Our opponents are all the time asking us: "Must one know all the consequences of baptism?" Now I consider such questions both ignorant and out of order. What consequences are there connected with baptism that have not been made known? If they have been made known, then God made them known that we might understand them, or else he had no design in making them known that I, or they either, know of. But brother Hodgen says, one can believe a proposition without knowing what the proposition is. That is at least one degree further in logic or philosophy than I have ever been. If a man can believe a proposition without knowing what the proposition is, then we might all believe the gospel without ever hearing it. Listen at his explanation! He says: "The great proposition of the gospel is, that Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God. You believe this; but do you know, or fully comprehend, all it contains?" What is the proposition? "Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God." There is the proposition. Every one who ever read, or heard read that proposition knows what the proposition is, and it only requires proof for any one to believe it. He says: "No, you nor any other man knows all it contains." We just know all that has been revealed, and that is all God requires; but he does require us to know all he has revealed, or he would not have revealed it, unless he has been in a habit of revealing things for no purpose. But the funny part of the matter is, that brother Hodgen then goes right on to say: "Hence, faith is in degree, proportional to the understanding of the proposition." Now that is precisely my argument all the time. "Hence," if the proposition be not understood, no faith. "Without faith it is impossible to please God."—Heb. xi: 6. If then, when Peter said, repent and be baptized every one of you for the remission of sins, the sectarian wholly misunderstands the proposition, according to brother Hodgen, how much faith has he in that proposition? He must be baptized having no faith in what Peter or Christ either said.

Oh, but says brother Hodgen: "We are not to have faith in baptism." Then you are not to believe Jesus or the apostle. That is a grand idea for a Christian. The Samaritans believed Phillip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Christ; and were baptized on that faith.

Bro. Hodgen then asks me if I knew what repentance was when I repented. If I had not, I should not have known what I was doing. If I had never learned what repentance was, I never could have repented. Preachers in those days told the people what to do to be saved. Many of our preachers now tell the people that they need not understand what they tell them. Is not that consistency? Bro. H. argues, too, that a person can do a thing and not know what he has done. I say that a sane person cannot. If a person does anything purposely, he knows what he has done, unless he is insane. He says further, that at least half of our brotherhood are ignorant of what repentance is. Is not that a high estimate to put on an intelligent Christian people? If I ever have seen one who did not know, I am not aware of it. He says that I said, "that is just the condition of the sects, and brother Hodgen would fain reduce us to the same condition." Then he says: "Well, if I know my own heart, it is that all should learn and grow in grace, etc." How is he to know his own heart if a man may do anything and not know what he has done? You may not know your own heart, dear brother.

Then he asks: "How did you know that I teach the people that they need not know what faith, repentance or baptism is?" Why, what a question to ask me, when you have been arguing for months through the F. F. with myself and others that very question. I contending that they should understand; and you denying. What have you been arguing, brother Hodgen? You are one verification of your statement that a person may do a thing and not know what he has done.

Bro. Hodgen then says that I say, one must absolutely know what faith, repentance, confession and baptism are. Then he says: "I affirm that you cannot show that God requires any such absoluteness." I will ask him: Is faith a command? He must answer, yes. "This is his commandment that we believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ."—I. John iii: 23. Is repentance a command? "Preach repentance and remission of sins in his name."—Luke xxiv: 47. Is confession a command? "With the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. x: 10. Is baptism a command? "Repent and be baptized every one of you."—Acts ii: 38. Were these to be preached? We have taught so all the time. The apostles taught these. And Jesus says: "Teach them to observe all things that I have commanded you." If any one does not understand, has he been taught? Will brother Hodgen say, yes? Then I will ask him this question: Suppose you hire a man to teach your son arithmetic, and you contract to pay him ten dollars to teach your son arithmetic; and he goes on for a week or two, and demands his ten dollars. You say to him: "Why, you have not taught my son arithmetic." "Yes," he says, "I have." You reply: "Why, he does not understand one rule." "Oh, what of that? I did not agree to make him understand it." Would you be willing to pay the ten dollars? When Jesus said, teach them to observe all things, how did he expect them to observe what they did not know or understand? "But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed."—James i: 25. "Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil days; and having done all to stand."—Eph. vi: 13. Do these Scriptures look like absoluteness?

Says brother Hodgen: "Who knows all that Jesus means? Indeed it is not a matter of knowledge, but of faith. We walk by faith." Yes, we walk by faith; but how does faith come? By hearing the word of God, Paul says. The word of God gives us faith; but we have no faith only as we are taught. We know nothing only what has been made known, and that gives us our faith.

With regard to persons believing in Jesus with all the heart without asking what faith is, I answer as before. It has no point to it. Believing in Jesus is believing the gospel. To believe the statements of the historians who wrote of him. John says, the things that he wrote were in order that we might believe that he is the Son of God, and accordingly, trust his promises and obey his commandments. To have this faith, they must hear all the truth of the whole matter. Persons have no faith beyond what they learn. According to what they learn or hear, will their faith be. He says: "Many believe who know scarcely anything of the testimony. Many children believe more because their father or mother believe." Yes, Sam Jones said he could give no reason why he was a Methodist than that his mother was one. That is grand logic, indeed. "Children believe because father or mother believed." If the father or mother tell the children the story of Jesus, they may believe as well as in any other way; but if they teach them Methodism or Baptistism, they will believe that all the same, and get religion at the bench, and that does brother Hodgen and all his sort just as well as the truth, provided they are dipped. Then he says, the little child does what its mother bids, but can't tell how or explain, and because the loving mother forgives, so will God do toward those who don't understand Him and do as he directs. I see no use of His giving law, if none need understand what He said: and if they go and do what they think right, He will accept it. All such teaching as that, simply sets aside the whole Bible, and establishes the will of man guided by his ignorance. I do not make any exception in the case of the deaf mute. He must know the will of God, and do it. But if God has not given him speech, He does not require him to speak; but, "he can make the necessary signs," is what I said. Neither was it any exception in the case of your forgetting to take the man's confession. That was your fault and not the man's. He was, no doubt, ready and willing to do so and did in his own mind, if you were faithful in teaching him. But the individual who confesses that God for Christ's sake has forgiven his sins tells that which is not true. His confession is a denial of the word of Jesus; and yet, you and your kind of thinkers say, it is all right. Then anything is right, true or false.

Bro. Hodgen says: "I don't wonder that some say, we make a Savior of baptism." I do not, either, when such men as he, and many others, are arguing all the time that a man may believe all the false teaching in the world. He may deny every statement of Jesus and the apostles, he may practice according to any of the forms of the sects; but, if he is only dipped in the water, no matter for what object, that saves him. The boat is decidedly on the other foot, brother Hodgen. We repudiate all baptisms not preceded by an intelligent faith; while you allow a dipping on any kind of faith, and for any purpose the person may choose. Who makes a Savior of baptism? "Thou art the man."

You say, you believe that "the Baptist church is a part of the kingdom of Christ; and that when they are baptized to get into the Baptist church they do right; that they thus fulfill all righteousness: and that we call it sect baptism—not worth a cent. And notwithstanding, they live as godly lives as any who know a little more of the gospel, yet it all amounts to nothing, they are lost if they are not re-baptized for remission of sins." I kindly suggest to brother Hodgen, that he go to the Baptists, since the Baptist doctrine is so much preferable to the doctrine of Christ. It would be much better for all concerned, I think, for all that class to go to the Baptists. We would have no more trouble with them, and, of course, they would be better satisfied in that part (?) of the kingdom.

You say they confide in God's promises, and name some of them. "They confide in justification by faith." Yes, by faith alone, which is false. "Conversion." Yes, conversion by a direct application of the Holy Spirit, and not by the means of the gospel; which is false again. The truth is, their whole system is false from beginning to end; but brother Hodgen can swallow it as complacently as a frog can a house fly. With him and all his kind, there is no difference between truth and falsehood. I again ask you, my dear sir, why did Jesus give conditions of pardon, if they need not be understood? I have never been able to induce one of your kind to answer this question. Will you do it? No, sir; you can't do it. Will Jesus say, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do," of those who have the revelation of his will and will not teach or obey it; but make creeds of their own, and live according to their own wills?

The Universalist thinks he is right, the Methodist thinks he is right, and so of all; and you say, AMEN. What becomes of the law of the Lord in your hands? It is simply nullified. Is a man striving with his whole heart to obey God who denies his word and teaches for doctrine the commandments of men? If they were striving with the whole heart and could not find the truth, then God has not made a revelation at all; for a revelation makes known. And Paul says: "We have the mind of Christ."—I. Cor. ii: 16. How did they get the mind of Christ? By his revelation. We all have the same revelation, but if some may not obey it, why should any?

Bro. Hodgen then says: "I, nor any other preacher of our plea has ever said they need not understand the design of baptism." In the name of sense, what has all our argument been about, then? I had so understood you all the time. He says that they have not agreed that any should be baptized for any other purpose than the remission of sins. Why, does he not know that they, (the sects), all baptize for a different purpose? And yet, he and his kind will take every one of them with a shake of the hand. It is the precise point of the whole argument.

I have written much more than I intended. Not for the benefit of those who are contending with us, but to prevent others from being deceived by those who teach differently. There is no doctrine ever taught that is calculated to do more harm, than the doctrine that it makes no difference what a person believes, so he is baptized. And that all the sects are God's people.

If they are God's people, one of two things must be true. God has ordained all these sects, or his people can become his people by going into unordained human institutions and believing and practicing after the commandments of men.

I. N. Hodgen must know that God's people are one. He must know that the Baptists believe that faith is a direct gift of God; that it does not come by hearing the word of God, and that every conversion is a miracle performed on the individual's mind, i. e. that a power above the gospel is required, while Paul says, the gospel is God's power to save. In fact, they deny nearly the entire teaching of Jesus and the apostles. And yet, he declares that they are a part of Christ's body. Now, if they are, the truth cuts no figure in the salvation of anybody. The man that cannot see that, is too blind to be taught; and all the reason in the world can never do him any good. If he is saved, it will be because he is too ignorant to be accountable. But it would require a large volume to write all that ought to be said on this subject. I must close for the present.

Being wholly set for the defense of the truth, I remain the same,

WHO IS A PROPER SUBJECT OF BAPTISM.—No. 2.

If there be such a thing taught in the Bible, as unintelligent obedience, then we should at once cease caviling and disputing about the design of baptism, with all of its antecedents and consequents, and endeavor to get persons to be immersed whether they believe or understand the design of it or not.

The chief argument of those who believe in sectarian immersion is, that if those who are baptized among the sects, believing that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and are baptized to honor God, they are Scripturally baptized. Now it is strange that men of learning, and well versed in the sacred volume, will make such an assertion as the above; for they know that faith is produced by testimony, and, as the testimony is, so is the faith, both as regards quantity and quality. We find that Jesus makes faith in him an essential prerequisite to baptism; but the great trouble seems to be this: those who advocate sect baptism, fail to make any distinction between the faith of those taught by sectarians and the faith of those who were taught by the Apostles. If they would only throw off the veil of humanism, they would see clearly that the gospel as taught by the Apostles were very different from that taught by sectarians; for, while the Apostles taught persons wanting to know the way to "repent and be baptized for the remission of sins," sectarians teach them to pray and be prayed for, giving for evidence their own feelings, imaginations, etc. Now, when such a doctrine as this is taught and believed, what do such persons look to for salvation?

They evidently expect Christ to pardon them through these means, and in no other way can they be made believe that they can obtain remission of sins; hence they have false conceptions of Christ. Why? Simply because this is the way they have been taught. Now let any one note the words of the Savior in whom they profess to believe, and they will at once deny it. Tell them, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned," (Mark 16: 16), and they will tell you it does not mean what it says, and if it did then, in that time, it does not now.

Thus we see plainly, that they reject the authority of Christ; and, in so doing, they reject Christ himself; for, to reject the authority of a man, is to reject the man. Again, the theory which teaches that persons can obey God acceptably without understanding the commandments, reminds me of the Pedobaptists, who receive infants into the church upon their sprinkling, and afterwards teach them to know the Lord. Jeremiah 31: 34 says, in speaking of the new covenant: "They shall not teach every man his brother, and every man his neighbor, saying, know the Lord; for they shall all know me from the least unto the greatest of them."

Now when a person complies with the conditions of the gospel, not knowing what it is for, they are in the same condition as the infant as respects knowledge, and consequently, must be taught to know the Lord afterwards; and, in so doing, they reverse the order of the word of God entirely; for it teaches that in the new covenant we shall not teach our brother and our neighbor to know the Lord, which shows plainly, that all must, before coming into the kingdom, know these things.

If this does not prove that knowledge is essential to salvation, I confess my inability to understand it, and when we associate with this, the teaching of our Savior, it makes it doubly sure; he says: "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." Again, he says: "But he that received seed into good ground, is he that heareth the word and understandeth it; and bringeth forth fruit, some a hundred fold, some sixty, and some thirty."—Matt. 13: 23. Again, he says: "Ye do greatly err, not knowing the Scriptures."—Matt. 22: 29.

We suppose the same thing is as true to-day, as it was then; for all errors and innovations spring from ignorance of the divine volume. But to what must we attribute this ignorance? To a lack of the powers of understanding? Certainly not. Then, again, we ask, why is it that they do not understand it? The reason is obvious. They have a "plea" to defend and a creed to sustain, which says: "There are good Christians in all denominations; all we want is, for them to just quit some of their practices, give up their party name, and we will recognize them as Christians." You will? Well, where did the Lord authorize such a course? It may be, it is to be found in the third epistle of Peter, or the second chapter of Jude; but it does not belong to the written part of the Bible. Yes, like all other unscriptural practices, it belongs to the "big unwritten book"—the book which never existed.

Now the book by which we must be guided, and by which we must be judged, teaches that, teaching is first, hearing is second, understanding is next, believing is next, repentance is next, confession is next, and baptism is next. This is the Lord's way, as we all very well know; and now, brethren, let us not, just because we have been guilty of things not authorized by God, shut our eyes and stop our ears, and harden our hearts, that we may not see and hear and know the right way; but let us, before it is too late, turn from this unscriptural practice, and teach that for which we have divine authority.

I have noticed carefully the arguments of those who believe in sect baptism, and their whole argument rests on an "if," if they did so and so, if they believed so and so. Does God make a positive command depend on an if? If so, we can find excuses for anything. But, to do a thing for a thing, one must understand the design of the thing done, in order to realize the thing for which it is done. Now, in proof of this, I refer to the whole Bible, for it is full of the evidence in confirmation of this statement. If this is denied by any one, I will make my assertions good by referring to numerous Scriptures in support of this fact.

Now, what I have written, has been written in the spirit of love, meekness, and a strict fidelity to the Scriptures; and for the purpose, if possible, of getting those who oppose this way to meet the issue fairly and squarely, and not dodge and quirk around, and never touch the main point at issue. Brethren, affirm your position in some set of words equivalent to the following: "We believe that sectarian immersion is valid, Christian baptism," and I, or some one else, will deny it, and we will affirm that, "all who believe the gospel as preached by the Apostles, repent of their sins, confess the Lord Jesus with the mouth, and are baptized in the name (or by the authority) of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins shall be saved." Will you try it? If so, let us hear from you. Don't let us hear anything more about your "ifs," but come right square out and affirm your position in positive terms, and we will do likewise.

Hoping that we may all see the way, and after we have seen it, be honest enough to embrace it and walk in it, I remain yours in brotherly love,
C. E. HOLT.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Enclosed please find twenty-five cents for the Oatman-McGary discussion, which I am very anxious to see; for I know full well, that if you handle Dr. Oatman like you have handled all other opposers of the truth, you will chase him so close across the battlefield, that he will be so busily engaged trying to save his own sectarian sign, that he will forget all about his kingdom chain, and come right out and acknowledge his defeat.

While I am not living in the drouth stricken district, I am so near it, that I have not been able to find a man that has money enough to spare to pay for a copy of the F. F.; nevertheless, it is gaining ground everywhere with the brethren. When I want to find out in the shortest possible way, what kind of timber a brother is made of; whether he will swell and warp in wet weather, or sun-crack and split in a dry season, I always ask him if he endorses the position of the FIRM FOUNDATION? I know then what kind of metal he is.

I met brother Shipp at Wright's creek, four miles north of Llano, last Lord's day, and he preached three discourses. He is an able defender of the truth; always in the field working for the Master, pay or no pay. He fully endorses the F. F., as all the solid, pioneer preachers do. I wish, brother McGary, that you would hold a meeting in Llano county; when you get back from your trip to Menard county. Let me hear from you.

Your brother in the one hope,
WILLIAM EDWARDS.

THE COURAGE TO LIVE.

We need not preach the courage to die—that is common enough—but the courage to live, to be honest in spite of poverty and neglect; to be true, though all is dark except where God shines in; to be faithful, though the heavens fall and hearts break and friendship turns to gall. Yes we must teach men to dare to be unpopular, to be misapprehended, to be ahead of the times, to follow the voice of God, though it leads into the wilderness, to tell the devil to his very face that he lies, and also give him his dues—an act which requires the supremest courage at all times.

I wouldn't give a farthing for the triumphant faith of the death hour, unless it comes from that triumphant faith that makes our life full of noblest daring, that is more ready to fling away honor, wealth, and the praise of friends, than to impair for one moment the soul's integrity. Oh for such a courage—the courage to think, to act, to tell the world the truth, to overthrow splendid falsehoods, to disown sweet lies and to banish tenderest associations rather than cheek in the least the free movement of the sovereign soul. We must all die with more or less equanimity, but we cannot live in the full splendor of our being except by courage and determined exertion. The coward, under certain circumstances, may die grandly; but never, under any circumstances, can he live grandly.—Selected.

ZEKE JACKSON AND THE PARSON.

RACCOON BILL JONES' MEETING.

At the appointed time, Raccoon Bill Jones was on hand, at his appointment in the Jackson neighborhood—the name, "Raccoon," had been given him, partly because he lived in the mountain wilds of Arkansas, and partly because he bore so many of the characteristics of that old "soldier," Raccoon John Smith. He made his headquarters at uncle Hezekiah Jackson's during his meeting; and there were repeated collisions between the old men, on religious topics, while aunt Hannah and Zeke constituted the audience. When uncle Hez. would advance a Baptist dogma, Bill Jones would ask: "Where did you find that?—book it, and I will accept it." He said, no good would result from a discussion on the grave question of redemption, unless it was conducted strictly upon a Scriptural basis. He said, if a man believes the Bible teaches a certain doctrine, he can and should turn to the chapter and verse which seems to him to teach it, when requested to. He said, he did not teach nor entertain an idea in reference to salvation, that he could not cite the Scripture that taught it, or, at least, seemed to him to, and that he was willing to submit his proof text, upon any religious question, to the consideration of any fair-minded seeker after truth. He said, that, if a different construction from the one he entertained in reference to any passage of Scripture could be fairly shown to be the true construction, he felt bound and pledged to the Lord that he would, and heartily embrace the truth. He said, that the man who would not, was on the direct road to that place "prepared for the devil and his angels." He had preached on "the good confession," and it aroused Zeke till he slipped off to town to consult his friend, the "pastor of the Christian church." He accosted the pastor thus:

"Parson, why have you not been out to hear old brother Jones?"

P.—"Well, brother Zeke, I have been too busy with my own 'charge.' Lord's day, of course, I had to preach at eleven and at night. You know they pay me one hundred dollars per month to preach for them, and if I were to lose any time, they might dock my salary some, and I could not afford that, for my wife and I could not exist respectably on less than one hundred per month in this fashionable town."

Z.—"Parson, I think I could live on less than fifty dollars per month, especially if I lived after the Spirit instead of after the flesh; but why have you not been out some night through the week?"

P.—"Well, Monday night, I had to attend the prohibition rally. Tuesday night, I had to supervise the jug breaking, which was for the benefit of the church. Wednesday night, I was compelled to attend the young ladies' society; Thursday night, the married ladies' society; Friday night, the young men's society; Saturday night, the married men's society; all of which you know are good works. So you see, brother Zeke, I am up to my elbows in good work. We are told to always abound in the work of the Lord, and I am trying to do that."

Z.—"I have never read anything in the word of God about prohibition rallies, jug-breakings, young ladies', young men's, old ladies', or old men's societies; but, of course, the Scriptures do speak of these things and give directions for conducting them, because "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works"—and you say these things are good works, so they must be mentioned in some place that is not familiar to me. But, parson, I know you could have found time to have come out if you had tried hard."

P.—"Bless your life, my brother, my whole time is taxed. My congregation demands something new in the way of preaching, and they must have it—they are broad, liberal and progressive, and it takes talent, and active, industrious talent, too, to feed them. If I were to go to feeding them on the "old-fogy, thus-salth-the-Lord" diet, that country congregations are forced to subsidist upon, I would have to step down and out with my walking papers in my pocket. But I admit that I have not been anxious to go to your meeting. I don't care to give aid or comfort to such a man as you have preaching."

Z.—"Why, parson, what's the matter with our preacher?"

P.—"Bro. Zeke, he is an extremist, and is disturbing the tranquillity of our congregations by riding his hobbies roughshod through them. All who love our plea should give him and all such a wide berth."

Z.—"Parson, I have found no hobbies in him, nor anything in his preaching that seems to me more extreme than the teaching of the Scriptures. I grant he has disturbed my mind some; but if his points are Scriptural I have no right to call them extreme, nor denominate them hobbies. My trip here to-day is to lay my difficulties before you, in the hope you can offer me relief."

P.—"Bro. Zeke, I feared that, when I heard that old crank was going to preach for you. Now I advise you to have nothing more to do with him, don't even hear him preach his stuff again. He is not one of our representative men, but is of a certain "faction party, which shall be nameless." He never saw inside of a college in his life. There are not more than a dozen preachers of his sort anyway."

Z.—"Parson, I am not inquiring after the number who preach as he does, nor to learn whether or not he has been educated at a college. If you were correct about the number who are preaching as he does, then that weighs nothing with me. 'Twelve' is just the number the Lord began to have his gospel preached by, and it is many more than preached God's word in Noah's time; but God was on their side, and He is still on the side that preaches the truth whether few or many. When you tell me not to hear brother Jones preach, you remind me of our Baptist preacher, when he used to tell me not to hear you preach. But, parson, I want you to cite me to the Scriptures that validate my baptism which was not preceded by my making what brother Jones has proven to be the "good confession," and which, it seems to me, he has proven is demanded by the Lord, as antecedent to the baptism authorized by Him. If you do not do this, I shall feel that you acted without authority in receiving me into the church as you did."

P.—"Bro. Zeke, I think you are very foolish to be disturbed by such an extreme doctrine. That doctrine sends Alexander Campbell, and many more of the ablest men of this reformation, right down to hell! Men who have been educated specially for the ministry, at Lexington, under such learned men as brothers McGarvey and Graham, may go and preach our plea to the people with all the earnestness and eloquence of their souls, and then some backwoods, hoosier preacher, like Jones, will come along and counteract the result of his labors, with his hobbies and new heresies."

Z.—"Peter was not educated at any such college as Lexington. Paul was educated at Jerusalem, which is every whit as famous as Lexington, and his teacher was Gamaliel, who was as learned as McGarvey and Graham; and yet, on his way to Damascus he turned from the idea, he had imbibed from Gamaliel, to the doctrine preached by Gallileans, who had never seen inside of a college, and I verily believe he did right. I am not so much in quest of consequences, as I am for truth. My grandmammy was as good as Alexander Campbell; as earnest, as zealous, and as prayerful; yet she was never immersed; she died a sprinkled Methodist. Now, if I turn out to consequence-hunting, I shall want to know of you where your doctrine sends her. But what I want, parson, is for you to show me that I am safe as I am, as you received me with the right hand of fellowship."

P.—"Bro. Zeke, were you not baptized to honor God?"

Z.—"Well, I suppose I was, if I understand you. I was not baptized to dishonor Him, I know. But what do you mean by that?"

P.—"I just mean that when a person is baptized to honor God, his or her baptism is valid."

Z.—"But, parson, I did not ask for your thinksoes, but for the word of the Lord on the matter. Does the word of God say to inquirers, "repent and be baptized to honor God," or does it say, "repent and be baptized in the name of Christ (authority of Christ) for the remission of sins?"

P.—"It says, be baptized for the remission of sins, but that is to honor God at last."

Z.—"Do you mean that the three thousand who were baptized for the remission of sins, were baptized to honor God, too?"

P.—"Yes, that is just what I mean."

Z.—"Well, then, if three thousand more had been baptized for something else, would they have been baptized to honor God, too?"

P.—“That depends on circumstances. If they intended to honor God in the act, then they would have been.”

Z.—“But suppose they did not have just that idea in their minds; suppose I did not have just the idea that I was honoring God in my mind at the time I was baptized, but wanted to be baptized because I regarded it a duty; what, then, was my baptism valid?”

P.—“Yes.”

Z.—“Well, prove it, and it sufficeth.”

P.—“He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, there is the proof.”

Z.—“Well, then, why do you say, that when people are baptized to ‘honor God’ they are saved? Why do you not say, that those who are baptized for the remission of sins, or to honor God, or as a duty, are saved? Your proof says, ‘He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved,’ but ‘believeth’ what?”

P.—“Believeth that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God, of course.”

Z.—“Well, parson, if you are right about that, then it is not necessary to confess or repent either. Does not your proof prove too much?”

P.—“Bro. Zeke, that is silly talk; when a man believes that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, he does repent; the repentance is included in the ‘believeth.’”

Z.—“Peter did not so regard it, parson, because he told those who had believed and cried out, to ‘repent.’ If the repentance is included in the ‘believeth,’ as you say, then Peter not should have said that. Again, parson, if the repentance is included in the ‘believeth,’ and that ‘believeth’ is wholly and solely confined to the fact that Jesus is the Christ, then the devils that ‘believed and trembled’ were also penitent.”

P.—“Well, there is no use arguing the matter any further. I see you are ready to depart from our plea. I say, when a man is baptized to honor God, he is Scripturally baptized.”

Z.—“Parson, that expression, ‘baptized to honor God,’ sounds like the lingo of Ashdod. It is not pure speech. Paul baptized about twelve persons who had once been immersed as much to ‘honor God’ as anybody has ever been. What do you say about that? That shows that Paul would have departed from ‘our plea’ if there had been such a godless thing in his day. When you say, those who are baptized to honor God, are Scripturally baptized, it does not carry sufficient weight for me to anchor my soul to. Just find where God has said it and it sufficeth.”

P.—“You are gone, Ephraim like you are wedded to your idols. Farewell to you, I am sorry to see you take the course you do.”

Z.—“Yes, parson, I am wedded to the word of God as far as I know it, and intend to wed myself to all of it I can learn. Are you really sorry that I have determined to take God at His word, and determined to reject the word of men when their word conflicts with God’s? Parson, I am sorry you are wedded to a human ‘plea’ which would level the doctrine Christ delivered to the saints, to the same low plane with the doctrines of men. We must part. You have a right to risk your soul on a human plea, while I have a right and feel compelled by the Spirit of loyalty to my Master, to reject this plea, as unsound and unsafe because it did not originate with the Father of lights.”

That night Raccoon Bill Jones preached on the subject, “the gospel of Christ.” He said, he was like Paul in a few things, and that one of them was, that he was not “ashamed of the gospel of Christ.” He said, the reason he was not ashamed of it was, because it is the power of God and the wisdom of God unto salvation of them that believe it. He said, he would be ashamed of so-called gospels of Methodism, or Baptistism, or any other ism, because they are the powers of men and the wisdom of men, and are foolishness with God, and vain worship. He said any man who loves God will be ashamed of that which is foolishness with God. He said, the devil’s subtlety had lost none of its cunning in six thousand years, but was still destroying souls by the same old tricks that entailed suffering and death on the teeming millions that have returned to dust since he wriggled into the garden of Eden and added the little word “not” to what the Lord said to the primal pair. Think you not, he said, that satan has waxed worse and worse, and sharper and sharper, during these six thousand eventful years? In our fast age his satanic majesty wins souls through drinking saloons, gambling dens, brothels of prostitution, respectable card parties, horse-racing, stock-markets, and Ingersollism. But there are some who are ashamed of these things, and are of a religious bent of mind. But satan despairs not of them. He furnishes them preaching by his “ministers transformed into the ministers of righteousness.” Paul speaks of these ministers in II Cor. xi: 15. Just enough of the word of God is employed by these ministers to make satan’s lies go down smoothly. A little of his doctrine and a little of his ordinances. In the ordinance of baptism just a little water is used, which satisfies a large class, because they are made believe that the ordinance is non-essential, anyway. But there is another class who are willing to swallow all of the same “orthodox” lies, but they demand more water to make the lies go down. They cry for much water. Hence, satan has ministers at hand to satisfy this class, too. He even has them immersed under the solemn sound of Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

There is another class who are willing to swallow down these same lies, but they can’t be caught by the last named class of preachers, because they don’t like the name they preach under. So satan fixes up what he calls “our plea,” and they shake hands with all the much-water class. But, he said, my friends, there is no God, no Christ, no Holy Spirit, hence no gospel of Christ in any of this. He said, the gospel of Christ was to be preached, and those that believed that gospel and were baptized were promised salvation. There was no authority in this for preaching Methodism, Baptistism, or any other ism. This gospel of Christ, which is authorized to be preached in the commission of Christ, and which was preached by the Apostles, is like its omniscient and adorable Author, “the same yesterday, to-day, and forever.” He said, this gospel of Christ which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes it, is the same “word of the Lord” which Isaiah said was to “go forth from Jerusalem,” the same “law” that he said was to “go out of Zion”—it is the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, and is to be “written in the hearts” of every one who obeys it, or they cannot “obey it from the heart,” and it is only obedience of this doctrine, this gospel, from the heart, that makes free. This gospel was preached by Peter on Pentecost, and by the Apostles of Jesus Christ throughout the world. It has lost nothing nor gained anything in these eighteen hundred years. The man who believes the same gospel Peter preached on Pentecost, the same gospel Paul and the saints preached, believes the gospel that Christ delivered to be preached, and upon the belief of which he authorized men and women to be baptized into his name. He said, those who do not believe that very same gospel in all its parts, do not believe that which Christ delivered to be preached, and which was preached by the faithful Apostles and bound in heaven and earth; and Christ said, he that believeth not (that gospel) should be damned. He asked, how many there believed it. He said, that if some had been immersed without believing that gospel, and some had been sprinkled without believing it, they stood alike in the eye of Him who is without variableness or shadow of turning.

In conclusion, he made a stirring appeal to his audience to obey the gospel and become children of God. When he was through, uncle Hezekiah, aunt Hannah and Zeke went forward and made the good confession, and were baptized. At the water’s edge, uncle Hezekiah made a talk. He said, that he could have seen the truth as brother Jones had preached it anywhere and any time. But, said he, that plea which endorses my conversion, and then appeals to me to come from the Baptist church to them—that is, millions of Baptists to go to a few hundred thousand of another name, just to change the name Baptist to the name Christian—was indeed foolishness to me, as I know it is to my God. If the smaller body, who urges nothing against the Baptists but their name, had proposed to come to the Baptists if the Baptists would change their name to “Christian,” it would have appeared more worthy of consideration. He said, he thanked God the gospel of Christ, freed from the obscuring cloud of a human plea, had been preached to him, and that the only regrets he felt, was that this plain gospel had not been preached to him thirty years ago, so he could have been working for Christ all these years. He said, many of the Baptists were honest and would accept the truth, but would not abandon one human position for another. Thus ended Raccoon Bill Jones’ meeting.

Raccoon Bill Jones left for other fields of labor in his own state, while uncle Hezekiah, aunt Hannah and Zeke “went on their way rejoicing,” a perfectly united family in Christ.

CONVERSION NECESSARY TO SALVATION.

What is conversion, what does the word convert mean? It means to turn or change from one thing to another. To illustrate, a man has a hundred pounds of wool, which he wants to turn or convert into clothing. He takes it to a carder, who brings the power of his cards to bear upon it, and changes or converts it into rolls. There is a conversion, but not into what he wants. He then brings the power of the wheel to bear upon the rolls and converts them into thread; still it is not what he wants. He takes it to the weaver and the power of the loom is brought to bear upon it, and it is converted into cloth; yet, it is not what he wants. He takes it to the tailor, and the power of the shears and needle are brought to bear upon it, and it is converted or turned into clothing.

The reader will notice that in this illustration, there are four distinct changes, or conversions, in order to get the wool into clothing, and that the character of each change or conversion depends upon the character of the power brought to bear upon the material converted. For instance, in converting it into thread, the power of the needle and shears is not brought to bear upon it, because that power is not suited to the bringing about that change, and so with all the other changes, the power brought to bear must be suited to the change or conversion desired. If the man had only desired to convert the wool into cloth, he would not have brought the latter power to bear upon it.

Mankind, as soon as they arrive at the age of accountability become sinners, violate the law of God; iniquity separates them from their God; and their sins cause Him to hide His face from them, and they love sin and hate righteousness.—Isaiah 59:1-4. The heavenly Father loves them notwithstanding their sinfulness: "Is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance," that all should be converted, turned or changed from the love and practice of sin, to the love and practice of righteousness, and he brings to bear upon their nature a power, (the gospel), which is adequate to bring about such a change or conversion as he desires, at the same time consulting their will as free moral agents, as to whether they will submit to or reject that power. As proof that he consults their will, when He created Adam and Eve, He gave them a law, by the observance of which they would continue in a righteous, a saved state or condition; but satan talked to them, brought another power to bear upon them, converting them from the love and service of God to his service. (See Gen. 2: 17, and 3: 4.) "And if it seems evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom you will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Anointed, in whose land you dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."—Joshua 24: 15. "Go preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."—

Mark 16: 15-16; which quotations show that man's will is consulted, and that he has the privilege of turning or converting from the service of one to the service of another; hence, Paul says, "know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants you are to whom you obey; whether of sin unto death or obedience unto righteousness."—Rom. 6: 16.

Having seen what conversion is, let us next see how it is effected, or brought about: The Psalmist, David, speaking as he was guided by the Holy Spirit, says: "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul."—Psalms 10: 7. But that law cannot convert unless it is written in the heart, understood; hence the same witness says, "then will I teach transgressors thy ways, and sinners shall be converted unto thee."—Psalms 51: 18.

Notice, teaching first, then conversion; but people cannot be taught unless they understand; hence the apostle Paul was sent by the Savior to the Jews and Gentiles "to open their eyes, (what eyes? the eyes of their understanding—Eph. 1: 18), to turn or convert them from darkness to light, and from the power of satan to God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins."—Acts 26: 18. What is the object of this turning or conversion? That they may receive forgiveness of sins, be saved. How is this turning or conversion to be brought about? By the eyes of the understanding being enlightened. How is the understanding enlightened? By being taught. Taught what? The gospel, the law that was to go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord that went forth from Jerusalem.

The Savior said of the Jews: "This people's heart is waxed gross and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed, lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, (or mind), and should be converted, and I should heal (or pardon) them."—Matt. 13: 15. Now, according to the above language of the Savior, people must see and hear in order to understand, they must understand in order to be converted, they must be converted in order to forgiveness, or saved: hence, he said, when he gave his commission, "Go teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit."—Matt. 28: 19.

What did he want them taught? Exactly what the apostles, acting under that commission, taught them, the word of the Lord, the gospel, the law of the Lord. Why did he want them taught those things? That they might understand. Why understand? That they might be converted. Why converted? That they might be forgiven, or saved.

As there are different steps or changes in the conversion of the wool into clothing, so are there different steps or changes in the conversion of a sinner into a Christian, and as the character of the conversion of the wool depends upon the nature or character of the power brought to bear upon it, so the nature or character of the conversion of the sinner depends upon the nature or character of the power brought to bear upon him; hence, if you want to make a Roman Catholic of an individual, you bring Roman Catholic power to bear upon him, you teach him Roman Catholicism, and if he understands it, he becomes what you desire him to be. So with Calvinism, Methodism, Mormonism, Campbellism, and all other isms with which this earth is cursed; in order that a man may be converted to any of them, he must be taught, and he must understand them. If we want to convert a Radical into a Democrat, we do not get radical papers for him to read, nor bring radical influences to bear upon him; but we get democratic papers, and bring democratic influences to bear upon him.

But as we do not want to make sectarians or politicians of people (and there is not much difference between them, so far as salvation is concerned), but Christians, what power shall we bring to bear upon them? Why, the gospel of Christ; for Paul says, "It is the power of God unto salvation;" but as the power of the cards, in the wool illustration, would never have made clothing of the wool, neither will the three facts of the gospel preached to the people and believed by them, convert them to christianity; for there is no law in those three facts, and the Psalmist says: "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul."

Then let us not only believe the facts of the gospel, but give heed to the commands, that we may enjoy the promises, for all the promises of God are in Christ, not out of him; and Paul says, we are baptized into him, the last step in the commission, and if it is necessary to understand that Christ died, was buried, and rose again, it is necessary for us to understand the design of baptism, for it is as plainly revealed as the other.

E. HANSBROUGH.

REPORT OF MEETINGS AT PETTY'S GROVE AND WHITE ROCK.

Petty's Grove is situated on Cobb creek, about twelve miles south of Hillsboro. This place has been used by the Methodists for several years for their "big meetings." The old arbor was repaired by our brethren, a well dug, seats repaired, etc., and our meeting begun the first Lord's day in July. Bro. W. P. Richardson was with me, and during the first week did most of the preaching. During this week we had many hindrances. Nearly every day the gathering clouds and muttering thunder threatened to drench us with rain; and on the night of the 5th inst., we had quite a storm of wind and rain that produced quite a commotion in camp. Two families were camped on the ground, and brother R. and self camped with them. On the night above referred to, our little force was increased in numbers by another family who had remained for night meeting. If I had not promised to keep it a secret, I would tell you how badly frightened some of the ladies were. The storm was soon over, however, the tent repaired, and the whole party partook of a good supper and went to rest. I suffered much that week with chills and fever, attended with some congestion.

The attendance from the beginning of the meeting was good, although we had several picnics in the surrounding country during the time, and a Methodist meeting near us for the first two weeks. Bro. Richardson had to leave on the night of the second Lord's day, and I continued the meeting until the fourth Lord's day. Bro. Levi Speer came down from West and preached once for me, besides this I had but little help.

I would like to report many things that occurred, but do not wish to trespass upon your space. Suffice it to say that the people received the word with readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, therefore many of them believed and were baptized. The immediate result of the meeting was, thirty-three baptized, two restored and nine added to the congregation. Many others were convinced, but lacked the courage to confess Christ. On Monday I went to White Rock, McLennan county. Bro. Levi Speer had preached a week at this place, and then left for an appointment in Hill county. I found some interest manifested, and large audiences in attendance. On Wednesday night a lady came forward, when invitation was extended, and when I asked her purpose in coming, she made the following statement: "That her husband was a member of the Christian church and she wanted to join the same church in order to have peace at home." She said, "that she had been baptized into the Baptist church, and afterwards received into the Christian church, but had, soon after this, gone back to the Baptists, and now she wanted to come back to the Christian church and was perfectly satisfied with her baptism." I told her that her motive in presenting herself was not right; that peace in the family was greatly to be desired, but that her prime motive should be to obey the Lord; and that if she believed in Jesus and was willing to satisfy the demands of the gospel, I would gladly assist her in so doing. She was not willing to confess Christ and obey him, and the brethren were unwilling to receive her.

I asked this lady, if I had not clearly shown in my discourse that night, the Scriptural conditions required by the word of God, for an alien to come to Christ. She admitted that I had. I then asked her, if she had obeyed these conditions when she joined the Baptists. She said, she had not; that she had not made the confession, and had only been baptized into the Baptist church. I then asked her, if she had obeyed the Lord. "No," she said, "I have not." "But," she continued, "I was once received into this church on my baptism, and I don't see why I can't be taken in again the same way."

I explained to her, and to the audience, the necessity of fidelity to the word of God in all things, and the time had come for us to correct the inconsistent practices of the past, and no longer receive parties from the sects upon their sect baptism.

I remained at this place until last Lord's day, and during the week, five who had been "shaken in" to the congregation, came forward and demanded baptism in the name of the Lord. There are several others in this congregation who came from the Baptists and Methodists. I think that they will soon rectify their mistakes and be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus for the remissions of sins.

At present writing I am with my home congregation. Bro. Richardson is with me, and we will continue until next Lord's day. Next Monday morning we start for Mason county, and hope to arrive on time.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, SEPT. 1, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

ATTENTION, READERS.

This is to notify my brethren and friends that ere this reaches them, my home will be Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas. All correspondence to me should be addressed there. Our exchanges will please note this change and send their papers to that place. But all funds and orders for the FIRM FOUNDATION or any pamphlet published by us should be addressed and made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

We are offering the F. F. at a nominal price. Friends of the paper ought to press its claims upon the attention of their brethren and neighbors. Brethren, take this matter in hand and send up some large clubs. In almost every community we have visited, where the paper is taken, it has opened the eyes of sectarians, and many have been baptized. The unmixt truth of God is a hundred-fold more powerful than the thin decoction of "our plea." Push the work, brethren. Sisters, you can do much in this good work. May the "truth have free course and be glorified."

Bro. Stone's reply to brother Hodgen, in our last issue, is right to the point; and no unblased reader will fail to see that there is nothing left for brother Hodgen to say, except to quibble away from the issue. We have no "theory" on this question. Those who are opposed to the stand we take on this question are opposed to being tied down to the word of God. We preach and contend for the same faith or gospel that the apostles preached and contended for.

Bro. Sommer says, that if brother Stone will write out his creed, he will publish it in the Review, or words to this effect. Well, if brother Stone should write it out, it would simply be the New Testament, the Divine Creed. The fault found with our position is not, that it differs from Apostolic doctrine; but it differs from the practices of the "fathers of this reformation"—the founders of "our plea." Our offending is, in not following these "fathers" on beyond the right revelation, to their time-honored guessing ground. Well, brethren, let us walk the "narrow way" that the saints have delivered and God has "bound," if every little college upstart, and popularity-seeking editor in the land nabs at our heels as we go straight on. Many thanks to brother Stone for his untiring labors for the way "ordained of God."

I have just read a small pamphlet by David Lipscomb and Jno. T. Poe. D. Lipscomb's part is devoted to "Difficulties on Religion-Considered"—and right well does he consider them. Like most of brother Lipscomb's writings, his subject in this pamphlet is clearly and cogently treated. It is, verily, multum in parvo. John T. Poe's part is devoted to "What Must I Do To Be Saved? And Identity Of The Church." These questions, though briefly handled, are pointed, sound and well written. I consider the pamphlet well worthy of the attention of the brethren, and useful for distribution among aliens who are seeking light. It is offered by Lipscomb & Sewell, Nashville, Tenn., at ten cents for single copy, or twelve copies for one dollar.

As a fair sample of the wilful misrepresentations of T. R. Burnett we give the following from his paper: "The New Foundation has added a new plank to its platform. In addition to the re-baptism doctrine, it now says that no Christian should vote for prohibition. The last issue contains nine or ten columns on this subject. What next?"

I suppose the "next" will be another misrepresentation by T. R. Burnett, judging from his past course. Now, when did T. R. Burnett ever speak of any "new plank" in the Gospel Advocate? He never has that we have seen. But his misrepresentation consists in saying, that the F. F. "says, that no Christian should vote for prohibition." Now, there lurks a wilful and vicious misrepresentation in this. He knows we raise no such issue. We say that Christians should not vote on any question, or yoke themselves with unbelievers in political measures and schemes at all. He knows that we have said, if we voted at all, we would vote and work for prohibition. Then why does he thus misrepresent us? Is it because he has been unable to stay the rapid growth of the FIRM FOUNDATION with his three fact nonsense? What "re-baptism doctrine" does the FIRM FOUNDATION advocate? It advocates the gospel of Christ without addition or subtraction—"the doctrine once delivered to the saints." If we advocate the doctrine of the apostles—and T. R. Burnett knows we do—and refuse to sanction any doctrine or practice that originated with uninspired men, and thereby are advocating a "re-baptism doctrine," then the apostles delivered the "re-baptism doctrine," did they not?

Bro. Lipscomb has said more on the relation of Christians to human governments than any one else; and his arguments appear to me to be unanswerable. Why does T. R. Burnett not accuse him of "adding a new plank?" I suppose it is because the Gospel Advocate does not come in as close competition with the Christian Messenger in Texas as the F. F. "The love of money is the root of all evil." A. MCG.

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER.

We will send the F. F. to any address till the first of January, 1888, for twenty-five cents on trial, or five copies till then for one dollar. This is a splendid opportunity for the friends of the F. F. to send in the names of some of their friends in different counties, or in different states, in order to give them a chance to read and learn that there is, published by Christians, one sound paper that boldly contends for the faith once delivered to the saints, one that will not compromise with any error in any manner, shape or form.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We are going to call upon you in all kindness, to send in your dues, if you owe anything, by the first of October. You are aware that hard times fall doubly severe upon us, when we tell you that a great many have not settled with us, and you know that we do not advertise as other papers do, hence it requires close collection to carry on the F. F. and keep it out of debt; and we hope no one will become sensitive on the subject, and have this as an excuse to stop his subscription. We want to give you the best paper in the world for the least cash. So, brethren, send us your arrearages and renewals in advance and thus aid us in our work. While it is a small amount to each of you, the aggregate is immense to us.

ATTENTION!

According to previous announcement, as well as to comply with the urgent request of some of our readers, we expect to arraign some of our most prominent and popular brethren and leaders, editors and authors, before an intelligent, candid and conscientious brotherhood. Our charge against them is, that they have tarnished their own consciences to maintain a tenet of a human "plea," and that they are unworthy of the confidence now reposed in them by their brethren. This work will render us more and more unpopular, but we believe that the interest of truth will be guarded and subserved by such a course—hence, we shall prosecute it vigorously and uncompromisingly, believing it to be a good work, under the circumstances. We contemplate beginning this work in our issue for the first of September.

Every such man tried, shall be tried by his own words, as well as by the word of God. We hope our readers, in the mean time, will send in many new names in order that as many as possible may see the inconsistency and danger in further following our so-called representative men. See our trial offers, brethren, and send in all the new names you can. A. MCG.

OUR NEW HOME.

Perhaps it will interest some of our readers to know why we have settled in Western Texas, so far from the office of the FIRM FOUNDATION.

Hence we will briefly advert to our chief reasons for doing so. First of all, I was charmed by this country the first time I passed through it—about seven years ago—and saw its clear rivers, sparkling brooks and bubbling springs.

Now, we have a family of five children, ranging from ten months to sixteen years old. Our three eldest are boys. About a city is a dangerous place to raise children, especially is it so for boys. Satan's traps, with sprung triggers, are set at every nook and corner in the large towns and cities. Besides, we desired to raise our boys to till the soil, and live by the sweat of their faces, instead of doubling their risks for final destruction, by offering them professions by which to win their livelihood through the sharp tricks, and shrewd manipulations of "head-work," as it is called. Again, we wanted health; and if it is not to be found at Fort McKavett, and the adjacent country, I don't know where to look for it.

In leaving Austin we parted from some of the truest and best Christians we ever met, or ever expect to meet; and they had withdrawn themselves from the apostate body that calls itself "the Christian church" in that city. These true brethren have their regular Lord's day meeting from house to house, where they attend to the supper, and study the word, and "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." Parting from these brethren and giving up these delightful and helpful meetings with those who have stood with us so earnestly and firmly against the innovations and corruptions of those, who, in that city, are seeking to secularize the kingdom of God, is regarded by us, as, by far, the severest loss we have sustained in changing homes.

Here, we find no brethren. There are some of the "branch-church" out here, but we had rather encounter them than false brethren. F. S. Young came here while he was "state solicitor," and held a meeting. I remember seeing, at the time, his report of his meeting here, and he blew a loud trumpet over it—blowing his own horn. But his work here is in ruins. One Baptist preacher in this section said that he had heard Young preach in this country, and that he was as good a Baptist preacher as he wanted to meet with. Well, I have the satisfaction of knowing that I will not have to build upon another's foundation in my contemplated work for Christ in these parts. Young's foundation was a shaking one, no wonder it has fallen to pieces.

I think of mentioning, from time to time, the advantages of this country, hoping to induce some good brethren to cast their lot with us in this benighted field. Several families of Christians are now planning to move here. We intend to try to fairly represent this country to our readers. While we are anxious to have some Christian families to settle here, we will not, in any way, assist any one in looking out locations, etc., who does not first satisfy us that they are opposed to the different innovations that are now so seriously disturbing the church and hindering the progress of truth. We mean that we will not aid nor encourage brethren who are advocates of a missionary society, instrumental music in the churches, nor of "our plea" for the recognition of sectarian immersion, to settle in this country. This may appear quite proscriptive in its tendency; but we do not intend to be instrumental in introducing elements of discord in our own neighborhood if we know it. We would much prefer to out and out sectarian neighbors to one compromising, secularizing false brother.

OPPOSED THE MEASURE.

Elder J. F. Grubbs, pastor of the Christian church at Cleburne, has resigned his position for the reason that he opposed prohibition, while his congregation was largely in favor of it. After tendering his resignation, he addressed the largest audience that ever assembled in Cleburne, at the courthouse, on Wednesday night, about fifty per cent. of whom were ladies, in opposition to the amendment, quoting from the Bible to back up his assertions. Continuing, he said: "He had believed this amendment to be non-religious, non-sectarian, non-partisan and he could ally himself on one side or the other. He had given the question profound thought and he could not support the amendment. He had long since been taught to revere the Bible as a revelation from God to man. He had gone to the Bible for his light, and he would stand with his Bible, and he believed prohibition contrary to this teaching. All rights that man has in this world were natural and inalienable, yet in the organization of society it was necessary to have laws. Here he quoted from Leviticus, 10th chapter, 9th verse. He would not ask his audience to take his word but to go to the Bible. Man obtained his right to make and drink wine from divine authority. Noah drank wine. The apostles drank wine. Christ commanded it to be drunk to commemorate his memory. He quoted freely from the Bible to sustain his position. He believed the attempt to prohibit the manufacture of wine was a direct blow at the teaching of the Savior correct. It is left to the modern prohibitionist to contradict the teachings of the Bible in the manufacture of wine. He believed that it was the goodness of God that reformed men and not constitutional amendment."

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Please find enclosed a clipping from a secular paper, that is going the rounds here as a campaign document for the anti prohibitionists. Is it so that brother Grubbs has taken that step? I thought that the F. F. and staff were not taking any stock in this prohibition question. But it seems that brother G. has, and worse than all, has fallen on the wrong side of the fence. Is it so? Hoping that the F. F. may live long to battle for the one way, I remain, your brother in Christ,
JNO. A. JACKSON.
Leona, Texas, Aug. 1, '87.

We are not posted as to the political status of brother Grubbs. We presume, however, that the above newspaper account is substantially correct, and that he is an "anti-prohibitionist." Bro. Grubbs has not written any for the F. F. for quite a while don't know why. If we felt it our duty to vote, our present impression would lead us to work and vote for prohibition. But since we look inside and not outside of that volume which "furnishes the man of God unto all good works," for that furnishing of Christian duty; and since we find in that volume no work laid out for Christians, through the ballot-box, or elsewhere, except through the church of the living God: And, as in scanning its pages for our duty, and instead of finding authority to vote, we find such injunctions as the following: "No man that warreth, entangleth himself with the affairs of this life;" and: "Whatsoever you do, in word or deed, do all in the name (by the authority) of Christ;" and: "If a man strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned except he strive lawfully;" And, as we regard politics strictly an affair of this life; and as the only "authority of Christ" that we know anything of is his written word, in which he has not told us to vote; and, as to "strive lawfully," must mean to strive by the written law, we say, as this is the way this matter strikes our mind, we cannot vote on this or any other question. But, when brethren become wise enough to run on ahead of the Lord, and determine questions by their "sanctified common sense"—which sometimes seems very common to us—we have about as much confidence in, and respect for one as another. Hence, while we would differ from brother Grubbs on this question, when we resort to the realms of sanctified common sense, we respect his views on the question as much as we do the views of brethren who have espoused the other side, and doubt not his conscientiousness any more than theirs. Bro. Grubbs "speaking one thing," and brother Jackson and other good brethren "speaking another thing," only goes to show that the trouble is, that both parties have become wise above what is written, and have turned their backs upon the "true light," and are walking in the dark.

Paul's language to the Corinthian brethren applies to these brethren to-day with marked appropriateness: "Now I beseech you brethren, by the name (authority) of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that you be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."—I Cor. 1: 10. The only way to do this, is for both parties to turn back from following their "sanctified common sense"—which is often very unsanctified—and follow Christ. "Do all by his authority," fully realizing that you are "complete in him" for "all good works"—that is, not what stump-speakers from sectarian societies, called churches, and money-loving pastors, and would-be pastors, from among the disciples, call good works, but the "good works God has ordained we shall walk in."

Bro. Jackson thinks that brother Grubbs has "fallen on the wrong side of the fence;" and so do we; and we believe that brother Jackson, and all other brethren who have mixed up with this question, "striving" through the ballot-box, are on the wrong side, too, because they have not been "striving lawfully"—by the law of Christ, but by the law of Cæsar.

I have great respect for brother Jackson, esteeming him highly as a friend and brother. I hope he will not forget that there has been about as much said in the FIRM FOUNDATION on his side of this question as on the other. Bro. Grubbs has not written a line on it, that I remember.

A. McG.

Austin McGary, in his last Firm Foundation, is mad enough to bite himself with a snake, and snaps worse than a snapping-turtle. He is so disgruntled because he cannot meet the arguments of our senior editor against his new heresy, that he exhausts his whole vocabulary of billingsgate upon him. He calls him a Simon Magus, and as destitute of truth as the devil who tempted mother Eve! McGary is bad off. If the Lord don't cast the evil demon out of him he will soon go daft. We advise Jackson and Durst to soak his head in a mud-puddle, and administer large doses of Mrs. Soothlow's Winsling Syrup. Also baptize him a few more times in the Colorado river.—Christian Messenger.

It is a surprise to us that true disciples of Christ will help sustain a paper, whose editor-in-chief will act toward his brethren, and the truth of God, as the editor of the Messenger has acted toward his brethren and God's word. Brethren may differ widely on matters of opinions, and even sometimes on matters of faith, and both parties be actuated by perfectly proper motives. But I boldly assert, without the fear of any unbiased brother or sister trying to gain-say it, that no unprejudiced mind who has read both the Messenger and F. F., can fail to see that brother Burnett has labored all the while to misrepresent the F. F., and to discolor the facts relating to our several criticisms of each other. He has labored hard to create the impression in the minds of his readers, that we were afraid to meet him before our readers, in a debate of the question of sect baptism, and says, we will not let our readers see what he has to say. While the truth is, as all of our readers know, we have repeatedly proposed to discuss this question with him, and publish all he may say, if he will come up to a fair discussion of it. He has given things in the Messenger, as our sayings, that we have never said, nor never expect to, and we have called his attention to it, and he has not corrected it. He has tried to create the impression that we had cut him off from our exchange list, which was without the slightest foundation; and we so informed him, and he could not be just enough to correct it.

He has repeatedly said that the three facts of Christ's death, burial and resurrection constitute the gospel—he has argued this in such an exclusive sense as to teach that nothing else is a part of the gospel, saying, that the only way to pervert the gospel is to deny these three facts. He has been forced to take this position to dodge points made against him. Then when he was reporting a meeting he held at Rose Hill, he said the "ancient gospel had not been preached at Rose Hill till he preached there," when he knew full well that the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, which he had argued before was the whole gospel, had been often preached there. In this he caught himself, as a deceitful handler of God's word; and there is no escape from this conclusion. Every one of his readers, who knows their right hand from their left, knows, that when his report of his Rose Hill meeting is laid down by the side of his arguments, as to what constitutes the gospel, he is caught dissembling and handling God's word deceitfully; and they all know that such a man is a dangerous man as a teacher.

Now, I appeal to such men as brother E. W. Dabney, and other old soldiers of Jesus, to know if they can conscientiously aid and abet, and hold up the hands of such a man?—I am not asking for their sympathy. I know they are opposed to the position of the F. F. on the baptismal question; but what I want to know is, if they are going to encourage the man on their side of the question in these wicked courses, just because he is on their side? If they are, how can they expect God to approve them. I don't believe they will do it.

One who has been intimately connected with brother B, in pushing the claims of the Messenger, and who has written much for it, wrote us, that we need not expect fair treatment at T. R. Burnett's hands. He said, Burnett would not do to rely on when he was pushed. Said, that he feared he would sell the Messenger to the progressives. Now this brother is not in sympathy with the F. F. on the baptismal question; and no man in Texas knows T. R. Burnett better than he.

Why does brother B. say, I am mad enough to bite myself with a snake? It is because I have called attention to his low trickery and disingenuousness. I am not mad. Why does he advise that my head shall be soaked in a mud-puddle? Because he knows that he has been handling God's word deceitfully, and he feels the force of what I said about it, but is too uncautious to act the part of the true man and the humble disciple of Christ and has nothing else to say. Why does he advise my brethren to baptize me a "few more times in the Colorado river?" It is because he has learned that I was immersed a second time; and he thinks the low hints and reproachful insinuations of his and others to this circumstance will redound to the detriment of the FIRM FOUNDATION. How puellanimous his course must appear to many of his readers. I was re-immersed, and I acted in good faith in the matter. I have never seen the moment that I would not have cheerfully submitted that matter, with all its attendant circumstances, to the scrutiny and fair criticism of any fair-minded brother or sister. I have never felt that I did wrong, or doubted for one instant, even, that I did right in being re-immersed. Those who have hinted and insinuated about this matter have only betrayed the evil of their own cowardly hearts, and it has all fallen harmless at my feet. If I could be shown that I did wrong in this or any other matter, I love God and the gospel of His Son just well enough to confess my fault to all my brethren who love God.

With these remarks, I, in all candor and seriousness, ask all true lovers of Christ, to halt and examine their course in encouraging such self-willed and self-loving and wicked men as I have been describing. I would not be justified as a defender of the faith to avow that I intended to let T. R. Burnett severely alone, because as long as he has a following as a teacher, and continues to "pervert the right ways of the Lord," I owe it to Him who has "chosen me as a soldier," to expose these perversions and hold forth the right way instead. If I had the right to ignore him I would do so till he confesses his faults which I fear is not in him to do. Yet I can truly say, I have no enmity towards the flesh and blood man, Burnett. But I hereby bid T. R. Burnett a respectful farewell, in so far as he may hereafter hint, and insinuate and slander me as an individual. I have higher and nobler aims than individual refutation to pursue, and a holier cause than my own weak and sinful character to defend. Where individuals stand in the way of truth, and obstruct its free course, it is right to single them out and expose them in any way that promises advantage to the truth. If I am doing this, then brother Burnett has the right to assail me individually; but he should tell the truth.

TALKS WITH THE SISTERS.

Dear Sisters:

I have an idea, somehow, that a few more hints as to the duty of husbands and wives, will not be out of order. Though I wrote at some length on this subject last October, by request I will go a little deeper into it. It seems some have not profited much by my letter. As I said before, I often see husbands and wives who love each other tenderly, who, though they have the whole world for company, are not happy apart, yet wrangle and find fault with each other to a sinful extent, and not privately always, but oftener in public. They grow gradually into this habit without realizing it, and should any kind brother or sister tell them of it, they would be surprised to think such an impression should get abroad. I think this cutting at each other in public, is not always meant earnestly, but is often done with the idea that it is amusing to others; but this is certainly a very mistaken idea. We may be assured the hearers are far from amused; on the contrary, regard it very seriously, and, perhaps, as the outgrowth of a loveless marriage.

There is a rule of etiquette which says, never entertain any one with home troubles, especially conjugal troubles; for you may be assured that no one is so much interested in them as yourself; which is very wise and true. The key to a great deal of conjugal unhappiness is a lack of consideration for the feelings and failings of others. For instance, I have heard wives say: "My husband and I get along so much more pleasantly when we are alone. When we are in company, he seems to take a delight in holding up every little weakness of mine to view, as if he desired to provoke laughter or blame." I heard another say: "My husband is such a great hand to tell all our little disagreements. If we have just had a slight dispute, and any one happens in, he is sure to rehearse it from first to last." Now this is very unwise, and if these husbands loved their wives as themselves, as they are commanded to do, they would not do this, and so with the wives to whom this may apply. When this is done, a retaliative spirit is aroused, and a dispute is the consequence. This way of making public such faults, often creates the impression of an unhappy married life, when such may not be the case at all. Married folks seem to go on the principle enunciated once by a prominent statesman, who, when a friend whom he was abusing, stepped up and overheard him, said to him: "Well, if we can't abuse our friends, whom can we abuse." So they seem to argue, "If we cannot be unpleasant to home-folks, to whom can we be unpleasant;" or, I will again repeat the poet's apt expression of this idea:

"But oft for 'our own' the bitter tone,
Tho' we love 'our own' the best.

Yes, the guest, or even the stranger, within our gate, receives a kind word and gracious smile, but we reserve for "our own" our impatient looks and words. How true, how sadly true this is! How often is a loving husband or wife, or a little, tender, clinging child repulsed with sharp, wounding words, when we know at the same time, that our very life is enwrapped in their love!

"We vex 'our own' with look and tone
We might never take back again!"

are very solemn words; and we all know the day will come, when every harsh word we speak to each other will return to us with added bitterness; a bitterness springing from a consciousness that the one to whom they were spoken is far beyond our reproach, and will never come back again! This is somewhat of a rehearsal of a portion of my former letter, but these thoughts so naturally arise as I ponder this subject, and it is well, anyway, to keep them before our minds.

Now, let me suggest some remedy for these family broils. First, when two people unite their destinies, they agree to take each other "for better, for worse," and generally it is worse, until they become thoroughly acquainted with each other's disposition. This does not take long, however, and when each learns the faults of the other, they should follow the Apostle's advice, to forbear one another in love. We should bear in mind that every human being has his weak point or points, which, perhaps, cannot be overcome. A husband, for example, may have some fault that appears despicable to the wife, but she should remember that she may have some equally so to him. Each should try faithfully to overcome such faults, but should they fail, then avoid any further mention of them, as it will only gender strife. But instead of this plan, often we see some little inherited weakness of a faithful wife, held up to ridicule, until her eyes fill with tears, by that husband that should love her as his own body. On the other hand, there are patient, gentle, men, whose wives seem to be impatient with them, simply because they know they will bear it. When crushing sorrows come, they subdue, soften and naturally draw husband and wife together; but in these daily petty trials and irritating accidents that will occur, how often we hear the strife-stirring words, "I told you so," or, worse still, "I am glad of it," when, perhaps, they are entirely undeserved. How often, when one is on the verge of giving way to hasty temper, instead of kind and soothing words, the very thing that will aggravate most is said. How often, when one has every nerve strained to accomplish some end in a certain length of time, will the other stand idly by, irritating and wounding at every turn! How often, when a patient, weary wife has done a thing right ninety-nine times, and fails the hundredth, will the husband say she never did it right in her life. How true it is, that the things done are never noticed, but those left undone. Ah, the husband or wife who never receives a word or smile of approval is to be pitied indeed, and there are many such, I fear, especially wives.

Now a great part of this trouble arises from self-love, and a failure to realize the trials of others. Now, dear sisters and brothers, if such a state of affairs exists in any of our homes, let us set about to correct it. We will miss our crown if we do not. The great trouble is, we fail to let patience have her perfect work. We are lacking in that "love that suffereth long and is kind; that vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up; that love that seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; beareth all things, endureth all things; that love that never falleth. And now abideth faith, hope and love, but the greatest of these is Love."

REPORT OF MEETING.

Leaving White Rock, I returned to Hill county, and found brother Richardson at our church near Ficklin's, six miles south of Hillsboro. Bro. Richardson went home on Wednesday to be present at the election, he returned Thursday and went to Arnot's School-house and preached there until Saturday evening, and had eight additions. In the mean time I continued meeting at Ficklin's until brother R's. return on Saturday night. We closed this meeting Monday morning at the water—fourteen additions to the congregation.

At the close of services on Lord's day night, a gentleman came to me and said, that he had stayed away from us just as long as he could, and that he would gladly unite with the congregation, but could not consent to be again immersed. He further said, that he had no more confidence in sect baptism than myself, and that he had obeyed the gospel. He presented himself on Monday morning at the water, and we bid him welcome. Bro. Moore's statement to us was this: "That he had learned the truth from reading the Bible, and that he believed the Baptists to be nearer right than any religious body that he knew of. When he presented himself for baptism the preacher asked him, 'If he believed that God had for Christ's sake pardoned his sins.' 'No,' he said, 'I believe in Jesus Christ and believe that I will be pardoned when I obey him in baptism.'" After some parley, he was received and baptized upon this confession. After living a short time with the Baptists, he found their faith and practice so inconsistent with Bible teaching that he ceased his affiliation with them, and as soon as he heard our brethren preach, he found that we occupied the true position, and expressed his intention of taking his stand with us, and has so done.

Bidding adieu to brethren and friends, brother Richardson and self left Hillsboro on the south bound train Tuesday, August 9th, and arrived that evening, safe and sound, in Austin, where we met brother Gillespie, who soon piloted us to the residence of brother Hansbrough. Our trip down was without any incident worthy of special notice. Our stay at brother H's. was made pleasant by sister Hansbrough, brother H. being absent preaching. We found brother Gillespie and Mr. Denison, our worthy printer, "holding the fort" and as busy as bees preparing the F. F.

for the mall. We are glad to know that nearly every mall brings in new lists of subscribers, and hope that brethren and friends will work diligently for the extension of the circulation during the campaign.

Leaving Austin Wednesday morning on the A. & N. W. R. R. we arrived in Burnett about noon. After fooling our appetites with an apology of a dinner, we took the stage westward for Llano. Of our trip to that place, and thence to Mason, we will speak more particularly another time. Suffice it to say, that we arrived in Mason Thursday morning at four o'clock, sleepy, tired and dusty. Bro. Holland was on hand to receive us, though, and it was not long ere we forgot the trials and bumps of the road in sound sleep. We are resting to-day. To-morrow we start for the camp-ground, situated about fifteen miles northeast of Mason, near Fredonia. Having some other writing to do, I must wait till another time to give you some of the incidents of our journey, etc.

J. W. JACKSON.

REPORT FROM BRO. A. J. McCARTY

As an item of news from this part of the evangelistic field, I will make another brief report. I held another meeting at Roark Prairie, in Walker county, the same place where we had fourteen additions last April. The result was not as great as expected by the brethren. Two noble souls came out and made the good confession, one of this number was a member of the Baptist church. The Baptists have had full sway here for a long time, but the old moss-covered walls of mystic Babylon are tottering and soon will fall to rise no more. The work of exposing and binding of Satan is going on, and by ringing the old Jerusalem blade in his territory many have fallen in love with its glad ring, and willingly bow to the authority of the Christian's king and captain of the hosts of Israel.

The Baptists made a desperate struggle to break up our meeting, not only in making an appointment to conflict with ours (in the same house), but on Wednesday night they had me arrested for disturbing religious worship; but I gave bond ($100.00) and continued to "preach the word." It has been said that, "When the mills of the gods grind, they grind slow but fine." May it not also be said that, "when the fire of God's word burns, it burns steadily but hot?" If one does not want to be burned, he must keep out of the fire.

Wherever the gospel is fully and faithfully preached, we will meet with opposition and persecution. The circumstance mentioned above is purely a case of persecution. A few ignorant Baptists, led by an ignorant Baptist preacher—one of Satan's ministers, a wolf in sheep's clothing, and perverter of the right way of the Lord—are kicking with might and main against the goadings of the sword of the Spirit, and fighting against God and his Son by persecuting the people of the Lord. This is another manifestation of that spirit that was in the Old Scarlet Lady, whose headquarters is Rome, and whose foul and ungodly work for fifteen centuries has been to persecute the saints of the Most High, and to wage an unceasing warfare against the peace and safety of the church of the living God. If they do not cease their wicked opposition to the truth and repent, they will certainly have their portion in the lake of fire where the beasts and false prophets are, and where they shall be tormented for ever and ever.

We closed our meeting at the water's edge on Friday morning, July 22, and rolled for home—Madisonville—where we rested one night, and on Saturday morning we were off again for Grimes county. Antioch is the name of the church. This is modern Antioch, and the place where the disciples were first called Christians in Grimes. We have a faithful band of brethren here. The congregation was planted by brother Sikes, a faithful preacher and a warm friend of the FIRM FOUNDATION. Bro. Duke is their regular preacher. He is also a subscriber to the F. F., but I think he leans towards the Bush. I hope I am mistaken, but from what I saw in the T. C., I think I am correct. Oh, that all of our preachers had faith enough in God, and in the all sufficiency of the holy Scriptures, which thoroughly furnishes the man of God unto every good work, we would have no more use for human plans, nor human machinery to convert the world and save the church.

The result of our meeting here was, five, who had been shaken in, threw away their sectarian baptism, made the good confession and were intelligently and Scripturally baptized. There are several more in the congregation who are anxious to get rid of their unscriptural baptism. Since brothers Sikes and Tant have been converted on the baptismal question, we think they would do well to return and do their work over. However, I think the good work will go on, as the FIRM FOUNDATION has supplanted the Bush organ, the so-called Texas Christian.

As the audiences were large and attentive, we regretted very much that we had to close the meeting, but were forced to do so, as I was under bond to appear before Caesar's tribunal, in Huntsville, to answer the charge of "disturbing religious worship." On the first Monday in August we put in our appearance. With the Bible on our side, and many good brethren to stand by and sympathize and encourage me, and three of the ablest lawyers in Huntsville to volunteer to defend me, I naturally felt very strong. To their (these persecuting Baptists), everlasting shame and contempt, they failed to make out a case, and on Tuesday we came home, feeling happy that we were counted worthy to suffer for his (Christ's) name, the worthy name by which we (Christians) are called.

I am now in a meeting three and a half miles west of Madisonville. Two confessions up to date. The baptizing will take place Lord's day evening. We hope to see many more obey the gospel in this neighborhood to the honor and glory of our divine Redeemer.

Wishing you success in publishing the truth and earnestly contending for the faith once delivered unto the saints, exposing error and driving all innovators out of the sacred precincts of the church, I close for the present.

WILMETH-SWINDALL DEBATE.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have just returned from the Wilmeth-Swindall debate. Dr. Swindall opened the discussion on his affirmative proposition, which is as follows: "The Church with which I, D. D. Swindall, stands identified, possesses the Bible characteristics which entitle it to be regarded as the visible church or kingdom of Jesus Christ." Mr. Swindall claims to be a great scholar, and perhaps he is, but it is such a common claim among Baptist preachers, the music has somewhat lost its charm. In defining the term, scholar, as applied to Baptist preachers, I suggest, that the definition bear prominent baptistic marks. Mr. Swindall has, perhaps, passed his three score years, has had some experience in debate, is not an extra speaker, and his wit is as blunt as the upper end of an ash-hopper. He is especially good in Latin having frequently, during the debate, made use of the word Lipsuslingue. He made a labored effort to make out church succession for the missionary Baptist church, and instead of making out his succession he made a failure in the double superlative degree.

On the doctrine of the final perseverance of the saints, Mr. Swindall worked hard. If a Baptist can be saved without works, there is certainly a difference between them and their doctrine, because the doctrine could not be saved with works. The Doctor was exceedingly mad against the name Christian. He claimed that the name was given by wicked men, that it was given by the devil.

Bro. Wilmeth found a good reason along here for saying, that Baptists were not Christians, and that he would not call them by a name that they repudiated. Bro. Wilmeth said, in this connection, that many of our brethren denied that Baptists were Christians, and since they had the Baptists on their side respecting this question, that they were in a fair way to succeed in establishing the denial, and at the close of Mr. Swindall's proposition, Bro. W. exhorted him to make the good confession, promising him that he would baptize him for the remission of his baptistic sins.

The question of the beginning of the Church was thoroughly discussed, Mr. S, depending upon the Greek to support his cause. Enggike was the Greek word that claimed all attention, Swindall contended that the word signified, has come. Bro. Wilmeth contending that it signified, has come near. Bro. W. showed by the lexicons that S. was wrong. S. tried to carry his point by an appeal to grammars, but it was shown that grammars were not designed to settle the meaning of words.

Mr. Swindall gave a rehash of Williams' criticism on Acts 2:38. Mr. Williams was the reviewer of the review of Jeter by brother Lard. Swindall contended that the grammatical construction in the original of Acts 2:38 forbid the conclusion that the same parties who were told to repent, were the same parties who were told to be baptized. Corroborative of his Greek criticism, he called attention to the fact, that some mocked while others did not, to show the presence of two parties. Bro. Wilmeth denied the correctness of the criticism, and introduced such men as Hackett and Lind, of the Baptists, as against Mr. Swindall. Bro. W. also showed that the two parties referred to by S. were the parties existing before Peter preached, but that Peter's answer was directed to the one party who inquired, "men and brethren, what shall we do," and that this fact, with overwhelming force, was against the gentleman's Greek.

There was one feature in this debate which was new. The discussion of the first proposition occupied three days. On the fourth day brother W. opened his affirmative proposition, affirming the same for the Church of Christ that S. had affirmed for the missionary Baptist church. When brother W. had closed his opening speech, Mr. S. arose and stated that he would reply to W's. affirmative arguments when he saw proper to do so, and continued his arguments on his own proposition. The president moderator having failed to attend on that day, the two moderators busied themselves about nothing but keeping time. Bro. W., in reply, told S. that he would give him two-thirds of the time allotted to the discussion of his proposition, and that he could prove his proposition in the one day left to him. At noon on the fourth day, (brother W's. first day), Swindall's moderator told Swindall if he did not quit that old proposition and attend to the new one, that he would leave for home immediately. This brought Swindall to time, and persuaded him to leave his missionary Baptist church robed in the faded garments of a failure, and attend to negative matters.

Bro. Wilmeth is too well known in Texas for me to attempt to describe him as a debator. It is sufficient to say, that the cause is safe in his hands. The brethren were all well pleased with the debate. I speak advisedly in saying, that the verdict from outsiders was almost unanimous in brother W's favor. The debate closed on Saturday, July 23, having occupied six days. All appeared to be in the very best of humor. It being impossible for me to give a full account of the debate, I will close by saying, that brother Wilmeth fully sustained his proposition in every particular, and I predict good results to follow after.

REPORT OF MEETINGS.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I desire to make a brief report of a few day's meeting, held by brother A. J. McCarty at our house of worship. Five persons, having been taught the way of the Lord more perfectly, came forward, made the good confession and were buried with Christ in baptism for the remission of sins. There are three more who had been shaken in by brother Duke, that are now waiting for his return, on the fourth Lord's day in August, to follow the example of those above mentioned.

We have a little band of brothers and sisters here at this place, about forty members of us, endeavoring to worship God according to the apostolic plan. While we claim to be a band of disciples, we have had but few preachers, such as brothers A. J. McCarty and B. P. Sweeney, to come among us and wield the old Jerusalem blade, (the sword of the Spirit), as they have done. And I might say the same of brother Duke, but I must say also that he sometimes acts inconsistently in receiving sectarians into the church of Christ upon their sect baptism. My desire is, that all those who are receiving them on their sect baptism, would see their error and abandon their practice forever.

I remain your brother in hope of eternal life,
A. M. SMITH.

REPORT FROM MILLS, TEXAS.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

By your permission, I will report a meeting which I held at Enon, Freestone county, commencing on Friday night before the third Lord's day in this month, and continued until the fourth Lord's day night.

In some respects this was the best meeting I have ever held. In the first place, it is usually the case, that on the eve of an election, the issue before the people commands the attention of the brethren to such an extent, that it becomes the all absorbing topic, and one can scarcely enlist them in the work, especially in an issue of such magnitude as the present one seems to be. I, however, am one of the few preachers that never take any stock in politics. I have thus far avoided any public expression, pro or con, although at times the old Adam would almost get the upper hand of me, but I would think of Paul's exhortation, (Rom. 12), and suppress my fleshly desires in that direction. The brethren at this place did not controvert prohibition nor anti-prohibition, but seemed to enter right into the work of their Master. I was greatly aided by brother B. F. Sanders, who did much of the praying.

In the second place, the congregation was larger than usual. Notwithstanding the dust and extreme heat, we had a full attendance from beginning to the end, and all seemed to take a deep interest. In the day we discussed as best we were able, the practical features of the Christian's high calling, and the brethren seemed to appreciate it very much. At night we talked to all on subjects applicable to them. The Lord, through this means, added seven to the body at this place by confession and baptism. I pray the blessing of heaven upon them. Hold out faithful, for you shall assuredly reap in due time, if you faint not by the way.

We also had the pleasure of seeing three who had been out of the narrow way, return to the fold and take up their line of march to the better land. May God bless you, my brothers, and may He bless the good sisters at Enon in their work of faith and labor of love.

We obtained ten new names for the F. F. on your twenty-five cents offer. We are now at Box church. We have no church here, and can not as yet say what can be done here—not much good, I fear. Prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists are having barbecues, sectarians are having camp-meetings, and you may know that not much good can be effected under these circumstances. Your brother for the truth.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Through the kindness of somebody, I have received several copies of the F. F. In the main, I am pleased with it. It is about ten years now since I left the anvil to go forth and preach the gospel of the grace of God. During that time over three thousand have united with the disciples of Christ, under my labors. Among the number are preachers, class-leaders, Roman Catholics, infidels, and all classes of sectarians, as well as a large number of Egyptians—or persons straight from the kingdom of satan. We have faithfully done our part in telling them of Jesus and his love, and, according to the glorious gospel of the grace of God, bringing Jesus to them, and, we trust, them to Jesus.

For years we have averaged a sermon every day in the year, and, under the blessings of God, over a convert for every discourse preached. Within a few miles of home are several congregations of Christians which have been brought together through our preaching, that are doing well. Then we go over the county and state lines and we can count scores of congregations which meet every Lord's day to celebrate the praises of God and the Lamb, gathered together through our labors in preaching the things pertaining to the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. To be able to state these facts is a pleasure to us, and if it will serve as an incentive to earnest faithful men to go to work and continue to work, and work all the time for Jesus, I will have accomplished my purpose.

I am now engaged in evangelizing, or going from place to place, as the brethren call upon me, to carry the good news to all who will give ear to the joyful messenger of life and salvation through Jesus Christ our Lord. May the Lord bless you in every good word and work.

REPORT.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Bro. S. N. Thomas has just closed a good meeting at Tucker's schoolhouse, three miles from Blum, where we had eight additions by baptism to the one body. Much interest was manifested throughout and many others were convinced of the truth, by the plain and forcible manner of the preaching. Bro. Thomas surprised us, for we did not think he was much preacher, but we acknowledge our mistake. He never sounds a trumpet before him.

Bro. J. W. Baxter, a young brother, was with us part of the time. Tucker's has been called the worse place in Hill county, and we prophesied that no good would result, but brother Thomas says, the gospel is the power of God.

Your brother,

H. C. DICKERSON.

ADVICE TO THE UNMARRIED.

I would like to say a few words to the unmarried brothers and sisters: I would suggest, for instance, when you begin to cast your eyes about in search of a companion, be sure you look in the right direction. Be careful, for you must remember you are looking for a companion for life; not for a few short months, but for life. Think, if you can, how much depends upon your choice; a life of peace and pleasure on earth, and eternal happiness in heaven, on the one hand; while on the other, a life of suffering, self-sacrifice and bitter tears, at best, if you are faithful to your Redeemer; but, if you should happen to be weak, a final separation from your blessed Savior, who shed his precious blood for you. Oh, for Christ's sake, for the love of your soul, be ye not unequally yoked together. Paul says: "It is good to marry only in the Lord." There is no congeniality between the Spirit of Christ and an alien sinner. It is even worse with a member of any of the sects. You would be obliged to neglect your duty, one Lord's day of every month, to go with your companion to their place of worship, or cause hard feelings. You know Christ said, not to forsake the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is. There is one day lost. Now suppose it is too far for you to go alone, and he will not go with you; he does not even want you to go; you see, right here, you are forced to choose to obey your husband, or your Savior, one. Too often it is the husband. 'Tis true, we are commanded: "Wives, obey your husband;" we can, and may in the Lord. If he has the Spirit of Christ, he will ever be ready to carry you to the house of the Lord; you will both be ready to labor in the vineyard of the Lord together.

What a life of happiness and peace on earth, which will lead to a still happier home in heaven. Some may say, I never thought of that until, I am afraid, it is too late; I am betrothed to the one of my choice; I can't give them up; it is too hard; it may be I can win them to the Lord. That is seldom the case; besides, must you do evil that good may come? Is it not easier to give them up, than to give up the Lord and the hope of heaven for a few years of misery here? How do I know they will be in misery? Because I do not think it possible for one to taste the joys of the Lord, then forsake them and be happy. I could not, I know. If these few words can be the means of saving one soul from a life of misery, I shall feel thankful.

OBITUARIES.

I desire to report through the F. F. the death of brother M. W. Damron. Bro. D. was born May 10th, 1824, and came to Texas in 1844, and was married to Miss Sullio Pennington in 1847, and, in 1869, he and his wife obeyed the gospel. Bro. Damron was universally popular, never asked for office that the people of his county did not give him. For the last twenty years he had retired to private life, giving much of his time and money to the upbuilding of the Master's kingdom. He was one of the elders of the church of Christ at Salado, and was greatly beloved by all the members. Bro. D's. christian wife preceded him fourteen years to the "land of the blessed." He has left two daughters to mourn his loss; but they are both Christians, and mourn not as those who have no hope. Bro. D. had been on the decline for three years, and on the 28th of April last, his pure spirit passed into the land of rest, where we all hope to go.

D. PENNINGTON.

San Gabriel, Texas, July 28, '87.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jackson was born in East Tennessee March 28, 1802, daughter of John and Lydia Howell, was married to Ephraim Jackson March 18, 1821. She united with the disciples of Christ in Limestone county, Alabama, during the early ministry of B. F. Hall and C. Kendrick, and other faithful and devoted ministers of the word, who preached the gospel in Alabama, Tennessee, and other states. Sister Jackson and family moved to Texas and settled in Hickory Valley, Burnet county, in 1855. During the last two years of her life she suffered, at times, the most excruciating pain, from disease of the heart. Four weeks before her death she was confined to the bed; her sufferings, at times, were intense. She bore them all with a patience, fortitude and resignation which only those who love God can know. Mother Jackson died as she had lived, in the triumph of that faith which has ever characterized the faithful in Christ Jesus. Every degree of care and attention was bestowed on this faithful and devoted Christian that the love of children, affectionate relatives and kind friends could bestow. Mother Jackson fell asleep in Jesus January 12, 1887. The funeral service was conducted by brethren E. Hansbrough and J. N. Gibson. By her special request the coffin was made of plain pine lumber, with not a yard of black cloth. She said: "Place nothing but plain, rough stone—nature's own manufacture—at the head of my grave."

THE RELATION OF A CHRISTIAN TO CIVIL GOVERNMENTS.

Now that the heat of passion has somewhat subsided, we hope that all can study this subject with that calmness and deliberation that should actuate every lover of the truth.

By many, our position is regarded as extreme, narrow and unscriptural. If this is true, it is earnestly solicited that the error be pointed out. I ask then, the most critical test of the position herewith given. Be it understood, first, that I do not embrace the denominations under the term Christian. The great majority of professed Christians are made so by the "doctrines of men," and not by the law of the Lord. I allude to Bible Christians, and not to the hosts of persons who are nominally so. There is a law of induction into Christ. I do not understand any to be in Christ, who have not complied with this law. It is, hence, not to the alien that this question relates. It will be conceded, I think, that all questions concerning Christian duty to be settled by the word of the Lord.

If then, the Christian should take part in the governments of this world, the word of God will so direct. I believe our brethren are generally agreed, that there are three sources of authority derived from the word of God: 1st. By precept. 2d. By example. 3rd. By inference (Ex necessitate rei,) from the necessity of the case. Then the word of God, in reference to Christians duty in this respect as well as every other commands, or it furnishes an example of approval, or we must draw from its teaching, a necessary inference.

You will then, my brethren, go with me to the Oracles of God, to investigate the subject under consideration. I present the following proposition: The will of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Christian's King, embraces his entire duty as a subject of his kingdom, and the kingdom of the Savior is distinct from the kingdoms of this world. The kingdoms of this world, are divisive in their nature, and intended only for the children of the world; hence, Christians should not render active service in them.

My first proof is found in John 18: 20-30. In his answer to Pilate, Jesus said: "My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence." Paul to Christians at Colosse, (1: 13), says: "Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son." To the Hebrew Christians he wrote, (Heb. 12: 28), "Wherefore receiving a kingdom that cannot be shaken, let us have grace, whereby we may offer service well pleasing to God, with reverence and awe." (N. R.) The Savior's kingdom, then, is distinct from the kingdoms of this world. The kingdoms of this world are included in the kingdom of darkness. Christians have been translated out of the kingdom of darkness, and into the kingdom of Christ. In this kingdom we are to serve the Master, with reverence and awe; and such service will be pleasing to God.

When our Savior was on earth, he was a source of great comfort to his disciples, by his personal ministrations. Just before he ascended, he told them, "I will pray the Father, and he shall give another comforter that he may abide with you forever: even the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him."—John 14: 16-17. In the sixth chapter and sixty-third verse he says: "My words are Spirit, and they are life." The words of our Master first guide the alien into his kingdom, before they are a source of comfort to him. For the world cannot receive this comforter. The words of the Savior, are then, a comforter alone to his children. All of the Christian graces and Christian duties are given by virtue of the relationship to their King. As subjects of Christ's kingdom, we are to produce the fruits of a Christian life. Hence, that portion of the New Testament commencing with Romans and ending with Jude, embracing twenty-one letters to Christians, contains the directory of Christ, and covers the field of Christian duty. No part of these duties were given to aliens. He must first come into the kingdom of Christ before he is a subject of the commands and promises in this division of the will of Christ. Citizens of earthly governments, and citizens of the kingdom of Christ are a separate people.

Will you go with me to the second letter of Paul to the church of God at Corinth, sixth chapter? In the fourteenth verse he says: "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers. For what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness?" I here pause and ask the question: Are my political brethren giving heed to this, when they yoke themselves together with unbelievers in the advocacy of Christian duty? But we continue: "What communion hath light with darkness? What concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an unbeliever? And what agreement hath a temple of God with idols? For we are a temple of the living God: even as God said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them, and will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore, come out from among them and be you separate saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing." What unclean thing is alluded to that we must separate ourselves from? 1. Being yoked together with unbelievers. 2nd. Unrighteousness. 3rd. Darkness. 4th. The things of Belial. 5th. Infidelity. If we separate ourselves from these things, Christ says: "I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters."

In the light of such clear teaching, how can my political brother claim the approval of the Master? Paul to his brethren at Rom. 12: 2, wrote, "Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."

Again I ask my partisan brother, are you being transformed, and renewing your mind, and proving by your course what the acceptable and perfect will of the Lord is? If you answer yea, then what about the equally zealous, and equally honest, political brethren who are opposed and working contrary to your politics? This is a question you must meet, or surrender to the will of the Lord, as an honest, God fearing man. Will you do it? "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace."—I. Cor. 14: 33. Now, James 3: 16, tells us where confusion exists, even among brethren. "For where envy and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work." Paul tells us in Gal. 5: 19-22, that they which do such things, shall not inherit the kingdom of God. To the church at Corinth, (3: 16-17), "Know ye not, that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." Paul clearly shows to the Philippians the Christian citizenship. "That ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world, holding forth the word of life."—Phil. 2: 15.

Here the great duty of the Christian is clearly set forth. 1st. We are in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation. 2nd. We are to shine as lights among them. 3rd. We must constantly be guided by, and hold forth the word of life. The grand reason why we should do this, is given in the twentieth verse of the next chapter. "For (says the Apostle) our citizenship is in heaven, from whence also we look for our Savior the Lord Jesus Christ." (N. R.) "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus, the Lord, so walk ye in him; rooted and built up in him, and stablished in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving. Beware, lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ. For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power."—Col. 2: 6-10. Hence, as Christians, we are to touch not, taste not, handle not, (which all are to perish with the using) after the commandments and doctrines of men.—Col. 2: 20-22.

We will now go to the impressive exhortation of Paul to Timothy: "I exhort, therefore, that first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority." What for Paul? "That we (Christians) may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty."—I. Tim. 2: 1-2. In his second letter (2: 1-4) he wrote, "And these things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also. Thou, therefore, endure hardness (hardships) as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier."

Is it not strange that many brethren, in the light of such teaching, will entangle themselves in the affairs of this life, and insist on others doing likewise, and exhibit a spirit of ostracism toward those who prefer to be true to the Master. Many of us prefer to so act, that we may please him who hath chosen us to be soldiers of the cross. In the kingdom of Christ, He alone is law-giver. He has legislated in reference to the duty of his subjects. Let us survey the statutory of the Master. What has he said about the crime of theft? "Let him that stole, steal no more; but rather let him labor working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth."—Eph. 4: 28. What has he said about lying? "Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds."—Col. 3: 9. "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. For without are dogs and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie."—Rev. 22: 14-15. Here we have judgment pronounced against six classes of wicked deeds, including lying.

What has he said about the married state, one of the most important and responsible positions in life? "For the woman which hath a husband, is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth, but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. So then, if while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress; but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law, so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man."—Rom. 7: 2-3. Our Savior said: "Whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced, committeth adultery."—Mat. 5: 32. In the fifth chapter of Galatians, we learn that a fornicator, and an adulterous person shall not enter the kingdom of God.

What has he said about drunkenness? "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit."—Eph. 5: 18. In I. Cor., 5: 11, we are told not to keep company with a drunkard, and with such an one not to eat. In I. Cor., 6: 10, we are told that "a drunkard shall not inherit the kingdom of God." In I. Tim., 2: 9, He forbids the wearing of gold, of pearls, and of costly array. In 5th of Galatians, he condemns, as works of the flesh, adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lavisciousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like, making seventeen counts, clearly specified, and many others necessarily included in the expression, such like.

Now I submit a question for my political brethren. In legislating against the crime of theft, lying, sorcery, witchcraft, whoredom, murder, idolatry, violating the marriage covenant, fornication, adultery, drunkenness, conformity to the world, the wearing of gold, pearls, and costly array, uncleanness, lasciviousness, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envy, revelings, and things like it, if the Lord intended that Christians should take part in the governments of the world, why was he silent in mentioning all the foregoing crimes, about their duty when these things should occur in governmental jurisprudence, both in reference to voting and assessing the requisite penalty? Again: if it is the Christian's duty to labor to incorporate into our state, or national constitution, a prohibitory measure in reference to one of these crimes, because, of its evil tendency, then his work should not stop till every other one is likewise included, even to the wearing of gold, of pearls and of costly array. And when our work shall have ended, governmental criminal law will be the counterpart of the divine, and we will have changed the language of our Savior to Pilate, from my kingdom is not of this world, to my kingdom is of this world.

Thus we establish from the unerring word of God our proposition, namely: The law given by the Christian's king, embraces his entire duty, and that his kingdom is distinct from, and not of, the kingdoms of this world.

I will notice a few of the strongest objections offered against my position. In reference to converted office holders, I am asked, where is it stated that they resigned their offices, which they should have done, if political office holding is incompatible with the Christian's calling. I am willing to calmly weigh any objection that may be brought against the position before established by the word of God. Hence we will examine this question by the record. In order to a full understanding, I will ask a few questions, too: Where is it stated that the thief stopped stealing; that the adulterer ceased his adulteries; that the converted priest ceased to perform his duties as a priest? What converted persons ceased to do, is not stated, but what they continued to do is often alluded to, commented upon, and instruction given for the performance of duty. This is true, whether their acts were good or evil. If good, they were encouraged in them, and directed how to continue to do good. If their acts were evil, they were affectionately warned to cease to do so, under the penalty of final punishment. If then, these converted officers, continued to perform the functions of their respective offices, why were their positions and duties, as officers, never after referred to? We find that every other relationship, position, and duty, from the greatest to the least, was alluded to, and minutely given to guide them in the path of duty; but in no part of the book of God is there a single reference to a single one of these officers, after his conversion, in his official position, nor a line of direction or guidance as such. Will some one of our political brethren explain this consistently with their position. A Christian is taught how to act as a friend, a neighbor, an enemy, a husband, a wife, a parent, a child, a rich man, a poor man, a master, a servant, and as a subject of a civil government. Now there are a number of officers of the government referred to that were converted to Christ, on whom largely depended the happiness, the peace, and prosperity of the people, and not a single line given in reference to their continuing in office; not a line of instruction or guidance, in these, the most difficult positions, of civil governments. Can my office-holding and political brethren explain this to the satisfaction of reasonable Bible Christians? I know it is not said, in so many words, that converted officers resigned their offices. Yet we know that the incompatibility of the Christian's calling forced them to do so. We know that Matthew resigned his office. We know that Paul did. How do we know this? Their after life is given, and this shows this fact. Then we see that some resigned whose resignation is not stated. May not all have done so? In every case where the after life is given, they ceased to perform official duty, notwithstanding the mention of their resignation is not given. Does not this raise the strongest probability, that if the after life of the others had been given, the same fact would have been shown in the other cases. In Rom., 16: 23, reference is made to Erastus, the chamberlain of the city. We see, however, from references elsewhere given, that at this very time he was not acting as chamberlain—not in office. He was the greater part of his time traveling as an evangelist with the Apostles. His title as mentioned in the above Scripture, he had acquired by his former office, just as we call a man who has been a general in the army, General, when he has ceased to be such. One who has been a judge, Judge, after he has ceased to be one. One who has been a governor, Governor, after he has ceased to be so. While then it is not mentioned that converted officers resigned, or were turned out of office, it is, I think, certain that they all did give up their offices.

Look at the Jailor's case. His duty as an officer was to imprison criminals. All Christians were criminals in the sight of the authority under which he was acting. Under the law, to let a prisoner escape, even by accident, involved punishment by death. When the jailor thought the prisoners had escaped, he was in the act of killing himself, rather than meet it by the law for his carelessness. Paul's assurance that they were all there stayed his hand. He was, by the preaching of Paul, converted to God. After his conversion, he turned them out of his own accord. Do you believe that the authorities permitted him to remain in office? If the after history of the Jailor had been given, it would certainly tell us that he either fled from the authorities for his life, or was killed for turning these prisoners out.

We will look at another case: There was an office in primitive times called a Centurion. His duty was to arrest criminals. Christians were regarded as criminals. This being so, it was the Centurion, who at the command of the Magistrates, punished Paul and Silas so severely before their imprisonment. This was their official duty. We have, in the 10th of Acts, an account of the conversion of Cornelius, a Centurion. Now do you believe that a government, regarding Christians criminals, would permit a Christian to hold the important position of executing its acts of punishment upon Christians? Again: do you believe that a person converted to Christ, would continue to hold an office, the duties of which are so antagonistic to his principles of Christian duty? A Christian man who can believe such things is certainly not to be reasoned with. It is, then, clearly deducible as a necessary inference, that converted office-holders ceased to hold office in civil governments.

If mention had been made that some resigned their offices, it would doubtless have been also mentioned that they did so for reasons, and those reasons would have been given. If others had continued in office, and mention had been made, instructions would certainly have been given for their guidance. From the fact that neither is mentioned, we deduce the conclusion that there was a general and well understood rule that controlled the life of every one converted to Christ. Hence it was no more necessary to say that a converted officer resigned his office, than it was necessary to say that a thief ceased to steal after his conversion.

Both the enemies and the followers of Christ well understood that fidelity to Christ prevented active participation in, or support of, the government of this world. It would be better for the Master's cause, if brethren would so understand it now. The disciples, however, at that time were disposed to recognize in no sense, or to submit in any way, to governmental matters. It was to correct this extreme view that Paul wrote to the Romans, in 13th chapter, as follows: "Submit to the powers that be." Also to Titus: "Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, etc.;" and that Peter wrote, "Honor the king;" clearly drawing the line of duty, not in active opposition, not in ac-

the participation, but in passive submission. But be it fully understood that our passive submission must be modified by our highest duty to obey God, rather than man. For instance, our government requires at our hands the payment of our taxes. Christ says, render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's. We do not conflict with Christ's law when we pay our taxes. Hence, we submit to human law in this respect. But should my government demand of me something that Christ has forbidden, my duty to Christ is first. The Apostle Paul, rising to the full height of Christian manhood, exclaimed: "For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, (and this includes the powers that be), nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."—Rom. 8. Exhortatively he addresses the Ephesian Christians thus: "The eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power, which he wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also that which is to come: and hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all."—Eph. 1: 18-23.

Then our submission is not demanded when it forces us to violate the law of the Lord. We are justified by example, to avail ourselves of the privileges of human law, when necessity demands it. Paul, when persecuted, appealed to the authorities for protection. This was no evidence, however, that he was a participant in the government. If so, then the Union man who appealed to the protection given him under the Confederacy, was a supporter and a participant in the rebellion. The Englishman who is tried under the laws of our government, claiming the immunities granted him under our laws, is a participant in, and a citizen of our government. In the late war between the States, Bros. Lipscomb and Fanning, of Tennessee, claimed from both the Federal and Rebel authorities exemptions from military service, granted by the laws of both governments, for themselves and their brethren. Did this make them participants and active supporters of the Federal and Confederate governments? We then, must passively submit to our government in the payment of taxes, and all other duties not in conflict with the law of the Lord; and may claim its protection under persecution, as Paul did.

History tells us when and how the question arose in reference to Christians holding office. It was bitterly opposed, and as late as the year 250, a bishop was deposed for accepting office. I know that questions frequently arise in civil government, involving issues that appeal strongly to our judgment to take part, and to cast our vote on the side of morality. But, dear brethren, the devil transforms himself into an angel of light that he may deceive, and by these moral questions, he labors to draw the children of God away from their fealty to their Master.

But, I am told, that common sense and our better judgment is against me. I answer, that it is the part of wisdom to be guided by the teaching of Christ, and not by our judgment independently of the precepts of the Christian's King. This my dear brethren, is precisely the contest God is having with the world—whether it will follow his word, or man's judgment and wisdom. This is a grand contest. The Christian is a soldier in this conflict. He is to "take the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." "The weapons of his warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds, casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."—II. Cor. 10: 4-5.

Hence, in the language of one of old, "To the law and to the testimony; If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."

I am frequently approached under a moral garb, and solicited to unite with the order of Friends of Temperance: You are a preacher of the gospel and we want your influence. My reply invariably is, my dear sir, you possess nothing good in your order, that I, as a child of God, am not obligated to teach, to exemplify, and to work for. The Christian stands upon the best foundation of any organization of earth—the rock, Christ Jesus. He has given him his word—the grand lever that can elevate sinful man from the lowest depths of sin and temptation to the citadel of God. This is enough for me. Why should it not be for you?

From another standpoint I am asked: "What is to become of the people, if Christians withdraw from active participation in civil governments?" Will you weigh well my answer? Give to the cause of the Master, brethren, as he directs, the same time, zeal, work, and means, that you are giving to the Farmer's Alliance, Grange, Odd Fellows Lodge, Masonic Lodge, Friends of Temperance, the cause of Prohibition, and to governmental affairs, and the religion of our Divine Master will permeate society, and there will be inaugurated a standard of morality that will govern and control those within the body of Christ, and gain the respect of those without. Such a standard of morality as this will stand the test in this world, and the fiery ordeal in the world to come. So far as earthly governments are concerned, the force of circumstances demand the best laws they can frame. This necessity has always existed, and will continue to exist. The welfare of society demands that the wicked be punished. The laws of earthly governments are to govern and control those who are earthly minded. In all civilized governments a large proportion of the best human laws are framed by those who are not Christians, for the very purpose of governing and controlling the wicked. It was in view of this fact that Paul said: "For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? Do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same." A passive submission, then, to human law, when it is not in conflict with the will of the Christian's King, is demanded of all Christians. Active participation in governmental matters, by Christians, is neither enjoined by precept, example, or necessary inference.

I have given you, dear brethren and friends, some of my reasons for entertaining the position I do on this question. I confidently present them, and ask the closest scrutiny, by all lovers of the truth. I abstract them from the Bible, heavens golden measuring reed. Will you stand on the Rock of ages, the platform of eternal, unerring truths given by God to man? I pray God that we may fully understand the Christian's duty. He alone will survive the wreck of worlds, and will exist as a perpetual monument of fidelity to Christ on the plane of immortal life.

BAPTISTS' REPENTANCE.

Dear Brother McGary:

I have three or four questions to ask you which were put by one who is doing all he can against the F. F. Please answer through the columns of your paper and oblige:

Is the repentance Baptists have genuine? If you answer, no; why not? If you answer, yes; then does the belief that repentance comes before faith, keep repentance from coming at all? If not, why not, according to the principle involved in your teaching on the baptism subject?

R. T. LAWRENCE.
Burnet, Texas.

As Bro. McGary is absent at present, and has his hands full of other business, I will answer the above questions.

"Is the repentance Baptists have genuine?" We answer, no, it is not. "If you answer, no; why not?" I answer, no; because God's word says nothing about the repentance Baptists have; therefore, it is not genuine, but is false.

Now, for the proof: You admit, and Baptists teach, that repentance comes before faith. Now this is either true, or it is false. If their repentance comes before their faith, it is displeasing to God, for Paul says: "Without faith it is impossible to please him." Is God pleased with genuine repentance? He is. Is He pleased with the repentance Baptists have? No; for it is a repentance which precedes faith, a repentance that needs to be repented of—and it is not genuine repentance, but is false. If you persist it is true that the repentance the Baptists have comes before one kind of faith, but not before saving faith, as Baptists say, when you press them closely, then you have two faiths for them, when Paul says there is one faith. Now one or the other of their faiths is false. Yes, both of them are, because both are a contradiction of the word of God.

The third and fourth questions are only suppositional, and are answered in the preceding.

Now, in conclusion, if the repentance the Baptists have is false, because it precedes faith, then the faith Baptists have is false, because it follows repentance; then the confession Baptists make, or the experience Baptists give in, is false, because it is a confession unknown to the word of God, and not required by Christians, and is an experience founded in ignorance and through excitement of the feelings and imaginations, and is contrary to and a contradiction of the word of the Lord. And then the baptism Baptists have is false, because their faith is false, and their repentance is false, and their confession is false, and their baptism is bound to be false, and so also is their works and worship, and it is a great delusion on the part of our own members of the body of Christ, to imagine that those who ignorantly, and sometimes wilfully disobey the word of God, are as good Christians as those who have heard the pure gospel of Christ preached in its simplicity, and understood in its beauty, and believed in its fulness, and obeyed from the heart. If a lie, believed and practiced, will free us from sin, what advantage then hath the truth over a lie? If there are any errors let's avoid them.

AN ERROR IN SIMPLE ADDITION
BY A DOCTOR, AN EDITOR AND A STATE EVANGELIST.

I noticed in a recent number of the F. F. a statement over the signatures of Bros. Aten, Bush, and Dr. Adkin, that Bro. Tant belonged to the FIRM FOUNDATION faction, which consisted of only 10 or 12 erratic brethren. It is hardly necessary to say, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship we the God of our fathers.

Will you please to readjust your figures, brethren? I can call to mind about 75 preaching brethren in this State who endorse the F. F. I think it can be swelled to 100. Do you want the names, brethren? They will be forthcoming if demanded.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, SEPT. 15, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

ATTENTION, READERS.

This is to notify my brethren and friends that ere this reaches them, my home will be Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas. All correspondence to me should be addressed there. Our exchanges will please note this change and send their papers to that place. But all funds and orders for the FIRM FOUNDATION or any pamphlet published by us should be addressed and made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

We notice that Bro. D. Lipscomb, senior editor of the Gospel Advocate, proposes to exchange a few articles with Bro. J. W. McGarvey on the question: May Christians participate in the control of human government. Bro. L. proposes to affirm. Now if Bro. McGarvey will engage in this discussion, and publish it in the Guide, pro and con, he will supply his readers with some of the most nutritious gospel diet they have had in a long while. The only danger would be in its being stronger meat than most of them could bear. These men are both as strong as their respective sides can muster. We would agree to find sale for five hundred copies of such a debate, in pamphlet form; because we believe that this question is fraught with lessons of more practical utility to the congregations than almost any other that could be named.

The editors of the one-sided Filmsy Foundation continue their bitter war upon Bro. Barnett, without letting their readers see anything that Bro. Barnett writes. This is the only way they can meet him in debate.—Christian Messenger.

Dalton was the contriver of the happy hit, "Filmsy Foundation." He wore it thread-bare, and cast it aside for any ape that might come along and pick it up and don himself with it. Our brother seems to think that it is debating, to refer to our paper as the "Filmsy Foundation." Well, he ought to know what debating is, since he is, at least in his own estimation, one of the "liveliest debaters on the American continent." But our paper is not only "Filmsy," but it is "one-sided." Now, the Messenger is a two-sided paper. That is, one side of it proclaims that the three facts of Christ's death, burial and resurrection constitute the gospel wholly and exclusively. And the other, or second side of it denies, that when these three facts are preached, separate from the whole doctrine delivered to the saints, that the "ancient gospel is preached," that is, it denies that this is the "ancient gospel" when preached at Rose Hill. Yes, a two-sided paper—two gospels: one for Rose Hill, and the other for the special pleading of "our plea." Now if there is not something filmsy in such double-dealing as this, then the word, "filmsy," has lost its usual significance. I think the man's chance for heaven, who shows two such inconsistent sides as this, a very filmsy one, indeed.

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER.

We will send the F. F. to any address till the first of January, 1888, for twenty-five cents on trial, or five copies till then for one dollar. This is a splendid opportunity for the friends of the F. F. to send in the names of some of their friends in different counties, or in different states, in order to give them a chance to read and learn that there is, published by Christians, one sound paper that boldly contends for the faith once delivered to the saints, one that will not compromise with any error in any manner, shape or form.

SOME QUESTIONS TO BRO. BURNETT.

When you said, that the ancient gospel had never been preached at Rose Hill till you preached there, did you mean that the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus had never before been preached there? Will you now tell your readers that these three facts had never been preached there till you preached them? Now please answer these questions in the spirit of Christian candor, and don't run off to frivolous and vulgar personal reflections and nicknaming. You know just what you meant when you reported your Rose Hill meeting, and we ask you these questions with the view of enforcing the truth, and not for personal advantage.

SPIRIT OF PARTIALITY.

Prof. J. W. McGarvey, in giving a history of "The Kentucky Christian Education Society," in a recent issue of the Guide, says of that society: "In order to receive the aid of this society, a student must be in good standing of some Christian congregation, having been 'baptized for remission of sins.'" Now it seems rather strange that Prof. McGarvey would call attention to such a demand on the part of said society, without offering some adverse criticism. He is also the president of this society. This demand, that the applicant shall have been "baptized for remission of sins," is a discrimination against a large class of young men whom Bro. McGarvey considers Christians. Why will he remain silent on this matter, while this society is being conducted upon this discriminative and proscriptive principle? The President considers those who have been immersed because they believed God had already remitted their sins every whit as good Christians as those "baptized for remission of sins." Then this discriminating principle of partiality practiced by this society, is in direct conflict with the Spirit of Christ, which says: "I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect angels, that thou observe these things without preferring one before another, doing nothing by partiality."—I. Tim. v: 21. A. MCG.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We are going to call upon you in all kindness, to send in your dues, if you owe anything, by the first of October. You are aware that hard times fall doubly severe upon us, when we tell you that a great many have not settled with us, and you know that we do not advertise as other papers do, hence it requires close collection to carry on the F. F. and keep it out of debt; and we hope no one will become sensitive on the subject, and have this as an excuse to stop his subscription. We want to give you the best paper in the world for the least cash. So, brethren, send us your arrearages and renewals in advance and thus aid us in our work. While it is a small amount to each of you, the aggregate is immense to us.

THE MYTHIC JOURNAL.

The Dallas Theological Conclave decided to put out a paper that will fully represent them, or, as they express it, "be worthy of the great brotherhood." Now, if they mean by the "great brotherhood," that impatient, rebellious faction led by C. McPherson, A. J. Bush, the three Clarks, W. K. Homan, and those that walk in the shadows of these self-willed dignitaries, then a consolidation with J. D. Shaw's Independent Pulpit, and the Texas Christian would give them just the thing that is "worthy of them," and of which they are worthy. For, to turn away from God's appointments, to human devices after beginning to walk with God, is really more rebellious and more sinful than to refuse to be led by Him at all. Hence, when these brethren, who have once been led by the Spirit into the body of Christ, turn from the directions of the Spirit as it has pointed the way through the church of God, for the spread of the gospel and the conversion of sinners, and prefer to traverse the directions of the wisdom of this world as this wisdom has pointed the way through human plans and inventions, they are more culpable in the sight of God than Mr. Shaw, or others who have never known the way of God. Open, frank infidelity like Mr. Shaw's and the Independent Pulpit, is entitled to more respect from men, and is less sinful in the eye of God, than the unfaithful and perfidious way of these false brethren named, and their organ, the Texas Christian.

They may feel the pulse of the Texas brotherhood for their paper enterprise, by which they expect to take stronger hold upon the churches and strengthen and prolong their lease of power, and reap richer harvests of "filthy lucre;" but we predict an utter failure for the enterprise.

The FIRM FOUNDATION has already found friends around too many Texas hearthstones, and is being by these, too rapidly introduced into new ones, for such a paper, as would represent these traitors to the faith, to make much headway. You are too late, brethren! The truth is soon going to "have free course" in Texas, and it will "be glorified." Your tactics of "severely letting alone" has been indulged in too long, and has proved a most splendid failure. The mighty are falling! A. MCG.

SOME QUESTIONS ABOUT PURIFICATION.

A brother who dissents from our position, in our reply to Bro. Conner, on purification of the heart by faith, says:

I will ask you some questions to which I hope you will try to answer: Now, since faith purifies the heart, does faith come before baptism?

Are purification of the heart and remission of sins the same thing? It appears this is your idea.

Can't a man's heart be pure and his sins not be forgiven? You will please answer and oblige.

1. We answer, faith "comes before baptism," and reaches way beyond baptism, so far that everything done must be an act of faith; "for whatsoever is not of faith is sin." Then, a baptism that is not of faith is of sin.

2. We do not say, that purification of heart and remission of sins are the same thing. But what we do say is, that man purifies his own heart, while God forgives sins; and at the very point at which man's heart becomes purified through the "obedience of faith," God has appointed the forgiveness of sins.

3. As to the question, "Can't a man's heart be pure and his sins not be forgiven," we must say, we are not measuring the possibilities of God, but gospel facts. Yet, when we strain our imagination ever so much, we cannot conceive of such a being as a pure-hearted sinner. Our Savior said, "blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." I cannot believe that he meant that some sinners should see God; nor that part of the "pure in heart shall see God," but all of them. A. MCG.

"NEW IDEAS."

If we take the increase in the Guide's circulation in Tennessee within the past few months as reliable evidence, there has been a phenomenal awakening all along the line in that State. There is one way to account for this felicitous manifestation that is at least plausible, to-wit: We have been sending sample copies of our paper into that territory without stint. People are not blind to superior merit when they see it, and new ideas like new blood in the veins, arouse life and activity in the mental and spiritual economy. Go ahead, Bro. Carter, we are with you.—Apostolic Guide.

Yes, "new ideas" do "arouse life and activity in the mental and spiritual economy." The old idea, that the church of the Living God was ordained of God to spread the gospel of Christ over the world without the aid of human auxiliaries, has been Advocated to the brethren of Tennessee for more than twenty years, and doubtless this idea had waxed stale and flat with many impatient, precipitate and advancing natures in that state. But now comes the Guide, with the "new idea," that the Lord needs help in the way of a human institution called the "Missionary Society," to preach the gospel of His Son to the world! This "new idea" arouses life and activity, and zeal in those spiritual sluggards; but it is a dangerous, destructive zeal, because it is not "according to knowledge." These "new ideas, like new blood in the veins," which the Guide is infusing into these brethren, "zealously affect them, but not well." It is a misdirected zeal. Like Paul's, before he went to Damascus, their zeal, too, is provable by their "persecuting the church"—which they are doing in scoffing at the "Lord's plan." Yes, new ideas have been in demand, and have found a popular following ever since the first batch was first whispered into mother Eve's ear, to the present. There is a large element in the church, whose "ears have been turned unto fables," or "new ideas," and they have "heaped to themselves teachers." It seems, that in the church, as well as in the commercial marts, wherever there is a demand, the supply is forthcoming. Hence, the demand for "new ideas" is being satisfied. A. McG.

CONDITION OF PARDON.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I wish to ask you a question concerning the conditions of pardon to the sinner. I learn from the Book that faith, repentance, confession and baptism are the principal conditions of pardon, and, as I understand that, faith is the mainspring that prompts a man to action—for, "without faith it is impossible to please God"—we know that there are many other things that are conditions of pardon.

We heard one of our progressive preachers yesterday, and, if he is right, we have been improperly taught. He enumerated the conditions of pardon as follows: Faith, repentance, confession, prayer and baptism. If he is right, we should erect a mourner's bench at once, and call sinners to the bench and teach them to pray, Methodist fashion. But this is not in keeping with the Apostolic teaching, therefore, we can't accept it as the word of God. I asked him for the chapter and verse, and he cited me to Saul's and Cornelius's cases. But did God command them to pray?

I love the tone of the FIRM FOUNDATION, because it speaks the words of eternal truth, and I pray God that you brethren may live long and stand firm, and shun not to declare the whole counsel of God, as it is in Christ Jesus. Please let us hear from you through the FIRM FOUNDATION. Please explain the unpardonable sins, or sin against the Holy Ghost. Your brother in the common faith,

B. S. KING.
Farmersville, Tex., Aug. 15, '87.

Any man who adds "prayer," as a condition standing between the alien and the kingdom of God, adds to the word of the Lord, and seeks to bind on earth what the Lord has loosed in heaven and on earth. This is sinful; and its penalty is, to have the "plagues that are written in the Book, added" to such offenders. Men may, and, doubtless, do commit this sin ignorantly and conscientiously. But such men are blame-worthy because they presume to teach that which they do not know. A man who attempts to teach the way of salvation, should, first, study to show himself approved unto God, rightly dividing the word of truth. If he gives to the alien that which has been meted out to God's children, he ought "to be ashamed;" for he pretends to be working for God, while his work is not approved by God. No inspired teacher ever told an alien seeker to pray! Those who teach differently are challenged to find an instance of the kind in the whole scope of Apostolic teaching, after they were told that, what they "bound on earth should be bound in heaven; and whatsoever they loosed on earth should be loosed in heaven." Since God has graciously bequeathed unto us a record of that teaching which He has bound in heaven and earth; and, since in that record we are "thoroughly furnished unto all good works;" and, since in this thoroughly furnishing record we do not find any such condition as prayer for the alien sinner, we are irresistibly forced to the conclusion, that to teach such a condition is a bad work, contrary to "sound doctrine," and should be condemned by all lovers of truth; and he who has taught it should "be ashamed;" and cease to do so again. The divine statement that Cornelius prayed, and that his prayers "came up for a memorial before God," weighs nothing on this question. Cornelius did not have the gospel of Christ upon record as we now have it, but it was in such "earthen vessels" as Peter, James, John, and other selected men—these men were to that age, what the New Testament Scriptures have been to subsequent ages, and will be to the end of the ages. Hence, when Cornelius was directed to send for Peter, it was just as if he had been directed to send for the New Testament, wherein to learn what to do to be saved.

Now, what conditions did Peter lay down to him when he got there? Did he tell him to pray? If he did, it failed to go to record. By turning to Acts x, the reader will find, that after Peter reached Cornelius and asked why he had sent for him, and Cornelius had detailed to him the circumstances that caused him to send for him, Peter preached the gospel of Christ to him. He began by laying the foundation for this gospel, which was, to show that Jesus, who delivered it, was "ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead." This he did by referring to his wondrous works "in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem;" and more than all, by his resurrection from the dead after he had been hanged upon the tree and slain. He told him, that all the prophets had given witness that, through the name of Jesus, (that is, the authority of Jesus,) whosoever believed in him should receive remission of sins.—(See verses 29-43) Hence, as Cornelius had sent for the gospel of Christ as it was contained in the earthen vessel, Peter; and as Peter had laid this gospel before him and he had believed it, Peter commanded him to be baptized "in the name of the Lord." Acts x: 48: For the Lord had commanded Peter and his associate Apostles, to "Go and preach the gospel to every creature." And He promised that, He that believed that gospel and was baptized should be saved. If the case of Cornelius is to be taken as a model for subsequent conversions, prayer and all, then our sectarian friends come nearer following this model than we; for they have it prayer, Holy Ghost, and then baptism, or rantism, either one. If the record of this case is to be followed just as recorded, then people should be induced to pray to God, before they believe the gospel of Christ; for Cornelius did his praying before he believed the gospel of Christ; for it was before he heard it, and he could not believe it till he heard it.

Now, if there is a man in this world to-day whose case Cornelius will fit, in all its details and circumstances, let that man act as did Cornelius. But he must be a devout man, an alms-giving man—one that fears God and desires to know the will of the Lord; but can't obtain the New Testament, nor hear it from the mouth of man. That would be the man to submit Cornelius' case to, were it not for the fact, that he who could give him Cornelius' case, could, instead, give him the same gospel Peter gave Cornelius, which would obviate all that Cornelius had to do before Peter reached him. But those who try to lug in prayer as a condition for the alien, refer to Ananias' language to Paul, when he said: "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." They claim that the expression, "calling on the name of the Lord," means praying to the Lord. But in no use that the Apostles have made of the expression will it bear such a construction. Take Paul's use of it in Rom. x: 11-16. "For the Scripture saith, whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed. For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent?" (They could not, because it was only those who were chosen and "sent," who knew what to preach. Hence, Cornelius had to send for one of these in order to call on the authority (or name) of the Lord.) "As it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things. But they have not all obeyed the gospel"—that is, they had not all called upon the name of the Lord. Since things that are equal to the same thing, are equal to each other; and since "calling on the name of the Lord," and "obeying the gospel," are both equal to salvation, they are equal to each other. If those that call upon the name of the Lord are saved, and if "calling upon the name of the Lord," means praying to the Lord, as some of our brethren teach, then Cornelius and Paul were both saved before baptism. Let calling on the name of the Lord mean calling on, or submitting to the authority of the Lord—that is, obeying the gospel—just what it is, and we have harmony in the word of God; but let it mean praying, and we will have contradiction after contradiction.

All sin is, in a sense, against the Holy Spirit, but I suppose you refer to the sin of "blasphemy against the Holy Spirit." Strictly speaking, persons cannot now commit the sin, which our Lord then called "blasphemy against the Holy Spirit." They saw a demonstration of his God-hood in his miracles; but with these miracles staring them in the face and challenging their attention, they resisted their convincing power, and charged that he did these things by the power of Beelzebub.

But it seems to me that, the principle is the same in those who have the evidence of these miracles, and his resurrection from the dead, transmitted in such an irrefutable, overpowering and convincing manner as it is, if they see these evidences and resist them, and scoff at them, and use their influence and energies to turn others away from the truth by such a course, we believe the principle is the same. Such people have not honest hearts. In the parable of the sower and the seed, it is only the honest heart that ever yields fruit.

DANIEL WITH LOGICAL EYE-GLASSES ON.

In the Octographic Review of August 18th, in an article headed, "Cutting The Tap Root," and signed, "Daniel," we find some wonderful work, just such as only a "Daniel" could do. But we believe, that if the "princes, governors and captains, and the king's councillors were gathered together, around" this modern Daniel, they could see that his "coat is changed," if "the hair of his head is not singed, nor the smell of fire passed upon him." The coat he had on a short while ago bore this inscription: "THOSE BAPTIZED AMONG THE DENOMINATIONS MANIFEST MORE COURAGE AND LOYALTY TO CHRIST IN SO DOING THAN THOSE WHOM WE BAPTIZE" Now, he has either "changed" or turned his coat so that we read, upon it: "When I made the proposition I did to Bro. Stone's article," (which was that sectarian path referred to, that was inscribed on his coat), "I had not put on my logical eye-glasses; for really the question at issue never appeared to me to be of sufficient magnitude to give it more than a passing notice. Hence I made the statement that I did, in a sort of off-hand way when I really should have affirmed nothing but let Bro. Stone affirm his practice." As off-hand as was his statement he does not admit that he was mistaken about it; but he ought not to have affirmed anything but let Bro. Stone affirm his practice! So then, with his logical eye-glasses on, he still, for ought he has said or that we know, sees: More courage and loyalty to Christ in those baptized among the denominations, than in those baptized by those who preach the truth as it is in Jesus, and baptize those who believe that truth. Then, as he would say, the way of the denominations is, "the more excellent way." Then why does he not adopt this way of "MORE COURAGE AND LOYALTY TO CHRIST?" Will he tell us?

But this "re-baptism tree" did not, at first, appear of sufficient "magnitude" to merit more than a "passing notice" by "Daniel." But now he has put on his logical eye-glasses, and is going to win the name of Samson, to go with "Daniel," by plucking up the "re-baptism tree," by the roots. Now, lookout, Daniel, Samson, that you do not pull this "tree" down upon yourself, and thereby "lay more at your death than you have slain in your life," by burying your own self under it. "Daniel," in "Cutting The Tap Root," is freeing the columns of the O. R. of what is commonly called "Re-baptism." He prefers to do this wonderful work all by himself; the reason he prefers to do it by himself, instead of dividing time, we suppose, is, because he can read the "land writing on the wall" of "our plea," and it spells to him, against the plea, "MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN." What he calls the "re-baptism tree," grew in Paul's day. What a pity this Daniel, Samson did not live then to "cut the tap root," and set Paul right. He calls that, which refuses to recognize immersions that are not authorized by Christ, "the re-baptism tree." Now, if he will turn to Acts xix, he will find that the roots of this "tree" run back to Paul's time. Hence if it is a tree it is as one "planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth fruit in season; its leaf also shall not wither," even at "Daniel" Samson's efforts. But there is a tree that demands Daniel's best efforts. It is the corrupt tree of "our plea," which "was not planted by our heavenly Father," and "shall be rooted up." This tree was planted by "the fathers of this reformation," and the "axe" of truth, "is laid unto the root" of it. If it was planted by our heavenly Father, as Daniel contends, then let him show it quickly, or down it must come! But this mighty man of valor and his courageous comrades that have taken shelter under this umbrageous human plant, call on us, who are for "up-rooting all plants not planted by our heavenly Father," to prove that their tree was not planted by our heavenly Father!! This is the kind of "logical eye-glasses" they wear! Because "Daniel" thinks he could disturb the minds of his brethren on so many subjects, such as the nature of "repentance," "believing upon a personal examination of testimony, in contradistinction from taking anything for granted," the "form of confession," etc., etc., his therefore, is, that it is not necessary to believe what inspired preachers preached and what primitive disciples heard and believed. I would throw away such "logical eye-glasses," as made things look that green.

I think that if "Daniel" would play "Nebuchadnezzar" a while, and not "Daniel" so much, for the O. R. it might be better for the cause. We do not say this to help Bro. Stone; for he needs no help. If "Daniel" would only attempt to prove that his tree is a heavenly plant, and permit Bro. Stone to examine his proofs, his Samsonian locks would be quickly shorn. But he will not do this, but wants Bro. Stone to affirm a negative. If his "logical eye-glasses" were not so green, he would answer Bro. Stone's demand, to know where he got his catechism: "Are you satisfied with your baptism?" He called for the origin of Bro. Stone's catechism, now let him tell where his own came from. If he really wants to investigate what he calls the "re-baptism question," then why does he not consent to handle the real issue that is involved? He will not deny that the Lord authorized the preaching of the gospel that the Apostles preached, in which gospel they preached the remission of sins through baptism, and the baptism of those who now believe that same gospel. Neither will he deny that the Lord authorizes the baptism of those who have been baptized contrary to the Lord's authority; that is, authorizes the baptism of such, when they believe this same apostolic gospel, as Paul baptized about twelve at Ephesus. Then, this is all we teach on this question. If he will deny it any of us will affirm it. But he teaches that the Lord authorizes the baptism, also, of persons who have not heard, hence do not believe the gospel the Apostles preached. This we deny, and call for the proof; but his logical eye-glasses are too thin and green to see his duty on this question. We hereby call on him for the proof of his teaching. If he must deal with "trees," let him show just one virtue of this Upas that God did not plant, and which has no place in the vineyard of Christ. A. McG.

J. W. MCGARVEY, SR.

All the disciples know, either personally or from character, the man whose name stands at the head of this. His reputation as a religious teacher extends over two hemispheres. For thirty-six years he has been preaching the gospel of Christ, and submitting the terms of "Our Plea," to immersed sectarians. We think it safe to say, that no man, among the disciples of modern times has exerted more influence, at home and abroad, than he. And his popularity and influence has grown with his years, and is at the present on the increase. To-day he fills more positions of responsibility, perhaps, than any man among the disciples. He is a leading Professor in "the College of the Bible," editor of one of the most popular and widely circulated religious papers published by the disciples—the Apostolic Guide; and is president, treasurer, etc., of several auxiliary societies, or institutions.

Now it is not the moral character, nor individual piety of J. W. McGarvey that we propose criticizing, or calling attention to. We presume that from this standpoint he is about as unassailable as any Christian who has wielded the influence he has; in fact, we suppose his private character is as free from serious blemishes as any ordinary man's. But it is the public actions of J. W. McGarvey, sr., his career as a public religious functionary that we propose arraigning before our readers. This we have the undisputed right to do; for all of the public acts of any man, whether secular or religious, are the acknowledged property of the public, to be used as circumstances may demand, when fairly handled; and we intend to handle his upon the strictest principle of fairness.

We are truly sorry that Bro. McGarvey and other leading men among our brethren, have treated the FIRM FOUNDATION the way they have, thereby forcing us to pursue the course that we have now set out upon to bring the truths that we contend for, to the attention of our brethren throughout the land. These leaders have studiously avoided the issues involved in the chief question that we have pressed upon their attention, by letting the FIRM FOUNDATION "severely alone."

However, a few allusions have been made from time to time, in our leading papers, to the question of sect immersion; but every such time the real issue has been held off at arms length and evaded, and sympathy sought by fore-casting the consequences through worldly-wise calculations. Now, inasmuch as our confidence is unshaken in the rightfulness of our course, in refusing to acquiesce in the practice of recognizing and receiving into Christian fellowship persons who have been immersed from the denominational, "orthodox," standpoint; and as it is the evident duty of those who teach and practice this thing, to show their authority for the practice: and, as they have been repeatedly called upon to furnish this authority: and as they have not responded to this fair demand upon them; but have, when they have taken any notice of the demand at all, called upon those who deny the Scripturalness of the practice to affirm their negative position; we say, in consequence of the foregoing facts, we have determined to show from the ripest thoughts of J. W. McGarvey—and, perhaps, other prominent men among the disciples, who, like Bro. McGarvey, have taught and practiced this thing that we deny their right to teach—that he has condemned this practice doctrinally, potentially and virtually, as pointedly and effectually as it has ever been condemned in the FIRM FOUNDATION.

We have alluded to these things before; but as the circulation of the FIRM FOUNDATION is four or five times as extensive now as when we mentioned these things, we think that the time has come to make these inconsistent attitudes, of these brethren, tell for the truth. Bro. McGarvey became offended at us when we mentioned these things before, and wrote us that we had violated the principle of Christianity, in publishing a private letter of his. But we could not see the matter in that light, as his letter had nothing of a private nature in it. But even if we did wrong, he has no right to refuse to answer the palpable and equitable demand upon him, to harmonize his position on this question, with his teaching in his "Commentary on Acts," which has been before the public about twenty-five years. True and acceptable teachers of the religion of God's Son, that is, acceptable in God's sight, must not let any individual offense against them, however trying it may be to their patience, stand in the way of any known duty—and Bro. McGarvey must know that it is his duty to give attention to this matter: for it is not out of idle curiosity that we ask him to explain his discrepant teachings; but many, many brethren want to hear his explanation of this matter; and he owes it to the "Lord who bought him" to explain it, whose life-giving truth, from Alpha to Omega, is one unbroken, harmonious system, and in it there is no inconsistency at all.

So, we conclude this, by notifying Bro. McGarvey, that we shall lay his teaching and practice down by the side of some of his matured thoughts in his "Commentary," and shall ask him some questions bearing upon them, in our next. With the fear of God, and the love of truth actuating us, we assure him that our motive in this contemplated examination of his teachings, is free from all personal considerations and influences. Of course, if Bro. McGarvey will not give these matters some attention, we shall proceed to make out our case against him, on the presumption that he feels unable to grapple with these difficulties satisfactorily, and is unwilling to confess his fault to his brethren. But how can he, knowing the truth of God so well, and the demand for humility on the part of true disciples of Jesus, act so sinfully in God's sight, as to refuse to comply with so plain a duty?

A. McG.

THE TWELVE AT EPHESUS.

It is a fact that cannot be denied, that Paul commanded the twelve at Ephesus to be baptized. He had them re-baptized. Now the question is, why did he have this done? I take the position, that they had to be taught, and hence did not have the right kind of faith before they went into the water. It is evident to my mind that those twelve were made disciples through the eloquent preaching of Apollos, who was mighty in the Scriptures. "For he mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, showing by the Scriptures that Jesus was Christ. 1st. The twelve at Ephesus had heard Christ preached. 2nd. They believed in Christ. 3rd. They repented of their sins. 4th. They were baptized for the remission of sins: and, finally, I may safely say, this was all done in obedience to God. Who will deny it? Was their baptism valid? No. Why? Because Paul taught them the truth more perfectly and had them baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. Why did he re-baptize them? The first reason is, they knew nothing of the Holy Spirit; and, the second reason is, they were "baptized unto John's baptism"—by the authority of John. They were ignorant of those two items of "the faith," Paul knowing this, taught them the full measure of the faith necessary to gospel obedience; and, without asking them, if they were satisfied with their former immersion, he baptized them in the name, (by the authority), of the Lord Jesus.

Had some of our brethren been present, who believe in and practice the "shaking process," they, no doubt, would have asked them, if they were satisfied with their baptism, and by a good, hearty shake of the hand, bid them Godspeed, with their John the Baptist baptism, which had been out of date for twenty years. But Paul knew better than to encourage them with their unauthorized baptism, and so he instructed them and taught them the gospel in its fulness, and baptized them by the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ, and then he laid his hands on them, and they received the Holy Spirit.

I take the position, that there is but one baptism now, as in Paul's day, and the one baptism has its antecedents and consequents, and without these it is not the "one baptism" ordained of the Lord Jesus Christ. The baptisms practiced by the sectarians is not the "one baptism," because the scriptural antecedents are wanting. Persons immersed by sectarian preachers do not make the good confession. They tell the preacher that God for Christ's sake has pardoned their sins. They do not believe what Peter said in Acts 2:38. They do not believe in the Scriptural doctrine of the Holy Spirit. The Spirit they pray for and claim to get, is not the Holy Spirit that guided the Apostles into all truth. Admitting them to be conscientious and honest, still we deny the acceptableness of their obedience. If the baptism of the twelve (Acts xix:1-5) was not valid with all their honesty, their repentance, their confession of sins, etc., how can we say and affirm that the baptism of these sectarians is valid and Scriptural?—Let those who affirm and accept it, prove it. I deny it. If Paul re-baptized twelve men because they had not been properly taught, we who claim to take the Apostles as our spiritual guides, have a right to do what he (Paul) did. Paul says: "Those things which ye have both learned and received and heard and seen of me, do, and the God of peace shall be with you."—Phil. iv:9. We learn from Acts xix:1-5, that Paul baptized twelve men who had been baptized unto John's baptism, and whenever I find Baptists who are honest enough, and will let me, I will teach them the way of the Lord more perfectly, and baptize them into Christ, (by his authority) for the remission of their sins. I have re-baptized about one hundred during the past three years, and will continue to do so until some of our wise scribes show me the authority for shaking them in on their baptism. If our wise and able brethren, who think we are disturbing the peace of Zion, by baptizing these sectarians into Christ for the remission of sins, will show the authority against it, I will cease it at once. I never have thought there was power enough in man's puny grasp to shake these sinners into Christ. I invite any one who will, to criticize what I have written, and we will answer him in a friendly and brotherly spirit. I desire peace and union, but the Church must be purified before we ever can have peace and union. Brethren, let us settle these questions by the word of the living God, which thoroughly furnishes the man of God unto every good work, and not by an appeal to the "fathers of the great reformation."

Respectfully,
A. J. McCARTY.

REPORT OF MEETING.

On Friday night before the fifth Lord's day in July, Bro. J. S. Durst began a meeting at Caljack, twelve miles above Junction City, Kimble county, Texas. On Saturday evening Bro. McGary and I joined him. We continued the meeting until Tuesday night. Six made the good confession and were baptized; two of them, Bro. and sister Wooten, having at one time joined the Methodist church, and becoming dissatisfied with that, they were baptized into the Baptist church, and about two years ago they were shook out of the Baptist church into (as they supposed) the church of Christ; but having learned the way of the Lord more perfectly, they made "the good confession," and were baptized for remission of sins, as the Scriptures teach; by complying with which teaching they were inducted into the body, or church, of Christ, and not a human organization.

Bro. Wooten has a beautiful farm of about one hundred acres, which he irrigates, and raises fine crops of small grain, mellons, vegetables, etc., and there is a good deal of land on that stream, the South Llano, susceptible of irrigation, and profitable culture, and can be bought now on reasonable terms.

We trust that the brethren at Caljack will realize the importance of the position they occupy, and the relation they sustain to each other in the body of Christ, his church, and the obligations they are under to live in accordance with His will, avoiding even the appearance of evil, and that they will meet together every Lord's day, read and study the Scriptures, sing and pray with and for each other, partake of the emblems of his broken body and shed blood, and thereby grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Brethren, let us "hear of your affairs, that you stand fast in one Spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel."—Phil. 1:27. E. H.

ATTENTION, BRETHREN.

Some strange things are noticed in the F. F., of August 1st, second page, second column. Those who believe the teaching as presented in the F. F. are said to be out of harmony with the "general body of Christians in Texas." Bro. Tant is said not to be "properly endorsed by the Church," has "gotten into the lobby," also he is said to be "an extremist," and is "out of order."

The above charges have moved me in the Spirit to say a few things, which, perhaps, would not have been said, had they not appeared. I have hoped and prayed for a fair and impartial investigation of the differences between the brethren of the F. F., and those who shake the immersed sects in, but all seems in vain; hence, I have come to the conclusion that a fair and impartial discussion will never be, and that we will have to put each party to the test; try their teaching in the court of Apostles, and hear the verdict as rendered by the Divinely inspired Apostles. Let us, then, examine the teaching of Bro. Tant by this rule.

1. As to his preaching: It is admitted by all parties, that whatever the Apostles preached, should be preached. Attend to the following: They "preached the gospel." They preached "Jesus." (Acts 8:35.) Now what is the difference in preaching Jesus and the gospel? All answer, none. They preached "the word of the Lord."—Acts 16:32. Now what is the difference between preaching the word of the Lord and the gospel? All answer, none.

Now let us compare Bro. Tant's preaching with the Apostle's preaching:

1. The Apostles told of Christ's wonderful suffering and death for our sins. So does Bro. Tant.
2. The Apostles told of his burial. So does Bro. Tant.
3. The Apostles told of his resurrection. So does Bro. Tant.
4. The Apostles told unbelievers to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ for salvation. So does Bro. Tant.
5. The Apostles told believers to repent—for the remission "of sins." So does Bro. Tant.
6. The Apostles taught that "with the mouth confession is made unto salvation" So does Bro. Tant.
7. The Apostles told men to "be baptized—for the remission of sins." So does Bro. Tant.
8. The Apostles taught that all Scripture was given by inspiration of God, and was profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. So does Bro. Tant.

Again: We, one and all, agreed before God and man, on becoming Christians, "to speak where the Bible speaks, and keep silent where the Bible is silent." That "what-ever could not be read in the Bible, or proven thereby, was to be rejected." This is substantially the position of Bro. Tant.

Where, then, is the difference between Bro. Tant and the Apostles? Just nowhere. But did the Apostles receive into the church by the shake of the hand those who were baptized without understanding the gospel as others understood it when they were baptized? No. Neither does Bro. Tant.

What did the Apostles do in such cases? They taught them the way of the Lord, and baptized them just as though they never had seen any water baptism. (Acts 10.) So does Bro. Tant.

Did the Apostles use the organ, or endorse the use of it in the worship? No. Neither does Bro. Tant.

Did they organize a missionary society, separate from the church, with its president, secretary, committee, etc.? No. Neither does Bro. Tant. But enough.

In conclusion, I must say, that such charges are scandalous, and that every true disciple of Christ should withdraw fellowship from the men who made them. Every Christian should declare his disapproval of all such slander. Those brethren and sisters that are for the Lord, will sooner or later have it to do. As for me, you may enroll my name among those, who will speak where the Bible speaks, and keep silent where the Bible is silent.

Let's hear from the brethren all along the line from Maine to California. Put on the whole armor of God. Fight the good fight of faith; lay hold on eternal life, and remember that it is no little fight, no light reward. May the blessings of God, our heavenly Father, ever be with you, is my prayer.

LAVACCA DOTS.

Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in thy holy hill? He that walketh uprightly and walketh in righteousness and speaketh the truth in his heart.

Just home again, after an absence of two weeks, among the sighing pines. Nacogdoches is the place of my birth, and I love it still. There I have many warm friends; there I have a brother; there I left my mother, and there I long to be. There I met the "East Texas War Horse," John F. Brill, a man of wonderful courage, and an excellent preacher. He is bold and fearless, yet kind and firm in his manner of speech. He has given up the shaking lay-out altogether. Three confessions and baptisms there.

Went to a Baptist meeting while there; heard wonderful things, indeed. Text: (whatever that is,) "Come and go with us, and we will do thee good, for the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel."—Moses to Jethro. He said, that Jethro represented the world, and Moses the Baptist church. Exactly. Jethro was Moses's father-in-law, and, according to this rule, the world is father-in-law to the Baptist church. Now you have it exactly! This is what I have suspected for some time. Behold, it was shapened in iniquity, and in sin did it's mother conceive it. But it will not do to say, that "old Israel" was the type of the "Baptist church," for more reasons than one. Baptists, you know, can't fall, while all of Israel, who passed through the "Red Sea," did, with two exceptions. So you see that Israel was not a type of the Baptist church. Again, the Israelites were not saved until they had passed through the water. Baptists saved before they had. Don't sit again. Moses did not propose to vote to see whether or not Jethro should go: Baptists, you know, do. No fitness here. Moses did not ask the Israelites, do you realize that you are in danger? and then, in the next breath, do you feel that you are safe? Two things at once, you see. Saved and damned, too. Hardly anything impossible with the sects. But they are erring brethren, say their apologist. Certainly. But if God will forgive their former error, may He not forgive the latter; so let them alone where they are.

That Stone, out in Indiana, is rather hard to turn over.

The Bush Co. treated Bro. Tant rather badly, did they not? The Texas Christian is breathing rather hard just now.

The digressive organ is nearly gone, and they must, for another look, Or else be found floundering in the pond.

Blitting at the naked hook. They stood upon the digressive deck, Whence all but them had fled. Burnett, McGary, their speed tried to check;

But they listened not to what was said.

Hurrying on, they cannot wait, Nor for the old path look, Shows, conclusively, they want the bait—

Don't care for the Book.

Well, well, does it not look like it, sure enough. On with the F. F. I am picking up subscribers occasionally. Yours in the faith.

JOHN STRODE.

Wellersburg, Texas.

Dear Bro. Hansbrough:

I have just closed a meeting, with three additions, at Alnaville, Rutherford county, Tennessee, where you preached a few sermons, two or three years ago. There are several readers of the F. F. in this neighborhood, and they are highly pleased with it.

The brethren at Alnaville are good, earnest, faithful, working brethren. We had large congregations, and good interest, throughout the meeting.

From Alnaville, I went to Cedar Dell, and preached four discourses to a house full of people every time. Cedar Dell is in Marshall county, Tennessee.

Bro. Hansbrough, unfortunately, I lost the paper in which you replied to my article; so, I am not able to refer to any of the things in it now. But I desire to draw you out a little farther: In John, 9th chapter, you find there, Christ spat on the ground and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with clay, and told him to go, wash in the Siloam. The man went and washed and came seeing. Now, I want you to tell me why he went and washed.

Did he go to get the clay off, or with the expectation of seeing, or to obey the command of the Savior? If he went, not knowing what the blessing would be, did he obey the command?

I try to speak a good word for your paper, occasionally, because I think such a paper as the F. F. is very much needed among our brethren. I find those who read your paper are generally good, earnest workers in the vineyard of the Lord. I send you the following names, for four month's subscription: Wm. Anderson, Carter's Creek; E. E. Wilson and G. L. Harmon, Chapel Hill; C. S. Richardson, Triune. All the above places are in Tennessee. I send you also fifty cents for my subscription for the remainder of the year.

I am truly glad the F. F. is not joined to the human prohibition party. I am sorry to say, that many of our preaching brethren in Tennessee have almost quit preaching the gospel of Christ and gone out preaching prohibition. But some of our preaching brethren are standing very firm, and working earnestly on the God-given plan.

Bro. Anderson, of Carter's Creek, whose name I sent you, is a man who sticks closely to God's plan. Bro. Anderson is a most earnest preacher.

I trust much good may be done by the FIRM FOUNDATION.

F. C. SOWELL.

Columbia, Tenn.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I pen you a few lines to let my Texas brethren know how the cause progresses in this part. The Lord has added nearly seventy souls to our little band recently. I am preaching in Wayne and Hardin counties, Tennessee, and thank the Lord that my humble labors have been thus far blessed. Opposition from the sects have been, and is yet very great. Many of them who, a few years ago, wanted to unite with us by virtue of "our plea," have become very bitter against us, because we want them to put on Christ before receiving them. So much the better for us; probably, for them.

The F. F. is the paper for the brotherhood. Send sample copies to Bro. John A. Jackson, Waynesboro, Tenn. Your brother in Christ,

C. E. HOLT.

Cypress Inn, Tenn.

Dear Bro. McGary:

It has been a long time since I have written to you. I have moved from Dallas county to Denton county; have been very busy building and improving my farm, since the last of May. My postoffice is Garza, Denton county. I made one trip around, visiting several congregations. Got a few subscribers for the FIRM FOUNDATION. All I have seen, say they intend to renew when their time paid for is out. Many say, that it is the only pure paper they have ever read.

I have just closed a meeting of six days, close to home, (at a place called Lebanon, with eight additions; six by immersion. I left a good interest, and Bro. White to carry on the meeting.

Bro. Griffin says he will send you several subscribers after awhile. I am happy to see so many able pieces written and the cause of Christ so ably defended in the FIRM FOUNDATION. It has the right name and it has the right ring of good metal.

I am sorry to see Bro. Burnett's miserable failure, after defending the cause of Christ so ably against the Baptists, and then, to be like the cow, kick it all over. Bro. Burnett would be useful, if we could get him converted; but as long as he thinks the Church of Christ came down through the slime-pit of Baptist theology, he never can be sound. The Church of God stands upon its own merits; needs no sectarian props to hold it up. Everything that had a beginning has an ending. The Church of Christ had its beginning on the day of Pentecost, and its ministry will end when Christ shall come again; called the church militant here on earth, but is eternal as God is eternal, and was with the Father before the world was; for in the beginning was the word and the word was made flesh, and dwelt among men, and this is the word by which the gospel is preached unto you, wherein you stand, by which ye are saved. If you keep in memory that which I delivered unto you, except you have believed in vain, how that Jesus Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, that he was buried and rose again according to the Scriptures, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. The law of the Lord went forth from Mount Zion, or Sinai, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. I have anchored the Church of the first born with the throne of God before the world was.

It takes three things to make a kingdom: territory, subjects and a king. The king has not been dethroned. The devil is as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may destroy, but as long as there is one subject, the kingdom is in him, and is not in the Baptist church. Ye are the temple of God: ye are God's building, and he that defiles the temple of God, him will God destroy. So the Baptist church is not the temple of God, neither did the Church of Christ come down through such a slime-pit of corruption, for God never had one Child horn of any of the daughters of Babylon, the Baptists not excepted. If they will show one, I will quit preaching.

So let Burnett and all the other bobby-shealy, shake-in preachers come up to the word of God, or quit lying against the truth, for it is not their rule of faith and practice.

Now, my dear brother, I have promised this to your subscribers, so you will please correct mistakes in spelling, and let the brethren know where I am. I will send you more subscribers soon. Yours truly in the one faith,

WILLIAM MCINTIRE.

Garza, Texas.

PUBLISHERS NOTES.

Notice Bro. Durst's article, "The Relation of a Christian to Civil Governments," on first page in this issue. It is irrefutable.

Bro. R. W. Floyd, of Waelder, gave us a pleasant call a few days ago. He is sound on the Bible, and is a firm friend to the F. F.

We received an invitation to the marriage of sister Maggie L. Stone to Mr. H. H. Shick, at Catlin, Ind., Aug. 20th. Sorry we could not attend.

There are several good articles on hand, that are crowded out of this issue. The paper is too small, or the articles are too long, or there are too many of them, one. Which?

Bro. W. P. Richardson stopped one night with us on his return from the big meetings in Mason and McCulloch counties recently, and gave us a full description of the proceedings, and cheered us all up considerably.

A postal from Bro. Grubbs recently states he has had about ninety additions to the church of Christ under his preaching. All by confession and baptism. Mostly from the Baptist society. One Methodist preacher and wife obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine once delivered to the saints, and were thereby made free from sin.

Bro. A. J. McCarty was in our office the 2nd of this month, on his way to Belton, to perform the marriage ceremony between his brother, Eric F. McCarty, and Miss Lula Armstrong. Bro. Mc. says, the Baptists of Walker county have had him rearrested on the same old charge of disturbing their worship, and he has hopes of proving not guilty to the charge. T. H. G.

FILIAL DUTY.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I feel it my duty to write a few lines for the F. F. on this very important subject, my mind having been directed thereto, by one of the saddest, most pitiable cases of filial disrespect the world has ever known; I hope. We often read touching stories of unkindness to the aged, but they are generally represented as taking place at a distance; and we comfort ourselves with the hope that they are untrue or rather fancy sketches. But the one to which I refer, is only too true, and several of the readers of the F. F. will recognize the characters involved.

First, I will draw a contrasting picture, also from life. I was once intimately acquainted with a dear, charming old lady, who died about a year ago, at the ripe age of eighty-six years. She was the mother of nine children, five sons and four daughters, and such deep respect and devotion as they manifested toward their aged mother is rarely seen and was lovely to behold. She was reared in affluence, but was reduced to comparative poverty by the war; but her children determined that in her old age she should never know any change; so she was kept from domestic cares the rest of her life. She passed the last twenty years of her life, visiting among her children and in each child's home there was a room known as "Grandma's room," containing every comfort that love could devise; and when tidings came of a contemplated visit from her to any one child, such preparations were made as would do honor to a queen; but such a loving, tender welcome as greeted her no queen ever received. Her children were splendid specimens of manhood and womanhood; and a pleasing sight it was to see great giant-like men and stately women seek her bedside at night, to inquire after her comfort, and imprint a tender, good-night kiss on her wrinkled brow. A like greeting awaited her each morning. Every grandchild held her in the same deep reverence and love. Oh, were this display of affection oftener seen in families! We should show affection to our children, and teach them to demonstrate their affection for each other, by loving deeds and caresses. But to return: Dark sorrows crossed my aged friend's pathway. In the death of three of these dear children, but those remaining, so softened with loving sympathy her grief, that she soon regained her accustomed cheerfulness.

But, at last the summons suddenly came for her to go hence, and she realized it. Her son with whom she was staying at the time, was wild with grief, and begged her to live for her children's sake. But with a happy smile she shook her head saying, she had had a long, happy life, and it was going out suddenly and peacefully, just as she had always desired it should. She "fell asleep" as quietly as an infant in its mother's arms. When her still form had been made ready for its last narrow bed, her son came into the room, and throwing himself by the bier, with one arm clasping the pulseless clay, he thus sat throughout the long night in agonizing grief. Now, contrast this lovely picture of filial devotion with the sad one following, the one which I set out to portray.

The writer very recently knew another aged woman, who was nearing her ninetieth year when death claimed her. She was the mother of ten children, eight of whom lived to be grown. But consumption laid its relentless claim on six of them, and they passed from earth in the morning of life. Her husband died when these children were quite young, and she had to devote all her energies to their maintenance. But death having robbed her of all but her two youngest, a son and daughter, she lived at the old homestead with her son till he married and things changed. His wife was not kind to her, she said, so she lived in one part of the house, with a motherless grandchild whom she had reared, and had all things separate. But as time went on, this child grew up and married, and as she was too old to live alone, she boarded with her son.

Her daughter lived in a distant state, and her mother-heart began to yearn to see her, and she pined so, that her son gratified her desire to visit her daughter. This daughter called to see me a few days before her mother's arrival, and told me of the expected visit. I congratulated her upon the joy of having her mother with her, but she checked me by saying, she had much rather she would postpone her visit, as she had nowhere to put her, as she only had one spare room and she did not like to give that up.

I called on the unwelcome mother a few days after she reached her new home, and found a white-haired, lovable old lady, vigorous in mind and body for her advanced age, eighty-six years, reading a large-printed Testament. This was almost her only diversion for three years and it was pleasant to see her face light up with eager interest over some "old, old story" of the Savior's life, as some new beauty presented itself to her mind. She always talked of the past, as is the wont with all old people; she told me much of her past life, which was full of interest to me. I visited her as often as domestic cares would permit, and grew quite fond of her, and the affection seemed to be mutual. But in these visits, I was always pained to see the impatient, unloving demeanor of her daughter, who was constantly reminding her that no one was interested in her reminiscences. Little respect was shown her by either her daughter or two grown grand-daughters. They always interrupted her conversation, though she was very polite herself, and was often more interesting than they. Her tastes in the preparation of food were rarely gratified, and she was not allowed to take any part in the household work that they could prevent, but was constantly made to feel that she had out-lived her usefulness, and was only in the way. Her childish, troublesome (?) ways were often mentioned and heartlessly commented upon in her presence. No courtesy was shown her, but she was treated as an unreasonable child, or imbecile, though she was very sensible.

When I first met her, she repeated to me, clearly, a discussion she had heard between a Universalist and a Christian, and remembered the points made by the latter; and yet they always tried to convey the impression that her mind was very weak. Her daughter so often complained, in her presence, of the trouble she was at night, and how her rest was broken by having to get up and down with her mother.

Yet this same mother had often told me, that for three years of this twin son's and daughter's life, she had not thought they would live, and how often she had watched alone with them at night, lest they should die before morning, and what great anxiety she suffered on their account; and this was her return!

She was quite sick once, and I called to see her after she was up, and after a long absence. She was sitting alone, the family being in the parlor with guests. She looked thin and pale and was very weak. She was overjoyed to see me, and said she had so longed for me; that she needed christian companionship, and "her folks" were not interested in such things. She rocked back and forth, clasping and unclasping her hands in the most pitiful way, and begged me to ask them to be kind and patient with her, at least till she got well. She said they were not patient with her; that they would not answer her questions, nor talk to her, and that she had to live with her dead too much. Said she felt as if she had lived too long; that it would be best if God would take her home. I mingled my tears with hers, comforting her as best I could, but my heart was aching over the heartlessness of this wicked daughter.

She was very fond of company and visiting, but they gratified her very little in the latter, though every convenience for so doing was theirs. She so often spoke of how she missed the privilege of meeting weekly, as had been her custom, to commemorate her dear Lord's death; and as a little band of disciples met regularly each Lord's day, almost at her door, we desired her presence at such meetings, but were refused.

She once requested me to read a letter from her son to her daughter in regard to the old mother returning to him. A more heartless letter was never penned! He said he did not want her to come back to him, as he was not prepared to care for her, and none of her grandchildren wanted her, so she must stay where she was, whether she liked it or not. I afterwards learned he agreed to pay his sister $125.00 per year, out of the old lady's money, to take care of her. She had a good sum of money, as her son-in-law once told us, and part of it was used to build the house, under whose roof she found so little comfort.

They finally denied her the pleasure of visiting altogether; she felt that she was being unjustly treated and often told them so, and finally rebelled and would leave home frequently and go to the neighbors, but was relentlessly dragged back as soon as missed. She would beg pitifully to go, and several of us would gladly have devoted one day in the week to her pleasure, but were not allowed the privilege, and they even requested us not to invite her to see us. They grew less and less patient, and finally took to locking her in the house.

Denied every coveted pleasure, the continued persecution of three years began to tell on her mind, and a wild desire seemed to possess her to go somewhere where she could find what was denied her there, and she would ask every one to take her home, and was it any wonder! At last they began to lock her in her little room, and felt that she was "crazy," which was false. She would beat on her door and beg so pitifully to be let out, but all in vain. They allowed no one to see her, and just before the Christmas holidays, she was put out of their way entirely, by being deposited in the Lunatic Asylum at Austin, Texas. The Superintendent pronounced her trouble a giving way of the mind from old age, as her son-in-law informed us. He further said, she was too great a care on his wife, but when she got bed-ridden, they would take her back home.

Dear readers, let us hope that they were ignorant of the enormity of their sins, and that their hearts are not so black as they appear.

In justice to her son-in-law, let me say, that she always had confidence in him, and spoke kindly of him and her grandson to the last, but not so of the others. Now does not this story sound like a mad fancy of a deranged mind? Alas, alas, it is only too true!

I visited her in her prison home, and as I approached the grated door of her ward, a touching sight greeted me. She was seated on a hard, slatted bench, with three other bona fide lunatics, her bent form hovering over the register for warmth, her thin gray hair straggling from under the border of her cap. She looked thin, pale and tired, and asked us, at once, if we had seen "her folks," and begged us to take her back home; said she was so tired there. We talked with her an hour, perhaps, and she followed us to the door, and the last sight my eyes rested upon, was her poor wrinkled face, pressed against the glass door, begging us to send her folks after her.

The next time I saw her, she was resting peacefully in her coffin, forever out of the way. She lived but two weeks in this wearisome home, having received a blow on the head, from falling one night in trying to get out of bed, with no one to help her, which blow produced paralysis and death. They brought her home to die, but she was all unconscious of the home-coming. The preacher spoke beautifully of the long, useful life, so fittingly ended—and I suppose he was ignorant of the circumstances—but others present could have told a tale that would have chilled the hearts of his hearers. As I gazed for the last time on the peaceful face, I thanked God fervently, that she was forever beyond such neglect and cruelty; but bitter thoughts arose and "would not down at my bidding," against those who had perpetrated this cruelty.

Now, in my first sketch, none of the characters were christians, many of them unbelievers; in the last, every one claims to be a child of God, and are regular attendants at his house and prominent members of the church of Austin, Texas. Do you wonder at the infidelity of the world? The Savior says "by their fruits ye shall know them." Now, who of you would like to stand before the judgement seat of Christ, in the place of this unnatural son and daughter? There that gray-haired mother will rise up in judgement against them, and the Savior will say: Depart, I never knew you, ye workers of iniquity.

My dear brothers and sisters, if a hoary head crowns your hearthstone, thank God for the blessing! We are commanded "to requite our parents, for this is good and acceptable before God."—I. Tim. v: 4. To requite does not mean simply to give food and shelter, but also to return with interest that love that has blessed us all our days. It hovered around us in tender infancy and throughout the varied trials of childhood, and now we should gladly give them every loving care that they so unselfishly bestowed upon us. To me, every wrinkle of their time-worn hands, is touchingly eloquent of some act of self-sacrifice, some uncongenial service made sweet through love of us; and shall we now let their aged hearts be burdened with a sense of neglect and unwelcomeness? God forbid! Then be patient with all their little childish ways, that often, try us, remembering we have been more trying to them. Never let them feel that they are of no use, but let them perform any little service they may desire. It is but a little while at most, before they go hence; and we will have abundant time to rejoice in a consciousness of having fully done our duty, or be racked with remorse for a neglect of the same. It seems if there is any one sin that is greater in God's sight, than another, a failure to requite our parents would be the greatest. This duty fully done, insures to us the love and respect of our own children, and the approbation of our heavenly Father, who honored this sacred relation, by attaching a promise to his command to us to "honor thy father and mother." Oh, then let us perform this duty faithfully, and many a gray head will descend in peace to the grave, to arise and shine as stars in our crown in the resurrection morning.

Doctrine is the plowshare that opens the furrows for the seed of life.—Selected.

THE CAMPMEETING.

Bro. Richardson and self left Mason August 12th and arrived at the campground about 3 p. m. The Shingled arbor is situated on a small branch that runs into Lost creek. It is in the midst of a mountainous country, near the little village of Fredonia, and is about fifteen miles northeast of Mason. A good spring in Lost creek furnished water for cooking, drinking and for stock. The arbor is about fifty feet square, well seated, and has a good shingle roof.

By night of the first day there were quite a number of campers on the ground, some of them from a great distance. On Saturday and Sunday the number had increased to such a degree that it was apparent to all that the surrounding country could not support such a crowd of people. There was no grass for stock, and the drouth having been severe in this section, corn and fodder were difficult to obtain.

There were campers present from Llano, Burnet, Mason, McCulloch, Williamson, San Saba and Atascosa counties. It was estimated that at different times during the week about 1500 were present; some days the crowd would decrease to about 350 or 400; the scarcity of stock food compelling a great many to return home for supplies.

There were present during the meeting the following preachers: R. W. Floyd, from Gonzales; J. J. Larrimore and Bro. Cavness, from Llano; D. P. Balze, W. G. Churchill, from McCulloch; Bro. Shipp, from San Saba; Bros. Cobb, Holland and Edwards, from Mason; and Bro. E. Hansbrough, from Austin. Bro. Durst and McGary did not put in their appearance, and thereby disappointed a great many of us.

The order of exercises for each day was: Prayer and Investigation meeting at 9 a. m.; preaching at 11, a. m., 8:30 p. m., and at night. We had sermons during the meeting from each of the following brethren: Hansbrough, Balze, Larrimore and Floyd. Bro. Richardson and self were worked continuously.

On account of the scarcity of stock food, and the beginning of another meeting at Field creek, Llano county, not very far from the Arbor, it was determined to close the meeting at the end of first week. The interest increased to the very last, and I think that the brethren made a great mistake in not continuing the meeting at least another week. During the week there were three conversions, only two of these baptized, the other deferred on account of sickness, and five reclaimed.

Good will and peace reigned throughout the entire meeting, and there was joy in the communion of loving brothers and sisters thus brought face to face from so many different and distant homes. Here we met a great many readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION, and we are strengthened and encouraged to go go in the good work by the hearty approval given by so many staunch Christians.

There were many brethren and sisters from adjoining counties who came to see what legislation was going to be done! One of these good brethren said: "Why, they preach the same gospel that we all believe." Yes, my brother, we preach the one gospel of Christ, but we insist upon carrying out in practice that which we preach. Don't preach one thing and practice another.

The meeting closed on Lord's day night, the 21st, and on Monday morning there was a general break-up of camps. Bro. Richardson went on to Field Creek to remain there a day or two and then go home. I went to Tiger creek, near Voca, McCulloch county, about eight miles west of the Shingled arbor. During my stay here I made my home with Bro. W. H. Jones. Bro. Balze, an old and faithful soldier of the cross lives here. Bro. Churchill is also here, one of the Elders of the church.

I began preaching here on Tuesday night and continued until the following Friday night week. The attendance was large, interest good to the close of the meeting. There were twelve baptisms, one reclaimed and several who "took membership in the congregation." I did not preach during the day at this place, but spent the time in visiting, looking at the country and resting. I found here a large number of Christians, but not in good working order. The disturbing elements that have hindered the progress of the cause here are in a great measure local. I shall have something to say hereafter about these things. In the mean time, I am assured that much good was done in the church, and that they are more than ever determined to practice that "more excellent way" pointed out by the Apostle Paul in I. Cor. xiii.

On Saturday, the 3rd of September, I bid farewell to Voca, and in company with Bro. Jones, came to Mason, and am at home with Bro. Holland and his estimable Christian wife.

There are many things out here that I would like to write about, but will forbear for the present promising, in the near future, if the Lord spare me, to write particularly concerning those things that disturb the peace and harmony of certain congregations.

MASON MEETING.

Mason, the county seat of Mason county, is situated near the center of the county, on Comanche creek. It has a population of about four hundred. Most of the buildings in town are built of rock, of which this country produces a most bountiful supply. They have shown their interest in educational matters by the erection of a beautiful two-story rock building, capable of accommodating about two hundred pupils; besides this, they have voted the special tax for the support of the school. A full corps of teachers has been employed and the school will open on the first Monday in November. Religiously, the people are much divided. I find here good substantial houses built for the use of the following denominations: Catholic, Presbyterian, Lutheran, Episcopal (not yet finished), Northern Methodist and Christian. Besides these, there are a few Baptists; the Southern Methodists, who use the house of the Northern brethren; and some Christadelphians. On looking around at the many altars here erected, I thought of Paul's visit to Athens.—Acts 17.

The Christian church at this place has a neat and substantial house of worship; built of rock, well seated, and well furnished with lights, etc. I could not ascertain the strength of the church in numbers, but was informed by one of the Elders, Bro. Dunlap, that the regular Lord's day attendance was about thirty or thirty-five. There has been division and alienation in the church here for several years. Some few brethren and sisters objecting to the introduction of humanisms into the church, and the majority ruling them in as expedients. The discussion of these matters produced some bitterness of feeling, which was finally turned against the FIRM FOUNDATION on account of the controversy between B. F. Gooch and Bro. McGary. This controversy originated in a visit to this place by Bro. J. S. Durst and his report of it. Our readers will remember that Bro. Gooch assumed the authority to say that no one connected with the F. F. should preach in the church at Mason; though brethren here seek to modify this statement by adding a proviso to the effect that they might preach here if they would preach the gospel. The proviso is a greater slur than the direct prohibition.

We believe the statement made by Paul that the gospel of Christ is the power of God to save every one that believes it, hence we preach that gospel, and do not pander to the vitiated tastes of those who would pervert the gospel of Christ in order to gain converts from sectarian bodies.

But to return to our meeting. I arrived here on Saturday, Sept. the 3rd, and found a hearty Christian welcome in the home of Bro. Whitmill Holland. On Sunday morning before the preaching hour, I was informed by Bro. Dunlap, one of the Elders, and Superintendent of the Sunday School, that there was some ill feeling amongst the members on account of my appointment being made in conflict with the regular services of the pastor, D. W. Pritchett. I went on to the church and there met Bro. Pritchett and insisted that he should go on with his regular services, and that I would wait until next day to begin my preaching. This, however, he refused to do, and I then went on with the preaching.

To prevent any ground of complaint by the church, Bro. Holland had announced that I would preach here in Mason, and Bro. Dunlap told him that the Christian meeting house was at my service, and that he would announce the meeting at their prayer-meeting, which I suppose he did. But Bro. Pritchett was not consulted about it, and hence the ill-feeling on the part of two or three members.

On Monday I had a conference with Bro. Pritchett in which he told me of the fears and doubts entertained by the church. The secret of it is just this: They were so prejudiced against the FIRM FOUNDATION and all connected with it, that they could not act toward me other than as an enemy. I told him and the church generally that I wished to get acquainted with them, that they might see and hear that their prejudices were unwarrantable. The meeting went on, the attendance being very good up to the last night. Some of the staunch members never put in their appearance at all during the meeting, and, of course, they are still full of prejudice. As to others, I am glad to say that from some of them I received a cordial, Christian welcome; others, however, held themselves aloof; they gave us their presence, but never a word of welcome.

There were three confessions, one reclaimed, and four others received into the congregation, during the meeting.

As to the future of this congregation, we can but hope for the best. Their pastor, D. W. Pritchett, is a nice man, a splendid singer, and judging from his well-filled library, a well educated man. Whether he can preach or not, I only know from hear-say, and am told that he can preach the gospel well. He is on the popular side; that is, favors church socials, (though I don't know what they are,) missionary societies, and says that he is perfectly willing to accept an organ in the worship, as it is not forbidden. But he treated me courteously, for which I thank him; and, if he will accept it, will tender this advice: Quit church socials, croquet and lawn parties, and go out into the field for a year or two and endure hardness as a good soldier.

I find here a complaint made that the country members are very neglectful of their attendance, except when a protracted meeting is on hand. The difference between the manners, dress and customs of town members and country members is more apparent in the regular meetings than in the large gatherings at protracted meetings. The laws of fashion and city etiquette destroy all cordiality and affection and introduce a cold, dead formalism, that so chills the hearts of true Christians that they stay away from such meetings. I do not say that such is the case here, this may in part be the reason, but not altogether. If town members would see the country members in constant attendance, they must show that brotherly love, that Christian kindness and cordiality that serves to cement the body into one.

I am glad that I have been at Mason; I made the acquaintance of some true hearted brothers and sisters, and was instrumental in doing some good. I entertain none but the kindest feelings for those whose prejudices prevented them from showing at least common courtesy, and sincerely hope that they may grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth, and that they may be diligent workers in the Lord's vineyard.

J. W. JACKSON.

LETTER FROM BRO. STONE.

I do not care to occupy too much space in the F. F. But being at home to-day, and my domicile being situated immediately on the gravel-road, I have been observing the great numbers passing on their way to the county fair. To-day is the last day—the day for the fast stock to test their speed. A day of gambling on the races. I observe that nearly everybody is on the road. I have already counted three preachers on the road. The preachers were men who call themselves Christians, too. To-day premiums are to be paid for the fastest horses. It is simply gambling. The company pays the premiums out of the money collected from the people; hence, every one who pays his or her money to enter, helps to furnish the gambling money for the day.

What is the difference between the man who goes to a horse race and bets his money on the horse he thinks the fastest, and the man who goes to the fair and pays his money to see his fun? The difference is, the one may win, and, so far as money is concerned, be benefitted. The other gives his money to forward the gambling, but gets nothing in return. They are equally guilty before God. Which does the most harm, he who dances or he who pays the fiddler?

Will Christians (?) ever learn Christian propriety and duty? Many Christians (?) go to the theatre and opera house and pay their money to support a class of people who generally have little or no regard for Christianity: while their business has a direct tendency to eradicate every virtuous, as well as religious sentiment from the mind. "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God by him."—Col. iii: 17. Do they do the above things in the name of the Lord Jesus? In all these things they are assisting the evil one directly. If they be professed Christians, it is yet worse. Christians should shun every appearance of evil.

All persons who give any aid to any evil work will be held responsible for the consequences of such evil work. Just so will it be with all who give aid and encouragement to sectism. They acknowledge that there is Christianity in it. If any one who acknowledges that the sects are Christians, has any influence, those influenced by them may be led astray. In proportion as they admit the correctness of sectism will their faith be diminished in the truth of Scripture. No man can believe the Bible and admit the Christianity of the sects. Jesus never authorized sects. By what authority then do they exist? Only by their own authority, thus presuming upon the authority of the Lord. Teaching for doctrine the commandments of men. What a fearful responsibility rests upon all who know the truth, and yet compromise it with falsehood. God forbid that I should ever give aid and comfort to anything that is not precisely in accordance with the truth.

I am glad to see new scribes appearing in the F. F., both male and female. May grace, mercy and peace abound with all the true friends of the Lord and his truth.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I closed my meeting at home, on the 7th Inst., of sixteen days, sixteen confessions and baptisms. After two days' hurry, we got our things into the wagon, and started for the southwest. This morning finds us near the west line of Burleson county. Please send me a few copies of the F. F. to Weesatchle, Gollad county, Texas, and I will work for the F. F. in Live Oak, Bee and Gollad counties. You need not send my paper to New Baden any more until the first of November. I don't suppose I will get home sooner than that. Enclosed you find ($1.00) one dollar to pay for the F. F. Send it to L. T. Davis, Acorn, Robertson county, Texas.

Yours in the hope of the gospel.
B. H. WEBB.

Aug. 15, '87.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Faith comes by understanding and understanding by the word of God. The deaf man cannot hear, yet he can read and understand the word of God, and render acceptable obedience to the same. If I had never heard the gospel and a Frenchman should come to our village and preach it in its "pristine purity," it would produce no faith in me because my mind could not in this case understand it.

For therein, (in the gospel) is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith. Testimony reveals to us the Sonship of Jesus. We are then ready to "hear him." He says, believe the gospel. The facts of the gospel are then revealed. The "death, burial and resurrection of Christ." Any man that has these in his memory can understand them, and if they are not in his memory sustained by the testimony of the Bible, he cannot say, truthfully, that he believes them, for faith comes by understanding the word of God. When he understands these, he is prepared to accept salvation by believing, then repenting of his sins, confessing Christ, and being baptized for the remission of his sins, which are the next revelations of the Spirit through the gospel, or he is prepared to reject salvation by saying he does not believe.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, OCT. 1, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 30. All checks or money orders should be made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

ATTENTION, READERS.

This is to notify my brethren and friends that ere this reaches them, my home will be Fort McKayett, Menard county, Texas. All correspondence to me should be addressed there. Our exchanges will please note this change and send their papers to that place. But all funds and orders for the FIRM FOUNDATION or any pamphlet published by us should be addressed and made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

A. MCGARY.

We have received two or three late copies of the Firm Foundation. This paper is published from Austin, Texas, though it is not intended that its circulation shall be confined to the Southwest. The paper, true to its name, is striving to present just the foundation laid in Zion nearly two thousand years ago. The copies I received I thought lacked a little in variety, but their space is smaller than the usual weeklies have; but we should look rather to the quality than the quantity in the make-up of literature. Success to the F. F.—[A. Ellmore, in Christian Leader.

We heartily thank Bro. Ellmore for these commending and encouraging words. We will offer the same excuse, substantially, for the lack of "variety," that Bro. E. has, doubtless, often offered to meet the sectarian charge that, our brethren "preach too much on baptism"—which is as follows: The FIRM FOUNDATION seems to be the only paper contending for the faith against the practice of recognizing sectarian unauthorized immersion. The Leader, Review, Advocate and the Messenger, are all opposing the "Missionary Societies," of men; and the use of the organ in the worship. We think they are all doing right in opposing these things. We do not say as much on these questions as these other papers; yet the F. F. has said enough on them for all of its readers to know where it stands.

Now let these papers cease to oppose missionary societies and go to opposing the popular practice of recognizing these unauthorized duckings, and see how soon the F. F. will say more about the missionary societies and less about these sectarian duckings. Or let them cease to oppose the use of the organ, and see how soon we will say more about that divisive instrument and less about the immersions that God has not recorded his name in.

A wise general will not combine all of his forces at one point when he is being assaulted in the center, and on both wings of his army. So, the FIRM FOUNDATION, being set for the defense of the faith in its entirety beholds, with joy unspeakable, the impregnable positions upon which these other papers have planted their banners against these other points of invasion; and it is ever ready to shout hallelujah! at their gallant and irresistible assaults against the invaders.

The attacks of these same papers upon the F. F. all rebound, without harming it, and fall upon their own heads. The F. F. stands upon the only ground of safety against all gospel perversions. If these papers one, or all combined, can produce authority for recognizing sectarian immersions they will, in so doing, lay a predicate for "Missionary Societies, instrumental music," and everything else that "sanctified common sense" may demand; for there is no precept, example nor fair implication for any of these troublous things.

Again, Bro. Ellmore, we thank you, and herewith invite you to spice up our columns with some of your gospel "varieties." I read a pamphlet of Bro. Ellmore's—"Which Is The True Church?" I believe was the title. I saw from it, that he would have to be as inconsistent as all opposing brethren who have "written a book," if he opposed the teaching of the F. F. That pamphlet, by the by, is a bushel of pure "wheat." A. MCG.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I see through the F. F., in one of your articles, that you are opposed to the present mode or manner of raising missionary money, also opposed to societies, co-operation meetings, etc. Will you, through the F. F., tell your readers how you are in favor of raising such means. I mean means to send abroad or to pay for home Evangelistic labor. Give us the manner of the Apostles of raising all such means. While it is right to go and preach the gospel, and you are opposed to the stipulated amount to Evangelists, (if this is the idea), suppose one of you, or both, go and hold a meeting for a congregation one month, then decide they would not pay you anything; then what?

Yours truly,
J. W. BRATCHER.

Paul wrote to the Corinthian brethren: "Now concerning the collections for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no collections when I come. And when I come, whomsoever ye shall approve by your letters, they will I send to bring your liberality."—I. Cor. xvi: 2. This was the Lord's work and this is the way it was done. Now, the sending of the spiritual bread is also the Lord's work. Why, then, should there be a different method for raising means to supply this spiritual bread, from the method furnished by the Holy Spirit for raising the means to supply the bread that nourishes the body? The only reason for the different methods employed, that I can see, is that the experiments of worldly-wise men may have loose rein.

The Lord's day collection is the way to raise all means for the work of the Lord. It is the only method furnished by the Scriptures; and, as the Scriptures "thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works," the Lord has tied us down to this method. When the churches have slipped the yoke of Christ, and "heaped to themselves teachers" that modulate the gospel to suit "itching ears" that have become attuned to demands upon the Lord's means, for organs, cushioned seats, Brussels carpets, tall spires, costly edifices, fashionable pastors with their clap-trap appliances and Romish trappings, then, of course, the true of such congregations, whether one or more, must withhold their prosperings and free-will offerings from such a treasury, and must use it in the Lord's work just as if they were the church of God in that locality. If he or they know of destitute brethren, or needy widows or orphans near by, they must be helped, telling them that it is given because Christ demands it. Then quote or read the Lord's words as found in Matt. xxv: 32-40; and Paul's injunction, to "work with your hands that you may have to give to him that needeth." But if there is no charitable object at hand, then some faithful preacher who has gone, without first bargaining for so much "filthy lucre" should be helped; or, the funds should be sent to some church that is free from the greedy domination of an artificial "pastor," and under the direction of God's eldership.

But the Lord's day collection is God's rule, these others are exceptions, by necessary implication. But some brethren say that the "laying by him in store," clearly indicates that it is to be laid by in an individual purse. But this idea is clearly disproven by the Apostle adding: "that there be no gatherings (N. V. says, no collections) when I come." If each individual had a private purse, out of which the means were to come, it would necessitate a "gathering," the very thing Paul wanted to avoid, and the very end that would be avoided by a church-treasury. But in no case should a disciple of Christ permit one farthing of the Lord's means to pass through any missionary society other than the church of God; for "missionary societies" are the very embodiment of disloyalty to Christ; for they seek to supplant, and are, in many cases, supplanting the institution over which Christ is head, the church of God.

No man's experience of "preaching a month," or a year, or even a life-time, without receiving any pay, will militate against God's plan, or justify us in seeking new methods for preaching the gospel. Preachers ought to be sustained when they preach the word, and I believe they will be, and always have been. I believe that God has charged the gospel with ample power to sustain the man who carries it, and delivers it. It may not bring ease and affluence, if it should, it would be a curse in disguise. But all things will "work together for good to them that love God." Things do not have to be adjusted to this end; but they are already fixed. The sower of the good seed of the kingdom of God will be partaker of the fruit.

With all the grumbling on the part of some brethren, they have not borne one-tenth of the hardships that Paul bore; and yet he was ten fold more faithful than any of us.

A. MCG.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have been desirous to ask you a few questions in regard to how we should spend the Lord's day. We understand that we are to meet together to break bread. Should we attend to that, sing a hymn and go out? or should we remain at church? If the latter, how should we spend the remaining portion of the day? Must we have a Sunday School? If so, how should it be conducted? Can the women teach? (the small children)? I hope you will answer at some length, and oblige myself and others. Your sister in Christ. M.

Christians should associate with, admonish, exhort, comfort and encourage each other, as often as possible. In Paul's letter to the Hebrews he says: "Exhort one another daily, while it is called to-day; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin."—Heb. iii: 13. Under the old dispensation we learn that, "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another." But the Lord's day, or first day of the week, is pre-eminently a day for the coming together of the disciples. On this day, primitively, when the disciples of Jesus were blessed with the personal association and guidance of the Lord's chosen and empowered teachers, whose teaching, in precept and example on earth, is bound in heaven, they met upon this day to "break bread." But, while the prime object of the coming together on this day was to perpetuate the Lord's ordinance and "show forth his death," it was also a day for the transaction of other matters pertaining to the kingdom of God.

"Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God has prospered him."—I. Cor. xvi: 2. And we also learn that time was improved at these gatherings by teaching, admonishing and exhorting; for we find that on one such occasion Paul preached to them, and continued his speech till midnight.—(See Acts xx: 7-11). It is a sad fact, that the fires of Christian "zeal," "brotherly kindness," and "love unfeigned," do not blaze in the hearts of disciples to-day with that ardor that it did in primitive days. Then, they were baptized into Christ, and "continued steadfastly in the Apostle's doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." Then, too, "all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all, as every man had need." This state of things, or, that which is practically the same, would re-appear among the disciples, if their faith should ever equal the faith of primitive disciples.

The whole day should be taken up with religious exercises. Studying the word: teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in the heart to the Lord—not making melody on an instrument to the sensuous taste of men.

As for the "Sunday School," there is no place for it in a faithful congregation of disciples. I speak of the Sunday School as such as I know of it. The church is the only school known to the Scriptures. The church of God should be as one family. As it is the duty of the parents to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, this duty may be done around the family hearth-stone, and at the Lord's day meeting where these families are all thrown together as the family of God in any neighborhood. What God requires of one Christian family He requires of all Christian families under like circumstances.

Of course it is right for the mothers and sisters, whether at their respective homes, or at the Lord's day meeting, to take part in this duty. In this she does not teach the Church nor usurp authority over the man. Priscilla helped Aquila "expound the way of God more perfectly" to Apollos.

But the popular "Sunday-school," with its "lesson leaves," and other sectarian paraphernalia which is being multiplied by "bran new things almost every week," is an unprofitable and godless institution. It is a Romish relic at best.

"One Lord, one faith, one baptism." It is unscriptural to contend for two baptisms as for two faiths. Hence, the re-baptism doctrine is unscriptural.—Messenger.

Well, then, why don't you quit "contending" for Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Christadelphian, Mormon, Dunker's and all other immersions besides the "one" authorized by Christ? If you were to come across one who was baptized "unto John's baptism," your rule of action would force you to contend for his too! That is one of the many differences between you and Paul. You consider all thorough wettings the "one baptism." Paul did not. The twelve at Ephesus had been wet all over in their baptism "unto John," but he did not recognize it as the "one baptism."

In another place you say: "The Octographic Review speaks out boldly in condemnation of this new heresy of re-baptism. Bro. Treat and Bro. Sommerstand squarely on the old landmarks." In this you display a wonderful amount of ignorance in reference to church history, by calling the "landmarks" that these brethren "stand on," on this question, "the old landmarks." These "landmarks" they and you stand on; and which you call "old," were only laid out in the earlier part of the present century. While that which you call the "new heresy" runs back to Ephesus, as recorded in the ninth chapter of Acts. A man who can establish "Baptist succession," ought to be better posted than that. You are of those described in Isaiah v: 20, "Who call evil good, and good evil; and put darkness for light, and light for darkness; and put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter." You identify yourself with these by putting old paths for new, and new paths for old; and by putting "heresy" for things Scriptural, and things Scriptural for heresy. A. McG.

Dear Bro. McGary:

As I think I can aid you in increasing the subscription of the F. F., I write you to know if my services as solicitor will meet your approval. I am a young minister of the gospel. I began preaching one year ago. Have been reading the F. F. for nearly one year. I fully endorse its teaching as the ablest advocate of Ancient Christianity published by our brotherhood. I want to aid you in your noble efforts in spreading the ancient gospel, and I know of no better method than to preach the same things advocated by you and your associates. If my services as solicitor will be acceptable to you let me hear from you. I will say, that I am anxious to get this paper read by all with whom I labor, for it aids me in my work of stirring up the brethren on so many points of vital interest. I send, this morning, one dollar and fifty cents; one dollar for Bro. —, and fifty cents for my dear old uncle, —. If you desire reference as to my standing, I refer to the Elders of the Church of Christ at —. Love to you. Yours in Christ, F. M. T.

—, Texas, Aug. 24, '87.

We desire to assure all brethren who love the gospel of Christ as it was delivered to the saints, without human addition or subtraction, that the FIRM FOUNDATION is engaged in no individual enterprise, but is about the heavenly "Father's business." Then it is the "business" of every such "chosen soldier" of Jesus, to take hold of this work and become identified with it, and "abound in it," as this brother aims to do; because, brethren, "ye are Christ's and Christ is God's." We would be pleased to have every one who reads this, and who is willing to make an earnest effort to obtain new subscribers, to drop us a line to that effect. Address us at McKavett, Menard county, Texas. Our reason for requesting this, is, because if a goodly number will become enlisted in the effort we will then make some special offer for new subscribers, at a very reduced rate, and see how many can be enrolled during the month of November. TESTIMONIALS.

HENRON, W. Va., Aug. 6, '87.

Bro. Rowe:—Please say to your many readers that Bro. R. H. Singer, of California, Pa., has been with us at the Mt. Zion congregation again, preaching the gospel to large crowds of people. Ever since he began to make his visits here (which was last October) the slanderous tongues of our enemies—the sects about us—have never ceased to vilify and scandalize him in order to kill his influence, as he was convincing many of the sectarians, as well as many others, of their duty to God; and knowing how prone our enemies elsewhere are to gather up something that has come from a distance and hurl it with all that it has gathered by traveling against our successful preachers, we deem it our imperative duty toward the cause of Christ, and Bro. Singer, that we state, positively, that while he has been with us he has walked circumspectly. His conversation and conduct have been in every respect as become a Christian, and as an earnest, honest, sincere, faithful and uncompromising leader for that "faith" once for all delivered to the saints. The whole congregation join us in commending him to the fellowship and confidence of the brethren everywhere.

IRA C. MOORE,
R. M. WEEKLY,
Elders.

HENDERSON SANDY,
S. M. BUMGARDNER,
D. M. MCCULLOUGH,
Deacons.
—[Christian Leader].

We publish this without request, because we believe that Bro. Singer is a faithful and sound gospel preacher. It is a pleasure to be able to do anything for such brethren, that has a tendency to remove from their names the bitter calumnies that the foul mouth of slander has breathed against them. There is just such an implacable principle of counteraction, and inevitable hostility between truth and falsehood, right and wrong, God and Mammon, that, "those who will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution." This fire that must ever rankle between the heaven-born principles delivered to the world by Jesus of Nazareth, and the spirit that he found here, from the "prince of the power of the air, that worked in the children of disobedience," was "kindled" by the Son of God, and it will wax hotter and hotter till his enemies are "consumed with the Spirit of his mouth, and destroyed with the brightness of his coming."

Those who love the world, and hate righteousness will ever heap odium upon those who are faithful to Christ and will not compromise with them. This is perfectly in harmony with the very nature of things. This is why our Lord said to his disciples: "Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you." The only way for man, in this world steeped in the gall and bitterness of sin, to be spoken well of; by all men, is for him to "call evil good, and good evil; and put darkness for light, and light for darkness; and put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter." We have had a little experience of this, by one of our hireling "pastors" writing us up in false colors, in the Christian Standard last year, because we are opposed to the old and new innovations of the "fathers of this reformation," and the college boys of the present. Christ laid no grounds for peace between these antipodal principles: for he said: "think not that I have come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword." It is true, he wants peace to reign supremely, but not through compromise with his enemies; but by their grounding the arms of rebellion and bowing the knee to his authority.

So then, brethren, let us not relax our opposition to all things that are contrary to "sound doctrine," but "earnestly contend for the faith delivered to the saints," as "peaceably as lieh in us" as disciples of Christ, filled with the Spirit, and living "sobriety, righteousness and Godly;" "striving together for the faith of the gospel; and in nothing terrified by our adversaries," when they speak evil of us without a cause. A. McG.

J. W. MCGARVEY, SR.—No. 2.

As before stated, these leaders will not come out upon open and fair grounds and lay aside their sophistical coat of mail, and meet the question of denominational immersion in the bright light of truth, where it may be subjected to the "sword of the Spirit," for weal or woe; but they either preserve an air of transcendent dignity, such as could not condescend to even cast a glance down the low angle that descends in the direction of the brethren who are questioning their course; or they call upon these "extreme" brethren to affirm their negative grounds! From their lofty positions in the estimation of the masses blindly led by them, their uncomplimentary epithets and insinuations, directed at the FIRM FOUNDATION, fall with such force as to make it appear a very unworthy and detestable sheet, in the eyes of many. In these ways our leading brethren have shirked the responsibility of investigating this question, and have retained their hold upon a large majority of brethren, for this dogma of "our plea," and have greatly retarded the growth of the FIRM FOUNDATION.

Yes, as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses with their sorceries, tricks and enchantments, so do these over-zealous adherents to "our plea," "also now withstand the truth," that the FIRM FOUNDATION is advocating. "But they shall proceed no further: for their folly shall be manifest unto all men," who read the F. F., even as was the folly of Jannes and Jambres.

One brother has requested us not to call attention to the inconsistencies of Bro. McGarvey, that we once called attention to. He says: "Bro. McGarvey is our leading man, and he ought to be remonstrated with, privately, to see if he will not turn from his present course. If he will not, then it might be proper to expose him. But it is sure to injure the cause to publish his discrepant positions." But we care not how much we injure that cause that is advanced by he suppression of the inconsistencies of men who oppose the truth. The sooner all such causes are sunk to the very depths of oblivion the better it will be for the kingdom of God. Besides, we did write to Bro. McGarvey, calling his attention to these things, before we published them, and he seemed to regard it very lightly, and persisted in his course. "Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God: for it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness. And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain. Therefore let no man glory in men."—I. Cor. iii: 18-21.

Many of our brethren seem to have ceased to consult the oracles of God, but bestow their time upon the Apostolic Guide, and speak as the oracles of McGarvey. Such brethren entrench themselves behind his sayings as the strongest bulwarks of their faith. We repeat, that it is out of no personal animosity or ill-feeling for Bro. McGarvey that we arraign his teaching before our brethren. It is not that we love him less, but the truth more. With this we call attention to some of the language of his Commentary. In his "Introduction" of that worthy book, on page 5, speaking of the record of conversions found in Acts, he says:

They possess, indeed, this advantage: that, in contrast with all the conversions of the present day, they were guided by infallible teaching, and were selected by infallible wisdom from among thousands of others which had occurred, because of their peculiar fitness for a place in the inspired record. They have, we may say, twice passed the scrutiny of infinite wisdom; for first, all the conversions which occurred under the preaching of inspired men were directed by the Holy Spirit; and second, if any difference existed between those put on record and the others, the Holy Spirit, by selecting these few, decided in their favor as the best models for subsequent generations. If a sinner seek salvation according to the model of modern conversions, he may be misled; for his model is fallible at best, and may be erroneous; but if he imitate these inspired models, it is impossible for him to be misled, unless the Holy Spirit itself can mislead him. Moreover, in so far as any man's supposed conversion does not accord with these, it must be wrong; in so far as it does accord with them, it must be right.

Now, we conclude this, by asking Bro. McGarvey some questions: (1) Is there any difference between the process of Baptist conversion, and the Apostolic process, as recorded in Acts, and which process has "twice passed the scrutiny of infinite wisdom"? (2) When you said: "In so far as any man's supposed conversion does not accord with these, it must be wrong," did you not mean that such "supposed" conversion was really no conversion in God's sight? (3) If there is a difference between Baptist conversion and the examples in Acts, which would make Baptist conversion wrong, in so far as that difference existed, would their conversion, which would then be wrong in part, still amount to the new birth—the birth of the Spirit? Please answer and don't let any supposed or real wrong that we may be guilty of, influence you to do wrong. But I mean no injustice to you.

The meeting of Prof. Black, at Waco, has not thus far been very fruitful. The preaching is grand, as it always is when Bro. Black is the speaker, but the people seem hard to reach. The great excitement on political matters is partly to blame, as Waco was headquarters for both parties in the late campaign, and necessarily somewhat of a battle ground. Up to the present writing ten have been added to the congregation. — Texas Dept. Guide.

These are strong words for as strong an adherent to the doctrine of "prohibition" as A. P. Aten. If the agitation of this question hinders the gospel of Christ, as A. P. Aten says it has in Waco, then it would seem that a man who realizes this fact, must prefer the doctrine of prohibition to the doctrine of Christ, before he will agitate the former. In the name of Christ, brethren, let's have no more excitement of this kind if it turns the people away from the gospel.

A. McG.

Here it is. Baptism for the remission of sins, provided a man believes before he is baptized that baptism is for the remission of sins. Repentance changes the life, provided a man believes before he repents that repentance changes the life. Faith changes the heart, provided a man believes before he (what?) believes that faith changes the heart. If this looks a little foolish, remember it is in accordance with the new gospel preached by the new reformers at Austin, Texas, and founded on the New Foundation. The logic of it is, that a man can perform no act of gospel obedience until he knows the design of the act. Hence, a man must believe in the design of faith, before he can believe in Christ!!!—Christian Messenger.

We don't know what doctrine the New Foundation teaches; we have never seen a copy of that paper, unless it goes under the disguise of Christian Messenger; but that paper is published in Bonham—it tried to get down to Austin last year, but "couldn't come it."—The FIRM FOUNDATION is published at Austin; but he surely did not have reference to it, as it does not teach the doctrine he mentions. It is hard to keep up with the different doctrines that are being taught now. One paper in our state teaches, awhile, that the three facts alone constitute the gospel, and then, awhile, that "the ancient gospel" is not preached where these three facts alone are preached. He gets things mixed anyway. The "Christian System," his Bible, teaches some doctrine he raises such a miration over. It says: "Faith in God's appointments, and repentance for past transgressions, are now, always were, and evermore shall be, necessary to forgiveness." This is substantially the same as "baptism is for the remission of sins, provided a man believes before he is baptized that baptism is for the remission of sins." What a pity Bro. Campbell did not live to meet and learn at the feet of our "livellest debater on the American continent." He might then have gotten rid of this "new heresy" before he died. We believe that Bro. Campbell was right in this statement. But then, there is something else in the doctrine that Bro. Burnett enumerated, and which Bro. Campbell taught, that the FIRM FOUNDATION does not fully endorse, which is that "repentance changes the life." The New Foundation may for aught I know. I know the Christian Messenger gulps it down, without modification, like a young bird swallowing a worm. Now "if it looks a little foolish" and inconsistent, and deceitful for a man to argue that the three facts constitute the gospel wholly and exclusively, and then deny that the ancient gospel has been preached where these three facts have been preached. "remember it is in accordance with the new gospel by the" editor of the Christian Messenger. "The logic of it is, that a man" has the right to twist and turn and handle God's word deceitfully to make his livelihood out of a so-called Christian paper. "The love of money is the root of all evil."

A. McG.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I arrived home this evening, found the F. F. and many good things therein. One thing with which I was not very well pleased. You spoke of arraigning some, (describing them,) before the brotherhood. Now, Bro. McGary, if I were you, I believe I would let them alone. I believe that by a quiet and an even, tempered course, you will accomplish more good for the Master. I do not wish to be considered dictatorial, or your advisory board, but, as a brother, I love you, and more especially the cause which you and the contributors of the F. F. advocate. I think that this great evil will naturally grow out. Bro. Burnett and those of his kind will soon "foam out their own shame." I take the Messenger, but do not think I can take it any longer than the time paid for. Bro. B. cannot, it seems to me, treat his opponents fairly. I believe it would be better for the F. F., and that will better the cause, not to notice him any more. The F. F. is growing in favor with the people here all the time. The course that some of our brethren are pursuing, grieves all Bible loving people most sorely, but we must be patient. "Rome was not built in a day." It will take time for the accomplishment of those things so greatly desired by the friends of the F. F. Brethren are falling into line all the time. Old Bro. —, of East Texas, has given up the shaking process. I am doing all I can for the F. F. I want it in every house where I go and I will try to put it there. May the God of heaven bless and keep you all in love. I remain true to the Master.

We publish this letter though it was not intended for publication.

It seems the brother thought we were including Bro. Burnett among the number whom we spoke of arraigning. But we did not, for we think we have already laid him away in his little tomb hewn out with his own hands at Rose Hill. He died from running against the sharp end of three facts. Peace to his ashes. No, Rome was not built in a day; neither can it be torn down in a day; but the work must go on till it is razed to the ground.

A. McG.

EVIDENCE OF PARDON.

The first man whose pardon is recorded in the Bible, is Abel. He offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain: he shed the blood of a lamb, while Cain offered only grain. Paul says, almost all things are, by the law, purged with blood, and without the shedding of blood, is no remission.—Heb. ix: 22.

Such being the law of pardon, we see why Cain did not obtain remission, and why his offering was not accepted—his fruit offering would not bleed, and without the shedding of blood, there was no remission. God required, under the old law, the shedding of animal blood, in order to remission, and all who had faith in the promise of God, and a right condition of heart when they obeyed, had the evidence of pardon. See Lev. iv: 20; v: 10; vi: 7; xix: 22. There was, then, under the law, a standing ordinance for the remission so certain that no honest man who had any faith in the promise of God could doubt his pardon.

And if the gospel of Christ has no better plan of salvation than the feeling, guessing, doubting system of sectarianism, where is the boasted superiority of the gospel over the law? What sensible man would not prefer to live under a sensible system of pardon than to live under the doubting, damning system of sectarianism?

When Jesus was in the land of Judea, some few were favored by receiving their pardon directly from his lips in person, but since he ascended up on high, we have not that privilege; we, therefore, look for the institution or ordinance of remission under the last commission. It reads: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16: 15-16.

Here we learn that the world's commission contains also an ordinance of pardon, and that ordinance is baptism. It well became Jesus in offering salvation to the world, to state the terms upon which he would grant it; he, therefore, adds: He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. As "BELIEF" and "BAPTISM" are connected by the copulative conjunction "AND" in this commission, baptism is made a condition of salvation, or belief is not a condition of salvation either. No human ingenuity can evade or disguise this truth. It is a most PRECIOUS PROMISE; but such is the established use of the word "and," that no man can lawfully claim the promise till he has done both, viz: BELIEVED and BEEN BAPTIZED.

Again, then Peter said unto them: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."—Acts 2: 38.

Now, the sects have been greatly puzzled to get baptism out of their way in this text and save repentance, but they are bound to share the same fate, they stand or fall together; for we have the same right to say, that they were to repent because their sins were remitted, as to say that they were to be baptized because their sins were remitted, as the sects teach. No honest man can say that he repents because his sins have been remitted, neither can an honest man say, that he is baptized because his sins have been remitted, for the Apostle tells them to be baptized for the remission of sins.

I will now refer to some Scriptures that I only ask the reader to believe. Please examine them: John, 3: 5; I. Peter, 3: 21; Gal., 3: 27; Eph., 5: 26, and Acts, 22: 10. Jesus and his Apostles have been put to torture equal to that of the Inquisition in order to force them to recant the truth asserted in those Scriptures. Every sectarian buttery in the land has been opened upon these texts, and, in fact, upon the whole Bible. They have been attacked with a violence and perseverance equalled only by that of Saul of Tarsus. Every sophistry, every trick, and every device that the devil could invent has been employed by the sects to make these Scriptures to mean the very reverse of the truth which is expressed on their face; but these arguments, when divested of their verbosity, amount to nothing more in the aggregate than INFIDELITY, an absolute denial of the truth of the Bible on this point. As Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, so do these sectarian infidels resist the truth. Oh foolish men! How vain to fight against God! Why fight against your own soul? The Bible says Christ's blood was shed for the remission of sins.—Matt. 26: 28. All agree to this, there is no dispute about the phrase "for the remission of sins" in this passage, but when the Bible says "repent and be baptized for the remission of sins," the sects stand ready to cavil, and say, "It is not so," and thus make God out the lie. And some of our (so-called) brethren teach that such people are Christians—a people that makes God out a lie in most of the things that He teaches in His word. Oh what a shame! and what a scandal on the divine character of God!

Christ's blood was shed for the remission of sins, on certain terms, and men are now required to perform these terms for remission of sins, namely: to believe with all the heart; to repent of all their sins; to confess Christ before men; and to be baptized by the authority of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. If men can obtain remission by the blood alone, then neither their baptism, repentance, faith, prayer, grace nor anything else is necessary to that object. But I trust the reader can distinguish between what God has done for us, and what we are commanded to do for ourselves. It is one thing to open a fountain for sin and uncleanness, and quite another thing for us to wash our robes and make them white in that fountain. The blood of Christ does indeed cleanse from all sin, but, in order to be cleansed, we must, or the sinner must come to the blood of Christ, His blood is found in his death. To procure the blood of the lamb, we caused the lamb's death; so the Lamb of God shed his blood in his death; and in his death we find it.

But how do we get into his death? Paul answers: Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?—Rom. 6: 3. After telling them they had been baptized into his death, he adds in the seventeenth verse: He that is dead is freed from sin.

But the sects have a different plan, and hence, we find that their protracted meetings are noisy, irreligious and disorderly. By dreams and visions, they got the sinner to the mourner's bench to get religion, which cannot be done. But they say: We know for ourselves by the witness of the Holy Ghost independent of, and without the word of God, that we are accepted of God, and all our sins are washed away and that our feelings are all the evidence that we want, for we know that our parents, and many of our friends have died and gone to heaven without other evidences.

Can Christians give their influence for the advancement of such a religion? They cannot, and at the same time be true to God. It is a matter of profound regret that such meetings should occur among intelligent and accountable beings, anywhere, but especially so that they should occur where the people have the Bible to read for themselves. They can blame no one for their false doctrine and practice. It is plain that they had rather have a false system of religion than the true one. No man has ever produced anything of the kind from the Bible. No such things as they teach ever accompanied our Lord or his Apostles, in all the accounts of the vast numbers that were added to the church under the preaching of the Apostles. There were no noisy meetings like the sects have, such as jumping, falling, swooning or slapping of the hands. The whole procedure was orderly, quiet, and intelligible, for it is a clear statement of Scripture that God is not the author of confusion, (I. Cor. 14: 33), and that everything must be done decently and in order.—I. Cor. 14: 40.

But then, what is the Bible to such people? The Bible is nothing to them. You tell them what the Bible says about these things, and it does not have as much weight with them as a feather. No, it is nothing with them but the written word, the mere word, the bare word. Little do they think that they will be judged by that very word, that they will not hear and heed, and that these visions and dreams and experiences will all go for nothing—will not save them at the last day.

They talk of persons knowing that their sins are pardoned by their feelings! Where do they find this? Are their feelings revelations from God? If they are, is it new revelation or old? It is not anything in the Bible and above it. Then, if it is independent of the Bible and above it, it is not Bible doctrine, and therefore is not of God. We cannot conceive how people could be more completely deluded than to be turned away from the promise of God. That when Christ says: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," the sects will not rely on the promise "shall be saved," after baptism, but they do rely on an uncertain class of feelings reached in an exciting meeting, without one promise of God. They could not tell whether the feelings come from God, or from the devil, if their lives depended on it. Feelings in the sinner's heart, however joyous, is no evidence of the fact of pardon. When the sinner obeys the conditions of the gospel, he then comes to God's promise of pardon; and now believing in the sure promise of God, his rejoicing has a true foundation. The rejoicing follows the believing and obeying, then the peace flows from the faith and obedience.

God's order is, first, knowledge; second, duty; third, happiness. Jesus says: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."—John 13: 17. The case of the eunuch was, first, knowledge of duty, obtained through Phillip's preaching; second, duty, being baptized; and, third, happiness, he went on his way rejoicing.—Acts 8: 35-40. He believed his sins were pardoned because he had obeyed Christ's law of pardon; his assurance of remission was just as strong as his faith in Christ, believing in Christ, he believed his word of promise, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" but the sects will not teach the sinner to obey God's law of pardon, and to trust in his promise. They aim to feel their way to heaven in midnight darkness. They will fall into the ditch together. Lord have mercy upon them, and upon us all. Bless all that are connected with the FIRM FOUNDATION. May they stand for the truth unto the end. Fight on, soldiers of the cross, you will soon gain the victory.

Thurlow, Ky.

HE WOULD NOT REPLY.

I have been waiting some time for Bro. Treat to reply to an article of mine which appeared sometime ago in the O. R. in reply to his of June 10th, 1887. But I have waited in vain. Daniel Sommer took up the gauntlet and floundered around for awhile; but at last excused himself, that he had forgotten to put on his logical eye-glasses, and turned the matter over to Bro. Treat again. Finally, however, he concluded to apply to it the "more excellent way" and shut me out of his paper. So you see I failed to get the long expected opportunity at Bro. Treat in his own journal.

The truth is, Daniel had made such a signal failure, after refusing to publish some of my articles, (pretending that they were not respectfully written, and proposing to send one back to be re-written, which I sent him stamps to return, but yet he has not returned), and Treat's article was so thin, that they were afraid to proceed with the argument before their readers; and Daniel concluded to cut the Tap Root. His effort to cut the Tap Root is a funny production. He boasts of how he could go among the people and unsettle their faith on almost every article of their faith. What a wonder that Daniel has not cut the tap-root of all sectism where he has gone. If he is able to go among true believers who have been taught the truth, and upset all the truth they have learned by falsehood, he certainly ought to be able, with the truth, to crush out all the falsehood among the people at once. What a Goliath Daniel is, in his own estimation.

But I wish to pay my respects to Bro. Treat. He says, in his reply to Bro. Hansbrough: "But why did he not publish our criticism on their general position? Is he afraid to let his readers see both sides of the question?" "We frankly say to our brethren of the Foundation, had you published our article, we would feel under some obligation to publish your reply." I want to ask Bro. Treat, why will not Daniel publish my replies? Is he afraid for his readers to see both sides? Did not Bro. Hansbrough tell Bro. Treat, that if he would publish his article, he would publish Treat's reply? Surely he did. But Bro. Treat, it seems, preferred to say, what he had to say, through his own paper, and then have Daniel to apply his more excellent way, and close us out. Well, 'tis said, "prudence is the better part of valor."

Bro. Treat then says: "Our statement that no positive utterance of the Bible supports the assertion that a man must clearly understand the design of baptism in order to be saved, is tacitly admitted by the Foundation in the following words: 'Neither is there a positive statement of Scripture that a man must understand what is usually called the mode of baptism.'" Why did Bro. Treat garble what he pretended to quote from Bro. Hansbrough? What is the whole statement of Bro. Hansbrough? Here it is: "Neither is there a positive statement of Scripture that a man must understand what is called the mode of baptism. Does it follow, therefore, that it is not necessary to understand what constitutes the action of baptism, in order to acceptable obedience? Will sprinkling or pouring a little water on the subject do as well, provided he does not understand it? Now every sensible person can see how Bro. Treat garbles and perverts this passage from Bro. Hansbrough. Hansbrough's words (must understand) are italicized.

Bro. Hansbrough's language is intended to convey the following idea, viz: It is not stated in the Scripture when Jesus said, "go teach the nations and baptize them," or when he said, "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," that he then said, baptize means to immerse. Or, you must understand that baptize means to immerse. I think that Bro. Treat knew that Bro. Hansbrough did not mean to admit that any one need not know that baptize means to immerse. The idea seems to be to so pervert Bro. Hansbrough's meaning as to make him teach exactly the opposite of what he aimed to teach.

Bro. Treat has had too many debates not to know better than that. But Bro. Treat says: "We do not preach the why of the mode, or that it is necessary to understand the why of the mode." Is it possible that he has never preached why we baptize instead of sprinkle? That is the worst blunder yet. Why I have no doubt but that he has preached a hundred times that the mode is in the likeness of Christ's burial. That Paul says, that we are buried with him by baptism into death. That it is to come to Christ's death—to reach his blood.

If he and Daniel preach as they write, I do not wonder at their supposing the brethren to be ignorant of the design of baptism and repentance and almost everything else. When Christ said: "He who believes and is baptized shall be saved," to have made such a positive statement as Bro. Treat demands, should have added, "You must understand that the mode is immersion, and that the design is salvation." Now that is just what Bro. Hansbrough was denying. For Bro. Hansbrough has sense enough to know that when Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," that he had already told both the mode and design: and that there was no need of repeating it to sensible people.

Bro. Treat knows that baptize means immerse, and that when Jesus said it was for salvation he told the design. And yet he says there is no positive statement that we must understand it. If we need not understand that, we need not understand anything else that is written, so far as I am able to see. They are positive statements of the Savior and need no explanation.

Again, Bro. Treat says: "This concession, neither is there any positive Scripture that a man must understand, etc., is a full confession of the weakness of the case."

No one, however, as I have shown above, ever made the concession he claims. He garbled and misconstrued Bro. Hansbrough to mean a thing directly opposite to what he says. He saw Bro. H's italics, but took advantage as he thought, as I verily believe, of the ignorance of his readers. When I have to resort to such trickery to maintain a cause, and that a false cause at that, I will acknowledge that I am fairly beaten.

But, says Treat, "Where the Bible speaks, we speak: where the Bible is silent, we are silent." Where does the Bible say, either in words, or by necessary implication, you must understand, specifically, the design of all the acts of obedience in order to your salvation? That is another dodge of his: "Where does the Bible say you must understand specifically?" Where is the reason for Christ, when he gave any command stating the design, to turn and say, you must understand this specifically? Do not such questions betray either ignorance or duplicity? Bro. Treat must know that Jesus specifically stated the conditions of salvation with their design and I am not able to tell why he and many others are so determined to conceal the truth and blind the people. All that I can see in it is, that it is popular with the people and the sects.

Again, Bro. Treat says: "Our brethren of the Foundation, in common with all who have written on the affirmative of this question, insist upon a statement of which the church of Christ has never tolerated." "They harp about sect baptism administered because your sins are forgiven." "They fight nothing but a false design and represent us as endorsing that." "Nothing that we have ever said intimates that a correct obedience can be rendered with a false design in view." Here I would like to ask Bro. Treat a question. But if I did, he would not answer. All they have tried to do so far, is to misrepresent and make false issues. But I would ask him, if when a person claims to have his sins already pardoned and is not baptized for remission of sins, is not he baptized with a false design? If he is not, then what is a false design? These very people he has been taking, and defending their baptism as valid.

He says: "These brethren are welcome to their opinion; but what right have they to disturb the church with it." Is it an opinion with him that baptism is for remission of sins? If it be only an opinion with him, the sectarian opinion that it is not, is just as good. But if it is a truth, then they who do not believe it, do not believe the truth. But then, the legitimate consequence of the shaker doctrine is, that a lie does just as well as the truth, so one is sincere. Of all the dodging and zig-zag running that I have ever seen in all my life, these poor shakers have had to do it for the last two or three years. There is not one among them that can write a single consistent article.

They will write certain things and then deny that they ever wrote so. As Daniel did about saying the sects were more loyal to Christ than the Christians, and then asked me to point out the paper in which he said so.

Bro. Treat misrepresents Bro. Hansbrough again, when he says: "To my mind it is very probable that the thousands who are baptized among the sects, there are some who submit to this ordinance simply because God has commanded it. And if they do, the Foundation admits their salvation. For, Bro. Hansbrough says, he believes with all his heart our proposition that, 'He is a Christian who does what God has commanded because he commands it.'" Now behold how he garbles Bro. Hansbrough again. Hansbrough goes right on to explain, and says: "Christ commands penitent believers to be baptized for remission of sins, (not because of). When they understand, they must be baptized because their sins have been remitted, and act accordingly, they obey from the heart the form of doctrine delivered them by men, and are not made free from sin." Bro. Hansbrough did not admit what Bro. Treat says he did at all. He says, that they must do what Christ commanded, and he commanded them to be baptized for the remission of sins; while Treat's argument is, that they must simply be baptized because Christ commanded it: no matter for what design. Any one can see the difference, and no one clearer than Bro. Treat. He knew that Hansbrough taught no such thing. But he was not able to answer him any other way and anything to save the sects.

Listen at him once more: "If there be no sincere obedience among the sects to the ordinance of baptism because it is Christ's commandment, there can be no question that they are all unbaptized. Whatever of charity we may have in this direction is based upon the presumed sincere obedience to Christ's authority." Yes! The "presumed sincere" obedience to Christ's authority. Here he makes their sincerity the ground of obedience. That is sectarianism genuine. But I must drop the pen here, for the present, and examine the remainder of his article in another paper. It is a rare specimen of garbling, sophistry and perversion. All such must be met. Bro. Hansbrough may examine this article, for anything that I know; but he nor I will ever get into the Review with it. They dare not let their readers have the light. Truth is too unpopular for big papers that have to raise big sums of money. If they desire to come into the F. F., they can get a hearing. But then they could not misrepresent and suppress articles as they can in the O. R. Wish all the friends of truth success. I remain yours with kind regards.

PUBLISHER'S NOTES.

Bro. Stone will cause Treat to retreat now, as he cannot answer Bro. Stone's arguments, any more than a pedo-baptist can.

Brethren, write to us when you do not receive your paper regularly. If we cannot supply back numbers, we can help look up and right the wrong.

Brethren, remember to call and see us when you come to Austin. Look at the directions in the F. F. and hunt us up. Glad to see our old friends and meet new ones.

Had a pleasant visit from Bro. D. Crosthwait, of Lockhart, who spent the night with us and carried the writer with him to Creedmoor the next day to hear Bro. J. W. Jackson preach.

We enjoyed a pleasant visit from Bro. Dr. T. Alton, of Creedmoor, who came after Bro. J. W. Jackson to hold a debate with a Baptist, (if the Baptist will not back out), but if he did not hold the debate, then preach a week.

Bro. E. Hansbrough has returned home from a two month's tour, preaching the gospel of Christ. He has had success, and gained a few subscribers for the F. F., and many friends for himself. He needs rest for a few weeks, and then he is ready again to go wherever he can do good.

OATMAN—MCGARY DEBATE.—The long looked-for discussion between Oatman and McGary is ready for mailing to those who have subscribed for it, and will reach many of its readers before this reaches them. Brethren, push this discussion to the front, it is the very thing to up-root all sectarianism, directing the reader to the true teaching of the word of God on those points under consideration. T. H. REWARD AND PUNISHMENT.

"He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."—Hob. xi: 6. "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment."—Matt. xxv: 46.

These passages teach that there is a reward and that there is a punishment. Sometimes it appears that some men would reason the Lord out of a part of his word.

Respecting reward, they tell us, that a reward cannot be given to any save those who are capable of performing a work of merit, and that man cannot perform a work of merit; therefore, man cannot obtain a reward, or God cannot bestow it. Thus the idea of reward is taken out of the way. But this is not all. If this idea of reward is removed in this way, we may now take a peep at the other side of the question. If we cannot have reward without works of merit, we cannot have punishment without works of demerit. If there is no merit, there is no demerit; and, if there is no demerit, there is no punishment. Thus the Lord is reasoned out of a part of his word.

But, some would say, I believe in punishment, but I do not believe in everlasting punishment. But why not believe in everlasting punishment? Well, for this reason: Man is a finite creature and is therefore not capable of an infinite offense; and, in justice, is not subject to everlasting or infinite punishment. Again, man is capable of action in time only, and his sins are limited to time, and it would be injustice to punish man eternally for the sins of time. Thus finite man would attempt to show the infinite God how to reason. A lightning bug has more sense than to show himself when the sun shines.

When man begins to speculate, and to array his power of reason against God's word, the first thing is to get the measure of God's mental capacity, and when man desires to know how God works, he measures by man's methods, and then proceeds to draw his designs by the rule thus obtained.

God claims to be our master, and claims us as his servants; and man seems to assume that he knows all about God as a master, because he understands that relation as it exists among men, and God is not allowed to transcend the boundaries of the iron bedstead of human reason. God is the author of the book of nature as well as the book of salvation. Quite frequently we hear of some great one, (great in his own estimation), who knows that God did not mean that we should believe him, when he said: "These shall go away into everlasting punishment." They tell us, that it is contrary to common sense and the principles of justice, to punish a man always for the sins of one day, or the sins of three-score and ten years. These same men of this great degree of advanced thought, may find some work to do along this line, where God has made a like mistake in the administration of the laws of nature.

Over the Atlantic, on the Eastern continent A. D. 500, Mr. John Granger went out early one morning to dress his garden; when he had done, being rather too warm to be pleasant, he retired to a cave near by, and was soon in the embrace of Morpheus, in the land of forgetfulness. Upon awaking from his slumber, he found that he had taken cold; he used such remedies as he thought would restore his system to its normal condition, but all without the desired effect. In violation of the laws of nature, he had contracted a cold, which culminated in pulmonary consumption, which brought him to a premature grave, after years of intense suffering. This same physical taint was entailed upon his posterity, that is still sending the Granger family to the consumptive's grave. The sin against nature's law was committed in one short hour, but the consequences of that one sin are still widening and extending, although the sin was committed more than a thousand years ago.

Is the God of nature unjust because he thus administers his law? If not, by what course of reasoning can the charge of injustice be made and sustained against God for inflicting everlasting punishment for the sins of time. It may be claimed that the consequences of a sin is a necessity, but that everlasting punishment is arbitrary. If the consequences of a sin may extend for more than a thousand years, without violation of the principles of justice, where would be the injustice were it to extend to all eternity? If everlasting punishment, as taught in Revelation, is unjust, the same principle of injustice is found in the administration of nature's laws. If God has made one mistake in nature, He may have made two, and, perhaps, His second mistake was made when He made the man who thinks he knows more than his creator.

But how shall we obtain the measure of one sin so that we may know exactly how much punishment is due? Man is capable of putting an evil cause in motion, and that evil cause may be in the form of disrespect for God's word. This disrespect for God's word may be transmitted from one man to twelve, and each one of these may influence another twelve, so we have one hundred and forty-four, and so on in geometrical progression.

Who shall be able to measure the magnitude of this one sin, and not step outside of the domain of finite numbers? Who shall be able to find due punishment for this sin in the realms of the finite? God may be accused of being arbitrary in his dealing with man, but the accusation may have its foundation in man's ignorance, rather than in the truth. Has God given man choice between life and death, or has He not? Has God instructed man how to make the choice of life and told him what that life will be? Has He invited him to come to life? Has God invited man to come to Him? If God has invited man to come to Him, two things must be true: Man has the power to come, or he has the power to refuse to come. If a man accepts the invitation, in doing so he accepts a certain character of condition, and the characteristics of that condition are not difficult to name.

To come to God is to come into a state of holiness. To dwell in His presence is dwelling without sin, a dwelling in holiness and in the presence of His glory and power. It is certainly not injustice for God to offer man the choice of such a dwelling place as this. There is but one other condition in which it is possible for man to be. This condition is a matter of choice. Man may, as a matter of choice, choose to travel the broad road. Is it injustice for God to allow man to travel this road? If you see a man traveling the wrong road, and you tell him it is wrong, and he treats your advice with disrespect, do you feel guilty of any injustice to the man? You know that there is no ground for guilt here. God has told man that the broad road is the wrong road. If man travels on, is God to blame? Justice answers, no. Where does this road lead to? God tells man that it leads to destruction. When man gets to the end of his journey and finds destruction, will he accuse God of injustice? If he does, he is exactly where he ought to be—in hell.

Here we stop to attend to a few points of comparison. Is there no devil, then there is no God; the Bible speaks of both, and if it is false about one, no confidence can be placed in it about the other. Is there no hell, then there is no Heaven. Is Heaven a place, or a condition? If only a condition then hell being its opposite, is an opposite condition. Is there enjoyment in Heaven, in the presence of God, then there is its opposite in hell, in the presence of satan. Is there, in Heaven, an everlasting association with the spirits of just men made perfect, then there is, in hell, an everlasting association with the spirits of the wicked and imperfect.

The Bible says, Judas might go to his own place. How came Judas to have a place of his own? There are two places for man, Heaven and hell; these places are unchangeable. Heaven is the abode of the good, and hell is the abode of the bad. God does not force man to prepare himself for either. If man prepares himself for hell, like Judas, he makes it his own place and God cannot be so unjust as to rob man of his own. If man prepares himself for Heaven, he makes it his own place, and God allows him to possess his own. Every one is either a servant of God or a servant of satan. God promises his servants eternal life, but the wages of sin is death. When a man serves God, by His promise he is entitled to eternal life. Will the devil fulfill this promise of God? He certainly will not; such an idea would be absurd. When a man serves satan for the wages of sin, is God under any obligation to settle the account in pure coin of Heaven?

God is not unjust when He allows satan to settle his own accounts with those who render him service. The decree shall go forth: "He that is holy let him be holy still."—How long shall he be holy? Shall the "still" be measured by the fleeting years of time, or is it commensurate with eternity? "He that is filthy, let him be filthy still." How long shall he be filthy? Just long enough to be annihilated! If eternity is equal to "still," and "still" equal to itself, the filthy shall be filthy as long as the redeemed of God are permitted to dwell in His presence and the glory of His power.

W. P. RICHARDSON.

BUSH, ATEN AND ADKINS.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

As we have read an article, published in the FIRM FOUNDATION of August 1st, sent to you by Bro. J. D. Tant, of Lampasas, which was written by Mr. E. W. Holeman; being answers to questions submitted to one of our brethren, Eld. J. N. Adkins, of Lampasas, and endorsed in substance by a second brother, Eld. Bush, State Evangelist, also Prof. A. P. Aten, editor Texas Department Apostolic Guide, stating same, adding that, if he, J. D. Tant, was an evangelist, he was such on his own responsibility.

Whereof, we, the members of the Church of Christ, worshipping at Sipe Springs, having the greatest feeling for our brethren, generally, and the cause of Christ everywhere, do feel that Bro. Tant has been seriously wronged by our brothers above named, in, we hope to think, unintentionally misrepresenting him as being not in full fellowship and not in harmony with a popular sentiment of the Christian church.

Now the first question submitted to Bro. Adkins was: "Is the FIRM FOUNDATION faction of the Christian church in harmony with the general body of Christians in Texas?" To which he emphatically answered, "no!" Now, we would like for Bro. A. to explain, in what particulars the E. F. faction is not in harmony with the general body? Is it because it contends strictly for the word of God, and discards all humanisms, that he thinks it out of harmony? If so, this congregation is out of harmony with the general body; for we believe that God hath given us all things that pertain unto life and godliness through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue. (II Peter, 1:3.) Therefore, we need no humanisms, and we believe this to be the position of the F. F. and Bro. Tant.

Second question: "Is Rev. Mr. Tant properly endorsed by the church?" "No." Why does he say that Bro. Tant is not properly endorsed? Is it because he is not endorsed by Bro. Adkins, Bush and Aten? Do they constitute the Church?

Then again, Bro. Adkins says, Bro. Tant "is out of order." With whom is he out of order? Is it those brothers, or is it with the Baptist church, or both? "But that the Church had never withdrawn from him." Now, we do think those brethren have done Bro. Tant a great wrong in bringing those charges against him, unless they can establish them as facts, and if it is true that Bro. Tant is out of order with the teaching of the Bible, then they should have accused him to his face, and that before the Church, as Paul did Peter, (Gal. 2:11-14), and not before his enemies, as they have done.

Now, we do hope the brotherhood will speak out, and set their condemnation on a course of conduct as these brethren have pursued, and when a brother acts in a manner unbecoming a Christian, let him be brought before the proper tribunal, (the Church of Christ), then if he will not hear the Church "let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican."—Matt. 18: 17.

Now we would like to know if there are other brethren that can express themselves in support of Bro. Tant, through the FIRM FOUNDATION. As we have never before written anything for publication, we hope this may find space in your worthy paper.

Written by request of the congregation at Sipe Springs.

ANSWER TO BRO. JOHNS.

Dear Brethren of the F. F.

As I have been asked some questions on the atonement of Christ, and feel that some help would be beneficial to me, and to the cause of Christ at this place, I submit the following questions:

1st. When was the atonement completed?

2nd. As the high priest took the blood of the goat of the sin offering, within the veil, and sprinkled it upon the mercy seat, and before the mercy seat, and made an atonement for himself and the people. (Lev. 16: 15-19). Did not Christ die on the cross, and then take his own blood into heaven itself and make an atonement for the sins of the whole world? (Heb. 9: 12; I. John 2: 2.)

3rd. Show that the church of Christ is like the tabernacle, its shadows.

The above questions have been given me, please answer, and oblige. Furthermore, I want to hear from Bro. I. C. Stone on the atonement of Christ.

Fraternally,
W. J. J.

Trimble, Tenn.

Dear Bro. Johns:

I have before me your letter of the 7th inst., through the kindness of Bro. T. H. Gillespie, of Austin, Texas. In your letter you have asked several questions of the brethren, and especially of me.

Your first is: "When was the atonement completed?" Paul says, in the 9th chapter of Hebrews, after giving a brief description of the tabernacle, "Now when these things were thus ordained, the priests went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God. But into the second went the high priest alone once every year, not without blood which he offered for himself, and for the errors of the people. The Holy Spirit thus signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while the first tabernacle was yet standing; which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience; which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation. But Christ being come, a high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is, not of this building: neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us."—Heb. 9: 6-12. Again, Paul says in this same chapter: "And almost all things are by the law, purged with blood; and without shedding of blood, there is no remission. It was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens should be purified with these, (the blood of animals), but the heavenly things themselves, with better sacrifices than these. For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands; which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us: nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest enters into the holy place every year with the blood of others; for then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world; but now once in the end of the world has he appeared, to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment; so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many."—Verses 22 to 28.

Now it seems to me quite clear that the atonement was completed when Christ appeared before God with his own blood. The atonement was evidently for the whole world: The whole world was lost or it could not be properly said that they were redeemed. But because all were redeemed, we may not conclude that all will be saved. God has given law to all who are subjects of law, and man must accept the terms of his redemption.

In a comparison of the tabernacle and the church, I have only time to speak of one or two similitudes. In the tabernacle service the offerings were made through the priests. The people were not allowed to enter the holy places. They brought their offerings to the priest, and he officiated for them. The priests were washed before anointed and dared not approach God unwashed. In the church each one has a right to approach God in his own person, having been washed and anointed. Paul says, in Heb. 10: "For by one offering he, (that is Christ), hath perfected forever them that are sanctified. Whereof the Holy Spirit it also is a witness to us: for after he had said before, this is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds I will write them; and their sins and iniquities I will remember no more. Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin." That is, Christ will not be sacrificed any more. All past sins have been forgiven. Under the law they were remembered every year, by the same sacrifices. Christ has now been offered for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first covenant. So, Paul says: "Having, therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us through his flesh; and having an high priest over the house of God; let us draw near with a true heart, (a right understanding) in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled (purified) from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water."—Heb. 10: 22. Paul says: "Now he which establisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God."—II. Cor. 1: 21. "But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you," etc.—I. John 2: 27. Then those who have been washed and anointed may approach God in the name of the high priest and worship. But that individual who has not thus been prepared has no right to enter into the holiest and worship. This is one place where sectarians are dangerously in error. But when they have been taught to commit sacrilege and imagine that God has accepted their abominable sacrifice, they go and are dipped, claiming to be washed after being anointed; and some of our brethren who ought to know better will persist in accepting such sacrilege. If the Lord had not told us better we might be excusable; but not since we have been told. But I can not now pursue these thoughts further. Unto you all grace, mercy and truth.

I. C. STONE.

Catlin, Ind.

WHAT IS THE GOSPEL?

The term, "Gospel," means good news, glad tidings. We will now, in view of this definition, endeavor to learn something, as respects the gospel of Christ: the gospel which Paul declares to be "the power of God unto salvation to every one who believes it."—Rom. 1: 16. Again, Paul says: "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain. For I delivered unto you first of all, that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he arose again the third day, according to the Scriptures."—I. Cor. 15: 1-4.

Here Paul sets forth in brief though definite terms the fountain head of all divine truth, the great truth, around which all other truths revolve; yet he does not say this is the whole gospel, exclusive of all other truths; for this, within itself, would not be what is termed "good news;" hence, a knowledge of these facts, without the design of them being understood, would not be conducive of one ray of light to a single individual.

But some may say, did not Paul state the design by saying, "that Christ died for our sins"? Not in a measure that would cause them to believe that their sins were remitted, unless the doctrine of unconditional election be true. Whenever these facts were preached by the Apostles' the question would naturally arise, "men and brethren what must we do?" Showing conclusively that they regarded themselves in a state of condemnation, and, therefore, appealed to the Apostles for information. Now suppose the Apostle's instructions had stopped here; how much comfort, hope and assurance would they have had? Just none at all; and this is what sectarians are doing today: they teach the sinner that he must be converted, that Christ died, was buried, rose from the dead and ascended to heaven; but the terms or conditions upon which the remission of their sins are suspended are never mentioned. They urge them to have faith, without presenting one word of testimony, with which to produce faith.

We also find some who claim to be advocates of the ancient order of things, who, in order to capture sectarians, and have them recognized as christians, without obedience to the gospel, have narrowed the gospel down to three facts, viz: "Death, burial and resurrection." Now I would ask, if this is all the gospel, why speak of obeying it? Facts may be believed, but cannot be obeyed; and Paul says: "That Jesus shall be revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of Christ."—II. Thes. 1: 8. Then again, I ask, how obey it? According to the above definition, we cannot tell how. But let us turn to the treasure of all divine knowledge, the word of God, and see if we can get any light on this important subject. On the day of Pentecost, Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit, preached the "death, burial and resurrection of Christ," and about three thousand believed it, and asked: "Men and brethren, what must we do?" To this important inquiry, the Spirit, through Peter, said: "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."—Acts 2: 38. Now was not this good news? Indeed it was; and it was upon the compliance of which, that they were relieved of the guilt, bondage and corruption of sin, and made to rejoice in the God of their salvation. We find also that some have digressed so far as to say, that the only way by which men can pervert the gospel is, to deny these three facts; and then go into a community in which these three facts have been preached for years; and then when giving an account of their preaching say, that the gospel had never been preached there before.

"O, consistency, thou art a jewel;" but whither hast thou flown? This compromising plea with sectarians must be exposed; God's sanctuary must be cleansed. Brethren, let us labor for this, regardless of consequences. This is why that I write and work for the F. F. It is the only paper published by the brotherhood that contends for the whole truth, free from all manisms. I do not say this to flatter its noble editors, but with a view of pressing its claims on the brotherhood. So, hoping that all may come to the knowledge of the truth as it is revealed in the word of God, I remain yours in the hope of eternal life,

LETTER FROM A SISTER.

Have determined to write a few lines to (or for) the F. F., do not know, but the waste basket will receive it. No difference, so a few questions are answered which are of vital importance to one who has been trying to serve God with all her heart for many years, and all alone, with no christian companionship, save my Bible and your invaluable paper.

Born and reared by sectarian parents, entirely surrounded by sectarians, will you wonder that this poor, isolated sister, has been ignorant of many things pertaining to salvation? It is at least twenty-five miles to the nearest congregation; have one sister living, some ten miles from me, we have both large families so do not meet often.

If it was not for the strength and information gained from the F. F. together with my Bible, do not know what would become of me.

Bro. Strode has preached to the people here once, and continued, almost a week; every one seemed pleased both with the man and his teaching. Yet no one joined the church, but hope he sowed good seed in the hearts of some. We hope much good has been accomplished. Am much pleased with Bro. Strode: seems to be a humble, zealous worker, in this great and glorious cause; will not shake in from the sects. After our next meeting will let you hear from us again.

In Bro. Conner's article of "Several Things," "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." (II. Cor. vi: 14). Is it alluding to marriage ties? If so, many of us are irretrievably lost. After all our labor and struggle in this glorious warfare, it is an awful thing to feel that one wrong step taken through ignorance, because we loved and married one not a Christian, should be condemned through all eternity. Are we not justified in I. Cor. vi: 18-19? Answer something to comfort me, dear brothers, for God knows I want a thus saith the Lord for every thing, and my prayer is, that I may be able to read his word with an understanding heart.

Think it would always be best and more pleasant for Christians to intermarry. Yet this seems impossible on every occasion. I think it wrong to be yoked with unbelievers in societies, and never fall availing myself the pleasure of telling it on all occasions when I have a chance. But marriage is a natural consequence, and is not looked upon in that light. If one of our preachers should be called on to perform the marriage rites between a Christian and an unbeliever, is it his place to tell them it is not his duty or privilege?

I am not wise enough to contradict, (neither do I want to), so good and learned a man as we deem Bro. Conner, and if you have space in your columns, dear brothers, just answer these questions; you always make things appear so plain to me, it is no trouble to understand.

I think the FIRM FOUNDATION the best Christian paper I ever read, and it will always get my support, and I intend to do all I can towards its growth. I keep it always where my friends and neighbors can see it, and sometimes force them to read, or listen to me. May God bless you in all your efforts to do good, and help you to stand firm and stick close to the old landmarks, is the prayer of a sister in Christ.

A word to the sisters. So much has been said by other sisters through the press, far more competent than myself, I feel at a loss what to say. Sister Sarah is still rapping the sisters about snuff dipping. That is right; all can quit the filthy practice, if they will. Do not wish you to think me egotistic but just as soon as it was shown to me in an ungodly light, I laid it aside, and never intend to touch it again. Are we not commanded, dear sisters, to be temperate in all things? Then let us all abstain from this filthy and intemperate practice. Do not say, when I get through with this bottle I intend to quit. You will never bring yourself to forbear in such a way, but lay down your brush and say, I have done, if you had a shop full of it; and, if you are a Christian, the struggle will be nothing. I intend this for the brethren as well as the sisters. All should come out on the Lord's side, and put on the whole armor. None must say, I cannot.

My life is so lonely and isolated in this benighted part of the world. You know not, dear sisters, the strength and pleasure it affords me to read your letters. Write on and admonish others; if we wait to feel worthy, we will never make the attempt.

May God bless you all, and when death has set on us the seal of immortality, and the cold, chilly waters gather thickly and fast around us, may we peacefully recline our heads on the bosom of our Savior, and be borne gently over the turbulent waves of Jordan, where we will meet to part no more.

Yours in the one faith,

A SISTER.

CREEDMOOR.

Bidding adieu to kind friends at Mason, I once more tried the tender mercies of the stage coach. Should any of our readers need a thorough shaking up, accompanied by a vigorous jolting down, with a few bumps and thumps thrown in as eye-openers, I recommend a trip from Burnet to Mason via the stage line. I arrived safe in Austin, and under the hospitable roof of Sister Hansbrough, I soon recovered from the fatigue of my journey.

On the 16th, Bro. Alton came in with his buggy to take me to Creedmoor. I enjoyed the ride very much, as the Doctor is a good talker, and an earnest Christian. On arriving at the place of meeting, we found that the Alliance would occupy the house that night, so we went on to the Doctor's home. On Saturday the Methodists had a quarterly conference at the school-house and preaching at night. On Lord's day I preached three discourses to good audiences, but on Monday and Tuesday nights was prevented by rain from preaching. Wednesday night we preached and closed the meeting. The rain, and "busy time" gathering crops were too much in the way.

We have a congregation of good brethren and sisters at this place; but they meet only once a month at a school-house not far from Creedmoor.

While at Bro. Alton's I learned something about the application of power—dog power. He has a dog—Brewster, by name—that is an important factor in the household. He does the churning every morning. The machinery used is very simple and all home-made. An incline wheel about ten feet in diameter is erected just outside the milk-house; the churn, a very large one, sets inside the house, and when the wheel is put in motion by Mr. Brewster, it works a lever to which the churn dasher is attached. Sometimes Brewster hides out till churning is past, thereby demonstrating that a dog knows how to shirk duty as well as man. Now, sisters, if you can't get the men and boys to do your churning, utilize your dogs. Leaving Creedmoor on Thursday, the 22nd, I arrived at home the next day, and found all well.

There is no reason why the brethren at Creedmoor should not succeed. They have advantages not possessed in other places. Good crops, a healthy country, and plenty of material to work upon. May the Lord bless them, and may they work diligently in the cause of the Master, and always walk by the same rule.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, OCT. 15, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

ATTENTION, READERS.

This is to notify my brethren and friends that ere this reaches them, my home will be Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas. All correspondence to me should be addressed there. Our exchanges will please note this change and send their papers to that place. But all funds and orders for the FIRM FOUNDATION or any pamphlet published by us should be addressed and made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

A. MCGARY.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Brethren will please remember, not to send subscription money for the F. F. to me. But send all money for pamphlets or F. F. to Austin, payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION.

We will patiently wait awhile to give Bro. McGarvey time to answer our questions, which we hope he will do. If he does not, we have more to say in that connection. Yes, much more.

If Adam had only been struck by the wisdom which has beamed upon our "prohibition" brethren, he might have averted his and Eve's fall, and check-mated the devil, by cutting down and casting out of the "garden" the forbidden "tree." Poor old foggy! What a pity the Lord did not happen to get hold of some of that finer quality of "dust," when He made the first man, so that He could have made one of the "progressive" stamp—such as Clark, Homan, McPherson, Carroll, Dimmitt, et al, who have discovered a near cut on the devil. Then when the devil came into the garden to work the ruin of man, by means of the fruit of this tree, his satanic majesty would have been pointed to the place where the "tree" had stood, and he would have been—stumped.

On the 6th of last month, Jacob Ditzler, of the Methodist church, and Bro. T. W. Brents, engaged in a debate at Obion, Tenn. One of Bro. Brents' propositions was: "Baptism to a believing penitent is for, or in order to the remission of sins." Now, if it is not necessary that people shall know that baptism is for the remission of sins, then it is not necessary that T. W. Brents, or any one else should attempt to establish such a proposition. Why not, then, discuss practical questions? But it is a rare thing to hear of a debate between our brethren and any sectarian, in which this proposition is not discussed. Our brethren who say, that it is not necessary that persons shall understand that baptism is for the remission of sins, in order to the validity of the ordinance, surely do not mean what they say; or they are making theological by-play of this doctrine in these debates.

See what desperate lengths the fanaticism of the advocates of "our plea" is driving some men into. One says, "those baptized among the denominations manifest more courage and loyalty to Christ in so doing than those whom we baptize"!!! Another says: baptism for the remission of sins is not of the "one-faith" of the New Testament Scriptures!!! No wonder the FIRM FOUNDATION is making friends so fast; it is the only paper that boldly holds itself aloof from the entangling alliances of "our plea," and disrobes the gospel of Christ of this goat-skin that it has been wrapped up in for so many years. Let's pull it off, brethren, that the Lamb of God may be seen without these human "blemishes and spots." Let these modern Cains pile up their faithless offerings mountain high, but let us, as did Abel, offer only by faith.

We did not expect any lovely words from Bro. Burnett in reply to our warning words to brethren, about holding up the hands of a man who will define the gospel to be one thing to-day, and to-morrow, as the occasion may demand, deny that it is the gospel. When a man sets out to merchandising on the gospel in this way, of course he will become greatly enraged at the man who would hinder his craft. Bro. Burnett's definition of the gospel, when trying to meet the demand of "our plea," and then his remarks about the "ancient gospel" never having been preached at Rose Hill till he preached there, when he knew that the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, which is the whole gospel with him when defining it to defend the plea, reminds me of a Jew in Austin, of whom I bought a pair of pants when I was there last. I had called for a good quality, and while he was looking for "the very ting wanted," I took up a pair and was examining them; but when he saw what I had and that I was in the act of putting them down, he remarked, "I know you would not vant dem; for I know you are a shudge of goots, and dem are inferior; but I vill show you shoust de ting wanted." But after overhauling his stock of pants, he called to one of his clerks to know where to find the best quality. The clerk answered that they were all sold. Whereupon he walked back to the pair I had been looking at, and picked them up, and said: "Mr. McGary, I vas mistaken about dese banta, dey ish very goot banta." So it is with Bro. Burnett about the gospel: When he was selecting the gospel for his Rose Hill report, he passed right by the three facts, as an inferior gospel; yes, so inferior that when it was preached, dissociated from the entire doctrine delivered to the saints, it was no good, no gospel at all. He had the best quality in stock then, "the ancient gospel." But when a Baptist, Methodist, or other immersed sectarian, has to be fitted and "the ancient gospel" is not in stock for him, the three facts are represented as a "very goot" gospel. We would not throw an obstacle in the way of an honorable, high-toned journal that was sincerely contending for the gospel of Christ, under any circumstances; but on the contrary, would recommend it to our readers, even if it were being published in a stone throw of the F. F. But when a man will twist and pervert the gospel of Christ, and willfully and recklessly misrepresent his brethren to subserve his fell purposes of "filthy-lucre," it is the bounden duty of all faithful men to hinder him in such nefarious enterprises. If Bro. Burnett will furnish any plausible hypothesis for his very discrepant positions about what constitutes the gospel—that is, it seems discrepant to us—we will hasten to offer him some apologies and beg pardon for much we have said. But thus far he will not even allude to that matter. A. MCG.

What is the one faith of the New Testament? You say it is belief with all the heart that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God. Is it no more than this? You answer no. Then, belief that baptism is for the remission of sins is no part of the faith? You answer no. Then the man who preaches and requires this additional faith, in order to baptism, adds a new faith to the one faith of the New Testament? You answer yes. Then, according to his theory there are two faiths, or else belief in Christ as the Son of God is not the one faith!! Again, baptism on this one faith that Jesus is the Christ is the one baptism, is it not? You answer yes. Then additional baptism on an additional faith is another baptism, is it not? You answer yes. Then the man who preaches and requires this additional baptism adds a new baptism to the one baptism of the New Testament? You answer yes. Then, do not all the re-baptizers add a new faith and a new baptism to the "one faith" and "one baptism" of the New Testament, and are they not in conflict with Paul, and wholly outside of the Scriptures with their new heresy of two faiths and two baptisms?—Christian Messenger.

Seriously, we wonder how long the readers of the Messenger will encourage Bro. Burnett while he is insulting their intelligence, and trifling with the truth, as he has in the above, and in many other instances we could mention. Will they, who are to "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints," hold up the man's hands while he denies that faith, and propagates the heresy, that the doctrine of baptism for the remission of sins, is not of the "one faith of the New Testament?" If they will, then they become "partakers of his evil deeds," in thus "bidding him God-speed." If baptism for the remission of sins is not of the "one faith of the New Testament," then it is a sin to teach that doctrine; for "whatsoever is not of faith is a sin." Verily, he must be determined to "foam out his shame." In the same issue of that paper, with this perverse stuff, is an article from Bro. J. R. Jones, that Bro. Burnett would do well to read carefully.

What a pity such sound wheat as Bro. Jones furnishes the Messenger should be bound up in the same bundle with Bro. Burnett's miserable chaff. If the Messenger does not cease to barter off the truth, to meet the demands of this man in a tight, it is bound to collapse, unless it has more insincere readers than we think it has. We had a letter from a section where it now has many readers, and that letter stated, that unless Bro. Burnett corrected some of his gross perversions of the Scriptures, and ceased to misrepresent his brethren, every one of his readers in that locality would drop the Messenger soon. We say these things out of no spirit of rivalry, but because they are true, and ought to be said of any paper that will deny the faith as Bro. Burnett has denied it above.

The circulation of the FIRM FOUNDATION has increased more rapidly since the beginning of its controversy with the Messenger, than ever before, and is increasing now more rapidly than ever, which we mention, to show that the Messenger is not in our individual way at all; but upon the contrary has, doubtless, been an advantage to us in the way of procuring subscribers; because the error the Messenger has taught has furnished a dark background for the truth the FIRM FOUNDATION teaches, to shine more brilliantly against.

We wonder what Bro. Jones and Bro. Wilmoth think about this departure of their senior editor. Brethren, speak out, we know you can't endorse such heresy as that. A. MCG.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Please answer the following through the F. F.: Should I contend that John's baptism is Christian baptism? Would I not deny the blood of Christ? See Rom. 6:3. Would I not be that anti-christ, as in I. John, 4:3? Would I not deny that Christ has come in the flesh, as in Acts, 19:1?

Yours for the old way,
A. M. CHANDLER,
Lingleville, Texas.

There is, under the reign of Christ, but "one baptism." This "one baptism" began to be administered by the Apostles of Christ on the first Pentecost after his resurrection and Coronation as King. This "one baptism" is the birth of "water and Spirit," without which no man can enter into the kingdom of God. It is an immersion in water of one whose heart has been prepared for an intelligent obedience of that ordinance, so intelligent that it can be said to be an "obedience from the heart." This preparation is that instruction of the Spirit which was delivered through the Apostles, "beginning at Jerusalem" at the time above mentioned, and reaching to the end of time. It is the taking of the steps pointed out by the Spirit, no more and no less, and in the very order arranged by the Spirit, which makes it a birth of "water and the Spirit," and the "one baptism."

The baptism of the twelve whom Paul found at Ephesus, who had been "baptized unto John's baptism" was not this "one baptism," hence Paul did not recognize it as of the authority of King Jesus. If we should come across such baptisms to-day, if we are true to the "Captain of our salvation," we will act as did Paul. Yet such baptisms, if we were justified in instituting a comparison between them, would seem a thousand-fold nearer the "one baptism" than those we meet with among the denominations, who systematically avoid and berate that approach to immersion, which was pointed out by the Spirit—they have it approached from the very opposite angle to that by which persons came to the baptismal waters under the Spirit's guidance. Hence, it is a sham and a fraud of satans, by which he counterfeits the "one."

Yes, it is the Spirit of anti-christ which introduces all of these counterfeits, and the very way to determine the genuine from the counterfeit, is to do as John commands: "try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world." If the spirit which teaches a man, is false, then all he does by the guidance of that spirit, is of the spirit of anti-christ. If that false spirit, in its system of religion, imitates ordinances of Christ, they are only imitations, or counterfeits, and the more nearly they approach the true, the more mischievous they are, as all know the danger of well executed counterfeits. A. McG.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have seen several of your answers to questions asked you by our brethren, that appeared to be so near the point, that I concluded, if you will not think it out of place, to propound a few; but will, in the outset say, I have no object in view save truth and information for others, as well as myself. God in his wisdom has seen proper to suspend the remission of sins of all accountable beings on certain specific conditions in which they exercise their wills, and have the ability to comply with, this done from a good and understanding heart, salvation or pardon is the result; though some of these parties, back in their lives, were known as thieves and robbers, and still have some of their stolen goods in their possession. Now, will these parties be admitted into the everlasting kingdom without restoring their stolen property, they having the opportunity and ability to do so? Or will they fall short of the promised inheritance for failing to do this, after having been pardoned? or will such characters ever be pardoned without first proposing in mind, as the gospel is brought to bear on them, to make restitution, and carrying out their determination in after life as they have opportunity coupled with the ability to do so?

The Savior, on a certain occasion, seems to have sanctioned the restoring of falsely obtained things to the the extent of fourfold, and we evidently live under a better law than the Jews did. Repentance that doesn't run far enough back into the old life to root up all the old stumps and grubs of disobedience as far as we can by making good the wrongs we have done, appears to me to be no repentance at all. These thoughts published may arouse others to a sense of duty that have never given the subject a thought; our preachers seldom mention it in their teaching, so I look and long for an answer from your closely scrutinizing pen.

Yours in the hope of eternal life,
WM. EDWARDS.
Loyal Valley, Texas.

Christianity, in its entire scope, is a system of righteousness, or right doing. That of which a man has defrauded another is not rightly his however long he may have had it in his possession; but is the property of the defrauded man, though he should never lay hands on it again. Christ's blood does not wash out the rights of the defrauded, nor the wrongs of the defrauder who clings to another's property. "Let him who stole steal no more," is as applicable to this kind of a thief as any other. A. McG.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have seen a copy of the FIRM FOUNDATION, and it claimed to stand ready to answer all fair questions bearing on its teachings. Now last year Bro. Kurfees gave attention to your position, in the Guide. Among other things, he asked for the Scripture which says: "The sinner must know the fact in order to the validity of his baptism," meaning the fact that baptism is for the remission of sins. Again, he asks: "Was the faith of the editor of the Firm Foundation, at the time of his baptism, in the proposition that Jesus is the Christ and the Son of God, so complete that it exhausted all the meaning there was, or is, in that sublime proposition so that there was nothing left about the proposition that he did not fully understand and believe? If he answers no, his inconsistency is evident; if yes, then we shall not hesitate in telling the brotherhood where to find the Daniel who can dissolve all theological doubts and difficulties."

Now, Bro. McGary, you ought to have answered these questions, if you saw them. I watched the Guide closely for your answer, and if you ever answered I failed to see it. * * * * * You may publish these questions, and all of my letter, but page 3, if you desire, provided you will correct mistakes. I would like to see your reply.

The brother watched the wrong paper to see our answer to these stunning questions. We saw the questions and gave them attention in our paper, but they never went into the Guide. But we must say, that we see nothing in these questions half so manifest as the blindness of the young "pastor" who asked them; and we presume this is the reason our answers were not published in the Guide. When he demands us to show where the Scripture says, in express words, that the sinner must know the fact that baptism is for the remission of sins, in order to the validity of his baptism, he does some top-logical begging of the question, indeed. Now while we admit that we cannot meet his demand at this point, we would remind him, that he cannot find it stated just that way in the Scriptures, that we must know the facts of Christ's death, burial and resurrection; yet he teaches that we must know these facts in order to the validity of our baptism! But while we can't find the necessity for knowing the design of the ordinance stated just in those words, we do find it said: "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free;" and we find that our Lord selected and qualified men to deliver or preach that truth. We find that when they were fully equipped from the Throne at God's right hand, to present this system of truth by which sinners were to be made free, that they taught that baptism was for the remission of sins.

Now, as they taught this, it must be true; and as Christ said we should know and be made free by the truth; and, as he enjoined upon these teachers, specially, to preach repentance and remission of sins in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem; and as we find that they did this very thing, we must conclude, that the very same system of truth, in all its parts, must be preached, understood and believed to-day, in order to the validity of baptism. This may not satisfy a young "pastor" who can't kick off the "wooden shoe" of his Bible College curriculum, and whose vision is shaded by a green-back veil; but free, unfettered minds will be satisfied with it.

As to his question about our faith, when we were baptized, we will say that, we did understand that Jesus Christ was the Son of God, just in the sense it was preached by the Apostles; and we also understood that baptism was for the remission of sins, in that same sense.

As for that part of his question about our understanding the proposition that "Jesus is the Christ and the Son of God, so completely as to exhaust all the meaning there was or is in that sublime proposition, so that there was nothing left about the proposition that we did not fully understand and believe," we must say that our questioner would around the moon so on this that the lunar influence was so great that the gist of it was all wasted before he got back with it. We simply believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God, through the testimony of the inspired witnesses that have told us of him, and of his death, burial and resurrection. Now, this may make us appear "inconsistent" to the man in the moon, or to other men who whirl around the moon till they become dizzy; but we do not fear that ordinary people, even though they stand on tip-toe sometimes, will thus judge us on this matter. We have no fears about his calling us the "Daniel who can dissolve all theological difficulties." Daniel was a godly man and never arrogated to himself the power of dissolving difficulties, except through the power of God. Neither do we. God's power for our day, for dissolving difficulties, is the gospel. If we are a Daniel that is the kind of one we are.

If to believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God, and that baptism is for, or in order to what he and his Apostles have said it is for, makes us appear so wise and Daniel-like in his eyes, then he could have found three thousand just such wonderful dissolvers of theological difficulties, at Peter's meeting in Jerusalem, on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Jesus, if he had been there! What a pity he was not there to see so many prodigies baptized by the Apostle. A. McG.

Dear Bro. McGary:

If a person comes before the church for membership, from a different state, merely stating that he was a member, how would you act? Please state through your paper what would be the proper way, and by so doing you will confer a favor. I am a subscriber and expect to be as long as I live, and trust that you may be blessed with a long life.

I remain, your brother in Christ,
JUDGE WILLIAMSON.
Mexico, Texas.

If he says he is a member of "the body," and his conduct has been as becometh the gospel of Christ, he should be received, of course. If, however, there are grounds of doubt about his professions, steps should be taken to ascertain his standing where he came from, which might be done by letter or otherwise. The danger in receiving an interloper into the congregation, under such circumstances, is only imaginary. For where the congregation lives up to the law, such a character would soon be detected in his ungodliness, and then the authorized dealing with him would more than counteract any reproach he might have brought upon the cause.

So, when congregations study and act by divine guidance there is no danger of such impositions. But if they will not live up to this guidance, they are not apt to be hurt much anyway, because they are as dangerous to the cause, and as sinful in the sight of God and man, as the supposed character would be. We have to depend upon the word of all whom we receive, at last. It is only where the Scriptures enable us to detect their mistakes that we are justifiable in refusing the admission of persons into the body. A. McG.

THE RUM-SELLERS DOOM.

During the recent contest over the whisky question, vehement execrations and stirring anathemas were breathed in song and prayer, against saloon-keepers, by Christians, and so-called Christians, of every age, hue and sex. Old men, young men, old women, and fair maidens out of every "branch" of the great "orthodox" family, and from the non-church departments of the world, as well as from among the real disciples of Christ, blended their voices in one grand chorus against the wicked rum-seller. Men who strive with main and might six days out of the week, to lay up gold in their coffers, even "devouring widows houses," and who, "for a pretense make long prayers" on Sunday, forgot that the Lord said: "Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me;" forgot that he said: "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven;" forgot that Paul said: "The love of money is the root of all evil;" yes, "forgot what manner of men they were," in their war upon the "rum-seller." Women, who "consume widows' houses" and rob God's poor, spending it upon the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, in the way of "costly array, gold, pearls" and other forbidden adornings forgot that the law of the Spirit demands that they shall cease to conform to the ways of this world, and adorn themselves in modest apparel; yes, forgot what manner of women they were, in their crusade against the evil of whisky.

We would not offer a premium on any evil, neither would we extend sympathy to the man who earns his livelihood through such a nefarious means as that of the whisky saloon. But when we read the doom of such characters of Christians as are mentioned in this, and that of the saloon-keeper, as revealed in the Book out of which all are to be judged, we see they are all to depart from the presence of the Lord into the same place, that was prepared for the devil and his angels—the saloon-keeper because he never became a disciple of Christ, and the others because they would not "walk in the Spirit," but "after the flesh."

So, in the light of the Scriptures, it seems to us there will be, speaking after the world, ten highly refined Christian ladies driven from the presence of the Lord, to every saloon-keeper; and, perhaps, three times as many cultured Christian gentlemen. The love of gain underlies all of the evils; for Paul says it is the root of them all. To remove drinking saloons will only be a surface work. Then let us strike at this root of all evil. We cannot reach it through the ballot-box, but only by sowing the good seed of the kingdom in the heart. "Preach the word." A. MCG.

A LETTER FROM BRO. SOWELL.

Dear Bro. Hansbrough:

The F. F. comes again to my home, containing much weighty matter; and it is truly worthy our consideration.

Well, Bro. Hansbrough, when the truth is strong and convincing, we should be honest enough to acknowledge and accept it. I have studied carefully the word of the Lord, to know whether it is right to take the sects into the church by the "shake of the hand," I find the word of the Lord teaches no such thing. But I find it does teach what the Apostles taught the world and what the world did in order to enter the church.

I have thought it very strange that some of our great, good and learned men would act as they do. They tell us the sects teach the plan of salvation contrary to the doctrine of the Apostles, and, of course, those who obey under such teachers, do something wrong. Now, then, will the brethren take them into the church without obedience in the right way? Yes, if they are carried through the form of sectism. Why do our brethren tell us the way the sects teach the plan of salvation is wrong, and then receive a man into the church who has accepted and obeyed that very same false doctrine?

During our last meeting at my home congregation, Corinth, we baptized three who were from the Cumberland church. We taught them and treated them as if they had never been connected with any religious body. One who presented himself said he had been immersed by a Cumberland preacher and was "satisfied with his baptism." We then made an effort to teach him the way of the Lord more perfectly; and he accepted and was baptized into Christ before the meeting closed. Some of the brethren tell us the re-baptizing of the sects is a great hobby with the FIRM FOUNDATION. Yes, it is such a great hobby they are not able to meet it with the truth. Brethren of the F. F., you are surely sounding at the right place on that subject, or some soldier on the battle field would break your sword into many pieces.

Bro. H. we differ a little on one point, which you did not make very clear to my mind, in your reply to my article of June 15th. I believe when we obey God's commands, whether we understand the promise or not, he will save us. You say, we must understand the promise: will you prove it? I understand we do the obeying and God does the promising and the blessing. May the Lord bless you, my brother.

F. C. SOWELL.

Columbia, Tenn.

Dear Bro. Sowell:—I got home from West Texas on the 17th of September, having been gone two months, and found an article in the FIRM FOUNDATION, of Sept. 15th, from you, in which you give an account of your meeting at Almarville, Rutherford county, Tenn., and at Cedar Dell, Marshall county, and in which you say: "I lost the paper in which you reply to my article." Bro. Gillespie tells me he sent you another, and I would be glad you would reply to it, if you think it best, after reading it again. You also ask me the following question in regard to the blind man, to whom the Savior gave sight.—John 9:

"Now, I want you to tell me why he went and washed. Did he go to get the clay off, or with the expectation of seeing, or to obey the command of the Savior? If he went not knowing what the blessing would be, did he obey the command?"

If he washed to get the clay off, to get his sight, and to obey the Savior, it was all right; but if the Savior told him to wash in order to get the clay off, and to get sight, and to obey Him, and he had washed just to get the clay off, do you believe he would have received the blessing, his sight? I don't, if you do. Why? Because he would not have had faith in the word of the Lord, and without faith it is impossible to please Him: and it must be faith in his word, and not in man's.

Now for the application: You, if you preach right, tell sinners that they must believe in Christ with all their heart, they must repent of their sins, they must confess with their mouth the Lord Jesus, and be baptized for the remission of sins, for salvation. They obey when thus taught. Now have you taught them the word of the Lord? You say, yes. Have they obeyed the gospel? You say, yes.

Another preacher (not of the gospel) comes along and tells sinners that they must first be begotten or regenerated by an influence of the Holy Ghost direct from heaven, they must then repent, then believe, and as soon as they believe, they are forgiven, saved, and they must be baptized because they are saved. They are dipped when thus taught, and are honest, sincere.

Has that preacher taught them the word of the Lord, the gospel? You say, no. Have these sinners, thus taught, obeyed the word of the Lord, the gospel? Do you say, yes? Oh, don't. If you do, then what is the difference between believing the truth and a lie? Understanding the truth and a lie? Obeying the truth, the gospel, and a lie?

The Savior says, the truth, (not error or falsehood), shall make you free; but He says, you shall know it.—John 8:32. But in order to know it, we must understand it; or can we know a thing and not understand it? Bro. Sowell please take your Concordance and trace the words "know" and "knowledge" and see what conclusion you will necessarily come to.

I, like you, believe that such a paper as the F. F. is very much needed among our brethren, and am glad that you speak favorably of it to the brethren, which I hope you will continue to do as long as it contends for the truth, which I verily believe it is doing, and which I verily believe a great many of our leading brethren are not doing.

We have received an article from you, not dated but postmarked Sept. 21st, which we publish above, and in which you say: "I have studied carefully the word of the Lord to know (or understand) whether it is right to take the sects into the church by the shake of the hand. I find the word of the Lord teaches no such thing." Then we ought not to do it; for Paul says: " whatsoever you do in word or deed, do all in the name (by the authority) of the Lord Jesus." We cannot do it by his authority, unless his word teaches it; and if his word teaches it, none of our leading brethren, who practice the hand shaking, as an initiatory rite, will undertake to show it, or affirm their teaching and practice on that subject, which looks a little suspicious, does it not? Even Bro. J. A. Harding, upon whom I have always looked as such a bold, faithful and fearless soldier of Christ, will not undertake to defend his teaching and practice on that subject. It may be that he fears he will get his "sword broken into many pieces." But he need have no fears of that if he uses "the sword of the Spirit;" but if he does not, it will be broken, sure.

You ask the question: "Why do our brethren tell us the way the sects teach the plan of salvation is wrong, and then receive men into the church who have accepted and obeyed that very same false doctrine?" Well may you ask that question; but none of them will undertake to answer it; and why? Because they cannot. See how Bro. Treat did in his pretended reply to my article in the F. F., of July 15th; and see how Bro. I. C. Stone exposes his garbling and sophistry in the F. F., of Oct. 1st. When men, big men, big debaters, have to resort to such low trickery as that to sustain their cause, is it not time they were abandoning it? Why, even an ordinarily honorable lawyer, (let alone a Christian), will not stoop that low to carry his point before a jury. Treat's article is in the Octographic Review of August 4th, headed "More Speculation."

You say, further: "I believe when we obey God's commands, whether we understand the promise or not, he will save us. You say we must understand the promise; will you prove it?" Faith comes by hearing God's word; will you give our readers the word of God, for what you say you believe? But now for the proof: The Savior teaches, (Matt. 18: 15,) that in order to be converted we must understand, and we must be converted in order to be healed or pardoned. That is pretty strong, Bro. Sowell. Again, in verse 19, he teaches that, when any one hears the word of the kingdom and does not understand it, that the devil takes it out of the heart. See also Luke, 8: 12, and in the 23 verse he says: "But he that received the seed into the good ground, is he that heareth the word and understandeth it." If they don't understand it, the devil takes it out of the heart, and, of course, it cannot bring any fruit. Is not baptism for the remission of sins a part of the word of the kingdom? And is it not necessary to understand it in order to be forgiven, or saved? Bro. Sowell, that ought to be proof enough for you; but once more and I will stop for the present. Why do you preach, (which I have no doubt you do), that baptism to the believing penitent is for the remission of sins, if it is not necessary to be understood?

Hoping that the above proof will prove satisfactory, and that you will write again soon, I am, your brother in Christ,

E. HANSBROUGH.

LETTER FROM BRO. HEFLEY.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Through the influence of my wife and the preaching of Bro. Tomlinson, of Indianapolis, Ind., I united with the Church of Christ at Danville, Ill., a little more than six years ago. For near twenty-two years I had lived in faith and practice a Methodist. I could see but very little difference in the doctrine of the Bible as taught by Bro. Tomlinson, and as taught by the M. E. preachers. I had been sprinkled in the M. E. church. But as I understood that I could not be received in the "Campbellite church"—as I then called it—unless I was immersed, I submitted to it as a matter indifferent, nonessential. Not for, or in order to the remission of sins, for this the Methodists never taught, nor do they to-day.

In June following, I moved to St. Joseph, Ill., and in September Bro. H. C. Cassell, of Oxford, Ind., was called to hold a meeting. I was still full of sectarianism—just as many are whom we find in the Church of Christ to-day. But Bro. Cassell's plain, simple presentation of the truth, put me to thinking, and not only to thinking, but like the brethren at Beren, I "searched the Scriptures daily, whether these things were so." The result was, I lost all the sectarianism I was ever possessed of, and found I had not obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered to the saints. I had not been baptized for the remission of sins. But just because, and that was about as good a reason as I could give. I requested and received at the hands of Bro. Perkins, baptism for the remission of sins. I have found and immersed several who came into the Church in about the same manner; but having learned the way of the Lord more perfectly, they were baptized for the remission of sins.

I often think of a saying of Bro. Perkins: "There are just two things that will take a man to heaven, start right and keep right." This the preacher should not only insist upon, but should teach the sinner how to start right, and how to keep right.

Bro. Sommer says he has "cut the tap-root of this re-baptism tree. It has fallen, fallen, FALLEN." Well it seems to me, from what I have read from the pen of Bro. Stone and others, and from the proposition of Bro. Jackson—which is not accepted by Bro. Sommer—to discuss the question, that ugly old tree still stands. Bro. Sommer says: "Paul did not try to unsettle the Pentecostans because of a defect in their knowledge when baptized." My brother, how do we know there was any "defect in their knowledge when baptized?" Luke says: "Then they that gladly received his word were baptized. And they continued steadfastly in the Apostle's doctrine, etc." I can see nothing that would indicate that there was any "defect in their knowledge," of what Peter meant when he commanded them to "repent and be baptized for the remission of sins."

In regard to "certain disciples" whom Paul found at Ephesus, if not taught by John, by whom were they taught? If not baptized by John, where do we read of John's disciples baptizing either before or after he was imprisoned or beheaded? And if they had not heard of Christ when they were baptized, what did John and his disciples preach? Paul says, Acts xix: 4: "John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people that they should believe on him which should come after him: that is, on Christ Jesus." Now Bro. Sommer, I am not asking these questions in the spirit of controversy, for it would be foolishness on my part in a superlative degree to attempt a Scriptural argument with you. It is information I want.

Bro. Sommer, in O. H. of September 1st, under "The Needs of The Hour," says: "Some would-be Christians flatter themselves that by taking wicked wretches into their company, they can reform them. Wretched reasoners! Those who have loved sin sufficiently to corrupt themselves therewith, will mostly interpret all efforts to lift them up, without repentance on their part, as an endorsement of their misconduct, or, at least, that their sinfulness has not been regarded as exceedingly sinful." Well, some—I will not say would-be Christians—flatter themselves that, by "the more excellent way," they can reform those who have corrupted the worship of God by introducing the organ, the festival, and many other things not commanded. "Wretched reasoners!" Those who love the praise of men more than the approbation of God, and have so far forgotten that they were purged from their old sins, that they will not heed the pleadings of a crucified Redeemer: the plain and positive command of God, through Christ and his martyred Apostles. "If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the things that are written in this Book. And if any man shall take away the words of the Book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the Book of Life and out of the holy city, and out of the things that are written in this book." Will mostly interpret, "the more excellent way," as an endorsement of their unrighteous ways, or at least, that it doesn't make much difference after all whether we use the organ or not. "If meat make my brother to offend," I will eat meat any way, even if through my knowledge the weak brother perish for whom Christ died. "The more excellent way," Christ's way, or any other way to the contrary notwithstanding. Your brother in hope of eternal life. B. R. HEFLEY.

"Good understanding giveth favor; but the way of the transgressor is hard."—Prov.

WHY WE DENY INFANT BAPTISM.

I am sometimes asked why we deny infant baptism. My answer is, because there is no authority, no precept or example for such practice, in the whole word of God. Notwithstanding there is no authority for it, four-fifths of the so-called evangelical churches baptize infants. Now a little child can neither believe, repent, nor confess. It has no desire to come to the ordinance—no ability to understand its meaning, no heart or will in it whatever. This lack of faith, confession and intelligent, voluntary submission to this ordinance, with us, wholly violates the validity of it and renders it nugatory. Water baptism alone—separated from genuine faith voluntarily held, true repentance heartily exercised, and public confession openly made—we wholly repudiate as inefficacious, whether the person be adult or infant. We do not speak of "Adult Baptism," nor "Infant Baptism," but only of believers' baptism.

Brethren, we must attack the evil of infant sprinkling as anti-Christian, if we stay true to the cause of Christ, though many who uphold it are regarded as among the pious of the earth. We hold them so ourselves. We unite with them, in many ways, for the purpose of advancing the kingdom of our Redeemer. We love them for their piety and their devotion to religion; yet we must oppose them in their practice before described, even at the risk of being denounced as sectarians, as bigoted, as factious, and as heretics. We may expect to encounter the displeasure of all those whose tendencies are to antiquated forms and systems of human wisdom. But if we are assured of a good cause—if we believe that God requires his people to teach the truth—and that, if all will not engage willingly in this work, those who are able and willing must do it—and if, above all, we enjoy habitual communion with Jesus Christ, we shall have sufficient courage to carry out the measure, and to act upon the principle, that "we ought to obey God rather than man."

In the Methodist discipline, under the head, "Infant Baptism," these words of Jesus are quoted, and badly misapplied: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for such is the kingdom of God." Now, this language is used in the Discipline as though meaning that his disciples were to suffer infants to be brought to the baptismal font. Brethren, this is a glaring perversion of Scripture. They were commanded not to forbid them from coming to his arms—from receiving his blessing. They were already meet for his tender welcome. They were invited to come by the shortest and most direct route, and not go round by any Jordan, nor any diminutive bowl. Now, the Discipline requires the minister to pray:

"Almighty and everlasting God, we beseech thee for thine infinite mercies, that thou wilt look upon this child: wash him and sanctify him with the Holy Ghost; that he being saved by thy grace, may be received into the ark of Christ's Church."

Thus the minister prays for God to wash a little child and sanctify it, when Jesus said, "of such, as he is, already is the kingdom of God." Now, if "of such is the kingdom of God," then little children do not need baptism nor sanctification to prepare them for it. Notice that Jesus asked that the little ones be permitted to come to him, not to the font, which he never ordained. Notice, again, that he wanted to bless them, because they were innocent, not to wash or cleanse them.

The Discipline instructs the minister to "beseech the dearly beloved" to call upon God that he will "grant to this child, now to be baptized with this water, that which, by nature, he cannot have." Why beseech them thus to pray? "For as much as all men are conceived and born in sin, and that our Savior saith, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

Then, if the Discipline be right, Jesus must be wrong; for he said of children who had not been baptized, "Of such is the kingdom of God." The Discipline interposes the font between the children and the Savior. The Discipline teaches, that the little ones were "conceived and born in sin," they must be washed on their way to their Master. The performance might do the child no harm—even as we have seen it can do no good.

When the unconscious babe grows up and hears the command, "Be baptized,"—which he has never, in any sense, obeyed—he is told he was baptized when a babe in his mother's arms. Thus he goes to the judgement-bar of God, never having obeyed the Lord in baptism, unless he breaks away from the traditions that bind him. The belief in "total hereditary depravity"—of original sin—is the fundamental error on which the heresy of infant baptism rests.

Oh! how strange that a passage, teaching the heavenly innocence of little children, should be wrested into support of their depravity. Strange, too, that they who chide immersionists for "making too much of baptism" should themselves make more of it by including unconscious babes, and quoting in justification of such folly, the words of Jesus to Nicodemus: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." D. H. PETREE.

REVIEW OF BRO. J. A. HARDING.

In the Gospel Advocate of August 17th, appears an article from Bro. J. A. Harding in defense of sect baptism. Bro. H. refers to an occurrence which took place recently at a protracted meeting. The parties were a man and a lady, who were members of the Presbyterian church; but, upon hearing the gospel preached in its purity, became convinced of its truthfulness, and hence desired to identify themselves with the Church of Christ. The gentleman referred to, had been immersed, which is described by Bro. H. in the following words: "An elderly man came forward who had been immersed by the Cumberland Presbyterians when he was between fifteen and seventeen years of age. He said that he tried faithfully, for two or three years, to live up to his "profession of religion," but that he then fell away from duty, and for many years, even to old age, lived a wild, wreckless life."

Now, here was a man who had never been in the kingdom of God, but had only submitted to a man-made creed, as Bro. H. very well knows; and after serving it a while, gets tired of it and ceases to make any pretensions to religion at all, and Bro. Harding decided that his baptism was valid, and, therefore, received him into the church.

Bro. H. seeks shelter under his favorite argument, viz: that if a person is immersed to honor God, no matter into what denomination he is baptized, it is valid, and, therefore, is accepted of God.

Now, this seems strange, when we compare it with other things Bro. H. has said concerning the sects; for, if any one will read Bro. H's articles in the last few numbers of the Advocate, he would, indeed, be surprised at seeing such an article as this one under consideration. Now, it is evident, that the man who had been immersed into the Presbyterian church did not, at the time of his baptism, believe the gospel; hence, his baptism was not of faith, and as "whatsoever is not of faith is sin," (Rom. 14: 23), therefore, it was sinful, and unauthorized by God.

But Bro. H. insists that the man believed in the "death, burial and resurrection" of Christ before he was immersed, consequently, was a fit subject of baptism. If the death, burial and resurrection of Christ is the whole gospel, it follows that no one can obey it; for who ever heard of any one obeying a fact? Facts may be believed, but cannot be obeyed. Paul, in Rom. 6: 16-17, speaks of his brethren having obeyed the form of doctrine delivered them, after which they were made free from sin, and became the servants of righteousness. Peter, after preaching the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, and about three thousand believed it, and inquired of the Apostles what they must do, said: "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."—Acts 2: 38.

Hence, we find that the gospel consists of facts to be believed, commands to be obeyed, and promises to be enjoyed. Do Presbyterians teach these things? No, they do not; but deny this as being the plan by which we are saved, and teach such things as predestination, abstract spiritual influence, utter passivity, total hereditary depravity. A belief in these things is required of every one coming into the Presbyterian church; hence, instead of teaching the gospel, they teach things not to be found in the divine volume. Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by words spoken. So, if a man hears Presbyterianism, he will, if he believes anything, believe Presbyterianism. The same is true of any other doctrine. As the teaching is, so is the faith.

The second case referred to by Bro. H. was a lady, who had been sprinkled by the Presbyterians, and becoming dissatisfied with said sprinkling, applied to Bro. H. for baptism. Now it is evident that sectarians are sprinkled for the same thing for which they are immersed; and the truth is, they have no faith in God's appointment, and rely for salvation upon things which God has never promised; and if we immerse those who have been sprinkled or poured, we should also immerse those who have been dipped, for their dipping to them was no more than sprinkling to others. Hence, they should first be taught the gospel and its requirements, and then be admonished to obey it.

There are many other things in Bro. H's article which we would like to notice, but we think this is sufficient to show the inconsistency of his course; and, beside this, the F. F. has so many noble writers, that I do not wish to occupy too much space. So hoping that we may all come to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus, I remain, your brother in Christ,

C. E. HOLT.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have received two or three copies of the FIRM FOUNDATION, and am truly glad to know that we have a paper among us that is not afraid to tell sectarians that they must be baptized for (or in order to) the remission of their sins. I was raised among the general Baptists. They would call the people around the mourner's bench to get religion, or rather to have their sins forgiven; and then take them down to the water and baptize them into the church. A doctor goes to see a sick man and leaves some medicine, and says to his patient: After you get well, take this medicine. Now, my dear brethren, baptizing a person, after their sins are forgiven, does as much good to them, as the medicine will do the well man, who takes the medicine after he gets well.

But still we have brethren who will take persons into the church on such a baptism, but not into Christ, "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ."—Gal. 3: 27. Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead, by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.—Rom. 6: 4.

We must not walk in that broad way any more, for it leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat. Oh, may we ever be found walking in that strait and narrow way that leadeth unto life everlasting, is my prayer.

Bro. McGary, if I have written anything worthy of your paper, publish it; if not, cast it into the waste basket. Success to the F. F. Enclosed you will find fifty cents, for which you will please send me the F. F. for six months.

Yours for the truth,

GEORGE HARSHMAN.

A RELIGIOUS DISCUSSION.

There will be a debate between J. D. Tant, of the Church of Christ, and N. W. Little, of the Primitive Baptist Church, to take place ten miles south of Hamilton, in Hamilton county, beginning on the 17th of November next, and lasting four days.

FIRST PROP.—The Scriptures teach, that the Spirit of God operates immediately upon the sinner's heart in conversion. Baptist affirms.

SECOND PROP.—The Scriptures teach, that after a man has been converted, he can wander away, or apostatize so as to be eternally lost. Christian affirms.

THIRD PROP.—The Scriptures teach, that the heirs of eternal salvation are unconditionally elected thereunto, by the God of heaven, before the foundation of the world. Baptist affirms.

FOURTH PROP.—The Scriptures teach, that baptism in water to a penitent believer is in order to the remission of all past sins. Christian affirms.

Please insert the above, and oblige, yours for the one way.

J. D. Tant.

READ THIS, BRETHERN.

Many persons have subscribed for the FIRM FOUNDATION at my solicitation—they understanding that payment was expected in October, 1887. That time is here, and I insist that each and every one of said persons be prompt in remitting their money as early as possible. As all of said subscribers live in Montague county, each will consider this a personal and earnest call for your remittance. The F. F. needs money now. Yours in Christ,

JOHN W. HARRIS.

PUBLISHER'S NOTES.

If you want to please the publishers of this paper, send them in your dues, and send them one or more new subscribers. ALL TRY IT.

If you have not received your copy of the Oatman—McGary discussion, as you directed us to send, please let us know at this office at once.

Had a pleasant visit from Bro. L. O. Johnson, of Fliskville, Texas, not long since, and he gave us some encouraging words. Call again, Bro. Johnson.

Let those who think that they know more than God, study Bro. Richardson's article, in this issue, closely, and find God's second mistake. There are many who are afraid to trust to the wisdom of God, preferring their own. God can not be mocked, cannot lie and can not change.

We publish a letter from a sister, in this issue, which should have appeared three months ago, but it was misplaced, and not found until recently. It is good advice and is always new. We hope all will read it carefully, and meditate upon it seriously, and search the Scriptures honestly to know the truth on this subject, and the truth will make you free, indeed.

A recent letter from Bro. F. M. McMurrey, of Sweet Home, Lavacca county, Texas, says: "The cause of the Master in this county, (Lavacca), is prospering. There seems to be a forward movement all along the line, and under the preaching of J. W. Strode and R. L. McMurrey there have been between sixty and seventy persons converted, this summer, to the word of God."

OATMAN—MCGARY DEBATE.—The long looked-for discussion between Oatman and McGary is ready for mailing to those who have subscribed for it, and will reach many of its readers before this reaches them. Brethren, push this discussion to the front, it is the very thing to up-root all sectarianism, directing the reader to the true teaching of the word of God on those points under consideration.

Had a pleasant call from Bro. D. J. Garvin, of Hye, Blanco county, a few days ago, and soon learned that he is sound on the gospel plan of salvation—no shakelism about him. He delighted us with a statement made by a shaken-in Baptist at Willow City, who said not long since, that he had tried very hard and for a long time, to bend the Bible to suit his baptism, but said, it would not bend. So he humbled himself like an honest man, who understands the word of God on that point, and made the good confession, and was baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and now he is happy in the knowledge of the fact of having done his duty according to the will of God, and he stands upon the Rock, (a firm foundation), and relies upon the promises of God, which are sure and steadfast, safe and sound.

LETTER FROM BLANCO COUNTY.

I staid night before last at Bro. —, who is selling goods, and farming some, and, I think, is very much taken up with the things of this world, and not much with the things of the world to come; and, I think, that is the case with nearly all the brethren in this section of country. They nearly all belong to the Grange and Alliance, and these worldly institutions, gotten up by man's wisdom, and supplanting the Church of Christ. They are not satisfied with the grandest of all Alliances, the Alliance instituted by Christ, which is the Church; but they must go into those worldly-wise institutions, gotten up by designing and money-loving men, for the purpose of subserving their mercenary motives; and many, yes, many of our brethren and sisters are being drawn into them.

Oh, brethren, why are you thus forsaking the Church of Christ, which is his body, and of which He is the infallible head, the law-giver, and spending your time, talents and means building up these human institutions, which are not only not authorized by the Head of the Church of which you claim to be members, but are opposed to his authority, who is King of kings and Lord of lords, law-giver over all law-givers? Do you say, that you are not pulling down the Church of Christ by your present course? Do not be deceived; God is not mocked, (or deceived, if we deceive ourselves); "for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."—Gal. 6: 7-8.

Now, brethren, when you give your time, talent, means, and influence to the support and building up of these human organizations, are you sowing to the flesh, or the Spirit? If you say, to the Spirit, then prove it by the teaching of the Spirit, and you shall have space in the FIRM FOUNDATION to set yourselves right before the brethren. If you say to the flesh, then let me entreat you not to be deceived, and thereby reap corruption, instead of life everlasting. There is no medium ground: we are either sowing to the flesh, or the Spirit. But how can we tell which we are sowing to the Spirit, or to the flesh? Why, Paul tells us in the preceding chapter, saying: "Walk in the Spirit, and you shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh."—Gal. 5: 6. But how do Christians walk in the Spirit? It is not a liquid, like water, in which they can walk. Then, how? By walking within the limits prescribed by the Spirit.

To illustrate: A man walks in Texas as a citizen of the State; but as soon as he passes over the line, which bounds or prescribes the limits of the State, he is in another government. Then the law prescribes the boundary within which the citizens of the State are to walk, and as long as they remain within that boundary or limit, they are walking in Texas. So with the Spirit; it prescribes the limits within which Christians, the citizens of Christ's kingdom, are to walk, and as long as they walk within those limits, they walk in the Spirit, as directed; but as soon as they pass those limits, they are walking in a another government, under another ruler, the prince of darkness; for there are but the two governments in which we can walk, "and his servants we are to whom we obey, whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness."—Rom. 6: 16.

Brethren, do not become offended at me for writing plainly to you. I do it because I believe you are doing wrong; and I believe it my duty to tell you of it, "whether you will hear or whether you will forbear."

The Apostle says: "As you have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk you in him."—Col. 2: 6. How did we receive him, brethren? By faith, repentance, confession and baptism for the remission of our sins, thereby complying with the law of the Spirit, which Paul says, "made him free from the law of sin and death."—Rom. 8: 2. How do we walk in him? By continuing to observe all things whatsoever he has commanded, (not what men commanded), by receiving with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save our souls, (Jas. 1: 21); doing our Christian duty.

There are many of our brethren, yes, and preaching brethren, too, who will go ten, fifteen and twenty-five miles to a Grange, Alliance, or some other worldly institution meeting, carry their dinners and suppers, pay their initiation fees and quarterage promptly, get up and talk, and travel and lecture in the interest of the institution, who seldom go to the Lord's day meeting, when it is not more than two to five miles; and when they do go, they are so timid they cannot say a word for the cause of Christ, and have not a nickel to spare for the treasury of God. Now, brethren, ought these things to be so? And ought these preaching brethren, who, both by precept and example, teach their brethren to go into and sustain such institutions, to grumble because their brethren do not sustain them while preaching? I verily believe they ought not; because it is the necessary result or fruit of their own teaching and practice.

Paul says: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."—II. Tim. 3: 16-17. Now, brethren, do you look upon yourselves as being men of God? If so, do the Scriptures furnish you to all good works? If they do, do they furnish you to Granges, Alliances, Masonry, etc? If they do, the readers of the Bible have been a long time finding it out, and I would be glad you would point me to chapter and verse, for, if it is my duty to encourage these things, I want to do it. Brethren, let us do what we do in the name (by the authority) of the Lord Jesus.—Col. 3: 17.

E. HANSBROUGH.

Blanco county, Texas, Oct. 14, '87.

"ONE LORD, ONE FAITH, ONE BAPTISM."

"Without faith it is impossible to please God."—Heb. xi: 6.

It seems that enough has been said about re-baptism, as some are wont to call it, but when I hear men say, that it makes no difference whether one understands the design of baptism or not, just so the act is performed, I cannot refrain from offering a few thoughts, as they suggest themselves to my mind, in vindication of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

My thoughts are based on Paul's declaration that, "It is impossible to please God without faith." Then it follows, that an act performed, a deed done, in the absence of genuine, unrelenting faith in Christ, and his word, cannot please God, let that act be whatever it may. Then, what is faith? Paul says: "Faith is the substance of things hoped for; the evidence of things not seen."—Heb. xi: 1. Then, in the second verse he says: "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed." Then he gives us a clear example of faith. He says: "Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain." Why was Abel's sacrifice more excellent than Cain's? Not only because the material he offered was more excellent, but also because he offered it according to the plan that God marked out, and did it solely on the ground that God had commanded it to be done. Therefore, we learn from this, as well as many other passages of Scripture, that faith leads on to prompt obedience, not only to the thing done, but as to the design of the act performed. Therefore, faith is simply the belief of testimony. What is the testimony concerning the law of admittance into the kingdom of Christ? 1st. Faith. 2nd. repentance. 3rd. Confession. 4th. Baptism.

Now, brethren, do not the Scriptures clearly and distinctly teach this as God's plan of admittance into His church? and in the order I have presented them? Yes. Is there any other way by which men enter the church of Christ? No. Then, does it not follow that baptism is the consummating act, and all the rest precedes it in order to qualify one for baptism? You say, certainly so. Then does it not also follow, that in the absence of either of these three items, one is not a fit subject for baptism? Faith is the belief of testimony. Now, do not the Scriptures clearly teach, that is for (in order to) the remission of sins? You say, that is the testimony. Very well. Then if one has faith, they believe it. Then, in view of all this, when one, right on the eve of going down into the water, says, they do not believe it, but confess that they believe that God has already pardoned them. Now, do not the sects all require such confession, without a single exception? And will you say, that such a person has faith in Christ, when they do not believe his word? How can they be fit subjects for baptism?

Therefore, in the absence of faith in the word of God, they are not qualified for baptism; therefore do no please God, because it is not of faith. "That which is not of faith, is sin." Again, Paul says: "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. x: 10. Now, is confession something that the Book does not teach, making that confession that Paul says is made with the mouth unto salvation? You know it is not? Then it follows that Baptist baptism is not valid; because they are baptized before they believed the testimony concerning the way of salvation. Faith is the belief of testimony. Then, if one of the qualifications is left out, they are not fit subjects for baptism. But that is not all: they have been baptized without confession, and confession must precede baptism. Confessing to believe their sins pardoned, is not confessing Christ in any sense. But to the contrary, is positively contradicting His holy word; therefore is not of faith; and "whatsoever is not of faith, is sin." Nor is that all: they deform that form of doctrine that Paul thanked God had freed the Roman brethren from sin.

Let us look into that briefly: what is the doctrine Paul is speaking of? It is the doctrine of Christ. What is the doctrine of Christ? The death, burial and resurrection. What is the form of it? Why, it must be something just like it is in every particular. Jesus died; so must the sinner die. That is, separate himself from his sins. (Death means separation.) What next? He was buried; so must the sinner be buried in baptism. Then what? He arose from the grave; so must the sinner arise from the watery grave to walk in newness of life.

What is the Baptists rule? They first kill the sinner. That's right. But here they spoil the form by making him alive and then burying him because he is alive. O, consistency, thou art a jewel.

Now, dear brethren, one and all, will you not agree with me, that genuine faith, repentance, confession and baptism will place one in the church of Christ? And does it not follow that if one's baptism is genuine, all the rest of the items were? for it takes them to qualify one for baptism. Therefore, if Baptist baptism is valid, the Baptist church is the church of Christ. Will you admit as much. If not, quit the shaking process. But, if you are willing to admit as much, join yourselves unto them. But, mark you, if you do you can depend on going under the water, for they won't receive you otherwise.

OBSERVE THE TRUTH.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Please let me talk awhile to the readers of your paper, because I know they love the truth, (except perhaps a few), and they that will not read it, do not love the truth. I think there is good to be accomplished in talking to and with those who know and love the truth, and are willing to abide by it, though they may neglect it.

Now, brethren and sisters, this is what I wish to talk to you about: A neglect to observe truths in our daily life and conduct, though we know them. We fail to remember, yes, forget that unless we strive lawfully we will not gain the crown. We do not earnestly heed the things we have learned, and therefore let them slip. "How shall we escape a just recompense of reward if we neglect the truths written for us, and thereby neglect a great salvation?" "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God!" Knowing these things, brethren and sisters, let us watch, and as we are not children of the night, let us not sleep, but lift up the hands that hang down, and make strait paths for our feet. Take up our cross daily, and each day renew our lives in consecration to our Master's cause. Knowing that we are the "salt of the earth" and "the light of the world," how careful we should be that our light may so shine that others seeing our good works may glorify, (not us), but our Father who art in heaven.

In beginning this article, I intended to mention a few of the faults I have noticed with us, as Christians should be a peculiar people; but in doing so my talk would be too long. So for the present I will tell Bros. Hansbrough & McGary that we heard, through a Mr. Thomas, (not Bro., for he come among us only by a shake of the hand), that Bro. C. P. Vance said the F. F. is dead. What do you say, brethren? Is the Truth dead? Ah, the Truth has many enemies. Fight on, brethren, God has given you a weapon, and He has given you a measuring reed, which they cannot face, nor stand to be measured by.

SOME POINTS OF DIFFERENCE.

There are spurious Christians. Some point to this fact to prove there is no genuine religion. This fact does not serve such persons. It proves to the contrary. It unmistakably proves there is a genuine. They could not have been a counterfeit dollar on this earth without the existence of a genuine dollar. The counterfeit proves the existence of a genuine. In like manner spurious christians prove the existence of genuine christians.

In a series of short articles I want to show up some points of difference between the two classes. For the sake of convenience, I will divide both classes into preachers and private members. First, I will notice the private members of the spurious class. Secondly, The genuine private members. Thirdly, The counterfeit preachers. Fourthly, The genuine preachers.

The spurious private members are generally great lovers of money. They engage so closely in making money, that they have no time to spend in doing good. When they succeed in getting money, they refuse to honor God with it. Some of them contribute liberally, but not in a way that honors God. They want to honor men, and have men praise them. They want to contribute where it will go out to the world that they themselves are some great ones. God's persecuted poor may starve. His uncompromising, faithful ministers may suffer. These world-loving, popularity-seeking christians can afford no relief. To contribute here would not be sufficiently trumpeted. These spurious christians profess to feel a deep interest in the welfare of our country. They are great politicians. They believe the welfare of the country demands that christians take an active part in affairs of state. They vote, hold office, and some of the bravest of them will take up arms, if necessary. In short, these counterfeit christians wallow in the filthy mud-puddle of politics until they terribly besmear the garment that should be clean and white. The class of christians under consideration are very particular in the selection of their preachers. Why are they particular? Is it because they want men that will preach the word without addition or subtraction? No; this is not the reason. These are the very men they do not want. Why, I again ask, are they so particular? It is because they have itching ears, and want them tickled. It is because they are a plug the sects around them, and want them pleased. The preacher that lives in the vicinity will not do. He must be a compromising, sect-pleasing, brought-on preacher. He must come finely dressed, with his bee-gum hat on, and must have no scruples against lording it over God's heritage. When such a preacher is procured, these christians seem to think they have done their whole duty. They have no worshiping to do. The preacher is hired to do that for them. The little assembly of the saints, on the first day of the week to worship God according to the direction given in his word, has no charms for them. Notwithstanding the elder, the God-given pastor, is there anxious to feed them on the sincere milk of the word, they are on some secular business, or their way to hear the sects, pass by. Notwithstanding the table is spread, upon which are the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of the great Redeemer, they scornfully pass by, seeming to think such assembly beneath their dignified notice.

When the preacher's day arrives, they are promptly in their seats. They sit there with mouths open, like young birds, ready to swallow anything the preacher puts in, except the word of God in its ancient purity and simplicity. These christians fail to make the addition spoken of by the Apostle Peter, and as a result, they are blind. The Lord says, shun every appearance evil. These being blind, no evil appears to them. They cannot see the traps the adversary has set for them. They rush blindly in and are caught. They see no evil in the skating rink, nor the social dance. No evil appears to them in the political strifes. They see no evil attending the organ in the worship. No appearance of evil to them in shaking the sects into the fellowship of the saints. They can see no evil in forming societies that God has not authorized. They are, as the Apostle said, blind and can not see afar off. For this blindness they are responsible, because it is wilful. It results from not making the addition commanded in the first chapter of the Apostle Peter's second letter.

The Lord commands christians to grow in grace and in the knowledge of Jesus. These spurious christians have failed to grow. They are like wasps, smaller than when born. They are so spiritually dwarfed that they are no good to the cause of Christ. They contribute to the spiritual preacher, it is true, but this does not help on the Lord's cause.

I will now bring my remarks relative to this class of private members to a close. In my feeble remarks, I have found fault, I am taught that it is wrong to find fault without suggesting an improvement. Kind reader, if you belong to the class partly described in the foregoing, I suggest that you grow in grace and in the knowledge of Jesus. I urge that two things are necessary in order to growth, literal or figurative. These are food and exercise. The food God has ordained for your spiritual growth is, the sincere milk of the word. The exercise is, the works that He has ordained that christians should walk in. These are God's appointments for your growth. If you will heartily observe them, you will cease to be counterfeit. Yes, observing these appointments, will erase all the spurious figures, and make you a bill that will pass through the gates into the eternal city. More anon.

LETTER FROM BRO. J. C. STONE.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Since Daniel Sommer has seen fit to "cut the tap-root," as he says, of the "re-baptism" tree, and thus close me out of his paper, I shall reply to some things he says, through the FIRM FOUNDATION.

He says, in the O. R. of September the 8th: "The Review has bid farewell to vain jangling." But in the Review of the 15th, he gives another blow at Bro. Rowe. He there intimates that there is something dreadful behind the curtain that he would expose, if his friends did not restrain him. I have seen men before now, who seemed exceedingly anxious to fight somebody while their friends would hold them; but if turned loose, were altogether calm. Now, I suggest to Daniel's friends to turn him loose, and see if he will attack Bro. Rowe. He seems to think that no one has any right to publish a paper but himself. Rice was a scoundrel when he opposed Daniel; but now he is a gentleman. The case being altered, alters the case, you see.

Some time ago, I wrote an article for his paper, asking him to correct some misrepresentations of his, but he refused to publish, stating that he did not wish his readers to see such a "document." But finally I prevailed on him to publish it: and now it is before the brethren, and I want them to compare it with some of his abuse of Rowe and Rice, and see if will not compare favorably with his. He tried to make his readers believe that I had a catechism for the pious sects, and after I had told him plainly that I had no such thing, he still called for my catechism. I told him the second time I had none, and yet in his foot-notes in the Review of September 8th, where he states that, at North Salem, Ind., three came from the Missionary Baptists, and he "re-baptized two of them, and the third said he was satisfied with his baptism," he says: "If Bro. Stone had been in my place, he would probably have found it necessary to ask him half a score of questions to convince him that he ought to be again buried in baptism. This is what I meant by the word 'catechism.'" Is not this a wonderful excuse for his misrepresentation of me? He framed in his own imagination, a catechism of half a score of questions, and then attributed it to me.

Again he says: "Every one knows upon reflection that re-baptism, as it is called, must be specially preached, or some will come forward to unite with us, who are satisfied with their baptism, though they became obedient among the denominations. Well, it was the particular questioning about the views entertained when baptized, and which is necessary to lead such to become dissatisfied therewith—it was this that we denominated a catechism." Do you see how, in his own imagination, he fixes it up. If I go and preach the gospel and contrast it with sectism until the people cannot help but see the difference, and show them what the faith of the gospel is, contrasted with what the sects claim to be faith, and any see their mistake, does any call that a catechism?

What catechism was employed with the two he re-baptized at North Salem? What catechism did Bro. Daniel use to ascertain that the one there was satisfied with his baptism? I asked him where he got his catechism that says, "Are you satisfied with your baptism?" but I get no answer. I must ask him, if the baptism of the one was valid was not the baptism of the other two? They had all submitted to Baptist baptism. The difference was, that one was satisfied and two were not. Now, Bro.

Daniel, will you tell us which was right? If the two were right, the one was wrong; and if the one was right, the two was wrong. If the two were right, then you did wrong in passing the one, for if the first baptism of the two was wrong, so was that of the one; but you left him in the wrong. If his first baptism was right, so was that of the other two, and you did wrong in re-baptizing them. So, in either event you did wrong.

But Bro. Daniel has been arguing that re-baptism is wrong. In the Review of August 18th, he undertakes to cut the tap-root of this "re-baptism tree." He goes on and describes a man who "believes that Christ is God's Son, and the Savior of Gentile and Jew; believes that he died, was buried and arose from the dead; repents of his sins, and, in few words or many, confesses his faith in Christ, and is buried in baptism to fulfill all righteousness, etc. But he has some wrong notions. He believes baptism an outward sign of an inward grace, and not for remission of sins, and, perhaps, as a door into a church, and that he received forgiveness at a mourner-bench. Now to affirm that such wrong notions invalidate the baptism, etc.: This is placing the design of baptism above the design of Christ's death, burial and resurrection, and above the design of his atonement." Will he tell us why it is? Are not the death, burial, resurrection, and atonement all to be preached? Are they not set forth in the gospel? Does any of us deny their design or the necessity of understanding them? Not one. This is only another of Daniel's imaginations. It originated in his own brain, and not in mine.

But the nice part of the matter is, after he had gone through all this fancy sketch, he says: "Thus the tap-root of the re-baptism tree is cut, and the tree falls; and as it falls so let it lie." But instead of letting it lie, strange as it may appear, and will appear to his readers at North Salem, lo! Daniel replanted the very tree he had cut down, as he said. There, as he says himself, he "re-baptized" two good Baptist brethren, who fills the description which he gave, as I have recited above. They believed that Christ died, was buried and arose again. They believed that he is God's Son, and the Savior of the world. They had repented, as he says; they had confessed in few words or many, no doubt, as he says; they had been baptized, as he says. They had the wrong notions, no doubt, that he describes. But, he says, he assisted them in their obedience. Not only that, but he gladly assisted them in their obedience. In their obedience to what? According to his teaching, they had obeyed before. If they had not, then the third one, who he says, was satisfied with his baptism, had not obeyed. But he took him in on the same kind of baptism.

Poor Daniel, I will not cast him into the lion's den; but only into the hole he dug in trying to get at the tap-root of the baptismal tree. The tap-root of that tree is too deep for him to injure it. He got Bro. Treat to venture near the hole he dug. But Bro. Treat was too sharp to venture near enough for me to tumble him into Daniel's pit. Treat took off after Dr. Hughey, and escaped. If, in the future, I should find him maneuvering around to pull Daniel out, I will yet tumble him in.

I am of opinion that they have done about the best they can in their opposition to the truth; but so far in the discussion not one of them has been able to give one good reason, nor one argument, in favor of sect baptism. They all contradict themselves and are wholly inconsistent. Daniel Soumer, after all his floundering around, blowing his more excellent way, comes right back and re-baptizes, two, who he had argued, were already good Christians. Will not everybody say he has condemned his own teaching? They certainly will, for they cannot help but see it. Any of them, it appears, will re-baptize any one who desires it. They leave it entirely to the person's notion. What is the will of the Lord is the question. Such a course virtually nullifies the law of the Lord. We say the law of the Lord must govern, regardless of any man's opinion. Let us earnestly contend for the faith.

A SISTER'S LAST LETTER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have been a reader of the FIRM FOUNDATION from the first issue to the last. I know it is the best paper for the true brotherhood of Christ Jesus, that has ever gone to the press.

I have seen so many articles from the sisters, more especially sister Saria. I have often wished I could write like her; but my misfortune was, that I was left a poor orphan in this wide world, and my education being but little I know not how to make the necessary corrections, but I will do the best I can, that is all my Lord and Master requires of me, and my poor fellow creatures ought not to require more.

Sister Sarah speaks my sentiments exactly. For years gone by I have seen and heard so much about the fashions of this world, it makes my heart ache within my breast. Time after time has the tears fell from my eyes, when I would see the wealthier sisters look on the poorer with scorn and disdain, even in what they call the Lord's house. I, for one, think the Lord has but few houses in this world. There are many houses that are claimed to be the Lord's, which, I think, if they were properly called, it would be the house of satan. I think they are generally kept filthy enough for anything but the Lord. I have met at the Lord's table to partake of the emblems of our dear Savior, and saw the amber running under the table, and I have seen the elders, deacons, and even the preachers, take a great quid of tobacco out of their mouth and throw it under the table, when they went to prepare the Lord's supper. Shame! shame on the brother guilty of such filthiness.

I have also seen sisters dipping snuff as though they were at home, Sisters, I would set a better example before the brothers. If I ever used the filthy weed, I would be like Bro. Sweeney, never do it again. It is nothing but a filthy habit and fashion of this sinful world. Our Book teaches us to have everything in decency and in order. Is this decency, is it in order? If so, who ordered it? The fashion; not the God of heaven, who made man in his own likeness and image, and pronounced him not only good but very good. Can we imagine the God of heaven like the fashions of this world to-day, more especially the fashions of the sisters? No, no. I think of His likeness as being pure and undefiled, without spot and without blemish.

Dear sisters in Jesus, can we step to the glass to-day and look at our likeness and think we are without blemish, when we look at the beautiful covering and ornament of our heads that God has given us, seeing one-half of it cut from ear to ear, and combed down to our eyebrows, or all frizzed up, the other half combed wrong side out, and put on top of our heads: then look around and see what a great hump on our backs. Oh, what a picture the God heaven must be, if He is the likeness of the fashions of to-day.

Dear sisters in Christ Jesus, think and reflect and meditate seriously over this subject; think whether you would like for the meek and lowly Savior to enter your door or not. We should all live while it is called to-day, as though we expected to-night to be our last. I remain yours,
A SISTER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

The above letter is from the hand of my dear companion, who was called away to the Spirit land a few days after she penned those thoughts. If you think them worthy of space in your valuable paper, of which we think so much, you can let the readers see them. If not, commit it to the waste basket.

I remain yours in the one hope,
M. M. WILLIAMS.

Egan, Texas.

OBITUARY.—Died, on the 17th of July, 1887, RACHEL E., wife of M. M. Williams. On Lord's day morn, about ten o'clock, she closed her eyes in death. She quietly passed to the Spirit land, with a sweet smile and heavenly expression on her lips. She had been struggling for the Master's cause about twenty-eight years, and amid all the trials of this life she lived a devoted Christian all the way through. She leaves a husband, seven daughters, two little boys, and many warm friends, to mourn her loss; but they mourn not as those who have no hope. M.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

CORRECTION.—In our issue of Oct. 15th, under "Editorial Notes," where we compared Bro. Burnett's course to the Jew merchant, four words were left out, which destroyed the sense. In the 80th line from the bottom, between the words "plea" and "reminds" should have been, "had been preached there."

Let it be kept in mind that no anabaptist has yet told us where the church was before the days of Alex. Campbell.—Christian Messenger.

Let it be kept in mind that a certain Baptist-successionist has failed to tell us whether the three facts were ever preached at Rose Hill before he preached there. It is a strange idea that, people have to stop and tell where the church was prior to "Alex. Campbell's day," before they can convince people that they have no right to alter God's law of induction into Christ. Perhaps the church, "before the days of Alex. Campbell," was in the same place that it was in at Rose Hill, before the "ancient gospel" was preached there, by T. R. Burnett.

I have read, with much interest, Bro. Richardson's article on "Reward and Punishment." And, while I believe it is about the strongest argument of its length I have ever read on that question, I do not subscribe to the views he presented. I believe, however, all who are associated with me in editing the F. F. hold to the views Bro. R. expressed. So no one of them is at all responsible for whatever I may hereafter express on that question. I have had some private correspondence on the question recently, and have from time to time expressed my views on it in private conversation with different brethren. I, therefore, (and because I believe it would be interesting and profitable to some of us,) contemplate reviewing Bro. Richardson's article some time in the future. If that review should lead to a discussion of the question between Bro. R. and myself, I may yet learn to be "orthodox" on the question; for I shall discuss it as much in quest of tenable grounds as otherwise; for, while I am inclined to the opposite side from Bro. R., I am not so well settled on it as he and others seem to be on the other side. I know of no one with whom I had rather discuss the question, for he is fair and logical, and it would be really a treat to discuss with such a brother, after so much controversy with unfair and illogical brethren. But I don't want to appear as one who knows more than God, and as "God's second mistake," because I have not been able to see this question in the same light these other brethren do. The argument, that there can be no happiness without the existence of a state of unhappiness—and all of that line of co-relative argument—I can not yet grasp. Again, it would not, in the least, impair my faith to be forced to change my views on this question. Again, I think Bro. R., and others, mistaken when they teach that our ideas of justice cuts no figure. God is all-wise, just and merciful. A man must have a fair conception of these attributes to be able to understand God's Revelation. I grant, he is not able to scale their loftiest heights. It is in part my idea of these attributes of God that leads me to repudiate the "orthodox" idea of eternal punishment. But if I should become convinced that a fair interpretation of the Scriptures sustains Bro. R's position, it would not lessen my confidence in any of God's attributes; but I would then know I had imperfect ideas of them—in fact, it would be, in part, a change of these ideas that would lead to an acceptance of the other side of the question. But I must not now write any more, for I don't want to draw Bro. R's fire yet, as I yet have some months work laid out. I will preserve his article.

A. MCG.

J. W. MCGARVEY, SR.—No. 3.

On pp. 122-23 of Bro. McGarvey's "Commentary on Acts," he interests his readers with an account of a discussion he had with a certain "Doctor of Divinity," some years previous to the writing of his "Commentary." He says:

"I determined to apply to him a test which had been employed before by some of my brethren, and charged that he dare not, as he valued his ministerial position, and even his membership in the church, give to mourners seeking salvation the answers given by inspired men, in the very words which they employed. He interrupted me, by asking, if I intended to insinuate that he would not preach what he believed to be the truth. I replied, that I had no disposition to question his honesty, but that I was stating a startling fact, which ought to be made to ring in the ears of the people. I then told the audience I would put my statement to a test at once; turning to the Doctor, I said: 'Sir, if you had a number of mourners before you, as Peter had on Pentecost, pierced to the heart with a sense of guilt, and exclaiming: 'What shall we do?' would you dare to say to them, 'Repent, and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit?' Or, if you were called into a private house, like Ananias, to see a man fasting and weeping and praying, would you dare to say to him: 'Why do you tarry? Arise, be baptized, and wash away your sins, calling on the name of the Lord?'" I pause for a reply. I stood waiting and the immense audience held their breath; until the silence became painful; but the Doctor hung his head, and answered not one word."

Bro. McGarvey, you had him in a tight! He saw that his course was not in harmony with the divine course. Poor fellow! It was hard to have to be subjected to such a pinching ordeal before that immense audience. No doubt it was very humiliating to his "ministerial" pride. But you did right in thus "putting him to the test;" for truth is worth so much more than any man's individual reputation, that the high as well as the low, rich and poor, should be exposed, as religious teachers, whenever they deviate from the way ordained of God.

But now, my brother, you stand before a larger audience than that "Doctor of Divinity" stood before. You have been put to the test, by one who, though not so prominent and popular in religious circles as was the man by whom that Doctor of Divinity was put to the test, yet is every whit as earnest and conscientious. Are you not "hanging your head and answering not one word?" We have "stood waiting," too, for your reply, until our "immense audience" is about out of "breath," and yet not one word from you! Are you afraid you will endanger your "ministerial position?" Perhaps, though you have decided silence to be the better policy, you have not yet "hung your head."

But, my brother, if you are not more brazen-faced than I think you are, you will, ere this test is concluded, "hang your head." But I beseech you, as you so clearly saw the folly and sinfulness of that Doctor's course, to be honest and candid with yourself long enough to "see yourself as others see you," and part with one of your discrepant positions. And oh, my brother! if you do move upon consistent grounds, do, for the sake of your never-dying soul, which must render an account to the Giver of the gospel for the manner in which you deal with this system of truth and redemption, take your stand upon the side of the word of God, and let "our plea" suffer, if it is not in harmony with that move.

But we have more questions for you. On page 99 of your "Commentary on Acts," while on the immersion of the eunuch, you say:

"Luke says, Philip 'preached to him Jesus.' How, then, had he, while hearing Jesus preached, obtained instruction in reference to immersion? There is only one answer to this question. It is, that to preach Jesus, after the Apostolic method, involves full instruction upon the subject of immersion. The prejudice, therefore, which exists at the present day against frequent introduction of this subject in discourses addressed to sinners, is altogether unscriptural; and those only preach Jesus correctly who give to it the same prominence which belongs to it in apostolic discourses."

(1) I ask you if there is any divine authority for preaching Jesus after any other than the "apostolic method?" (2) If there is no such divine authority, is not such preaching a perversion of the gospel? (3) Will a perverted gospel believed and obeyed bring the one so believing and obeying, "into Christ?" (4) Do those who preach a denial that immersion is for, or in order to the remission of sins, give "full instruction in reference to immersion?"—do they "preach Jesus after the apostolic method?"

Again, you say, in the same connection, in your "Commentary," and on the same page: "Thus he who preaches Jesus has immersion in the beginning and in the end of his sermon." (5) I ask you: Do the Baptists, Methodists, or others from whom you receive converts without immersion, have immersion "in the beginning and in the end of their preaching?"—do they "give to it the same prominence which belongs to it in apostolic discourses?" If you will not answer these questions, will you please state why you will not? You have no right to become offended at our demanding answers to these questions, at your hand: for you demanded answers of that Doctor of Divinity, and when he wanted to know if you were insinuating that he would not preach what he believed, you replied, that you had no disposition to question his honesty, but that you were "stating a startling fact, which ought to be made to ring in the ears of the people."

My brother, remember, and act upon the golden rule. "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." Now as you demanded an answer from that D.D., and thought that he acted in bad faith in not answering, so now answer these questions about your own teachings, or know that others will think you have acted worse than that D.D. We, too, think this matter should "be made to ring in the ears of the people," and we intend to ring it, for the sake of truth.

KITTRELL-MCGARY DISCUSSION

Editor Firm Foundation:

With the permission of your senior editor, I will give to the readers of the F. F. what I claim to be the plain teaching of the Scriptures, by the mouth of the prophets, the Savior and Apostles, concerning the "gift of the Spirit (Holy Ghost), or what is more plainly set forth in the commission as given by Mark, 16: 16-17-18, as the "signs following them that believe." On my part I affirm that these gifts belong to the Christians to-day, and Mr. McGary denies. "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God" says the holy Apostle. "To the law and the testimony: if any man speak not according to this word there is no light in him," says the prophet Isaiah.

Jesus of Nazareth, in his parting lesson to the twelve, as given in the last chapters of John's gospel, or narration of events, told them that: "When I go away, I will send to you another comforter, the Spirit of truth, which will bring to your remembrance all things whatsoever I have said, and he shall abide with you forever."

Under the guidance of this comforter was brought to John's remembrance the conversation of Jesus and Nicodemus, when Nicodemus was told how a man must "enter into the kingdom of God." "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." Here we have set forth the birth "of water and Spirit," not two births, but two elements. Now unto Peter He says: "Unto thee I give the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and whatsoever you bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever you loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Again, after his resurrection, he commands them: "Go tarry at Jerusalem until endued with power from on high."—Luke 24:49. Again, in Acts 1:4-8: "But wait for the promise of the father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me." This is the "comforter" spoken of above. Again: "But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost shall come upon you." This Peter denominated in Acts, 11:17, as a "gift." The Savior says, "the promise." Please bear these two terms in your mind. To impress this upon your mind, we will italicize them. The terms, "gift and promise," are synonymous. Before the reception of this "gift or promise," the Apostles were only for a time possessed of the fourth rate gift of hearing, afterwards they became prophets and general miracle workers.

Now follow them to Pentecost, where they received "the gift or promise," and were prepared to set forth the way to "the kingdom of heaven." Jesus spake the words given him by the Holy Ghost, with which he was anointed at the Jordan, when he set forth the way to Nicodemus, and see how perfectly the words of Peter, after the same anointing, accord with those of Jesus. First, after being "endued with power from on high," or receiving "the promise of the Father," Peter preached unto them the gospel: "declaring to them the wonderful works of God," how that God had "wrought many wonderful works by him in the midst of you all," and had at last raised him from the cruel death to which their wicked hands had brought him.

These "quick and powerful" words reached the hearts of three thousand of the hearers, and in answer to their cry of: "Men and brethren what must we do," the Spirit, speaking through Peter, says: "Repent and be baptized (born of water) every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of your sins, and ye (Peter and the eleven others had already received it), shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost," (birth of the Spirit). "For the promise is unto you and unto your children, but not unto all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." This was very near the words of the Spirit, and was the way that Peter construed it, as shows by his behavior at the household of Cornelius, and the preceding events. This is the way our opponent also construes it, but is not the language of the Spirit, but: "For the promise is unto you and your children and all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." How are people "called?" "Whereunto ye were called by our gospel."—II. Thes. 2:24. "Called" to what? "To the obtaining of the glory of the Lord Jesus Christ." Now if we are called to the obtaining of this glory, are we not chosen to a higher estate? What could elevate us to this higher position except the same anointing which he received? Do the simple facts of belief and baptism bring every one to that estate? Simon, the sorcerer believed and was baptized, yet he had no part nor lot in the "gift of the Holy Ghost," which others received before his eyes.

Paul believed and was baptized, as did the others in "the city of Samaria," at the same time as Simon, and both Paul and they "obtained the glory of the Lord Jesus Christ." Then the act of believing and being baptized, while it is sufficient to save from our past sins, or gain for us "remission of sins," for our Savior said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," and Peter said, "be baptized for the remission of sins," but does not entitle us to membership in the kingdom of God; which can only be entered by being "born of the Spirit," "for if we have not the Spirit of Christ, we are none of his."

Read the language in Mark, 16:17, "and these signs shall follow them that believe: cast out devils, speak with new tongues, take up serpents, drink any deadly thing, shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover." Now with Peter's "promise" of "the gift of the Holy Ghost" in your mind, read I. Cor., 12 chapter, commencing "concerning spiritual gifts" and after enumerating these gifts, which he says: "Is given to every man to profit withal, he commands them, in the concluding verse, to "covet earnestly the best gifts;" and again, in the first verse of the 14th chapter, to "Desire spiritual gifts." These gifts he enumerates as follows: "The word of wisdom, of knowledge, faith, gifts of healing, miracles, prophecy, discerning of spirits, divers tongues, etc." and adds, that the Spirit divides to every man severally as he will. To whom was this Corinthian letter addressed? "To the Church of God, which is at Corinth; to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus. Called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord: both theirs and ours." Does this address apply to any of the readers of this article? Are any of you saints? Do any of you call upon the name of Jesus Christ? To this class of people was it addressed; to them "that in every place call, etc." Now how does this enumeration of gifts coincide with the "signs" in Mark 16:17?

But the answer will be made that these gifts only apply to the days of the Apostles, and that they could only be conferred by the laying on of the Apostles hands. There is no "thus saith the Lord" for either position, for "the promise is unto . . . all that the Lord our God shall call," to "all everywhere that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ." To whom was the promise of "remission of sins" after hearing, believing, repenting and being baptized? To the days of the Apostles only? No; to all that the Lord our God shall call." Then why not "the gift of the Holy Ghost," which promise is contained in the same sentence, and preceding "all that the Lord our God shall call"? By what manner of reasoning do you sunder this language of the Spirit from its context? Is it because it impugns your righteousness? "Yea, let God be true tho' every man be a liar."

What says the Savior in John, 7:38: "He that believeth on me out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water." This John, by the wisdom which the Holy Ghost or comforter gave him, defines in the 89th verse thus: "But this spake he of the Spirit which they that believe in him should receive, for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, for Jesus was not yet glorified." Then every one "that believes on me shall receive the water of life—living water—Holy Ghost. Do any of you, my readers, "believe on him?" Listen to the last invitation through this same John: "Whosoever will, let him come and take of the water of life freely."—Rev. 22:17. Here is an invitation to "whosoever will," to take of the Holy Ghost as defined by John. This Spirit is the mainspring of the power which characterized the Savior and Apostles. "If I by the Spirit of God do these things," says Jesus; "He was anointed with the Holy Ghost and with power, and went about doing good," says Peter, Acts 10:38. "My preaching was . . . but in demonstration of the Spirit and power," says Paul, I. Cor., 11:5.

Objection No. 2: "It could only be imparted by laying on of the Apostles hands." Who laid hands on the greatest miracle worker next to Jesus of Nazareth, Moses? Who on Jesus himself? Who on Cornelius and household? Who on Paul who never saw any Apostle for three years after his ministry commenced? And who will lay hands on the two mentioned in Rev. 11:5-6, who will have power to call down plagues on the whole face of the earth at their will, who are to prepare the way for the coming of the Lord the second time? But you say that "hands were laid upon those in the city of Samaria; the twelve disciples of John in 19 Acts; upon Timothy, what then? It comes either with or without. You say "it was only, for these in Apostolic days," but the Scripture says no such thing; but "the promises of God in Christ Jesus are eye and amen, and not yea or nay."

Again: "God is no respecter of persons." This you find in the language of Peter to Cornelius, Acts 10, and about twenty other places in the Scriptures. The position that these promises belonged to the Apostolic age is not only without the authority of the oracles of God, but makes the promises of God in Christ Jesus, "Yea" to them, and "nay" to us, and makes God a "respector of persons." *

Mr. McGary will, or has promised to deny this power which I assert the Scriptures teach, and he has everything that claims to be a church to help him out in the fight, for the position condemns all alike. This same Holy Ghost which he won't have, nor wants no one else to have, foretold just this state of affairs 1600 years ago, when speaking through Paul it said, II. Tim. 3:1-5: "In the last days perilous times shall come, men shall be lovers of their own selves, . . . having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." The power of godliness is what the Scriptures promise, and to contend for which I have written this article; and to deny which Mr. McGary promises to write equally as much. Who does the prophecy by the Spirit sit? Answer reader.

My faith stands in the "power of God," i. e. Christ, the power of God, I. Cor. 1:18-24, and I believe that every promise will be fulfilled to those "that believe," for there is no promise to those who do not. You ask why those professing the faith of Christ receive none of these things, and I answer by asking, did you ever know one that believed they were entitled to them? They are only unto "them that believe" for we "must believe that he is and a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

In conclusion, let me ask, when the Scriptures are so plain in this promise, why do you fight so, to thrust it away from you? Does your faith offer anything to compare to it? What an empty shell is the religion of the churches, one and all, compared to this.

Let me add here a prediction as to my opponent, whom I have known and loved for years, and whom I esteem an honest and truthful man, when not too much maddened by his blind zeal, for the error for which he is now contending. The prediction is, that he will, ere long, be a defender of this faith, which he now so bitterly opposes. I say this, knowing that he is a man of courage, and when he sees his error will not be ashamed to acknowledge it, tho' the churches and the world will say of him then as he now does of me, that his doctrine is foolishness, but "the foolishness of God is wiser than men," and it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.

W. H. KITTRELL.
Alexander, Texas.

About the last of August, my wife received a letter from Mr. Kittrell, who is her brother, in which he wrote: "If I teach the truth, you haven't the truth, and I defy you or any one else to show wherein I teach contrary to the word of God. Aus. has threatened, but he has never dared to meet me in any way."

To this, I replied, that I would not discuss religious questions unless I saw some hope of benefitting some one; but if he would send me a good list of readers from among his faith and order, to read my replies, I would discuss with him. I stated terms, as to length, and number of arguments, etc. Well, he did not come up to the terms, but sent along his first argument, and four readers!—whom I suppose are of his faith—one of them I know to be, and I believe she will give what I write a fair consideration, or I would not proceed; for I have lost all hope of ever being able to reach Mr. K. But if I can lead one from under this fog-bank where they are now hugging Mr. Kittrell's delusion, I will feel repaid for my effort. As for Mr. Kittrell, individually, I entertain about the same feelings I would were he my own brother. We have been very intimately associated in the past, and not one circumstance of ill feeling ever marred this association, that I remember. It is true that, since he has been advocating his present theory of religion, we have had some warm controversies, but in all of this my attachment for him individually has remained unchanged and I am satisfied he is none the less my friend. I mention these things that the reader may not suppose from anything said in this discussion, pro or con, that it proceeds from personal ill will. I separate him from his doctrine as much as possible, when I handle it without gloves. He means no harm to any one, but is full of benevolent and warm-hearted impulses for everybody. But his doctrine, like all false doctrines, is surcharged with mischief, and, again, like all other false doctrines, when very zealously held, it warps the better judgment, and blunts the tender sensibilities of the heart for the time being.

Now, to the question: What bearing has the "new birth" on this question? It, like much found in his article, is as foreign to the issue as it would be were he trying to prove that, "the man in the moon" is red-headed. But, as he has defined his view of the new birth, and then, on the next page contradicted himself, I will expose this contradiction to show what a state of confusion he was in when he wrote the article.

First, he says, the birth of water able to reconcile these two statements; and he will, in doing so, establish his proposition, by a practical demonstration; for nothing less than a miracle can accomplish this feat, and he will stand higher than a "fourth-rate" miracle worker when he performs this job. Let him try his hand, if he cannot write more to the point in his next than he has in this.

He undertakes to tell how I construe Acts ii: 38; but he had better learn how to deliver his own views without contradicting himself, as he has above, before he goes to defining mine. I have heard of some broad mistakes he has made in telling what I teach; but I attribute these mistakes to his misty standpoint rather than to intentional perversion. But, now, I am going to write some upon the real issue involved in this question, whether he does or not. I am sorry that he has put up his article so loosely and illogically, that I cannot pursue it and stay in sight of the issue. If I have space left after I define the true position on this question, I will spend it in wandering off after him again, far enough to turn some of his points against him. Really, he seems to be picking out a soft place to fall, rather than trying frankly to develop his position.

Now, reader, go back with me to the starting-point of his position. And let's study this question candidly and impartially in the divine volume. Lay your prejudice aside if you have any; for prejudice always spreads a film over the eye and shuts out the light. But why should any one act so irrationally and sinfully as to blindly cling to error, and grope in darkness, when they may bask in the bright light of truth, simply by opening their eyes and letting the light in.

Mr. K. talks about "speaking as the oracles of God speak," and then handles God's word like it was a scrap-book. We have to use the same common sense in reading God's word, that we do in reading any other literature, to advantage. We have to note the circumstances and connections, or proper divisions, that pertain to it. By using the Bible as Mr. K. does, I can prove that God is now making men out of dust, and women from ribs taken from their sides.

But now to Mr. K's fundamental of God. And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following."—Mark xvi: 19-20. This is substantially saying, the Lord fulfilled his promise to accompany them with signs. We are bound to drop one of these powers from the list, even if there were nothing to teach that these signs ceased. That of "casting out devils" cannot, in the very nature of things, pertain to our age. People are not now possessed with those demoniacal spirits. So the devils, or demons, cannot be cast out of those they are not in! But we refer the reader to some passages to show that these signs or miracles were to pass away with the apostolic age, or when a complete revelation of the New Covenant was formulated and bequeathed to the world: "Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge it shall vanish away. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away. When I was a child, I spake as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things. For now we see through a glass darkly; but then face to face; now I know in part, but then shall I know even as I am known. And now abideth faith, hope, and charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity," (love).—I. Cor. xiii: 8-13.

Again: "And he, (Christ), gave some Apostles; and some prophets; and some evangelists; and some pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ. TILL," (mark reader), "we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ: That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ: From whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint to that figure of perfection called "a perfect man." To say a certain state of affairs will exist till a certain time, implies that at that time it will cease to exist. In our quotation from Cor. it says all of the, then influences, that were supporting the church would cease, but faith, hope and charity, or love; hope and love grow out of faith; and faith out of God's word.

Paul says faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. And he again says: "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."—Rom. xi: 17, and Heb. xi: 1. These supernaturally endowed teachers were laying the immutable foundation of "faith, hope and charity," when they were preparing God's word to pass down the fiery gauntlet of the ages. God was demonstrating to that and subsequent ages, that His hand was with them, by these accompanying signs and wonders. These miraculous accompaniments were to this "perfect man" they were erecting, as the scaffolding of a building is to its erection. When the building is completed the scaffolding is taken away.

But Mr. K. is swinging on to this old scaffolding-like grim death. He will fall and break his neck if he does not come down. He fails to grasp the divine intention of miracles. He calls them the gospel! But let's endeavor to learn the divine aim of miracles from God's word, and we will get right on it. Every new order of things brought into this world by the Creator was accompanied with a miracle. The first tree that ever was upon this globe was planted by the miraculous hand of God; but, then it propagated its species by dropping its seed naturally upon the earth, after that. So of the first man. He had to be made by some process differing from that natural one by which the earth has since been peopled. He was the first man and could not have been begotten by man, as all men have been since. But the miracle that brought him from the dust was not continued after he was complete, and the seed of subsequent billions in him. God took Abraham's family and by supernatural or miraculous intervention made them a typical people, and developed the Messiah from them. Then when the New Covenant was

Is Bro. Rowe going to sacrifice his convictions of truth and righteousness to save the so-called "rival journal?"

If he had the courage of his con-turn, or play on words to evade or cover up truths, and that he was charging motives which was not very creditable, either to his opponent or himself, he apologized and did not again use the accusation.

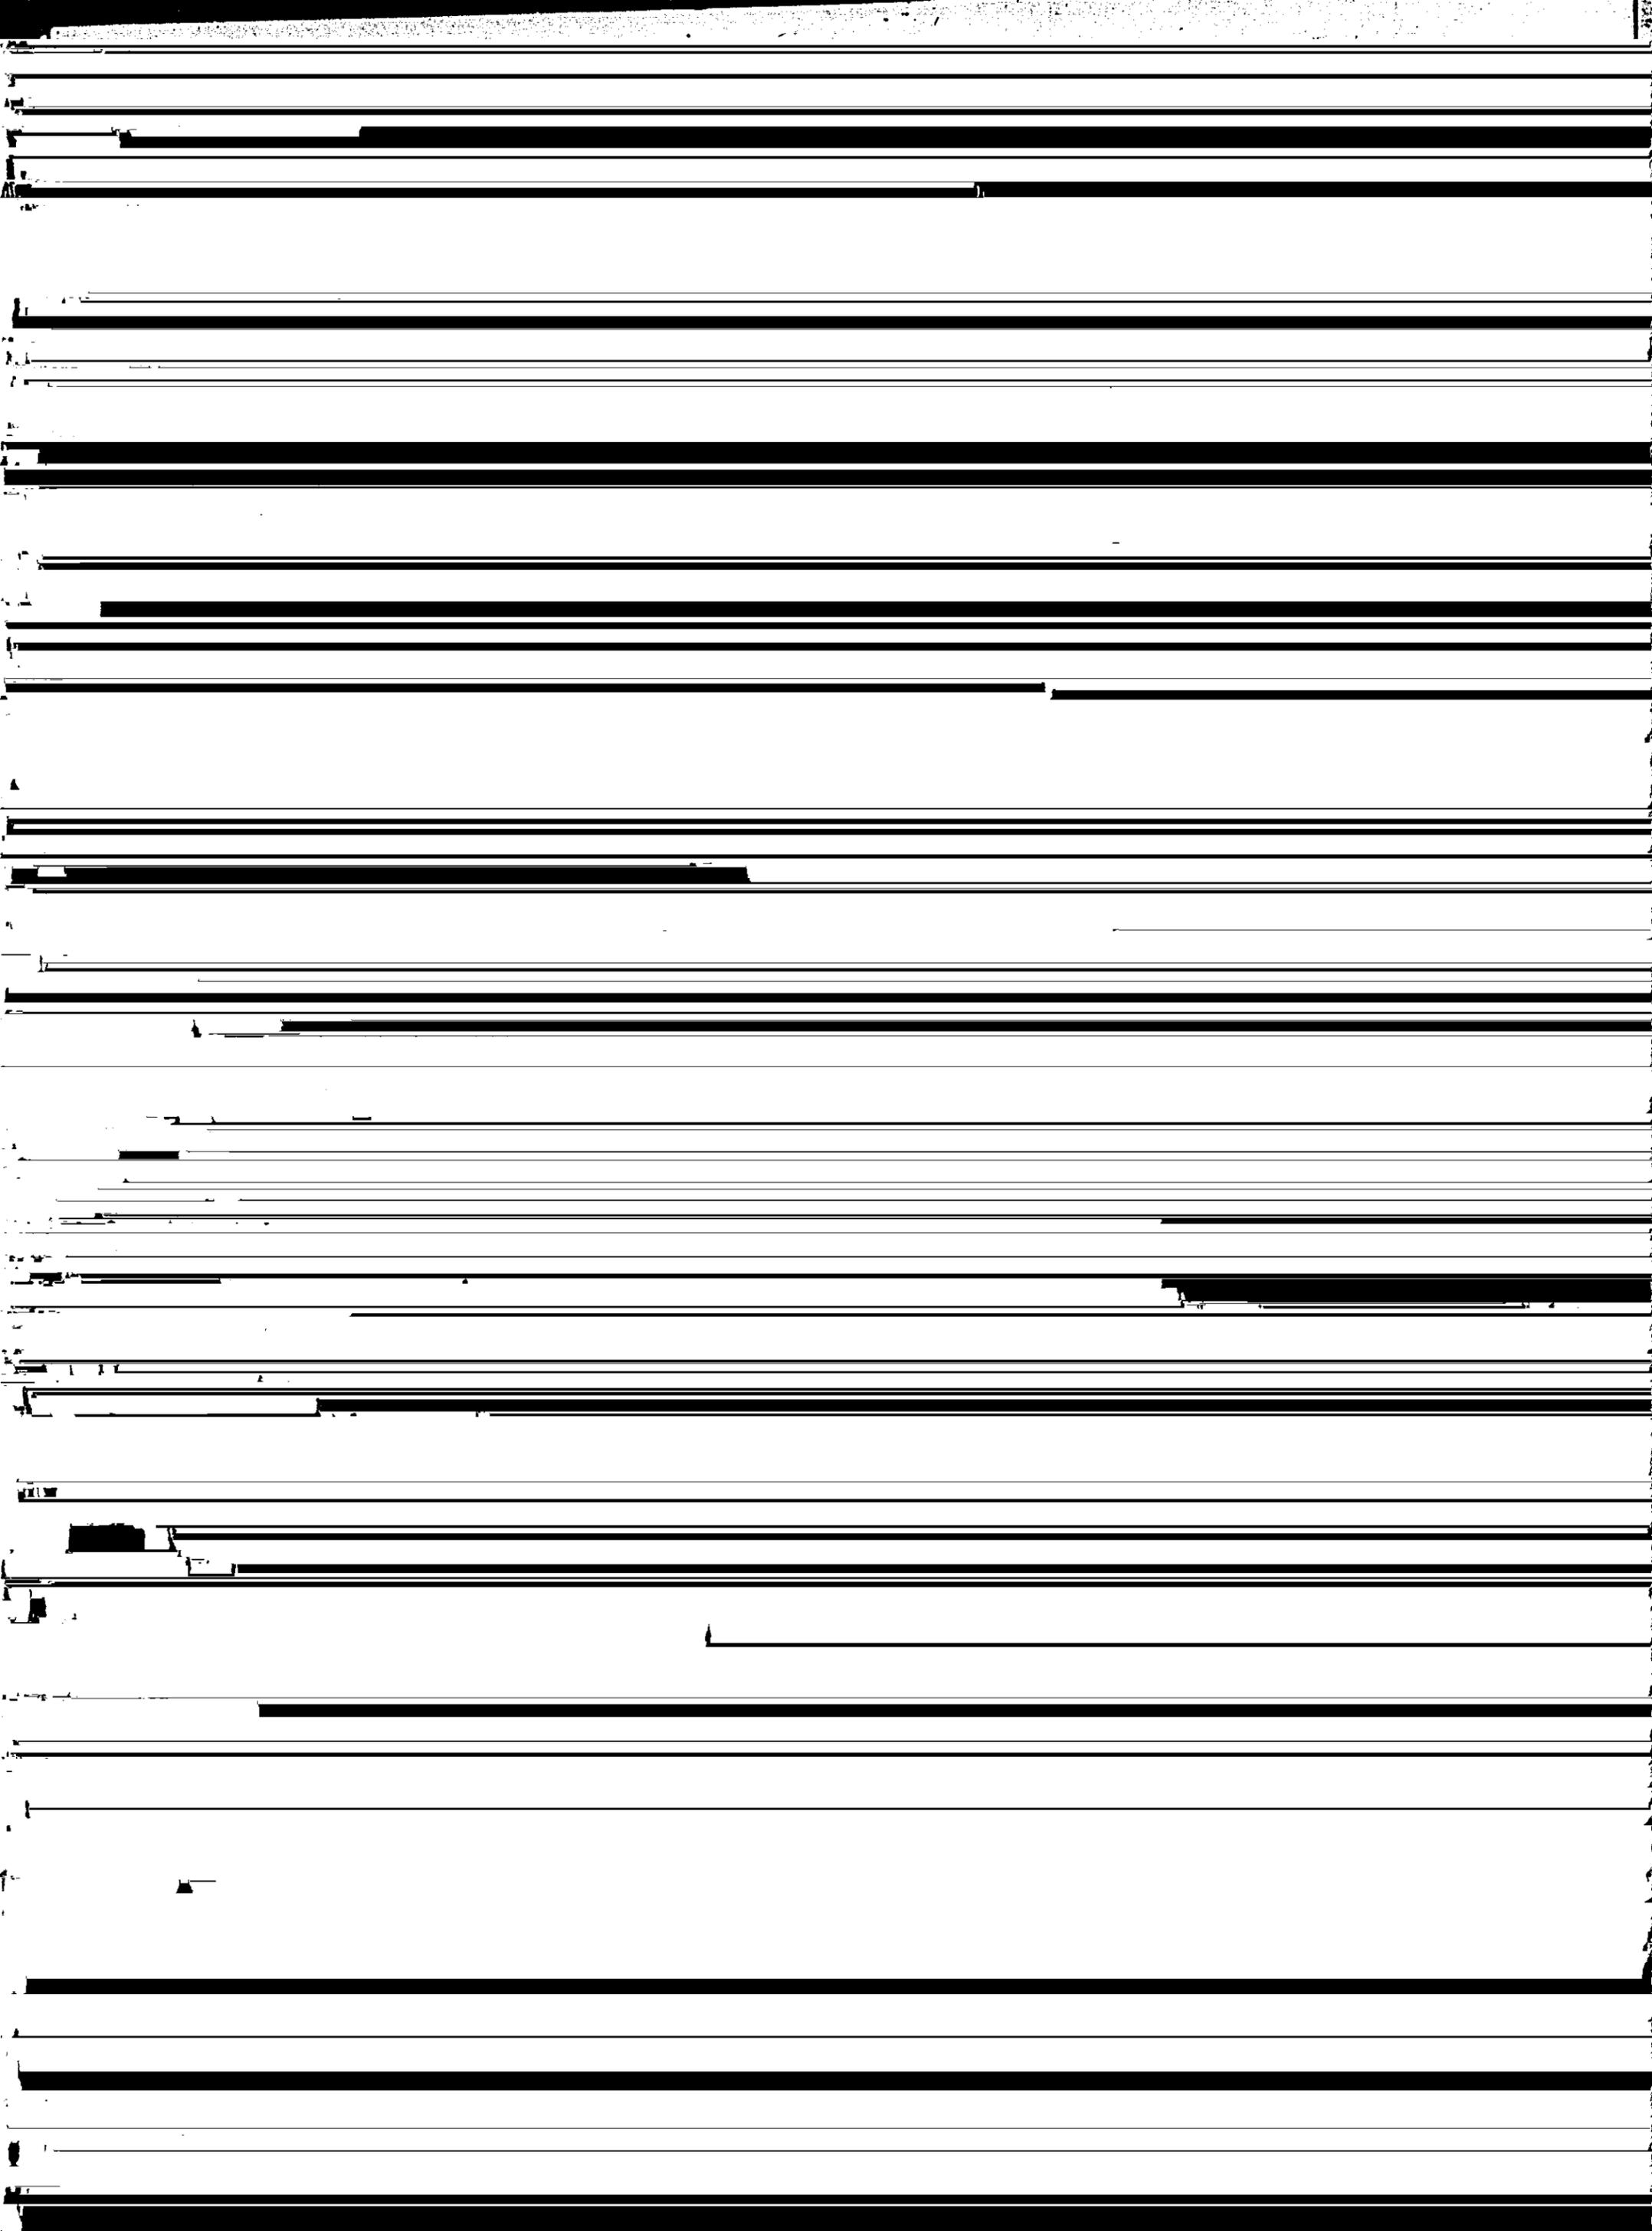

The debate was well attended from first to last. The best of order was observed, and critical attention was given to the arguments, pro and con. Our brethren seemed a little strange and others not a little amusing; as an illustration: when Bro. Tant gave Mark 16: 16, "He that believes and is baptized shall be saved," as an argument on baptism for the remission of sins, Little answered, by assuring the audience, this could not be taken as proof, for it was only declarative. Again, on the last proposition, Bro. Tant introduced the parable, where the Savior said: "Whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones, a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily, I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward."

If we have not gold and silver, fall and check-mated the devil by cutting down and casting out of the garden the forbidden tree." Also, "Then when the devil came into the garden to work the ruin of man by means of the tree, his Satanic majesty would have been pointed to the place where the tree had stood, and he would have been—stumped."

Now, since in the above figure, Adam represents the "prohibition brethren, the forbidden tree," the liquor traffic, and the "garden" the state of Texas, just what he says Adam would, or "might have" done, is what the prohibitionists are trying to do, is drive the liquor traffic from the State. But the editor would say, Adam would have done wrong to have cut the "tree" down and cast it out of the "garden." Then to exclude the sale of alcoholic liquors for drinking purposes from the State would be wrong.

Also, since God put the "forbidden tree" in the garden, the figure would make God the author of the liquor traffic. Surely the writer did not mean to teach, God the author of such a nefarious business. He is not the author of the liquor, much less the traffic, no more than he is the author of murder. He created the materials of which the liquor is made; so did he create the man that did the murder.

The conclusion one would come to on reading the article is, that the editors of the F. F., or at least one of them, thinks the saloon business right and should not be interfered with.

In a former number of the F. F., Bro. McGary took the position, if I am not mistaken, that prohibition was right, but Christians should not vote for it, on the same grounds they should not vote for governor.

Bro. McGary, please state just what is the position of the FIRM FOUNDATION on the question of prohibition, entire. If it thinks prohibition is wrong, say so; if right, say so. A paper so good as the FIRM FOUNDATION should send forth no uncertain sound.

I hope you will not get weary in exposing the flimsy position of shakism, and especially the inconsistencies and shortcomings of the Messenger.

Your brother for the truth,
C. F. TEFTLEER.
Leonard, Texas.

The trouble is, our brother makes the very common mistake of pushing our remarks, about Adam, and our modern "prohibition brethren," far beyond the point aimed at. This is always unfair, because by such a course any example can be rendered ridiculous. Even the parables of Jesus, and the types of Jehovah, when subjected to such a pressure of hyper-criticism, can be thus distorted into nonsense.

It is almost universally agreed among Biblical scholars, that fleshly Israel, under their sojourn out of Egypt, across the Red Sea, through the wilderness and to the bank of the Jordan, is a type of spiritual Israel, or, of Christians while in the flesh. And the "promised land," Canaan, a type of the "heavenly country"—the eternal inheritance of the faithful "joint-heirs with Christ."

But take this type, and stretch it out beyond its divine aim, to meet the demands of a fastidious critic, and he could enjoy a chuckle over the idea of war, bloodshed and rapine in Heaven; for fleshly Israel crossed Jordan and entered into bloody wars.

But I do not wish to be understood as intimating that Bro. T. would thus wilfully pervert to evade the force of a point; but this is the very obvious tendency of such criticisms.

The point aimed at in our mention of Adam and "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil" was this: Adam had to avoid the fruit of this tree or suffer the penalty for disobedience. His disobedience set to work the sting of death, and filled the earth with sin and violence, among which is the "whisky traffic."

Now what we meant was, that Adam could not have kept out of the world these afflictions by carnal opposition. There was no implied privilege in God's command to him, for him to war against his desires and appetites for this fruit, except through love and reverence for God—spiritual and not carnal triumph was all that could meet the demand.

So it is now, the world is fairly reeking with sin in multiplied thousands of forms, and aspects, and can only be corrected by God's power. How our brother can say, that our position seems to be that "the saloon business is right, and should not be interfered with," can only be accounted for by us, by considering him blind with prejudice. This seems manifest, too, in the gratuitous manner he fixes up Adam representing the prohibition brethren, and the "forbidden tree," the liquor traffic, and the "garden" the state of Texas.

I would not fix it that way at all. So this is his own fixing. I aimed to enforce one point; but he would make me reach beyond one. I believe in "interfering with the saloon business" with God's power, and not with the carnal artifices of puny man. Let the world try its wisdom to uproot these evils as it may, but Christians must be guided by King Jesus, and must wield the weapon of Christian warfare—"the sword of the Spirit"—not such carnal weapons as Cæsar's ballot-box. If they resort to the ballot-box, they "turn back to the weak and beggarly elements of the world," and thereby forfeit their friendship with God.

The brother asks us to state the position of the F. F. on this question. We thought we had done this often. But we will briefly do so again:

(1) We regard the saloon a man-trap, where men and boys are caught and physically and morally poisoned—the fountain-head of rivers of tears that flow from the broken hearts of thousands of mothers, sisters and wives of our country.

(2) For Christians to become "entangled with the affairs of this life," becoming yoked with unbelievers in the use of the ballot-box, is for them to do what Christ has told them not to do—see 2 Tim. 2: 4-5.

Hence it is an evil, a presumptuous sin.

(3) We hold that Christians must not do one evil to remove another evil, however enormous the one to be removed may be.

We might go off into an argument of the question, and show that one cannot be a citizen of two governments at the same time—"Ye cannot serve God and mammon"—"Ye cannot serve two masters"—"Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God."—James 4: 4. "Ye are no more strangers and sojourners, but ye are fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God."—Eph. 2: 19, N. V. "Our citizenship is in heaven."—Phil. 3: 20, N. V. As subjects of King Jesus, we are to make a complete surrender of our ways, and realize that we are "complete in him"—"furnished completely unto every good work."—2 Tim. 3: 17, N. V. "Whatsoever ye do in word or in deed, do all in the name (by the authority) of the Lord Jesus."—Col. 3: 17.

Now, as we are completely furnished in the law of Christ unto all good works, and, as we are told to do all we do by his authority; and as we are told that we will not be crowned "except we strive lawfully"—which must mean by the law of Christ—and as we are told that our citizenship is in heaven, and, that such friendliness towards the world as becoming entangled with its affairs, is regarded by our heavenly Father as unfriendly towards him.

We say, in view of all these things, and many others to the same point, taught us in the "perfect law of liberty," the FIRM FOUNDATION is opposed to Christians voting, or doing any other evil that good may come of it. We hope our position may be understood.

Many conscientious brethren may, like Saul, see "good works" (?) outside of those unto which the law of Christ has completely furnished us, but such should remember that, as Saul lost his crown for "good works" (?) that God had not "ordained he should walk in," so they will fall of their crown of righteousness, if they do not cease to do "good works" (?) by "striving" through the ballot-box instead of, "by the law of Christ."

If any man has a worse opinion of saloons, saloon-keepers, and their wholesale system of corruption and robbery, than we of the F. F. have, his is surely not a good opinion. But we do not intend to "turn back to the weak and beggarly elements of the world" to oppose the saloon or any other evil. God's "grace is sufficient unto all good works."

PUBLISHERS' NOTES.

With this issue, most of our "trial offer" subscribers will be out and we would be glad if all will renew at once.

We will send the Oatman—McGary discussion, and Zeke Jackson, one copy of each, to any of our subscribers, for twenty-five cents.

Bro. E. Hansbrough, if the Lord will, expects to be in a meeting with Bro. T. W. James at McKinney's school-house, in Blanco county, during Christmas week.

We have been expecting Bro. A. McGary, but recent letters inform us that the weather was too threatening. Hope he will be with us before the old year is gone.

Recent letter from Bro. R. B. Trimble states his intention to move from Pilot Point, Denton county, to Ravenna, Fannin county. Correspondents will please note change, and address him, in future, accordingly.

Received a letter from Bro. J. H. Allen, of Goldthwaite, Mills county, requesting mention to be made of a debate to be held in Goldthwaite, beginning January 23, 1888, and ending the 28, between W. R. Alexander, of the Church of Christ, and Nathan Barrow, of the Primitive Baptist church. Issues not stated.

We request our contributors to write PLAINER, to prevent mistakes. Don't be in too big a hurry to pen your thoughts. Remember, they have to be read by others, so be particular. If you speak so as not to be understood, you will have to repeat your words or speak to no effect. So in writing your thoughts, if you write illegibly you will have to rewrite it, or write to no effect.

We call attention to a sister's letter on "Charity" in this issue. It is in the right direction. While we must contend earnestly for the faith, we must plead with others, and not abuse them; we must speak the truth in love, and not in anger; we must not let our own words condemn us. For with what judgement we judge we shall be judged. We can speak the truth and offend not, and we can speak the truth and offend. Which ought we to do? Like begets like; anger stirs up strife, and love produces love. Jesus, when he was reviled, reviled not again.

ZEKE JACKSON.—"The Religious Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family" is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, upon receipt of price, ten cents per copy, or three copies for twenty-five cents. Published by McGary & Hansbrough, Austin, Texas. Send in your orders, brethren and friends, and circulate this little pamphlet. Send it to those who have been shaken into the congregations of Christians. They will see that they have been only shaken, and this will uproot them, and the word of God will cleanse them from all unrighteousness, if they will obey the gospel of Christ.

OUR POEM.

BY J. CLEVENGER.

As for the FIRM FOUNDATION,
We have this much to say:
It's gaining friends and readers
Everywhere, every day.
With McGary at its head,
And Hansbrough's ready hand,
We'll send the truth a huriling
To many a distant land.
With Jackson in the field,
And McGary on the wing,
We'll preach the anointed order,
And make the gospel ring.
Brother Durant can write us up,
On politics, so well;
And, everything that's lacking,
Brother Stone is sure to tell.
When Treat and Daniel read it,
It makes them fairly groan;
But when they start to run away,
They run against that Stone.
Brother Treat has gone retreating,
And Daniel's dead again:
Turning Stones with broken cornstalks,
They find it all in vain.
When the three-fact-shaker rallies,
And tries to make a show;
It passes like a gust of wind,
For it only was a blow.
He calls it the Flimsy Foundation,
And thinks it is surprising:
While he is shaking sectarians in,
We are all baptizing.
He calls it re-baptism,
And says, it will not do;
And when we give him Paul's example,
He says, it is not true.
But when he scoffs and scorns the truth,
And says, we are to blame,
The readers of the Messenger
All shrink back in shame.
When sectarians hear the truth—
We have no other way—
We give them the Lord's appointments,
And ask them to obey.
And when they believe the gospel,
And wish to enter in,
They've told to confess, repent, be baptized,
And wash away their sin.
No sectarian ever enters,
Any other way,
Only by baptism,
And this they must obey.

LETTER FROM BRO. STONE.

Dear McGary & Hansbrough:
Being at home and having a little leisure, I have concluded to drop a few thoughts with regard to somethings which I see and hear. This is an age of humbuggery, deception and misrepresentation. An age in which it behooves every one to examine all things carefully, so as to arrive at the truth. If there can be no means by which we can arrive at the truth, then there has been no revelation of the truth made.

If there has been no revelation made, then we shall certainly not be held responsible to the truth.

Now if all persons were willing to accept the truth as it has been revealed, and to act upon it, then all that we would have to do, would be to point them to the revelation of truth. But too many seem to be unwilling to accept the simple truth as stated in the divine record.
Too many are disposed to cling to prepossessions, and to pervert the truth to support their opinions.
This sometimes provokes sharp criticism; and causes those who desire to defend the truth to have to write very plainly. There are some, however, who wish to appear exceedingly modest and chaste in what they say. So much so, that they are actually afraid to defend the truth; and are opposed to any other person's defense of it.

So far as my own observation goes, those who are so vehemently opposed to any controversy, are those who hold doctrines which will not bear the light of investigation. There never was a man who was conscious of having the truth who was afraid of controversies.
All lovers of truth desire that the truth shall be known on all vital questions.

I see in the Octographic Review, of Nov. 20th, that the publisher says,
"In the early part of this memorable year of the Review, it bid farewell to secular advertisements, and now bids farewell to personal controversies, with the intention that this shall remain."

What does he mean by personal controversies? Does he here refer to such controversies as he and I had on baptism? Or such as I and Bro. Holloway had? Does he pre-pose to prevent the investigation of such questions as pertain to life and godliness? Or does he have reference to such personal controversy as he tried to have with Bro.
Rowe? If he refers to this last, I say, amen!

Again, he says: "At an early date, we would, no doubt, have delivered the Review entirely from personalities, had it not been for an effort that was made to fasten upon us the odium of having been a party in a sham transaction in securing possession of the paper.

That effort it was necessary to contradict with positiveness that could not be misunderstood, and these columns were thereby opened to a personal controversy which, in many respects, has been unfortunate, and which none have regretted more truly than the publisher of this paper."

Now everybody knows that the controversy here alluded to, was mainly one-sided. And he who so much regretted it, could have avoided it. My opinion is, that the publisher begins now to regret it.

But, he says further: "Besides, there have appeared in these columns reviews of several who have assailed the publisher on doctrinal questions. But the unfairness with which we have been treated from first to last has been highly unsatisfactory. With two exceptions, we believe, our critics have not even made an effort to publish our positions upon which they have offered their strictures. One of them recently confessed that he had criticised an article from our pen which he had never seen."

Here he refers to Bro. McGary, as I suppose. Now Bro. McGary does not say that he did not see the article which he criticised. He did see what Sommer said to me and also what he saw in Bro. Neal's paper. But Bro. Daniel will make mistakes.

He now says: "The Review now bids farewell to personal controversy."

Now, I have this to say, any paper that will not allow any controversy, is not willing to have the truth defended, or else they are not willing to have their views controverted. I do not wonder that the Review should discard controversy.
Its publisher cannot write a consistent article on many subjects.
He frankly acknowledges that he has wasted his time in trying to answer some of our articles. We knew that before he acknowledged it. But he, as usual, boasts of his easy victims, and that when he would get through with them, he would feel sorry for them. I wonder who the poor fellows were?

But then, the publisher says again: "Is there any real difference between us in regard to the action and design of baptism? Not a particle. What is all the trouble about then? It is over a misunderstanding of what is said and written. Now, in the name of common sense, let us stop long enough to take a straight look at the practice of the entire brotherhood everywhere. To illustrate, we will take

Bro. Sommer and Bro. McGary. If a person says to Bro. Sommer, 'I have been immersed, but I did not understand [the design, and I wish you to baptize me for the remission of sins,' Bro. Sommer will do it, and so will any of us. If a person says to Bro. McGary, 'I have been immersed and I understood that it was for the remission of sins, and I have been living in a sectarian church, but now I am convinced that I should discard my sectarian name and unite with the people who have been named by the mouth of the Lord.' Will Bro. McGary baptize this person again? Bro. I.
C. Stone says he would not; but that he would receive such a person."

Now, I say, that if a person has been scripturally baptized, I or Bro. McGary would receive such a person. But Bro. Sommer did not argue that way with me. Both he and Bro. Treat argued that it is not necessary for a person to understand the design of baptism. If Bro. Sommer denies it, I will show his and Treat's own words.

But now he is trying to make it appear that he and I are agreed.
In the name of reason, what did he argue with me about? The argument was, that those baptized by the sects were scripturally baptized and that they need not understand the design; and so one knows it better than does Daniel Sommer.
But since he had, of late, to baptize several of my converts, he is now trying to make it appear that he has been of the same mind all the time. Does he think that he can now make his readers think so?
He may, for he will not allow us to write and correct this statement in his own paper. He can now misrepresent us as much as he pleases and we cannot be heard.

He will, after a person has believed he can get religion, and has gone to a mourner's-bench and claims to have his sins pardoned, and is baptized because of remission of sins, receive such, if he says he is satisfied with it. I and Bro. Mc-Gary will do no such thing as that,
and so one knows it better than does Bro. Sommer. Yet he is now trying to make his readers believe there is no difference. What would his readers think of him if we could tell them this? No wonder he has closed us out. What can the brothers think of a man who will thus pervert the truth. He accused me of telling about a score of lies in the last article he wrote against me.

What do you think brethren, of a man who will argue with another

SOME UNWISE, AND SOME WISE WORDS—PROGRESSION.

All Baptist preachers are not "sound" on the communion question as Baptists count soundness, but what matters it when they follow Christ! Read the following from the Christian Standard:

Bro. Darsie, in his letter from Boston in this week's Standard, after mentioning that, A. G. Lawson, a Baptist preacher, preached for him in the tabernacle, adds:

"But what I want more especially is to say that Bro. Lawson not only preached our people a good sermon, but that he presided for them at the Lord's table, and like a brother among brethren, partook of the sacred feast himself. And he showed no hesitancy whatever in so doing. He regarded it as a matter of course. It was in all respects a graceful, appropriate, and brotherly act. I mention it partly to express our appreciation, and partly to exhibit the superior breadth of our Baptist brethren in New England."

That is right. There is no reason why it should not be so done. But tell it not to the editor of the Battle Flag, nor to the editor who holds that a brother is guilty for proposing to receive those who are known to hold any unscriptural views. They might put up the bars and leave Boston outside of the pasture field.

The above is taken from The Witness, of Kansas City, edited and published by J. H. Smart, at one time an editor of the Christian Evangelist, of St. Louis. The Christian Standard endorses Darsie, and The Witness endorses the Standard.

A Baptist is "a brother among brethren" when he violates his party obligations and partakes of the Lord's Supper with the disciples of Jesus! This man knows that his religious organization holds that it is wrong for him to do this thing, yet he does it, and continues to hold fellowship with it, and receives pay from its members for preaching its doctrines! Is he honest? We have heard that Spurgeon permits members of other religious organizations to commune with him, but not long since he denounced those whom he called Campbellites as heretics. We are the editor referred to in the last paragraph of this clipping, and hence we feel at liberty to ask a question or two.

Will Darsie, the Standard or The Witness, say that the "Baptist Church" is the "Church of God?" Will they say that the individual members of the "Baptist Church" are members of the "Church of God?" If they will answer these two questions affirmatively, they will please answer: Do the Baptists and the Apostles teach and practice the same things? If the Baptists teach differently to what the apostles teach, can they be the disciples of Jesus? Can the teaching and practice of conflicting doctrines make both parties Christians? Are there two ways of getting into the Kingdom of God?

If the Baptists are correct in their teaching and practice, are we not incorrect, and should we not abandon our teaching and practice and accept theirs? If a man can, by accepting either teaching and practice, become a child of God, ought we not, for the sake of harmony, cease to exist? But, if a man can become a child of God by accepting only the teaching of inspiration as we teach it, can we recognize those as brethren in Christ who teach and practice differently?

It seems to us that if we are correct, that those who differ from us must be in error, and we can have no fellowship with error. We can not see how we can ask Baptists to sever their connection with the Baptist church and come to us, if they are in the Kingdom of God, or how we can urge persons to come out of human organizations, if we admit that, while they are members of those organizations they are in the Kingdom of God.

We are not denying the morality or the honesty, or the goodness of the Baptists, but are asking whether they have become citizens of Christ's church, or if there is more than one way of acquiring citizenship. Neither are we enquiring whether God will accept Baptists as "well done good and faithful servants" at the final judgment, for that is not our province, but we are enquiring whether the Bible gives any promise of salvation to them. Our duty is to proclaim the terms of naturalization, and it is God's prerogative to decide who have complied with the terms. We have no right to proclaim the terms, and then say that citizenship may be acquired by other means.

According to the above, a Baptist is a "brother among brethren," and just as much a citizen of the Kingdom of God as those for whom he was presiding. If he is "a brother among brethren," then he is one of the family and our debates with Baptists must cease. If the Baptists will permit it, disciples of Jesus, when living in a locality where there is no congregation of disciples, may and should take membership in a Baptist organization, assist in supporting the Pastor and their missionary enterprises, if this position is correct. We do not so read the Bible. It may be possible that these other editors are more liberal in their fellowship and fraternity than God. We may be narrow, but we endeavor to be consistent, and we think that we are not narrower than the Word of God.—E. W. Herndon, in the Christian Quarterly Review.

These are wise, true and timely words, and under the circumstances, they manifest, in a marked degree, a true purpose of heart to stand by the appointments of God with unflinching Christian courage. Bro. Herndon is already under the proscriptive ban of that faithless horde that has exalted its wisdom above God's, in missionary work. He has grossly insulted these brethren by laboring for the perpetuation of apostolic methods, and proclaiming their sufficiency, and pointing out the danger and insufficiency of human improvements upon divine plans. As a penalty for this rudeness toward the wisdom of these advancing brethren, they have threatened to supplant his paper, the Christian Quarterly Review, by a Quarterly, that will reflect their sentiments and "progressive" schemes. And now he shows that he sustains that same fealty to "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" which makes "free from sin", that he does to the divine plan for proclaiming this law to the "nations." When a man has such sound and true convictions, and has the courage of his convictions and the ability to defend them as Bro. Herndon has, his hands should be held up by his brethren while he wages the conflict against the enemies of truth, and reclaims the honest-hearted from the popular vortex of worldly wisdom and presumptuousness of ungodly men.

Every preacher who reads the FIRM FOUNDATION could easily get four subscribers for Bro. Herndon's paper, and that would insure a copy for the getter-up of the club; for Bro. Herndon promises five copies to any one who will send him four subscribers and eight dollars. Two dollars is cheap for the Quarterly. It contains 100 pages, or 640 pages per year. And it is all good solid reading matter from the pens of our ablest brethren. If the preachers who read the F. F. would all take advantage of Bro. Herndon's offer, they could easily send him a thousand new subscribers, thereby greatly aiding him in his work, and benefitting themselves, too.

I hope our readers will all take hold of this offer, not only preachers, but all who love truth and love to encourage a brother who is laboring for truth—I mentioned preachers specially because they stand a better chance than others to get up clubs, and they should all read the Quarterly Review.

Take right hold of the work, brethren, and let Bro. Herndon be encouraged by seeing that, though the advocacy of unadmixed truth may turn the backs of the untrue upon him, it will draw the hearts and hands of those who are on the Lord's side to his support. All who resist the truth will turn out about like Jannes and Jambres.

Truth crushed to earth will rise again,
The eternal years of God are hers;
But error, wounded, writhes in pain,
And dies amid his worshippers!

—A. McG.

LETTER FROM A SISTER.

MR. AUB. MCGARY:

DEAR BROTHER—As I used to be well acquainted with you in Madison county, in your first wife's lifetime, I do not feel embarrassed to ask you some few questions on the Scripture.

I was a member of the Missionary Baptist church nine years before I ever heard a Christian preacher; but I never could see any other scriptural way of taking members into any church, except the way the Christians receive them now. I left the Baptist church and joined the Church of Christ, just by being asked if I knew what I was immersed for? Any one that ever read the Testament and does not know what baptism is for, I don't know what to think of them; though, if any one will prove to me that I ought to be re-baptized I will be, though I think if I did not know that it was for remission of sins, Christ does surely know. Turn to 4th chapter of John. Also I wish a little light thrown on third chapter of Corinthians, 15th verse.

I read your FIRM FOUNDATION, one of my next door neighbors takes it. I would take it if I were not so poor. I will close, hoping to hear from you soon, if you think my letter worthy of notice. Your sister in the faith once delivered to the saints. M. E. W.

Yes, I remember you, and am glad to hear from you after the lapse of so many eventful years, during which I had not known your whereabouts. When I saw you last you were a merry young lady exulting in the hey-day and hilarity of that state of girlhood verging upon mature womanhood; and I was wild, reckless and exceedingly sinful, trampling the law of God under my foot without fear.

But now we have both faced about and are confronting the stern realities of an eternity to which we are rapidly hastening, and fully realize the, worse than wasted past, and that we must now work with all our might, because "the night cometh when no man can work." But this work must be done in the vineyard of Christ, not out of it.

We hear men preach that salvation is not of works, and it is true, but it is that class of works done of ourselves, out of Christ, of which this can be truly said. When we enter the vineyard, or kingdom of Christ, we are bought by Christ and are his servants. Then our work is Christ's; just such works as are profitable unto salvation. Hence Paul said to his brethren: "Therefore my beloved brethren be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not vain in the Lord"—but it is vain when it is out of the Lord. And John says, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord," for he says, "they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow."—Rev. xiv: 13. How then can men preach that salvation is not of works of any kind?

But now to your case. It would do you no good to be baptized to satisfy any one but yourself; for it must be done, seeking a good conscience, that is, if your conscience is satisfied as you now stand, then it would be a sin for you to be baptized, because you would not do it as an act of faith. See Rom. 14: 23.

But I am satisfied you want me to be candid with you. Then I must be. Hence I must say to you in all earnestness and seriousness that I do not believe your baptism was scriptural, even if you did understand that it was for the remission of sins. The Baptists do not have their converts to make the "good confession." They require them to say that they believe that God has already pardoned their sins before they will baptize them. I do not think a baptism is valid without the confession, such as was made by the eunuch, Acts 8: 37; or Peter, as found in Matthew 16: 18.

I would advise you to seriously consider this point, and if you can see that you have not fulfilled the requirements of the Scriptures, then by all means do so, so that your labor will be in the Lord, and not vain. But this must be done only when you see the importance of it.

I don't know to what you refer in 4th of John. I understand 1 Cor., 8: 16, to teach that a man may be in Christ, and unwittingly pervert the gospel, and mislead others, and yet be saved himself. Persons are saved by the gospel, not by something else, which they conceive to be the gospel, but the gospel. A. MCG.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Some months ago I was persuaded by Bro. C. F. Durham to subscribe for the F. F., and I found in it much that the Christian is sorely in need of. Hence I am under many obligations to Bro. Durham for his kindness in calling my attention to your valuable paper.

Bro. Durham is one of those that has come in from the Baptists by the shaking process, but he told me to-day that he was convinced of his error. I wish you would answer through the columns of the F. F., the following question:

What is meant by this Scripture, "In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God."—John 1: 1. "And the word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory as the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth."—John 1: 14.

If you do not consign this to the waste basket, I will write a longer letter next time. Your brother, J. A. McELRATH, Coleman, Texas.

This is such deep water that we go over our hat-band the first step. But we know this Word refers to Christ, then without flesh he was with God, who is Spirit, before he dwelt among men. When he came among men, he became clothed with their likeness—flesh. A. MCG.

FROM BRO. BONNER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I am a reader of the F. F. and believe it to be the right thing in the right place. We are taking at my house some four or five papers, and when we get our mail, if the F. F. is in the list, it is the first to be read; in fact, I and my house think it the most thorough advocate of primitive Christianity as taught by the apostles now published, and cannot see how any Christian, with an unbiased mind, can fail to see the beauty and consistency of the principles taught in its pages.

I want to ask you a few questions to be answered, (if worthy of notice), in the F. F., by you, or some one else. I frequently notice in our papers, articles of considerable length on church music; indeed, it has been a subject of discussion for a number of years. Now, the questions I want to ask is upon a different phase of the subject; about something upon which I have seen nothing from any brother or sister. Now we as a people do not believe in the organ or its use in church; this agreed upon, we now proceed to the questions:

Now, should our music books have written in them the tune for each song or hymn in some kind of notation; if so, what kind of notation should we use? Ought we to sing all the parts in church? That is, soprano, alto, tenor and bass? Can you tell me why our church music books are written in round notes? that will do very well for people who use the organ, for anything to show what letter to play, is sufficient for an organist; for truly they play the letter scale; but can we sing the letter scale? I say, no. We could easily enough learn to sing the letter scale in any one scale or key, but what will we do when our key is changed and we have to commence on another letter? Do you think we could make all the intervals correctly, placing the half stops where they belong? I say, no.

Now, the letter scale is very properly called the absolute pitch, but in order to sing in any and all scales or keys, we have to use the numeral scale, or relative pitch. Now we learn to sing the numeral and we know the relation of tones is the same in every scale, whether it be the scale of C, or of E, or of G, or A, or any other letter, the order is the same, unless changed by an accidental. Now as the numeral scale represents relative pitch, why not have a character for each number of the scale representing the pitch to be sung without having to stop to count lines and spaces, such as we have in the character notes?

I am a strong advocate of the character notes, since I find that congregations that use the character notes sing much better than where they use round notes.

I write this article because all of our church music is written in round notes, and we who prefer the character notes have either to use a notation we do not like, or else use a book published by other denominations, and the result is, that a great number of congregations of the Church of Christ use books published by the Methodists and Baptists. Is it true that our brethren believe so strong in the round notes, or what is the matter? I will gladly exchange ideas with any brother on this subject whose ideas are different to mine.

I am not in the habit of writing for papers, and if you think this worthy of space, put it in; if not, put it in the waste basket.

O. E. BONNER.

Durango, Texas.

It is the duty of Christians to sing, and make melody in their hearts unto the Lord; this we try to do; but we know nothing of the science of music, but sing such as we do, by ear. So we submit Bro. Bonner's letter to the consideration of those who understand the principles of music, as he seems to, for a discussion of the relative merits of the different styles of notation.

REPORT OF MEETING.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Bro. E. G. Sewell and the writer have just held a meeting with the Bethany church, Logan county, Kentucky, resulting in twenty-four additions—mostly by baptism.

Bro. Sewell is co-editor of the Gospel Advocate, and is an able and eloquent defender of the gospel. He preaches regularly for the church at Bethany, and lives in the hearts of the people, one of the purest and soundest men I have ever met. The audiences throughout were large and very attentive.

Several brethren in this region take the FIRM FOUNDATION and esteem it very highly. It is growing in favor with the disciples.

I have enjoyed my visit to my old Kentucky home, and will soon return to my field of labors at McCune, Kansas. In the one faith.

BENJ. H. SMITH.

McCune, Kansas.

Yes, we have always regarded Bro. Sewell a sound man—"mostly"—but no man is truly a sound man who attempts to build on the "one foundation" in any way but the one way the apostles built.

TALKS WITH THE SISTERS.

Dear Sisters:

Let us talk awhile on the subject of Mary and Martha of Bethany, the dear friends of our Savior. The most of us need to learn a lesson from them, so engrossed are we with earthly cares.

Who has not pictured busy Martha, bustling in and out, lunging to hear the Savior's words, but neglecting this golden opportunity, lest something should occur in the kitchen to wound her housewifely pride? And gentle, sweet Mary, sitting at His feet, her eyes fastened on His heavenly face, drinking of the fountain of life freely, all unconscious that Martha is aggrieved that she leaves her to serve alone. We are nearly all Marthas, and when we find a sister who like

Mary, chooses to sit at the Master's feet and learn of him, we are too apt to criticize her, and think she cares too little for her household.

But the real truth is, we care too much for ours. We go to bed at night, and rise in the morning, thinking of what we shall eat, and wherewithal we shall be clothed. Each day, it may be, witnesses the making and breaking of the resolve to do less for our bodies and more for our souls; to steal at least a few minutes for prayer and spiritual recreation. But days and weeks go by with no time spent in doing good to ourselves, our children, or our neighbors; precious time devoted to the "meat that perisheth."

For illustration: A sister comes to spend the day with us. Is our first thought of the spiritual treat before us? Ah, no! It is "what shall I have for dinner?" We are oppressed with the weight of the question. Perhaps we call up the children and dogs, institute a chase after a chicken, and make such ado as to cause the good sister to feel that she is giving trouble, instead of the pleasure she designed to give; she feels impelled to offer her assistance. Two hours, at least are consumed in the preparation and eating of the meal, another in the care of the dishes and kitchen, and only about two left for the entertainment of the guest. Would it not have been better to have seated that sister comfortably, placing the latest christian paper in her hand, bidding her enjoy herself while you prepare a quick dinner?

But you say you feel like you ought to give her something different from what she has at home. Very well, but remember that anything you might prepare, would differ in some respect from hers, and taste all the better for having been prepared by other than herself. Then when the quick meal is over, why not spread a cloth over everything and leave the washing-up till the sister leaves? "But that is not my way of doing," you say. "I have a regular routine of work." Which is a first-rate idea, but can you not break your routine for this sister once in awhile, and devote the time to your mutual spiritual edification?

Again, in glancing around, her eyes falls on the bed, handsomely bedecked with embroidered pillows, crocheted spreads, etc., and secretly she feels ashamed of her plain beds at home, and resolves to go right back and tuck and trim something for them. This added burden to her many cares, all because an influential sister has not courage to give up these follies that arise from a lust of the eye.

The writer once went in company with several others to spend the day with a good, christian woman, expecting a feast for the soul, but instead we found a feast for the body. When dinner was over and the dishes put away, we had only about one hour to stay, before time to leave. On her table I counted thirteen kinds of sauces, preachers, young or old, in Bible colleges.

First, because they are not authorized by the word of the Lord, and that furnishes the man of God to all good works. Second, because we find, in reading the New Testament, that the church of Christ is the School of Christ, in which he designs men shall be educated for preachers of the gospel. Third, because I see by observation that the fruit of Bible colleges is bad.

They, as a rule, manufacture preachers who wear high-top, silk hats and kid gloves, and sit down on rich churches, at stipulated salaries, pushing the elders aside, adopting the one-man pastorate system, and are generally in favor of some, or all, of the innovations and departures from God's word; such as missionary societies, instrumental music in the worship, church fairs, festivals, etc., etc., for none of which is there any particle of authority in God's word. Bad fruit, is it not? F. HANSBROUGH.

FROM BRO. MCGAVOCK.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

If it is not asking too much space in your valuable paper, I will give a few items, which may be of interest to your readers:

East of here, twenty-six miles, (when the Brazos is up), is a thriving country village, surrounded by as fine land as Texas affords. For a newly settled place, Mart is really promising. Having preached several times near Mart, I felt inclined to preach there also. In company with Bro. A. F. Storrs, Saturday before the second Lord's day in August we reached the village, and enquiring, learned that there was but one church in Mart, (the Missionary Baptist), that has a house. We learned there was a school-house, but on examining it, saw that, for some purpose, one end had been taken out and not put back. Believing it would be almost impossible to keep a light in the school-house, we decided to ask the Baptists for their house. On enquiry, we learned the Baptist conference was to meet at 11 a. m. Further enquiry was made, and we were informed, that one of the Deacons was in the store where we were at that time standing. Bro. Storrs being acquainted with him, introduced me to him. I told him I desired very much to preach to the people in and around Mart a week or ten days, beginning the next Thursday night, and asked him to present my request to the conference. He promised to do so, and asked me to give him my name. I did so, on a slip of paper, and just under my name I wrote, "Christian evangelist."

The conference met and adjourned. As the Deacon was passing Bro. Storrs he informed him that I could not get the use of the house he gave no reasons for refusing. We at once announced that I would preach in the old school-house the next Thursday night. But, fortunately, the community sold the school-house and bought, I suppose a store house. So, on arriving, I found the store house seated and a very small congregation to address. I believe I preached seven times. The people generally expressed pretty good satisfaction. I left another appointment, at which I preached only twice: the Methodists carrying on a big meeting only two miles off, succeeded in getting the people.

It was on this trip that I learned, that the reason I was refused the house was, that the Church to which I belong was "not ORTHODOX." I was also informed that, the "pastor," Pat Lumpkins, said, in a contemptible manner, after hearing the Church Clerk read the minutes of a previous meeting, in which the language, "O. H. McGavock, Christian evangelist," occurred: "He is no Christian evangelist, put it down Campbellite evangelist."

Learning these things, I wrote the following letter, which was received by the preacher and church:

ROBINSON, TEXAS,
Oct. 7th, 1887.

MR. PAT LUMPKINS, Mart, Texas,

Dear Sir:—I have been informed that the Baptist Church at Mart, refused me the use of their house on the charge that, the church with which I stand identified, "is not Orthodox." I was also informed that you, in your church conference, said, I was a Campbellite evangelist, and not a Christian evangelist, which I was sorry to hear.

Now, Mr. Lumpkins, if you really do believe the above of us, you certainly believe the Baptist church has the man to show it up to an intelligent people; and, in as much as the Disciples and Baptists have had the point of difference between them discussed hundreds of times, I challenge you to the contest. Truth is mighty and will prevail. We have it, and have the men to defend it. I call upon the Baptist Church at Mart, Texas, to select their man, and we will furnish ours, and let them discuss the differences. Will you do it? or, are you a pitiful set of cowards, afraid to have your teachings exposed? I hope not, but will wait and see.

I then offered some propositions, which would not interest you just now.

At my next appointment in Mart my congregation was large. I explained the reason for having challenged the Baptists, insisted that they come up with their man, but all seemed in vain. I preached four discourses, and was obliged to return home. So far only three have been added at that place. I want a preacher with me there the first Lord's day in January. Can Bro. W. P. Richardson come?

Your brother in the one hope,
O. H. MCGAVOCK.

WILMETH-JARRELL DEBATE.

There will be a debate in this city between Bro. C. M. Wilmeth and Dr. W. A. Jarrell, Baptist, beginning January 9th, 1888, and continuing six days. Each debater will affirm the following proposition:

The Church of which I am a member is in organization, doctrine, teaching and practice, the New Testament Church.

Please announce through the F. F., and be sure to come.

Your brother in Christ,
J. W. JACKSON.
Hillsboro, Texas.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I wish a religious paper, sound in the "Faith once delivered to the Saints," one that holds out the "Bible alone" as the rule of faith and practice. I am tired of hearing and reading about "our custom," what the Campbells, Scotts, Stones, etc., believed and practiced, and that a man can believe a lie and be saved, if he is only honest in his belief. Please send me a copy of the F. F. with subscription rates, and oblige,
SARAH WILLIAMS.

OBITUARY.

Willie L. Carmichael, son of C. N. and E. J. Carmichael, was born in Dodd county, Georgia, October 3rd, 1865, and departed this life Nov. 26th, 1887, aged 22 years, 1 month and 22 days.

After lingering several days with typho-malarial fever, he was called home. He was an obedient son and a worthy young man, being as near a perfect Christian by practice and example as we ever see on earth. His death is lamented by all who knew him. He left a father, mother and several brothers and sisters to mourn his departure.

About seventeen months ago, he obeyed the gospel under the teaching of the writer, and had often expressed a desire to be a Bible teacher. Some of his last words were: "I am ready and willing to go, when my Savior calls for me." "The Christian life is the religion to live and die by." He was in his right mind up to the moment of his death, and he died without a struggle.

He is now gone to dwell with Christ and the loved ones forevermore. This is a consolation to all those who live Christians. Our dear Willie will never come to see us, but we will go to see him. He has fought the good fight, and God's blessings rest upon him. We rejoice to know that, if we live the Christian's life, we shall clasp hands with our beloved brother on the other shore; for

He sleeps the sleep of the just,
In God was his constant trust;
For he lived the life of the true,
Ever since he was born anew,

We soon shall join the glad throng: yes, soon shall our resting be at home. Oh, how sweet it will be there to meet dear ones all at home.

PUBLISHERS' NOTES.

Please remember the debates announced all along in the F. F., and attend them if you can.

Remember that the Zeke Jackson pamphlet is for sale at this office. Single copy, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents.

If you see a big RED CROSS on your paper, you may know your subscription is out. Please renew if you want the paper.

Bro. E. Brown, Willie Jones and Mr. Andrews, of Lampasas, spent a portion of their time with us while they were in this city.

We will send the Oatman—McGary discussion, and Zeke Jackson, one copy of each, to any of our subscribers, for twenty-five cents.

Can Bro. Bolling explain how he thinks a Christian gentleman, of no ordinary ability, of whom he speaks in this issue, and whom he esteems very highly, indeed, can teach contrary to God's immutable word, and yet be a Christian gentleman?

Willie Jones and I went to the First Christian Church, in Austin, on Sunday, the 18th, and witnessed the exercises of the Sunday School, and, after which, heard a discourse by the pastor, interspersed with nice songs. One lady was given the right hand of fellowship.

Had a pleasant visit from Bro. and sister McKee, Bro. Sid Thomas and his two little sons, Jimmie and Sid, of Junction City, who came down in wagons, and brought pecans, which they sold before reaching Austin. We enjoyed their visit very much, indeed; but it was wet weather, and they were anxious to get back home before the roads would become too bad.

Bro. E. Hansbrough and I went to Moore's school-house, in this county, with Bro. McAngus, on Saturday, the 10th of Dec., 1887, and on Lord's day morning Bro. Hansbrough preached a splendid sermon to a small but attentive audience. We ate dinner with Bro. J. L. Gross, the school teacher there, and, as the weather was too inclement for night services, we induced Bro. McAngus to hack us back to Austin that evening. Two brothers and one sister requested us to send them the F. F.

ZEKE JACKSON.—"The Religious Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family" is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, upon receipt of price, ten cents per copy, or three copies for twenty-five cents. Published by McGary & Hansbrough, Austin, Texas. Send in your orders, brethren and friends, and circulate this little pamphlet. Send it to those who have been shaken into the congregations of Christians. They will see that they have been only shaken, and this will uproot them, and the word of God will cleanse them from all unrighteousness, if they will obey the gospel of Christ.

CAN CHRISTIANS MARRY OUT OF CHRIST?

The above may seem to be a strange question to ask, when we see so many doing it; but the question has not reference to what Christians can do, but to what they have the right or privilege of doing. They have put themselves under the law of Christ, the King of kings and Lord of lords, and they ought to be governed by his will, as revealed in the New Testament; but it has always been wrong for the children of God to marry those that were not the children of God. It was one of the most fruitful sources of wickedness, that we have any account of, before the flood, and the wickedness resulting from it, was one of the principle causes of the destruction of the human family; and Moses gives an account of it in Gen. 6: 1-5. He says: "And it came to pass when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, that the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair, (that is, pretty); and they took them wives of all which they chose."

Yes, like they do now, they went according to their own choice, and not according to the choice of God, as revealed by the Holy Spirit; and hence, "the Lord said my Spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh; yet his days shall be a hundred and twenty years." He gave them a hundred and twenty years to repent and turn from their wickedness; but they did not do like the people of Ninevah, when Jonah preached to them, and hence God's Spirit ceased to strive with them, and they were destroyed.

Moses further says: "There were giants in the earth in those days, (people of great physical and animal powers), and also after that when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men, who were, of old, men of renown." They were not renowned for doing good, but evil; the cross was not a good one.

After the flood, and after God had selected the descendants of Abraham as his chosen people, and after they were delivered from Egyptian bondage, and while in the wilderness (a type of the Church) through his servant Moses he gave a law to the children of Israel as follows: "When the Lord thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, and hath cast out many nations before thee, the Hittites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perrizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, seven nations great and mightier than thou, and when the Lord thy God shall deliver them before thee, thou shalt smite them, and utterly destroy them; thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor show mercy unto them: neither shalt thou make marriages with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son; (now he gives the reason), for they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other Gods: so (for doing that) will the anger of the Lord be kindled against you and destroy thee suddenly."—Deut. 7: 1-4.

What important lessons are taught in those four verses. Our heavenly Father, in his dealings with the Jews, was setting up types or figures, of what would come up under the reign of Christ, and Paul says; "All these things happened unto them (the Jews) for examples: and they are written for our admonition."—1 Cor. 10: 11.

Who do those nations, by whom the Jews were surrounded, and that God drove out before them, represent or typify? If they do not represent, or typify, the sectarian parties by whom Christians are surrounded, I am at a loss to know what they do typify. If that is so, then are not Christians commanded to utterly destroy them, not with carnal weapons, but with the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, and to make no covenant or compromise with them, nor show mercy unto them? No, they are not to go in and work with them in their mourner's bench and "getting religion" process neither are they to accept their dipping (called baptism) submitted to through the faith brought about by the false teaching they receive at the mourner's bench, or elsewhere, and they are not to recognize them as Christians by calling them brethren and sisters, which some of our brethren do. Yes, some of them don't seem to have the courage to call their own brethren brethren, nor the courage to keep from calling sectarians brethren, when they know they have never complied with the law of the Spirit that makes people free from sin, and brings them into the kingdom of Christ. Brethren, when you act that way are you not compromising with and showing mercy to their false teaching and bidding them godspeed?

Further, Christians are not to make marriages with them because they will turn them away from the true to vain worship, and their children will learn to speak half in the language of Ashdod or sectarianism, and half Christian (Nehem. 13: 24) and such a mixture is not acceptable to God; and Joshua, the servant of God, just before he died, warned the people so faithfully on this subject. Let us hear him: "Take good heed, therefore, unto yourselves that you love the Lord your God. Else if you do in anywise go back and cleave unto the remnant of these nations, even those that remain among you, and shall make marriages with them, and go in unto them and they to you: know for a certainty that the Lord your God will no more drive out any of these nations from before you; but they shall be snares and traps unto you, and scourges in your sides and thorns in your eyes until you perish off this good land which the Lord your God hath given you."—Josh. 23: 11: 13.

Oh what a solemn warning given by the heavenly Father through his servant Joshua, and brethren and sisters ought we not to give heed to it, and take warning from it? How often I have seen unhappy husbands and wives, because they have violated the law of the Lord on this subject, either ignorantly or wilfully; most of them, I believe, ignorantly, for preachers are not teaching on that subject, it is not popular; but we will examine some of the teaching of the New Testament with reference to it, and close this article.

When the gospel began to be preached, and christianity established in the world, the nations of earth, (except the Jews), were worshippers of idols, and it was very common for men to have more than one wife, and that custom prevailed to some extent among the Jews also, though it was contrary to God's will; but the gospel found men with a plurality of wives, and it did not require them to separate; but if the unbelieving husband or wife did not wish to live with the believing husband or wife, they could depart, (not being subject to the law of the Lord); but the believing husband or wife was admonished to dwell with them (if agreeable on the part of the unbeliever,) that they might be the means of saving them, (1 Cor. 7: 13-15); but the apostle says, in verse 39: "The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; only in the Lord." Now is not the same privilege granted to the husband, if the wife be dead, to marry whom he will, only in the Lord? And is it not obligatory on both husband and wife, if their companion dies, and they marry again, to marry in the Lord? That verse settles that question beyond a doubt.

Now the question arises, who is in the Lord, and how do people get into Him? Our brethren say, by believing in him (Christ) with all of their hearts, by repenting of their sins, by confessing him with their mouth, as did the Ethiopian eunuch, (Acts 8: 37); or as did the apostle Peter, (Matt. 16: 16); that good confession spoken of by Paul, (Rom. 10: 10), and by being buried with him in baptism for (not because of) the remission of their sins.

Now, brethren, is that the law of induction into the Church or body of Christ? If you say yes, then I ask, do any of the many sectarian parties of earth comply with that law? If you say no, and you are bound to say it if you tell the truth, then I ask again, are they in Christ, in the Lord? Again, I say, if you tell the truth (and we ought not to tell lies), you are bound to say no. Then if they are not in Christ, in the Lord, can Christians marry them, and give their sons and daughters in marriage to their sons and daughters without violating the law of the Lord? If they can, then I will give it up, and agree that Christians may go ahead in the gratification of the desires of the flesh, and take them wives and husbands of all which they may choose, on account of their beauty, their wealth, or anything else that is calculated to gratify their animal man; but, brethren, remember that God's Spirit will not always strive with us and that there are giants in wickedness being born into the world now on account of bad marriages. EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Michigan Christian Advocate, (Methodist), says: "The Campbellites have a paper named the Firm Foundation. It opposes all other Campbellites, and claims to be endeavoring to restore them to apostolic Christianity on the subject of 'sect baptism,' taking the position that persons joining the Campbellites from the sects should be re-baptized." Our Methodist friend must try it again! The FIRM FOUNDATION opposes all "Campbellites"—not "all other Campbellites"—but all of them, without any kind of reservation! We have no little use for a "Campbellite" as we have for a Methodist, because neither have any connection with the kingdom of God. "Campbellites" are rare animals in this country, but Methodists are plentiful. I know many Methodists that I like as individuals. It is only when I view them as Methodists that I dislike them. I would like them better even as Methodists if they did not try to saddle off on the Bible, their idolatrous, mesmeric, infidelic "doctrines of men." Our friend is mistaken again, when he says we take any position as to how people should "join the Campbellites." We are perfectly indifferent as to how people do in "joining the Campbellites." We would discourage any one whom we might see aiming to "join the Campbellites," or Methodists either. We want to see the people obey the gospel of Christ, and enter the kingdom of God. A. McG.

Bro. N. B. Gibbons comes out in the Messenger in criticism of Bro. Spurlock. Bro. Spurlock's article was in the FIRM FOUNDATION; and Bro. Gibbons says the reason he replies in the Messenger is, because he does not believe the FIRM FOUNDATION would have published it, as it refused to publish his "reply to A. McGary's reply to J. R. Jones." Well, Bro. Gibbons was right, we would not have published his criticism of Bro. Spurlock, for the very same reason we did not publish his reply to A. McGary's reply to J. R. Jones, which was because he raised a false issue in both. If he had been saying the moon he would have come as near criticizing my real position as he came in his so-called reply to it; and I can truly say the same of his reply to Bro. Spurlock. But in both articles he comes with a gust that puts on the air of a storm. I must say I do not think Bro. Jones would have felt much helped if the reply to A. McGary had been published. Bro. Spurlock says that Christians are as good as God wants. But when his context is taken with it, any one that can see at all can see that he does not mean good in the sense of character, but good as to state or relationship. Yet Bro. Gibbons lights in with the idea that it is preposterous to say that Christians are as good as God wants them! So he spends his cyclone at character, while Bro. Spurlock was writing about state! No, my brother, I will not publish such fusillades at "straw men." Confine yourself to something I have said when you want to reply to me, and I promise you a hearing, however terrific your logic may be. But when you have time to waste, and can come no nearer the real issue than you did at Bro. Spurlock and me, if you are determined to waste it, save your paper, and spend your time whistling jigs to gate posts, or write for the Messenger.

AN HONEST OPPONENT.

Bro. Harrison's report of Bro. Tant's debate with the Primitive Baptists, shows that although Bro. Harrison is opposed to the FIRM FOUNDATION on some points, he does not allow that opposition to dwarf his better judgment and shrivel up his soul till the Spirit of Christ is squeezed out of it, like some others. His report of this debate causes me to feel very respectfully toward him and repose a degree of confidence in him that I am sorry to have to say I have found no room for in many of our opposing brethren. Contrast this report of Bro. Harrison's with the action of Dr. Adkins and A. P. Aten when Bro. Tant was about to enter into a debate with the Baptists near Lampasas, and the grounds for these remarks will be manifest.

But I think Bro. Harrison is mistaken when he thinks there is danger of the friends of the F. F. "crystallizing into a sect." If crystallizing is the right word, we can see no danger in crystallizing around the apostolic teaching in precept and example. Bro. Harrison says we, "need to practice love and forbearance, remembering that when we die, wisdom will not die with us." And we can heartily second these wise words. But our "love" must be rightly directed, so that we will love God and his word and His Son's blood-sealed system of redemption, and consider God's "wisdom" as revealed to us in the New Testament, the never "dying wisdom," and a sufficient rule of faith and practice. If our brethren refuse to follow the teaching of "our plan" beyond the teaching of the New Testament, as far as to recognize as scripturally baptized, those who have been baptized under false teaching, and whose baptism was preceded by an experience of irresistible grace, instead of by "the good confession," we do not think there is manifested in such refusal any grounds to fear that they have lost love for God and their brethren, or, that they think wisdom will die with them. The readiness of our brethren to "spite," has been the sectarian cry raised against them from the first. It is true they are ever ready to interchange views with all who differ with them, but I hope Bro. Harrison will not fall out with them for this, as it is one evidence of honesty on their part.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS AND S. S. PAPERS.

Some seem to think we have been opposed to Sunday-schools, and that, in publishing Sunday-school papers, we have changed our position. There never was a greater mistake. I am certain I never wrote or spoke a word discouraging Sunday-school in my life, and have intended, for the last ten or fifteen years, so soon as able, to issue a series that would maintain the proper relation of the Sunday-school to the church, and that would not encourage practices in the Sunday-school that would be objectionable in the church. To have the Sunday-schools do things objectionable in the church, is to provide for the church doing the same thing when the school becomes the church as it will in a very few years.

So far from being opposed to them, in childhood I attended school every Sunday. At Sunday-school I memorized the New Testament to Romans, and have always believed it could be made a most efficient helper in training children for immortality. We have never believed any church does its duty that does not maintain a good school for old and young. We have several times said, in the Advocate that, could the whole church be induced to study the word of God together in classes instead of listening to a prosy rambling, oft-repeated sermon from an elder, or an entertaining lecture from a youthful pastor, it would be more instructive, interesting and beneficial, and do more good to others.

We have believed the school should be a part of the church work, under the guidance of the elders of the church, not necessarily taught by them, but it should be under their supervision, and the whole talent of the church should be used and developed in this work. We have long believed this would be much more in accordance with the primitive model of church worship than being sermonized every Lord's day. We have always opposed, except still to oppose the placing the Lord's school for old or young under the control of an organization separate and apart from the church. That is dishonoring to the church and its founder and opens the way for teaching error.

A lesson leaf is a Bible leaf, with explanatory notes. How one who uses Bibles with notes or a religious paper, can object to this, I cannot see. These lesson helps are much more pure Bible teaching than any religious paper. The more leaves with scriptures on them that are printed and scattered in the world, the better for the world.

We have always said, we always expect to say, that it is better for children and old persons to read from the Bible or Testament, where the connection will be seen, and familiarity with the book will be cultivated, than to read from any separated leaf; and we urge parents and teachers to induce old and young, to use the book itself in preference to any lesson leaf. The questions will excite thought and direct attention, so are profitable.

But many families do not have testaments for each member, and the universal testimony is, if the teacher depends upon each one having a Testament, many do not read at all. Between not reading at all and reading from the leaf we greatly favor the leaf. If the demand for Lesson Leaves shall fail because all use the book itself, none will more rejoice at this failure than the publishers of the Advocate Lesson Leaf. D. L.

We give the above from the Advocate because we do not want to do it an injustice, and as we made some remarks about its position on "Lesson Leaf"—not the "Sunday School"—we thought it fair to let our readers see what Bro. Lipscomb has to say in reply to "some;" for "some" may consider his remarks applicable to what we said. But Bro. L. very clearly shows in these remarks that he regards instructions directly from the Bible better than from Lesson Leaves. He advises and endorses the Lesson Leaf, only, because the people will not use the Bible. That is the principle upon which many people tell me they work through a missionary society—they say the churches will not do their duty and send the gospel, and the societies will. The very same argument that will defend the use of Lesson Leaves, and Sunday Schools will defend the missionary society, and the argument that will overturn the one will overturn the other.

Bro. Lipscomb ought to remember his objection, some time ago, to Bro. Neal's style of argument on the voting question, too well to attempt to gain anything for "Lesson Leaves" by contrasting them with religious papers. If he has no more scriptural right for publishing the Advocate than he has for publishing "Lesson Leaves," we verily believe he ought to quit both.

We believe, yes, we know that Christians must bring their children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, or be guilty in God's sight for not doing so; but this lays no foundation for a Sunday School. My objection to such a school is, that it is strictly a Sunday School; while to obey the Lord in instructing our children we must have an everyday school, right around the family hearth-stone. Then let the children go with the parents to the Lord's day meeting, and be instructed under the eye of the feeders of the flock, and not under some man who is in Nashville or Cincinnati. Away with the Sunday School, even if Bro. Lipscomb had memorized the whole of the New Testament at Sunday School. If the apostles did not have Sunday Schools we do not need them, and should not have them. If they did have them we will find it out in the same chapter and verse that tells about their having missionary societies, bloated clergymen, instrumental music in the worship; and about their baptizing persons who did not know for what they were being baptized.

THE CHRISTIAN SYSTEM THEIR BIBLE.

Alex. Campbell once said, concerning the re-baptism question:

"Some persons have thought that because they did not understand the import of Christian immersion, at the time of their immersion, they ought to be immersed again in order to enjoy the blessings resulting from this institution; but as reasonably might a woman seek to be married a second, a third, or a fourth time to her husband, because at the expiration of the second, third or fourth year after her marriage she discovered new advantages and blessings resulting from her alliance with her husband, of which she was ignorant at the time of her marriage."—Christian Messenger.

The apostle Paul, "once said, concerning the re-baptism question," to those who had been immersed without hearing and believing "the doctrine once delivered to the saints:" "Unto what then were ye baptized?" And after proper teaching, "they were baptized in the name (authority) of the Lord Jesus," see Acts xix: 1-5.

I believe Paul did right, "Alexander Campbell" and his blind followers to the contrary notwithstanding.

Under the rule of such sophistry as the above from the "Christian System" (T. R. Burnett's Bible), if in marrying a lady to John Smith, the administrator or performer of the marriage ceremony should call the name of John Jones instead of John Smith, she would be Mrs. Jones, the wife of John Jones, who was not there, and who had had no say or voice in the matter from the earliest inception of the courtship to the culmination in marriage! This is clearly their logic and doctrine, as may be seen from the following quotation from the champion of their side, and the strongest man on it:

"Baptist practice converts men through devices, and is a conversion by men. Their course drives God out of the work. They have more faith in human dreams, visions and imaginations than in the promises of God, given by the Holy Spirit, sealed by the blood of Christ, and confirmed by the oath of Jehovah. Baptist conversion is wholly of men."

Now the Baptists, according to this, let God have no voice in their work from beginning to end; they "drive him out!" Well, when they drive God out, they drive Christ and the Holy Spirit out. Yet these men teach that when the Baptists are marrying their converts to the Baptist church they marry them to Christ, who has been "driven out" and is not there, merely by calling his name and using the same form of words that would be used, and counterfeiting his ordinance that would be used if Christ were there, and were in the work! This is a terrible stain on some men who have to put their fingers in their mouths and keep mum—"yes, mum is the word;" for Alexander Campbell has once spoken and his disciples "speak where he spoke, and keep silent where he has not spoken"—with them, there is "one Lord"

—Alexander Campbell; "one faith"—the doctrine of Alexander Campbell; "one baptism"—a thorough wetting.

With them it is, "if any man speak let him speak as the oracles of the 'Christian System,' or there is none of the light of our plea' in him—he is 'a heretic,' a 'new reformer,' an 'anabaptist,' a 'Wild Bill of the West,' standing on a 'flimsy foundation,' because he does not stand on our Bible, the 'Christian System, by A. Campbell.'"

But there are many things in the "Christian System" they don't quote much! I expect they would like to get out a new version to get rid of some of these—for instance:

"Faith in God's appointments, and repentance for past transgressions, are now, always were, and evermore shall be, necessary to forgiveness."—Christian System, chapter xix, verse 3, page 63.

I wonder if T. R. Burnett can find it now? Here you will have to institute a counter-march, just as your lord, A. Campbell, did. But Bro. Campbell never expected to be elevated to the point of infallibility, or that his "Christian System" would become a Bible. He was great enough to be humble; hence would have corrected his mistakes if he could have seen them, while those who blindly follow him will not. The followers of the apostles have a guide book that never contradicts itself like the "Christian System" and other unadorned books. Thank God for the New Testament, which is a consistent book, and, "a sufficient rule of faith and practice!" In this marriage illustration, so often brought forward, the very point at issue is assumed. There is no room for controversy over a legal marriage, neither is there over a legal or authorized baptism. But when the issue is over an illegal marriage, or an illegal baptism, issues arise that can only be determined by an appeal to the law governing the case.

"ANCIENT GOSPEL."

In the report of our meeting at Rose Hill, Texas, last summer, we stated that the "ancient gospel" had not been preached there, using the phrase "ancient gospel" in its technical sense, as it is used by writers of the reformation, to signify the system of doctrine and practice advocated by the Christians of the present day. The editor of the Foundation, seeing in this use of the phrase "ancient gospel" a seeming contradiction of our position that Paul defines the gospel in Cor. 15 to be the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, began to ring the changes on it, and has kept it up for three months. He has already printed six columns about it, and will print sixteen more if we do not rise and explain. As this is the only seeming contradiction he has ever found in the writings of the Messenger, we ought, perhaps, to let him enjoy it; but lest he cackle himself to death, and cackle his readers to death, we will state that our use of the phrase "ancient gospel" in that report was not strictly correct or scriptural. The ancient gospel is the death, burial and resurrection of Christ. See 1 Cor. 15. We shall try to be more careful in future, lest some other weak brother misconceive the use of our words.—Christian Messenger.

This Rose Hill matter has worried him and fretted him until he has turned in his anger and "eaten his own words." He says that, "As this is the only seeming contradiction" we have found in his writings he would let us enjoy it, but he fears we will cackle ourself and our readers to death over it. Well, there might be some danger of such a result were it not for the serious thought that the inexcusable contradiction was made by a blunderhead that claims to be a preacher of the gospel and a lover of truth. But how badly mistaken he is, when he thinks this is the only "seeming contradiction" he is guilty of. As he will not confess his faults, but prefers to feed upon his own chaff we will agree to dish out enough of such vitals to him to fill him up and nauseate his stomach, unless it is as destitute of sensation as his head and heart.

Let him make his next meal on his two statements about the three facts. He has said that they are not to be obeyed, and that they are to be obeyed! This is a "seeming contradiction!" Now open your theological chops and devour this morsel, and we will then give you some more of these goodies.

He says he used "ancient gospel in its technical sense" (you should have said nonsense.) But he said this "technical"—nonsense, I will say—in which he used ancient gospel "was not strictly correct or scriptural. The ancient gospel is the death, burial and resurrection of Christ." Well, then, as "the gospel" is all that Christ has authorized any man to preach, no man has authority to preach more than the three facts! All pedobaptists preach these three facts; hence, all pedobaptists preach the gospel, all that any man has authority to preach. The Roman Catholics preach the three facts. T. R. Burnett preaches the three facts. Hence the Catholics and T. R. Burnett preach the "ancient gospel." Therefore, as things which equal the same thing are equal to each other, the preaching of Roman Catholics and the preaching of T. R. Burnett are equal to each other! What, then, has T. R. Burnett been making all of this fuss about for thirteen years? "The way of the transgressor is hard!"

WHAT IS THE GIFT OF THE HOLY GHOST?

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Please answer through the F. P. the following questions:

(1) Acts, 2: 38, what is the gift of the Holy Ghost, that Peter says they shall receive, if they will repent and be baptized for the remission of sins?

(2) Also explain the 8th verse of the 3rd chapter of John, to satisfy several inquirers.

Your brother in Christ,

J. H. MOORE.

Rockford, Washington Territory.

(1) The gift promised in Acts 2: 38 to those who believe and are baptized for the remission of sins is that satisfaction of heart and consoling emotion which always caused converts to "rejoice" after baptism.

When a fugitive fleeing from a land of oppression, with the idea that the authority of the oppressor is in hot pursuit, reaches a shore of liberty and safety, the moment his foot presses that shore he feels safe and satisfied and feels like rejoicing. He did not feel this way till he actually set his foot upon the free soil; but the instant he does his faith in the overtures and promises and power of the government of this land to protect him brings this comforting influence to his heart. So it is with the one who really realizes the danger of Satan and sin and alienation from God, when he has passed the Red Sea of baptism and stands upon the other shore of safety, and knows that the Pharaonic host of sin has been "washed away" and forever drowned and "buried" in that watery grave, he feels that comfort of heart that he never had and never could have felt otherwise. His confidence in God's word, and his comfort of heart are of equal strength. But there is no direct impartation of Spirit in it, it is the natural fruit of faith; and he who has not this spirit in his heart is none of Christ's.

I do not mean to say, that others than those who actually obey the gospel do not have a strong delusion that gives them momentary and fitful seasons of satisfaction and rejoicing; but then they have long seasons of doubt and despair. This, the one who is truly born again, born of water and Spirit, never feels. They may sometimes doubt their rectitude as children of God, and even sensibly realize that they are walking after the flesh; but they never doubt that they have been born of God. Whoever does doubt this may know from that doubt that they have not, and they had better do their first works over.

(2) This is a passage which has been forced through the theological gauntlet so often, and has been so rudely handled that I do not take it up with that alacrity I would a less mooted passage. But as I have been asked several times recently to explain it, I will venture, briefly, to do so:

"The wind" (or Spirit) "bloweth" (or the Spirit breathes) "where it listeth" (or pleases) "and thou hearest the sound" (or report) "thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit."

It is, perhaps, easier to tell what this passage does not teach, than what it does teach. There is so much confusion on the question of spirit, some time; have assisted the brethren in adding twenty-nine to this congregation since the second Lord's day in May.

Although this country was settled by the Shakers, and all the geographical lines run at an angle of forty-five degrees, which somewhat resembles the religious lines that are being run by our "shaker" brethren, the brethren at Oakland are not "shakers" but stand by the Bible and the Bible only, they want nothing but straight lines. Although I have many times visited the old Shaker location, I am always lost, cannot tell the time of day by the sun.

Have often thought that sectarian angles have caused many to be lost in their efforts to serve the Lord. Many who claim to be brethren have been trying to follow Christ by running across the Bible at an angle of, perhaps, forty-five degrees, so long that they are lost to the truth and for this reason are trying to bolster up sect baptism. Certainly a straight line brings a man from faith to repentance, and from repentance to confession, from confession to immersion, and from immersion to a godly walk and a pious conversation, which misses sects and sectarian teaching.

Brethren, get out of your angles and follow the lines laid out by Christ and the apostles and all your crooked "tap-root" troubles will vanish from before you like a morning's fog.

INCONSISTENCIES.

The inconsistency in the teaching in this day and time, of those who claim to be baptized with the Holy Ghost, is very apparent to Bible readers.

I heard a minister, who had been preaching for a number of years, say, after hearing a Lutheran on "sprinkling the proper mode," "that he had always been in doubt as to whether immersion was baptism or not, and now he was fully convinced that sprinkling was the proper mode." Quite recently "he ducked one," as some of them call it, which it is reasonable to suppose, is against his faith; "whatsoever is not of faith is sin," but the applicant said so and was told that she had read her Bible too much to believe that anything short of immersion was baptism; and as that was the only resort to get her in, it had to be performed. There is a very lame place in such inconsistent practice.

Some of our popular preachers of this day and time, will preach for an hour to convince their hearers that sprinkling is the proper mode and apostolic practice, and go the next hour and immerse a person, if they persistently require it. I don't see how a man claiming to be "called and sent" to preach the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, and also to be baptized with the Holy Ghost, as were the apostles, can differ from their teaching and practice. Their remorse of conscience must be very great. Just think, a man going down into the water, not at or near by, and repeating the sacred formula, and burying the subject in water, when he conscientiously holds, (or says he does), that the act he is performing is not baptism at all. One great objection is, that it is too inconvenient; a more convenient way is, to bring a little water and sprinkle it on, as it is nothing but an outward command.

When the Savior said to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born of water and the Spirit," can a man be born of a few drops of water? Can anything be? If he repents, turns away from his sins, and turns to God by obeying from the heart the form of doctrine delivered them, then God will blot out his sins. No where in God's word did ever the apostles, at their meetings, tell or require sinners to come forward or stand up, that they might receive their prayers, or that feelings was any evidence of pardon? Let us notice the first time the gospel was ever preached in fact, on the day of Pentecost. Peter arose and preached to them Christ and him crucified, and when they heard this they were pierced to their hearts, and cried out: "What shall we do?"

—here is the evidence of their faith, and that is the way faith comes by hearing the word of God. The great and important question was then asked and answered for the first time, what must we do to be saved. What did Peter tell them? To come to the anxious seat and pray for faith, or stand up that they might be prayed for, or some of their relatives should bring them up, or did he go to them and asked them if they were satisfied, etc.? No; but repent and be baptized, —for what? A door into the church? No; but for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, after you have been baptized and not before. Now we plainly see the three thousand had not received the Holy Ghost, or remission of sins, until they had been baptized. So they were not justified by faith alone as is taught by the creeds. K.

LETTER FROM A SISTER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Allow me, through the columns of your paper, to thank Bro. Conner for his kindness in answering the questions asked by me, several months since, concerning Christians marrying aliens. This is a subject of great importance, and I think a great deal should be said about it through the press, that the young Christians may see the fatal step ere it is too late.

We admire Bro. Conner's candor on every subject which he handles, more than we care to express. Better for many if such teachers had existed long since. My prayer is, that he may continue to grow in the knowledge of the Scriptures, and God will surely furnish him unto all good works.

What has become of Sister Sarai that we are deprived of her advice and teaching of late? Hope to see more of her productions in the near future.

Brothers and sisters, everywhere, let us work for the F. F. We must not let it go down. I am sending some copies to places where they have none. Bro. Freeman has sent my name with several new ones, for another year. Bro. Lockhart has been holding a protracted meeting in Sulphur Springs, and the last account was, forty additions to the church. Do not know whether he is a progressive or not. That little place was once my home, and I feel a great solicitude for the church there; have sent some papers to sisters, will you please send sample copies to J. N. Pender, Oscar Pate, and Mrs. Rosa Edwards, all of Sulphur Springs, Texas.

Bro. Strode preaches for us occasionally, but has such poor encouragement he cannot come often. Hope we will be able to build up a little congregation ere long.

May the blessings of heaven attend you all in this glorious contest, is the sincere prayer of your sister in the one faith.

L. S. GRISSOM.

Morales, Texas.

My knowledge of God's word leads me to believe that the man or woman who does not understand the design of baptism, is not a fit subject for baptism; that hundreds have gone under the water spurning the idea that baptism was a condition of pardon; that I have taught many such the way of the Lord more perfectly, took their confessions and baptized them, and at the same time did not think they were being rebaptized, simply because they were never scripturally baptized before.

That we have men among us claiming to be preachers of the gospel, who never obeyed the gospel as Peter preached it on the day of Pentecost, and as such preachers were never baptized for the remission of their sins, but because they were saved. Yes, they thanked God that they were saved by "faith alone;" got religion at the mourners' bench, or out in the field, or some other place. How can such preachers say to sinners: "Repent and be baptized in the name of Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." Suppose the sinner would say to the preacher: "Were you ever baptized in the name of Christ for the remission of your sins?" The preacher would be compelled to say, "No, sir." Why, then, ask me to do something you never did? If it is right for me to be baptized for the remission of sins, it is your duty, too. My advice to you, Mr. Preacher, is, practice what you preach. You are preaching to me that baptism is a condition of pardon: your former practice contradicts your preaching, for you were baptized because you were saved. PUBLISHER'S NOTES.

Orders are coming in for the Zeke Jackson pamphlet, but not so fast as we could wish.

Remember that the Zeke Jackson pamphlet is for sale at this office. Single copy, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents.

If you see a big RED CROSS on your paper, you may know your subscription is out. Please renew if you want the paper.

We will send the Oatman—McGary discussion, and Zeke Jackson, one copy of each, to any of our subscribers, for twenty-five cents.

We have several good articles on hand which have been crowded out this issue, but will appear in due time. Articles which we do not have to rewrite shall have the preference always, as it takes time to transcribe them.

The red cross will not appear on your paper more than three times. If you will write us word that you want it, we will remove the cross and send the F. F. on to you. But how are we to know whether you will renew or not unless you write or send us word?

We call attention to Bro. Stone's article in this issue, and ask a careful perusal of it. Whoever takes issue with him, will have to bring as proof the testimony of the apostles, as that evidence alone is his guide, and to it only will he yield.

ZEKE JACKSON.—"The Religious Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family" is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, upon receipt of price, ten cents per copy, or three copies for twenty-five cents. Published by McGary & Hansbrough, Austin, Texas. Send in your orders, brethren and friends, and circulate this little pamphlet. Send it to those who have been shaken into the congregations of Christians. They will see that they have been only shaken, and this will up-root them, and the word of God will cleanse them from all unrighteousness, if they will obey the gospel of Christ.

Bro. Hansbrough will hold a protracted meeting in this city beginning Thursday night before the third Lord's day in this month. He has secured the temporary capital building in which to preach. He has not been invited to preach in the Christian church here, but has been refused the privilege of so doing once or twice; and, knowing that he has nothing else to present to the people but the word of the Lord, and nothing to keep back, he has secured a house wherein no one can molest him, nor make him afraid, and those who want to hear the truth preached in all its purity, should avail themselves of this opportunity, and attend regularly. Hope Bros. J. W. Jackson, J. W. Strode, A. J. McCarty, A. McGary, H. A. Casey and J. D. Tant, will try and be here, as they have all intimated that they will be here about that time.

The Firm Foundation, in many a home,
Is teaching the truth, wherever it is found;

Already it has caused many to think,
And turn from error, whose cup they did drink.

Many, it is leading, gently along,
From erroneous paths to sing a new song;

Many more, it will gather, as older it doth grow,
If the good word it doth continue to sow.

Then forward! dear editors, I bid you Godspeed,

As long as you will ever for the truth
Plead.

Let us all, dear brethren, send in our Mite,

And help the good brothers speak for
The right.

Error must fall, truth must arise,
And by his power, the world surprise.
Baptize them over; I say it again;
Baptize them over; you know who I mean.

They're not in the kingdom, never have Been,

Perhaps if they are, I am not, then.
They ignore the confession—that is a sin:
Baptize them over! don't shake them

SEVERAL THINGS.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

You will please change my address from Sulphur Rock, Independence county, Ark., to Strawberry, Lawrence county, Ark.

The following is a brief synopsis of my labors in the evangelistic field for the year 1887: Number of discourses preached, 208; amount of money received, $114.65; railroad and ferrage expenses, $10.55; number of persons immersed, 19.

The whole thing looks mighty little to me; I don't know how it looks to others. I will not be able to spend 1888 in preaching, so the prospects are, that at the end of '88, I will not be able even to make as good a report as I have this year.

I am a little like my old aunt was in time of the war. She said she wished she were a hundred men, so she could do as much fighting in the war as she wished to. If it were possible for me to be a hundred men, I would want every one of them to be proclaimers of the old Jerusalem gospel; but I believe I had rather be a dead gnat than to be a thousand of these wishy-washy, time-serving, soft-shell, money-loving, people-pleasing, good-for-nothing preachers that the country is flooded with at the present time.

"If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God." I am reminded of this when I hear our brethren, and especially the preachers, calling the Lord's day (Rev. 1: 10) Sunday, or, still worse, Sabbath. They should remember that the Sabbath, as such, belonged to, and passed away with the Jewish institution, and that there is no such a word as Sunday in the New Testament.

Again, I am reminded of this when I hear our people talk about "our church," (bad), "our denomination," (worse!) "Christian denomination," (still worse!) and, if we would speak as the oracles of God speak, we should never use the phrase "Christian church," for we never find that in the Bible. I have read about the church of Christ, and the church of God, which is all the same, but I have never read of the "Christian church," nor "Christian denomination," in the Bible.

But it seems that the highest idea most people have of the Church of Christ is, that it is merely a denomination (sect) among denominations; hence, I very often have the question put to me: "What denomination do you belong to?" I always reply: I don't belong to any denomination—I belong to the Church of Christ. I cannot conceive of a more contemptible thing, than a little shebang gotten up by man, claiming to be a church!

It is time the world was finding out that when an individual is converted, or born again, he then and there becomes a member of the church or body of Christ, and that denomination is no part nor parcel of Christianity. I should like to write an article on the subject of the Church, if the F. F. could find space for it.

"The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."—Rom., 1: 16. Notwithstanding this statement of the apostle Paul, I sometimes hear men pray for God to send some untried means to save sinners! As if God could try anything but his own power (the gospel) to save them!! The gospel is the very means that is untried by those who are sending up those faithless petitions; probably if they would try the gospel awhile, they would have better success. Some of our preachers use this Scripture for a "text" sometimes, and at the close of the discourse, demonstrate to the congregation that they don't believe a word of it, by saying: "If there is one here who wishes to obey the gospel let him make it known by giving us his hand while the brethren are singing," and then talking mighty loud and waving their hands in the air, while the singing is going on; thus attempting to make sound do, what the gospel—the power of God—failed to do—move persons to obedience. But some try to justify themselves in this practice by saying, "it is customary." Just as well to say: "Because it was once customary to pay the priests to pray off the sins of the people, that therefore we will keep that up."

"I beseech you, brethren, by the name of the Lord Jesus, that ye all speak the same thing: and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and same judgment."—1 Cor. 1: 10.

There is a woeful deficiency among us on this matter, and the question naturally arises: Who is responsible for the divisions that exist in our midst to-day? He who speaks that which is not spoken in the Bible, and thereby causes divisions, is responsible for all the divisions that such speaking may cause.

He that practices that which is not authorized or required in the Scriptures is responsible for the divisions that may arise by such practice. For instance: Some use the organ in worship and thereby cause division; the Bible does not require us to use the organ, therefore they who use it are responsible for the division it causes.

Some join secret organizations, vote, hold office, extend the right hand of fellowship to young converts, etc., and thereby cause divisions; the Bible does not require us to do these things, therefore those who do them are responsible for the divisions that they cause.

Be careful, brethren, "it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the Living God!"

TO THE READERS OF THE F. F.

Dear Readers of the F. F.:
There are many papers now published by our brethren, some of which

I am sorry to say, do not do justice to the cause they advocate. Instead of being mediums through which to disseminate divine knowledge, they are filled with long reports of Missionary conventions, "C. W. B. M.," "C. F. M. S.," Sunday School conventions, etc., made by men who seem to think that gain is godliness, who strive to make a great show of worldly wisdom.

Such papers, run by such men, will, if supported, lead us back into the mists and fog of Babylon, from which we have scarcely emerged. Hence, it behooves every lover of the "old paths" to take a careful survey of the surroundings, and, before adopting any of the various ideas of our so-called progressionists, measure their doctrines by the divine standard, the "word of God, which liveth and abideth forever."

"Oh, yes," says one, "we know all this, but then we get so much reading matter for so little money. A large sixteen-page weekly for $1.50 to $1.75 a year."

Yes; but hold on my friend; this great amount of reading matter obtained from such papers, reminds me of a story concerning a man, who went to a tavern to get his dinner, and after drinking six or seven cups of coffee, the keeper of the tavern began to complain, whereupon the man replied: "Sir, I have to drink a great deal of water in order to get a little coffee." So with many of our religious (?) papers; it takes so much space for the secretaries of the different "Boards," that there is room for only a small portion of other matters. Those who write for these papers are requested to be brief, and if an article is somewhat lengthy by reason of its importance, it generally finds a place in the waste basket.

But enough has been said in regard to this, let us now inquire: Have we a paper among us that is a true exponent of primitive Christianity? We answer in the affirmative. Well, where is it to be found? We answer, in the city of Austin, and State of Texas. There, in the capitol of the Lone Star State, published by A. McGary and E. Hansbrough, the FIRM FOUNDATION, a paper that contends for the whole truth, as it is revealed in the word of God.

Such a paper as this, dear readers, is one that is worthy of the support of the brotherhood, and every lover of the truth should strive to give this paper a wider circulation than any other paper among us. We should also work to make it a weekly; for, in doing this, we would put the paper into the hands of a great many more, and the more we circulate this paper, the sooner will the cause of truth be established. We know that many will tell you, that it is too plain spoken; that it will offend the sects, and keep them from uniting with us: that it does not believe in Christian union, etc.

While the F. F. believes and teaches Christian union upon a divine basis, it, at the same time, opposes all the various schemes devised by designing men who teach sectarians that, all that is required of them is, to just take the name "Christian" and wear it to the exclusion of all other names. This is equivalent to saying that, though they have not been converted according to the Bible, yet, if they were sincere in what they have done, all right. Just come along, give us your hand, and go with us.

Yes, this is all very popular; but, did you not know, dear readers, that sincerity in the belief of a proposition, does not establish its correctness? If you will read the conversion of Saul of Tarsus you will find this statement verified.

Now, let every subscriber of the F. F. go to work, and get others to subscribe, and by so doing we will enable its editors to make it a weekly, besides doing a good work for the cause of Christ. So, hoping that these few words may be duly considered, and acted upon by all who desire the welfare of Zion, and the salvation of her people, I subscribe myself your true friend in Christ.

JUSTIFICATION BY FAITH.

Rom. 5: 1, Paul says: "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ." A proposition which was denied by the Judaizing teachers. It is the work and purpose of Paul in all of his epistles to draw the contrast between the law of Moses and the gospel of Christ, showing thereby to his Jewish brethren the transcendent superiority of the gospel, as a system of salvation, over the law of Moses. And to prove to the Jews that the gospel of Christ is ample and adequate to the salvation of both Jews and Gentiles without observing the requirements of Moses' imperfect law; hence the wisdom there was in the call of Paul to the apostolic college; he being educated by Gamaliel, the renowned doctor of law. Taught according to the perfect manner of the law, eminently qualified him to do the work that was so essential in harmonizing the Jews and Gentiles in one grand brotherhood in Christ. To accomplish this end, the prejudice against the Gentiles must be broken down. Hence, Paul, in contrasting the two systems, for the sake of brevity, calls the one Faith, the other Law or Works.

Dear brother, (or whoever may chance to read this), has it ever occurred to you, that Faith is a term almost unknown in the Old Testament? Have you ever examined to ascertain how many times the word, Faith, is used in all the Old Testament scriptures? I will not tell you, but simply ask, if there is not something very significant in the fact, that it is so seldom used in the Old Covenant? A premium will be paid to the person who finds the word, Faith, a third time.

To my mind there is a peculiar significance attaching to the word, Faith, it being a term peculiar to the New Covenant. It says to me that more than simple belief is comprehended. While it always embraces belief, yet in the great majority of its use in the New Testament, the entire gospel, with all of its conditions, as the system of salvation through Christ, is most surely embraced in it.

Hence, when Paul says: "Therefore, (which indicates that he has reached a conclusion from arguments previously made) being justified by faith," he simply means that the gospel is amply sufficient to justify without the observance of the law given by Moses. It is a rule in logic, that where a word is ambiguous to supply the meaning instead, good sense is the result. Try it. "Therefore being justified by the gospel, we have peace with God." The Judaizers taught, if circumcision and keeping the law was not observed, they could not be saved and have peace with God. Paul's argument was to correct this erroneous teaching, and thus to convince them that the gospel supplants the law, and is ample to bring man into the state of perfect reconciliation with God in Christ.

Lest this article grow to be too long and tiresome to the reader, I will cite a few passages in proof of my position, that Faith means the whole of the gospel, as a system, and then close, asking the reader to turn and read the scriptures cited: Rom. 3: 20-22-26-27-28. Read all this. Rom. 4: 16: read carefully on to close. Rom. 16: 26: obedience of Faith, (gospel.) Gal. 1: 23: Now preacheth the Faith (gospel) he once destroyed. Gal. 2: 15, to close of chapter. Here he says, justified by faith of Jesus Christ. If he means belief, then Christ does the believing and not man. Gal. 3: 2 to 5: Hearing of Faith, (gospel, evidently). Gal. 3: 11: No man is justified by the law. What law? Of Moses. Man is now and has ever been justified by law. The law of Moses could not justify. The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus now makes men free from sin and death.

So we see that God rules by law. Hence, conversion is not instantaneous and miraculous, but is a process of immutable and fixed laws. Twelfth verse says: "And the law is not of Faith, (gospel). The law of Moses is not of the gospel. It is no part of the gospel. The law was only the Jews' school-master, to lead them to Christ, that they might be justified by faith, (gospel).

But after that faith, (gospel), had come, they were no longer under the law. Now for complete justification by faith see 26th verse. All children of God by faith, (gospel). 27th verse: "For as many (and no more) of you as were baptized into Jesus Christ, have put on Christ." Such as these, only, are heirs according to the promise that God made, and confirmed by his oath to Abraham. Nothing short of this is scriptural justification by Faith.

You: brother for the whole truth,

R. B. TRIMBLE.

Ravenna, Texas.

LAVACCA LOTS.

It snowed here last night, but it is melting away to-day. Why? Because the sun is shining. How fast would error melt away if the truth could shine in full upon it. But like the snow, when it has protection, does not melt away so fast. The snow does not melt because of the heat of the moon, though it shines. The sun, you say, is warmer than the moon, hence melts the snow. Error will not give away before error, however much like the truth it may seem; but the truth with its warming, healing beams will drive out error. Some of our brethren are standing in the way of many, trying to persuade them that they have obeyed God, and thus prevent the rays of truth from entering into many benighted souls, who are hungering and thirsting after righteousness. Better stand aside, brethren, lest a worse thing come upon thee.

"W. P. Richardson says: 'The kingdom existed in an embryo state only.' McGary says: 'It was an invisible kingdom,' and J. W. Strode says: 'It failed entirely.'"—Christian Messenger.

In what Bro. McGary and Richardson say we are not concerned, believing they can and will take care of themselves. But as for myself, I can only say, that the seed and good ground existed. Bro. Barnett thinks that because Daniel says: "It shall never end," and that the Savior says, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it," that God is under obligation to keep it, even if they do wrong. The acute editor of the State Messenger is so obtuse as to not see any "ifs," in this language.

God says through his prophet: "And at what instant, (or time), I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom to build and to plant it; if it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then will I repeat of the 'good' wherewith I said I would benefit them."—Jeremiah 18: 2. Did He not speak good concerning "the kingdom of His Son," that the gates of hell should not prevail against it; but suppose it do evil in His sight, will He keep them anyhow? Jeremiah says, no. Do you believe it, Bro. B.? Did they not do evil in his sight, and did they not forsake His law? And did He not say, if they did, He would repent of the good He said He would benefit them?

He said He would make a new covenant with the people. Why? Because the first He broke, and why did He break it? Because the people regarded it not, saith the Lord.—Heb. 8: 9. Did the Lord say it should be an everlasting covenant? Yes; see Gen. 17: 7-13. Now we see that He broke that "old everlasting covenant" because of the wickedness of the people. And He said He would make a new one, and says of it, if they do evil in His sight, He would repent of the good He thought to do unto them.

The same prophet that prophesied of a new covenant, (see Jer. 31: 31-32), prophesied that, if they did evil He would repent of the good wherewith He said He would benefit them. But this was not the question. The question is, "is sect baptism valid?" It does not matter whether the kingdom did or did not fail during the "dark ages." The same law of pardon that was preached before the "dark ages" must be preached after.

I hunted of nights when younger than now, and there was a certain kind of a vermin which, if the dog treed, I'd whip him for it. He soon learned that, and when he would tree one of those "critters," and I came near where he was barking, he would run off and bark up another tree. Bro. B. tried the re-baptism tree, but when Bro. McGary and Jackson came near, he ran off to another tree, (perpetuity of the kingdom), thinking, perhaps, the whole thing depended on the "dark ages." He wants to know where it was during the inquisition. Well, it was with that part that had no existence—the Baptist part.

You say: "There were no Baptists for fifteen hundred years, and that the Baptists are a part of the kingdom, and so a part of the kingdom failed even in the days of the apostles." Bah! If the Baptists are a part of the kingdom, and there were no Baptists, as Bro. B. says, in the days of the apostles, of course, then a part, (the Baptist part), failed.

Daniel is barking at the same old tree, (baptismal tree.) He cut it down above ground, and finding nothing, concluded it went down the hollow, hence the scratching at the "tap root." Bro. Treat came up to see what Daniel was after, but for fear it would run out over him he fled. These brethren have dug, chopped and barked. I would kindly suggest a twist, if they have not already tried that.

The cases in Lavacca is getting along very well. Brethren, with a few exception, are all in the "Alliance." Some of them have taken unto themselves wives from among the Philistines. They look on the daughters of Gath, and see that they are fine, yes, very fine and think that by marrying one of them they will have a nice, fine sacrifice to offer unto their God, and that will atone for their crime.

By the aid of the mighty "Jo HI," good old Bro. Coombs has been enabled to lay aside his crutches, and attend an "old sister Phoebe" play party. Hop light, ladies, the cake is all dough. "The world do move." Well, no wonder, for it has a heap of help now days. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved.—Bible. Not so. You are saved before.—Baptist. We are baptized into Christ.—Bible. We are baptized into the Baptist church.—Baptist. We should rise to walk a new life.—Bible. Not so; we should rise to resume the old life.—Baptist. We are to be baptized in the name of Christ.—Bible. We are baptized in the name of Christ, too, but we rise in the name of the Baptist.—

While here at Sterne old Bro. Brill came around to see me. We are glad to meet such men as Bro. Brill. He is getting subscribers for the F. F. whenever he can.

We will preach at Tempson on next Saturday night and Sunday. Tempson is in Shelby county. The brethren want this scribe in Lavacca one more year. Our town, Hallettsville, is rapidly improving.

Glad to see sister O. G's. letter, of Alleyton, in the issue of the 15th. Write again, sister O. Would love to spend awhile with the Alleyton people—those who are akin to me.

On with the F. F. Love to all.

LETTER TO A COUSIN.

Dear Cousin:—I was much pleased to get a letter from you a few days since, a cousin that I have loved since my first acquaintance with you. You speak of going to Virginia in the spring, or back to Missouri.

My wife and I expect to go to North Carolina in March or April, and I expect she will go to Virginia in the spring or summer, whether I do or not. I expect to spend my time preaching in that old poor country; country poor and the people poor, and as they are too poor to pay much for preaching, they don't hear much, and but a small proportion of what they do hear is gospel, scripturally speaking.

The last letter I got from you was in answer to one I had written to you a short time before, (I forget the date of both), in which I said that I would be willing to go from Texas to Missouri to baptize you if you wanted to be baptized. You replied that, your minister told you that you had been baptized, and that you were all right on that subject.

Dear cousin, do you want to know whose minister I believe he is, be he whom he may? I know you call him your minister, but he is not your minister for good, but for evil, and now turn to 2 Cor., 11: 14-15, and you will find a description of him given by the Spirit of God, through the apostle Paul, and I would rather you would tell him what I have written about him than not. He knows you have never been buried with Christ in baptism, or by baptism. Rom. 6: 4, Col. 2: 12. He knows you have never been born of water and the Spirit; because a birth cannot occur under surroundings smaller than the person or thing born. See John 3: 5. The reason why the Savior used the figure of a birth is, because there is something about baptism that resembles a birth, and such a resemblance cannot be brought about by a few drops of water sprinkled or poured on an infant or adult; and the Savior says: "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

Dear cousin, I believe you know, as well as that minister, that you have never been born of water and the Spirit, you ought to know it, if you do not; but, perhaps, that same minister, or one of a similar character, has told you that it is not necessary to be baptized, that baptism is a non-essential; that is no account. Now, I believe you are a good woman, but you are not as good a woman as Cornelius was a man, and he had to be born of water and the Spirit to get into the kingdom of Christ, or become a Christian, and, if he had to, so will you, if you ever become a citizen of his kingdom; for we learn in the history of his conversion that God is no respecter of persons. Read carefully the 10th chapter of Acts of Apostles, and the first fourteen verses of the 11th chapter.

But you say, that you do not believe that baptism is necessary to salvation, and if you were to be baptized in that state of mind, it would do you no good. That is true, it would not do you any good in your present state of mind; but, if you believed the word of God, instead of the words of that minister of Satan, you would believe that it is necessary to salvation, and my object in writing to you is to get you to believe God's word.

The apostle Peter, speaking as he was guided by the Holy Spirit to three thousand who asked what they must do, replied: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name (by the authority) of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."—Acts 2: 38. Now Peter had preached the death, burial and resurrection of Christ to these people, and instead of its being the gospel, the good news, the glad tidings to them, it pricked them in their hearts, which good news never does; but when he told them the conditions with which to comply in order to be saved, or forgiven, then they gladly received his word, that was good news to them.

Yet the same kind of ministers spoken of above, told the people that the death, burial and resurrection of Christ constitute the gospel, and they do that in order to justify their ungodly practice of shaking untaught sectarians out of their sectarian parties, and, as they suppose, into the Church of Christ.

This same apostle, in writing to his brethren, and speaking of baptism, says: "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us. (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer, or seeking, of a good conscience toward God), by the resurrection of Jesus Christ."—1 Pet. 3: 20-21. The water floated Noah and family out of that old wicked, sinful world, into the new, regenerated world, separated them from their sinful, wicked enemies, and there was not a baby in that ark, when they went in nor when they came out, which is a very significant fact, though Noah's three sons had been married a year or more.

Baptism floats or translates the sinner out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son, when he is prepared for it by faith, repentance and confession; yet there is not water enough in the universe to wash one stain from the soul of an individual; but baptism is the last act of obedience that the sinner performs, which brings him to the blood of Christ, which cleanses from all sin; hence the apostle Paul says: "We are baptized into the death of Christ."—Rom. 6: 3. Because in his death his blood was shed, and baptism brings us in contact with that blood, by bringing us into his death, and that is the reason, my dear cousin, that I do not believe that you are a Christian, that you have been cleansed from sin, because you have not been brought in contact with that blood by being buried with Christ by baptism.

When I commenced writing this letter, I did not think of publishing it, but before I got through I concluded that, as there were many others in the same condition that you are; honest, but misled by false teachers, ministers of Satan, that it might be well to publish it, and, perhaps, some of them might be benefitted by reading it, as I hope you will be.

Your affectionate cousin,

E. HANBROUGH.

LETTER TO BRO. CONE.

Dear Bro. Cone:

I take the privilege of asking you a question through the columns of the FIRM FOUNDATION. I do not exaggerate when I say, there lives not a man whom I esteem more highly, "for their work's sake," than you, nor who is more anxious that "we all speak the same things, and be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment." I have reason, as you well know, to appreciate you thus highly, having received many encouragements from you, perhaps more than all other men combined; at least, your advice has made a more lasting impression—being always founded upon the word of God.

But since I left the rocky hills, and limped streams of Arkansas, and have taken up my abode in the "Lone Star State," my mind has been called to consider the acknowledgment of receiving into the fellowship of the Church, persons who were NOT baptized "for the remission of their sins." Yea, persons who had not made the good confession. Now I have entered into the investigation, in search of truth, my conclusions are, we have been acting very inconsistent with "our plea," to speak where the Bible speaks and keep silent where the Bible is silent.

And, just at this point, let me remind you of a statement you made to me, at the time you were defending the cause, by trying to hush to silence that "wicked person" After you had presented testimony as indubitable as can be offered, there were some who were wont to keep the defamer in the pulpit, you remarked that, "when a proposition is presented to my mind, I always weigh the testimony that is bearing on the proposition thoroughly, and when I reach my conclusion, I defend them, though the whole world is against me." Those may not be your exact words, but the thought is expressed.

Now, as before stated, I have given attention to the question mentioned in this letter, I have weighed the testimony that has been presented, both for and against the practice alluded to, as near as I could, studied it from every standpoint from which it has been discussed. I have reached the conclusion mentioned above, and until other evidence superior to what has so far fallen under my observation, is brought forward to vindicate the practice, I shall defend the conclusion reached, though the whole world should oppose.

But I am glad to say, that I am not alone. Our name is legion, who are determined to let those know who have builded on the sands, the danger they are in, and plead with them to no longer trust such precious interests on such unintelligent obedience, but to be builded according to the divine model, upon the Rock of Ages.

It is not my purpose to pull you into this investigation, but knowing your ability, I am anxious to hear from you, and knowing your influence, I am anxious for others to hear from you.

Question: Does the word of God teach, that persons can enter the kingdom of God without confessing Christ and being baptized, by his authority, for the remission of sins?

Hoping to receive an answer from you through the F. F., I am, as ever, "your son after the common faith."

O. H. MCGAVOCK

Bros. McGary & Hanbrough:

Please continue our paper, as we do not want to miss one number; we have one more subscriber; want to get five, if we can, before we send, so we can send paper money. We will send what we can get, in Jan., '88. Send to W. A. Hobbs, Alpine, Talladega county, Ala.

Success to the F. F. Go on in the good work, my brothers, and never shun to declare the whole counsel of God as it is in Christ Jesus, our Lord. We know this way is evil spoken of, but if the Lord is for us, who can be against us?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"To Whom It May Concern:

After having been engaged in debate for four days with Eld. T. R. Burnett, of the Christian church, I hereby certify that he has shown himself to be the fairest debater I have ever met, and he presents his doctrine with more force and ability than any man with whom I have debated.

J. C. WEAVER.
—[Christian Messenger.

Now, then, who will deny that T. R. Burnett is the "liveliest debater on the American Continent"?

Remember, that there is a reward of one hundred dollars offered for a text of Scripture that commands a man to believe in the design of baptism as a prerequisite to baptism or salvation.—Christian Messenger.

I don't want your money, and your gassing "rewards" look contemptible to sensible people—but they show that you have money on the brain. But I will furnish you a dozen passages to that effect, if you will furnish one example where an apostle ever baptized one who did not know its design, or one intimation in all their teaching, that others may baptize such.

The idea that a Christian man or woman who has been baptized into Christ, on a confession of faith in Christ, must be re-baptized into the faith of the design of baptism, is so preposterous that it seems no man or woman with intellect enough to be accountable could be deceived by it! Yet this is the delusion that is leading away hundreds of disciples in Texas at the present time.—Christian Messenger.

Yes, that is very preposterous! It is about as preposterous as the idea that men can be baptized into Christ, upon the confession of their feelings, which confession is also a denial of the plain words of Jesus, that he forgives sins in the act of baptism. If any man is teaching that persons who have been "baptized into Christ, on a confession of faith in Christ," should be "re-baptized into the faith of the design of baptism," mark that man, brethren, for he is as dangerous a heretic as the man who shaves Baptists into the Church. I am glad the Messenger is crying out against one of these preposterous practices—though this practice has not appeared yet in our section—I do wish it would speak out against the other also. But about all "accountable" men and women in this section have long since seen the preposterousness of this shaking process. I am sorry the brethren in the fields of the Messenger are being troubled with both of these heresies.

A. MCG.

"WHO MAY BE BAPTIZED?"

Under this heading Bro. Burnett gives his readers a very blinding article. In fact, the Messenger seems just now to be making a death-struggle to keep its readers ignorant of the glaring inconsistency of "our plea" for union with immersed sectarians.

It has resisted the truth at this point so bitterly, so persistently unfairly and cowardly, that it has seriously injured itself, and its only hope now is to keep its readers in the dark on this question. To this end Bro. Burnett and his co-laborers are bending their energies. They are terribly afraid to meet the question fairly and let their readers see both sides.

But we have a plan in view by which we think we can force them to an issue soon. We have now determined to spare no pains or expense in the prosecution of this plan by which the Messenger readers shall see how cowardly Bro. Burnett has acted, and how sophistical are his efforts to darken counsel. Till our plan of work in this direction is fully matured, we expect to give but little attention to what these men may write; but they may look out when we begin on them, for we intend to give their whole years crop of chaff a most thorough fanning. If Bro. Burnett really wanted his readers to know "who may be baptized," he could have informed them in few words, instead of giving his long article on it, leaving them out in the fog at its conclusion.

Now, candidly, "who may be baptized"? Where shall we find out? Is not the New Testament a sufficient rule of faith and practice on this as well as all other questions of that nature? Certainly. Well, then, who did the apostles baptize? Those who "gladly received their word," in which "repentance and remission of sins" was preached. That class may yet be baptized.

A. MCG.

GREEN-ELLIOTT CORRESPONDENCE.

KENT, PORTAGE, Co., O.,
Dec. 21, 1887.

Dear Bro. Elliott:—I read all your "Sundries" in the Leader, and yours of this week is among the very best. It carries me back to old pioneer times, when we had no colleges or theological institutions, or regular clergy among us, but every one that could preach the gospel, whether learned or unlearned, went everywhere preaching the word. I remember well when we had no meeting-houses to dedicate by professional dedicators, or successful beggars for money. We had no organs to entertain the congregations, but the natural one the Lord had given to his children. We had no hired boys, just out of college to play the clergyman and usurp the authority given to the heaven-ordained elders of the Church of God. I have lived to see nearly all things we once preached and practiced changed to the modern, fashionable, sectarian practices, where all expedients are used to entertain the people and gain thereby the recognition of the conflicting sects around us, to become popular and be considered orthodox and really one of the branches of the Church.

When I became a member of the church almost fifty years ago, I never expected or dreamed that I would live to see the change in doing the Lord's work, as it is called, that I have seen.

Well, Bro. Elliott, you know pretty well where I stand on all the innovations and departures that the Disciples run into. I am now old, and the time for my departure is at hand.

I have been fighting, as I had supposed, the good fight of faith according to the revealed will of God as contained in the gospel of Christ, but if the modern improvements in church work and worship are according to the will of God, I have only preached a partial gospel, but I will plead not guilty, from the fact that I had access to only the gospel the apostles preached under the last commission given them by our Savior. I never had any authority given me from God or the Church of Christ to preach anything not contained in the law of the Lord. And until a new law is made known to me, or to make additions to the one that God has given me, shall be proclaimed by authority from heaven, as the one I now have was, I shall hold on to the one I have, God helping me.

With kindest regards for yourself, I am your brother in Christ,
P. GREEN.

Dear Bro. Green:—To know that my humble writings have given any comfort to such a veteran soldier of the Cross as yourself, is very encouraging indeed. I have known you through your writings for a good many years, and have always regarded you as true to the gospel as the needle to the pole, and have, therefore, always had a warm place in my heart for you—as I have for every true and faithful disciple of the Lord—and I would rejoice to have a personal acquaintance with you, for I am sure I should find a kindred spirit and one with whom I would be in perfect sympathy. Though not so old as yourself, I too have lived to see nearly, or quite all the departures from the simplicity of the gospel of which you speak, and have mourned over them not a little, and things seem to be growing worse instead of better, and the Lord only knows what the result will be. The height of ambition of some of our so-called "pastors" seems to be to be considered "orthodox," and acknowledged to be so among the antagonistic sects around us, and this seems to me to be the most discouraging feature of the whole dark prospect.

Only a very short time ago, I heard one of our "representative men," while preaching a sermon on the occasion of "dedicating" a new "house of worship," declare that the sectarianism of the present day was a very mild affair compared with the sectarianism of apostolic days, and, turning to a Methodist clergyman, whom he had invited to occupy a seat on the platform, he said: "Bro. — and I are too large to let our little differences prevent our acknowledging each other as brethren. We have the same God and the same Christ, and can not afford to be separated on account of some minor matters of opinion, and we ought to be ashamed of ourselves that we ever stopped to discuss our differences. We would better discuss the things about which we are agreed. We all have the same 'one God and one Christ,' and so on ad nauseum. I noticed, however, that he always stopped short of saying we all had the "one baptism;" but he might as well have done so, for he has already stultified himself and given the gospel away, and all, apparently, for a very small mess of sectarian potage. Well, some of our brethren seem determined to travel by that route, but it will never suit me. I have the highest regard for a preacher of the gospel who is true to his calling, but for one who will compromise the truth and give it away because the people will to have it so, I can not help feeling a kind of contempt. I am fully aware that I have sins and shortcomings of my own, but I have no idea of ever being condemned for compromising the truth of God for the sake of being considered "liberal and large," for the approval of God and of my own conscience is worth more to me than the praise of men.

J. PERRY ELLIOTT.

The above taken from the Christian Leader of Jan. 17, 1888, shows clearly the rapid strides that many of our brethren are taking back toward Babylon. Yes, they have taken the back track. And now, brethren, will you look and see who it is that are in the lead in this backward movement? If you will, you will find that it is the un-learned pastors, manufactured, mostly, in our Bible Colleges. Oh, what a curse they are, that is, Bible Colleges, and the greatest mistake of Bro. Campbell's religious career was the building of Bethany College. Had the cause remained in the hands of, and been advocated by such men as Bro. Green, we would not now be cursed with missionary societies, old and young men and women societies, Sunday-school institutes and many other things unauthorized by the word of the Lord, and, of course, not sanctioned by the heavenly Father, and I have no idea he, (Green), was ever inside of a Bible College.

E. HANSBROUGH.

FAREWELL BRO. CRAWFORD.

Elder T. R. Burnett publishing a paper in Bonham, devoted to religion, politics, and fun, has repeatedly claimed to have defeated all the scribes of the FIRM FOUNDATION, and to have completely downed "the heresy of re-baptism." Some time during the summer and again in his issue of Jan. 11th, this editor bids us farewell. In his summer article his good-bye was concluded with a reference to old Bro. Crawford of hardshell fame.

The truth is, that the Elder is on a big scare, and, like the "ole gray mar" in the hardshell story, he is making a fast run down his chosen line. The story, (as I heard it,) is as follows: Old Bro. Crawford had preached for many years to one congregation. Had baptized all that had joined the church there during that time. The time came at last for a parting, as the old brother was going to move to a distant place and preach to another congregation. The parting scenes were very affecting; and the old man left with the good wishes and prayers of all.

On arriving at his new home, the first discourse he preached to his new congregation was to describe his parting with the old one. After a pathetic description of the tears shed, the blessings spoken, and the prayers offered by old, middle aged and young, he proceeded to relate his departure from the church about as follows:

"And my, brethren-ah, when I went out and got on my old gray mar; my faithful ole gray mar that had carried the gospel around for twenty years-ah, the very meeting-house that I left behind me seemed to say, farewell Bro. Crawford-ah! and as I rode along and heard the cooing of the doves, and the bleating of the sheep, and the sweet singing birds in the groves, they all seemed to say, farewell Bro. Crawford-ah! and as I rode along down the lane, an old hog darted out of a fence corner and skered my ole gray mar-ah! Yes, my ole gray mar that had been so faithful, so kind, and so true, got skered and she flung me off right in the middle of the lane-ah! Yes, my brethering, right in the middle of a mudhole-ah! And my ole gray mar went down that lane in lightning speed, with her head rared back, and her tail switching enormously from side to side-ah, and every switch of her tail, my brethering-ah, seemed to say, farewell Bro. Crawford-ah!"

How the good old brother was extricated from the mud-hole and got his "ole gray mar" again, do you want to know?

Now the application: Elder Burnett quotes the language as applicable to me. Evidently, then, I must be old Bro. Crawford, and he is the "ole gray mar" that so unceremoniously pitched the old man into the mud-hole. Now, the "ole gray mar" has had a big scare; he is afraid of the circulation of the FIRM FOUNDATION, and not being able to stand the spurring I gave him, he has (according to his own figure) pitched me into a mud-hole, and away he goes with his head up, tail switching, at double-quick time down his chosen line of succession and every switch of his tail seems to say: "Farewell Bro. Crawford-ah! I'll get thar—I am dodging and twisting and turning, but I'll get thar—so farewell Bro. Crawford ah."

Well, I respond, farewell my poor "ole gray mar," may the Lord have mercy on you and bring you back from the wilderness of sectarianism so that you may feed out of the gospel rack. J. W. JACKSON.

PROPER DIVISION OF THE WORD OF TRUTH.—No. 1.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Believing it would be of some benefit to the readers of the F. F., I will write a few articles on the Proper Division of the Word of God.

We are satisfied that a very large proportion of the divisions and perversions of God's word, and of all errors now taught and practiced in the world, arise from a failure on the part of religious teachers to rightly divide the word of truth; and hence a failure to rightly apply the teachings of the Bible. Many, who attempt to teach the Christian religion, make no distinction between dispensations and law, and thus make confusion out of the whole Bible. In the New Testament, they often take what is addressed to Christians and apply it to alien sinners—take what was written to teach Christians how to live the Christian life, and attempt to teach the alien sinners thereby how to become Christians. Such a course always keeps up confusion and discord.

The same preacher often takes language that was addressed to the apostles, in regard to their inspiration by the Holy Spirit, and apply it to all Christians at the present time. No wonder the world is in confusion on the subject of christianity. If the lawyers, and officers of the different States, were to pursue such a course as this, we should have a pretty state of affairs in law matters. Take, for example, a State that has made, at different times, three constitutions, two of which have been done away and the third now in force; now, what sort of a figure would a lawyer cut, who should claim that all these constitutions are equally in force, and should attempt to gain his case by the laws of the first or second instead of the third, or last? He would at once become a subject of ridicule and contempt among all sensible people.

Yet, in religion, preachers are every day acting upon this principle, and very few ever seem to pay any regard to it, many claim, for instance, that there has been no change in the law of pardon from the days of Cain and Abel down to the present time—claim that all are saved by faith only, and that all the people of this world, who have obtained pardon at all, have obtained it precisely the same way.

There are three distinct dispensations, covenants, or constitutions, revealed in the Bible, with laws and regulations peculiar to each. No State or government ever had three constitutions more distinct, the one from the other, than are the three dispensations or covenants revealed in the Bible. The first of these is usually called, by way of distinction, the Patriarchal dispensation; an account of that dispensation and its laws is given in the books of Genesis and Job, so far as they are given at all.

In that dispensation, there was no special priesthood. Each man could approach God direct for himself without an intervening priest, and offer his own sacrifices, acceptable to God, as did Abel, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Job; and so with all the god-fearing men of that age; no temple or tabernacle stationed at one place then, to which people had to resort with their sacrifices, but wherever they chanced to be in their journeying, they could erect altars and offer acceptable sacrifices to the Lord, as did Abraham, Jacob, and others. That dispensation lasted some twenty-five hundred years till the establishment of the law dispensation, through Moses at the foot of Mount Sinai, after the Exodus from Egypt. When this law or constitution was established, many things were entirely changed from the first dispensation. One tribe, out of the twelve tribes of Israel, was chosen as the priestly tribe; while one family out of this tribe, the family of Aaron, was chosen of God to minister about holy things. And when this order of things was established, it had to be complied with, no matter how much the people might have preferred the first or Patriarchal covenant. They were compelled to abide by the regulations of the second, or Jewish dispensation.

Your brother in Christ,
T. W. JAMES.
Blanco, Texas.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Bro. D. Wallace, of Austin, preached a few sermons at Ezell, Lavaca county, not long since, and one made the good confession and was baptized. Bro. J. W. Strode then preached for three nights, but the weather was so bad he had to quit. Many of us would like for him to come back again.

There is a Baptist who talks here occasionally. He preached from Rom. 6: 23: "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." He did not appear to pay any attention to the last part of the verse, (through Jesus Christ our Lord), but preached that it was a direct gift from heaven without conditions. He should have studied some of the following passages of Scripture before spreading himself: "Howbeit for this cause I obtained mercy that in me first Jesus Christ might show forth all long-suffering for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on him to life everlasting."—1 Tim. 1: 16. Also John 3: 15-17. By these we see we must believe to life everlasting. "When they heard these things they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life."—Acts 11: 18. By this we see we have to repent unto life. "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. 10: 10. By this we see we confess unto eternal life.

This same preacher has a good deal to say about somebody he calls Campbellites, whoever they are. He has much to say about water baptism not saving any one. Let's hear what Peter of old says about that: "Wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God), by the resurrection of Jesus Christ."—1 Pet. 3: 20-21. But then Peter is always bothering somebody with his backwoods logic and interfering in religious matters generally. He even had the assurance to rebuke the sorcerer; and, when Christ offered him the keys of the kingdom of heaven, I verily believe he had the hardihood to take them.

This same Baptist man preaches that the head may sin, but the heart cannot sin after conversion. Ah! so nice. The head can say to the legs: Come on, let's go and steal us a good fat hog. The heart may kick a little about it, but it cannot help itself, poor thing. One thief was about to join, but the preacher spoiled it all by calling for mourners. He expected to get it direct from God, but said, he had to mourn a week for it he did not want it.

I hope you will be able to bring your paper to a weekly. I will send you ten names, including those already sent. Your brother in Christ.

Dear Bro. Hansbrough:

Enclosed you will find two dollars. Please credit me with one dollar, and send the FIRM FOUNDATION to sister M. E. W., who writes a letter in F. F. of Jan. 1st, saying, that she was too poor to take the paper.

Our congregation is moving along here about as well as could be expected.

Yours for the FIRM FOUNDATION every week,

RE-BAPTISM.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

There seems to be many scribes, and great cause for many more, on the subject of re-baptism, and a perfect knowledge of God's law in regard to the same. Will you allow me to add my mite? Starting with the fact, that the philosophy of reason is good logic, we can safely say, that it is necessary for a man or woman to know God's law before they can obey it.

All this prancing around the truth by these shakers is the natural outgrowth of error, and the idea that man can obey God before he understands his commandments is an idea that was conceived in darkness, and ignorance of God's word, and is a child of the devil. Now starting out with the sectarian proposition: That, if a man is baptized to honor God, it is all right, and his baptism is valid. Let us see if a man can be baptized to honor God, if he be ignorant of God's law, and the design of baptism. If a man is baptized into Christ, and for the remission of sins, understanding what baptism is for, he honors God by his obedience to God's word, and not obedience to the think-so of some one who would destroy God's law, and establish a law that is in direct disobedience to God.

Now if a man claims to get into Christ contrary to God's way, he has thrown the lie in our heavenly Father's face and dishonors God. The same one will then submit to the ordinance of baptism, not believing it to be for the remission of sins, but because of, therefore he dishonors God again, for he denies the purpose of baptism, and throws another lie in God's face. My! Ain't they honoring God, though! when they set at naught God's revealed word, and follow the teachings of men?

I heard one from the sects, who has lived very strictly all his life, say: "I was immersed by a Methodist, and I understood the design of baptism when I was baptized, therefore my baptism is good." Not so, for if you understood the design of baptism, and then wilfully allowed yourself to be baptized into the Methodist church, knowing it to be wrong, for they do not hold baptism as essential, you united yourself with a people who are trying to get into the kingdom of heaven as a thief or robber. You were wrong in every respect, for you did wrong knowingly, and was not baptized for the remission of sins, but into the Methodist church. And God will hold all such responsible for wilful disobedience.

Light of reason, where do you shine, that you have not illuminated the dark places in some of the shakers' cretinisms?

How can a man obey God if he is ignorant of what God wants him to do?

The ones who claim fellowship with the true disciples of Christ, are getting baptism just where the sects want it, as a non-essential. They can swallow everything but baptism, very easily, but they can't see how baptism has anything to do with the salvation of a man's soul. Now, I say, if a man don't believe that it is essential, he don't believe in Christ; for if we believe in Christ we believe in his commandments. That is just the way we prove that we do believe. And Christ said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" therefore, if we believe in Christ, we believe that he meant for us to be baptized. Then when he, through the apostles, tells us what it is for, and we say, it is not for that purpose, then we prove that we do not believe in Christ, for we don't believe what he requires. If a man don't have to understand the design of baptism, what does he have to understand?

Let's see if this plan will work: Do you know who Jesus Christ was? Answer, no. Do you know what repentance means? Well, no; it's something to honor God, but I don't know. Do you know what baptism is for? No; it's some more of the Campbellite doctrine, something about being saved; but it's only to honor God, I suppose. You believe there was a Christ, don't you? Oh, yes; but I don't know what he was for. Did you repent? Well, I didn't know I had to; that is, I didn't know how: but I cried. Were you baptized? Yes. What for? The preacher said it was to honor God.

Now would you take such an one into your midst, ye who have the shaking power? No. You would say, they didn't understand who Christ was, and what his mission was for, and that they didn't repent, because they didn't know that they had to. Why not take them if they didn't know who Christ was, didn't know what repentance was, didn't know what baptism was for? Why not take them? If you take one who has said, (God has pardoned his sins before God did do it, who was baptized for something that God never commanded, why not take the other candidate for the shaking, as well as the last? Mighty miracle workers that you are, who can, by the simple twist of the wrist, as it were, shake a man out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son.

Now, what's the use of your preaching? Why don't you go around and just shake "em all in?" For if you have the power to annul the last commandment and substitute a shaking process for baptism, it necessarily follows that you could do away with faith and repentance also. May God pity those who are trying to destroy his word. May their blind eyes be opened, that they may avoid the ditch they will surely fall into, with all who follow them. That ditch yawns deep and wide and their footsteps are rapidly nearing the brink.

Brethren of the FIRM FOUNDATION,

and all ye brethren, who love and fear God, continue to serve God as he has commanded; for the word that is so rudely set aside by those who shake now, and who will shake worse when that awful day shall come, that same word will judge us all. And to those who have obeyed him, he will give a crown of righteousness. But to those who reject his word will be everlastingly banished from the presence of God. May the F. F. live long and continue to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints.

REPLY TO A BROTHER'S REQUEST.

We received a letter a few days since from a brother requesting us to write an article for the F. F. for the benefit of his parents, whose minds, he says, are confused in regard to certain things pertaining to christianity, and he thinks that similar difficulties might be removed from the minds of many others in the same way.

He states their difficulties as follows: "First, The supposed infaney of the Church." Any church that is not more than eighteen hundred years old is too young to be the right one, whether it be Roman Catholic, Episcopal, Lutheran, Baptist, Methodist, or Campbellite, and there is as much salvation in any one of them as in another, and there is no salvation in any of them. The right church is the one described by the apostle Paul in Eph. 4: 4-5, where he says there is one body, which is the church, Eph. 1: 22-23, Col. 1: 18, and one Spirit, which is the Holy Spirit, which animates or gives life to that one body, or church. The apostle James says: "The body without the Spirit is dead."—2: 26. James was talking about physical bodies; but it is true in regard to other bodies, whether scientific, political or religious. Take the democratic spirit out of the democratic body and it is dead; take the Roman Catholic spirit out of the Roman Catholic body and it is dead; and it is so with all the other sects or parties.

But, now, brethren and friends let me ask, is the Spirit that animates or gives life to the Roman Catholic church, or body, the one Spirit of which Paul speaks? If so, then those bodies or churches that have not that Spirit, are not the right ones, for there is but the one Spirit, and it dwells in and gives life but to the one body.

Again: Is the Spirit that gives life to the Episcopal church or body, the same Spirit of which Paul speaks? If it is, then those bodies or churches that have not that are not the one body, having the one Spirit of which Paul speaks. (Once more: Is the Spirit that gives life to the various Baptist bodies or churches, the Spirit of which Paul speaks? If so, how does it come that there are so many bodies, and yet but one Spirit? And the same may be asked of all the other sects or bodies.

The apostle Peter, speaking, as he was guided by the Holy Spirit, says: "But there were false prophets also among the people, (under the Patriarchal and Jewish dispensations), even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily (secretly, slyly,) shall bring in damnable heresies," (divisions).—2 Pet. 2: 1. Now, Peter says, that these different sects, divisions, or bodies, that have these different Spirits are damnable; condemned by the heavenly Father, and yet Christians? Oh, what foolishness.

What is the ground work, or foundation, of all these different sects or parties, and how are they bound together? False teaching is the foundation, and that is brought about by covetousness, or the love of money, just like all the missionary and other societies are brought about, which are as much of an abomination in the sight of God as were the sheep and cattle which were saved by king Saul, to sacrifice to God.—2 Pet., 2: 3, and 1 Sam. 15: 14.

We find that the heavenly Father recognizes or sanctions only one body or church, animated by the one Spirit, the Holy Spirit, having the one hope, which is an anchor to the soul. One Lord, (lawgiver), one faith, which comes by hearing the words of the apostles. John 17: 20; 20: 30-31; Rom. 10: 17. One baptism, a burial with Christ in water for the remission of sins, for pardon or forgiveness.

Now as it is settled by the book that there is but the one body or church of God, or Christ, the question arises, how do we get into that body or church? Do we enter it when unconscious babes by having a little water sprinkled or poured upon us? No. Do we enter it without faith? No. But faith in whom? Why, in Christ, brought about by the words or teaching of the apostles, not the teachings of uninspired men. Do we enter without repenting of our sins, which repentance is brought about by godly sorrow? No. Do we enter without making the good confession? No. Do we enter without baptism? No. For the apostle Paul says, we are baptized into him, Gal. 3: 27, Rom. 6: 3; then, if we are baptized into him, we cannot get into him, or his body, which is his church, without baptism; but then what are we baptized for? Why, according to the apostles, through whose words we are to believe in Christ, we are baptized for the remission of our sins.

Do the members of any of the sectarian bodies enter into their organization in the above described manner? No. Take the Missionary Baptists, and how are their members taught that they must enter their church? They must first be regenerated by a direct influence of the Holy Spirit on their hearts, then repent, then exercise faith, and as soon as they believe they are pardoned, or saved, they must then confess themselves, (not Christ), that they believe that God for Christ's sake has pardoned their sins, and they must then be baptized because their sins are pardoned. If that is not the teaching of the Missionary Baptists, then I am mistaken, and I have been hearing them for years.

Now, will compliance, or submission to the last named conditions, bring people into the same body or church, that compliance or submission to the first named conditions will bring them? If so; then complying with the conditions that makes a man a Free Mason will also make an Odd Fellow, or anything else of him. If the first conditions of entrance are taught by the apostles, then the last are taught by uninspired men, and can only induct people into a human organization.

Some preachers make a great ado about Campbellism, and tell their members that it is a very dangerous heresy, and that they had better not go to hear it, keep away; others, governed more by policy, being a little smarter, tell their members that Campbell started out with good motives, good intentions; that he only desired to unite the people of God from all sects; but that when he failed to do that, that he acknowledged that he had only added another sect to the number. Now any preacher that would make such a statement as that would have a good deal of trouble in sustaining his veracity, (if he has any), by showing where Campbell ever said it, or anything like it; and as Christians are commanded to pray for all men, (1 Tim. 2:2), and Peter says, "the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open to their prayers: but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil," (1 Pet. 3:12); it might be well to pray especially for such men as they, that they might be induced by the high and holy motives of the gospel to turn from their false teaching and other wickedness, and obey the Lord and be saved.

THE BUGLE BLAST OF DOCTOR REEVES.

In the Apocalyptic Guide of the Spirit of Christ. Now, seriously, do you think the Spirit of Christ influenced the Doctor to sound this Bugle blast? It seems that he and Bro. Aten look through different glasses. Bro. Aten advises: "Let them secretly alone." The Doctor attacks by misrepresentation and censure.

Now, Doctor, those you censure so severely, if in the wrong, can be exposed much better with the word of the Lord, God's measuring reed, than by abuse. Is this the kind of fruit your tree bears? "Thou that teachest that it is wrong for a man to steal, dost thou steal?"

Listen again to the Doctor: "Now there are quite a number of these brethren scattered all through this country, 'gone out from us,' but evidently not now 'of us.' To withdraw from those who 'walk disorderly,' is a plain duty; but they, by their acts, having already withdrawn from us, ought not the churches who have such nominal members, by some public action, declare such persons in disorder, and thus avoid any responsibility for the unchristian conduct of such characters?"

Now, Doctor, if you are correct, why trouble yourself longer? If they have gone out from us, and evidently are not now of us, your fears should be at an end. The four is in no danger of becoming unwholesome by the smutty wheat, as you seem to fear. You call upon Bro. McGarvey for light on this question. You thus put him under two fires. The very ones you censure, have been calling upon him to reconcile his teaching with his practice. They are in search of all the light possible, and stand ready to receive every ray emanating from that Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

You have been looking at these brethren through your telescope of faith, and while doing so, ask the following questions: "Do they pray more than other people? No. Are they especially noted for acts of christian benevolence? No. Do they contribute more for the spread of the gospel? No. On the contrary, almost to a man, they bitter-

Blanche and Sweetheart variety, whose sound he expects to hear on his trail. You need not fear, Doctor. The writers of the "F. F." are good on trail, but they prefer to select the animal. Some animals, you know, are fair and honorable, and others raise the flag of alarm, and would bluff their pursuers with an unwholesome attack. Tray, Blanche and Sweetheart prefer a retreat, and ask to be excused from the chase.

THE GOOD CONFESSION.

The "Good Confession" being a part of the faith, it becomes the bounden duty of every true and faithful man of God to most earnestly contend for it. Paul says: "But the righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise, say not in thine heart who shall ascend into heaven? (That is, to bring Christ down from above.) Or who shall descend into the deep? (That is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.) But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that is the word of faith which we preach: that if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart, man believeth unto righteousness, and, with the mouth, confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. 10:6-10.

The above quotation shows very plainly that Paul understood, and so taught the Romans, that confession with the mouth was a part of the faith once delivered unto the saints.

The apostle, Jude, wrote, exhorting the brethren to "earnestly contend for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." How can a man earnestly contend for the faith—the word of faith—and not contend for the good confession? To all, who think the confession unimportant and unnecessary, I would ask: Are you earnestly contending for the faith? I understand "the faith," "the word of faith," "the law of the Spirit," and all such expressions, to mean written, not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God, not in tables of stone, but in tables that are hearts of flesh.—2 Cor. 3:3, N.V.

Hence, Paul, in writing to the Romans in regard to the word of faith, says: "The word is nigh thee even in thy mouth and in thine heart." The confession was written by the Holy Spirit upon the hearts of the Romans: It was put in their hearts and minds first, and then they confessed with their mouths. This agrees with the teachings of Jesus, the law-giver, while he was on earth. (See Matt. 16:18.)

It is also the doctrine of the apostles who were guided by the infallible Spirit into all truth. The good confession is not preached by Methodists and Baptists. Their converts are not taught it; they know nothing about it, it is not written upon their hearts, it is not in their mouths and, since it is in order to salvation, and they do not know it, therefore, they do not obtain salvation. Our duty is plain. We should teach those ignorant sectarians "the word of faith," the gospel of their salvation. Yea, teach them to repent of their sins, (for they are sinners in the sight of God), and, according to the principles of the New Covenant, as the good confession is not written and engraven upon their hearts, teach them their duty and the honest ones will come out before men and with the mouth confess the Lord Jesus, and descend into the watery tomb, and will be there immersed into Christ, "for the remission of sins," and will arise to walk in newness of life as all servants of righteousness should do.

If you will, I will vote the balance of my days, and do all I can to get others to vote; for Paul in writing to Christians says: "Whatever you do in word or deed, do all in the name (by the authority) of the Lord Jesus."—Col. 3: 16. Now, Bro. —, your authority for voting, if you please.

I used to vote, as you know, in by-gone days, but I have learned the way of the Lord more perfectly and quit it, just as you ought to do; and while on this subject of voting, I will notice what you say about some prominent church members electioneering, (and, of course, voting,) for the saloons. Shame on such church members, voting for saloons and other things, when they claim to have put themselves under the law of the King of kings and Lord of lords; and they cannot to save their lives, find any law or authority for doing such a thing, either by command, by example, or by far-fetched inference. I have seen the latter, (inference,) tried lately and it was a total failure, worse than proving baby sprinkling. Bro. —, don't you believe that, if the Lord had wanted you to vote he would have told who and what to vote for?

You ask, what would become of the government if the anarchists, hoodlums and saloonists have the reins? I don't know what would become of it. If the Scriptures answer the question I have never found it, and if they do not, it is an untaught question, and Paul says, avoid such. 2 Tim. 2: 23.

You say the FIRM FOUNDATION is opposed to organized missionary work. When I saw you last, Bro. —, you were opposed to the use of the organ in the worship, and why? Because you did not believe it was authorized by the word of the Lord, and that was a very good reason, a better one could not be given. Now when you show me the Scriptures authorizing missionary societies, right along in the next verse I will show you the authority for using the organ and fiddle in the worship. Give us the chapter and verse, if you please.

You say, we are at war with everybody, and even differ with the brethren of our own faith and order, and look like we are striving to cause divisions. Now let me ask, are you differing with brethren of our own faith and order when you oppose the use of the organ in the worship? are you not striving to get up divisions? Oh, my brother, you ought not to do that, because Paul says, "Mark them who cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which you have learned, and avoid them." Now is it you, or those in favor of the organ, that is causing the division? You say that it is those who favor the organ. So say I; and it is those in favor of the missionary societies that get up the trouble there, and I do believe they ought to be avoided, withdrawn from, if they persist in teaching and practicing things for which they can find no authority in the word of the Lord, such as missionary societies, organs, church fairs, festivals, mysterious tea parties, etc.

In regard to Sunday Schools, I wrote an article in Jan. 1, '88, issue of the FIRM FOUNDATION setting forth my views on that subject, and I believe they are endorsed by Bro. McGary and others who write for that paper, and I refer you to that article, and if you object to it, send us your objections, and we will publish them.

You call my attention to the fact, that I went to a Bible College after I had become rather an old man, and yet the FIRM FOUNDATION opposes Bible Colleges. That is true, I did go to a Bible College in Lexington, Ky., after I had become rather an old man; but old as I was I had not learned the sinfulness attaching to such institutions. Instead of teaching the Bible, they teach their deductions about the Bible, just as the Methodists and all other sects teach their deductions or inferences in reference to the teaching of the Scriptures. I have asked the professors of that institution, who were in that college the year I was there, to tell the brethren when, where, and by whom the first Bible College was built or founded, and they were as mute as mice; they will not say one word in their defense. They know that it was centuries after the Bible was complete, and after the gospel had been preached to all nations, before such an institution ever was thought of. Surely if there ever was an age of the world when Bible Colleges were needed it was in the days of Christ and the apostles, and yet we find that the word of the Lord does not authorize them, and Paul says, that it furnishes us to all good works; that being so, Bible Colleges are a bad work, and their fruit is necessarily bad. They manufacture salaried pastors, and, as a rule, they go to old established churches, push the elders aside, that are of God's appointment, call themselves pastors, and they generally almost beardless boys. Pretty pastors, or elders are they not? And nearly all of them are in favor of the innovations and departures from God's word that are distracting and weakening our brethren, and will eventually, if persisted in, cause divisions, and whose fault will it be?

One more item and I will close this letter. You say: "I don't like Bro. McGary's style of writing, he uses the roughest language I ever read after from a preacher." The human family, in certain ages of the world, have become very wicked. For instance, just before the flood, the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the Jewish nation just before the coming of Christ, became so wicked that they were ready for destruction as a nation, and that wickedness is always preceded by a desire to have smooth things spoken unto them, deceitful things, and not the word of the Lord. See Isaiah 30: 8-11. Hence we find that the preachers are not reproving the people for their sins; it is not popular to do so. I know that preachers, and a great many others, (for instance, yourself,) are riding the whisky horse with whip and spur, and he is a bad horse, and ought to be well whipped and spurred, and driven out of the camp of Israel, and if rough language would run him out, the language you have used in your letter about him surely would have accomplished it. But it is so hard for us to see ourselves as others see us.

The whisky horse, however, is not the only bad horse in the country that needs driving out of the camp of Israel. Go to meeting next Lord's day, and you will find more men and women violating the law of the Lord in your congregation, by wearing gold and pearls, and costly array, and humps upon their bodies, and dead birds upon their heads, than you will find saloon keepers and drunkards. How shall we stop these things? Shall we use the gospel, God's power unto salvation, and thereby honor God, or use Caesar's power, the fallible law of fallible men, and thereby honor Caesar?

But we often do not see all the influences that cause preachers and editors to use rough language. I know that Bro. McGary sometimes uses language that he is afterwards sorry for; but it is "human to err, and it ought to be human to forgive." And now, brother, we received your admonition in the same spirit of kindness with which we believe you gave them.

Your brother in Christ,
E. HANSBROUGH.

A FEW THINGS.

First item: Bro. Wise, of Johnson county, is preaching for a few days for us at Enon. This noble man is mighty in the Scriptures—knowing perfectly the gospel of Christ. The characteristics of his preaching are not those of "our plea," or shaky-shake, but the gospel, the power of God, and the wisdom of God. He is a reader of the F. F.

Second item: It is the unanimous expression of the readers of the F. F. that it is THE PAPER; not an advertisement, nor a bit of the world in it. It is as different from the papers, as the Book is from the books.

Third item: And still Bro. Burnett hurls his poisonous darts at the "fimsy foundation" and McGary. Well, it is no marvel to us who know the facts in the case. Bro. Burnett is running the C. M. as a "secular business," for the money that is in it, if you please; and not knowing that the F. F. brethren are sacrificing their time and labor for the restoration of primitive Christianity, but supposing that they, too, were running a "secular business," and seeing their low price, he supposed they were trying to undersell him; hence he must down his opponents with scoff and misrepresentation, as is common in "secular business." But no one can say that Bro. B. is making merchandise of the gospel. No, sir; he has turned his "secular business" into a notion establishment—has no gospel in it. But has on hand, at all times, a full line of notions, slang and slander, novelty and novel stories, negro sermons and negro burlesques, Irish wits and wicked blasphemy, humbugs and humbug advertisements, politics and political blows, etc. Now, just think of it, "shake" a poor, starving, hungry soul in, and then feed him on such stuff as that, and, (of a truth the last state of that man is worse than the first.) Now we suggest to this adviser, who advises the brethren to re-baptize Bro. McGary, we can't baptize you by the authority of Jesus until you repent and make the good confession. Now we do not say that a man cannot be baptized by the authority of Jesus without making the confession precisely and publicly after the common formula, but we do boldly affirm by the authority of the New Testament, that a man is not baptized by the authority of Jesus, who openly and publicly renounces it, and refuses to make the confession—slandering the sacred precepts and examples as "a kind of Baptist experience," (which things we saw and heard.)

Now along this line we are reminded of that poor unguarded brother who denied his Master before the Baptist council, and betrayed Bro. Tant to shame and slander, and wilfully misrepresents Bro. McGary, and says, "They are a little party headed by McGary, and have only eight or ten preachers." This is not only false, but wilful dishonesty, knowing full well that this brotherhood is headed by CHRIST, and are led and taught by the Apostles, and will not depart from it to court favor of a Baptist cliche or clan, nor of any worldly institution, but they comprise the "one body," and I affirm (knowing whereof I speak), that a large majority of the so-called reformation and all of the restoration in the state of Texas, tully and heartily endorse, and stand identified on true Bible and New Testament teaching advocated and sustained by the FIRM FOUNDATION.

In brotherly love, my kindest regards and best wishes.

J. CLEVENGER.

FROM P. H. A.

"Shout! shout! we're gaining ground,
Glory hallelujah,
Satan's kingdom's tumbling down,
Glory hallelujah."

The tree that was "barbed," has grown afresh with a firmer, deeper root than ever, being on a FIRM FOUNDATION by the river side, its branches are spreading, and its emerald foliage glistens in the sunshine of glory; while its fruit is juicy with truth consonant with God's Holy Word, The Firm Foundation of the Christian's faith and hope. May the rich showers of God's grace fall upon it, and as it sends forth its fragrance, may it ascend as pure incense before the throne of Christ, the sole Ruler of the Universe. May its friends increase, and its foes decrease, until the world shall end. May no (k)"not" of the adversary's promptings ever grow upon its trunk, nor the slimy serpent's trail be found beneath its balmy shade. But may it prove a resting place for all those who are weary of the 'doctrines of men, and a sure and safe retreat for the creed-oppressed of "every name and order." May no false Daniel arise to prophesy evil against it, but may it thrive and thriving spread until its leaves shall heal the nations through the truth of God's word. Let the husbandmen prune closely that no dead branch may be found upon it, and clear well the ground beneath, that the "barkers" and "rooters" may retreat along the Holloway of its error. "So mote it be." P. H. A.

FROM BRO. CONNER.

Dear Bro. Hansbrough:
In a recent issue of the F. F. you made mention of having opened a letter, through mistake, from a prominent preacher, in which it was made known, that he was the champion chess player of Texas. Near the close of your remarks you express a desire to hear from the brethren, (and especially myself) to know whether or not we are ready to fall in with the improvements of modern times.
I can only answer for myself. My earnest conviction is, that the nearer we practice what the Bible teaches, the nearer will we be right. This being the case, I am not AND NEVER EXPECT TO BE ready to fall in line with the many innovations of the Nineteenth century.
Some of our brethren are like the foolish Israelites were. They wanted a king like the other nations. They were tired of God's way of doing business, and wanted to be like their neighbors. Our brethren, (the spurious ones, of course), are tired of being governed by their Master, Jesus, and they want to keep up with the times, by being like their neighbors, the sects, and introduce something in their preaching and practices to attract attention. Poor fools! They forget that our faith must not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God.
If Paul had written to the Ephesians, begging them to "walk worthy of their vocation, with meekness, lowliness, long suffering, forbearing one another in love, endeavoring to play chess at two cents moves," or had he said, when speaking of the ancient worthies: "They through chess playing subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire," etc.; or had he when instructing Timothy, told him to do the work of an evangelist, making full proof of his ability to play chess; then I would want to know the whereabouts of the champion chess player of the great state of Texas, and if I could get the money, take lessons from him, even if it did cost me two cents a move. But inasmuch as it is said in the Scriptures that, "That which is highly esteemed among men, is an abomination in the sight of God," I have not got much of a hankering in that direction.

I am satisfied if that "prominent preacher" had as hard a way of getting money as I have, he could make a better use of it than paying it to telegraph companies for amusement. For, having through unavoidable circumstances, made a failure in a crop in '86, and thereby becoming involved in debt for the necessities of life; and having, in '87, spent my time in preaching (for which I received a little over $100, which I paid on my debts, all above my actual expenses, and the tenth, which I gave to the Lord), my pile is reduced to seventy-five cents, and I am not yet out of debt, and have got myself and sister to support. So I go to work with my hands to make a living, preaching only on Saturday nights and Lord's day.

Saturday morning I start through the cold to ride twenty-five or thirty miles, hoping the brethren will contribute to my necessities; but in this I am usually disappointed. I preach as best I can, receive the congratulations of the brethren, return home empty, endeavoring to bear my burden patiently, knowing that every son the Father receiveth he chastiseth.

EAST TEXAS ITEMS.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:
Will give a few items from Eastern Texas, hoping that they may prove of interest to your readers.
We commenced the new year at Nevel's Prairie, Houston county. There is a good church here, having a membership of sixty.
Went from there to Homer, the county seat of Angelina county. The brethren at that place are in good earnest, and are composed of the best citizens. Owing to bad weather, we did not have a large attendance.
Went to Centralia, Trinity county, the fourth Sunday. A good congregation at that place. Also will preach at Groveton, county seat of Trinity county, the third Lord's day, from this on. The brethren at Groveton are not in good working order, but we hope to be able with the Lord's help to do much good there in the future.
We will evangelize in Houston, Trinity and Angelina counties this year. There is plenty of work in these three counties, in the by-ways and hedges, besides the churches that are in good working order.
All of the above named churches are self-sustaining, and another good thing is, most of the members are F. F. men.

Bro. John F. Brill is evangelizing in the eastern part of Angelina county also.

No more for the present. Will do all we can for the F. F. Wishing it all the success it deserves, which can never be rightly estimated.

Yours in Christ,
LEVI SPEER,
T. C. GOLDMAN,
Lovelady, Texas.

THE WAR ENDED—PEACE DECLARED.

THE CHRISTIAN MESSENGER CONVERTED.

The first issue of the C. M. from its new home, Dallas, declares that it will advocate the following principles:

1. "It will plead for the divine creed, the Bible, as the only confession of faith for Christians, versus the human creeds and confessions of fallible men..
 2. It will plead for the divine name of the church, and of the people of God, versus the human names and sectarian titles worn by the adherents of the sectarian parties of the present age.
 3. It will plead for the divine faith, that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God, and for the divine confession of faith, made with the mouth, as in apostolic days.
 4. It will plead for the union of all Christ's people, upon the Bible as the only creed, and for one body or church, as it was in the pure age of Christianity, versus the multifarious bodies that have been set up by men in modern times and called churches.
 5. It will plead for a hearty cooperation of all Christians in the spread of the gospel over the world, by the Lord's plan of missionary work, and will oppose all plans or schemes that look to the organization of any society or institution other than the church of Christ.
 6. It will plead for the abandonment of all things which divide Christians; that are not found in the inspired record, and for the exercise of the law of love on all points of expediency.
 7. Its motto shall be, to speak where the Bible speaks, and keep silent where the Bible is silent, and advocate those things that make for peace, and condemn the bones and issues that cause strife and alienation among the Lord's people. It will therefore "look for the old paths and walk therein," and hold tenaciously to the old landmarks, and condemn departures and innovations of every caste and character."
- We gladly welcome the Christian Messenger into the ranks of the faithful. A strict adherence to the third and sixth articles as above given, will heal the heart-burnings and divisions produced by the C. M.'s course in the past. We wonder what our "shaking" brethren will do now for a journal to do battle for them. With Bro. Burnett on the right side, we can safely and surely predict a glorious future for the cause of Christ in Texas. Again we say, welcome, brethren, to the ranks of the faithful.

J. W. JACKSON.

FROM BRO. TRIMBLE.

Dear Bro. McGary:
I am requested by Bro. J. M. Dill, a subscriber and reader of the F. F., whose postoffice address is Roberts, Hunt county, Texas, to visit that section and preach some for them, and in case I could not arrange my affairs so as to go, that I write a short article for the F. F. stating their desire to have a Christian preacher come among them, and preach the "ancient gospel." I will say that present circumstances are such that I cannot at this time respond to this "Macedonian call" for help. Is there not some one who can?

I will say, for the benefit of any "straight jacket" preacher, who is not afraid to declare the "whole counsel of God," as did Paul to the Romans, (6: 17-18), that if such a preacher is able to go over and help them, that they will find in Bro. Dill, and his estimable Christian wife, true christian hospitality. Bro. Dill is a good man. He was, before moving to Hunt county, elder of the church at Spring Hill, Denton county, Texas, and during the entire time the "corn-field" preacher labored with them. Bro. Dill's seat was never vacant, he was always there to lead the song worship.

I will close by requesting some one of our preaching brethren to respond to this call. Is there not some one in Hunt county who can visit Bro. Dill, and plant the good seed of the kingdom?

Faithfully your brother,
F. M. TRIMBLE.
Dexter, Texas.

Dear Bro. McGary:
Enclosed, find one dollar and twenty-five cents, for my paper and Zeke Jackson's ups and downs. Yours is the only paper I have seen since I left Babylon, or the Baptist thing. Please give the readers of F. F. the sword of the Spirit, as you are and have been doing, and, if you get no reward in this world, you will in the next; and that is what I am watching and waiting for. I could write a great deal, but I will refrain, as I am a poor scribe. I never wrote but one letter for publication, and Bro. Barnett suppressed about one-half of that. So good bye. Do right and fear no evil. Yours for the gospel faith.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, FEB. 15, 1888.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to the FIRM FOUNDATION, BOX 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

We thank our brethren and sisters for their matured thoughts on the great theme of salvation, though we cannot publish all articles they send us. From this time forth short, well-written articles will have the preference. Let all who have favored us in this way in the past continue to write, and we would be glad to have others to write. Boil down, brethren and sisters, and skim off the cream and send it in. Hereafter no poetry will be published unless it seems to us to be sure enough poetry, and sound Christian sentiment. Paul was always able to proclaim the truth in prose, and we hope our brethren can do so too. Good poetry will be thankfully received and cheerfully published when the sentiment suits.

VANITY.

The Austin Statesman, after mentioning the "Southern Presbyterian Church," its memorial windows, dedicated to individual members of that church, who are dead, the "commanding spire," "massive scroll work" and "eloquent Brussels carpets," has this to say:

"The building as it now stands, including the lot, is estimated to be worth $32,000. The Statesman congratulates Dr. Smoot and his people."

Of course, the secular papers, which are of the world, will always sound unstinted laudations upon such work as the above. Such emulative and vain-glorious work of those who profess to be Christians, is that walking with the world that pleases the world and retains its love and flattery. But how does it look to see those who claim to be the followers of him who "had not where to lay his head," spending $32,000 for a house in which to teach people to follow him? What has become of the poor widows and orphans in Austin? Can their hunger be satiated by glimpses of the "commanding spire" and "massive scroll work"? Does the "elegant Brussels carpet" soften the rugged path of their lives as they trudge along in the tails of poverty?

Some people seem to read Christ's word as follows: "Then shall the King say to them on his right hand, come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; for ye built me fine churches with commanding spires, memorial windows, massive scrolls and elegant Brussels carpets." But did he say it? Reader, turn to Matt. 23:32-46, and see.

We would not allude to this work of the "Southern Presbyterian church," for this is not and cannot be the church of Christ, nor any part of it, till they depart from their human doctrines and obey the gospel, but the "Christian Church" of Austin, and many other cities, are doing these same things, as far as they are able. When Christ returns, will he "and faith on the earth," or, instead, the monuments of vanity like the above described?

A. McG.

TO MANY TRUE FRIENDS.

It is very gratifying indeed to us to be able to say to the friends of the F. F., that it has, despite the hard times of the past year, added over a thousand names to its subscription list. And, that which affords us still more pleasure is, the general satisfaction, and appreciation, and promise of co-operation in the good work, expressed by our old subscribers. It is true that there are occasional complaints made at some things which have appeared in the paper, but this is regarded by us, as by no means a bad omen; but on the contrary, is a marked manifestation of true friendship and fidelity to the sound Christian principles toward which we have set our faces.

It is natural that the true friends of the fundamental principles for which the paper earnestly contends, and upon which alone apostolic christianity can be maintained, should desire to keep the columns of the F. F. as clear as possible of all objectionable expressions and features. Those who have criticised us most at this point, are the truest friends of the paper, and have proven themselves so by their constant, untiring labors to increase its circulation. We think there is far more danger, to a religious paper, in flattery than in criticism—we think we know a paper now that is being flattered to death! Of course we get some unjust criticism, which wells up from the deep fountain of bile and venom that has been stagnated by the poisonous doctrines of a human "plan." This, of course, is not pleasant or desirable, but it has not come "unawares."

But a fair criticism is an absolute necessity to the healthful growth and success of a paper that aims at a return to apostolic grounds of faith and life. Uninspired men are all fallible at best, and under the bewildering fogs of Babylon, which have overshadowed us more or less, from our cradles to this good hour, none can truly claim entire exemption from this dazing power of Satan. So, brethren and sisters, come on with your fair criticisms of all you may see, from time to time, on our columns, and from whomever the objectionable saying may proceed. And let every one who writes for our columns determine to receive all such criticism in the spirit of humble Christian submission.

This is our paper—the paper of all who are determined to strive together for the faith of the gospel as it is written. The demand still comes from every quarter for a weekly. Continue, brethren, to labor with us to this end, and we believe by the first of September we will be enabled to meet this urgent demand. There is a glorious future for the F. F., if its friends, who have been so true in the past, will hold out faithful and diligent. That glorious future will be realized, we humbly trust, and firmly believe; and it will be when those that love God truly, determine to "walk by the same rule"—"the faith once delivered to the saints"—and "withdraw themselves from those that walk disorderly."

May we keep ourselves pure, so that God will be with us. Who, then, can be against us? Let all such submit their objections, in the spirit of fairness, and they shall be heard through our columns, and if criticised by us, the criticism shall be in the same spirit. We are determined to make some improvement along this line. We feel that we owe this to those who have helped the F. F. to its present promising outlook; and above all, we owe it to him who has called us to glory and virtue.

When we see such a rapid declension from "sound doctrine" by many of our papers, as all who observe must see, we feel thankful to our heavenly Father that we began the F. F. when we did, and thankful beyond power of expression for the co-operation of our dear brothers and sisters in Christ, in the good work of building it up.

Now shall we sustain a paper that will present the Lord's plea to sinful, dying men and women? Shall we sustain one that is planted upon the Rock of Ages, and which, in defiance of all of the influences and adversities of Satan, the world, and designing men, will keep the "narrow way" and declare the whole counsel of God, and oppose all of the counselings of men that are contrary to God's counsel? If we will, then we must build up the F. F. till it will meet this demand.

Certain brethren of Texas are now raising means as a joint stock company, to publish a paper at Dallas that will, as they express it, fairly represent the Texas brotherhood. If the Texas brotherhood could be fairly represented by a paper that would contend for the whole truth, it could be fairly represented by the F. F. But since it takes a modification of the apostolic ways and means to fairly represent these brethren, they must have a "progressive" paper, and we must refuse to consort with them in the enterprise. We depend for the support of the F. F. on those only who are for the whole truth and nothing but the truth. And we do not fear that they will disappoint us.

A. McG.

LETTER FROM BRO. OWNSBY.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

We are entire strangers, only the acquaintance formed through the F. F., which some good friend has been sending to me this year. I suppose it was Bro. Hugh Gearhart, of Celina, Texas. You will please drop me a card, and if my paper is not paid for, I will send you the money. I will say, just continue my paper another year—make it a weekly if you can.

At first I paid but little attention to the F. F., and thought it a bundle of some would-be great man's ultra views, but being sent by a friend, I thought I would read it: the more I read the better I like it, and find it containing the same views I contended for twenty-seven years ago, but I found my views not endorsed by, what I thought were our great men, I concluded I must be wrong, and quit talking about it in public. Yet I never thought a man could obey God until he knew what God commanded.

Bro. McG. you are doing good, but be careful; in avoiding one extreme, you may run into another. Be careful, watch yourself, in your flight from Babylon, don't pass Jerusalem, stop there.

In twenty-seven years preaching I have found one person baptized by a Baptist that I thought was correct. I will give you the case, and ask you if I did right:

About twenty years ago I was preaching on Flat Creek, Overton county, Tenn., and an old lady, who was a pauper in our county poor-house, came and gave me her hand; at the proper time I asked her her motive in giving me her hand. She said, she had been a Baptist for forty years, but hearing me, she thought I was right and she wrong, and wanted to live with us. I questioned her as to her baptism. She said she was satisfied with that, for, said she, the man that baptized me, baptized just like you do, and I am satisfied. And, said she, when I went down into the water with the preacher he said to me and to the crowd, (which was large): I am not baptizing you into the Baptist church but into Christ. I so understood it, and so received it. I was satisfied then, and am yet. And she said, the same man, in about two weeks, rode forty miles to hear Alexander Campbell preach, and he joined him.

Bro. McG., was her baptism valid or not? If not, wherein was it wrong? Did I do right in receiving her? You may correct, and publish this if you think proper. If you think not proper, lay it aside.

I am, yours in the one hope,

J. P. OWNSBY.

Hilham, Tenn.

I thank this brother for his words of warning, which are manifestly well intended. We always try to give due weight to the counselings of our brethren, and hope never to become so lifted up with pride and self-sufficiency as to become deaf to the advice of any brother or sister who, through love of God's truth, may see proper to favor us with well intended admonition. We greatly desire to get clear away from "Rome," and in the straight road to "Jerusalem." We think the only way to do this, is to make God's word a "lamp unto our feet, and a light unto our path."

This is what we of the FIRM FOUNDATION have done; and we are determined to walk in this "light." Hence we confidently expect to keep out of the bewildering smoke of the mystic city, and in the "narrow," but "plain way" that leads to "Jerusalem." If we should get in a hurry and try to make near cuts through the woods, or take the left hand road where we find, pointing thus, "Our Plea," we might get into the fog and become so badly lost as to counter-march back in the direction of Babylon, supposing that we were hastening to "Jerusalem," like so many others are doing. But we don't like this left hand with its human sign-board. Many are advising us to take this road, and are saying all manner of evil of us because we will not, but there is not an apostolic track to be found in it; so we prefer the straight-forward way along which we find the foot-prints of Paul, Peter, James, John and other heavenly pioneers, who laid out and trod this way eighteen hundred years ago.

It is true it is not as popular nor as much traveled as the left hand, but it has the old "Jerusalem" back and the gospel blades all along; hence we know it leads to "Jerusalem." All who want to take risks and get into the fog and feel along for the mystic chain of "Baptist succession," to be with the crowd, may do so, but we of the F. F. will keep the "strait way." If this leads us to "extremes" we know not how to avoid "extremes," only by following the "fathers of the reformation," where they turn away from following the apostles: and this we consider extremely hazardous. We have heard of extremes meeting, and if these two meet in "Jerusalem that is above," no one will rejoice at it more than we, but we fear they will not.

If those who have been immersed before they were "taught" what Christ sent his apostles to "teach all nations," are in Christ, Christians, then we do them no harm in not recognizing them as such; for God will save them anyhow; and if we make the mistake it is God's mistake; for He has not enabled us through His word to know them as such. He has provided in His word for "teaching and baptizing," but not for baptizing before teaching. God, "according to his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue."—3 Pet. 1: 3. This knowledge is given to us in the Testament of His Son. This is our rule to "prove all things" by; or to "try the Spirits" by. The "wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." Yet it is by "worldly wisdom" that men decide that the untaught immersed are in Christ; for that "wisdom which is from above" says, teach and then baptize.

In conclusion I must answer the question of the brother. If the sister to whom he refers was taught and baptized by the Baptist, as the apostles of Christ taught and baptized, I must, to speak as the oracle of God speak, say that she was "baptized into Christ;" but if she was taught Baptist doctrine and baptized upon an "experience of grace," instead of upon "the good confession," fidelity to the faith delivered to the saints, as it was preached by them and recorded in the Scriptures, forces me to say, that she was not baptized into Christ.

A brother, for whom I entertain the kindest feeling, wrote an article on this question a short time ago. He represented the different religious angles from which people approach "our plea" for Christian union, by the letters A., B., C. and D. This brother tells how he would act with all of these applicants for admission into the fellowship of Christians. There is no good ground of controversy over any of these but "D." Perhaps there may be over him. I would have disposed of the others substantially as he did. He says: "I ask D. what he desires. He answers, that he has been a member of the Baptist church, but that he is not satisfied to remain longer in fellowship with a people that teach and practice things not taught in the Bible, and now that he has found a people that profess to take the Bible alone, he desires to be united with them. I ask him if he is satisfied with what he has done to become a child of God, and he says that he is; that while the Baptists taught that sins were forgiven before baptism, he was satisfied that they were not, and he was baptized to obtain forgiveness. That the Baptists seemed nearer to the Bible than any others he knew of at that time, and as he wanted to be publicly on the Lord's side, he had united with them. I make this statement, and tell my brethren that I am willing to give him my fellowship."

I have received a private letter from a prominent brother, asking if I will agree to receive such as "D."? He said, if we of the F. F. would agree to receive such, he thought he could get many who now oppose the teaching of the F. F. to come to that ground, and harmony would be restored on this question, or words to this effect. We would say to all brethren, that we would gladly have harmony; but we cannot bargain with any one upon any basis but the word of God. We would learn of "D." if he made the good confession before his baptism; if he did, we would receive him, of course, because he would have complied with the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, and we have no other way.

FROM SPENCER GRIFFIN.

Dear Editor McGary:

I see in your paper of Oct. 1, '98, a piece headed, "Evidence of Pardon," by W. M. Sublett, in which he sets forth the law of pardon very plainly. From the Scriptures he quotes it looks very plain to me; but as an inquirer after truth, I would like to know if the sects, as he calls them, have no Scripture for their way of pardoning the sinner. They certainly do have some texts that they hold, to justify their mode of preaching. If so, what are those texts, or passages?

If Mr. Sublett would find out what they rest their happy feelings upon, and explain the true meaning of these passages, he might enlighten the sinners more, if not the sects, by exposing the errors they preach. They experience religion in their feelings, but is there no other witness, have they Scripture to rest their faith in?

I don't belong to any denomination, but I hope to learn the truth, or the right way. I think your paper is a good paper; it looks like you are contending for the truth as it is in the Scriptures. My friend takes your paper and I read it. I think I will subscribe for it.

WILMETH—JARRELL DEBATE.

This debate was held in the city of Hillsboro, Hill county, Texas, beginning Jan. 9th, and closing on the night of the 18th. Notwithstanding the rain, mud and cold the debate was well attended. The proposition discussed was as follows: "The Church of which I am a member is in organization, doctrine and practice the New Testament Church." Equal time was allotted to each debater as affirmant of this proposition, Mr. Jarrell taking the lead.

Jarrell read his arguments from his book, and was very profuse in his charges of heresy against the Campbellites. He pursued the usual line of argument generally relied upon by Baptists in their efforts to establish their identity with the New Testament church. Bro. Wilmeth had no difficulty in showing the fallacy of the Baptist claims.

Bro. Wilmeth, in his affirmation, brought forward the special marks or characteristics of a New Testament church, and then showed that we as a people possess these marks, thus establishing our identity with a New Testament church.

It is not my purpose to give a detailed account of this debate as there was but little new matter introduced by either debater.

Jarrell charged upon us, that we denied "the deity of Jesus Christ," and he affirmed the old scholastic dogma "that Jesus was the veritable and eternal God." Bro. W. called his attention to the New Testament Scriptures, that "these things are written that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God;" but Jarrell persisted in teaching as Baptist doctrine, that "Jesus, born of Mary, was the veritable and eternal God." Bro. Wilmeth did not attempt to dogmatize concerning the relation of Father and Son, but showed most conclusively from the New Testament that Jesus is divine, and that He is the Son of God.

Jarrell is not a strong debater, and yet he is strong in abuse, misrepresentation, and sophistry. He is proficient in the use of slang. Bro. Wilmeth is a good debater, except in one special point. He lacks driving power. Perhaps his compassion for Jarrell induced him to be merciful.

The general expression of disinterested parties is, that Jarrell's attempt to establish identity was a complete failure. Several objected to the debate on account of the slang and abuse used. I think that Christians should never indulge in such things either in or out of debates. In the investigation of Scripture or in the discussion of religious topics we should preserve the character and dignity of Christians.

It is impossible to say just now what good will result from this debate, suffice it to say that we are fully satisfied with the work done by Bro. Wilmeth in behalf of truth, and believe that very soon good fruit will follow from his teaching.

VISIT TO THE AUSTIN CHURCH.

On the fourth Lord's day in January I visited the "Christian Church" in this city, and heard a sermon from Eld. Junius Wilkins, based upon the language of Jesus to his mother: "Know ye not that I must be about my Father's business."—Luke 2: 49.

The sermon was short, practical and pointed; the design of the speaker evidently being to arouse the congregation to a greater zeal and diligence in the work of the church. The first thought suggested was that "we should all have a business." That God had given us life, health and talent to be used and developed; that we should in imitation of Jesus use all our time and talent in the Father's business. If we fail to do this, but put our own business ahead of the Lord's, the church will fail.

The speaker then introduced his second thought, that we should be enterprising in our business, and, lastly, whatever we did, we should use dispatch. In speaking of the enterprise to be used, he said that we should "move with the age;" that we should reach out and grasp all those instrumentalities that enable us to carry the gospel to the world; and that in this work, we should seek to modify the truths of the gospel so as to influence the sinner and bring him to Christ. The speaker here disclaimed any attempt to give up or compromise the fundamental principles of Christianity, but wanted them so modified as to be acceptable to the world.

If Bro. Wilkins will not take it unkindly, I wish to offer a few suggestions: The Father's business is the only business in which we should be engaged. "Therefore be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."—1 Cor. 15: 58. In this work our enterprise must not lead us to stretch ourselves beyond the line marked out by the Master. "And if a man also strive for masteries yet is he not crowned except he strive lawfully."—3 Tim. 2: 5. And as in the above discourse, Jesus was given as an example of diligence, and enterprise, we hear Him say: "For I came down from heaven not to do mine own will but the will of him that sent me."—John 6: 46.

Our enterprising spirit then must be controlled in its operations by the will of God. As to modifying the gospel or any part of it so as to make it more acceptable to the world, I am not sure that I understood the brother. The truth as it is in Jesus is very unpalatable to sectarians, and even to many of our own brethren, and I for one do not believe in "sugar-coating" it to please them. Paul said, "for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ."—Gal. 1: 10.

Truth and error are antagonistic, there must be no truce between them. If we would be faithful soldiers we must use just the weapons Jesus gave us, and if they will turn away their ears from hearing the truth, so much the worse for them. See 2 Thes. 2: 10-12. But if the brother meant that we should in all our works strive to be more like Christ, and modify our own words and actions so as to "give none offence, neither to the Jews nor to the Gentiles, nor to the Church of God," 1 Cor. 10: 32, I agree with him. For "the servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves, in God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth."—2 Tim. 2: 24-25.

J. W. JACKSON.

SECT BAPTISM IS NOT OF FAITH.

"Whatsoever is not of faith is sin;" sect baptism is not of faith, therefore sect baptism is sin.

The word of God supplies us with everything that is included in "the faith and practice" of the Church. If the faith is right, every work or practice resulting from that faith will be right; because the practice, or the work done, is the fruit of faith. "By their fruits ye shall know them." If the word (fruit) is right or good, then the faith (tree) is good. So that the work or thing done not only shows the presence of faith, but clearly manifests the nature of it.

Now sectarians deny "that baptism is for the remission of sins." Because they cannot reason out the relation existing between baptism and remission, they deny that such relation exists. They do not believe God's word, hence have not the right faith. "But they do have faith." Yes, but it is faith in the wisdom of men; faith in tradition. The word of God says, that baptism is for the remission of sins; they do not believe this. Tradition says, that baptism is a door into the church; a sign and a seal of sins already pardoned; a christian duty—they do believe these traditions and their faith in traditions leads them to a baptism not commanded by the Lord.

God commanded Moses to rear the brazen serpent in the camp, that whosoever was bitten by a serpent might look upon it and live. What connection existed between looking and being healed. No reason here—no philosophy—but faith. God said look and live, they believed God; obeyed and were healed. So in baptism. The authority of the Lord Jesus says to the believing penitent, "be baptized and be saved;" or, "be baptized for the remission of sins." Faith in Jesus obeys the command. But sectarians do not obey because they do not believe God.

The traditions received by them and believed by them make void the word of God. The baptism they practice is "of tradition," or of reason and not of faith. May the Lord help all who are in sectarian toils to see the truth and obey the command of the Lord, "Repent and be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus for the remission of sins."

OUR PAMPHLETS.

We desire to call attention to our pamphlets, the "Oatman—McGary debate" and "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family." The demand for these books has been good and is increasing. Brethren, send for them and circulate them. While I lay no claim to kinship with Zeke, I am sure that all true Christians will find in his "Ups and downs" a clear and forcible presentation of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. You can do good by getting those who are in the toils of sectism to read this tract; they may thus be led to do as Zeke did, obey the truth. We have in contemplation another tract of about the same size in which the subsequent trials of Zeke Jackson will be set forth. Due notice will be given when published. For price of these books, look in publisher's column, eighth page.

CONTRIBUTION.

My Christian brethren, permit me to stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance. I fear that you are in the dark, in a great measure. John 9: 12.

I wish to call your attention to the church contribution, or fellowship, as I understand the contribution to be the fellowship. If I am not mistaken in my reading and understanding, we have overlooked one of the great essentials of church work. Brethren, remember that God does not bless willful disobedience, but on the other hand banishment from his presence. Then how careful we should be to be right. Let us look close for the old land marks, Jer. 6: 16-17 and Isa. 8: 20-21, and when we find them, let us walk in them.

Please read 2 Tim. 3: 16-17, for a foundation, then ask yourselves the question, is our present system of contribution, as practiced, perfect? If so, all right. If not, there must be something wrong. To keep from being too lengthy, I will give references. Please read the following Scriptures: Deut. 14: 28-29, and 26: 12-19; Neh. 10: 37-39, and 13: 10-14; Jer. 6: 9-19; Micah. 3: 8-12; Mal. 3: 8-12-18.

Brethren, don't become alarmed because I have invited your attention to the reading of the Old Testament Scriptures. They constitute one end of that great chain that is to bind old Satan. I am aware of the fact that we are not living under the law, but under grace, or gospel. I understand that the law was a shadow of better things to come, Heb. 10: 1. Now a shadow is a picture of a substance: something better than a shadow. Please read Acts 4: 33-35, and 11: 27-30; Rom. 15: 26-28; 1 Cor. 9: 14-18, 12: 25-26 and 16: 1-4; 2 Cor. 8: 1-24, and 11: 7-9; Gal. 2: 9-10; Phil. 4: 14-20.

Now I conclude that we have come to the substance of the shadow. The shadow and substance must fit, or there is something wrong. If these Scriptures do not teach differently to our practice, then I am mistaken, and ask some good brother to set me right. May God help us to understand his word, is my sincere prayer; and when we understand His revealed will, let us do it. I understand God's word to teach his children to give willingly, 2 Cor. 8: 12-15; to give equally; to give as he has prospered them, 1 Cor. 16: 2. So that one member shall not be burdened and another eased, 2 Cor. 8: 12-15; and where one member suffers, all the members suffer with that member.

How shall we suffer, feel a little sorrow, is that the way? Read James 2: 14 to last, and 3: 16-18. Faith without works is dead, being alone.

Now go with me back to the law: We find that God required his chosen people to give tithes of all they had. Mal. 3: 8-12. We find they had store-houses, Mal. 3: 10, or the treasure houses, Neh. 13: 12-14, and treasurers were appointed to take charge, because they were faithful. Where is the substance of the shadow? I ask, where is it? Just think! Brethren, I see but one way, scripturally, to give to the fellowship, and that is in the form of per cent, be it much or little, this gives equality, nothing else does.

Then, to have fellowship one with another, 1 Cor. 12: 25-26, all suffer with that member, and where one rejoices all rejoice. To illustrate, a little, it is said, they that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel, 1 Cor. 9: 14-18; it is also said, they that will not work, shall not eat, 2 Tim. 3: 10-12. Then the preacher's family must work, just the same that others work. While this is true, they need for the necessities of this life, they draw from the store-house of the congregation. No line of distinction here; and so with every other member in the fellowship of their congregation.

Preachers are not paid stated salaries, 1 Cor. 9: 18, Micah. 3: 8-12, but as they have need, and this as long as they remain in the fellowship, then it is not necessary for the preacher to study about the affairs of this life, but give himself wholly to the ministry. So we have the Scripture fulfilled: they that preach the gospel, shall live of the gospel.

Orphans are reared, fed, clothed, and schooled, by the church; this seems to be an open question: the how it shall be done. I would suggest an orphan's home, that would soon become self-sustaining. This would be a glorious work for Christians. Then parents could die with this consolation; I know that my children will be cared for. So we have the Scriptures fulfilled in this, where one member suffers, all suffer with that member, 1 Cor. 12: 25-26.

Christians are required to keep out of debt. Owe no man anything, but to love one another.—Rom. 13: 8-14. If this be God's law as I understand it is, it does away with all humanisms, such as life insurances and secret organizations, so far as the benevolent part of the work is concerned.

What say you, brethren? Read up carefully, and don't try to twist God's word into old, preconceived notions. Our object is the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. I want our able brethren to take hold of this subject, and sift it to the bottom; they can do nothing better for the cause of Christ this memorable year of our Lord, 1888. Your brother in Christ.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I am, at this writing, in a meeting at Zephyr, Texas. We have only a "handful of" brethren in this community. They, however, are able to "put ten thousand to flight," as they are of "the sort." A good work has begun in their midst, to-wit: the building of a house for the Lord. As they are few in number and poor in this world's goods, they ask the readers of the F. F. to lend us a helping hand. Send your contributions to L. B. Jones, or J. J. Driskill, Zephyr, Texas.

Precepts are useful, but practice and imitation go far beyond them; hence the importance of watching early habits, that they may be free from what is objectionable, and of keeping before our mind as much as possible the necessity of imitating the good and the wise.—Ex.

QUERIES.

We would be glad for brethren to send us reports of meetings. Write on postal cards. We have a great many articles and letters on hand that we cannot now publish for want of space. Please condense your articles, and write only on one side of your paper. Questions should be short and pointed.

J. W. JACKSON.

Is it or is it not the duty of every Christian to contribute every first day of the week?

It is.

Why is it that the teachers of your order—all that I have ever heard, precede repentance by faith? Repentance precedes faith in the Bible order. It is to my mind that a sinner must have both grief and hatred on account of sin before he can gladly receive Christ by faith as his only and all sufficient Savior. The first word of John the Baptist's preaching was "repent."—Matt. 3: 2. Christ's first words of preaching were "repent ye and believe the gospel." The twelve commissioned by Christ went out and preached that men should repent.—Mark 6: 12. Besides, if there is any verse where faith is placed before repentance in the New Testament, I have not been able to find it.

S. D. DAVIS.

Vienna, N. C.

The order in which events or things are mentioned in any given Scripture, is not always the order in which they actually occurred. As an illustration, see Acts 10: 30, 1 Tim. 3: 16. We must determine the true order of events or things from the context, parallel passages and the natural connection or dependence upon each other of the things mentioned. It is true that John the Baptist, Jesus, the Twelve and the Seventy began their preaching by saying, "repent." They were sent to the Jews, (Matt. 10: 5) et al. These people were under law to God, believed in God, and hence the call to repentance. That faith or belief is not mentioned in any verse before repentance proves nothing. There are some cases of conversion in which faith is not mentioned at all. Shall we conclude from this that faith is not necessary? No. How, then, determine the order? Paul says: "Without faith it is impossible to please God."—Heb. 11: 6. " whatsoever is not of faith is sin."—Rom 14: 23.

If repentance precedes faith it is not of faith but without faith, and hence cannot please God. Paul again says, that the goodness of God leads to repentance, Rom. 2: 4, and godly sorrow worketh repentance, 2 Cor. 7: 10. The leading and working here mentioned precede repentance, and the goodness of God, and godly sorrow, the one leading and the other working must necessarily precede repentance. How can the goodness of God lead a man to repentance unless he believes in God? and how can he believe unless he hears? and how can he hear without a preacher?—Rom. 10: 14-15. Jesus sent preachers into the world to preach the goodness of God. "Faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God."—Rom. 10: 17. Man hears God's goodness in sending Jesus to die for man, believes with all the heart, and is thus led to grieve and sorrow for sin. Man's emotional nature is never affected by a proposition that he does not believe; godly sorrow is a product of faith, and this sorrow works in us a change of will or repentance. The fruits of repentance are obedience to the will of God. Confession with the mouth of the Lord Jesus, and baptism for the remissions of sins.

A young brother asks an explanation of Eph. 2: 5: "Even when we were dead in sins, hath he quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved.)"

Paul is writing to Christians, and reminds them of the great love that God manifested, (verse 4,) "even when we were dead in sins." See Rom. 5: 8. Through this love or grace "he hath quickened us (Christians) together with Christ." How are we made alive or quickened with Christ? "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."—Rom. 6: 4-5. Again, in 8th verse, Paul says, we are dead with Christ, and in the 11th verse, alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. It is evident, then, that the quickening or making alive is in obedience.

Will you do me the favor to explain 2 Cor. 3: 3: "For as much as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God, not in tables of stone but in the fleshy tables of the heart."

1. Is the heart spoken of here the physical heart?

2. If the heart here spoken of is the mind, why did the apostles use the term, "fleshy tables of the heart"?

3. If the mind alone is meant, why did Paul use both terms in Heb. 8: 10: "Put my laws in their mind and write them in their hearts"?

J. W. Z.

Comanche, Texas.

1. No.

2. Paul was contrasting a hard substance with something that would receive an impression. For similar contrasts see Ezek. 11: 19, and 36: 26.

3. Paul uses the words "mind" and "heart" interchangeably. Heb. 8: 10, and 10: 16. When the two words are thus used together we understand "mind" to refer to our intellectual faculties; and "heart" to the affections.

Figures must never be pressed too far. It is much better always to give scriptural illustrations of our subjects. We know that laws are not literally put or written upon the mind; but are taught to us and we learn them. Hence, in plain words God's laws were taught and these people received them. For an illustration. See Ex. 4: 10-16. God selected Moses to act as Mediator between Him and Israel and to send him to Egypt to deliver them. Moses was unwilling to go, on account of his not being a good speaker. Aaron was then given to him as a mouth-piece. God told Moses "I will put words into your mouth and you shall put words into Aaron's mouth." How did God put words in Moses' mouth? "I will teach you what you shall say." God taught Moses what to say, and Moses taught Aaron, and Aaron spoke the words of God to the people. See Ex. 4: 30. So now God sent His Son into the world, and the Son selected mouth-pieces, the Apostles. God gave the words to Jesus, and Jesus to the Apostles, and the Apostles speak to man that he may hear and believe. All shall be taught of God, Isa. 2: 3, John 6: 45. Jesus the great teacher received the words from the Father (John 17: 8), and gave them to the Apostles. The Apostles speak these words to man. See 1 Cor. 2: 10-13.

Will unbelievers be resurrected?

J. W. H.

Yes. Jesus said: "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation."—John 5: 28-29. Unbelievers die and go to the grave, and as "all that are in their graves" shall come forth—be resurrected—unbelievers will be resurrected. For confirmation, please read the account of judgment in Rev. 20: 11-15; and then Rev. 21: 8, where the fate of the "unbelieving" is mentioned.

ORDER VS. CONFUSION.

"God is not the author of confusion, but of peace as in all churches of the saints."—1 Cor. 14: 33.

The above language was penned over eighteen centuries ago, by the great apostle, to the Gentiles. He wrote it to the Church of God at Corinth, and in connection with many other things that had been written by him for the correction of a certain class of evils that existed in the Church at that time, growing out of the teaching of men. Prominent among them was division. Not, however, about anything they had been taught by God. As Paul clearly teaches in the above language, that God was in no wise responsible for such a state of things; or in other words, God had not given them a system of things for their salvation, that could possibly bring about such a state of affairs, when legitimately carried out in the lives and practice of his children. But on the contrary would tend to make peace in all the assemblies of the saints.

In this article I wish to show, that nothing that God has ordained for us to walk in, could possibly beget the state of confusion and strife that exists among us to-day. Be it remembered that we, as a people, have pledged ourselves to Heaven's king, and one another, that we will take the Bible as the man of our counsel, and especially the New Testament, in all matters of faith and practice.

And now I am ready to affirm that our division does not grow out of an observance of the above rule or motto, when carried into practice by us. Let us see: 1. God has ordained that faith shall come by hearing his word, or the testimony he has furnished, and about this there is not one dissenting voice among us that I know of; so you see we are a unit at this point. And why? Because we are content with the word. To my mind there are but two main reasons for this; 1st, because God has ordained or appointed that it should be so; and, second, because we have accepted it as the truth and have stopped. Hence our oneness and joy in believing. We learn also from that that it is just as essential for us to stop at the right time and place as it is to start right in order to have peace, harmony and good will among ourselves.

2. God has ordained that men must repent or perish; and that it must succeed the faith and be preceded by a godly sorrow for past conduct or sins. That repentance is such a change of will as will result in a corresponding change in the life and conduct of the person in the future, and as far as possible correct all past wrongs. Now, so far as I know, we are one here. And if so, it is for the same reasons assigned in connection with faith.

3. We come next to the good confession that must be made with the mouth. And when any one out of a good, honest heart confesses Jesus the Christ the grand radiating center of the whole book of God, there is none to oppose. On the contrary, all are ready to say, Amen! and feel thankful to God for such noble courage in the sons and daughters of this ruined race. Here, then, we start and stop at the right place again, and hence are one. Well now we come to baptism, a thing the Lord has commanded to be done, (not as a mere formality,) but for something, and that something is for the remission of past sins, in connection with the foregoing necessary pre-requisites in their place and order. And when one from the heart has been buried with Christ in baptism, all hearts are again made to rejoice and respond amen to the glory of God. Yes, all God's children are glad with exceeding joy to welcome the new born babe into the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ. And all this grows out of the fact that we are satisfied that the divine requirements have been faithfully complied with.

We come now to notice those acts of worship he has appointed, such as the assembling ourselves on Lord's day, reading, prayer, exhortations, fellowship or contribution, singing, with melody in our hearts to the Lord. Then comes all those private and public acts, such as home reading and meditations upon God's word, family worship, training our little ones up in the teaching of the Lord, being kind to our husbands, wives, children and all with whom we meet. Then our visits to see the orphans, widows, sick and afflicted, and administer to their wants. Then comes our dealing, one with another, and with all men, which should be honest and upright before God and man. Always speaking the truth, because we love the truth, having been made free by it.

Now all these, and many more, are the heaven appointed means for man's happiness in this world and the one to come, and when we engage in them according to the letter and spirit of God's law, they tend directly to make us one in heart, thought and action. This course will exalt us here and hereafter, no division here, nothing in all this to mar the most refined Christian feeling; not one thing in all this to cool our zeal or paralyze our efforts for good; nothing, no, nothing here to keep us from loving one another with pure hearts fervently.

And why all this blessed state of affairs? Because we are walking in the Lord's ways, and the King of peace has given us a system when carried out in our lives can but make peace. God is not the author of confusion. But of this part we will say our say in the next, if you brethren think it worthy a place in the F. F.

APPEAL FOR HELP.

The Church of Christ at Hallettsville, Lavaca county, Texas, sendeth greeting to the faithful everywhere, and will say to you, that a small band of us have been meeting for three or four years in a public hall. We are trying to build us a meeting-house, we have bought and paid for a good lot and have about three hundred dollars raised; we need about that much more: we are poor and appeal to you to help us, for I am sure that a house at this point will further the Master's cause, and will be for the glory and honor of God.

My dear Christian brother or sister, when you read this, do not throw it aside, but get up and send us some freewill offering. We published an appeal for aid in the Christian Messenger, the Christian Leader, and the Oceographic Review. The result to me was astonishing; I received not one single response. Now, for one, I can say, that others do not meet with such a result every time.

I feel that such a call is for the good of our beloved Lord's cause, and, therefore, I have the boldness to again appeal to you. A small amount from each one who reads this will make us much richer and you will not feel the loss. The word of God teaches us to help one another to bear the burdens of life. Help us, and pray that we may be faithful unto death. Yours in hope of eternal life.

AN APPEAL FOR HELP.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Please allow me space in the F. F. to ask for a little help. I have been so unfortunate as to lose a leg, and have been wearing an artificial limb; but it is worn out and I can go no more until I get another. I am not able to buy one, as they cost sixty-five dollars. I ruined the one I had going into the water to baptize. In the past two years have had 169 additions to the one Body. I work for the Lord in destitute places and get very little help.

I leave the matter with the brethren to do as seems best to them. Any amount however small will be thankfully received. Send either to me, or M. C. Leslie, Willis, Texas.

Your brother in the faith,
W. H. DUKE.
Willis, Texas, Jan. 29, '88.

We hope that those who are blessed with good limbs, and who have the means, may generously respond to the appeal of our unfortunate brother.

THE BAPTISM OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

"For John truly baptized in water, but you shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit not many days hence." Just a few days after this language of the Savior was uttered, and at the glorification of him at the right hand of the Father, he received of the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, and sent it upon the apostles in compliance with a promise made to them in John 14: 16. John 16: 8, we learn from the Savior, what it was to do for the world, or the unconverted. He will convince the world of sin of righteousness and of judgment. In the ninth, tenth and eleventh verses we learn the reasons why the Spirit will do these things.

Whoever will take the Scriptures and follow the apostles to the city of Jerusalem, and remain with them until the Pentecost, and observe what the Spirit does through the apostles, cannot fail to understand how the Spirit operates on the alien sinner's heart to convert him. It filled the apostles, and through them spoke the gospel to the multitude, Acts 2: 4. They (the apostles), were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance. Their utterances then, were the utterances of the Spirit through them. But whatsoever He shall hear that shall He speak. The Spirit received or heard words of Christ. The apostles were instruments through which he operated. Christ had promised them, that he would be with them to the end of the world. This being so, we have the sentiments of Christ, by the Spirit, through the apostles, in the New Testament, until now, and the promise of the Savior that we will have them until the end of the world.

What use have we then for an abstract operation of the Spirit? Simply none. We object to it, because it makes God a partial God; supplants the gospel, and overthrows the very purpose for which the Holy Spirit was given to the apostles and Cornelius.

LETTER FROM A SISTER.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

After reading J. L. B's letter, I feel like writing a few lines to express my delight. One more good true soldier of the cross not afraid to speak for the truth and condemn the wrong. I am glad to hear him speak favorably of the F. F. That proves to me he is not ashamed of the gospel of Christ. We need more such men.

He says, "Praise me or blame me as you choose, brethren and sisters, I can but speak the truth." I do wish there were more who would speak the truth, regardless of what others may say or think. Then there would be no use for you to use sharpness in contending for the truth. It is impossible to argue or rather contend with some without sharpness. There are some objections to the F. F. because of so much contention. I think when I hear such objections, the one who objects is a little unsound.

True, I had rather all would work together in peace and love, but if they will not, then I think best to use the Scriptures as the apostles did. They did not round the points for love nor money; they presented them as they were inspired. I am glad you do the same. I never read the F. F. without feeling thankful that you, Bro. Mc., and others true and good, are able to defend the truth. Others I know are able, but they love the praise of men more than Christ; or it may be the money they have and are willing to sell their souls for. May they learn to be honest with their souls, and their God; it is of more importance than money or praise of men.

May you ever be guided by the Spirit of Christ in all you say and do, is my prayer. I have tried to get some subscribers, but failed. I am not able to be out much; hope I can do something this summer.

Yours in the one faith,
M. A. N.

PUBLISHERS' NOTES.

Bro. J. W. Strode's address is changed to Timpon, Shelby county, Texas.

When you see a blue cross on your paper, you may know your money for renewal has been received.

If you see a big RED CROSS on your paper, you may know your subscription is out. Please renew if you want the paper.

We will send the Oatman—McGary discussion, and Zeke Jackson, one copy of each, to any of our subscribers, for twenty-five cents.

The red cross denotes that the time paid for on your subscription is out, and the blue cross denotes that the money for your renewal has been received.

Bros. Levi Speer and T. C. Goldman are both located at Lovelady, Houston county, Texas, and will work together this year in evangelizing Eastern Texas and in getting subscribers for the F. F.

STAMPS.—Brethren, if you can do better than send us stamps in pay for subscription to the F. F. do so; if not, send us one and two cent stamps. We cannot use five and ten cent stamps, and we cannot sell them, so we are out that much.

Agents will please always state the amount they wish to be credited to each name in the list they send us, and specify for how long a time. Also write plainly the name, the postoffice, the county and the state of each one every time.

Brethren, remember to write only on one side of your paper when intended for publication. Many articles go to the waste basket for being written so illegibly that they cannot be read understandingly. When we have many good articles to publish, we are compelled to select those written according to printer's requirements.

We gladly inform our readers that the effort of the brethren to secure the additional number of yearly subscribers to convert the F. F. into a weekly is very encouraging. The number of subscribers required is six thousand, and we need many more to reach this number, but if the brethren will continue in the future as in the past, we are confident that we will succeed by September 1st.

ZEKE JACKSON.—"The Religious Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family" is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, upon receipt of price, ten cents per copy, or three copies for twenty-five cents. Published by McGary & Hansbrough, Austin, Texas. Send in your orders, brethren and friends, and circulate this little pamphlet. Send it to those who have been shaken into the congregations of Christians. They will see that they have been only shaken, and this will up-root them, and the word of God will cleanse them from all unrighteousness, if they will obey the gospel of Christ.

FAITH IMMEDIATELY AND FAITH MEDIATELY.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

There is too much necessary to be done for me to be idle. I came home about a week ago from a protracted meeting worn down and suffering with cold and hoarseness. And while I am resting up a little, I have concluded to drop some thoughts for your readers on the subject at the head of this article.

That faith is an immediate gift of God, as is taught by most of our neighbors, is a doctrine that is certainly false, and full of mischief. Its tendency is only evil, and that continually. If it be true, that faith is an immediate gift of God, then God gives it, not by or through any means, but directly. He bestows it on the individual as He bestowed breath and life on man at the beginning. Now, if this be so, then if all men do not have faith, it must be because God has not given it to them; and God must be a respecter of persons. But Peter says: "God is no respecter of persons."—Acts 10: 34. If faith is such a gift, there is nothing which stands between God and man through which this faith comes. God holds it until he bestows it on man. Man receives it with the knowledge that he has it.

The doctrine, if I understand it, is, there is a sensible application of the principle of faith, and that this application is conversion. By it the individual is changed from a sinner to a saint. By it he is translated from the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son. Now if I can show that this teaching is false, (for if it be not in accordance with God's word it is false,) then the pernicious consequences of it will be apparent. For if the word of the Lord sets forth faith as mediate, and there be but one faith as declared by Paul in the

Now let us examine closely the word of inspiration with regard to this matter. Let us hear first from Jesus himself. He says: "Go teach all nations." Teach them what? Hear him again: "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." When he said, "Go teach the people," he meant the very same that he did when he said, "Go preach the gospel." But he says again, "He who believes and is baptized shall be saved." He who believes what? What was taught of course. Will anyone dispute this statement? If one does, then I will ask such an one, what the Lord meant when he said: "He that believeth?" He said that he who would believe and be baptized should be saved. This belief, whatever it might be, was to save them; or else the baptism was to save them alone; but sectarians tell us that baptism will save no one. Then the faith, or belief, must do it, or else Jesus was entirely mistaken as to their being saved at all. But he says; "He who believes and is baptized shall be saved." The apostle Paul tells us that, "Without faith it is impossible to please God."—Heb. xi: 6. Will any one be saved who does not please God? If not, then this belief here spoken of by Jesus must be the faith that pleases God. Did anybody believe the gospel when the apostles preached it? And were any saved? Did not three thousand gladly receive Peter's word when he preached the gospel; and were they not saved? Who will deny? Was not their glad reception of the word the very belief that Jesus had reference to in the commission? Who will say, no? Was this belief immediate or mediate? Certainly it came through the testimony of the apostles and prophets, as this testimony stood between God and the people, and, therefore, their faith was through the medium of the word.

But further, Jesus told his disciples to tarry in the city of Jerusalem until they were indued with power from on high. What did he mean? Can we ascertain exactly? Certainly we can. Because he said that he would send on them the promise of the Father and that they should be baptized in the Holy Spirit not many days hence. He had also told them that they should receive the Spirit of truth. Now let us attend to the facts of this matter as recorded by Luke in the second chapter of Acts. And facts cannot be passed by. They are inflexible things:

Now when the day of Pentecost came, Luke tells us that there were at Jerusalem Jews, devout men from every nation under heaven. Now the apostles were indued with the power from heaven on that occasion to preach the gospel in truth. This will not be denied. Now when this was done, the apostles began to speak in other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance. The people said, are not all these Galileans, and how do we hear them speaking every man in his own language wherein he was born?

Now this Spirit indued them with the power to speak to all these people in their own language. What for? Because it was necessary that each individual should not only hear, but understand what the apostles said. The language of the apostles was to convey intelligence to the minds of those who heard. Without such intelligence they could not believe that good news which was called the gospel. Now I say that no man can give one single reason for this endowment of tongues, save that it was to make the conditions of salvation clear and intelligible to all persons. This idea is clearly expressed by John when he declares that the things written of Jesus were written that the people might believe that he was the Christ the Son of the living God, and believing this, they might have life through his name. This belief that he was Christ, was the belief which enabled them to have life in connection with his name. Did God ever give this belief without testimony? Does he make a difference and give some faith without testimony and others through testimony? Can there be given any facts showing that he does, or any reason why he should?

The apostle Paul makes this matter very clear in the tenth chapter of Romans. He says: The righteousness of faith speaks on this wise, say not in thine heart who shall ascend into heaven? (That is to bring Christ down from above.) Or, who shall descend into the deep? (That is to bring Christ up again from the dead.) But what saith it? Saith what? The righteousness of faith. It says: The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith which we preach; that if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.

Here the apostle declares that we are not to call for Christ from heaven, nor yet ask that he should be raised from the dead. We believe that he arose from the dead and ascended to heaven. We have this on testimony and it is a part of our faith. We have the word of faith and in this word of faith is declared that we should confess Christ with the mouth and believe that God raised him from the dead. If we do this we are then ready to accept the salvation offered, and may be saved by it. If Jesus be the Son of God, then all is safe. His words are all true and his commands all of authority. The individual who accepts not Christ cannot be a believer in Christ.

Now I want to say, that if it be a truth that faith comes by hearing the word of God, every one is mistaken who believes that he gets faith as an immediate gift of God. If he waits and prays for such faith, and rejects the faith of the gospel when he claims to receive faith and remission of sins, as is customary among the denominations, is it true, or is it false? If it be true, then one of two other things is true. Either God has two plans of salvation, or else the apostles and Jesus have taught us wrong. If it be false, then it certainly will save no one. It is a mistake. But hundreds and thousands of people are depending on this very immediate faith. They are going to benches and altars and praying for this kind of faith, and if God does not give that kind of faith, they are being deceived. If false teaching and deception will save the people, why did the Holy Spirit enable the apostles to speak the truth to all the people in their own tongue wherein they were born? Will some one tell me? Was not Peter sent to tell Cornelius words whereby he and his house should be saved? How would words save him otherwise than by directing him to do something? Were Peter's words to act on him like a charm and thus free him from his sin as a medicine would cure a disease? No; he was to be instructed what to do for his cure. Paul was told by the Lord to arise and go into Damascus where it should be told him what he must do. Peter told the multitude at Jerusalem to do something before they should receive anything. God is the author of our faith since he has given us the means of faith.

John says: "And this is his commandment, that we should believe on the name of his Son, Jesus Christ."—1 John 3: 23. "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is begotten of God." "For whatsoever is begotten of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater; for this is the witness of God which he hath testified of his Son. He that believeth on the Son hath the witness in himself; he that believeth not God, hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son."—1 John 5: 10. The testimony that God has given of his Son is in a record then. That record is written, as John says, in his record of Jesus, that we may believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of the living God, and that believing we may have life through his name. The believing of this record is what John calls being begotten of God. This certainly is the true and genuine faith. There is no other kind of faith described in God's book, and it is always predicated of God's word.

The solemn question is, can the people be saved outside and apart from God's ordinances? If they can, then of what account are his ordinances? If they cannot, then should not everything be done that can be done to get the people to abandon this false teaching? Ought we not to wholly repudiate everything of the kind, and not acquiesce in any means of leading the people astray? The FIRM FOUNDATION will wholly repudiate all sectarian and teach the whole truth. What other paper will? We shall see.

May God bless all lovers of the truth.

OLD AND NEW ISSUE.

There is certainly a recognized difference between ignorance and unbelief. "I do not know," is an expression that differs much from the expression, "I do not believe." Who would not prefer the chance of an ignorant Hottentot, in the future state, to that of a scoffing infidel who dwells in a Christian land? If the Hottentot's chance for salvation is the least doubtful, what may be said of the chance of the unbeliever in a land of Bibles?

It is admitted that many people are immersed in ignorance of its design. Whether such an immersion is valid, is a question, in the minds of many, while many others regard such an immersion a genuine Christian baptism. There is another class who emphatically deny the validity of a baptism received by one who is ignorant of its design. Of these three classes, it is but candor to admit that each of them contains some good and wise men. So far as the authority of all these good and wise men is concerned, the validity of a baptism received in ignorance of its design, to say the least of it, is doubtful.

But some one is ready to inquire, does an appeal to these good and wise men settle anything? By no means; but shows that the question is still unsettled, and if unsettled, still open for discussion.

If sectarian baptism (which is a baptism received in ignorance of its design) is invalid, it will be admitted that it should be repudiated. If sectarian baptism is doubtful, (in my judgment), it should be repudiated for this reason. God certainly will not condemn any one for demonstrating his choice of a certainty for an uncertainty rather than to live and die in doubt. If sectarian baptism is valid, it will be admitted that it should not be repudiated. So it appears that there are two reasons for rejecting baptism in ignorance, to one for acceptance. If any one attempts to show the errors of those who reject sectarian baptism, and fails to show the validity of such baptism he can make no other stand, his best gun is spiked, his last line is broken. If any one attempts to show the error of those who accept sectarian baptism, and should fail to show that such baptism was certainly invalid, he may retreat to another strong position where he will find many heavy guns well manned.

He may first make his stand on the invalid baptism line of defence, and if unsuccessful, may fall back and mass all his forces on his second position with an increase of munitions and an increase of soldiers. Is it reasonable to suppose that the stronger position has the greater amount of truth about it, or is it reasonable to say, the weaker the position the greater the truth? But let us get the two together and send call reason out to inspection.

Baptism received with or in ignorance. Baptism received with knowledge. If ignorance is preferred by reason, it seems to me that I should repudiate all reason, or prefer to be a goose rather than a man. Baptism for the remission of sins, so says Peter. Baptism to honor God, so says sanctified common sense (?) Is "to honor God" equal to "for remission of sins?" If not, sanctified common sense is not equal to Peter. Do Baptists baptize to honor God? They do not baptize to save any one. They do not baptize for any of the benefits that lie between their regeneration (that precedes repentance and faith) and the highest gift of the spirit they claim. They do not baptize for salvation, for regeneration, for the gift of the spirit, for the power to preserve or to remove total depravity. I believe they do claim to baptize into church privileges. This church privilege of partaking of the emblems which they say are not necessary to salvation. Is God a tyrant, that it should please him to see his poor creatures work for nothing? That which does not please God, does not honor him. But more on the subject of honoring God after a bit.

So far I, have been attending to the old issue, which is, ignorance of the design of baptism does not invalidate it. Peter says, baptism is for the remission of sins—baptism saves us. Two men, A. and B. want to be baptized. A says, I do not know what baptism is for. B. says, I do not believe that baptism is for remission of sins. Now bring A. and B. close together. A. says, I do not know. B. says, I do not believe. A. and B. are not exactly alike, are they? What is the difference between them? One is ignorant, the other is an unbeliever. They do not need the same thing. A. needs to be taught, B. needs to be convinced.

There are two characters of men in the world that I never had, and never will have, the chance to baptize. One of these characters will allow a sectarian to baptize him, the other character will receive it from the hands of none. Jesus said, he was the Son of God. Jesus said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." C. says, I do not believe what Jesus said when he said, "I am the Son of God." D. says, I do not believe what Jesus said when he said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Would it be justice to call C. an infidel, and pronounce D. a believer. What is there to support the validity of D's baptism that would not come to the support of C's. If some called and sent preacher should put C. under the water would it come any nearer being a scriptural baptism than it would have been had he accidentally fallen off a log into the creek?

Just here, some preacher who preaches the technical gospel now and then, only, may accuse me of misrepresenting D. by suppressing a part of his faith; alleging, that D. really does believe in Christ. Then I must review my position. I will bring C. and D. back together again.

C. says, I neither believe in Christ nor what he says. D. says, I do believe in Christ, but I do not believe in what he says. The difference, then, appears to be, that C. is an infidel and is honest; while D. is as much an infidel as C. and adds a fib to his infidelity.

But, stop there, says some Rose Hill circuit-rider. It is not what Christ says that D. disbelieves, but the things he disbelieves is what you say. Then I will review again. Jesus says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." I say, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." I once heard of a mean slave who was full of trickery and shrewdness, whose master told him: "Sam, you are a black rascal." The negro replied: "That's so, master, but when black Tom calls me a rascal, I call him a liar." If this mean slave could get black Tom between him and his master he would call his master a liar. In like manner, if D. can get me between him and the Savior he calls the Savior a liar.

The difference between C. and D. is about this: C. is an infidel and frankly owns up, while D. is a cowardly whelp trying to hide his infidelity behind some one else.

In conclusion I will say, that no other point of Baptist doctrine is labored more than that respecting the design of baptism. They are quite particular in teaching their converts that baptism is not for the remission of sins. So their baptisms are not administered to those who are simply ignorant of its true design, but to those especially who are taught to deny the truth of plain statements of Scripture. If God ordained baptism for the remission of sins, is it honoring Him to change the purpose of His ordinance? Honor bright, please.

W. P. RICHARDSON.

PROPER DIVISION OF THE WORD OF TRUTH.—No. 2.

Dear Bro. McGary:

We find in the 16th chapter of Numbers, that a number of persons not of the family of Aaron, did rebel against the priestly arrangements which God had made, and complained at Moses and Aaron for having taken so much upon themselves, and claiming that all the people were holy and that all could burn incense as well as Aaron and his family, and so obstinate were they in this matter that the earth opened her mouth and swallowed up Korah, Dathan and Abiram and their families, and then fire came out and slew two hundred men; who, though not of the family of Aaron, attempted to burn incense before the Lord and God commanded that they should take their censers and make a covering for the altar of them to be a sign to the children of Israel afterwards that no stranger should approach the altar to burn incense thereon after the death of these parties.

The Jewish people came to Moses and Aaron and complained to them that they had slain the Lord's people and on account of this complaint, a plague broke out among them by which fourteen thousand and seven hundred more died, so great was the anger of the Lord against those that rebelled against this new order of things, and attempted to act according to the first dispensation. God then directed twelve rods to be cut, one for each tribe, and laid up in the tabernacle as a witness before the Lord. And the next day it was found that the rod of Aaron, for the tribe of Levi, had budded, bloomed and borne an almond, thus putting the matter forever at rest, and showing the people that they were compelled to submit to the Lord's arrangements whether they preferred them or not.

What folly is it for men to claim that there has been no change of law from Cain and Abel on down, with such facts as the above before them. After the establishment of the law dispensation, and the selection of the priestly family, none could obtain pardon except by bringing the sin offering according to the law and the offering of the blood by the priest. It was not so in the first covenant, each patriarch was his own priest and could make his offering direct to God.

All the books of the Old Testament, save Genesis and Job, pertain in some way to the Jewish dispensation. The law is given in Exodus and Leviticus and mostly repeated in Deuteronomy. Then Joshua comes in, giving an account of the twelve tribes in the land of Canaan, embracing a period of forty years, then the book of Judges, two books of Samuel, two of the Kings and two Chronicles, bringing the history of the Jews down to their captivity. The books of the Prophets were all written during the law dispensation and pertain chiefly to the dealings of God with the Jews under this law dispensation, containing at the same time many prophecies concerning Christ and his mission.

Hence, those desiring to acquaint themselves with the patriarchal covenant must read Genesis and Job, while those wishing to study the Jewish institution in all its parts must read the remaining books of the Old Testament.

Whenever a new covenant is established, the preceding one is done away with, except such parts of the old as may be transferred to the new. The patriarchal order of things as such was taken away when the law of Moses was established. True, many of the same things were retained, but these were binding, not because they were in the first constitution, but because they were in the new one. There are many things in the law dispensation that were not known to the patriarchal one at all, and all these additional requisitions had to be complied with and those who refused them rejected God and were in turn rejected by him. One of the new requisitions was that their offerings had to be made at the tabernacle, while under the first they could make them anywhere.

T. W. JAMES.

DISCOURSE.

"For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith, as it is written, the just shall live by faith."—Rom. 1: 16-17.

The gospel of Christ is the power of God. As gospel means good news, had Paul not qualified the term with "of Christ," we might have been at a loss to know what good news it is that is the power of God. Or had he even said, the gospel of Christ is a power of God unto salvation, we would be left to infer that God had more ways than one of saving people. But the language will not admit of but one gospel and it is the only way God saves people; sane minded people; this does not include idiots and infants. What then is the gospel of Christ? It is composed of three sets of items and each of these are subdivided into three parts, making nine in all.

1. We have the three facts, viz: the death, burial and resurrection. These are facts of the gospel and must be believed; but these may be believed and still it may not save, simply because the other sets of items are not complied with; for faith alone cannot save. Jas. 2: 14-20.

2. The commands of the gospel are three, viz: repentance, confession and immersion in water. These must be obeyed. We cannot believe them, but we can do them. We can believe the facts and obey the commands; hence belief is more a result than an act of obedience. It does not require an act to believe, for it will usually result from testimony unless an effort is made to resist it. I mean a belief of facts; there is another phase to faith that I will notice directly.

3. We have three promises, viz: pardon of all past sins; the comforting guidance of the Holy Spirit through the word of God, and eternal life after this present life is over, on condition of our faithfulness to the end. These are to be received and enjoyed in eternity. But that phase of faith referred to, was what gave Abraham the preference and rank of father of all the faithful, viz: faith in the promise of God. "He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief, but was strong in faith giving God the glory, and being fully persuaded that what He promised He was also able to perform; therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness. Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead."—Rom. 4: 20-24. What was it that he staggered not at? the facts? No. Any one believes that, says the sects, and so say I. What then was it that Abraham believed that made God appoint him father of all the faithful? Hear it, O ye nations. It was the promises of God; and it is not written for his sake alone that it was imputed to him, but for us also if we believe: what, the facts? No, the promises. The facts must be believed, of course, but all agree that that is not sufficient to save, but the trouble is, in knowing how to supply the deficiency; and hence some have manufactured what they call evangelical faith as distinct from what they call historic faith. Why call it by that name? Why not call it as the Bible does, faith in facts, and faith in promises? Many of them who believe the facts do not believe the promises of God, but believe something God has not promised, a falsehood that they might all be damned. 2 Thes. 2: 11-12.

If to believe a lie will condemn a person, what will become of him who manufactures them? Will somebody say? Paul said that the reason why he was not ashamed of the gospel of Christ is, that "therein the righteousness of God is revealed from faith to faith." How is that, Paul? From faith in facts to faith in promises. While it is expected that a man believe the facts it is also expected that he believe the promises. "No man can come to God unless he believes that he is, and, (not only that,) but that He is a rewarder of those who diligently seek Him."—Heb. 11: 6.

We must not be contented with believing that He is, (the fact) but must believe that He is a rewarder, the promise part of the gospel also. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith; the righteousness of God that Jesus fulfilled when he was baptized, stands in the midst of God's facts and promises, therein is his righteousness revealed.

The third part gives life or vitality to the two preceding. His death and burial would perfect nothing without the resurrection. So also the third of the commands gives prominence to the two preceding and to the third of the facts. For if a man obey not the gospel, Christ will take vengeance upon him when he shall be revealed from heaven in flaming fire.

The third of the third class gives vitality and importance to the two preceding and to the other two classes also. For what good will his death, burial and resurrection do if we miss heaven? Or what will all that do, and a repentance, confession and baptism do, if we miss heaven? Or what good will all the parts of the gospel, do, and all the first principles, viz: to initiate us into God's family; yea, moreover, what good the remission of past sins do, or the comforting influences of the Holy Spirit, which is the Christian Scriptures, if we fail to buckle on the armor of God, fight His battles, gain a victory over the world, the flesh and the Devil?

May we not then fear lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it. Heb. 4: 1, "Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom it was first preached entered not in because of unbelief (in His promise); let us labor therefore to enter into that rest lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief." Heb. 4: 6-11, "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God."

If we take the armor of God and fight the good fight of faith and lay hold of eternal glory, we can at last have it to say with the apostle Paul: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course; I have kept the faith, and henceforth there is a crown of righteousness laid up for me, which the Lord the righteous judge will give me at that day, and not to me only, but to all who love his appearing." May we all confide in His promises, obey His commands, and thus have a right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gate into the City, is my prayer. Amen.

JAR. L. CASTLEMAN.

THE COMMISSION.

"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." What shall we preach, Savior, what is the gospel? "You tarry here at Jerusalem until you are endued with power from on high." "Go teach all nations baptizing them into the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit—teaching them to observe all things that I have commanded you." What shall we teach them, Savior? "I will send the Holy Spirit and he will guide you into all truth and bring all things to your remembrance that I have commanded you." "For thus it is written and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and rise again the third day, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations beginning at Jerusalem."

How can we preach repentance and remission of sins, Savior? Repentance is something for the people to do, and remission of sins is something for God to do, and how can we preach it? Now if the record had stopped here, the present state of confusion and the above questions would have been a very reasonable result. But, come, let us step up with the open record before us to the fulfillment of the Savior's promise, and see the apostles start on this grand commission, and hear them speak as the Spirit gives them utterance, guides them into all truth and brings all things to their remembrance.

Hear the Holy Spirit preach the gospel—teach all nations—preach repentance and remission of sins in the name—by the authority of Jesus. And just as Paul said he preached to the Corinthians (1 Cor.

15), precisely so Peter delivers unto them first of all; not first and last and all, but "first of all," how that Christ died and was buried, and that he arose again the third day, according to the Scriptures—according to the prophets.

This being confirmed by the miraculous gift of tongues, and clear quotation and application of the prophets, they, like Nicodemus, knew the teaching came from God, and they believed it with all their hearts. How much faith did they have? Just as much faith as they had gospel. Faith comes by hearing, and they believe all they have heard. What do they believe? They believe the three facts of the death, burial and resurrection of Christ; and we are told by those claiming to be preachers of the gospel, that these three facts constitute the gospel in full.

Paul told the Ephesians that, they were saved after that they had heard the gospel of their salvation, Eph. 1: 13. Were these Pentecostians saved when they heard and believed the three facts? No; but just the opposite, they were condemned, and not a word of salvation for them.

Again, the gospel contains the word of reconciliation, 2 Cor. 5: 14-19. Were they reconciled by the word that they heard? No; but just the opposite, irreconciled, guilty murderers, pierced in their wicked hearts by the gospel they had heard—doomed to eternal ruin without the word of reconciliation—the gospel of their salvation.

But, says our error advocate, they must obey the gospel. Very well; we will try them on that. "When they heard this they were pierced in their hearts and cried out, men and brethren, what shall we do?" And Peter commanded them to obey the gospel. Do they do it? No. Can they do it? No. If any one thinks they could, let him tell how. Could Peter tell them how to obey the three facts? He did not and could not; because the gospel of commands and obedience had not been preached. Moreover, if they could have obeyed, they could not have attained to remission; because they had not repented—"repentance and remission of sins" had not yet been preached.

Now can any one fail to see the inconsistent falsity and perversion of the gospel in asserting and contending and teaching that these three facts constitute the whole gospel. No one believes it, but as one error begets others, some are forced by error to thus preach it. But let falsehoods and teachings of men stand aside, and let us hear the apostles declare the whole counsel of God—preach the gospel according to the commission, according to the directions of the Holy Spirit.

CONVERTED TO A THEORY.

On my recent trip I met with one of our prominent preachers who is opposed to the "extreme grounds" of the FIRM FOUNDATION. While in conversation with this brother he passed some compliments upon my writings in the paper, which he says he has been reading from the first. But he said: "Bro. McGary, many of the brethren think you were converted to a theory and have not the love of God in your heart."

Now I want to write some upon this matter to try to give these brethren a better understanding and wider and more liberal view of the work I have been engaged in for the past three years. I desire to accomplish something in this line that the F. F., which I verily believe to be the only true exponent of the whole counsel of God among our papers, may not in the future, have to encounter so much prejudice. I shall say things in this that I said to that brother, and, perhaps, some things I did not say to him, as I shall direct my remarks to this whole class of brethren and not to this particular one.

Well, I was converted to a theory; but I claim to love God and His truth and all my fellow-beings, and especially those who have earnestly enlisted as soldiers of the cross under the banner of King Jesus. I was converted to the apostolic theory! There are theories of men for which I have no use, and against which I must earnestly contend, or prove myself recreant to the obligations that devolve on me as a faithful soldier. Now I freely confess that I have no love in my heart for these theories of men. But love for these and love for God, I consider quite different things. These brethren who are wedded to these human theories are apt to be slow at recognizing the presence of "love for God in the heart" of any man who arrays himself against their exalted human theories. While we would be pleased to enjoy the esteem of all of our brethren and sisters, we cannot afford to court it at the expense of the apostolic theory, or, "the faith once delivered to the saints." When we "were of the world" we could afford to seek to please the world; "but if I yet pleased men I should not be the servant of Christ."

I beg my brethren to hear my experience, or rather a brief statement of the "theory" to which I was converted and by which I expect to stand till death. My experience for putting my own case forward is, that these brethren misjudge me, and say all manner of evil against the F. F. and its work, because of my connection with the paper and its good work.

Of course, my statement of the case will not be received by many of this class of brethren, but will be judged by their low standard of self-interest and individual advancement. But "what man knoweth the things of man, save the spirit of man which is in him?"

I once regarded the Bible and all of the wondrous things said in it to have been done by Jesus, and the story of his resurrection, as supremely mythical. A friend to whom I expressed these views handed me the Campbell and Owen debate. I read it very carefully, and the very profound arguments of Bro. Campbell met every doubt I had ever entertained and broke down and wholly eradicated my unbelief. Before this, I cared nothing for the preaching of any man. My limited education had been acquired at a Methodist school, McKenzie's Institute, which I attended two years. My father was a Methodist. These two years gave me an insight into Methodism—at whose fanatical altar I bowed many a time, to go away more confused and disgusted than benefited. These two years—during which I saw about one hundred and seventy-five mourning bench operations—paved and smoothed the way to that condition of mind I was in when I began to read the Campbell and Owen debate. But after I read this debate and believed in Jesus as a divine man, and that he actually rose up from the grave and met and conferred with men who knew him before his death, I became intensely interested in the Bible. I heard Bro. Harry Hamilton preach and learned the plan of salvation. I read it from the Scriptures and saw that Bro. Hamilton preached this plan just as the apostles had preached it. I loved this plan of truth and salvation because I saw it was the authority of Jesus Christ, and because it was so simple and easy to be understood. Hence I submitted to its conditions. I have ever since studied hard the apostolic lessons given to us in their epistles.

This is the "theory" to which I am converted. I love this theory and desire above all things to put it into practice in every particular, and to see all others do the same. I love all who are striving to do this, even if they do often stumble through the infirmities of the flesh. I love the apostles for braving the difficulties and dangers, and even death, to deliver this heaven-born theory of salvation to their fallen fellow-men. I love the Lord Jesus Christ for giving his life and pouring out his blood to show lost man the gate-way from under the dark clouds of the grave into "the air" where he may meet his Lord and be forever with him and the redeemed host of God. I love God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ for His grace and mercy in the gift of His Son to lead us from a state of despair to the happy hope revealed in his gospel. Is there any love of God in this? Then I can claim to love God. If this is an empty "theory," then these brethren may be right in saying I am only converted to a theory, and have no love of God in my heart. But I have something else to say, something to admit, a confession: I "hate" all the "doctrines" and theories of men that seek to be recognized that they may modify this apostolic theory to which I have been converted. I "hate" every innovation upon the plan of the Lord for the salvation of the sinner, and every one introduced into the worship prescribed by the word of God, and every one that would in any way change, or tend to change the Lord's plan in any way, or breed strife and division among brethren, "contrary to the doctrine we have learned." Yes, I hate all of these as my Master "hated the doctrine of the Nicolaitanes."

Brethren, I have shown you to what "theory" I have been converted, what I love and what I "hate." I do not claim to have been "baptized with the Holy Ghost."

But now in conclusion, I must mention another matter that came up between the brother mentioned above and myself, in this same conversation. He said: "Bro. McGary, there is a little matter I am bothered about. The brethren at — want me to go there and preach for them. They use the organ and you know I don't countenance the organ. Now shall I write them that I will come if they will not use the organ while I am there?" I told him I would not, but that I would write them to appoint the meeting, and I would go and show the evil of the organ, and if they would consent to my teaching and put the organ out forever, I would then commence preaching to aliens to bring them into the church; but that, if they would not accept my teaching against the organ, I would not try to add any to such a body, but would point out their apostate tendency to the world. This brother said he would not do this. He had too much love for his brethren to get up a war over the organ.

Well, now, this is a kind of love I confess I have not, and I am glad of it. I admire some things about this brother, but I must say that I do not believe the devil has any objection whatever to such love as that. Brethren, there is much in this world that passes for the love of God and the Spirit of Christ, that I do not believe will pass for the genuine love and spirit of holiness at the bar of God. And I verily believe there is much that is called unholy warfare by those who seek popularity, that God will recognize and reward as the "labor of love." If not, I see not how the apostles are to stand at that great day. We are to "try the Spirits," but not by human standards.

I mean no harm to the brother I have mentioned, and if he desires to reply to what I have said, he may do so without giving his name to the public, since he dreads publicity so much. Let him write to me and I will publish what he may desire to say in reply to this.

This principle of love which forbids that this brother shall antagonize his brethren by preaching against the use of the organ in the worship of God, which he knows is an innovation upon the true worship, would forbid him to preach to them against the practice of baby sprinkling, if they were all having their babies sprinkled! Or if they were all dancing, or playing cards, or wallowing in the gutter from drunkenness, this principle strictly adhered to, would pad-lock his mouth against all these things! I do not imbibe such a principle of love from studying God's word. In it I learn my duty to "preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine." A. MCG.

LET US BE CONSISTENT.

In the Leader of Jan. 31st, Bro. Holloway gives the readers of that paper a lengthy article on "What Is It to Obey the Gospel of Christ?"

It is not our intention to review that article, but we feel it our duty to drop a few thoughts about it.

Bro. Rowe has thoroughly committed himself to the opposite view to the one now strenuously contended for in this article by Bro. Holloway. These diverse views of Bro. Rowe and Bro. Holloway, who are editors of the same paper, have a vital and fundamental bearing upon the kingdom of God. If these brethren can work together in harmony through the same paper, differing as they do on this question, then they could do so, it seems to me, if one of them should begin to advocate baby sprinkling as valid Christian baptism.

Bro. Rowe believes that immersed sectarians are as far from the kingdom of God as sprinkled sectarians. While Bro. Holloway believes that their immersion puts them into the kingdom. This, then, is a difference really as broad as the grounds between christianity and any ism in the world, even Mohammedanism. I shall undertake to prove this if it is called in question. If Bro. Rowe permits Bro. Holloway's article to pass without a review of it before his readers, then I shall conclude that Bro. McCarty's strictures some time ago against Bro. Rowe were not far wrong.

A word now with Bro. Holloway and I will have devoted all of the space I can afford to such wild and reckless teaching on the part of one who claims to be laboring to restore the ancient order of teaching and practice. Bro. H. concludes from his premises, that when Paul preached to aliens, "he did not preach baptism for the remission of sins."

Well, if Paul did not, then Bro. Holloway ought not to do so either. Bro. H., do you ever preach baptism for the remission of sins to aliens? If Paul did not, as you hold, and you do, then you preach too much, or Paul did not preach enough! How is it? If Paul did not preach what you do, that is, if you preach more than he did, you preach "another gospel," and Paul said, "If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." You had better cease preaching baptism for the remission of sins, if you have not already done so; for if Paul did not preach it, it seems to be rather dangerous to do so, in the face of Paul's warning.

Why should a man run this risk, anyway, since it is wholly unnecessary and foolish to preach anything that it is not necessary for the people to believe? If the three facts constitute the gospel, and baptism for the remission of sins is no part of the gospel, then there is no authority for preaching anything but the three facts, because Christ only authorizes preaching the gospel. He never sent any one to preach anything but the gospel; hence he never sent any one to preach more than the three facts! According to this Peter was not authorized by Christ to utter the language of Acts 2: 38.

I heard a "Holiness" preacher, at Austin, a few days ago, say that Peter's language beyond the 36th verse of the 2nd of Acts, was not inspired! Now if Bro. Holloway is right, this "Holiness" preacher was right! But I cannot take this view of it. As Christ also authorizes the preaching of "repentance and remission of sins, in his name among all nations"—see Luke 24: 47. I must conclude that baptism for the remission of sins is a part of the gospel. In Acts 8: 35, we learn that Philip "preached Jesus" unto the eunuch. And in the 36th verse we see that under this preaching he said, "see, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" So then, the preaching of baptism for the remission of sins comes in when we "preach Jesus."

Now will Bro. Holloway tell us how much difference there is in preaching the gospel, and "preaching Jesus?"

But I must desist. I know some one who has more time than I have will ventilate his article. I hope though he will give some light on what we have written. Brethren, let us be consistent and we may be right; but if we are inconsistent we may know we are wrong.

THE MESSENGER SHAKES NO MORE!

From Bro. Jackson we learn that the "Christian Messenger is converted."

We have carefully read and weighed the declaration of principles which Bro. Jackson says the Messenger enunciated in its first issue from Dallas. We heartily join Bro. Jackson in welcoming the Christian Messenger "to the ranks of the faithful."

The plan of work the Messenger has laid out, under seven different heads, covers the ground precisely that the FIRM FOUNDATION started out upon, and has firmly adhered to, and by the grace of God intends to remain upon and defend "till death us do part." Hence the "hatchet is buried" between the C. M. and the F. F. Right where that "hatchet" lies, which ought to have been "the sword of the Spirit" instead of the carnal weapon it has been, we cheerfully bury deep, all of the wounds and sores it has inflicted on our side, and raise right over the spot, the Christian Messenger's "motto:" "to speak where the Bible speaks, and keep silent where the Bible is silent, and advocate those things that make for peace, and condemn the bones and issues that cause strife and alienation among the Lord's people. It will, therefore, look for the old paths and walk therein, and hold tenaciously to the old landmarks, and condemn departures and innovations of every caste and character."

Amen, amen! amen!! "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

WILL HE ANSWER!

If a brother is afraid to enter into a fair discussion of a question upon which he differs with another, but dodges around the issue and blows about "cutting the tap root" and "taking the bark off," which acts the most sinfully, the one who calls such a brother a "rooter and bark-er," or the one who publishes his brother as a bad man and a wilful falsifier, and writes a long article to try to fasten his charges, and then refuses to publish his brother's reply to his charges? Will Bro. Daniel Sommer please answer?

OUR PAMPHLETS.

We desire to call attention to our pamphlets, the "Outman—McGary debate" and "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family." The demand for these books has been good and is increasing. Brethren, send for them and circulate them. While I lay no claim to kinship with Zeke, I am sure that all true Christians will find in his "Ups and downs" a clear and forcible presentation of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. You can do good by getting those who are in the toils of sectarianism to read this tract; they may thus be led to do as Zeke did, obey the truth. We have in contemplation another tract of about the same size in which the subsequent trials of Zeke Jackson will be set forth. Due notice will be given when published. For price of these books, look in publisher's column, eighth page.

ORDER VS. CONFUSION.

Things that make peace, and those things that cause division among the children of God.

And when I say the children of God, I mean those who have obeyed God according to his law, or the gospel as preached by the apostles. For there is no other way known to man by divine authority of becoming his children. Now as to those who have never grounded their arms of rebellion or submitted to his authority by obeying from the heart his law of induction into his kingdom, in the order and for the purpose he has required, they will do less harm divided than united. For if united they would have greater power for opposing the truth than they do, as they are.

I used to think it very strange, in reading after Bro. Franklin and others, who, when speaking of the necessity of God's children being one, seemed to include all sects of every shape and grade, so they had been in water. Now if the church becomes divided, there is a necessity for showing them that it is wrong for Christians to be divided. But who are Christians in the Bible sense of the term? Those who are Christ's. Who are Christ's? Those who obey him. Heb. 5: 9.

Paul said he became the author of eternal salvation: to whom? Answer: Unto all who obey HIM! Yes, just that number and no more, so far as we know. But to the subject:

In my former article I made an effort to show that nothing God had ordained for his children to walk in could possibly cause division among them, when legitimately carried into practice. Now this being so, and yet finding division, strife, envy and alienation, in heart and practice among us, I ask the question, from whence doth it come? Bro. James, will you please answer? Yes. "But if ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts glory not and lie not against the truth." Don't begin to say that God's law or the truth contained therein when put into practice, causes such a state of things. Well, my brother, from whence doth this state of things come, or who is the father of it? "This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish." Well then, if it is devilish, I ask, who is the father of it? The devil. And hence the admonition, Glory not in what you are doing and lie not by imputing it to truth, or by saying it is a work the truth requires at our hands. Bro. James, what is the legitimate effects produced by the work of the devil among God's children? "For where envying and strife is there is confusion and every evil work."—Jas. 3: 14-15-16.

Now I wish to try the tree by its fruit; and so I will begin naming the things that cause division among us:

1. The use of the organ.
 2. The missionary society.
 3. The state meetings.
 4. An unconverted choir to do the singing.
 5. Belonging to the Masonic fraternity.
 6. Belonging to the Alliance.
 7. Belonging to the Knights of Labor.
 8. Becoming Odd Fellows.
 9. Joining temperance societies.
 10. By unlawful marriages.
 11. By giving support and countenance to sectarianism.
 12. An unscriptural set of men calling themselves pastors.
 13. An uninspired eldership.
 14. Ice-cream suppers.
 15. Engaging in unlawful callings or business pursuits for the sake of money.
 16. God's children holding office in Caesar's kingdom.
 17. Christians voting.
 18. Sunday School conventions. I might say schools and conventions in the popular acceptance of the term.
 19. The woman's aid society.
 20. Preachers dubbing one another with the words Doctor and Rev. in order to ape and keep pace with a gang of sectarian bigots.
 21. An unlawful spirit of rivalry among preachers for fat places, or places of ease.
 22. An un-Christ-like spirit of envy and jealousy among our editors, the very men who are shaping the public mind among our brethren.
 23. The calling on those who have never obeyed the Lord to lead in prayer and conclude the service of the Lord.
 24. The bowing by preachers and members to the command of a sectarian clergy to the mourner's bench exercises.
 25. State evangelists.
 26. State Sunday School superintendents.
 27. The receiving of unconverted persons into the church by the shake of the hand.
- What more shall I say? for the time would fail me, it does appear to name them all. Now these are a few of the many things that are causing confusion, and out of that, division among us. As Paul has vindicated God in the matter by saying He is not the author of confusion, or, in other words, a system when carried into practice by His children, that would begot any such state of confusion and alienation among his children or churches. May I not ask, from whence cometh the system, the practice of which is "playing such sad havoc in the Lord's family? Yes, among us that claim to be the Church of Christ.

James has informed us that, where there is envying and strife, there is confusion and every evil work, and that such a state of affairs is not from above or from God. That being so, I ask, from whence do they come? And to this question there can be but one answer. Will you hear it? Upon the authority of the Son of God, ye are of your father, the devil.—John 8: 44.

Now it occurs to my mind that I have a sufficient number of charges in the bill of indictment upon which to try and condemn the guilty.

Your brother in Christ,

J. R. LANE.

SECOND LETTER TO A COUSIN.

My Dear Cousin:

I received your letter dated Feb. 2nd, in reply to mine in the FIRM FOUNDATION of Feb. 1st, in due time, and take this method of replying to some of its contents, believing that other readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION may be benefited as well as yourself.

You say: "Your kind and interesting letter came in due time. Cousin Elijah, I read and re-read it, and have thought a great deal about what you have written to me. I have looked carefully over our confession of faith, and it all seems to be Scripture and full of good things, and I know you have the Scripture for all you have said, and you don't know how you have troubled me."

If your confession of faith says things which seem to be Scriptural, as you say, and what I have said you know is Scriptural, as you say, then, if we do not say the same things, your confession must say things that are wrong, and that is the reason, I suppose, you are so troubled.

My dear cousin, I would not hold to a confession of faith, or anything else, that would bring me into trouble when I compared them with the teaching of God's word.

You say: "I pray to God to guide me in the right way, if I am not right." Cousin —, the apostle Peter says that the "divine power of God (which is his gospel) has given us all things that pertain to life and godliness."—2 Peter 1: 3. And Paul says: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished to all good works, 2 Tim. 3: 17; and further says, "That from a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus"—2 Tim. 3: 15.

The above Scriptures being true what is the use of your confession of faith? and why should you be praying to God to guide you into the right way, when he has already told you the right way in his word? Do you not believe, if he were to speak to you, or influence you in any way outside of, or apart from his word, that it would be in accordance with his word? If it were not, he would not be a truthful God.

You further say: "At the time I joined the church, I insisted on immersion, but was not encouraged in it, but told that it was only a form, and of no material importance, and the argument seemed so plausible that I thought it was all right." My dear cousin, you never joined the Church, but only a human organization, and as a proof of it, you nor your preacher can find what you call the church in the Bible, in any one or more of its various branches.

You say: "You were told that baptism was only a form and of no material importance." The flood was only a form, too, but it was a terrible form to the disobedient, it destroyed them and saved Noah and his family; and Peter says, "The like figure whereunto baptism doth also now save us, (not the putting away the filth of the flesh, but the answer (or seeking) of a good conscience toward God) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ."—1 Peter 3: 21.

Now does a few drops of water sprinkled or poured upon an individual remind us of that flood that destroyed the wicked and saved Noah and his family? There is something about baptism like the flood, an overwhelming, and when submitted to by the sinner, having believed, repented and confessed the Savior, is an act of obedience that brings him to where God separates his sins from him, or forgives him, as the waters of the flood separated Noah from the old, wicked world and brought him into the new, regenerated world.

And the Savior says: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believes and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16: 15-16. And we find that the apostles in their preaching under that commission, told three thousand believers to repent and be baptized in the name (or by the authority) of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins.—Acts 2: 38. They were to do these things in order to their being separated from their sins: hence baptism doth now save us. Now in view of the above quotations would any man who has the regard for God's word that he should have, call baptism a form, a mere form, as I have heard them do so often?

There was nothing poisonous, or wrong about the fruit that Adam and Eve ate in the Garden of Eden, but it was disobedience to God's command. Now if disobedience will separate us from God, may not obedience unite us to Him? and that is exactly what baptism, as an act of obedience does, hence the apostle speaking of baptism says, "If we have been united (N. V.) in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection," Rom. 6: 5. As much as to say, if we have not been united in the likeness of his death, we shall not be in the likeness of his resurrection. Yet baptism is a non-essential, no account. Oh what mischief the ministers of Satan have done in this world.

You say your daughter —, said: "Tell cousin Elijah I feel very comfortable in my belief, if I could only live up to what I believe." She also said, "The thief was pardoned on the cross and he was not immersed, and Christ said, 'to-day thou shalt be with me in paradise,' and further says, 'I have been baptized, but not immersed.'"

I never read of such a thing in the Bible, as a person being baptized and not immersed, and if she or her good minister ever did, I would like her or him to give me chapter and verse. But how does she know that the thief was not baptized. He may have been baptized by John the Baptist. But if he was, it did him no good, as he went to stealing afterwards, did not bring forth the fruit meet for repentance; but he repented on the cross, did all that he could do; and if she wants to be saved like the thief, she must go to stealing, get on the cross by the side of the Savior, then repent of her sins, and ask him to remember her when he comes into his kingdom.

The Savior while on earth had power to forgive sins, (Matt. 9: 6,) but he never gave a law of pardon until after he had submitted to death, was buried and arose from the grave, the law of Moses was still in force. Christ took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross, and had he given a law of pardon before that, he would have been a rebel against his Father's government, and would have deserved to die. But Paul says, "The priesthood being changed there is made of necessity a change also of the law."—Heb. 7: 12. But when was the priesthood changed? Why, the same apostle says: "For if he (Christ) were on earth he should not be a priest, seeing that there are priests that offer gifts according to the law (of Moses).—Heb. 8: 4.

Then the priesthood was changed when he offered his broken, sacrificed body to his Father, and then the law was changed, and the thief was saved without baptism, and so was Abraham; because Christ had not then been made King of kings and Lord of lords; had not given a law of pardon; but if either of them had lived under the reign of Christ, they would not have been saved without baptism, for the law-giver says, he that believes and is baptized shall be saved.

The Savior was baptized in the River Jordan, Mark 1: 9-10; and Philip and the eunuch went down into and came up out of the water, and the baptism occurred between the going down into and the coming up out of the water, Acts 8:

38-39; and Paul says, we are buried with him (Christ) by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.—Rom. 6: 4, Col. 2: 12.

Now, if cousin — has believed in her Savior with all her heart, has repented of her sins, has confessed him with her mouth as the eunuch did, and been buried in water for the remission of her sins, then she has been baptized. If not, she has not, all the false teaching that she has received to the contrary notwithstanding.

She also wants to know what is to become of the religion of all that are sprinkled if they are lost? I cannot answer that question, because it is not taught in the word of the Lord; and Paul says: "Foolish and unlearned or untaught questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes."—2 Tim. 2: 23. But this I know, the Savior says, "Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be who go in thereat: because strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."—Matt. 7: 13-14. And in the next verse he warns us against false prophets or teachers. Peter says: "But there were false prophets among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies (divisions)."

Now if these different parties, or divisions, are damnable, then I do not believe that many who hold to the false teaching that makes these divisions will get to heaven.

Oh, my dear cousin, let us turn away from the doctrines and commandments of men, learn and do the will of the Lord. (not of man,) and be saved.

I first thought I would let my paper stop until I could send the money, but I can't bear the idea, as we have such little teaching here, except false. So please continue it, and I will send your money soon. Please consider me a life time subscriber, or until you change your teaching to error. I hope the times will never be so hard as to let me see the red cross again. May God bless you is my everyday prayer.

QUERIES.

We would be glad for brethren to send us reports of meetings. Write on postal cards. We have a great many articles and letters on hand that we cannot now publish for want of space. Please condense your articles, and write only on one side of your paper. Questions should be short and pointed.

Please explain Matt. 5: 39-42.

W. H. BICKLE.

A contrast is here presented between the principle of retaliation as taught in the law: "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth;" and the principle of patient endurance of evil, as taught by Jesus. The same lesson is taught by the apostles: "but if when you do well and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God."—1 Peter 2: 20. The only retaliation taught under the reign of Christ is this: "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head."—Rom. 12: 20.

BRO. MCGARY:

Do you claim that no Baptist preacher ever has baptized for the remission of sins? J. R. LANE. Cherokee, Texas.

No, I make no such claim. But I do not believe there is a Baptist preacher in the world who teaches the true design of baptism, or baptizes upon the Scriptural confession—"the good confession." There are a great many men, who, to defend their dogmas of shaking Baptists into the congregation offer many apologies for Baptist preachers; but these Baptist preachers do not thank them for their pains nor accept their apologies; for they know there is no foundation, in fact, for them.

A. MCG.

1. Please explain the differences in Names, as we have people here who claim that there is nothing in a name and that we can worship God in any name.

2. We have a man almost persuaded to be a Christian, but he has been immersed by the Methodists; he claims that his baptism is legal, because he was immersed. Please explain why his baptism is not Scriptural.

A SISTER.

Unlontown, W. Va.

1. Names are given to societies in order to indicate the peculiar characteristics of the society or body. Names are not given in order to confer the quality or characteristic, but are given because the quality already exists. Some names indicate relationship; some official character, and some individual character. The names given to the people of God in the Bible are as follows: Saints, that is holy persons; disciples, learners or followers; brethren, members of one family or body. The new name, and the only new name found in the New Testament, Christian, is given to those who believe in and obey Christ.—Acts. 11: 26. It signifies anointed ones, and is peculiarly appropriate. Paul condemns the wearing of human names as a species of carnality.—1 Cor. 3: 1-5. The names of the various religious bodies, Baptist, Methodist, Episcopal, and Presbyterian are indicative of the peculiar tenets held and taught by each one. If there is nothing in a name, why will they not give up their human names and take the Bible names? Simply because they will not give up the peculiar dogmas taught by their respective denominations. A blessing was pronounced upon the Church at Philadelphia (Rev. 3: 7-8) because it had not denied Christ. The religious bodies of to-day deny the name of Christ. They first deny His word, then they teach traditions, and their names indicate the peculiar dogma upon which they are built.

2. Methodist baptism is not Scriptural baptism because it does not fill the requirements. The gentleman referred to thinks his baptism valid simply because he chose immersion instead of sprinkling. He has, as he thinks, the scriptural mode. Any one can easily test the validity of his or her baptism by an appeal to the Scriptures. We find that it must be preceded by Faith, a belief of the whole heart, Acts 8: 37; repentance, Acts 2: 38; the good confession, Acts 8: 37, Rom. 10: 8-10; and that it is for or in order to the remission of sins, Acts 2: 38, and 22: 16. If the gentleman will choose to obey the form of doctrine thus taught, he will then be in Christ and not in the Methodist church.

J. W. J.

In Matt. 16: 19, with reference to the "keys of the kingdom," how are we to understand the plural form, "keys?"

1. Did Peter use one key, or keys, on the day of Pentecost? If he used more than one, how did he use them?

2. If one key was used in order to admit believing penitents into the kingdom, how was another key used, and for what purpose?

3. Was there but one key used at the house of Cornelius, or keys?

S. A. KNOX.

A key or keys, either singular or plural, were anciently used as a symbol of government, authority or power. To say that the plural form indicates number obscures the metaphor. There are not two, three, or more keys to the kingdom of heaven, or church of Christ; nor is Jesus here, (Matt. 16: 19,) speaking of two kingdoms, or two churches. The symbol means power or authority, and not two, three, or more powers. However, if some will still insist that the plural form is significant of two or more things, I will suggest the following as scriptural: That "keys" here signifies authority and knowledge; and these two things will fill the complement of that power promised to the apostles.

1. Authority. Jesus promised that they should be rulers in His kingdom, Matt. 19: 28. Ambassadors for Him, 2 Cor. 5: 20.

2. Knowledge. The lawyers had taken away the key of knowledge, Luke 11: 52. Jesus promised to send the Holy Spirit to His apostles, that he might guide them into all truth, bring all things to their remembrance, and show them things to come, etc.—John 16: 7-13.

Now it is very evident that in order for the apostles to have power to admit persons into the kingdom of heaven, and to govern them properly after they are in the kingdom, they must not only have knowledge and authority but be enabled to use both so as to accomplish God's will. To this end Jesus commanded them to tarry in Jerusalem till they received power from on high, (Luke 24: 49). This power they received on Pentecost when the Holy Spirit came upon them, Acts 1: 8, and 2: 3-4. Then, through the knowledge given them, Peter unlocked the prophecies of Joel and David and showed their fulfillment, and then revealed to them that God had made Jesus both Lord and Christ. And when the multitude cried out, "what shall we do?" they spoke with authority, commanding certain things to be done in the name of Jesus for the remission of sins.

In the exercise of the apostolic office, whether in preaching the gospel for the admission of Jews and Gentiles into the kingdom; or in "binding and loosing" certain things to the disciples in the kingdom, as in Acts 15: 12-29, we always see included in that power exercised by them, and symbolized by the keys, these two things authority and knowledge.

Please explain the following Scriptures: "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book, but these are written that you might believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God, and that believing you might have life through his name."—John 20: 30-31.

Does believing these things now produce faith in the heart or mind of the individual, or will it apply to us at this day and time? If so, and an individual begins with the New Testament Scriptures at Matthew first reading the entire gospel, and it produces faith, and they have also found, Mark 16: 16, "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," and obey the form of doctrine, will they be made free from sin? or will not having read Acts 2: 38 invalidate their baptism?

W. W. JACOB.

We do not see how language could be plainer than John 20: 30-31. Perhaps some do not understand that, "might have life through his name," is equivalent to, might have life through his authority. We consider the language as applicable to us as to people of that or any other age. But we do not believe, that believing that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God is the full measure of faith. When one believes that Jesus is the Christ, he is then ready to hear His terms of salvation. The law of Christ weighs nothing with one who does not believe he is the rightful law-giver.

We do not see that it would be necessary for one to read Acts 2: 38, if he had read and believed Mark 16: 16. Does the brother not know that Acts 2: 38, only tells in different words the same thing that Mark 16: 16 tells? Every act done that is pleasing to God must be of faith. Faith comes by hearing the word of God; but it is not such a hearing as some people give when they read Mark 16: 16, and then turn and are immersed, believing what man has said, which is contrary to this language of God. How can a man believe Mark 16: 16, and yet believe that he is to be saved and then baptized? He could believe that God and Satan are one just as easily.

Then when a man is baptized for any other purpose than that taught by the word of God, his act is not of faith, hence is not pleasing to God, however much men may rejoice over it. Peter, in Acts 2: 38, only stated the terms authorized in Mark 16: 16. But many preachers imagine themselves wiser than Peter and change Christ's terms, by telling people that baptism has no connection with salvation; and that they must be saved by a stroke of irresistible grace, and must then be baptized because they are saved. This is making God a liar. I hope our brother does not sanction such ungodliness.

A. MCG.

FROM A BAPTIST.

McGary & Hansbrough,

DEAR SIR:—Kindly see after my account and send me the amount due, as I want to pay up and stop the paper.

I am a Baptist, and from the way your preachers up here do, I am all right, as they only shake us a little and take us in. And you say, a Christian ought not to vote or hold office; and, if that be so, I think there is no use of following you further, as I am sure if we were to give up voting to the Devil, he would run it to suit himself and land us all in hell.

D. W. MCG.

Troy, Texas, Feb. 10, '88.

The preachers referred to above, we suppose to be Christian preachers. Their practice can be accounted for in one of three ways:

1. It is in accordance with the rule given in the New Testament for building material upon the one Foundation; or,

2. They are ignorant of the New Testament "law of pardon;" or,

3. They are deceived by the popular theory "that there are good christians in all churches."

Paul says to the Christians: "Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing."—Phil. 2: 16. Will you accept the divine rule, or will you follow the rule conceived and brought forth by human wisdom? Those preachers cannot plead the New Testament authority for their practice, and it would be, perhaps, too humiliating to plead ignorance of the gospel rule; hence we conclude that they are deceived by that specious plea of "christian union," that has opened the gates of Orthodoxy to the would-be-popular "Christian Church."

No, sir, they are not our preachers; we have no preachers; but we love and honor all preachers of the Church of Christ who are faithful to the Master. If they are inconsistent in their practice we pray for them and work with them to get them into the right path.

We propose shortly investigating thoroughly and exhaustively the subject of Christians participating in human governments. We hope that our friend and all others interested in this subject will carefully examine what is said upon the subject and not jump at conclusions. As to following us, we do not put ourselves forward as patterns, but we point all to the divine pattern given through Christ, and say to them, "follow Christ." J. W. J.

THEY SAY WE PREACH THE DENOMINATIONS TO HELL.

We are frequently asked if we believe that certain persons, who are good, pious and humble, that belong to the Methodist, Baptist, Cumberland, or something else, who have not obeyed the gospel as we teach it will be saved. We tell them people must obey the gospel of Christ to be saved. If the Methodists have obeyed the gospel, we have not; and if we have obeyed it, the Methodists have not. And we are taught in the great and good Book, if we obey not the gospel of Christ, we will be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power.

The whole thing of preaching others to hell seems to be, with the denominations, thrown upon us. But they are just as guilty of such preaching as we are. They accuse us of something of which they are guilty themselves. Let us examine their faith and preaching and see whether or not we are true.

The Baptists preach that immersion is the only act of baptism. And they also teach, this is according to the word of God, therefore, whatever is contrary to this doctrine is false. If false, it is a lie; and they teach that a liar cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

The Methodists and Cumberlandians do not believe immersion is the only act of baptism. According to the Baptist's faith and teaching, they send the Methodists and Cumberlandians to hell. Yet they will cooperate in their revivals.

The Methodists teach that a man can fall from grace because they say, the Bible sustains them in such doctrine. If then that doctrine is true, whatever is contrary to that is false, a lie; therefore, those who teach a man cannot fall from grace are in danger of hell. Thus, you see, the Methodists preach the Cumberlandians to hell.

We are authorized by divine authority to preach the gospel that was given by our heavenly Father. If we fail to preach the gospel of Jesus, the curse of heaven will be upon us. It is very true, the sects don't believe and teach this gospel, and this is why they say we preach them to hell.

They believe and teach that people are pardoned out of Christ, but the Bible teaches, in Christ Jesus salvation is promised. "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." There is just one way to get to heaven, and if we miss that, we miss all the glory and grandeur in that beautiful home of the soul. A man must give an opening ear to God's word, and allow it to penetrate an honest heart, and let much love dwell there for the Lord, and obey the gospel just as the apostles preached it.

Peter preached Jesus on the day of Pentecost, and when the people believed it, they were pricked to their hearts. Then he said, "repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."

You see, my dear readers, repentance and baptism are well locked under God's authority by the conjunction and. The sects think this lock ought to be broken, but we think it should remain just as God has sealed it. As we believe and teach it as Peter did on that grand occasion, and as this comes squarely against the belief and teaching of the denominations, they say that we preach them to hell. Before they bring such an accusation against us, they had better first go back and settle up with the apostle Peter.

What is the matter? I failed to receive the F. F. of January 15. I don't want to lose a single copy. May the Lord bless you, my dear brethren, in the good and noble work.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Dear Bro. Gillespie:

In the F. F. of Feb. let you say: "Christians should not perform the marriage ceremony between Christians and sinners, nor between sinner and sinner, but they may be between Christians."

Will you oblige myself and others by showing the scriptural authority for Christians performing the marriage ceremony between Christians? I must confess, that in all my reading, I have been unable to find such authority; and as we should be of the same mind and judgment, (1 Cor. 1:10), if you will furnish the desired information, of course we can come together upon this point.

Yours truly,
J. G. CONNER

Strawberry, Ark.

I do not know that I can cite Bro.

Conner to the chapter and verse for Christians performing the marriage ceremony between Christians, but I think I can prove it by inference, and if I fail, I simply said Christians may perform such, and not must or must not.

Paul says, marriage is honorable in all, Heb. 13: 4. And whatsoever things are honest, just, pure, lovely and of good report, think on these things. Those things which ye have both learned and received, and heard, and seen in me do, and the God of peace shall be with you, Phil. 4: 8-9. Then all Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

The right that one man has to marry one woman is derived from God first and then from the law of the land, but the how the ceremony shall be performed is not derived from God, but from the government under which they reside. God's word says who Christians shall marry, but not how or by whom the ceremony shall be performed, only it commands Christians to submit themselves to the powers that be. The law requires certain ceremonies for each State, and authorizes certain individuals to perform the ceremony. A preacher of the gospel of Christ is one of the parties empowered by the state to perform the ceremony. He may or may not perform the ceremony and not transgress the law of the land. He may or may not perform the ceremony between Christians and neither transgress the laws of man or of God, but if he performs the ceremony between parties unauthorized to marry by the word of God, he transgresses the law of God; and if he performs the ceremony between parties unauthorized to marry by the laws of the land it is illegal.

When the law of God conflicts with the law of the land, it is the duty of Christians to obey God rather than man. When the laws of the land are not in opposition to the law of God, the Christian can obey the law of the land. There is a difference between submitting to the law that exists and a desire to exercise a voice in the government in overturning existing laws and creating new ones.

PUBLISHER'S NOTES.

If you see a big RED CROSS on your paper, you may know your subscription is out. Please renew if you want the paper.

We will send the Oatman—McGary discussion, and Zeke Jackson, one copy of each, to any of our subscribers, for twenty-five cents.

Those who like the F. F. and are unable to pay for it at present, but who will pay for it when they can, will receive it regularly, if they will write to us and let us know the fact.

We are enjoying the preaching of Bro. J. W. Jackson with Bro. Hansbrough's assistance, now in Austin, when the weather will permit. We wish thousands could hear them besides the few that attend.

Bro. J. G. Conner writes, "I should like to write an article on the subject of the Church, if the F. F. could find space for it." We will find space for it, Bro. Conner, if you will write it and send it in; but let it be as short as practicable and to the point.

We have been sending the F. F. to W. W. Davis, at Carroll Hill, Benton county, Ky., but we received a returned copy from the postmaster at Cincinnati saying there is no such office in said state. Where are you, Bro. Davis? Will some of his friends tell us?

STAMPS.—Brethren, if you can do better than send us stamps in pay for subscription to the F. F. do so; if not, send us one and two cent stamps. We cannot use five and ten cent stamps, and we cannot sell them, so we are out that much.

We would be glad if all the readers of the F. F. in the city of Austin will come regularly every night to hear Bro. Jackson preach, in W. B. Smith's warehouse near the Narrow Gauge depot, and bring as many of their friends with them as possible.

Bro. E. Hansbrough has gone to Liberty Hill, Williamson county, for eight or ten days, and will preach while there. He expects to go to Smithwick Mill before he returns. Then on his return he expects to start on a long tour during the summer and fall through Arkansas, Tennessee and North Carolina. Sister Hansbrough will accompany him.

ZEKE JACKSON.—"The Religious Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family" is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, upon receipt of price, ten cents per copy, or three copies for twenty-five cents. Published by McGary & Hansbrough, Austin, Texas. Send in your orders, brethren and friends, and circulate this little pamphlet. Send it to those who have been shaken into the congregations of Christians. They will see that they have been only shaken, and this will up-root them, and the word of God will cleanse them from all unrighteousness, if they will obey the gospel of Christ T. H. GILLESPIE.

FROM BRO. I. C. STONE.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have concluded to call the attention of your readers to some things which appear in a late issue of the Octographic Review from the pen of its publisher, Daniel Sommer.

He writes in reply to Bro. J. E. Lay. In his reply he says to Lay, that we who oppose him on the baptismal question wrote in such a style that he regarded us as lacking in that beautiful thing called honesty. He further states that we had not the courage to lay his leading article before our readers.

Now I do not believe that any reader of the F. F. will believe any such stuff as that. That leading article was a wonderful document. In it he stated that he had cut the tap-root of the "re-baptismal" tree, and that it had fallen, etc. You all remember what he said. But now in his reply to Bro. Lay he says: "When time permits, we will endeavor to discuss this subject fully."

The tree seems to have arisen before Bro. Daniel again, and he is going to ply the mattock once more. But he says the burden of his former article was not against baptizing those who had previously gone down into the water, but it was directed against making a specialty of the importance of so doing. He says that to make a specialty of it was to be a hobbyist and sectarian. Now who has made a specialty of it?

Listen to him again when he says, "There is no just reason for objecting to sectarian teaching concerning the design of baptism more than their teaching respecting the divinity of Christ, faith in Christ, and repentance." Just so say we. We object to such false teaching and therefore object to baptism administered on such faith. Daniel unwittingly struck the right track.

Exactly; it is all false, null and void.

He says that if one who holds all these false doctrines should hear one of us proclaim the design of baptism, and should conclude that he did not understand when baptized, and should come forward to make the confession, that we would take his confession and baptize him notwithstanding all those other errors. Wonder what he did with that Baptist he took in at North Salem, Ind., that held on to all his errors and was even satisfied with his baptism in those errors? Or, the other two who made the confession and were baptized by him? I wish he would tell us what kind of catechism he used with the two, to ascertain if they had abandoned all their errors.

If, after we preach to them the whole truth they come to us to make the good confession and be baptized into Jesus Christ, we understand they have abandoned their sectarianism. They have repented of it, of course, and what are we authorized to do, but to take their confession and baptize them into Christ? Will Bro. Daniel inform us what more we can do? Have we made a specialty of contending for their scriptural baptism more than he for contending against it? Shall our contending be called a specialty and his not?

He says another thing that I call especial attention to. He says: "Since my former dissertation on this subject, I have made it my business to inquire of intelligent disciples who were never under the influence of denominational teaching, whether they thought of baptism being for the remission of sins when they obeyed it in that institution. The answer has been invariably, 'no.' Now I wish he had taken pains to have asked those intelligent (?) disciples if they thought about it being for any other purpose. I expect the answer would have been no.

But the idea of intelligent Christians not knowing what they were baptized for is a new idea to me. Why all the sectarians in the land seem to know what we baptize for. The world all know it. They all call it Campbellism. But our own members do not know it! If Bro. Sommer will show me a disciple who does not know the design of baptism, I will show him one who does not need baptism. Such a person is not responsible. But then he goes on and states that he always teaches the requirements of the gospel as they are on record.

The design of the facts and commandments as recorded. But lo! he says that not more than one tenth of them ever think of baptism being for the remission of sins. How much heed then have they given to his teaching as it is on record.

Now, brethren, he has said in his article of Feb. 2nd. What do you think of such statements? He says, "The surrender to Christ chiefly occupies the mind and heart. This is just as it should be." How could the surrender to Christ occupy the mind in baptism if the individual did not understand that baptism was a surrender to Christ? Can a prophet tell? A sectarian is not taught that, in baptism they surrender to Christ. They are taught to surrender before and be healed, and then surrender to the society. We teach that they are to yield to him in baptism; Daniel tells us that nine-tenths do not know it. Let us hear Campbell and Errett as quoted in the same number of the Review by Bro. Showalter. Showalter is replying to one Mr. Adkins, a Baptist, and Adkins quotes Campbell and Errett. Mr. Campbell maintained that the believing penitents are forgiven in the very act of baptism. "I am bold to affirm," says Campbell, "that every one of them, (the Pentecostians,) who, in belief of what the apostles said, was immersed, did in the very instant in which he was put under the water receive remission of sins." Now, mind you, Campbell said all who believed what Peter said: that is, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

Then he quotes Errett as saying, "In baptism he (the sinner) appropriates God's promise of forgiveness, relying on the divine testimonies as his own. We therefore teach the believing penitent to seek through baptism the divine assurance of the forgiveness of sins."—Isaac Errett. How flatly this contradicts Sommer, Holloway and Barnett. The progressives are far ahead of the shakers on this point. Errett strikes it precisely. But Sommer, Holloway and Barnett cannot write one consistent article. Their writings are a bundle of mistakes and contradictions.

I am glad to see a good article from Bro. R. H. Singer in the Christian Leader of Jan. 10. Bro. Holloway comes in, in the number before the last, with about as weak a piece as I ever saw. I wrote a short reply to a part of it and sent it to Bro. Rowe but I have no assurance that he will publish it. I shall still contend for the truth as long as I can be heard.

May God bless the right. The F. F. is the paper for the whole truth.

"MY FATHERS HOUSE."—Jo. 14:2.

In this text are several points of interest. I call attention to the following: 1. What is the Father's House here spoken of? 2. What are the mansions here referred to? 3. What was to be accomplished by the Savior's work of preparation? 4. What the grand consummation?

1. Was the Master speaking specifically of the old Jewish temple? I think not. The immediate context forbids such an idea. The apostles knew how many mansions there were in the temple. Let not the Savior be charged with folly. That he was speaking of a house containing many mansions, is evident. That both the house and its mansions were all at that time in existence is also true. Yet there is in all this no proof that he was talking of the Jewish temple. Nor do the texts cited by Bro. Larrimore (F. F. Nos. 2 and 3), prove it. Those texts confessedly do refer to the temple. But does this one? To simply say it does, is no proof. The Savior was speaking of the Father's real house. In it, said he, "are many mansions."

How many mansions did the Jewish temple contain? Bro. L. says it contained two! Surely that is not "many." But we are told that the Jewish temple (tabernacle) was a type of the "True Tabernacle." It certainly was. How many mansions then in the latter? You answer, two. Not the Father's House of the text, then, for it contains more than two. I conclude that even the true, much less the untrue tabernacle is not co-extensive with house under consideration.

It is only one of its mansions. It is the identical one which the Savior went to prepare as a final abode for his saints. But what is the house itself? Let us interrogate Paul: Heb. 3:5, "Every house is builded by some man but he that build all things is God." God's house, then, includes all things whether material or immaterial. This is the Father's House in its most comprehensive sense. In harmony with this view read Acts 17:24. Here we are taught that God dwells not in temples made with hands. Now read 1 Kings 8:27-29. Solomon says: "Heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain the omnipresence."

ent God much less the house he had builded.

On the other hand, as occasion may require, any specific place may be designated as God's house, especially where God records his name, manifests his glory, or bestows his blessings. Hence it could be properly applied to Solomon's Temple, the Tabernacle of Moses, even to Jacob's pillar, Gen. 28: 19-22. Hence it is especially applicable to any place where the Father is acceptably worshiped, whether on earth or in heaven. Heaven is the very sanctum sanctorum, or holy of holies. Here is his palace royal. Here his presence, where is fullness of joy and pleasures forevermore. This is pre-eminently his "dwelling place." Here is where Christ has entered "now to appear in the presence of God for us."—Heb. 9: 24. Also 1 Tim. 6: 16; This is the holiest of all the True Tabernacle.—John. 16: 28 and 17: 5-24.

When Jesus was about to die and leave his disciples, he was not going to pass out of existence. Nay, verily "ye believe in God," that he lives and cares for you although invisible. "Believe also in me" in like manner. I am only going to step out into another one of the many mansions appertaining to my Father's great house, and make certain necessary preparations for you so "that where I am there you may also be."

2. What now are the "many mansions" in the text? I answer very briefly, the mansions, states, places, or conditions, in this vast universe or Father's House, in which God has made it possible for his innumerable tenantry to live. The word "mansion" signifies this: It means, a dwelling, abode, or residence. In the Father's House, then, there are many places of residence. The word "many" is indefinite, yet it comprehends all. How many there may be, is beyond finite comprehension. The stars, perchance are all included. If so, how wonderful. Yet, how much more wonderful when we pass to the realms of immateriality, and contemplate the many mansions of God to mortals invisible yet eternal! Suffice it to say, one of these the dear Savior went to prepare for his saints. We are occupying one of these "many mansions" now. Shall we, by and by, occupy one prepared for the devil and his followers, or shall we be so unspeakably happy as to dwell forever with Christ in that beautiful home, which he has gone to prepare for all those who shall love and serve him faithfully to the end?

3. What was to be accomplished by the Savior's work of preparation? On this point it will be well to enquire what the word, prepare, signifies. It simply means, "To make ready; to get in readiness." It also means, "To make evident or manifest; as opposed to that which is "unseen, not apparent, dark, concealed from view, or not manifest." It does not then signify an act of creation, or bringing into existence, as many have mistakenly supposed. Yet less than creative power could not have accomplished the work! The application is easy. The Savior, through his death and resurrection brought eternal life and immortality to light; opened up the way; so prepared heaven as to make it accessible to fallen, sinful man. Through his blood the way into the holiest has now been prepared or made manifest. By his death and resurrection, the shedding of his blood and its sprinkling 'upon the mercy seat' in the holiest of all or heaven itself, the place (not places), mansion, (not mansions) has been made ready or prepared.

4. The grand consummation will be fully realized by and by, when the faithful shall hear the welcome plaudit: "Come you blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." To God, who saw the end from the beginning, it was so. In like manner, Jesus was the Lamb of God, slain from the foundation of the world. Ah, dear brethren, what a glorious home is in readiness for us. The sun will be new. The earth and stars of heaven will be new. Our very bodies will no longer be composed of flesh and blood, but will be spiritual, immortal, incorruptible. "We shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." "Where he is, there we also shall be." Hence we shall dwell in the light, which is to man, in this world, unapproachable and wholly invisible. "What must it be to be there."

"When we've been there ten thousand years,
Bright shining as the sun,
We've no less days to sing God's praise,
Than when we first begun."

ORDER VS. CONFUSION.

In my last article I enumerated some of the things that are causing divisions among us contrary to the doctrine of Christ. The first thing was the organ. Now be it remembered that the Savior taught that a good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit. This being so we will examine this organ tree by the fruit it has borne since its introduction into the church of the first-born.

As before shown, let us bear in mind that God is not the author of a system of worship that, when carried into practice by his children will cause confusion among them. But what does the word, "confusion," mean? Webster defines it: (1) Disorder; (2) tumult; (3) ruin. Now I ask the question, has it had this effect in the household of faith?

Again, what honest, fair-minded man among us can say that the organ has had any other effect since its introduction into the worship of God? Dare any man who has any regard for truth and the history of the case, say that the mission of this Jews-harp of the Devil has been any other than one of disorder, tumult and ruin in every congregation into which this child of the unrighteous one has been introduced? Provided there were any in the congregation who loved the Lord and desired to walk as Christ walked, in the light of truth. Now, in the name of the Master, and by the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ, I protest against its use in the worship of God.

Because it is an unscriptural, unauthorized invention, begotten of the devil in the heart of, and brought forth by a "Romish Monk in the seventh century." Now Paul taught, in Rom. 8: 14, that so many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. Do you ask how they are led by God's Spirit? Answer, by being taught, governed and guided in all things religiously by the law or rule given by the Spirit; and when any one refuses to be governed in all matters of divine worship according to the law given by the Spirit, they refuse to be led by the Spirit, and, therefore, are not the sons of God. Now I call upon one and all of the advocates of the organ to produce one word of authority in the New Testament for its use. If they fail in this, I charge them with having impeached the wisdom of God at this point, and with having called his veracity into question. For it is clearly taught that by his word the man of God is thoroughly furnished unto all good works. And I contend that they are in honor bound to take one of two positions: Either, first, that it is a good work, or, second, that it is an evil work. If they say that it is a good work, their word and their practice gives the lie to God's word. Which says that the man of God is thoroughly furnished unto all good works; for we know that the New Testament is as silent on the use of the organ, as it is on the mourner's-bench; or, in other words, there is just as much authority for one as the other. As there is no authority in the New Testament for it, it can not be a good work, and is therefore an evil work; hence from the devil. And they stand guilty of having transgressed God's law, which thing John defines to be sin. (1 John 3: 4). Yes, like king Saul, they have gone through or beyond God's law, and are trampling the blood of the everlasting covenant under their unhallowed feet.

I have another serious objection to the use of the organ in connection with the worship of God, and I base it upon the admission of its advocates. They say that they use it to draw the people. Now if this is correct, I charge them with being guilty of perverting the gospel. We now have the gospel with its facts, commands, promises and motives: The leading motive of God, as held out to men in the gospel to induce them to love and serve him, is his love as displayed in the gift and death of his Son; and hence said John, we ought to love God because he first loved us.

This being so, it follows that when men resort to the organ and death-bed scenes, together with all the inventions of the age to draw men and women to God, and his Christ, they are guilty of perverting the gospel; and according to Paul's teaching, Gal. 1: 7, are resting under the curse of God. And if the prayers of the man that turns away his ear from the hearing (or obedience) of the law, (Prov. 28: 9,) is an abomination to the Lord, I see no reason why this grinding on the "old boy's Jews-harp" will not come under the same head. For they not only transgress the divine law, but disobey and turn away by refusing to do what he has commanded; that is, to sing with the Spirit and the understanding. Now they sing after the organ, and not according to the foregoing requirement.

And another very sad feature of the whole thing is, that the devil not only furnishes the Jews-harp, but also a majority of the players. I had just as soon call on his servants to pray for me, as to have them lead and do the singing; there is just as much authority for one as the other, and one is just as acceptable to God as the other. How long, oh! how long before we return and rebuild the wasted walls of Zion, and be content with Lord's order of things.

Your brother in Christ,

J. R. LANE.

THE COMMISSION.

We have seen that he preached first of all, the death, burial, resurrection and ascension of Jesus, that he is both Lord and Christ. When they heard this they were pricked in their hearts, and interrupted Peter, inquiring, what they should do. Peter continues: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost," etc. Here is the gospel of commandments, here is the gospel of their salvation, the word of reconciliation, the gospel of promise; here is repentance and remission of sins preached in the name of Jesus, according to the commission.

Is it the word of God? Yes. Did they hear it? Yes, gladly. Then it produced faith. What did they believe? That baptism was for the remission of sins, unequivocally. This constitutes faith in the promise of Christ, like Abraham—accounting that what he had promised he was also able to perform, and this only is faith proper.

But did they obey it? Yes. How did they obey? By being baptized for the remission of their sins, and could not have obeyed it in any other way or for any other purpose. They "obeyed from the heart that form of teaching as it was delivered to them." Can a man obey an order as it is given, and at the same time obey it differently? The former is obedience, and the latter is disobedience.

Is not the injunction of baptism for the remission of sins? Yes. Then if a man is baptized "because of," has he obeyed the injunction?

No, he has positively disobeyed. But to make the matter more forcible, we have seen that Jesus commanded the apostles in preaching the gospel, to preach repentance and remission of sins in his name. We have seen that they did preach it in a way that men could exercise faith and obedience to it. We have seen that they could not exercise obedience until they had heard it. We have seen that to preach repentance and remission of sins, is to say, "Repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

Now the preacher who does not preach baptism for the remission of sins, does not preach remission of sins by the authority of Jesus, does he? All answer no. Then the individual obeying such preaching does not get remission of sins by the authority of Jesus, does he? Dare any one say yes? Then if the Pentecostians could not obey the gospel until baptized for the remission of sins was preached, can you? Not by the authority of Jesus—not by the gospel of Christ.

Once more: Christ's people have the "knowledge of salvation by the remission of their sins."—Luke 1: 77. Christ's people have remission by being baptized for remission, and by this remission have knowledge of their salvation. Now is any one prepared to tell us how those get knowledge of salvation who are not baptized for remission, but claim remission before baptism? You say they get remission when they are baptized, regardless of their claim or belief. Then they get remission in a way, and at a time, unknown and unbelieved by them. Yes. Can such remission give "knowledge of salvation?" Can a thing not understood, not believed, not known, give knowledge? Will some of their "shaking" attorneys defend them just along this line?

Now, Bro. McGary and Hansbrough, if I have not already occupied more space than Bro. G. can spare me, I would like to have a long talk with you and the readers of the F.F. concerning the noble paper, and the grand cause of truth to which it is espoused. I, with many others, am anxious for it to be made a weekly, and enlarged, and sent to earth's remotest bounds, that the earth may be filled with his knowledge and glory as waters that cover the sea. And shame on us, readers, if it is not done, when those sacrificing brethren offer to make it a weekly and let us have it at the same low terms of one dollar per year, if we will only double the subscription. Now there is few, if any, subscribers who do not intend to renew, and there is, perhaps, not one who by a few kind and true words cannot procure one or more new subscribers. Union makes strength, and it makes the burden light; our several small efforts will lay the great foundation, and the workmen will quickly build on it. How many will respond with their own, and one or more new names, (and the necessary funds accompanying), during the next month?

J. CLEVENGER.

REPLY TO A SISTER.

We received a letter a few days since from an old sister near Sprinkle, in this county, in which she requests us to stop her paper because, first, she is not able to pay for it at present, and second because she, like a certain Missouri brother, does not like some of its contents. I do not suppose there was ever a book written, or a paper published, that pleased everybody. If there ever was, that book or paper was no account; for the Bible, the best of all books, pleases but very few people, and judging from the fact that she does not make a single quotation from it in her lengthy letter, she does not like it very well; but we must not judge from that fact, for I know her and believe her to be a good woman, but is mistaken as to the place where Christians ought to work, which is, in the vineyard of the Lord and not in the vineyards of Satan.

Paul tells Timothy to reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine."—2 Tim. 4: 2. She reproves and rebukes me pretty sharply, and then exhorts me with all long suffering, but not with much doctrine, except the doctrine of men, and that is not much account.

She says: "Now let us do all the good we can by preaching, by praying, by writing, by voting, by working, by doing anything to put down sin and elevate suffering humanity, and glorify God, and gain a home in heaven." That is a pretty good exhortation, is it not?

Now, dear sister, I try to accept your exhortation in the spirit in which it is given, and I can find scriptural authority for all of it, except the voting; will you please point me to the chapter and verse authorizing you and me to vote. I know we ought to work and do all we can to put down sin, and elevate fallen humanity; but Christ our law-giver has given us a rule by which to work, and he thoroughly furnishes Christians to all good works, he does not furnish them to voting; consequently, voting is not a good but a bad work.

But a brother said to me not long ago, that Christians are commanded to pray for these human governments, therefore they ought to vote. That reminded me of the arguments of the baby-sprinklers, who quote the language of Christ, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." The object of the little children coming to the Savior was, that he might bless them; but the baby-sprinkler perverts the language of the Savior, and applies it to what he calls baptism, when he sprinkles a little water in the baby's face, and that is not a whit greater perversion of the word of the Lord, than to quote what Paul says to Timothy about "praying for kings and for all that are in authority," to justify Christians voting.

Now, sister B., if you will come to Austin some pretty day soon, and stand with me an hour or so on the corner of Congress avenue and Pecan street, I will show you more men and women who are violating the word of the Lord by wearing costly apparel, fixed up in great humps on their lower backs, gold ear rings, gold chains around their necks, and gold bracelets and rings on their wrists and fingers, than you can show me drunkards in any three cities in Texas, and it is not only so in Austin, but in all the cities and towns, and also to a considerable extent in the country, and they are as certainly on the road to perdition as are the drunkards.

Now how shall we stop it? I mean how shall Christians stop it, or assist in stopping it? Shall they go to voting and get a law passed prohibiting the manufacture and sale of such things, or shall they teach and practice what their law-giver, their King, requires, and thereby give him the honor of putting down sin, instead of these governments that belong to Satan?

Sister B., I used to vote, and was in favor of Christians fighting with carnal weapons, but since I have learned the word of the Lord more perfectly, my mind has changed in reference to these things.

You further say: "We all can and do read these passages of Scripture that you quote to prove your theory; but do they reach the saloon men?" No, ma'm, they don't. Neither do the passages we quote to reach the fine dressers, the adulterers, the liars, etc., effect them; but what shall we do about it? Shall we abandon the word of the Lord, the gospel, God's "power unto salvation," and appeal through the ballot-box, to the power of these wicked human governments, or shall we take the sword of the Spirit as required by our King, use it as faithful soldiers of His, that we may at last come off conquerors, yea, more than conquerors? Sister B. I prefer to fight under the instructions and for the honor of our King, let others do as they may.

You also ask me where I get my authority for calling my brothers "shakers?" I get it from their practice, just like I call some preachers baby-sprinklers, because they practice it; but I cannot find anything of the practice of either in the Bible, and therefore cannot call either of them by a Bible name.

You ask me, in the conclusion of your letter, not to be angry with you, for you do not want to hurt my feelings. I assure you, my sister, that I am not offended at you, but think more of you than before you wrote to me. You have shown that you are not like a great many who claim to be soldiers of the cross; but have never added to their faith the first necessary item, which is virtue, or courage. They are wishy-washy, tender-footed, backboneless creatures, and you would conclude from their talk frequently, that they are so full of love that they cannot reprove sin when they see it; but it is not an excess of love, but a want of courage. They know it is wrong for Christians to engage in things for which they have no authority in the word of the Lord; but they have not the courage to reprove them, and I am glad you have written to me as you did, though I am satisfied you are mistaken about its being the duty of Christians to vote for human laws to put down sin.

Your brother in Christ,

E. HANSBROUGH.

FROM BRO. STONE.

Dear Brethren:

I have concluded to make a proposition to you who read the FIRM FOUNDATION. I have filled all my engagements in this part of the country, and now desire to make a tour through southwest Missouri, north Arkansas, southeast Kansas, Texas and Tennessee. All the brethren who read the F. F. know me. I should like to see them and get better acquainted.

Now if any congregations would like that I shall visit them and preach for a week or two, or even longer, they will write me as soon as they see this. Write me at Catlin, Parke county, Ind., and give me your address, and how I can get to your place of worship, and how long you would probably desire that I should stay.

I am getting old, and live in a rented house. I am not able to do any hard work; but I am able to preach the truth. I desire, if possible, to raise means to buy me a cheap house some where convenient and save rent. I do not ask the brethren to give me means, I am willing to go out and labor for them. Many congregations employ evangelists, as they call them, to hold meetings at $25.00 per week. Now I have heard several of these, and I know that I tell as much truth as they do, in the same length of time, and I believe that I can tell it as well. I know nothing to preach but the gospel; and, although I attended college some, it was not a theological institute where they manufacture preachers. What ability I have, has been acquired through the study of the Scriptures and practice.

To take such a trip as I speak of, if I should be invited to many places, would require some eight or nine months labor; but I think, perhaps, it would be beneficial to my health, as I was raised in the Sunny South. I expect to give this same advertisement also to the Christian Leader.

Now, dear friends, let me hear from you at once, as I have no time to lose. May the good Lord bless you all.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

We do not want to flatter any one, but we must say that all honest men and women that advocate the validity of sect immersion, who have read the articles of Bro. Richardson and Bro. Stone in our last issue, must have been staggered by the force of their arguments!

Under the heading of, "Incidents Of Nearly Fifty Years Ago." Bro. C. Kendrick tells the Messenger readers that, the "FIRM FOUNDATION is still trying to make its foundation firm. It proceeds much as if its foundation had been shaken, and as if it might be shaken clean out!" Has this poor old man dreaded the F. F. and dreamed about its rapid growth, and been haunted by his inconsistencies that it has forced him to see, till he really believes it has been in existence for "nearly fifty years?" My dear old brother, wake up out of your double Rip Van Winkle sleep, and strengthen your weak hands and confirm your feeble knees by planting yourself on the "foundation of apostles and prophets." Until this foundation is "shaken clean out," the FIRM FOUNDATION will not become alarmed. A. McG.

"Bro. C. Kendrick has been preaching the gospel fifty-three years.—Messenger."

What a pity this aged brother has made the mistake of blending the following two passages of Scripture all this time: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them." Matt. 28: 19; and "I will shake all nations."—Hag. 2: 7.

A Baptist editor affirms that Jesus "was not baptized in order to the remission of sins, therefore baptism is not for the remission of sins." Jesus was not baptized because of remission of sins; therefore baptism is not because of remission of sins. One therefore is as good as the other.—Messenger

Suppose "Jesus was not baptized because of remission of sins," Baptists are, and "our plea" puts their baptism on an equality with His.

Baptists frequently quote 1 Peter 3: 21, "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also save us," and say that baptism saves us in a figure. But Peter does not say we are saved in a figure, but the figure or anti-type (baptism) saves us. Baptism is the anti-type of the flood, which saved the eight souls in the days of Noah.—Messenger.

Why instruct them on this matter since it makes no difference anyway? Baptist figures "well shaken" will cipher the sum of "our plea" as well as apostolic realities. A. McG.

"The pedobaptist will tell you there is no "mode of baptism" revealed in the New Testament, and in the next breath he will tell you that sprinkling, pouring and immersion are all modes of baptism. He cannot be right in both these statements."—Messenger.

Yes, and there are some who will say that the design of baptism is as clearly revealed in the New Testament as the "mode;" and they will spend their time and money running over the country to debate this design. But after they have raveled hundreds of miles and spent their time and money and stirred up strife and contention between thousands on this question, they will tell you it makes no difference whether the people understand this design or not! How much worse are the pedobaptists than these men? A. McG.

Of the many little things some preachers and church members can do, one of the least, if not the very least, is to engage in the undignified work of trying to proselyte people from a church of one denomination to that of another; and with some little-souled people it seems a chief work, low and contemptible as it is.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

It is wrong to proselyte people from one denomination to another, but it is right and scriptural to proselyte people from all denominations to the church of Christ. There were no "denominations" in the days of the apostles, and should be none now.—Messenger.

Here is an opportune place to ask, "where was the church of Christ before the days of Alex. Campbell?" Can one be proselyted from the kingdom of God to "the church of Christ?" We don't want any further wrangling with the Messenger; but as it has so clearly laid out for its work the grounds that the F. F. is on, we have noticed several things it has said, in the hope of aiding it to stand firm on its newly chosen grounds. A. McG.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Rev. B. B. Sanders, State Evangelist of the Christian Church, will be in Houston to-day en route to conduct a protracted meeting at Eagle Lake. Mr. Sanders has consented to remain over to-night in the city and will preach at the Christian church in the Royles building, Texas avenue and Main streets, at 7:30 o'clock. His subject will be "Samson's Riddle." Mr. Sanders is well known to the members of the church as an able, forcible and interesting speaker, and persons who wish to spend a pleasant and profitable evening are cordially invited to be present.—Houston Post.

Bro. Bush has got the right man in the right place at last! This "State Evangelist" is not hampered by the obsolete construction of the commission of Christ, and other passages of Scripture. Mark 16: 15-16 gives out this to his mind: "Go ye into all the world and preach Samson's Riddle to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved,"—well, why will not a baptism superinduced by "Samson's Riddle" be as valid as those brought about by "orthodox" riddles?

This Evangelist must construe Rom. 1: 15-16 thus: "So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach Samson's Riddle to you that are at Rome also. For I am not ashamed of Samson's Riddle: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." And he must understand 2 Tim. 4: 1-2; thus: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach Samson's Riddle."

Since the "jaw-bone of an ass" was so effective at Lehi, we would like to learn what the same weapon accomplished that night at Houston. A. McG.

BRENTS—HEROD DEBATE.

Bro. T. W. Brents kindly sent us a copy of his debate with E. D. Herod, a Primitive Baptist. We have had this book on hand for some time, but have not mentioned it to our readers, because we were for a time so pressed with other matters that we could not take the time to examine it, and we do not endorse or mention books to our readers till we have examined them. But now that we have read this debate we can cheerfully lay it before our readers, as one of great merit. It is a pamphlet of 118 pages, offered at 50 cents, by T. W. Brents, Lewisburg, Tenn. The shell that cannot be cracked by this hammering Bro. Brents gives the "Primitives" must be harder than flint. We would recommend it to "Elder Dalton" as a sure cure for his "livercomplaint," if he will, after taking, submit to "the washing (bath) of regeneration."—Titus 3: 5. A. McG.

SOME QUESTIONS FOR THE WISE.

If Peter, in Acts 2: 38, gave the very answer that the Holy Spirit dictated, would his answer have as effectually prepared them for obedience if he had said, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ because your sins are already forgiven?" If not, why not, since those who are told this and baptized upon the belief of it, are recognized by "our plea" as Christians all the same?

If such an answer by Peter would have done as well as the answer he did give—and it must be admitted by those who recognize as Christians those who have been baptized upon the belief of it—will it not do well for teachers to give that answer now? Yes, will it not do better since experience has taught us that the people are much more ready to accept this teaching than what Peter did say, and since we know it would go so far towards union between us and the Baptists?

Yes, more! Is it not the heaven-bound duty of every man who believes that one of these answers will do as well as the other, to waive his individual preference at this point and teach that which is just as good as his, when he knows that it will tend to make peace between divided Christians—Baptists and Christians—and bring so many more aliens into the fold?

Let those who recognize Baptists and other immersed sectarians as Christians, came right up to the scratch on these questions, and they will fall into the arms of the Baptists or determine to move over upon the impregnable grounds the F. F. is planted upon, the foundation of "prophets and apostles, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." A. McG.

WHEN IS THE HEART PURIFIED?

Dear Bro. McGary:

It may appear to you to be a rather late date to say anything on the above named subject, but I have waited patiently, hoping some one more able than myself would take up the subject and investigate it more fully, but I have waited in vain. I have been requested a number of times to write on the subject; and, although knowing my inability to do the subject justice, I will comply with the request of my brethren, that the truth may be more fully elicited on this matter.

In your reply to me in the F. F. of June 1, '87, you say you are unable to draw those nice distinctions of that science which mark the separate identity of the heart and soul of the man; and then you give Mr. Worcester's definition of the word "soul," from which you draw the conclusion that there is not a sufficient distinction between the heart and soul to admit of two processes of purification.

To this I will say, if Mr. Worcester's definition be correct, then you are right; but if his definition conflicts with the Scriptures, it is incorrect.

Do the Scriptures make a distinction between the heart and soul?

Yes, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength." Here, then, is distinction made between the heart and soul.

Again, Christ said: "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, for where your treasure is there will be your heart also."—Matt. 6: 20.

Is a person's soul in heaven when he has treasure there? No; for if it were, then he would be dead; for James says: "The body without the Spirit (soul) is dead."

Now if the heart can be in heaven while we are alive, and our souls cannot be, until our bodies are dead, then there is certainly a difference between the heart and the soul—yes so much so that one can be in heaven and the other upon earth at the same time. If there is this much difference between them, will they not admit of two processes of purification if need be?

In speaking of the heart, in Matt. 7: 20, Christ evidently had reference to the affections: Where our treasures are there our affections are. And when the Apostles speak of the heart being purified by faith, I have always understood, that he had reference to our affections being changed (purified) by faith. It is an evident truth, that if a man loves sin, he practices it; and in order for him to obey the gospel, it will be necessary to change his affections; by preaching the gospel to him he believes in Christ (a pure heart); this changes his love (affections, heart), and produces a godly sorrow, for having sinned against Him whom he now loves, and this godly sorrow works repentance, 1 Cor. 7: 10.

Paul tells the Roman brethren, that they had obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered them, and that they were then made free from sin, Rom. 6: 17. The "form of doctrine" referred to was baptism—or, at least, baptism was included in it. Well, their obedience was from the heart. Was it from an impure heart? You say it was, for the heart is not purified till one is baptized. Will a man with an impure heart, have a pure motive in view? "Can a clean thing come out of an unclean?" and will a man be made free from sin with an impure motive in view? If so, why don't you give the Baptists, who were baptized to get into the Baptist church, (an impure motive) the right hand of fellowship?

But you say: "If Bro. C. will not deny that cleansing, healing, purifying and forgiving are synonymous Scripture terms, he will abandon his position * * * sins are forgiven in the act of baptism, therefore we are cleansed, purified, and forgiven in the act of baptism." (I quote from memory). Let us try these words and see whether or not they are synonymous. Peter says: "Seeing you have purified your souls in obeying the truth."—1 Pet. 1: 22.

If the words mentioned by you are synonymous Scripture terms, they will all make sense to place them where the word "purify" is in the above passage. "Seeing you have forgiven your souls in obeying the truth." These words, (purified and forgiven), don't look much like synonyms do they? No. The truth is, we purify our souls by obeying the truth, but God forgives our sins—purification takes place with us, but forgiveness takes place in the mind of God for us.

"But Christ said: 'Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God,' and if a man's heart is purified before baptism, he is prepared to see God before he is baptized." Reply: In the passage referred to, "blessed" means happy, and "see" is evidently used in the sense of enjoy.

This makes it all clear, if the heart is purified before baptism, and sins not pardoned till then. They are happy because salvation is in their reach: they enjoy God because they love him; but at the same time they are sorry for having committed sin, and resolve henceforth to abstain from it. Paul says to persons who have been baptized to "Follow peace with all men, and holiness without which no man shall see the Lord."—Heb. 12: 14.

You seem to think a man is not prepared to "see the Lord," till his sins are pardoned, and when his sins are forgiven he is prepared to "see the Lord."

If this is the sense in which the term "see the Lord" is used, it would appear that the Hebrews never had received pardon, nor never would unless they followed peace with all men! But to use the word "see" in the sense of enjoy, we can easily understand this.

When their hearts were purified by faith, they could enjoy God; in order for them to enjoy Him, it was necessary for them to keep His commandments, a part of which was to follow peace with all men, and holiness.

"But if the heart is purified as soon as one believes, those who believed on Christ but would not confess him for fear they would be put out of the synagogue had pure hearts." That may be. Do you think a person with a pure heart can't do wrong? They were of that class spoken of by Christ, (Mark 4: 16-17), who, when they hear the word, receive it with gladness, but have no root in themselves, so when persecution ariseth (they were afraid of being put out of the synagogue) immediately they are offended. See?

You say, if we concentrate the functions that the Scriptures ascribe to the heart, we will have all of man that comes within gospel range. What, then, do you suppose God meant when he said: "Cast away from you all your transgressions whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit?"—Ezek. 18: 31.

If everything about man that comes within gospel range is included in the word "heart," why, after telling the Jews to make them a new heart, did he tell them to make a new spirit also?

But Bro. McG. says: "If your position means anything, it means purification without repentance, without confession, without baptism, without good works—purification by faith alone—dead faith—but wilt thou know O vain man, that faith without works is dead?"

One thing is certain, and that is, that faith must have a time and place to begin. In the heart it where it begins, for "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness," (Rom. 10: 10); after hearing the gospel is the time it begins; for faith comes by hearing the word of God. Faith is made manifest by the life, but faith must exist in the heart before it is made manifest by works. The fountain must be pure before the stream will be. A change of heart, a change of life and a change of state, are necessary in order for one to become a Christian.

But I have said enough—much more than I intended when I began. And now, Bro. McGary, I want you to examine this carefully and any criticism you may think proper to make will be well considered by me. I hope this subject will be settled satisfactorily to all concerned. Don't be afraid of hurting feelings. I am not that kind.

Earnestly desiring to know the truth, I remain, very truly yours,
J. G. CONNER.

This article of Bro. Conner's was received sometime ago, but was laid aside because it did not appear to us to be permeated by that spirit of candor that should be manifested in the defense of religious grounds. To be candid, it contained too much human philosophy and theological gymnastics to strike us as at all meritorious. So we laid it aside, and doubted not that Bro. Conner would soon come to his sober senses on this question and thank us for not publishing it. But he has written to us that "many brethren" desire its publication. Well, it now lies before them, and we do not care to make any particular effort to mar its beauty or weaken its force, if it has either.

But we cannot consent to let such spiritual food be dished out without letting our readers know just what it is before they swallow it. It is that same dry old crumb of "orthodoxy" which has been kicked out from under so many straw piles, and over which so many hungry souls have leaped for joy and whooped themselves hoarse in the vain delusion that they had found the real "bread of life." It is the "wholesome doctrine" which has been so "full of comfort" to our Methodist friends—faith alone—dead faith, "being alone."

eral review of the article for fear we cannot muster sufficient patience to treat it with that degree of seriousness that Bro. Conner would bear; for, candidly, we can not persuade ourself that Bro. Conner is very deeply in earnest about it; but it looks to us like he was exercising his wits on psychology, to see how he could get along with this science of the soul, mind and heart. Again, we cannot place such a low estimate upon the intelligence of our readers, as to suppose they need an extended criticism of his article.

The wisdom of the world with its philosophic and scientific eyes can not see how baptism can have any part in purifying the sinner's heart. But the apostle of God says, to those who had been baptized, "Seeing you have purified your souls in obeying the truth, * * love one another with a pure heart."—1 Peter 1: 22. All sorts of theological eeling that the ingenuity of man can plan has been resorted to, to worm around baptism, and the very best they have been able to do, to escape this ordinance of God has been to raise a jubilee over the wholesomeness and comfortableness of this very doctrine Bro. Conner is contending for. If Bro. C. is right, they are right. But I have never yet heard of these "orthodox" surveyors laying out these broad grounds between the "heart" and the "soul." I think Bro. C. can safely claim the honor of originating this idea.

Bro. C's. question about a clean thing coming out of an unclean, is certainly very wide of the mark, as is also his question about an impure heart having a pure desire. I once heard of a man asking, "if a wool hat cost forty cents how long will it take to go to Georgia?" But it may be that some will read his article who are hampered by this stale old orthodox dogma and are resting their hopes on it without obedience of the gospel. Hence we will briefly notice the most misleading parts of it.

He moves about on the grounds that his psychological research has laid between the heart and soul, which grounds he makes as broad as the distance from earth to heaven! We think he might narrow them very materially if he would only consider the word "heart" in its full scriptural scope when he weighs it against the word "soul" in its broadest scriptural signification. If he is not aware of it already, it would, perhaps, facilitate his retreat from his present foggy position, to be informed that the Scriptures use both of these words in more senses than one. We will not take time to prove this till it is challenged, which we presume will not be done. He assumes that the difference between "heart" and "soul" is so great as to demand "two processes of purification."

Now since he is so fond of writing on this subject and asking questions, we will propound some. As you hold that the heart is purified by faith alone, because Peter said, put no difference between Jews and Gentiles, "purifying their hearts by faith," has not the "orthodox" world the same grounds and the same right to construe John 3: 36, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life," by your rule, and teach the doctrine of everlasting life by faith alone? Have they not that same, right to use your rule on Acts 16: 31, and teach salvation on belief alone? You know many other passages that it is needless for me to mention, where an application of your rule would at one stroke sweep away the conditions of repentance, confession and baptism.

Peter said, "Baptism doth also now save us." Why might not some one adopt your rule here and launch out on a new doctrine of salvation by baptism alone? No inspired man ever attributed any blessing to faith alone; and no man can hold such a doctrine by any fair use of God's word. The faith that purifies the heart is a living faith, a working faith—"faith that works by love"—not the corpse of faith, that died from "being alone."

You have asked us many questions, and tried your hand at transposing what we called synonymous terms. We could give a transposition on one of your positions that would produce no little merriment, but we desist for the present. The reader will see that you had to virtually admit that the "chief rulers," who believed on Christ but would not confess, for fear of being put out of the synagogue by the Pharisees, (John 12: 42) had pure hearts! Now, my brother, if you will point to one instance where the Scriptures refer to any one out of covenant relationship with God, as a pure-hearted person, I will yield the point without another word.

Remember, it was after Cornelius and house had obeyed the gospel—after their "obedience of faith,"—after faith had "worked by love," and led them to obedience, that Peter said God had "purified their hearts by faith." God also purified the hearts of the three thousand on Pentecost, "by faith," but not by faith alone. Their repentance, confession and baptism were all steps of faith leading to their purification. Peter tells those who had "purified their souls in obeying the truth" to "love one another with a pure heart." He does not seem to put their "hearts" and "souls" as far apart as Bro. Conner does; and he even mentions the purity of their hearts after the purification of their souls; but we hope never to become so wild as to conclude that there were "two processes of purification," one for the heart and one for the soul. But if we should, we should claim that it is after the soul is purified by obeying the truth, that this second and separate purification of the heart comes in.

Come, Bro. Conner, don't continue to battle for a lost cause, but be sober! Come to yourself again, and let us be of "same mind and the same judgment;" for we "have the mind of Christ" on this question.

THE RED CROSS.

The red cross on your paper shows that you are in arrears. We hope that all who find that they are behind with us will immediately attend to it. It is a great inconvenience to us to have to be burdened with the trouble of reminding you from time to time of your indebtedness. The amount of a dollar or two is not much, but when there are many hundreds of such amounts due us, then it is a very considerable matter with us, while it is a trifling one with you—this is the best reason why you should promptly settle up—discharge your small duty and you thereby relieve us of a heavy load.

Every brother and sister who regards "the faith once delivered to the saints" worth contending for, and who approves a principle of fair, open and even-handed dealing, in investigating controverted points, ought to appreciate the efforts of the FIRM FOUNDATION sufficiently to pay their subscription to it promptly.

Some write that they did not subscribe for the paper, and that they don't think they ought to pay for it. We do not send the paper regularly to any one unless we have been requested to do so. Many brethren have written to us asking us to send the paper to certain of their relations or friends. In this way some have received the paper without knowing the cause of its being sent to them; but as they take it out of the office and use it they ought to pay for it, and if they don't relish the truth, then stop it when they have squared up with it. This the law requires them to do. Merely writing to stop a paper, or refusing to take it out of the office does not meet the demands of the law on this matter; for until you pay up all arrearages, you are due your subscription even if the paper continues to come for ten years.

We do not want to force the paper on any one, but we believe the requirements of the law are just and fair; hence we expect to demand a fulfillment of these requirements. We do not expect any trouble whatever with honorable brethren and sisters—it is only that class that disregards God's law, and tramples it under their feet, for human speculations, with whom we anticipate trouble.

FROM A BROTHER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Dr. T. W. Brents is said to be one of our ablest men. I saw him a year or more ago and showed him a copy of the FIRM FOUNDATION; he said he endorsed its teaching, especially the design of baptism. Now what I desire is this, that you communicate with him and see whether or not he will publicly advocate the truth on this subject.

Oak Level, Ala.

We give this letter, but withhold the name because we do not know that it was intended for the public. We would be glad to hear from Bro. Brents.

DOWN WITH TOBACCO.

The grand old apostle Paul said, "If meat make my brother to offend (or stumble), I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." But some brethren that I know seem to think that was a small sacrifice to make, this little matter of meat-eating, but if Paul had used tobacco he could never have said that of it, for he could not have given that up, he couldn't "have done without it."

These brethren not only refuse to give up this useless and highly injurious stimulant, but tempt other brethren who have given it up, by using it in their presence, when they well know its power over a person who has once been its slave. The spirit of Paul is lacking here certainly. These brethren would loudly condemn a sister given to the opium habit, yet it is not one whit more useless, or injurious moderately used, to some persons than tobacco is. Why should not a sister as well gratify the lust of the eye by dressing handsomely, thereby causing some poor sister to stumble, as for a brother to gratify the lust of the flesh by using tobacco, thereby offending a brother's weak conscience and tempting him to sin?

Paul gave us a great deal of instruction on points of this kind, which I regret to say is not heeded at all. But it would be wise for us to heed it. Tobacco is the "right eye" and "right hand" of some, and they had rather go to destruction with it, than to heaven without it, and will certainly have their choice unless they change their course soon. "God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap. If he sows to the flesh he shall of the flesh reap corruption." Is this not sowing to the flesh?

A SISTER.

LAW OR NO LAW.

A few days since I was in conversation with a certain man, who said, Christians have no law, that they are not under law, that there is no law in the New Testament for Christians to be governed by. He says there was a law for Jews but none for Christians. That they are free, like a son is free from parental authority when he arrives at mature age. His father will then advise but not rule him. He says there is advice and exhortation in the New Testament, but no law. I heard him talk the same way last summer, and said to him then: "I suppose, then, you think the time has come round again for every man to do that which is right in his own eyes."—Judges 19: 4, and 21: 25. Said he, "Yes, I think so." His position, if I understand him, is that if you are honest, then whatever you think is right, is right for you.

Webster says, law is a rule of conduct established by authority. Christ is governor, law-giver and ruler. I refer the reader to Matt. 2: 6, and James 2: 12. Jesus is king, has a kingdom and rules in that kingdom, out of it too; for he says, bring hither those mine enemies who would not, that I should rule over them and slay them before me."—Luke 19: 27.

Command, commanded not; obey, obeyed not; obedience, disobedience, are words which carry with them the idea of law. "That ye both do and will do the things that we command."—2 Thes. 3: 4-6. "Work with your own hands as we commanded you."—1 Thes. 4: 11. "In as much as he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness."—Acts 17: 31. Will God judge and pass sentence without law? Can he? "And being made perfect he became the author of salvation to all them that obey him."—Heb. 5: 9. "In flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."—2 Thes. 1: 9.

Some one may say that love covers the whole ground of law, commands and obedience, but in 1 John, we read, "This is the love of God that we keep his commandments, and his commandments are not grievous." "Commandments" is plural, and will take in more items than one, love. The priesthood being changed there is made of necessity a change in the law, law not done away with, but changed. "Out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."—Isa. 2: 3. What law did Isaiah mean when he made this prediction? The Mosaic law had been given long before Isaiah lived, and he said, "shall go forth." So it had not been given at that time.

Has the law (of pardon) and word of the Lord gone forth from Jerusalem? Luke may answer. He says: "And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name, beginning at Jerusalem." Then and there the Christian's law, or law for Christians, commenced, and it was given, by apostles in their writing, until it was closed by their saying, "blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter through the gates into the city."—Rev. 22: 14.

The gentleman referred to, relies for his position chiefly on James 2: 12, speaking of the perfect law of liberty. Admitted; but we are to be judged by the law of liberty, and if we don't live up to the requirements of that law, we will have to suffer the penalties.

MRS. M. A. BONHAM.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

Through some friend the F. F. has been coming to my address for some time. I desire to know if it has been paid for, and if so, how long, and when will the time be up. If not paid for, please let me know it soon.

I see that the F. F. is opposed to baptisms by the sectarian world, either by sprinkling, pouring or immersion. I have a question to ask you through the F. F., that came up in Owen county, Ind. It is this:

The Missionary Baptists were holding a protracted meeting, and had gone down to the water to attend to baptizing some of their converts into the church. While there an old, gray-headed man approached the preacher, extending his hand saying: "Here is water, what hinders me from being baptized?"

Preacher.—"If thou believest with all thy heart thou mayest."

Old Man.—"I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God."

They went down into the water, the preacher baptizing him. My question is this, was this a scriptural confession and baptism?

With true regard for the truth, I am, your brother in the one hope,

R. T. MCKEE.

Lyons, Ind.

Editor Firm Foundation:

I have become slightly acquainted with your paper through the kindness of a brother, who sent me a couple of copies. Whether right or wrong, it is the only paper I have ever seen that I consider consistent on the sect question. I have taken the old reliable for ten years or more, and I am, and have been, disgusted at the abuse of the immersed sects and their teachings, and almost in the same breath shaking and singing them into the church. If we endorse them we are bound, to be consistent, to endorse their teaching, and then I see no cause for division.

Enclosed find one dollar for the F. F., commencing with this month, and if I like it as well as I think I will, I will try and get some subscribers.

I have been seeing the red cross on the last two or three numbers, and thought for a while I would not renew, but wife says she cannot do without it, and I have just read the last number and I am so well pleased with it, that I told wife I would send the money right away for another year. All the objection I have to the paper is, that it don't come often enough. Make it a weekly as soon as possible.

QUERIES.

Please explain Acts 2: 8-11, "How hear we every man in our own tongue wherein we were born?" A brother here believes that Peter did the speaking and that his voice was miraculously changed into the different languages. J. R. Selina, Texas.

The record says "they (the apostles) were all filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance."

All of the apostles spoke with other tongues; nothing is said about changing the voice or word after spoken so as to make it sound like some other language. The miracle consisted in bestowing the wonderful power upon the apostles that enabled them to speak with other tongues. J. W. J.

1. What is the baptism of fire, and who are to be baptized with it.—Matt. 3: 11.

2. Please harmonize John 3: 22 and John 4: 2.

Your brother in Christ.

S. A. G.

1. John the Immerser preaching to the Jews, said: "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear; he shall baptize you with the Holy Spirit and with fire. Whose fan is in his hand and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner, but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." This baptism of fire was then to be for that class called chaff; it was to be an unquenchable fire; and should follow the gathering of the wheat into the garner.

The righteous and wicked are represented in the Scriptures, respectively, as wheat and chaff, wheat and tares, sheep and goats, etc. The gathering together of the saints is to be at the coming of the Lord Jesus. 2 Thea. 2: 1. Then the baptism of fire will be administered to that class represented by the chaff. Rev. 20: 15, and 2 Thea. 1: 8.

2. The passages referred to harmonize themselves. The apostles did the baptizing, and as Jesus was their recognized Head, or Teacher, their acts were said to be his. I cannot find where Jesus ever authorized any one to baptize, before his death and resurrection.

J. W. J.

Please explain the following Scripture: "And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord, and as many as were ordained to eternal life, believed."—Acts 13: 48.

J. J. MAY.

All advocates of the unscriptural doctrine of "unconditional election" find strong consolation in this passage, because it contains the words "ordained to eternal life." They argue that these Gentiles believed because they were fore-ordained to eternal life. Any interpretation placed upon this Scripture that will antagonize other plain passages must certainly be wrong. Hence their interpretation "that belief is the result of fore-ordination," is incorrect. Belief comes from hearing the word of God. Rom. 10: 17. The word of the Lord contains the glad news that eternal life will be given to those who by patient continuance in well-doing SEEK for it. Rom. 2: 7-8. Paul and Barnabas, first preached the word of God; the Jews, filled with envy spoke against those things spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming. Paul then said to them: "It was necessary that the word of God should first be spoken to you, but seeing ye put it from you and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles; for so hath the Lord commanded us, saying I have set thee to be a light to the Gentiles, that thou shouldst be for salvation to the ends of the earth." The Gentiles were glad to hear this, and glorified the word of the Lord, and as many as were disposed to eternal life, believed.

The contrast is between the two classes, showing first the state of their hearts; one filled with envy, the other glad to hear; one contradicting and blaspheming, the other glorifying the word of God; one judging themselves unworthy of eternal life, the other disposed to accept eternal life. And finally as a result of this disposition on the part of the Gentiles to accept the eternal life thus offered, they believed. All the parts of an antithesis must correspond with each other; and if we say that God ordained these Gentiles to eternal life, therefore they believed; then we must say God ordained that the Jews should not have eternal life and therefore they contradicted and blasphemed. But Paul says the Jews "judged themselves unworthy of eternal life," and this part of their conduct in rejecting eternal life, is placed in contrast with that of the Gentiles in being disposed or determined to accept it. I would remark, in conclusion, that many of the best Greek scholars translate the Greek word rendered above, "ordained," by the word, "disposed."

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I wish to ask some questions concerning the contribution, as we are somewhat divided here in Northern Arkansas upon that subject. Some claim that we should give one-tenth of what we make; others say give a nickel every first day of the week. Please give us the scriptural teaching upon these points, as I want to do just what the gospel teaches. Is it not right to be silent where the Bible is silent, and speak where it speaks? Ought we to extend the right hand of fellowship to young converts? I cannot find anything in the Scriptures for such a practice. We have shaken some into the church here and had to shake them out; glad to get rid of them. You may consider me a life-time subscriber to the FIRM FOUNDATION.

Yours in the one faith,

A SISTER.

It is certainly right "to keep silent where the Bible is silent, and speak where it speaks." By observing this principle, you can settle the questions above referred to. We are not "under the law, but under grace," hence we go to the New Testament, not the Old, to find the rules that regulate our giving. Many good brethren are so full of type-ology that they press into service every little point that they think will make an impression. We should be very careful not to make anything a type that is not clearly made such by the inspired writers. We are taught in the gospel:

1. To give.—2 Cor. 9: 6; 1 Cor. 9: 14; Acts 20: 35.

2. To give willingly.—2 Cor. 9: 7; 2 Cor. 8: 12.

3. To give as we purpose in our hearts.—2 Cor. 9: 7.

4. To give as the Lord hath prospered us.—1 Cor. 16: 2.

5. That our gifts are acceptable, not according to what any one else may have or give, but according to what a man has.—2 Cor. 8: 12.

6. To give at our stated assemblies or when we come together.—1 Cor. 16: 1-2; Acts 2: 42.

Here the Bible speaks, it is silent about the one-tenth or the nickel, let us respect its silence. If Christians will observe the above as it is written, the Lord's treasury will never be empty.

What is the right hand of fellowship? Is it not simply a token of hearty good will and welcome to the participation of the benefits of christianity? When Paul and Barnabas went up to Jerusalem to consult the church there about the effort being made by Judaizing teachers to impose circumcision upon the Gentiles, (see Acts, 15th chapter, and Gal., 2nd chapter), the right hand of fellowship was given them, and to James and John after the matter was settled. Was this a church ordinance? No. It was nothing more than an exhibition of the cordial love and good feeling existing among brethren, and, perhaps, of joy that a difficult question had been so amicably disposed of. Now the question comes up, is it scriptural to give the right hand of fellowship? I say yes. But when and to whom? When brethren meet, and when they part, they should greet one another by that token which is universally recognized as expressive of love and friendship—the right hand of fellowship. When parties are received by the congregation (Rom. 16: 2), I can see nothing unscriptural in greeting them with the right hand of fellowship. J. W. J.

TO BRO. M'KEE.

In this issue, on sixth page, third and fourth columns, Bro. McKee reports a very strange occurrence that took place in Owen county, Ind. It is, that of a Missionary Baptist preacher, following the example laid down in Acts, 8th chapter, in receiving a person to baptism. Bro. McKee then asks: "Was this a scriptural confession and baptism?" I answer, yes. The validity of baptism does not depend upon the administrator. In the case referred to above, the Baptist preacher violated the well-known and long established law of his church. It is to be hoped that having once broken the bands of creeds and acted in accordance with apostolic example, that he will renounce all of his errors, and himself make the good confession and be baptized for the remission of sins. The old man who demanded baptism, evidenced by his demand and the manner in which it was made, that he understood his duty.

REPRODUCTION.

In the parable of the sower, the Savior declares the seed to be the word of God, Luke 8: 11. He teaches that when the seed is sown into good and honest hearts, it makes Christians. That this is true in every age I presume no one will have the temerity to deny. When the word of God germinates and springs up into the life that God requires, then it produces Christians. This life is one of obedience and strict adherence to God's word; it includes many features of the church of God, in fact, the church in every feature, and as a whole is produced by some divine agency.

One feature is not produced by one thing, and another feature by something else. Hence there is not a rightful feature of the church that is not produced by the word of God in any age since that word was given. Since the word of God produced the church of God, it is able to reproduce it (in the physical organization.) Having power to reproduce it, it has power to reproduce any of its lost features. Hence it has power to restore an apostate church to its original purity, from which it departed. Having power to do this, the question as to when it was done must be determined by comparison with the word of God.

When all the provisions of the constitution of heaven are enforced as they were in the beginning, the kingdom is restored as it was before the apostasy, in the age of inspiration, and cannot be regarded as a new church.

A people can now claim identity with that church only, by discarding everything not found in that age, and restoring everything that is found. With its essential features restored, the organized church of God is re-established. This re-establishment of the church is the claim of the restoration with which we stand identified.

The extent to which this has been accomplished, we are willing to have tested by the divine model.

which, all who accept the supreme authority of the word of God, must admit is the only infallible standard by which a claim to church identity must be settled. We can see that much of our practice falls short of our ideal, but the principles are divinely right, and the practice as a whole nearer the standard than it can be with those who discard the principle.

If we have not fully succeeded in establishing the church as it was we have accepted the only principle by which the grandest of all religious movements can be accomplished, and faithful adherence to this principle must succeed, since this is the only principle by which the question of church identity can be settled; if the identity is not complete we are far in advance of all other religionists.

If it has been accomplished we have a right to claim the accomplishment; and we are more than willing to have that claim tested by those who would deny us the honor.

The theory of succession is yet held by many Baptists, and proceeds upon the idea that the church of God must be continuous or not at all. In other words, that the power that produced the church at first, cannot produce it now independent of the connecting links.

This idea is false! It is essentially Romish, and dishonors God and the Bible. All along the line, men have come into the Baptist church with an alien baptism. Like Dr. Weaver and others, they received their baptism by other than Baptist hands. They baptized their thousands, who in turn multiplied those thousands in the Baptist church. Hence, no man could tell whether his baptismal line ran through the apostles, or "branched" off into some "modern sect." No claim is stronger than its weakest links; and when it has broken links its strength is gone!

But if the chain of succession were so strong that when shaken at this end it would rattle all the way back to John the Baptist, it would amount to nothing unless it carried with it the principles and practices of the apostles and first Christians; it would be as "sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal."

By proving succession without establishing corresponding principles and practices with the first church; a church only proves its own apostasy; hence succession as a method of trying to establish identity is both weak and silly!

The great trouble with the churches of this age is that they have descended too much! The religious world has been on the down grade for about eighteen hundred years. Instead, then, of boasting of their descent from the apostles; it would be better to talk more about trying to ascend till they reach the grand plain on which the first Christians stood in the simplicity of their faith. To reach the sublime heights to which the first Christians ascended should be our highest and holiest ambition; the nearer we get to these the nearer we get to God.

But my Baptist friends if you happen to see this, I pray you will not try to get there by the shaking process. Yours in the one faith.

EVANGELISTS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Allowing that the many practices and teachings of the disciples are right and good works, is it not a little bit strange that Paul should have said, all Scripture given by inspiration of God should furnish us unto every good work, and these being good works, is it not also just a little bit strange that these same Scriptures are as silent as the grave about many of the modern ways of spreading the gospel?

Now a days we hear men called evangelists, and claiming that they are sent out by the church, while the Bible tells us the Holy Spirit sent them, where it tells us anything about them at all. We find, the men called evangelists then, and those whom we might, by necessary inference, call evangelists, had the power to work miracles and that they are classed by inspiration, along with apostles and prophets and all declared to be gifts of God, and were given to individuals for specific purposes, which are named and until a certain time had come. 1 Cor. 12: 28, and 13: 10; Eph. 4: 11-12.

Now when that time came, did the offices of apostles and prophets cease to exist? If so, that of evangelist, did also, for no where in God's book do we find those guided by inspiration giving directions or saying a word about how apostles, prophets and evangelists, were to be perpetuated, created or sent out, but to the contrary, we find them saying, that "whether there be prophecies they shall fail; whether there be tongues they shall cease, whether there be knowledge it shall vanish away."

We do find ample directions given for the creation and perpetuation of teachers and for the spread of the gospel. Is the office or work of an evangelist, a good one? Then, according to Paul, the Scripture must furnish us unto it. And in the absence of such teaching, and the face of such Scripture as quoted above, I have from necessity come to the following conclusion: That we have no Bible authority for calling any man an evangelist. Now what say you, Bro. McGary?

We are yours for the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, no matter whom it hurts.

AN APPEAL FOR HELP.

We have received a letter from sister Mattie Lenix, Llano, Llano county, Texas, asking for help. She is afflicted with rheumatism and is almost entirely helpless, having been so disabled by her disease that for two years she has been unable to turn over or help herself.

We hope that the congregation at Llano will see that this sister's wants are ministered to, and that all Christians will remember, that to minister to the wants and necessities of Christ's people, is to minister to Christ. Send your contributions to Mattie Lenix, care of S. G. Lane, Llano, Texas, J. W. J.

OUR NEW TRACT.

I have just finished reading Bro. J. W. Jackson's "Sequel to Zeke Jackson." Bro. Jackson has used the "Grub-Ax" some in this work, and I think Mr. Nichols will have to give his "ax" a good grinding to get the gaps out of it before it will do to thrust into another "Campbellite" path—the roots it has been grubbed into, all turned out to be solid rocks, and the edge of this Methodist implement has been turned and gapped till it had to be thrown over the fence for repairs. I regard it a valuable pamphlet. Send for it and circulate it. For price, see third column, eighth page.

PUBLISHERS NOTES.

If you see a big RED CROSS on your paper, you may know your subscription is out. Please renew if you want the paper.

Send us a postal card, if you can't send the money at present, and thereby have the red cross removed from your F. F.

All those who have written a sermon for the "Texas Pulpit" are requested to forward their manuscript immediately to Lawrence W. Scott, Sulphur Springs, Hopkins county, Texas.

We were sorry to learn through Bro. E. W. Hooking of the death of Bro. E. M. Northern, of Stephens Station, Ark., who died on the 6th of Feb., 1888. He was a pioneer preacher and was sound in the faith.

We have had the pleasure of a two week's visit from sisters Mary Casbeer and Missouri Russell, of Liberty Hill, Williamson county, who came down with Bro. E. Hansbrough to attend Bro. Jackson's meeting.

We would call especial attention to Bro. Clevenger's article, "The Commission," one-half of which appeared in the F. F. of March 1st, and the other half in this issue. Read them together, and see if he does not convince you of the truth.

Many are replying to the call of the red cross, and are having it removed. Those who are not able to pay up will please let us know whether they appreciate the paper and will pay for it after a while, and we will remove the cross and continue to send it to them.

We learned from one of our city papers of the death of Bro David Wallace, near Austin, Texas, on or about the middle of February, 1888. He was trying to put out a fire which occurred in a cedar brake, and he was taken with an attack of paralysis, fell into the fire and was burned to death.

A few of us have been enjoying the preaching of Bro. J. W. Jackson for some four or five weeks. The meeting closed Tuesday night, March 6th. The result was five baptisms; one confession not yet baptized. The brethren and sisters are greatly encouraged to go on in the cause of the Master with more earnestness and an unwavering fidelity to the word of God. We may have more to say hereafter about this meeting.

We received a notice from the postmaster at Ogden, Illinois, that the FIRM FOUNDATION, addressed to B. F. Glass, is not taken out of that office, asking us to discontinue the name, for the reason that B. F. Glass refuses to receive it. We are sorry that Mr. Glass refuses so good a paper as the F. F., but we assure him that we had never heard of him before, and we hope that whoever has been sending him the F. F. will see this and not send it again to him who refuses to receive it.

BY THEIR WORKS YE SHALL KNOW THEM.

It will, perhaps, be very difficult to analyze the motives of all those who profess to be disciples of Christ, so as to discover the mainspring of their actions. But He "who searcheth the hearts" and knows what is in man, has given us a rule by which we may know, what the controlling power is, that governs the actions. "By their fruits ye shall know them"—Matt. 7: 16.

In the exercise of this divine right, the charity that "thinketh no evil" would lead us to ascribe none but pure motives to all who are earnestly trying to serve God. But while charity may legitimately think that a person is honest, sincere, earnest, and conscientious in what they do, it must not seek to excuse the faults, mistakes, or errors practiced by these honest persons.

How can we "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints" and at the same time through a false idea of charity be silent concerning the erroneous practices introduced into the religion of Jesus? Men claim to be honest in preaching sprinkling for baptism, and shall we for fear of wounding their feelings bid them godspeed?

The Apologist, however, says: "They are honest, conscientious, pious and devoted to good works done in the name of Jesus, and as they are earnestly trying to serve God according to the best light they have, we must treat them as brothers, mistaken brothers it is true, but none the less brothers."

I answer, that they have the same Light that we have, "the true Light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world."—John 1: 9. If a man stumble or fall down or go in the wrong road, it is evident that he is walking in darkness, and will not come to the Light. Turning his back to the true Light he walks in the darkness of his own shadow, vainly seeking to find God by the light of human tradition and philosophic reasonings. This idea of people "walking according to the best light they have" is another device of Satan to entrap the unwary and deceive them. "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them who are lost, in whom the god of this world (Satan) hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them."—2 Cor. 4: 4. John says "If we walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another."—1 John 1: 7. If people will honestly walk in darkness, do not accuse us of lacking charity because we will not fellowship them. We cannot fellowship them without being partakers of their mistakes and errors.

Coming nearer home, we find good honest brethren introducing organs into the worship of God, and other honest brethren urging the brotherhood to practice "the more excellent way" of saying nothing against this practice, but in the fullness of charity, go and preach and worship with them; perhaps you may lead them out of darkness into light.

When Nadab and Abihu introduced a human element into the worship of God, (Lev. 10: 1-3), God did not wait for Moses and Aaron to try this "more excellent way" upon them; "There went out fire from the Lord and they died before the Lord." And now, when men use their liberty as an occasion to please the flesh, by introducing strange human elements into the worship of God shall we hold our peace? Shall we condone the practice, by throwing over it and them the broad mantle of charity and crying peace—let us have peace? No, a thousand times no. It is a presumptuous sin upon the part of man to thus mingle humanisms with divine requirements. He who seeks to elevate human wisdom to the same plane of divine wisdom, shows a contempt for the authority of God, and though the vengeance of God lingereth long, yet it will be sure. "I will be sanctified in them that come nigh unto me and before all the people I will be glorified."

A great many others, honest and pious ones too, are using all diligence in organizing and operating missionary societies, mission boards, state meetings, state and county evangelists, etc. Now according to the "more excellent way," charity must stretch her mantle so as to cover all of this pious machinery. And why not? If charity can find shelter for honest sectarians, and for those "who chant to the sound of the viol and invent to themselves instruments of music like David," it can certainly be exceeding kind to these fruitful workers in the cause of missions.

But is this the charity of which Paul speaks, 1 Cor., 13th chapter? No, for this charity "rejoices in the truth," and this "more excellent way" taught by men, holds out a flag of truce to error and says, "let there be peace between us." But, says one: "You assume the very thing to be proven, viz: that it is sinful to organize societies for the spread of the gospel, and there is where you lack charity."

I assume nothing. I have long been combatting the inferences and assumptions of the sectarian world, and do not intend now to begin a practice that will lead me away from the Light.

Jesus once said, "If I do not the works of my Father believe me not. But if I do, though you believe not me, believe the works that ye may know and believe that the Father is in me and I in Him."—John 10: 37-38. Now if Jesus could rest the verity of his claim upon the works done by Him, are you not willing to be put to the same test? The Jews to whom He spoke had to decide, first as to the nature of the work done. Was it a work of God or a work of Satan? Having decided from the nature of the work that it was of God, they could then see the perfect consistency between the work done, and the claim or profession made by Jesus. But how were they to decide as to the nature of the works? They had the Scriptures and in them it was foretold of Jesus that He would open the eyes of the blind, unstop the ears of the deaf, and preach deliverance to the captives.—Luke 4: 18-19, and Matt. 11: 3-5. When they, therefore, saw the miracles done by Him in fulfillment of that which had been spoken, they could say "they are of God."

Were the Jews able to decide this question as to the origin or nature of the works? Evidently they were, for Jesus says, "If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin, but now they have both seen and hated both me and my Father."—John 15: 24. How had they thus hated both? By declaring that the works done were not of God, (Matt. 12: 24.) and thus deliberately closing their eyes to the evidences of His mission.

Now Paul tells us that "all Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrine, for correction, for reproof, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."—2 Tim. 3: 16-17. Jesus had said "by their fruits (works) ye shall know them." Those whom God sends will do the works of God, and we must determine their claim to be sent of God by the nature of the work done.

But how am I to decide this? By charity? by "the more excellent way?" No, but by a direct appeal to God's word. I go there to find "all good works" that God has ordained that we should walk in them," Eph. 2: 10; and by diligent search I fail to find one single line of authority for any such practice as organs in the worship, societies, mission boards, Sunday-schools, et id omne genus. What then is the only legitimate conclusion? It is that such things are not of God, they are not "the works of the Father." What of those who practice them? Their claim, that they are doing God's work, is false, for God has nowhere spoken of such works neither came they into His mind.—Jer. 7: 31.

"Oh! how uncharitable you are to say so, don't you know that God has been silent as to methods and that we only use our liberty in speaking where He has been silent." Please show me where God ever authorized man to speak where He was silent. Here again you are rushing presumptuously to your own destruction. You presume to say that there were some good works to be done that the Scriptures failed to furnish us with, and that contradicts Paul, who says that it furnishes us unto "all good works." Again, you say that the good works are commanded but it is left to our "sanctified common sense" as to how we are to do them. This is also a contradiction of Paul, who says that the man of God is "thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

Your societies are organized for the purpose of securing money with which to pay preachers to go and work for the Lord; and these preachers will not go unless they are backed by some "promise to pay" from the society. Now all such work is of the wisdom of this world, it is not of faith. Such workers need more faith in God. If they cannot trust in God for their support, they should go to some secular calling and not burden the cause of Jesus with their human plans.

But I want to try that plea of "sanctified common sense" a little further. "The disciple is not above his Master." Jesus submitted his claims to men and told them to test them. Now did Jesus ever speak where God was silent? He says: "I do nothing of myself, as the Father hath taught me I speak these things."—John 8: 28. Can we be sinless when we speak where the Father has been silent? Is it not impugning the divine wisdom and foresight of God to talk about "the requirements of the age," and then introduce human contrivances in order to make His religion more acceptable to the populace? Is it following the example of Christ to do so? Nay verily. Then if we wish to please the Father in all things, we must speak only as we are taught of God.

It is not by God's silence that we live, "but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Strict fidelity to that which is spoken forever debars all such humanisms as are spoken of above, and relieves us of the charge of being uncharitable. There is one other class among us of whom I wish to say just a few words. They are those who secretly approve the position taken by the FIRM FOUNDATION, and yet have not the courage to come to the front and do battle for the right. These brethren love their ease, they dislike anything like antagonism, and are so afraid of hurting somebody's feelings that they keep silent while the truth suffers. Like Joseph of Arimathea, who was a disciple secretly for fear of the Jews, (John 19: 38), but who could come in after the death of Jesus and perform some funeral services for Him, these fearful soldiers might be induced to perform some of the last and offices at the burial of truth.

The love of the praise of men makes many cowards. They fear to be put out of the synagogues, or to be ostracised from some society, and so they weakly drift along with the crowd and make no effort to save the cause they profess to love, from the corruptions forced upon it by worldly-wise men. It is not popular to stand opposed to all innovations and all sectarianism. Just as soon as you are known to be battling for the truth against all species of sectism, you will be treated as was Jesus: defamed, persecuted, and if it were possible, even crucified. But why fear these things? Have you not faith enough to say with Paul, "the Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me"?

If not, let me remind you of some more of the sayings of Jesus. In the sermon on the mount, after having warned his disciples of false teachers, he says: "Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me ye that work iniquity."

How could they "work iniquity" and yet have done so "many wonderful works" in the name of Jesus? Because their works were not the works of the Father; they were not the "all good works" furnished by the Scriptures. Let us go to "that day" when these fruitful workers will claim so much. "And I saw the dead, small and great stand before God, and the books were opened, and another book was opened which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books according to their works."—Rev. 20: 12.

The fearful, who were afraid to do the things written in the books, are left out of the inheritance, to keep company with those whose feelings they were afraid to hurt.—Rev. 21: 8. And all those whose works were not according to the things written in the books were banished from God.

Brethren, let us be up and doing. Put on the whole armor of God; add to your faith, courage; take the sword of the Spirit and as faithful soldiers contend earnestly against all the devices of Satan sought to be imposed upon us by men, even if they are honest and conscientious, having as much charity for them as the gospel of Christ will permit, but none whatever for their works.

J. W. JACKSON.

SOME QUESTIONS FOR BRO. J. C. HOLLOWAY.

In the Christian Leader of Feb. 28th on first page, third and fourth columns, is an article from Bro. J. C. Holloway headed "Reply to Bro. Elliott, and a Word to Bro. Stone," in which he speaks very highly of Elliott as a personal friend, and then says, "We feel sure his strictures were prompted only by his sense of right concerning the passage in question, viz: "They that gladly received his word were baptized." I will pass over what he says about getting at the matter in a certain way, and that Luke was no tautologist, for if there is any point in it, I have not sense enough to see it.

He says: "The reference, (that is, they that gladly received his word were baptized,) may possibly be to the exhortation, which he had just given, saying, save yourselves from this untoward generation. It would then mean, they that gladly received his word of exhortation, proceeded to save themselves by obeying his command. But we still think it more likely that Luke means this: They received the body of his speech, viz: (a) That he whom they crucified is Jesus. (b) This Jesus is approved of God by miracles, wonders and signs. (c) God hath raised him up. (d) Being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear. (e) God hath made that same Jesus both Lord and Christ. These statements one must receive prior to his immersion, and he who receives these, receives the gospel; and the apostles were instructed to immerse those who should receive the gospel. Therefore, Luke's statement, "They that gladly received his word were immersed," is one simply informing us that their immersion was according to the commission."

It will be remembered by those who read the discussion of what he calls the "re-baptism" question in the Cetographic Review between himself and Bro. Stone, that Bro. Holloway took the position that the death, burial and resurrection of Christ constituted the gospel, and quoted Paul's language, 1 Cor. 15: 3-4, "For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received (first) how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures."

Take notice, he says, these three facts constitute the gospel. Now, reader, look at the above quotation from the Leader. He brings in the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, all that he says Paul preached, as the gospel, and then adds four more facts: His exaltation at the right hand of God, his having received the promise of the Spirit from the Father, and his shedding forth the same, and that God had made him both Lord and Christ; and he not only adds these four facts to Paul's gospel, but he says: "These statements one must receive prior to his immersion, and he who receives these, receives the gospel."

Of course, they that do not receive them, do not receive the gospel. Then they that heard Paul preach did not receive the gospel, for he only preached three facts. So it turns out that we have better preachers in this the Nineteenth Century, than were Christ's inspired ambassadors in the First Century; preachers who do not hesitate to add to the word of the Lord, the gospel. But he further says: "But we think it more likely that Luke means this," the body of his speech, viz: the facts as given in the above quotation.

Now, Bro. Holloway, I want to ask you a few questions, and hope that you will not treat them with the contempt that some others of my brethren have treated similar questions that I have asked them.

1st. Does not Luke, after mentioning that Peter had preached the above facts say, "Now when they heard this, (the above facts, the body of his speech, which you say is the gospel, which is different from Paul's gospel,) they were pricked in their heart? Bro. Holloway, does gospel, or good news, ever prick the heart? If so, give an instance, if you please.

2nd. The Savior says: "When any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart."—Matt. 13: 19. "But he that received seed into the good ground, is he that heareth the word and understandeth it; who also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth some one hundred fold, some sixty, some thirty."—23. Is baptism for the remission of sins, to the believing penitent, a part of the word of the kingdom?

3rd. I suppose you, like most of our preaching brethren, sometimes hold discussions with sectarian preachers in reference to the design of baptism. If you do, and it is not necessary to understand its design, in order to acceptable obedience, why do you do it?

4th. Peter says, speaking of the salvation of Noah and his family: "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the seeking of a good conscience toward God) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ."—1 Peter 3: 21. Seeking, says Bro. McGarvey and the Emphatic Diaglott, is the correct rendering. How can a man be seeking a good conscience in submitting to a requirement of the Lord, and not understand the design of that requirement?

5th. Paul says: "Moreover brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also you have received, and wherein you stand, by which also you are saved."—1 Cor. 15: 1-2. Paul says we are saved by the gospel "which he preached." Now, Bro. Holloway, are we saved without faith, repentance, confession and baptism? If we are, then the death, burial and resurrection of Christ may be the gospel; but if we are not saved without them, then those three facts are not the gospel.

6th. Did not Paul believe the three facts, when Christ appeared to him on the way to Damascus; but was it good news to him until, in connection with the three facts Ananias told him what to do to be saved?

7th. Paul says, writing to Christians, "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."—2 Thes. 1: 7-8. Will you please tell us how facts are to be obeyed?

8th. Is it not necessary to understand what is usually called the mode, (or more properly), the action of baptism in order to acceptable obedience, or will sprinkling or pouring do as well?

9th. Is not the design as plainly revealed as the action; and is it not the design that gives it any worth?

The apostle Paul says: "But though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."—Gal. 1: 8. Now, Bro. Holloway, you have added several facts to what you say Paul preached as the gospel, the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, and you say that the people must receive these added facts in order to receive the gospel. What are you going to do about it? Are you going to rest under the course threatened in the above quotation?

Bro. Holloway, I do not think I have misrepresented your teaching as you accuse Bro. Stone of doing; but Bro. Stone is amply able to defend himself. Will you please answer the above questions in the Leader, those that are numbered, and we will also publish your answer in the FIRM FOUNDATION; or, if you prefer it, send them to us and we will publish them. Hoping that we may discuss these matters in the spirit of our Master, with the view of benefitting all whom it may concern, I am, your brother in Christ.

TALKS WITH QUERISTS.

In some parts of the country where I have been, I have heard the Guide denounced severely because it has not discussed the so-called question of "re-baptism," and the friends of that peculiar doctrine say that the reason is, it is afraid to do so. Do you not think your course has been faulty in this matter?

A. L. JACKSON.

The editor of this department has had greatness thrust upon him by having advised in these columns, a year or two ago, to let a certain paper "severely alone," whose chief business has been the agitation of the re-baptism question and the abuse of those who happen to differ with its editors. We have been hauled and overhauled on account of that advice, and allusion is still made at this distant day to that sentiment, by those who think that we have not done ourselves justice by carrying it out. It has not been because of any fear on the part of the Guide to discuss the question, for that has been done in its columns, sufficiently, but from a disinclination to give prominence to an unsanctified spirit that has so largely prevailed in many places, especially in Texas, regarding the question. Personal abuse has entered so largely into the denunciations by those who have favored anabaptism, that self-respect seemed to demand silence upon the part of its opposers. The wisdom of this course has been manifest, and though some communities have been torn asunder by ill-advised controversy, the churches in general have escaped. We still believe the Guide can be more profitably engaged than in controversy with factious agitators.

We clip the above from the Texas Department of the Guide, of Feb. 24.

Bro. Aten, it seems, claims to have had greatness thrust upon him, for having advised, a year or two ago, to let a certain paper "severely alone," whose chief object has been the agitation of the re-baptism question, and the abuse of those who happen to differ with its editors. We were not aware that he had grown to such huge dimensions, and that too, by the force of circumstances. Hold up, brethren, enough of a thing is enough! Bro. Aten is a small man. Don't load him down so heavily! Do have mercy on him!

Now that greatness has been thrust upon him, we inquire if it is the kind of greatness taught by the blessed Savior, and exemplified by his apostles? The Savior rebuked error on every hand. His apostles, moved by the Spirit of the Master, acted in like manner. When did they ever teach Christians to let error "severely alone?" "Reprove, rebuke, with all long suffering and doctrine," was the battle cry of early times, when the disciples of the Master were fighting the battles of the Lord. Let me cite you to Paul, one of the great men of that age. He was great in manhood, great in an adherence to principle, great in a spirit of non-conformity to this world, great in his boldness in correcting the faults of his brethren, great in his fidelity to the word of the Lord, until the battle of life was fought, and the victory won. His greatness was not thrust upon him. Therefore Bro. Aten's greatness is not Pauline greatness.

But the certain paper that he advises to let "severely alone," advocates the re-baptism question. That is just what Paul advocated at Ephesus, instead of letting it "severely alone." It is the will of the Lord to advocate it, when persons have not been baptized as the Lord directs. That paper has the Lord and Paul on its side of this question. Is that enough?

The second chief design of that "certain paper," as given by Bro. Aten, is, "the abuse of those who happen to differ with its editors." To this charge it pleads not guilty, unless Bro. Aten calls contending for the faith abuse. It is ever ready to examine with fairness any scriptural question. One of its special designs is to teach practical christianity, and a careful perusal of its columns will demonstrate the fact, that there is a greater amount of scriptural teaching on this subject than can be found in any other paper among us. On all questions, it proposes to cut with the sword of the Spirit. Bro. A. calls this an "unsanctified spirit," and is disinclined to give prominence to it. It makes no difference what he calls it; neither is his disinclination to give it prominence checking its teaching. Brethren are rallying to the principles of the Bible all over the land, notwithstanding denunciations of the type and spirit of the above extract. It is, perhaps, wisdom, (I mean earthly wisdom) on the part of the Guide, to treat with silence and indifference these matters. The F. F. has taken a firm stand for the truth, and against error.

Not all the learning, toil, and pain,
Of those who treat us with disdain
Not all their logic, scoffs and flings,
Their witty nor their bitter things,
Can stop the progress of the band,
Who take the Bible in their hand,
Who feel resolved to no more trample
Beneath their feet the Lord's example,
And finding all their efforts fail,
The true disciples still prevail.

MISTAKEN.

A friend informs the Messenger that Bro. J. W. Jackson, associate scribe of McGary's Foundation, (which paper we have not seen for a month or two,) pronounces Bro. Burnett converted, because he stated in a recent article that he would "speak where the Bible speaks and keep silent where the Bible is silent, and advocate those things that make for peace, and condemn the bones and issues that cause strife and alienation among the Lord's people; it will therefore look for the old paths and walk therein, and hold tenaciously to the old landmarks, and condemn departures and innovations of every caste and character." It is said all the scribes of the Foundation endorse this motto. Which shows that they have bidden farewell to the re-baptism issue, and laid aside the bone upon which they have feasted for three years. Next to Bush's missionary board, no innovation has produced as much alienation and strife among the Lord's people in Texas as this re-baptism foolishness. The Bible speaks nowhere of the re-baptism of a person who has been baptized on a confession of faith in Christ, and all Christians should keep silent upon the subject. If the Foundation scribes are honest in their endorsement of our motto, we are ready to shake them into fellowship. Bro. Jackson will please raise the tune:

"And while the lamp holds out to burn,
The vilest sinner may return."

The above from the Christian Messenger is another evidence of the truth of the doctrine of "falling from grace." I had supposed from the declaration of principles adopted by the Messenger and published in the F. F. of Feb. 15, '88, that Bro. Burnett was thoroughly converted. It seems that I was mistaken, or if not mistaken, that he has "fallen from grace."

Bro. Burnett knows that no one of the editors of the F. F., nor any of its scribes, ever contended for the re-baptism of those who had "been baptized on a confession of faith in Christ;" but on the contrary, they, one and all, contend earnestly that baptism not preceded by the confession with the mouth of the Lord Jesus is not scriptural.

As Bro. Burnett has signified in the above that the door is open for penitent sinners to return, and wants me "to raise the tune," I shall lead out on the above, to the Long Meter tune of Windham, and while it is being sung, we exhort Bro. B. to come, 'fess up, and do so no more

J. W. J.

FROM A BROTHER.

Dear Bro. Hansbrough:

As I do not often see anything in the F. F. from this part of the "moral vineyard," I thought I would write you, as I want your opinion on a little matter, which I will give you as brief as I can.

We, the disciples of Muddy Creek, met a few days ago to consult about building a new house of worship. One person who had once been "of us," but has left us and joined the Baptists, had subscribed very liberally towards the aforesaid house, but said he would not pay anything unless we would allow singing school taught in the house, and sing any and all kinds of songs that is in the popular books of the day; among the songs are some, of which the following is a sample:

"Way down on de bank of de river,
De trees dey hang so low,
De coon among de branches,
But de musk he stay below."

As would be supposed, a part of the members opposed any such singing, while some, (strange to say,) advocated the coon-song. A motion was made and seconded to have none but religious or sacred songs taught, but the moderator would not put the question in that way, and finally after much talking, both pro et con, a motion was put to have all kinds of singing or no singing at all. Four of the brethren voted for it and four did not vote; our moderator, by the way, was one of our ministers.

Now I want you, through your paper, to tell me what you think about it, for the most of those who went for those worldly songs, are readers of your paper; as for myself, I think that if we are not of the world, we should not sing their songs, nor allow them sung in a house of worship, and I greatly fear that we are drifting off too much into a kind of a fashionable religion to be well pleasing to the meek and lowly Jesus. Now if you think this worthy of notice, I shall be glad to have your opinion on it.

Your brother in Christ,
A DISCIPLE.
Clemmonsville, N. C.

We publish the above letter and the comments on it, hoping thereby to benefit not only the brethren at Muddy Creek, but also others who may be inclined to go into such things. I think I know the party spoken of, "who had once been of us but had left and joined the Baptists," and I would not wonder at such a man being in favor of the coon and mink songs. Any man that will abandon the church and cause of Christ, and go to a human organization, about which there is not one word in the Bible, we might expect would be far better suited and much more delighted singing coon and mink songs, than songs of a spiritual character, for he would not want to sing songs that would remind him of the relation he once sustained to Christ, provided he was ever converted, and if he was not, they would remind him of how hypocritical he has been.

As to the minister spoken of, I think I know him too. He used to be considered sound, and kept himself aloof from sectarianism, did not mix up with them in their worship; but I saw, or thought I saw, when I was last in North Carolina, a disposition on his part to accept any and everything claiming to be christians as genuine, unless it was that grandest of all humbugs, Swedenborgianism, and he may by this time be ready to accept that, for when a man once cuts loose from the Bible, there is no telling where he will stop, only we learn from the Bible that he will eventually land in perdition, if he does not turn from such folly. May he examine himself in the light of God's word, and turn from his folly and wickedness, and thereby save himself, and be instrumental in saving others.

BRO. J. W. JACKSON.

Bro. J. W. Jackson, who has been with us for some time, has returned to Hillsboro. He will be absent about two weeks, and will then return and spend the summer and fall at Austin. Congregations wanting protracted meetings, and a sound gospel preacher to preach for them, will do well to write to him at this place, Box 36.

J. W. MCGARVEY ON THE WITNESS STAND.

Owing to Bro. McGarvey's great influence with the disciples of this age, and the fact that he has departed from apostolic grounds, in more particulars than one; and, as this great influence has enabled him to "draw away" many disciples after him and his human speculations, we began a series of articles some months ago to show some of his inconsistencies, hoping thereby to lead him back from his miry way, to the solid foundation that alone can stand the floods of time and the assaults of the world, the flesh and the devil. In those articles we began by asking him some plain, pertinent, but respectful questions. We were confident, that if we could get him to answering questions bearing on his teaching and practice in reference to immersed sectarians, we could so effectually show his inconsistencies, that he would return to consistent and apostolic grounds.

We thought that even if he should stiffen his neck against the true position, many brethren and sisters who now seem to be swinging to his coat-tail and blindly tumbling into the "ditch" of "our plea," might so clearly see these inconsistencies that they would extricate themselves from this pernicious course they have become entangled in and return to the "narrow way" mapped out by the apostles of Christ. But Bro. McGarvey, instead of answering our questions, or treating us respectfully or civilly, dropped us from his exchange list, and left us with no alternative but to call up his Commentary against him again, which we do. We arraign him before his brethren upon the charge of inconsistency. Now we open McGarvey's Commentary on Acts, and turn to page 5; or, rather, we call up J. W. McGarvey to testify against J. W. McGarvey—surely he will not attempt to impeach our witness!

Advocate.—Bro. McGarvey, as you are upon the witness stand, we ask you this question: What do you think the advantages are, if any, of the record of apostolic conversions found in Acts of apostles, over the popular conversions of this age?

Witness.—"They possess, indeed this advantage: that, in contrast with all of the conversions of the present day, they were guided by infallible teaching, and were selected by infallible wisdom from among thousands of others which had occurred, because of their peculiar fitness for a place in the inspired record. They have, we may say, twice passed the scrutiny of infinite wisdom; for, first, all the conversions which occurred under the preaching of inspired men were directed by the Holy Spirit; and, second, if any difference existed between those put on record and the others, the Holy Spirit, by selecting these few, decided in their favor as the best models for subsequent generations. If a sinner seek salvation according to the model of modern conversions, he may be misled; for his model is fallible at best, and may be erroneous; but if he imitate these inspired models, it is impossible for him to be misled, unless the Holy Spirit itself can mislead him."

A.—You say the sinner may be misled by seeking by modern models. I desire you to be a little more definite upon this point. What about such conversions when they are different in some respects from these apostolic models?—give us a prompt answer.

W.—"Moreover, in so far as any man's supposed conversion does not accord with these, it must be wrong; in so far as it does accord with these it must be right." See Commentary, p. 5.

A.—That will do, you only consider such conversions, supposed conversions! Now I will ask you a question on another point:

We see in Acts 8: 36, that when the eunuch saw water he desired baptism, yet the preceding verse only mentions that Philip preached unto him Jesus; now will you please tell us why the eunuch demanded baptism upon having Jesus preached to him?

W.—"There is only one answer to this question. It is, that to preach Jesus, after the apostolic method, involves full instruction upon the subject of immersion."

A.—Bro. McGarvey, I will ask you this question: Suppose some men preach that immersion has no connection with salvation, but that saved men ought to be immersed to honor God, how about their preaching?

W.—"Those only preach Jesus correctly who give to it the same prominence given to it in apostolic discourses." See Commentary, page 50.

A.—I will ask you one more question, and will then rest the case so far as count No. 1 is concerned, and take up count No. 2.

You recognize Baptists as Christians and receive them into Christian congregations upon their baptism; now do the preachers, under whom their "supposed conversions" were brought about, give to "immersion" the same prominence that is given to it in apostolic discourses?—did their teaching "involve full instruction upon the subject of immersion"?—in short, did these Baptists "preach Jesus after the apostolic method"—did they preach Jesus correctly; and do these "supposed conversions" "accord" with the models of conversion found in Acts? Please answer.

As the witness refuses to respond I must complain to the court that he "hangs his head and answers not one word," at this point.

As the court decides that it can not force a witness to criminate himself, I must submit, and pass to count No. 2.

A.—Bro. McGarvey, it is generally held that verse 37, of Acts 8, is an interpolation, does this fact render it less obligatory on us to earnestly contend for, the good confession, as an item of "the faith once delivered to the saints"?—please answer promptly.

W.—"The fact that such a confession as is here put in the mouth of the eunuch was uniformly required by the apostles, is evident from other passages of Scripture. It is quite certain that it was confessed by Timothy. Paul says to him: 'Fight the good fight of faith; lay hold on eternal life, into which you were called, and did confess the good confession before many witnesses.'" This confession was made at the beginning of his religious career; for it is connected with his call to eternal life. It is the same confession which is attributed to the eunuch; for Paul immediately adds: 'I charge thee before God, who gives life to all things, and Jesus Christ, who bore testimony under Pontius Pilate, to the good confession,' etc. Now, what is here called 'the good confession' is certainly the confession that he was the Christ, made before the Sanhedrim, under Pontius Pilate. But this is identified, by the terms employed, with the confession which Timothy had made, which is also 'the good confession that Jesus is the Christ,' the same attributed to the eunuch. Moreover, this confession was so conspicuous, at the time of Paul's writing, that it was known as the confession, and so highly esteemed as to be styled the good confession."

A.—Well, you have given an elaborate and clear answer. You are a good witness when you will hold your head up and speak right out in court. You do not leave any loop-holes in your answer, for that "orthodox" statement which Baptists and other sectarians make, and which some of our brethren now accept as "the good confession." You "identify" the good confession as just "such a confession as is here put in the mouth of the eunuch"—that is, just such a confession as is found in Acts 8: 37.

You think, then, that there is no doubt about Paul's teaching and demanding just "such a confession as is here put in the mouth of the eunuch," and, that we are safe, and not taking extreme ground, when we teach and demand that same "highly esteemed" confession, do you?

W.—"We have, therefore, both his premises and his conclusion, to sustain us in deciding that this confession was universal in the primitive Church, as a part of the apostolic ritual." See Com., p. 100.

A.—I will now ask you, Why do you suppose the language of Acts 8: 37 was "put into the mouth of the eunuch"?

W.—"Now, the object of the interpolator was to fill up what appeared a blank, so that Philip should not appear to have led the man into the water too abruptly."

A.—Thank you for such a prompt answer; but many now seem to think they can't be "led into the water too abruptly"—they think that there is really no use for any "instruction" on the subject of immersion, much less "full instruction!" They think that if they have heard of the death, burial and resurrection of Christ and believe this, that if they are led into the water believing that God ordained it for them to imitate "Thomson's colt" it is valid in God's sight.

Bro. McGarvey, some of our brethren hold that the confession is merely a means by which the administrator may determine the fitness of the subject for baptism; but, that if he has good reason for believing that the subject does believe that Jesus is the Christ, he may dispense with the confession. But, as you say, it is "part of the apostolic ritual," I want to know what you have to say about this position of these brethren—remember, I mean when I speak of the confession, just what you do, that it is just such a confession as is found in Acts 8: 37. Please answer.

W.—"The truth declared in the confession, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, is, beyond controversy, the foundation of the Church of Christ, and is so declared by Jesus himself. Without it no Church of Christ could possibly exist. It had to exist as a truth, and be demonstrated to men as such, before the Church could begin to be. The truth itself, however, and the confession of it, are two things entirely distinct. The former is the foundation; the latter a means of building on it." [Italics mine.]

A.—That makes the point clear; for I understand you, that although the foundation was solidly laid over eighteen hundred years ago, that no man can be built on that foundation till he makes just "such a confession as is put into the mouth of the eunuch;" now do I understand you?

W.—"There is no way to build an organization of men and women on a truth, except by a mutual confession of it, and an agreement to live together according to its obligations. When individuals, believing that Jesus is the Christ, mutually confess it, and agree to unite in the observance of its obligations, the immediate and necessary result is a Church. In this way the confession became an organic element in the ecclesiastical constitution." Com. pp. 101, 102.

A.—Bro. McGarvey, there is a strong tendency among some of our brethren to abandon this confession as a "ritual," or as an "organic element in the ecclesiastical constitution." Do you think this ought to be done, or that this "orthodox" statement should be recognized in its stead?

W.—“The angels all confessed the good confession, receiving Jesus as their Lord, and rendering thus their first act of worship to the Son of Mary. The one identical confession, therefore, has brought together, in one harmonious whole, God, angels, and men; the latter being pledged by it to eternal worship, and the former pledged forever to accept their grateful homage through Christ. That this confession was the only one required of candidates for immersion by the apostles, is universally admitted by those who are competent to judge. It is likewise admitted that they regarded it as a sufficient confession. This fact alone should teach men to be satisfied with it now. He, indeed, who is guided by the Bible alone, cannot require of men any other confession than such as he finds authorized by Bible precedents. * * * Fidelity to the word of God, therefore, binds us to this confession alone, and, in clinging to it, we have every assurance which inspiration can give that we are right.” See Com. p. 103. [The italics are ours, to make the witness speak a little louder on certain points.]

A.—So then, Bro. McGarvey, you do not think we ought to depart from this item of the “apostolic ritual,” or, “organic element in the ecclesiastical constitution,” but that we should “cling to such a confession as was put in the mouth of the church.”

W.—“Departure from apostolic precedent is never justifiable, except when the precedent itself was the result of circumstances peculiar to the apostolic age.” Com., p. 103. [Italics ours again.]

A.—But, Bro. McGarvey, sometimes it is said, that such a confession as is found in Acts 8: 37, is not exclusive enough; what have you to say to this?

W.—“It will exclude the Unitarian and the Universalist; for while they are willing to confess that Jesus is the Christ, in the next breath they deny him, by contradicting some of his most emphatic declarations. * * * It will exclude the devotee of the mourning bench, who waits for an operation of the Spirit before he comes to Christ. * * * None of these characters can scripturally make the good confession, without some specific change in view or in character.” Com., p. 105. [We had to make the witness speak a little louder again with our italics.]

A.—But, Bro. McGarvey, suppose it should be said, as it is now being said by the enemies of the FIRM FOUNDATION, that “Your confession is too exclusive,” what would you say?

W.—“We add, that it receives all whom the apostles would receive, and excludes all whom they would exclude.” Com., p. 105.

A.—Now, then, Bro. McGarvey, I will ask you this: Do you not receive Baptists and immersed persons from the denominations upon an immersion, that was not preceded by this “organic element in the ecclesiastical constitution,” which is a “part of the apostolic ritual”? and do not the statements that these persons make before their immersion, “deny Christ, by contradicting some of his most emphatic declarations”? Is not Christ's language in Mark 16: 15-16, where he promises salvation to those that believe and are baptized, an “emphatic declaration”? Is not Peter's language, (which is virtually Christ's language), when he says repent and be baptized for the remission of sins and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit, an “emphatic declaration”? Do not these parties deny these “emphatic declarations” when they say, before their immersion, that they believe that God for Christ's sake has already pardoned their sins? Yea, do they not doubly deny Peter's emphatic declaration when they say they have already received the gift of the Holy Spirit and the remission of sins? And do you think you are excluding those who “waited at the mourning bench for an operation of the Spirit,” when you receive such persons on such baptisms?—are you receiving such as this “apostolic ritual” you have been talking about receives, and are you excluding such as it excludes?—are you clinging to this “organic element in the ecclesiastical constitution,”—or are you unjustifiably “departing from apostolic precedent”? Please answer these questions as briefly as you can.

We will have to complain again, that the witness hangs his head like his “Doctor of Divinity,” and answers “not one word.”

As a witness cannot be compelled to criminate himself we will have to rest our case here, and depend, for a verdict of INCONSISTENCY, upon the intelligence and fairness of our brethren and sisters who are candid enough to look questions squarely in the face, and “be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive.” With them we will leave the case, till the “righteous Judge” shall pass upon it!

Now a concluding word to such as may be disposed to shut their eyes against the points made in this article. That concluding word is this: If you continue to bid Bro. McGarvey “God-speed” while he persists in his present course, refusing to correct his glaring inconsistencies and palpable departure from the “faith once delivered to the saints,” you become “partakers of his evil deeds!”

If Bro. McGarvey cannot see his inconsistency, when the points we have adduced from his “Commentary on Acts” are laid by the side of his practice in receiving Baptists and other immersed sectarians on such baptisms, I verily believe a lunatic asylum is a more appropriate place for him than a Bible College!—but he can see it! So it remains to be seen what he will do—whether he will please men or God!

A. McG.

LET HIM PRODUCE HIS PROOF.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I must tell you of a funny little incident that took place between Bro. Wallis and myself on one side, and Bro. Humphrey and Bro. Callison on the other.

I went to Eugene City on business and soon learned that a “big gun”—a new preacher by the name of Humphrey, was to preach there that night. So I concluded to stop and hear him, and I must say that he gave us a very good discourse.

As soon as the people were dismissed, Bro. Wallis came to me and requested me to continue his F. F. another year; and while I was congratulating him upon his wise choice of papers, Bros. Humphrey and Callison came along, and hearing us talk about a paper, Humphrey asked for the name of the paper. When I told him that it was the F. F., he became very much excited; his eyes popped out, and he looked somewhat like he would soon be ready for the asylum.

He raised his hand very high and brought it down with wonderful emphasis and said: “McGary is a fraud!” I told him that I was not personally acquainted with Bro. McGary, but I thought that his paper came nearer the truth than any paper I ever read. I suppose from the way he spoke, he thought that I had not read very much; so he asked me if I had read the Guide. I told him that I had. He then asked if I had read the Standard. I told him I had. Then his disgust seemed to rise to a wonderful height and he talked as if he had been all through and around about where you have caused so much trouble in the churches; and that you had left the church in disgrace, or had been withdrawn from, or words to that amount. He said, that in twenty years, he believed that McGary, although so much opposed to sects, would himself be the leader of a sect.

Once in a while, when he would get a little out of breath, I put in a word edge-ways, and told him that he could not make me believe such things. He seemed to be much surprised when I told him that I would not take his word for it, and asked me if I wanted the proof. I told him I did, and he said he could bring the proof. I do not suppose that he will try to bring any proof, but one thing he will do, that is to thoroughly abuse you while he is in Eugene City.

I think I have never seen a more venomous spirit manifested by any person claiming to be a Christian. Several of the brethren wish to hear from you concerning this man Humphrey.

Your brother in Christ,
JAMES GROSS,
Elmira, Oregon, Feb. 12, '88.

I thank Bro. Gross for the interest he takes in this matter, and especially for giving me a chance to confront this foul aspersion of my character. But I remember that “vengeance” is God's, and that “they that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution.” I know that the enemies of truth even tried to break down the character of my Lord and Master—“the disciple is not above his Master, nor the servant above his lord.”—Matt. 10: 24.

I know nothing of this Bro. Humphrey, don't think I ever heard of him before, and am sorry I have heard of him this time, since he hates the truth of God so badly that he feels justified in laboring to smut the character of those he does not know, only as defenders of the truth he hates, and opposers of the human traditions and perversions he loves. I am much more ready to show up a man's corruptness when he attacks God's truth than when he attacks my individual character, though I am far from surrendering my character for a foot-ball for these little theological charlatans to kick all over Oregon.

Let Bro. Humphrey furnish Bro. Gross with all of the proof he claims to have against my christian standing, and especially to show that I have ever been withdrawn from, or even had charges preferred against me in any congregation. Then let Bro. Gross furnish me with a copy of this proof and I hereby promise every word of it to the readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION. He has brought the charge, now let him bring forward the proof. This he will do if he is a christian, or any part of a gentleman; and if he is neither, I cannot afford to give him further attention. This will test him as to whether he is a conscientious gentleman or a scoundrel. Let him not run off to some other paper and kick up a dust where I cannot get at him, but let him avail himself of the use of our columns. If I am the character he represents me to be, my readers are the very ones to know it.

But now, to satisfy any fair-minded brother or sister who may have heard these slanders, I submit the following:

I was born and raised within one hundred and fifty miles of Austin, Texas. I lived in Madison county, Texas, from the time I was eight years old till five years ago, when I moved to Austin. I obeyed the gospel at Madisonville, Madison county, and remained a member of that congregation without intermission till I moved to Austin. When I went to Austin they gave me a letter to the Austin church, which I put in, and became identified with that church immediately.

Now the same old members of the Madisonville church are there still—it has been called the best church in Texas by several preaching brethren who know most of the Texas congregations, but I fear it is not as good as it used to be. If my standing was bad from the time I was eight years old till five years ago, these Madisonville brethren and sisters know all about it. I will give some of their names so that any one who may feel disposed can enquire into this matter. Bros. J. B. Lee and wife, Dr. R. Westmoreland and wife, J. L. Rolling and wife, John Manning and wife, and sisters Sallie Randolph and M. E. Jenkins. I could name many others but have not the space. Let any who may feel so disposed write to Bro. Lee, he is the county clerk and one of the leading members of the church. I ask these brethren and sisters to be candid and state if these things are true of me.

I had not been with the Austin church long till I saw that they were brimful of the spirit of innovation. W. E. Hall was their "pastor." I often remonstrated with him against these things; but they waxed worse and worse, until I regarded them in a state of spiritual stagnation, and asked for a letter, that I might unite with some more congenial brethren, where God's heritage would not be lorded over by a modern pastor, and where I would not have to behold theological dramas and by-plays in the house of God, and where all sorts of pious tricks and frolics and theological jugglery would not be witnessed and resorted to, to raise the pastor's salary, and where the widow and the orphan would not be wholly forgotten in the hot-haste after new and sinful things. Well, Bro. Hall announced my desire for a letter, and,—pardon me for saying, that he complimented my christian deportment while I had been with them—they granted me a letter. But, as I could not find a congregation convenient at the time, and as some of the members requested me to remain and try them a while longer before I had my letter issued, I consented and remained with them till they refused to allow an old gospel preacher—a man whom I knew to be a good, sound preacher and upright Christian—have the house to preach in, when they were not using it. Then I said to the elder, that he was not fit for the position of elder, and added, that I could not conscientiously worship with them any longer.

Then I, with some others who had been driven away by the same sinful innovations, commenced meeting from house to house, which we kept up till I left Austin last June. I will name some of these brethren: Bro. E. Hansbrough and wife, T. H. Gillespie, Miles Hall and wife, James Henderson and wife, John Hargrave, Jack Martin, sisters Ann and Erin Miller, Haygood, and some others.

Now I call on these brethren and sisters to know if my christian standing has been good or bad; and to know if they have ever heard of these charges Bro. Humphrey brings against me, and if what I have said is not true?

I have written several articles—some in the Gospel Advocate, and some in the FIRM FOUNDATION—exposing these innovations of the Austin church; and in these articles I have said some uncomplimentary things of W. E. Hall and the Austin church, and other modern pastors they have employed since Hall. This is all the Austin church will urge against me I think. This is my offending. Brethren, I have stated the facts in the case in advance; for I have no idea Bro. Humphrey will try to prove his charges. So I leave the matter with you.

I forgot to state that after all of this the Austin church gave me a complimentary letter which I have in my possession.

COMMENDATION.

This is to certify that we, the undersigned members of the Church of Christ, are well acquainted with Bro. A. McGary, and we know him to be an honest, truthful upright Christian gentleman.

E. M. Henderson,
J. T. Martin and wife,
L. O. Johnson,
C. A. Miller,

T. H. Gillespie.

I have been intimately acquainted with Bro. A. McGary for the last five or six years, and know that his walk during that time has been that of a christian, and Bro. Humphrey ought to prove what he said about him, or retract it as publicly as he has said it, or the brethren ought to withdraw from him.

OUR NEW TRACT.

I have just finished reading Bro. J. W. Jackson's "Sequel to Zeke Jackson." Bro. Jackson has used the "Grub-Ar" some in this work, and I think Mr. Nichols will have to give his "ax" a good grinding to get the gaps out of it before it will do to thrust into another "Campbellite" path—the roots it has been grubbed into, all turned out to be solid rocks, and the edge of this Methodist implement has been turned and gapped till it had to be thrown over the fence for repairs. I regard it a valuable pamphlet. Send for it and circulate it. For price, see third column, eighth page.

TALKS WITH THE SISTERS.

Dear Sisters:

I read with great interest every line that appears from the sisters and note with pleasure the earnest tone that characterizes them and am so glad to see new ones appearing all the time. These short letters of exhortation and admonition do more good than perhaps the writers dream of.

The time has come, dear sisters, when we need constant help of this kind. Satan is busy among us leading many astray daily. The paths he invites us to tread are flower-strewn, very inviting, pleasures awaiting us at every turn, but all leading—where? To destruction! I recently read the story of a youth who was deeply enamored of a lovely though heartless woman. One day he received a dainty, perfumed missive from her, appointing a meeting with him in a certain palace. Gladly he hastened thither. He found a marble structure, lovely beyond description, with richly-varied mosaic floors, and tropical plants blooming on every side. As he approached the entrance the doors of broad leaves and brilliant flowers opened noiselessly and as silently closed behind him. The interior was fabulously gorgeous and beautiful and for a long while he was completely absorbed in its varied charms. But ere long he noted that everything was ominously silent and he began to feel nervous and apprehensive, as no one appeared. He tried the doors and found them locked. Then he realized with a shudder that he was a prisoner, lured to his death by his charmer, that his rival might no longer fear his power. So with Satan, His pitfalls are oftenest hidden amid the loveliest surroundings. To those who cannot be tempted by bold allurements, he proffers "innocent amusements," such as the "parlor dance," private theatricals and the like.

My mind was directed to this train of thought by hearing of some brethren and sisters who so far forgot "the vocation wherewith they are called," as to give dances at their houses Christmas. These remarks may seem out of season to some, but we are told to be "instant in season and out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine."—2 Tim. 4: 2.

We all doubtless know this festive day is of Roman Catholic origin, instituted to commemorate the supposed natal day of our Savior. The real date of his birth is unknown; but this we do know, that he was born, lived a life of suffering and died on the cruel Roman cross that we might have everlasting life. Then if we will keep this time in memory of Him, let us do so in a befitting manner. We have, perhaps, from infancy regarded this day as sacred and as it approaches, the thoughts of many are of that sweet Bethlehem babe. The natal hymns find expression on our lips in subdued song. This past, lovely Christmas the following sweet words came to me o'er and o'er:

"Glad Christmas bells, your music tells
The sweet and pleasant story,
How came to earth in lowly birth
The Lord of life and glory.
No palace halls with ceilings tall
His kingly head spread over,
There only stood a stable rude
This heavenly babe to cover."

Every true christian's mind naturally turns to this phase of the holiday, the birth of the Christ, the world's Redeemer. But alas, many calling themselves christians enter upon it with all the abandonment of the worldling, spending money uselessly and lending their influence and presence to many sinful amusements. They act very much as though they had a Pope or priest to grant them an indulgence to sin throughout this season. But our high priest has made no provision for such holidays, but all days are His, for he says, "if any man will come after me, let him take up his cross daily and follow me." What is the measure of a christian's faith who will deliberately make a dance-hall of his house? A mustard seed is a mountain compared to it. The writer once rebuked a christian brother for doing this and his defence was, "the young people will dance and he thought it was better for them to dance at a respectable place than with a lot of roughs at a public hall."

Now if there were a set of lawless men in a country that needed hanging "without judge or jury," he might just as consistently argue that it would be better for a body of christians to take the vengeance that belongs only to God into their hands and hang these fellows, than for a lot of roughs to do it. But what a fearful mistake! Shall we do evil that good may come of it?

This same brother has a young daughter, who is an earnest christian, who has made up her mind to forego all sinful pleasures, who seems to hunger and thirst after righteousness, yet this brother will deliberately set a snare for her young feet by having dances at his house. Our Savior said it were better for a man if a mill-stone were hanged about his neck and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend (cause to stumble) one of his little ones!

Satan has agents and emissaries busy at Christmas-tide, inventing all sorts of attractions to allure young feet from the path of duty, and rarely a holiday passes that witnesses not the return of some young christian to the weak and beggarly elements of the world.

Now why cannot every christian constitute him or herself God's especial agent to counteract this evil influence? We must use as much energy about our Father's business as Satan does in his. Why cannot each congregation have a good preacher to come at that time and hold forth the promises of this Prince of Peace, whom angels announced on Bethlehem's plains eighteen centuries ago? Why cannot we sisters go out into the highways and by-ways and fill our Father's house with guests that their souls may be feasted on the bread of life?

It is an open question whether it is right for christians to observe Christmas at all, but if we will, let us listen to our Savior's injunction: "When thou makest a dinner or a supper call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbors; lest they bid thee again and a recompense be made thee. But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind. And thou shalt be blessed, for they can not recompense thee." Now, do any of us do this? Do we not rather the very thing the Savior forbids?

Verily when He returns, shall He find faith on the earth? All these omissions occur from lack of faith; for we walk by faith and if our faith be dim we will stumble into some of Satan's pitfalls. Oh, then let us renew our faith and consecrate our lives anew to the service of Him who is able to keep us from falling and present us faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy. To Him be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.

SARAL.

QUERIES.

Where do our preaching brethren get their authority for standing while praying in public places?

Your sister in Christ,
M. E. WEBB.

LeWalt, Texas.

I think they get it from that scripture that says "submit yourselves to every ordinance of man, for the Lord's sake."

Kneeling is the proper attitude of prayer, being expressive of that spirit of humility, dependence and reverence that should characterize every true worshipper of God.

J. W. J.

1. Were the Fathers of the Reformation baptized for the remission of sins?

2. If not, were they in the kingdom?

M. L. BOSTICK.

1. I do not know.

2. No. One of the promises of the New Covenant is: "I will put my laws into their minds and write them in their hearts."—Heb. 8: 10. This was promised and is done, in order that all shall know the Lord, (Heb. 8: 11), and "obey from the heart the form of doctrine delivered them."—Rom. 6: 17. This form of doctrine, or law of the spirit of life (Rom. 8: 3) makes us free. Can obedience be from the heart without first having the law or command written or impressed upon the heart? The law of the Lord requires the believing penitent to confess with the mouth the Lord Jesus and be baptized for the remission of sins; obedience to this law takes man into the kingdom of heaven. Any other law obeyed does not take man into the kingdom, because God would not put an imperfect or mutilated law into their minds. The "forms of doctrine" taught and obeyed by the sectarian world are not of God, hence obedience to them does not take one into the kingdom.

J. W. J.

Why is it that the disciples of Christ do not wash each other's feet now?

A YOUNG BROTHER.

All Christians place a proper estimate, I hope, upon cleanliness; hence they practice foot-washing at home, and do not wait for a weekly, monthly or quarterly assembly of the brethren in order to make an act of worship out of that which belongs exclusively to the "good works" enjoined upon disciples. Some people, however, honestly believe that "foot-washing" is an act of worship enjoined upon the church and to be observed in connection with the Lord's supper. For their benefit I submit the following:

1. The supper at which the Saviour washed his disciples' feet was not "the Lord's supper." The Lord's supper was instituted after the Passover had been eaten. Matt. 26: 18-28, Luke 22: 13-18. The supper spoken of in John 12: 1-17, was in Bethany "before the feast of the Passover." After the occurrence of the foot washing and the subsequent conversation of Jesus about being betrayed, and Judas had left the assembly, John says: "Some of them thought, because Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, buy those things that we have need of against the feast."—Verse 29. This certainly is conclusive that foot-washing has no connection with the Lord's supper.

2. There is a broad distinction between acts of worship, and good works. We worship God; we do good works to and for our brethren. Foot-washing cannot possibly be ranked as worship, but it is placed among good works.—1 Tim. 5: 9-10.

3. The example embodies a principle that must be taken as a rule of action. The example here given, like the parables of Jesus, taught a lesson which was confirmed by apostolic teaching. Remember that Jesus commanded these apostles to teach "all things whatsoever I have commanded you."

The lesson in this chapter inculcates humility and the obligation of ministering unto each other's comforts and necessities. If Jesus the Lord and Master could condescend to perform the menial service of washing the feet of his own servants, then there should be in them the same spirit of humility and condescension. "Whoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." The apostles teach that we must be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another. Distributing to the necessity of the saints; given to hospitality. Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate.

To confirm the fact, that the example here given is to enforce a principle rather than to institute a custom or ordinance, I invite attention to other examples.

In 1 Cor., 10: 1-11, Paul refers to the wicked actions of the Jews while they traveled through the wilderness, and specified the things done. He says, "these things were our examples." How can wicked actions such as idolatry, fornication, tempting God, and murmuring against him be "our examples?" Paul says, "to the intent we should not lust after evil things." Again he says, "all these things happened unto them for examples, (that is, they were punished), and they are written for our admonition." The design of these examples is, that we may not do as they did.

Again, Peter speaking of the sufferings of Christ says, "Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps."—1 Pet. 2: 21. Does this mean that we must literally pass through the same sufferings that Jesus endured? No, but rather that you should arm yourselves likewise with the same mind that was in Jesus.—1 Pet. 4: 1. "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."—Phil. 2: 5. What mind? An humble, patient self-sacrificing spirit. One that does no sin; that when reviled, reviles not again; when suffering, threatens not, but commits itself into the hands of Him who judgeth righteously.—1 Pet. 1: 22-24. The religion of Jesus teaches us to abound in good works. To feed the hungry; clothe the naked; visit the sick and the poor and minister to their necessities. In doing this it may be frequently necessary to wash some poor saints' feet, and I doubt not that Christians who love Jesus, will be ever ready to do this good work, but not as an act of worship. J. W. J.

STILL SILENT.

Since writing "J. W. McGarvey On The Witness Stand," I have seen his very flimsy subterfuge in the Guide of March 9th, in the way of excuse for not giving attention to articles that have appeared in his exchanges tending to show his inconsistencies. He knows that he can't extricate himself from these charges without making some admissions; and that is why he does not make the attempt.

No man who loves truth and believes that he is in harmony with truth, will silently rest, as our several articles against his consistency have left Bro. McGarvey. A man must know that he is too badly tangled in his own sophistry to have any struggling room before he will tamely submit to such exposures. The true and humble spirit of christianity will spur any man to either undertake to show that he is not inconsistent, or to acknowledge that he is, and to make amends.

As we have often said, so say we again: it is not a desire on our part to injure Bro. McGarvey that prompts us to expose his inconsistencies; but it is a desire to further the interests of truth.

Bro. McGarvey says: "I have quit going around with a chip on my shoulder, and I will never fight again just to show how easily I can whip somebody." Well, that is a commendable resolution; but it is not what has kept him silent in reference to our articles, and some that he refers to from Bro. Herndon; but I suspect that it was to keep from showing how easily he could be whipped that has stayed his pen along here. The man who is inconsistent and knows it, and yet persists in his inconsistencies, cannot be actuated by the Spirit of Christ! The man who cannot see Bro. McGarvey's inconsistencies as they have been shown by Bro. Herndon, in reference to his organ and missionary society teachings, and by the writer, as shown on fourth page in this issue of our paper, in reference to receiving immersed sectarians, must have his heart fearfully wrapped up in obscuring veils and dark delusions.

HONEST ERRORISTS.

O God, the God of the spirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be angry with all the congregation.—Num. xvi: 22.

This was the prayer of Moses and Aaron in behalf of two hundred and fifty of the children of Israel who had gone off after the false teachers. Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, who not satisfied with the office of serving the tabernacle, sought the priesthood also, and thus cause division and the alienation of two hundred and fifty of the children of Israel from God. Korah, Dathan and Abiram had done this thing "presumptuously" and the penalty was death.—Num. xv: 30-31. This Moses well knew. But his heart went out in prayer for the two hundred and fifty who had been duped and misled by the error of those men, hoping, no doubt, that God would inflict punishment only upon the leaders. But God's answer to that prayer, and the sequel tell us of the destruction of Korah, Dathan and Abiram by a new or uncommon way; the earth opened her mouth and swallowed them up, and fire came out from the Lord and consumed the two hundred and fifty. But the end is not yet, all the congregation murmured against Moses and Aaron, saying: "Ye have killed the people of the Lord;" thus manifesting their approval of error, and their sympathy with the errorists, they became partakers of their evil deeds, and fourteen thousand seven hundred were destroyed.

These people were sincere, no doubt, nevertheless they were in error. Hence their destruction. You remember the "man of God" who went out of Judah unto Bethel to warn Jeroboam of his idolatrous worship, and of the destruction of the altar, and that God told him to "eat no bread nor drink water nor return again by the same way that thou camest." And as he was returning, a false teacher came to him as he was sitting under an oak tree, and said to him, "I am a prophet as thou art, etc., and the Lord has told me to bring you back with me to my house to eat bread and drink water." "But he lied unto him." Nevertheless the man of God went off after that false teacher; and the record tells us that as he returned he was slain in the way by a lion, because he had disobeyed the commandment of God. He undoubtedly put implicit confidence in the words of the old prophet, but believing a lie, though honest in his belief, cost him his life. 1 Kgs. 13.

Again, we might refer to the prophets of Baal who were slain at the brook Kishon for forsaking the commandments of the Lord and going into idolatry, and many others, to show: 1. "That what a people think is right, that is right to them," is exceedingly dangerous ground to stand upon. 2. That not the false teachers alone were punished for their false doctrines, but the followers, although deceived and misled, were alike responsible and suffered the penalty of the law.

But, says one, this is all Old Testament teaching, and the law of Moses, and your people say we are not under the law. True. But Paul says, "Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning."—Rom. 20: 4. "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples and they are written for our admonition."—1 Cor. 10: 11. "For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven."—Heb. 12: 25, and 2: 2-3.

We look back and we see that it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. That every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; and we now look forward to the day that God has appointed in the which he will judge the world. Acts 16: 31. "And reserve the unjust unto the day of judgement to be punished." And in that day "he that is unjust let him be unjust still," and the unprofitable servant will be cast into outer darkness. God has spoken unto us in these last days by his Son, and the command is, "hear ye him."

Christ said of the scribes and Pharisees "they be blind, leaders of the blind, and if the blind lead the blind both shall fall into the ditch." The led, as well as the leader. They were blinded, in that they taught for doctrine the commandments of men. How sad to see thousands of blind leaders teaching for doctrine the commandments of men, and hundreds of thousands of the blind led—some of them our own flesh and blood—into the ditch. Many of them the best of men and women morally, and we irresistibly ask ourselves: Will these people be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power? And we hopefully go to the divine record for an answer, and we read: "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven. But he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

We again ask, do the one thousand different denominations do the will of the Father in heaven? And again we go to the divine record for an answer, and we read: "There is one body instead of one thousand. And that the one body should not be divided, but that it be perfectly joined together, and speaking the same thing, being of the same mind and of the same judgment, and that there be no divisions among us. Hence in the light of God's truth we are compelled to say: Alas, the hope of this people lies not in that which God has revealed to man. And like Moses and Aaron of old, our hearts go out in earnest prayer for these people, and we ask, "Lord are there few that be saved?" And the answer comes back from the Savior: "Strive to enter in at the straight gate, for many I say unto you will seek to enter in and shall not be able."

The Scriptures which I have examined briefly, are not applicable alone to sectarianism, but to many who were once of us, but went out from us that it might be manifest that they are not of us, of whom there is less hope, in my opinion, than for the most bigoted sectarian. For it would have been better for them not to have known the way of the Lord, than to have known it and then turn from the holy commandments delivered unto them. "Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his, and let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity."

Thank the Lord for the good work of the brethren of the F. F. in bringing back to the old paths the C. M. Therefore my beloved brethren be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labors are not in vain in the Lord.

Your brother in hope,
B. R. HEFLEY.

TO THE SISTER READERS OF THE FIRM FOUNDATION.

Dear Sisters:

I feel that I must try to write something for the cause of Christ. I see other sisters advocating the Lord's side of the question, and I know it is my duty to try to do something to help along His cause.

I am a reader of the F. F. and would not be without it for anything. I am always very anxious to ready the sisters' letters, and wish that more of them would write, and write longer letters. Sisters, I am glad to see so many of you in the noble work for our dear Savior, for there is great work for us to do as christian wives and mothers.

First, we must strive to make home cheerful and pleasant for the coming of our dear husbands; and then how hard we ought to strive to make home a cheerful place for our little ones, so that they will love home, and when they grow up they will not want to stray away from it, and, of course, get into bad company. How careful we ought to be in training them while they are young; teach them to love the Lord and obey his holy will, for, dear sisters, if we wait till they grow up and have a way of their own, then it will be too late.

If we teach them to do right now while they are young, then, when they grow up, if they should get into some kind of trouble, they can not say, well, mother is to blame for she never taught me what was right. Then, mothers, how careful we ought to be, for how would we feel, to know that we had neglected our own duty so far as to have our own dear children accuse us as above. Then let us, one and all, teach our children to love the Lord our Savior, then we can say and feel that we have done our duty as far as it is in our power.

Oh, ye mothers, train your darlings
So to love their homes, that they,
With the idle and the vicious,
Will never go astray.

With a chain of strong affection,
Bind them to the safe retreat,
That their minds may not be tainted
By the lessons of the street.

Your Sister in Christ,
OZELLIE McELRATH.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

Please send me the F. F. and I will pay for it as soon as I can. I stand on the same foundation as respects the sects. I had a debate last October with a Baptist, and in studying the design of baptism, I was converted entirely from sectism. May God bless you in the publication of the F. F.

Your brother in Christ,
T. J. T.
Clarksville, Ark.

McGary & Hansbrough:

I like the F. F. I am a poor farmer and unable to pay for it now, but if you will send it on, I will pay for it in the future. I am a member of the Methodist church, but I like to read the truth, let it come from where it may.

Yours truly,
W. W. WILLIAMSON.

No doubt there are some nettles in the world. There are unpleasant things said, hard things that tend to make life smart keenly. But we put far more nettles into the world than are there originally. The real nettles are ourselves, in our own uncomfortable, petulant, sour, selfish dispositions, and they spread their own character over nature.—Selected.

While there is much misery and sin in the world, a man has no right to lull himself to sleep in a paradise of self-improvement and self-enjoyment, in which there is but one supreme Adam, one perfect specimen of humanity—namely, himself. He ought to go out and work—fight, if it must be, wherever duty calls him.—Selected.

PUBLISHER'S NOTES.

If you see a big RED CROSS on your paper, you may know your subscription is out. Please renew if you want the paper.

Bro. J.W. Jackson's article, on the first page this issue, is the best one of its kind I have read in some time.

We have several articles on hand relative to the resurrection of unbelievers, which will receive attention as soon as we can reach them.

We will not put the blue cross on any of the papers hereafter, as we are prepared to send receipts for money as fast as sent in. If you fail to get a receipt, write to us inside of thirty days for it.

DEBATE.—There will be a debate at Lanham, Hamilton county, Texas, beginning May 21, '88, to continue six days, between J. D. Tant, of the Church of Christ, and F. S. Payne, of the Missionary Baptist church.

Several have written requesting the removal of the red cross, promising to remit as soon as they can. We will remove the cross when requested to do so, and will keep the red cross on all those who do not write us about it, or notify us otherwise.

Met up with Bro. Bush, Sanders and Riell in LaGrange on the 16th of March, as I was on my way to Alleyton. Bro. Sanders and Riell went on to Columbus, and we found out wherein we differed, and discussed these differences all the way to Smith's Junction, where we parted.

CORRECTION.—In the F. F. of March 1, '88, fifth page, third column and 27th line of Bro. Lane's article "Order vs. Confusion," for "had been in water," read "had been immersed in water." In fourth column, same article, at the 13th item specified, read "an unscriptural eldership."

I left the office of the F. F. March 15th, for a few days' visit to my mother near Alleyton, Colorado county, on account of sickness in two of my brother's families. Bro. Will's wife died of typhoid-malarial fever, in Eagle Lake, after an illness of several weeks, and was buried in Alleyton, before I reached there. Our friends were very kind in time of need, and for which they have our sincere thanks.

Bro. I. C. Stone's address, from this time on until further notice, will be Sumner, Lawrence county, Ill., Box 177. Bro. Stone is an old man and is poor in this world's goods, but rich in faith, sound on the gospel, and an able preacher. He has changed his abode because the brethren would not respond to his necessities in Indiana. Every reader of the F. F. should aid Bro. Stone in his old age, and I will be one of a thousand to send him a dollar. All money sent to me for him will be forwarded to him immediately and receipt given. T. H. GILLESPIE.

SECT BAPTISM NOT VALID BAPTISM.

God requires certain conditions of the sinner before he is a proper subject for baptism. These conditions are: 1, faith; 2, repentance; 3, confession; and, 4th, to be valid, the act must be performed for the remission of sins. Have the sects these conditions, when immersed? They have not. God requires the sinner first to believe the truth with all his heart; to believe that Jesus is the Christ is to believe the truth, the gospel. Paul says to the Ephesians, "In whom (Christ) ye also trusted after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation."—Eph. 1: 13. Peter says, "but the word of the Lord endureth forever, and this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you."—1 Pet. 1: 25. Again, "sanctify them through the truth, thy word is truth."—John 17: 17.

It is said that Philip preached Jesus unto the eunuch and the eunuch asked, "what doth hinder me to be baptized?" And Philip said, if thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Upon this he baptized him. Acts 8: 26-40. Now we see that to believe that Jesus is the Christ is to believe with all the heart, the truth taught by Christ and His apostles, the doctrine, the gospel.

The sects do not have this faith, for they do not believe the doctrine taught by Christ and His apostles, and therefore they do not believe that Jesus is the Christ, nor do they believe the truth, the gospel; for, to believe that Jesus is the Christ is not to simply believe that there is such a person as Christ, but it is to believe the doctrine taught by Christ. In no other way can we believe in Christ. I said that the sects do not believe this doctrine taught by Christ and His apostles. All the subjects that are immersed by them believe, or, at least, they subscribe to the doctrines taught by them. Now we will prove that neither the subjects that are immersed by them, nor themselves believe the doctrine taught by Christ.

1. Christ's doctrine is, that faith is the act of the man, the belief of testimony, and that it comes by hearing God's word.—John 20: 30-31, Rom. 10: 13. The sects do not believe this, but believe that faith is the direct gift of God, which is not taught in the Bible.

2. Christ's doctrine is, that the first thing the sinner must do after hearing the gospel is to believe.—Heb. 11: 6. The sects do not believe this, but they believe that repentance comes before faith; that the first thing the sinner must do is to repent, and then believe.

3. Christ's doctrine is, that baptism to the believing penitent is for the remission of sins.—Mark 16: 15-16, Acts 2: 38. The sects do not believe this; they believe that God pardons the sinner before he is baptized.

4. Christ's doctrine is, that being born again, is to be first begotten of God by the word of truth (Jas. 1: 18), and then born of water, or immersed, John 3: 5. The sects do not believe this; they believe that being born again is a change from the love of sin to the love of holiness, done before faith, repentance or obedience.

5. Christ's doctrine is, that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, Rom. 1: 16. The sects do not believe this; they believe that the word of God is a dead letter. We see in these five things, that they believe a lie instead of the truth. In fact, they believe a lie in all of their believing, and this alone proves that their dipping is not an ordinance of God: for they that believe a lie will be damned.—2 Thea. 2: 10-12. And this is not all, for according to their own logic, they have no repentance. If repentance comes before faith, then they have no faith when they repent, therefore cannot believe that he has any sins, or that there is a God, heaven or hell. Paul says: "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin," Rom. 14: 18; then, according to their logic, if they have any repentance at all, it is a sinful one.

Now we have proven that the sects have neither faith nor repentance required by the gospel. Have they made the good confession? They have not, nor do they require it at all; they do not believe in it, and they call those who require it of the candidates, "Campbellites." This is calling Christ and his apostles "Campbellites." There is no getting around it (the confession); it is just as much essential to a valid baptism as faith and repentance. In fact, God requires it of every sinner in order to salvation, and no one in the days of the apostles obtained salvation without making this confession.

Paul says: "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. 10: 10. This is the confession that every believing penitent is commanded to make. The Messiahship of Jesus, is the great central truth of christianity; it is the truth which vitalizes the whole system and stamps it with the divine image. The Lord Jesus is the Alpha and Omega of the Christian religion. His divinity is that truth around which all other truths revolve. There is nothing strange, then, in the fact, that God has made a confession of this truth a cardinal element in obedience to the gospel. The eunuch's case shows that it must be made before baptism. We have now shown that the sects have not that faith, repentance and confession required by the word of God in order to constitute the sinner a fit subject for baptism.

Now I ask those shaking brethren, who think to shake the sects into the Church of Christ, to stop and honestly and candidly consider this matter.

The sects do not immerse their subjects for the right design. God requires the believing penitent to be immersed for the remission of sins; but they take their candidates, who claim to be already pardoned, down into the water and immerse them. Of what account is such a baptism? None in the world. God has a design in everything pertaining to christianity, and if these things are not done for the right design, the persons do not obey the command. For instance, Christ in speaking of the Lord's supper says: "This do in remembrance of me."

Luke 22: 19. To remember him, is the design of this supper; now suppose that I take this supper in remembrance of Garfield, would I receive any blessings therefrom? All would answer, no. Why so? Because you did not do it for the right design.

I have preached the gospel to a great many of the sects in this country, some will not hear, will not obey. The more I preach the word the more they hate me and the word of God, and yet some of our so-called brethren say that such people are Christians. Lord save us from this evil. Amen.

WORDS OF WARNING.

Woe unto them . . . that chant to the sound of the viol, and invent to themselves instruments of music, like David.—Amos 6: 5. Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs: for I will not hear the melody of thy viola.—Amos 6: 22. This prophecy is a solemn warning to those who are departing from the will of the Lord.

Listen to the words of Job. 21: 7-18: "Wherefore do the wicked live, become old, yea, are mighty in power? They send forth their children like a flock, and their children dance; they take the timbrel and harp, and rejoice at the sound of the organ; they spend their days in pleasure, and in a moment go down to the grave." "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion." The word of God contains the grandest promises given to poor fallible man. It contains the most solemn warnings ever listened to. Bitter judgments are pronounced upon those recreant to the Master. Indescribable blessings await the true and faithful ones.

Dear brethren, guard against the temptations of pride, luxury, and all carnality. Remember that, "Pride goeth before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall." The whole Jewish nation and their proud city, were punished severely for their vices resulting from wealth and ease. Take warning from rich, proud, haughty Babylon. How she was humbled in the very dust!

Look again at the beautiful "cities of the plains." Coming down to the writings of inspired men, in the New and better Covenant, we are told that these are set forth as examples to them that should afterward live ungodly. Like Nebuchadnezzar, the proud and haughty king, many persist in violating God's laws. The church of the present is far from exemption from many vices, and should look well to these warnings. May she heed them, e'er her sun set at noon, and darken our land!

Christ through John admonished the church at Sardis "to be watchful, and establish the things which were ready to die, for I will come upon thee as a thief." Oh, ye worldly churches, take warning and watch. Christ wants his children to know the truth and to stand as valliant soldiers.

The church at Laodicea was lukewarm—neither hot nor cold. Such service is not acceptable. We must be for him, or against him, in Christ's name, or by his authority, all things commanded must be done. He being the door, all things done in his service, must be done by his authority. But there is another door—a "back door" made by the great adversary of souls. It is through this door that all the heresies and innovations have been introduced. Image worship, extreme unction, infant sprinkling, instrumental music, church festivals, etc., have come through this door. Modern speakers and writers call this door "the law of expediency." I think they need to learn over again the Alpha of the doctrine of Christ.

Paul said: "When I was a child, I spoke as a child, but when I became a man, I put away childish things." Many modern churches linger back in baby or childhood, and demand their playthings, and these they will have at the expense of the peace and happiness of the children of God.

We need men, brave men, like Luther to nail last to the church doors all over this land the solemn protests and warnings of Jehovah against the vices of these churches. Very few churches are exempt from the errors of Rome, or the evils of Jewish formalism.

Buckle on the armor, dear brethren, and press forward in the grand contest against sin and the many departures from the truth. On to victory.

ORDER VS. CONFUSION.

In my last article I wrote of the organ; of its origin and the evil effects it has had in causing strife, confusion, division, alienation and every evil work, since its introduction into the work and worship of the Lord; it is therefore not of God, and hence must be of the evil one.

In this I shall speak of the sectarian creature that is called by the name of "Missionary Society," that has, by the progressives, been lugged into the Lord's fold, in order to ape the nations around us, and become more like them and less God-like. And it is in and through this child of the evil one that they propose to work. Work for what? They say, "For the glory of God and the advancement of the Master's cause, and the present and final salvation of the race." What? Work for the accomplishment of these glorious ends through an institution unknown and unauthorized by the book of God? Shame on those who thus desire to reject God's way and become wise above what is written in the book of life.

Now there is just as much authority for the Baptist association in the Bible, as there is for the missionary society. They are both inventions of men, and I would just as soon attempt to work for God's glory through the former as the latter. Paul taught that all Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction. In what? He answers, "in righteousness." Now the word righteousness in this connection means "to do right." To do right before God is to walk, work and talk; in one word, do all we do for the glory of God, according to the rule or law of righteousness as given in God's word. Paul assigned the reason for this, please hear him. "That the man of God may be perfect," and not only perfect, but furnished, and not only furnished, but thoroughly furnished unto—what? He answers, "all good works."

Then it follows, that if the Scripture does not furnish the authority for the missionary society, it is not a good work, and must be an evil work, and, therefore, the man of God must not engage in it. If he does, he is guilty of transgressing the commandment of the Lord, and is a sinner, and if a sinner, he is of the devil. 1 John 3: 4-8.

Will some of the advocates of this new way get up the Scripture and reprove us for our opposition and dereliction of duty in this direction? Yes, brethren, we need some instruction in this good work of yours. Please let us have the authority for it that we may fall into line with you in this good work. I will vouch for Bro. McGary, Hansbrough, Jackson, Durst, Gillespie, Stone, and a host of good soldiers of the cross, that they will buckle on the sword of the Spirit and be at your side to assist you in opposing spiritual wickedness in high and low places, in and through our society, as you call it; if you will just show us that our King has commanded it. Come, brethren, here is your chance to put to silence forever all those that oppose our society, which seems to be dearer to you than the commandments of the Lord, that are "sweeter than honey and the honey-comb."—Ps. 19: 10.

The progressives will reprove us, but not by the word of the Lord. But by dubbing us as "old fogies," "non-progressives," "not up with the spirit and progress of the times, and not anxious about the conversion of the heathen," and many other things too numerous to mention. Well, I have this to say, that we had just as well let them remain where they are as to convert them from one error to another, and thereby make them just that much harder to be reached by the truth.

The Church of Christ on earth is the only missionary society that God recognizes or through which He will receive work done for his honor and glory, and the only one that his children can work in for the advancement of the cause of Jesus Christ on earth. For it is in the church that men may glorify God on earth through all ages world without end, amen, (Eph. 3: 8), and not out of it or through any human institution.

Yours in the one hope,

J. R. LANE.

MORE ABOUT VOTING.

Dear Bro. Hansbrough:

I notice in the F. F. of March 15, your request of an old sister to point to the chapter and verse authorizing us to vote. I wrote a few lines on that subject some time since for the F. F., but it was not worthy of notice. I will ask you for the chapter for us not to vote, and try to answer your question put to the good old sister:

"Render, therefore, to all their dues; tribute to whom tribute; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor."—Rom. 13: 7. "Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work."—Titus 3: 1. "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake; whether it be to the king as supreme, or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil doers and for the praise of them that do well."—1 Pet. 2: 13-14.

I don't want any inferential answers, as Bro. Jackson answered the performing of the marriage ceremony. I can sustain voting the same way. God is the author of voting. He submitted it to the people for their approval or disapproval, and they voted, viva voce, all these things will we do.

Brother, I am willing to conform to every commandment of God; but where there is no law there is no transgression. And where the laws of the land do not conflict with the law of God, it is no sin to observe them.

Yours in the one hope,

W. K. HAMBLEN.

Salado, Texas.

We publish the above letter from Bro. Hamblen; but I am at a loss to determine whether he is in earnest or jesting, though I know him and do not think he is in the habit of jesting especially about religious matters.

He says: "I will ask you for the chapter for us not to vote." It is the second chapter of the epistle of Jude, where you find the instruction to the baby-sprinklers not to sprinkle babies. He then quotes: "Render, therefore, unto all their dues; tribute to whom tribute; custom to whom custom; honor to whom honor."—Rom. 13: 7. That is a good quotation, Bro. Hamblen; but is there anything about voting in it? You again remind me of the baby-sprinklers, who quote what the Savior says about suffering little children to come unto him, that he might bless them, to justify their putting a little water in their faces for baptism.

Again: "Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work."—Titus 3: 1. Another most excellent quotation; but again I ask, is there anything about voting in it? If there is, I cannot see it; besides, to be subject to the powers that be is a very different thing from voting and helping to make the laws to which they are to be subject; and the good works spoken of in the above quotation are embraced in the good works spoken of by Paul to Timothy, where he says that the Scriptures furnish the man of God to all good works.—2 Tim. 3: 17. Bro. Hamblen, if the Scriptures furnish the man of God the privilege of voting, and mixing up in politics, I have never found the passage, nor have any of the advocates for his doing it, ever shown any.

Again, he quotes Peter, who tells his brethren to be submissive to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, to kings, governors, etc.; but, Bro. Hamblen, do you not see that, as in the other quotations, it is submission to these things that is required of christians, and nothing said about their voting to bring these things into existence?

Again he says: "God is the author of voting. He submitted it to the people for their approval or disapproval, and they voted, viva voce, all these things will we do." Bro. Hamblen is it possible that you look upon that as voting? It was simply an expression of willingness to do the things God required of them, and if that is voting, every time your children said they would do what you told them to do, they voted; but if you still contend that they voted, I would be glad you would tell the readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION what candidate, or candidates, run against God on that occasion, and how many votes each candidate got. Bro. Hamblen, if your children were to tell you that they would be submissive to any law that you might make for their government, do you think that you, or they, would conclude that they had voted?

Once more, he says: "I am willing to conform to every commandment of God; but where there is no law there is no transgression." That is true; but then there is a law, which is this: "Whatsoever you do in word or deed, do all in the name (by the authority) of the Lord Jesus."—3: 17. Bro. Hamblen, there is not an instance, from the time that God created Adam and Eve, down to the present, that he ever permitted his people to make laws for their government, or the government of others, if there is, I wish you would show it, and the object of voting is to make laws.

Your brother in Christ,

E. HANSBROUGH.

The thought of being nothing after death is a burden insupportable to a virtuous man; we naturally aim at happiness, and cannot bear to have it confined to our present being.—[Selected.]

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

"And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:32. "And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."—2 Thes. 2:11-12. From these two passages we learn three important lessons:

1. That it requires a knowledge of the truth in order that people be made free.
2. That a belief of a lie is certain condemnation.
3. That a man must believe something.

If we love the truth, it is within our reach; and if we do not love the truth, God will make us believe a lie. He says so. It is easy to learn what the truth is that makes us free. Paul says, "the law of the Spirit hath made me free."—Rom. 8:2. And again Paul says, "And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain."—1 Cor. 15:14. He then tells us if the faith is vain "ye are yet in your sins."—verse 17.

How any man can, with the above Scripture before his eyes, say, that sectarian teaching and practice ever made a Christian, is more than I can understand; unless it be because they are deluded. There are multitudes to-day among the sects who firmly believe that a man can be saved as well without baptism as with it, and we say, they are deluded.

And shall we conclude that one among us shall continue to teach, that a man may hear, believe, and obey a falsehood and be made free, and that because he is one among us, that God will not send the delusion upon him? I hope none are yet so deluded as to jump at such a conclusion as the above. I am sure that no man could prove by the Bible that any man has ever been saved by hearing, believing and obeying, according to sectarian teaching, if his own salvation depended upon it. Yet we are told by many preachers, and almost all editors of our religious periodicals, that it does not invalidate a man's baptism if he does believe his sins were pardoned before he was baptized. But I would ask, if a man believes his sins pardoned before baptism, did he not get that idea from sectarian teaching? All Bible readers must answer, yes. Well, then, is that kind of teaching the truth? The same people must answer, no. Then, if it is not the truth, (and it takes the truth to make people free), is it not vain teaching? Yes, is the only answer. Here then, is vain teaching, and we find the faith to be the same; and Paul says, they are yet in their sins.

Brethren, is it possible we have a man that will dispute with the apostles, and still contend that such persons under such teaching are made Christians? We should remember that a dispute over such things is not a dispute with Bro. McGary, but with God. Every man among us knows well enough that just as soon as a Baptist will preach the truth as it is in Jesus, that he will then and there cease to be a Baptist, and so will all sects of every name.

And I am one of the many to deny that sectarian teaching and practice ever did, or ever will make a Christian. Who will take the affirmative side of this question?

Let no man say that, those holding to this, (the negative) side, is but a little handful led by Bro. McG., for their name is legion, and they are led by the Spirit of the most high God. For proof of this, we refer to God's holy book. But who will refer to the book to prove that sectarian preaching and practice makes Christians? We wait to see.

We here agree to take as proof either precept, example, or promise, found in the Bible. If sectarian doctrines are not true doctrine then they are counterfeits; and the nearer they are like the genuine, the more dangerous they are, for they are better calculated to deceive. Yet they are counterfeits all the same. Then let brethren not abuse and misrepresent those who contend for the truth, but re-examine God's word on the subject, with love for the truth, lest they be deluded.

W. T. KIDWELL.

PRAYER.

Of all duties left upon the pages of holy writ to be observed by Christians, none, perhaps, are of more importance than prayer.

As there is a time, place and manner for all things, prayer must be included with the rest. In one place the divine record says, "men ought always to pray and not faint." This being true, but little time will be left for idleness or neglect.

Then when we see or feel that it is our duty to pray, right then is the time and there is the proper place to offer up the petition at the throne of grace for divine acceptance. No doubt the manner of offering prayer to Almighty God is viewed from a very different standpoint by the All-wise Father of light, and by fallible man generally.

Of all prayers recorded upon the divine pages we should observe, that none are very lengthy, no superfluity of words is made use of; but by many of the present day the very opposite is the case. Why this should be, I am unable to determine, unless it be in imitation of so many other practices among men, viz: a hearty strife to please man to the utter neglect of pleasing God. "Brethren, these things ought not so to be." Some when called upon to pray in public will refuse to even make the attempt. I can call to mind those who have grown gray, or even white, as church members, some of whom have been superintending Sunday-schools many years, and yet they are never heard to pray; no, not even in their own Sunday-school.

This, it seems to me, is a sad neglect of one very important duty. Those professing Christians, who refuse to pray for want of a command of language, should not lose sight of the judgment of our Savior as passed upon the Pharisee and Publican who went up into the temple to pray. It will be remembered by all Bible students that the one whose prayer consisted of only seven words, "went down justified rather than the other."

If in the days of our Savior seven words formed an acceptable prayer before God, where is the Christian to-day with any acceptable excuse for refusing to pray when called upon?

If men will practice secret prayer more, it will be much less difficult to pray in public when occasion or duty demand; and, as one speaking from experience, I can truthfully say, that whenever called upon to pray in public, by some brother, or in secret, by a sense of duty, nothing short of the proper attempt or effort upon my part affords the desired relief within my mind. Doubtless fully as much is accomplished by prayer in secret as in public.

If we commit sins, or see or hear others do so, it is not at all necessary for us to wait till some regular time for prayer, or some meeting, to offer supplications to God in behalf of the offending one. Not by any means! Not even a moment should be lost in presenting the case of the offending one to the Giver of every good and perfect gift, remembering that those who pray to our heavenly Father in secret have the promise of a reward openly. Brethren, how many of us are working for this reward? How many are striving for it lawfully?

All the prayers ever offered by our Savior while here in the flesh, are noted for brevity and simplicity, yet nothing can be found to excel them for science of purpose, or for application to the case under consideration. None will venture the assertion that Jesus indulged in simplicity of language for want of knowledge, but like every other act of his exemplary life, it was left on record as a pattern for all his professed followers to imitate. Simple and plain that it may be easily imitated. Simple and plain also that it may not engender false pride.

Any who are so void of self-confidence as to conclude they can't pray, are earnestly requested to study that portion of the New Testament commonly called the Lord's prayer, carefully noting the author, also the simplicity of said prayer.

"Men ought always to pray and not to faint," is a divine record that no Christian can afford to lose sight of, remembering that now is the accepted time for all.

In answer to the question: How, when and where shall I pray, let the following suffice. Make use of the very simplest language, imitating that of Christ and his disciples, always praying in the proper spirit: Now is the accepted time: never lose sight of this fact.

Wherever you may be, when duty says pray, spend no time in seeking a more convenient place, but enter at once upon the all important duty, resting assured the Scripture will be fulfilled which says, "pray to your heavenly Father in secret, and thy heavenly Father which heareth in secret will reward thee openly."
R. W. GILLENPIE.

LORD'S DAY MEETING.

Do you attend strictly, punctually and faithfully to the services of the Lord's House?

The above question is of paramount importance to every one who has passed from death unto life, having been translated out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son. You, brother, sister, are under obligations as high as heaven, as deep as hell, and as wide and extensive as the dominion of sin, to be faithful to the discharge of every Christian duty.

To-day the emblem of the Savior's broken body and shed blood will be in the church, will you be there, or do you neglect this holy institution? If so, is not your spiritual appetite becoming languid, and does it not refuse the strong meat of the word? The only way to have regular and healthful digestion is, to eat regularly, and such food as will give nourishment and strength to the body.

Your spiritual nature needs the bread of everlasting life, the fruit of the vine. You need this food every Lord's day. But you attend to this matter once a month. Suppose you neglect your daily food that long. Why, you know you could not live! Your spiritual health and growth in godliness depend upon the faithful discharge of every duty enjoined in the Lord's day service. If you neglect these, you cut yourself off from all the joys and happiness of a life hid with Christ in God; you imperil your own soul. See Heb. 2:1-3, also 2nd chapter. Our influence over the unconverted will be lost, happiness will be lost, a good conscience will be lost, and it may be, heaven itself will be lost at last.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A. J. Bush, "State Evangelist," says: "I hope to locate a good man between this place and Bastrop." We would be obliged to him if he would "locate," in the word of God, some precedent for these prelatial and lordly swells he is cutting. He seems to think that, having "Pendleton, Looa, Graham, McGarvey, Errett, Dimmitt, Carlton, the Clarke, Gano, and a host of others," at his back, is as good backing as he needs. But he will learn when it is too late that, playing "lord over God's heritage" is a serious and dangerous business, and that his worldly-wise backing cannot prop him up against the fury of an outraged and avenging God.

A brother who has all the while been against our position in reference to sect immersion, says he has read the "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," and, that it presents some points he would like to see J. W. McGarvey or D. Lipscomb attempt to meet. This brother is one of the strongest men in Texas, and his remarks in reference to this pamphlet clearly evince the fact that he knows we are contending for the truth; he believes as we do, but will not "confess because of the Pharisees, lest he should be put out of the synagogue." But he said he was going to get a half dozen copies of "Zeke" and send them around. Brethren, if you want those who do not stand with us on this question, to see the inconsistency of the opposite position, I think you could not do better than to circulate this pamphlet. For terms see eighth page.

Mr. A. McGary:

Will you please discontinue the FIRM FOUNDATION, as we do not know who directed it to me. I have not read it for months, and we have more waste paper than we want. Do not believe in its teaching, much rather have the Bible for my guide. I presume that the party that directed it will pay you for it, but please do not send it to me, and you will greatly oblige, MARY C. GAINES.

Palestine, Texas.

Yes, we will very cheerfully discontinue the paper since she expresses a preference for the Bible. But if she had preferred some of these papers that lead people away from the Bible, contending for "our plea" instead of, "for the faith once delivered to the saints," we would have discontinued it very reluctantly.

We do not remember who has been doing this good work of sending the paper to this sister, but whoever has will have occasion to feel thankful when they see the "good fruit" that has followed, of preferring the Bible to papers. You are right, my sister, the Bible is better than any paper. May you never depart from this best of books.

"OUR PLEA."

The phrase, "our plea," which has become so popular with the disciples of this age has no place in the word of God, because its central idea is not of "the faith delivered to the saints."

Man has no right to present to his fellow-men a plea, in the name of Christ, which has not first been made in the Scriptures of God's last Will and Testament.

Christ's only plea to all men is his gospel in its plainly-revealed, heaven-bound conditions, and holy principles of virtue, and powerful incentives to obedience. This plea every loyal-hearted disciple will "earnestly contend" for and scrupulously guard against the slightest infraction, whether by addition, subtraction, change or modification.

"Our plea" is human, and its central idea is "earthly, sensual and devilish," because it seeks to contravene the law of the Spirit. It is the shibboleth of a new tribe that has sprung up in a modern Ashdod, and ought never to pass the lips nor pen of those who love "sound doctrine and pure speech," except in reproof and rebuke. A. MCG.

PREACHING FOR THE BAPTISTS.

We learn that Bro. Harry Hamilton has been preaching for the Baptists at Lovelady, Texas. If he preached "Samson's riddle" or any of the popular riddles of modern theology, no doubt the Baptists enjoyed his preaching very much; but if he preached the gospel and declared all of the counsel of God, it is not likely that he will be invited to preach for them again.

Bro. Hamilton knows how to preach the "ancient gospel" with a force and cogency that few can equal. But if the Baptists are in the kingdom, as Bro. Hamilton holds, then he will be consistent if he takes membership with them. It seems to me that the best way would be for all who think they are in the kingdom to go over to them. When they become "of them" it will be much easier to get them to drop the name "Baptist" than while standing aloof from them. There might be a compromise made with them to accept their abstract operation and mourner's-bench theory of conversion, and baptism, because of forgiveness, on the condition that they would drop the name "Baptist." It is the plain duty of those who consider them in the kingdom, to make this compromise if they can: for it is an undeniable fact that more converts can be made by their teaching than by ours; and since it brings persons into the kingdom just as well it is but an act of spiritual economy to accept it. This will be the inevitable outcome of the fanatical advocacy of "our plea" that is now waxing so warm. A. MCG.

COMPARATIVE MERITS.

The F. F. is about half the size of the O. R. The O. R. contains 50 per cent. more matter in every issue than the F. F., saying nothing of the quality of the matter.

Price of the F. F. is $1; that of the O. R. is $2.00. The F. F. issues 24 numbers a year. The O. R. 52 numbers per year. The F. F. charges $1 for 24 numbers with half the matter contained in the O. R. At that rate the O. R. is worth four times more than the F. F. In other and more intelligible language the O. R. should have $8 per year, or $6.00 per year more than it gets on each subscription.

If the F. F. should publish the same amount of matter the O. R. does, the price of the paper should be four times more than it is. Certainly that would make the F. F. a valuable piece of property to own. Its stock would be in demand in the market, commanding a premium over that of some other papers.

The F. F. is violently opposed to the "More Excellent Way," and is proud of its monopoly of the untaught question of sect-baptism. That controversy having been transferred to its columns, we look for a large growth from the use of so much succulent food—Octographic Review.

The O. R. seems to see no prospect of a livelihood except in the wake of the ruin it can hope to work for a few of its contemporaries. It tried this nefarious course on Bro. Rowe and the Leader, but was badly discomfited; but now it is figuring up its chances to supplant the F. F. It is a real "raw-head-and-bloody-bones" plan the O. R. has adopted, but it seems determined to "fight it out on that line if it takes all Sommer."

Bro. Rowe was very ungraciously thrust out of the editorial chair of the A. C. Review, which he had so courageously filled for many years, and a clan somehow worked into his place that seemed bent upon showing him no quarter, if he did not silently succumb and hide in the deepest shades of oblivion. When he began the publication of the Leader, all the machinery of ruin and destruction that these men could muster was mercilessly turned loose upon the "rival journal," as they called his paper. They tried to marshal all the old soldiers of the Review army against him. But it turned out about like the efforts of the Bourbons when Napoleon Bonaparte returned from Elba to France; the Bourbon leaders could not induce the battle-scarred comrades of Napoleon to fire on the "Little Corporal." Neither could this Octographic Review clan induce many of Bro. Rowe's old comrades to engage in his slaughter—so that wicked scheme fell back upon their own heads and sent them staggering away to another base of operation—this time they are after the F. F.

What have we done to them? Nothing, only that Bro. Sommer wrote the writer up in the O. R. as a bad man and a wilful perverter of facts, and refused to let his readers see our reply to his charges. There is an old proverb which says that, "a knave will never forgive a man he has injured, but will add insult to injury." I do not call Bro. S. a knave, but really, he seems to me to fall into some very knavish ways when prejudice shuts his eyes to the rights of those who oppose him.

This figuring up of the "Comparative Merits" of the O. R. and the F. F., seems to have been done by Bro. Rice. As he is in his dotage, and, as I suppose, it is a bread and butter matter with him to have the O. R. succeed, I excuse him. But it is a poor way to determine the respective merits of the two papers. I suppose, he is not far wrong in estimating the matter of the O. R. to be nearly twice as much as that of the F. F. But he will have to wait till a bushel of chaff is worth as much as a half bushel of wheat, before such an estimate will benefit the O. R. The O. R. is one of these see-saw papers! It will preach the gospel fluently and eloquently on one page, and then on the next page will "root" it all up and "bark" at it till it is all gone! It is much like the snake that swallowed itself and left nothing but a track in the sand! Now if the O. R. were ten times as large as it is, and acted upon this same plan, it would be just like that much blank paper; for, to argue that baptism is for the remission of sins, on one page, and then consume the next page in arguing that it is not necessary to believe what it has taught on the former page, makes a stand-off and cancels both pages.

We have never realized one dollar on the F. F. But the paper is about to square up old scores, and when it does we intend to double its matter by making it a weekly. We never intended to make "its stock command a premium" in the money market! It is rapidly increasing its list, and when it pays a dividend as a weekly, we intend to help those true brethren who have labored with us in "contending for the faith." It may appear strange that we have not realized anything on the F. F.; but we risk our veracity upon the statement that, we have not realized one dollar on it. We suppose we pay about twice as much per pound for the paper we use as most other papers do. Then we do not employ a cheap and unreliable vagabond and drunkard to do our printing; but our printer is a trustworthy gentleman in every respect. It costs something to employ such men, but we would rather pay more and be thus associated with a gentleman, than to have an unreliable man at half price.

But we are "violently opposed to the 'more excellent way.'" What "more excellent way," the more excellent way of love for God and our brethren? Oh, no! But we are opposed, yes, "violently opposed," to Bro. Sommer's "more excellent way" of riding the fence on the organ question—hobnobbing with this divisive instrument to build up a paper.

We do not know how he found out that we are "proud" of our "monopoly of the untaught question of sect-baptism!" We think it is very clearly taught what baptism is, and what it is for. It is this doctrine of men, to shake persons into the body, that is untaught in the word of God. We do not believe that the O. R., or any other paper that holds to this untaught question, is very proud of that "monopoly," deep down in their hearts, although they hold so tenaciously to it. Let us be of one mind, whether our papers succeed or not. A. McG.

B. B. TYLER ONLY A FEW STEPS AHEAD.

Bro. Tyler leads the van of progressives, in fraternizing with sectarians and making himself generally contemptible, but that class of brethren who recognize Baptists and other deduced sectarians as Christians, while they make much ado over Tyler's rapid dashes back to Babylon, will have to fallow over the same grounds he is now cantering over, sooner or later, to be consistent; or, they will have to give up the "our plea" delusion, that these sectarian dabblings are valid baptisms! Tyler is only a little ahead of them, kicking up his theological heels and raising the dust that these brethren have to travel in.

Tyler says: "The union of Christians is a subject very near to the hearts of a great multitude of the children of God. The interest increases. Prayers in behalf of unity multiply."

Yes, but this is not the unity the Son of God desired and prayed for! His desire and prayer was for the unity of those that believed on him through the words of his apostles. But the "unity" Tyler is talking about is the jumbling together of the heterogeneousness of denominationalism, a kind of an "orthodoxy" whoop-jamboree, in which the doctrines and traditions of men are lifted aloft to "make the commandments of God of none effect."

He says: "Union is in the air." Yes, it is in the air! In fact, "the prince of the power of the air" is the prime mover of all such unity as B. B. Tyler is talking about. He says: "The spirit of sectarianism is no longer rampant." Why should he be towards such men as B. B. Tyler and W. E. Hall? They have been throwing their elastic arms around it and hugging it most fondly for several years.

Again he says: "The theological world moves. There is a more talented, a more Christian spirit abroad." Yes, it does move. It has moved so rapidly with such men as B. B. Tyler, W. E. Hall, and that class that has been moving with them that doubtless some "candlesticks" have been "removed" in the precipitous haste.

He says: "What to do with some of our formularies, symbols, customs and institutions, received by inheritance from the fathers, is the question. We care but little for them. They are out of date. In many instances they are, apparently, useless lumber. We hesitate to cast them overboard. This would not be quite respectful, we think, to our ancestors. We are puzzled. Paul, on one occasion, was in a strait betwixt two. So, too, are we. But the good Lord will show us in his own good time the way out of the present difficulty." Yes, that is it, just wait the "Lord's own good time," it may be one, two, or ten years before the Lord can decide what is best! You know it has often taken the Lord ten years to decide to send the electric shock into the hearts of many of these with whom you are chiming in this saturnalian muster, or union, as you call it; but in the "Lord's own good time" he sent it. Well, then, if the Lord is going to show you the way out of these puzzling things in his own good time, you need not trouble about it, for, if, in the multiplicity of his unfinished work in this line, he should forget these things, he will not punish any one for their not being "thrown overboard;" for certainly a just God will not punish man for being found in difficulties he did not show him the "way out of!" Paul forgot such things as these when he said, the Scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works! Yes, "the theological world moves" so fast that it leaves Paul behind, clear out of sight.

But Tyler is only a little ahead of these other brethren. He is out at the end of the rope of "our plea" stretching it tight, while our brethren who are "brothering" the sects and calling on them to pray and take part in our worship, and recognizing as subjects of the kingdom of God those who have been merely soused in the water, are gradually tending to the same point at the end of the rope—but they are beginning to take up the slack of this rope right fast. They will soon "get there." A. McG.

"IT WORKS WELL."

Bro. Daniel Sommer is ever ready to boast about his "more excellent way." He calls it courageous to act on his plan with the organ. Those who deal thus with the organ manifest "backbone!" He says his "more excellent way" is working well wherever tried." But "well" for what or who? He thinks his one-sided way of running the Review, attacking his brethren and then barring his columns against their defense, "works well," too—and, no doubt, it does "work well" for him, furnishing him a retreat and shelter for his indefensible weaknesses and skittishness—he can sally forth and sling his mud whizzing at those who come too near him or get in his way, and then dart back under his shelter, crying as he retreats, "the Review is done with personalities!" So we are inclined to want to inquire further when he says anything "works well."

He says: "Innovators don't care a button how much you quarrel with them at a distance. What they dread is a face-to-face conflict." Oh, what "a face-to-face conflict" he and Bro. Treat are having with the organ! How these brethren do manifest "back-bone" in their "face-to-face conflicts" with it! Yes, it "works well"—for the organ and Review. But if such a course works well for the kingdom of God, then Paul should not have said, "mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which you have learned; and avoid them."—Rom. 16:17. Neither ought he to have said, "reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine," nor to "rebuke sharply that they be sound in the faith." But if this policy of these brethren works well for Christ, Paul, after saying, "teach and admonish one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord," ought to have added, "but if some want to add organs, horns, fiddles, banjos, Jews-harps, tambourines and rattling bones, don't quarrel with them at a distance, but stiffen your 'back-bone' and march up and have a silent 'face-to-face conflict' with them, that things may 'work well' for your individual ease and glory, and that men may say you possess the Spirit of Christ." A. McG.

OUR PAMPHLETS.

The Oatman-McGary discussion is a discussion of the kingdom question and the birth of the Spirit. Dr. Oatman is the leading Christadelphian of Texas; hence this pamphlet deals with the grounds of Christadelphianism. We believe it is the only published discussion any of our brethren have ever had with the Christadelphians. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages. We offer it for 25 cents, but this edition is nearly exhausted.

"The Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," is a pamphlet that lays wide open the inconsistency of receiving Baptists and other immersed sectarians without "immersion in the name of the Lord Jesus." It is offered by us at only 10 cents per copy, or three for 25 cents. It ought to be widely circulated among those who have not yet seen the unsoundness of the practice referred to.

The "Sequel to the Religious Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," by J. W. Jackson, is a pamphlet about the size of the other, and is offered at the same price. It gives an account of how "Zeke Jackson" won his wife, first converting her from Methodism. In her conversion "Zeke" met the Methodist "Grub-Ax" and exposed its sophistry. This is a splendid pamphlet, especially for circulation where the "Grub-Ax" has been circulated.

Address,
MCGARY & HANSBROUGH,
ONE EXTREME REGETS ANOTHER.

Bro. Lipscomb says he would not baptize one who would tell him he had not prayed!

Now lets analyze this and see what it amounts to.

Why would he not baptize such a person? Because he does not think it would be right to do so, of course.

Why would it not be right? Because he does not think the Lord has authorized the baptism of such, of course: for if he thought the Lord authorized it he would think it right, and being right he would do it, of course.

Well, if the Lord has not authorized the baptism of those who have not prayed, all who have been baptized before they prayed stand in God's sight, and Bro. Lipscomb's as unbaptized. Of course, Bro. Lipscomb believes that all unbaptized persons should be baptized.

So, to be consistent, Bro. Lipscomb will have to go to teaching all who were baptized before they prayed, "the way of the Lord more perfectly," (if it is the Lord's way), and "baptize them in the name of the Lord Jesus"—"re-baptize" them.

The extreme grounds Bro. Lipscomb has taken to prove his loyalty to "our plea" has slackened his grip on "the good confession;" and the two ends of extremes meet and lap over when he begins to demand prayer as a condition precedent to baptism. The condition he turns loose is an item of "the faith once delivered to the saints"—see Rom. 10:8-9-10—but the condition of prayer, before baptism, is his own invention—it is not "bound in heaven and earth," but the good confession is. Prayer is for those who are in a covenanted relationship with God—as all know who know how to "rightly divide truth." I hope Bro. L. will cease to "bind" that which the apostles and the Lord "loosed," and contend for, that which they "bound." This will furnish him plenty of "re-baptizing." A. McG.

FROM BRO. S. N. THOMAS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

A brother in my congregation was baptized by J. F. Grubbs some years ago: 1. He did believe. 2. He repented. 3. He confessed Christ before men. 4. He was baptized. He understood that baptism was for the remission of sins, but thought remission of sins applied to the life beyond the grave, and knew nothing about remission of sin in this world. Was it a valid baptism? Yours for the truth,
S. N. THOMAS.

Blanton, Texas.

This is one of those questions that may be best answered by asking some questions in turn:

Did he know the truth? Jesus says, "You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." Did he understand the word of God? Jesus said, "He that received seed into good ground is he that heareth the word and understandeth it." Was he drawn to the Son by the Father? Jesus said, "no man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him."

Now how does the Father draw people to his Son? "Every man therefore that hath heard and hath learned of the Father cometh unto me." Had this man heard and learned of the Father when he knew nothing of remission of sins in time? Last, though not least, have we any record of the apostles ever baptizing one who was in such a frame of mind? and are not their precepts and examples, and the necessary inferences to be drawn from these a sufficient rule of faith and action? I do not believe that any amount of water will make up for a lack of teaching or understanding of God's truth, by which we are to be made free. Hence I believe an immersion under such circumstances is just equivalent to falling off of a log into the water. I advise this man to read J. T. Poe's pamphlet, "What Must I Do To Be Saved?" He can get it of J. T. Poe, Longview, Texas, for ten cents.

A. McG.

THEY WON'T HATCH.

C. McPherson tells of a boy who set the "speckled hen on a hundred eggs just to see the old thing spread herself."

He says he feels that way about the Christian Courier—he wants to see the new thing spread herself. Well, this progressive goose nest they are setting at Dallas will hatch out about like the speckled hen that sat on a hundred eggs—their progressive eggs will spoil. Texas is a bad climate for hatching progressive eggs. Old uncle Joe Clark can give you his experience on that. He sat and sat on that nest at Thorp's Spring, till he couldn't "stay any longer," and came off with his feathers all turned the wrong way because the eggs would not hatch! You had as well set a goose on green walnuts and expect to raise a brood of goslings, as to expect much of a hatching in this climate from progressive eggs. The boys who are to take charge of this goosey enterprise will wind it up by "killing the goose (or geese) that laid the golden egg"—your nest egg.

ITEMS FROM TENNESSEE.

Bro. J. A. Harding, disciple of Christ, met Mr. Nichols, Methodist, at Lynnville, Giles county, Tennessee, in January and discussed four propositions. Mr. Nichols is known as the "Grab-Ax man." But, my dear brethren, I would say, in short, in regard to Bro. Harding's defence of the truth, he gave Mr. Nichols an everlasting grubbing.

There are ten or twelve churches in Maury county, still there is much room for evangelizing.

I met a preaching brother not long since who said Bro. McGary had been a bad man. I know not how bad Bro. McGary had been but I know now he seems to be a Paul-like man, after the truth.

Paul was one of the worst men, and he became one of the best men. Men should not speak so as to make a wrong impression.

I visited some days ago Bro. W. Lipscomb. He is Bro. D. Lipscomb's senior. Bro. L. is a fine scholar, a most excellent school teacher, a good preacher, and truly a pleasant man. He has nothing to do with human plans, but looks to God as an all sufficient guide.

Bro. Dorris, a young preacher from Kentucky, came down and locked hands with one of Dr. W. T. Brent's daughters as his life-time "better-half."

The Bible is the book to study, love and practice.

Bros. E. E. Wilson and G. L. Harmon, of Chapel Hill, Tenn., gave me one dollar to send to the F. F. You will please give each credit for fifty cents on his subscription. These are good zealous brethren, and they say they like your paper.

Several persons have died with meningitis, in and around Columbia, in the last few days.

May the Lord bless his faithful workers.

LETTER FROM A SISTER.

Dear Sisters:

It has been a long time since I have had a talk with you, but I have been reading the F. F. all the while, and I miss the sisters letters. Why don't you that are able write oftener?

We ought to admonish one another, and say a word for Jesus whenever we can. Let us read the Bible and learn our duty and teach it to others. If we can be the means of saving one soul, we shall have done a glorious work; but we should not be satisfied to stop at that, but press onward and upward, letting our light shine around each one in its place.

Sisters, you whose husbands are preachers, I sympathize with you in your lonely hours. I am not a preacher's wife, but a preacher's sister, and am alone to-night, no one near to speak a word of cheer. Did you ever stay alone at night? If so, you can pity me. A preacher has many hardships to bear, and especially a poor one, as well as his family. And, as a general rule, members of the church don't seem to know this, but think they can spend their time preaching and make a living too; when my Bible says, they that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel.

Brothers and sisters, you that are rich in this world's goods, remember the poor saints, always help them when you can; be not high-minded but fear, and when you meet together on Lord's day, don't get off in a group with the rich and leave the poor out in the cold. Ah, no wonder so many go back to the world, when they are treated so cold in the church.

Who is responsible for all this? Is the Church of Christ what it ought to be? Are we all working for Jesus, or not? Every one must answer for themselves.

Sometimes I feel thankful that I am poor, when I see the selfishness of the rich. Yet I would love to be able to help the poor, but God knows what is best for me, and I have many things to be thankful for.

Brothers and sisters, let us go forward in the discharge of our duty, ever looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith.

I would like to know sister Sarah's full name. May God bless you all, is my prayer.

Your sister in Christ,

ELIZA CONNER.

MARRYING OUT OF CHRIST.

I will endeavor this morning to express a few thoughts in regard to members of the Church of Christ marrying members of denominations or sinners.

Paul in 2 Cor. 6: 14-15: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Baal? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?"

Dear brothers and sisters, if such instruction were good for the church then, it is now. Well, says one, what has that to do with marriage? Much in every way. There are but two classes of people, the children of God, and the children of the devil. Join a member of Christ to a member of the devil, and you will too soon see the result.

Well, says one, "we can't help it; we can't control our affections; if they naturally go to one not in Christ, we are not to blame. I believe marriage is a lottery anyhow." If you continue in that belief, you will one day see differently, perhaps, too late to mend the wrong already done, without doing another. It is better to take the right step first, then there will be no room for a life of repentance.

What if you are promised to be married to one out of Christ; no doubt you gave that promise before you knew it was wrong; it is always right for a child of God, as soon as he finds he is wrong, to admit as much, and try to do right. You may think you could marry them and turn them; stop and think. That would be doing evil that good might come; better settle your affections on one worthy, or turn them first.

It is hard to do one's duty to God and to her companion when one becomes a Christian after marriage, and the other does not. Every child of God loves the law of their Savior which says: "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is." They delight in going to meet with the disciples. If their companion is not so inclined, and does not want to be deprived of your company, or service, as the case may be, you remain at home, and thus make yourself disobey the Lord again. "Wives obey your husbands." You cannot do your duty to both; you cannot serve God and Mammon.

I have taken more space than I intended. Hoping that this may assist some one to see their way more clearly, I will close.

Your sister,
M. A. N.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I will write you a few lines to let you know how well I like the FIRM FOUNDATION. The more I read it the better I like it, and I would to God that it could fall into the hands of all the people on earth.

Brethren, let us rise as one man and lend a helping hand to this noble paper, by sending in a subscriber or two. I am proud to know that the F. F. is on rising ground, and is being sent broadcast all over the land. Yes, in spite of everything that has been done and said to sink the F. F., it holds its head above the dark and rolling billows of an angry sea. The arrows of hatred, and scorn, and misrepresentation are shot at the F. F. from all sides. But, oh, they have fallen broken at its feet.

Yes, this paper is like the rising sun. The splendor of its light is driving back the dark and benighted ignorance and superstition of sectarianism. The only fault that I have to the FIRM FOUNDATION is, that it don't come weekly.

For fear I will make my letter too long I will close.

Yours in the one hope,
G. W. SPURLOCK.

EVERY TIME.

Every time I speak a kind word I am adding a brick to my temple of manhood.

Every time I tell the truth, I add to my strength of character.

Every time I refuse a drink of liquor I am improving my manhood.

Every time I speak cross or impetuously I'm weakening my nerve power and adding to the misery of some one.

Every time I pay rent I am taking that much away from a home of my own.

Every time I refuse to do a favor when I can as well as not I prove that I am growing mean.

Every time I refrain speaking in defense of a friend I prove that I am not a friend.

Every time I hire an employe who uses liquor as a beverage I open the door to my own robbery.

Every time I oppress a servant I am guilty of sin against God—Fam-roy.

QUERIES.

Please explain Luke, 14: 23; as one of our prohibition brethren argues, that it justifies him in voting and compelling people not to commit the sin of drunkenness.

A BROTHER.

The language referred to in the above reads thus: "Go out into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in that my house may be filled."

The original word here translated compel, means to urge, to constrain not by force, but by persuasion, entreaty, argument. The brother who justifies his voting by this Scripture must have taken a few lessons of inferential reasoning from our Methodist friends. They infer infant baptism from the Savior's language: "Suffer little children to come unto me;" and this brother infers voting from the command given to compel parties to come in. What next? J. W. J.

1. Should a woman, in the absence of her husband, give thanks at her table?

2. Should she hold family prayer?
3. When so many were added in one day, as in Acts 2: 41, were they baptized in one day and by whom?

1. The instructions given by the apostles, that Christians should "in everything give thanks," (1 Thea. 5: 18, Eph. 5: 20,) apply equally to man and woman. Hence a woman, in absence of her husband, or a widow should not fail to give thanks at her table.

2. As the woman in above case would be the head of the family, she should "hold family prayer." Remember, that the prohibition against woman teaching and usurping authority, (1 Tim. 2: 12), does not refer to the teaching and worship of the home circle.

3. By reading the context we learn that "they that gladly received his word were baptized and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls." Then three thousand were baptized the same day, but by whom I do not know. There were twelve apostles there besides the disciples mentioned, Acts 1: 15; and they could have baptized that number very easily. At the rate of fifty an hour, it would have taken the apostles just five hours to do the work. Many preachers can easily immerse seventy-five an hour. J. W. J.

BRETHREN:—To whom is Paul's language (Heb. c: 4-6), addressed? Is it applicable to us now? If not, why?
M. L. USKRY.
Durango, Texas.

The language referred to reads thus: "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened and have tasted of the heavenly gift and were made partakers of the Holy Spirit, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh and put him to an open shame."

The epistle was written to Hebrews who had become Christians. The design of the writer was to confirm and strengthen them in the faith. This he does by showing the superiority of the New Covenant to the Old Covenant. The first chapters are devoted to the first principles of the gospel, viz: "That Jesus is the Christ the Son of God." This grand truth having been demonstrated, he refers, in the above language, to those Jews who had believed it, and who had received the blessings promised by Christ to all obedient ones; that if they shall apostatize it is impossible to renew them again to repentance. Why could they not be renewed to repentance? Seeing that they crucify afresh the Son of God and put him to open shame. Jesus was rejected and crucified as an impostor or deceiver. But these (to whom Paul writes) after an examination of all the testimony had believed in Him, accepted Him as the Christ, and had enjoyed the benefits of His reign, and if after all this they turn away from Christ and reject him as an impostor, of course, such could not be renewed to repentance; as faith in Christ is the foundation upon which a genuine repentance is based. I think that the language would be applicable now to those Christians who, after a knowledge of the truth, deliberately turn away from Jesus and deny that he is the Christ, the Son of God. The only motive power that God has on earth by which to bring man to repentance is the gospel of Christ, and when men who once believed it and enjoyed it, deliberately renounce it and pronounce it a falsehood they place themselves beyond the reach of mercy. MY PEOPLE IN BABYLON.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I notice, that when the shakers are pressed to give Scripture for their practice of shaking the sects into the church, they appeal to and rely on Rev. 18: 4, and emphasize the phrase, "my people," as proof that there are Christians among the sects. That is assuming a great deal in their favor, to get them into the church without obedience to the Lord in baptism. We may assume as much for the Jews and take them in without baptism. When the angel Gabriel appeared to the Virgin Mary, he said: "And she shall bring forth a son and thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins."—Matt. 1: 21.

All admit that the Jews were his people spoken of. Did the apostles shake them into the church that they might have the necessary association and teaching to keep them from the commission of sins? No. Read Acts 2: 28. Well, we might claim as much for the Gentiles also.

In John, 10: 16, the Master said: "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold, them also must I bring, and they shall hear my voice and there shall be one fold and one shepherd." All admit that the Gentiles are "the other sheep."

Now if sheep, why not assume (all that present themselves for membership in the church) as being already righteous and needing no baptism for remission of sins? The sheep represent the righteous.—Matt. 25: 88. Well how did the apostles treat the Gentiles, "other sheep?" Just like they did "his people," the Jews, baptized them all for the remission of sins.

There is no reason why the apostles, if present now, would not treat the so-called people from Babylon (i. e. the denominations) just as they did all men in their time, baptize them for the remission of sins, asking them no questions about their former washings or worship.

DELAYED LETTER.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Enclosed please find two dollars, for which send the F. F. for one year to H. C. Heflin and Mr. Hollenworth, to Blackburn, Claiborne parish, La. I have sent you three subscribers since you proposed to make the F. F. a weekly on doubling your subscription list. How are the brethren getting along with the work? Let us hear from you on this matter. I have not started to work yet. There are a great many persons in North Louisiana who will subscribe for the F. F. as soon as they get a chance, and I will not forget to give them a chance.

I am the only man in North Louisiana that is working for the F. F. at this time, but I will enlist others. We are co-laborers in the vineyard of the Lord, and that is the reason I have not asked your permission to work for the F. F. for I believe it to be the strongest rival that error has ever met, except the Bible. Publish this if you like, and oblige, your brother in Christ,

W. R. CARPENTER.

Holly Springs, La., Jan. 18, '88.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

After reading your paper more or less for two years, I have always endorsed its teachings, and I feel like writing you a few lines to let you know that there are a few here that stand solid with the F. F. and think it the best paper published by the brotherhood.

We hope that you may live long to contend boldly for the faith in future as in the past. We have no preaching in our little town, and, therefore, neglect keeping house for the Lord. We are few in number, and are not able to support a preacher; nevertheless, we would like that Bro. Tant could preach for us. May you ever be guided by the teachings of the Holy Spirit in all you say and do, is my prayer. I have succeeded in getting up a few subscribers for your paper, whose names and amounts I enclose herewith.

Your brother in the one faith,
G. W. HOLLIS.
Sparsville, La.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough,

I thought I would write a few lines for your valuable paper, this being my first. If it is not in accordance with the Scriptures, cast it in the waste basket.

We have brethren all over the United States claiming sectarians are born into the kingdom, and then go off into Babylon, and, by the shake of the hand, they can pull them out.

There must be a begetting before there can be a birth. James says, of his (God's) own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his creatures, James 1: 18. Do the sects teach the word of truth to the alien, or do they teach some truth, and serpent-like, some falsehood?

Jesus told those Jews that believed on him, "If ye continue in my word then are ye my disciples indeed. And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31-32. He does not mean ye shall know some truth and some falsehood, and some truth and some falsehood shall make you free.

Paul tells the Thessalonians that God hath from the beginning chosen them to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth.—2 Thea. 2: 13. Paul does not mean they were chosen to salvation through the belief of a truth or some truth. No. But by the belief of nothing more nor less than the truth. If they believe more than the truth, they believe too much; if less, they do not believe enough.

But, says a man, do not the Baptists teach faith, repentance, confession and baptism? Yes; but they teach no faith in repentance and baptism; no faith in repentance, because with them repentance comes before faith; and no faith in baptism; because they teach that a man can be saved without it. Whatsoever is not of faith is sin. If they change God's order, they are teaching for doctrine the commandments of men. If they are begotten by the will of men, they are not begotten by the will of God.

Yours for the truth,

J. F. RAINES.

CAN A RICH MAN BE SAVED?

In this fast age of strife and contention, the main object, it seems, of the great mass of mankind is to get money. True, men spend large sums of money for the education of children, but that is to enable them to follow in the footsteps of their progenitors in the accumulation of wealth. The foundation of many of the religious (?) organizations of the present day is money; take that away and the building falls.

Even the members (or professed members) of the Church of Christ, are not free from this greed of gain. Look at our literature, for instance; pick up any of our weekly papers, (with probably one exception), and scan their columns, and what do you find? Advertisements of nearly all descriptions. What do they mean? They mean that the proprietors are running the papers for the money that is in them, rather than for the good of the people.

Go to the cities and see the fine "pastor" feeding the flock on his thin preparation every Lord's day, and thus supplanting the elders; and ask the cause. The answer is easy; He is getting a fat salary to be lay by for a "rainy day."

Why are the so-called "missionary societies" organized among us? For the love of money. God's plan hasn't got enough money in it to satisfy their greedy souls.

In view then, of the shortness of time and the length of eternity; in view of the love of God manifested to the world in the person of his Son; in view of the judgment of the great day and the crase of men for worldly wealth, let us stop a moment and consider the important question: Can a rich man inherit the kingdom of God?

I now call your attention to Matt. 6: 24: "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." It will be admitted, that none but the servants of God will be saved. Mammon, in the above quotation, unquestionably, means worldly wealth. The only legitimate conclusion, therefore, is: that no one while seeking worldly wealth can be saved.

After making the statement above quoted, on one occasion, (Luke 16), in order to impress it more forcibly upon the minds of His hearers, Christ brought up the case of the rich man and Lazarus, and thus showed that the one who had served mammon (riches) went to hell, (there is nothing else said against him), while the poor man was saved. Remember, dear reader, that this was spoken by Christ, in confirmation of the truth that he had just uttered, i. e. "No man can serve two masters."

I will now call your attention to 1 Tim., 6: 8-10: "Godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing in the world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment let us be therewith content. But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil; which, while some coveted after have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows."

It being true, that seeking worldly wealth drowns men in perdition and destruction; it must necessarily be true, that those seeking it can not be saved until they abandon these practices; for men in perdition and destruction are not in a saved condition.

James testifies on this subject as follows: "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days. . . . Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth; ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter."—James 5: 1-4.

The above is positive, and shows that miseries shall come upon the rich, in eternity. Miseries will not come upon the saved; therefore the rich will not be saved.

When the rich man approached

Christ and asked him what to do to inherit eternal life, He told him to go sell what he had and give to the poor, and "take up your cross and follow me, and thou shalt have treasures in heaven." And when he refused to do this, Christ said: "How hardly shall a rich man enter into the kingdom of God! For it is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."—Luke 18: 18-25. Now we know that a camel cannot go through a needle's eye, and that, therefore, a rich man can not be saved. But Christ's disciples were astonished when they learned that the rich could not inherit the kingdom; so they then inquired: "Who then can be saved?" (They doubtless regarded the rich as highly favored of the Lord; and when they learned that they, while possessing riches, could not be saved, naturally thought it was a slim chance for anybody, hence the inquiry). Christ answered: "With men it is impossible, but with God all things are possible;" or, as Luke puts it: "The things which are impossible with men are possible with God." That is, with men it is impossible for anybody to be saved, but with God it is possible for some to be saved, even if a rich man cannot be saved.

In view of these things then, I appeal to those who possess much of this world's goods, to dispossess yourselves of them at once, for the sake of your eternal welfare! What a great amount of good you could do, by helping the needy with your means. What joy you could bring to the disconsolate widow by contributing to her necessities! By sustaining the worthy preachers, who are too poor to spend their time in preaching, you would be the means of sending the glad news of salvation to many who are without God and without hope in the world! Yea, more, you could by dispossessing yourself of this ponderous weight, and laying up treasures in heaven, secure for yourself a mansion of eternal felicity in the presence of God! Will you do it, or will you continue to let hungry go unfed, the naked uncluthed, the faithful preacher unsupported, the heathen untaught, and for the sake of money and a few years of pleasure here, sacrifice your eternal interest in the home of the blessed, and be doomed to everlasting banishment from the presence of God and the glory of his power?

FROM A BROTHER

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have been a constant reader of the F. F. for the past year, and am delighted with it. I preached the same position it advocates for ten years before your paper started. All said I was wrong. The F. F. has revolutionized all this section. I do not know a brother here who is willing to fellowship the "shake-ins."

Owing to the drought here last year, and for want of money now, the people cannot take your paper as they would like to. I know of about one hundred people who want the F. F. but have not the money to pay for it at present.

I can't keep a copy of it. I have sent copies to nearly every state in the Union, and am still sending them. Sister Hattie J. Weaver, of Weaversville, N. C., writes that the copies of the F. F. I sent her had stirred the Methodists more than any paper ever read there. She is an invalid of several years, and is unable to pay for the paper; further, there are but four members of Christ's body there, and all of them are women. I have tried to get some one to send her a bundle of F. F.'s to distribute, but have failed.

I send you some thoughts on the resurrection, which, like my position on baptism ten years ago, now look wrong. Many have called on me to have them published; I have at last submitted my thoughts to you and trust it may be published.

Yours in Christ,

JOHN W. HARRIS.
Uz, Texas.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Enclosed please find fifty cents for my subscription for the F. F. About the first of July will send fifty cents more to finish paying for this year. I am a confirmed cripple and can't labor. Is the reason I am compelled to send fifty cents at a time.

I greatly desire the success of the F. F., for it is indeed the only perfectly apostolic papers published. We have other papers that claim to be apostolic, but when measured by God's measuring reed, they fall in some respects; but the F. F. comes in the spirit of "Elijah" of old, turning the hearts of the people back to the Lord whom they have forsaken for this modern Baal, sect-baptism. May God's blessing attend you.

Yours in the hope of eternal life,
W. COOMBS.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Please send me one copy of "Zeke and the Methodists." I will send some new subscribers in a short time and will send the money for the pamphlet when I send the names. I have a copy of the "Religious Ups and Downs of the Jackson family." I have been a subscriber to the F. F. since June '86; can take F. F. and the Zeke Jackson pamphlet and put to flight any of the shaky brethren around here. Truth is mighty and will prevail. Much Christian love to you all.

PUBLISHER'S NOTES.

If you see a big RED CROSS on your paper, you may know your subscription is out. Please renew if you want the paper.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

We will not put the blue cross on any of the papers hereafter; as we are prepared to send receipts for money as fast as sent in. If you fail to get a receipt, write to us inside of thirty days for it.

We call attention to the change made in which all money orders for subscription, and for pamphlets, must be made payable and sent direct to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Texas, instead of to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas, as heretofore.

The Church of Christ, at Austin, will meet every Lord's day at 1014 E. 7th street, at their own hired house, and all Christians opposed to innovations in the work and worship upon the Lord's plan are cordially invited to meet with us when possible.

"Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath; for it is written, Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."—Rom. 12: 19-20-21.

A postal from Bro. H. H. Johnson, of Liberty Hill, Williamson county, dated April 1st, says, Bro. J. D. Tant is there preaching the gospel of Christ. We hope the brethren and sisters and friends to the cause of Christ there will give him a faithful hearing, and will do as he tells them, for it will do them good as long as they live.

We still have several good articles on hand which will appear shortly, and we have some which will be cast into the waste basket on account of their illegibility. It is impossible to make out what the writers, intended, and we do not have time to recompose other's articles, or to transcribe them for the printer. If you are a poor scribe, get some friend to rewrite the article for you.

At this writing, the Bro. and sister Hansbrough are striving to leave here by the 11th for North Carolina, and by the time this issue of F. F. reaches its readers, they will probably be in middle Tennessee. Bro. H. will stop at Park Station, Maury county, Tenn., and hold a few day's meeting in the neighborhood of Bro. S. J. Moore. They expect to be gone till late in the fall. Bro. J. W. Jackson will be in the office of the F. F. part of his time during the entire summer, and will select the copy for the F. F. and answer all scriptural questions of a practical import sent here to him.

WILL UNBELIEVERS BE RESURRECTED?

In answer to the above question, the F. F. of Feb. 16th positively answers, yes, and adduces Scriptures to prove same, all of which I heartily believe; but do not believe they prove the affirmative of this question. In order to draw out clear teaching on this subject and reconcile many passages of Scriptures, I enter my reasons for denying that the unbelieving dead will be resurrected!

I am aware that the position is new, (so far as I know); I never saw any man's position or reasoning denying their resurrection, and if I am wrong at all, I learned it from the Bible and no other source. I have never preached it yet, but hold the "denial" as private property.

1. In Matt 13: 41, "The son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them that do iniquity," etc. Here we have the angels entering the kingdom to gather out offensive material. The kingdom, here, is agreed, I think, to be the church—all right.

2. 1 Peter 4: 17, "For the time is coming that judgment must begin at the house of God," etc., here we have the "house of God" as the place where the judgment is to be held!

As I have found where the judgment is to be held, it is next in order to find something about the

"all" that we find in John 5: 28-29: "The hour is coming when all that are in their graves shall hear his voice," etc.

1st. I deny that "all" means entirely, whole, in every place, and in these passages, quoted to prove the resurrection of unbelievers, in particular.

Proof—John 12: 32: And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw "all" men unto me. "All men" are not drawn! Acts 2: 17: "I will pour out of my Spirit upon 'all' flesh," etc. Matt. 10: 22; Mark 13: 13; Luke 21: 17; Matt. 24: 9. Ye shall be hated of "all" men—of "all" nations for my name, etc.

Gentle reader, do you hate the apostles? Jesus said that "all" men will hate them—you are one of the "all men." Here are a number of passages that no one claims (that I ever heard) means entirely.

If let alone, I think, I will show that much false teaching has been heard on the resurrection question. I fully believe everything the Bible teaches concerning the resurrection, but do not think there is any necessity for raising unbelievers—their "everlasting punishment" is as complete without resurrection as with it.

Again: a proclamation from our chief executive effects none but subjects of the United States, and in the United States are millions of people, good and bad, small and great. No benefits nor punishment is dreaded by the subjects or citizens of Mexico, or elsewhere, from a proclamation from Grover Cleveland.

Just so in the government of God, proclamations affect only the subjects of God's government—the unbeliever is not a citizen of that government. I do not know of a Bible man who teaches that the unbeliever is a subject of God's government. Thus far I have touched the easier approaches to the main subject. The foregoing was necessary that the reader and critics might prepare their guns when the main charge is attempted.

(a) In John, 3: 18, Jesus says: "He that believeth not in me is condemned already." "Already" is ever present expression, the first and last moment of time is included in "already." Besides, if the unbeliever is raised, what is the object of his resurrection? Is it not to condemn him to "everlasting punishment?" Yes, says the teaching. If so, is that not condemning a person twice for the same offence, unbeliever? Will any one argue that God will condemn a person twice for the same thing? I think not.

John, 3: 36: "The unbeliever shall not see life." If he is raised how can this be? How can he be raised without seeing life? Will he be blind? Here is room for us to study. But the difficulties thicken fast.

In this world we have temporal life—a life that ends—a life that has many divisions of time. Such as years, months, days, etc.; a life that needs clocks, watches, and such like; but beyond this life we call it eternity—no need of any of the above divisions nor time pieces. Everything there, so far as we know, is without limit. To this all are agreed. Well then, if one unbeliever is raised there, common sense would say that, he was raised to the only kind of life there was in eternity, that is, eternal life. No matter how long he should hold that life, whenever the second death is visited, just that soon would eternal life cease to be without limit—it would then come to an end—the very thing that we never had thought could happen to "eternal."

I have merely opened the negative of this query, and that you may have something to study, I want you to find when and where the Devil, False Angels, or the Beast and False Prophet are to be raised!! This is food for thought, if you had never thought right with the Bible before you.

In former part, I merely outlined the work of removing the rubbish from this badly abused, (as I think), subject. In that I found that the judgment was to be held in the house, church of God. I know of no one who teaches that the unbeliever gets into the church of God. Hence if he does not get into the church of God, and the trial is going on in the church, for what purpose would he be raised? He is outside the church and trial is on the inside; where the "good and bad, small and great," "they that have done good, and they that have done evil," subjects of God's government are on trial. He did not get into the church in this life, how can he get into the church to be tried in the next life? Let some wise person tell how the entrance is made there!

As before illustrated, the proclamation of Cleveland affects all citizens of the United States—the highest cabinet officer on down to the last convict in our State prisons. They are all citizens. Just so God's proclamation affects all citizens of Christ's kingdom, whether good or bad, small or great. We know that in the Church of God are many Great Christians and many very small ones; many Good Christians and many very bad Christians. There are Christians or persons who have "done good" and "done evil," who are to "come forth" in John 5: 28-29.

Please read John 5: 25: "The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live." Live how long, Lord? Just as long as the life in eternity is, of course! Well, "all the dead" are to be raised and because of the voice of the Son of God the unbeliever hears that voice, says the teaching, and rises from the dead with the pledge of Christ that he shall live! No danger of any death now, for he has passed beyond this, where all is eternal.

Again, John 6: 54: "Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day." Does the unbeliever eat his flesh or drink his blood? Every one says, no! Under the above contract has he got eternal life? There is the rub!

But Christ made a fair and plain contract—that contract is, "I will raise him up." But the unbeliever has done neither of the items of the contract, hence has not the promise attached to the eating and drinking.

Who ever heard of a positive without its equivalent negative? Whenever a stick with but one end, and a board with but one side is found, then, and not till then, will a positive without an equivalent be found. The positive, in this passage, is that if a person does certain things, Christ will do a certain thing, "raise him up." The negative is, that if he does not do these certain things, Christ is under no pledge to do the thing promised, "raise him up." Do you think so, reader?

I will now take up the passage in 1 Cor. 15: 22, where I have heard more inconsistent preaching by my brethren here than from any passage now in mind: "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Brethren teach the people that Paul wrote this letter to the church—to Christians—they get enthusiased and rear and plunge, telling the audience this letter is addressed to those in Christ! At last they strike this passage, and by some frank of inconsistency they tear loose from their own teaching and gather the entire world, believer and unbeliever in a bundle. How is this done? Very easily: they have the life-time hobbles on which they have never tried to rid themselves of.

Let us look at this passage. What relationship did Adam sustain to God? He was the Son of God! Luke 3: 38. Is the unbeliever the Son of God? All say no! When Adam was created, he was a "good son." When he broke God's law, he was a "bad son." At first he did good, at last he did bad. He was still the Son of God!

I am not denying the resurrection of the entire race before "faith came." I affirm that the race up to that time will be raised. Just here I will leave a loose thread for some scribe to swing on. It is useless for me to examine the epistles further. We teach that all of them are addressed to those in the church, in Christ.

I will now tackle the strongest stockade relied on, that is, Rev. 20: 12. On this (to my mind) inconsistency has gone to seed. "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works."

Difficulty No. 1: Who teaches that the unbeliever gets his name in either of the books named? If he gets his name there, where is the law by which he has his name enrolled?

No. 2; If the judgment is to be in the church of God, and the parties are to be judged from writings had in books, and the unbeliever has never entered the family or house of God where the enrolling is had, what danger would there be to him if he were raised? His name is not in the books, neither his works! (Or if his works are in the books, his name is not there, hence the works might be called, charged to the wrong person.

But, says one, what will be done with the unbeliever? Read Rev. 20: 15: "Whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." Is that not sufficient? Jesus said he was condemned already, and like the angels, in Jude 6, the unbeliever has been reserved for this lake of fire.

Rev. 20th chapter is the closing of the judgment scene. Rev. 21: 8, simply gives the state of certain dead persons after the judgement, without a hint at any resurrection or no resurrection.

One other item and I close until the critics are heard from. I am in earnest, but don't want to be wrong. The person who sets me right is my best friend. Isa. 28: 12-14 names parties who "shall not rise!" In Rev. 11: 1-2, an order is given to take a measuring reed and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.

Is there anything about the church that is not here? If so, what is it? The measuring or judging is in the place 1 Peter 4: 17 says it will be. It is amid the right people, "those who worship therein." The unbeliever has never worshiped therein, hence is not to be measured.

"But the court that is without the temple leave out, and measure it not," etc. Without the temple is the proper place for the unbeliever, and orders are given not to measure it! Why? Because Jesus has said he is condemned already! Is not that sufficient?—he dies out of citizenship, out of Christ; he will receive no bounty, none of the blessings attached to citizenship. But the "Great Christians," the ones "who have done good" will enter into life. The "Small Christians" the ones "who have done evil" will share with the unbeliever "everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power."

JOHN W. HARRIS.

Uz, Texas.

The foregoing article is composed of so many "loose threads that I do not wonder at the signal failure made by Bro. Harris in trying to weave the web of an argument.

He first denies "that unbelievers will be resurrected," and then says, "I am not denying the resurrection of the entire race before faith came." Then, Bro. H., your denial should read, "some unbelievers will not be resurrected."

The question then arises, what becomes of those unbelievers who have died since the faith came? Bro. H. says, they will not be resurrected; that he does "not think there is any necessity for raising unbelievers." Ah! there is the rub. Bro. H. does not think that they ought to be resurrected, therefore he finds Scriptures to prove that his thinking is right! But he says further, "their everlasting punishment is as complete without resurrection as with it?" How can that be when you tell us that Rev. 20th is the closing of the judgment scene, and that the wicked or unbelievers are turned into the lake of fire with the wicked angels? According to the above the unbeliever is everlastingly punished as soon as he dies, and then at the judgment, he is everlastingly punished again without being raised to life! Rather "loose threads" all along the web; better tighten them up and let that old sadducean idea go to the moles and bats.

The basis upon which Bro. H. builds his argument is an erroneous interpretation of 1 Pet. 4: 17. He says of this: "Here we have the place where the judgment is to be held." [Italics mine]. How you could think such an idea from that passage is a mystery to me.

Peter says: "For the time is coming that judgment must begin at the house of God, and if it first begin at us what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?" Peter teaches that judgment first begins at "the house of God," the people of God, not a place, and, second, the judgment extends to those who obey not the gospel of God.

Paul tells us that God has ordained a day in which He will judge "the world" by that man whom He has ordained.—Acts 17: 30-31. In view of that judgment when "the world" will be judged; when the "secrets of men," (not some men), will be laid open, Rom. 2: 16; when the dead small and great shall stand before God; mark you it is the dead, not some dead, but the dead who were given up from the sea, and from death, and from hades (the spirit world,) all of them before God, Rev. 20: 11-13; I say, in view of all this, "God now commandeth all men everywhere to repent."—Acts 17: 30. Is this proclamation broad enough? Does it affect every man?

But I have not space nor time to take up so many loose threads and work the kinks out of them. I notice, however, one more. Please turn to John 5: 25: "Verily, verily I say unto you, the hour is coming and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God and they that hear shall live." Jesus raised the dead, restored them to life. Luke 7: 14; John 11: 43; Matt. 11: 5. This was a great wonder to the Jews, so, Jesus explains that, "as the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the son of man to have life in himself, and hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the son of man." They continued to wonder at his words and then he said: "Marvel not at this for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." Who were in the graves? Two classes: one that did good, the other, that did evil, and Jesus says: "All that are in the graves."

But Bro. H. says, all means only a part, or some, which I deny. The context will generally show what restriction is put upon the word, or to what extent it must be used. Here it is restricted by the phrase "in the graves," and is just equal to what John says, Rev. 20: 12, that the sea and death and hades gave up the dead that were in them.

It also agrees with Paul's statement that, in the day of judgment God will visit tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man that doeth evil, upon the Jews first, and also upon the Gentiles; but glory, honor and immortality or eternal life unto all that do well.—Rom. 2: 6-16.

The coming of Jesus with all his holy angels, in the glory and power of the Father is immediately connected with the resurrection and the judgment. When Jesus thus comes His voice will penetrate the dark abodes of death and awaken from their sleep the nations of the dead. The dead in Christ shall rise first. They come forth to the resurrection of life; then the wicked in their order or class come forth to be punished according to their works. Hades gives up the angels that had been reserved in chains of darkness, and all that know not God and obey not the gospel of the Lord Jesus will be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power; and mark it, this is to be done when he shall come to be glorified in his saints and to be admired in all them that believe.—2 Thes. 1: 7-10. ORDER VS. CONFUSION.

Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up.—Matt. 15: 13.

This language was spoken by the Savior just after he had been denouncing the Scribes and Pharisees as hypocrites, for having set aside God's law and substituting the doctrines of men, in and through which they could get no nearer to God than a lip-service. And that is all that any class of people can do in this age of the world, in and through the inventions of men. They get no nearer to God than a lip-service, for the Savior taught that God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him, how? In spirit and in truth. John 4: 24.

Then no man or set of men can worship God acceptably only as they are governed and guided in all things by the truth. Now all this idea of being spiritual-minded and therefore right, if it is according to the doctrines of men, is just about as near right as the wholesome doctrine of justification by faith alone. For mark you, the Savior said it must be in spirit and in truth. What is truth? Answer, "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth."—John 17: 17, also 2 Sam. 7: 24. Then according to the foregoing definition, to worship God in truth must be as his word directs.

Now I propose to notice third and fourth items in our bill of indictment against the progressives. Then from whence came this plant that has been by the hand of man set in the garden or church of God on earth called the State Meetings? This unknown creature to the book of God I believe was begotten and born at Bryan, Texas, so far as Texas is concerned, 15 or 20 years ago. And, if I have been correctly informed, to Bro. C. Kendrick belongs the honor and distinction of conceiving and begetting this little animal, the very birth of which engendered strife, alienation and confusion, between such as Bros. Lipscomb and Kendrick. Bro. L. came to Texas on a visit and happened to be at the birth of this animal, and believing it to be a creature that that would usurp the authority of heaven's King and his Lord and King; he, like a good soldier of Jesus, drew the sword of the Spirit and made a thrust at it. At which Bro. K. became so offended that he failed to treat Bro. L. with the christian courtesy due him. Yes, and from that day to this good hour this animal has been butting and horning at any and every one that would dare dispute his right to alter, change or improve on the Lord's way of having his work done.

I remember having attended one of their State Meetings in '76 or '77, at Waco, Texas. And there I saw the spirit of the new-born animal so clearly manifest, that I became satisfied that it was not of God by the fruit it bore on that occasion. There was some unchrist-like feelings between Bros. C. M. Wilmeth, Poe and others on one side, and Bro. W. K. Homan and others on the other. Because, forsooth, Bro. W. called in question the right of the existence of such machinery in connection with the Lord's work. Yes, he made rather a furious attack upon the whole thing, which stirred the ire of some of the advocates of this creature; and Bro. W. K. Homan, (notwithstanding his high position as chairman), resigned the chair and made a very sharp reply, and thus it has gone on on from bad to worse until they can cast out all the Wilmeth's, McGary's, Grubbs's, Hansbrough's, Durst's, Pennington's and Poe's, that could assemble in the city of Austin, and that without one remorse of conscience for having violated any law of love to God or man.

Now I have referred to the history of this animal, not because I wish to dig up the past or cast any unjust reflection on any one, but because I wish to try this plant by the fruit it has borne from the day of its birth, and we find it has been bad, yes, very bad; and is therefore not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish, not having the Spirit.—James 3: 15, also Jude 1: 19.

Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His; and the Saviour said, by their fruits ye shall know them, Matt. 7: 20. Now if the advocates of this State Meeting animal were actuated by the Spirit of God, or that wisdom which is from above, we would have a tree bearing this kind of fruit: "First, pure, then peaceable gentle and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits." Yes, and without that partiality that is so clearly manifest in every meeting of theirs, and without that hypocrisy that claims to love God and his children, while they disregard or reject his word and wound the conscience of those for whom Christ died.

Well, says one, Bro. Lane you ought not to judge your brethren. No, and may the Lord keep back his servant from such a presumptuous sin. But, my dear brother, when the tree bears bad fruit, it is not a matter of judgment, but of knowledge. But do they bear the fruit of the Spirit? Let us see: But "the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law."—Gal. 5: 22: 23. Now in as much as this plant has not borne the foregoing fruits, what shall I say? Well it is not of God. Then what is it? Answer, a work of the flesh.

But, says one, how do you know? Because Paul has so taught. Please hear him: "Now the works of the flesh are manifest which are these, adultery, (yes, they have become married to another institution, or living without marriage while the first husband is living, and in either case they are guilty,) fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, (or disagreement), emulations, (or rivalry), wrath, strife, seditions and heresies." Now these are some of the works of the flesh; and the work of this State Meeting machinery is in perfect keeping with the above named items, for it causes hatred and disagreement among brethren, and is a rival institution, and that against the church of God, that Jesus Christ purchased with his own blood. Yes, it has caused strife and confusion at every meeting they have held in the State, and it is a departure from the apostolic order or way of raising money and carrying on the Lord's work, and is not "pleasing to God," being a work of the flesh. Then the grave question is, can God's children aid or abet, countenance or support it without criminating themselves before God? I answer, no. For John has taught if any man falls to bring the doctrine or teaching of Christ we are not even to bid him God speed without becoming partakers of his evil deed. 2 John 1: 10. This being so, it is time for all good brethren and sisters who have more love for God and his word than they have for the ways of men, to be led no longer by the blind, lest they fall into the pit of destruction and be lost. And while I have no unkind feelings for any one, yet I earnestly pray to God that I may never have more love for man than for God and our Lord Jesus Christ, that loved me unto death; neither do I desire that kind that thinks more of the errors of the people than for them and their eternal well-being in the world to come.

We have fallen into the practice of calling on the unconverted to come forward and take front seats and do the singing for us. Now I ask, is not the singing a part of the worship of God? All, I presume, will say, yes. Then by what authority do we call on the sects and unconverted to do this part of the worship of God? Why not call on them to pray or preach, or do anything else the Lord requires his children to do? I object to this because it supplants the Lord's order and in many instances deprives God's children of the pleasure and privilege of singing and making melody in their hearts to the Lord, not being able to keep time with the choir. What an idea: that the rebel against God's authority can sing and make melody in his heart to the Lord in an acceptable way.

In Prov. 28: 9 we are informed that, he that turneth away his ear from the hearing of God's law even his prayer shall be an abomination to the Lord. Now if to refuse to hear (or obey) God's law is sufficient to cause him to refuse to recognize one's prayer, may I not ask, will the singing of such fare any better? Then how inconsistent and wrong it is for those who have been bought and redeemed by the blood of Christ to go up to serve with those whose prayers and hymns are an abomination to the Lord. When such is the case do we not become partakers in their evil deeds? The book says that, those who would serve God must come out from the world and Babylon and be separated, and then he will be their God and they his people, not while mixed up with them, but after they come out.—2 Cor. 6: 17-18.

PRIDE.

Pride, ostentation and show are playing sad havoc with the church in a thousand ways. At the very threshold of christianity we are commanded to humble ourselves as little children; to be not conformed to this world but transformed by the renewing of our minds; they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with its affections and lusts; that is, its worldly affection, affection for things carnal and unholy.

In former times it was customary to leave the world behind when joining the church, now, in nine cases out of ten, we fear, there is an effort to lug the world into the church. Men feel the necessity of christianity and set out to be religious enough so that they may escape hell at least, but they are loth to give up the world, and cling so much that way as at last to prove their everlasting destruction.

The Methodists won their way in the religious world by their simplicity, their humility and zeal. The rich were made low that they might be on a level with the poor. They won the masses and multiplied by thousands, and while they maintained their simplicity and zeal they seemed irresistible; but pride crept in, their numbers were large and they began to feel themselves powerful as a people; they began to dress fashionably, to wear gold and pearls; to build fine churches; to substitute for their soul-stirring congregational singing, the choir, and at once their glory departed. They are dying of worldly pride and vanity.

We are becoming proud also, we have left our former simplicity and zeal, and are becoming worldly-minded, fashionable and fond of show; in many places our grand old congregational hymns have given way to the operatic airs of the organ and choir, while our churches present as much gaudy jewelry, fine dressing and show as might be expected in a heathen temple, as though God could be flattered and deceived by outward show. These things are largely growing upon us year by year, and unless we shall give attention to these matters and at once begin to purge out the old leaven it may not be fifty years until we need another reformation as radical as was that advocated by A. Campbell, Walter Scott and others.

I would like to see a few good articles from the pen of some of our good sisters, for the best method of combatting this growing evil of worldly pride in our churches.

Your sister in Christ,

Mrs. B. F. JOHNSON.

FROM BRO. ARNETT.

Will any of the writers of the F. F. be so kind as to tell how the Pharisees knew that a man was to come to baptize. John 1: 25, they ask the question: "Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet?"

Now what I want to know is, how did these questioners know that any one was to come baptizing?

Again, in the 33rd verse, John says: "I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with (in) water the same said unto me," etc. Now who sent John, that is, where is it recorded that John was sent? I am satisfied God sent him, but where is it written? What satisfies me, don't always satisfy others.

I have a boy just past ten years, and he shut me up on that question. Then he suggested we write to Eld. Hansbrough. He (the boy) thinks Bro. Hansbrough knows it all.

Again, I want you to refer your readers to the Christian Baptist on "The Trinitarian System," instead of saying we are up to our necks, the first step into the question. With all your new "lights" Campbell was six inches taller than any of you.

W. W. ARNETT.

FROM BRO. CASTLEMAN.

I see in the F. F. an inquiry, if the fathers of the reformation were baptized for the remission of sins, by M. T. Bostick. I will say, by your permission, that A. Campbell et al were baptized on a simple confession of faith in Christ, not on a profession of faith that God had pardoned his sins.

What he thought about it can only be learned by what he taught, and it is certain that he taught that it was in order to remission, and the Baptists in a debate have quoted the Christian Baptist to prove that Campbell taught, that baptism without that thought was as empty as a blasted nut. "The hull was there but the kernel was wanting." So we see that those who entertain so much uneasiness about A. Campbell need have no fear.

But what effect would it have on the truth if Campbell had made a mistake? It is not what Campbell or any other uninspired man says, but what did Jesus and the inspired apostles say about it? Brethren, let us have divine and not human testimony. J. L. CASTLEMAN.

What a world of gossip would be prevented if it were only remembered that a person who tells you of the faults of others intends to tell others of your faults.—E. L.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, MAY 1, 1888.

From this time on send all money for the FIRM FOUNDATION, or any of our pamphlets, to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Texas. Make all money orders payable to A. McGary. Please state whether you are a new subscriber or an old one. Write plainly, and give the county, where your post office is not a large town. Don't forget this in sending orders. MCGARY & HANSBROUGH.

A. MCGARY'S address is Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas.

A BROTHERLY LETTER.

Bro. McGary:

Some weeks ago, in a few lines in the C. Messenger, I referred to your continual efforts to make your foundation firm, as though, without these continual efforts, it might fail. I meant no more than all the innocent pleasantry there is in brotherly facetiousness. This you seem to misunderstand, and speak of me as "the poor old man," etc., in very uncomplimentary terms! I write this to say that, whether your foundation is firm or not, I do not think your reply is brotherly or Christ-like. But when I have expressed this opinion to you I have said all I designed to say. I mean no controversy. My foundation needs no propping or watching. It can stand the storm, I trust, from all quarters.

How much I regret that we can not have more of the Christian spirit, and more of the fruit of the Spirit—love, joy, peace, etc.

Affectionately and truly,
C. KENDRICK.
Weatherford, Texas

Bro. Kendrick: I do not consider it criminal to be old, or poor, or old and poor—I expect to be both if I live long enough. But the word, poor, has several meanings. In my reply to what you now say was, only intended as "brotherly facetiousness," I did not use "poor" in a disgraceful, but in its commiserative sense. I really felt sorry for an old brother who had devoted half of a century preaching and writing against innovations as earnestly and cogently as you have been doing, who could not turn loose all these things himself.

It is really bad to see a doctor, who can cure everybody else of a disease, die with that same disease himself, while he has the sovereign remedy in his own hands and could save his life by merely swallowing what he has so kindly put to the lips of thousands of his brethren.

You say you mean no controversy; and I will not try hard to draw you into one against your will; but you must pardon me for saying that if you will furnish me authority for baptizing persons who do not know for what they are going down into the water, I will furnish you authority for something you have called for long and loudly—authority for the use of the organ in the worship. You, and the fiddle, banjo, tambourine, and every other musical instrument.

But since you only meant a little brotherly facetiousness, when you said the F. F. was trying to keep its foundation from being shaken out, I am very sorry that you wrote what you did and drew out my reply; because your feelings have been hurt unnecessarily—though I did not intend to hurt your feelings. I respect age very much. I am sorry to have to hurt the feelings of any of my brethren, especially the old ones. But fidelity to truth leads me sometimes to say things with an apparent tartness that wounds. I beg your pardon for wounding yours; but will you permit me to say that, when an old brother becomes "facetious" over such serious things, as you were in this instance, a little wounding may do him good?

Let us all cultivate that "true Christian spirit," and, my brother, may God bless your declining years with that vigor of mind and zeal you have possessed to such a marked degree, to your last moment; and may you never feel too old to turn when you see you are wrong on any point—this spirit of humility is one of the greatest blessings an old brother can have. Few seem to possess it. Dear old Bro. Strickland is an exception that you and all other old brethren would do well to imitate.
A. MCG.

"THE RED CROSS" EXPLAINED.

I have been censured some for writing an article some time ago under the above heading. I have mislaid the paper that contained that article, and do not remember just what I did say. So I will have to guess at the objectionable features of the article. I expect I laid myself open to this censure and if I did I am glad my brethren have called my attention to it.

In the first place, when I alluded to having trouble with some, I did not mean that I would sue them, for let whoever may take advantage of what I now say—but no true man or woman will—we never will sue any one for their subscription. It is true, I stated what the law was and said we would demand that. But if the F. F. cannot live without suing people, it will cease to be published. I merely meant to demand as a matter of justice what the law of the land has said was just, not because the law demands it, but because it seems right. But I do not and did not mean to press that demand beyond the point of honor, did not mean that I would demand it in the courts. I showed what the law demands, as argument that certain complainants might see that I was not taking a narrow, individual view of it.

But now to a conclusion. When I heard last from the office there were about fifteen hundred dollars due the paper. We will not sue if we have to lose all of this. We are willing to spend and be spent for the gospel. We never have refused and never will refuse to send the paper to those who want it, but are too poor to pay for it. So let those who do not think they ought to pay drop a card immediately to the F. F. at Austin—not to me—and let the books be straightened up. We leave the matter to their honor. I have heard from several who, under the circumstances they mention, ought not to pay.

A QUARRY.

In the Guide of Feb. 10, Bro. Williamson speaks of "Brother" Moody's wonderful meeting in Louisville.

Who is this "Brother" Moody? When was he baptized into Christ? When did he obey God's Law? Where is his membership? When did he begin to honor Christ by wearing his name? When did he become a brother? Will Bro. W. please enlighten one who knows nothing of Moody's obedience? Has he ever obeyed God? If not, is he your brother?

J. M. RATLIFF.

Barry, Ill.

The above questions were propounded to Bro. C. P. Williamson, assistant editor of the Guide; but instead of giving unequivocal answers to them, Bro. W. betrayed the fact that he was hemmed and a little peevish over it. But he gives his conclusion as follows:

In conclusion—as we preachers say—permit me, my dear brother, to add that I do not agree with all that Bro. Moody says, nor do I believe that he understands the gospel plan of salvation fully. I do not endorse his errors but his truths. I rejoice in his spirit which is certainly that of an honest, conscientious loyal Christian, and I shall never anathematize those who are trying to serve God in humility because they do not see as I see. The testimony of the preachers of Louisville and of the secular press is that the meetings have done much spiritual good, and I am satisfied that Bro. Moody's practical and loving sermons have lifted many souls into a higher and better life. In these things I rejoice. Bro. Ratliff and I do not see all things alike, shall I cease to love him or speak kindly of him? Nay, verily. Let us aim to "abhor all evil and cleave to all good," and above all, manifest the spirit of Christ for "if a man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his."

C. P. WILLIAMSON.

We feel sorry for such brethren as Bro. Williamson—sorry that they have not the courage of their convictions so that they could go over to the denominations where their great big hearts could reach from "branch" to "branch" and their capacious souls could feast to satiety upon the luscious fruits of "orthodoxy." He does not believe that D. L. Moody "understands the gospel plan of salvation fully." But what if he does not, since other "plans" are just as good, according to such brethren?

He says that Moody is a loyal Christian? I had thought that a man had to "contend for the faith once delivered to the saints"—the "gospel plan of salvation"—to be a loyal Christian, but it seems I am mistaken, if Bro. Williamson is right. He proves the christianity of Moody by "the testimony of the preachers of Louisville and of the secular press." I wonder if John, when he said: "try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world," meant for them to be tried by sectarian preachers and secular papers!

Now if I understand Bro. W., he considers those devoid of the Spirit of Christ who deny that such sensational, clap-trap, theological mountebanks as D. L. Moody are Christians.

Well, I do not believe they are; and if Bro. W. really thinks I have not the Spirit of Christ, I do not blame him for saying so; and he should not blame me for thinking and saying that those who approve such men as D. L. Moody, become traitors to Christ by endorsing men who preach "the doctrines of men, which make the commandments of God of none effect."

A. MCG.

FROM BRO. MCGINNIS.

Bro. McGary:

I am taking your paper and like it very much; if you will allow me space in your paper, I would like to ask you two questions:

I notice in the January number of the F. F. some questions asked by sister M. E. W. First, in regard to her baptism, I understand you to teach that it is necessary to understand the design of baptism before performed or it is not valid; this she says she understood. You said that in her present condition, it would do her no good to be rebaptized if her conscience was clear; this I think she claims from what she said, yes, more; yet you said she would commit a sin to be rebaptized. Then you said you did not believe her baptism valid because the Baptist does not require the confession before baptism; now Bro. McG. if she makes the confession and is not baptized after the confessor, that will be contrary to apostolic practice; if she is baptized she commits a sin, how will you get out of this dilemma?

She asked for some light on 1 Cor. 3: 13: you say you understand it to teach that a man may be in Christ and unwittingly mislead others and yet be saved. Now Bro. McGary if a man mislead others and yet be saved, cannot a man obey God in baptism ignorant of its design and be saved? Let us have a little light along here. Is God a respecter of persons?

Yours in the one faith,

W. M. MCGINNIS.

We think the dilemma will turn out to be a mere fume of fancy when we clear the mist from the brother's eyes.

1st. We never thought of suggesting such a disorderly procedure as would be confession after baptism.

2nd. We surely did not advise baptism in the lady's present state of mind and conviction; for we said it would not in that case be an act of faith, hence would be a sin.

We advised her to re-examine the question in the light of the Scripture, and upon such re-examination, if she found she had not filled up the measure of the law of Christ to then make "the good confession" and be baptized.

We have not our original article at hand now, but we are certain this must be the obvious meaning of what we wrote. We are at a loss to understand how such a foreign meaning to what we did write as that which this brother attaches to it, can be ascribed to that article. But when it comes to his criticism of our remarks on 1 Cor. 3: 15, we must admit that his point of attack is not so chimerical.

Many have written us on this same point. It may be that our understanding of that passage is wrong. We have no disposition to dogmatize upon such passages. We only gave that as our understanding of the passage. While I admit that there are some difficulties that stand in the way of my view of that passage, I have heard no other view expressed that does not, it seems to me, encounter some insurmountable obstacles.

If any of the many brethren who have taken me to task at this point feel disposed to write on this question for the benefit of our readers, we will cheerfully publish it for them, and if they can throw any light on it, I will try to open my eyes wide enough to get a glimpse of that light. And if I think they are so far wrong as to lead any very far astray, I will then take time to point out the difficulties the best I can. But for the present I consider other questions more profitable.

A. MCG.

FROM BRO. WEAVER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

As I highly appreciate your paper, and think it is doing great good, I would be more than glad you would send it to me, though I have not the money to send you now; though I think through the help of a higher power I can have the money by October. Times are hard here owing to short crops last year. My wife's health is so bad that she is scarcely ever able to go to church and your paper, I consider is having preaching at home.

Bro. Sweeney held a meeting on Boon's Prairie in February, got six members, two of them being my son-in-law and daughter. I think Bro. Sweeney a fine preacher.

Can you tell me where preachers get their Scripture for using those charts?

I am going to ask you to do me a favor if it is agreeable with your business. I have not heard from my father or any of my brothers or sisters since 1867; if you will put it in your paper as I give you their names I think that I can hear something of their whereabouts. I will give you the old people's names: father's name was Ebenezer Weaver, mother's name before marriage was Mary Cody. Now if you can do this and not interfere with your business, I will pay you well for your trouble.

Your brother in the one hope,
WILLIAM GREEN WEAVER.
Boon's Prairie, Texas.

We hope our readers will give any information they may possess of these parties and oblige this brother. Of course we would not think of receiving remuneration for such as this.

OUR PAMPHLETS.

The Oatman-McGary discussion is a discussion of the kingdom question and the birth of the Spirit. Dr. Oatman is the leading Christadelphian of Texas; hence this pamphlet deals with the grounds of Christadelphianism. We believe it is the only published discussion any of our brethren have ever had with the Christadelphians. It is a pamphlet of over one hundred pages. We offer it for 25 cents, but this edition is nearly exhausted.

"The Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," is a pamphlet that lays wide open the inconsistency of receiving Baptists and other immersed sectarians without "immersing in the name of the Lord Jesus." It is offered by us at only 10 cents per copy, or three for 25 cents. It ought to be widely circulated among those who have not yet seen the unsoundness of the practice referred to.

The "Sequel to the Religious Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," by J. W. Jackson, is a pamphlet about the size of the other, and is offered at the same price. It gives an account of how "Zeke Jackson" won his wife, first converting her from Methodism. In her conversion "Zeke" met the Methodist "Grub-Ax" and exposed its sophistry. This is a splendid pamphlet, especially for circulation where the "Grub-Ax" has been circulated.

DANCING.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Please give us an article on the modern dance. There are many young members that need to be instructed and advised, as they seem to think it no harm to engage in this fleshly amusement. There are also others that attend these places that do not dance, and claim that they have done no harm.

J. C. A.

Weches, Texas.

We publish the above card, and we, like the writer, believe that it would be well to give some lessons of instruction in reference to the subject of dancing; whether or not the children of God have the privilege or right to engage in or encourage such things, and where shall we go to decide the question? To the word of the Lord we must go, and if that does not settle it, nothing else will, and we will begin by saying that, in the Old Testament we find two characters of dancing mentioned, one to the Lord and the other not to the Lord, and must of necessity be to the flesh.

The first place it is mentioned is in Exodus 32: 19, when Moses went up into the Mount to receive the law from God, he tarried longer than the people expected, and they proposed to make them gods who should lead them back to Egypt, and Aaron told them to break off their ear-rings and bring them to him, and he melted them and ran them into a mould like a calf, and they danced around it, and Paul in speaking of it says: "The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play," (or to dance).—1 Cor. 10: 7. Now that is the character of the circumstances under which we read of the first dancing that we have an account of in the Bible, and I ask our modern dancers if that dancing was done to glorify the law of God or an idol, and so great was their sin in that thing, making the idol god and dancing around it, that three thousand of them died, and Paul says: "These things happened unto them for examples: and they are written for our admonition."—1 Cor. 10: 11.

Job speaks of the same character of dancing when he says: "The wicked send forth their little ones like a flock, and their children dance, they take the timbrel and harp, and rejoice at the sound of the organ, they spend their days in wealth, and in a moment go down to the grave, therefore they say unto God: depart from us, for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways; what is the Almighty that we should serve him? and what profit should we have if we pray unto him?"—Job 21: 7-15. Is not that a good description of modern dancers? Do they not want to banish all thoughts of God and all knowledge of his ways from their minds? And is it not strange that Christians, those who have been made free from sin, young or old, male or female should engage in such things, or encourage others to do so by their presence?

We will now notice two cases of dancing to the Lord, the first of which is in Exodus 15: 20: After the children of Israel were delivered from Egyptian bondage, a type of sin, having passed through the Red Sea, they sung the song of deliverance, "and Miriam, the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances." We find in this case that the women went out by themselves to praise the Lord for his great goodness in delivering them from bondage, a type or representation of our deliverance from sin, when we are baptized into Christ. Do our modern dancers do that way? Do the women separate from the men and sing songs of praise for their deliverance from sin?

We find that David danced before the Lord when he brought the ark of God to his city; but that was a very different character of dancing and for a very different purpose from that practiced by our modern dancers, and there were no women dancing with him, and if the men and women were to dance separately now there would be very little dancing done.

In the New Testament we find that the daughter of Herodias danced before king Herod and his guests, and so nicely did she skip about over the floor, and so pleased the drunken king that he promised her whatever she might ask, and she being instructed by her wicked mother, asked the head of John the Baptist, which was granted her, so that one of the best men of earth lost his head by the request of a foolish, giddy dancing girl.

The apostle Peter speaks of dancing, calling it reveling, and classes it with the works of the flesh, lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine banquetings and abominable idolatries, 1 Peter 4: 3. Paul also speaks of it as a work of the flesh, and classes it with adultery, lasciviousness, murders, drunkenness, and such like, such as going to theatres, circuses, etc., and says that, they that do or practice such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.

Under the reign of Christ there is no dancing sanctioned either to the Lord or otherwise, men and women together or separated, and it is strange to me that Christians should desire to engage in such a fleshly amusement, or see others engage in it, and thereby encourage them in the practice of something that will keep the children of God from entering the everlasting kingdom, especially in view of the fact that Paul admonishes them to avoid even the appearance of evil. Brethren and sisters, old and young, will you for Christ's sake, for the sake of your own souls, and the souls of those by whom you are surrounded, turn away from such wickedness and serve the Lord Jesus, who loved you and died for you?

I know that some preachers tell their members that there is no harm in dancing; but such preachers are not the ministers of God but of Satan. Others will not say there is no harm in doing it, but will permit those who practice it to remain in the congregation, knowing that they do it and they are no better than the first class spoken of; they too are the servants of the devil.

E. HANSBROUGH.

THE BLOOD OF CHRIST.

The most important thing that man can enjoy is, forgiveness of sin; to have the assurance that we are redeemed from the guilt, pollution and consequences of sin, and to know that, when this earthly tabernacle is dissolved, we have a building, a house not made with hands, eternal and on high. But how are we to obtain this great blessing?

The beloved John declares, 1st epistle 1: 7: "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son, cleanses us from all sin." Here the apostle attributes to the blood of Christ what sectarians attribute to the Spirit of God. They make the Holy Spirit the convincing, converting and purifying agency, apart from all other agencies. Is this correct? Let us see: the Holy Spirit was to convict the world of sin, of righteousness and of judgment, John 16: 8. How was he to do this? By entering their hearts in some mysterious way, incubating their souls, quickening and making them spiritually alive? Never; Jesus says, the world cannot receive the Spirit, John 14: 17.

But how does the Spirit perform this work? Christ says, it was to dwell in the apostles, John 14: 17. On the day of Pentecost this aid from on high visits them, and Peter, the foreman of the twelve, begins to speak. He preaches unto them the gospel; the effect is, three thousand are cut to the heart, convicted of sin. Now are they pardoned? Certainly not. Why? The blood of Christ has not been applied to their guilty souls; they must come in contact with that blood before remission of sins can be obtained. How, literally? No; God in his wisdom and goodness has ordained an institution by which the sinner can do this. In order that we may get a more comprehensive view of this matter, let us inquire, when was the blood of Christ shed? Paul says: "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission."—Heb. 9: 22.

We could not then be saved by his blood before it was shed. When Christ instituted the supper he said: "This is my blood of the New Testament which is shed for many for the remission of sins," Matt. 26: 28. Not until he was nailed to the cross was this soul-cleansing blood poured out. Then it was at his death that his blood was shed, and Paul says: "Know ye not that as many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death? Therefore, we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection," Rom. 6: 3-4-5. Hence we see, that in order to come in contact with his blood, we must come to his death, where his blood was shed. Faith, repentance and confession brings us unto his death and not into it. Before we can get into a house, we must come unto it. So, before we can get into Christ we must come unto him.

Paul says: "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation," Rom. 10: 10. Again, "When they heard this they held their peace and glorified God saying, then hath God granted unto the Gentiles repentance unto life," Acts 11: 18.

Now notice the difference in regard to the preposition used when speaking of baptism. In speaking of the position into which baptism places us, Paul says: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ," Gal. 3: 27. Hence we see that baptism brings us into Christ, in whom we have redemption through his blood even the forgiveness of sins, Col. 1: 14. Again Paul says: "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things have become new," 2 Cor. 5: 17. Hence we find that in order to get into Christ we must be baptized into him, and if any man climbeth up any other way he is a robber.

To say that persons are Christians who have never submitted to this law of pardon, is to deny the teaching of the Savior, for he teaches that there is but one way of entrance. "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life; and few there be that find it," Matt. 7: 14. Hence all persons who have never been converted according to the "one way," have not had the blood of Christ applied to them are not in Christ, and consequently are not pardoned.

Some have asked the question, what will God do with these characters? That is not for us to decide. We know that Paul says: "That the Lord Jesus will be revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ," 2 Thes. 1: 8. Now this is enough for us to know. Our duty is plain, the gospel is what we should preach, nothing more, nothing less.

If sectarians are in the kingdom how came they there? Look well, brethren, to where you are going. Hold up just a moment; try yourselves and your teaching by the divine standard here; square up a little and see where you stand. You cannot deny the gospel being God's power unto salvation, and you know that the gospel does not consist of just "three facts." If so, we, of course, would be saved by faith alone. Are you prepared for this? Why is Bro. Harding debating so much of late? If sectarians are in the kingdom, why is he trying to get them out? Answer, Bro. Harding; I presume you will not. But whether you do or not, the inconsistency of your course is open to all. Brethren, "prove all things, hold fast to that which is good."

REPLY TO BRO. TANT.

Dear Bro. McGary:

A copy of the FIRM FOUNDATION chanced to fall into my hands a few days since in which I read some "notes from the field," by Bro. Tant, in which occurs the following language:

We have some good brethren at Hamilton, but they have over-leaped themselves in the way of a house; have up a large frame house, unceiled and unseated, financially embarrassed, not able to complete it, and when it is completed, it will be three times too large for twenty-five years to come. Had our brethren at Hamilton used more common sense religion and less pride, they could have finished well a house large enough for all practical purposes, and had money enough left to have sustained an evangelist in Hamilton county one year, the good of which would only have been known in eternity. And it is sad to note, the brethren at Hamilton are not the only congregation that have acted unwisely in the same matter.

After reading the above, it occurred to me that there could be nothing wrong in asking space in your columns in which to enter a mild protest against the disposition which some of our preachers manifest to misconstrue the motives of other brethren. Does it not occur to you that, preachers who travel round the country evangelizing, subject to few of the trials of pastors of churches, always welcome and seldom laboring long enough in one place to wear that welcome out, well fed, and sometimes petted, and complimented, get just a little spoiled and vain, and "think more highly of themselves than they ought to think?"

Now, Bro. Tant may know ever so much about the best way to meet a hard-shell argument on "total depravity" or "final perseverance," and still be as ignorant as a Hottentot about building church edifices. There are very few of the brethren at Hamilton that would think of asking Bro. Tant's advice about how large to build a church or the best way to raise money for that purpose. As a rule, preachers are the most impractical class of men in society. They are good for the work to which God has called them, but, to use a common expression, "They don't know it all."

Bro. Tant, we submit, having met with the church at Hamilton only a few times, knows very little about what he volunteers such sage advice upon. Besides he is young, and ought not to charge brethren that are much older than he, and have been fighting sectarianism much longer than he, with being deficient in "common sense religion," and influenced by motives of "pride" in their Christian work.

Bro. Tant, we learn, has done much good and promises to be more useful as he grows older. It would do him no harm to be reminded that "meekness" was one of the qualities enjoined upon Timothy by his father in the gospel. Censorious criticism of the brethren with whom he labors is unwise.

While the church at Hamilton are not satisfied with the size of their building and their financial condition, considering the hard times that came upon them unexpectedly and delayed the completion of their house, they have more faith than Bro. Tant, that the future congregations of the church at Hamilton will need all the space for which they have provided, contrary to the judgment of Bro. Tant. Moreover, I cannot for the life of me see what benefit it can be, either to him or us, or the church at large, to advertise the fact that we are in debt, unless it is to help us out, which we have never solicited him to do.

There is a great deal in Christianity besides "bristling logic" and wholesale denunciation of the faults of others. There is the "charity that thinketh no evil." "Common sense religion" that Bro. Tant claims to possess in a high degree, should lead him to commend the good that brethren do and not unkindly misconstrue their actions without any reason for so doing. I hope the passing years and the lessons they impart will have the effect to smooth off the rough corners of his vigorous young manhood and thus increase his usefulness.

Fraternally,

C. M. BOYNTON.

RECOMMENDATION.

We, the undersigned members of the Church of Christ at Madisonville, Madison county, Texas, do hereby certify that we are well acquainted with Bro. Austin McGary, and know him to be a very zealous Christian. We know the accusation brought against him by Bro. Humphrey of Oregon to be false.

We knew Bro. McGary long before he became a Christian, and will state that, although he was wicked, he never tried to sail under false colors. You could always tell exactly where he stood on any question. We respectfully ask Bro. Humphrey to bring the proof to sustain his charges, or come up like a man and acknowledge his fault.

Dear Bro. McGary:

The F. F. has been coming to me for some time, patiently bearing its cross. Enclosed find one dollar which I trust will relieve my paper for a season of the burthen of the cross.

Bro. McGary, most any of us can find fault and enter complaints, and sometimes I think there is too much of this palmed off for Christian teaching. There are, it seems, but few that obtain the true qualifications of Christian teachers. Much error exists in the age in which we live. Men are standing on almost every corner and crying, "lo here is Christ and lo there is Christ," and are saying to the people that, this, that and the other is the way of the Lord. Man is both a worshiper and an excitable being, and in the midst of the great tumult and confusion of the world, thousands are inducted in error and are found shut up within the walls of human theologies, and consequently are blinded to the plain teachings of the way of the Lord. Laborers are needed in our Lord's vineyard. To be valuable laborers there, we must keep our sickles sharp. Much pruning is needed, for many wanton sprouts are putting up, and many branches are bending out, showing a tendency to connect with the foliage of the world. Such sprouts and such branches must be cut loose, for the Lord's church must be held sacred. His people must be a sacred people.

Trusting, Bro. McGary, that your life may be lengthened and that all your days may be spent with an eye single to the glory of God, our heavenly Father, I am your brother in hope of immortality and eternal life.

QUERIES.

Dear Bro. Jackson:

I have been a reader of the F. F. from the first, and have found but very few items in it that I cannot heartily endorse. However, I see a paragraph in your reply to "a sister" in Arkansas, in issue of March 15th, that I cannot endorse, it being relative to a practice that I have been fighting, both publicly and privately, for some ten years past, to-wit: giving the right hand of fellowship. Why? Because, aside from its being unscriptural, I have witnessed the evil results of it as it is now practiced in the congregations.

You say: "Now the question comes up, is it scriptural to give the right hand of fellowship? I say, yep." Our sister speaks of the common manner of giving the right hand of fellowship when receiving young converts: is it scriptural? I say, no.

You say: "When parties are received by the congregation (Rom. 16: 2) I can see nothing unscriptural in greeting them with the right hand of fellowship." Did the congregation at Rome greet sister Phebe with the right hand of fellowship? It appears that you think so, by your reference to that incident. Did the brethren receive Paul and Barnabas with the right hand of fellowship when they went up to Jerusalem? No.

If they had, would that authorize us to receive young converts with the right hand of fellowship, as is commonly practiced now? I say, no.

If a thing is not unscriptural it is scriptural; in order to be scriptural there must be Scripture authorizing it. The Scriptures thoroughly furnish us that we may be perfect. Let us have them, Bro. J.

Yours for the truth,

ISAAC M. FUSTON.

Waxahachie, Texas.

The practice of giving the right hand of fellowship to young converts as a condition of membership is unauthorized by Scripture; nor do I know of any scriptural authority, precept or example for giving the right hand of fellowship as an act of reception to membership in a congregation.

Christians should "be kindly affectioned" one to another, and as an expression of that affection should greet one another. But how? In ancient times the manner of greeting was a kiss; hence Paul exhorts the saints to "greet one another with a holy kiss." He did not propose to change their manner of greeting, but sought to regulate it by the injunction to let the kiss be holy and thus express the holy affection entertained for each other.

In our day the manner of greeting is by giving the right hand. It is a token of friendship, good-will, and of welcome. Among Christians who have fellowship with each other it is simply an expression of their good will or love. It does not give fellowship, but it is given as an expression of fellowship.

I think that when Phebe was received by the church at Rome they saluted her with the holy kiss as was their custom. When we receive members now shall we greet them or not? To make this action which belongs properly to our manners or deportment toward each other, a condition of membership is about as foolish as to make foot-washing an act of worship. Let everything be done in order, that is, assign everything to its proper place.

So that I say again, it is scriptural to give the right hand of fellowship, Gal. 2: 9, Acts 15; not to give fellowship, but because there is fellowship; not to "join the church," but as a greeting to one already in the church; not as a duty, or as an act of faith, but as an expression of our hearty good-will and love towards a brother or sister.

J. W. J.

Dear Bro. Hansbrough:

Is it a sin to plait the hair or to wear jewelry? I plait my hair sometimes and wear jewelry all the time, such as breast-pins, ear-bobs and finger-rings, but I believe, as our Testament says, we ought to be temperate in all things; just as much harm to wear too much of anything as it is to drink too much, sleep too much, eat too much, or work too much.

I know, in 1 Peter, 3: 3, we find where he says: "Adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." I believe every word of it.

H. V. N.

Your letter, my sister, shows that you are well acquainted with the apostolic teaching relative to dress. Do they mean what they say? Yes. Then those fashionable adornments of the body are forbidden. Why do you wear jewelry, ear-bobs, finger-rings, etc.? What is the principle that leads men and women to adorn the body with fine clothing, jewelry, etc.? "All that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world; and the world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."—1 John 2: 16-17. Vanity expresses itself in a great many ways. We know that the principle is in the heart by the fruit it bears, and we should strive earnestly to crucify it. Instead of doing so, many cultivate it.

Solomon says: "There be many things that increase vanity; of the many things that increase vanity none are more powerful than fashion, the custom of the world, the demand of the age. Now if we love the world, desire to make friends with it by conforming to its imperious demands as to dress, etiquette, etc., we will become the enemies of God.—Jas. 4: 4.

We cannot be temperate in using or doing anything evil? There are some things we must not do, this is abstinence not temperance. The things we must not do are forbidden because of the evil principle underlying them, and God would eradicate this principle and thoroughly prepare us for the higher enjoyments of the pure society of heaven; let us therefore be not conformed to the world, but be transformed, renewed in the spirit of our mind and put on the new man which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness.

J. W. J.

Brethren:—Bro. J. W. J., in F. F. of Jan. 15, in his reply to Bro. McKee, says: "The validity of baptism does not depend upon the administrator," without any scriptural proof for his assertion.

We say the validity of baptism does depend upon the administrator. We must speak where the Bible speaks and be silent where it is silent. "Go ye therefore and teach all nations baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit."—Matt. 28: 19. When we say those in the kingdom can administer valid baptism; we speak as the Bible speaks.

When we say those out of the kingdom can administer baptism, we add to the word of the Lord, because God nowhere commands them expressly nor impliedly to baptize, which we know is equivalent to commanding them not to baptize. One cannot receive baptism at the hands of those forbidden to baptize; because in so doing he does what God nowhere commands, which is the same as doing what God forbids: and that which God forbids cannot be valid.

J. M. MADING.

Baptism to be valid must be an act of obedience from the heart.—Rom. 6: 17. But whose act is it? Who obeys from the heart? Certainly not the administrator, but the one who submits or yields to baptism.

It is not the administrator's act that puts us into Christ; it is obedience from the heart of the one baptized. In order to this obedience the law of the Spirit of life that makes us free from sin (Rom. 8: 2) must be put in the mind and written in the heart, Heb. 8: 10. Understanding this law, I go as the eunuch did and demand baptism; not ask for credentials or authority to baptize; and thus obeying from the heart my baptism is valid. Please study this question; does being baptized into Christ depend upon the faith of the administrator or upon the faith of the party baptized?

MEETING AT FORT M'KAVETT.

Dear Bro. Jackson:

As I have been surrounded this week with the excitements that the ancient gospel has stirred up in McKavett, I have not sent in my usual amount of editorial matter. So I write this letter and if I am not interrupted before I give an account of a meeting, which I know will be interesting to most of our readers, I will let this be published to make up somewhat for my shortage in editorial matter.

You know it has been a long time since I have preached any, and in fact you know I am a novice in preaching any way. When I came to McKavett I was for several months so pressed with other duties that could not be deferred, that I made no appointment here till in the winter—I did not want to begin till I could find an opportunity to preach a series of discourses. When the night arrived for me to begin in the winter a severe spell of weather came on and broke into the appointment. Since that time I have written to several brethren to come here and hold a meeting, but none of them could do so. I had, however, arranged with Bro. Durst to come whenever I thought a favorable opportunity had offered.

But on the first of April "Presiding Elder Potter" of the M. E. church came here and held his "Quarterly Meeting." I attended every discourse, and, on Monday, April 2nd, I spent the day, at a Methodist house, with this celebrated frontier divine (?) and his sub-divine (?) Knox. I found them very pleasant company indeed, except when the Scriptures were mentioned. Mr. Potter told me, (when I asked permission to question him on one point), that he preferred not to be drawn into a controversy. He told me how lovely he and Bro. Charles got along at Angelo, never bringing up controversial points with each other. When I left that evening I told Mr. Potter that if he did not show his seekers what to do to be saved, out of God's book, I would do so the next night after his meeting closed. Well they did not get one through that night, and they held over till Tuesday night with no better success. Tuesday night he preached on the devil and showed that, among other agencies, the devil sometimes used men who claimed to be preachers of the gospel. He is an eloquent speaker, reminds me very much of Bro. Caskey. In this discourse he warned them against the devil's efforts through preachers—which I thought was good advice. When he was through I felt like asking, "Lord, is it I?" But I kept quiet, as he had consented to announce preaching for me the next night, which he did, I asked him to remain and hear me, but he said he could not, as he had to go to another meeting; I wanted to give him the 2nd chapter on the devil. But I am glad he did not remain, as I had cooled down by the next night and did not allude to what he had said that night.

I preached Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights to large and attentive audiences. A Baptist who had been preaching here, but who had not filled his appointment for six months, came in and claimed the house Saturday night and held over till Monday night. He pitched into what I had preached as well as he could gather items, and Sunday at 11 a. m. he made some desperate reaches at Christianity over the shoulders of "Campbellism," a fabled monster some of these people have heard of and seem to dread with quaking fear. When he was through—he had preached on "false teachers," and had called on a Methodist to pray, who prayed against this "child of the devil, full of all subtlety and all mischief," which he supposed was in their midst. I asked permission to say a few words—I could not think of letting the opportunity pass. To be brief and sum it up, I challenged both Methodists and Baptists to the defense of their teaching. I showed that this man could not offer any excuse that he was opposed to religious discussion that could be made to appear feasible, because he had been having a one-sided discussion while my hands had been tied. I charged that he was a coward if he did not meet me or furnish some other Baptist to do so before these people.

When I was through, he arose and accepted my challenge and we agreed on propositions; but that night he flew from his proposition, which was: "In the conversion of the sinner the Holy Spirit operates independently of the word of God." So I let him modify his proposition. Sunday night he seemed very angry with me and opened fire on me from the very first, calling my name. He had attended our baptizing Sunday evening when I baptized two young ladies. I had made a talk at the water on baptism, and he did not like some things I said and did. He began by misrepresenting what I had said, and as he called my name I replied and told him not to misrepresent me. I finally forced him to admit that he had misrepresented me. When he was through I was offered the stand which I took and put everything straight for the truth in about ten minutes. The best people here of the Baptist church told me that if I had not challenged him they would have thought strange of it, and would never have had any confidence in my sincerity. They said he did wrong and that I did right, and they stand up to what they have said.

So, although my meeting has been broken up, the truth has not suffered, and I will soon begin another meeting and doubt not that I will have a good hearing. As for the proposed discussion, very few people think he will be on hand—it is set for the second Wednesday in June. He is a weak man, I think, but he thinks he is a power. He is a man of very limited education, but talks quite fluently.

At the request of a Methodist friend, I had set Sunday at 11 a. m. to speak on the divinity of Christ, as there are many infidels here and they were attending my meeting.

The town is in a fever of excitement over the meeting, but everything will be quiet in a few days. I will report the next meeting if I am again blessed with an opportunity to speak the word of life to these benighted souls—it is a strange doctrine to most of them.

Fraternally,

OUR PAPER.

Some subscribers have desired from us an expression as to the permanency of the FIRM FOUNDATION. Some envious persons are constantly seeking to pull it down by surmising that it will soon fall or cease to be published, and this is why brethren wish to know how we stand. Well, brethren and sisters, we intend, the Lord willing, to continue the F. F. as long as we live, and when we die, we hope to leave it in the hands of those who will still continue the good work.

It is our life-work, and we hope that all who love the Lord will assist us in extending the circulation of the FIRM FOUNDATION.

We receive letters constantly, urging us to change it into a weekly. If our subscribers will go to work in earnest they can so increase our list by next fall that we could then give them a weekly. Go to work then, brothers and sisters, and let us see if we cannot increase the list of subscribers up to ten thousand before the year is out.

J. W. J.

PERSONAL.

This is the second time that duty demands of me to write in defense of an innocent man. A brother whose christian standing has been called in question. A. McGary, editor of the FIRM FOUNDATION, is the brother to whom I allude.

Two years ago he was attacked by W. H. Bagby, in the Standard, making some false charges which he did not even attempt to prove. I see in the F. F., of April 1st, that another one like Bagby, a progressive and, of course, an enemy of the F. F. and perverter of the right way of the Lord, has made a similar attack. When I first read the letter of Bro. Gross, written from Elmira, Oregon, giving an account of that false charge and false statement about Bro. McGary, I thought the best thing for us to do would be to treat him with silent and supreme contempt, knowing he would not be able to bring forward the proof, but fearing the truth, and not Bro. McGary's character, would suffer, I will say a few things for the benefit of our readers, in addition to what Bro. McGary has already said, and what the members of the Madisonville congregation may say in his defense.

Brethren, because Bro. McGary has acted up to his convictions in publishing the FIRM FOUNDATION which calls in question our authority for receiving immersed sectarians without re-immersing them, he is forced to defend his christian character against an unjust and calumnious charge made by a false brother in Oregon, who knows absolutely nothing at all about Bro. McGary, except, perhaps, what some enemy said against him or his paper. Why did he not prove his side of the question instead of resorting to the sinful course he has?

I have known Bro. McGary going on four years and I am proud to say that, I have never known him to do anything unbecoming either a brother or a Christian. Bro. McGary was converted under the preaching of Bro. Hamilton in the town of Madisonville, and has been an earnest, zealous and consistent disciple ever since. I love Bro. McGary and have every reason to believe that he has a clear conception of the truth as it is in Jesus and of the lofty aim of the church of God.

That class of our brethren who oppose the teachings of the F. F. act very much after the order of sectarians when they fail to meet our arguments, and are convinced against their wills that we have the truth, they at once begin the wicked work of misrepresentation and slander. Just what Bros. Bagby and Humphrey have done, and many more that we might mention. Do they act fair or manifest the Spirit of Christ in treating their brethren in such a way? The sum total of Bro. McGary's offense is, the warfare he has been waging against the inconsistent practice of receiving immersed sectarians into the church. Why is it that Bro. McGary will not come out like a true soldier and acknowledge his inconsistencies which he has been so plainly shown by Bro. McGary in the F. F.? "There are none so blind as those who will not see."

Let us do our whole duty, my brother, and the righteous Judge will render a just decision in that great day when the secrets of all hearts will be made manifest. If our brethren wish to slander and persecute us for doing what we know to be right and consistent with the blood-sealed system, let them go ahead Jesus and his apostles were misrepresented, persecuted and even put to death. So let us bear it all patiently. Let us earnestly contend for the faith and leave the consequences with God.

May the blessings of God rest and abide with the faithful in Christ Jesus.

Respectfully,
A. J. McCarty.

BACK NUMBERS.

Many thanks to those who have responded so liberally with back numbers. We have enough now except the following: October and November 1884, and May '86; those having these numbers and sending them to us will receive in return one of our tracts, as they may order. Send orders separately on postal card.

If you see a big RED CROSS on your paper, you may know your subscription is out. Please renew if you want the paper.

Bro and sister Hansbrough left Austin April 11th, and when last heard from had arrived at Columbia, Tenn., safe and sound.

Reader, if you want to see truth triumph assist us in circulating the FIRM FOUNDATION; a little earnest work cannot fail in securing subscribers.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

Brethren and friends who may visit Austin during the "festival week" are cordially invited to call at our office, 1306 Rio Grande street, corner of west 14th street. Come and see us.

We will not put the blue cross on any of the papers hereafter, as we are prepared to send receipts for money as fast as sent in. If you fail to get a receipt, write to us inside of thirty days for it.

Correspondents will please remember to send all money orders for subscriptions or for our tracts to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas, and all correspondence for publication to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36, Austin, Texas.

Our space is too limited to publish obituary notices. While we sympathize deeply with those who have lost dear ones and would do all in our power to comfort them, we do not think an obituary notice the proper channel through which to exhibit sympathy or give consolation.

Some brethren are murmuring because their communications are not published and some threaten to withdraw their friendship unless we publish what they write, and some are angry because we publish articles about tobacco, dress, the Alliance, etc. We do not intentionally slight any one; but we must contend for the right to select the matter that goes into our columns. Sometimes articles and letters are unavoidably crowded out of the issue for which they were intended, and being thus delayed, they are subsequently displaced by more appropriate matter. Please remember that every issue of our paper is read by several thousand persons. This large audience is expecting something good in every issue, and we hope that when you write again, brethren, you will bestow some thought upon your subject; by so doing you will lead others to think about it.

FROM A PRESBYTERIAN.

McGary & Hansbrough:

If you see fit, accept these few lines as my first. I would have said, Brothers, but as I am only a reader of your paper and belong to the Cumberland Presbyterian church, I suppose you would not recognize me as a brother.

I will say, that I like to read your paper, and think it teaches good doctrine in part, but as it seems to overlook some very important Scripture as taught by the sects, as you call them, I thought I would give a few outlines of what we (the sects) believe and teach.

We believe in God through Christ, as taught in the New Testament. We believe in hearing the word, repenting of our sins, confessing Christ as the Son of God, and being baptized by the Holy Ghost, symbolized by water; and as the Holy Ghost is poured out or falls on us, as is taught in the Testament and concurred in by the old prophets, we conclude that water ought to be poured also; and while we can find in the Bible the word, sprinkle with water, and the pouring out of the Spirit, I never have been able to find immerse in water yet, as a saving power. And while we believe we are doing right, and have the Testament to back us, we do not condemn all others because they do probably the same work, only they do it in a little different way; because the Scriptures thoroughly furnish us unto all good works.

Because, if you go to town by one road and I by another, what is the difference so we both get there; or, must I tell you that you are not in town nor can't get there unless you go back and come the same road that I did? Now this is not Scripture, I only use it as a figure, and further, I do not write this for the purpose of argument, but I have on one occasion seen the question asked in your paper: "What do the sects believe, or do they have any Scripture for their faith?" To such I would say that, we have the New Testament from Alpha to Omega to sustain us.

Now as I have told you that we believe in God, we also believe in Christ, in repentance, in confession and in baptism. We believe also that Christians should show their faith by their works, for Paul says, faith without works is dead; then it is our duty to show our faith by good works.

And while we have our belief in prayer and the baptism of the Holy Ghost, we do not condemn others, so they do good work, for he that is for us is not against us. But you say, that we sprinkle for baptism and that is not right, for if a man is not immersed he is not baptized, and unless he is baptized he can not be saved; then, practically, you deny the power of Jesus to save, and say by your teaching that, a person must hear the word, believe it, repent, confess the Christ; but he or she must not trust him any further, but come to you and let you immerse them in water, and then work out their own salvation. Thus denying the power of Jesus to save, and placing it all in yourselves and the water.

Now I want you to show me any place in the New Testament where any of the Scriptures say, immerse in water, or where John the Baptist, or any other man, said I immerse, or baptize you in water. If it is there I have never been able to find it; but it does say, I baptize you with water, but never in water. John said: "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance, but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear, he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." Matt. 3: 11.

Again he says, "I baptize with water, but there standeth one among you whom you know not. This is he of whom I said, after me cometh a man who is preferred before me, for he is before me. And I knew him not, but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing (with water). And John bore record saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove and it abode upon him. And I knew him not, but he that sent me to baptize (with water) the same said unto me, upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining on him, the same is he that baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. And I saw and bore record that this is the Son of God."—John 1: 26-34.

Again Christ says: "John truly baptized (with water) but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence."—Acts 1: 5.

Now if you see fit to publish this, you can do so; but be so kind as to overlook mistakes and bad writing, and if any one wants to know more about our faith and practice, I will give it to them in another article.

Yours respectfully,

JACOB KARNS.

Rice, Texas.

We publish the above letter with pleasure, believing the writer to be honest in his convictions, and possessed of courage enough to contend for that which he believes. I will endeavor to reply to this, not for argument, as you say, but in order to correct some very erroneous ideas you entertain as to what the New Testament teaches, and as to our faith and practice.

You say that you "belong to the Cumberland Presbyterian church," and you suppose we would not recognize you as a brother. Now as you claim to "have the New Testament from Alpha to Omega to sustain us," please show one line of authority from it for the existence of such an institution as the Cumberland Presbyterian church? Can you do this? I have read that book very diligently for many years and I find "the church of God," (1 Cor. 1: 2); "church of the living God," (1 Tim. 3: 15); and "the churches of God in Christ," (1 Thea. 2: 14). Paul speaks of the church saying that there is "one body," Eph. 4: 4; and that Jesus is the head of the body or church, Eph. 1: 22-23; and all who are in Christ are members of the one body, Eph. 5: 29, Rom. 12: 4-5.

Now if you are in the one body, one of "the many members," I shall esteem it not only my privilege but my duty to call you brother. At present, however, I cannot consistently do so, because I do not believe that you are a member of the one body, but hold your membership in a church that differs from the "one body" in its constitution, faith and practice.

Yet you claim to be "doing right;" that the New Testament sustains you in what you teach and do, and also say: "we do not condemn all others because they do probably the same work only they do it in a little different way." And then you illustrate the different ways of doing the same thing by men traveling to the same town by different roads. Do you not see, my dear sir, that your idea of people doing the same thing in different ways is an impossibility? Your illustration is faulty and is demonstrative of the fallacy of your own position.

We all want to go to heaven; we have but one guide-book to tell us what route to take; what road to travel. You assume that there are many different roads leading to this place, but the guide-book says there is one, and but one. "Enter ye in at the strait (narrow) gate: for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat. Because strait (narrow) is the gate, and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."—Matt. 7: 13-14. There are then two ways, but only one narrow way that leads to life, and that is the new and living way which Jesus consecrated for us through his death and sufferings. Heb. 10: 19-23. This narrow way leads into the kingdom of God, and as we cannot enter the kingdom of God without doing the will of God, (Matt. 7: 21), it follows that doing the will of God, is just the same as travelling this new and living way.

The New Testament furnishes us with the will of God that we are to do. Now are there two or more ways of doing the will of God? Can there be different ways of performing "the same thing" or action? I know that the religious denominations, in order to justify the dividing ways taught by them, claim several different ways of doing the same action, as for instance, in baptism. While you claim that pouring water on a person is baptism, your Methodist neighbors expand the meaning and take in sprinkling or immersion, according to the choice of the one to be baptized.

You further say, that you have never seen the word immerse in the Bible, and want some light upon this point. You are certainly aware that the word, "baptize," is not an English word. It is a Greek word, transferred first into the Latin, and then into the English. The word then, is not translated, but transferred. In order to ascertain the original meaning we should go to the Greek. But here a great many raise an objection, saying that they do not understand Greek, and that the scholars of the world not having settled this matter, we are shut up to our investigations of the New Testament as we have it. Very well, I am satisfied with this and so should every individual be, who honestly desires to do the will of God.

Now, sir, please note these points: Baptism was a part of the counsel of God, hence something to be obeyed or done by man.—Luke 7: 30. Jesus commanded His apostles to baptize (Matt. 28: 19-20); and believers were commanded to be baptized.—Acts 2: 38. The apostles were sensible men, capable of understanding the will of God, and fully endowed with power from on high to carry out all the commands of Jesus, including this one of baptism. Now, sir, the New Testament was not given to us as a book of definitions, but as a book of principles, precepts, examples and precedents; and we must go to the actions or things done by those whom God sent to baptize in order to learn the things necessary to be done in carrying out the command. By taking what is said by the apostles about baptism, we can ascertain beyond peradventure the true action of baptism. Please examine the following points and read the Scriptures cited, and you will see that baptism requires:

1. Water.—Matt. 3: 16, Acts 10: 47.
2. Much water.—John 3: 23.
3. Going into the river or water.—Mark 1: 5, Acts 8: 38.
4. Going into the water, both preacher and the one to be baptized.—Acts 8: 38.
5. Buried in baptism.—Rom. 6: 4, Col. 2: 12.
6. Body washed with water.—Heb. 10: 22, Eph. 5: 26.
7. Raised up in baptism.—Rom. 6: 4, Col. 2: 12.
8. Going up out of the water, both preacher and the one baptized.—Acts 8: 38.
9. Baptism compared to a birth of water.—John 3: 5.

Now when you have closely read these passages, please tell us which one of the three actions claimed by the religious world will fill all of these requirements? Sprinkling and pouring each require water, and there you stop. Just one item out of nine; only one-ninth of a chance for it to be right then. Try immersion and it will meet every one of them. Which would you prefer then, the one-ninth of a chance, or the certainty—the nine-ninths.

Besides this, if you will take the trouble to consult the commentaries of the wise men, all Pedo-baptists, such as Adam Clark, John Wesley, McKnight, etc., you will find that they with one accord say that Paul, in Rom. 6: 4 and Col. 2:

12, refers to the apostolic mode of baptism.

I must notice, however, your objection to immersion, together with your claim that baptism must be by pouring because the Holy Spirit was poured out.

In speaking of this baptism of the Holy Spirit we must do as we did above, collate the Scriptures and thus learn the full force of the language:

1. John says, He shall baptize with the Holy Spirit.—Matt. 3: 11, Acts 1: 5.
2. Jesus says: "He (the Father) shall give you another comforter.—John 14: 16.
3. The Father will send.—John 14: 26. "I will send him."—John 16: 7.
4. When the Spirit of truth is come.—John 16: 13, Acts 1: 8.
5. Prophecy of Joel, pour out my Spirit.—Acts 2: 17 and 10: 45.
6. Peter says of this baptism, he hath shed forth this which you see and hear.—Acts 2: 33.
7. The Holy Ghost fell on them as on us at the beginning.—Acts 11: 15.
8. The parties who received this, were filled with the Holy Spirit and spoke with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance.—Acts 2: 4-8, and 10: 45-46.

Now what are the literal facts in these two instances? what was done? God gave the Holy Spirit first to the apostles, and afterwards to Cornelius and household; this gift enabled them to speak with tongues; they were filled with the Spirit, received power from God.

Can you not see then that the words, baptize, pour out, shed forth, fell on, are used figuratively? Neither are they used as synonyms. What right have you to say that "baptize" and "pour out" are equivalent to each other? Why not take the expression, "shed forth," and use it in the same way? Thus: "He that believeth and is shed forth (or poured out) shall be saved."

Notice, please, the different figures presented by the language used. When speaking of the source whence the Holy Spirit came, or the being giving it, we have: "I will pour out;" "As hath shed forth;" "(God gave." When speaking of the descent of the Holy Spirit, Peter says: "it fell on us as on them at the beginning." When speaking of the effect upon those who received the Spirit: "they were all filled with it," "or baptized with the Holy Spirit."

Now, sir, whenever you see any one with tongues like as of fire upon his head, and he speaking with other tongues as did the apostles, you may say he is baptized with the Holy Spirit.

You say that we practically deny the power of Jesus to save, because we teach that a man "must hear the word, believe it, repent, confess the Christ, but he or she must not trust him any further, but come to you and let you immerse them in water, and then work out their own salvation." Now, my dear sir, with regard to this I will say, that you never have read anything, written by one of our brethren, that would convey such an idea as "not to trust in Christ any further only be immersed." This, you know, is a slanderous charge gotten up, and propagated by partisans who seek to build up their own church organization, and palliate their rejection of the word of God, by defaming us.

Jesus has ALL power in heaven and upon earth.—Matt. 28: 18. This power of Jesus is exercised upon earth for the salvation of man: "for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4: 12. Then the power to save man is placed among men; just where it is needed. But power unapplied accomplishes nothing. So that the power of Jesus must be applied to man in order to save him. That power Paul tells us is the gospel of Christ.—Rom. 1: 16-17. In order to the application of the power, God has ordained that by the preaching of the gospel those that believe should be saved.—1 Cor. 1: 21.

Now, sir, you admit that the New Testament thoroughly furnishes us with doctrine, reproof, correction, and instruction in righteousness, (2 Tim. 3: 16). I ask then, does not the teaching of the apostles under the commission given them by the Lord Jesus, furnish us with the following requirements:

Hearing the word of God; believing it; repentance; confession with the mouth of the Lord Jesus, and baptism for the remission of sins? Have you any right to omit baptism? Ah, sir, do you not see that those who teach justification or pardon by faith alone put their trust in faith to save them, rather in Jesus? All the efficacy and power for their salvation is attributed to a peculiar kind of faith and not to Jesus.

Now we believe in Jesus; we trust in Him to fulfill His promise of remitting our sins, when we have humbly submitted to his authority. Thus by faith in Jesus we do what he commands, accepting unreservedly His statement that, "not every one that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

We hope to hear from you again, and hope that you will receive this as it is meant, in all kindness and sincerity, and for the purpose of assisting you to rightly divide the word of truth. J. W. JACKSON.

PARTIAL TO ERROR.

There are two great powers in the world. The power of truth and the power of error. In a religious point of view, to say the least, truth is always for the best, error is always for the worst. Truth leads to the honor of God and the salvation of man. Error is detrimental to both. Truth is good, error is evil. Truth should be seen and known that it may be accepted. Error should be seen and known, that it may be rejected. No lover of truth can be willing to see truth laboring under disadvantages, neither can any honest man claim an undue advantage over error. It is right to uncover truth and thus expose its beauty that honest men may love it; it is also right to uncover error and thus expose its horrid form that honest men may hate it.

Those who are partial to error, concerning things that they regard as error, abound in such advice as, "Let it severely alone," "Preach what you believe and let other people's doctrine alone," etc.

This advice means, preach the truth but let error alone—do not expose it. Let it lie concealed in the way which mortals pass, and if it devour them you are not responsible. "Stop! stop! you misrepresent. I said preach the truth and let other people's doctrine alone." Then I must understand that other people's doctrine is all truth. "No, that is not it, either." Then if other people's doctrine is neither error nor truth, it is nothing, and people ought to be taught not to depend upon it. "Oh, you are entirely too narrow. Other people's doctrine, as a rule, is innocent and sometimes does great good." Well, you look after the pure metal and I will measure up the dross.

God's book promises salvation to those who obey the gospel. Other people's doctrine promises salvation to those who submit to the operations of the mourner's bench. The promise is based upon two different conditions; one of these conditions is human, the other divine. Which is right? I am just narrow enough to say, that the divine condition is right: and just narrow enough to say, that the human condition is wrong.

So it appears that other people's doctrine turns out to be other people's wrong. Preach the truth and let other people's wrong alone. Do not expose the wrong, somebody might see the error of his way and get mad. God's book says, "Reprove, rebuke." The man who says, let wrong alone, is not on the side of the book. He is partial to wrong, partial to error.

But what other people's doctrine should be let alone? All others. If one preaches the whole truth and lets all other doctrine alone, it necessarily follows that the doctrine, thus let alone, contains all the error in the religious world. A man who preaches so as to let all error alone, the most that can be said of him is, that he is just half of a preacher.

Some one who is of the full measure of modern charity, calls me to order again. I am all out of order because I exhibit so much fractional currency among the modern preachers. I will turn again and see if I have done any one injustice. I will go back to the apostle Paul (if he is not too ancient) to find the standard of a whole preacher. "Tell me ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law."—Gal. 4: 21. Paul you are too narrow, you should preach the truth and let the doctrine of these Judaizing teachers alone. "I would they were even cut off which trouble you."—(Gal. 5: 12. Why, Paul, you are not any more charitable than the editors of the FIRM FOUNDATION.

This old apostle assailed the doctrines of men at Rome, at Corinth, in Galatia, at Ephesus, etc., and while doing so was proclaiming the whole counsel of God. Could Paul have preached the whole truth without pursuing the course he did? He certainly thought he could not. Have I a right to think differently from the apostle? If not, I must think, (in order to think like the apostle), that the man who does not assail the doctrine of men, does not preach the whole truth. Each part of the whole of God's truth is so much like the whole truth that I am inclined to the opinion, that no man can preach any part of it, (fully), without removing from about it all the rubbish of the doctrines of men. I believe now I will take back what I said about that half of a preacher, and say that no man who preaches in such a way as to let other people's doctrine alone, is any part of a preacher, when compared with the divine standard.

The Bible says: "Faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God."—Rom. 10:17. Other people's doctrine says: Faith comes in answer to prayer. (See the first verse of the first chapter of the mourner's bench.) That the people get something at the bench, is certainly true; and if those under whose mesmeric power they are being manipulated tell them that it is faith, they believe that it is faith.

Not long since, a young man of my town was put under the influence of one of the disciples of Mesmer, who ordered him to pull off his vest, which he did. He was then told by the operator that it was a pair of pants and to put them on. The young man proceeded to put his legs through the arm-holes of his vest, and thus made himself the laughing stock of the crowd, for no other reason than that his operator said that his vest was a pair of pants.

The points of comparison are these: Mesmerism is about the same at a mourner's bench as it is in an opera hall, and that which a man gets at a mourner's bench comes about as near being faith as a vest is a pair of pants. It seems to me that the man who can keep silent in view of the attempts being made to supplant the influence of God's word by the influence of religious mesmerism is neither a friend to God or man.

The Bible, which contains the whole truth, says: "Baptism saves us."—1 Peter 3: 21. Other people's doctrine says: "Baptism does not save us." Not a more square issue can be found between an infidel and a christian. Compare notes: The Bible says, "baptism saves us;" sectarianism says, "it does not." The Bible says, "Jesus rose from the dead;" infidelity says, "he did not." Is there a difference between these "nots?" Is God no respecter of persons, and yet will He accept the "not" of sectarianism, and reject the "not" of infidelity? If so, is there logic in the universe that will enable me to vindicate His justice? If there is such logic, it might raise the king of the bottomless pit to the Jerusalem above, and thus outstrip infinity itself, because infinite power cannot save the devil.

Oh, you should be more charitable. Charity "thinketh no evil, rejoiceth in the truth." These doctrines of men thinketh to negate the truth, therefore thinketh evil, rejoiceth in contradicting the word of God; therefore rejoiceth not in the truth.

Should I be so charitable, so partial to error as to refuse to point out its lair that it may not prey? Paul said to Timothy: "Preach the word—rebuke." Rebuke what? Error. Rebuke error, where? Wherever found. Paul said again: "And the things thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also."—1 Tim. 2: 2. The contrast is about this: The faithful men rebuke error wherever they find it, while those who are unfaithful, or who are partial to error, advise: "Let other people's doctrine alone—let it severely alone," etc.

W. P. RICHARDSON.

THE CHURCH OF CHRIST.

Knowing that there are many churches in the world to-day, each having its own peculiar organization from which has flowed various doctrines of men, we thought well to give the seeker after truth a few letters, to show that there is a church whose builder and maker is God.

Also we hope to show that man can, in coming into said church according to the law given by its Founder, obtain forgiveness of sins and eternal life, two blessings that cannot be obtained in any of the churches of men.

In seeking for any country, person, or institution, we must first know what we are seeking for, and then we can tell how and where to seek.

Therefore, in speaking of the church, I affirm that God has given us a name to wear, and that no one can wear any other name without bringing reproach upon the church, and condemnation upon themselves.

For proof, we find that when the kingdom of Israel was divided, one party was called Jews in honor of Judah, not God, hence the name Jew, is of human origin, finding it no where till after the division of the kingdom of Israel. Then we find them dishonoring God; not wearing his name; not being governed by his law; therefore we find Him telling them, "they should leave their name for a curse to his chosen, for he would slay them, and call his servants by another name." (Isa. 65: 15.) We find that the Gentiles should see his righteousness, and all kings his glory, then they were to be called by a new name. (Isa. 62: 2.) Now we have found:

1. The Jewish kingdom should be slain.
2. God's law should be preached to the Gentiles.
3. His servants should be called by a new name.
4. The mouth of the Lord should name them.

Tracing their history for seven hundred years, we still find the Jewish kingdom in existence, and the Gentiles not being brought in, but about this time we find Christ coming, as the end of the law, nailing certain things to the cross, and breaking down the wall of partition. Therefore, we may begin to look for the conversion of the Gentiles and the giving of the new name by the proper authority.

About this time we find Paul was converted, and chosen for a certain purpose. That was to bear His (the Lord's) name to the Gentiles, Acts 9: 15. Then in 10th chapter of Acts we find the first Gentile converts; and, in Acts, 11: 19-20, Jews and Gentiles both saw the goodness of God.

Now, according to prophecy, we have the proper surrounding circumstances for the new name, if we can get the proper one to give it, hence we find in the 25th verse, they went to seek Paul, God's ordained messenger, to bear his name to the Gentiles, and when he came to Antioch, the disciples were first called Christians there, verse 26. From the above we find God has given us a name to wear.

Christ teaches that only those who do his will shall enter into heaven.—Matt. 7: 21. And when he has willed that we should wear his name, I don't see how many of our brethren can expect to escape the wrath of God when they accept or answer to the name of Campbellite, or any other unscriptural name. I frequently hear them call themselves Campbellites, and speak of belonging to the Campbellite church, enough to make any Bible reader hang his head in shame. And when people argue that the name, Christian, was given in derision, or by the enemies of Christ, it shows plainly their ignorance of the teaching of God's word. Dear brethren let me exhort you to use sound speech that cannot be condemned. (Tit. 2: 8).

Now we find that members of the church are, in the Bible, called Christians; they belong to the church of Christ, or the church of God, (1 Cor. 1: 2); not the Christian church, nor the Disciple's church. Then if we suffer persecution as a Christian, (not as a Campbellite, Baptist or Methodist), let us not be ashamed, but glorify God, (1 Peter 4: 16); knowing that the whole family in earth and heaven is called after His name. Eph. 3: 15.

Then let all people walk in the name (by the authority) of their God, but we will walk in the name of the Lord our God forever and ever. Mica. 4: 5. That is, when a man claims to be a Methodist, Baptist, Campbellite, or any other unscriptural name, he is walking by the authority of his God, not the God of the Bible, for He never authorized any of us to wear these names. But when we wear the name he has given us, then we walk by His authority.

But enough on the name, in our next we will give the time when and the place where the church of Christ was organized, by which we expect to show that all churches organized at a different time and place, are not only wrong, but all doctrines growing out of said churches, are false. May God help us to prove all things, and hold fast to that which is good.

CONTENTMENT.

As we travel along life's rugged pathway, how many of us behold nothing but the dark side of life. Indeed, so prone are we to search for and look at the troubles and trials of life, that we fail to see, and do not appreciate the blessings and pleasures that await us. We are ever ready to lament because the rose is stemmed upon a thorn, and seem not to realize that the thorn is crowned with a most beautiful flower.

Many consider the sacrifices to be made in traveling the strait and narrow way a thorn, which detracts from the beauty of the rose, forgetting that pleasure is made more sweet by pain. One of the most difficult thorns to eradicate in that path which leads to eternal life is discontent. The lust of the eyes and the pride of life tend to draw us away from our path of duty, and we find at every deviation that we become more and more dissatisfied. Yet, if we look to him who is the way, the truth, the life, we will, with his aid, be able to extricate every thorn, surmount every obstacle, and find a sweet pleasure in our triumph. We should so live that in looking back through the long vista of time, we may behold something more than the thorns of discontent; for it will be a joy to see how often we have allowed contentment to rule, a full blown rose.

"Godliness with contentment is great gain. We brought nothing into this world and we can carry nothing away, and having food and raiment let us be therewith content." But how few are satisfied with food and raiment. We sigh for greater possessions and a life of ease; which, if we fail to obtain, the thorns of discontent thickly beset us, and we begin to despise the humble walk of those who follow the meek and lowly Nazarene. We allow the anxiety and care for the morrow to dissipate the joys of to-day, forgetting that he who taught that but "one thing is needful," also taught, "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

We should not murmur at the waves of adversity we have to encounter, for he that said to the heaving billows, "peace, be still," and was obeyed, has promised never to leave nor forsake us, and it is easier for heaven and earth to pass away than for his word to pass away. O. G.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, MAY 15, 1888.

From this time on send all money for the FIRM FOUNDATION, or any of our pamphlets, to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Texas. Make all money orders payable to A. McGary. Please state whether you are a new subscriber or an old one. Write plainly, and give the county, where your post office is not a large town. Don't forget this in sending orders.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Bro. Madding, of Louisiana, after writing to me several times to learn something of my baptism at Bro. Carrington's hands, and Bro. Carrington's baptism at my hands, has at last been heard in the Messenger. It is rather strange that the Messenger published it and did not give him the information he sought. We did not publish it for several reasons, some of which we prefer not to give at the present; but we will give two reasons why we did not. (1) We have never intimated, or thought that the condition of the administrator had any bearing upon the obedience of the subject. (2) We have never felt like parading our individual actions before our readers as examples for them. But we have no objection to being ground through the flint-mill of criticism on this matter, if brethren think there is any good in it. So let them roll up their sleeves and pitch in, to their hearts content. If we felt that we ought to assume the air of infallibility, like some men who never confess a fault though caught in them so plainly that they are seen of all men, perhaps we would draw back from such criticism. But I feel something like Peter did when "Cornelius met him and fell down at his feet," I too, know that "I myself also am a man." Hence: I do not want my actions to be examples for others; and, yet I shall not be too sensitive to have them criticized by all who may desire to do so.

ABOUT THE WEEKLY.

We are glad to see so many of our readers urging the necessity of making the paper a weekly. Many have written to know how we are getting along. We will answer, that if the present rate of increase keeps up till 1st of Sept. we think we can undertake the change.

But, brethren, you must not slacken your efforts, we need a large increase to our list to enable us to make the change. We could add an advertising department to the paper and make the change now very safely with what we have, but we want to publish the paper without doing this if we can. We aim to improve the paper in every respect. There are many old brothers and sisters who complain some at the smallness of our type, so when we make the change we intend to get a large clear type, but we will also increase the size of the paper so that we will not lessen the amount of matter.

Now it does seem that with the number of subscribers we have they ought to send us three or four thousand new subscribers in a month's time. If they would all send us one subscriber each, we could begin the weekly immediately. The style of paper we intend to make the F. F. when we change it to a weekly will be, at $1.00, the cheapest paper published.

Let every reader send to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Texas, one new subscriber, and see how soon you will have the weekly, and what a good paper it will be. Brethren, just make one effort and you will be surprised at the result. Don't consider it "everybody's business" to get subscribers for the F. F.; if you do, you will not do anything; for that which is everybody's business, generally turns out to be nobody's; but let every brother and sister who loves the F. F. consider it his or her business to send us one subscriber in one week after they read this, and we will soon have a large list and a good weekly religious paper disseminating "the truth as it is in Jesus" all over the land, and marking the things that are contrary to the doctrine which we have learned. Who is not willing and anxious to take a part in this good work? If you will all do this, we will publish a list in the following issue to let all who are interested see how many have been obtained, who they are, and by whom sent.

FROM A SISTER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Please explain Phil. 1: 18; and also give chapter and verse for writing books of fiction. Answer through the F. F., if you don't consign it to the waste basket as you did a piece I wrote sometime ago for the F. F.

Thy sister is the one hope,

M. E. DOLLINA.

Weimar, Texas.

Phil. 1: 18, shows that the "power of God unto salvation" is in the gospel and not in the eloquence or pathos of men. It matters not how mean, black-hearted and sinful a man may be, if he declares the whole counsel of God without addition to or subtraction from the gospel of Christ, just as it was delivered to the saints and bound in heaven and earth, if men and women hear, understand, believe and obey that gospel from their hearts they are thereby adopted into the household of faith, their past sins are forgiven or remitted. The man who preaches it may be a very incarnate devil, but if he sows the "incorruptible seed of the kingdom" into "good ground," honest hearts, it will spring up and bring forth good fruit, "some an hundred fold, some sixty, some thirty."—Matt. 13: 28.

This fact at once strikes down that ecclesiastical "beast" that is lifting up its hydra head, at the bidding of our priestly order in the form of ordination by "the laying on of hands." It also sweeps away the last vestige of the ignorant pretention of "apostolic succession," claimed by so many of our religious neighbors. No one is required to know the state of a preacher's heart—for this none can know but God—to obey the gospel at his hands. It is the truth, the gospel of Christ, written in the hearts of men and women, and then obeyed from the heart, which constitutes the obedience of faith and makes free. It matters not either, how honest a preacher or his hearers may be, if he perverts or modifies the truth and they obey this perversion or modification from their hearts, it will not make them Christians; for just as the "seed" has been corrupted so will be the crop. Methodist seed sown will produce a crop of Methodists whether sown by an honest or a dishonest man. So of Baptist, Catholic, or any other spiritual seed. If an honest man sows turnip seed, he will raise a crop of turnips, if anything; and the seed would produce just as well if sown by a dishonest man. So of "the good seed of the kingdom"—the power of production is in the "seed"

(2) The word, "fiction," has more meanings than one. There can be no authority derived from the Scriptures—no "chapter and verse"—for writing a book to establish a lie. But the Bible abounds in figures, symbols, tropes and parables, to teach and enforce truth. This, I think, gives us the authority for publishing certain books which might be called, "books of fiction," to enforce that same truth.

Some one wrote us a few days ago, for the authority for preachers using charts—I think some preachers run the chart system "in the ground"—but certainly as long as we have the examples of our Lord and his apostles employing figures, symbols and parables to rivet the truth more firmly on the minds of people, we feel authorized to use a blackboard or chart to enforce that same truth.

In conclusion, my sister, I will say to you that, I never saw your piece that went to the "waste basket." If brethren would send their pieces directly to us at McKavett, Texas, there might not be so much complaint about them going to the "waste basket." It is too much trouble for the brethren in the office to remail all such matter to us. Bro. Jackson is now in the office, and I would be glad if the brethren would propound some of their questions to him. But let all matter which is intended for me be sent direct to McKavett. I cannot promise to give it all attention, but I will do the best I can in that line.

REMARKS ON A LOST COMMUNICATION.

We received a communication some days ago about a congregation withdrawing from a preacher and some brethren who persisted in receiving sectarian converts on their unintelligent immersion. The writer of that article asked us to express our views upon their action; but as he did not give us the details as fully as we would have liked, we cannot as fully express our views as we might, if we knew all of the circumstances. But I shall express my views on this question in a general way, as an humble disciple of Christ in the love and fear of my Master. But every congregation must act upon this question, as upon all others, as the Lord's freemen guided only by the inspired volume, which "thoroughly furnishes them unto all good works." "And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified," Acts 20: 32. I am sorry that I have not at hand the brother's communication to answer questions in the order he propounded; but it has been mislaid.

(1) I will say that, if the Lord did not authorize the teaching that the sectarian world has heard and believed, He does not authorize the baptism they have received; for in His divine arrangement it is "one Lord, one faith, one baptism"—"according to your faith be it unto you"—faith comes by hearing the word of God." But many of our scribes are now saying there is no such a thing as "sect baptism"—"that the sects can't take immersion away from the Lord." Therefore they conclude that it matters not as to the teaching, if persons are immersed, that is the "Lord's baptism." I say that the Lord will not take away from the sectarian world their baptisms! These brethren hold that calling the divine names, Father, Son and Holy Ghost over those the sects immerse fixes the seal of God on the work. But such an idea is preposterous, and they contradict themselves on it; for when they are not on the defence of this sectarian work they contend that, in order for persons to be immersed by Christ's authority, the administrator must say, in the name; and this the orthodox world do not say nor believe.

(2) If the Lord has not authorized the teaching that leads to sectarian immersion, as before said, he has not authorized their immersions; and, if he has not authorized these immersions they are no more in his right than so many baby-sprinklings. So I verily believe that the proposition of W. T. Moore, to affiliate with sprinkled sects rians, is viewed by the Lord with as much favor as is the work of these brethren who receive into the congregations persons who were immersed before they knew what that ordinance was for. Of course, human wisdom can philosophize and sophize a merit into these immersions that it excludes from effusion; but all such worldly wisdom is foolishness with God, and is "earthly, sensual and devilish." "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God," for therein he is "thoroughly furnished unto all good works"—the former immersion of the twelve Paul found at Ephesus was really no better than twelve now who have been sprinkled, and their former immersion was surely as good as any immersion which is now unauthorized by the Lord. Our position, i. e. we who do not recognize as valid these sectarian immersions, logically, legitimately and scripturally force us to ultimately refuse to fraternize and affiliate as brethren with those who rely upon these sectarian immersions. I know some of the strongest friends of the F. F. dread this issue; but I for one do not dread to take any step which fealty and fidelity to "the faith once delivered to the saints" point out.

But let it be well understood by all, that the F. F. will never attempt to assume ecclesiastical authority as some seem to fear. This paper will simply proclaim "the truth as it is in Jesus," and impress upon its readers the duty of "marking them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine (of Christ) which they have learned; and avoid them."—Rom. 16: 17. It will remind them that, if any come and bring not the doctrine of Christ, and they bid them God-speed they will be partakers of that preacher's evil deeds. See 2 John 1: 9-11.

If there is authority in the Scriptures for baptizing untaught persons, or for receiving them into the congregations after others have baptized them, then the man who comes teaching anything leading to immersion, however contrary to the things taught by the apostles his doctrine may be; or the man who follows such a teacher and shakes his converts into the congregations, is bringing the doctrine of Christ and should be bidden God-speed. But if there is not authority for such work in the Scriptures, then it is not the doctrine of Christ, but a bad work, and he who bids him God-speed will be partaker of his evil deeds. Just let the brethren call on all such teachers to read their authority to the audience, when they invite such persons to unite with the congregations, and there will soon be an end to this work. If he cannot produce the authority—and no man can—then stop his mouth in the most orderly way you can and you have done your duty—tighten the purse-strings against such teachers and it will work like a charm in stopping such teaching; for you will find most all such teachers particular to know how much pay they are to have before they will preach. Now this question, and the missionary society, and the organ, and one man "pastor" questions all eventuate at the very same point of logic and duty, which is to withdraw ourselves from all who persist in these divisive and offensive things, which are all contrary to the doctrine we have learned of Christ. While this is true, we should act in all of these things with care and caution and humility, and in a spirit of true fidelity to the gospel, and in brotherly love. This course will open the hearts of true men and women for the reception of a more perfect teaching of the way of the Lord; while a rash and ill-advised course will close the hearts of many against the truth.

Some who oppose the teaching of the F. F. on the baptismal question, but who oppose the missionary society, the organ and the one man power, object to our position, because it forces us to exclude those whom we regard as invalidly immersed; but they are blind to the fact that consistency forces them to take the same step with those who advocate and work in these other divisive things. OUR PAMPHLETS.

"The Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," is a pamphlet that lays wide open the inconsistency of receiving Baptists and other immersed sectarians without "immersing in the name of the Lord Jesus." It is offered by us at only 10 cents per copy, or three for 25 cents. It ought to be widely circulated among those who have not yet seen the unsoundness of the practice referred to.

The "Sequel to the Religious Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," by J. W. Jackson, is a pamphlet about the size of the other, and is offered at the same price. It gives an account of how "Zeke Jackson" won his wife, first converting her from Methodism. In her conversion "Zeke" met the Methodist "Grub-Ax" and exposed its sophistry. This is a splendid pamphlet, especially for circulation where the "Grub-Ax" has been circulated.

COMING TO THE LIGHT.

"Some of us remember when applicants for baptism and church membership were required to tell their experiences. A change has come. To-day, in most cases, a few leading questions are asked, and asked in such a way as to insure correct answers. And often these questions are such as may be answered by unregenerated persons. We knew a case once to beg off from making a statement, on the ground that he had not language to explain his feelings. On the following day he found rest by looking to Christ and could tell his feelings readily. The tongue of the stammerer was then ready to speak plainly. Some of our church members are converted (?) so gradually that they just cannot tell anything about it. They cannot tell when, where or how. They only know that they feel better than they did feel—well!"

"Everything essential to a Christian experience is in every Christian experience, hence, Christian experience can differ only in non-essentials. If any one fails to have in his experience what the Bible teaches that Christians do have, that one is not a Christian."

"Persuading a restless, doubting soul, who himself feels that he is not a child of God, that he is a Christian, is like persuading a sick man that he is well, persuading a shivering man that he is comfortable and warm, or persuading a blind man that he sees."

"Many persons believe that they are Christians when in reality they are not. But none believe that they are not when in reality they are."

"Making the experience of one who claims to be a Christian, a standard by which to interpret the Scriptures, is like testing scales by weighing a lady whose exact weight is not known."

"A deceived soul believes that he has found salvation because he found a change in his feelings. A Christian has found salvation in Christ, and therefore necessarily finds a change of feeling."

"No change of feeling is to be relied on as conversion. A change of feeling is not even an evidence of conversion, unless such change grows logically out of a conception of Christ as a complete Savior."

"Now God's way of saving sinners is through preaching the gospel. 'It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.' 'How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? And how can they believe in him of whom they have not heard?' 'Faith cometh by hearing; and hearing by the word of God.' This is God's way, and if he has any other way he has not revealed it unto us. Jesus commanded the apostles to preach the gospel and baptize those who believed; so the preparation for baptism came through preaching on the part of the sinner. Of course the power is of God, but this is the way through which God has been pleased to exercise his power. Take the case of conversions as given in the New Testament and outside of those which were through the direct call of Christ, they all came through preaching. Before this modern revival machinery was introduced, while in many lines of activity, especially in increase of membership, the churches were behind, compared with the present, were they not in advance in the matter of spirituality and soundness of faith? Some of us can remember when it meant something to be a Baptist. But God's ways were too slow for this fast age. Others adopted the use of altar services, and mourner's benches; excitement took the place of reason; sinners were taught to look to their prayers and penance instead of to the blood of Jesus; they were taught to pray to God for the forgiveness of sins, and conclude when they found a change of feelings, that their sins were forgiven, instead of looking to Jesus as a sacrifice for sin and being justified by faith—all these which turned the sinner's eye to his own exercise and feelings, as the object of his faith, rather than to the blood of Jesus Christ which cleanses from all sin, seemed to work well and swell the ranks of other churches, and Baptists not wishing to fall behind in the work have gradually drifted into the same channels.

Many of our churches are to-day embarrassed because of a high-pressure revival service in which this machinery was used. Sometimes it takes months, even years for a church to get over the evil effects of such a meeting. If any pastor will take it upon himself to look into the original personal experience of his members and examine them critically, he will find that the greater part of those who manifest no spiritual life, made their professions in revival meetings of the type mentioned, and that they have no clear understanding of Christ as a Savior. God's way is not only the best way, it is the only way; any other way is a failure. No objections urged against revivals; nor are those members of our churches who have been brought in through the instrumentality of the gospel preached in revival meetings underrated. We believe in revivals, but in revivals which came through God's appointments. Brother if you never tried simply preaching the gospel, as a means of bringing sinners to Christ, try it and note the lasting effects, and be convinced. 'But suppose that this fails; what other means must be resorted to?' None. If God's plan fails, the failure is far better than any success that may come by adopting any extra means. We are to fish with gospel bait. The Lord has not sent us out giggering."

The foregoing extracts are taken from the Gospel Standard, Baptist monthly, published at Waco, Texas. And they speak loudly against the abuses practiced by many professed Christians "for the furtherance of the gospel." Some of the editor's brethren have dubbed him a "Campbellite," for the style in which he (Martin) preaches and writes; and, in fact, the nearer a man preaches God's plan as made known in the Bible, as our people have for many years, the louder sectarians will cry, "Campbellite."

Now, "one swallow (Martin) does not make a summer," yet it shows plainly "there's a bird in the air." And we predict that the G. S. will be like the "leaven" which was hidden in the "meal." In fact, it has already commenced working and will work wonders in the Baptist ranks. He "strikes out" boldly, and "hews to the line," and if he will only "speak where the Bible speaks, and be silent where it is silent," his teaching will do great good. Success to him in the Lord. And may he raise high the "Standard" of the gospel that the people may be led to follow Christ and abandon the "traditions of men."

PERSONAL.

I noticed in one of our religious journals recently, that one of our preachers had made a thrust at Bro. McGary, and pronounced him a fraud. I deeply regretted to learn that we had a preacher identified with us in the reformation who is willing to slander a brother. Now I know about as much about Bro. McGary as does any one in Texas, or elsewhere. I knew him long before he obeyed the gospel, believe I knew very nearly his every impulse. I was present when he was baptised, and feel warranted in saying that, the Christian religion has done more for him than for any one I have ever met.

I knew him when he was sheriff of Madison county, and was practicing law at the time, and had opportunity to know that he was strictly honest in his official acts, and I have never heard his honesty or integrity questioned. And as a Christian gentleman, he stands the equal of any brother I have ever known in Texas.

Our brother who chose to assail Bro. McGary may cause those who do not know him to regard him as a fraud, but a hundred like him will never make those who know Bro. McGary, believe that he is not all that he has ever pretended to be, strictly a Christian gentleman.

I am willing to concede the fact, that I do not subscribe to the use of the sarcasm and harsh language that he sometimes indulges in when writing, but his motive is a pure one. And I suggest to our brother who assailed Bro. McGary, and to all others who may be tempted to detract from his character as a Christian gentleman, if you are unable to meet and answer his arguments, just let him alone, for you can never convince those who know him, that he is not pure in heart and a Christian gentleman in all his walks.

J. L. BOLLING.

SUPPORT OF PREACHERS.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

I wish to write a few lines for the F. F. relative to the duty of Christians, in holding up the hands of those who "preach the gospel." And especially old ministers who have grown gray in the service of our King. It seems to me that our old and faithful preachers should be well cared for, for their works sake. What a shame it is that those professing to be Christians and disciples of Christ, will suffer old and infirm soldiers of the cross to go uncared for. But alas, it is the case. I am personally acquainted with more than one who has been sounding the "gospel trumpet" for thirty-five and forty years, that are to-night, while I am writing these crude and hasty lines, worrying their minds over the dark and gloomy prospects lying out before them.

Preachers who have once been a power, in the hands of God, in accomplishing good, are now in their old age uncared for by those to whom they have been instrumental in bringing the glorious gospel of the Son of God. Some brethren are more careful to minister to the wants of the brute creation, than they are to maintain and support old and expiring ministers of Christ's gospel. Why do you take such care of the faithful old work horse? You answer, because of the good he has done. Very well; are old and faithful preachers of less value in your estimation than the work horse?

Why not the church take care of her old soldiers for their work's sake. An old "veteran of the cross" recently remarked to us: "I am getting too old now to do the preaching I once could do. I am not now able to go out and blaze out the road through the sectarian thickets, as I once did, and clear away their sectarian rubbish, thus making it easy on the young preacher who followed after me." And he continued: "My young brother, it makes me feel sad because I am so very poor, and my only means of support is my preaching, and my experience all along has been, that old preachers are soon forgotten. Our preachers from timidity or some other cause have failed in the main to educate our brethren up to their duty in taking care of and providing for their old worn out preachers." Brethren, there is a wrong somewhere, and it is a shame that it has not been looked after before this, but it is not even too late now for us to write and preach to the church upon this important matter.

All true Christians will admit that all true preachers should be supported, they will also freely admit that, as a rule the hands of ministers are not held up as they should be. This being admitted, calls up the question, on whom does the wrong rest? Now I am going to try and answer this question. It cannot rest on God, and be charged that he failed to make wise provision for the support of those preaching his gospel. For he plainly says, through his apostles, that "they who preach the gospel shall live of the gospel." Then as the fault is not with God, whose fault is it? It is the fault of those professing to be Christians, but who never put anything in the Lord's treasury. It rests on those good Christians who are always wanting to do good, but when an opportunity is offered them, they are too hard run just now to do anything, but intend to when times get a little better. I charge it on these Christians, who pray long prayers for the widows and fatherless, but when their cries come to their ears, "charity" then begins at home, and with proficiency they quote Paul: "He that provides not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." It rests on such Christians as visit the dram shops, big shows, theatres, political mass meetings, and such like, who are wanting "our party" in the lead; on those who are always ready to go my part for "our party."

It is chargeable to all such Christians as join all the secret benevolent organizations, gotten up by some rich man to make him richer, by getting monthly or quarterly dues; hence they have nothing for the good Lord's cause. Finally, it rests on those who are not satisfied with the Bible as "thoroughly furnishing the man of God unto all good works."

Brethren, I have no "theological axe to grind," although a preacher, yet I am young and able to support myself and mine on the farm; but I write to "stir up your minds" about the duty of ministering to the wants of God's old and now almost worn out servants. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." In sowing to the Spirit we are walking in the good works, "which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them, (see Eph. 2:10). Among these good works is, the giving of our substance for the Lord's cause in the earth. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit, so shall ye be my disciples."—John 15:8. "And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees, plural, (two kinds), good tree and bad tree, (both in the church.) Therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire.

Brethren, wake up to your own eternal welfare, put on the whole armor of God, and fight the good fight of faith, for if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, (2 Peter 1:8)—please read whole chapter. But I must desist.

If this appears in the F. F. it will be followed with Bible suggestions in another article, showing how easy it would be to carry on the Lord's work, without the many shameful and disgraceful schemes resorted to now. With love to all the "true Israel of God," I am, yours truly,

F. M. TRIMBLE.

SOME STRANGE THINGS.

It has been my privilege for six years to learn how the disciples of Christ are doing. It would fall of justice in me not to say that, during this time, I have met many faithful individual disciples. Yes, men who would hazard their lives for "the faith."

I have also found some few congregations that were alive to our Master's work. It is encouraging to visit such congregations; righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit reigns. No discord, contention, strife, hatred, envy and many other things which tend to destruction. God bless you, my brethren, be faithful till death, and leave in your places your children and neighbors that they may keep the light of God shining until Jesus comes.

But I now call attention to some things which appear strange to me, and just where to begin, or which of many strange things that have come under my observation, needs most attention, is hard to tell. But, first, I observe members of the church meeting with other members when at church, its "howdy-do, Bro. A." When on the street, or in some worldly gathering its "good morning, or good morning 'Mr.' A."

Now why is this? I fix it up that those who do such things are not a peculiar people in the Bible sense.

A few days ago a brother, who was and is yet, I suppose, a member of a "fashionable" congregation called to see me. In speaking to my wife he called her Mrs. McGavock, and when she brottered him, it gave rise to a talk on the subject. He told us, that subject was once discussed by some of his congregation, and it was the conclusion of the elders that, we ought to brother each other at church, but when out among the world it would be best not to do so. This is strange.

But, second, I find by listening closely that these very brethren, and sisters, too, when they meet a false teacher, in the form of a sectarian preacher, its "howdy-do, Bro. B." Now how strange for a child of God to act! I have listened to such things until I have become disgusted.

Third, I know some brethren who attend church once a month, if there is to be preaching, but seldom do they attend the Lord's day worship. With my idea of preaching, and worship, this is the strangest thing I have observed in the actions of persons whom I esteem good people. Christians meet together to worship, not to preach. Preaching is necessary and must be done.

But I insist that the congregational worship, consisting of singing, praying, teaching and exhorting, then breaking the loaf, drinking the wine, and contributing of our means "as the Lord has prospered us," is not a monthly worship. We have no more right to think we have discharged our duty when we engage in the worship just once a month, when it is possible to meet upon the first day of the week, than were we to engage in the worship only once a year. Yet how many are thus acting. My brother, is it not a strange thing to you?

I visited a congregation not long ago, and on inquiring I learned there were a hundred members in the congregation. I asked what the average attendance was upon the Lord's day, when no preacher was to be present. I received the astonishing answer, "twelve." I asked if was not very burdensome upon the few while so many were at ease? "Not much," was the answer, "for about fifty cents is the amount of the weekly contribution, ordinarily."

Now how strange these things are. This congregation is for the Bible plan of work. No innovator need go there expecting to induce those brethren to work in their human machinery. Where the Bible speaks we speak; where the Bible is silent we will not speak, is their motto. I suggest, brethren, that we practice what we preach. I am glad to say, however, I found some brethren who seemed anxious to do the Lord's will.

I suggested while there, that a pruning of those dead members of the body was essential to the body.

I have some more things of which I would like to speak, nearer home. Should this find room in our valuable paper, they shall be forthcoming.

Brethren, let us wake up to our duty. If heaven is worth anything, it is worth our faithful service to Him who has loved us and given His Son to die for us. Let us remember we are not our own, but the servants of Christ. And that all we have and are, belong to Him, and that to Him we will have to give account. Yes, our time, our influence, our means, all belong to Him who has purchased us with His own blood.

O. H. MCGAVOCK.

A FEW WORDS OF APPROBATION.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

I am well pleased with the neat appearance of your little paper and would like to see it made a weekly.

Your position, in regard to what constitutes the gospel, is what I have held for several years. Bro. J. H. Howe, of Canada, and I debated that subject in the A. C. Review in 1872, or 1873, I think it was, as you and some of the brethren are doing now. Bro. Treat has recently acknowledged the correctness of our position. See a late Review.

You are right in your position in reference to none having been baptized except those who first heard and believed the gospel with all the heart, repented of all past sins, and confessed with the mouth their faith in Jesus the Christ.

Jesus told the apostles to go and teach, and said that they should know the truth, and that the truth should make them free. Go and preach the gospel to every creature. "It is written in the prophets that they shall all be taught of God, and all who hear and learn of the Father cometh unto me."—John 6: 44-45.

Jesus in the parable of the sower says: "The good ground is he that heareth the word and understandeth it: which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth some a hundred fold, some sixty, some thirty."—Matt. 13: 23.

John says: "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of His disciples, which are not written in this book. But these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through His name."—John 20: 30-31.

"For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. 10: 10.

"And it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved."—Acts 2: 21.

"For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."—Rom. 10: 13.

"How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?"—Rom. 10: 14.

Peter said: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Jesus says: "Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father who is in heaven."—Matt. 10: 32-33.

What is it to deny Him?
1. To disbelieve him, to reject him, to refuse to hear him.

2. To refuse to turn and follow him.
3. To refuse to confess him before men.

4. To refuse to put him on by being baptized "into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit," by his authority in order to the remission of sins.

FROM BRO. DUKE.

Dear F. F.

Please allow me space in your columns to return my thanks to all the dear brethren and sisters for donations received to enable me to purchase an artificial leg. I have received enough and will get the leg, for which I am thankful. Being requested by so many not to publish their names, I withhold all the names, and I will try to show my appreciation of their help by my work.

I took the confessions of four young ladies last Friday night and buried them with Christ by baptism on Lord's day. One was the daughter of a Baptist family, the other three, of a Universalist family. Pray for me and my work.

W. H. DUKE.

FROM BRO. NEWMAN.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

By request of Bro. J. T. Kornegay and R. P. Johnson, of Bremond, Texas, I desire to acknowledge the receipt of ($10.00) ten dollars sent by the above named brethren.

This, as well as I now remember, was in September or October, 1887, this amount was to be divided between Bro. W. E. Hawkins, of Coleman city, and myself. I gave him $5.00, and he gave a Bro. Loftin $2.00 of his part.

This statement I ask you to publish in the F. F. in order to pacify the church there, as there has some trouble arisen over the matter. By so doing you will greatly oblige your humble servant and brother in Christ.

G. W. NEWMAN.

Coleman county, Texas.

FROM BRO. MOORE.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough,

Bro. B. P. Sweeney, a few days since, closed a meeting at Cottonwood Baptist church in Bracco county. Result was, five baptisms, four from the Baptists, and one that had been immersed, but stated that he did not fully understand the design of baptism before. Bro. S. has certainly sown some seed here that will bring forth fruit which cannot be shaken off the vine by "every wind of doctrine."

I send you an editorial taken from our county paper, that our ice (cold) cream brethren may see it and move up a little. I think they are all a few paces behind. It reads as follows:

"A doll show is on the tapis for next Thursday and Friday at the vacant store next door to the Barnes House. Three prizes are offered: one for the oldest, one for the ugliest and one for the prettiest doll. Any little girl can show her doll under some one of the three lists. The dolls must be brought to the above building on the afternoon of Wednesday, April 4th. The admission price will be only five cents; refreshments day and night for 25 cents. Proceeds for benefit of the Methodist church."

Now could not some of our sisters get up a baby show? It would certainly be more entertaining than a "doll show."

May God bless and prosper you in your work of throwing stumbling blocks in the road that leads to Babylon. I am sure you are causing some to turn their steps to the way marked out by the apostles. O, how I long to see the day when every one that professes to preach the gospel of Christ can see that it is God's word he is dealing with, and not man's to make merchandise of.

Your brother for the old apostolic teaching. JOE MCGEE.

FROM BRO. BURLINSON.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Enclosed please find $1.70, $1.00 to continue my subscription to the F. F., fifty cents for Bro. J. H. McPherson for the F. F. six months, twenty cents for "Zeke and the Baptist" and "Zeke and the Methodist" one copy each.

I have been reading the F. F. five or six months, and am well pleased with it. It would suit me better if it were a weekly, but it comes twice a month like a true Christian friend, and it is always a welcome guest with all the family that are able to read.

I have succeeded in gaining one true friend to the F. F., and I think you may count us both life-time subscribers. May God hold your hands up and enable you to continue in his glorious work. We believe it will be the means of aiding all true Christians to come to a common center—the word of God. The clear ring of the F. F. shows it would not sacrifice truth for any worldly prospects.

Yours for the whole truth, J. D. BURLINSON.

Utopia, Texas.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

Will you please send me the FIRM FOUNDATION. I have not the money now. My prospects for a crop are good and I think I can pay you by fall, if not sooner, if it is our Father's will that nothing evil happens to the crop; if the crop fails, I will try a plan of selling eggs to raise the amount.

I am a poor widow, but I feel that God will bless me through His dear Son. I have wanted your paper for two years but have been prevented from subscribing by the failures in our crop. Send it to me and by God's help I will be a life-time subscriber.

Your sister in the faith, F. S. Stockdale, Texas.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have been getting the F. F. about two years or more. I did not subscribe for the paper, but I think it a good paper, and am willing to pay for it. Enclosed you will find two dollars, and if you will remove that red cross and continue the paper, I will pay balance due next fall. Success to the F. F.

Yours for the faith, C. NICHOLS.

West, Texas.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Enclosed find sixty cents in postage stamps, for which please credit me with fifty cents on my subscription, and send me a copy of "Zeke and the Methodists." I will remit balance due in a short time. I can not do without the F. F.; we have no gospel preaching but it in this part of Texas; would have remitted long ago, but could not get hold of the money. If I am fortunate to raise anything in this drouth stricken country this year, I will send a few subscribers that cannot take the paper and pay for it; in that way I can aid in spreading the gospel, and know, you and others connected with the F. F. should be sustained for the stand you have taken against errors taught by our brethren. Your brother.

JOHN BAYLOR.

Degress, Texas.

Editor Firm Foundation:

Through the kindness of a brother, I commenced to receive the visits of my "preacher," (FIRM FOUNDATION), in August last, but about New Year's it came with the red cross and has so continued up to the present. I am sorry I have not been able to send my subscription. I am an invalid and in great distress, have been afflicted with lung disease for nearly six years, and frequently suffer for want of sufficient and proper nourishment, and my bodily sufferings at times are very severe. I do not know what I shall do if you conclude to stop my preacher coming to visit me. I do so love to hear through the silent language of the pen, the gospel proclaimed as it was once delivered by the apostles. I promise to send as soon as I able, my subscription, God being my helper, if you continue to send the F. F., and may God strengthen you in the good work, is the prayer of yours in Christ, G.

Kerrville, Texas.

FROM BRO. SPEER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I left home the 9th inst by rail for Angelina county to hold a meeting. Arrived at Homer next day, commenced the meeting that night and continued till the 13th. Result, four obeyed the gospel. The people were very attentive throughout the meeting, and the house was crowded.

Left on the 14th for Burke, same county, which is a small town on the H. E. & W. T. railroad. We have had but little preaching here, unless it has been of the Rose Hill kind. We continued here five days and nights. Result, six obeyed the gospel. The people of Burke heard with all readiness of mind; there will be a rich harvest here soon. Bro. Goldman and myself are going to work up this field.

Two preachers have been trying to get to hold meetings in Angelina county at one hundred dollars per month, and if they don't stop trying to make merchandise of God's word in this way, I will expose them in my next.

It seems as if they do not want Bro. Goldman and myself over here because we are friends to the F. F., but we are here to stay all the same, and will watch the walls of Zion.

We arrived at home on the 20th; found all well. Lizzie and Asa had planted five acres of corn during my absence. So we will have roasting ears to eat after a while.

Will start to Centralia the 23rd inst.

Love to all my brethren and sisters. Success to the F. F.

LETTER FROM MILBURN.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Here at Milburn we have a church in name only. Since Bro. Hansbrough was here last September, a few of us met once, and that was to hear Bro. McGee, a shaker, who preached on the second Lord's day in last month.

A short time after Bro. H. left us, we announced a meeting. I believe there were only three there. Some are dissatisfied with our Elder, (we only have one); some give one excuse and some another. There have been hard feelings between two sisters for more than two years, and I am told that our Elder has taken no notice of the matter whatever. Another sister went to a party and danced, and her case was passed by unnoticed.

Now, I think, you will conclude that we are in a deplorable condition. As there are several readers of the F. F. here, please give us a little advice, and I think it will arouse some of us to action.

B. A. DUBOIS.

THIS AND THAT.

Some one has said: "The new gospel reads this way: Go preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth, knowing what faith is for, and is baptized, knowing what baptism is for, shall be saved."

Now let us read His gospel: "Go preach the gospel to every creature he that believeth, not knowing what faith is for, and is baptized, not knowing what baptism is for, shall be saved."

I hear there is a one hundred dollar reward for a Scripture that makes a belief in the design of baptism a prerequisite to baptism or salvation. Well, how would 2nd of Acts do you? Have you read it? For fear you have not, let us read: "Now when they heard this, they cried out, men and brethren what must we do? Peter said, repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Christ, for the remission of sins." Peter taught them here what to do, and what it was for. That is, he taught them repentance and baptism and their design.

Did they believe Peter in what he said? Yes, three thousand did.

They gladly received his word and were baptized. These were saved. There were some who did not believe. Were they saved? No. Why? Because they would not believe the things Peter preached.

Now if Peter preached baptism and its design, which he did to all the people, if they had not believed it, do you believe they would have been saved? The design of baptism is part of the gospel. Remission of sins is to be preached in his name among all nations beginning at Jerusalem.

"Preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth, and is baptized shall be saved." Jesus taught in this: 1. The gospel was to be preached. 2. The people were to obey. 3. Shall be saved—is the design of the obedience. Jesus then taught the design of baptism; what he said was true, and "he that believeth not shall be damned."

He that don't believe the design of baptism, don't believe the Bible—don't believe the truth. We are chosen through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth. People may believe a lie and be damned. Let us watch and be sober, for many deceivers are gone out in the world. Let us hold fast to sound words—sound doctrine.

"Be not weary in well doing," that is, subscribe for the FIRM FOUNDATION and get your neighbor to do likewise.

Bro. W. E. Hawkins reports a meeting from Coleman, Texas, with twelve added, one of the number being a young preacher.

Bro. A. McGary and a Baptist preacher, name unknown, will have a debate at Fort McKavett some time in June. Particulars will be given as soon as we learn them.

Bro. J. D. Tant and F. S. Payne, a Missionary Baptist, will have a debate at Lanham, Hamilton county, Texas, beginning on the 21st of this month and to continue six days.

Bro. E. Cox, Ledonia, Fannin county, reports a debate between Bro. N. S. Williams and H. M. Pirtle, of the Methodists. The debate was carried on for eight successive nights and resulted in a victory for the truth.

Bro. J. Hendershot, of Evelyn, Wirt county, W. V., wants to know if some one can supply him with a work on the origin and doctrine of the Mormons. He has to encounter them in his work, and wants some information as to their history, in order to enable him to refute and put them to silence.

Bro. J. D. Tant reports a debate at Goldthwaite, in January last between Bro. Wm. Alexander and Elder Burrows of the Baptist church. He says that "Bro. A. is one of our ablest preachers," and, of course, had no difficulty in showing that the Baptist doctrines of succession, total depravity, etc., are unscriptural. The meeting continued a day or two after the debate and one confessed Christ.

Bro. A. Freeland, Evelyn, Wirt co., W. Va., reports several successful meetings in different parts of his country. Of one of these meetings he says: "From Stinston, Calhoun county, I went to Mill Fork of Steer creek in Braxton county. Five of the brethren went with me. The people of that place had declared that, if I came there I would have to be carried or hauled away for they would shoot me. The meeting lasted one week. They said they would stop the meeting if they had to throw the house down. The third night of the meeting they stole the stove-pipe. We had to borrow a stove-pipe and carry it away every time we met. There was one old man, who collared one of the brethren while passing through his farm, and pushed him over the fence. The result of this meeting was, we organized a congregation of seventeen members. They are a zealous and determined little band. The people that abused us so, claim to be baptized with the Holy Ghost. I think if they are baptized with any ghost at all, it is the devil's ghost, for it is the same persecuting spirit that the people had that stoned Stephen. I am determined by the grace of God to labor and fight on till death ends the warfare."

Some brethren cannot see why the "Sunday School" should be classed among those works not "of the Father." Because it is an institution distinct from the church in its origin, nature, organization and practice. Robert Raikes originated the idea of Sunday Schools, in the city of Gloucester, England, in the year 1780. But the schools established by Raikes had no connection with the church. His object was to gather the poor and ragged children out of the streets and slums and have them taught on Sunday evenings. In the first schools established, he employed four teachers at a shilling apiece to take the oversight of those who attended. The churches having taken hold of the idea, have progressed so far beyond the original intention of the founder, that he wouldn't own them, if he could rise from the dead and visit them. The apostles of the Lord Jesus, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, originated the Lord's day assembly for Christians to attend to the worship, and to mutually exhort and edify each other. In thus assembling they should take their children with them; thus training them in the way they should go, and they, (the children), should be taught the things pertaining to the kingdom of God, by the Elders or by those Christians competent to teach. Such an assembly is not a "Sunday School," but the church at work, and has the full sanction of God's word. J. W. J.

READ THIS.

The present edition of the Outman—McGary debate is exhausted; in ordering pamphlets please remember this.

The "Queries" give place in this issue to correspondence. Some of a practical nature will be answered in next issue.

If you see a big RED CROSS on your paper, you may know your subscription is out. Please renew if you want the paper.

In last issue of the F. F., in Bro. McGary's letter, on 8th page, first column, 29th line, the word "feasible" should have been "plausible."

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

Correspondents will please remember to send all money orders for subscriptions or for tracts, to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas.

We will not put the blue cross on any of the papers hereafter, as we are prepared to send receipts for money as fast as sent in. If you fail to get a receipt, write to us inside of thirty days for it.

The RED CROSS is not a den but simply to notify you that your subscription is due, and your prompt remittance of the same will materially assist us in keeping all expenses paid up. If you wish the cross removed and the paper continued drop us a postal to that effect. A few parties, who have been reading the paper for one or two years, without paying anything, became angry as soon as the red cross appeared and quit taking the paper from the office. Such readers are a good deal like the old man that thanked God for a free religion. He said: "Thank God for a free religion; I've belonged to the church thirty years, and it hasn't cost me but thirty cents." What do you think of such readers and such Christians? J. W. J.

FEEBLE EFFORT.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have been acquainted with what is called the rebaptismal controversy ever since Alexander Hall published the Gospel Proclamation, and it seems no nearer settled now than it was forty years ago, notwithstanding our most profound scholars have brought all of their talent to bear on this vexed question; and the one in favor of receiving all who have been baptized by the sects if they are satisfied they have obeyed the Lord from the heart, seems to be astonished that any one should reject them if they are satisfied with their baptism.

On the other hand, the one who is opposed, seems horrified that any one should be so blind and careless as to receive him without baptizing him again. Now I ask, if our learned brethren are going to be in everlasting dispute on this mooted question, what are we poor ignorant disciples going to do, who can not read a chapter in the New Testament correctly? And yet you tell us it is so plain that the way-faring man though a fool shall not err therein. Look at Bro. McCarty's language against brethren of world-wide fame as defenders of truth, in F. F., vol. 4, No. 2, page 3, and say then what we poor ignorant fellows are to do. It seems, there is something wrong, is it the Bible, if so, where can we find it?

I wish now to ask some questions and hope you will give them such notice as you think proper:

1. If our first parents had believed every word the serpent had said to them, (Gen. 3:5), and not ate of the forbidden fruit, do you think they would have been turned out of the garden? If so, why?

2. If the man of God had believed every word the lying prophet had said to him and yet obeyed the word of the Lord, do you think he would have been destroyed? If so, why?

3. Suppose A. owes me ten dollars. I write him a note stating to him, if he will water, feed and saddle my horse I will forgive him the debt. He waters and feeds him, and he is informed by them that carried him the note that, it is not necessary to saddle him, for I have forgiven him already, and they are sure the debt is cancelled, and he feels satisfied and is sure in his own mind that I have forgiven him; yet notwithstanding his feelings of freedom, he saddles the horse. I ask, if his believing those lies releases me from my promise to forgive him the debt? If so, why?

Now our Lord said: "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16:16. Of course, repentance is understood. This good news is sent to the sinner who is ten thousand talents in debt, and he is taught by them that are educated and profess to know what the Bible teaches; and their teachers tell them if they will believe and obtain a certain class of feelings, that these feelings are evidence of pardon; then they tell them they can be baptized if they want to, for it is only a commandment and it is a non-essential anyhow, and they can be saved without it, for thousands have been saved that never were baptized. And suppose the poor, misguided sinner believes every word of these false teachers, and yet does believe, repent and is baptized, will his believing those falsehoods hinder the Lord from complying with his promise when the misguided mortal has done just what the Lord required him to do, and said, he shall be saved? If so, why?

It is urged that a full understanding that baptism is for remission of sins is necessary, and if the sinner does not so understand it he will fall of pardon. Now, my brethren, if God ever made an understanding of what he was going to bestow, a condition of his bestowing the promised blessing, I have utterly failed to find it. But understanding and doing what he commanded us to do, and then he attends to his part, bestows the blessing. To speak after the manner of men, God places the blessing where it pleases him and then tells the person or persons to come or go and accept it; and no matter how many difficulties they may encounter in getting there, when they do get there the Lord does not take it away, and say, you shall not have it because you had so much trouble in getting here. No verily, but he gets the blessing.

So God placed the healing in the seventh dip for Naaman, (2 Kings 5:10), and he was as mad as ever I saw a sect because God placed remission in baptism, but he went and dipped, but he never touched the healing power till he went down in the seventh dip, where God placed the blessing. Did God take it away because Naaman raged and foamed about its being put there? Surely not, for God said do that and he should be healed. Did he take it because Naaman had no confidence in it? No, for he had faith enough to get there where he was informed the blessing was, and his flesh was restored as the flesh of a little child, just the same as he had been well pleased with God for putting it there. Now this is a matter of sense. But now we come to something that is above sense, that a man can neither see, feel, hear, taste nor smell, that is, the pardon of sins. Yet it seems that we are permitted to obtain a satisfactory knowledge of the remission of our sins, but it is by faith.

Now if the sinner comes to baptism where God has placed remission of sins, and is buried with the Lord into death will he not as certainly be cleansed from his sins by the blood of Christ as Naaman was from his leprosy, or will God remove the blessing because he had no confidence in it? Surely not, because he had faith enough to get there. It seems that he would be as willing for the sinner to receive pardon as he was for Naaman to be cleansed. Now Naaman's healing was a matter of sense, no one could dispute it. Pardon is a matter of faith. And Naaman was so glad when he was healed, he blessed God and manifested a determination that in the future he would honor him.

Now when the poor, misguided sinner, who has been baptized notwithstanding he had been made to believe that pardon was at the mourning bench, hears the gospel preached in all its fullness and learns that baptism is for remission of sins, (for this is a matter of faith and not of sense); though he realizes it to his comfort and consolation, (as much as Naaman, his healing by sense), it seems to me that he should be permitted to carry out his resolve to glorify God in the future by leaving the ranks of the enemy and placing himself with those of the Lord, without being compelled to go and do again what he has already done.

Would it not have been a strange freak of the prophet to have said to Naaman when he wanted to do right, (for he wanted two mule's burdens of earth to carry with him to put in the temple of Rimmon that when he bowed down and his master leaned on his hand to worship, that God would not impute the sin of idolatry unto him, 1 Kings 5:18), you cannot get it unless you go and dip yourself again seven times in Jordan. Naaman says, I am cleansed; it don't make any difference, you was mad about it, and it was no dipping at all it was just a sousing, you go back and dip yourself seven times and then come and you can have the earth; and he begins to reason thus, I am cleansed, but I fear the consequences, if I do not obtain this earth; and he goes and dips again. Was it for his cleansing? Surely not, but to obtain future privileges and to gratify a whim of the prophet.

Now suppose one who has been baptized by the sects should come and desire to live with those who keep the ordinances of the house of God and some would interrogate him thus: Did you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ with all your heart? Did you repent of your sins? were you baptized into the name of The Father, Son and Holy Spirit? To all of which he would answer in the affirmative. Then he is asked, if he understood that baptism is for remission of sins; he says, I did not. Then he is informed that his faith is no faith, his repentance is no repentance, and that his baptism is no baptism, it was only a ducking. Why, he says, I believe my sin was pardoned, for I did what God said do and I should be saved. It is said to him; no difference what you believe about it we know unless you understood that baptism was for remission of sins you had just as well fall off a log as to any good it will do you, and he is driven off and lost. Whose fault is it? It seems, he has as much right to decide that he is pardoned as Naaman had to decide he was cleansed. But suppose he is forced to be baptized, is it for the remission of sins? Surely not, for he says he is pardoned, and he looks now to the word of God for his evidence and not to his feelings any more. If baptized at all, then it must be to gratify his judges, or for future privileges, and not for past sins. If a man could see, feel, taste, smell or hear sins pardoned, he might sit as judge in the case, God forbid I should. Yours truly, J. M. LEMMON, SR.

Pocahontas, Ark.

The foregoing article is published by the special request of our aged brother under the caption given it. It is not my purpose to consume space in following Bro. Lemmons through the intricate mazes of his suppositional logic. This kind of reasoning is the last resort of all those who would find some pretext for bending the word of God to suit their partisan ideas; Christians should not use it.

Bro. L. attempts to prove by his supposed cases. 1. That a man may believe a lie and yet go on and obey the very things contradicted by that lie. 2. That man's believing a lie, that contradicts the word of God, will not hinder or prevent God from bestowing the promised blessing. These are the only two points in his entire article and are disproved by the very cases cited by him.

No such cases can be found either in the Bible or out of it, as a man believing a lie and yet going and doing the very things contradicted by the lie. Just as well suppose that an infidel who denies that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, yet goes on and obeys all that Jesus commands. "He that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of His Son."—1 John 5:10. "Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ."—1 John 2:22. Men will act as they believe; if they believe a lie, they will act in accordance with the lie, and as the lie contradicts the word of God, their actions will be contrary to God's word.

But again, under this point he supposes a "misguided sinner" who believes all his false teachers tell him, and yet goes on and is baptized, etc. Just how a misguided sinner, who believes all the misdirections given him, can yet go on and do just what the Lord requires him to do, is a mystery that cannot be made clear even by Bro. Lemmon's "suppositions."

What does God say about teachers that teach lies? "Behold I am against them that prophecy false dreams, saith the Lord, and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies and by their lightness; yet I sent them not, nor commanded them; therefore they shall not profit this people at all, saith the Lord."—Jer. 23:31. The principles of God's government have never changed. False teachers are as much an abomination in His sight now as then. See 2 Peter 2:1-2. If teachers contradict God's word, change it, or alter it, they are classed as liars, Job 30:6; and what they teach as lies. For they change the truth of God into a lie, (Rom. 1:25), and by their lightness and deceitful handling of the word of God lead people astray. "No lie is of the truth."—1 John 2:21; neither will those who love or make a lie be blessed in eternity, unless they repent.—Rev. 22:15.

If a poor "mis-guided sinner" believe the lies thus taught by false teachers his faith will hinder God from bestowing the blessing. First, because his faith makes God a liar.—1 John 5:10. Second, because God's blessings are conditioned upon obedience to HIM, not upon obedience to something that contradicts His will. Man cannot walk in two opposite directions at one and the same time; he cannot believe the truth and the lie that contradicts that truth at the same time. To convince you that God has made a belief of his word absolutely necessary as a condition of being blessed, please read the 14th chapter of Numbers. In that case the children of Israel believed "the evil report" brought up by the spies and their faith in this lie, caused God to turn them back to wander in the wilderness for forty years, and thus withhold the promise made them.

Jesus also teaches that men make void the word of God by their traditions.—Mark 7:13. These traditions taught and believed shut the people out of the kingdom of God.—Matt. 23:13. Jewish fables (suppositions) and commandments of men turn people away from the truth.—Titus 2:14. These things being true then, are true now. Men and women are turned away from the Lord by the traditions and commandments of men, and I would say in the language of Moses: "Because ye are turned away from the Lord, God will not be with you."—Num. 14:43.

Paul himself though zealous toward God was so blinded by faith in tradition as to think it right to persecute the children of God.—Acts 26:9-10. He was mis-guided, but honest and conscientious: thought he was obeying God. As soon as he learned better; that is, as soon as his faith changed; his actions changed; he obeyed the gospel, and just so your mis-guided sinner should do. If honest, he will obey the right directions as soon as he learns them.

If there is any other principle involved in your supposed cases I cannot see it, and I sincerely hope that you will remember the facts in the cases referred to by you.

Eve was deceived by a perversion of God's word; her faith in that lie caused her to act: so the people are now deceived by the perversions of the gospel and their faith in these perversions leads them into disobedience. The prop-et of Judah believed a lie told him by the prophet; he acted in accordance with his faith and by so doing "rejected the word of the Lord" and was justly punished.

Naaman, though angry at first, when reasoned with by his servants went to the place he was commanded to go, and did just as he was commanded. This was obedience. Now if a sinner believe the false teachers, that baptism is not the place where God will pardon sins; he is unwilling to go to baptism, as Naaman was, hence unwilling to receive the promise when and where God has promised to give it. His unwillingness is on account of his faith in a lie; now go to him, reason with him and convince him of the truth that "baptism is for the remission of sins" and he becomes anxious to obey God. Why? He believes God rather than man, his faith is changed and his works will correspond.

"Let us walk by the same rule," my brother; and this rule is plainly written. Study to please God by a fearless and faithful adherence to that which is written and do not seek to hide the beauty, strength and simplicity of the gospel of Christ by "suppositions."

J. W. JACKSON.

THE GIFT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

As there is a great deal said and written in the papers of our brotherhood on this subject, I desire to say a few things through the F. F. and ask the readers to gather up all that has been written together with mine; and compare them and try them by the divine standard and accept all the truths you may find herein. I propose to let the Bible interpret itself on this subject as on all other subjects pertaining to the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ.

The apostle Peter told his penitent inquirers on the day of Pentecost to "repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus for the remission of sins and receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."—Acts 2:38.

Now, in order that I may be understood, I affirm that the Holy Spirit and gift are two different things; the Holy Spirit was a divine teacher, 1 Cor. 2:13, and a divine being, John 16:7. Then as the Holy Spirit is a teacher, a divine being, he had power to bestow his gifts on whom and when and where he pleased.

The apostle Paul says: "These gifts are spiritual gifts."—1 Cor. 12:1. Commencing at the 4th verse he says: "There are diversities of gifts but the same spirit; and there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord; and there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit. To another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gift of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another the discerning of Spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues; but all these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will."

We see here from divine testimony that the gifts and the Holy Spirit are different. As the Holy Spirit is a divine Being, he imparts his gifts severally as he wills and these gifts were given in a measure. Paul says, "unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the grace of God."—Eph. 4:7. He is talking to the brethren in Christ that had been baptized into Christ for the remission of sins; in order that they might receive the gift of the Holy Spirit.

Notice if you please, He used the word "us" including the brethren with himself, who had received the measure of the gift of Christ. As the gifts were different we wish to keep up a distinction between the gifts given to the apostles, the ambassadors of Christ, and the gifts given to the church, the body of Christ. The apostles received extraordinary gifts to enable them to confirm the great salvation that began to be spoken by the Lord, Heb. 2:4. The apostles measure of the gift gave them power to impart gifts by the laying on of hands, Acts 19:6, and 8:19. Philip having received his measure of the gift of the Spirit went down to the city of Samaria and "preached Christ unto them, and the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did, and when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women."

"And when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God they sent unto them Peter and John," that by the laying on of their hands the measure of the gift of the Holy Spirit should be given them, Acts 8:19. I use the word, measure, here because it is a Bible term, John 3:34. God did not give the Spirit by measure unto his Son, but to the church he gave it by measure, Eph. 4:7. The apostles here in the city of Samaria manifested their extraordinary gift by the laying on of hands. They imparted the measure of the gift of the Holy Spirit to the people Philip had baptized, which measure Philip did not possess. The apostles only had received this measure in the gift of the Holy Spirit, which gift Simon thought he could purchase with money; Peter reproved him and informed him that he had no part nor lot in this matter.

The next important question to be settled is, for what were these different gifts given to the church? To the law and the testimony. Please turn with me to Eph. 4:8,

"Wherefore he saith when he ascended up on high he led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men." Notice the words gifts in the plural, Paul calls them diversities of gifts. 1 Cor. 12: 4. "Now that He ascended what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth? He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens that He might fill all things."

"And He gave some to be apostles and some prophets; and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the edifying of the body of Christ, till we all come in the unity of the faith; and of the kingdom of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."—Eph. 4: 9-18. These gifts of the Holy Spirit were given after Jesus ascended to his Father on high. He then sent the Holy Spirit from his Father's throne as a divine teacher and when he came he set in the church, first, apostles; secondly, prophets; thirdly, teachers; after that, miracles, the gifts of healing, helps, governments, diversities of tongues."—1 Cor. 12: 28. The Holy Spirit gave these gifts for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry; for the edifying of the body of Christ, the church, and these gifts were to remain in the church until the full measure of the stature of Christ, was given in its completeness. Which stature is the gospel, the new dispensation, a revelation from God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith.

These gifts of tongues and miracles were given after the apostles were set in the church, 1 Cor. 12: 28. These signs and new tongues were to follow them that believed, and to confirm the word, the gospel of the new dispensation, Mark 16: 17-18-19-20. These gifts began to be given to the church on the day of Pentecost when the Holy Spirit came as a divine teacher. The Holy Spirit began to impart his gifts to the church, through the apostles; hence the Holy Spirit through Peter told his penitent inquirers to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and receive the gift of the Holy Spirit, meant what he said. If the reader will read Luke's history of the church through the Acts of the apostles and Paul in the city of Corinth; he will find that both Jews and Gentiles received the gift of new tongues, Acts 10: 44, and :11-17.

The reader will please compare these results with Mark 16: 19. Then turn to 1 Cor. 12: 29-30. We find in the city of Corinth that the Gentiles were "enriched in all utterance and all knowledge to confirm the testimony among them so they come behind in no gifts."—1 Cor. 1: 5-6-7.

The next question to be settled is, how long did these gifts remain in the Church? They remained until a revelation was completed by the Holy Spirit, or until the New Testament, the constitution of the Church of the living God, was given. Paul taught the brethren at Corinth to covet earnestly the best gifts and He would show unto them "a more excellent way."—1 Cor. 12: 30-31. It may seem strange to some, to think that a more excellent way could be than that of the gifts of the Holy Spirit.

Oh, that this religious age, especially my brotherhood, would appreciate the more excellent way. What is the more excellent way? It is "Faith, hope and charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."—1 Cor. 13: 8-13. "Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away. For we know in part and we prophesy in part. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away."—1 Cor. 13: 9-10.

Ancient church history says, these gifts remained in the church until about the fourth century, about the time the church began to suffer martyrdom for the more excellent way. The testimony of Jesus, the gospel, the last revelation from God was sealed with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. If the reader will read the history of the martyrs of the church in the third century, he cannot help but believe that the church did possess the gifts of the Holy Spirit. The saints of Jesus could have saved themselves from a martyr's death by saying one word: they sealed their testimony with their own blood.

There is one other thought, then I am done, for fear I make my piece too long. Some try to make it appear that the promise spoken of in Acts 2: 39, is the gift of the Holy Spirit, verse 38. Then Peter said unto them, "repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit, for the promise is unto you and your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." This promise is not the gift of the Holy Spirit. It is the grand promise God made to our father Abraham four hundred and thirty years before He gave the law of Moses; this is the promise God made to Abraham, "saying in thee and in thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed."—Gen. 22: 17-18. "God has remembered his holy covenant the mercy promised to our fathers, the oath which he swore to our father Abraham," Luke 1: 12. God has confirmed this promise with an oath, that by two immutable things in which it is impossible for God to lie, the promise might be to all the heirs. That promise is Christ, His Son, the gospel, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith. Thank the Lord that the promise has come to our nation and our day in living characters suited to the condition of all men, and if any man will enjoy that promise he must hear that gospel preached by Paul, Peter, James and John, must believe it with all his heart and must obey it from the heart that he may be made free from sin. This cannot be the gift of the Holy Spirit, for there is no class of men that claim to possess these gifts but the "latter day saints," and we know they lie. May the Lord help us all to understand His word.

PERSONAL.

Through a private letter written to Bro. McGary and forwarded to me, I learn that Thos. G. Nance, recently of Bosque county, Texas, is now in Tennessee, and that he is so exceedingly mad against the FIRM FOUNDATION, that he fights it by defaming me.

He should remember that scripture which says:—"thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer among thy people." Lev. 19: 16. And also this:—"thou shalt not raise a false report."—Ex. 23: 1.—

Bro. Nance lived awhile in Hill county, Texas, which has been my home since 1860, and was in Hillsboro but a short time before he left for Tennessee. Why did he not prefer these charges here at home, where I was known and where I have lived and labored for several years? I have preached for several years in Hill and adjoining counties, Johnson, McLellan and Limestone; and my manner of life during all this time is well known to both saint and sinner and even to Thos. G. Nance, if he will testify, that I have lived strictly, a Christian.—

But the attack upon me is made in order to injure the paper. Being incompetent to meet the arguments or positions taught by the F. F., he enviously and insidiously seeks to besmirch the character of those who are associated with it. Such conduct partakes of the littleness and contemptible meanness of the political demagogue rather than of that spirit that loves the truth.

As to myself, I do not profess to be perfection. In past years I have done many things wrong, committed some grave errors, and sometimes fallen into folly; but I was never a sneak or a coward.

No one has suffered more on account of errors committed than myself; as David of old said, "my sin is ever before me" and sometimes when I am comforted by the consoling promise of God "that your sins and your iniquities shall be remembered no more" some just man will resurrect some misdeed of years gone by, freshen it up a little, and bring it to my remembrance.— Truly we are a peculiar people; peculiar in teaching that God remembers not our sins, and very peculiar in showing that man does.— But it is not my purpose to parade the deeds of my life either good or bad before the readers of the F. F. it is sufficient for me to state just now that I have testimonials of my standing in the church and take pleasure in saying that any one anxious to know how I stand in Hill county where I have lived for several years, will be placed in correspondence with some ten or twelve congregations, if they will write to me for their addresses.

J. W. JACKSON.

The first and only time I ever met Bro. Thos. Nance, he was in company with Bro. J. W. Jackson. This was at the Bryan "State meeting" nearly four years ago. Bro. Nance then manifested great friendship and admiration for Bro. Jackson. During the several days we were there, Bro. Jackson and Bro. Nance were together much of the time. I was then expecting to commence the publication of the F. F. Seeing that Bro. Nance seemed so well acquainted with Bro. Jackson, I talked with him some, with the special purpose of learning what I could about Bro. Jackson's character and qualifications, because I then had an idea of trying to enlist Bro. Jackson in my contemplated work. I did not, that I remember, tell Bro. Nance of this. But the impression made on me by Bro. Nance was that Bro. Jackson was eminently qualified and worthy. If Bro. Nance then knew the things he has since told in Tennessee on Bro. Jackson, they did not seem to make any unfavorable impression on him. If he did not then know of them, but has since learned them, he has acted very badly indeed, it seems to me, in not, first going to Bro. Jackson with them. I would like to know whose christian character cannot be tarnished by going into their past eight or ten years. This plan the enemies of the FIRM FOUNDATION have fixed upon, to weaken its influence, is certainly most pusillanimous and contemptible in the sight of all true men, and awfully wicked in the sight of God.

The character of the man who is found in such low alleys of infamy for the purpose of defaming and crippling the influence of those he is afraid to meet in fair open controversy, would surely fare badly if some one should take his back-track and report all of his actions and ways. Pity on such miserable cowards and wicked wretches. I would ask God's forgiveness for their pernicious work, but I can't truly say, "Lord, they not what they do;" for they do know they are insidiously and stealthily wrapping the slime of slander around the character of their brethren, to hinder some of God's truth they "close their eyes" against and hate.

THAT WASTE BASKET.

We are here in the office of the F. F., looking for the "waste basket," and behold they have none! We found a big wooden box with rejected articles, not because they are worthless, but some are refused because no names were signed. If you want your articles to appear, you should observe the rules: to write plainly and only on one side of the paper, and always sign your name somewhere, so they will know by whom it was written.

Bro. T. H. Gillespie is all right, Bro. J. W. Jackson is "clothed and in his right mind." Love to all.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, JUNE 1, 1888.

From this time on send all money for the FIRM FOUNDATION, or any of our pamphlets, to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Texas. Make all money orders payable to A. McGary. Please state whether you are a new subscriber or an old one. Write plainly, and give the county, where your post office is not a large town. Don't forget this in sending orders. MCGARY & HANBROUGH.

A. MCGARY'S address is Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Several brethren have written us that they have sent in money to Austin for the F. F., who complain that they have received no receipt for the amounts. They need have no fears, for all money received there will be receipted for; but when our readers are told so pointedly and plainly to send money to me, at Fort McKavett, Texas, they ought to comply with instructions, as we of the F. F. certainly have a right to say where we prefer all amounts sent. Every issue since the change, contains instructions on the front and 4th pages of the paper, and in "Publisher's Column," telling our readers where to send all subscription money for the paper and for our pamphlets. There is no need of any confusion whatever in this matter. So please follow instructions. A. MCG.

HOW WE MAY HAVE A WEEKLY IMMEDIATELY.

Letters are pouring in upon us urging us to use our utmost endeavors to make the F. F. a weekly, immediately. Some of these brethren write that, they can get ten times as many subscribers for the paper as they now do, when it is made a weekly. To make this change we will have to invest about $1,500 at the very outset, and we are not willing to go in debt to do it—we have no fears about the paper paying its own way afterwards. But now, where is this $1,500 to come from?—times are very hard throughout the whole country.

We received a letter from a responsible brother who said, "I can get you one hundred new subscribers in my county to be paid in the fall." But we are already carrying about as many on time as we can afford; for we never refuse to send it to any brother or sister who writes us that they want it and will pay for it when they get the money; or when they say they are too poor to pay for it—as some write.

We are anxious to meet this demand for a weekly because we, too, believe it would add momentum to the wheels of Zion, and help on the gospel of Christ, and rebound to the glory of God in up-building the kingdom of His Son and hedging off the doctrines and traditions of men which are so stealthily "rendering the commandments of God of none effect."

Some time ago, when it was rumored that the F. F. was about to collapse, several brethren, in and out of Texas, wrote us to let them know if we needed any money to run the paper—one of these brethren has written us three letters telling us that he had money to help the paper when it was needed—but we have never called on them for a dollar, for we have been able to go ahead without it—we thank them for their good intentions all the same as if we had used their money.

Now here is our plan to make the F. F. a weekly: Let every one who thinks that the paper is doing a good work, and who feels like helping it on in that good work, send to us, to Fort McKavett, Texas, such amounts as they may feel disposed to employ in the work, and we will fix it so that they can help on this work without any expense except a little trouble to themselves. This is the way we will fix that: For every one who will send us $10 in this way, we will give credit on our subscription list for eleven new subscribers; and he or she can hunt up the subscribers while we are pushing on the work of the weekly, and as they procure subscribers they will reserve the money to the amount they have sent us—the extra dollar will pay for the money orders, stamps, etc. For $15 we will enter a credit for seventeen subscribers; for $20 twenty-two full and one six month's subscriber; for $25, twenty-eight subscribers; and so on in the same ratio. Or for $5, five full and one six month's subscriber.

Now, brothers and sisters, here is your chance to help us much in this work, if you have the money to spare—and we do not ask you to send us anything in this way unless you can spare it. We will publish a list of all receipts on this offer so that you may see how we are getting along. If we should fail to raise the requisite amount to begin the weekly, we will let the $5 amounts have credit for six subscribers to the semi-monthly; the $10 amounts, twelve; the $15, eighteen; the $20, twenty-five; the $25, thirty subscribers, and so on in the same ratio; but we do not expect to fail to raise the amount necessary for the weekly; for we know that the F. F. has many friends who are friends indeed; and if they have the cash to spare we are satisfied they will help in this work, as they will get the money back as they get subscribers.

In last issue, the reader will find some remarks from us about the change, that will give some idea of the kind of a paper the weekly will be. Now, brethren, we leave this matter with you as co-workers in the spread of the only strictly sound paper we know. A. MCG.

FROM BRO. CASTLEMAN.

Dear Brethren:

The "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family" is to hand, and I have read it twice. I want to say, that while it exposes the inconsistency of some of our brethren who are apologists for the Baptists, it is marred with extreme thoughts.

Any one who wilfully neglects or refuses to obey the Lord in the way he has appointed, cannot be a Christian. All such need conversion. It seems that Job willfully refused to obey the gospel, therefore the preacher was wrong in giving such an obituary. He was wrong in receiving Zeke on that baptism after he had joined the Baptists to comply with the whim that it was the safe side, which the preacher's teaching would naturally lead him to do. He was wrong in telling aunt Hannah that if she lived a consistent Baptist, she would be saved, after she had heard that it was wrong to wear fictitious names and hold to the bench method. Jesus said: "If I had not spoken unto them they had not had sin, but now they have no cloak for their sin."—John 15: 22.

There is a vast difference between a man making a mistake and one going against light and knowledge. A man who goes a certain wrong way knowingly, merely to be on the side recognized as safe, is not right at heart, and the man who teaches they are, is a blind guide. But for all that, a man may read the Bible, understand it, and obey it, at the hands of a Baptist, or any one else, and it is valid. If not, why not? I have no idea that the number is large who do that, but one in a thousand would let us out from rejecting any who say they have obeyed, to believe with the heart unto righteousness, Rom. 10: 10; repentance unto life, Acts 11: 18; confession unto salvation, Rom. 10: 10; and unto baptism Rom. 6: 4, Gal. 3: 27, are necessarily pardoned and he who refused to obey is not pardoned so far as we know; but there is a world of difference between doing this wrong thing intentionally and accidentally. And when we consider that they can do right at the hands of any one, we have no plea for stringency without making ourselves judges.

There are three positions occupied by our brethren. This pastor you spoke of is in one extreme, and so is the Messenger, while the F. F. occupies the other. The middle ground is the true position, I think.

We should not say that, all who are from the Baptists should be baptized, nor should we say that none should. But he who has been baptized like the Jacksons should be, while some who are baptized right, should not. People are baptized into Christ, not into a denomination, nor even into a congregation of Christians, and while they may, perchance, be baptized into Christ and regarded in a denomination or in a congregation, it is possible for them to have a more correct idea than this. If they make a mistake and entertain some wrong notions about what they are joining, they may lop off these notions.

It is not necessary to go back and be baptized every time we find we have made a mistake in something; if so we had better wait till just before we die, like some of the ancients did.

I am satisfied that the two extremes in this matter are doing harm. We should not say that none are right; we should not say all who are immersed are right. Either of these constitutes an extreme and is wrong. Teach the truth and let the people say whether they understood it or not; to defend a baptism without a confession is equally pernicious. Hope you will let your readers see this middle ground, for the sake of truth. In hope. J. L. CASTLEMAN.

There is very little in Bro. Castleman's article that I can object to though I try ever so hard. He imagines that we stand way off to one side on "extreme grounds," while he is on the sound, "middle ground." I don't like the expression, "middle ground," it generally sounds like a man astride the fence, thumping a splinter on the top rail; but it does not appear quite that bad with Bro. C., for he defines his "middle ground," and if I have not misunderstood him it is right where we stand. Where did he ever see anything from us repudiating a baptism because it was done by a Baptist, or any one else? I deny that he ever has.

So the only trouble with the brother is, that he has set a "straw man" off on this "extreme ground," while he has stood in the "middle" and popped away at him.

Where did he ever find us teaching that people should "go back and be baptized every time they make a mistake?" Will he point it out to us? The truth is, if I can understand Bro. C's article, there is about as much difference between his "middle ground" and the position of the F. F. on this question, as there is between tweedledee and tweedledum. I must express my surprise at him after reading the F. F. as long as he has for not seeing this. Now the only chance I see for him to make the positions different is, for him to contend that the statement which the Baptists require as a confession, is "the good confession"—surely he will not do this when that statement virtually denies the commission of Christ and the whole gospel plan.

But Bro. C. talks about those who are in error who have had no chance to know the truth. He wants to modify the gospel, it seems, for them. Now while we are fixing up an excuse for them, we can present the truth to them and save the excuse. I don't pretend to know what the Lord will do with those who never hear the truth.

TALKS WITH THE SISTERS.

Dear Sisters:

Lately I have had some very encouraging private letters from sisters, one particularly sweet and affectionate. One writes: "We can not get along without the F. F. I read with much pleasure all the sisters' letters and think I have profited by them." Another: "Beloved sister and old school-mate, accept my heart-felt thanks for the good your last letter in the F. F. has done me this morning, for I was tired in body and sick at heart. I cannot begin to tell you how much comfort your 'Talks' always give me. You always did say the right thing in the right place, and if you can take time from your many cares to write so often, I certainly can neglect some of the many things I have to do this morning and write you a few words of cheer." Pardon this bit of egotism, dear sisters, for such words though sweet, but serve to remind me of my unworthiness of such praise and my failure to live fully up to my preaching. The latter sister I know has very heavy cares and I think if she can take time to write a private letter, others less burdened and thoroughly competent, might write a few words for publication now and then. Are such not burying their talents in not doing so?

Sisters frequently write, "neglect your work to write regularly for the paper." Well, I must say that I am often reminded of Mrs. Jellyby in Charles Dickens' Bleak House. I have reduced my work to a minimum in order to gain time to write. I cooked through the winter when food gave out, and I wash when clean clothing gives out, only scrub when health demands it. I indulge myself and children in few furbelows, tucks and flounces; make no crazy quilts and tidies; in fact, do no fancy work, yet every moment is filled with care, and often I find myself looking forward to that "rest that remaineth unto the people of God."

I take this means of acknowledging the receipt of these kind letters, which I would enjoy answering privately, had I the time. Every sister says, "neglect me for the F. F.," which I am forced to do.

Now for my main talk, which I have long intended should be on "Self-control;" the lack of it being so noticeable in myself and almost every one else with whom I come in contact. Daily the newspapers are filled with details of awful crimes, which result from a lack of this all-important principle. I shall not attempt a metaphysical diagnosis of self-control, but a very good definition of it is "self-culture," so some writer says, which is true. For if we cultivate our hearts and remove all noxious weeds of selfishness, impatience, etc., we will soon become masters of our wills.

I shall simply give instances from life to show the evil resulting from a lack of self-control. For instance, a man calls another a liar. Does the offended man stop to reason that the mere fact of a man calling him a liar does not make him one? No, but jerks out a pistol or knife and the result is, his soul stained with the blood of his fellow-man, for a fancied insult.

What would be more heart reading than the following? A father carelessly lays a twenty dollar greenback bill on a table and leaves the room. His three year-old boy picks it up and holds it in the blaze to see it burn as he knows naught of its value. The father returning just in time to see the last of it, in his anger, strikes the child felling it to the floor. As it falls, its temple strikes the andiron causing instant death. The mother, engaged in bathing a young babe in the adjoining room, witnesses the whole scene through the open door, and in her alarm leaves the baby in the tub and rushes to her boy. The babe is drowned, and the frantic father realizing the horror of his deed, reaches for his gun and blows his own brains out. Now in a calm moment he would have given his life for his child, but for a paltry sum, in a moment of uncontrolled anger, sacrifices three lives, leaving the wife a raving maniac.

Now, for some daily domestic scenes. I was once visiting the house of an intimate acquaintance. The neat housewife had brought her soap-barrel in, out of the rain and temporarily placed it in the kitchen. Her husband, in going into an unused room adjoining the kitchen, encountered the barrel. Did he quietly move it aside and pass on? Not a bit of it. He stopped, puffed up and delivered a lecture on cleanliness and orderliness; called his wife the filthiest woman in the country, when he knew every word was untrue; piled on exasperating words till wrath was stirred—why? Simply because he had never learned self-control. Another from the same family: The pains-taking wife, while preparing breakfast, lets the fish scorch. The husband spies it the first thing as he enters the room. Does he politely overlook it, as he would at a friend's table, or even at a boarding house? Let's listen! "I never saw such a woman in my life! You never did fry fish without ruining it. You just don't care, is what's the matter, just so you get out of the kitchen. I will fry fish next time." "Very well," says the wounded wife, "I will call on you," which she does in a few days. He bustles in, seizes the fork and watches closely for about three minutes, when he gets up a conversation on county politics, when lo! the fish is scorched! Does he beat his breast and abuse himself for his carelessness? Not at all! "Why a little burnt fish is nothing. See how easily you can remove the scorched part. Who cares for a little scorched fish?" "Why," says the wife, "when I did it, you seemed to care a great deal. You acted as if I had committed the unpardonable sin." At this he rubs his nose, strokes his moustache and is silent. Now why could he not have passed her fault by as he did his? First, because he does not love "his wife as he does himself;" second, because he had never controlled himself but allowed that unruly member full play.

Again, something goes wrong, a dish is broken in the kitchen, or a sewing machine needle in the house, or perhaps husband has found fault with us, when along comes an innocent, loving child with some little request or question that we would usually answer with a kiss, but now it is sent away with a sharp slap, its little heart aching with the injustice of the punishment. I once saw a three-year-old boy fall into a deep river. His mother caught him as he rose and as she lifted him out she administered a severe spanking, which was not only cruel but unreasonable.

Again, I know a man, (not a christian, however), who when his toddling babe fell almost into the fire, hurting its head severely on the andiron, caught it up and beat it cruelly for what it could not help. I have seen mothers who had foolishly over-worked themselves, whip their nursing babies who had partaken of their nervousness, because they could not go to sleep.

Now, these are life-pictures and will give you some idea of the evil results of the lack of this principle. We should cultivate it ourselves and enforce it on our little ones. It will be comparatively easy for them to gain this victory now, and will make them so much nobler men and women. How many let their children from one to five years old dance and kick and scream for what they want, or even fight their parents till they yield! How many let a child who has a bad temper, indulge in fearful outbursts, striking with dangerous weapons any who may oppose them; then excuse him by saying: "Oh, when he gets mad, you must get out of his way. We can't do anything with him, he has such a temper." Just such tempers unrestrained are what fills prisons and gallows.

Let us think prayerfully of this, sisters. First control ourselves, for no child can have proper respect for parents who are constantly flying to pieces and doing unreasonable and unjust things. When we can master ourselves then we can help our children to master their wills. I know a mother who, when her child was on the verge of convulsions, prevented them by her calm demeanor and firm "My son, control yourself." I tell you, you can not be a true christian without it. It is the grand lesson taught by our Savior when he said: "If a man smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." It is this that keeps back the oath that has so long soiled the lips of the wicked man now turned from his sins. It is this that makes a patient wife and mother, a revered husband and father. In fact, it is the grand foundation-stone of christian character. "Be ye angry and sin not."

Let us then begin to-day to exercise this principle in our homes. When our little helpless children come to us in vexatious moments let us force ourselves to speak to them and send them away lovingly and gently. It is much easier to do than you imagine. I know from experience. It is so easy to fall into a peevish, fretful habit, from which our children are the greatest sufferers. Our husbands can defend themselves, but children are not allowed to remonstrate, but must bear in silence. When your little child comes to you in pain from a fall, do not give it a knock or a "good for you," when a pitying kiss would send it away happy.

Let us begin even at this late day to rule our spirits, bridle our tongue, be just, courteous, kindly affectioned one to another "that we may please Him who hath called us to glory and virtue." SARAI.

P. S.—I would be glad if the sisters would suggest subjects for me to write on. Will not the sisters all try to send up some new subscribers to the F. F. I hope, my dear sisters, you will all turn out and see what you can do for this best of papers. Send your clubs to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Texas, and let's swell its list till it can be published weekly. Any sister can get some subscribers if she will try; and, if I am competent to judge, the F. F. is the only truly sound paper that I read, and I read many others that claim to be sound. So think what a good work we are doing, sisters, when we use our endeavors to extend the circulation of the F. F. S.

OUR PAMPHLETS.

"The Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," is a pamphlet that lays wide open the inconsistency of receiving Baptists and other immersed sectarians without "immersing in the name of the Lord Jesus." It is offered by us at only 10 cents per copy, or three for 25 cents. It ought to be widely circulated among those who have not yet seen the unsoundness of the practice referred to.

The "Sequel to the Religious Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," by J. W. Jackson, is a pamphlet about the size of the other, and is offered at the same price. It gives an account of how "Zeke Jackson" won his wife, first converting her from Methodism. In her conversion "Zeke" met the Methodist "Grub-Ax" and exposed its sophistry. This is a splendid pamphlet, especially for circulation where the "Grub-Ax" has been circulated.

THE WEEKLY AGAIN.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have been patiently, anxiously prayerfully waiting for some brother to rise up with some plan or suggestion that would serve to change the F. F. from a semi-monthly to a weekly paper, but alas! it seems that we are to wait in vain, as all the calls upon the brotherhood for this purpose have died away without an echo.

Brethren, I am not willing for this to go on any longer without raising my feeble voice in that direction, and with your permission I would make an appeal to all the true brethren through the F. F., provided you think it will avail anything.

Brethren, what are we waiting for? Is it because we do not want the F. F. to become a weekly? No, for we all are more than anxious that it should be so. Is it because the F. F. is not founded upon the word of God, and aims to declare the whole counsel of God? No; because we believe that it has stood upon the word of God without addition or subtraction through all the fiery trials it has had to pass, and it is the only paper that has taken the broad platform against all worldly powers and innovations, and confirmed its teachings, by its practice. For instance it does not oppose church festivals, jug-breakings, and such revellings for raising means for the support of the gospel, and then soil its sheet with all manner of worldly advertisements to obtain means for the same purpose, and thus prove its inconsistency.

Again, it does not publish any article from any correspondent with an uncertain, or Ashdodic language in it, without a little piece of correction under it. Hence it does not require one so well versed in the Scriptures, to separate the spurious from the genuine.

Well then, what is the matter? What are we waiting for? Is it not for the popular current which is so strongly opposing its position, (the F. F.), to subside, in order that we may double up our numbers and thus obtain the paper for one dollar? Well, yes; this seems to be the difficulty, as there has been no other understanding than that it should be accomplished by raising new subscribers at the price, hence the waiting.

Now, brethren, is not this the true condition in which we are standing? Then let us arouse to the right sense of our duty and view this responsibility in its proper light, let us bear in mind the adverse circumstances under which Bro. McGary had to start the paper and the fortitude and courage it required to withstand all the opposition, and let us remember the Savior's teachings, (and it is prophecy, too,) "Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."—Matt. 7: 14. So it will be the few all the while, that will stay close to the faithful word, in comparison to the many that will not.

Again: "Hearken my beloved brethren, has not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath every subscriber to the semi-monthly subscribe one dollar each to make it a weekly, and every one take an interest, and see that their neighborhood is well solicited to subscribe, at the same time take all new subscribers they can; let all pay that are able, and those that are not let them say when they will any time before the 1st of October next; and let a report be made by each one that have taken an interest in this matter of their success, giving names of subscribers and amount collected. Said report to be made to the F. F., and sent in with the amount, say within thirty days after the publication of this.

Surely we ought to get enough subscribed and a sufficient amount paid in at present to warrant the editors to proceed at once to change the paper to a weekly. If not, let the editors report to us through the paper, and let us rally again, all that are able to, and give another dollar each, and so on until we accomplish our design.

Brethren, I am in a strain trying to pay for a home, and until I get it paid for, I am as poor as any one that can give anything, and I will be one to respond to the call ten times, if necessary, and think it the cheapest way I could invest to preach the gospel, and contend earnestly for the truth as it is in Christ; and oh, brethren, I appeal to you for no other cause than the cause of Christ, and in no other name than the name of Christ, and I pray for none other than the will of the Lord.

May God bless you all, brethren, and enable you to rise and say you will do all in your power to make the FIRM FOUNDATION a weekly, if the Lord wills. Yours in Christ, in truth and in spirit.

A. G. AMENT.

P. S.—Now, brethren, if you think my article worth publishing, there are two things which, if you promise the brethren, will, I think, serve to strengthen my effort:

First, if we fail to secure enough subscribers to make the paper a weekly, you assure them that all money sent you for that purpose shall be subject respectively to that the cause of some writing to know the permanency of the paper. Now while this ought not to make any difference, I verily believe there are hundreds of brethren that will succumb if the above prediction comes true; besides it is evident that it would be detrimental to the general cause of the paper to move it from Austin, and greatly to its interest if Bro. McGary could move back and be with it.

With constant prayer for the success of the F. F., I am yours in Christ.

A. G. AMENT.

Eagle Springs, Texas.

We publish Bro. Ament's idea about changing the F. F. to a weekly, also our own, which was sent forward for publication before his letter was received. Perhaps all that can be done upon both of our plans, may be sufficient to enable us to make the change immediately. We promise the brethren the paper for $1.00 per year whenever we obtain a sufficient list to do so without loss.

We doubt not that many will follow the suggestions of Bro. Ament and double their subscriptions. The weekly is badly needed, we think. We want our brothers and sisters to consider this "our work" as servants of Christ to contend for the faith He "once delivered to the saints." Let all friends to this work manifest half of the interest Bro. Ament does and success is certain.

PROGRESSION'S BEST FEEDER.

If I should say anything under this caption too strong for the editors of the F. F. they will have the good sense to consign it all to the waste basket, or by comment make the responsibility rest where it belongs. The undersigned is responsible for the sentiments expressed. This is an age of wire-working, and policy is the watch-word of those who pull the wires. Modern progression is but the slight successive variations tending to a new order of things. A step in religious progression must be taken with the greatest men on both sides; it must be that the difference is owing to education. People are educated for the church before they become members of it, and things in which they are educated determine the character of the material of which the church is composed, whether it will be a progressive church or not. If a number of individuals enter the church after having been educated under the influence of an institution having societies, fairs, and festivals, it is difficult to convince them of the evil of the human additions. The Sunday School is regarded by many as the church in embryo, but it is an embryo of human origin. The Sunday School of to-day is the church of to-morrow. As the Sunday School is educated to day, so is the conscience of the church to-morrow. The Sunday School is an invention of man. Had man the right to make this invention? If he had not the right, the deed was wrong, and to perpetuate it, is to be partaker of the evil deeds of the past. But I am not allowed to assume that man had not the right to make this invention. If he had the right to make the invention, he had the right to add to it societies, fairs and festivals, because man has the right to add to his own invention whatever in his judgment will improve it. One of three things must be done:

1. Deny that man has the right to invent the thing.
2. Deny him the right to add improvements to it.
3. Admit that it is right to educate the rising generation for church membership under the influence of societies, fairs and festivals.

But it is claimed that there can be no wrong in the Sunday School. It is one of those slight variations in addition to God's appointments. Must we be so charitable as to admit this one variation and then be so uncharitable as not to admit one more, two three, or a dozen more? The Sunday School is one step beyond God's appointments. May I take it without fear of that momentum that only loses matters of necessity, and when they leave this "nursery of the church" to take a stand in the church, if you think to convince them that State machinery is not a necessity, and all wrong, you had better gather up your effects and move to the far south where the climate is suitable to the growth of the evergreen.

I am informed that we are commanded to bring up our children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Yes, so said an apostle but he did not authorize the organization of a Sunday School through which this command might be obeyed. I have never organized a Sunday School, and never belonged to one, but if I should be lost for these reasons, I shall find myself in company with all the apostles and primitive christians. But other churches have them and that part of the kingdom of Christ that belongs to the Baptist, and that part of it that belongs to the Methodist church, will outstrip us in educating the young, and we must do something to be up with the times. Yes, these churches have mourning-benches and altars full of straw, for the accommodation of those who choose to bow to their human inventions, and must we therefore invent something to supplant the revealed plan of salvation?

To sum up the whole matter, we observe, that the Sunday School is quite a nice thing to look upon, more likely to deceive, by opening up the ways for human addition, than perhaps, anything else that could have been invented. In and of itself as innocent and as good as if it were of apostolic birth or at least, so it appears. Its friends do not claim that it is divine. If you want an organ in the church, first put it into the Sunday School, and the Sunday School and the organ will grow together, so that you cannot separate them. If you want societies in the church put them in the Sunday School of to-day and you will find them in the church of to-morrow. Fairs and festivals in the nursery will make to themselves friends there, who will carry them over and advocate their claims in the church of the near future.

Where will we stop? After the Sunday School and before the fair—after the fair and before the festival, or after the festival and before the State machinery? Some will stop at one place and some at another. As for myself I will stop before the Sunday School; it is easy to stop on up grade. This means, to stop with the apostles and primitive christians.

W. P. RICHARDSON.

THE ADMINISTRATOR QUESTION

I think that the readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION have advanced far enough to appreciate an essay on the work of the administrator in baptizing, and its bearing on the validity of baptism.

I have regarded it, for some time, as the rock on which the F. F. was liable to "stump its toes;" for the idea that the administrator has nothing to do with the validity of baptism, when admitted to be true, strikes down the very issue upon which the F. F. has waged such a relentless warfare. The consequences following such admission would not stop in the bounds of reason, or common sense, for it would not only admit any and all to the work of an administrator, but would justify the presumption that we could dispense with him altogether: as the only use we would have for him would be to give us a ducking and we could do that ourselves and the validity would not be affected.

I think that the great mistake that is made is based upon the unscriptural idea, that the act of baptism is a work solely of the person being baptized; when our own observation proves the absurdity of such an idea. Paul says that we are "baptized into Christ" and that this baptism is a burial with Christ. Now how was Christ buried? Did he bury himself? He did not. Well, is the sinner required to do more in his burial than Christ did in His? But, some one says, the sinner obeys from the heart a form of doctrine. Yes, his mind being informed as to the blessings and promises that are to follow this act, his will is induced to yield himself into the mold of doctrine, having the assurance that he will be freed from sin and be made a child of God.

But somebody says: "Bro. Hawkins, you put man between God and the sinner." My friend, you are very much mistaken, I do not do it; and if you want the job of taking him away you can have it; but let me suggest that if you undertake it, you will find it a bigger job than, perhaps, you think for. Tell us how the sinner gets his faith? Why, by hearing, of course. Can he hear without a preacher? No; well there is another man to move. But, says one, the preacher don't put him into Christ. He believes, repents, confesses and obeys; that puts him into Christ. Well, let us see: Does he believe into Christ? No. Faith alone will not give him all the blessings and promises of God, for they are in Christ. Well, faith is an act of the sinner, is it not? Yes. Does repentance put him into Christ? No; that is also an act of the sinner's, is it not? Yes. Does confession put him into Christ? No, it is unto salvation; in the direction of Christ, but don't quite put him in Christ. It is also the sinner's act, is it not? Yes. Well does baptism put him into Christ? Yes, for we are baptized into Christ. Well does he perform the work himself? "But, hold up," shouts somebody, "there is that administrator, take him away." That is your job, my brother, you attend to him.

Now we have seen that the sinner does the believing, repenting, confessing and the—the—, well, that's the question. What did Christ tell his apostles to do? To teach and baptize. Just where we find them, standing between the sinner and God. But can't we get a little closer and ask how is this act performed? Paul says, that persons were buried and raised up, having faith in the power of God who raised Christ from the dead. But who raised the sinner from the watery grave? Shall we say? Of course everybody knows. Well did the same act that buried him and raised him up, put him into Christ? Don't all speak at once; and while we are waiting for an answer, we will go again to the commission.

We will quote from Bro. Edmore in the Leader, of April 3rd, '88, he refers to Meyer's Commentary and he puts it this way: "Go ye therefore and make disciples of all the nations by baptizing them." etc. Again, he says: "The gospel is preached, which includes the teaching of all that has been commanded, belief follows; this leads to repentance, and the belief and the repentance, instructed and guided by the teaching is followed by baptism, and so, a man is made a disciple." Now, if the above is correct, can a man be disciplined, or made a disciple, without baptizing him? But some one says, does the administrator have to believe that baptism is for the remission of sins? We don't suppose that the Lord ever contemplated that any one would ever want to baptize, who did not believe the gospel, hence He did not issue an edict prohibiting every unbeliever from baptizing. But, says one, did they baptize for the remission of sins or did the candidate simply have to believe that he ought to be baptized for the remission of sins?

This brings us to a very important question and when settled will, or should, forever settle the question of sect baptism. Well to the law and the testimony; and I would say that the only way we have of judging man is by his words and actions; and as we have found that man was commissioned to preach remission of sins and to baptize; we find remission connected with baptism by hearing them tell persons to "be baptized" for or in order to obtain this blessing. Now would it be reasonable to suppose that such instructions would have been given, if there was no one baptizing for the remission of sins? What do we understand Paul to mean, when he asked certain disciples, for what or into what they were baptized? The answer given was "unto John's baptism." Now the meaning of this expression "unto John's baptism" is, I think, clearly explained in Paul's reply; which was, that he knew that John baptized to believe on him who was to come after him. Now if there was no one else but John and his disciples baptizing for a specific purpose, and Paul knowing this too, why should he have propounded such a question? The fact that they had not heard of the Holy Spirit raised a suspicion in Paul's mind that they had not been baptized by the disciples of Christ; for when they (the disciples of Christ) baptized for remission they taught their converts to expect the gift of the Holy Spirit, while John and his disciples only taught those baptized by them, to believe on some one who was to come after. Again, we hear Paul saying to the Corinthians: "Thank God that I baptized none of you." Why? "Lest any should say that I had baptized in my own name." But, Paul, why should it matter if the administrator had nothing to do with the validity of their baptism? More anon.

M. F. HAWKINS.

We withheld further comment upon this subject until Bro. H. completes his side of the question.

J. W. J.

FROM BRO. I. C. STONE.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have been waiting for several days to recover from a severe attack of sciatic rheumatism so I could write to you. I wrote a short article some three weeks since for the F. F. thanking the kind friends who had invited me to visit them, provided I made a trip through the west; and also thanking the friends who, in response to a proposition made by Bro. Gillespie, that one thousand of the subscribers to the F. F. each send me one dollar to buy me a home, had sent in their part. Things are so shaped that I cannot visit the west this year, but I am as thankful to those who extended to me an invitation, as if I could. And also to the few who have sent me money, as if they were a thousand and their contributions were ten times what they are. I suppose the article that I wrote before did not reach the office, or else it reached the waste basket. I desire that my friends may know where I am, and that my address is changed from Catlin, Park county, Ind., to Bloomfield, Green county, Ind.

I am hardly able to write an article for the paper yet. If I continue to improve and have no relapse, I will try before long to give the readers some thoughts. There are a great many things that need correcting as well as a thousand things to be learned, which are closely connected with true Christianity. It seems that the great object now, of most preachers, is to please the people. To make Christianity as congenial to worldly tastes as possible. To enjoin nothing that will interfere with the frolic and fun of the giddy and the gay.

If there is a festival, picnic or party, the preacher must lead the way; and especially if he is a young man. The young people cannot devise schemes and plans enough to get up worldly amusements, the preachers and old people will throw their means together and establish a Bethany assembly, or a Eureka encampment, where ladies (?) and gentlemen (?) can promenade, boat ride and swim together. And after they have a week or two of revelry and fun, then the big editors and college presidents will return home and give glowing accounts of the hilarity and amusement they had.

What is to become of christianity if such people are pattern saints? If men and women floating in the water together, or the man holding up the woman while she floats, is an index to the christianity of to-day, what would be the index to the lasciviousness of the times? If D. L. Moody is to be held up as a type of the true Christian gentleman, what is the type of the false teacher? If a man can positively deny the teaching and authority of Christ and his apostles, and set up his own statements as a substitute, and yet be a good Christian, what must a man do to be an antichrist? If the man who claims such to be genuine Christians, and eulogizes them before his countrymen does not bid them Godspeed, what must he do to bid them Godspeed?

Brethren, we must earnestly contend for the faith. Many of our would-be leaders are giving away the truth almost every day. They are introducing novelties constantly. The idea seems to be, to do away with the notion or thought that the Bible furnishes us to all good works. They seem to want the people to believe that the modus operandi of our worship is not set forth in the Scriptures. That we have great latitude in which we may scheme and plan things according to our wisdom. (Which they call sanctified common sense.)

But I must close, and will try to finish these thoughts at some future time. Farewell, dear friends, and may God bless you all.

A REASONABLE REQUEST.

DEAR BRO. MCGARVEY:

I see a small tract written by Bro. M. C. Kurpees on "What Must I Do to Be Saved," and published by the sisters of the Campbell street congregation, Louisville, Ky., from which I conclude that the sisters of that congregation endorse the teaching of said tract, whether the brethren do or not: in which tract Bro. Kurpees claims to give the conditions upon which sinners are saved from their past sins, and enter into the body or church of Christ, and he has ignored, entirely, "the good confession." In fact, you would not know from that tract that the word, confess, confessed, or confession, was in the Bible.

Bro. Kurpees attended the Bible College at Lexington, Ky., for several years, and you were one of his teachers. I also attended the Bible College one year, and you were one of my teachers; and my object in writing this is, to ask you if he did right in failing to give "the good confession" as one of the conditions of salvation. I know that you need to teach us both that it was a prerequisite to baptism; and now was your teaching wrong, or is Bro. Kurpees wrong in ignoring it? Will you please answer the above in the Apostolic Guide for the benefit of your many readers?

Your brother in Christ,

E. HANBROUGH.

FROM A SISTER.

In the issue of the F. F. of May last, a subject is presented to us for serious thought, and for writing, it is this: "Some are angry because we publish articles on tobacco, dress etc."

Now, dear brethren and sisters who are angry, why do you not wish information on this subject as well as others? Why prefer darkness rather than light? Because your deeds are evil. You say, "you should not be censured, the money spent is yours."

Are we not told to exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching? Should we not teach the whole council of God?

When Paul's brethren had sinned

he talked to them, even weeping. Yes, in tears! What a token of love for his Master, for the truth, and for his brethren. Did he not tell them they were enemies to the cross of Christ, and that their end was destruction, expecting, perhaps, that he would become their enemy because he told them the truth?

You say, "The money spent is ours." Not so; we are God's and all that we possess. It is these very things that are consuming the Lord's money. Lust of the flesh, lust of the eye, and the pride of life. Listen, "These are not of the Father, but of the world, and the world and the lust thereof passeth away; but he that doeth the will of the Father abideth forever."

Let us exhort you to "abstain from fleshly lusts that war in our members, and present our bodies a living sacrifice to God." When bodies were presented for the yearly sacrificial altar, they were to be without spot and without blemish. Now in this our daily sacrifice, do we present our bodies unblemished? Ah, no. Besides the eating often of too much food, we use a beverage of coffee and tea which is admitted to be injurious to both body and mind. But worse than these is the filthy habit of using tobacco which also much affects the mind and body. With such bodies, where is the sacrifice? Let us strive to present healthful bodies with minds clear and intelligent.

Now, dear sisters, especially the young and unmarried, let us entreat you to lay aside your gold, your costly dresses, ribbons and lace. You say, let older and married sisters dress plainly. Remember Paul says, "The unmarried careth for the things of the Lord, how that they may please the Lord." He tells you not to love the world nor conform to it, and if you seek its friendship, you are an enemy to him. Can you please while you disobey Him? Let us provoke you to love and good works, and to a serving of the true and living God. "Out of the fulness of the heart the mouth speaketh." Love the Lord with all thy heart, then will your conversation be in heaven, "from whence we look for the Savior the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body."

Now, dear brethren and sisters, all of us, seeing we should flee these lusts, let us deny ourselves those things that are for the lust of the flesh, lust of the eye, and the pride of life, and on the first day of the week lay by us in store as the Lord prospers.

Then according to the Master's will we can make collections and send to the relief of poor saints, such as Bro. I. C. Stone, who cannot live as Paul did at Rome, in his own hired house.

We could assist Bro. McGary and Hanbrough in sending the gospel to a dying world. We that are partakers of spiritual things should minister of our carnal things.

"But we lust and have not, we have not because we ask not. We ask and receive not." Why? Because we ask amiss that we may consume it upon our lusts, i. e. spend it in our pleasures.

This article is now too long, but please let me say a little more to you who are not slow to anger, and have more respect for the world than for the truth.

Dear brethren and sisters, why nibble at the truth, if we have not the courage to contend for and speak the whole truth? Too much soft and smooth talking at the sacrifice of truth. Rather than respect the feelings of brethren and friends, let us fear to grieve the Spirit of God, whereby we are sealed till the day of redemption; but we are only too glad to have a chance to compromise the truth. Like Christians in Constantine's day, when the people cried, "Is not Mary the mother of Jesus great as our goddess Diana, and he great as our god? Let us be friends." Soon all were worshipping heathen gods together. So are we with the sects. They say, come, brother, or sister, we are willing to acknowledge you Christians and claim kin with you; let us be agreeable, not talk upon subjects wherein we differ. With joy we accept the offered friendship. You know how it ends.

Dear brothers and sisters, we should contend earnestly. "God is not mocked, whatsoever we sow, that shall we also reap." We are told "above all to take the shield of faith wherewith we shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." To be vigilant, because our adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour. When we endure temptation blessed are we, for when we are tried, we shall have a crown of glory.

FROM BRO. I. C. STONE.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

Having fairly recovered from my late attack of rheumatism, I have concluded to give the readers of your excellent paper another short article.

The principal thought will be: How ought we to demean ourselves toward the religious parties around us? Or, in other words, what should be our course of conduct toward them as religionists? There are but few subjects with which we deal, that are of more importance than this. We know that there is but one God and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all to be testified in due time, 1 Tim. 2: 5-6. We know further, that the one God has had but one way for men to worship and serve him in this world at the same time.

In each of the dispensations his worship and service has been fully and clearly defined: and under each division, all were required to worship in the same way. These are facts known to all Bible readers. It has always been true, that he who came to God "must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of those who diligently seek him." God has always made himself known to man; and given man all the means of that faith, without which it is impossible to please him, Heb. 11: 6.

The means, therefore, by which we are to seek God are clearly set forth in order that all those who

sincerely desire to be children of God may have full assurance of faith. Here one may inquire: Is it necessary that all should have full assurance of faith? Yes; Paul says, "let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith having our hearts (affections) purified from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water," (unmixed water).—Heb. 10: 22.

Now all the true disciples of Jesus have done this. And since God has but one way at a time, or at the same time, it follows that all who have not done these things are not disciples of Christ. "God is not the author of confusion; but of peace."—1 Cor. 14: 33. Where there is confusion then, of course, it must arise from a disregard to the authority of God. From the foregoing, which must be true, it seems only necessary to ascertain whether there is confusion among the various religious parties around us, to determine whether they are of God. That there are confusion, variance and strife is manifest to all. "God is not the author of confusion." The confusion arises from a neglect of God's authority: and those who neglect his authority are not loyal to him. They are not therefore subject to the law of God. And Paul says in his letter to the Romans, 8th chapter, that the carnal mind is not subject to the law of God. So those who are not subject to the law of God have carnal minds. They are not spiritually minded. Therefore they have not the Spirit of Christ, and, therefore are none of his own, Rom. 8: 9.

Paul also says, Rom. 6, that to be made free from sin, one must obey from the heart that form of doctrine which had been delivered. Then without regard to what that form may have been, it was but one form in the singular: and all had to obey it. Then it follows with the force of demonstration that they who have followed various forms of doctrine have not obeyed from the heart that form of which Paul speaks; no matter what that form was. Following the one form made them free from sin, and of necessity, the following of any other, or all others would be a failure. We know that if God be true, divisions are wrong. And we know further, that if God be true, he will never justify the wrong. Then if God will not justify the wrong, will he justify us, if we justify the wrong?

This is a serious question. If we acknowledge that to be right which we know to be wrong, we lie. If we acknowledge that any course which God has not ordained will save the people we repudiate God's ordinances and abandon our faith in them, or else we lie and deceive the people.

How then must we demean ourselves toward these denominations? Since we must needs live among them, treat them as neighbors and as citizens, with ordinary kindness and respect. We are commanded to do good unto all men, especially to the household of faith, Gal. 6: 10. But in doing good to all men we must not be partakers of other men's sins. In doing good to all men we are not to conceal the thief or favor the incendiary; but to do justice and judgment. If we would do good to the thief or the murderer, we would correct them. So if we wish to do good to him who errs, we would teach him the truth. This we can never do by acknowledging him right already. The veriest fool in all the community knows this, if he but thinks of it.

If I see a blind man walking alone in a path where there is a pit-fall and warn him not, and he falls and is crippled, I am culpable. So if I find my neighbor in error, it is my duty to tell him the truth and if he refuse to hear, I have done my duty. But if he will not hear and I turn to him and say, oh well, I know you are wrong; but you are honestly wrong and I think God will take the will for the deed. If there is any such thing as God's accepting the will for the deed, perhaps those who use the saying can tell me where it may be found. It is not honesty nor integrity that causes persons who know the truth to acknowledge the wrongs of others. It is a desire to please everybody so that all may say, "that is a fine, genial fellow. He is so affable and liberal." The truth is, all such persons lack two commendable qualities, viz: Moral courage and honesty. If otherwise, they lack common sense. I have attacked some of them with regard to their acknowledging the righteousness of the denominations and calling them brother. I have asked them such questions as the following: Do you believe that God has more than one way of saving people at the same time? Answer, no! Do you believe that one must obey the gospel to be saved? Yes. Do you believe the gospel requires all persons to believe the truth, repent of their sins, confess the Lord with the mouth and to be baptized into Jesus Christ? Yes. Well then what about those who have not done all these? If they are saved, they are saved outside of the requirements of the gospel of Christ. This they are compelled to acknowledge, and yet through cowardice when in the presence of the denominations they would bid them Godspeed. They would call them brother and sister, take a part in their worship, and ask the sectarian to assist in their worship, and thus acknowledge him to be a servant of God. If God will take the will for the deed he will certainly save all those zealous heathen who will sacrifice themselves to whatever they worship, aiming to do right, and attesting it by the sacrifice of themselves.

But those tender-hearted, pliable ones are they who are so exceedingly anxious to send missionaries to the poor heathen. If ignorance be an excuse in a Bible land, will it not be much more so in a heathen land? If persons who have God's revealed will, but remain ignorant of it, will be excused for their non-compliance with it, will not the heathen, who have it not? Will you answer, ye missionaries?

Such silly twaddle does away entirely with God's revealed will. It nullifies the whole of it and leaves every one to be led by his own imaginations. We are under strong obligations, both to God and man to wholly ignore every form of religion that has not the sanction of God's word. God will certainly condemn every man and every woman who gives aid and comfort to any false, or unauthorized form of religion. It is a denial of the authority of Jesus and directly aiding the powers of darkness. A helping to delude and deceive the people.

In a steady resistance of falsehood we do not have to be abusive and harsh. A soft answer turneth away wrath; but grievous words stir up anger, says Solomon. Let us be firm; but not offensive. Let us reason but not boast. Let us hold to the word of God which is living and powerful—sharper than any two-edged sword. Let us not barter it for the commandments of men. We have the truth in the book. Let us stay with it. It will not leave us if we do not leave it. We are invincible with the sword of the Spirit. Without it we are weak as other men.

Perhaps I have said enough for one sitting. If I keep my health now, you will hear from me again. We have a dreadful conflict just now, and it behooves every soldier to fight valiantly. Let our motto be victory or death. There are many traitors as well as foes. All should be treated alike. May God bless all the friends of the Lord and of his cause.

Yours for the whole truth,
I. C. STONE.

FROM A SISTER.

In the issue of the F. F. of May last, a subject is presented to us for serious thought, and for writing, it is this: "Some are angry because we publish articles on tobacco, dress etc."

Now, dear brethren and sisters who are angry, why do you not wish information on this subject as well as others? Why prefer darkness rather than light? Because your deeds are evil. You say, "you should not be censured, the money spent is yours."

FROM BRO. I. C. STONE.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Having fairly recovered from my late attack of rheumatism, I have concluded to give the readers of your excellent paper another short article.

The principal thought will be: How ought we to demean ourselves toward the religious parties around us? Or, in other words, what should be our course of conduct toward them as religionists? There are but few subjects with which we deal, that are of more importance than this. We know that there is but one God and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all to be testified in due time, 1 Tim. 2: 5-6. We know further, that the one God has had but one way for men to worship and serve him in this world at the same time.

In each of the dispensations his worship and service has been fully and clearly defined: and under each division, all were required to worship in the same way. These are facts known to all Bible readers. It has always been true, that he who came to God "must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of those who diligently seek him." God has always made himself known to man; and given man all the means of that faith, without which it is impossible to please him, Heb. 11: 6.

The means, therefore, by which we are to seek God are clearly set forth in order that all those who

sincerely desire to be children of God may have full assurance of faith. Here one may inquire: Is it necessary that all should have full assurance of faith? Yes; Paul says, "let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith having our hearts (affections) purified from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water," (unmixed water).—Heb. 10: 22.

Now all the true disciples of Jesus have done this. And since God has but one way at a time, or at the same time, it follows that all who have not done these things are not disciples of Christ. "God is not the author of confusion; but of peace."—1 Cor. 14: 33. Where there is confusion then, of course, it must arise from a disregard to the authority of God. From the foregoing, which must be true, it seems only necessary to ascertain whether there is confusion among the various religious parties around us, to determine whether they are of God. That there are confusion, variance and strife is manifest to all. "God is not the author of confusion." The confusion arises from a neglect of God's authority: and those who neglect his authority are not loyal to him. They are not therefore subject to the law of God. And Paul says in his letter to the Romans, 8th chapter, that the carnal mind is not subject to the law of God. So those who are not subject to the law of God have carnal minds. They are not spiritually minded. Therefore they have not the Spirit of Christ, and, therefore are none of his own, Rom. 8: 9.

Paul also says, Rom. 6, that to be made free from sin, one must obey from the heart that form of doctrine which had been delivered. Then without regard to what that form may have been, it was but one form in the singular: and all had to obey it. Then it follows with the force of demonstration that they who have followed various forms of doctrine have not obeyed from the heart that form of which Paul speaks; no matter what that form was. Following the one form made them free from sin, and of necessity, the following of any other, or all others would be a failure. We know that if God be true, divisions are wrong. And we know further, that if God be true, he will never justify the wrong. Then if God will not justify the wrong, will he justify us, if we justify the wrong?

This is a serious question. If we acknowledge that to be right which we know to be wrong, we lie. If we acknowledge that any course which God has not ordained will save the people we repudiate God's ordinances and abandon our faith in them, or else we lie and deceive the people.

How then must we demean ourselves toward these denominations? Since we must needs live among them, treat them as neighbors and as citizens, with ordinary kindness and respect. We are commanded to do good unto all men, especially to the household of faith, Gal. 6: 10. But in doing good to all men we must not be partakers of other men's sins. In doing good to all men we are not to conceal the thief or favor the incendiary; but to do justice and judgment. If we would do good to the thief or the murderer, we would correct them. So if we wish to do good to him who errs, we would teach him the truth. This we can never do by acknowledging him right already. The veriest fool in all the community knows this, if he but thinks of it.

If I see a blind man walking alone in a path where there is a pit-fall and warn him not, and he falls and is crippled, I am culpable. So if I find my neighbor in error, it is my duty to tell him the truth and if he refuse to hear, I have done my duty. But if he will not hear and I turn to him and say, oh well, I know you are wrong; but you are honestly wrong and I think God will take the will for the deed. If there is any such thing as God's accepting the will for the deed, perhaps those who use the saying can tell me where it may be found. It is not honesty nor integrity that causes persons who know the truth to acknowledge the wrongs of others. It is a desire to please everybody so that all may say, "that is a fine, genial fellow. He is so affable and liberal." The truth is, all such persons lack two commendable qualities, viz: Moral courage and honesty. If otherwise, they lack common sense. I have attacked some of them with regard to their acknowledging the righteousness of the denominations and calling them brother. I have asked them such questions as the following: Do you believe that God has more than one way of saving people at the same time? Answer, no! Do you believe that one must obey the gospel to be saved? Yes. Do you believe the gospel requires all persons to believe the truth, repent of their sins, confess the Lord with the mouth and to be baptized into Jesus Christ? Yes. Well then what about those who have not done all these? If they are saved, they are saved outside of the requirements of the gospel of Christ. This they are compelled to acknowledge, and yet through cowardice when in the presence of the denominations they would bid them Godspeed. They would call them brother and sister, take a part in their worship, and ask the sectarian to assist in their worship, and thus acknowledge him to be a servant of God. If God will take the will for the deed he will certainly save all those zealous heathen who will sacrifice themselves to whatever they worship, aiming to do right, and attesting it by the sacrifice of themselves.

But those tender-hearted, pliable ones are they who are so exceedingly anxious to send missionaries to the poor heathen. If ignorance be an excuse in a Bible land, will it not be much more so in a heathen land? If persons who have God's revealed will, but remain ignorant of it, will be excused for their non-compliance with it, will not the heathen, who have it not? Will you answer, ye missionaries?

Such silly twaddle does away entirely with God's revealed will. It nullifies the whole of it and leaves every one to be led by his own imaginations. We are under strong obligations, both to God and man to wholly ignore every form of religion that has not the sanction of God's word. God will certainly condemn every man and every woman who gives aid and comfort to any false, or unauthorized form of religion. It is a denial of the authority of Jesus and directly aiding the powers of darkness. A helping to delude and deceive the people.

In a steady resistance of falsehood we do not have to be abusive and harsh. A soft answer turneth away wrath; but grievous words stir up anger, says Solomon. Let us be firm; but not offensive. Let us reason but not boast. Let us hold to the word of God which is living and powerful—sharper than any two-edged sword. Let us not barter it for the commandments of men. We have the truth in the book. Let us stay with it. It will not leave us if we do not leave it. We are invincible with the sword of the Spirit. Without it we are weak as other men.

Perhaps I have said enough for one sitting. If I keep my health now, you will hear from me again. We have a dreadful conflict just now, and it behoves every soldier to fight valiantly. Let our motto be victory or death. There are many traitors as well as foes. All should be treated alike. May God bless all the friends of the Lord and of his cause.

Yours for the whole truth,
I. C. STONE,

THE BAPTIST AND THE BAPTIZED.

I have been requested to write an article on the subject of, The Administrator, and also on, Obedience, with the understanding. The subjects are so closely related that I may write both under one caption. I suppose that the question of most importance respecting the administrator of baptism is, what effect does the administrator have on the obedience of the party baptized? Little can be learned with regard to this matter, because but little is said about it in the Bible.

We may find many strong inferences, but how strong an inference must be before it becomes a necessary one might furnish ground for division before it is settled.

Who is authorized to baptize? is the first question that demands attention. I think it is fair and reasonable to say that a Christian is the only character sufficiently interested to be willing to baptize. It would hardly be reasonable to suppose that any one not in sympathy with the cause of Christ, should be appointed to work in that field.

If A. should assume to be a Christian and knows he is not, or thinks he is and is not, and should baptize B. who is under the impression that A. is what he claims to be, would it be justice to B. to force him to bear the blame of A's false claim? Finite justice would certainly exonerate B. from all charges; and how can infinite justice judge him guilty? B. may have the power to ascertain whether A. is a Christian or not, if he does not use this means he is guilty of carelessness amounting to disrespect for the Lord. But since it is a fact that, "No man knoweth the things of man save the spirit of man which is in him."—1 Cor. 2: 11, a man may be baptized by another who is not a Christian and go into his grave in this condition. Now if an unauthorized administrator renders such baptism a nullity, a man may be consigned to perdition for no other reason than that his creator did not give him power to know the things of a man.

The above thoughts may not be conclusive, and, indeed, it may be impossible for me to write anything on this side of the question that is, but I will venture, at any rate, to present a view of the matter from another standpoint. If a man believe, repent and confess the Lord Jesus Christ is he then a proper subject for baptism? If so, why? Because his affections are properly directed, centered upon Christ. He loves the Lord and depends upon him. His life has taken a corresponding change to that of his affections—he is truly penitent. He confesses before men what he believes. What yet remains to be done to thoroughly prepare such a man for baptism? Certainly there is nothing wanting. What necessary changes have been made so far? Certainly all that can be produced by faith, repentance and confession.

Would it be possible for an improper administrator to affect any change in the faith, or any change in the effect of faith—to affect any change in repentance or its effects or in the good confession or its effects? Baptism administered by an improper administrator can not effect any change in the antecedents to baptism. Baptism administered by a proper person, to be valid, must be in company with all its antecedents. Can we take two baptisms, each in company with the necessary antecedents and yet hold that one is valid and other invalid? or, in other words, can we deny that, things equal to each other are equal to the same thing?

Is the validity of baptism measured by its antecedents or by its administrator? Faith, repentance, confession and baptism bear the same relation to God—the relation of commandments. Faith, like baptism must be administered for the reason that it comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God, and the word of God by the preacher, the preacher is the administrator of faith. What character is authorized to administer faith? Certainly the Christian only.

If A., though not a Christian, should preach the gospel, (which it is possible for him to do) to B. and thus administer faith to him. Would B's faith be invalid? It would be regarded as genuine faith. Why should it be so regarded? Because it is found in company with its necessary antecedents—with hearing and the word of God. Shall we conclude that A. who is not a Christian may administer faith and baptism, and the faith be valid and the baptism invalid? Consistency demands that both be accepted or both rejected.

We will conclude on this point with some inquiries after consequences. It is sometimes said, do right and let consequences take care of themselves. In this case the consequences forever cut us off from all certainty as to the right. Every baptism administered to-day depends for its genuineness upon the soundness of official succession. If a single link should be broken in this long official chain, not another genuine baptism can (after the break) be found. My dear sir, if your flow of official grace was interrupted in the corrupt days of the Arian controversy the validity of your baptism falls short to the full measure of fifteen hundred years.

It is safe to say, that during that corrupt period in the world's history, that not more than one in one hundred who claimed to be Christians were what they claimed to be. If the validity of your baptism depends upon its connection with the one in the one hundred there is nothing certain respecting your own claim to be a Christian except its exceeding uncertainty. If one should doubt the validity of a baptism administered by one who is not a Christian and on account of the doubt, repudiate such baptism, then since it is a fact that such a one's ability to trace the stream of official grace back to the apostles is not only doubtful but an absolute failure; it follows that the baptism of succession is more faulty than the other. So, of the two uncertainties, reason dictates that the least is the best. Rather than postpone baptism until there is a line of Christian succession traced (which has never been done and can not be done), I would accept as an administrator the best chance in reach and risk my acceptance with God, on the ground that I had done my best in all honesty and sincerity.

Since receiving the request to write on the subject of, "Baptism with Understanding," another writer has written on the subject giving the Scripture on it, I shall therefore be brief.

Come, let us reason together. Two kinds of baptisms are before us Baptism without understanding and baptism with understanding. Which is best of these two? I put the question in this form to avoid an insult to common sense, for an insult I should certainly offer were I to ask, which is best, ignorance or knowledge? May I be permitted to answer this question? If so, I answer this. Baptism with understanding is best. Does any one take issue with me on the answer given, or in other words, does any one believe that it is best not to know what baptism is for? If so, infant baptism is the best baptism in the world. If baptism with understanding is best will a wise man choose any other? Who is so stubborn, having made a bad choice, as to refuse to try again. God is the author of one of these baptisms. Of which is he author? God said, "Go teach all nations baptizing them." God is author of the baptism preceded by teaching, therefore preceded by knowledge. Therefore God is not the author of baptism without understanding. Will God accept a baptism of which He is not author? If God accepts of such, those who say the Bible is a dead letter are not far wrong after all.

W. P. RICHARDSON.

FROM E. HANBROUGH.

My wife and I left the vicinity of Triune, about twenty-five miles southeast of Nashville, Tenn., on Monday the 7th of May, having spent about ten days with the brethren in that neighborhood very pleasantly, and I trust profitably; and when I say profitably, I do not have reference to pocket-book profit, which seems to engage the attention of so many of our preaching brethren now, for, in reference to what they did for me, I was well satisfied; but profitably in reference to the interest of the kingdom of Christ. We stayed that night with Bro. A. W. Jordan, about eight miles west of Murfreesboro, and preached in a school-house near him to a very fair and attentive congregation, mostly Methodists, on the parable of the sower and the seed, in the 8th of Luke, and I know I did not sow any mixed seed into their hearts that night, for the Savior says, the seed is the word of God; and he says to Timothy through Paul, "preach the word," and if Timothy could not know when he was preaching the word, there would be no use in that admonition, and if preachers now can not tell when they are preaching the word, there would be no use in that command being handed down to us; but is it not evident from the fact that most of that congregation were Methodists, that mixed or corruptible seed had been sown into their hearts? but according to the teaching of a good many of our preaching brethren, that seed is as good as any, just so it has been soaked a little bit in water, having had the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit pronounced over it; but the heavenly Father through his servant Moses taught the Israelites, and through them us, that the seed is not to be mixed, Leviticus 19: 19; and in Deut. 4: 2, he told them, and through them us, not to add to his word (the seed) nor diminish aught from it, and the object of it was, that they might keep the commandments of God, thereby showing that, if they add to or take from, they fail to keep his commandments. Yet there are many who in the same breath, add to and take from his word, and many of our brethren say that such keep the commands of God. For instance, the Baptists teach those to whom they preach, that they must first be regenerated by a direct influence of the Holy Ghost, (addition), and when they speak of baptism, they teach them that they must be baptized because their sins are remitted, (both addition and subtraction), and yet the above brethren say that such seed, which is corruptible, produces as good a crop as the incorruptible seed; and how much better are they than the sowers of such seed?

We left Bro. Jordan's on the 6th for Murfreesboro, and took the cars that evening for Atlanta, Ga., where we arrived in due time next morning at 5:30 o'clock, and were to have started from there on the north bound train at 7:30; but our conductor was instructed by the superintendent to wait for two car loads of Baptist preachers from Southern Georgia, who were on their way to the great Southern Baptist convention to assemble in Richmond, Va. While waiting there we saw the Rev. Eaton Arbuckle, from Burnet, Texas, who was also on his way to Richmond, to swell that great number of Baptist preachers; not one of whom will, or dare, tell sinners what to do to be saved according to the instruction of the Holy Spirit as given through the Apostles, and yet they claim to be great Holy Ghost men. Now, brethren, if such conventions are authorized by the word of the Lord, and such preachers, compare such conventions, are preachers of the gospel, (God's power unto salvation), and their preaching and mourner's bench system is making christians, would it not be better for us to go with them? They are more popular and make more converts (such as they are) than we do, with the additional power of "our plea" to the gospel. It seems to me that we ought to bid them God-speed in their great and good work, and not be debating about the direct influence of the Holy Spirit, and about repentance coming before faith, and about "clinging to the good confession," the design of baptism, etc.

According to the position of our fast brethren there is no use in debating with the Baptists except to give the debaters notoriety; make them stand out before the world as great defenders—of what? The Savior says, "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 32. Now, if the Baptists are free, it must be because they know the truth, and there is no use in debating with them, except to bring ourselves into notoriety, or to get the truth away from them.

THE SIN AGAINST THE HOLY SPIRIT.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I see three questions in the Octographic Review of Dec. 14, 1887, by W. H. Parker, of Willow City, Texas, as follows: Matt. xii: 31; Heb. x: 26; John v: 16. I shall only notice the first two. The answers are as follows: "The blasphemy of the Holy Spirit would literally mean to speak slanderous words concerning God's spirit. This they did indirectly when they accused him of casting out demons by Beelzebub, the prince of demons." Second, "To sin wilfully after one has obtained knowledge of the truth, spoken of Christians, can only mean to deliberately forsake the right way; especially denying the Lord that bought them. For such there is no salvation, because there is no longer a sacrifice to them for sins."

I have not so understood the above Scriptures, and if you find my views worthy of publication in your most excellent paper you may.

The Savior said, "If I go not away the Comforter will not come," which is the Holy Ghost, (Spirit). As the Savior had not gone away I understand the Comforter or Spirit had not come, therefore the law of the Spirit had not been given, as without law there can be no transgression, therefore until the law of the Spirit had been given it could not be transgressed. Matt. xii: 32, "And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man (Christ) it shall be forgiven him." Also the 3rd verse. I understand that he was going to make the tree (church) good, and he wants it to bear good fruit (the members), but had not made it yet.

Now when the day of Pentecost was come the Holy Spirit spoke by the mouth of the holy apostles and gave a law, and many of the Jews (people) believed, and obeyed. Then they were taught to obey the law of the Spirit. Now there is a certain sin against that law (Spirit) that is unpardonable. What is it? 1 John 5: 6, "There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it." The Jews desired to go back after they had started out on the Christian life by the law of the Spirit, and worship under the old covenant, and offer sacrifices, as though Christ had not come and offered his blood as the last sacrifice, and thereby made the Spirit testify to a falsehood, when it had testified to the Christ as being the end of the law for righteousness, and thereby made it appear that he had not come; therefore they crucified him afresh and put him to an open shame—see Heb. 6: 4-5-6.

Any sin that man cannot repent of is unpardonable, and those people who had received miraculous gifts of the Holy Spirit, and fell away, it was impossible to renew them again. They had tasted of the heavenly gift, which was the gift of the Holy Spirit. Read Luke 12: 10-12-13; also Heb. 10: 28-29.

Second question, Heb. 10: 26: "For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins." Christ was sacrificed for our sins once, and that for the sins of our past life before we were enlightened, since that time the sacrifice is on the part of the Christian, or those enlightened by the gospel (or Spirit.) After any one has learned from the word of God that it is wrong to defraud a brother, or lie, or steal, and does these things in the face of the gospel light, it is a wilful sin, and the Savior will not be crucified any more for that sin, but we must repent of the sin and restore to those we have defrauded, and pray to our God in the name of Jesus to forgive us, and do it no more; for sacrifices are not offered every year for us now as under the Mosaic law.

With hope of causing investigation, I am, your brother in the one hope,
J. H. ALLEN.

FROM BRO. DURST.

Editors F. F.:

This is the Lord's day, and as I am prevented by rain from meeting my appointment to preach, I will pen a few lines for the F. F.

Junction City is a growing little town in the centre of Kimble county, Texas, and for the benefit of my friends and old acquaintances who occasionally enquire as to my whereabouts, I will state, that it is my postoffice.

Years ago the congregation here was established by R. O. Charles, now of Sweetwater, Texas. We have the only church building in town, and it is also used by the Baptists, Methodists and Presbyterians. While it is called the "Christian Church," (it should be the "Church of God"), it is also claimed by the parties above named as a matter of right, as under Bro. Charles' management, the money to build it, was solicited and raised from all sources. A saloon man recently said that his money helped to build it. Before I came here, and while Bro. Charles was the preacher, an unfortunate affair disrupted the congregation, from which it has never rallied. Old sores occasionally get the scab knocked off, and the wound gets irritated again. Christians should not do this way.

We have a mixture here as well as elsewhere. Those who stand steadfast to the word of the Lord are called cranks. Then we have a few brethren, principally in town, who are too much inclined to the ways of the world, and who favor the organ in the worship, missionary societies, etc., and who want a preacher as pastor, who favors these things. These we call progressionists. They have progressed so far that they can publicly talk in worldly gatherings, but not a word can we get from them when we meet to worship, either by word of exhortation or in prayer.

They started a subscription paper recently, soliciting aid from the sects and the balance of the world, to get a man to pastorate once a month for them for $250 a year. I understand they made a failure. I was in hopes they would succeed, as I firmly believe that a contrast of truth and error would open the eyes of all whose great desire is to see the "straight and narrow path," and to walk therein.

I preach at Junction City regularly, and the people hear me attentively. We intend to "hold the fort," and continue to sow the seed of the kingdom. The outlook is not bright in town, but is promising in the country. A great majority are for the word of the Lord, and I think the day is not far distant, when the cause of the Master will be established at various points in the county.

Brethren of the F. F. will continue to aid in the good work of the Lord. So long as it has the word of God on its side, it can and will stand patiently and resignedly the misrepresentations and abuse of its enemies. If brethren (so-called) would be as ready to denounce real sins, as they are the F. F. what exemplary members of Christ's body they would be! O consistency, thou art a jewel so rare that few there be that possess thee! For the truth, regardless of consequences.

JOHN S. DURST.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

In the F. F. of May 1st, I notice a sister wishes the "best method of combatting the growing evil of worldly pride in our churches."

I think that one of the methods would be to induce the members of the churches to become constant readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION. If that would not "stir up their pure minds in the way of remembering" what the Bible teaches on this subject, "they have forgotten that they were purged from their old sins."

If every reader of the F. F. would resolve himself, or herself, into a committee of one to promote the circulation of this paper, the good we might accomplish would be known only in eternity.

Brethren and sisters, let us each send one new name, at least, even if we pay the dollar ourselves. We could not spend money in a better cause, and the amount is insignificant compared to what we spend for things we do not need or would be better without. We hire "pastors," (some of them far from being free from worldly pride themselves), and pay them large salaries to teach the few, while the F. F. teaches thousands; and I am sorry that most of these teachers hold doctrines that will not bear the light of investigation, and their teaching is a bundle of inconsistencies, to say the least of it. Those that we have up here spend much time fighting sectarians, they are great fighters—still they contend all the time that they (the sects) are Christians.

Let us all "give as the Lord prospers us," to this teacher that "teaches the truth as it is in Jesus."

Your sister,

SARAH WILLIAMS.

Nebo, Ill.

Dear Sisters:

I will try in my weak and feeble way to say a few words of encouragement to you. Do not think your labor has been in vain, for you have done one poor, weak sister good, if no more. I enjoy reading your letters very much. As I am very young, (not yet eighteen), and have never written anything for publication, please excuse any imperfection of manner while I try to say a few words for the benefit of my young sisters; yes, and old ones, too, that are conforming themselves to this world.

Dear sisters, do you ever stop to think of the apostle's language, "be not conformed to this world," when you are frizzing your bangs or putting humps on your backs? "Oh, well," you say, "I do not think it is any harm for me while I am young; when I get old I intend to quit it." Dear sisters, that will not do, you know you have not the promise of to-morrow, and you know that you cannot live a Christian and follow the foolish fashions of this world.

Another says, "I do not think it is any harm for me to wear a hump on my back it makes my dress fit better." Oh, dear sisters, let me entreat you in the name of our blessed Savior to lay aside such foolishness and say I will be a Christian, for what shall it profit if one gain the whole world and lose their own soul. Your sister, L.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

The FIRM FOUNDATION comes to me regularly and is appreciated. Its superior paper, clear type and aggressive spirit make it a pleasure to me. May long life and prosperity attend it.

In the number just to hand today, I notice that a correspondent, W. W. Arnett, propounds the following: "Now who sent John? that is, where is it recorded that John was sent? I am satisfied God sent him, but where is it written?"

In the memoirs of our Savior, written by the apostle John, first chapter and sixth verse, we read: "There was a man sent from God whose name was John."

This same John—the Baptist—was a wonderful character and his remarkable life is an interesting and profitable study. Miraculous in his birth and tragic in his death, modest, humble, devoted and self-sacrificing in his life; no wonder that Jesus would say, "Among them that are born of woman there has not risen a greater than John the Baptist." EDITORIAL NOTES.

"Recently we represented the FIRM FOUNDATION as a monthly instead of a semi-monthly. This paper is published at Austin, Texas, at $1.00 a year, and as an exponent of New Testament or apostolic Christianity, it deserves a liberal support, which we hope it may receive in the great Empire State of Texas."—Christian Leader.

We were made glad last week by a visit from Bro. Cavness and wife, of Pontotoc, Mason county, Texas. Bro. Cavness preaches some, and I expect is a very good preacher; for he seems to have very clear conceptions of the gospel and is brim full of zeal. They both seem to be very devout Christians, and we were sorry they could not remain with us longer. We so seldom have the pleasure of Christian association in this far west, that we are loth to part with our brothers and sisters in Christ when they leave us. Bro. Cavness was very much pleased with this country, and says he would like to be one of a Christian colony to settle up this rich and beautiful valley of the San Saba. In July, we intend giving our readers an article about this country, which will be intended as an answer to many private letters we have received from brethren inquiring about it. We hope none of them have thought hard of us for not replying to their letters; and we feel confident they will not when we explain in our contemplated article.

SPECIAL OFFER.

To new subscribers we will send the FIRM FOUNDATION from now till January 1st for fifty cents. And to any brother or sister who will send us a club of three on this offer we will send one copy each of the "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," and the "Requel, or Zeke and the Methodists." We hope to get many new readers on this offer. Send to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Texas.

NOTICE.

As Bro. J. F. Grubbs has started a paper of his own which will doubtless demand all of his time, and, as he has not written anything for the F. F. for quite a while, his name is dropped from our list of "Associate Editors;" and hereafter our readers will bear in mind that he is not authorized to act as agent for the FIRM FOUNDATION. We wish him success in his paper enterprise, as far as he "contends for the faith once delivered to the saints." We have a card from him proposing to club with us, but we prefer to defer the matter till we see more of his paper; if it seems to us to "speak sound doctrine" instead of trying to stilt its editor up as a new philosopher and scientist, we shall bid it Godspeed and aid it in every way we can. A CORRECTION.

When I said in a previous issue for brethren to send their articles to me at Fort McKavett, I did not mean to be understood as wanting all articles sent here to me, although I find my words seem to convey that idea, occurring just as they did. But when I wrote that, I had just read two letters complaining that articles, intended specially for me, were never permitted to come to me, or if they were, had not been published. I meant that articles thus intended should be sent directly to me instead of giving the trouble to the brethren at Austin to remail them. I want all articles intended for publication, except such as are here mentioned, sent to Austin.

A BAD DISEASE.

Bro. Neal complained that he had not been getting the Messenger regularly, to which Bro. Burnett replied: "Why did you not tell us you were so hungry for it. We love to accommodate suffering humanity. There are many people down with Messenger-itis."

We are sorry to hear that any of our brethren are so sadly afflicted. From my experience with the disease of "Messenger-itis" I pronounce it more dangerous than meningitis; the former is spiritual and the latter spinal; the former endangers the soul, while the latter only preys upon the body—this is the difference. I would prescribe a few drops of the oil of Ross Hill. If this does not give relief, try the obedience of three facts. If this fails, then I know nothing else to suggest but "fasting and prayer, as this kind goeth not out but by this." "I love to accommodate suffering humanity."
A. MCG.

DO YOU WANT THE GOSPEL PREACHED IN DESTITUTE PLACES?

There is much being said about the duty of Christians to send the gospel to distant lands to the heathen. I am by this, like Bro. E. W. Dabney. He says this distant heathen rage, is like expecting the leaven to jump out of the barrel it is in, into another barrel, off you-der, instead of first doing its work in the meal of its own barrel.

From Fort McKavett it is fifty miles north, thirty-five miles south, sixty miles east and unmeasured miles west where "the truth as it is in Jesus" is not known and has not been heard. The false doctrines called "orthodoxy" have long since been sounded in these parts. In all of the neighborhoods and little towns they have meeting houses, but for Jesus there are no houses and no disciples, or so very few that we have not heard of them.

Now brothers and sisters, you well know the power of truth in such places, and you know how badly these "orthodox" societies treat a preacher of the gospel who would use their houses in which to "preach Jesus." So I write this to ask all who would aid in giving the truth to these perishing fellow men, to send to me at Fort McKavett, Texas, such aid as they may feel disposed to contribute in this work. I want to buy a good tent and work up this country. I will do all I can in the way of preaching and otherwise. All means sent to me will be used in this work. If more than should be needed to buy the tent is sent to me, I will use it in holding up the hands of some sound old gospel preacher like Bro. I. C. Stone or J. S. Durst, or some other sound and needy brother, to help me harvest this "white field." I do not intend to attempt to make a show in the paper about this work, as a kind of standing advertisement, like some of our other papers do with their mission enterprises; but I am very much in earnest about the work, and would do it without calling on others for help if I could.

GOOD MEDICINE.

Bro. C. M. Wilmeth, under the heading of "How to Guard Against Division," concludes thus:

"Elders should not allow a disturber of the peace and divider of brethren to teach their congregations without open rebuke for their factious sentiments and conduct. They should not send forth a preacher whose teaching and methods tend to division. The elders are the watchmen on the walls who are to warn the people of their danger; and therefore whenever any one brings to their communities false and divisive doctrines, or manifests mercenary or selfish motives in connection with his ministry, they should rise up in their heaven-ordained right and call him to give an account immediately.

Brothers, let us avoid factionists; let us nip division in the bud, and we will not be cursed with so much hopeless apostasy in the future."

Now we heartily agree with Bro. Wilmeth, that elders should "rise up in their heaven-ordained right" and call any teacher of unauthorized and divisive doctrine "to give an account immediately." And if such teacher cannot give a "thus saith the Lord" for what he teaches, his "mouth should be stopped," right then and there!

But what if some elder should "rise up in his heaven-ordained right" and call on Bro. Wilmeth for a "thus saith the Lord" for inviting immersed sectarians to unite with those who have obeyed from the heart the apostolic form of doctrine? Does he not know that he could not produce it if his neck depended on it? We mean by, "thus saith the Lord," either precept, example or fair inference from the word of God. He could give the example of Alexander Campbell and many other great and good uninspired men; but a true elder would not be satisfied with such authority.

There are many places now in Texas and other states, where Bro. Wilmeth would have to take his own physic if he were to make such a call upon those who were immersed under "orthodox" delusion. If all the elders of the congregations should follow Bro. Wilmeth's advice he would either have to cease shaking down the unripe fruit of "orthodox" vineyards, or he would soon have his trowser pockets full of "walking papers." By all means let the elders follow this wholesome advice!

If a man comes advocating cooperation through a human missionary society, let the elders "rise up in their heaven-ordained right and call him to give an account immediately"—and so Bro. Wilmeth would say. If he comes advocating the organ in the worship, Bro. Wilmeth's advice to the elders would be the same, to which we would say, well done. Now why advise the elders to such a course with the advocates of these things? Because the Scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works, and it furnishes him neither of these things. Hence they are divisive things. The true disciple must contend against them, speak against them, write against them, and in every honorable way oppose and hinder them with his whole soul, mind and strength.

If in doing this, division results, only the advocate of these things is responsible, because the opposer of them has only contributed to that division by contending for "the faith once delivered to the saints," he has only driven the wedge of truth, by the authority of his Master, while the offense came by the other party—"woe be unto the man by whom the offense cometh."

But suppose a man comes and advocates "our plea" for union with those who were baptized before they were taught,—those who did not make "the good confession" "unto salvation," what should the elders do? Should they rise up against him in their heaven-ordained right and call him to give an account immediately? If not, why not? Do the Scriptures furnish the man of God unto such work? If they do it has escaped my eye. It is not to be found even hinted at from side to side of the divine volume, and its advocates know it; for they will not attempt to show it. But Bro. Wilmeth would here advise the elders to "lie low" and respect the tradition of "the fathers of this reformation." Such inconsistency ought to burn a blister on an honest man's cheek.
A. MCG.

The editor of the Firm Foundation is kindly sending that spicy sheet to me. It is printed on extra good paper, with clear type; is wide-awake and vigorous in its editorials, and I am reading it with pleasure and profit, and wish it success. Innovationists and those who make love to denominational Dillalahs, and compromise the gospel for the sake of sectarian recognition, find no quarter in its columns. —[J. Perry Elliott, in Leader.

Yes, we have been noting and enjoying the sound, uncompromising utterances of Bro. Elliott quite awhile, and we were confident he was a man of sufficient faith, candor and Christian integrity to recognize and admire the true, incontestable grounds that the FIRM FOUNDATION is planted upon, and from which it is waging "the good fight of faith" against "spiritual wickedness in high places," and against the hosts of the god of this world from whatever quarter they may come or wherever they may be making inroads upon the faith delivered by the Lord Jesus Christ.

We have built the FIRM FOUNDATION up, largely by the plan of sending sample copies to brothers and sisters whose writings, in the different papers, appeared to us to have the certain sound of pure speech. Neither have we been often mistaken, though sometimes we have found some, in this way, who did not mean what they said, but loved the faith delivered to the saints as far as it was in harmony with "our plea;" but where the plea of Christ, and the plea of "the fathers of this reformation"—"our plea"—separate they unhesitatingly follow "our plea" and raise the cry of, "disturber of the peace of Zion," against the FIRM FOUNDATION and all brethren who will not tramp the same blind path with them and fall into and help to fill up the "ditch" of human wisdom, presumption and awaiting woe, where there will be "weeping and gnashing of teeth." Thank God for the true, courageous men and women of faith who have not bowed and will not "bow the knee to Baal." A. McG.

WOULD SHAKE THE HEAVENLY CITY TO HELP OUR PLEA!

Bro. Burnett, in speaking of the "New Papers" in Texas, which seem just now to be "vexing his righteous soul" over-much, says: "Bro. McGary will tell us how not to shake the Baptists, lest we shake the foundation of the New Jerusalem." Well, the "New Jerusalem" is the "heavenly city," and its foundation is the word of God! As this doctrine of, "shaking the Baptists," is not in the word of God and has no place in the foundation of the "New Jerusalem," in hanging to it Bro. Burnett shows that he would shake the very foundation of the city of God to advance this human doctrine, if he could. But there is no danger of his puny efforts effecting the word of God; hence he can not "shake the foundation of the New Jerusalem." To do so would be to shake the very heavens.

He says the "Christian Messenger" will continue as it has for fourteen years, to be the messenger of good tidings and great joy to all who love the old paths and the old religion." Yes, it will continue to carry the "good tidings" to the Baptists, that they are in the kingdom of Christ, and increase their love more and more for "the old (Baptist) religion" and steady their steps in "the old paths" of "Baptist succession"—whither Bro. Burnett has to resort to take a peep at, "the church before the days of Alexander Campbell"! Yes, the Messenger will continue to give "great joy" to Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Catholics and all other religionists who teach that Christ died, was buried and rose again; because the Messenger teaches that all of these teach the gospel of Christ without perversion; for the Messenger teaches that, the "only way to pervert the gospel of Christ is, to deny these three facts"! Such a zeal as this for human doctrines would shake the foundation of the "New Jerusalem," if it could; but it can't!

Now "Bro. McGary" denies that these preachers of these denominational falsehoods preach the gospel, which denial he is pressing upon the attention of the people through the FIRM FOUNDATION, and Bro. Burnett thinks he is engaged in a very bad work in denying that these perverters of the truth of God are preaching the gospel of His Son. A. McG.

DOES HE WANT UNION?

Bro. C. Kendrick says: "Worldly-izers must go. The rest of us will stand on the old and true ground, and try to profit by the weakness and errors of the departers. They talk of our 'going out,' 'withdrawing,' etc. How astonishingly bold and deceived they are! They are the departers. We remain on the very ground all our people occupied less than forty years ago—all that ground, and no more; except we have learned more Bible, and know better how to defend and teach it. Let us not cease to labor and pray for union and purity of worship."

Bro. Kendrick is an old disciple and has been in the front rank of the disciples as a preacher and teacher for many years. As some one said in the Messenger, "he was preaching before A. McGary was born." But this is no reason why "A. McGary" or any one else may not call in question his utterances, and point out his errors and inconsistencies when they see them. If one should rise up and claim to have been preaching ever since "the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing," and should speak or write things tending to confusion and error, it would be the duty of true disciples to point these things out and use them for the advancement of truth.

Bro. Kendrick seems to think, to "occupy the ground all our people occupied less than forty years ago" establishes the rightfulness of his position in all things.

Now, if "all our people occupied ground less (or more) than forty years ago" that was not occupied more than eighteen hundred years ago, by the apostles and primitive disciples, that ground was wrong then and ought not to have been occupied, and there is less excuse for occupying untenable ground now than there was then—since "we have learned more of the Bible." Bro. Kendrick knows there was no authority forty years ago for receiving persons into the congregations upon an unintelligent immersion, and he knows there is none yet, and never will be as long as the New Testament is the sole authority of Christians. I say he knows this—for there is no use in mincing matters. Then why does he contend for the practice, while he opposes other practices that must stand or fall by the same right?

Bro. Kendrick has never "learned" enough of the Bible to know how to "defend" this practice, and cannot, till the Lord gives us some revelation containing such authority, which He will not do. We who oppose this forty-year-old innovation can, upon this question, say of Bro. Kendrick and those who advocate it with him, in his own language: "They are the departers." We remain on the very ground all our people occupied over eighteen hundred years ago.

Now, my aged brother, if you are sincere in your labor and prayers "for union and purity of worship," you will be willing to get off of any and all grounds occupied forty years ago and now that was not occupied by the apostles and first disciples. Can you afford to do this, even though you should have to be "baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus"? If you cannot you deceive yourself about really desiring union and purity of worship, and it is a sectarian unity you want. Those whom we call progressives may continue this presumptuous practice with some slight show of consistency, but you and others who call for a thus saith the Lord for all teaching and practice, and oppose missionary societies and organs in the worship are burning the brand of inconsistency big and deep upon yourselves in your teaching and practice on this question. A. McG.

FROM BRO. HOLLIS.

Would you consider the baptism of a brother valid that is taken in from the sectarian ranks by a shake of the hand? I wish you would give me some Scripture on it. Your brother, G. W. HOLLIS.

No, we consider no dabbings in the water by human authority, however pious the fraud may appear, Christian or scriptural baptism. Baptism by the authority of Christ is such as fills up the gospel measure, and the wild fires of orthodoxy, however brilliantly they may glow, retard instead of filling that measure. Christ sent men, "faithful men," to teach and to baptize the taught. He never sent those who baptize without first teaching "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus."

I can give you no Scripture for shaking them into the congregations. Neither can those who advocate and practice it give you any, for the simple reason that the Scripture is all against such teaching and practice. The highest authority they can give you is that of Campbell, Scott, Stone, Smith and others, all good men, but uninspired. A. McG.

EXPLANATION.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Please allow me to address a few lines to you in regard to the F. F. Last January I sent one dollar in payment for the F. F. for '87. I sent the money in a letter to Austin, Texas, without having the letter registered: I got a receipt for it. Well, about two months ago, being tired of seeing the red cross on my paper, and wishing to continue it, I sent one dollar in a letter to Austin, Texas, Box 36, same as I did the one previous, but it did not stop the red cross on my paper.

So the Chicago paper might have been lost in sending, I, about two weeks ago, sent a postal to Austin, asking them to let me know whether my letter and money had been received. The only reply I got was the F. F. with a big red cross on the front page, as usual.

Now will you kindly answer and let me know if the money was received, or if lost in sending; if so, I should feel very sorry, but could blame no one but myself, for not having the letter registered, as I should have done. Truly your sister in Christ,

Mrs. BARBARA A. WISER. Chicago, Ill., May 15, '88.

We publish this letter that our book-keeper may explain why the "red cross" remains on papers after the dues have been received. We are certain that no wrong is intended by him, but these complaints are pouring in upon us so fast that we want the matter explained.

We are very sorry that our subscribers have been bothered in this way, and hope, in the future, there will be no such complaints. Sickness at the office has likely caused the red cross list to be overlooked, for we know they have had sickness and constant nursing to do within the last thirty days. We thank sister Wisser and others, who have written about this matter; for when things don't go right with them it is their duty to make it known, and ours to make them right, if we can. A. McG.

When the red cross was first put upon our subscriber's papers, many of them were behind on the books for two years, and some of them had no credits at all. When some of these sent in their money, they did not state for what year it was intended, and as they did not send in enough to pay up arrearages according to the book, the red cross was not removed from their papers until they wrote to us informing us why the red cross should be taken off, and in those instances we removed the cross and have their names corrected upon our new books. Some of our subscribers have not paid a cent yet. Do they intend to?

In some instances we failed to give that immediate attention to letters that should have been given, for good reasons, some of which Bro. McGary has expressed above; and another important reason was, we were transferring the names of our subscribers into new and larger books. We do not justify ourselves in our neglect, but we are sorry mistakes occurred, and ask the forgiveness of those neglected.

In the case of sister Wiser, we failed to send her a receipt for the last dollar she sent in. We took the red cross off, but in transferring the names into our new book, in April, we accidentally placed the red cross by her name on the new book. Then, when we received her postal inquiring the why and wherefore, we removed the red cross again, but it was after we had sent off the mail for May 15; and we answered her postal immediately upon reception.

No injustice was intended any one, and we will be glad for every one to remember that the red cross was used to get the books corrected and brought up to date, so as to be kept straight in the future. Receipts will be given to all who send in money here, indicating the time of subscription paid for, and date of reception. Any one failing to get a receipt inside of thirty days after sending in their subscription money, will confer a favor on us by writing us about it, stating the time it was sent, amount sent, and for whom sent.

Respectfully,
T. H. GILLESPIE.

INDIANA NOTES.

I notice that Bro. I. C. Stone, of Oatka, Ind., contemplates a visit to the South and West. Bro. Stone lives next county to me, and I can testify to his sterling good qualities. He is cultured, educated and logical. His sermons are not sermons after the manner of some. They are simply talks to the people. He speaks extemporaneously as the thoughts come to him: the thoughts never fail to come. He talks, hit or miss, and always hits. Bro. Stone is a Bible man.

The voting question is being mooted. Voting is expressing the individual will and choosing men to carry out that will, and give it the force and effect of law. Shall not Christians express their will at the ballot-box? Shall they not choose men to crown their will into law—the rules by which society is controlled? Shall they be denied the privilege of saying by what rules they will be governed and protected? Each person is an aliquot part of society. Shall the Christian, the better part of such society, remain inactive, only to let the more vicious control? When the good rule the people rejoice. Sin is a reproach to any nation.

The ballot is a trust conferred by society as a whole upon the individual. The purer the trustee the more safe the trust. Shall we deliver ourselves into the hands of the immoral? That is what such pernicious institutions as the liquor traffic desires. The ballot belongs to no man, he cannot sell it. It can be taken from him by the State when he uses it to a selfish end. Let the good accept the office of trustee and discharge the duties.

Herein I find an argument for woman suffrage. They are mentally and morally qualified to discharge the duties of a trustee. Would it not be better to have Christian men and women entrusted with the nation's life, than to enfranchise bad men?

Of course it depends how you vote. If a man votes wrong, it is not right for him to vote. Be careful that you express your convictions. Herein church members commit a sin. If the professed Christians of the United States would express their convictions at the ballot-box next November the liquor traffic will be no more. Be careful that you are not turned aside by party prejudices and stifle your convictions. On election day please don't let your conscience go out on a vacation.

A law is a supreme effort on the part of the sovereign power (the people) to better their surroundings. Shall Christians be denied the privilege of bettering their surroundings? Shall they not be empowered to remove the hell-holes that tempt their beloved? May they not remove the weeds that choke the little ones? Let our fathers of to-day vote to hand down to their sons and daughters our political garden freed from noxious tares, weeds and thorns.

EXPLANATORY.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I noticed in the F. F. of recent date something about Bro. Hamilton preaching for the Baptists. Knowing that you would not willfully misrepresent any one, I would say, that you were mistaken about that. He did not preach for the Baptists, but for the Church of Christ, or by the request of the members of the Church.

The Baptists offered their house to our brethren, not to Bro. Hamilton, nor did they request him to preach, but were willing for him to preach in their house if our brethren wanted him to. He preached the gospel straight; so straight in fact that there was no room for any one to doubt that he was "contending for the faith once delivered to the saints." You know my position in regard to sect baptism as well as all the progressive ideas too well, to ever think that I am defending Bro. Hamilton's position, if that position be contrary to what the Bible teaches and what you contend for in the F. F.

But in justice to Bro. Hamilton, on the occasion spoken of, I will say that you have not been informed right. Your brother in the one hope and for the F. F.,

T. C. GOLDMAN.

Midway, Texas.

My remarks about it were drawn out by a private letter written me by a brother who lives in Lovelady. I am glad to make the correction, if the brother who wrote me was mistaken.

IOWA NOTES.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

As we have no meeting to attend I will drop a few lines to you this morning. I love to meet with the brethren on Lord's day, "to keep the ordinances as they were delivered," but being deprived of this, I take pleasure in corresponding with brethren who love the truth and who will not give it away for the sake of popularity.

I love the position taken by the FIRM FOUNDATION. I reason on the subject thus: A Baptist "revival" is in progress; in the same city is a congregation of disciples; in the revival three persons "get religion," and after telling their experience and claiming that God has forgiven their sins, they are baptized, (not into Christ) into the Baptist church; not in order to the remission of sins, but in order to get into the "visible church." But as there is no Baptist organization in the city, and they need a "home" in some church, they present themselves to the "pastor" for admission into the "Christian Church." The question generally propounded is, Have you ever been baptized? If an affirmative answer; the pastor makes it known, and the congregation prepares to extend the right hand of fellowship. No matter for what purpose they have been baptized; no difference if Peter, speaking by the Holy Spirit, did say that baptism is for the remission of sins.

But now the point is right here: If brethren who receive immersed sectarians, were called upon to conduct a mourning-bench meeting after the manner of Baptists, Methodists, and others, they would positively refuse. Ask them the cause of their objections and they will say at once: It is contrary to the teaching of Christ and his apostles. That is true; but if it is contrary to the teaching of Christ for us to convert people after this manner, how much better is it for us to receive such converts from the hands of others. O, consistency!

But this is not all. Such persons were not begotten by the gospel of Christ; for if they were they would have been immersed into Christ instead of into the Baptist church, for the remission of sins, instead of, "an outward sign of an inward grace," and consequently when a man comes along preaching the old Jerusalem gospel, they become offended, and turn away from the truth unto fables, and heap to themselves teachers, and false teachers at that. But perhaps this article is long enough.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
W. P. GRAY.

SEVERAL THINGS.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have received a complimentary copy of, "A Sequel to the Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," by J. W. Jackson. It is very interesting as well as instructive, and shows in a very forcible manner the fallacies of the doctrines set forth in the "Grub-Ax." I would advise every reader of the F. F. to send and get a copy. It would be a splendid thing to distribute among our Methodist friends, as well as other sectarians. Raccoon Bill Jones' sermon on the "one body" is well worth the price of the book, (10 cents.) Bro. Jackson did his work well.

I am always pleased to see articles in the F. F. from Bro. O. H. McGavock. He and I used to preach together before he left this state. He should be well supported for I think him worthy.

"Let love be without dissimulation."—Rom. 12: 9. The word, "dissimulation," means hypocrisy. This is an age of hypocrisy, and there seems to be but little real love existing. When a person is prosperous in worldly matters, people love (?) him dearly; but when adversity overtakes him, his one time friends (?) are gone, and thus it is shown that their love was not without hypocrisy.

There is a great deal of this, "I am very sorry for you, be ye warmed and filled," kind of love; but when it comes to giving the things the one you are so "sorry" for needs, you falter. Is such love as that without hypocrisy? I think not. Paul makes Christian liberality a test of love. See 2 Cor. 8: 8.

I once preached for a congregation in which there was a man possessed of an abundance of the goods of this world; and he almost invariably insisted on me leaving an appointment; when I would get ready to leave he would take me by the hand and say: "I wish you well;" but never a nickel did he give me, though I was in need. This is one of your "Be ye warmed and filled" cases. His love was not without hypocrisy.

We should love each other dearly because "he that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten," and we should show by our actions that our love is genuine; then will our love be without dissimulation, and meet the approval of the Giver of all good.

"Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearer."—Eph. 4: 29.

There is a great deal said in the Scriptures concerning our conversation. It ought to be pure, so free from vulgarity and jesting that it would be a mark of distinction between the Christian and sinner. Some professed Christians, it seems, take great pains to provide themselves with a stock of by-words to take the place of profane language they were wont to use before embracing christianity—such as “by-george,” “by-jingo,” “drot it,” “darn it,” “I’ll bet,” etc. Now the man of the world is ready to say: “He had just as well swear, for it means the same thing.”

Some will even go so far as to use the name of God as a mere by-word, to express great astonishment. Such as “Lord have mercy!” “O Lord!” “My Lord!” etc. Speak to such persons about the sinfulness of such things, they will tell you, they use them without thinking. Worse and worse! A Christian should never speak without thinking, and especially should he think when he pronounces the name of the Lord.

Does such language as that, and joking and running on with nonsense, edify (build up) or minister grace unto the hearers? Surely not. Do you not by using it, stand in the way of sinners? Do you not know that “by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned?” Then for the sake of christianity and your immortal soul, bridle your tongue, even at the risk of being called dull.

J. G. CONNER.

THE CONTRIBUTION.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough,
I see in the F. F., of March 15, a question asked by a sister in northern Arkansas concerning the church contribution, and answer to that question.

I stand right where that sister stands. I want nothing but what the Bible teaches, and what I will contend for, to the best of my ability; and for a starting point, I will call your attention to the reading of 2 Tim. 3: 15-16-17, “And that from a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. All Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.” This certainly means the old as well as the new Scriptures, from the fact, that the new was not completed at that time.

The law was a shadow of things to come, Heb. 10: 1; who can say, how much of the law was not a shadow, and where the dividing line is? The shadow and the substance of anything must fit, or there is something wrong. Under the law the Jews were required by the Father to give tithes every man according to his prosperity. Deut. 14: 22-23; Neh. 10: 37-38, and 13: 10-14.

Will a man rob God? Mal. 3:

8-12. The law was the shadow of better things to come. The better things in this case, appears to be, we are not required to give tithes, that it does not require that much to keep up all necessary expenses, though if circumstances required it, we should yield willingly; let God’s will be done not ours. We must give as the Lord has prospered us, 1 Cor. 16: 2. Lay by in store, (or store house), Mal. 3: 10. “For I mean not that other men be eased, and ye burdened; but by an equality.”—2 Cor. 8: 13-14. Now brethren, how can this be, short of the form given in the shadow, a per cent. let it be much or little. A little digression just here, where one member is made to suffer, all members suffer with that member, 1 Cor. 12: 26. Is this just to feel a little sorrow? I think not; but we suffer financially, every member according to their financial worth, which comes out of the treasure house.

For example, a brother gets his house burned and is not able to rebuild without going in debt, which we should not do, Rom. 13: 8-14. The remedy, we go to the storehouse for the means to rebuild his house; so we have the Scriptures fulfilled. Where one member suffers, all suffer with that member, 1 Cor. 12: 25-26. This is being in fellowship one with another, 2 Cor. 8: 4; and not merely the shake of the hand, as many seem to think.

Now, brethren, examine closely what I have said in connection with what I said upon the same subject in the FIRM FOUNDATION of Feb. 15. The truth never loses anything by fair investigation, and when you see brethren afraid of investigation, you may know the material their house is built of, it is hay, wood and stubble; can’t stand the fire of investigation.

Now love and good will to every brother who may differ from me honestly upon the contribution. I will venture an assertion which is this, our present form of contribution as practiced is not correct, because there is no equality in it.

Please publish this with your comments. Your brother in Christ.

Our brother must remember that the apostles drew the dividing line between the shadow and the substance, by teaching all things necessary to be done, according to the command given them, Matt. 28: 19-20. As we have the substance, “the better things” to pattern after we must not go back and try to build according to the shadow.

Paul does not say that the law was a shadow, nor that every item of that law was a shadow or type, but he says: “The law having a shadow of good things: to come and not the very image of the things.” A shadow is an “imperfect and faint representation” of those things afterwards to be made clear and distinct by a full and complete revelation; and now that we have this revelation of God’s will complete in all its parts and perfect in its adaptation to the necessities of man we must come out of the shadow into the light, away from the law to the gospel, and serve God as a son, not a slave.

Christians are taught to give liberally, as the Lord hath prospered them. As to how much or what proportion I am to give the book is silent. “Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly or of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver.”—2 Cor. 9: 7.

If you try to impose the tithe system, or indeed any system of percentage upon man, then he will give, not as he purposes in his heart, but as your system purposes. Let us be mindful of the commandments spoken by the apostles of the Lord Jesus, and remember that those who use their freedom from the tithe system as an excuse or pretext for not giving at all, or giving only what they can spare will fall into condemnation; but that by cheerful liberal giving, as the Lord prospers us, we lay up in store for ourselves a good foundation against the time to come. LETTER FROM A SISTER.

Dear Sisters:
I have been asked to write a piece concerning women’s work in the church. I don’t know that I can say anything more than has been told over and over. The first I will notice is in Paul’s first letter to the Corinthians, he says: “But I would have you know the head of man is Christ; and the head of the woman is man; and the head of Christ is God, etc. But every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered dishonoreth her head, (husband); for that is even all one as if she were shaven.”

Why is it that so many cut off their hair? 1 Tim. 2: 9. “In like manner also that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array. But (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works.” Is it modest or shamefaced to wear bangs? “Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence. For Adam was first formed then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression.”

Sisters, be sure you are right before you even persuade your husbands; see what an awful mistake mother Eve made: read last verse. 1 Cor. 14: 34-35, “Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything let them ask their husbands at home; for it is a shame for a woman to speak in the church.” Read 1 Peter, 3rd chapter to 6th verse, as I have not room to write it all.

Rom. 12: 2, “And be ye not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God.”

1 John 2: 15-16-17, “Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.” I have not room for all.

Dear sisters let us try to live according to our pattern, and not let the follies and fashions of this world cheat us out of that inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for us.—1 Peter 1: 4.

Titus 2: 3-4-5, “The aged women likewise, that they be in behavior as becometh holiness, not false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things; that they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their children. To be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed.”

My advice is, to be in your places in due time; the sister’s places are not in remote corners, but near the stand, be ready to aid in singing as soon as you understand what is to be sung; help to select proper songs, so that all may sing with the spirit and understanding. If strange women come in, see that they have a comfortable seat, also aged women; I have seen young girls take the best seats; honor the aged. My plan was, at our home church, if a stranger came in, to invite them home with us to dinner, or all night. Let us do our duty and all will be well. Bless the Lord.

LIFE AND DEATH.

Yes, life eternal depends greatly upon how we conduct ourselves while travelling here below. Death is inevitable, i. e. physical death, but death eternal may be averted by strict compliance with the law—the law of the Lord. And as little as Christians may think, life everlasting to the unconverted depends somewhat on the manner in which Christians deport themselves while in their company. Let your light shine, is an injunction of the Master, and why? That others may see your good works and glorify your Father which art in heaven. The failure to do this on the part of the Christian, will bring death eternal to themselves and to others.

Brethren, if we could realize this, would we not bestir ourselves more than we do? Think of it, that through the church the world is to be converted, and we act in such a way as will drive them from us, or enable them to say: “I am as good as he.” The greatest crime that has been committed by our brethren is, the concession that, there are good and bad in all churches, i. e. Christians in all the so-called churches. This concession was wrang from our brethren by the monster, popularity and sympathy.

We are often asked: "Do you not believe that there are christians in other churches." I answer, I know of but one church—"the Church of Christ." Continue they: "Then you believe that everybody will go to perdition, except they belong to your church." I have no church, and do not want any. I am satisfied for the Lord to have it, and rejoice in the thought that I am a branch of it myself. "Well, then, what are you going to do with all other denominations?" At the last day I expect to do nothing with them; but while here I'll try and teach them that there is but one body, one way to enter that body; but one way to live in that one body. That the blessings are all in that one body, and if they want life they must enter that body. "Yes, but we do not see alike." No matter. Says Paul: We walk by faith and not by sight any how? Our not understanding alike is caused by the lack of faith. Paul says: "By faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God." How do we understand it? Paul says, by the word of God. God said so, and hence we believe, and so understand. You and I understand that a person must have faith to please God. Why do we see this alike? The reason is, we both believe what God said about it.

Again, we understand that a man must repent. How came we to be so completely one here? God said so in his word, and you believe it and so do I. So you see that agreement does not come by seeing alike, but by believing what God says about it. I also understand that baptism is for (in order) to the remission of past sins. Why? Because God's word says so, and I believe it; hence my understanding. You do not so understand it. Why? Because God said it was not? No. God nowhere says that baptism is not for the remission of sins, but on the contrary, says it is, and still you do not understand that way. Your misunderstanding is traceable to one thing, and one thing only, lack of faith in God's word.

The reason to-day of so much confusion in the body of Christ is, that we all have not faith. I understand that a person should be taught before he is baptized. Why do I understand that? Jesus said so, and I believe it, hence my understanding. You believe if a person is immersed, whether he understand it or not, it is all right. Why? Because God said so? No. God did not say any such thing, and if you had believed what the Savior said about it you would believe as I do. "Go teach the nations, baptizing them," is the command of the Son of God. I believe it, and for the same reason I understand. It is purely for the want of faith. Disbelief will bring death.

I have held one protracted meeting since I have been in this county. It was with and for the brethren of Willow Grove. Had tolerably fair audiences, notwithstanding the continuous rain fall. Six were added to the saved; five baptisms and one restored. All seemed to enjoy it very much and made our stay very pleasant. Some of the brethren confesses to have "gotten religion."

Bro. A. D. King lives there, and is a good preacher, and should be kept out in the field all the time. We were entertained very hospitably while among the good brethren. We are anxious to know how the churches are thriving in Lavacca county. What are you doing Bro. F. M. and R. L. McMurrey? Bro. Coombs did not attend the "bell" on purpose, but a-c-c-i-d-e-n-t-a-l-l-y. Here our pen falls with a good-by to all. Love to all

"MCGARY IS A FRAUD."

Dear Brethren of the F. F.:

As usual, persecutions and opposition work to the advancement of the truth. Through the false and wicked slander of that would-be great, (whose name I do not wish to retain in my mind), thousands of disciples like myself, who did not personally know Bro. McGary and his private reputation and character, are strengthened in knowledge, confirmed in confidence, seeing we are compassed about with such a cloud of witnesses.

Many thanks to those noble brethren for their prompt vindication of the true character of that persecuted, belied and slandered, yet true and bold disciple of Christ. (Of a truth may Bro. McGary say with Paul: "In perils with false brethren.")

But to that false accuser we would say, (if perchance he may read the F. F. through envy); sir, if the "who is a fraud" was written on your forehead in letters of fire, it would not be so clear "an epistle known and read of men" as it now is. Remember, sir, "In so much as as you did it unto one of my disciples, you did it unto me."—Christ. But we desist further rebuke, hoping you may repent and confess your sin to your offended brethren and slandered brother.

Kindest regards and best wishes to the F. F. and all who receive the truth in the love of it.

BRIEFS.

Don't fail to read Bro. Richardson's article, on second page in this issue.

In ordering the paper or tracts write your name plainly, and give postoffice, county and state.

Don't send any more orders for the Outman—McGary discussion, as we have no more on hand.

Bro. Tant reports four additions at Sanburn May 27th, and one at Hamilton under Bro. Zachery's preaching.

For the present the red cross will be omitted. Those who know themselves to be in arrears will confer a favor by remitting as soon as they can.

Correspondents will please remember to send all money orders for subscriptions or for tracts, to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

How many preachers, now-a-days, are using "a cloak of covetousness?" Visit the churches and see how much sin and folly is permitted to go unrebuked, and you can answer the question.

Bro. J. E. Carnes, from Hillsboro, Texas, reports two additions at Larabee school-house, near Hillsboro—both from the Methodists. "Uncle Jack" is a doing a good work in Hill county. Write again.

"It is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing."—Paul.

It is a "good thing" to subscribe for and circulate the FIRM FOUNDATION. Reader let your zeal so affect you as to send us immediately a good long list of subscribers.

By the time this reaches our readers the debate between Bro. A. McGary and Mr. Crawford, Missionary Baptist, at Fort McKavett, Texas, will be under full headway. We expect some of the brethren who attend it to send us a report of it.

Bro. J. W. Strode writes: "I will, the Lord willing aid Bro. R. L. McMurrey in a protracted meeting, with the brethren at the bridge near Schulenburg, Lavacca county, Texas, to begin Thursday night before the third Lord's day in June, at which time we hope to see many of the brethren of Lavacca."

A great many people now-a-days are affected with mental colic. I know that it hurts them by the way they grumble. If they will try a few grains of common sense, mixed with patience, it will do them good and not be so annoying to others. No one need to take this prescription unless they are afflicted.

Bro. T. C. Goldman, Lovelady, Texas, writes: "Just back from the lower part of Houston county. Preached four discourses at what is known as Chandler school-house. Result was, four from the Baptists by confession and baptism, two reclaimed and none shaken in. Only a few Christians here, but they are now gathered together and will meet every Lord's day."

Bro. F. M. Trimble, from Dexter, Cooke county, says: "Four made the 'good confession' at our appointment in Dexter on the fifth Lord's day in May, whom we buried with Christ in baptism for the remission of their sins, the same evening. The subject of discourse on this occasion was, 'The Soldier of the Cross.' At 7 p. m, we discoursed upon the 'reasons why the gospel is not obeyed.' At the close of the discourse an old lady who had served as a veteran in the cause of Methodism came forward and made 'the good confession.' If the Lord will, we will baptize her at Rocky Mound on fourth Lord's day."

The western people seem to be all upon the warpath just now, besides the above debate we are authorized to announce the following: Debate at Lanham, Hamilton county, Texas, between J. D. Tant, Christian, and J. C. Weaver, Methodist, to begin June 27th and continue eight days. At the same place, another debate will be held between J. D. Tant, Christian, and F. S. Payne, Baptist, beginning July 6th and continuing seven days. Besides the above, another debate is announced to take place on Cow Creek, Erath county, three and a half miles northwest of Dublin, between J. W. Zachery, "the boy preacher," Christian, and S. A. Powers, Missionary Baptist; debate to continue six days.

Some Christians plead as excuses for not giving of their substance to aid the preacher or the poor:

1. That they have nothing to give. If this is true, it is either an affliction or a disgrace; if the former, the church should support them; if the latter, it is the result of idleness or improvidence, hence sinful.
2. Others have plenty, but give nothing because uninstructed. Very few can make this excuse.
3. Another class give nothing because they are covetous. They work too hard for their money to give it away! Yes, and by your hard work for earthly riches you give away all the chances you ever had for heaven.

There are many others, however, who do give; one class will give.

1. What they can do without, or don't need.
2. Others give what they can spare. Both of these classes will evidently reap very sparingly. (2 Cor. 9: 6.)
3. Some give to be seen of men. "Verily they will have their reward"—popularity here—nothing over yonder!
4. Some few "lend to the Lord" hoping to get their own back with a large percentage. This class think that they can persuade God by a money consideration to bless them.

Some few give to the Lord as the gospel directs. Brethren and sisters shall the Lord's treasury be filled? "Let each willing heart give, and the Lord hath prospered them," and there will be no lack of means for all the service of God. J. W.

WHAT IS TRUTH!

The above question was asked by Pilate of the Savior, just before he pronounced sentence of condemnation upon him, Luke 23: 24; but the Savior did not answer him; though he had told him just before he asked him the question, "to this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness (or testimony) unto the truth," John 18: 37. Is not the same question just as important now as it was when asked by Pilate nineteen hundred years ago, and can we not decide definitely from the teaching of the Scriptures, what the truth is of which the Savior spoke, and what it accomplishes?

John says, speaking of Christ, that he was "full of grace and truth," John 1: 14; and Jesus says: "Of the abundance or fulness of the heart the mouth speaketh," Luke 6: 45. Now if the Savior was full of the truth, then that of which he spoke was the truth, and now, brethren, testing ourselves by that rule how do we stand? Do we talk about politics and the things of this world more than we do spiritual things? If so, that is what our hearts are fullest of, for Jesus says, out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. Sisters, how stands the matter with you? Are you talking more about the fashions, the follies of the world, the gold, the pearls, and the costly array with which you are decorating your bodies, than you are about spiritual things? If so then that is what your hearts are fullest of, and you are not giving heed to that part of the truth which says, "be not conformed to this world," and are not proving what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God, Rom. 12: 2.

Again, Jesus said to the Jews: "Now you seek to kill me, a man who hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God," John 8: 40. Then the truth is something about which he had talked to the Jews, and that he heard from his heavenly Father.

In John, 14: 6, Jesus says: "I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father, but by me; and in John, 6: 44, he says, "no man can come to me except the Father who hath sent me draw him." Then to come to the Father and to come to the Son are the same; but how do they come? By being drawn. How are they drawn? By being taught, verse 45. What are they taught? The truth. Then the truth (not error) taught to the people, and accepted by them, draws them to the Father and the Son.

Again Jesus says, talking to his apostles: "It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away the comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart I will send him unto you, and when he is come he will reprove (or convince) the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment," John 16: 7-8. "When he the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth (or the truth)," verse 13. Just before he ascended to heaven he renewed that promise by telling his apostles that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which you have heard of me, Acts 1: 4, also Luke 24: 49. It is the same truth that Paul admonished Timothy to study and rightly divide, 2 Tim. 2: 15; and from which he told him that the time would come when people would turn their ears away from it and be turned to fables or lies, 2 Tim. 4: 4.

In the last quotation, Paul was not talking about wicked worldlings, and sectarians, who have never accepted the truth, and hence cannot turn their ears away from it, (for a man cannot get out of a road he has never been in); but about such as some of our brethren, who are denying some of the conditions of salvation in order to accommodate, and hug in these sectarians, that Peter, speaking by the Holy Spirit, says, are "damnable," 2 Pet. 2: 1.

What does the truth accomplish?

The Savior prayed to his Father, when he raised Lazarus from the dead, and said: "Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me, and I know that thou hearest me always," John 11: 41-42. He afterwards prayed that all that believed on him through the word of the apostles, might be one, John 17: 21; and the word of the apostles is the word of God, which he had given them, 4th verse; and the word of God is truth (or the truth), verse 17.

Now if the Savior told the truth when he prayed at the grave of Lazarus, then God's people have always been one since the Savior's prayer as recorded in the 17th chapter of John, and sectarianism, heresies, or divisions have always been from the devil. Then the truth unites or makes people one who accept it. It also sanctifies or sets them apart to the obedience and worship of God, John 17: 17.

Brethren, is it having that effect with you? Are you meeting upon "the first day of the week" and worshiping according to the truth; preacher or no preacher? If you are not, are you sanctified by the truth?

Again James says "of his own will, begat he us (quickened us, made us alive,) with the word of truth," 1: 18; and the word of truth and the gospel are the same, for Paul says, "in Jesus Christ I have begotten you through the gospel," 1 Cor. 4: 15. Then that is another very important matter accomplished by the word of truth; but we are not only begotten by it, but if we are Christians, our souls are purified in obeying it, and it is the gospel, 1 Peter 1: 22-23-25.

Once more the Savior says: "You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free," John 8: 32. Free from what? From sin; but in order to be made free from sin by the truth we must know it; but can we know it and at the same time not understand it? No honest sensible man will say yes.

The truth is composed partly of law, and law is a rule of action, in which there are conditions that must be complied with, hence James says, "whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty (freedom from sin) and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed," Jas. 1: 25. Now the thing accomplished by this perfect law of liberty is, freedom from sin, the same that the Savior says the truth will accomplish; and the apostle Paul says, "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus made me free from the law of sin and death," Rom. 8: 2; but was Paul made free from sin by the law of the Spirit without understanding the conditions of that law? Will some of our brethren affirm that he was? I would like to hear them.

The same apostle, speaking of the new covenant, the gospel, says: "For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their minds and write them in their hearts: and I will be to them a God and they shall be to me a people," Heb. 8: 10. So we see that under the new covenant, the gospel, God will not be our God and we his people unless we have the law written in our minds and hearts, the law of the Lord, the perfect law of liberty, the law of the Spirit, and not the law of man, or men.

Now, brethren, do the sectarians, any of them, preach the truth that the Savior says we shall know, and it shall make us free? If they do, I have never heard them, and I have been listening to them for fifty years. Do they write the law of the Lord, the perfect law of liberty, the law of the Spirit, in the minds and hearts of the people? If they do, I have never heard them. I know some come nearer to it than others; but they are only the more dangerous, as a well executed counterfeit bill is more dangerous than a badly executed one, more apt to deceive. In fact they all do as Bro. Lipscomb says about the Baptists: "Their course drives God out of the work, and their conversions are wholly of men." If he tells the truth, (and I do not suppose he would like any one to doubt his word), they are not free from sin, not children of God, not Christians.

FROM BRO. I. C. STONE.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:
As we are working for the good of the cause of Christ, and endeavoring to instruct and enlighten the people, it is our duty to keep our readers constantly posted with regard to the schemes and plans of those who are leading off after apathy and the world.

The object of this article is, to apprise the readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION of some things in which the society houses are engaged. And in order to give the information that I desire to give, I will describe a little pamphlet which came into my possession two or three years ago. Its title is, "Missionary Song Herald." It purports to give a brief statement of the missionary work of the disciples of Christ, with a collection of original songs appropriate to missionary services, published by R. Moffett, 716 Logan avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. "Songs appropriate to Missionary services." What kind of services are those? Not the services of God; but of the missionary society. Before I am through, you will observe, kind reader, how you may engage in these services. Here I will quote from the 5th page of this little book, "The Foreign Christian Missionary Society":

"The object of this society is to make Disciples of all nations, and teach them to observe all things whatsoever Christ has commanded. Any member of the Church of Christ may become a Life Director by the payment of $500, which may be paid in five annual installments; or a Life member by the payment of $100 in five annual installments; or an Annual member by the payment of $10."

Now, brethren, you see how you may serve this society, or how you may enter into these missionary services and sing those appropriate songs. Now mark, these conditions, above given, are not the conditions by which any one enters into the church. Hence this society and the church are entirely different institutions. What institution did the Lord ordain except his church? Did he say, "On this rock I will build my missionary society?" These men know that there is as much authority for the Mormon society as there is for the "Foreign Christian Missionary Society." The one is as much an abomination in the sight of God as the other. And especially, since the one requires from ten to five hundred dollars to be a member of it. But I will quote still further from the same page:

"Since its organization in 1875, nine missions have been established. Two more will be established in a few months. The total membership under its care at present (July 1883), is about 1,300. The property is estimated at $79,000. Last year, the receipts were $25,000. This is a very small exhibit compared with that of some of the other religious bodies. It is to be remembered, however, that we have only recently entered this field, and that our receipts are constantly increasing. The success of this cause is now assured. Within the present century, foreign missions were pronounced 'visionary and impracticable.' There are already two million converts to Christianity. The people of the Sandwich and Fiji Islands are sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed and in their right minds."

Is not the foregoing a tremendous blow? These two millions were every one converts to sectarianism, if there were that many. And lately they have returned to their heathenism, which I esteem fully as good as the sectarianism to which they pretended to be converted. The Methodists, I believe it was, went there and made these heathens believe that Methodism was a wonderful blessing to the people and when the heathen tried it a little while they found that there was nothing in it but falsehood and hypocrisy; and, of course, they abandoned it, as all sensible people ought to do.

I will now give you what those bosses say to the preachers. They give the preachers the following bit of advice: "You are the leaders of the brethren in every good word and work. To you we look more than to any others for the teaching and preaching and working that will develop better results. You ought not to be satisfied to lead a 'forlorn hope.' You ought not to be content to minister for churches that will not sympathize with missionary work. Better abandon such churches to the fate that awaits them, and go into new fields to make new converts, and educate them into a better conception of the Christian life. Preachers should make the missionary spirit the web and woof of a majority of their sermons, until the leaven of missionary zeal begins to work."

Here they advise preachers to abandon congregations who will not submit to the missionary yoke and work in an institution which has no authority, and pay from ten to five hundred dollars for the privilege of serving the missionary society. And to make the missionary spirit the warp and filling of a majority of their sermons. They would have us abandon the gospel and the church and preach missionary.

Well, so far as I am concerned, they may have all the glory of such a course to themselves. I prefer to preach the gospel and to build up the church: and if I can get men and women converted to Christ, I shall have them about right; and then they will give of their means to those who work for the church and extend its borders, not through a human society; but through the one body—the church.

Beside this society, they have what they call the "General Convention." To become an Annual member of this, you must pay $5.00. A Life member $50.00, and a Life Director by the payment of $100. They are all money institutions of purely human origin: and in which no true Christian has any place. They aim, however, to usurp all the authority in the congregations of the church, so we must contest every inch of ground and try and keep the brethren posted. They are frittering away the entire apostolic teaching—apologizing for sectarian ignorance, and false doctrine, and abusing every one who contends earnestly for the faith. We are ever ready to meet them before an intelligent people on all departures, so let them come. Grace and mercy to all.

I. C. STONE.

THE ADMINISTRATOR—ONCE MORE.

Brethren:

We have read Bro. Hawkins on the administratorship, and favor his position for several reasons:

1. Moses and the priesthood were God's administrators during the Mosaic dispensation.

2. John the Baptist and his disciples were his administrators during the preparatory dispensation.

3. The apostles and their disciples were the administrators for this dispensation.

Now, inasmuch as God forbids administrators outside of his kingdom, we forbid those outside of the kingdom to baptize.

Yours for the truth,

H. H. MONTGOMERY,
H. D. KELLEY.

Rocky Mount, La.

I had written this article before receiving Bro. Richardson's on the same subject. His article in last F. F. was clear and to my mind conclusive. I offer nothing new, but present the same ideas from a different standpoint and hope that the above brethren will note specially the points made.

The question is frequently asked, "who has the right to baptize?" It is generally answered, "that none but a proper administrator should baptize." This gives rise to the question: "What constitutes a proper administrator?" But why determine this question? Because, it is said, the validity of baptism depends upon having a proper administrator.

The above question has been variously answered, but I believe that the orthodox world generally, takes the position that none but regularly ordained ministers of the gospel are proper administrators. Hence in their view the validity of baptism depends upon the official relationship of the administrator. Our brethren have generally taught that all Christians, except the sisters, have the right to preach and baptize; and just now some are contending that the validity of baptism depends upon the administrator being a Christian. It seems, however, that they cannot come to any settled determination about it, and in order to assist their investigations I offer the following suggestions:

1. God has ordained preaching as a means of salvation, 1 Cor. 1: 23, and Rom. 10: 13-15. The power to save is not in the preacher, but in the things preached, Rom. 1: 16-17. So then the preacher is not to receive the honor or the glory, but God who gives the increase, 1 Cor. 3: 5-7. Faithful men were required as preachers, (2 Tim. 2: 1), in order that they might teach the truth—that truth that makes us free. But there were false prophets among the people in ancient times, and God says of them: "I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran: I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied. But if they had stood in my counsel and had ceased my people to hear my words, then they should have turned them from their evil way and from the evil of their doings," Jer. 23: 21-22. Now did the value or validity of the faith depend upon the preachers above alluded to, or upon the false prophets? No; the power of faith or its validity, depends upon what is believed. There were false teachers or preachers in the days of the apostles, alluded to in Phil. 1: 18. Those who preached "through envy and strife," "not sincerely," were certainly not Christians in character, though, perhaps, nominally members of the church. But Paul says, he rejoiced that they preached Christ. We have one clear point thus far: that the validity of our faith depends not upon the official or spiritual character of the preacher, but upon the thing preached.

2. Preaching was not only ordained in order to faith, (Rom. 10: 14-15 and 1 Cor. 1: 23); but also in order to the obedience of faith, Rom. 1: 5, and 16: 26. There can be no faith without preaching; no preaching without a preacher and no obedience of faith without an administrator; and as the validity of faith does not depend upon the preacher, so the validity of baptism or obedience does not depend upon the official or spiritual character of the administrator.

3. The baptism that takes us into Christ, or "into the one body," when viewed from the divine side is "by the Holy Spirit," 1 Cor. 12: 13. "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body."

Now, if you want administratorship, here it is: By denotes agency, and the Holy Spirit is thus presented as the proper administrator. But this needs some further explanation, "Christ loved the church and gave himself for it that he might sanctify it, and cleanse it, with the washing of water, by the word," Eph. 5: 25-26. The washing of water is admitted by all scholars to be baptism, or the obedience of faith. It is here ascribed to the word as agent, just as baptism above is ascribed to the Spirit.

But how does the word wash us with water? In Heb. 10: 8, Paul speaks of sacrifices "offered by the law," and we know that this means, those sacrifices offered in accordance with the instructions given in the law. Hence we conclude that to be "baptized by the Spirit," or "washed with water by the word," is to be baptized in accordance with the instructions given in the gospel of Christ. If this be done, the baptism is valid, so far as the administratorship is concerned.

Official character cannot give efficacy to any of the means or instrumentalities ordained of God; nor can moral character affect them only as it influences the man who handles them, to suppress, pervert or change them, and the truth thus perverted is made void, Mark 7: 13. But if the gospel be preached in its purity, and its ordinances be ministered as directed by the Spirit, it matters not what the official or moral character of the preacher may be, it will not invalidate faith and obedience.

Water will quench thirst from an earthen vessel just as well as from a silver pitcher; nor will putting it into the silver pitcher add anything to its power to quench thirst. Just as the waters of salvation will not isfy the thirsty soul as fully and thoroughly when received from "an earthen vessel, (any administrator,) as when received from the "silver pitcher," (the "proper administrator.")

4. One more suggestion, and I close my part of this subject. It is taught and believed most surely among us that baptism is an act of obedience and that this obedience must be from the heart. But how can it be my act if the validity of it depends upon the administrator? I have nothing whatever to do with providing the means, instrumentalities or agencies in salvation; that is God's part. I hear the gospel and believe it with all my heart, and am ready, willing, and anxious as the Eunuch was to obey, and it is God's part to supply the administrator, and this he has provided in the command to preach the gospel. For as the whole includes all the parts, so everything necessary on the divine side to bring salvation to the sinner is ordained. Hence, when the sinner "hears and learns of the Father," when he receives the word of God into an honest heart and understands it, he yields obedience to the command as directed by the Spirit—this is valid baptism. To obey a baptism, as directed by man, like our orthodox neighbors, is not valid baptism—it is not by the Spirit, nor by the word. J. W. J.

"THE PRODIGAL SON."

Many sermons have been written and preached on the parable of the prodigal son, but in all of them I have not read or heard one that I consider correct. The parable is found in the 15th chapter of Luke's testimony.

I do not lay claims to any very great degree of scholarship; neither do I claim to be smarter than those of my brethren whom I have heard attempt to give the true interpretation; but, nevertheless, I think they are all wrong, and I have the confidence to believe myself able to show by fair rules of interpretation the incorrectness of the two most popular theories, or interpretations of this parable.

In all my reading and studying of the Scriptures, I have tried to make them harmonize. When I place an interpretation upon a certain parable or passage, I am careful to see if it agrees with the context. If the interpretation does not agree with all other passages bearing upon the point, the interpretation is false and should be rejected and the true one adopted.

If we are not sure we are right, better not put any construction at all upon the passage in question; lest we "wrest the Scriptures to our own destruction." Hoping the reader will bear in mind what I have said, I will now proceed to give the theories in order:

First Theory: The advocates of the first theory claim that it is a national parable, that is, the "certain man," (verse 11), or the father of the two boys represents God, and the elder son represents the Jewish nation, and the younger son the Gentile nations. They say, the Jews objected to receiving the Gentiles into the church, (see Acts, 11 chapter), and the elder son objected to receiving his brother back into his father's house, therefore Jesus must have intended to convey the idea of a national parable.

I will offer two objections to the above theory. Objection first: It does not agree with the context. The two parables in the same chapter just before this, have no such idea. Second objection: In the 29th verse, the elder son said to his father: "Lo these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment; and yet thou never gavest me a kid that I might make merry with my friends." If the elder son represents the Jewish nation then, the Jews never did "transgress" the law of God, or break his covenant. I do not believe that Jesus ever intended to convey such an idea; he knew they had been highly favored above all other nations on the earth and that God had been merciful to them, and notwithstanding His goodness and mercy, they were disobedient and hard-hearted. Yes, they had disobeyed his laws and statutes and broken his "everlasting covenant" and were guilty of many other sins too numerous to mention. The national idea does not fit.

Second Theory: The second theory is what I am pleased to term the orthodox theory. The advocates of this theory say, the father represents God, the elder son the church member, the younger son the alien sinner, and the house into which the prodigal was received, the church. This is a favorite theme for Methodist preachers on a big revival occasion. I am prepared to show the above theory to be false and foreign from the Savior's idea. First, The God of the Bible loves sinners, (John 3:16). The orthodox God hates sinners. Second, The "Father" in the parable ran out to meet his boy when he saw him "afar off fell on his neck and kissed him" and took him into his house, and the orthodox idea of God, (judging from their practice), is this: the old man should have gone into the house when he saw his boy coming, and shut the door, and the servants should have held a protracted meeting outside, begging and pleading with the father to come out and receive the boy. Imagine you see the servants beating this poor weary prodigal in the back and telling him to "pray on and perhaps the father will come out and bless him" and "speak peace to his soul."

How many prodigals have gone away disappointed and unpardoned? And false teachers who advocate the above theory are to blame. If the Methodist preachers believe there is any truth in this parable of our Savior, then they ought to know that their theory and practice is false and misleading. As I have no hope of converting any of the blind guides and false teachers from the error of their way, I will stop this part of the subject.

Third Theory: I will now try my hand and see what the reader may think of it. I claim that the father stands for Jesus the great teacher, (or "God manifested in the flesh.") The elder son stands for the scribes and Pharisees, and younger son stands for the "publicans and sinners."

Now for the proof: In the beginning of this 15th chapter Luke says: "Then drew near unto him, all the publicans and sinners for to hear him, and the Pharisees and scribes murmured saying, this man receiveth the sinners and eateth with them." Jesus spake three parables to the Pharisees and scribes. Proof: "And he spake this parable unto them (the Pharisees and scribes) saying: what man of you having a hundred sheep, and having lost one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost until he find it? And when he hath found it he layeth it on his shoulder rejoicing, and when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbors saying, rejoice with me for I have found the sheep that was lost. I say unto you, that even so, there shall be joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine righteous persons that need no repentance."

The parable of the woman and the ten pieces of silver, is illustrative of the same idea. Now what is the idea? If we can get the true interpretation of the two first, we will certainly have the true one to the one under consideration. Those self-righteous scribes and Pharisees were always finding fault with the great teacher, either by trying to entrap him in his preaching by asking him difficult questions, or murmuring and complaining at him because, as Luke says, he "receiveth sinners and eateth with them."

In this instance when they began to murmur and complain at him, Jesus turned and addressed three parables to them. He seems to address them, after this manner: I came into the world to do my Father's will, and to save my people from their sins. You are so good and so righteous you don't need any Savior; or as Jesus said on another occasion, (Luke 5: 31-32): "And Jesus answering said unto them (scribes and Pharisees, verse 30), They that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. I came not to call the righteous, (like you scribes and Pharisees claim to be), but sinners to repentance."

The above quotation is a key to the parable under consideration. When the elder son came in and saw what was going on, he was very angry and "would not go in." The scribes and Pharisees would not accept the principles of his kingdom, and they became angry and murmured at Jesus for teaching the publicans and harlots, who gladly heard him. Do you see the point, reader? When the father "entreated him, he answered and said to his father: Lo these many years do I serve thee, and I never transgressed a commandment of thine, (new version), and yet thou never gavest me a kid that I might make merry with my friends; but when this thy son came who hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou killedest for him the fatted calf."

This self-righteous boy was not willing to have his brother come back home and enjoy the good things of his father's house. Notwithstanding the elder son's objection, the father received him with the kiss of reconciliation, and there was rejoicing in that house.

In conclusion I wish to say to the readers that, I have come to the above conclusions by careful study; they may not be free from objections. I am not dogmatic on such subjects. Some may want to criticize, do so if you wish; yet I think there are other subjects more interesting and profitable. I have said enough for this time.

Respectfully,
A. J. McCARTY.
A CALL.

To the Disciples of Little River, Serier and Howard Counties, Arkansas.

Brethren and sisters, there are enough of us in these three counties to keep an evangelist in the field of labor all the time, and I suggest that we form a co-operation among us, and that the Elders or pastors of each congregation bring the subject up before the church, and let us decide how will be best to bring about such a thing, if thought practicable. Brethren, talk about this matter, and I wish that each congregation would advise me by mail as soon as possible the conclusion they come to. Yours in hope,
C. C. SWART.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have been a close reader of the F. F. ten months; would not give it for all the papers I have read. When I first began to read the F. F. I was a member of the Masonic fraternity, F. A. P. T. U. and the prohibition party, and used one dollar worth of tobacco per month. I have quit them all, for which I give the F. F. the credit of pointing me to the Scriptures that showed me my errors. Your brother in Christ.

Mr. A. McGary:

As times are hard at present I will send you one dollar now. Will you please send me the paper still? as I think it is a good paper, although I am no member of the church, but my wife is a member, and we both like to read your paper. Please send it on and I will send more money later.

Yours truly,

"HE IS OF AGE, ASK HIM."

We find this language in the 9th of John, and, as it is prompted by the same spirit of craven cowardice that now prompts so many of our brethren in their relations to and treatment of the FIRM FOUNDATION and the unalloyed doctrine it disseminates, we will try to draw a short lesson for these brethren, from the circumstances that surrounded these "parents," when they said of their son, who had been given sight by Jesus, "He is of age; ask him."

First, here we find the ancient Pharisees, whose "sanctified common sense" had reached beyond the will of God in so many particulars. In this instance the trouble grew out of their added notions about "the Sabbath day." God had ordained the Sabbath day and clearly fixed its bounds; but these Pharisees did not stop where God stopped, but went on beyond what was written and made the Sabbath day cover grounds that God had not aimed it should.

As Jesus was passing along, his eye fell upon "a man who was blind from his birth;" and his compassionate heart was instantly "touched with the feeling of his infirmities," and he gave the blind man sight. But it was on "the Sabbath day," and these Pharisees had a notion about the Sabbath day, that it was not lawful to heal on that day. I don't know that they called their notions about this, "our plea," but it was theirs; for it was not God's, as He had not expressed such a will in reference to the Sabbath. This Pharisee party among the Jews was a strong and influential party; and when one incurred their displeasure, if they did not "let them severely alone" they treated them in some severe way. So they rose up against Jesus for this act of beneficence, because he had disregarded the tradition of the fathers of their "reformation"—reforming the expressed will of God. To speak their displeasure and side with Jesus, who had raised an issue with them by disregarding their "sanctified common sense" notions about "the Sabbath day," required no little courage, for they fairly scolded with rage against Jesus and whosoever had the hardihood to side with him. They would cast all such "out of the synagogues."

This was more than the parents of the blind man could muster courage to stand. So they took the "middle ground"—the "golden mean"—or "got on the fence," as it is sometimes expressed. They knew full well that Jesus had healed their son; and the fire of parental love, if nothing else, would have impelled them to have said so, and to have followed after Jesus, if they had not been over-awed by the fear of being put out of the synagogue. Their son spoke boldly for his benefactor and was "cast out;" but his parents escaped this indignity and dishonor by saying: "We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind: But by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who hath opened his eyes, we know not; he is of age; ask him; he shall speak for himself." What lying hypocrites they were; but it served their purpose, kept them in the synagogue and insured the friendship of the Pharisees.

So much, then, for the ancient Pharisees in transcending the will of God, and for these cowardly Jews who turned away from Jesus and their own son and acted contrary to well-known truth, and truckled to the traditions of the Pharisees to retain their friendship and a seat in the synagogue.

Brethren, history is repeating itself! We now know many who are turning away from "the truth as it is in Jesus" and are toadying to our modern Pharisees who have gotten up a notion, called by them, "our plea." This plea is founded upon the tradition of "the fathers of this reformation," and upon the "sanctified common sense" of these modern Pharisees. Our Lord ordained baptism and gave it a fixed design. These Pharisees, like their ancient sort did with "the Sabbath day," have gone beyond the Lord's design for baptism and invented designs of their own. The Lord designed this ordinance for those who were taught the gospel preached by his apostles, and who believed that gospel just as they taught it, "beginning at Jerusalem," just as they taught "repentance and remission of sins," and just as they taught that, "with the heart man believes unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession (the good confession) is made unto salvation"—and, just as they taught that "faith comes by hearing the word of God."

But our modern Pharisees have fixed up a plea declaring that this ordinance is also for those who have not been taught these things and who have not confessed the Lord Jesus. Thus they render the commandments of God of none effect, by their traditions. But they, too, are casting out of the modern synagogues those who will not submit to their "sanctified common sense" notions about this ordinance. And many who know that this plea transcends the word of God, and that the FIRM FOUNDATION is contending for the true apostolic way, just as well as these cowardly parents knew that Jesus gave sight to their son, are acting as did these wicked parents and stultifying their consciences by saying, "We know not which position is true!"

Yes, they are continually picking the middle ground, to retain the respect and flattery of these modern Pharisees and to be let into their synagogues. Even some editors are wilfully pursuing this pusillanimous course. Some sons are denied the privileges of the synagogues, for speaking their convictions and the truth on this question, while their parents have retained seats in the synagogues by smothering their consciences and occupying "middle grounds."

The writer knows one true old sister who would be cast out of the synagogues of our cities for her devotion to the truth, whose son retains a right to enter them, by stifling his convictions and occupying middle ground. Poor abject cowards! they are selling their only true hopes for a "crown," for a mere mess of pharisaic "pottage." How cheaply they sell!

Brothers and sisters, let us be true disciples and "put on the whole armor of God," and "stand" for "the faith once delivered to the saints." Let us watch in all things, endure afflictions, despite the satanic machinations of the modern Pharisees who would deter us in the good fight of faith, by threatening to cast us out of modern synagogues. God is with us; who then can be against us?

In conclusion, I will say that, I have private letters from some who occupy prominent places among the disciples, who in these letters express strong wishes for the success of the FIRM FOUNDATION, and say that they have held our position on this baptismal question for years; but these same men are afraid to agitate this question boldly; and are even afraid to say, of the FIRM FOUNDATION, publicly, "It is of age; ask" it! Such men, by such a course, will enjoy the friendship of modern Pharisees, and seats in their synagogues for a season; but in such things will their reward solely consist. Let those who "have not bowed the knee to Baal" never bow! Let those who esteem the riches of faith more than the flattery of these modern Pharisees, but who have unwittingly bowed the knee to Baal, remember that, "no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." Wherefore, brothers and sisters, "lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees; and make straight paths for your feet." A. MCG.

WAS GEN. LEE A CHRISTIAN?

Dr. Hardwick takes Dr. Andrews to task in Baptist Herald for arguing that Gen. Lee was not a Christian. Hardwick says he was, while Andrews says not. So they are divided. Meantime where is Gen. Lee? From the way these men write on the law of pardon we think it will be a question for men to settle by and by as to whether either of these men are Christians! We believe, however, that their own testimony might be taken in the case. They only claim to be Baptists. Hardwick says Lee was a Christian, because he believed in Christ, and cites Mark 16: 16, to prove it, and says Christ said, "He that believeth shall be saved." Christ did not say it, nor does it read that way. Christ said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." The little word "and" makes something besides faith necessary. Will Bro. Hardwick say Lee was baptized? No, sir. Then what does he do? He perverts God's word. He garbles it, and tells only half the truth, in order to get a great general into heaven. Such teaching is an abomination. Heaven has no immunity for a great general which it has not for the humblest peasant of earth. "God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation, he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted of him." God accepts character, not earthly titles.

The reason more people are not baptized, and the reason there are not more Christians, is because the professed teachers of God's word will not cease to pervert the right way of the Lord. A man who dare not tell the whole truth, in speaking the Lord's message to a dying world, had better not speak at all.—John T. Poe, in Christian Messenger.

The above are true and well-said words. But few men seem willing to go to record denying the salvation of such popular men as Gen. Lee. But while Gen. Lee was a brave soldier in "wrestling against flesh and blood," with "carnal weapons," and was, perhaps, as noble and good as it is possible for man to be without the transforming "power of God"—the gospel of Jesus Christ—he was not a Christian, if we have been correctly informed about him, unless the doctrine preached by the apostles of Christ has lost its heaven-bound force and power.

The Savior said: "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." Was Gen. Lee "born of water and the Spirit"? Not if we have been correctly informed. Then he did not and cannot enter into the kingdom of God, if the Son of God told the truth when he spoke the above words. Who then will make a square issue with Christ, to pronounce Gen. Lee a Christian?

If Gen. Lee had been a Christian he would have entered the kingdom of God, for that which makes one a Christian also translates him out of the "kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son." Col. 1: 13. Was Gen. Lee "buried with Christ by baptism"? Not if we have been correctly informed. If not, he did not "obey from the heart that term of doctrine which was delivered" by the apostles of the Lord Jesus—see Rom. 6: 4 and 17. Then if he did not obey this specific apostolic doctrine, he was not "made free from sin and did not become a "servant of righteousness"—see Rom. 6: 17-18. If he was not made free from sin and did not become a servant of righteousness he did not become a Christian, for that which frees from sin, at the same time makes one a Christian and a servant of righteousness. As many as "have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ"—see Gal. 3: 27. To put on Christ one must be "buried with him in baptism," Rom. 6: 4, Col. 2: 12—must be "born of water and the Spirit," John 3: 5.

So, if we have not been misinformed about Gen. Lee's religious status, in the light of these Scriptures we must say that he did not "put on Christ;" and if he did not put on Christ, he was not a Christian. To do these things which makes one a Christian is otherwise expressed as obeying "the law of the Spirit of life in Jesus Christ"—see Rom. 8: 2. Paul was not made free from sin till he became so by obeying the law, which was delivered to him through Ananias—see Acts 22: 16.

God's ways are not our ways. He looks not upon the person of generals, kings, or potentates with any more favor than upon the poorest pauper that passes through this world in his rags. We would not detract one iota from the illustrious name of this brave soldier of a lost human cause, if we could. Among the military chieftains from Julius Caesar to the last one that has lifted up his sword, we do not believe the annals of history can produce one, whose moral excellence will equal that of Gen. Robt. E. Lee. But morality and Christianity are very different things. And we are not doing the "judging" when we deny that Gen. Lee was a Christian; but we are applying the rule by which we are to "try all things;" and this judgment is God's and not ours. How silly the world has become under the bewildering fogs of spiritual "Babylon." A. McG.

FROM BRO. LEE JACKSON.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I admire your bold and conscientious manner of defending what you conceive to be the truth, and I would like to enter into an investigation of what you term "sect baptism" with you, if you have no objections to giving a little Alabama preacher a little space and attention.

I am a seeker after truth and I want to draw out, if possible, the very best things that you have to say in favor of the necessity of an individual understanding that baptism is for remission of sins in order to valid baptism. If you are right, I want to know it, for I am satisfied that I want to preach the truth. On the other hand, if my present position will bear the test of an investigation, I want to know that. I will begin by asking you two or three questions:

1. Can there be any genuine obedience to a command where the design of the command is unknown?
2. Is not the cleansing efficacy for remission of sins in the blood of Christ and baptism only the door through which we pass to reach that blood?
3. If so, is it necessary for the sinner to understand the true relationship between the blood of Christ and baptism in order to remission of sins, before his baptism can be valid?

Awaiting a reply through your paper, I am, respectfully your brother in Christ,

LEE JACKSON.
Landersville, Ala.

(1) It depends entirely upon whether or not the command is to be "obeyed from the heart." In God's ordinances of baptism and the Lord's supper, as we call the partaking of the emblems of bread and wine which represent his broken body and shed blood, we must "obey from the heart," which necessarily takes an antecedent understanding.

(2) As the Bible does not call "baptism only the door through which we pass to reach that blood" we do not so call it.

(3) When any one understands that Christ shed his blood that the way to salvation from sin might be opened to sinners, and that he rose from the dead to demonstrate his divine mission, and then understands that he commanded baptism as the ordinance for the remission of sins, that one understands the "true relationship between the blood of Christ and baptism in order to the remission of sins" about as thoroughly as any man does or can. I know theological schoolmen talk very learnedly about the "blood of Christ" in such a way that one is almost ready to suppose they knew where a secret, literal pool of it ever stands ready for their pious fingers to be dipped into. Many men write about the blood of Christ in a very unwise way.

In conclusion, my brother, I will say that, I will cheerfully investigate this question with you, if you will try to show the authority for the practice of receiving persons on these unintelligent immersions. This is what we deny. If you are not willing to lead out and endeavor to show this authority, we can not consent to publish and reply to your articles, as we have already more than we can publish, wanting us to affirm a negative. You write like an honest man, and I hope you are willing to try to prove what you teach, and what we deny, instead of wanting to deny our denial.

FROM SISTER TAYLOR.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Please accept a few lines from a sister, as it is my first to the F. F. There is a small congregation here; we have been having preaching once a month, by Bro. J. W. Bratcher; but our little congregation is somewhat confused—there came a preacher here by the name of Kenner, who claimed to be an evangelist belonging to the church of Christ; he claims that baptism administered with the ceremony of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost does not apply to us.

He says that, we should be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. He is preaching and baptizing all that will be baptized. Some of the brethren and sisters have been baptized by him. Please publish this and give an explanation of the subject through the F. F. for the benefit of the brethren and sisters.

Yours truly,
MOLLIE A. TAYLOR
Eagle Hill, Ark.

To baptize "in the name of the Lord Jesus" is to baptize into his name or authority, as all standard translations will show. This is done when one is baptized "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit," Matt. 28: 19. The name or authority of the Father is vested in the Son, for the Son "came to do the will of the Father." The Son went back to the Father and sent the Holy Spirit to operate through the apostles and communicate his will.

So, then, the name or authority of the Lord Jesus is also the name or authority into which Jesus directed persons to be baptized, when He said: "Go disciple all the nations, immersing them into the name (or authority) of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit," Matt. 28: 19—this is not the King James rendering, but it is the rendering of the Emphatic Diaglott, which all recognize as the better rendering. The authority of the Holy Spirit uttered through the apostles is the authority of the Son, the Lord Jesus; and the authority of the Son, the Lord Jesus, is the authority of God the Father.

A teacher who would reject a baptism because it had been done "into the name of the Father, and of the Holy Spirit," would exclude the co-operation of God and the Holy Spirit from his work; and when he does this he also excludes the Son; for these three are one in their name and authority.

FROM BROS. N. E. AND J. D. NICKS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

If you will send the F. F. on I will pay for it when I get the money. Money is very scarce here now. I like your paper and would not be without it for anything.

Yours in Christ,

N. E. NICKS,
J. D. NICKS.

P. S.—I want to ask you about something the Southern Methodists of this county affirm. They say there never was a person who was baptized in childhood who was ever hanged or sent to the penitentiary. If this is true, baby-sprinkling is a great protection through life. They further say, immersionists have searched for such a case in vain. They except those sprinkled by the Roman Catholics. Please state what you know about this. I have no right to deny it unless I knew it was not true. J. D. NICKS.
Bakersfield, Mo.

I know it is false, though no more so than many other things they say and teach. Their whole system of religion is false, because it is not of Christ, but of the adversary. What they say about no one ever having been hanged or sent to the penitentiary, who was baptized in childhood, is also of the evil one, because he is the father of lies, and this is one of his most robust children—unless they mean by baptism, what it really is, immersion. If they mean this, it might not be a lie, because they don't immerse children, but sprinkle them—they might get out of it on this ground. Or, it may be that, those sprinkled in babyhood in Missouri, make such sleek rascals that they can't be caught—you know, "catching comes before hanging," or before sending to the penitentiary.

But, if you will send a committee of those Methodists down to Texas, I will agree to show them many, now in our penitentiary, who were sprinkled in childhood. Yes, I will show them one who was named after the great John Wesley, and who was sprinkled in childhood, John Wesley Hardin. He is one of our most notorious convicts. And I think it would be no trouble to show that men have paid the death penalty on the gallows in Texas who were sprinkled in childhood, and many more that ought to pay it. Send this committee along, if you can get them to come; but if some of them did not lodge in the Texas penitentiary and never get back it would be a wonder, even though they were sprinkled in childhood.

Why make a distinction against the Roman Catholics? If there is any virtue in sprinkling, for babes or adults, the Roman Catholic church is entitled to credit and honor for that virtue, for they originated it.

We admit that immersion does not keep people out of prison. Paul and Silas, and Peter and John, and many other early disciples were immersed, and yet they were some times put in prison. But they were never sprinkled. I wonder if Paul and Silas would have escaped their imprisonment at Philippi if they had been sprinkled when they were babies? I wonder if Jesus would have escaped the cross, if he had been sprinkled instead of circumcised in childhood? But the devil was never sprinkled, that we know of and do not know that he was hanged or put in the penitentiary—but most all rules have their exceptions.

There is one thing I will say in conclusion: Sprinkling in childhood, nor in age will keep people out of hell, even if it were true that it will keep them out of the penitentiary, for the Son of God said: "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God," John 3: 5. Who had not rather go to the penitentiary than to hell? But if our Methodist friends really think sprinkling will keep people out of the penitentiary, by all means let them sprinkle for that purpose; and then baptize for the remission of sins to put them in the kingdom of God and to escape hell. A. McG.

FROM BRO. STARNES.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Please answer the following question through the columns of the F.

F. If a man be married and put his wife away for committing adultery, and be married to another, and he and she become members of the Church, can he be an Elder of the Church? Success to your paper. For the truth.

T. B. STARNEK.

When a man is divorced from a wife because of adultery on her part, in the eyes of the law of man and God she is no longer his wife. When God separates man and wife, as he does for the cause of adultery, they are no more man and wife than they were before they were married. That man is then wholly without a wife. If he marries another woman he is then a man of "one wife;" and if he have the other qualifications laid down in the Christian's thoroughly furnishing guide-book, he is God's elder, it seems to me, whether men recognize him as such or not. It is no fault of the man that his wife is guilty of adultery, nor of the wife when the husband is guilty of this grave offense. Let us preserve the harmony and consistency of the Scriptures with a vigilant and scrupulous eye. This we think we have done in this answer.

THE NEW BIRTH.

Jesus said to Nicodemus, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3: 5. This shows, without a doubt, a man can not enjoy the privileges of the kingdom of God without the birth of water and Spirit.

Nicodemus, like many at this age of the world, did not understand the new birth. It can be understood, and must be, if a man wishes to enjoy salvation.

To get this matter clearly before your mind, I first call your attention to that work of the Spirit in the new birth. Doubtless it would aid us much in giving the explanation of the Spirit, to know in what gender Jesus used it. "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; it is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment: Of sin because they believed not on me; of righteousness, because I go to my Father and ye see me no more; of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged. I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot hear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself, but whatsoever he shall hear that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come."—John 16: 7-12.

In this quotation you see our Savior makes the Spirit in the masculine gender. This being true, then let us see his (the Spirit's) work in the new birth. Christ said this Spirit would guide the apostles into all truth. When was this work to begin? "And being assembled together with them commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father which, saith he, ye have heard of me."—Acts 1: 4.

They wait at Jerusalem as directed, and while there he, (the Spirit,) comes and he begins, as Jesus said, to guide them into all truth. Peter stands up before the people and speaks as the Spirit guides him. Directly from heaven the Spirit comes to Peter and passing through him it goes into the hearts of the people. Well, what does all this do for them? Let us hear Peter again: "Seeing you have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently: being born again, not of corruptible seed, but incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." 1 Peter 1: 22-23. Peter says they "obeyed the truth through the Spirit," and the Spirit came through the apostles. By thus receiving the truth God does something for man. Now let us see what that is: "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his creatures."

Truth was in the Spirit when it came from heaven to Peter and the other apostles, and the same truth passed from the apostles into the hearts of the people who heard and accepted it; therefore they were begotten by the Lord with the word of truth. So this is the work of the Spirit in the new birth.

To tell how the spiritual man is made, we may never be able to understand, as Jesus illustrated in the 8th verse of the 3rd chapter of John. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit."

He says we hear the sound of the wind, but from whence it comes, or whither it goes, we cannot tell. But people some times say the wind is coming from the north, south, east or west. Let a man try to find east, and he fails. He can travel in what is called an eastward direction, but he never finds what is called east. So if a man is not able to find east, he is not able to find where the wind comes from. Neither can he tell where it will stop blowing.

So, Jesus says, is every one that is born of the Spirit. The farmer plants his corn, but he cannot tell how corn is made. He knows what makes it. He knows earth, rain, sun, air and cultivation will make it; but the how these elements make it, he cannot tell. We know what will make the spiritual man, if a man will give an open ear, an honest heart, to the truth it will make a new man. So we cannot tell any more about how a man is born of the Spirit than we can about where the wind comes from, or where it goes.

In conclusion, I wish to say something about the water spoken of in the 3rd chapter of John. The sects tell us, the word, water, in this chapter does not mean water but Spirit. Let us see how it will do to use the word, Spirit, instead of water. "Except a man be born of Spirit and Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." If the word, water means Spirit, in that verse it must mean evil spirit, as we have mentioned once in the same verse the Holy Spirit. Let us read, "Except a man be born of the Holy Spirit and evil spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

To make the word, water, mean anything in that verse but water, it would seem to me absurdity in the deepest dye. Jesus said, water and Spirit without any modification. Hence that is exactly what he meant. Paul said we are baptized into Christ. Christ said, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. In thus acting a man gets into the kingdom of God. Then according to Jesus, he is born of water and Spirit. May the Lord help us to learn and appreciate the truth.

ORDER VS. CONFUSION.

In this article I shall inquire after the right of God's children belonging to those friendly fraternities, such as the Masons and Odd Fellows. Now I wish it distinctly understood at the beginning, that I am not opposed to either as worldly institutions; neither am I opposed to those who belong to the world becoming members of, and running their own worldly institutions. For, like the world, they are worldly and will all soon pass away. But I am going to speak of those who have or may become members of the body of Jesus Christ on earth remaining or becoming members of either, after having been begotten and born of the incorruptible seed of the kingdom. In their new, spiritual and divine relation to God I believe it is wrong, notwithstanding the fact that we have many good brethren that to-day stand identified with one or both.

It is with no unkind feeling that I write, but out of love for their eternal well-being, and for God and the cause that Christ died to establish, in and through which alone God's children may work for the glory of God and the real good of humanity. Believing as I do that many good brethren belong to these orders. Not because they are desirous of doing anything wrong, or that would cripple the cause of the Master; but because they have not been taught that it is wrong, or not sufficiently so, to cause them to investigate the subject carefully from a Bible standpoint.

Now I presume that none will say that, they are anything more than worldly institutions, and this being so, we, as the children of God, are required not to be "conformed to the world," or the fashions and orders of the world, Rom. 12: 2.

What does the word, conform, mean? Webster defines it to mean, (1) To make like; (2) To comply; (3) To yield. This being so, may I not ask, are you not conforming to the world by yielding to, and complying with the requirements of a worldly institution, and thereby becoming like those of the world that belong to those orders? Are you not "unequally yoked together with unbelievers"? I think so for the reason that the Jews and infidels are members of both. Again, do you not have some love for them? And if so, John says to you, "love not the world neither the things of the world," and why? He answers: "If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him."

Now do not think that I will "accuse you to the Father; there is one that accuseth you," even God's word, that we have promised to accept as our guide through life, 1 John 2: 15. Now the object of these orders in the world as worldly institutions is that of benevolence, and as such they may do some good. But I deny the right of God's children working in and through either for the accomplishment of any such good ends. Because he is "perfect and thoroughly furnished unto all good works;" and he is instructed to do all he does in the "name of Christ" in and through the church to the glory of God.

Now, brethren, do you do anything you do in either, for the good of mankind by the authority of Christ? And if so, please let me know where in his word I may find the much needed information? Now I trust you will not become impatient with me, for you must, as Christian brethren, realize the importance of this at once. For if right for you, it is for me, and if for either, it is because God has so required it; and if so, the requirement is to be found in this word, and that under the reign of Christ; come, now, up and to your duty to correct a brother from the "error of his way," and save a soul from death and cover a multitude of sins." What a grand work for you!

But there are some other reasons why I think it is wrong for us as his children to belong to and do deeds of charity through these orders. Because it has a tendency to weaken the influence of the church and paralyze her efforts for good. Because when Christians take of their means that their Father has blessed them with, and give them through either; the order through which they are given gets all the praise, and it has a very crippling and paralyzing effect on the church. Yes, God is robbed both of his glory and money.

Now, brethren, the question for us to settle on this point is, have we the right to give our money and influence to the upbuilding of any cause or order that is working detriment to the church that Jesus has "purchased with his own precious blood"? I say, nay, verily. For all we have belongs to the Lord, and therefore we should do all that we do to glorify God with our souls, bodies, spirits and money, "which are his." When you give of your money through either, do you not say in that act that you are not "thoroughly furnished as the man of God" to that particular work? How often have you heard men say, ah, the Masonic Institution is as good as the church, anyway! Yes, did you ever hear a brother say? "Ah, the church wont do it." And how did you feel?

Now I have heard both; and I have heard men say they belonged to the Lodge, and therefore thought they would go to heaven, because they had been doing some good deeds. Ah! Pray tell me in whose name they were performed? Not in the name of Christ. But how comes it that men say the Lodge is as good as the church? Because of the actions of those that claim to be his children in regard to them.

Brethren, have you never thought that you were assisting in moulding just such a state of things? What else could have impressed the world with such a thought? Now if we would do as they did in the days of the apostles and early Christians, we would make different impressions on the world. Yes, every effort would be to restore the church to her original loftiness as the only luminary of the world, and the heaven-born institution in and through which men may work to the honor of God and the securing of their soul's salvation. Say, when your chaplain offers prayer, does he do it in the name of Christ? And if so, how do your Jewish brethren seem to take it? And if not in his name, pray tell me in whose name it is?

Then, again, have we the right to do anything, or belong to any order or society, in which the name of Jesus must be kept in the back ground?

Once more: You know that our ability and accountability run hand and hand; or, in other words, God requires us to do all we have the ability to do, day by day, in and through the church. This being so, we have neither time nor money for the upbuilding or advancement of any such orders. This being the truth, will you tell me how you will account to God in the judgment day for the time and money spent in this direction?

Now, brethren, when we have anything to give, and an object of charity presents itself, let us go and do it in the name of Christ as a Christian, as a matter of duty to God, because he requires it at our hands; and not because some worldly order has required it; and then you see it would have a direct tendency to elevate the cause we claim to love. Yes, the orphans and widows would think of the church, and on to the "author" of it, and their hearts would well up to the throne of God in gratefulness for having given the world a system, the principles of which are so elevating to those who have espoused them. Yes, indeed, it would make the church shine as the light of the world, and the people would say, let us cast our lot among them and be Christians such as they are.

Now what I have written has been done in full view of the judgment and my responsibility to God, as one that should ever "watch for your souls," and that must give an "account to the chief Shepherd and Bishop of your souls." May the grace of God be with all the true Israel of God. Your brother in hope of eternal life.

FROM SISTER RICHARDSON.

To-day a sister sent me two numbers of the F. F. Have read and re-read them. I think each successive number the best, but May 15th is—well, if it is not the best, it is certainly very good. The FIRM FOUNDATION has many warm friends in this country, though hardly half that read it are subscribers. Not a fair way of doing business? Well, it does look like getting something of real cost and value for nothing, and that, too, at the expense of others, and, if we are blessed with good crops this year, we will quit this ugly practice.

Those of the brethren here who are subscribers are kind enough to loan their papers, and so they go from house to house preaching the word. I have only met a few brethren who dislike the F. F., and they are without an exception of those who profess to have "liberal views," and not of that class who are forever contending for the "gospel in its purity." If there was ever a time in the history of the church in which the disciples should stand firm, and at the foot of the cross, it is now. But, sad to say, with many, the reverse is true. They have turned from the faith and brought reproach upon the cause of Christ.

A few stand, firmly grounded in the truth. Faithful beacon lights along the shores of a rough and boisterous sea. The waves of persecution may roll high, but higher and above all the voice of the Spirit speaks, "endure hardness as a good soldier." Fight the good fight of faith, ever looking to Jesus who will at last speak peace and crown with immortality and eternal life the faithful in his name.

I do so much like the stand you have taken against the innovations and worldly-mindedness in the church. Preachers spend a great deal of their time laboring to convert the world, that should be spent in trying to convert the church. It is an easy matter to go through the requirements of the gospel in order to become a Christian, but the warfare is then only begun. Every weight that would hinder the Christian must be laid aside and in their place must come those Christian graces, which illuminate, so to speak, the "new man in Christ," making him or his light to shine as a city set upon a hill. He must, to be acceptable to Christ, present his body a living sacrifice. There is no such thing as partial surrender, no half-way ground. If ye would be my disciples take up your cross and follow me. "Add to your faith virtue, to virtue knowledge, to knowledge temperance, to temperance patience, to patience godliness, to godliness brotherly kindness, to brotherly kindness charity, growing day by day into the likeness of him in whom dwelleth the fullness of beauty." Such a life is well-pleasing in His sight, and not only so but an influence for good, whose bounds is eternity.

May the glad day soon roll round when all who profess to wear the name of Christ shall put on the "whole armor" and go forth as an army with banners, conquering and to conquer. But my letter is already too long. Will some of the sisters give us a good lesson upon the subject of, Dress of Christian Women? Much has been said and written on this important subject, but much yet remains to be said. Fashion has in some places well nigh ruined the influence of the church. All admit this. Suppose we try to get up a reformatory movement among the sisterhood? It might work well and prove a blessing. Yours in the faith.

FROM SISTER CROCKETT.

Dear Sisters:

It has been quite a while since I have had a talk with you. I am a constant reader of the F. F. and how I do love to read the sister's letters.

Now I want to write a few thoughts on giving. The gospel of Christ from its Alpha to its Omega is a history of giving. God gave his only begotten Son; the Son gave himself; the Holy Spirit was given to those who had forsaken all and followed Christ. God spared not his Son but delivered him up for us all. Rom. 8: 32. Of Christ it is said, "though he was rich, yet for your sake he became poor," 2 Cor. 8: 2.

Now are we trying to imitate these divine lessons in giving, or are we trying to gain wealth and be looked up to by the rich? If the latter, I say, shame on such Christians; they are nothing more than money lovers and are idolaters, and no idolater hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ. "The love of money is the root of all evil, which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith and pierced themselves through with many sorrows."—1 Tim. 6: 9-10.

Christ is our exemplar. In what respects we should imitate him the apostolic writings clearly teach. "Lay not up for yourselves treasures in heaven," Matt. 6: 19-20. Let us be more careful, my dear sisters and brothers, let us not think more of a dollar than we do of the loving Master.

Some will say, oh, I don't believe in giving to a preacher, although he has to ride from twenty-five to fifty miles to preach; yet ask this self-same brother to do a days work for you and he will exact pay. Now, my dear brother, God will surely look on such conduct with no degree of allowance. Seldom do we ever see a whole-hearted Christian become rich. I, for one, don't want to be rich in this world's goods, but rich in good works.

Your sister in Christ,

EMMA CROCKETT.

Pocahontas, Ark.

FROM SISTER STEPHENS.

Bro. McGary:

I subscribed for your paper through Bro. Grubbs, and do not know whether he paid for it. If not, please let me know how much I am due you, and I will forward same shortly.

I was baptized by Bro. Fanning in 1841, and have taken some one of our papers every year since—except during the war while the "blockade" lasted. I am now 79 years old, and my son, (Dr. Stephens), is not willing for me to read so much. Consequently presume you had better discontinue it, as I cannot refrain from reading when it comes. I make a practice of reading my Bible through once a year. Have read "The Living Pulpit" three times, and other good books. I love the teaching of your F. F. and wish it success.

Yours in the hope of eternal life.

MRS. S. J. STEPHENS.

FROM A SISTER.

Dear Sisters:

I will write again, and especially to the snuff dipping ones; those who are always talking about hard times, and who need so many things and have nothing to buy with, but they can send 30 cents every two weeks to get them a bottle of snuff. Sum it up, dear sisters, and see how much you can spend in one year for the vile, poisonous stuff. Just think how many you could send the F. F. to if you would quit the filthy habit, and, perhaps, be the means of converting them to the true and living way. Oh, how much happiness it would be to you to know that you was the means of turning even one soul from the error of his way, and to know that you had denied yourself for Jesus' sake. We should deny ourselves daily, take up our crosses and follow in the foot prints of our blessed Savior.

There are two sisters here in our neighborhood, whom I have been trying to get to subscribe for the F. F., but they are always too poor; yet I see they keep their snuff, and get other things, that I would do without to get the F. F. They both have unconverted husbands, and they seem so unconcerned about them. They and all others that have an unconverted companion ought to have the F. F., and if your husbands wont read it, when you find a piece that suits their case, read it to them. If they are prejudiced against the truth, bear with them patiently, for I have had some experience in that line; but thanks be to God, he is at last converted to the religion of Jesus Christ. He says now, like the apostles of old, that he is not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for he believes it to be the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes it. I remain, your sister in the one faith.

FROM BRO. A. J. C.

Bro. McGary:

Please give us your views, through the F. F., on the propriety and scripturalness of having a church granary where the brethren can stow away grain as soon as threshed or gathered. Said grain to be distributed by the deacons and elders of the congregation to the Lord's poor of the church, who are in destitute circumstances, or to be used in having the gospel preached in waste places.

Such course, it seems to me, coupled with our weekly contributions, would enable the church to do more towards feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, and sending the gospel where it is not, than any other.

Please answer at your earliest convenience, and oblige your brother in Christ.

A. J. C.

Coleman, Texas.

We think it a good work indeed. Certainly no one can raise a dissenting voice to it. Doubtless some quibbler will raise the cry that this is not consistent with what we have taught heretofore about giving, but we are ready for criticism, while we bid Bro. A. J. C. and those who co-operate in this work "Godspeed."

A. McG.

FROM SISTER WILLIAMS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

For the $1.00 enclosed please send the F. F. one year to my brother R. P. Williams at Hanford, Tulare county, Cal., and please send me two copies of the "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," and one copy of "Zeke and the Methodists."

I have been a constant reader of your paper for several months, (subscribed for it in Jan.), and consider it the religious paper. I will be glad when it becomes a weekly, and am trying to get subscribers. I hope soon to be able to send several new names. Your sister.

SARAH WILLIAMS.

Nebo, Ill.

FROM BRO. HOLT.

Dear Bro. McGary:

The time of my subscription for the F. F. has about expired. I want you to send it on, and I will send you the money for it soon. I expect to read the paper as long as it is published, and I am permitted to live.

The cause is progressing very well in this part. I am preaching a great deal in destitute fields; consequently I get but little money. It is not money that I am preaching for, it is for the benefit of souls.

I am doing all in my power to increase the circulation of the F. F. In all of my travels I never fail to speak a good word for the F. F. I love its teachings, I admire its spirit, I glory in its aim. Press on, dear brother, God is for you; thousands of hearts beat with sympathy for you, and for all who are laboring with you. May the blessings of God rest upon you.

Your brother in Christ,

C. E. HOLT.

Cypress Inn, Tenn.

Many thanks to Bro. Holt for his kind and encouraging words. We do not know that he intended this for publication, but we publish it, knowing that it will be interesting and gratifying to many "like-minded" brothers and sisters. If it were not for the encouraging letters of such brothers and sisters, the poisoned shafts of slander hurled at us could not be so easily borne.

A. McG.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I send you a number of the F. F. for May, '86, for which I wish you to send me "Zeke and the Methodists," as I have never read that. We have one of the "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," and think no one could read it and fail to see the inconsistency of the Baptist doctrine. We have been sending ours around, as we have a great many brothers and sisters who have been shaken into the congregation. O, I would love to write a long letter, but as it would be of no use I will close. Your sister in Christ.

WHY GO TO HEAR THE SECTS.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough,

Not seeing anything from this place in the F. F., I thought I would write a short letter. It may benefit some.

Why do we go to hear the sects preach? Are we benefited by so doing? The first thing they tell you when they get up to preach is, that if the Holy Ghost speaks anything through them you will hear something, and if not, they will have to give way to another. Now, this is false, for the Holy Ghost don't speak through people now as it did in the days of the apostles. "Come out from among them and be ye separate with the Lord."

The next thing you hear from them is a prayer for the Lord to come in some unknown way and convert the sinner. Now is this in accordance with what Paul says?

He says that the "gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth," and pronounces a curse on any one that preaches any other gospel than the one he preached.

Your brother in Christ,
P. S. COEN.

Stinson, W. Va.

BRIEFS.

In ordering the paper or tracts write your name plainly, and give postoffice, county and state.

Don't send any more orders for the Oatman—McGary discussion, as we have no more on hand.

Bro. J. W. Strode reports two baptisms at Willow Grove, Nacogdoches county on June 2nd, '88.

Correspondents will please remember to send all money orders for subscriptions or for tracts, to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

Bro. J. E. Cartes, of Hill county, writing June 12th says: "I got into a talk with a Baptist last night after supper, and about 11 o'clock I took him to the creek and baptized him into Christ."

Brethren will please not grumble because their letters are briefed. It is impossible to publish all the letters received, and besides this, if you get to growling somebody will think that you are sick.

Bro. "Batte" writes from Chatfield and wants to know something about "the right hand of fellowship." In the F. F. of May 1st this subject was discussed; if any additional light is needed I hope that our senior editor, or some other able brother, will give it.

The Christian Quarterly for July, edited by E. W. Herndon, Columbia, Mo., is before us. This number is full of good things. Those desiring to read the best thoughts of some of our best writers, should send for the Quarterly. Price, two dollars per year; direct as above.

I will be absent from the office during most of this month, assisting the brethren in Hill county. Our meeting at Cobb Creek, Hill county, will begin, the Lord willing, Saturday night before the second Lord's day in July. During my absence Bro. Gillespie will attend to the "Briefs."

Bro. N. B. Sikes, writing from Arnot school-house, Hill county, June 12th, says: "The gospel, in my field of labor, is meeting with some success. Last Saturday, a week ago, I baptized two near Wortham, Freestone county. Yesterday I baptized three at this place. Last month baptized two just above here."

Bro. F. M. Trimble, Dexter, Cook county, May 28th, writes: "Two confessions and baptisms yesterday; one was the wife of our Elder, who was 'shaken in' some five years ago."

Received at this office, the Bible Index, a monthly published at Toronto, Canada. It is a 32-page pamphlet form and filled with good things. If the two numbers already received are an index of its future contents and course, we bespeak for it a liberal patronage. Price, one dollar per year. Address Bible Index, Toronto, Canada.

Bro. J. W. Bratcher, of Dallas, Ark., writes about "an old man named Keeney" who is preaching in Polk county, Ark., and has raised a disturbance in the church about the formula of baptism. In another place in this issue is a letter from a sister relative to the same subject. Bro. B. also says: "The church at Waldron, Scott county, is not doing well at this time, having no meeting-house in which to worship. On my return I preached there to a large audience, in the Methodist church. Bro. L. D. Gilbreath being in bad health, and has been during the winter, he has preached but little during the winter and spring. The church at Hackett City, Sebastian county, is lying dormant, doing no good. The church at Fort Smith is in a prosperous condition under the management of Bro. Spindler. Bro. Larimore, from Alabama, closed a meeting there a few days ago with 65 additions in various ways. Pahaw! such ways! I am truly glad to see the brethren falling into line with the F. F. It advocates the primitive gospel; the one faith and one baptism of which Paul speaks."

Bro. J. B. Jones, of Tell, Stone-wall county, writes: "I sent you $1.00 about the 1st of January, and four names. One was a Methodist, who told me not long before that he was so prejudiced that he would not go to hear our brethren preach; since that time he says he likes the F. F. and is glad I sent it to him. Two of the others were brethren, one of them likes the F. F. very well, so I am told, the other wrote me to have his paper stopped. That was a mystery to me at first, as he did not pay for it, but the mystery is now explained. He is a strong advocate of the organ, and also the champion chess player of the town. Is this not similar to the idolatry mentioned in 1 Cor. 10: 7? Any man who adds to the worship of God, or substitutes a human element for a divine one, will incur the displeasure of God. See Lev. 10: 1-4. Amusements of all kinds originate with the evil one. A man cannot serve the devil in any better way than to be constantly amusing himself, or entertaining himself with some of the "interesting and harmless" games and plays invented by Satan. How can a Christian be "always abounding in the work of the Lord" and at the same time "amusing himself" with the vain and frivolous games and plays of the world?"

WHAT CONSTITUTES CHRISTIAN BAPTISM?

The readers of this magazine are almost agreed that immersion in water is one essential; and also that the person baptized should be a believer. Should the person baptized have a definite conception of the purpose of the act? Is it sufficient that the person submit to it simply because it is commanded, and is it immaterial whether it is done for different purposes, by different persons? In other words: Is the baptism of a person who submits to it because he believes that his sins have been pardoned, and that he is merely identifying himself by the act with the people of God, merely in so doing, "fulfilling all righteousness," the same baptism as that of the person who understands that his sins are not forgiven, and that he is doing it so as to fulfill all righteousness in order that his sins may be forgiven? Upon this question we differ.

Peter, in opening the kingdom, said: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins." Let us ask these persons a question or two. "What did Peter command you to do?" "He told us to repent, and to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ." "Why were you baptized?" "Because it was a command, and we desired to fulfill all righteousness, and we wished to be identified with the people of God." Are these the answers that they would give? Certainly not. They would have answered according to the narrative, "Peter commanded us to repent, and to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ unto (in order to, for) the remission of our sins, and we submitted to baptism for that purpose." This must be their answer, for it is said: "They then that received his word were baptized;" his word was, "be baptized unto the remission of your sins," and not, "be baptized because your sins are remitted," or "to fulfill all righteousness," or "to be identified with the people of God." Then, a baptism for any other purpose except the remission of sins, is not Christian baptism; then the elements of Christian baptism are, immersion in water of a believer for the remission of his sins. Repentance follows and is connected with belief and leads to baptism. We often hear the expression "penitent believer" in connection with baptism. It is not in the Bible, repentance and penitence are two different conditions; the former may produce the latter, but they are quite different. It is not our purpose to discuss "Re-baptism," or to define "Sect baptism," but to determine, if possible, what is "Christian baptism," and in making this attempt we will notice some statements that have been made in this connection, by whom made, does not concern us. It is stated: "Those who have been buried and raised again in baptism have performed the right act." Persons are not buried or raised in baptism; buried in water and an emerging from the water is baptism. "Those who have sorrowed on account of their sins and sincerely and thoroughly turned away from their sinful conduct have made the right change." Where in the New Testament is an alien sinner commanded "to sorrow" previous to baptism? Some religious teachers tell such persons to mourn, and have provided a "mourners' bench," but we have not found it in the New Testament. "Those who have never doubted the divinity of Jesus Christ, but so believe in him that their hearts are purified from the love of sin—they certainly have the proper faith." If a man's heart is purified from the love of sin, then he is a child of God, and a man may become a child of God by faith alone. "Now when one who has thus believed, repented and been baptized, thereby professing himself to be a saved one, and desires to be added to the church of Christ (Acts 2:47), where is the authority for sitting in judgment on the validity of the faith, the repentance or the baptism of such an one?" Would it not be better to say, "a pardoned" or "a forgiven" one, instead of "saved" one? In Acts 2:47, it is not said "added to the church of Christ." The first statement contains the fallacy—"those who have been buried and raised again in baptism have performed the right act." The action may be right and still it may not be Christian baptism. Suppose that instead of "thereby professing himself to be a saved one," he had professed himself a saved one, not thereby, but independently and anterior to the baptism, would we not have authority from Peter's command to sit in judgment upon their baptism?

"Does some one say that we call for a confession of faith, and when confession is made, then the question of faith is settled? But how do we know that the one making that confession understands what it is to believe with all the heart that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. . . . On the same principle must we allow him to decide whether he understood what he was doing when he repented and was baptized." Suppose the man when he made the confession, in addition to saying, "I believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God," were to continue his confession, and say: "I believe that Jesus is the Son of God, but only as all Christians are, sons of God, his sonship differing not in kind, but in degree, from the sonship of all disciples," would we not be authorized to sit in judgment upon his "faith"?

"Even Paul did not sit in judgment on those twelve men at Ephesus, mentioned in Acts, 19th chapter. He asked them two questions. Then he taught them. Taught them what? That they should be baptized for the remission of sins? Not one word is said about remission. Their baptism was invalid because they had not believed in Christ. But who said their baptism was not valid? Here is the question. What Paul did then, we may believe we may do the same under similar circumstances. But the record does not so inform us. Whatever he may have thought, he did not say that it was invalid, even though they had not believed in Christ. Therefore, it is impossible for any one to believe that he should pronounce the baptism of believers in Christ not valid." The two questions he asked, were: "Did ye receive the Holy Spirit when ye believed?" and "Into what then were ye baptized?" Believed what? They are called disciples, which term in the New Testament, standing unqualified, means Christians. The question must mean, when they believed in Jesus as the Christ. Paul declared their baptism to be not Christian baptism, because they submitted to it for a purpose other than for the remission of sins. Paul saw these men, who were recognized as Christians; he asked them if they had received the Holy Spirit as Peter had promised it in Acts 2:38; they had not heard that it was to be given to believers who were baptized; he then asked them the purpose of their baptism, and they told him that they had been baptized as a declaration of their repentance and acceptance of the Messiah in the person of Jesus. Paul then told them that that baptism had been superseded by a baptism for the remission of sins, which would be followed by a gift of the Holy Spirit. They then received Christian baptism. Paul did teach them, and it was precisely the same teaching that Peter gave in Acts 2, that they should be baptized for the remission of their sins. Their baptism was not invalid because they had not believed in Christ, but because the baptism of repentance had been superseded by the baptism for the remission of sins.

In commenting upon this passage, Prof. McGarvey very correctly says: "If the gift of the spirit had no connection with immersion this inquiry would have been inapposite, and Paul would not have propounded it. But the apostles taught as Peter did on the day of Pentecost, when he said, 'Repent and be immersed, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit.' It is only on the supposition that Paul knew this to be the universal teaching of rightly informed brethren, that he inferred something was wrong about their immersion, from their ignorance of the gift of the Holy Spirit." "The general conclusion, from all the premises, is this: That persons who were immersed with John's immersion, while it was in lawful existence, were received into the Church of Christ without re-immersion." As far as his authority goes, it is settled that immersion must be preceded by the teaching of its design, and to this we agree, and claim that if the design must be taught, the baptism must be submitted to for that purpose, or the baptism is not valid. Sect baptism, if we may so design-nate that baptism which is for a different purpose, is neither John's nor Christian baptism. After John's baptism there is no baptism that is Christian baptism, except that baptism which is for the remission of sins.

"Without precept or example to that effect, but a clear declaration to the contrary, they persist in sitting in judgment upon certain ones who have obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine delivered in the gospel, and they persist in characterizing such obedience 'sect baptism.'" It is very wrong for any one to stigmatize "obedience from the heart to the form of doctrine delivered in the gospel" as sectarian. Such persons should repent of their wickedness. If we could find such persons we would earnestly strive to lead them to repentance: but we have never seen nor read any utterances from such persons. How can any one designate a person "sectarian," who obeys from the heart that form of doctrine delivered in the gospel. It is unreasonable. We are in the habit of designating as sectarian such practices and teachings as are not delivered in the gospel. As Paul understood that every intelligent disciple taught baptism for the remission of sins, when men teach that it is for some other purpose, then we call it sectarianism, or sect baptism. Any person who is baptized because his sins have been pardoned, is not obeying from his heart that form of doctrine that was delivered in the gospel.

"Certain ones desire to get to heaven. In order thereto they desire to do the will of the Lord. Baptism they learn is one of his commands. In obeying this command they insist upon being immersed, which they are taught and believe is the answer of a good conscience. They thus perform the right act with an obedient spirit, but they do not understand the design of this act as set forth on Pentecost. And on account of this lack in understanding, there are those who declare this believing submission to this right act to be 'sect baptism.'" The command on Pentecost was, "be baptized for the remission of your sins," if they were not baptized for this purpose, they were not obeying this command, but our apologist says, that they are excused and their baptism accepted on account of their ignorance? If ignorance justifies them in this, it will justify them in all perversions. This is the plainest command connected with the plan of salvation, and if ignorance of it will excuse, surely many other things will be excused. Let us use the same reasoning about some other things. Certain ones desire to get to heaven. In order thereto they desire to do the will of the Lord. Baptism they learn is one of his commands, and also learn that the mode is not revealed. They do not understand the act, but are sprinkled, believing it to be baptism, and submit to it with an obedient spirit, believing that it is done in answer to a good conscience, yet there are those who declare this believing submission to this act which they believe to be the right act, to be "sect baptism"! The person who is sprinkled is just as conscientious as the one who is immersed, because he thinks his sins are forgiven, and both are equally ignorant. If conscientious ignorance justifies the one, it most assuredly justifies the other.

Ignorance of a law that has been published does not excuse the person violating that law. This is a principle applicable alike to human and divine government. A sovereign power in a state may enact a law, but until that law is published it is not in force; as soon as it is published, as soon as it is in the power of the citizen to know the law, then he is judged by it. If he carelessly or wilfully neglects to inform himself concerning it, he is not excused. God enacted his laws and published them, or made provisions for their publication, and no one who has carelessly or wilfully neglected to learn the law, will be excused for disobeying the law. The law is, "be baptized for the remission of your sins," and no one to whom the message has come, is justified or excused in being baptized because his sins have been forgiven; and neither is any one excused for being sprinkled instead of being immersed. Both are perversions of the command, and neither are acceptable. The purpose, by Acts 2:38, becomes part of the act, and essential to it. We may now, therefore, answer the question, What constitutes Christian baptism? by saying, Immersion in water, of a believer, for the remission of sins. -Editorial, in Christian Quarterly.

McGARY-CRAWFORD DEBATE.

On the 12th of June, wife and I started to McKavett to attend the debate between Bro. McGary and J. T. Crawford, a Missionary Baptist. At Junction City, we were joined by Bro. and sister Thomas and their daughter. We reached the hospitable home of Bro. McGary and family the next day about noon. So we had the evening to rest, to be in readiness for the discussion to begin the next day at 10 o'clock. The writer made a talk at night, in refutation of the old theory that the Bible cannot be understood without the direct aid of the Holy Spirit.

The next morning at the appointed time, the people assembled to witness the beginning of the contest. Mr. Crawford failed to appear and I made a talk on the subject of faith. We met again at night, and waited till half past nine for Mr. Crawford. Bro. McGary then arose and said that inasmuch as he (Mr. C.) had failed to come, it was presumable that he had abandoned the discussion, and that he would turn it into a meeting to be conducted by the writer. I then made a talk on John, 8: 1-8, to an attentive audience, and announced meeting again for the next night.

The next evening Mr. C. came, and in an interview with Bro. McGary said that he was unprepared, and that his brethren had given him no encouragement whatever, but on the contrary had been writing to him from all parts of the state not to go into the discussion. Bro. McGary told him that, if there was a failure, he would not be a party in it—that he (Crawford) had appointed the time and he was ready for it. He finally decided that he would be ready to begin the discussion at eight that night, and it was so announced.

At the appointed time a large audience assembled and the discussion at once began. I shall not attempt to give a detailed account of it. Bro. McGary led out with the proposition, "The Scriptures teach that baptism is for the remission of sins." He explained that the baptism under discussion, was the baptism of the Bible with its prerequisites. A few plain and pointed passages were given, that fully sustained the proposition, and at the expiration of his half hour took his seat to hear his opponent examine the strength of his proof. But instead of doing so, he preferred to indulge in Arkansas anecdotes, rather than argumentation. Bro. McGary would briefly notice irrelevant matter, and proceed with his argument. This style of discussion continued to the end.

I must say that I never heard a man pay so little attention to the argument of an opponent. He saw that he was completely demolished at the close of the first speech, and he made no attempt whatever to grapple with the points presented. He had his mouth well trained and puckered to squall Campbellite and salvation in the water, but as for argument, there was simply none in the man.

He would deny the word of God with as great boldness as the greatest infidel in the land. He declared the word of God to be no more than an almanac—that it was a dead letter and without life. Bro. McG. at one time read 1 Peter, 3: 19-21, and when he read aloud, "the like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us," he put the question directly to Mr. Crawford, "Do you believe that?" And he shook his head. "Well, did not Peter say that?" And to this question he was silent. So he knew that Peter said so, but he did not believe Peter.

Again, on the proposition of repentance coming before faith, he said that in passages where it is not put before, it was a step of the writer.

Brethren, Mr. Crawford, is a representation of that class of people that many of you try to shake into the kingdom of God. Let me tell you that the hardest shake from the strongest hand and most zealous heart in the land, is not sufficient for these things. I beseech you to cease such nonsense, and rely on the strong arm of the Lord. Mr. Crawford thought he had a strong argument in the baptism of the Savior. He was not baptized for the remission of sins, therefore baptism is not for, but on account of a state of purity. After Bro. McGary showed why the Savior was baptized, it was then shown that John refused to do what Baptists teach. You know that good persons are the kind that they baptize, and this is the very reason why John did not wish to baptize him. Mark 1: 4 says, John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins. Therefore baptism is not because of remission of sins, as the Baptists practice and preach.

There were six speeches each on the first proposition. Mr. Crawford then began with his affirmative, viz: "The Scriptures teach that a person is converted and saved before baptism." It was evident to all, that he was at the end of his row. He made a feeble attempt, lasting about twenty minutes, and took his seat. Bro. McGary noticed the show of argument presented by him, and consumed the remainder of his thirty minutes in rebuttal. Mr. C. arose and after talking a few minutes, said he was done. It was expected that he would make six speeches of thirty minutes each on his proposition, but he made only a part of two. He was out of soap.

Bro. McGary closed the discussion with a telling comparison of the Bible plan of salvation with Baptist theology, and after a hasty recapitulation took his seat. Thus ended the McKavett debate.

One of the most intelligent Baptist families of the place were free to say that Mr. Crawford utterly failed, and that the Baptist plan of salvation was not of the Bible, and that they were no longer Baptists.

Brethren, if you want Baptistism completely demolished, and Bible teaching to reign instead, send for Bro. McGary. J. S. D.

WHY DID THE SACRED CANON CLOSE.

All the works of God are necessary. As long as God continued to increase revelation there was a necessity for its increase, but as soon as the necessity for an increase of revelation no longer existed, the sacred canon closed.

We submit the following proposition: The sacred canon closed with the close of the New Testament. The arguments that may be used in support of this proposition are offered as an answer to the caption question: Why did the sacred canon close? What God may have in store for man in the age beyond the mediatorial reign of Christ is a question that does not enter into this investigation.

God's promises by the prophets, which were made in past dispensations show clearly that an increase of revelation was a necessity. "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant," Jer. 31: 31. In this prophetic declaration we have a reference to a time in the future when there should be an increase of revelation. Many other references of like import might be obtained from the same source, but this one is sufficient.

Leaving the prophets, we come down to the first part of the New Testament. The Savior said: "Go preach the gospel." Preach repentance and remission of sins in thy name. "But tarry in the city of Jerusalem until ye are endued with power from on high," Luke 24: 49. The apostles were waiting for a new power, which was necessary to enable them to perform a new work and that new work was the promulgation of a new scheme—the scheme of redemption in Christ. Here we have a promise of a future proclamation. Again, "And when he (the Spirit) is come he will reprove (convince) the world of sin," John 18: 8. It takes testimony to convince. Here also is a promise of an increase of testimony—of revelation.

After the apostles received the baptism of the Holy Spirit they were enabled to proclaim the gospel. Of this gospel Paul says: It is the power of God unto salvation. God's power needs nothing added to it. The gospel is God's power to salvation. Therefore the gospel needs nothing added to it. If the gospel needs nothing added to it, it must ever remain as it is, both in quantity and quality, for God can not be accused of the folly of working where it is not necessary.

Many single passages of Scripture might be relied upon to support the all sufficiency of the Old and New Testaments, but one more argument having a foundation as broad as the whole revelation of the Old and New Testaments I regard as sufficient. When God created Adam, He pronounced him very good. We stop here to inquire if Adam was good enough? If we say that he was, we cannot reasonably aspire to a standard of goodness higher than his. If we say that he was not good enough, the fault was in the power or will of God, and if we ever become good enough ourselves we must reach a standard higher than that erected by the will and power of God.

When God created Adam He regarded him worthy to live forever, or regarded him worthy of eternal life, because he gave him access to the tree of life. God counted Adam worthy of his presence. Hence, He met with him face to face. Do we hope for more than to be counted worthy of eternal life, and to dwell in God's presence forever? Adam lost the way of the tree of life, and therefore lost eternal life—lost the blessing of God's presence, all in consequence of the violation of God's commandment. Let us bear in mind that eternal life in the presence of God, was God's will concerning Adam, and nothing short of eternal life in God's presence, for Adam's posterity is, according to God's will, in the great restoration.

To restore Adam's race to Adam's primitive state and condition is certainly the purpose of the divine arrangement. The plan of restoration was in process of development throughout former dispensations. During these dispensations man was being raised to a higher standard, and the scheme of redemption growing into that which is perfect. God's promise to Abraham concerning Christ, made it necessary to place Abraham's family under law until the fulfillment of the promise. The types and shadows of this law dispensation kept the world in anticipation of some coming event of grand proportions.

That part of the law that forbid the Jews to amalgamate with the nations, made it possible to keep a lineal line extending from Abraham to the bringing in of the better hope. Throughout this entire age the blood of bulls and goats was shed of which it is said, it is impossible that they should take away sin. During all this period sin is not removed because nothing is found to take it away; hence the flaming sword must keep his place.

Adam could not go to the tree of life, his violation of law canceled his right to its privileges, and consequently his right to eternal life. When these rights and privileges are restored to Adam's race, God's work is completed, and man brought back to the primitive state where God said of man, he is very good. God works by means, and whatever means brings back the primitive state must be perfect, as the primitive state was perfect.

"He that looketh into the perfect law of liberty and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed," Jas. 1: 25. This passage shows the existence of a law of liberty which is perfect. If the liberty here referred to, is liberty from sin, we find a perfect means of freedom from sin, Paul says: "Being then made free from sin ye became the servants of righteousness," Rom. 6: 18. Here we find freedom from sin by means of that which is perfect, and therefore find perfect freedom from sin.

The man who never sinned is perfectly free from sin. The man who does the things contained in the perfect law of liberty, is perfectly free from sin, and by this means becomes the equal of Adam before he sinned. Adam, before he sinned, was entitled to the tree of life and God's presence. All who are equal to Adam before he sinned must be equal to him in rights and privileges, and therefore must be entitled to the tree of life and God's presence.

In the last chapter of the Revelation of John, we have this language: "Blessed are they that do his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter through the gates into the city," Rev. 22: 14. By obedience we obtain a right to the tree of life. This was the right that Adam lost by disobedience. How reasonable and how just! That which Adam lost by disobedience, his race obtains by obedience. By doing the commandments of God we are brought to the primitive state of Adam.

In that state, Adam was very good. Such will be our standard if we do His commandments. That perfect law of liberty which contains the commandments of God is the means ordained of God to restore man to the primitive state of holiness. In this primitive state man was as good as God was willing to make him; and God will certainly never make man better than the first who was worthy of his presence, and worthy of eternal life. If the means ordained of God are capable of making man so good, neither more nor less, and God can never become willing to make him better, God can never become willing to add to or increase the means. God cannot add to His last law, because by His Spirit through the apostles He called it a perfect law.

Revelation as we now have it is capable of restoring man to that high standard erected by God Himself. When revelation has developed a power to raise man to that sublime relation which he sustained to God in the garden of Eden—when it has completed the means to reinstate man in the royal presence of the King of the universe, is it outside of the range of truth to say that it has accomplished all that deserves accomplishment? So much in answer to the question, "Why Did the Sacred Canon Close?"

W. P. RICHARDSON.

JESUS THE GREAT HEALER.

(Synopsis of a sermon preached by J. H. D. T., of Arcola, Ill., May 10th, '88.)

Text:—The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord."—Luke 4: 18-19.

Exordium:—Jesus "came to Nazareth, where he had been up: and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day and stood up for to read. And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Isaiah. And when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, etc.

Text. "And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people."—Matt. 4: 23.

1. Jesus taught the people and preached the gospel of the kingdom.
2. He healed all manner of sickness and disease among the people.
3. He cast out demons and raised the dead. He was never known to fail in a single case. By his works he proved his love and his power. He attended his patients personally when on earth; but since his ascension he attends them through his appointed agents. He provides them with the necessary remedies for all manner of sin-sickness. All free of charge.

Jesus said: "They that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick."—Matt. 9: 12.

Homily:—1. What made the sinner sick? (1) The love of sin. (2)

The practice of sin. (3) The state of sin. (4) The guilt of sin. (5) The punishment of sin—the thoughts of it.

2. What will cure him? (1) Faith in Christ, the great physician. (2) Repentance towards God. (3) Baptism for the remission of sins. (4) Pardon or remission of sins. (5) The withholding of the punishment—the assurance of its being withheld.

By disobedience he was in a state of condemnation; but obedience brings him into a state of justification.

Recapitulation and close.

A DEFINITION.

An English minister defines a Campbellite Christian as one who takes his name from Christ and trusts in water to save him; a Baptist Christian as one who takes his name from baptism, and trusts in Christ to save him.—Canadian Baptist.

Baptist Christians do well to trust in Christ to save them, for there is salvation in none other; but they should not forget that Christ requires those who put their trust in him to speak the truth about their neighbors. Those who do so never represent us as trusting in baptism to save us. Did Dr. Hackett, of the Baptist church, trust in baptism to save him when he taught precisely as we do that Peter enjoined believers to repent and be baptized in order to the remission of sins? Baptist papers should cease to retail such fables.—Christian Standard.

In the F. F., of Jan. '87, I noticed that one "Rev." R. T. Hanks claims the honor (?) of this definition, and the thing was noted in the Baptist papers as a nice thing. So nice, indeed, that some one suggested that it be put into the Encyclopedia of Universal Knowledge; in fact they wanted the concentrated lie crystallized so that future Baptists might profit by so "fine cut" a definition.

Besides this, I believe he received the degree of D. D. for his smartness and erudition. Did n't he deserve two? Dry Detective, or something like that. As he don't have any use for water in making Christians, possibly for making Baptists he may use it. He may be the "English minister" referred to, but if he is not, he certainly is guilty of plagiarism. Though it is possible for two smart men to have the same ideas. Let the Rev. (?) Hanks adhere to the truth simple, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, not forgetting that there comes a day of judgment.

THE ART OF TEACHING.—To make teaching effective, it should be a developing process of the mental faculties. For everything a child is taught, a reason or explanation should be given. Mere imitation or committing to memory of facts is a waste of time. To think correctly is the main object of all proper teaching; without it all teaching is mere blundering through a labyrinth of mysteries.—Selected.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, JULY 15, 1888.

From this time on send all money for the FIRM FOUNDATION, or any of our pamphlets, to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Texas. Make all money orders payable to A. McGary. Please state whether you are a new subscriber or an old one. Write plainly, and give the county, where your post office is not a large town. Don't forget this in sending orders. MCGARY & HANSBROUGH.

WAS HE CONSISTENT?

In the first issue of the Christian Courier we find the opening assault against the "rebaptism hobby" as follows:

"The rebaptism theory which some good brethren have been led to embrace, and which by some seems to be made a test of Christian fellowship is not a new one. Sixty years ago it had its advocates, and in the Christian Advocate of June, 1828, Alexander Campbell disposes of the matter most effectually by the use of a very appropriate illustration. We commend it to brethren who may have been disturbed by the rebaptism hobby. It may be found in the Christian Baptist, Burnet's edition, page 447, and is in these words: 'Some persons have thought that because they did not understand the import of Christian immersion, at the time of their immersion, they ought to be immersed again, in order to enjoy the blessings resulting from this institution; but as reasonably might a woman seek to be married a second, a third, or a fourth time to her husband, because at the expiration of the second, third and fourth years after her marriage, she discovered new advantages and blessings resulting from her alliance with her husband, of which she was ignorant at the time of her marriage. It is true she may regret that she lived so long in that state without enjoying the privileges belonging to her, but her having the rites of matrimony celebrated ten times or once for every new discovery she makes, would give her no better right to these enjoyments than she possessed through her first marriage. Nor will her repetition of the nuptial rites cause her to enjoy more fully the comforts of which she was deprived during the past years of her ignorance than the mere consciousness that she now enjoys them.'

Examples are very useful things in enforcing positions; but they are as useful to the side of error as to the side of truth. Sophistry can be hidden in an example sometimes when it can find no other place of concealment. This example of Bro. Campbell's, which Bro. Homan thinks so effectually sweeps away the position which he is pleased to call the "rebaptism hobby," is only valuable as a lurking-place for sophistry—though I have no idea that Bro. Campbell or Bro. Homan either wilfully used it for that purpose.

A legal marriage would, of course, entitle the parties to all of the advantages growing out of the marriage state; but an illegal marriage would not. It is not necessary to argue this point to such a lawyer as Bro. Homan; for he would not think of denying it. So of a legal baptism; it would insure to all legally baptized the immunities growing out of the baptized state, but illegal baptism would not. So, then, to use an example of legal marriage to illustrate the state of a baptism, the validity or legality of which is in controversy, is to assume, through that example, the very point that is in controversy and must be proved.

The laws of Texas require certain things as antecedent to the marriage ceremony. If these antecedent steps are ignored and left out, although the ceremony may be ever so nice and chaste, the marriage will be null and void in the eye of the law of the State of Texas. We hold that, when the steps ordained of God as antecedent to baptism are left out, or any one of them, the baptism is null and void in the eye of the law of God, even though the baptismal ceremony may be in strict accord with the commission of Christ.

Bro. Homan holds that the apostolic teaching upon the design of baptism, and "the good confession" with the mouth may both be left out of baptism and it will be valid. This we deny, and instead of setting about to prove this teaching in the Courier, he seeks to enforce his teaching by giving Bro. Campbell's example. We hope he will give us something better than this. In a private letter he informs us that he has seen but two copies of the FIRM FOUNDATION. We are sorry he has not seen a copy of every issue; for we are sure he would not have laid so much stress upon Bro. Campbell's marriage illustration if he had read them all, because the fallacy of that thread-bare illustration has been several times pointed out in the columns of this paper.

In conclusion we submit for Bro. Homan's consideration something else from Bro. Campbell, for him to lay down by the side of this marriage illustration, for careful and candid comparison; and we desire him to give it to his readers and say if he thinks Bro. Campbell was consistent on this question. It would be refreshing for Bro. Homan to give his readers some of Bro. Campbell's teaching which tends to establish the "rebaptism hobby." Here is what Bro. Campbell said:

"Some have such a puerile and inadequate conception of Christian baptism, as to regard it as a mere ceremonial introduction into the church—a way of making a profession of the Christian religion—no way affecting the spiritual relations of the subject. This view of it ought to have been expressed by such a precept as the following: 'Repent and be baptized, every one of you, for admission into the church.' But no such precept, in form, in substance, or in sense, is found in God's own book. As we have, then, but one Lord, one faith, and one baptism, and that one baptism is 'for the remission of sins'—to give us, through faith and repentance, a solemn pledge and assurance of pardon, any other baptism is a human invention and of no value; wanting, as it does, the sanction of the Lord Jesus Christ who ordained it."—Campbell on Baptism, pp. 256-257.

This knocks that marriage illustration all to pieces by the hand of the same great man who constructed it. It ought to serve as a lesson, too, to Bro. Homan and others, by showing them that uninspired men will not do to follow—they are following Bro. Campbell in their teaching and practice on receiving immersed persons from the denominations.

See then, Bro. Homan, how your leader on this question, has crossed himself. It is a clear case of a "blind leader" and his disciples, "all falling in the ditch." If Bro. Campbell had lived to have seen some things the FIRM FOUNDATION has shown "those who are blindly following him, he was just great and humble enough to have come out of that ditch and never have fallen into it again. But it seems that his followers are piling in upon each other and filling up that "ditch," while they close their eyes tighter and tighter. We trust that Bro. Homan's very logical mind may force him to open his eyes till he can see the apostolic ground too plainly hereafter to refer to it as, "the rebaptism hobby;" and that the Courier may go to work getting its readers out of the "ditch." MENARD COUNTY.

Menardville, the county seat of Menard county, is about one hundred and fifty miles west of Austin. Fort McKavett is twenty-two miles west of Menardville, at the head of the San Saba river. The San Saba river runs from northeast, southwest through Menard county. The valley lands along this beautiful, clear river are generally very rich, and when irrigated and properly cultivated yield very heavy crops of corn, oats, wheat, rye, sweet potatoes and all kinds of vegetables. These lands are held at prices ranging from three to five dollars per acre. In the vicinity of Menardville land is much higher, because they already have an irrigation ditch in successful operation there. Some land, I understand, along this ditch, has sold as high as sixty dollars per acre.

Farming cannot be safely relied upon here without irrigation; but the banks of the river are so low that water enough for gardens can be gotten out, at a mere nominal cost, almost anywhere on the river. I have just completed a wheel at the cost of seventy-five dollars which will irrigate about five acres of land. This wheel is very simple in construction and it costs nothing to operate it after it is put in. It will run five years without costing as much as five dollars. Such wheels can be put up almost anywhere along this river. There are bold and excellent springs of water breaking out all along the river, and the same kind of water can be found any where in the valley, I learn from old citizens, at a depth of from fifteen to thirty feet.

This is a very healthy country, even right on the river bank. It is the best stock country I ever saw—for cattle, horses, sheep, goats and hogs. The principle timber in the valleys is pecan. The timber on the ridges, or "divides," as they are called here, is live-oak. Timber is plentiful for fuel but not for fencing purposes. Most all fences are made of cedar posts and barbed wire. This makes a good, cheap and very lasting fence. All of the "divides" are covered with fine mesquite grass, the best grass that grows, I think. These lands can be bought at about $1.50 per acre; but this quality of land is worthless for anything but grazing. The first thing to be done in utilizing the "divides" is to bore for water, put up a wind mill and make troughs and extra tanks or receptacles for an extra supply of water to be held in reserve for such emergencies as low wind, storms and accidents to the mill. This, all told, will not fall short of one thousand dollars. They estimate ten acres per head of cattle, a little more per head of horses, and about three acres per head for sheep.

Below me on the river lies about three thousand acres of land that I have had my eye on for a colony of Christians. Two or three hundred acres of it can be irrigated in a body. The water could be taken out at a rock dam on my place and carried on to these low lands without much cost. This body of land can be bought for about twelve thousand dollars, and it would furnish self-sustaining homes for at least twenty families. Then a ditch could be extended to the foot of the hills for stock water, which would make the hill lands come cheap, as no wells would have to be dug for stock. Such a colony of Christians could thus obtain cheap and good homes and bring their church and school right along with them; and doubtless do much good in this dark region for the kingdom of God. If such a colony could be established here while my children are young I had rather keep them here than any where I have ever lived or seen, for I do not think a healthier country can be found.

But now I must give the other side of this picture, for I am writing this to answer questions asked me by many brethren through private letters; and I cannot afford to make an unfair report to them. I would have answered these questions long ago but I wanted to get better acquainted with the country and people here. Then, again, so many were writing and requesting me to go back to Austin and remain in the office of the F. F., that I wanted to see how this would turn out. It is not fully decided in my mind yet. I am well satisfied here but my wife is not, and her wishes and the demands of the FIRM FOUNDATION both pulling in the same direction is something I cannot disregard. But my wife would be satisfied if Christian families would come into the country.

But now to the other side: It is a long ways to market. Ballinger is the nearest railroad station, seventy-two miles—though the Santa Fe will run to Angelo by 1st of September. Angelo is fifty-five miles northwest of Fort McKavett. Society is very objectionable here. Fort McKavett was a government post for many years, and a very bad element was drawn here by the troops. I am sorry to say too many of them remained when the troops left. I never saw a country where there seemed to be less love for God, or less regard for character among men. But this ought not to scare off Christians. Some brethren have written me to know what kind of country it would be for poor men who are not able to buy homes. I would not advise any one to move to this country who is not able to buy a little home. If a family can buy a home here and improve it they can, with a few head of stock and a few acres of irrigated land, make a good living and enjoy health and life, unless they have their affections too much set upon such things of the world as are only to be found in the circles of high life, fashionable circles, where the goddess of fashion and the god of this world are united in unholy and soul-destroying wedlock.

The body of land I have referred to, would, as I have said, furnish homes for twenty families, giving to each family one hundred and fifty acres, of which at least fifteen acres would be irrigable land. This one hundred and fifty acres would cost about six hundred dollars. The fifteen acres of irrigable land, when the water is put on it, will be worth seven hundred and fifty dollars. Then back of this land, and in reach of the water lies thousands of acres of grazing lands that can be bought at from one, to one and a half dollars per acre. I have shown this land to several brethren and they were all delighted with it. I know of several who stand ready to take a share in this land and help to build up a colony where they can have church and school privileges right at their doors in a new and healthy country. A banker in Austin has been conferring with me about this property, but I would so much rather see it settled by Christians. But I am sure this opening will not be here long. I have no interest whatever in this land; and I might not get to enjoy the privileges and pleasures of such a colony, if it should take tangible shape and reach consummation; for, if I find the interests of the FIRM FOUNDATION demand me in its office, I shall subordinate all of my individual preferences for the welfare of this only paper that contends for the unadulterated gospel of Christ. But I know that such a colony of Christians could benefit themselves and do more good for their Master by thus coming together and co-operating by the express directions of the Scriptures. They would have ten-fold better opportunities for bringing their "children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and could shed a reflex light and influence upon those around them in the toils of sin and darkness. And as for missionary work, why could they not do more? I would be glad to see a colony of true and devout brethren take advantage of this opportunity for good little homes that I have herein tried to lay before them fairly. I have a home here and I think so much of this country that I shall not sell it, even if duty should call me from it—that is, I will not sell unless it should become necessary to the up-building of this colony. My survey contains sixteen hundred acres. If brethren who have expressed a desire to me for colonizing in this section should go to work to carry this project into effect and the land mentioned by me should not be sufficient for the demand, I will be willing to let mine go for what it actually cost me, all but a little home for my own family.

But, in conclusion, I want no one to take my judgment on this country without examining for themselves. I would say to those who have written to me about settling in this section, you had better act promptly, for I do not believe this opening will be here twelve month's from to-day, and, very likely, not half so long. FROM BRO. LATIMER.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

While the boys are taking their wonted nap, I thought, after reading my last F. F., I would have a little talk with you.

I have never received my receipt. Would like one, for I don't know when my subscription expires.

Please answer: What puts a sinner into the Church of Christ? Also please explain Rom. 6: 3, also Gal. 3: 27.

I understand there are several prerequisites. The point in my mind is, the act that brings the alien into the church.

Did you continue the paper to the widowed sister and the consumptive brother? We know you did. The F. F. has only failed one time to get in all right, and that was on account of a change in the postmaster.

We do not keep a correct house for the Lord. We forsake to assemble as is the custom of some others. But I hope we will do better before the Lord sends on us the punishment threatened the church of Ephesus. Let us all awake to the timely warning given by Bro. Speer, and support the old, the needy and the Christian, before the rich, the young, the progressionist and the greedy. Though a poor congregation don't look well with a fine, fat parsonic preacher.

An open confession is said to be good for the soul; the more I read the F. F. the more I like it.

It is about work time, good bye. May the good Lord continue you for the work's sake, is the prayer of your brother in Christ,

HENRY LATIMER.
Gordon, Texas.

(1) That which remits sins also puts one into Christ. The Church is a plurality of those "in Christ."

(2) Rom. 6: 3, "Know ye not, that all who are immersed into Jesus Christ were immersed into his death?" Those who are immersed from an obedience of the heart, are immersed into a state of death to sin and the world. The world and all that is of it is under the dominion of the evil one, who is the god of this world. While the "kingdom of God's dear Son" is under the dominion of the Lord from heaven. There is as great a difference between these two states as there is between the two states of life and death; life to one of these is death to the other, and vice versa. So, then, whoever is immersed into this heavenly dominion, is immersed into a state of death to the dominion of the god of this world, where he is "alive to God." To be dead with Christ is to be dead to sin and the world, and alive to God and righteousness. And to be alive to the world is to be dead to God and righteousness.

(3) Gal. 3: 27, "For all ye who were immersed into Christ did put on Christ." To put on Christ is, simply to die to the world and become alive to God by taking on "the yoke of Christ"—it is to become a new creature, a citizen of that government which is not of this world, but of heaven—it is to be, "born again," born of the incorruptible seed of the kingdom of God, which is to be born of water and Spirit—see John 3: 5. This is perfected when one opens his heart to the words of the Spirit and is led by these words to do just what the words say and for just what the words say to do it. When immersion is thus approached and submitted to, it is truly a "birth of water and the Spirit;" for it is, "the washing of water by the word" (Eph. 5: 26) of the Spirit. To leave the teaching of the Spirit out in approaching immersion is to be born of water, and not of the Spirit; hence it is not a birth of "water and the Spirit;" hence does not give remission of sins nor translation into the kingdom of God's dear Son. It is only the "corruptible seed" that can interfere with the directions of the "incorruptible." Wherever the corruptible seed enters it must take the place of the incorruptible and drive out the Spirit of Christ, and if it leads to immersion it is a washing of water by the word of man, which nullifies the whole thing in God's sight.

(4) Yes, I ordered the paper continued to them, and if they do not get it I want to know it. A. MCG.

FROM BRO. M'MURKEY.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Please explain the language of Jesus to Nicodemus in John, 3: 5: "And Jesus answered verily, verily I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and the Spirit he can not enter into the kingdom of God." Gal. 4: 26 reads thus: "But Jerusalem which is from above is free, which is the mother of us all."

What I want to know is this: Can the water and Jerusalem both be our mother? or can we be born of a thing and it not be our mother?

Answer the above and oblige, your brother,

F. M. MCMURKEY.

A great trouble with us is, that most of us press figures and types too far. To press a figure, type, or metaphor beyond the point it was intended to reach, is to do violence to the truth. To expect to find a perfect similitude of the literal birth, in a metaphoric or spiritual birth, is to expect too much and what cannot be found.

When we speak, we must speak as the oracles of God. So we should not call the waters of baptism the mother of us all; for Paul has said that of Jerusalem which is above. But if I were compelled to give water a name or place that we find connected with the literal birth, I would not know better how to do so than to call it the womb. It can very truly be said that one is born of the womb.

If we could find everything in a figure or type to correspond to the literal, it could not be a type or figure of the thing, but the very thing itself. So it is wise to learn where to stop pressing types and figures. This, I fear, is one thing about which none of us are particular enough. A. MCG.

AMONG THE CHU CHES.

First, Oak Grove. This congregation is composed of about thirty members. Is an active, working congregation. Last year I preached once a month in the house they use for public worship. I was liberally remunerated; I spent three-fourths of my time in destitute places, while this congregation administered to my necessities. This year they are building a house to worship in of their own. It would be well for congregations wanting to build to study the method adopted by these brethren before beginning.

The method is this: 1. It was agreed by all that a house was needed.

2. It was agreed by all that they wanted a house.

3. All agreed to build it at their own expense, unless those who are without, of their own free will, without being asked, contributed to it.

4. Each member contributed according as he thought he was able.

5. All the cash was raised.

6. A calculator was made to see what size house the money would purchase.

7. They bought the lumber, put it on the ground, and every spare day is put in at work on the house—among the brethren are some who are competent to build according to rule.

So the house is going up nicely. When finished, it will be a neat, comfortable building. Hope to be able to worship in it in a month or so.

We have Bro. W. P. Richardson booked for a protracted meeting, beginning the last of July or the first of August.

One who came to us from among the Baptists was baptized "for remission of sins" the third Lord's day in April, and another the fourth.

There are some others almost and others altogether persuaded to turn from the commandments of men to the "obedience of faith."

Second, White Rock. I am not able to give a report of the condition of this congregation fully. But can say they are free from many of the innovations now causing such confusion. No missionary society preacher gets any crumbs there. The theological shakers will find but little encouragement in his stabling business. Do not know what they have done in the past, only preached there two Lord's days.

Third, Little Elm, is in Bell county. I have been there once, preached three times, had a good hearing. This is a good congregation, though I was told that there were some who did not meet upon the first day of the week to break bread as often as they could. Yet there are some who are always at their post.

Last spring I was kept at home twenty-seven days waiting on my sick child, this congregation sent me a seven dollar money order, just when it was needed. I was told that in this congregation are persons who came from the sects, but I have hopes that when they investigate their claim to citizenship, they will obey from the heart (understanding) that form of doctrine delivered them, by being baptized upon a confession of their faith "for the remission of sins."

Fourth, Big Elm. This congregation is a live, working congregation. In it are several readers of the F. P. and many who substantially endorse the position defended by it, on the sect baptism question.

There are some in the congregation who were baptized in ignorance of its design, I am told. I have preached for them two Lord's days. Near them is a congregation of "Latter Day Saints," (or Mormons). The only nest I ever run upon.

In all these Churches of Christ I can see nothing to hinder success. And I pray God that they will study his word in the future, as some of the members of each have in the past, and that each of us may measure ourself by it, and wherein we find ourself too short, stretch out, and if too long, cut off.

Yours for heavens order,
O. H. MCGAVOCK.

THE PLAN OF SALVATION.

THE FAITH.

"He came to his own, and his own received him not; but as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name."—John 1: 11-12.

Thus is stated by that disciple whom Jesus loved, the character of persons to whom was given power to become children of God. The first great essential condition, or life-giving principle, is faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. One must believe on his name; that is, accept his authority, take his word as the law of life. This statement John fully confirms by giving samples of the Savior's teaching. The Savior's interview with Nicodemus is a striking example: "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." * * "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he can not enter the kingdom of God. That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit."

A birth of flesh avails nothing as to the kingdom of God; for "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." The subject of the new or spiritual birth is the Spirit or spiritual being; for it only can be spiritually affected, enlightened, morally changed, purified, converted, regenerated, saved.

In answer to the question: "How can these things be?" Jesus said: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the son of man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him may not perish but have eternal life." Dark as was this saying to the learned ruler of the Jews, it afterwards pours a flood of light upon the subject to those who observe the fulfillment of this saying and the demonstrations that followed on the great Pentecostal occasion.

When "the son of man had been lifted up," on the cross, and the thinking, anxious ones, like Nicodemus, were "begotten again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection from the dead;" and when Peter assured the assembly of Israel that "this Jesus (whom God raised up, whereof we are witnesses. Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear," then did the hitherto inexplicable, but now unmistakably lucid object lesson of the serpent lifted up in the wilderness, lend a halo of glory to "the accursed tree of the cross." The sting of sin has been made to fester in the hearts of the thousands that saw and heard on that occasion, till rankling anguish voiced its throes in the inquiry, "What shall we do?" Quickened by the power of truth, by which ignorance is destroyed and the enmity of the flesh overcome, they are begotten into a living hope in him who has conquered death, who died for their sins and rose again for their justification.

Hence they doubt not, they halt not, but gladly receive the word, and hasten to obey, (see Acts 2: 41); so that by faith there were brought into the kingdom the same day about three thousand souls.

Peter spoke as the Spirit gave him utterance, they heard, believed, obeyed. So then, as Paul says, in Rom. 10: 17, "Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God." And this Peter corroborates in Acts 15: 7-9, where he says: "Ye know how that a good while ago God made choice of me that by my mouth the Gentiles should hear the word of the gospel and believe. * * And put no difference between them and us, purifying their hearts by faith."

We see from this that God's means of purifying the heart is by faith, and that his means of giving faith is by the preaching of the word. The Savior said: "No man cometh unto me except the Father draw him. As it is written, They (that came) shall all be taught of God. Every one therefore that hath heard and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." For "how can they believe on him of whom they have not heard?" Men must hear and learn before they can believe. This is the law of the mind, the law of God. The entire revelation of God recognizes this principle.

James (1: 18) speaking of the unbounded goodness of God, says: "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." Peter also says, (1 Peter 1: 22): "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth, through the Spirit, unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that you love one another with a pure heart fervently: being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." So then, we see that the word of God is, as the Savior said, the seed of the kingdom, or God's means of begetting men unto life in his kingdom. Hence the gift of his Son, and by him the gospel. Hence the church as a pillar and support of the truth. For "how can they hear without a preacher?"

When the truth is preached, it produces faith; faith purifies the heart, (Acts 15: 7); the purified heart aspires to the new life in the kingdom, and exercises that power given to become a child of God, (see John 1: 11-12), or purifies the soul in obeying the truth through the Spirit, (see 1 Pet. 1: 22.)

This kind of faith is essentially evangelical, for it comes by hearing the gospel, the evangel, the word of God. It is divine; for it has for its foundation the divine testimony, the divine word. It is the obedient, or living faith, for it lays hold of the life that is in Christ by obedience. It is the Christian faith, for it claims only Christ as its author and savior. It is the saving faith, for it accepts the salvation that is offered in Christ. It is the true faith, for it exists by its reliance on the truth as it is revealed in God's word. "Without faith it is impossible to please God; for he that would come to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

Let us, therefore, keep this faith, walk by it, preach by it, and by it build on the firm foundation of apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone. This scriptural view of the faith addresses itself to man's understanding and to his reason. It has none of the difficulties of the dogmatic theories of faith that ignore the efficiency of the gospel as the means of faith and the power of God unto salvation. Since "faith comes by hearing," it recognizes the necessity of presenting to the mind the convincing facts of the gospel. No faith is expected in the absence of gospel truth. The things said and done by Jesus, and the words and acts of the apostles under the great commission are the matters upon which the mind must act. When these are fairly presented to the rational mind, then is accountability assessed against the soul. For the word of the Lord proves a savor of life unto life, or of death unto death. Every one hears, believes and appropriates by obedience, or rejects the counsel of God by disobedience. This indeed is the touchstone of faith, doing the things that the Savior commands. In vain does any one profess, saying with the mouth, "I believe," while the life is but a scene of rebellion. This is what the prophet calls drawing nigh with the mouth and honoring with the lips, while the heart is far from him. The heart work controls the life.

The expression the faith is often used as a synonym for the law of Christ, or remedial system, the gospel. And in this sense, it may truly be said that the faith alone saves. For the gospel being the power of God unto salvation. Whenever the faith is spoken of we may understand the expression to mean the gospel. Hence the faith is the power of God unto salvation. "The faith once delivered unto the saints" is the gospel, or gospel plan of salvation. Therefore let us ever heed the injunction of the apostle to "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints," for by so contending, we hold forth the only means of salvation revealed to mortals.

FROM A SISTER.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I enclose one dollar to you for the F. P. I suppose I am debtor for the past year, from May, '87 to May, '88, by my not registering the letter I sent the money in; this is all I can send now, but will send the balance as soon as possible. I cannot do without the paper. May God bless you in the noble work of sowing the good seed in honest hearts, and may they accept it and grow thereby. Others reject the F. P. can't bear sound doctrine: what a pity all are not united in the one faith. It is sad to see the church so divided and manifest a bad feeling instead of the brotherly love that should reign in the church of Christ. Your sister in the one faith,

QUERIES.

Please to give us the Scriptural authority for publishing the FIRM FOUNDATION?

"But we beseech you, brethren, that you increase more and more, and that you study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you,"—1 Thes. 4: 10-11.

Where do our preachers get authority for praying in public before preaching? A. J. THOMPSON. San Marcos, Texas.

We are commanded to "pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks."—1 Thes. 5: 17-18; 1 Tim. 2: 1-8. Read also 1 Cor. 14th chapter. The practice, adopted by some, of not praying before or after preaching, partakes more of the "eccentric" than of the "religious." Let everything be done decently and in order, and all of our prayers be without "formality and sanctimoniousness;" but with "the Spirit and the understanding" that the unlearned (unbeliever) may be edified.—See 1 Cor. 14: 16.

EDITORS FIRM FOUNDATION:

You Christians are such close baptizers, why is it that you are not close communionists? If you are the only people who are right, you should be the only people to partake of the supper. Please explain. I am not a member of any church; I am only seeking the right plan.

Very respectfully,
W. A. HOBBS.

Alpine, Ala.

The New Testament knows nothing of "close baptism," or of "close communion." Hence, we say nothing of either. The Lord's supper was given to the disciples of Christ; hence it is their duty and privilege to eat of this feast. We teach both publicly and privately that Christians and they only, have the right to "set the table" and partake of the loaf and wine. We deny, that the denominations have the Lord's supper, and also deny their right to partake of the supper until they become Christians.

Dear Bro. Jackson:

In the F. F. of recent date some writer referring to the ordination of church officers by the laying on of hands, condemned the practice.—according to my understanding of what he wrote—and I have sent off the paper and do not remember who the writer is, nor just what he wrote, but I would like for you or some other brother to write on that subject for the F. F. I have been taught that, that was the custom in the primitive Church.

Your sister,
SARAH WILLIAMS.

The idea of men "ordaining" elders and preachers is of popish origin. It is not taught in the New Testament. God ordains and man appoints; hence all appointments of elders, deacons, or evangelists to that work in the church, for which they are qualified, must be according to the ordinances of God. There is much difference of opinion relative to the form or manner of this appointment, a great many objecting to the "laying on of hands;" but in lieu thereof extend "the right hand of fellowship," as was done to Paul and Barnabas, Gal. 2: 9. All agree that elders should be appointed to the oversight of the congregations; that is, if they are qualified.

But how shall the appointment be made? We know how the selection or choosing of elders is to be done. We look among us for those who possess the qualities given in the Scriptures. We also know what their work is and how they are to perform it. It seems then that the only difficulty in the whole matter is, how are they appointed to their work? Is there any form of appointment? If so, what is it? If we adhere to the Scriptures upon this point as well as upon those mentioned above we can but conclude that appointments to work in the church were by "fasting, prayer and laying on of hands."

"What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for; but the election hath obtained it and the rest were blinded," Rom. 11: 7. The doctrine of eternal election and reprobation seems to be asserted. Please explain.

W. S. GRAHAM.

Boaz, Texas.

1. What was it that Israel (the Jews) sought for? "But Israel who followed after the law of righteousness hath not attained to the law of righteousness," Rom. 9: 31. What righteousness was it that they did not attain to? "For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God," Rom. 10: 3. This "righteousness of God" to which they would not submit, is revealed in the gospel of Christ, Rom. 1: 16-17. In plain words then, Israel or the Jews were seeking for salvation through the fulfillment of the promises made to the Fathers; but through ignorance, that is blindness, they did not receive the gospel nor obey it, but rejected Christ.

2. "The election hath obtained it." Who were the election? "Even so then at this present time also, there is also a remnant according to the election of grace," Rom. 11: 5. This remnant had been prophesied of by Joel, 2: 32. "And it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call upon the Lord shall be delivered: for in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the Lord hath said, and in the remnant whom the Lord shall call." The prophecy here quoted had its fulfillment in Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost, as recorded in Acts, 2nd chapter. Here we find Peter quoting the language of Joel by telling the Jews that the baptism of the Holy Spirit was a fulfillment of it. It follows then as an irresistible conclusion that the apostles were "the remnant according to the election of grace." The Lord had called and chosen them out of Israel. Mark 3: 13; John 15: 16.

3. How were the former blinded and the latter elected? Blindness is but another term for ignorance. They were "ignorant of God's righteousness;" "had a zeal of God but not according to knowledge." It was not given to them to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, Matt. 13: 11. Why? "For this people's heart is waxed gross (sensual) and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears, and should be converted and I should heal them," Matt. 13: 15. Did God inflict this blindness upon them? "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost in whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ who is the image of God should shine unto them." 2 Cor. 4: 4. Their blindness then was not predestinated but resulted from their sensualism.

The remnant were elected "according to grace" not according "to foreknowledge and predestination." Grace brings salvation, Titus 2: 11. But bestows it only through the name of Jesus, Acts 4: 10-12. Hence all who believe and obey "the name or authority" of Jesus are elected "according to grace." J. W. J.

FROM BRO. McCARTY.

Dear Brethren of the F. F.:

I notice that our ex-associate editor and brother, J. F. Grubbs, is publishing a paper called the Index Wheel, and he has been kind enough to send me the first two issues. In the last issue of the Wheel he inserts the following, upon which I desire to make a few strictures, hoping he will not become offended with me. Here it is:

"Rev. J. F. Grubbs, a prominent pastor of the Christian Church at Cleburne, but formerly of Troy, Bell county, has branched out in the sea of literature, and sends out the first number of the Index Wheel, a journal devoted to Science, Art, Literature and Religion. The parson is a good talker, and if he writes as well as he speaks, his paper will become a power."—Temple Times.

"Many thanks, Bro. Cox, such remarks from one who has known us so long are very encouraging. We shall endeavor to conduct the 'Wheel' that it may prove an unerring index to all who are in search of truth."—Index Wheel.

I was very much surprised when I saw the above from our brother and friend. I met Bro. Grubbs two years ago at the State Meeting in Austin, and was much pleased with him, and I love him yet, and do not know that he has changed his views on any religious question recently, but he certainly did wrong in inserting such flattery as the above in his paper. "Rev. J. F. Grubbs, a prominent pastor of the Christian church." This is encouraging indeed, and to one who is seeking the favor and popularity of the world, oh! how thankful he ought to be.

You acknowledge that you are "Rev. J. F. Grubbs" and that you are "a prominent pastor of the Christian church," do you?

Brethren this new "Wheel" at Cleburne turns fast. Wonder if Bro. G. has a brake for his new "Wheel"? If so, would it not be a good idea to try the strength of it on this down grade in the direction of Rome? If "Bro. Cox" is a brother, Bro. G. should have followed the example of Aquilla and Priscilla by teaching him the way of the Lord more perfectly. Yes, he should have taught him, that in the kingdom of God or the church of the first born, there are no "Revs.," no "prominent pastors" and no such thing as the "Christian Church."

Now, Bro. Grubbs, please don't think hard of me, but stop and think, if it stops that "Wheel" that is grinding out the "science, art and literature" of worldly wisdom, and turning aside from the Bible to such flattery. Come back, my brother, from such things to the "FIRM FOUNDATION" of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone.

Oh, that men could be satisfied with the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ and the wisdom which is from above. I have no objection to any brother publishing a paper, but that paper should be run in the interest of the religion of Jesus and that alone. I have no objection to the "Wheel," if it is run wholly in the interest of the cause of Jesus Christ. If Bro. G. will give himself "wholly to the work," contend earnestly for the faith, he and his paper will be a "power" for good in Texas; but if he devotes three-fourths of his God-given time to "science, art and literature," the banner of Jesus will trail in the dust. If Bro. G. will run his "Wheel" in the interest of the religion of Christ alone, and help us to drive out all innovations and beat back the strong tide of progressionism that is so detrimental to pure and undefiled religion, I will pledge myself to help him and his paper all I can, and I believe all true brethren will do the same.

May God help us to stand firm on his eternal and ever-abiding word of truth.
A. J. McCARTY.

FROM SISTER BRADFUTE.

Dear Sisters:

I see so many letters in the F. F. from sisters I feel it my duty to write some, if it is but little.

If the sisters are like me, they will be glad to hear something from me. I have not much education and never tried to write for publication before, but you don't know how it makes my heart rejoice when I see a letter from a sister, and to know there is one on our blessed Savior's side. I try to live a Christian, as near as I know how.

My father was a Christian, my mother was a Baptist, and all my brothers and sisters were Baptists. I joined the Baptists when I was fifteen years old, and thought I was doing right. I had never heard a Christian preach since I was a little girl. Father died when I was small and of course I was taught that the Baptists were right. I joined the Baptists and lived with them twelve years. I thought that any church was right. I knew they taught things that were not taught by the apostles, but thought all churches did that.

I went to hear the Christians preach and knew that they were right and joined the church; but I soon found that I could not get into the body of Christ, without being baptized into his body; so I made the good confession and was baptized into his body for the remission of sins, and I thank God for it; and I advise all who have not been baptized into his body for the remission of their sins, to do so before it is too late.

I think Bro. Jackson wrote a good article in the F. F. of April 1st. By their works we shall know them; there is a work for us all, but there is but very little work going on.

Dear sisters I think the greater portion of us, think too little about what pure and undefiled religion is. Do you visit the widows and orphans in their affliction? But to visit them is not all; "if a brother or sister be naked and destitute of dally food, and one of you say to them, depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled, notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body, what doth it profit?"

How many are there that cares for the poor widows and orphans, but have respect for them that weareth gay clothing and despise the poor? Now, dear sisters, if you are guilty of this, think that God has chosen the poor of this world rich in faith. Dear sisters read God's word more earnestly and try to improve your talent. God has given us all a talent, and if we bury it, the Master will come and take that he hath given us away. So let us be up and doing, is the exhortation of your poor, unworthy sister.

M. E. BRADY.

FROM BRO. McCARTY.

After preaching a week in the town of Franklin, I came to Austin, and the first thought was, to visit the office of the F. F., which I did, and found Bro. T. H. Gillespie and our worthy friend, Mr. Donison, (the printer), quite busy. Bro. Jackson came Tuesday from Liberty Hill, where he had been holding a meeting. Bro. Jackson is full of zeal for the cause of Christ, and is well qualified to fill the editorial chair of the FIRM FOUNDATION. We have discussed freely the things concerning the kingdom for the past week.

On Saturday night we met with brethren and friends on Robinson Hill, and Bro. Jackson made us a good gospel talk, and on Lord's day we met again for the purpose of "breaking bread." We can truly say, that the little band of brethren and sisters who meet on Robinson Hill worship on the apostolic plan. They meet in their own "hired house," and receive all that come unto them bringing the doctrine of Christ. May the Lord bless all such faithful disciples, is my prayer.

A. J. M.

BRIEFS.

The new plan: "Go and preach the gospel when you can get a good salary."

In ordering the paper or tracts write your name plainly, and give postoffice, county and state.

Now is the time to send in your clubs. Go to work, brethren, and send us large lists of subscribers.

Be sure to read the article on first page from the pen of Bro. E. W. Herndon. It has the true gospel ring.

Those desiring to write to Bro. E. Hansbrough will address him at Clemmonsville, Davidson county, N. C.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

Some preachers are looking out for "a good situation." They read Paul about like this: "I am not ashamed of the gospel for it is the power of God unto a good salary for me."

A private letter from Bro. J. D. Markett, of Madisonville, Texas, says: "I had three conversions; baptized this (Monday) morning in Pool's Creek. Bro. Lee was with me night and day."

Bro. F. M. Trimble, of Dexter, Cooke county, Texas, writes: "I am now through my push of farm work and am ready to go anywhere that my services are needed. Brethren, I have no time to lose. I am willing to work according to the "Lord's plan" anywhere, or among any people desiring my services. Three accessions to the church since my last report. Two by obedience and one by commendation."

Write us short reports of your meetings, and in writing please don't "puff" your preacher so much. The desire for public applause, notoriety, is born of egotism and is contrary to the Spirit of Christ—crush it out.

Baptist theology: When you get religion you don't want it; when you want it you can't get it; when you get it you don't know it; if you don't know it you haven't got it; when you get it you can't lose it; if you lose it you never had it.

Married at the residence of the bride's father, in Randolph county, Ark., June 24, 1888, Bro. J. G. Conner, of Strawberry, Ark., to sister Jennie Crockett. Elder J. M. Lemmons officiating. The young couple have our best wishes for their prosperity and happiness here and hereafter.

The senior editor of the Messenger, on one of his preaching tours through the black-land, got stuck in the mud, and also had a breakdown. Sectarianism is just like that black-waxy mud; it sticks closely, clogs your wheels, and will break down any man or paper that continues to travel in it. Be warned in time, Bro. B., and venture no more.

Bro. A. J. McCarty and wife, of Madison county, are visiting relatives in Austin. During their stay Bro. Mc. has helped us very materially in our office work. On Lord's day, (July 1st) Bro. Mc. preached for our congregation, 1014 E. 7th street, at 11 a. m. and at night. We think it sufficient to say of him that he is a worthy preacher of the true gospel.

Bro. C. E. Holt, of Cypress Inn, Tenn., writes: "I have just returned from Smith's Chapel, Ala., at which place I preached two discourses to large and attentive audiences. Baptized two into Christ. Prospects good for a large in-gathering. Will visit them again in the near future, when I expect to hold a meeting for several days. Success to the F. F."

Bro. A. J. McCarty and myself will begin a meeting on Onion Creek, near Moore's school-house, eight miles south of Austin, on Thursday night before the second Lord's day in August. The place affords splendid accommodations for camping, and the brethren at that place and at Willow Springs will take pleasure in making all campers and visitors welcome.

The "Christian Church" in Austin have severed their connection with their former Pastor Junius Wilkins. In a card published in the Statesman of July 1st, the pastor charges that the action of the officers of the church "is wholly arbitrary and without scriptural authority." An opportunity is now offered to the elders of this church to return to their "first love," and "do again the first works." May the Lord help them to rule diligently and scripturally.

We frequently receive long obituary notices with request that they be published. Our space is too limited to admit of this kind of literature, and we hope that those who have sent these notices will not take it unkindly because we brief them.

Died, June 5, '88, at Sparta, Bell county, Texas, Bro. Nelson Walton.

Died, at New Hartford, Ill., May 30, '88, Bro. Mahlon Bentley.

Died, at Marlin, Falls county, Texas, June 5, '88, sister Elizabeth P. Pringle, aged 73.

Of these Christians it is said, they lived in humble and faithful obedience to the Master, and they fell asleep believing in the glorious dawning of the resurrection morn, when they and all true saints shall be gathered into their eternal home.

Bro. R. L. McMurrey, of Lavacca county, Texas, writes: "I am just home from holding a meeting. Ten days were spent preaching and exhorting the brethren to good works, and notwithstanding the continual rain, the meeting was a success. Seven were added to the Lord. Four made the good confession and were baptized, two restored, and one yet to be baptized. I left Bro. Strode with the brethren; he expected to preach Monday night and close. Bros. Strode and F. M. McMurrey assisted me in the meeting. The congregation at this place is a strong one; they meet every Lord's day to break the loaf, and of course will get stronger. Several of the brethren take the F. F., but they tell me they are not getting their papers. It does not come to their office at all."

The omission of their names occurred in transcribing our list into new books. They will go all right hereafter.

There is a very troublesome fellow going around disturbing the peace and harmony of the churches. I have heard of him very lately in Texas, and he has been here in Austin, working among the members of the 8th street church. Discord and envy follow his footsteps wherever he goes. He is the worst fellow that has appeared among the churches in a long time. Some brethren asked me lately what I thought we ought to do about this egotistical, envious, malicious, strife loving, sower of discord among brethren. I told them that the only effectual remedy was to kill him. I am a man of peace, and a law-abiding citizen, but I think, in this instance, that "judgment without mercy" should be given, and the unworthy fellow should be summarily lynched—put to death. As he is almost everywhere I'll give you his name and just as soon as he begins to play his pranks among you, take him out and kill him. His name is SELF; he is full of importance, emulation, envy, boasting, and seeks in all things to enhance his own good and not that of others. Paul describes him very well and also teaches us to crucify him. Reader follow Paul's advice.—Gal. 6: 14. J. W. J.

VARIOUS THINGS.

I held a meeting of ten days at Old Muddy creek meeting-house, most of the preaching at night, as the farmers were very busy, and at the close of the meeting baptized five, two of whom had been shook out of the Baptist church, (a human organization), six years ago, but not into the church of Christ; for the shaking process does not bring people into the church or body of Christ, who have been taught differently from what the apostles taught, under the commission given by the Savior, and guided, as they were, by the Holy Spirit. The Savior says: "Go teach all nations, then baptize them into the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit," Matt. 28: 19. But teach them what? Why the word of the Lord, the gospel, and not what sectarians teach, which Peter says is damnable, 2 Peter 2: 1.

But many of our preaching brethren have learned from some source, (but they won't tell where), that their baptism is all right, no odds how false their teaching has been, just so they are satisfied with it. Then if they have had a little water sprinkled or poured upon them for baptism it is all right, just so they are satisfied with it, unless its acceptance with God depends entirely upon the amount of water, and not upon the condition of the heart of the baptized.

I went from Old Muddy creek to Boyer's school-house, where I preached ten or twelve days, mostly at night. One made "the good confession," ("to which we must cling," says Bro. McGarvey, if we preach and practice right), and was buried with his Lord in baptism for the remission of sins; and not because his sins were remitted, and to get into a human organization.

We came from Boyer's school-house here to Warner's school-house, where we have been preaching for several days. On Lord's day we baptized one into Christ, he having made the good confession, as Bro. McGarvey, in his Commentary, teaches all should do, and on Monday I went back to Old Muddy creek to baptize three others who had been shook out of the Baptist church six years ago. Oh what a pity that preachers will not do their work right at the start, and not make people's being satisfied their rule of action, instead of the law of the Lord.

On Tuesday I took the confession of and baptized three others here who had been dipped, or ducked, not baptized, (for there is but one baptism), by the Baptists several years ago, and they become dissatisfied: but I did not make their dissatisfaction my rule of action, but the law of the Lord; teach first, then baptize. July 9th:—The meeting at Warner's school-house closed yesterday evening: no other additions.

As the heading of this article indicates, I will write about some other things:

The doctrines of Hon. Emanuel Swedenborg are being embraced or received by some in this country, and as far as I have been able to find out, more by our brethren than any one else. I want to give some extracts from his writings, and the writings of those that commend his doctrines, and also some extracts from a tract written by a Presbyterian minister, in which he condemns John Wesley for his wild speculations and fanaticism on the subject of the "direct witness of the Spirit."

In a tract, the title of which is, "The Progress of the New Jerusalem During its First Century in America," by the Rev. Chauncy Giles, he says, "When Catholics and Protestants, Puritans and Presbyterians, and Episcopalians were excommunicating and killing each other, and declaring the doors of heaven closed against those who did not accept their special doctrines and conform to their ritual, Swedenborg, the herald of the New Church, (yes, the New Church), proclaimed that the rituals of worship are only the dress of the church; that the essential of religion is a good life: that charity, not faith, is the central principle, and that those of every religion who faithfully live according to their doctrines are saved." Page 13.

Yes, Mahomedan, Catholic and all the various forms of idolatrous religion, that have ever cursed this earth, have as much salvation in them as the religion of Jesus Christ. Now could a bigger lie be in fewer words, than is told in the latter part of the above quotations?

On page twenty of the same tract, speaking of the inspiration of the Bible he says: "They (men) see no way to gain the Spirit without discarding the letter but they hold fast to the fact that in some special sense the Bible is inspired and contains divine truths necessary to spiritual intelligence, and the salvation of the soul. This is a state of transition, and must be passed through on the way to something better."

Yes, we must pass to some of his visions in the spirit world that God permitted him to have when establishing his new church, when he talked to the apostles and others; and reject what Paul says to his son Timothy, "That from a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus."—2 Tim. 3: 15.

Again, in a tract, "Discourses on Prayer, No. 8," by same author, speaking of forgiveness of our sins, top of page 9, he says: "The only conditions are that we forgive others: for if you forgive men their trespasses your heavenly Father will also forgive you; but if you forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your heavenly Father forgive your trespasses."

Now, brethren, is it true that the only condition that the sinner has to comply with in order to forgiveness of sins is that he forgive others? If so, then a great deal of the preaching of the apostles was vain and false. Did the inspired apostles, or Swedenborg, who pretended to be inspired, tell the truth?

Again, on pages 10 and 11 of the same tract he says: "Every one who lives a pure, truthful, upright and useful life is forgiving the trespasses of others, is offering this petition in a sincere and effective manner, and is complying with the only conditions on which his own trespasses can be forgiven."

What a pity the apostle Peter did not know that. It would have saved him the trouble of going from Joppa to Cesarea to preach to one of the best men we read of in the Bible, in order to tell him what he must do to be saved.—Acts 10: and 11: 1-15. But then Peter's inspiration was nothing compared to the higher plane that Swedenborg occupied.

On page 70 of the Presbyterian tract, Swedenborg says: "I was carried in spirit to a region, in the spiritual world, covered with snow. It was on the Sabbath day; and I saw a number of human spirits, who had their heads covered with lion's skins, by reason of the cold; their bodies with the skins of leopards, and their legs and feet with bear's skins. I also observed several riding in chariots, made in the shape of dragons with horns; they were drawn by small horses without tails, which ran with the impetuosity of terrible fierce beasts. They were all flocking toward a church, on which hung a tablet inscribed: 'A divine being consisting of Father, Son and Holy Ghost, in essence one; but in persons three.' What foulery."

On page 81 of the same tract, he says: "Satan was once permitted to ascend out of hell with a woman to my house. She was of the tribe of sirens who can assume all figures, and all habits of beauty and ornament. All such are harlots in the world of spirits. I asked Satan if the woman was his wife? He answered, 'Neither I nor any of our society have wives: she is my harlot.' She then inspired him with wanton lust, and he kissed her, and she cried, 'Ah my Adonis!' I said 'what do thou and thy companions think of God?' He said, 'God, heaven, angels, and the like, are all empty words.' I answered, 'O Satan, thou hast lost thy understanding. Recollect that thou has lived in another world.' Immediately his recollection returned, and he saw his error. But the cloud soon returned upon his understanding, and he was just the same as before."

Oh what folly, what fanaticism, delusion and wickedness combined are set forth in the above extracts from his writings; and yet we have brethren in this country, yes, and preaching brethren at that, who are recommending his writings to our brethren and others; and one of them particularly telling them that said writings throw a great deal of light on the Scriptures, that the Scriptures shine as much brighter looking at them through Swedenborg's writings "as the lamps now used shine brighter than the old tallow candle." The advocacy of Swedenborgianism is not confined to some of the preaching brethren now in this country; for, two years ago, one of them, now in Louisville, Ky., a preacher in one of the congregations in that city, and not only a preacher, but an associate editor of one of our popular papers, advocated said doctrines, or said foolishness; and these same preachers do not, or did not then hesitate to meet Mormon preachers and expose the fallacy and wickedness of their teachings, (in which they did right); and yet they swallow the absurdities of Swedenborgianism; and the man who can swallow Swedenborgianism ought to be able to swallow Mormonism, Methodism, and many other isms, without so much as batting his eyes.

This same Louisville preacher has, not long since, written a tract on "What Must I Do to Be Saved?" in which he claims to give the conditions of pardon, or forgiveness to the alien sinner, and in which he ignores entirely "the good confession," to which "good confession" J. W. McGarvey, in his Commentary on Acts, says "we must cling."

The man who can endorse the follies and absurdities of Swedenborg is very well calculated and prepared, to write a tract ignoring the "good confession," and I think he is equally prepared to give up baptism for the remission of sins, to cover up his unscriptural practice of shaking untaught sectarians into, (as they suppose), the church or body of Christ; for Swedenborg denies that baptism has anything to do with salvation or the forgiveness of sins.

The apostle Peter speaking of the gospel says: "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness."—2 Peter 1: 2. Paul says the Scriptures thoroughly (or completely) furnish the man of God unto all good works, 2 Tim. 3: 17; and that they are able to make us wise unto salvation, 2 Tim. 3: 15. Now if Peter and Paul tell the truth, I ask of what use are the pretended revelations of Swedenborg, or the Mormon prophets? And why reject the Mormon foolery and accept the Swedenborg? Will the above brethren please answer? and if they cannot be heard through a more popular medium, they can be in the FIRM FOUNDATION, in which this will be published.

THE PLAN OF SALVATION.

REPENTANCE, OR PURIFICATION OF LIFE (SOUL).

God has ever treated man as a rational and responsible being. Hence the presentation of gospel truth as the means of faith, and consequently before he requires action on man's part. The statement that "without faith it is impossible to please God," is simply the enunciation of the principle that God accepts only an intelligent obedience.

While faith apprehends truth as coming from God, it is to man the enabling act that prepares him for obedience. It is that that places any and every command within his grasp.

Repentance is the first command to be apprehended by faith under the gospel dispensation. Without faith man could not apprehend this command—could not please God; and yet without repentance the sinner must perish, Luke 13: 1-4.

Repentance is made of so much importance in the remedial system which God has ordained for the recovery of man from the damnation and consequences of sin, that he has placed it at the very threshold of the religious life. Ere the purchase of human redemption by the blood of Jesus and the assurances given of the same by his resurrection from the dead, God winked at the ignorance of the Gentile world. "But now he commands all men everywhere to repent."

The question may arise, what is this that God commands all men everywhere to do? Is it something that man can do? Certainly it is, else God would not have commanded it. A wise, just, and holy Being would not require of his creatures that which they could not do.

But some have misapprehended the nature of repentance, and consequently do not know what it is or when it is done. Some think it is sorrow, or a degree of sorrow. Others think it a certain kind of sorrow—a godly sorrow. Others, again, conclude that it is nothing more than a reformation of life. These we may discover are merely some of its elements or environments, and not repentance itself.

The nearest route to the understanding of the command—the import of the term repent itself—is beset with some difficulty in our version of the Scriptures; since two terms of the original, of decidedly different meaning, are translated by the one term, repent, in King James' version. The word metamelomia of the Greek, which meant to regret, found in our language in King James' day, no suitable word to represent that idea, and so had to be represented by repeat as a tolerably near approach to it. The term metanoeo (the noun form is metanoeis, repentance), the one used in the gospel command, finds an exact equivalent in our word repeat. They are the same both as to etymological and tropical sense. According to etymology they mean to think again. As a result of sober second thought, where wrong thought has once maintained, is a change of mind, they have acquired the sense of a change of mind, or, rather to change the mind.

Usage shows that this change is always understood to be from a wrong condition to a right condition. The heathen proconsul commanded Polycarp, one of the bishops or Smyrna, to repent, else he would expose him to the wild beasts. This heathen ruler regarded Christianity wrong and heathenism right. But the Christian teacher replied by paraphrasing thus: "It is not good that we should change our minds from good to evil, but it would be well for you to change yours from evil to good."

Paul expresses the thought that he once had regretted making the Corinthians sorry with a letter, but that his regret had passed away before he wrote the second letter. This change was because they had sorrowed but for a season and after a godly manner. "Godly sorrow," he says, "works repentance unto salvation; but the sorrow of the world works death." Theirs was of the former kind. It worked repentance, or caused them to repent. The sorrow itself was not the repentance, but was a suitable antecedent; it led to it. Reformation followed as the chapter shows. So then we see that the act of the mind, or will, called repentance, is that which follows godly sorrow for sin, and sandwiches, as it were, between it and reformation of life.

Another pertinent example of repentance is that of the prodigal son. He is said to come to himself. At this point he evidently began to think again. As he thought, he spoke. He said, "There are hired servants in my father's house that have plenty and to spare, and here I die of hunger. I will arise and go to my father and say: Father, I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son," etc. He evidently had sorrow and it was out of this mellowed condition of a sad heart that his serious thought sprang, and moved the will. This resolution of the will is that which gives repentance its name, nature, and potential efficacy. Any character or degree of sorrow or thought that falls short of the indispensable and potential "I will," is not the repentance of the Bible. No matter as to its intensity or the time of its duration, it is not that that pleases God or blesses man.

It may be like that of Esau that caused him to weep, or that of Judas that caused him to kill himself, but unless it so affects the will as to cause one to turn away from sin and walk in a new life, it will avail nothing as to the salvation of our God. John demanded fruits meet for repentance. And so the suitable fruit, or reformation of life is the end to be attained. The abused notion that God is pleased with a long course of mourning and weeping over one's sins finds no countenance in the Bible.

Paul's regret ceased because those Corinthians sorrowed but for a season and sorrowed effectually—so that they resolved to put away the evil and do the right. An earnest short work is what is needed to make an end of a sinful course. This is the repentance that will make the angels in heaven rejoice. This is saving repentance, because it bursts the shackles of sinful habit and sets the life free from vice, or purifies the soul (life) by obedience to the teachings of the Spirit.

Therefore let the goodness of God, as manifested in the gospel of his Son, sink down into the soul of every intellectual erring being, and sweeten the bitter waters of a hitherto wasted life, so that they may henceforth issue in a never failing stream of good deeds that shall gladden the hearts of the children of men and make the arches of heaven resound with acclamations of joy. J. R. WILMETH.

THE SUBLIME AND THE RIDICULOUS.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have undertaken to write another article for the FIRM FOUNDATION, but the weather is so hot, and I sweat so much that it is difficult writing. The thermometer now stands at 94° at nine o'clock a. m.

The intention of this article is to draw a contrast between the sublime and the ridiculous. The ridiculous is far the most popular in this age 'tis true; but we desire to elevate the sublime, and depreciate the ridiculous. We will give an example of the sublime first, then follow it with the ridiculous.

The case of the sublime may be found in Acts of apostles, chapter 17, where the Epicureans and Stoics encountered Paul. It appears that they arrested him and brought him unto Areopagus, saying, "May we know this new doctrine whereof you speak?" For, said they, "you bring strange things to our ears. We would know therefore what these things mean?" Now for the sublime! "Then Paul stood in the midst of Mars-hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things you are too superstitious. For as I passed along I saw an altar inscribed, 'To the unknown God.' Whom you, therefore, worship in ignorance, I will now declare him unto you, God who made the world, and all things in it. He as Lord of heaven and earth, does not dwell in temples made by hand; neither is He worshiped with men's hands (or by hand) as though He needs anything, seeing he gives life and breath, and all things; and has made of one race (or blood) all nations of men who dwell on the surface of the entire earth, and has determined the time and bounds of their dwelling places; that they should seek the Lord and perhaps find Him, for he is not far from any of us: for of him we live, and move, and have even an existence; as certain of your own poets have testified.

They have said: "We are his offspring. For as much then as we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that God in character is like any image of gold, or silver, or stone formed by man's art or device. And the ignorance of men in the times past God winked at; but now He commands all men everywhere to repent: because he has appointed a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he has appointed (to judge the world) of which He has given notice to all men by raising him from the state of death."

Now for the ridiculous: If Paul, when he was thus brought before the authorities, had been a time server and popularity seeker, he might have replied: I am not indeed trying to introduce among you, noble Athenians, a new God; but as I was passing through your magnificent city I was contemplating your many grand temples and your many altars of worship. I beheld, too, in your temples and before your altars, your many representative Gods to whom, as I suppose, you ascribe no real power; but through whom you only make application to the great unknown God, to whom I see also an altar inscribed. I suppose, therefore, that you have an imperfect conception of him. Now I will relate a circumstance or two with regard to this unknown God. He had a son and sent him into the world. He was called Jesus. The wicked Jews killed him and he was buried; but God raised him to life again. And God had appointed a day when his Son should judge the world in righteousness; but I suppose that God will wink at your misunderstandings since you are so pious and devoted. You spend certainly vast sums in your devotions; and are certainly doing great good in training the Athenian youth to worship your gods.

God, the unknown God, will certainly take the will for the deed. He will certainly not require you to understand all about his will, and how, and why you should worship him. I discover you are very zealous and devoted. And since you worship so many gods, if I should happen to worship still another, we should not fall out about it. The true God has required all men everywhere to repent, but then if a man be pious, he has nothing to repent of. If, therefore, you can include in your piety the idea of this unknown God, and occasionally offer to him a sacrifice and a prayer, I think he will save you.

The above is about a fair sample of much of the teaching of the present day. Listen, if you please, to some of the ridiculous sayings of Rev. Dr. Talmage. Subject: "None like Jesus." "There are some things which I believe with my head. Then there are other things which I believe with my heart. And there are other things which I believe both with head and heart. I believe, for instance, that Cromwell lived. That is a matter of the head. Then there are other things which I believe with the heart and not with the head. That is, I have no special reason for believing them. Yet I want to believe them, and the wish is the father of the expectation."

If the foregoing is not ridiculous, I never saw anything that was

Some things he believed with the head, and that Cromwell lived is one thing that he believes with the head. How does he believe that Jesus lived or died, either? In precisely the same way that he believes that Cromwell lived. Both propositions rest on testimony. How does he, or any one else, believe Jesus is the Christ? In the identical same way, on testimony. These things are written, says John, that you might believe that Jesus is the Christ, and believing you might have life through his name, John 20: 30-31. Where does Mr. Talmage get his authority for making this distinction between believing with the head and with the heart? The truth is, that we believe all propositions in the same way, and that faith comes by hearing the word of God, Rom. 10: 17.

Then he says that there are things that he believes with the heart and not with the head. Things that he has no special reason to believe; but because he wants them, or to believe them, and the wish is the father of the expectation! Is not that ridiculous enough for you? He wants to believe a thing and therefore he believes it. I have not credulity enough to believe that he believes any such stuff as that. Now we have his logic of salvation. Here it is! We are saved by faith—we want to be saved—because we want to be saved, we believe we are saved; and that belief is faith. Or, we want to be saved, therefore we believe we will be saved, and that faith saves us.

By such a process, we originate, carry out, and consummate our salvation. That rules God, Christ and the Holy Spirit all out of Mr. Talmage's salvation. But this is a fair specimen of Presbyterianism and all sectism. Faith alone saves them. They want to be saved, therefore they believe they are saved, therefore they are saved. Thus you see, they have an easy way of being saved. But the most ridiculous thing of all is, that after they have thus saved themselves by this hocus-pocus performance, if they are dipped in the water by one of these jugglers, some will shake hands with them and declare them in Christ sure enough.

It does not require much intelligence to discover the absurdity of such jugglery as this. Yet some persons seem to believe it all right. Now I must say, that to such, I cannot ascribe both intelligence and honesty. Does not every one know, that if one can get persons into Christ at the mourner's bench, that another can do the same? And if after they have believed all the false teaching that usually accompanies such jugglery they are saved if dipped in the water, that it must simply be the dipping that saves them?

Now I repeat, that it does not require much intelligence to see this. All those who are opposing the FIRM FOUNDATION and raising such a howl at our heels about what they call, "re-baptism," are only advertising to the world their own ignorance. Once in every while, I see in the Christian Leader or Review some fellow pops up and fires a little squib at "re baptism," and dives out of sight again. They know that the O. R. believes in the shaking process; and that the C. L. don't want the matter discussed. Why do they not knock at the door of the F. F. for a reply? In its columns they can get full accommodations. But I expect the ridiculous to remain until the Lord comes. The people will have it so.

There are yet some other things of which I am going to write soon if the Lord will. The world is in a deplorable condition, and especially our own dear land. Let us be vigilant, brethren. Grace, mercy and peace to all. I. C. STONE.

FEARING GOD.

The wise man said: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge: but fools despise wisdom and instruction." Then whosoever would have that knowledge that leads to salvation must begin by fearing the Lord. This fear is not a slavish dread of God begotten in us by threats; nor is it that abject terror that arises from contemplating the approach or certainty of punishment, but it is a combination of two qualities of the heart; love and awe, producing what we call reverence. It is produced in us by a contemplation of the mighty works done by Him; His wonderful mercy, and His quick and prompt punishment of evil doers.

Faith in God, then lies at the basis of reverence. When once we rightly apprehend by faith the wonderful nature of God as seen in what he has done for man, we are led to fear him—that is reverence to Him. This is the opposite to all that is light and trivial. One who fears God is ever ready to acknowledge his dependence upon Him for all things. He will be humble and willing to wait to hear what God shall command. You see such an one always speaking of holy things in a respectful and reverential manner; you will see them treat holy things with all due respect. Alas! how little of reverence there is today for God, for His word, or for His divine appointments!

How often do we see in the Lord's day assembly conduct that would be permissible only at some fashionable party. Men, women and children seemingly forgetful of the day and the occasion of their coming together, will chatter and laugh and talk about anything and everything but God and His worship. This is "lightness;" it is treating holy things with irreverence, and the young who are brought up under such training are more disposed to mock and scoff at religion than to practice it.

Jesus once said: "Where two or three are gathered together in my name there am I in the midst of them." Do the saints believe this?

Do they realize it when they come together? If they do, I should think that they would feel more like doing as Peter did upon one occasion when he fell at Jesus' feet and said: "Depart from me Lord for I am a sinful man," than to act in such an unbecoming irreverent way.

In approaching God we must have confidence in Him and in His appointments. Using them reverently as he has ordained, the end for which He appointed them will be seen to follow. There is but little reverence for God when we refuse to do His will, or treat His institutions with indifference. How often do Christians forsake the Lord's day assembly, and then seek to "excuse themselves" by some frivolous pretext of "being too tired," "feeling unwell," etc.? The Christian who thus acts is sick and needs some vigorous medicine.

Brethren and sisters, "fear God and keep His commands for this is the whole duty of man." If you do less than your whole duty you lose your reward. WARREN.

DEATH-BED REPENTANCE.

The word of God certainly gives no one any ground to believe that his prayer for mercy will be heard if he has had the offered salvation when in health. God says: "Because I have called, and ye have refused; I have stretched forth my hand, and no man regarded; but ye have set at naught all my counsel, and would none of my reproof; I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh; when your fear cometh as a desolation, and your destruction as a whirlwind; when distress and anguish cometh upon you. Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me; for that they hated knowledge, and did not chose the fear of the Lord; they would none of my counsel; they despised all of my reproof. Therefore shall they eat of the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices."—Prov. 1: 24-31.

There are ample reasons, if we would but consider them, why a dying man is not in the condition, mentally and physically, to properly attend to a matter of such moment. The infinite importance of what he has to do, the goading conviction that it must be done, the utter inability to do it—the dreadful combination in his mind of both the necessity and incapacity, the despair of crowding the concerns of a life-time into a few moments—the impossibility of beginning a repentance where it should be completed,—of setting about a peace which should have been concluded, of suing for a pardon which should have been obtained. All these complicated concerns, without strength, without time, without hope, with a clouded memory, a disappointed reason, and a wounded spirit, undefined terrors, remembered sins, fear of punishment, an angry God, an accusing conscience, all intolerably augment the sufferings of the body which stands in little need of the insupportable burden of a distracted mind to aggravate its torments. —Tennessee Baptist.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, AUG. 1, 1888.

From this time on send all money for the FIRM FOUNDATION, or any of our pamphlets, to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Texas. Make all money orders payable to A. McGary. Please state whether you are a new subscriber or an old one. Write plainly, and give the county, where your post office is not a large town. Don't forget this in sending orders. MCGARY & HANBROUGH.

A. MCGARY's address is Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Bro. John Friend has been holding some good meetings in this part of the State. At Bigelow he had 32 additions, mostly by obedience.—D. Collins, in Leader.

If his additions were "mostly by obedience," what were those "by" that were not "by" obedience; were they by disobedience? A. MCG.

A TRIAL OFFER.

We will send the FIRM FOUNDATION, to clubs of five new subscribers, till the 1st of January, '89, for $2.00—this is forty cents a piece. Let every friend of the paper see how many new readers they can send in on this offer. This will hold good, too, if the paper is changed to a weekly.

Now friends, take hold of this offer and push it. One brother who is over eighty years old, in a town in California, sent us thirty-two names and $32.00 in one club for the F. F. He would not take a commission. And now our paper has a foothold in many localities in that far-off state. If all of the friends of the F. F. would work as diligently to increase its circulation as this dear old brother did, it would soon have a larger circulation than any paper published by the disciples. Send to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Texas.

WILL THE ADVOCATE EXPLAIN?

1. A paper having quite a circulation in Texas was at one time so scriptural and apostolic that it did not favor the International Lesson with or without comments. Today this paper publishes a series of Sunday School supplies, lesson helps included.—(J. H. Roscrans, in the Courier.)

Yes, and the senior editor of that same paper pointed out the exceeding sinfulness of Christians having their lives insured, and showed the corrupt tendency in general in the system of life insurance so logically and forcibly to the mind of the writer, that he paid up his policy in a company and had the policy cancelled, losing what he had paid in.

And now in that same paper we find the following: "Advertisers would do well to take advantage of the pages of the Gospel Advocate."

The Gospel Advocate is one of the best mediums in the South; has a large and growing circulation, and the rates of advertising are cheap. J. W. Jackson, manager for this department of the old New York Life Insurance Company, tells us he receives more returns from his advertisement in this paper than any other. We are glad the Advocate readers patronize those who give us a share of their patronage.

I hope the Advocate will explain this seeming inconsistency. That insurance agent is not our J. W. Jackson. [Italics mine.]

A. MCG.

THAT TENT.

That tent is not up yet, neither do we give it up. It is said that, "small beginnings make big endings." If this is true, we shall certainly expect a big "ending" in this tent proposition.

Now, brethren, I know times are hard, but souls are being lost for want of the gospel, all the same. Thus far only two have responded to our call for help in this contemplated and much needed work. A letter from Bro. Stone informs me that he would like to come out here and help in this work.

Just think of it, ten cents a piece from each subscriber of the F. F. would put the tent on the ground and start the work! Have you not the missionary spirit to the tune of ten cents! Brothers and sisters, I know you will not let this effort fall when it will cost so little to push it to success. So wake up and work while it is day. A. MCG.

CLERICAL TITLES.

There is quite a spirited contest now going on in the Courier over clerical titles. W. H. Bagby is making eager reaches for the title "Reverend." While J. H. Roscrans, who so complacently and dignifiedly wears the title of, "State Sunday School Evangelist," and A. Clark, are interposing and staying the hand of W. H. Bagby, and hindering him from grasping the coveted little title "Rev." As for J. H. Roscrans, it is clearly a case of the "pot calling the kettle black." And does not A. Clark honor J. H. Roscrans with his title? Do they pot all flippantly speak and write of their "State Evangelist"? You are right, Bro. Bagby, make them either swallow the little title "Rev." or vomit up their My titles. And there is "President" Ford, and "Secretary and Treasurer" Smith. Why, then, not let the gallant knight Bagby plume himself with this meagre badge of honor? I see one sister was made a chairman at your Waco meeting. You brethren seem to be wearing everything but "Rev.," Pope, and the jewel of consistency. The former two you will doubtless wear before your human machinery runs long, but the latter you will never wear till you quit your frolics in Rome and come back to Jerusalem. A. MCG.

A QUIBBLE.

We said that, although Bro. C. M. Wilmeth would advise the elders of the congregations to "rise up in their heaven-ordained right" and call any man to give an account who advocated the organ in the worship, or missionary work through a missionary society, he would not advise them to rise up against the man who advocates, receiving immersed sectarians, who were immersed before they were taught, to unite with us upon such immersion, although there was the same authority for all of these that there is for any one of them. And we said that such inconsistency as this ought to burn a blister on an honest man's cheek. To this the Messenger replies:

Such misrepresentation ought to burn a blister on your pen—or burn it up entirely. You know C. M. Wilmeth would not advise the elders to "lie low" and respect the traditions of "the fathers of this reformation" in any such case. He does not go to "the fathers of this reformation" for authority, but to Christ, who says, "Go teach all nations, baptizing them," etc. Therefore we could not receive "those who were baptized before they were taught."

But we do not believe these words are from the pen of Bro. Wilmeth, but from the expert doerger and quibbler, of Rose Hill notoriety.

We did not mean that any one had ever been immersed without first having been taught, but we did mean that these sectarians had not been taught the truth that is antecedent to Christian baptism. A man may go out to teach mathematics, and teach that two and two make five, and those who receive such instruction are taught, but not truly or correctly; yet such teaching is as true to the principles of mathematics as such teaching as precedes the immersion of sectarians is to the principles of Christianity.

If Bro. Wilmeth has really quit recognizing as being scripturally immersed those who have been immersed upon the perverse teaching of so-called "orthodoxy," I am glad to hear it, so much rejoiced that I am willing to "burn up entirely" several "pens"—yes, even gold pens. A. MCG.

MAKE A STRAIGHT PATH FOR YOUR FEET.

A brother wrote to Bro. Daniel Sommer that he wanted him to stop the Review, as he could not afford to support a paper that was so inconsistent on the "rebaptism question" as he had made the Review appear.

Now this brother was an old subscriber and Bro. Sommer did not want to lose him and his influence in that state. He had been taking the Review from before the death of Bro. Franklin. So Bro. Sommer wrote him an apologetic letter in which he said:

"I believe in rebaptizing every one whom we can convince by preaching the gospel that the baptism received at the hands of sectarian preachers was not Scriptural baptism. But when we cannot convince them without going beyond what the Scriptures authorize, I do not believe in doing an unscriptural something in order to prevent them from being unscriptural. I doubt not that some have submitted to be rebaptized who were not convinced that it was necessary. Then comes in that statement, 'Whatsoever is not of faith is sin.'

Oh, what inconsistent and dissembling attitudes the mania for publishing papers and floating them into the current of popularity where they will pay "handsome dividends" some editors and "publishers" find themselves—or, rather are found by others.

A man who is not convinced thoroughly that he ought to be re-immersed should not be immersed; and if he is, he is no nearer the kingdom of God than he was before. I remember two who have told me that they were not perfectly satisfied that it was necessary, but that they would do so to make their standing better with the congregations. But I said, not at my hands will you be baptized for any such thing. And I do not believe that any of the brethren who are contending that persons should be intelligently baptized would baptize any one who was not thoroughly convinced, if they knew it.

But let's see how this matter stands with Bro. Sommer. He clearly shows that, he does not consider that their "baptism received at the hands of sectarian preachers was scriptural baptism." Well, then, when he receives them into the congregations and recognizes them as Christians, he sins; for, as he says: "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." "Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man * * for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same thing."—Rom. 2: 1.

The sin is just as great and as palpable as if Bro. Sommer were to accept sprinkled persons without immersing them, to keep from doing "an unscriptural something in order to prevent them from being unscriptural." Because, if the baptism of those who received baptism "at the hands of sectarian preachers was not scriptural baptism," of course it is no better than any other unscriptural baptism, or so-called baptism. So, then, it is no better than sprinkling. This conclusion inevitably follows, and Bro. Sommer cannot avert it, nor the predicament it leaves him in on this question. What will he do about it? Will he continue in it, or is he a man of sufficient courage to put himself right before his brethren and his heavenly Father? I hope he is.

Let him not fly away to the mythic work of "Cutting the Tap Root," nor "Taking the Bark Off of the Rebaptism Tree." But let him act the part of a true, humble disciple, and make a straight path for his feet, and then keep the Review in that path. A. MCG.

FROM BRO. BOREN,

Dear Bro. McGary:

We send you $1.50 for the purpose of helping to make the F.F. a weekly. Send the F. F. to Willie Myers, Iredel, Bosque county, Texas, for six months; send it to Mrs. E. Smith, Palmer, Ellis county, Texas, for six months, and to Alvarena Boren, Margaret, Hardeman county, Texas, for six months. And we send you fifty cents for the purpose of getting a tent to preach the gospel of Christ in—not a gospel, but the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God—not a power, but the power of God—unto salvation to every one that believeth.

Times are very hard, but I think this is as good a way as we can spend our little mite in sending the gospel to a lost and dying world. Also find enclosed 25 cents for one copy of the "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," and two copies of "Zeke and the Methodists," for Frank Cook, Ennis, Ellis county, Texas.

Question: We find in Ps. cix: 8: "Let his days be few and let another take his office." The question is, who filled his place, Matthias or Paul? We find in Rev. 21: 14, "And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. We see in the Zeke Jackson pamphlet, to lay the foundation is to preach the gospel. "I have laid the foundation and another buildeth thereon."—I Cor. 3: 10. "Am I not an apostle, have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord?"—I Cor. 9: 1.

"Go thy way, for he is a chosen vessel unto me."—Acts 9: 15. "Paul, an apostle, not of man neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father."—Gal. 1: 1.

I am an old subscriber; have sent you four names with my own; expect to send you all I can. Hoping the F. F. will be made a weekly, I am, yours in the "one faith,"

J. R. BOREN.

Matthias took the apostolic place from which Judas Iscariot fell. See Acts 1: 20-26. "And he (Matthias) was numbered with the eleven." So Matthias, the newly appointed apostle, when numbered with "the eleven" old apostles, made "twelve." Also see Acts 2: 14. Here we find Peter, and eleven others mentioned, which make "twelve."

It was several years afterward that Paul became an apostle, it seems. Counting all who have been apostles, first and last, we find fourteen. It seems that until the Church was once well established throughout the then known "world," the Lord, for some inscrutable reason, required the full number of twelve apostles. It is true, that for a short time, we find there were thirteen living apostles, but only for a short time, for it took Paul to complete the number twelve after Herod killed James.

It is true, Paul says, in I Cor. xv: 5, "And he (Christ after his resurrection) was seen of Cephas (Peter), then of the twelve." This, of course, was before Matthias was chosen formally, and after Judas Iscariot had hanged himself. Doubtless Matthias was one of these twelve who saw him, but it was before he was formally made an apostle.

The "twelve foundations" of "the wall of the city" mentioned in Rev. xxi: 14, can only refer to the work done by the chosen apostles of our Lord. That work is the foundation of that city whose bulder and maker is God; for that work is bound in heaven and earth, Christ came to do the Father's will. He remained on earth just long enough to prepare chosen agents to carry out that will after the great sacrifice had been made; and when he sat down at the right hand of God, he sent to these chosen ones that "comforter" and guide into all truth, which fully equipped them to consummate the will of the Father that he came to earth to do and have done—Christ had no will but the will of the Father, and the apostles had no will but the will of the Lord Jesus Christ the Son, which was the will of God the Father.

So, as the apostolic college was composed of twelve separate men who all did the one will of God, the word "foundations" refers to them as different individuals, but not in the sense of separate work; it means no more nor less than Eph. 2: 20. "And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone."

FROM BRO. KENNEDY.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Bro. "Si" Davis, of Kerr county, sent the May 1st number of your paper to Bro. Wm. York, who lives near me here. So in this circuitous way I have the pleasure of reading one more copy of your F.F.

And now, Bro. McGary, this reminds me of several things: 1. Of the pleasant hours you and I spent together at Liberty Hill, on the San Gabriel, etc. Of the many good meetings I enjoyed in Texas. But especially does it remind me of the promise I made you when we last met in Austin. You asked me to write you when I landed at my home in New Mexico, and I promised to do so. It also reminds me that my wife has more than once asked me to subscribe for the F. F., since we landed here. And, again, it reminds me of Bro. Caskey's letter, (of Florence, Texas,) in which he says: "Please write some for the F. F., as many of us would like to see something from your pen."

So here is a dollar for your paper, and you can publish this letter, or not, as you think best. I have never cared much to write for our papers, as I well know there are so many of our brethren who are more able than myself.

Well, I left Florence, Texas, the 12th of last Sept. and landed here Nov. 9th. I brought through with me a small herd of cattle and four wagons loaded with household plunder and family groceries. Soon after landing here I bought out a merchant and am now doing a very lucrative business. I am located on the beautiful Rio Penasco, where sparkling waters flow by in a great rush, "clear as crystal and cold as ice." This is almost the very geographical center of the Sacramento mountains, and nearly fourteen thousand feet above sea level; or, twelve thousand feet nearer heaven than you are at Fort McKavett. But I believe it has been said, "that bodily exercise profiteth nothing."

This is a rough mountainous country interspersed by rich valleys of very productive soil, of a black sandy loam with clay subsoil. Corn, oats, alfalfa, Irish potatoes and, indeed, all kinds of garden vegetables grow in great abundance here. And it is, beyond all doubt, the finest country I have ever seen. There is an abundance of timber here—oak, fir, pine, spruce, ash, etc. There are pine trees here that would make lumber, shingles and rails enough to build, cover in, and fence Fort McKavett, and leave you fire wood enough to run you through an average Texas norther, and not consume a single tree. Pretty big yarn, eh? Well, come out and look and be convinced.

There is a good deal of government land here yet, that is not taken up, that will make good homes; but it is being taken up very fast. Two railroads are making for these mountains, and this country will be the speculators paradise for the next few years. There are a good many gold and silver mines already opened up here, and they pay handsome profits. There are pine log school-houses every few miles through this country and preaching at nearly all of them at times.

There are a good many of our brethren all through this country. The Methodists and Baptists are also pretty well represented here. The two Bros. Prichard are here, who are the only preachers of our church that I know of in this Territory. If one of our preachers "with plain common sense religion," as Bro. Tant calls it, would come here and devote his entire time to the work, he could do much good and be sustained.

All the people who have been here one year are living easy and have plenty of money to live on. I have not heard of a case of sickness since coming here, and a doctor is "an unknown quantity" in this region. There may be some better place for poor men to go to to find good homes, and a healthier country; but, if so, I know not where it is.

If you wish, I will try to send you some subscribers for your paper, and will write you from time to time, if you desire, either privately or for your paper, as you desire.

In conclusion, believe me, my dear sir, your sincere friend and brother,

S. E. KENNEDY.

Upper Penasco,
Lincoln county,
New Mexico.

Yes, Bro. Kennedy, we will be glad to hear from you often. I am sure your communications will be deeply interesting to many of our readers, some of whom are your old neighbors and intimate friends. The only thing I see in your letter I feel disposed to criticize is, that you say, "the two Bros. Prichard are the only preachers of our church that I know of in this Territory." Do you not know of Bro. S. E. Kennedy? He used to be considered a preacher of few equals down here in Texas. Does he think that, getting "twelve thousand feet nearer heaven" than he was down in Texas will excuse him from wielding the old Jerusalem blade and sheathing the "sword of the Spirit"? Brethren of New Mexico, push Bro. Kennedy into the work; for he is a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." A. MCG.

FROM A. J. HICKS.

Mr. A. McGary:

As I have been getting the F. F. by some "hook or crook," or some friend sent it to me, I don't know whether I am a subscriber or not; but one thing I do know, and that is, the red cross still comes, which tells me the paper is not paid for. Now if you will be so kind as to send it on, and take the red cross off, I will pay for all the time I have been reading it, as soon as I can, which will be this fall, sometime.

Now, Mr. McGary, I belong to the Missionary Baptist church, and to the Alliance, and to the Masonic fraternity, and all of these you oppose. But I assure you when I get my mail the F. F. is the first paper I read; and unless you stop it I shall continue to read it. I am under many obligations to you for sending it on to me. It is a valuable paper. Yours,

A. J. HICKS.

Hollis, Texas.

Yes, we would send it on if we knew we would never get a cent; for you write like an honest man and don't get mad at us for showing wherein you stand on unsafe ground. I wish all of my brothers and sisters in the Lord were half as honest. I regard the Baptist church, the Alliance and the Masonic fraternity all of human origin, and the former the worst of all, because it claims to be of God. A. MCG.

SOME HELP.

Since sending off my remarks on, "That Tent," I have received some help:

Old Thomas, Junction City, Texas,	50
J. R. Boren, of Ellis county,	50
E. A. McCorquodale, Madison county,	$1.25
E. A. Day, Madison county,	50
J. B. Lee, " "	50
S. T. Traweck, and other brethren, Honey Grove,	$5.00

I would not publish these names, but some of the brethren want receipts and this is the shortest way to receipt them. I am ever-run with correspondence, hence take all "near cuts" I can. Thanks to these brethren for their contributions to this work. A. MCG.

DIFFERENCES OF OPINION.

In No. 16 of this volume of our paper, Bro. Jackson says two things in which I cannot fully concur.

(1) On the "appointment" of elders, he says it was by "fasting, prayer and laying on of hands." I hold that it is very clear, that the laying on of hands done during the apostolic age was a means of conferring miraculous gifts; and that when these gifts ceased to be vouchsafed to disciples the laying on of hands must logically and scripturally cease also. The practice of laying on of hands among us in this age I think, is not of Jerusalem, but of Rome. I wish it, with all other Romish trappings, would cease to be observed by our brethren. I would refer those who desire to read an elaborate argument on this subject, to Bro. E. W. Herndon's argument on "Ordination," in the Christian Quarterly Review, January number. Address Dr. E. W. Herndon, Columbia, Mo.

I have had several private letters recently requesting me to give my views on this question. This is sufficient to show the position I entertain upon it. I am not a Greek scholar, know nothing whatever about Greek, therefore cannot make a philological argument on this question. But I may soon tender a common sense argument on it, which I think will very effectually show that the laying on of hands now practiced by so many of my brethren, is the effect of the inebriating wine of Babylon of which our fathers drank so freely, and the drugs linger in the veins of their sons.

(2) Bro. A. J. Thompson asked: "Where do our preachers get authority for praying in public before preaching?" To which Bro. Jackson replied: "We are commanded to 'pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks'; and he referred to 1 Cor. 14. He further says: "The practice, adopted by some, of not praying before or after preaching, partakes more of the 'eccentric' than the religious."

Now, I suppose Bro. Thompson referred to the practice of praying before preaching, where the congregation is composed of aliens, where there is no church. If he did, I think Bro. Jackson's reply is wholly unsound. I know the brethren practice opening their meetings with prayer; but all of the references given by Bro. Jackson to show that they do right, fly wide of the mark, it seems to me.

There are no disciples at McKavett, or, were none when I began to preach here, but my wife and myself. So, when I began to preach to them I did not have any public prayers. If there had been a worshipping congregation here I would have opened with prayer. I hold that in all of Christ's preaching where he spoke to immense multitudes, there is no example of his opening or closing with prayer. I also hold that in all of the records of apostolic meetings there is no opening nor closing with prayer, except where there was an assembly of brethren. Then, if my Master and his divinely-guided apostles always preached to aliens without having public prayer, why should Bro. Jackson, or any one else, consider it more "eccentric" than "religious" when disciples of to-day follow their example?

Mr. Worcester defines the word, Eccentric, thus: "He who, or that which, deviates from the usual method or common standard." Well, according to this definition, those who open preaching to alien assemblies without prayer are eccentric; but that same eccentricity is observable in our Lord and his apostles, for in their day "the usual method" was, "to pray standing in the synagogues and at the street corners" The public prayer was not the kind of prayer that was to be made everywhere, see Matt. 6:5.

The sectarians at McKavett raised a great cry against me on this point; but I think they got tired of it first, for I showed the teaching of the word on that point at the beginning of every discourse, until they hushed. I consumed the time that most men would have taken in praying, teaching the word on prayer. I did my praying as Jesus directs in Matt. 6:6.

If Bro. Jackson, or any one else, wants to criticize my position on this, I am ready for the criticism, and doubt not that he will get tired first. But this is enough at present. Bro. Jackson and I are seldom at variance on any question, and I am not anxious to discuss these with him; but I know him well enough to know that, if any man can sustain his position on this question he can, and I believe I know myself well enough to know that I am willing to see any mistakes I make and to have the right way pointed out to me. But 1 Cor. 14 will not do on this question, for it relates to worship in a congregation of Christians. A. MCG.

FROM A SISTER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Enclosed you will find 70 cents, twenty cents for the pamphlets, "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family" and "Zeke and the Methodists." I also send you one subscriber for the F. F. and fifty cents to pay on same. Send to Mrs. —, (Guide, Ellis county, Texas. I will send the balance (40 cents) as soon as I can. Mrs. — was once a subscriber, and says she is due you some on the F. F., let her know the amount and she will pay soon. She is my daughter, and, like myself about the F. F., is thinking it the best paper published, as it teaches the gospel in its purity, and comes out boldly in denouncing worldly institutions, and taking in persons on their so-called baptism, shake them in, as you call it. I know it is contrary to the teaching of Christ and the apostles; therefore I will never help to shake another one in.

I intend to do all I can for the F. F., and hope it will ever stand firmly on the foundation of truth; and I will indeed be glad when you can make it a weekly.

I will close, hoping the Lord will give you grace and strength to go on with your noble work, your sister in the one faith, M. L.

SHOULD WE RE-BAPTIZE BAPTISTS?

This question has been agitating the minds of some of our brethren for some time, and it is one of those troublesome questions that will not down very easily. For a long time my mind was perfectly at rest on this subject. But more recently in studying the subject of faith and its relations to our acceptable obedience to God, my mind has undergone a change. I take the ground and, I am confident the Bible teaches it, that we can not perform a single act that will be acceptable in the sight of God without faith. God must not only command a thing to be done, but it must be done in faith upon our part; that is, we must believe the end and object for which we are baptized will be accomplished. We understand that faith is the belief of testimony, and that where there is no testimony there can be no faith; and in order that our obedience may be accepted, our faith must be based upon divine testimony, and not on human testimony. All who are taught to believe that their sins are pardoned before they are baptized, and that they are in a saved state before baptism, certainly have their faith based upon a false testimony, and for the life of me I can not see how God can accept them believing a lie; for the apostle says we may "believe a lie and be damned." It seems to me that the apostle Paul could have just as consistently accepted the twelve Baptists at Ephesus on their baptism, although the institution as established by John had passed out, as for us to accept those who have been baptized believing a false testimony.

I will just ask this question of all my preaching brethren: If a man were to come to you and ask you to baptize him, asserting at the same time that he did not believe it was at all essential, and that he was already in a saved state—in the kingdom of Christ, would you baptize him? I am satisfied that there is not a preacher but what will say no. Why, then, in reason's name, will you accept those who have been thus baptized by some one else? "Oh, you say, they have been taught since they were baptized that it is essential, and their being wrongly informed, wrongly taught before they were baptized, does not invalidate their baptism."

If that be true, then why not take the individual mentioned above and baptize him, and afterwards teach him its essentiality. It would be just as consistent. We should remember the Bible order is that belief in the testimony must precede the obedience. Jesus says, "Go teach all nations, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Is it not just as essential that the people be taught that their baptism depends upon their obedience to the command of baptism, as it is that they should be taught any other part of the commission? If a man can be baptized, and afterwards taught that it was essential to his salvation, why not baptize any and everybody, and teach them afterwards that it was essential to their salvation? If baptism can be performed with no faith in its essentiality, and the individual thus acting be accepted, I confess I have read my Bible to no purpose, for the apostle says, "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." I am satisfied from this and kindred passages, that we can perform no act that will be acceptable to God, unless we have faith in the things commanded to be done. I am confident we ought to ask this question of all persons coming to us from the Baptists: "Did you believe when you were baptized that baptism was a command of God, and necessary to be observed in order to your salvation?" If they answer in the negative, we should take their confession and baptize them.

Brownsboro, Ky.

The above is clipped from the Apostolic Guide of May 4th. It speaks for itself. Not one word of comment appears. I am glad to see this article in this widely circulated periodical. Bro. Bertot presents the question in a clear and forcible manner. Will some of the shakers meet the issue, and show wherein he is wrong? The eyes of many are rapidly being opened on this question. As faithful men we must contend earnestly for the truth. We welcome Bro. Bertot to the ranks of the faithful.

FROM BRO. JONES.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

Your papers and "Zeke and the Methodists" are at hand, which I have read.

I think Zeke is the knottiest chap Mr. Nichols has come across. The paper is the soundest, I think, I have ever read. I have been taking the Gospel Advocate for years and thought it the best; however, I never agreed with it on all points, especially in shaking the immersed sects into the congregations.

I have seen nothing in your paper I can't endorse; however, your position in regard to Sunday-schools is new to me and I don't know that I fully understand it. I would like to hear more from you in regard to conducting the Lord's day worship.

I enclose the subscription price for your paper one year. I have tried to get some others, but have failed, but expect to continue as long as you stick to the Bible.

Yours in the one hope,
B. A. JONES,
Dickson, Ark.

QUERIES.

1. Were the "certain disciples" whom Paul found at Ephesus, Christians, built upon the one foundation?

2. What was the condition and relation of these disciples, that would account for Paul asking them, "if they had received the Holy Spirit since they believed"? Would Paul have propounded such a question to an alien?

3. Will you show us that Apollos was not a member of the body of Christ when he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord knowing only the baptism of John?

4. Will you tell us of the 120 disciples inclusive of the apostles (Acts 1: 17); were they in Christ on the day of Pentecost?

5. To whom were the three thousand souls added?

Your brother in the one faith,
C. BLACK.

Bowser Bend, Texas.

1. No. They were "built upon the one foundation" when "they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus."

2. They were "professed" disciples of Christ, but evidently manifested such ignorance of Christ as to draw forth Paul's question. In the New Covenant, "all shall know the Lord from the least to the greatest." Not to know the Lord was evidence that they had not obeyed the Lord; not having obeyed the Lord, they were aliens, hence Paul "propounded" his question to aliens.

3. The fact that Apollos was "taught the way of the Lord more perfectly" shows that he had been preaching and practicing an imperfect way. He knew only the baptism of John, and if his imperfect way took him into the body of Christ, the "certain disciples" alluded to above were also in the body of Christ, and Paul, Aquilla and Priscilla were "re-baptizers." But the fact that these Christians repudiated that imperfect way, baptism and all, shows us that Apollos and the certain disciples were not in the body of Christ until they obeyed the one baptism in name of the Lord Jesus.

4. Acts 1: 17 does not refer to the day of Pentecost. I don't know where the 120 disciples were on that day. The apostles were in Jerusalem, and they (the apostles) were filled with the Holy Spirit according to the promise. They were clean through the word of Jesus, (John 15: 3), and were the foundation stones—charter members—of the Church of Christ, Eph. 2: 20.

5. The New Testament does not say "to whom" the three thousand were added. The true idea expressed by the original word is "added or brought together." On that day those who obeyed the gospel were brought or added together in one body.

1. If you were serving a congregation as an elder, and had a brother, an elder, who was a frequent violator of the law of Christ, by participating in foolish, vain and wicked revelry, such as making of foolish music, having a wicked and vulgar sentiment, after which for others to revel in dancing; who refuses to accept advise, to hear instruction or reproof, what would you do?

2. If you, as an elder, had under your charge a number of sisters who were in the habit of working mischief in the congregation by talking, backbiting and dissembling; who refuse to heed admonition, instruction and reproof, what would you do?

3. If you, as an elder, had under your charge, a number of brethren and sisters who were so cold, careless, unconcerned and worthless, (as Christians), that they could not be induced to attend the weekly Lord's day meetings, what would you do?

Your brother in Christ, J.

The following Scripture answers all of the above questions: "Now we command you, brethren, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly and not after the tradition which they received of us."—2 Thea. 3: 6.

The sooner you obey this command, the better it will be for all parties concerned. J. W. J.

WHO HAS OBEYED THE TRUTH?

In my article, which was published in the F. F. August 15, '87, I certainly showed that the truth, as taught by Christ and the apostles, was the gospel. As no person can obey facts, the gospel must consist of more than facts; hence the death, burial and resurrection of Christ cannot be all of the gospel. There must be something for man to obey. Paul says, Rom. 10: 16: But they have not all obeyed the gospel. Here we see that all must obey the gospel.

Will our three-fact gospel brethren please tell when and how they obeyed what they call the gospel?—the death, burial and resurrection of Christ. Come, brethren, please answer this, or forever cease trying to defend a three fact gospel.

In our heading we ask, Who has obeyed the gospel? Certainly it cannot be that none but the dead, physically, have obeyed the gospel. Else Paul would not have written the brethren at Rome, Corinth, etc. I presume no one claims that any have obeyed the gospel who did not believe, and that none can believe who have not heard; for Paul says, Faith comes by hearing the word of God. Do we not find faith, repentance, confession and immersion for the remission of sins in the word of God, as taught by Christ and the apostles?

Paul says, "The word is nigh thee even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is the word of faith, which we preach; that if thou wilt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved: for with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. 10: 8-10.

Here Paul teaches that the confession of the Lord Jesus and belief in the heart—understanding—that God raised him from the dead, was to be preached. This agrees with Heb. 8: 10-11. "For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord. I will put my laws into their minds and write them in their hearts; and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people: and they shall not teach every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, know the Lord; for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest."

Here we see that the covenant of Jesus was to be placed in their hearts—understanding—that is, the law of Christ was to be placed into the understanding of men, or that the alien when entering the kingdom, was to be taught the law of Christ, so that each step taken by him was to be understandingly.

Jesus, in Matt. 13, says: "He that received seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word and understandeth it: which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth some a hundred, some sixty, and some thirty fold." Those who did not understand, Jesus said, "The Devil caught away the word out of their hearts—understanding." All the Devil wants is to get the word out of the understanding of men, he knows then that he has "cut the tap root."

Paul says, Eph. 4: 18, "Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their hearts." Here heart is used as synonymous with understanding. Here we learn that ignorance causes us to sin. It is not now nor was in the Jewish age, the will of God that man should be ignorant of the law of God. No man can meet the approbation of God, who does not hear the law of Christ as made known by the Spirit.

Have not the sects acted much like the Jews? Zach. 7: 8-14, pulled away the shoulder and refused to hear the law and the words which the Lord of hosts hath sent in his Spirit by the former prophets? Therefore it is come to pass, that as he cried and they would not hear; so they cried and I would not hear, saith the Lord. As God never has blessed any people for thus acting, why should we welcome such into our fellowship?

In Rom. 10: 10, we learn that, with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. Neither here nor elsewhere is it said that, with the heart man believeth into righteousness, or with the mouth, confession is made into salvation. There is quite a difference between unto and into. Unto denotes motion toward an object; into denotes the act of entering. Suppose I say, I am going unto the city. A child would understand that I was not going in the city, but only moving in the direction of the city; but should I say, I was going into the city, all would understand that I referred to the act of entering the city.

When Paul said that with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, all who do not believe in the doctrine of faith alone, will say that this man is not in a saved state, but is moving in the direction of salvation, but not yet saved. Paul coupled the same word, unto, with confession, which shows that confession is another step in the direction of salvation. We can tell from the teaching of Christ and the apostles, what is to be confessed.

Peter said in answer to Jesus' question, Matt. 16: 16-18, "Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God. Jesus said, upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. Should Peter have said, thou art the very and eternal God, he would not have confessed that Christ was the Son of God, and doubtless Jesus would not have given him the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Again, when the eunuch said, see, here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized, and Phillip said, if thou believest with all thy heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Then Phillip baptized him. Had the eunuch said, that God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins, who dare say that Phillip would have baptized him. If Phillip would not have baptized him on such a statement as this, would he (Phillip) have given him the right hand of fellowship, had he been baptized on this misrepresentation of the Christ? If a man guided by the Holy Spirit is so precise about the confession, should we not conform to the teaching of the apostles and holy men of God? If three thousand were required to be baptized for the remission of sins, should not all be baptized for the remission of sins? Paul and the Roman brethren were baptized for remission of sins, Rom. 6: 3-4; and after their baptism they were made free from sin, because they had obeyed from the heart (understanding) the form of doctrine which was delivered them. Who among us will say, that God will pardon any one with a falsehood in his mouth?

Jesus said, except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom. The sects all say, not so, Lord, we entered before baptism. Has not Jesus required all to receive his law? How can the sects receive his law and thus contradict his word?

No man has faith in Jesus who contradicts his (Jesus') word. Seeing that the sects all contradict his word, certainly leaves them without faith. Paul says, Heb. 11: 6, without faith it is impossible to please him. In as much as they are without faith, they cannot please God.

Brethren, how can we be so well pleased with them as to receive them into our fellowship? I know some are trying to establish faith for the sects—this is like trying to prove that fifty disconnected links make a chain.

Brethren, if it is not essential to understand the design of baptism, why did Christ and the apostles teach the design of baptism? And why were all under the teaching of the apostles baptized for the remission of sins? Our motto is, to speak where the Bible speaks, and be silent where the Bible is silent. As the Bible is silent on baptism being because of remission, and also on sectarian recognition, let us be silent on receiving heretics into our fellowship.

GOING BACK TO BABYLON.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

As you ask me to contribute something to your column, I comply. But are we on the firm foundation?

Was that preacher on said foundation who said he "bid God-speed to the mourner's bench operations" and could say, "God bless the works of the denominations"? He must have been firm on, at least, one foundation, for he was soon after preaching the above sermon, employed by the F. C. M. C. and sent, at a lucrative salary, to a foreign mission.

Another preacher in Kentucky, labored for and with the Baptists, and did all he could to advance the Baptist cause, as one would discover from his fulsome praise of the wonderful work they are doing for Christ—and, after these compromises, he was found to be a suitable man to represent—what? In a foreign field, and is now off under the said board's jurisdiction. These men are orthodox, you see.

But the man who will not laud Talmage, Sam Jones, Moody, Small, et al, is "narrow gauge." And just here allow me to place my views to record, and call me what they may it matters nothing to me: I believe Jones, Moody, etc., are damaging the cause of the restoration movement, more than Ingersoll, Jemerson, and all their colleagues; and I fear that the brethren who so enthusiastically endorse these manipulators of the unscriptural systems of manufacturing the most biggotted class of sectarians will go, and some have gone so far as to call those biggots who so earnestly oppose infant baptism, as a barrier to heaven, etc.

With some of our editors, Baptists are put down as "consistent Christians." The Baptist Judson is written up as equal to Paul, inspiration aside. Our people are urged to contribute money to build a Baptist church in New York.

I have been for some time in a position to view these tendencies, and this is not the first time I have asked the brethren to stop and consider—but I am convinced that this Mother Hubbard tendency is growing alarmingly rapid among us, and I believe it will still grow. This is certainly the most dangerous feature to be met and opposed, and in my next I will try to give the cause which have led us into this compromise with Balaam.

J. M. RATLIFF.

Mill Spring, Mo.

JESUS THE GREAT PHYSICIAN.

"For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed, lest at any time, they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted and I should heal them."—Matt. 13: 15.

Jesus here presents himself to us as a physician; as one who has the power to heal. The disease of which he is powerful in healing is sin, therefore heal as presented in this Scripture, as well as in many others, is equal to forgiveness of sins, or which is the same thing—remission of sins. Remission of sins, then, is the blessing to be enjoyed. But from the reading of the Scripture before us, we learn that there are several things that necessarily precede the healing. It is to those items that we invite special attention in this article.

"This people's heart is waxed gross," says the Savior, "their ears are dull of hearing," etc. It seems that they were of that class that would not accept the truth when they had heard it. But the expression, "lest at any time they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears"—see and hear what? We understand the seeing and hearing here to have reference to the seeing of those miracles that were being performed by the Savior, and the hearing of the conditions of salvation that was about to be offered by the one that was able to perform the miracles.

John, in the conclusion of his testimony, says: "Many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples which are not written in this book, but these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ the son of God, and believing you might have life through his name."—John 20: 30-31.

Then after examining these witnesses and, through them, seeing the miracles performed by the Savior, which causes us to believe on him as the Savior of the world, we are in a condition to hear on what conditions he proposes to save us; therefore, in the language of the Father himself, "hear ye him."—Matt. 17: 5. Again the Savior says: "Behold I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with me."—Rev. 3: 20.

What is it man is to do? It is to hear first, and then open the door of his heart that Jesus may enter. Enter for what? Why to heal him, of course. But again we hear the Savior saying, "Take heed what ye hear." Why did the Savior say this? John explains that very conclusively when he says: "Beloved believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God, because many false prophets are gone out into the world."—1 John 4: 1. Then in 2nd verse he tells us how we may know whether they are of God or not: "Every one that confesseth that Jesus is come in the flesh is of God." Which is equivalent to confessing that Jesus Christ is the Son of God; and Paul says that, confession must be made with the mouth.

It follows, then, that all who thus make that confession are of God; and those who do not, but confess something contrary to his word, are not of God. But, still again we hear the Savior saying: "Take heed how ye hear."—Luke 8: 18. Then we learn that after we see miracles performed by the Savior, which causes us to believe on him, that it is not only necessary that we hear, but that we take heed what we hear; not only so, but we are told to take heed how we hear.

This brings us down to the next item that precedes conversion. What did the Savior mean when he said, take heed how ye hear? He simply means to give attention to the things that we hear, in order that we may understand them. We are told that when Philip joined himself unto the chariot, where sat the eunuch, reading some of the prophets concerning the Savior, the very first thing that he desired to know was, do you understand what you read? He did not say, do you believe what you read? But do you understand it. Why did he ask if he understood it? Because he knew that it was impossible for him to believe it before he understood it.

We find, then, that after he had heard, it was necessary to understand also, and the understanding as well as seeing and hearing precedes conversion. Now we ask the question, understand what? Is it simply that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God, and that he died, and was buried, and that he rose again? Is that all that we are to understand? Nay, verily. The Savior here, in the same chapter, presents the parable of the sower and explains it. We turn to Luke 8: 11 and learn that "the seed is the word of God;" then in Matt. 13: 19, the Savior begins his explanation by saying, "when any one hears the word of the kingdom and understands it not, then cometh the wicked one (those wicked perverters of the truth) and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart." Such persons as these are unfruitful, because they did not understand in order that they might be converted.

But there is another class that received the seed into good ground; it is those, says the Savior, "that hear the word and understand it." This class brings forth fruit, some thirty, some sixty, and some an hundred fold. Understand it—what is the it? Why, the word, of course; then it is those who understand the word that are fruitful, and certainly we need no other kind in the Church of Christ. The Church is benefited by no other class, and no other class is benefited by being in the Church.

In as much as it is necessary to understand then we ask, what is the word of the Lord concerning the way of salvation? Is it not that the sinner must come believing that Jesus is the Son of God, and that God is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him, and that he must repent of his sins, and confess with the mouth that Jesus is the Son of God; and then, as Peter said on the day of Pentecost, "be baptized for the remission of sins"? Now is not all this the word of the Lord? You say, yes. Well, then, it is the thing to be understood by the sinner, in order to his conversion. We find, then, that seeing and hearing and understanding all precede conversion; and conversion precedes healing. Then if you desire to be healed, you must be converted; before you can be converted you must understand the word; before you can understand the word, you must hear it; before you will hear the word, you must see the testimony concerning the authenticity of him who spoke it. Hence, no seeing, no hearing; no hearing, no understanding; no understanding, no conversion; and no conversion, no healing.

May the Lord help us all, day by day, to learn the way more perfectly, that we may know the truth, that the truth may make us free.

FROM BRO. GRAY.

Dear Bro. McGary:

After a long delay, I will send you the promised dollar, for which please continue the FIRM FOUNDATION. Excuse my long delay, my dear brother, for times are hard, and I am preaching the same gospel that you are advocating, which brings but little of this world's goods. Send the paper to me at Bluff Creek, Monroe county, Iowa. I hope to be able to send some subscribers soon.

Yours for heaven,

W. P. GRAY.

But can not I gain some of the world, and not lose my soul? Perhaps so. But which is uppermost in your mind? Which would you give up first, your religion or your worldly enjoyment?—Selected.

BRIEFS.

In ordering the paper or tracts write your name plainly, and give postoffice, county and state.

Now is the time to send in your clubs. Go to work, brethren, and send us large lists of subscribers.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

Write us short reports of your meetings, and in writing please don't "puff" your preacher so much. The desire for public applause, notoriety, is born of egotism and is contrary to the spirit of Christ—crush it out.

Firm Foundation.

Through thy precepts I get understanding, therefore I hate every false way.

SAVING DEGREE OF FAITH.

That faith saves, is denied by no one who believes the Bible to be true. Every subject of gospel address who is saved at all, is saved by faith. While it is true that all men are saved by faith, yet it is not true that all men who have faith are saved. Here seems to be a rule that will not work both ways. All men are saved by the new birth and all men who are subjects of the new birth are saved. Now the rule works both ways, and therefore stands the test of a good rule. Why will it work both ways for the new birth and will not so work for faith? A correct answer to this question will be profitable to the investigation.

It would be absurd to say of a man that he was born a little, and that another man was born a little more than the first, and that a third one was born more than either of the first or second, and so on. But it is not absurd to say of a man, that he has a little faith, and that another has a little more faith, and that still another has more faith than all the rest.

The new birth takes its name when it is completed and not before. It is not a thing of degrees. Faith is a thing of degrees and takes its name at the lowest degree and retains it to the highest. We can conceive of faith in the potent degree, and whatever that degree of faith may be, it is safe to say that it saves the man who possesses it to the full extent that the new birth saves.

If faith is equal to the new birth when it exists in the potent degree, and saves not until it reaches this degree, it becomes necessary to find a sharp definition of this measure of faith. If I am authorized by the truth, and the law of language, to say that faith exists in the potent degree, I am also authorized to say that it exists in the impotent degree. If the potent degree saves, and the impotent does not, it is a matter of first importance that we draw a clear distinction between them so that we may not mistake that degree which does not save for the degree that does.

Adam first existed in an inactive state. God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and he became a living soul. Every germ in the animal and vegetable kingdom is inactive until quickened into life. Everything has its first form of existence in the inactive, or dead state. Faith is first in its inactive form and is dead. When it develops into the active, it becomes a living faith. Inactive or dead faith is the impotent faith, but when faith becomes active to, a certain extent, it becomes potent. There is a degree of faith that says, Lord! Lord! This degree falls short of divine approval, (see Matt. 7: 27.)

There is also a faith that works—works by love, Gal. 5: 6. If faith works by love, love must furnish the standard. "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me," John 14: 29. It is certainly no violence to the divine record to say: He that keepeth not his commandments is not in possession of the faith that works—that works by love. Faith that does not work by love does not work at all, and faith that does not work at all is dead, and it is but vanity to depend upon faith without works. "Know ye not, oh vain man, that faith without works is dead," James 2: 20.

According to Baptist doctrine, faith does not work in repentance because repentance comes before faith, and the work of repentance is done before faith exists. There is no work between Baptist faith and Baptist baptism. So their faith is without works and is therefore dead. James calls them vain men and asks them to know that their faith is dead. This knowledge they refused to have. If a man is saved by faith, how long after faith comes is it till it saves?

The Baptists and all the rest of the orthodox world teach that faith saves immediately upon its coming. If faith saves immediately upon its coming, it does not wait to be made alive by works, but saves while it is yet dead. My Baptist friend will you please tell me what work your faith does before it saves? Please tell me what is the first work of faith. Its first work, according to your view, is not found in repentance because repentance precedes it. It is not in your experience because your teachers tell us that this is the fruit of repentance. You cannot say that baptism is the first work of faith, for if you do you are saved by dead faith, believing as you do, that you are saved before baptism.

Faith produces love for God, love for Christ, and hatred for sin. These result in a ceasing to sin, and the practice of holiness. Hence, faith works in repentance. Faith moves the tongue to confess Christ, and therefore works in the good confession. Faith works in baptism and finishes the play of the death scene of our heavenly Master. We are buried with him and raised with him, by baptism. Faith works in the burial and works in the resurrection. So baptism is a work of faith. Baptism saves us—is for the remission of sins as a work of faith and not otherwise.

Paul says to the Galatians: "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For (because) as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ," Gal. 3: 26-27. Faith reaches its saving degree when it has grown to be strong enough to lead to the obedience of faith—when it has led to a consummation of gospel obedience. That degree of faith that takes hold of the promises of the gospel saves. Faith takes hold of these promises by obedience to the commandments connected with them. The activity of potent faith must be measured by repentance, confession and baptism. Salvation is connected with all of these, and it is because these items stand connected with faith and are component parts of it. Faith is unimpeachable when it performs all the functions of its office. W. P. RICHARDSON.

LETTER FROM E. HANSBROUGH.

I closed my labors at Boyer's school-house by taking the confession of and baptizing two, a father and his son; the father having been shook out of the German Baptist church, who dip three times for one baptism, and the son having been shook out of the Missionary Baptist church, who dip once because the party dipped is a Christian, is in a saved condition and to get into the Baptist church, an institution not recognized in God's word, and therefore not of divine origin and necessarily human. They became dissatisfied because they were not taught the word of the Lord, but the words of men, before they were put under the water, and the Savior says, teach first, Matt. 28: 19. The father who was eighty years old, made a short but very impressive talk at the water, said that he had been immersed three times for one baptism; but that since he had learned the way of the Lord more perfectly he saw that his three dippings violated every figure of baptism used in the New Testament, which is represented by a birth, a burial, a planting, and Peter says, the flood was a figure of it.

We took dinner that day with Bro. Harper, where we met with Bro. Burns, found him a very pleasant, social brother, and I think pretty well posted in the Scriptures; but, well posted as he is, he cannot find any Scripture authorizing some things he is teaching and practicing. He is State Evangelist for the Missionary Society of North Carolina, and he can find authority in the Scriptures for the Pope of Rome as readily as he can find authority for his position.

Ah, but it is a good work, the fruit of "sanctified common sense." What a pity Paul was not blessed with some of that "sanctified common sense" then he could have made Timothy state evangelist of Italy, and Titus of Greece, and Apollos of Gallatia and Phrygia, etc.; but Paul recognized the fact that the Scriptures furnish us to all good works, and as they did not furnish the above state evangelists, he did not see proper to over-ride their institutions by his "sanctified common sense."

Bro. Burns is visiting the congregations and taking pledges from them to pay so much a year for six years, thereby causing them to gamble on future prosperity, as much as the speculators in the large cities gamble on the anticipated rise of bacon, grain, cotton, etc., and now, brethren, what Scripture do you think he cited me to, to justify him in taking their pledges for future prosperity? Why it was 2 Cor. 8: 1-12 and Acts 11: 23-25. Now brethren, read the above Scriptures carefully and I am satisfied you will conclude that you can find baby sprinkling in them as easily as you can find authority for pledging yourselves on future prosperity.

Paul says: "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given orders to the churches of Gallatia, even so do you. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath (not will) prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come," 1 Cor. 16: 1-2. But Bro. Burns says, that was for the poor saints, and not for the preachers. If a preacher is a good man and poor, is he not a poor saint? and is he not entitled to money raised in that way? If not, why not? I know that Paul says, that the Lord hath ordained that they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel, as typified by those who served at the altar under the law of Moses, 1 Cor. 9: 7-14. But how is the necessary amount for their living to be raised? Is it by taking pledges of future prosperity from the brethren, or by the weekly contribution.

Bro. Sanders, one of the State Evangelists of Texas, says, that if the brethren would contribute upon the first day of the week as the Lord directs, there would always be plenty in the treasury; but he says they won't do it, and then they get together in their missionary societies, and make arrangements to help the Lord to spur them up to their duty. Oh what presumption.

We came from Boyer's to Jefferson on Friday the 13th, where Bro. D. H. Petree and Robert Hensbeck had been preaching for several days; four made the good confession that night, Bro. Petree having preached, and fifteen others during the meeting, which closed on Lord's day night, the 22nd, with the largest congregation I ever saw at that place, and much interest manifested, and I believe that others were almost persuaded to be Christians and that they will obey the gospel soon.

Five of the nineteen had been dipped by the Baptists and Methodists; but having learned the way of the Lord more perfectly they decided to be baptized in the name (or by the authority of Jesus Christ) (not of men), and to do that, they had to make the good confession and be baptized for the remission of sin.

E. HANSBROUGH.

FROM AUSTIN.

Editor Courier:

It gives me much pleasure to report one of the most important developments in the history of the Austin church. A common grievance has been in our midst for years, on account of the alienation of a number of members, who could not, or did not, affiliate with the general body. This occasioned us not a little sorrow, but through kindness and patient waiting, with many prayers, a communication, lovely in word and in spirit, came to my hands as a testimonial, to be presented to our congregation, signed by sixteen (16) members of a new organization. On last Lord's day, I presented their token of love and unity to the church. We rejoice at the proposition and of course they must have a welcome by the true hearts of this congregation. "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

Your Brother,
JUNIOR WILKINS.

—Christian Courier, June 21, '88.

In order that those who have read the above letter may learn the truth as to the "developments" in the Austin church, I hope the Christian Courier will publish this reply.

"The common grievance" of which Bro. Wilkins speaks consisted in the uniting together of those Christians who protested against all humanisms and innovations introduced into the Austin church by its pastors. Of course it was a "grievance" to the Austin church, especially to the progressive ones and the pastors, to be continually reminded of their departure from the faith, and some of those progressives lost no opportunity of speaking disparagingly of these Christians as a faction.

The "alienation" of these members and their non-affiliation was very largely due to the presence of Junius Wilkins in the Austin church and his operations therein as pastor. But while they could not conscientiously worship or affiliate with "the general body" they formed themselves into a congregation and have continued since their formation to assemble regularly on the Lord's day, and in all things have striven earnestly and faithfully to carry out the will of the Lord.

No effort has ever been made by this pastor to conciliate this "new organization." On the contrary, harsh words and stinging epithets were freely indulged, and myself and others arbitrarily forbidden the use of their house for preaching purposes. The unchristian spirit existed among the members, and sometime in June I thought I would try to bring about a better state of feeling between the two congregations. To this end the letter spoken of in the above communication was written and signed by the sixteen members and addressed to "the Elders of the Church of Christ, on 8th street, Austin, Texas." Why the aforesaid pastor should conclude that the communication was sent him to be presented to the congregation is easily understood by those who know how he tries "to Lord it" over the congregation. Besides this, his predisposition to term us "a faction" led him to totally misconceive the object of the letter and to place a false interpretation upon it.

We desire peace and harmony and love among Christians, but not by sacrificing principle or truth. We did not petition or ask for congregational unity. But we do desire and ask the Austin church to aid us in removing all hindrances to our full Christian fellowship. I am glad to report that, our efforts in this direction have met with cordial approval, and that there is some hope of reconciliation between the congregations. Expectially is this true since the Austin church has dismissed pastor Wilkins.

There is in the Austin church a conservative element who love the truth, and we hope that they will now seize upon the opportunity afforded them of bringing the church fully up to the divine standard. It will require firmness and courage upon the part of the Elders, and I pray God that they may be equal to the emergency. Remember, dear brethren, that some of the greatest sins of God's people were occasioned by the rulers and leaders of the people weakly submitting to popular demands.

J. W. JACKSON.

THE PLAN OF SALVATION.

THE GOOD CONFESSION.

Jesus had asked his disciples: "Who do men say that I the Son of man am?" and received as answer the various opinions as to his being some one of the prophets, or John the Baptist, risen from the dead. But he brought the question home to their own hearts, saying: "Who do you say I am?" Peter, with his usual readiness to speak, answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Jesus said: "blessed art thou Simon, son of Jonah, for flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but my Father, who is in heaven. I say unto thee, thou art Peter, and upon this petra will I build my church, and the gates of hades shall not prevail against it."

In this confession of Peter was couched the great fundamental truth of Christ's reign on earth. It is this truth believed that enthrones him in the hearts of men, and gives him sovereignty over their lives. Hence his benediction upon Peter for confessing it. For upon this truth, or rather the fact which it declares, is his church to be built.

No man can enjoy citizenship in his kingdom, or membership in his church without the hearty apprehension of this truth. And his church is to be made up of the erring sons and daughters of Adam, freed from sin by the truth, and built together upon the truth. Hence men are concerned as to the declaration or confession of this truth. Hence Jesus' teaching, "Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father who is in heaven." Likewise also Paul to the Romans (10: 10), "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Here the apostle asserts the fact that, with the mouth confession was made. He also relates (in 1 Tim. 6: 12) that Timothy had witnessed (according to new version) the good confession in the presence of many witnesses, and further exhorts him to steadfastness by the consideration that the Savior himself witnessed the same good confession before Pontius Pilate.

Let us now itemize certain points concerning this matter of confession:

1. Jesus promised to honor the one making it before the Father and the holy angels.
2. He honored Simon with marked distinction for having made it.
3. Paul says it was made unto (with respect to, or in order to) salvation.
4. Paul distinguishes it as "the good confession."

We have this to remark concerning the first instance: the scope of the confession as entitling one to recognition before the Father and the angels, while it evidently includes the simple confession with the mouth, should not be restricted to that alone, but should be understood as embracing a course of life whose tenor never denies the confession made with the mouth.

In the second instance, Peter's momentary denial of his relations to Christ, so promptly repented of and followed up by a course of life consistent with the confession did not invalidate his confession.

In the third and fourth items the apostle evidently has reference to the confession made in view of becoming subjects or citizens of the kingdom of Christ. For he says, it was "made unto salvation." This term salvation, as used by the Savior and the apostles, unless qualified so as to give it another sense, almost invariably has reference to salvation from sin, or deliverance from the sinful unto the justified state. If we take King James' version of the Scriptures, we have Philip requiring the good confession of the Ethiopian officer before he will admit him to baptism. Then this confession was in order to his baptism. And we know from the commission and other Scriptures that baptism is for the remission of sin. This therefore is the salvation unto which the confession was made.

But it may be objected that the revised version omits the eunuch's confession as an interpolation. Grant it. Whence came the interpolation? The critic that rejects it responds: "From the practice of the early churches." And this is in keeping with Paul's statement, "with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." The devout transcriber knowing that such was the practice to come to Christ by confessing him as the Son of God, filled out what seemed to him a blank in the record. There is no other way to account for the eunuch's confession as given in some of the ancient manuscripts, unless we conclude it was really Luke's original narrative, and that the different readings came by accidental omission rather than by intentional interpolation.

With the teachings of these Scriptures before us, and the further teaching of the Philippian, (2: 11) "That every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father," is there the least danger of making too much of this good confession by requiring every one who would come to God by the Christ to declare with his mouth before men, that which called forth the Lord's benediction on Peter? We can not see the danger in this direction. It evidently lies in the direction rather of neglecting what the Lord has required.

Let us therefore confess the Lord and teach men so, that he may confess us before his Father and the sanctified hosts of heaven.

How mortals do love to be honored of men, and especially of the great men of earth. But how incomparably glorious and beautiful will be the honors of heaven that Christ Jesus our Lord proposes to bestow on us in the great day of his glory. What ineffable joy will fill the hearts of those whom he shall recognize on that day as his brethren, his friends; for whom there are mansions prepared in his Father's house. Alas the overwhelming despair and confusion that shall sweep over the souls of those that have refused to confess him, when they shall hear the awful words, "Depart from me; I never knew you."

J. R. W.

FROM BRO. AMENT.

Dear Bro. McGary:

You will please excuse me for being late a week with my report, as it has been raining so much and we are so far behind with our work that we have had hardly time to look up. Enclosed I send you thirty-one names, and thirty-one dollars subscribed, and ten dollars cash of that amount paid in, the rest will be paid the 1st of October next, according to my plan in the F. F. of June 1st. The report, I think, explains itself.

I have not had time to work for the paper only at our Lord's day meetings at home. I did take a trip to Lometa to be at Bro. Hawkins's meeting the last week, with the view of working some for the F. F., but Bro. Hawkins closed the night I got there, so I did not have the opportunity among the brethren I desired.

I found only one F. F. going to that office, and that was one I sent to Bro. K. S. Johnson, (deceased), on the four month's trial. Bro. J. was an old and tried friend of mine and an able preacher of the gospel, and would have made his mark as high as any one, had his health permitted. He was not an F. F. man, but not prejudiced against it; but sister Johnson liked it and has done a great deal of good in giving it out to the brethren, and I would ask here that, if you can afford to send it to widows and orphans, to continue it to her and if she is able to pay for it she will do so.

However I succeeded in getting one good substantial and soundly converted subscriber to the F. F., B. J. Jones. Probably you know him, he is a brother to our dear old brother preacher, W. J. Jones. Bro. Jones told me he did not like the F. F. at first, but he kept on reading it until he was bound to acknowledge he could not deny its arguments or escape its conclusions, hence he accepted it, and says he will work for it. I take Bro. Jones to be a man of considerable ability and influence, and predict he will do good work for the F. F. in that part of the vineyard.

I heard Bro. Hawkins preach once only, and am convinced that he is one of if not the ablest logicians I have heard, and am satisfied he will shun not to declare the whole counsel of God. We are trying to arrange to have him hold us a meeting here, to begin about the 1st of September next, as he told me his time was engaged until that time.

I do hope the brethren will report a strong effort to consummate our design to make the F. F. a weekly. May God bless them and enable them to put forth their best efforts, and may the blessings of God abide with you and Bro. Hansbrough, and all the true brethren, and enable you to stand firm to the end.

Yours in hope of immortality,
A. G. AMENT.

THE CHURCH OF CHRIST.

In speaking of the Church of Christ Paul says: "There is one body and one spirit," Eph. 4: 4. Again he says in speaking of Christ, "He is the head of the body, the church," Col. 1: 15. Then as there is but one body, and this body is the church, it follows that there is but one church. But in the multitude of so-called churches, each claiming divine authority for its existence, and each one teaching doctrines diverse from all others, a great many persons conclude that there is no authority from God for any of them.

But we must remember that, there never was a counterfeit dollar but what was an exact imitation of a good one. So there can not be a counterfeit church unless there is a true one. Hence, the very fact, that there are spurious churches, proves to us that there is one of divine origin somewhere.

But some one, I opine, will be ready to ask: "Where is the true church of which you speak, and how can we distinguish it from all others?" Now take your Bibles and follow us closely, and we will show you how this knowledge can be acquired:

First, every institution has a foundation. What then is the foundation of Christ's church? Paul, in speaking of the foundation upon which we are built, says: "Now ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God, and are built upon the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone," Eph. 2: 19-20. Hence any church, the foundation of which is the deduction of men, cannot be the church of Christ. Again, Jesus taught: "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God," John 3: 5. Therefore any church which admits persons into its fellowship any other way than by a birth of water and Spirit, cannot be the church of Christ. When persons sought admittance into this church during the ministry of the apostles, they were told to "repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, and the gift of the Holy Ghost," Acts 2: 38.

So it is plain that any church, which requires persons to come to the mourner's bench to pray and be prayed for, for the remission of sins, cannot be the church of Christ.

We will next notice the confession. People anciently were required to confess Christ; hence any church that requires its candidates to confess their feelings, imaginations, etc., instead of their faith in Christ, is not of the "one body," of which Christ is head.

Once more: All the subjects of Christ's kingdom were to know the Lord from the least to the greatest. See Jer. 31: 34, Heb. 8. So it follows that any church, the members of which are in part infants, cannot be the church of Christ. Because as infants cannot know the Lord, they are not and cannot be members of the church of Christ.

We have now seen some of the marks of identity by which we are enabled to distinguish the church of Christ from the spurious churches of men. But to make this so plain that "he who runs may read," we will now contrast the teaching of the Bible with that of sectarians.

1. The Bible says: "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God," Rom. 10: 17. Sectarians say: "Not so; faith is a direct gift, bestowed on an individual by an abstract operation of the Spirit."

2. The Bible says: "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit," Acts 2: 38. Sectarians say: "Not so; you must pray and be prayed for, for the remission of sins."

3. The Bible says: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," Mark 16: 16. Sectarians say: "Not so; baptism is only an outward sign, and is not in any wise essential to salvation."

4. The Bible says: "If thou believeth with all thine heart, thou mayest" (be baptized), Acts 8: 36-37. Sectarians say: "Not so; we require all persons to relate an experience: then, if the church decides that the experience is sufficiently strong, we will then baptize them. Yet, we do not regard baptism as in any way connected with remission of sins."

There are many more differences which we could mention; but for lack of space we defer them for a future article.

We hope all will strive to learn the good and true way, and abandon the doctrines and precepts of men. In order that we may succeed in this, I would suggest that all—every one adopt this maxim: "Where the Bible speaks we will speak; and where the Bible is silent we will be silent."

Brethren, let us work for the F. F. Give it a wide circulation. Those who are able ought to make a gift of the paper to their poor neighbors. My love to all the brethren.

FROM BRO. CAMPBELL.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

The church here has just closed a good meeting, Bro. F. L. Young, of Aledo, Parker county, Texas, doing the preaching, and it was well done too. Bro. Y. is an uncompromising defender of "the faith." Our meeting was to have commenced on the 4th inst., but owing to a Methodist meeting going on, we could not get the house until Lord's day night, the 8th. The Methodists were exceedingly mad at the start, but a better feeling prevailed at the close.

Bro. Y. preached fourteen discourses. Visible results, ten added to the one body; six by confession and baptism, and four that had previously obeyed the gospel. One old Bro. came forward at the close and demanded baptism, stating that he had never confessed with his mouth the Lord Jesus. Bro. Y. took his confession Acts 8, '37, and, strange as it may seem to some, he didn't ask him a single question as to where the church was before the days of Alexander Campbell. We went the same hour of the night to a tank near town and baptized him and two others. So closed one of the best meetings that it has ever been our privilege to attend.

Will say to any of our faithful preachers, if you are passing this way, we would be glad to have you stop off at Joshua and preach some for us. We have no preacher in this part of Johnson county since our beloved Bro. Phillips moved to California last winter. Think I will be able to send in a good list of names for the F. F. soon.

Your brother in the one hope,
G. M. CAMPBELL.

FROM AN ALIEN.

Editor Firm Foundation:

DEAR SIR:—I like the FIRM FOUNDATION the best kind, though I am not a member of any church. I never did read the Bible much till I commenced reading the F. F., then I went to reading the Bible to find out the right way to become a Christian. From reading the F. F. and comparing it with the Bible, I am about convinced that the church of Christ is right. I have heretofore believed in the Free Will Baptist doctrine; but the F. F. has led me to a better knowledge. I wish I was able to pay you for your paper and take it, but times are very hard, and I am in debt for my land; but if you can afford to send it to me please do so, and I will do the best I can. Truly,
E. A. PRICE.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Find amount to pay for F. F. for sister D. Evans, whose address is Roxdale, W. Va. She says she wants the paper as long as she lives. I am circulating the F. F. all I can. From talking and circulating the F. F. ten, at Big Sandy, have laid aside their sect baptism and have been "baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus." My prayer is, that you may live long to fight for the cause of Christ. A. FREELAND.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The new Foundation is still railing at Bro. Burnett and Bro. Kendrick because they will not ride its new hobby.—Messenger.

Did Paul rail at Timothy and want him to ride his new hobby when he wrote him, All Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrine, reproof, correction and instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works: I charge thee, therefore, before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom preach the word; did he? If this is railing and wanting Timothy to ride Paul's new hobby, then the F. F. has railed at you and Bro. Kendrick because you won't ride its hobby.

Bro. C. M. Wilmoth, in giving an account of his Hillsboro meeting, in the Messenger, mentions meeting our Bro. J. W. Jackson at that meeting. He says, Bro. Jackson is a good preacher and a splendid writer. He also speaks of the high esteem in which Bro. Jackson is held by the brethren in that section. Hillsboro has been Bro. Jackson's home for several years, and he has preached a great deal in that county. Brethren, when a man stands well at his own home and among his own people, where he has lived for years, in vain will be any jealous brother's attempt to break him down, as one brother has recently attempted to break down Bro. Jackson. I do not mention this to praise Bro. Jackson, but as a mere act of justice. In fact, if I should publish what Bro. Wilmoth said, instead of referring to it as I have, it would be seen that Bro. Wilmoth's remarks were more flattering to Bro. Jackson than this reference is.

GARRISON SET FOR THE PIGEON-WING.

A certain "Weak Sister," as she calls herself, attacks Bro. J. A. Harding for saying there is no scriptural warrant for the use of the organ in Christian worship; and calls his attention to Pa. 150: 4 as authority.

Bro. Harding reminds her that, if this Scripture will warrant the use of the organ in the worship of Christians, it will warrant the dance also; for the dance is authorized in this Scripture in the same connection with the organ. And it also authorizes, in the same connection, "stringed instruments, and loud and high-sounding cymbals."

The rapid editor of the Evangelist speaks approvingly of this weak sister's use of Pa. 150: 4 and her remarks on this question. Now then, if, next Lord's day, the editor of the Evangelist should find himself surrounded in his congregation by a man with a fiddle, one with a banjo, another with a loud cymbal and still another with a high-sounding cymbal; and they should all, simultaneously strike up when the organ does, the fiddler drawing heavily on his bow, the banjoist thumping with all his might, and the loud and high-sounding cymbalists slapping with all their strength, the editor of the Evangelist would have no right to object, from his words of approbation upon what this weak sister says. I wonder if he would enjoy such an ecclesiastical minstrelsy. Perhaps to fill up the measure of this "weak sister's" authority, Bro. Garrison would arise and "cut the pigeon-wing": if he did, he would, it seems to me, be entitled to the same respect that is now due him for giving aid and comfort to that sister in handling God's word deceitfully.

A TRIAL OFFER.

We will send the FIRM FOUNDATION, to clubs of five new subscribers, till the 1st of January, '89, for $2.00—this is forty cents a piece. Let every friend of the paper see how many new readers they can send in on this offer. This will hold good, too, if the paper is changed to a weekly.

Now friends, take hold of this offer and push it. One brother who is over eighty years old, in a town in California, sent us thirty-two names and $82.00 in one club for the F. F. He would not take a commission. And now our paper has a foot-hold in many localities in that far-off state. If all of the friends of the F. F. would work as diligently to increase its circulation as this dear old brother did, it would soon have a larger circulation than any paper published by the disciples send to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Texas.

TRY FASTING AND PRAYER.

The trouble with McGary is, he has both the spiritual and the spinal disease. He attacks the Messenger with his re-baptism nonsense, and when we asked him where the church was before the days of Alexander Campbell, it threw him into spasms and meningitis. From the way he writes about Rose Hill, he seems to imagine the church was located in that region somewhere. Well, we have one hundred dollars to give to any anabaptist who will tell us where the church was before the days of Alexander Campbell.—Messenger.

Your offer of one hundred dollars will not likely spur any one to any very great efforts; for when a man is as notoriously reckless in his statements as you have proven yourself to be, a statement from him that he has one hundred dollars is no evidence that he has a nickel.

The church that shakes people into its fellowship, instead of baptizing them, cannot be located before the days of Alexander Campbell; for it had its origin in the days of Alexander Campbell, by Alexander Campbell; and the precepts and examples of Alexander Campbell constitute its sole authority for existence.

But if you really want to know where the church of the "first-born" was before the days of Alexander Campbell, I will tell you: It was wherever there were persons who had, upon "the good confession," been baptized for the remission of their sins. To find these before the days of Alexander Campbell, or, since the days of Alexander Campbell, is to find the Church of Christ. To fail to find such persons before or since the days of Alexander Campbell is, to fail to find the Church of Christ. To search for this Church by any other marks, is to become a booby swinging on to the old rusty and unlinked chain of Baptist succession.

It takes a man who holds, that to preach the three facts of the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, is to preach the whole gospel, and that no man can pervert the gospel till he denies these three facts, to attempt to trace an unbroken chain of the church back to the apostles. For even the Catholics preach these three facts as earnestly as any other people. Then the Catholics have never perverted the gospel! So, when such a man gets in a tight to find the church back in the thick fogs of Babylon, he can point to the Roman Catholic church.

Bro. Burnett is the man who says, "the only way to pervert the gospel is to deny these three facts." His position would even exonerate Bob Ingersoll from the charge of perverting the gospel; for even the redoubtable Bob does not deny but one of these facts. He admits the two first. I expect Bro. Burnett to garble some from what I have here said, as he never treats what I write in any other way. He has long since shown that he is afraid to let his readers see more than garbled extracts from the FIRM FOUNDATION. But, as there are not more than a quarter of a thousand of his readers who are not also readers of the F. F. too, this game of his will not now profit him much, but as long as he has one reader who does not read our paper, we expect him to pursue this partial-course to keep that one in the dark. If he were to start out to be open and honest with his opponents he would doubtless have to pinch himself right hard a dozen times a day to see if it were T. R. Burnett.

No, sir, I do not think the church was located at Rose Hill. But I know Rose Hill is the place where T. R. Burnett said the gospel had never been preached till he preached there, and then had to eat his own words bodily up and admit that the Catholics do not pervert the gospel of Christ, to save himself and his little three ply gospel from utter overthrow.

Instead of attacking the Messenger with "re-baptism nonsense" we attacked the perverse nonsense of the Messenger with the word of God, and if we did not throw it in to spasms and spinal meningitis, it flew into spasms of something much worse, which we would now like to cure it of to make it a decent contemporary—try "fasting and prayer."

GIVE THE DIFFERENCE.

The eighth annual meeting of the churches of Christ in Southern California, will be at Downey, August 17, 1888. Special effort will be made by the management to make visiting brethren comfortable. The objects of the meeting are, as they have been formerly, God's glory, man's present and eternal happiness. The churches are requested to send messengers that we may confer—co-operating in the great work of the Church—saving souls through Christ.

Come, brethren, let us have a profitable waiting before the Lord. Most cordially are all invited.

R. B. DARBY,
Chairman.

DR. J. CARROLL KENDRICK,
Secretary Ev. Com.

—[Christian Messenger].

If Bro. Kendrick will furnish our "Texas State Meeting" brethren the "chapter and verse" for his "Annual meeting of the churches of Christ in Southern California," and such officers for the same, as "Chairman" and "Sec. Ev. Com." he will place these brethren under lasting obligations to him; for they can use that same "chapter and verse" for their authority, for their different meetings and organizations.

Doubtless Bro. Kendrick thinks there is a wide difference between this organization of his and these of our "Texas State Meeting" brethren that he opposes; and there is, truly, a difference in the lengths they have already respectively gone—the distances they have traveled on the road to Rome—but when it comes to the authority by which they exist, and the principles that underlie them and the direction they all lead there is about as much difference as there is between tweedledee and tweedledum.

We are forced to the conclusion that, the silence of the Messenger in reference to one of these, and its great noise about the other is, because of the C. K. breeze its sails catch from the Pacific gale; and not because it really sees any material difference between these organizations. Now, if the Messenger will not consider this as, "railing against T. R. Burnett and Bro. C.

Kendrick," we will be pleased to see a dignified explanation by it, of the difference between the authority by virtue of which these two organizations exist. A. MCG.

FROM BRO. M'GAVOCK.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Paul says, 1 Cor. 14: 34, Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law.

Concerning this teaching of Paul I want to ask you some questions:

1. Is it to be understood in an absolute sense?

2. If so, does it not prohibit their singing and reading in the church?

3. Does it not conflict with other Scripture? such as the following:

1. Acts 2: 17, which teach that "daughters shall prophesy," (teach).

2. Acts 21: 9, "And the same man had four daughters, virgins, which did prophesy."

It is not my purpose to mention all the passages which seem to conflict with first passage of this article, but only to call forth your conclusion reached by comparing all Scriptures bearing upon this subject. Also I will remark that at one place where I have been preaching some confusion exists. Will you do us the kindness to write at some length concerning these matters?

Your brother in Christ,
O. H. MCGAVOCK.
Robinson, Texas.

I understand that it is the duty of every disciple, male and female, to take part in the worship of God, so that melodious "hymns and spiritual songs" will find utterance from every grateful heart in the congregation, see Eph. 5: 19, Col. 3: 16. But when it comes to a woman opening her mouth to teach as a public speaker, or as a ruler in the congregation, I understand that she is forbidden to do so. There are two meanings to the word prophesy; one is to teach by proclaiming the law of God generally, while the other is, to foretell future events.

Now, when Paul says- "I do not permit a woman to teach nor assume authority over a man," (Diaglott, 1 Tim. 2: 12, it must not be understood in that absolute sense that would reach beyond public speaking and rule in the eldership, or undue authority over her husband at home; for to press it beyond these points would involve the Scriptures in palpable conflict, which we know cannot be done by any fair construction.

Priscilla assisted Aquilla in "expounding unto Apollos the way of the Lord more perfectly." I understand woman's sphere in the church of God to be broad and useful, and that there is no check put upon her in this sphere until it comes to the border of masculinity where she would overstep the line of modesty to mount the rostrum or exercise the rule over an assembly of both sexes. This, I think, no true woman desires to do.

But the way our missionary society brethren are pushing women to the front, having them to lay hands on their missionaries and encouraging them to preach from the rostrum, we need not be much surprised to soon see them exercising the functions of "elder," and even pastoring in "plug-hats and claw-hammer coats;" and playing the theological dude generally. Well, they can't make the religion of Christ appear much more ridiculous when they get at this than these Lexington striplings now do. Fast preachers and fast women in the churches travel fast toward Babylon.

FROM BRO. SAM H. ALLISON.

Bro. McGary:

Will you give me a few lines in the F. F. and tell me if the Christian Church has got a discipline. Bro. J. W. Harris, Christian, and Bro. H. C. Rodgers, Methodist, have had a heap to say about the discipline and I want to be on the right side, and you can settle the whole thing through the F. F. H. C. Rodgers has a book that he calls a Campbellite discipline. I hope you will give me light on the subject.

Yours in the eternal hope,
SAM H. ALLISON.
Greenwood, Texas.

Yes, the Church of Christ has a book of discipline; and I do not doubt that Mr. Rodgers, (not Bro. Rodgers; for he is not my brother if he is a Methodist), has that book—he ought to have it and read it, and be governed by it in all things, if he wants to become a man of God, for it thoroughly furnishes the man of God unto all good works. This book of discipline is written by Matthew, Mark, Luke, John, James, Peter, Jude and Paul.

The "Campbellites" may have a creed for aught I know. If they have, I suppose it is the Christian System, by Bro. Campbell. Bro. Campbell did not desire his book to become a creed, but it seems that some will have it so since that good man has fallen asleep. They even use his examples as a part of their creed. But let us labor hard to convert these Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, "Campbellites," and other sectarians, and make Christians of them that they may lay down their human creeds and take the Christian discipline, the New Testament.

A. MCG.

A preacher of ordinary talent announces five debates to occur in the near future, to which he is to be a party. Occasional discussions, conducted by the right men are very desirable, but when one man has so many debates on hand it indicates a fondness for controversy that is often destructive of his usefulness in other lines.—Christian Courier.

This is a cowardly thrust at Bro. J. A. Harding, who has been such a pricking thorn in the sides of these missionary society prelates that they are ever ready to stab him in the dark. It is strange, if Bro. Harding is a preacher of only "ordinary talent," some of the missionary society magnates, of extraordinary talent, do not meet him in defense of their missionary society tenets.

He also says: "Occasional discussions, conducted by the right men are very desirable, but when one man has so many debates on hand, it indicates a fondness for controversy that is destructive of his usefulness in other lines." Yes, if the Texas Missionary Society had the right to appoint the men to debate, debating would be a good thing all the time, the more the better. Now, if it is ever right to debate to defend the faith I can't see why it is not always right whenever the faith is being assailed. And if a man is a good debater, able to defend the faith, I am at a loss to know how he can destroy his usefulness by debating, even if he has fifty on hand to be disposed of; I have never read any of Bro. Harding's debates with other people, but I have heard that he is an excellent hand to conduct such debates, and if he is as good at debating with them as he is with these missionary society brethren, I know he is one of the "right men" to debate.

The writer of this thrust at Bro. Harding, says, in the preceding column: "It requires courage—true bravery—to acknowledge a wrong done to another, and to repair the wrong. Most people are arrant cowards on this point." Now, that he has done wrong in thus trying to make Bro. Harding appear small, no man of "ordinary talent" can fail to see. Then let him show whether he is a man of "true bravery," or an "arrant coward," by trying himself by the rule he gives.

FROM BRO. BOLON.

Dear Bro. McGary:

For some time past I have been thinking of writing to the F. F. which has been coming to me some time since my time expired, and ask to erase the red cross which notified me of the same. I like the tone of the F. F. very much, and the position which it takes concerning many of the issues which are troubling us as God's people of today.

Although strangers in the flesh, yet I love you as a brother in the Spirit, because I see you are taking the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God, contending earnestly for the faith (word) which was once delivered to the saints.

I was brought up rather under Baptist influences, and when in my teens I attended one of their protracted meetings and was aroused to the fact that I was a sinner without hope, and without God, and that I should become one of his children. Being ignorant of the great plan of salvation, and seeing my schoolmates and associates pressing forward night after night, seeking after something seemingly mysterious, I too fell into their ranks, and the second or third night the preacher asked me if I felt that God for Christ's sake had pardoned my sins. Being as ignorant of the great plan of salvation as he was, of course, I said yes, as did the others; and because my sins were forgiven, I was baptized as a door into the Baptist church.

If ever any one started with a determination and desire to follow their Savior in all his appointed ways, I thought it was I. Carefully and prayerfully I sought after and to do my Master's will, that I might enjoy his blessings. My Testament always found a place near me, and when resting upon the farm I was searching its pages, and when a hold of the plow handle I was meditating upon the history of my Master, the great plan of salvation, and the only and divine discipline that governs the Christian on earth, and prepares him for the haven of eternal rest above.

But perhaps I studied too hard, for soon I found myself drifting, and doubts arising in my mind. But not drifting from nor doubting the revealed will of God, for I believed that all Scripture was given by inspiration of God, that the law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul, and preparing his children for every good work, but drifting away from and doubting the teachings of the Baptist church, for I could not harmonize their teachings with that of the Bible; and Paul says, if a man strive for the mastery, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully, and I determined to follow the teachings of the Bible whithersoever it led me, that I might strive lawfully, enjoy the blessings of the gospel on earth, and eternal life at God's right hand in heaven.

Doubts continued to multiply until I became so skeptical that, when that people with whom I had so oft met with and shared their enjoyments, invited, (say, about once every three months), all of the same faith and order to partake with them at their table, I could not go, my faith was not the same. My Bible had taught me differently, and then I began to search after that family I had learned first began at Jerusalem. And oft times when I met with them and assisted in singing hymns of invitation inviting sinners home, no one felt the throbbing of the heart, the suffering of mind or the desire of going more than I. I was fully convinced, and wanted to be numbered with the children of God. But would God accept me on my former baptism loomed up before me, and held me back. I enquired of the ministers, and searched in vain for authority to justify my former baptism, and remove all doubts. I could find none; no authorized agent could I find commissioned of high heaven to perform this rite but his disciples, and if Paul an apostle of Jesus Christ, would not accept nor impart the spirit unto those disciples whom he found at Ephesus, and who had in all good faith been baptized unto John's baptism, how could I be accepted on my baptism.

But regardless of what the people might say, and a determination to follow the Savior in all his appointed ways, I humbled myself and was buried in the likeness of his death, and arose to walk in newness of life. All doubts then vanished from me, and with the saints I then could sing, "How firm a foundation ye saints of the Lord, is laid for your faith in his excellent word." And like Paul, I now look back to that people which formerly were endeared unto me, and bear them record that they have a seal of God but not according to knowledge, and would say unto them as one that loves them, come ye with us and we will do you good, throw off and away with that which is human, and whatsoever ye do, do all in the name (by the authority) of Jesus Christ, from whence all doubts will be removed, and you shall hear in that last great day, that kind and loving voice saying unto you, come ye blessed of my Father. God grant that you may, in my prayer. J. G. BOLON.

LETTER FROM BRO ALLISON.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have been reading the F. F. over a year, and am proud to say, I am well pleased with it. Its design if consummated will evidently accomplish a reformation much needed. That baptism is an act of faith on the part of the believing penitent, is true. No Bible reader will doubt this. Hence, any person must believe the gospel as it was preached by the apostles under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, in order to that faith, which is a prerequisite to baptism.

As respects Sunday Schools as institutions, (if I understand your position), the objection is not against the design, but the policy used in reaching the design. All admit that the children should be properly instructed in the gospel, but we object to the usual method of teaching through imperfect literature. No one, I presume, would object to a Sunday School where nothing but the gospel in its purity is taught. The same is true, in our opinion, as respects institutions of any kind, which are set up for the purpose of teaching the people the plan of salvation, by virtue of the commission given to the apostles by the Son of God.

The Bible College, if properly conducted, is evidently a means of imparting indispensable knowledge of the gospel. But is unquestionably a great curse to humanity if the instruction received is untrue. The same is true of the press. If the doctrine issued from the press is strictly true, and nothing but the truth, then the information imparted through that institution is of great value to the student. The design of the Bible College is, or should be, to teach the true doctrine of Christianity, the same is true of the printed literature. Hence, we can find no objection to either as institutions. Each having the same object in view.

The objection, if any, is not in the institution, but in the policy used to reach the design. All institutions that fail to inculcate the truth in its purity, are but so many curses to humanity. The same is true of preachers or teachers of any kind. All who preach or teach contrary to the doctrine taught and practiced by the inspired apostles, are inculcating doctrines that are opposed to christianity, and are therefore calculated to thwart the design of heaven in the great system of redemption.

As respects civil government, we maintain that it was instituted by divine authority for man's participation, and that the design of the Almighty is, that the righteous should use their influence to the utmost of their ability to establish the true principles of human government for the happiness and prosperity of the governed. Yet, while we advocate this position, we would not approve of any one acting as politicians act, simply for party purposes. But Christians should always act in concert, simply upon true principles, not for a party, but for right principles. If Christians contend only for that which is right in point of civil government, then all will act in perfect harmony, and hence will not be divided against one another.

This is where they fail, not in design, but in their policy. To act for, and in concert with designing politicians is, in our judgment, exceedingly sinful. We must not, under any circumstances, deviate from the truth in our movements. Religion and politics are so very different in character and design that they cannot be cemented together. That God is the author of civil government as well as religious government is as plainly taught in the Bible as any other fact is taught. Yet, wicked men have so perverted the true principles of human government that the design of the author in this, as well as all other divine institutions is thwarted, and hence the nations of earth are involved in error as a consequence.

Fraternally,

A. ALLISON.

FROM BRO. BOLLING.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have never reported the result of but one protracted meeting I held with the different churches, and the F. F. failed to publish that, but I concluded to report the result of a brief protracted meeting I recently held at Stovall Academy, near the town of Alto, in Cherokee county.

On Friday evening of the 15th day of June, I commenced the meeting, and although the people were very busy on their farms, I had a fair audience; and on Saturday night I learned that a Mr. Rushing, a Baptist preacher, was to preach the next day at Palestine church house, two miles distant, upon the subject of baptism, and I announced that I would not preach at eleven o'clock a. m., on Lord's day, but would go and hear Mr. Rushing, and I urged my audience to hear him, and then come out and hear me preach upon the design and action of baptism.

I went to Palestine church on Lord's day, and heard Mr. Rushing; he devoted about half of his discourse to demonstrating that John's baptism was from heaven, a proposition I have never heard controverted; the balance of his discourse was devoted to lampooning Methodists, and Presbyterians and skinning Campbellites. Referring to Acts 2: 38, he asserted that Peter meant, be baptized because sins were pardoned, and he turned and looked steadfastly at me and asked, and repeated the question, is that not true? but he was unable to extort a word from me, for I had been refused permission to preach in that house, and if I had uttered one word, I would, I doubt not, have been prosecuted for disturbing religious worship. There were three other preachers present, all of whom had something to say: one of them thought that if we had more grace and less water, that it would be better for us.

Mr. Rushing said, he had been requested to preach upon the subject of baptism because some of the membership had become a little unsettled upon the subject of baptism.

I preached Lord's day night at Stovall Academy, upon the subject of the setting up of Christ's kingdom, by request, and Mr. Rushing was present and at the conclusion of my discourse he remarked, that he did not know that he objected to the discourse. I requested him to come out on Monday night and hear me upon the design and action of baptism, and told him that I would convert him. He replied, that he would prefer that God would convert him. I replied that the gospel was the power of God unto salvation to every one that believed. He did not come out on Monday night, but Mr. Gaday, a Baptist preacher, was out either on Monday or Tuesday night.

The sequel proved that Mr. Rushing was right in supposing that the Baptists in that locality had become unsettled upon the subject of baptism, for on Wednesday evening I baptized six Baptists; 'tis true, however that two of the number had been shaken into the church of Christ, but they were Baptists after the shaking as fully as they were before they submitted to the shaking process.

I preached on Wednesday night to a very large and attentive audience, composed mostly of Baptists, and was compelled to close the meeting, and come on five miles west of the Neches river, and commence a meeting at Franklin church. I however set the church in order at Stovall Academy with a first rate eldership.

J. L. BOLLING.

FROM BRO. HOLT.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

The F. F. is being read by several of the brethren in this country, and with very good effect. Last Lord's day I baptized an old man eighty years of age, who once belonged to the Methodist society, and by them was immersed, not knowing, of course, for what he was baptized. About thirty years ago he was shaken into the (?) church of Christ, the preacher telling him that his baptism was valid. Upon this man's word he relied for thirty years; when, after reading a few copies of the F. F. he began to doubt the validity of his immersion. About this time I visited this old brother and we had not conversed but a short time, when the subject of "sect-baptism" was introduced. He had studied this subject thoroughly, and had investigated it in the light of God's word. He asked me concerning my opinion relative to this subject. I told him that, as far as an opinion is concerned, I had none to give, but that I would give him the Scripture teaching upon this subject. This I proceeded to do, whereupon the old brother expressed his willingness to be immersed for the remission of sins, which was immediately performed. Many more should do likewise. Success to the F. F.

FROM W. N. GRUBB.

Mr. A. McGary:

DEAR SIR:—Having come across three copies of the FIRM FOUNDATION, can say that, of all the papers that I have seen in my life of thirty-two years, these are the only truly Christian papers I ever saw.

Enclosed you will find a one dollar postal note to pay for your valuable paper. I will try to get all the subscribers I can for it, for we live in a truly benighted land where true Christians are seldom seen or heard; and one thing more dear sir, we are needing one here to preach the true gospel to dying souls steeped in sin and Romanism. Could you not persuade one to come over and help us? I know of several, I think, long with me to confess their Lord and put on Christ that having the Son we may have life and have it more abundantly and seeing your letters in the F. F. I think I have found one preacher whom I could approach with a subject that is dearer than all else to me, and I trust you will sympathize with us starving ones in Presidio and Jeff Davis counties.

Send paper to W. N. Grubb, Marfa, Presidio county, Texas.

Will sign myself your friend.

W. N. GRUBB.

Marfa, Texas.

FROM BRO. BISHOP.

Bro. McGary:

Enclosed find one dollar for which continue my subscription to the F. F. I will say to you, that I am getting old and it may be that I can not send you the money regularly, but do not discontinue the paper. Send to Hope, this county.

I am a veteran of the Mexican war, and also in that of right against wrong, with Christ as our leader. May God bless you in your efforts to put down evil. Long live the F. F. Let us have the weekly.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

CHILDREN OF WRATH.

[A synopsis of a sermon preached by J. H. D. T., of Arcola, Ill.]

Text:—"And you, who were dead in trespasses and sins; wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the Spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience. Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others."—Eph. 2: 1-3.

Exordium:—Children of wrath implies children exposed to the wrath of God. Hence it is concluded that every child that is born into the world is born under the wrath of God. Now from this premise the following logical conclusions have been deduced:

1. The unconditional election and reprobation.
2. Final perseverance of the saints.
3. Miraculous unconditional conversion.

Now I protest against this premise and its consequences for the following reasons:

1. It charges God with partiality in the exercise of his saving power.
2. It charges God with the eternal condemnation of all who are lost.

3. It takes away man's responsibility and accountability.

4. It reduces all the commandments of God to unmeaning utterances. Paul says, "God commandeth all men everywhere to repent;" but why such a commandment if man has no power to obey?

5. This theory makes all the invitations of the gospel mere mockery. Why should the Lord say: "Come unto me all ye who are heavy laden," if he knew they could not come?

6. Finally, I object to this premise and all these logical deductions because it renders the Bible account of a judgment to come, the grandest scene of injustice that was witnessed by men or angels. "Because he hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained: whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead."—Acts 17: 31. But why thus judge the world if man has no power by nature to will or to do the commandments of God? But then what does the text mean? "Children of wrath by nature." There it stands, and how shall we dispose of it?

Homily:—I answer, there is what we call second nature; a nature acquired by practice or custom. To this Paul refers when he asks the question: "Doth not even nature itself teach you, that if a man have long hair it is a shame unto him."—1 Cor. 11: 14.

Now, nature, in the prime meaning of the word, (Physis), would teach that it is wrong to cut off the hair, for it is natural for it to grow and it is contrary to nature to cut it off. But second nature or custom says it is a shame to let it grow long. So this second nature acquired by practice, made these people the children of wrath.

In this connection the apostle is comparing the condition of the Jews and Gentiles. Of the believing Gentiles he says:

"And you, who were dead in trespasses and in sins; wherein in time past ye walked according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience."—Eph. 2: 1-2.

This is what Paul says of the believing Gentiles at Ephesus. We should notice:

1. They were once dead in trespasses and sins.
2. In time past when they walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience.

3. Therefore, we conclude that they become children of wrath by disobedience, etc.

Then turning to the Jews he says: "Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others."—Eph. 2: 3. The apostle says: "We all"—meaning Jews and Gentiles—"had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind;" that is satiating, gratifying, satisfying. By doing these things they all became "children of wrath"—Jews and Gentiles. Therefore, it is very clear to the mind of your servant, that all children of wrath have made themselves such by indulging the desires of the flesh and of the mind.

How and when does sin begin, or how and when does a person become a sinner or a child of wrath? Sin has its beginning in the heart of a youth. "For the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth."—Gen. 8: 21. See also sixth chapter and fifth verse.

1st. Then, is the evil imagination of the heart.

2nd. It takes place in youth, not at birth or in babyhood.

3rd. Lust is the second step toward becoming a child of wrath. "Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." James 1: 15, Rom. 6: 21-22.

4th. The third step is the gratification or satisfaction of lust and brings forth death—"dead in trespasses and in sins." "Sin is the transgression of the law."—1 John 3: 4. But these children of wrath had been quickened.

"But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved), and hath raised us together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus: that in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindness towards us, through Christ Jesus. For by grace are ye saved through faith: and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."—Eph. 2: 4-10.

Therefore, we conclude that all become children of wrath by disobedience, and children of God by obedience.

FROM A SISTER.

"Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."—Rev. 22: 14.

Dear sisters, what precious promises to them that obey the commands of our blessed Savior; to be with him in the presence of God and the holy angels throughout an endless eternity! O sisters, is that not enough to cause us to deny ourselves ungodly and worldly lust, and seek for eternal life—yes, eternal life of perfect happiness beyond this vale of tears?

I saw a sister not long ago who, I thought, had set her affections on things above, and not on things on the earth; but, to my astonishment, I saw her with an apron on the back of her dress, fastened to her basque. O how sad I felt. I could scarcely believe my own eyes. That superfluous part would have made some poor orphan child a dress these hard times. What do you think, sisters? Lay apart all superfluity of naughtiness is one of the commands. Are you striving to enter through the gates into the heavenly city? If so, you must obey this command.

I saw another sister with a dark ring of snuff around her mouth, that did not look decent. Oh, no, how can you, sisters, how can you expect to enter in through the gates into the city, if you do not obey the commands? You certainly do not expect to, if you believe the Savior's word.

I heard a sister say, it was the pride of life that caused her to dip snuff, and then it was the lust of the flesh that kept her at it. The lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but of the world; the world passeth away, and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever. You certainly see that the will of God is not in any of you. O will you not quit that filthy habit and serve God more acceptably?

Some say, it is a bad habit, but they can't quit it; it would kill them. Jesus said, he that loses his life for my sake shall find it. I heard a brother say to another, that tobacco was food; the other said, yes. O what a mistake. One-fourth of a man would have been more than enough for one meal.

I would have liked for them to have proved it. I think it would have done them some good not to have said so any more. I saw a little boy that tried it as food; it did not prove good for him: he was taken very sick, suddenly; looked like he would die: he threw up tobacco, then it was known what was the matter. It did not prove good food for him, nay, neither will it for any one. The child saw his father put it in his mouth, and he thought it was food. O what a bad example. Don't you see the evil? Look, brothers and sisters, if the child had have died, do you think his father would have quit? Nay, he is joined to his idol.

I must quit. My letter is getting too long, I fear. If this is published, I will write again. O let us all strive to be united in God's word. That we may be, is the sincere desire of,

Dear Bro. McGary:

I am due you this year's subscription for the F. F. Please remove the red cross and put me down as a life-time subscriber for the same, and I will send you the dollar as soon as I can get it.

Your sister,
M. M. NEAL.

FROM SISTER HAWKINS.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

I propose to be one to send you one new name for the FIRM FOUNDATION. Enclosed please find one dollar to pay for the F. F. one year. Send to the name of Mrs. Sarah Griffin, Spring City, Rhea county, Tennessee. And I think may be sister Sarah will perhaps get some more subscribers down there. We are anxious to have the F. F. become a weekly, and I think that we may get some more subscribers in the near future. We make our money by hard work. I raise chickens, sell eggs, make butter to sell, raise turkeys, etc. My husband raises corn, and hogs, on a small scale, but we are most too old to work much longer. Please excuse bad writing.

Yours in the one hope,

TANT-PAYNE DEBATE.

A grand victory has been won for the cause of Christ in the Tant and Payne discussion, which opened on the morning of the 8th of July, near Latham, Hamilton county, Texas.

Bro. Tant opened the discussion in the affirmative, showing the church, of which he is a member, possesses all the essential features of the New Testament church. He made a grand defense for the truth, and I am confident that the Baptists felt the force of his argument severely.

Both of the disputants conducted themselves well during the debate.

and manifested no vindictive spirit toward each other; nevertheless they hewed to the line with their arguments.

Elder Payne in one of his speeches demanded that Elder Tant could say to the people present, whether or not Baptist baptism was from heaven or men. To which Bro. Tant frankly replied that, it was of men. He showed that the baptism from heaven, ordained by Jesus Christ, was for the remission of sins, and that Baptist baptism was because of the remission of sins, therefore it is not of heaven.

Elder Payne affirmed that, from the 9th verse to the conclusion of the 16th chapter of Mark was spurious Scripture. But I think Bro. Tant made him sick of his affirmation by showing from Matthew and Luke the same facts recorded, and that if it was spurious in one place, it would also be spurious when written elsewhere.

During nights of the debate I had the pleasure of preaching to the people, and took twelve confessions. The Baptists also held a meeting before and during the debate, and if they converted any one to their false theology, I don't know it.

Yours in Christ,

JAMES W. ZACHARY.

BAPTIST INCONSISTENCY.

The Baptists are always charging us with believing in a "water salvation." They remind me very much of an old negro I once heard of named Pimple, who was a fisherman. Pimple went out one day to catch a big fish. In hunting for him he turned over a chunk, and up jumped a frog, and away he went for the creek, and old Pimple after him. When the frog reached the water into it he went and swam across to the opposite side; when he reached the bank he croaked out, "Salvation, salvation."

Pimple, determined not to be defeated, turned back in the bottom to hunt for another. He rolled a log over and out hopped another frog, and off to the creek he went, Pimple after him. Mr. frog jumped into the water and out on the opposite side he went. Pimple stood and looked at him while the frog yelled at the top of his voice: "Non-essential! non-essential! non-essential!!!"

This second frog reminds me very much of the Baptists, who splash around in the water with their converts, name their church after the ordinance of baptism, and talk of "close baptism," yet they, like the silly frog, yell, "Non-essential! non-essential!!!" "Oh, consistency thou art a jewel." A. J. McCARTY.

FROM BRO. MOORE.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

Enclosed please find one dollar ($1.00) for the FIRM FOUNDATION. I know not how much I am in arrears, but suspect it to be more than this, since the F. F. has been coming to me since about April 1897. It is such a very difficult matter for me to get money is the reason I have been so slow in sending it to you, but I don't wish the F. F. to stop until I order it stopped, as I consider it among our soundest periodicals.

I am in poor circumstances and trying to become able to reproclaim the grand truths of the Bible; hence I cannot afford to be without the F. F., since I consider it true to the "old land-marks," (so far as I am able to judge) except the manner of setting apart for their work preachers and elders, as Bro. McGary explained in the F. F. of July 16, though he may be fully able to substantiate his position.

"To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them."—Isa. 8: 20. I should be well pleased to see something further upon this question.

May the Lord bless his faithful everywhere, and keep them ready to be revealed in the last time.

Yours truly,

IRA C. MOORE.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS.

Dear brethren, in discussing the baptismal, or any other important question, please remember what Paul once said. Here it is: "For we dare not make ourselves of the number or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves: but they measuring themselves by themselves and comparing themselves among themselves are not wise."—2 Cor. 10: 12.

Now this is just what our brethren are doing in trying to settle the baptismal question. Whenever we call on our shaking brethren for authority for receiving immersed sectarians into the church, they almost invariably bring up Bro. Campbell, or some one else, and begin to "measure" by them.

Paul says: "We dare not make ourselves of the number," and if we do so, he says, we "are not wise." Bro. Lipcomb, Harding, and other brethren are doing the very thing that Paul says we "dare not" do, and which, if we do, we "are not wise." We never can settle this question by pursuing this unwise course. How may we settle it, then? Let Paul answer: "But we will not boast of things without our measure but according to the measure of the rule which God hath distributed to us, a measure to reach even unto you."—2 Cor. 10: 13.

I claim that the divine principle holds good, and that if we will faithfully use the measure of the rule which God hath given us; we can and will settle this question. Let us weigh these sectarians in the divine scales, measure them with God's measuring reed, and cease the unwise custom of measuring the living by the dead, and we will soon decide this question of sect baptism. Brethren, "be not unwise but understanding what the will of the Lord is.

Your brother for the one way.

BRIEFS.

Now is the time to subscribe for the F. F.

Don't fail to send for Zeke Jackson and the sequel to it.

We have several good articles on hand which will appear in due time.

When you have the money is the time to pay your debts. Do you owe anything?

In ordering the paper or tracts write your name plainly, and give postoffice, county and state.

We failed to get up our briefs for August 1st, on account of so much work to be done in the office.

Now is the time to send in your clubs. Go to work, brethren, and send us large lists of subscribers.

Christians will not impose any burden upon others, that they themselves have not borne or are not willing to bear.

On account of sickness, we did not mail the F. F., of August 1st, on time, but hope all our subscribers received their papers.

Bro. McGary has been preaching at Cherokee, San Saba county, recently. Have not heard results. Hope he will give it in next issue of the F. F.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

Write us short reports of your meetings, and in writing please don't "puff" your preacher so much. The desire for public applause, notoriety, is born of egotism and is contrary to the Spirit of Christ—crush it out.

The Christian campmeeting on Onion creek, in this (Travis) county, will be going on by the time this paper reaches its readers. Bro. J. W. Jackson will be assisted by Bro. A. J. McCarty; and, perhaps, Bro. McGary will be here during the meeting.

We had a very pleasant visit from sister P. A. Lyons, of Flatonia, who had been on a visit of four weeks to her relatives and friends in Mason, Llano and McCulloch counties, and was on her way home with her family and some friends.

Bro. J. B. Lee, of Madison county, writes: "Bro. C. T. Goldman is holding a very interesting meeting on Larrison prairie. Several additions up to date." We bid Bro. Goldman God-speed and hope many more may obey the gospel under his preaching. Bro. G. is a young preacher, but a true workman that needeth not be ashamed,

There must be something terribly wrong with the mails somewhere, because we receive so many complaints from subscribers saying they failed to get their paper at all. We are confident that we have not failed to send every issue to each subscriber whose name is on our list. We will try to replace the missing numbers, if we can.

Bro. John C. Lloyd, of Greenwood, Wise county, under date of July 30, '88, writes: "Bro. E. H. Rogers, of Collinsville, Grayson county, closed a meeting of fourteen discourses at Brownlow Mound church. On the night of the 24th seven made the good confession and were baptized, and six reclaimed, my wife was among the number, Rejoice with me. Long will Bro. Rogers be remembered by us as a good soldier of the cross. We recommend him to all.

Bro. Cicero Tyson, of Martin City, Nacogdoches county, under date July 9th, '88, writes: "I have not received the F. F. of June 1st and 15th, nor July 1st. Bro. J. W. Strode is out here preaching the gospel of Christ. He is courteous in his manner towards the sects, but he hews to the line. He rebukes the brethren for fellowshiping the unfruitful works of darkness, such as leagues, cliques, and other secret movements to rob God, and for celebrating holidays in honor of the devil."

Bro. A. K. Landrum, of Stonewall, Texas, under date July 15th, writes: "Having returned home from a campmeeting at Mount Sharp, Hayes county, will report that after eight days labor in July, eighteen were added: seven by confession and baptism. Two visits were made by me to this congregation: once in June, when I spent two days with them, and again in July, as mentioned. Set apart two elders by fasting and prayer, and also set apart a young brother Deek to the ministry of the word of God."

T. H. G.

B. B. Sanders, the "Samson riddle" preacher, is now in a meeting at Franklin, Texas. Bro. S. says, "It is only a question of time when all preachers who oppose the (their systematic work or plan of evangelization in Texas will be starved out and will have to quit preaching." If Bro. S. does not guard his expressions we will prove him to be a false prophet. We are not afraid of starving. We choose rather to suffer afflictions, (yea, "starve" with the people of God, who are satisfied with God's plan than enjoy the pleasures of the missionary conventions for a season. Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of the State Board, for we have respect unto the recompense of the reward. Let us live righteously, dear brethren, for David says: "I have never seen the righteous forsaken or his seed begging bread." Starve, or not starve, we will not submit to their human machinery. A. J. M.

WHAT SHALL THE END OF THESE THINGS BE?

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough,

Permit me again to lay before your minds, a few things which seem to me, to be most detrimental to the cause of Christ. The danger to true christianity seems to be constantly on the increase. Sectarianism was never more boastful and determined than now: nor did it ever receive so much aid and encouragement from those who claim to be disciples as it is now receiving. To the true Christian, it is now alarming to behold the rapid and far-reaching strides which a majority of so-called Christians are now making toward Babylon. Those who never read the Christian (?) Standard, Christian (?) Evangelist and Apostolic (?) Guide have but little idea of the present state of affairs.

Please listen to a few sentences from the Evangelist: "There are good people among us who believe sincerely that to admit the probable salvation of the millions of pious unimmersed people, who were faithful to the measure of light they had, is to compromise the scriptural teaching as to the design of baptism." What else is it, but to compromise the design of baptism? Indeed, if I admit that the pious unimmersed will be saved, I give up wholly the design of baptism. Baptism means immersion—it is immersion. If, therefore, persons may be saved without immersion the design of immersion is lost.

The design is not to save them, or, if it is, they can be saved without acquiescing in God's design. "Many good people believe, that it is compromising the design." Yes, sir; it is wholly giving it away.

But he says further: "They have a 'cloud' in their 'religious sky' which only a better knowledge of the character of God and the genius of christianity can dissipate." Mr. Garrison must have a very distorted idea of the character of God, if he supposes that we may deny his purposes and designs, and substitute the opinions and whims of ignorant fanatics and filthy dreamers. And also, of the genius of christianity if he thinks christianity to be so elastic as to be enlarged so as to include all the pious who have not obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which has been delivered by the ambassadors of the Lord.

Yes, what would be the nature of a christianity that might be warped and twisted and stretched so as to include every heresy? It would be no christianity at all; or such as could not be said to have any genius. That is just such a christianity (?) as Mr. Garrison and all his sort want. A christianity (?) that is broad enough to include all the plug-hatted Rev. Divines, and all the gay, fashionable and elite of all classes.

But we will quote him still further: "It was our good fortune once to dispel a very dark cloud from the mind of a sincere young lady, who wished to be immersed, but felt that in so doing she would be pronouncing, or ratifying the sentence of condemnation against her pious parents, who had accepted sprinkling for baptism, and died believing they had obeyed the divine command. When asked if she believed they had acted according to their best judgment, she replied that she had no doubt but that they had. Can the same be said of you, if you neglect to be immersed? we asked. Not at all, she replied, because my understanding of baptism has changed. From the new light which came to her face, as she extended her hand and expressed her readiness to be baptized, we knew that the cloud of her own making was gone."

He asked this young lady if she believed her parents had acted according to what they believed to be right and that dispelled her gloom. Does Mr. Garrison not know that such an argument as that totally ignores the law of Christ and makes the entire salvation of the person depend on their own think-so? If he does not, he is too ignorant to ever try to teach anybody what to do to be saved.

But I am compelled to believe that he knows better. The young lady was right in the start, but he made her believe a lie, or else he has been teaching lies all through his ministry, if indeed he has always taught that sprinkling is not apostolic baptism. He knows that to be sprinkled is not to be born of water; and he further knows that Jesus said: "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven."

But he makes that simple-minded young lady believe that the parent's opinion set aside the word of the Christ, the Lord. Will God hold such perverters of his truth guiltless? Tom Payne, Charles Watts and Bob Ingersoll are harmless creatures compared with such maneuvering, twisting perverters of the truth as Garrison, Williamson, Tyler, Raines and all such.

But we are not quite done with Mr. Garrison. He says further: "If God could use Cyrus, Alexander, and the heathen nations to accomplish his purposes, why should it be thought incredible that he should use pious Godly men with imperfect knowledge of his truth to do the work that needs to be done, and which no one else is doing? Who can doubt that such evangelists as Moody are doing great good in this money-loving and materialistic age, in awakening people to a knowledge of sin and their need of salvation. Grant that their understanding of the apostolic method of evangelization is imperfect, and that they do not seem to know how to advise a convicted sinner to proceed to find peace and rest: may it not be that others, who pride themselves on their ability to tell sinners what to do to be saved, are deficient in power to convince of sins, and thus the two may supplement each other."

His argument, if he has any, is, that if God could use Cyrus and Alexander and other heathen kings, to punish the wicked, why not use the devil to rebuke and correct and save sinners? That God has actually sent out a lot of ignorant false teachers who do not follow the apostolic method of preaching; but they get the people to believe their false doctrine and to confess a falsehood and that they will quit doing the sins that they accuse them of; but now they do worse things. They ignore Christ's commandments in a pretense at religion and are two-fold more the child of hell than before. After Moody and Jones have taught them to tell a falsehood in professing religion, and have gotten them into some sectarian organization, then Mr. Garrison would have some of us who pride ourselves on our ability to tell them what to do to be saved, to go on after and call them out of Babylon, saying, "come out of her my people." Moody has made them God's people and pushed them into Babylon! Is not that grand? Ought not Mr. Garrison to have a pewter medal? But now I will dismiss him and turn my thoughts to something else for a while.

The ignorance and slackness of many who call themselves Christians are also alarming. They are almost wholly conformed to the world. And indeed they seem not to discern much, if any, difference between christianity and the world.

I will here speak of one practice they have, viz: Almost every kind of worldly performance is supplemented with devotional exercises. If it be a political convention where all manner of fraud, maneuvering and chicanery are to be resorted to, they open with prayer, and sometimes sacred songs. If it be a picnic for fun and all manner of levity are to be seen, there must be devotional exercises. In those exercises the saint, (if there are any), and the sinner, the sceptic and the infidel all unite.

We have had here in Bloomfield what is called a Teacher's Institute. The superintendent of schools had collected all the teachers of the county, and others who desire to teach. Some sectarians and some worklings, and perhaps some infidels. At some of their meetings, (and they met three times a day), they had devotional exercises, and always singing of sacred songs. I heard them singing, "On Jordan's stormy bank I stand and cast a wishful eye, To Canaan's far and happy land where my possessions lie. We will rest in the far and happy land just across on the ever-green shore, Sing the song of Moses and the Lamb by and by and dwell with Jesus ever more."

What presumption it is for a sinner to sing spiritual songs! Lying to God. It is solemn mockery. What a shame it is that persons who claim to be Christians have not been better taught. Yet it is common in our congregations for sinners, infidels and sectarians and all to engage in this part of the worship.

Then there is another thing that I want to speak of here, and then I must close. The evils of the Sunday-school, as it is called. There are many now who claim to be Christians, who will go to the Sunday-school and there pretend to teach the young the Scriptures; and pretend to teach them to obey the Scriptures, that they may know how to worship God: and as soon as the Sunday-school is dismissed will gather up and walk off home, or to some sectarian assembly, instead of setting a good example before the young by staying and attending to the communion and the worship.

Thus by precept they pretend, (for it is only pretense), to teach the young aright, and by their example teach them the very opposite. What is such christianity worth? They worship the Sunday-school more than they do Christ. And my experience is, that when you find a very ardent Sunday-school worker, you find a very slack church member. "You cannot serve two masters." Let us of the F. F. work for the church.

My love and prayer for all the Lord's people. I. C. STONE.

RELATION OF A CHRISTIAN TO CIVIL GOVERNMENTS.—No. 1.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Last January I wrote a brief communication for the FIRM FOUNDATION upon the subject of the propriety that attaches to the Christian in regard to the exercise of the elective franchise; and mentioned the fact to one of the associate editors of the F. F., and he informed me that an article upon that subject had appeared in the columns of the F. F. from the pen of Bro. John S. Durst. And he has handed me the paper containing the article, remarking at the time, that it was the strongest and most conclusive argument upon the subject, and that the chief editor of the F. F. endorsed it, and regarded it as very exhaustive. And as the chief aim of my life is to learn, accept, endorse, and promulgate the truth, let it emanate from what source it may; I have very carefully read and considered all that Bro. Durst has said in his article. And as I cannot remain much longer at home, and have time to reply to Bro. Durst's article at my leisure, I concluded to reply at once.

My brother's article occupies nearly eleven columns of the F. F. I will endeavor to present, "multum in parvo," (much in little), and not prove so voluminous. It is apparent, even to the casual reader, that Bro. Durst was prompted to represent his views upon this subject because of the late agitation in regard to the question of prohibition. And he courts the most rigid criticism in regard to all he has said, in presenting his views upon this subject; and as he has invited criticism, I trust he will not take offense when I proceed to do this.

My brother has presented much valuable Bible teaching in his article. I am much pleased with his exhortation upon the subject of Christian duty, and I heartily endorse all he said in that direction. But it will be my purpose to notice all that he said in regard to the propriety that attaches to the Christian in regard to the exercise of the elective franchise and no more. He has made some home thrusts at denominations, and nominal Christians, and in all this, "Job sinned not."

My brother holds that Christians should refrain from the exercise of the elective franchise, and ignore politics entirely. And it will be observed by those who read his article, that he refers to those who dissent from his peculiar views, as his political brethren. There is a display of just a little modest sarcasm in referring thus to those who dissent from his peculiar views; and I will refrain from referring to him, and those whose views are in harmony with his, as fanatics, (wild enthusiasts), even though the term might be appropriate.

My brother says: "The will of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Christian's king, embraces his entire duty as a subject of his kingdom, and the kingdom of the Savior is distinct from the kingdom of this world." Yes, sir, I grant all this, but does it demonstrate that Christians owe no sort of loyalty to the republican government that vouchsafes to them the enjoyment of life, liberty, and the worship of God according to the dictates of their own conscience, and protects and promotes the happiness, peace and prosperity of the civilized world?

But my brother says, his first argument is based upon the declaration of the Savior: "My kingdom is not of this world." The man who would controvert the truth of this declaration of Jesus, would be a very suitable subject for the lunatic asylum. But I fail to perceive what bearing it exerts upon the theme we are considering. It does not define the Christian's duty either to his God, or man. Paul said, Phil. 2: 4, "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others."

He then quotes Paul, Col. 1: 13, "Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son." Surely Bro. Durst will not insist that Paul here had any remote reference to a political or civil government, when it must be obvious to even the casual reader, that he referred alone to the kingdom of darkness and Satan.

When the Savior left the resplendent courts of heaven, and encountered Saul who was enroute to the city of Damascus to persecute Christians, he informed him that he had appeared to him to send him to the people, and Gentiles, to open their eyes, and turn them from darkness to light and from the power of Satan unto God. Then my brother must admit that Paul thanked God that his Colossian brethren had been delivered from the power of Satan, and that he had not the remotest reference to an earthly power, or government.

But my brother says, the kingdoms of this world are included in the kingdom of darkness, (Satan). Demonstrate this assertion, Bro. Durst, and you will convert me to the theory of total, hereditary depravity. J. L. BOLLING.

The readers of the F. F. will remember that sometime ago, I wrote an article on the "Relation of a Christian to Civil Governments." Bro. Bolling wrote a reply, containing twenty-four pages of legal cap. I have just read it, and I propose noticing it from time to time till the entire article is given.

He expresses the hope that I will not take offense at his reply. Why should I do so? When he excels me in this respect, I will try to profit by his example. You seem to be a little offended at my use of the term, political brethren, and say, "there is a display of just a little modest sarcasm" in this; and that you will "refrain from referring to me and those in harmony with me, as fanatics, (wild enthusiasts), even though the term might be appropriate."

This reminds me of the man who told his friend that if he were not his friend, he might call him a thief.

But let's notice the points made by Bro. B. The first four pages contains nothing to answer. On the fifth page I find the following: "My brother says the will of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Christian's king, embraces his entire duty as a subject of his kingdom, and the kingdom of the Savior is distinct from kingdoms of this world." You then say: "Yes, sir, I grant all this; but does it demonstrate that Christians owe no sort of obligation to the republican government that vouchsafes to us the enjoyment of life, liberty, and the worship of God according to the dictates of their own conscience? etc."

Now, why do you convey the idea that my position demands no sort of loyalty to worldly governments? I have shown in the article to which you reply, and am ready to show again just what the Bible teaches on this subject. In reply, it devolves upon you to show not only that I am wrong, but that the Bible teaches that a Christian should be a politician and an office holder in Caesar's government. Now will you please to remember this, and give us a little clear cut work in this direction. A familiar Scripture to us all, is often used when it subserves our purposes: It runs thus: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

You then refer to my first argument, based on John 18: 29-36, and say the man who would controvert this would be a fit subject for the lunatic asylum. But then you add, I fail to see the bearing it exerts upon the theme under consideration. Your failure, my brother, is very apparent to all who read my article with unobscured eyes. My object in quoting John 18: 29-36, Col. 1: 13, Heb. 12: 23, was to show into what kingdom the Christian had been translated, that we might examine the laws governing his duty as a citizen of that kingdom.

But you wish me to demonstrate my statement that the kingdoms of this world are included in the kingdom of darkness. You furthermore say, that when I do this, I will convert you to the theory of total hereditary depravity. Now, my brother, it is not my purpose to convert you from one erroneous position to another, but from error to truth. But really, I am surprised at your request. Are the kingdoms of this world of the devil, or of God? In all kingdoms the king rules. Are the kingdoms of this world ruled by God? Will you demonstrate it?

I will close this article with a few quotations in point, and ask the patience of Bro. B. and the F. F. readers, till I finish my reply to Bro. B. Dan. 2: 44 shows that the kingdom of God, or Church of Christ should break in pieces and consume all earthly kingdoms. In Heb. 1: 8 we have, "A scepter of righteousness is the scepter of thy kingdom" Now turn to Eph. 6: 11-12: "Put on the whole armor of God, that you may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Now turn to Matt. 4th chapter: "And again the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and showed him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them; and saith unto him: all these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me."

Is this enough, Bro. B.? Now all I ask in conclusion is, that you do not embrace the doctrine of total depravity, but that you accept of the truth. What say you? More anon. J. S. D.

FROM BRO. KIDWILL.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

By your permission I will give your readers a few lines, which I hope may add something toward the establishment of primitive christianity. I admire the boldness of the F. F. in defense of the truth, and especially do I note with pleasure, an improvement in the manner of presenting the truth in the columns of your noble paper. The number of July 1st is freer from witticism than any number of this year. And I think, taking it as a whole, it is the best copy of the F. F. I have ever seen.

We should remember that the style of the Holy Spirit in presenting the truth, cannot be improved upon. And every cutting word, or piece of wit thrown in by man, only tends to mar the force and beauty of the word of God. I, for one, can sympathize with the brethren who are so mystified as to argue that sectarian teaching and practice make Christians. I could go down upon my knees, and with a flood of tears, pray God to open their eyes. If it would do them any good. But alas, this is not God's way of doing the work. We have his word, the law of the Spirit, which makes people free, when they understand and obey it from the heart. No other people on earth teach the truth as it is in Jesus, as do the disciples. God says the people of the new covenant "shall all know me from the least to the greatest;" not only as but he says they shall not be taught to know the Lord. This we understand to mean that every one in the covenant is acquainted with God to a certain extent before he can enter the covenant. All the knowledge we can have of God in the sense of the above passage, is what we learn of him through the law of the Spirit.

Shall we then conclude that there is nothing new to be learned after we enter the covenant? No, no; for Matthew says, they are to be taught after they are baptized, hence after they enter the covenant. (For the baptized are certainly in covenant relationship with God.) All, therefore, that can be embraced in the words, "They shall all know me," is, that they shall understand the word of God so far as it relates to the pardon of the alien, and his induction into the new covenant.

If our sectarian friends (enemies) understood this law as God has revealed it, they would not be where they are. They don't know the Lord, as he has revealed himself in the New Testament. They only know as they have been taught by sectarian teachers. Take what every sectarian preacher, as such, preaches; put it all together, or divide as we may, and no man could ever, from such teaching, gain a correct knowledge of God, as he has revealed himself in the law of pardon to the alien.

Yet some of our brethren say, that such people are Christians, members of the new covenant, of which God says they shall all know me, (be acquainted with the law of pardon), and that we may teach them those things after they have entered the covenant, and receive them among us upon their obedience to sectarian teaching, which was done when they knew nothing of God as they ought to know. If this is not reversing God's order, then I must confess that I have lost my reasoning power, if I ever had any. Why pray for God to open the eyes of one who has closed them so tight as not to see that such practice will not save people? Teaching is the only thing that can do them any good.

It does my very soul good to see some of our best talent coming over to the Lord's side. I see in the editorial department of the Christian Quarterly Review of January, 1888, page 150, the editor intimates that he was not fully settled on the re-baptism question. But in the July number of '88, pages 446-451, under the heading of editorials, I see an article under the caption, "What Constitutes Christian Baptism," the writer, after giving a short but pointed article, concludes with the following words: "We may now, therefore, answer the question, What Constitutes Christian Baptism? by saying, Immersion in water of a believer for the remission of sins."

Bro. Herndon is one of our strongest and most influential men, and if he will now as boldly defend the truth on this point, as he has moved his pen against unlawful societies, instrumental music in worship, the modern pastorage, etc., he will certainly accomplish much in bringing about the primitive order, as regards one of the most important of all questions.

Fight on, dear brethren, "holding fast to the form of sound words," You will be persecuted: "But if they have persecuted me they will persecute you." is just as true now as when Jesus spoke these words to his disciples. "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake." "Rejoice and be exceedingly glad: for great is your reward in heaven." Oh what "great and precious promises" the Lord has given, "that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature."

Then let us keep the truth as Jesus did, continually pressed to the front. Press it so hard upon the defenders of sect baptism that they will make an attempt to give us a thus saith the Lord for their teaching, or quit it one or the other.

We should not only do all we can with tongue and pen to defend the truth, but do all we can in putting the best literature of our brethren into the hands of every family. And upon this point I wish to say, that, in my judgment, the Christian Quarterly Review, edited by Bro. E. W. Herndon, Columbia, Mo., is as sound as the soundest. It is made up of the best talent of our country, and is open for the free discussion of all important Bible subjects. It is of good size with 100 pages, and comes at the low price of two dollars per year. I have never seen a number of it yet that I did not consider the editorial alone more than worth the subscription price. But enough for this time.

Success to the F. F., and all defenders of the truth. I am into the war for life, and not a conscript, either.

Yours for the whole truth,
W. T. KIDWILL.

THE PLAN OF SALVATION.

THE ONE BAPTISM.

"He came to his own, but his own received him not; but as many as did receive him, gave him power to become the sons of God, even to them that believed on his name; who were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."—John 1: 11-13.

This brief declaration of the apostle John sets forth the salvation of God as a matter of grace through faith. For to every one that believes the gospel of Christ, he graciously grants the power, right, or privilege of becoming a child of God, or entering into the saved state. This entering in was figuratively denominated a birth. But it was not a natural birth, following any blood line, that limited it to any particular family of earth; they were born of God. None of the supposed different bloods of the various families of earth, noble or ignoble, had anything to do with bringing it about.

John informs us at the outset of his record that as many as received the Christ were born of God. He also defines receiving as the equivalent of believing on his name. These statements alone might not give one any very clear idea of the process of being born again, or of becoming a child of God, if the party were ignorant of the preaching and practice of the apostles, or if John had not taken the pains to develop the nature of this new birth by samples of the Savior's own teaching upon the subject. But John tells us how he said to Nicodemus: "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God;" and, "Except one be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." This expression, "born of water and of the Spirit," has ever been construed by both ancient and modern scholars as a manifest reference to that baptism which the Savior afterwards commanded the apostles when he said: "Go ye therefore, teach all nations baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you," Matt. 28: 19.

This teaching here required is the prerequisite to the hearing and learning that one may come to God by faith in his Son Jesus Christ. Repentance is a necessary outgrowth of faith and prerequisite to baptism. Confession also must necessarily precede baptism as a preparation both of the subject and the administrator, that the act may be to all intents and purposes of the understanding, or heart, of the subject, that he may apprehend the Christ as the source of authority sovereign to whom he willingly submits himself for guidance in all things spiritual; of the administrator that he may be assured of the intelligent faith of the subject so that God may be honored and the individual blessed with the answer of a good conscience toward God. For the Savior has assured us in the parable of the sower, (Matt. 13: 23), that, "He that received seed in good ground is he that heareth the word and understandeth it."

Paul also, in Rom. 6: 3, appeals to their knowledge of the import of baptism; that being baptized into Christ they were baptized into his death, and thus freed from sin, or made dead to sin. And in the 17th verse he manifests the strong assurance of their intelligence in this matter when he says: "God be thanked . . . ye have obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine which was delivered unto you, being made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness."

And so we must conclude, that whatever importance attaches to baptism as a means of separation from sin and consecration to Christ is derived solely from the commandment of the Lord Jesus Christ, and that this fact must be apprehended by the mind in order to give the act validity. For to say, "ye obeyed from the heart," is equivalent to saying, ye obeyed understandingly. And this understanding of Christ's authority precludes the magical efficacy that is too often thought to inhere in water associated with solemn ceremony. For no quantity of water, no number of dippings coupled with ceremonies ever so solemn, or names ever so holy, can cleanse the soul from sin, only as that soul recognizes by this act of submission to Christ's authority, the efficacy of that blood that was shed for the remission of sins, and appropriates the same according to the promise of the Savior, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," and the consequent command of the apostle, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

When the subject has this preparation of heart, believing that Christ died for our sins and rose again for our justification, and having confessed the same before men, he is ready to go down into the water and be buried with Christ by baptism into his death. Having thus conformed to the likeness of Christ's death and resurrection, he has entered the new, or Christian life. He is now a new creature in Christ Jesus. "Behold old things are passed away and all things have become new. He is now justified from past sins, he must walk by faith in Christ. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him that we may be also glorified together."—Rom. 8: 1, 14, 16, 17. THE CHEROKEE MEETING.

There are "several things" connected with this meeting to render a report of the meeting interesting to our readers; so we will give it a more extended mention on this account than we would otherwise.

Cherokee is about one hundred and ten miles from Fort McKavett, the way I had to travel; but a crowd could make the trip less than one hundred miles. Bro. M. M. Cavness, of Pontotoc, made the appointment and went with me to it, and was very helpful throughout the entire meeting. Bro. Cavness and I stopped at a farm house for water when we reached the vicinity of Cherokee, and when he introduced the writer to the family, the gentleman remarked that he would be out to hear me preach, as he had heard so much of me and of my tearing the churches to pieces. He said I had been accused of tearing the Cherokee church up. Whereupon I remarked that I was certainly engaged in a very bad work if these reports were true; and he said, "I really think so." I told him that if I understood myself and the gospel of Christ, I was only contending for that gospel without addition to it, or subtraction from it, and this, I, with all other faithful men, was commanded by the word of God to do. I asked him, if I faithfully did this and no more and it brought contention and division, who was to blame for the trouble? He said under such circumstances I was not. That "time" has "come" among the boasted "reformers of the Nineteenth Century," when many of them "will not endure sound doctrine," and "after their own lusts" these who turn away from "sound doctrine" and despise those who "earnestly contend" for it and will not preach anything but "the word," "heap unto themselves teachers, having itching ears, and turn away their ears from the truth, and are turned unto fables," see 2 Tim. 4: 1-4.

Yes, and when their opposition to the truth and adherence to human speculations estranges them from brethren who are faithful to the doctrine of Christ, they raise a great hue and cry against the faithful, and blame them with the trouble. Our master said: "It must needs be that offences come, but woe be unto that man by whom the offense cometh." And Paul said: "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine, which ye have learned; and avoid them. For they are such as serve not Jesus Christ, but their own appetite; and by kind and complimentary words they deceive the hearts of the unsuspecting." How true!

Those who are making merchandise of the gospel, through human institutions, called missionary societies, by means of which they grind the money from the people, and appoint lords over them, called State, and District, Evangelists, who exercise lordship over a certain diocese for a stipulated sum of filthy lucre, cry vociferously against those who oppose such God-dishonoring and money-making schemes, and they would saddle all of the blame of division on such opposers. So with those who rend congregations by adding to the prescribed form of worship given by Paul, by thrusting in idolatrous instruments to make the "psalms and hymns and spiritual songs" that God intends shall well up from grateful hearts and be sounded out from the throats of His Son's disciples, with the spirit and understanding; these fermenters of discord, and "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," would shift the responsibility of division upon the shoulders of those who refuse to consort with them in adding this calf of idolatry to God's appointments.

And, then, God has instructed us in the gospel of His Son and the examples of His inspired apostles, what to teach as preparatory to baptizing into Christ; but some of our brethren have become wise above the oracles of God on this question, and say that persons may be baptized into Christ who have not had this preparatory teaching, and, upon this human speculation and theory of worldly wisdom they are receiving into the congregations persons who have been baptized in total ignorance of the gospel of Christ, and upon a statement called a confession, which statement flatly contradicts the most positive and plain statements of the word of God, even giving the lie to the commission, the only commission in which Christ gives authority for preaching in his name. And such brethren are trying to attach the blame of the division that they bring about by such a course, upon their brethren who will not join with them in such high-handed and presumptuous rebellion against God's Son. This was the ground upon which we were charged with dividing the Cherokee church.

Well, we failed to find this division when we reached Cherokee. It is true, we learned there had been some sharp controversy over the question there, as it had been a strong-hold of the shakers; but I understand they have about all been baptized intelligently upon the good confession. I heard of one who had not been, and he did not put in an appearance while I was there; but I had the pleasure of baptizing his son into Christ, and doubt not that he would have been baptized had he attended the meeting, which he could not do because of sickness in his family.

Instead of division and contention in the church at Cherokee, I found a kind christian-like feeling prevailing among the brethren. I was much pleased to find in my visiting from house to house during the meeting, absolutely no backbiting and no disposition on the part of any of the brothers or sisters to parade the faults of each other. This state of good feeling was quite noticeable. I have no disposition to flatter the church at Cherokee, and could find the same objection to them that I have found everywhere I go, or hear from—too much conformity to the world—but I am forced to say of them that, I never visited a church where I was treated better, nor where I found more to admire among my brethren. They are well informed and have an abundance of good material to make a strong and influential church. I have never seen a congregation where the average information in the Scriptures was better than theirs. Nearly all of them take the FIRM FOUNDATION. I found one who also takes the Gospel Advocate—Bro. Dr. Williamson—I spent some pleasant hours under his hospitable roof. Bro. George Lane, a young preacher there, takes the Christian Courier, but is not in sympathy with it—the Courier can never get a foot-hold in such a sound congregation as this.

While there I spent a night with each of the following brethren: Bro. Barber, Bro. Markley, Bro. Williamson, Bro. Whitt, Bro. Dan Cavness, sister Em. Cavness, Bro. Jno. Randolph, and Bro. Janney. The last two were old acquaintances in Madison and Walker counties years ago. Bro. John is the son, and Bro. Janney the son-in-law of sister Nancy Randolph who also lives at Cherokee. When I met this dear old sister I felt almost as if I had met my mother, for she knew my mother before I was born, and she has been a member of the church a long time. Many of our readers in Madison and Walker counties will be glad to hear of sister Randolph and her family, and that they are holding fast to the faith once delivered to the saints, and have their faces firmly set against all of the intermeddlings of self-willed and worldly-wise theologians and "State Evangelists." Bro. John Randolph is living with his second wife, was married a few months ago—I do not remember her maiden name.

Broa. J. J. Larrimore, R. P. Cobb, M. M. Cavness, G. R. Lane and Bro.

Shipp, all preachers, attended the meeting and preached and aided otherwise in the good work. I never heard better singing than we had—an organ would have detracted from instead of added to the melody of this sweet singing.

The perceptible result of the meeting was, seven wanderers from the fold returned and renewed their obligations to their Master, and nine were "translated out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son—sixteen in all. One was old sister Rebecca Cavness, 77 years old, and a member of the Baptist church 50 years. She is the mother of Bros. M. M. and Dan Cavness. There was great rejoicing at her baptism from the Christian side of the Cavness family and other brethren, and gnashing of teeth almost on the part of the Baptist side of the family. One daughter, a Baptist, met her at the very water's edge and told her she was going to make an old fool of herself, and reminded her that her husband and their father, had warned them all on his death bed, against the "Campbellites." But the dear old woman put her trust in Christ and extended her hand, saying, "I believe with all my heart that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and I want to be baptized for the remission of sins." When she arose from her watery tomb she exclaimed, "thank God I am in Christ now without a doubt." One lady from the Methodist church, who had been immersed, was among the nine baptized.

Two prominent Baptist preachers put, in their appearance at the meeting, and one of them took me up on something I said and talked like he wanted to debate our differences before the people of Cherokee; but when put to the test he wanted me to get the endorsement of certain shaking churches before he would debate with me. I let him know that I did not cater to such stilted ideas as that, nor sail under such theological red tape. I told him I would not have the endorsement of brethren who were inconsistent as to recognize him as a brother in Christ, while they were preaching a theory of religion that cut him off root and branch. He said he regarded us a faction—this is a convenient dodge that Bush, Adkins and Aten have furnished them. But we proposed to meet him with Bro. "Bill Alex." if he wanted to debate, as Bro. "Bill" preaches the same we do, although we are told he does not practice what he preaches. But he had reasons why he would not discuss with Bro. "Bill." He would not give these reasons, but we suppose they were really the same that kept him from discussing with me—fear. I have extended this report far beyond the bounds I intended, although I have left much unsaid that I desired to say. May peace and harmony and the "work of the Lord abound" at Cherokee and everywhere that the name of Christ is named. A. McG.

FROM BRO. BUTTRILL.

Dear Bro. McGary:

As I have asked the F. F. some questions and received no answer I will ask you one: Please explain John 10: 9.

Yours for the truth,
W. T. BUTTRILL.
Kosse, Texas.

Many questions and communications go to the office that are not published for want of room. So the brethren there have to leave out many; they select such as they think will be most instructive to our readers. I wish we could publish twice as many as we do.

The Scripture referred to says: "I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture."

Remember, the Master is here, as was his custom, teaching by figure. He speaks of his disciples as sheep, then, to carry out the figure and speak correlatively, he calls himself the shepherd and their spiritual food as pasture. And he also makes any one else who leads aright shepherds. But to lead aright, or be true shepherds, they must lead through the "door," see 1st and 2nd verses of the chapter.

In the verse under consideration he puts himself for his teaching, and calls himself the door. "I am the door." His teaching, his truth, his doctrine, his gospel is the door. Whatever he is his word is, and whatever his word is he is. If he is the door his word is the door, and if his word is the door he is the door. Oh, how eminent is the word of Christ! God calls him "the Word": "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God."

In John 14: 6 the Savior says: "I am the way, the truth and the life." His word he calls the Father's word, because he came to speak and do his Father's will. He sent his chosen apostles to speak and do that same will, and endued them with power through the Holy Spirit that guided them, so that what they spoke and wrote was his word and God's word, which makes it the way, the truth, and the life, and the door into the sheep-fold. The apostles, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and God the Father are, in this sense, all one.

I understand the passage to teach that there is no entering the sheep-fold, body, church or kingdom of Christ, except by hearing, understanding, believing and doing "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," just as it was delivered to the world by his chosen and inspired teachers, without the least infringement, change or modification. To allow the slightest modification of this perfect law is, to open a door that will widen with each advance of worldly wisdom, caprice and bigotry, till the line between the kingdom of God and the kingdom of darkness will be utterly obliterated. This is what the devil has been driving at ever since the Son of God delivered to sin-burdened man an asylum of safety from him.

All men who are tolerating and defending systems that are not in exact harmony with this law of the Spirit, are doing just that much to drift the church into this downward way where it will ultimately be drawn into that destructive vortex that will wipe out its apostolic marks and deliver it over to the prince of the power of the air, the god of this world. In the passage referred to, Jesus has direct reference to teachers, or leaders of the people. So, in the first verse, when he says: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheep-fold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber. But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep."

He that enters (or pretends to enter, for none can really enter but by the door) by climbing up some other way, is a "hireling"—no "ifs" or "ands" about it; for "if our gospel be hid it is hid to them that are lost; in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them." When these "blind leaders" reject the open door and climb up some other way they "fall in the ditch," and those who follow them fall into the same ditch. We had better stop making excuses for these "climbers" and lead them through the door. There is no foundation for such excuses in this Bible land. A. McG.

FROM S. J. S. WOOD.

Editor Firm Foundation:

The gospel was first preached A. D. 33. The dark ages began about the 10th century. In which prevailed much religious superstition. It is claimed that Mr. A. Campbell began about 1812 to preach the gospel of 33. Now please tell me what became of the souls who died between the 10th century and 19th century? For I conceive that unless I am a borned or naturalized citizen of Texas I am not a Texan. But if there is no Texas, how then could I make myself a Texan? This applied to the church gives the same result. S. J. S. WOOD.

All who are saved, so far as we may know from God's word, are saved by obeying the gospel of Christ. It is God's power to save, Rom. 1: 16. It is not what men think is the gospel, that saves, but the gospel—that unaltered, unmodified system of truth which Jesus delivered to the saints, and which is recorded on the pages of the New Testament Scriptures so plainly that "he that runs may read." There is not one letter of this gospel dependent upon Alexander Campbell or any other uninspired man. This gospel is just the same it was before Alexander Campbell was born, the same in every part or parcel that it would have been if Alexander Campbell had never been born.

It is not my province to speculate or dogmatize about what became of those who died between the 10th and 19th centuries. If I should do so I dare say Mr. Wood, or some one else would say to me, "Judge not." If God used any other power to save people between these periods, than the power which He now uses, which is the gospel of Christ, I have not been informed of it, and do not want to run on ahead of "the light" and become wise above what is written. And if there is any way for the gospel to save persons except by their hearing it, understanding it, believing it and obeying it, I have not been informed of that way, and prefer not to get ahead of the oracles of God.

Suppose we let the dead rest, Mr Wood, and try to save the living. We can preach the gospel to the living and tell them that the Savior said that those who believe that gospel and are baptized shall be saved; and those that believe it not, shall be damned. This is the best we can do. To go to dreaming over those who died a thousand years ago, or yesterday, is supreme folly. All from A. D. 33 to the present time who have obeyed the gospel of Christ and walked worthy of that calling until death, are saved. If any have been saved by less, or upon a different principle, I am willing; for that is Jehovah's prerogative. If any have been lost during this time it is too late for us to help them. So the doom of all the dead from this back to the 10th century, or even back to Adam, is unalterably fixed, at least they are beyond our influence to help or hinder.

Alexander Campbell did just what all other men ought to do who desire to be saved and to save their fellow men. He divested himself of the religion of the cradle, "mammy and daddy religion," and humbled himself at the foot of the cross and sought "that true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world"—if every man will open his eyes to receive it. As Alexander Campbell saw light he walked in it without regard to what it would lead him away from. Hence he was led away from Babylon toward Jerusalem, away from the confusion of tongues to the clear, saving tones of the gospel of Christ. I do not think he got clear out of the fog of Babylon, but he fell asleep with his face toward Jerusalem. He was a great and good man, but did no more than his duty. He was no gospel century post.

The gospel is the same unchangeable system of truth on both sides of Alexander Campbell's day; whether behind him or this side of him, the gospel that the apostles preached, and which is recorded in the New Testament, and bound in heaven and earth, is the power of God unto the salvation of every one who believes it. It cannot save one who does not believe it and obey it; neither could it before the days of Alexander Campbell. All who are saved without believing and obey-ing the gospel, in this or any other age, are saved independent of the gospel, by means we know not of. But now we have the gospel sealed with the precious blood of Christ, which has passed through the dark ages, unscathed, standing before us simply, plainly and beseechingly in the luminous blaze of the Nineteenth Century. Shall we accept it and be saved by it? Or shall we reject it till we can philosophize with our fleshly minds and determine its bearing upon the dead who have not strictly obeyed it. If we do the latter our damnation is certain. A. McG.

FROM SISTER WILLIAMS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I send you two dollars for which you will please send the F. F. to the following names till Jan. 1, '89:

G. W. Williams, Bee Creek.
Mollie McConnell, Strout.
Grippie Garrison, Pearl.
Dema Johnson, Nebo.
Nathaniel Grimes, Nebo.

I also enclose fifty cents; twenty cents to be applied towards getting that tent, and for the thirty cents remaining please send me two copies of the "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," and one copy of "Zeke and the Methodists."

I subscribed for your paper soon after that "rooting" and "barking" affair, and like it better all the time. I think that every stone hurled at you gains for you a number of friends. It was through some of this "free advertising" that I learned of the existence of the F. F.

Hope to be able to send you some more names soon. I forgot to tell you that all of the above subscribers live in Pike county, Ill.

Yours sister,

SARAH WILLIAMS.

FROM BRO. WILLIAMSON.

Bro. McGary:

I want some of my old friends and brethren in Tennessee to see the FIRM FOUNDATION, for I think they will subscribe for it. So I ask you to send a sample copy to each of the following names:

Robert Montgomery, sr., Granville, Tenn.
William Montgomery, Esigma, Smith county, Tenn.
Polk Whitefield, Gabatha, Jackson county, Tenn.
M. A. Lee, Gabatha, Jackson county, Tenn.

Yours fraternally,

Were man to live longer on the earth, the spiritual would die out of him. The spark of ethereal fire would be choked by the material, the sensual. There is a celestial something within us that requires, after a certain time, the atmosphere of heaven to preserve it from decay and ruin.—Hawthorne.

MISSIONARIES, THEIR FIELDS OF LABOR.

Every true preacher of the gospel is evidently a member of the missionary family: his mission is to preach the gospel, without addition or subtraction, and his field of labor undoubtedly is where he finds poor fallen man without hope and without God in the world.

The apostles were commanded to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. The command was left on record, and no doubt includes preachers of the present time.

The prevalent idea that missionary societies must be formed in order that the gospel may be sent to heathen lands, regardless of how much our home preachers and home folks are neglected, is, to my mind, a very wrong one. The heathen, no doubt, should have the gospel, but those who undertake to send out missionaries should first consider well what they have to spare both of preachers and money, before they start out in their enterprise. After all our homes are supplied with Bibles, every neighborhood with a church and gospel preacher, and every preacher and his family well cared for, then will be the time to send missionaries abroad.

The American people boast of civil and religious liberties, but, as a nation, shame rests upon us for the manner in which we make use of said liberties.

Wherever you go, the majority consists of non-professors, either those who have never made the good confession, or have become backsliders. With such a vast majority of our own countrymen living in sin, apparently unconcerned about their salvation it requires no argument to prove the vastness of missionary fields at home, also the need of laborers to work in them. "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few."

Alas sinners frequently start in the right direction, but for want of a sufficient amount of encouragement from the pulpit, they soon fall into the beggarly elements of the world, which encouragement could easily be supplied if the proper amount of interest were manifested and sufficient means employed at home before sending any abroad. While one soul is as precious in the sight of God as another, just as much will be gained by winning souls to Christ at home as abroad, and the more true Christians any country can boast of, the more fully it will be prepared to assist those in want of the gospel.

Many of the sectarians boast of having been foremost in sending the gospel to heathen lands, while hundreds of their home members have not a sufficient knowledge of the Scriptures to say whether sprinkling or immersion is scriptural baptism. This lack of knowledge, too, comes from a want of proper and sufficient teaching from home preachers, admonishing all to search the Scriptures. Paul left a record second to none as a preacher, yet missionary societies were unknown in his day. A few more like Paul and less missionary societies of the modern stamp, and much better would be the results both at home and abroad.

FROM BRO. LATIMER.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

There has already been enough said on the shaking question by the able scribes of F. F. to satisfy the mind of any one who has read the arguments of a few numbers; but as this is a progressive age, and the F. F. is still gaining ground, the subject must be pushed into every nook and corner of the universe. There are some preachers yet unheard from whom, for my own satisfaction, I would like to hear express themselves. For instance, Eld. J. M. Biard, or I should have said, Hon. J. M. Biard, for I understand he has forsaken the gospel for the more pleasant calling of law making. He used to preach the gospel straight.

You brethren of the F. F. will not think it strange when I tell you that I always feel a great sympathy for the Messenger. The cause is a natural one. We used to read the Messenger, and go to school to that venerable old man, Chas. Carlton, (or uncle Charlie, as we used to call him). We would like to know very much how he stands on the shaking question.

While this question seems to be absorbing the time and talent of the best scribes, there is one subject, at least, in our section, that needs the attention of some, and that is, the proper mode of Church government. My observation leads me to the conclusion, that the church is drifting into the one man system. Elders don't like to do their duty because the preacher is there. If the elder would prepare a lesson for each Lord's day, and when the church comes together all with books have one common lesson, this would be far more instructive than listening to a prepared sermon from the preacher. Then after he has delivered his hour's declamation he waits on the church and then dismisses the congregation and all go home.

For a proper method of organizing congregations let us go to Paul's letter to Timothy and Titus. Also for the proper persons for church officers. For it is impossible to mold them out of any kind of material.

Well, I must not forget our preacher. He is about fifty years old, six feet tall, and has been an Irishman. He is a school teacher, has considerable oratory, backed by considerable zeal, which is most generally according to knowledge. He is not very progressive, but he uses the diagram in dividing the word of truth. Guess Paul used one when he was before Agrippa, or at Mar's-hill, or probably on Pentecost, or at the house of Cornelius, or if they didn't, some one did that was good authority.

Yours in the one hope,

HENRY LATIMER.

FROM BRO. MCGAVOCK.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

I am anxious to stir up the minds of the brethren a little. The battle is not ended. Peace is not declared. But the battle waxes hotter. If there was ever a time when every true disciple should stand up, and defend the truth that makes free, it is now.

We once numbered the disciples as they were enrolled upon the church books, but in this we make a great mistake. A disciple is a learner, but how few whose names are on church books are learners? I have observed more sectarianism among our book members than I thought was among them. If a man now cries aloud, "to the law and to the testimony." "where the Bible speaks we speak, where the Bible is silent we will not speak," instead of all the members encouraging him, the cry of "extremist" is raised, and he is at once branded an enemy to the best interests of some, whose whole time is taken up in working plans by which to discourage the faithful man of God. There are but few congregations that have not a large number of just such members. They will not subscribe to Paul's declaration that, "All Scripture given by inspiration of God, is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." Neither will they endorse such a preacher. "Ye shall know them by their fruits."

I have come to the conclusion that it is our duty to encourage such, and only such as preach and practice as God directs. Those who oppose us are careful to withhold from us their aid, while at the same time they work their plans so as to uphold those who are not contending for "the faith." I know some good brethren and sisters who are giving their aid to their enemies. Men who will do anything that a sectarian will do to destroy "the faith once delivered to the saints." They appear among you, brethren, shake your hand and appear to be very firm in the faith. But tell them that there are some persons to be buried with Christ in baptism "for the remission of sins," who had been formerly buried in water, to get into some false church, and not for the remission of sins, and ask these false preachers and members if they are going to the baptizing, they will tell you they do not wish to witness such mockery, or show their contempt by their absence. Shall we give the Lord's means to support such men?

I am willing to bear with a man who is honestly striving to learn the Master's will, but when men are so prejudiced that they cannot read a religious paper that proposes to speak when, where and as the Bible speaks, they are too prejudiced to get to heaven. It is a fact, that until the FIRM FOUNDATION began to be published, most any of our members were willing to read and post up on those questions that cause confusion, but now many are like their sectarian neighbors, "don't want any controversy."

These things considered, let us mark them that cause division, and have no fellowship with them, for they "serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own bellies, whose end is destruction." Let us hear from you, Bro. Mc., on these things.

Yours for the whole truth,

O. H. MCGAVOCK.

BAPTISM THE FIRST RESURRECTION.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Bible teaching is one thing and human theory another. The old worn out theories of sectism are like the fading autumn leaves, they come and go. Time is the best historian in the world, by it is recorded victories and defeats. So the world rolls along. Rev. 20, Satan is bound one thousand years: the angel sets a seal on him for one thousand years, then casts him into the bottomless pit and shuts him up under a seal. In 4th verse thrones appear. Then the souls of them who were beheaded for the witness of Jesus and for the word of God. These souls lived and reigned with Christ one thousand years. In verses 5th and 6th brings the first resurrection to our attention. Shall we take the position in verse 6, that this is baptism? I will copy the 6th verse: "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first (Christ's) resurrection: on such (persons) the second death has no power, but they (persons who have a part in the first resurrection), shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him (Christ) a thousand years."

Please read the following verses: Eph. 2: 1, 2, 6, 20; Col. 3: 1, 3; Rom. 6: 2, 4, 5, 6, 22; Acts 2: 38; Luke 24: 46, 47; Matt. 28: 19, 20; Mark 16: 16.

We can never have part in the first resurrection till we are put on Christ in baptism. We can never be raised till we are buried. We are not buried till dead, (dead to sin); we must first die to sin, but we are not separated from our sin till baptized into Christ; till we have put on the first resurrection. None can have part in the first resurrection till they have been buried with Christ in baptism. In order to be raised they must enter the dominion of the dead first.

If this position can be sustained on Bible premises, then away goes the pedos with their grandmother and daughters, and all the family relations from the Pope down. Also down goes the advent theory of their first body resurrection.

When is a man freed from sin? Before or after burial with Christ and raised up with him? This 6th verse cannot mean a political and religious resurrection, for it is declared to be blessed and holy and free from the bondage of sin. It cannot apply to the literal dead, for verses 12 to 15 sees all the dead small and great stand before God. A moral and spiritual elevation may be included in this state of the resurrection. I would like for some able Bible teacher to give this subject a thorough research. Sect baptism must be set at naught by all true Bible disciples. The New Testament must be our guide. 1 John 5: 8, 20; Col. 1: 13; Gal. 3: 27. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Col. 2: 12, "Buried with him in baptism wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation (power) of God who hath raised him from the dead."

Is not a man raised from the death of sin by baptism? Is a Methodist raised up out of the old Adamic grave to walk in a new life, a new relation, or is he separated from his old sins by being sprinkled with water? He must be buried with Christ in baptism for the remission of sins, then he can walk in a new life, be resurrected, the first resurrection under which he passes.

No doubt thousands will raise their sectarian voices against this view of Rev. 20: 6. I would like to see Pedolism attack this view. Send on the F. F. Let the apostolic war go on—it has come. Health to the editors of the F. F.

J. A. CONNER.

FROM BRO. G. L. J.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Believing that a few thoughts from these parts might be profitable to some of the readers of the F. F., I will, in my weak or humble manner, pen a few lines for their consideration.

For a starting point, I will take Gal. 6: 10, "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially them who are of the household of faith." Now, brethren and friends, my understanding about the how to do good is, if a man is hungry, feed him, if naked, clothe him. But says one, and a brother, too, "how can I feed or clothe him? I haven't got anything to give. I must save enough to see whether I am going to make plenty to do me this year or not, before I can help any one;" and he, too, having fifty or seventy-five bushels of corn in his crib, or its equivalent.

Another will say, "I must have plenty for my horses to eat, if I have to go a hundred miles after it." If that's the case, my brother, you ought to go two hundred miles for bread for those of the household of faith, if you expect an inheritance undefiled and that fades not away. And Bro. D. will say: "How did Bro. B. get in such a destitute condition? May be he has not worked, or he did not manage right or he would have had something."

Yes, brethren, if we will hunt up excuses, we can find plenty of them, especially if we don't try to attend to the ordinances of the Lord's house; for Satan tried to deceive the only perfect person that ever was on earth; and he, (Satan), certainly will tempt us poor imperfect mortals of this earth.

Now as to our duty or obligations that we owe to each other, kind reader, we have the way-bill that should guide us through life. This waybill tells us just how we should do unto our neighbors and to all men. Brethren and sisters, if we would only be satisfied to be conducted by this way-bill through life, it would finally conduct us into heaven itself, to become heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ.

May this be the lot of all the readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

REPORT FROM BRO. JACKSON.

On the 3rd of July I left Austin for Hillsboro, Hill county; arriving there I found Bro. C. M. Wilmett in a meeting with the brethren. Some thought the meeting a failure. I do not think so. There was one added to the Lord, and as our good old Bro. Arnot says, "one soul is of more value than all the world." But the anticipations of the sanguine brethren were not realized. The preaching was good, sound gospel teaching. But the attendance was not large. Business, politics, barbecues, etc., so filled the hearts of the people that no room was found for the gospel.

Leaving Hillsboro on the 7th of July, I went to Cobb Creek, six miles south of that city, and began a meeting with my "home congregation." The meeting continued two weeks with five additions, three baptisms and two reclaimed. The people were at least one month behind in their farm work, and besides this a great deal of sickness throughout the country. Bro. N. B. Sikes, of Limestone county, a true gospel preacher, was with me a part of the time and did some excellent preaching. Bro. J. E. Carnes was there most of the time, but wouldn't preach. Bro. Carnes labors in Hill county, and I am glad to learn, is doing much good.

After closing this meeting I took a hurried trip to Breckenridge, in Stephens county; arriving there I found Bro. R. E. McKnight in a good meeting. Heard him preach three discourses, and had some talk with him. As to the manner and matter of Bro. McKnight's preaching it is sufficient to say that he preaches the gospel of Christ earnestly and faithfully. In practice, however, the good brother goes somewhat beyond the record in receiving persons from the denominations. On Lord's day night a Baptist lady was received into the fellowship of the congregation. She said she was satisfied with her baptism, then our brother took her confession. Making some very appropriate remarks as to the necessity of making the confession with the mouth in order to salvation. When I asked for his authority for such practice, he very candidly admitted that he had none, but that brethren and some of our preachers did it. I hope the brother will quit such an unscriptural procedure. If he will continue to receive these dissatisfied-satisfied Baptists, do not pervert gospel order any further by taking the confession after baptism.

I preached twice for the brethren there and then returned to Aquilla, Hill county.

While at Breckenridge I met a good many friends, and obtained several subscribers for the F. F. I hope to visit these brethren again in the near future.

At Aquilla I found everything in readiness for a meeting. But a great deal of sickness in the country. I preached there one week, had seven additions, and induced the brethren to go to work every Lord's day. We expect great things in that country, because the little band there are faithful and earnest in contending for the faith once delivered to the saints.

From Aquilla I came home, arriving in Austin on Tuesday, Aug. 14th, and the same day went out to Onion Creek, twelve miles south of Austin, to our "campmeeting." Bro. McCarty had commenced the meeting on time and had baptized three up to that date. The attendance was good throughout the meeting, and the attention was splendid. We closed the following Friday night—one more baptized. The Baptists had changed their meeting and put it on the second Sunday of August, and as the grounds, etc., were owned by Baptists we necessarily had to close.

This was a good meeting and we will yet reap a good harvest from the good seed sown here. During this round of meetings I obtained some new subscribers and many renewals to the F. F. I would be glad to write about many things I saw and heard "among the churches" but my health is so poor that writing is a task, and I wish to rest and recuperate for another meeting.

TRUSTING IN CHRIST.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I undertake, this morning, to write another article for the readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION. The truth needs to be constantly kept before the people. After all is done that can be, it seems there are only a few who will accept the truth. It truly seems as if men love darkness rather than light, from the fact that their deeds are evil.

Paul in his letter to the Ephesians, 1st chapter and 13th verse, says: "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation." This sentence, if well considered, gives us wonderful light. Light which, it appears to me, all ought to see. Those Ephesians had done something. They had trusted in Christ. It was an act done by them. Not for them by some one else. They had done it after something else had been done by them. They trusted after they heard something without which they could not have trusted. That something was the gospel of their salvation. That gospel is first called the word of truth. If then, the gospel is the word of truth, it is not a falsehood.

Now, as has been said, perhaps a thousand times, the gospel is the good news of salvation in Christ. Christ said to his disciples, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he who believes and is baptized shall be saved." Is it not true, that he meant, "He who will trust in me shall be saved by me." Did he intend to save any but those who would trust in him? Who will answer in the affirmative? I presume no one will be rash enough to so affirm.

There are doubtless hundreds and thousands of people who believe that Jesus lived, died and was raised from the dead, who do not, and will not trust in him for salvation. The very reason that men and women are not, and will not be saved or pardoned now, is because they will not trust in Christ. Many people love the world and things of the world better than they love him. Preach to the giddy and gay and although they may hear your voice and your pleading, yet they give no heed to it. They are not ready to be saved yet. They worship themselves and one another, and many other things which they will not give up to worship God. They know this, and they know that God knows their hearts, and while in this state of mind they cannot trust in Christ. Their own wills are in the way. They will not give up the world and they know that Christ will not receive them in that state, therefore they cannot trust. This leads us to define the word, trust. The dictionary defines it to be, confidence, belief, faith, credit, to rely on.

I will give a familiar illustration. My neighbor comes to me to buy a piece of property and I sell it to him on credit or trust. He gives me a promise to pay, either oral or written. I trust him. Why? Because I have confidence in him. I have faith in his promise. But suppose he gives me no promise, then I could not be said to trust him. Where there is trust, there must be something on which to base our credit. No one ever trusted in a promise which he never heard. Trust implies something expected; and expectation implies something promised: and hence, no one can trust Christ for anything which Christ never promised. And since Christ has promised us salvation in the gospel, we trust him for that salvation.

Have we any promise of salvation except in the gospel? Certainly we have not. Is not that salvation predicated on certain conditions? It certainly is. Because, if there are no conditions, then one is as liable to be saved as another, and we could not then be judged according to our works, which is contrary to the Scriptures. Every one who reads the Scriptures knows that righteousness, or good works are enjoined as conditions of acceptance with God. Now if one must trust in Christ for salvation, and must trust according to the promises of Christ, then it follows as sure as mathematical demonstration that those who claim to have trusted in Christ without trusting his promises, and on his own conditions, have never trusted in him at all.

Then did Christ ever promise to forgive any one's sins in answer to prayer at a mourner-bench, anxious seat or altar of prayer? Did he ever promise to give any one religion in answer to prayer? If he did not, then no one ever trusted in him at any such time and place. When persons go to a bench or any where else, and pray for religion, they simply go trusting in the commandments of men, and not in Christ at all; for Christ never promised to forgive them in any such way. It is impossible they could trust in Christ while acting thus, unless he had promised them pardon on such condition. In their case there is nothing but the promise of men: and either very ignorant or very wicked men at that.

It is a truth that no man can trust Christ for anything not promised. We might desire of him things which he has not promised. We might even ask him for things he has not promised, but to trust for more we cannot. Many persons have been deceived, no doubt, thinking they trusted in Christ while only trusting the false representations of men concerning Christ. Our confidence must be in his promises, and not in the promises of men. How foolish and unreasonable it is for men who claim to have sense and learning: and to follow the Scriptures, to receive such persons if, perchance, they have been dipped in water. Persons who, under the circumstances, never could have trusted in Christ not believing his promises.

What would be the difference between dipping one infidel in the water and another? The one who has believed only the promises of men, is as much an infidel as the one who has believed neither the promises of the Lord nor of men. I would accept one as soon as the other. Baptizing an infidel in the Jordan would do him no good.

I am glad to see that still the brethren are learning the truth and flocking to the FIRM FOUNDATION. We will get all the honest as fast as they see the F. F. and learn the truth.

My kindest regards to all.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:
As suggested by Bro. McGary, that each subscriber send in one new name, here is mine: R. A. Long, Chatfield, Texas. In order to make the F. F. a weekly as soon as circumstances will admit.

Bro. McGary I have often wished since I met you at the Ennis debate, that I could have another opportunity of meeting you again, and of giving you the hand of a brother who can, in all good conscience with the fear of God before me, and his word to support me, endorse all that I have seen from your pen; and will say to you all of the F. F., that I shall lose no opportunity of doing good for the cause we love by extending its circulation.

Go on, my brother, in the good work; "hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may." Preach the word; be instant in season and out of season. Reprove, rebuke, exhort with long suffering and doctrine, be true to God's word, let come what will. Then when your life's work is about to end, you can with old Paul exclaim: I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Then a crown will be yours.

Our congregation meets every Lord's day to attend the worship and to study God's word. Thus the church is at work edifying itself in love, without any of the modern improvements of man. Wishing you success, I will close.

Yours in Christ,
J. B. McQUEEN.
Chatfield, Texas.

AN OPEN LETTER TO BRO. A. J. McCARTY.

Yours of the 15th inst. was accidentally received through the FIRM FOUNDATION. The brother whom you called up from his bed at midnight, as you were en route to Austin, to ascertain if he had any news from me, brought me the paper, and in that way I learned that you had given me a very kind (?) notice of the notoriety I had among the readers of that paper by calling me "the Samson Riddle preacher."

I am glad to note that you are for "the Lord's plan," if it stamps you to death; and therefore we shall expect in the future that you will observe what our Savior says, (which is certainly included in "the Lord's plan"), in Matt. 18:6, in writing or speaking of your brother.

I have now another sermon, subject: "The Short Bed and Narrow Covering," which will furnish you, and others so desiring, another name for me, and you can now call me, according to the Lord's plan (?) the short bed and narrow covering preacher, until you tire writing about me as such, and, perhaps, by that time I can have another sermon ready, and thus furnish you with subjects about which to write in advocating the Lord's plan (?) for which you are willing to be stoned to death!

B. B. SANDERS.

REPORT OF MEETINGS.

Our meeting at Evant, closed with eleven additions by baptism. Our meeting was greatly damaged by Bro. Grubbs being thirteen days late in coming. This is one of Bro. G's weak points, though he makes it up in good preaching, and he is sound in the faith, though the brethren are tormenting him at Evant this week in a debate with Elder Cayce, Primitive Baptist. Have not learned the result, but am certain it was fore-ordained that Bro. G. should come out all right in the debate.

I left Evant for Liberty Hill, where I commenced Bro. Grubb's meeting: he finally came on and took charge of the meeting, set the congregation to work, and had four added by baptism.

I went from Liberty Hill to Florence to help Bro. Lincoln in a meeting. Closed there to-day: 16 added to the congregation, 18 of them by baptism. Bro. Lincoln is an able preacher, but acts inconsistent in some things. One was, there was a Baptist who came forward during the meeting whom Bro. Lincoln recognized as being a Christian, said he would take him on his baptism, yet he baptized him. The Bible gives us no more authority to baptize a Christian than it does a baby, and to be consistent it looks like Bro. Lincoln has as much authority to baptize children as those whom he recognizes as being Christians. I hope our brethren will learn to be consistent.

J. D. TANT.

QUERY.

Brethren, I want you to tell me through the F. F. what Fellowship is in a Bible sense; if it was practiced in the days of the apostles like it is now: for instance, one has been baptized, they seat him and sing a song, all of the sisters and brethren pass around and give him what they call the right hand of fellowship, the sisters first.

Now in that instance the sisters set the example for the Elders, not the Elders for the congregation. Please answer. G. W. STROUD.

This question has been answered in our columns before. There is no example in the Bible for the practice as above alluded to. See F. F. of March 15th, and May 1st, '88.

BRIEFS.

In ordering the paper or tracts write your name plainly, and give postoffice, county and state.

Now is the time to send in your clubs. Go to work, brethren, and send us large lists of subscribers.

The Lord willing, I will begin a meeting with the brethren in Blanco City, on Saturday before the first Lord's day in September.

Bro. E. Hansbrough is in Virginia now, where he will spend a few weeks, then go to Kentucky. We expect him home by the middle of October.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

Bro. George Savage, writing from Post, Montague county, says: "I have just closed a meeting here with seven confessions and baptisms. Set the congregation in order with eighteen members."

Correspondents please have patience. Having been absent from the office for six weeks, coupled with continued feeble health, has caused me to neglect some. I will endeavor to answer all in a short time.

A Baptist preacher in Hill county, said that Paul spoke by the Spirit, and the reason why he did so was that the Pope of Rome had the Bible locked up so that the people could not get it. References given if required.

Bro. W. H. Harper, of Hillsboro, Hill county, writes that he has just returned from a visit to Brown county. While there he preached a few times and baptized one. I am glad that Bro. H. has commenced the good work. Persevere, my young brother, and you will succeed.

One postmaster sent us a notice that a certain subscriber in this state refused to take the F. F. out of the postoffice, and gave as his reason, he is a Baptist preacher and doesn't need it in his business. No man likes to dig his own grave. That preacher, like many other Baptists, prefers darkness to light.

Bro. J. F. Grubbs has been preaching at Liberty Hill, Williamson county. The attendance was good, much interest was manifested. Eleven additions reported. Bro. G. left Liberty Hill for Evant, Coryell county, to debate with Eld. Cayce, a primitive Baptist. By-the-by Bro. G., what has become of the "Wheel"? Have you side-tracked it till the hot weather is over?

Bro. J. B. Lee, of Madisonville writes: "Bro. T. C. Goldman began a meeting at Larrison Prairie, in this county, on the 26th day of July and continued until last night (Aug. 6th,) preaching every night to large and attentive audiences, resulting in seventeen immersions, four of whom were from the Baptist, and eight reclaimed, leaving the church in good working condition. Bro. Goldman is a workman after the ancient order. He will begin a meeting at Liberty, three miles east of this place, on Saturday evening next (the 11th) to continue the following week. We expect another good meeting. Bro. Bolling will be with him a portion of the time. May God bless the efforts of our young brother in building up the cause of our Master in this county." J. W. J.

FROM A PRESBYTERIAN.

Editor Firm Foundation:

As you say you hope to hear from me again, I will write a few lines, not for argument, but to explain a few points in my other article and to ask you some questions.

You say that I represented several ways of getting to heaven, and illustrated it by men travelling by different roads to the same town. I did not mean ways in that illustration, I only meant the different churches and not ways, for there is but one way to heaven, and that is the way our Savior travelled from Gallilee to Calvary; and that was an over-land way, for there is no water ways to heaven, and we don't read of any but eight souls ever being saved by water and they were in the ark on the water, and not in or under water.

If any of that vast flood of water, that fell or was poured out from the heavens and immersed, (drowned) all the rest of the human race touched these eight souls, it fell or was poured on them, or in some way applied, for they were afraid to venture into the water after the ark landed, and the dove returned with the proof that the waters were abating, and that dry land was discovered, and then they waited a while longer, for fear they would be immersed and go like the rest of the world. So you see here were eight souls saved by being on water and sprinkled from above, while all the rest were drowned by immersion or being in water.

You want to know my authority for the Cumberland Presbyterian church. I will say that the name C. P. church is not in the New Testament, neither is the name Campbellite church in it. But you say you are Christians and not Campbellites. So the C. P. say they are christians, and not infidels or sectarians, as some of your church members call them; and as we believe in God, we also believe in Christ, hence the name christian.

And as our church rules and government are conducted or presided over by a board of elders, it is called a presbytery, hence the name Presbyterian. And as we are a branch of the old schools and were first organized into a church on the Cumberland river, we get the name of Cumberland Presbyterians. Just like the origin of your church, which was split off from the Baptist a little over sixty years ago by A. Campbell, hence the name Campbellite; and while we are not ashamed to own the origination of our name as a church, you have denied your father, and seem to want to rule and lord your practice over all. Please do not get offended at what I say, for I do not mean to offend.

As my article is getting rather lengthy, I will have to begin to wind up.

You say that I charge you falsely by saying that you deny the power of Jesus to save and place the saving power in the water. I never heard one of your brethren say all that, but you teach that, unless a person is immersed in water they cannot be saved. That is why I said before that you practically denied the power of Jesus to save, and placed the saving all in the water. Now, I will ask you a question after I tell you what I believe. We believe a man must hear the word, believe it, repent, confess Christ and be baptized. But how? By the Holy Spirit symbolized by water.

Here is the question: If I come to you and tell you I want to join your church, I have believed, repented, confessed Christ, and been baptized, believing at the same time that my baptism was for the remission of sins, or the last act to fulfill all righteousness, and I am satisfied that my sins have been remitted from the passive feeling brought about by the comforting influence of the Holy Ghost; but my baptism was by pouring or sprinkling, and I have all faith that if I will work out my christian duties that I will be saved; but I want to join your church that I may wear the name of Christian instead of Presbyterian; would you take such a one in on those statements without baptizing him again? Let me know, and I will tell you my reasons in another article, for this is getting too long already, and I am not half done yet.

Now if you see proper to publish this, please excuse mistakes, etc., and believe me that I owe you no ill will, but feel called upon to defend myself, in part at any rate, from the oft repeated attacks of your paper; although I will say that I like to read it and think it very instructive, and care nothing for being called a sectarian, for it is not the name that makes the Christian, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

JACOB KARNH,

Rice, Texas.

Owing to my absence from the office for several weeks, the publication of the above letter and my reply thereto has been delayed. I hope that the matters discussed therein may even at this late date prove interesting and instructive.

Mr. K. admits "that there is but one way" leading to heaven, and that he didn't intend to say that heaven was reached by different roads but through different churches. If this be true, then, either the one way leads through all the "different churches," or all these churches are travelling in the "one way." Either supposition destroys the illustration. But he says, "the way to heaven is the way our Savior travelled from Gallilee to Calvary, and that was an over-land way, for there are no water ways to heaven" etc. You should have read your New Testament more closely before penning those lines.

Note this, that Jesus grew up in obscurity, and before entering upon the work of His Father, he "came from Gallilee to Jordan unto John to be baptized," Matt. 3: 13. Here then is water on your "over-land" way, and it is the first public act made by Jesus. Then there is water on the way to heaven. AFTER Jesus was baptized, God acknowledged Him publicly as His Son, Matt. 3: 16, 17.

So now all who by faith in Jesus obey from the heart the command to be baptized for the remission of sins are acknowledged as sons.—See Gal. 3: 27-29. There is another lesson connected with this baptism that men should heed. Jesus said, "thus, (by obedience), it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." Baptism is here declared to be a part of that righteousness that men should obey. This agrees with what is said in Luke 7: 30, that the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, not being baptized of John.

This baptism was valid during the preparatory days, but when Jesus had risen from the dead, He by virtue of the power vested in Him instituted another baptism. This you find in the commission given by Matt. 28: 19, 20, Mark 16: 15, 16, and carried out by his apostles. This baptism is by authority of Jesus into the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and for the remissions of sins.

Now if John's baptism was a part of the "counsel of God," or "righteousness" what shall we say of that baptism spoken to us in person by the Son of God and confirmed by His apostles? Paul tells us that the Jews had a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge, for they had not submitted to (obeyed) the righteousness of God, Rom. 10: 1, 3. What righteousness, Paul? The righteousness which is or faith, (Rom. 10: 6), and which is revealed in the gospel of Christ, Rom. 1: 16, 17. Faith in Christ leads to obedience, and this obedience of the gospel is "submitting to the righteousness of God."

Your reference to the salvation of Noah and his family is an unhappy one for your dry land route. Peter says that "eight souls were saved by water." The ark also saved them, and Paul says faith saved them, Heb. 11: 7. God gave the plan or pattern and commanded Noah to do the work; Noah believed God and did as He commanded. When told to go into the ark with his family he obeyed, and when the waters deluged the earth and drowned the wicked, the ark was lifted up upon the bosom of the waters and safely borne from that old wicked world into a new world. So Peter says: "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh), but the answer of a good conscience toward God, by the resurrection of Jesus."

Can a man have a good conscience that denies the necessity of one of Jesus' commands? Can he have a good conscience until he obeys the command? When he obeys in baptism he is translated from the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son.—Col 1: 13. Having shown conclusively, I think, that there is water on the way that Jesus travelled and by which we must travel, I note another thing: You and many others charge that we deny the power of Jesus to save by teaching baptism for the remission of sins. This we deny. Jesus has all power on earth for salvation—remission of sins, Acts 4: 10, 12. This power is exercised in the gospel of Christ, Rom. 1: 16, 17. This gospel teaches that to one who believes with all his heart that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God, and has repented of his sins, and with the mouth confessed Jesus to be Lord, baptism is for (in order to) the remission of sins.

Now, sir, the difference between you and I is this: I believe just what Jesus says about baptism: that it is for the remission of sins. You try to philosophize and reason about it, and end by rejecting it, because you can't see any connection between the act commanded, and the end to be obtained. When the fiery serpents were sent among the Israelites and Moses was commanded to rear up a brazen serpent among them, and God said that whosoever was bitten and looked upon it shall live, suppose some theological doctor had come along and reasoned about the matter thus: "Why, sir, that is absurd to think that looking at a brass snake can cure you of the poison in your veins. There is no connection whatever between the two." The poor bitten Israelite would have found no consolation in such reasoning. No, but he would have said, yes, sir, there is a connection between the two, and that is faith. "I believe and look and am healed."

So now theological D. D.'s stand around and reason and rant about baptism being a non-essential, and that there is no connection between an act of ours and salvation, and I answer that there is a connecting link, and that link is faith. "I believe and obey and am forgiven." We trust in Jesus and obey Him, and He saves us—we have His word for it. We believe that and don't ask for any other testimony, as His word is the highest and best testimony in the universe.

For fear of making my reply too long, I now notice briefly what you have to say about names and churches.

There is but one body or church of Christ, Eph. 4: 4. Evidently than the many, very many bodies in the world cannot all be right. I am free to admit that if any one body, out of all christendom, can establish its claim to be the one body spoken of in the New Testament, it will at the same time prove all others to be but human institutions, no matter what their pretensions or professions may be. But how is this claim to be established? Who is to be the judge? Shall we begin and trace back from now and try to link on a succession of churches back to the apostles? No, apostolic theory has been disproved a thousand times. Then how proceed?

We have the constitution of the church—the word of God—the seed of the kingdom. We turn to its sacred pages and believing firmly the record that God has given to us therein of His Son, we build according to the divine pattern given therein. When built by our faith and obedience upon the one foundation, we take the word as our only guide book. There we learn that wearing human names is carnality, hence we wear no human name; and though we honor our brethren for the great work done in the Master's cause, we cannot wear their names.

In answer to your question as to receiving a sprinkled person who was satisfied with his baptism, etc. I answer emphatically no. I would take such an one and try to teach him the way of the Lord more perfectly. I never receive persons into the fellowship of the church upon a profession of satisfaction in what they have done, but upon a confession of their faith in Jesus and their obedience to his commands. If you are satisfied it must be because you think you have fully discharged every obligation due by you to God. If so, you should remain where you are, and so I advise all satisfied people. Stay in that church or body by obedience to whose teaching you obtained that satisfied feeling. But I also advise them to compare that teaching with the word of God. Perhaps their satisfaction may arise from delusive or deceptive teaching, hence the necessity of trying the teaching. Thus I bid you do. If you believe in Jesus, why not take his word as your guide. Lay aside all traditions, and commandments of men, and obey the Lord, and then in hope of eternal life you can say with David: "As for me I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."

J. W. JACKSON.

RELATION OF A CHRISTIAN TO CIVIL GOVERNMENT.—No. 2

My brother's reference to the fact that the Savior promised his disciples that he would send the comforter, and his reference to the declaration of the Savior, "The words that I speak unto you, they are Spirit and they are life," are too foreign from the theme we are considering to demand notice. I pass them.

He next refers to the marriage relation, and admonishes, (by his teachings) Christians not to be unequally yoked together; but as the Christian could exercise the elective franchise just as readily yoked as unyoked, I fail to discover the bearing it has upon the subject of voting or not voting.

My brother quotes—Paul, Rom. 2: 12, "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is the good and perfect will of God." Then my brother exclaims: "Again I ask my political brethren, are you being transformed, and renewing your minds, and proving by your course what the acceptable and perfect will of God is? If you answer, yes, then what about the equally zealous, and equally honest political brethren who are opposed and working contrary to your politics?" This is, in the opinion of my brother, a "stunner." For he exultingly exclaims, that we must meet it or surrender.

Now, Bro. Durst, do you mean to be understood as holding, that two Christian gentlemen cannot differ upon the subject of politics, or upon any other subject, and not be able still to retain their integrity and brotherly love for each other? Bro. Durst, you persist in referring to us as workers in politics, when our theory is, that the Christian gentleman should quietly deliberate upon the qualifications and fitness of candidates for office, and then repair quietly to the polls and cast our votes, of possible, for a God-fearing Christian gentleman, and then quietly retire.

My brother then proceeds to quote Gal. 5: 19, 22, 1 Cor. 3: 16, 17, and Phil. 2: 13, and I ask the reader to turn to and consult those Scriptures and you will see that they are foreign from the subject we are considering.

Bro. Durst next calls attention to the declaration of Paul, 1 Tim. 2: 1, 2: "I exhort therefore, that first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings and all that are in authority." Then my brother exclaims: "What for Paul? That we (Christians) may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty." But our brother is silent as to how our prayers facilitate the divine life. Let us ventilate this subject a little. All Christians will concede the fact that God hears and will answer the prayers of his people, if in accordance with his will. Then Paul expected Christians to pray that those in authority, having rule over us as a nation, and people, might become (if not so) God-fearing, and God-loving men. I am led to this opinion from consulting the wisest man that ever set foot upon these mundane shores, Prov. 29: 2. "When the righteous are in authority the people rejoice, but when the wicked beareth rule, the people mourn."

Bro. Durst, you interrogated Paul, permit me to ask you a question: Have you never in days ago, earnestly and devoutly prayed that we as a nation and people might have God-fearing men to rule over us?

My brother next refers to very nearly, if not the whole, catalogue of crime known to the law of God or man; and descends upon the drunkard like an avalanche, and says Christians should not eat (break the loaf with him. And I say so, too.

My brother condemns the wearing of gold, pearls, and costly array, and quotes Scripture to sustain his views. But for the life of me I can not divine what all this has to do with the question as to whether or not the Christian should exercise the elective franchise.

My brother also refers to the question of prohibition; that, too, is foreign from our theme. But I will here remark, that the intemperate use of alcoholic drinks is the most blighting and withering curse on earth to-day. Drunkenness is a grievous sin, and I voted for state prohibition, and will repeat when opportunity offers, unless Bro. Durst should convert me. Bro. Durst next turns his attention to and pays his respects to office holders.

J. L. BOLLING.

Will Bro. B. explain by what principle of exegesis he makes the apostle refer alone to the marriage relation in 2 Cor. 14: 13?

My position is, as explained by the apostle himself in his use of the expressions righteousness and unrighteousness, light and darkness, Christ and Belfal, a believer and an infidel, the temple of God and idols, and the appended admonition to come out from among these evil influences, that we must not be yoked together with any who are engaged in such work, but that Christians must be yoked together in the work of the Lord. We must be a peculiar people—or as Titus has it, "peculiar people, zealous of good works." Or as Paul has it in Eph. 2: 10, "For we are his workmanship created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."

You next acknowledge that the Christian is not yoked together in the exercise of the elective franchise. Then in the exercise of this privilege they are divided. This very fact shows that it is not the work of the Lord. God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, etc. The time, talent, and means of the child of God is demanded in the service of Him who bought him. If Christians should be active in political government, the Lord, I think, would have given advice in that direction, that all might be of one mind and judgment. In earthly governments, a large proportion of the time, talent, and finances of every efficient citizen is demanded. Thousands of so-called Christians are so enthused over these things that a stranger would not even dream that they were on the Lord's side. Yet "by their fruits ye know them." Even our good brother's mind seems to be so clouded with the enticing things in governmental jurisprudence that it cannot receive a ray of light from the impressive lesson in 2 Cor. 14: 18. Will you learn a lesson from Gal. 5: 19, 21. You will notice that among the works of the flesh are classed strife and variance. The recent revision has factions, divisions, parties.

Now let's present a practical example: There are two candidates for office. You are a Democrat and I am a Republican. We both claim to be Christians—one in the Lord. But here we separate. We step into the arena of party. You espouse the cause of your candidate, and I of mine. We are divided. Thus we work till the day of election. We approach the ballot-box. You cast your vote, and I kill it with mine. Here is variance. We were not yoked together in the work. Now was this sanctioned by anything embraced in the work of Christians? To the law and to the testimony. Your comments on my reference to Rom. 2: 12, is now answered also. But your theory seems to be that "the Christian gentleman should quietly deliberate upon the qualifications and fitness of candidates for office, and then repair quietly to the polls and cast his vote if possible, for a God-fearing Christian gentleman, and then quietly retire." How very quiet you would have him be!

My impression has always been, that anything right and honorable, is worth working for, both publicly and privately. It also demands earnest constant work. There is no retiring from the work of right. It demands our tongue, our time, our labor, our money, our affections, our talent, our all. Why is the Christian gentleman to be so very quiet in all things. Your theory does not concern me. "A thus saith the Lord," if you please. It is very easy for Bro. B. to pass by my references to the Scriptures and to pronounce them irrelevant. The readers of the F. F. can judge for themselves in these matters. All I ask is, that they may read them in the connection in which they are used. I ask especial attention to my article to which Bro. B. replied.

He next takes up 1 Tim. 2:12. Your policy, my brother, of passing by with one sweep of your pen Scriptures that you say do not bear upon the point at issue, will continue to get you into trouble. I want the reader to notice carefully Bro. B's comment on the above Scripture. Truly his ventilation needs to be ventilated, for it is about as clear as muddy water. Is that the way you ventilate things, my brother? Tell me why you jumped clear over my reference, used in the same connection, to Tim. 2:3,4? Will you please to ventilate this Scripture from your standpoint? Give us a trial.

But you ask me the following question: "Have you never in days ago earnestly and devoutly prayed that we as a nation of people might have God-fearing men to rule over us?"

It is not what I have or have not done in days ago, but what saith the Scriptures? Now I am free to admit that they teach we should pray for kings and all in authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty, and that they may come unto the knowledge of the truth and be saved. I try to heed this lesson. Is your question answered?

Now why did you refer to Prov. 29:3 as a rule to govern us under the new and better covenant? Was not this an oversight on your part? Will you please go to the law of the Christian's King in this matter? I am ready to hear. He says, "I descend upon the drunkard like an avalanche, and say the Christian should not eat (break the loaf) with him." Is that all I said about the drunkard, Bro. B.? Why did you select that expression to the exclusion of other things I mentioned? What was your point in that?

Now let me open your eyes from another standpoint. You say, "my brother condemns the wearing of gold, pearls, and costly array," and remark, "for the life of me I cannot divine what all this has to do with the question as to whether or not the Christian should exercise the elective franchise?" Why will you thus sever what I said from the connection in which I used it? I will give the extract in part from the article to which he replied. After mentioning all the crimes alluded to, I then asked this question: "If it is the Christian's duty to labor to incorporate into our State and National constitution, a prohibitory measure in reference to one of these crimes because of its evil tendency, then his work should not stop till every other one is likewise included, even to the wearing of gold, of pearls, and costly array. And when our work shall have ended, governmental law will be the counter-part of the divine, and we will have changed the language of our Savior to Pilate, from my kingdom is not of this world, to my kingdom is of this world."

Now right in the face of this, my brother says: "For the life of me I cannot see what all this has to do with the question as to whether or not the Christian should exercise the elective franchise." Open the eyes of your understanding, my brother, and you will see the point. You then, in strong language, condemn drunkenness, to all of which I say, amen. We differ as to the means by which the Christian should work to eradicate it. I prefer to work as the Lord has directed, and you by the laws of man.

In our next we will notice your argument in reference to office holders. Whatever reply you may make to these articles, you will please send to me, and it will appear after I get through with your first reply. J. S. D.

WHAT IS TRUTH.

The FIRM FOUNDATION comes to my desk semi occasionally, sent, I suppose, by some kind friend to my address at Mineral City. It should come to Beeville, Texas, as this is my place of residence. I appreciate very highly the kindness and watchful care of the sender, the rubs and whacks I get in reading it notwithstanding.

In the issue of July 1st I find on first page an article under the above caption, signed, E. Hansbrough.

WHAT IS TRUTH?

This is a question in which I delight, as every one should. I will ask for only enough of your valuable space to notice a very few things. I quote from the article referred to, "Now, brethren, do the sectarians, any of them, preach the truth that the Savior says we shall know, and it shall make us free? If they do, I have never heard them, and I have been listening to them for fifty years."

I am truly sorry that Bro. Hansbrough should be so rash as to brand with falsehood even the denomination of christians to which he belongs, it being incontrovertibly a sect; and I wonder if it never occurred to Bro. Hansbrough that when he says our interpretation of the Scriptures is correct and that of all others wrong, that he is that claims infallibility the same as the Pope of Rome. I know he will answer, we do not interpret the Scriptures, we take it as it reads; but to say that is to talk nonsense.

Again I quote: "In fact they all do as Bro. Lipscomb says about the Baptists; their course drives God out of the work and their conversions are wholly of men. If he tells the truth. * * * They are not free from sin, not children of God, not Christians."

Here Lipscomb makes some statements and Hansbrough endorses them, which makes me enquire with still more earnestness, what is truth?

Can it be that these men are totally ignorant of what Baptists teach, or do they intend willfully to misrepresent the Baptists, with the hope of deceiving the unwary? If the former is true, it certainly betrays great dullness in a man who has "heard them fifty years," if the latter is true, shows total depravity which they would say was a doctrine outside of the Bible. To say the least, it shows how great need these men have of a knowledge of the truth and how to tell it. "Their course drives God out of the work, and their conversions are wholly of men." I am certain that if all the writers of this world, and the underworld—if any—were called in convention they could not possibly construct a paragraph more totally destitute of truth than the above quotation. Surely such men ought to beg to know what is truth.

When every man and woman of any degree of intelligence, knows that the Baptists of all others are the people who teach that God alone converts the soul, and writes his law in their hearts, and that too at once, when simple loving trust and confidence has been placed in Jesus. Baptists alone believe and teach that, "we are justified by faith and have peace with God," that "the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth from all sin. That he that believeth in the only begotten Son of God hath i. e. when he believes, everlasting life."

God in all the work, no conversion without his immediate power, without baptism, without penance, or anything dependent on man. Three million of Baptists in the states and territories besides the many thousands in other countries, believe and teach as set forth above, and yet there are men, even editors, who are so ignorant or so destitute of what is truth, as to say, "they drive God out of the work, and their conversions are wholly of men."

In the article under consideration I am condemned as "not free from sin, not a child of God, not a Christian." To my own Master I stand or fall, I accept not the judgment of modern Phariseism.

I have repented of my sins, have believed with all my heart in Jesus as my only Savior, have been immersed into the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, I have the Spirit of God bearing witness with my spirit that I am a child of God; I know that I have passed from death unto life, because I love the brethren.

The love of God has been shed abroad in my heart by the Holy Spirit, my heart has been purified by faith. I am kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation. Jesus is the author and finisher of my faith. I walk by faith not by sight. Hence I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate me from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus my Lord. The judgment of poor frail man to the contrary notwithstanding.

I have been urged by one strong supporter of your paper, F. F., to write some for it, and I beg for this a place in its columns. I am yours with kind regards, and for the foundation other than which no man can lay. G. H. M. WILSON.

THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST.

"An apostle of Jesus Christ has declared (Rom. 1:16) that the gospel is 'the power of God unto salvation (from sin) to every one that believeth; to the Jew first and also to the Greek' (or Gentile). It is very necessary, therefore, that we should understand its scope, its designs, and what it requires of us."—F. M. Green, in Christian Courier No. 10.

Bro. Green you are certainly right; it is necessary for us to understand the scope, design and requirements of the "gospel of Christ." This being true, Bro. Green how can the "our plea" brethren receive sectarians into our fellowship without obedience to the gospel of Christ, who have never understood its scope, design or requirement?

The New Testament and Bro. Green both teach that we should understand the scope, design and requirements of the glorious gospel of the Son of God. But the "our plea" brethren say that it is not necessary that we should understand the scope, design and requirements of the gospel.

May God hasten the day when the "our plea" brethren will come out of Babylon and stand with Bro. Green upon the one foundation and declare the old apostolic doctrine, which is the only power of God unto salvation from sin. Who will be the first to come out of Babylon and stand on the firm foundation with Bro. Green?

We will suggest that Bro. Isaac Errett come first, as he is one of the main leaders of "Babylon," which would be the means of bringing many sons and daughters of men into the "kingdom of God."

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, SEPT. 15, 1888.

From this time on send all money for the FIRM FOUNDATION, or any of our pamphlets, to A. McGary, Fort McKavett, Texas. Make all money orders payable to A. McGary. Please state whether you are a new subscriber or an old one. Write plainly, and give the county, where your post office is not a large town. Don't forget this in sending orders. MCGARY & HANSBROUGH.

A. McGARY's address is Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Bro. Burnett says, "From the way McGary writes about Rose Hill, he seems to imagine the church was located there somewhere." No, Bro. Burnett, I do not "imagine the church was located" there, but I do imagine your three fact gospel was dis-located there. A. MCG.

"THE MILLENNIAL DAWN."

Brethren, please find out who in your section is reading the "Millennial Dawn," and pave the way for the F. F. to fall into their hands while we strip the sophistry of that widely circulated system of deception down to its naked and ugly deformity.

We learn that many of our brethren, in certain localities, are making ship-wreck of their faith chasing this materialistic jack-o'-lantern into the low swamps of delusion and semi-infidelity. One good brother has sent us a copy of this star of ill-omen, and many others have written us of its pernicious work. When brethren lose interest in the word of God till they cease to read and meditate upon it, they are, like the "Athenians," ready "to tell or hear some new thing."

That there is some truth in the "Millennial Dawn" cannot be denied; if it were not so it would be powerless to deceive. We aim to strike it in its vital parts and fairly expose its foundation. We speak confidently because we know at book and the Bible cannot oath be true, and we have unbounded confidence in the Bible. A. MCG.

FROM E. W. WIMLEY.

Mr. A. McGary:

DEAR SIR:—I have been reading the F. F. and find you to be an able exponent of the doctrine you teach, and consistent, too. Therefore I send you an epitome of our faith, and some tracts setting forth every point of doctrine we believe the Holy Scriptures teach. Please examine our claims very closely by a "thus saith the Lord," and then let me hear from you.

I have seen a Baptist preacher for about fifteen years, up to a little over two years ago. I have always been trying to serve the Lord as I understand my duty from the Scriptures; that is, from my boyhood until now. If you can find a single point in our claims that is not in harmony with the Scriptures let me have it; for nothing but the truth will do good.

I am, yours,
E. W. WIMLEY.

Wheelock, Texas.

We publish the above letter to let its author know that we have not ignored it, nor lightly esteemed it; for it breathes a spirit of candor, fairness and honesty that is, in this degenerate day, so conspicuously absent from the writings of most men who differ from us, that it merits a fair consideration at our hands.

We defer our remarks upon the tracts sent us, till we can give attention to the "Millennial Dawn," which has come in for a hearing first. Then we will show our friend some very palpable mistakes in the doctrine he has turned to, and try to enable him to see that, in leaving the Baptists and stopping where he has, he has only left one position in the quick-sand to stand in another just as miry. We say we will show our friend his mistake, because we believe he is honest enough to open his eyes and look, and we are confident if he does we can dazzle him him to conviction with the radiance of "that light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world"—when "every man" will look. DON'T WANT SOWERS OF MIXED SEED.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough,

I have your receipt for pamphlets ordered for Bro. G. L. Patterson, but he has never got the pamphlets. Please send them on. He wants "Zeke and the Methodist" and the "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family." Please send us a preacher that sows unmixed seed.

Yours truly,
G. W. HOLLIS.

Spearsville, La.

Will not some brother in Eastern Texas heed this Macedonian cry, or Louisiana cry? If Bro. Hollis would cry out, "we pledge one hundred dollars for the work," the "business committee" of the Texas Missionary society would send a man post haste.

But Paul did not wait for "pledges" before he went to the work; neither will any other man who has the same burning desire in his heart to save souls that Paul had, wait to be moved by such paltry motives.

We are glad Bro. Hollis will not have a sower of "mixed seed." That is right, Bro. Hollis, for all such are enemies. Those only work for Christ who sow the "incorruptible seed." When they mix, with "the good seed of the kingdom," the doctrines and commandments of men, they make all sorts of crops, such as Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Universalists, Infidels, etc. A certain mixture of good and bad seed will make some of these crops, and a certain mixture with the good seed will make some other one of them, and so on, till the whole variety is growing to the ecstatic joy of Satan. After the mixture is made and sown, no amount of water will drown out the bad seed or change the inevitable production of such sowing. Neither can the transplanting of the much watered plant change the result. It has been sown by the enemy and not by our heavenly Father, neither will any amount of shaking make such plants fit for the Master's vineyard; they must be "rooted up"—see Matt. 15: 18. So those who shake and transplant such plants are on a par with those who sow the mixed and corruptible seed at first.

They change the divine plan of Paul's work, which was expressed by the apostle thus: "I have planted, (ne never transplanted, no matter how well the transplant had been watered, see Acts 19: 1-5.) Apollos watered; but God gave the increase," to this: "The Methodists and Baptists have planted and watered: but we shake well before taking and thus obtain the increase by transplanting."

Let's have a good straight work, brethren, or none at all. Ever laborer who enters the Master's vineyard has plain specific directions how to do his work. If he deviates from these directions his work is bad work, for the Husbandman has "thoroughly furnished him unto all good works." When he becomes self-willed and presumptuous enough to go beyond or stop short of the pattern given him he may plainly read his situation in the cases of Saul, son of Cis, Uzzah, Nadab and Abihu.

Many men raise their hands in holy (?) horror and hurl thunderbolts of denunciation at those who go beyond the authority of the Scriptures to inaugurate missionary societies or instrumental music, who themselves are so exceedingly presumptuous as to attempt to modify "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," which has been "bound in heaven" eighteen hundred years, to meet their overweening theory for proselyting. There must be a deal more duplicity than honesty among such presumptuous theorists. A. MCG.

FROM A READER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I am a member of the Farmer's Union of Louisiana. I belonged to the Union when I joined the church of Christ. Can I still belong to the Union and be a true Christian?

Can I or ought I live in a church where they are shaken in? If I can, explain Cor. 6: 14, 15, 16, 17. Answer in the F. F.

Yours in the one faith,

READER.

Spearsville, La.

I cannot answer the first question, for I do not know what the obligations of the Farmer's Union are. If you can do your whole duty to the Church of Christ, and then have time and money to spare to help keep up the Farmer's Union, I suppose you can "be a true Christian" and continue to affiliate with it. But I have always thought it would take about all of any man's time and prosperings to discharge his duties to the church. If brethren would do their duty as Christians they would find all of the co-operation and benefits they may fairly seek, right in the church. All that a Christian may do as a member of any body, he may do as a member of Christ's body. All that he cannot do as a member of Christ's body he may not do at all, so I think. The Church is God's union, alliance, and society for the disciples of His Son. It was not given as a Sunday institution, but for every day from the time one is baptized into it till he lays his armor by and pillows his head for that long sleep that knows no waking till the last trump shall summon him to appear before the judgment seat of Christ. I can't see why any Christian should want any further co-operation than he may have with his brethren in Christ. I suppose none would if the churches were doing their duty; but they act so much like mere Sunday societies that brethren have to go elsewhere to find something to meet their every day demands.

(2) I can find no authority in God's word for receiving persons into the congregations except by teaching God's word and baptizing those that gladly receive that teaching which the apostles gave as preparatory to baptizing persons. But I believe we should not act too rashly under the circumstances, but teach the congregations on this matter upon which they have been falsely taught. Then, if they refuse to hear our scriptural protest against the unauthorized practice, and persist in carrying it on without showing, or attempting to show divine authority, I think we should withdraw from them.

A. MCG.

FROM BRO. BEESON.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I want to ask one question, (and if it is worth answering, please answer through the F. F., and oblige.) Can there be, or is there a single individual in the Church at this age of the world, that is or could be scripturally ordained an elder or bishop, or do the duties of either? Yours, etc.,

J. BEESON.

Lovelady, Texas.

There are certain traits and qualifications which determine who may and who may not be elders or bishops. The man who fills this measure may be a bishop, and the man who does not fill it may not be a bishop. I know in this day of human arrogance and presumption men determine otherwise and appoint men to the bishopric or eldership who fall far short of God's rule, given in 1 Tim. 3: 1-7. Men of reprobate minds, of which the church now seems full to repletion, are settling all of these matters for themselves, bridging all difficulties with their sanctified common sense, and making rough places smooth, and improving upon the plan of the Allwise God, with unsparing hands and stiff necks. But God is not well pleased with these gratuitous helps and presumptuous intermeddlings with that system which He has pronounced "thorough" and "perfect."

Many men who are now acting as elders, by virtue of uninspired authority, upon this modified system of sanctified common sense, are no more God's elders than the most notorious black-leg in the land. God will have His own way about His own government. If, when Samuel approached the house of Jesse, with the helper and consecrating oil, he had anointed Jesse's oldest son, who was of fine personal appearance, he would have acted upon the principle that many professed Christians now act in their so-called work for the Lord. But God had his eye upon the shepherd boy David and He would not have had Eliab in David's place.

So now, He has His eye upon a certain class of men for elders or bishops, and He will not have these other men in their places—they are men's elders, not God's. He has a plan for spreading His Son's gospel and building up his kingdom, which is the plan upon which the apostles did that work. He will not have these human plans in the place of His; and no amount of boasting about the booming results of "our State work" will flatter Him into a recognition of such high-handed presumption. His way is settled in heaven. He has prescribed the music which is pleasing to His holy ear, when made from the grateful hearts of His disciples, and He can not be flattered with anything else, no, not even Cincinnati's five thousand dollar organ. He has determined just what character of persons shall be baptized into the "one body"—such as hear, understand, believe and obey "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," just as it was delivered to His saints, and just as they preached it, and just as inspiration has recorded it for a model for all time and all men. And no amount of flattery, in the way of pompous reports about, so many "from the world, so many from the Baptists, so many by obedience, and so many otherwise, can gild over this human substitution till it will be well-pleasing to God, whose ways are not our ways, and who does all things according to the counsel of His own will.

But, in conclusion, we must say that it is a sad commentary upon the disciples of Christ to say that, no man among them can fill the measure of these qualifications for elder or bishop. I think it is not saying too much to say that, any man of sound mind who has lived in the Church five years under ordinarily favorable circumstances, who cannot fill the character part of these qualifications, may have serious doubts as to his eternal prospects; for when we measure ourselves by the divine "measuring reed," we find that all disciples are required to burnish up their characters to fill this measure. Let's not become discouraged, brethren, because we fall so far short of this standard. God must have elders, and they must grow up in His nursery, the church. Many can stand and face the examination till we come to "filthy lucre" that "root of all evil." But we must correct this defect here or we will fall when tested upon it before the judgment seat of Christ. Can we afford to lose our souls? Oh no! What will a man give in exchange for his soul? Let us desire and prepare ourselves for the office of elder and save our souls. A. MCG.

FROM SISTER RAINS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I want you to explain the parable of the unjust steward, Luke 10: 6, also explain Cornelius' case, Acts 10. I have tried to explain it to my sister, and I will write her letter off and send it to you, and hope you will correct all mistakes. I sent her a 25 cents subscription to the F. F. She wrote to me she had received two copies and liked them very well. She reads the Bible a great deal, but has no teaching. Said she hadn't been to church in four years, and had no religious people to talk to. I thought the F. F. would show her where she stood and the danger she was in.

She first joined the Separate Baptists in time of the war. At the close of the war her parents joined the church of Christ, but were never baptized. My parents were Missionary Baptists. I was small but I can remember that we moved from Kaufman county to Atascosa county. There was no church there but Baptists and my parents claimed to be Baptists, but my sister never has belonged to any church since I wrote to her two years ago when I joined the church, and asked her what church she held to. She said, "I was first a Baptist and I reckon I am a Baptist yet." All my people are Baptists but me. I had to leave them all, but the Savior said, "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me," and thank the Lord I can leave them and follow him.

I have been a subscriber to the F. F. two years, and have learned more from it than all the preaching I ever heard, for I never heard much. I would be glad if I was able to write some for it, but I don't think I am able yet, but hope I will be. I don't know whether you remember seeing me or not, but I saw you at Caljak school-house last summer when Bro. Durst and Hansbrough held a meeting, and I had the pleasure of seeing my husband baptized. Your sister in the one faith.

LOUISA RAINS.

JUNCTION CITY, TEXAS, 1888.

DEAR SISTER:—When I read your letter and you said to read the 10th chapter of Acts I laughed and said: "I wonder if she has worked at that chapter trying to understand it as hard as I have." After I joined the church, an old Baptist man commenced on me about the 10th chapter of Acts, trying to convince me that I was wrong in believing that baptism was for the remission of my past sins, and tried to prove to me by the 43rd verse of same chapter that as soon as one believes in Christ, he or she receives remission. Now, I was a babe in Christ and did not understand much, but I went to reading Cornelius' case very carefully. I thought if I was wrong I wanted to understand and try to do right, and if faith alone would save me I wanted to know it; so I read the 10th and 11th chapters over and over. Mr. Rains had asked an old sister where the new name was prophesied of? She told him it was the 62nd chapter of Isaiah. I was alone one Sunday, still pondering over Cornelius' case, and studying about the new name, when I read Isaiah 62: 2, "And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness and all kings thy glory, and thou shalt be called by a new name which the mouth of the Lord shall name." I noticed I had never seen where Christ's disciples were ever called Christians till in the 11th chapter, and then I noticed what the 18th verse of same chapter said, and my eyes were opened or my understanding. Read for yourself, don't take my word. I then understood that Cornelius was the first Gentile that ever was converted to Christ and he had to be taught.

Well, how did Cornelius' faith come? Was it not by hearing words from Peter? Yea. Well, what did Peter preach to him? He preached Jesus just as Phillip did to the eunuch. But, some will say, he never told the eunuch to be baptized. But it looks strange to me if he did not, how that ignorant man would have known anything about it. To preach Jesus is to preach the entire gospel, and what is the gospel? The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, also to the Greek. Romans, 1st chapter 16th verse.

Now, if you remember, when Christ was here with his apostles, he told them to not go in the ways of the Gentiles, nor in any of the cities of Samaria enter ye not, but rather seek the lost sheep of Israel. But after he was crucified and rose from the dead, just before his ascension he told them to "go teach all nations." That was just what Peter had been doing when his brethren contended with him for going in to men uncircumcised. Some of them were preaching to none but the Jews, but when Peter rehearsed the matter from the beginning and expounded it by order unto them and told them about the vision he had seen, they then understood what the vision meant. In place of meaning something to eat, it meant that God had no respect to persons. When they heard these things they held their peace and glorified God saying: "Then hath God to the Gentiles also granted repentance unto life." Now don't understand me to say that we are saved by water alone, for I don't think so, but I do say I don't understand that we are in a saved state until after we are baptized. I believe one has to have faith in Christ, or believe in him, repent of our sins, confess our Savior before men, and be baptized for the remission of our past sins, and when we obey all the Lord has commanded us, we will certainly be pardoned. Well, teach me all you can about the Bible and I will tell you all I can. May God bless you and help you to understand His holy word, is the prayer of your sister.

LOUISA RAINS.

Bro. McGary:

Most of the Baptists seem to think that, we all have to do just like Cornelius, pray, and our prayer goes up to God and then he sends an angel to us and we must send a runner after Peter; but it looks strange they won't believe Peter when he comes. I asked the old man I spoke of in my sister's letter, why Peter told the three thousand on Pentecost to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, if faith would save them? He said: "Ah, Peter was always saying something he had no business to say." L. R.

Sister Rains has asked an explanation of the unjust steward which I will give when I have time; also an explanation of Acts 10, which I think she has given in the above letter to her sister. I hardly think it necessary to add a word, as she has made the subject clear. I love to see the sisters take such an interest in the Scriptures and understand them so well. I sincerely hope this sister may soon have the joy of knowing that her sister has "obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine" that will make her not a Baptist but a child of God.

A CORRECTION.

I have a letter from Bro. Homan from which I find that I was mistaken in saying that, the reference in the Courier to the brother who had five debates on hand, was to Bro. J. A. Harding. Hence I was too hasty in what I said, and I beg Bro. Homan's pardon for my reflections upon him, or upon whoever wrote the piece in the Courier. I had just read in the Advocate of Bro. Harding's appointments for debates, and had no doubt that the reflection in the Courier was intended for him, but as I am mistaken I cheerfully make this correction.

TO THOSE IN ARREARS.

Now is the time to pay for your paper, if you are in arrears, as returns from the crop are coming in. Remember, brethren, that when we found many of you could not pay your subscription without inconvenience, we ceased to urge you to do so, and had the "red cross" removed from your paper, and bore our financial burden through the dull summer months the best we could without giving you further trouble.

You ought to appreciate this enough to now come to our relief with what you owe us. We assure you we would not mention this matter, but we are now needing funds to lay in supplies for the next volume of the paper. We want to begin Vol. 5 with weekly issues, if we can; but we know we cannot unless our old subscribers pay up promptly and aid us some in getting new subscribers.

Don't think, "it is but a dollar I owe and that amount can't make any difference;" for when the dollars and half dollars that are due are aggregated, they make a considerable sum, sufficient to lift the financial burden of the paper off of our shoulders and give us relief. The fact that you owe but little is the very best reason why you should pay up, because you can do so without missing it, and when you all thus discharge this duty, you collectively hold up the hands of the publishers.

We hope this will be sufficient to stir up your pure minds to the performance of this duty, so that nothing more will have to be said upon it. We heartily thank you all, brethren, for past favors and encouragements.

Yours very respectfully and fraternally,

McGARY & HANSBROUGH.

STRENGTH OF CHRISTIANITY.

For fifteen hundred years, the false interpretations of the Jewish people created a degree of prejudice unequalled in any other people in that age of the world. Their own prophets taught them to expect a deliverer, but owing to their false interpretations they rejected him when he came. That character drawn upon the Jewish mind was so far different from the true character of the good Teacher, that they refused to accept him, and, in consequence of their misguided condition, they filled themselves brim full of prejudice and stubbornness.

While they were so bitter in their opposition to the claims of Christ, they had a zeal in the same proportion for the institution of Moses. Excessive as they were in their hatred for the cause of Christ, and also excessive in their love for Moses, they were steeled against the conquest of the gospel. What an unfavorable field for the ministers of Christ! What had they in their possession with which to break down this prejudice and uproot this stubbornness? Was it something of human contrivance? Was it a sword like that of Mohammed? All the world, Catholics as well as Protestants, assert that apostolic power was the power of truth.

The Jews were sometimes drawn away into idolatry because it offered sensual motives, but the apostles did not offer such motives. The fact that Christianity triumphed over Judaism is regarded as an evidence of the strength of Christianity. Why is this so? Because Christianity without carnal power, without a single sensual motive, destroyed prejudice and stubbornness against itself, and also destroyed love for the established religion of the Jews. A Jew in becoming a Christian willingly surrenders his former religion—surrenders his love for it and lays down his hatred for Christianity.

The Jews forbid the disciples to speak in the name of Christ. Through their influence they arrayed secular authority against the Lord—they no doubt advised the people not to hear Him. One of the rulers of this people took advantage of night's sable curtain—went to Jesus by night and acknowledged him to be a teacher sent from God. What made this people act so mean and cowardly? What made them stay in the dark? Jesus says: "Men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil."

These Jews were afraid of the words of Jesus and there was a reason why they were afraid. There was a power about His words which they were not able to understand. They sought to take advantage. The conduct of the Jews proved that they knew the strength of that which they were opposing.

Turning people away from one religion to another is what some people call and condemn as proselyting. This is exactly what the apostles of Christ did, and their success proves that they had the truth. Using the term, proselyting, in the sense of, bringing over from one religion to another, I may safely say, that Christianity is the only system that carries with it the weight of proselyting power. If I am correct in this statement, that body of people who adheres to the true system of Christianity must necessarily be the greatest proselyting people.

Paganism was a system of religion that doubtless made many proselytes, but did it by a power outside of truth—by the power of the sword. Mohammedanism, another system, made proselytes, but by the power of the sword. This is not the proselyting power under consideration. Christianity is the only system that proselytes by the power of truth.

Coming down to our own times, we have many protestant bodies which at least, in some respects, are but different systems of religion. The first that we notice is that of the "Latter day saints." They make proselytes, but how do they do it? It is certainly a fact that they do not do it by preaching Mormonism. They preach the truth in order to gain adherents to their system, and after this they proceed to impose upon their converts the book of Mormon.

Methodism makes no proselytes worth a mention. They rarely have any additions from any other body of religious people. Presbyterians never have any proselytes from the Methodists, Baptists, or other denominations. Baptists do not make any proselytes from the Methodists only as they do so by preaching immersion, and having only this one point containing the power of truth, (and they spoil that by calling it a non-essential), they make but few proselytes from the pedobaptist ranks.

Wherever we find proselyting power we have found the power of the truth in the same proportion. The only exception to this rule is found in the case of Universalism, which gains its strength by adopting the benevolent side of Calvinism, or in the case of the Adventists, who take advantage of the admission of the sectarian world on the Sabbath question.

We now submit another proposition. Where there is the greatest amount of weakness there is the greatest loss of membership. Why then, do not the Catholics sustain great loss? Because they forestall the power of truth by teaching their people not to read the Bible, and not to hear protestants preach. By taking these two cautious steps they are able to hold their members by the power of ignorance. Some of the protestant parties seem to understand this secret. The Baptists are not afraid for their members to hear the Methodists. Neither are the Methodists afraid for their members to hear the Presbyterians, because these parties have no power to gain proselytes from each other. But when one of those preachers whom sinners call Campbellites comes into a neighborhood of Baptists, Methodists and Presbyterians, it is a well-known fact that these parties set up opposition meetings, misnamed "prayer meetings."

Not long since, while the writer was holding a meeting at a point ten miles south of the city of Waco, these parties began an opposition meeting at once. This, together with their advice to the people not to hear me, convinced me that they knew the strength of our position. They know the power of truth, or they would not act as they do. If they regard our position as a weak one, why are they afraid for their people to hear us? Their own conduct shows that they see the strength of our preaching and the weakness of their own.

It is a fact that our people have more additions from the religious denominations around them than any other people in the world. How is this fact to be accounted for? Proselytes were never made by us by the use of the sword. Then, if not in that way, certainly by the strength of the position we hold. That strength must be the strength of the truth. It is a rare thing for one of our members to join a sectarian church. We do not tell them not to hear other preachers. We do not run opposition meetings. We do not lock our meeting-houses against the preachers of our religious neighbors. What does this prove? It proves that we are not afraid of them nor their teaching. Why are we not afraid of their teaching? Because there is nothing in their teaching that has any power to win our people over to them.

As the Jews opposed the cause of Christ in an unfair way, so do sectarians oppose us. As the Jews tried to turn away the people from hearing Christ and the apostles, so do Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians try to turn the people away from hearing us. And may I not say, as the Jews were afraid of Christ because they could not withstand his words, so are these parties afraid of us because they can not withstand our words?

Christianity broke down the prejudice of the Jews, it nearly destroyed pagan worship, even as early as the days of Trajan. It possessed within itself a power of truth that challenged all opposition. The true Christian system has today the greatest power to destroy false religion. Of the many systems claiming to be the true one, that system, that still holds the original characteristic, the power to proselyte and win people away from false systems, must be the true one.

In conclusion, I suggest to all religious bodies whom it may concern, that if they wish to show to sensible people, that if they have any confidence in the strength of their systems, it is time they were coming out of the brush into the open field and thus show themselves to be brave enough to be soldiers of the cross of Christ.

W. P. RICHARDSON.

WHAT MUST I DO TO BE SAVED

I can conceive of no subject of greater importance than an answer to the above inquiry, provided there is anything for one to do.

It is evident that there is something to be done on the part of the alien, from the fact, Christ said: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven."—Matt. 7: 21. And again, when Peter preached to the people on the day of Pentecost, and they made the enquiry: "What must we do," the answer given by the apostle shows conclusively that something was to be done in order to be saved. See Acts 2: 37, 38.

We learn that the question heading this article was asked of Paul and Silas by the jailor, and their answer shows that something was to be done. Acts 16: 30, 31.

I take it for granted then, that in order to salvation a man must do something.

The question to be settled is not

What must God, Christ, or the Holy Spirit do that I may be saved? They all have to do with our salvation 'tis true; but I am not on that side of the question now, but on the human side. "What must I do?" I a poor rebel against the government of God; lost in sin, drowned in iniquity—what must I do to be saved?

Upon a proper answer to this question, depends the salvation of the world. For if a man knows not what to do, he will not do it, and consequently will not be saved.

But to whom shall we refer it, for a correct answer? If we allow the Baptists to answer, the Methodists will object; and if it is referred to the Methodists, the Baptists will object, etc. So I propose to leave it to the Lord Jesus Christ; to this none can object. But to what part of His sayings shall we go—to where He spoke before His death? No. For His will was not of force till after His death. Heb. 9: 16, 17.

So we come down after the death and resurrection of Christ—after his will is in force, and we find this language: "Go teach (disciple) all nations, baptizing them in (into) the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."—Matt. 28: 19, 20. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16: 15, 16.

"Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."—Luke 24: 46, 47. "Receive ye the Holy Ghost, whosesoever sins ye remit they are remitted unto them, and whosesoever sins ye retain they are retained."—John 20: 22, 23.

From these several passages of Scripture we learn this much: The first thing to be done on the part of the sinner, in order to be saved, after hearing the gospel preached, is to believe what is preached; second, to repent of all past sins; third to comply with any condition upon which an apostle might suspend salvation. ("Whosoever sins ye remit they are remitted," etc.) Paul says: "Confess with the mouth the Lord Jesus," and that this confession is unto salvation, (Rom. 10: 9, 10.) So the third thing to do is to confess, and the fourth is to be baptized.

Thus we have the answer from the lips of Jesus, backed by all authority in heaven and earth, Matt. 28: 18. But, says one: "I do not like your interpretation of His answer." I have given no interpretation of it. Are you willing to let the apostles apply the commission? If so, we certainly can come to an agreement. On Pentecost, Peter with the keys of the kingdom preaches, convincing his hearers that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, whereupon they cried out: "What must we do?" Peter answered: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of (upon the confession of) Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."—Acts 2: 30, 38. Thus we see the application Peter made of the language of Christ. It was, first, to preach; second, to believe; third, to repent; fourth, to confess Christ; fifth, to be baptized; sixth, the remission of sins.

I will here state, that the apostles answered the question: "What must I do to be saved?" according to the condition of the person making the inquiry. When the jailor made the inquiry he was told to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ" (Acts 16: 30, 31. Why? Because that was the first thing for him to do in order to be saved. When the people on the day of Pentecost asked what to do, they were not told to do that which they had already done, (believe), but were told to do the next thing necessary, repent.

When Ananias appeared to Saul he did not tell him either to believe or repent, for he had already done both; but he was told to do what he had not done: "Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."—Acts 22: 16. Thus this important question is answered in plain, unmistakable terms.

"But what must I believe?" "Believe on Jesus Christ," John 3: 16; Mark 16: 15, 16; Acts 16: 31. "How can I believe on him?" "These are written that ye might believe." "Faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God."—John 20: 30; Rom. 10: 17. "How much faith must I have?" Enough to cause you to do just as you are commanded. "Faith without works is dead being alone."—James 2: 20.

"What is repentance?" Godly sorrow is not repentance, for Paul said it worked repentance, 2 Cor. 7: 10. Turning from sin is not repentance, for Peter said, "repent and turn," Acts 3: 19, R. V. Repentance, therefore, comes between Godly sorrow and turning from sin, and is that change in a person's mind, will or purpose, which results in change of life. "How long does it take to repent?" No longer than it takes to form a resolution that you will cease to do evil and learn to do well. "What must I confess?" Confess what you believe, that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God. Matt. 16: 18; Acts 8: 37; Rom. 10: 10.

What is it to be baptized? In order to baptism it requires: Water (Matt. 3: 16; Acts 16: 47); such water, (John 3: 23); going to the water, (Mark 1: 5; Acts 8: 38); going into the water, both administrator and candidate, (Acts 8: 38); buried in baptism, (Rom. 6: 4; Col. 2: 12); bodies washed with water, (Heb. 10: 22); raised up in baptism, (Rom. 6: 4; Col. 2: 12). In short, to be baptized is to be immersed.

Now you have the terms of salvation from sin before you; will you comply with them and be made free from the guilt of sin now? Then continue to do right all the days of your life, and at last you will have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ.

VARIOUS THINGS AGAIN.

After closing the meeting at Jefferson, as reported in the FIRM FOUNDATION of August 15th, we went to Petree's school-house, near Bro. R. J. Petree's, where, with Bros. D. H. Petree and R. Helsebech we preached eight or ten days. Seven only obeyed the gospel.

While in that neighborhood we staid some with Bro. Riley Petree, father of the above named brothers, and while at his house I saw, for the first time, a copy of the "Proceeding of the North Carolina Christian Missionary Society," and an account of which society we find in the second chapter of the third epistle of Peter, to which I refer the readers of this and advise them to look closely, for it is the only place they can find an account of anything of the kind. I saw the above document after I had seen and talked with Bro. Burns, and in looking through it, found the following report:

"The committee on examination of candidates for the ministry reported as follows: We, your committee on examination of candidates for the ministry, beg leave to report, that we have examined J. H. Johnson and W. R. Jinnett, and find them competent to preach the gospel, and recommend that J. H. Johnson's name be enrolled on the list of preachers, he having been heretofore ordained to the work; and we also recommend that W. R. Jinnett be ordained to the ministry, and enrolled on the list of preachers.

N. L. RICHARDSON, }
J. L. BURNS, } Com.
C. W. HOWARD, }

On motion, the report was adopted."

Again: "Your committee on ministerial characters beg leave to submit the following: Having learned that Curtis Heath has withdrawn from the church, we recommend that his name be stricken from the list of preachers. The characters of all others, so far as we know, is unimpeached.

W. H. STANCLIL, }
J. L. BURNS, } Com.
FERNANDO WARD, }

On motion the report was adopted."

Now, brethren of North Carolina, is not that nice? Bro. Burns is it not pretty? The State of North Carolina has five little Popes, made or created by the Christian Missionary convention, or society of that State for the purpose of setting in their pontifical chairs, and judging of the qualifications of those who desire to preach, and of the moral character of the preachers in different parts of the State. Oh how nice that is. Gradually relieving the congregations of all their duties, except paying in their money that they have pledged on their future prosperity.

Bro. Burns do you not feel proud that you can be one of five to relieve the congregations of the duties that the Lord has imposed upon them in his word? Surely you must feel proud or ashamed one, and I believe the latter would be better, not only for you but for all others engaged in like work. You know as well as any one, or at least I believe you do, that there is not one particle of authority in the word of God for your missionary society, for the pledges you have been getting from the brethren on future prosperity, or for the work you have been doing as one of the committee as reported above, and you also know that Paul says, that the Scriptures furnish the man of God to all good works, 2 Tim. 3: 17; and that he tells Christians to do whatever they do in word or deed in the name (or by the authority) of the Lord Jesus, Col. 3: 17.

The brethren in that part of North Carolina that I was in were generally well pleased with Bro. Burns' preaching. They say he preached faith, repentance, confession and baptism for the remission of sins, as plainly as any one could, and not only contended for the above items, as being necessary to entrance into the church of Christ, but said that they must occur in the above named order or the whole was violated, null and void; and yet he will receive those who have never accepted the above items either as to number or order into (as they suppose) the church of Christ, just so they have been put under the water, no odds whether they repented before they believed, or whether they were put under the water because their sins were remitted, and to get into some sectarian and consequently human organization, and not only that, he will tell those who have been taught as the sects teach (which is not the truth), and afterwards learn better and obey the Lord, that there was no use in their doing it. Yes, if he had been present when Paul told the twelve to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, he would certainly have objected, Acts 19: 5.

I want to send Bro. Burns a copy of the F. F. in which this is published, and also the issue of Aug. 15th, and if I have misrepresented him in any way, he shall have space in the FIRM FOUNDATION to correct it, if he wishes to.

We went from Petree's school-house to Haw Pond, where we preached eight or ten days. Seven obeyed the gospel, and I hope they will, "as they have received the Lord Jesus, so walk in him," (Col. 2: 6), that they may obtain the eternal inheritance.

We went from Haw Pond to Ridings' school-house, in Forsyth county, where we preached four times. From Ridings to Winston, where we preached three times, and left Winston the morning of the 24th for this place.

While on the train between Greensboro, N. C., and Lynchburg, Va., I got into conversation with a Primitive, or what is often called a Hard-Shell Baptist, and truly their shells are hard. God says through the prophet Jeremiah, "Is not my word like as a fire: and like as a hammer that breaketh the rocks in pieces?"—23: 29. Yes, it will break up the stony hearts of sinners, but it won't break the hard shells of these Baptists. He contends, like a preacher that I heard in this country several years ago, not twenty miles from here, that every man married the woman that God has ordained from all eternity that he should marry. In other words, that everything that people did, it was predestinated by the heavenly Father from all eternity they should do; and yet they say, God will punish them for disobeying him. Let us see how that will work:

God in speaking of the nations by whom the Jews were surrounded says: "Neither shalt thou make marriages with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son, for they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods, so will the anger of the Lord be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly."—Deut. 7: 2, 4.

Here we find the Lord by his word prohibited the Jews, his people, from marrying among the surrounding nations; but we find that afterwards they did it, and were punished for it. Now I ask, according to hard shell Baptist theology, if the Jews were not in a pretty tight place? For they had to marry as they did to do what God had fore-ordained from all eternity they should do, and they had to refrain from marrying as they did to comply with his word: for God's word and his fore-ordination were right a cross each other, and their theology not only put the Jews and other people in a tight place, but it put God himself in a still tighter place, for it makes him the author of sin, and the greatest tyrant in the universe, because it makes him punish people for doing his will, what he wants done.

REPORT OF TWO MEETINGS AT MANOR.

The Christian meeting closed at Manor, Texas, on the 26th of August, with about thirty additions after several weeks preaching by Lockhart, of Palestine.

The Baptist meeting closed there a little earlier, having about as many accessions. Mr. J. M. Carroll, of Taylor, did the preaching.

The two meetings ran in opposition to each other, from the fact that they did not unite and have one grand, great big time of it together, which they should have done if they were all Christians. The two parties baptized their converts alternately in the same tank, both under the same authority, so they said, but for very different purposes.

The Christians baptized sinners for the remission of sins, and the Baptists baptized what they called Christians because they believed or said they believed they were pardoned already. The Christians required persons to confess Christ with the mouth before baptism; the Baptists required persons to confess their own feelings on the subject before baptism. The Christians did not take a vote before baptizing a convert, but the Baptists had to do so every time. The Christians did not fellowship or give the right hand of fellowship to persons before baptism, but the Baptists had to do so as it is their custom.

These are some of the differences. Can you see them? Many Christians cannot see that Baptist teaching will make Baptists, and Christian teaching will make Christians. But they think Baptist teaching will make Christians, and then they ought to think that Christian teaching will make Baptists. If not, why not? Is a Christian a Baptist? or, is a Baptist a Christian? Can a person be a Christian and not be a Baptist? Can a person be a Baptist and not be a Christian? Are Baptists and Christians the same? Do they teach the same things for the same purpose? Do they differ in the things essential to salvation, or do they differ only in the non-essentials to salvation? Do they agree in anything essential to salvation, or do they agree only in things not essential to salvation? An honest person will look at these things, and a wise person will decide to obey the gospel of Christ. If the Baptists teach the plan of salvation in its purity and in its simplicity, and Christians do the same, then both teach the same things just alike; but if there is any difference in their teaching concerning the plan of salvation, then it is the part of wisdom to judge by the word of God (and not feeling) which teaches the truth on the plan of salvation. FROM BRO. LANE.

Dear Bro. McGary:

J. F. Whitt, who had received an unscriptural immersion, came to my house on the banks of Cherokee creek, Aug. 8th, and requested me to go with him to the water. I complied with the request; and when we came to the water edge he said: "See here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?" I answered: "If thou believest with all thy heart thou mayest." And he answered and said: "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." Then we both went down into the water and I baptized him for the remission of sins, and he went on his way rejoicing, and I have not seen him since. G. R. LANE. Cherokee, Texas.

True love to Christ can walk on the water without drowning, and lie on the fire without burning.—Ex.

BRIEFS.

In ordering the paper or tracts write your name plainly, and give postoffice, county and state.

Now is the time to send in your clubs. Go to work, brethren, and send us large lists of subscribers.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

Bro. David Pennington has returned to Texas, and is now at home with his family in Austin. We hope he will remain in Texas as we need good preachers just as much as California does.

The society brethren are stretching every nerve in order to entangle Christians in the coils of their machinery. Their zeal is commendable, but their plans are not according to the truth of God.

Bro. J. D. Peke, writing from Arcadia, La., reports a meeting held at that place by Bro. W. R. Carpenter about the last of June. No additions, but a great interest aroused especially among the Baptists. He contemplated another meeting at the same place some time in July. Please report.

Bro. George Savage, writing from Dye, Texas, Aug. 28, '88, reports a meeting in his community, by Bro. Ed Grogan. He says: Five added by confession and baptism, seven took membership. Among those baptized two had been fellowshipped from the Baptists. Bro. Grogan preaches clearly. He fellowships some of the Baptists but I do not."

Bro. W. H. Floore, of San Gabriel, Milam county, Texas, writes: "On June 30th I began a meeting at Union Ridge, Milam county, and closed July 8th, with five confessions and baptisms. Two of these had been received by the shaking way, (a way not of God), but on hearing and believing the gospel they confessed Christ and obeyed Him."

Bro. H. P. Hilliard, of Cottonwood, Navarro county, Texas, writes: Bro. J. T. Evans began a meeting Friday night before the 2nd Lord's day in August, and closed on the 3rd Lord's day. Immediate result was fourteen added. Eight made the good confession and were baptized for the remission of sins. Bro. Evans will long be remembered by us as a good soldier of the cross."

Bro. G. W. Thompson, of Pike, Collin county, Texas, says: "I am a subscriber to your paper and it stands firm in our community. Bro. Ed Ewell and myself held a meeting at Snow Hill, eight miles north of Farmersville, Texas. Five confessed the Lord, four were baptized, one was too sick to get to the water. Will go to Long Neck on Monday next and be assisted by Bro. Ewell and Shipman.

Bro. J. T. Neal, of Cedarville, Ark., sends me a sermon by Mr. Nichols, of "Gub-ax" notoriety, on the subject of Prayer. I will review it as soon as I can get the time to do so. Your questions will be answered in next issue.

Bro. A. C. Leslie, of Ezzell, Lavaca county, Texas, writes: "We have here a membership of forty, though I regret to see some going back to the beggerly elements of the world. Those that read the F. F. continue in the faith. Brethren learn a lesson from this, and if you are not a reader of the F. F. subscribe at once. It will strengthen you and assist you in keeping steadfastly in 'the good way.'"

Bro. F. M. Barefield, writing from Darby, Grimes county, says: "Bro. B. P. Sweeney preached at Antioch in Grimes county, several days. The result was two from the Baptists. He preached also at Gum Springs, two miles below here, where he received five from the Baptists and two from the world. If he would have shaken them in he could have gotten more; but Bro. Sweeney and all of the congregation know the way of the Lord more perfectly than that."

Bro. P. S. Coen, of Stinson, W. Va., writes: "The brethren here have become cold in the cause of Christ. When we come together on the first day of the week many seats are vacant. Shame on such brethren. 'Ye did run well, who hath bewitched you that you should not obey the truth.' Will God recognize such characters as Christians? Jesus says, 'if you love me keep my commandments.' Your neglect of the Lord's day and the supper shows that you don't love Him."

Bro. W. N. Warrick, Pottsville, Hamilton county, Texas, writes: "There is one Mr. Speers here preaching the hard shell doctrine, who claims to have preached the Christian doctrine thirty years. He says God showed him his error two years ago. He claims to be from Arkansas. When asked how God showed him his error, he says, 'I don't know.' Would not 2 Thea. 2: 11, 12, suit his case? (Yes, and also 2 Peter 2: 20 22.) We have a good working band at Pottsville, not a shaker in the congregation and no probability of there being any soon."

Many good brethren and sisters are beguiled into contributing to the society by the specious plea that money is needed in order to send the gospel to lost and perishing souls. The truth is, that the preacher making the plea is the needy one. His plea reduced to plain English amounts to this: "Pay me well and I'll go and preach. If you don't pay me, I won't preach, and those poor fellows will die in their sins and you will be responsible for it." When the Lord says, "Go preach the gospel," they respond, "Yes, Lord, I will if the society will give me a good salary." When the Son of Man cometh will he find faith on the earth? J. W. J.

CONFESSION.

This heading is a general term, and so much so that it covers, in religion, at least three most important phases that demand our earnest and careful consideration, since it directly and personally has to do with our salvation. What then is the meaning of the term? Confession is the general term applied to the act of confessing. Confess is from the Greek word "exom," which means, "to speak out the same things." Confession is also from the Greek word, "homologeo," which means, to speak the same thing. This word occurs in Rom 10:10, where Paul said: "With the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

Thus we have the term defined, and anything that will cover this definition is confession. This confession must be made unto salvation; but the idea that has drifted into the church, that men must make it in a certain form, just so many words, just the same words, and no others, more or less, is a practice of the church unsupported by Scripture. I am sure that God divides this subject into three parts which are nearly always confounded by men:

1st. Confession with the mouth before witnesses that Jesus is the Christ, (anointed.)

2nd. Confession before men both by tongue and daily walk throughout Christian life, the religion of Jesus.

3rd. Confessing faults one to another.

The first is based on four positive declarations of Scripture: Matt. 16:16; 1 John 4:1, 2, 8; Rom. 10:8, 9, 10; 1 Tim. 6:12, 13.

Jesus Christ laid the foundation of this great central truth and requires others to maintain it. In 1 Tim. 6:18, it is said that, He, before Pontius Pilate "witnessed a good confession." (Original, the good confession). How did He do it? In answer to the question, "art thou the King of the Jews?" He said: "Thou sayest;" "To this end was I born"; "My kingdom is not of this world."—Matt. 27:11; Mark 15:2; Luke 23:3; John 18:33, 37. This is called the good confession, 1 Tim. 6:13. Then Peter and our Savior again give us this great central truth in other words, Matt. 16:16, "Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God." From these we draw out two propositions:

1. The confession unto (eis) salvation may be made in more than one way, yet it is always done with the mouth. The only limit to it is, it must speak out the same things that are spoken in the central truth. To speak out is to agree with, and express in as few words as possible something that shows to the people that, he who makes the confession is in perfect harmony with all that is set forth in the gospel.

2. There is connected with this confession a blessing that flows abundantly to those and only those who make it. "Blessed art thou Simon Barjona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto you but my Father who art in heaven."—Matt. 16:17.

Again: "For (gar) with the heart man believeth unto (eis) righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto (eis) salvation." Here salvation is connected with confession, can you then reach across this mighty gulf of uncertainty and obtain salvation without making it? You certainly cannot, because God is pleased to place it before (unto) your salvation.

But now Rom. 10:8, 9, 10: On this occasion Paul taught the church, that the righteousness which is of faith saith: "The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth and in thy heart that is the word of faith, (original, the faith), which we preach, that if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God has raised him from the dead thou shalt be saved."—verses 8, 9. Here again salvation is so linked with confession that the idea is not conceivable as to how man can be saved without making it.

But some are disposed, in preaching, to pass it lightly by, not classing it among the fundamental points of salvation. Paul here makes it prominent in the faith, (the gospel,) which he preached. It is the word of the faith; then is faith a condition of salvation? Yes. Acts 16:30, Heb. 11:6; because God makes it a part of the gospel. Then the same argument proves confession a condition of salvation also, Rom. 10:8, 9.

It is so with repentance and baptism, too; if one is placed under the heading of the faith all are, but confession with the mouth is more prominent because it is the central truth. Now should the church of God receive people into their fellowship who have not come to this great central truth? Certainly not. John said; "Beloved believe not every spirit but try the spirits whether they are of God, because many false prophets are gone out into the world."

Now notice the law by which we are to try them, and by it they must either be acquitted or condemned: "Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God." This is the class which the church is to receive when baptized, and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God." 1 John 4:2, 3. This is the class which we are to reject.

1. Now Christ himself made this confession, thus setting an example and laying the foundation for us.

2. The apostles preached it as a part of the gospel (the faith), Rom. 10:8, 9, 10.

3. Paul said, this is the good confession, which makes it some definite and essential feature, 1 Tim. 6:12, 13.

4. God gave the church a rule by which to go, and He allows it to receive those and only those who make "the good confession."

WORSHIP.

Our subject is worship. Our object, to learn what constitutes acceptable worship. Webster says worship is "the act of paying divine honors to the Supreme Being." There are two theories regarding what makes worship acceptable that we wish to examine:

1. Whatever a person does conscientiously is accepted of the Lord as worship. We object to this,

1. Because it gives too great a latitude to worship. Every shade of crime has found an approving conscience. "Whoever killeth you shall think that he doeth God service."

2. The Bible teaches that a man may be conscientious and not be saved. Rom. 10:1, 3.

Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved. For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge, for they, being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God." Paul was acting from a pure conscience when persecuting the church of God. Hence to act from a pure conscience is not enough to make our acts acceptable worship. But the conscience must not be disregarded as a factor in worship. Jesus says: "The true worshipers shall worship the Father in Spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him. God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in Spirit and truth."—John 4:23, 24. "For whatsoever is not of faith is sin," (Rom. 14:23), which means that all we do must be done conscientiously.

II. True worship is conscientiously doing what God commands us!

1. We must be in earnest. Every act must spring from the heart. "This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me," Matt. 15:8. We "must worship in spirit and in truth."

2. The act performed as worship must be commanded of God.

1st. It is wrong to teach anything God has not commanded. "The prophet which shall presume to speak a word in my name which I have not commanded him to speak, or that shall speak in the name of other gods, even that prophet shall die," Deut. 18:20. "But there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed," Gal. 1:7, 8. Notice that applies to those who "would pervert the gospel of Christ." Note also the curses on all who shall add to or take from the word, in Rev. 22:18, 19. Christ says: "In vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men," Matt. 15:9. Then, if we teach anything which God has not commanded—anything for which we have no "thus saith the Lord," we thereby render the worship vain.

2nd. It is wrong to engage in any thing as the worship or service of God that he has not commanded.

"And Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, took either of them his censor and put fire therein, and put incense thereon, and offered strange fire before the Lord, which he commanded them not, and there went out fire from the Lord and devoured them and they died before the Lord," Lev. 10: 1, 2. Why did these men lose their lives? Because they did something "he commanded them not." What was the sin of Moses and Aaron? They also did some things the Lord had not commanded them—presumed to change the command of the Lord just a little. See Num. 20. Many others might be given but these are sufficient. From these we should learn that God is worshiped only by conscientiously doing what he has commanded. There can be no acceptable worship then unless the act performed be commanded by the Lord, and performed by us conscientiously. The substitution of our notions or of any of the doctrines and commandments of men render the worship vain.

Yet there are things done as service to God in which there is neither conscience nor commandment from the Lord. For instance, infant baptism. The most learned defenders of the practice admit there is neither command for, nor example of infant baptism in the Bible. All admit, too, that the infant who is to be the one benefited by the action has no conscience in the matter at all. Then how can it be acceptable to the Lord when it lacks both of the essential elements of worship?

If any one shall read this who has been baptized in infancy, I ask you to think of this seriously. Has not God the right to say how he will be worshiped? And when we set aside his command and substitute something else in its place, do we not offer him an insult? Do you allow your own child to treat your authority in that way? Yet you think you have done no wrong when you change the ordinances of the Lord at will. And would you not like to have a choice as to how you will serve the Lord? Yet you, when other, without your knowledge or consent, have forced you to do something the Lord has not commanded you, accept it as sufficient reason for not obeying for yourself what he has commanded—to be baptized as a penitent believer.

This definition of worship if applied to all our acts of worship would speedily cleanse the church of Christ of all innovations. But the trouble is, we can't get the brethren who have introduced these innovations to make the application. Again I ask, has not God a right to say how he shall be worshiped? And shall we not accept his word as an expression of his will on any subject? Some think, however, that he has left much to our sanctified common sense. But I simply deny this. So far as the acts by which we worship and serve him are concerned, they are plainly laid down in the word of the Lord and nothing is left for us to supply.

But I want to notice conscience as a factor in worship just a little further. It is wrong for a man to stifle his conscience. Such a course persisted in would soon "sear the conscience as with a hot iron." If your conscience tells you it is right to do a given thing, then it is wrong, a stifling of the conscience not to do that thing. Hence, if your conscience approves of your partaking of the Lord's supper the first day of the week, it is wrong for you to neglect it next first day of the week. Again, if your conscience tells you it is right for you to worship God with an organ to-day, then it is wrong for you not to worship with the organ next Lord's day.

Yet there are good brethren who seem to have two consciences, and use them like a man uses his two coats—wears the one that suits the occasion best. When they fall in where the organ is used they put on their organ conscience and work harmoniously. But if next day they fall in where the organ is opposed, at once they don their anti-organ conscience—not exactly anti either, but some sort of a compromise between the two. Now it is right on all occasions to use the organ, or it is wrong on all occasions. If it is right on all such occasions, then it is wrong on all such occasions not to use it.

In matters of this kind, the absence of that which is right produces wrong. Thus if it is right for a congregation to break the loaf on the first day of the week, it is wrong for them to omit it. So if it is right to worship with the organ, it is wrong to omit it. And every time you omit it you not only displease the Lord, but stifle your own conscience.

Now come right up to the question and tell us, does every congregation that refuses to use the organ do wrong? Did you say, no? Then every one that does use it does wrong. There is no room for such a latitude of conscience. Our conscience should be educated by the word of the Lord, and should be positively for or against. But how am I to educate my conscience on this subject, by the Bible when the Bible says not one word on the subject? Then, says one, if I read the Bible I will be without any conscience on the subject. True. Then I can worship with or without. Not so. You can never worship God without a full exercise of conscience. It is mockery and a sin to attempt such a thing.

C. W. SEWELL, JR.

MY CHRISTIAN EXPERIENCE.

During the year 1870, the Lord by his gospel and his Spirit, disclosed to me the fact that I was a lost sinner. Under a sermon preached by Eld. E. McDaniel, from the text, "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord," I was deeply convicted. The impression made by the sermon was lasting. I could not efface it. The pangs of a guilty conscience smote me by day and by night.

As the time passed on, my case grew worse, even desperate. I was one sinner that was afraid of hell. "What could I do to escape it?" was the earnest question of my heart. At this juncture I thought that I had discovered a panacea for my disease. I attended a Campbellite meeting and was eloquently persuaded that all I needed was to be baptized; that baptism was the law of pardon; that in the act of baptism all my past sins would be remitted, and that I would be enabled to rejoice in a Savior's love.

A drowning man will catch at a straw. In my ignorance and spiritual blindness, I caught at the straw, which I hoped would bear me on in safety; with all the sincerity of my soul, I was baptized into their faith. All the perceptible change in the transaction was, that I went into the water a dry sinner and came out of it a wet sinner.

Had not the gospel through the enlightening Spirit of God reached my heart by the hearing of faith, I would have died in that faith and been lost. My situation was distressing. I tried to be satisfied with my new found faith, but conscience would not let me rest day nor night. I tried to pray. I tried to feel comfortable, but, like Simon Magus, I was in the gall of bitterness and in the bonds of iniquity. My cry was, "O, that I knew where I might find Jesus." Many were saying, "Lo! here!" and "Lo! there!" To whose voice must I give heed?

Having been deceived by Campbellism, I was sceptical about following men or being influenced by them. I resolved to read the Bible for myself in order to ascertain how a sinner could be saved. In my spiritual blindness I could not discern spiritual things. The only idea that I could entertain was that if I would do something for the Lord he would do something for me. Campbellism and all other things that I had tried afforded me no satisfaction. I would close my Bible frequently and say, as the eunuch, "How can I understand unless some man should guide me?" I was afraid to let the preachers guide me. What could I do?

The time for the Baptist meeting was coming on. I anticipated it with pleasure. The meeting was conducted by Elder J. C. Tally, a man of zeal for his Master's cause. I had not expressed to any one my dissatisfaction in my church relations. I wished once to inform my mother, but utterance failed me. At the first service of the meeting, and under many temptations from within and without, I accepted the invitation given for expressions on the part of inquirers. I listened to instruction, but my struggles were so great I had repudiated my former faith in theory, but it was difficult for a blinded sinner as I was, to repudiate it in fact. But I yielded to the power of the gospel. I was converted. I expected it to come like "the sound of a mighty rushing wind." It came like the gentle falling of the snowflake. It came by committing all to my Savior, and peace unspeakable filled my soul. Until that moment I had never been able to see how a sinner could be saved, I saw Jesus bleeding, dying for sinners. I heard his words, "Come unto me all ye that are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." I then saw that salvation was by grace—that it was a gift. I saw that Campbellism was as empty as the whistling wind; that it was a scheme of the devil to deceive souls. My continual prayer is, that God will give me long life and enable me to expose its errors and to teach sinners the way of life.—F. S. Rountree, in Gospel Standard, March '88.

I have taken the trouble to copy the foregoing for the purpose of showing how the "blind may lead the blind." I think F. S. R. is in a worse condition now than ever, from this fact, he has preferred the traditions of men to the oracles of God. All this took place not far from Austin, State of Texas.

Every person knows what he means by "Campbellism," as he calls it. And I do not hesitate to say that, notwithstanding his great enlightenment, he has foully traduced the people whose "error" he so deeply deplors; and I hope that the brethren and sisters too will hold him responsible when he so grossly misstates the doctrine held by Christians everywhere.

Had he read his Bible as he ought, he might have seen the text which "convicted" him sooner, for it was there before the preacher found it and wove his theory around it. "Spiritual blindness" indeed! He found the difference between a "dry sinner and a wet sinner," but the "enlightening spirit" came to his aid, and he came very like "Simon Magus." Now, my opinion is, that Simon was a much more sensible man, (though he sinned in another way), for when he heard the preacher, he believed what he taught and showed his faith by his obedience to the command of Jesus, "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

This was too much like "Campbellism" for F. S. R. He lacked faith in the promise of God, and therefore failed to realize the blessing; he was simply a "wet sinner," no wonder he felt bad and from bad to worse, terribly "deceived," could not trust any one; seemed to have an idea that, if he could "do something for the Lord he would do something for me." Well, he could not have trusted his Bible either, or he would have seen by reading what John says: "These things are written that you may believe that Jesus is the Messiah, the Son of God; and that believing you may have life in his Name."

"What could I do?" Let Peter answer this as he did on the day of Pentecost at Jerusalem: "Repent and be immersed every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." No! This was too much like "Campbellism."

But now a change comes o'er the spirit of our "wet sinner" so deceived and so sceptical that even the case of the eunuch gave him no help. Yes! oh yea! the "Baptist meeting was anticipated with pleasure," and he has not let out the secret about his "church relations," did not even "inform his mother"—bore his terrible burden manfully—and "at the first service of the meeting listened to instruction." I wonder if they Tally(ed) with Peter?

"My struggle was great." Poor fellow! had some misgivings after all; could hardly get rid of his "Campbellism." "But I yielded to the power of the gospel. I was converted"—to what, Baptistism? a dry one, too, as he had "repudiated" his "former faith," of course his dipping was null and void, not as he "expected it," "the sound of a mighty, rushing wind." "It came like the gentle falling of the snowflake." How nice he must have felt under "instructions" from "a man of zeal," more zeal than knowledge, I suspect. "I then saw that salvation was by grace—that it was a gift." Well, if he had read his Bible carefully he would have seen that long before. And then he saw another sight, "Campbellism was as empty as the whistling wind; a scheme of the devil to deceive souls." Oh, horrors!!! Well, "expose its errors" as much as you please, but take care that you are not found fighting against God.

FROM G. D. WILMETH.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough,

I have always opposed religious papers, believing that much dissension was produced by them. I have been reading the F. F. for about one year, with continual growing interest, and, despite my prejudice, I am forced to say, that a religious paper, based on truth, and that has for its paramount object the vindication of the pure teachings of God's word, and the overthrow of the strongholds of the enemy, is a great good, and should be sustained by every lover of Jesus in the land.

The only objection I have to the F. F. is, it does not come often enough. I get so anxious for the gems it contains that I devour them so eagerly that when I am through I feel a desire for more. I receive much consolation and light from the F. F., and as its columns seem so free for investigation, that I thought I would ask, through its columns, from some one of its numerous and able contributors, a reason for the formula used in the rite of baptism. Is not the language used by our Savior in the commission rather the authority by which baptism is to be done?

We read, baptized into Christ, Rom. 6: 3, and baptized for the dead, 1 Cor. 13: 29. Will this harmonize with, into Father, Son and Holy Ghost, as is found in new version? Has not this formula been established by custom rather than by the word, just as ordaining pastors by laying hands on their heads and many other rites established by usage, that are unauthorized by the teaching of the Bible?

Now this is no whim of mine, but many readers of the F. F. are interested in this question, so much so that some few have departed from the time honored formula. I asked one of our ablest ministers what authority he had for using the formula in question, and he could only give the old woman's logic, "just because."

For fear that I say more than will be noticed, I must desist. May the FIRM FOUNDATION long continue on its mission of love, is my heart's prayer.

G. D. WILMETH.
Youngsport, Texas.

The phrase, "in the name," means "by the authority of." When Jesus gave the commission to His disciples he said: "All power is given unto me in heaven and upon earth, go ye therefore, teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit."—Matt. 28: 19, 20. Here we have it clearly stated that the command was predicated upon the command or authority claimed by Jesus. This agrees with what is said in Luke 24. "Thus it is written and thus it behooved the Christ to suffer and rise again the third day that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." Here something was to be done "in the name," or by the authority of Jesus.

Turning to Jerusalem we see how Peter preached "in the name" of Jesus. We also learn here, Acts 2: 38 and Acts 10, that he commanded baptism "in the name of Jesus." In order that the obligation to obedience might be apparent, baptism is commanded by the authority of Jesus. It is not by the authority of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, but by the authority of Jesus. He is Lord of all.—Phil. 2: 5, 11; Acts 4: 19, 12.

But baptism is into the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. This is expressive of its transitional nature, for by our obedience we are translated into the kingdom of God's Son, and become sons of God, brothers of Christ, or members of His body, and drink in of that Spirit that animates the one Body of Christ.

The formula, so far as I know, has been always used as given in Matthew, or nearly so. Most of the orthodox use, "in the name," instead of, "into the name." The latter is correct, as all Greek scholars will testify. Remember that Jesus has ALL authority in heaven and upon earth, therefore every act to be obligatory upon us must be by His authority, or "in His name," Col. 3: 17. By obedience to this authority we pass into a new relationship to Father, Son and Holy Spirit, and all this is expressed in the use of the formula given by Matthew. J. W. J.

REPORT OF MEETING AND DEBATE.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

There has just closed at Evant the most interesting meeting and debate it has ever been my good fortune to attend.

The meeting began Thursday night before the fourth Lord's day in July, lasting until the night of the first Lord's day in August, making seventeen days and one night. Eleven made the good confession and were baptized. Bro. Tant did the preaching until Wednesday before the close of the meeting, Bro. Grubbs came and Bro. Tant left for Liberty Hill.

Thursday night a gospel perverter (or gainsayer, I should say) of the Primitive Baptist persuasion by the name of Cayce preached in the Baptist church, about two hundred yards from the arbor. He was invited to come to the arbor, but he did not come. So when Bro. Grubbs was done preaching he went up to the Baptist meeting to hear what he had to say. Bro. Grubbs heard part of the sermon, and asked him if he would affirm in a public discussion at that place what he had preached. He said he would. So they agreed on Aug. 14th as the time. They discussed the four usual propositions.

Eld. Cayce affirmed: "That the Scriptures teach that in the regeneration and conversion of the alien sinner the Holy Spirit operates without the Bible."

Bro. Grubbs affirmed: "That Scriptural baptism by man in the name of the Lord, is for, or in order to remission of sins."

Eld. Cayce affirmed: "That the salvation of the alien sinner is alone the work of God, without any effort on their part."

Bro. Grubbs affirmed: "That the Scriptures teach that the saint or child of God may apostatize or fall away so as to be eternally lost."

The debate lasted three days. Every member of the church of Christ that was present was pleased with Bro. Grubbs' vindication of the truth as it is in Jesus. The second night the Primitive Baptist preached; the third night Bro. Grubbs preached. At the close of the sermon one came and asked to be taken into fellowship again, as he had wandered away. Four others made the good confession and were baptized next day, among the number was Mr. Asa Langford an old man 68 years of age, one of the first settlers of this country. I understand he has been a Bible reader for years, he did as all others will do that read for information.

Bro. Grubbs and Tant are workmen that need not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth; the truth will never suffer in their hands.

WILL UNBELIEVERS BE RESURRECTED?

In the F. F. of May 1st appeared an article from me on the above, and a criticism from J. W. J. I have been waiting for other critics, when I intended to review my critic.

I will repeat a thought in that article: "I have never preached the subject" as there stated, and never made my position public till then. I have entirely abandoned all intention of writing further on this subject. I did not then know that any organized body of people, anywhere, held to the position I then took. Since then I have received two applications from organized bodies who claim this as a peculiar tenet, who desire to aid me in raising this subject and giving notoriety to same. I am not that easily gulled, and lest I should confuse some one, have determined to stir this no further.

I do not believe there is any danger in believing or disbelieving it, and the Scriptures have made plain about as much as I can preach anyhow. Besides, God will do as He pleases about resurrecting.

I have and still hold my position as private property, and state the Bible teaching on that subject in words, without criticism. I have suffered and sacrificed too much in the cause I preach, for me to raise a hobby to ride and make confusion. I may betray men and brethren, but will not betray the Church of God, nor the gospel of Christ, even if I miss being resurrected.

No one need apply further to get me to ride their "hobby." I am 54 years old, and clumsy, and don't like to ride at all. Besides, the Church of God is not crowded and there is yet plenty of room for me, and there may not be in the churches who have sought my aid.

I will preach the Word.
JOHN W. HARRIS.
Uz, Texas.

Bro. Harris has certainly chosen a wise course. Wise because in accordance with Scripture. "If any man speak let him speak as the oracles of God." Strict adherence to this injunction would prevent all speculation and theorizing, and would enable us to be of the same mind and judgment and speak the same things. J. W. J.

FROM BRO. M'CARTY.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have just closed a very interesting meeting near Leon prairie. It was near the line of Leon and Madison counties. We continued the meeting over two Lord's days, embracing the first and second Lord's days in September. Preached eighteen discourses, resulting in nine baptisms.

The night we closed, a lady who was a Baptist came up and demanded baptism, and Bro. Finch, a gospel preacher who lives on Leon prairie, promised to immerse her.

Bro. Finch is well qualified to do much good preaching were it not that he is so hampered with the plow handles. "Surely the harvest is great but the laborers are few."

QUERIES.

Is the Bible, or Word of God, the Comforter spoken of in John 14: 26?

"But the Comforter which is the Holy Spirit whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."—John 14: 26.

J. W. J.

1. Why did not Christ pray in public when he preached?
2. Why did not Christ instruct his disciples to pray to the world when he commissioned them to preach the gospel?
3. Why did not the apostles pray in public at the time they preached to the world?
4. Why do the ministers of to-day pray in public when they preach to the world?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"It requires neither energy, piety nor brains to make an objector and fault-finder."—Christian Courier.

That is, doubtless, what the hypocritical Pharisees thought, if they did not say it, when Jesus said to them that they had made the word of God of none effect by their traditions.

Bro. R. E. McKnight in speaking of the virtues of the Albany church says; according to their ability, "they will pay more for preaching than any other congregation I know of." He says: "The business committee will surely see that they have preaching." Yes, if Bro. McKnight is correct about them always paying well for preaching, the business committee will "surely see that they have preaching." What a blessing to the poor—if they are not too poor to pay well for preaching—is the business committee of Texas. Yes, the poor may now have the gospel preached to them, if they are not too poor to pay well for it. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," has come to mean, under the superior light of our progressive theologians of Texas, "Let the business committee send preachers into all the world, where they pay well for preaching. Why don't you old foggy preachers all catch the missionary spirit? then you would get good pay for your preaching. You might have to work a while on $50 per month, but the pay would increase when you learned the theological tactics and dropped on to church work, cantatas, jug-breaking, etc."

A. J. Bush, the boss drummer for the Texas-Missionary-Society-Christian-Courier Company, is trying to drum up a theological dude for the San Antonio church. He can only pledge $50 per month to begin with, but he says, "this would increase as the work went on."

Now can't some spider-legged popinjay who is an expert at ecclesiastical dramatics make up his mind to squeeze through the hardships and crosses of one month on $50, till he can get this languishing church on its feet again and is training for the winter frolics? If he can forego the pinching ordeal of living one month on $50, he can do better as the "work goes on." This church of the Alamo City which has been nursed so lovingly by its fond mother, the Texas State Meeting, alias Texas-Missionary-Society-Christian-Courier Company has been without a theological dude till its spirituality has about gone down to zero. If it does not rise up and shake itself and get up some lively sociables, jug-breaking, cantatas, oyster suppers, etc., which it cannot do without a theological coxcomb to oversee it, the business committee will have to send A. J. Bush there to pin its swaddling clothes back on it and rock it in the business committee's cradle. Send Sanders down to keep it awake with Samson's Riddle till a suitable dude can be drummed up.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

A writer in the Courier says: "It is a sad truth that we have killed more churches in Texas with the Bible alone than all sectarianism put together has done with their senseless creeds to help them."

What does such infidelic twaddle mean? If W. K. Homan permits such infidelic sentiments to be uttered in his paper without rebuking it, then the Christian Courier will soon become a viler sheet than Mr. Shaw's Independent Pulpit.

"The Bible alone" is the word of God alone. The word of God "thoroughly furnishes the man of God unto all good works." How can that which thoroughly furnishes the man of God unto all good works, kill churches?

He is exceedingly mad with "the Bible alone." He wants something with the Bible, something additional. He wants a human system to back the Bible and insure a salary to the men who play pastor for the congregations. I think this is the same man who was offered a salary of $1000 to pastorate for the Austin church, and considering the amount insufficient, he replied: "I would shave my head and set on buzzard eggs for a living before I would preach a year for that amount."

This poor old superannuated heavenly-livered infidel, and another about the same age and spiritual complexion, who, it is said, sometimes goes to the cities and gets drunk and carouses in bawdy houses, are cutting a wide swath in the columns of the Christian Courier. With such yoke-fellows and a clear cutting loose from apostolic grounds, and a base of operations dictated by a business committee of self-willed popularity-seekers, Bro. Homan will doubtless give us something rare in the way of a religious journal. A. MCG.

PLAYING LEAP-FROG ON EIA.

Bro. Homan is giving his readers an elaborate exposition of Mr. M. V. Smith's position on eia. Mr. Smith is a Baptist who has written a pamphlet to show that baptism has no connection with salvation. This pamphlet was sent to me with a request for me to review it, which I intended to do when I found time. But Bro. Homan is doing it so well that I hope he will put it in pamphlet form for convenient circulation. If he does I will help him to get it before the public.

But I think Bro. Homan is actuated by a bad spirit in this work. He does not believe that it is necessary for people to understand that baptism is for (in order to) the remission of sins. He believes that the Baptists are in the kingdom, are his brethren, in Christ. He knows that, to insist that baptism is essential to salvation, or for the remission of sins, is to antagonize his Baptist brethren and breed and perpetuate contention in, what he considers, the fold of Christ. To do this he must know is wrong. It would not be wrong, of course, if he felt that God required him to contend that baptism is in order to the remission of sins.

But he does not believe that it is at all necessary for people to understand this question as he does; he believes that persons who believe that they have been converted by an irresistible stroke of grace and are baptized because their sins have already been remitted are every whit as much the children of God as if they had been baptized to obtain the forgiveness of sins. Then why contend for that which people need not believe. Bro. Homan knows that God does not require us to contend for such positions. Yes, he knows that God forbids his doing so, if it is not necessary that it shall be understood. Paul says to Timothy: "Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord that they strive not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers."

Then, my brother, to strive with your Baptist brethren over eia, when you admit that it is not necessary that people should understand it, is striving about a word "to no profit," just what Paul tells you not to do. Now you spent four and a half columns of your last issue, and have spent several columns in former issues, doing the very thing Paul teaches you not to do.

Again, the motto of your paper is, "In faith unity; in opinion liberty; in all things charity." Now you know you do not consider the design of baptism any part of the faith, for you contend that it is not a part of the gospel. What is not of the gospel is not of faith surely. So then, you violate the motto that stands at the head of your paper, and the command of Paul when you strive with Mr. Smith on eia. If you do not cease cooling the brotherly tie which binds you to your Baptist brethren, by pulling them over eia, you will some day find yourself where you will need eia badly, with the spelling changed to ies.

If the Baptists are your brethren in Christ as you believe, then when you thrust your opinion upon them about the meaning of eia while you understand that it is not necessary that people shall understand the design of baptism, you fall under the condemnation of Paul's words when he says: "Now I beseech you brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ but their own appetite; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple."

Be consistent, my brother, or you cannot be right. If the Baptists are your brethren in Christ, and it is not necessary to understand that baptism is in order to the remission of sins, you act wickedly to keep up contention between yourself and your Baptist brethren by contending for a non-essential position, which you admit the doctrine of baptism for the remission of sins to be when you admit that people need not understand it. A. MCG.

TO THOSE IN ARREARS.

Now is the time to pay for your paper, if you are in arrears, as returns from the crop are coming in. Remember, brethren, that when we found many of you could not pay your subscription without inconvenience, we ceased to urge you to do so, and had the "red cross" removed from your paper, and bore our financial burden through the dull summer months the best we could without giving you further trouble.

You ought to appreciate this enough to now come to our relief with what you owe us. We assure you we would not mention this matter, but we are now needing funds to lay in supplies for the next volume of the paper. We want to begin Vol. 5 with weekly issues, if we can; but we know we cannot unless our old subscribers pay up promptly and aid us some in getting new subscribers.

Don't think, "it is but a dollar I owe and that amount can't make any difference;" for when the dollars and half dollars that are due are aggregated, they make a considerable sum, sufficient to lift the financial burden of the paper off of our shoulders and give us relief. The fact that you owe but little is the very best reason why you should pay up, because you can do so without missing it, and when you all thus discharge this duty, you collectively hold up the hands of the publishers.

We hope this will be sufficient to stir up your pure minds to the performance of this duty, so that nothing more will have to be said upon it. We heartily thank you all, brethren, for past favors and encouragements.

Yours very respectfully and fraternally,

MCGARY & HANSBROUGH.

THE "MILLENNIAL DAWN."—No. 1

An old friend and brother has kindly sent us the "Millennial Dawn," a book written by Mr. Chas. T. Russell. It has a wide circulation, claiming now to be in its "sixtieth thousand." The brother who sent it to us did not express himself yea or nay upon its merits; but we hear that several brethren who are our old friends, and were intimate neighbors of by-gone days, have become entranced and been "tossed to and fro" by its rapturous disclosures and thrilling prognostications.

On our recent trip to Cherokee we met and conversed with several persons who were very enthusiastic converts to the doctrine of the "Millennial Dawn."

Under these circumstances is it any wonder that we began the perusal of this book with deep concern and unusual avidity? If there was any newly discovered truth, any heretofore unseen rays of light gleaming through its pages, we wanted to come across them—we too wanted to catch a glimpse of those celestial illuminations which have so zealously affected some of our brethren—but we did not intend to run away from "the church of the first born" with what light we might find—as we learn some have who claim to have been enlightened by the "Millennial Dawn"—however large the measure might be that we obtained. No, no, brethren, the church of Christ is the very place for all the light and truth that may be gleaned from any source throughout the universe of God.

If the "book of Nature," the seen or unseen realms, or the Old or New Covenant vouchsafed to man by his heavenly Father, yields additional light to man, the depository for garnering it up and shedding it forth is the "one body," the body of "our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family of heaven and earth is named," Eph. 3: 15. Why flee from that "body" that bears the impress of the "new name" that "the mouth of the Lord named," to one that bears a name unknown upon the pages of God's oracles? Because some undiscovered truth has been grasped! What a flimsy excuse for deserting the ranks of discipleship and dropping the standard upon which is inscribed "the name" of the "Captain of our salvation"!

Let it be ever understood, brethren, that the Church of Christ is a school where the disciples are to be instructed in the word of God and from which they are to shed forth all the light they possess. Here the humblest disciple may gather and reflect all of the truth that the most diligent study of the word will impart, and no checks may be put upon him by any one! If he progresses faster than his fellow disciples and they refuse to accept the light he gathers, and shut their eyes and stiffen their necks against it till he is threatened with expulsion, let him not depart from the "one body," but take unto himself the "whole armor of God, that he may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, stand; therefore, having his loins girt about with truth, having on the breastplate of righteousness; and his feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith he will be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God."

Thus panoplied and armed he may stand his ground in the fold of Christ and put a thousand dissenting spiritual sluggards to flight. No, never leave the fold of Christ to advocate any truth nor to escape persecution for advocating any. All the promises are in him, yea, and in him amen." Though the earth should crumble beneath your feet, or the upper elements should fall down upon you, true disciple of Jesus, stand your ground in the Church of Christ!

We try to make it an ever controlling rule in reading any book to keep the avenues to our heart fairly open to receive any light that may shine upon its pages. At the same time we try to keep the winnowing fan of truth at work that we may not let in the chaff. We never expect to find all pure wheat in any uninspired book, nor all chaff. Our desire is, not to cast out any wheat with the chaff nor retain any chaff with the wheat.

Upon the pages of the thousands of tons of religious literature that are now being belched forth from the presses throughout our land, the finger-prints of Satan's transformed ministers are interspersed with exorbitant profusion. Brethren, we must "WATCH"!

The word of God forewarns us of these dangers. Paul, in writing of a class of false teachers who had even begun their pernicious work in his day, said of them; "For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ." (That is, they were passing themselves for the apostles of Christ.) "And no marvel, (no wonder); for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light," (in pretension.) "Therefore it is no great thing (not astonishing) if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness," (that is, pass themselves for such), 2 Cor. 11: 13-15. And the apostle John, in strains of love, said: "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets (or teachers) are gone out into the world," 1 John 4: 1.

From these apostolic premonitions—and we could refer to many more—we learn that some, claiming to be teachers of righteousness, and heralds of Christ's gospel, are the very incarnate emissaries of Satan. John says we must not believe all of these spirits but try them. What will we try them by? Paul, in speaking to the elders of Ephesus, about these evil workers and seducers, which he said he knew would enter in among them, and told them to, "watch." He said; "Now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and give you an inheritance among all them that are sanctified. That word of God's grace, brethren, will do the same for us, if we will make it our shield and buckler. This same word of God is what we are to "try the Spirits" by, to see whether they are of God.

Well, I read the "Millennial Dawn" with an interest that increased with every page till I had read many pages. But at last I came to the "dead fly in the ointment;" and then I found "the cloven foot" of materialism "sticking out" ever and anon. Cautiously and dextrously the reader is inveigled upon Mr. Russell's very thinly-glossed materialistic premise, from which profusely flow conclusions painted in the most rapturous tints of materialistic enticement, to gratify, "the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life," 1 John 2: 16.

He makes his converts by pandering to the flesh, baptizing them in the slime-pit of sensualism and animalism, turning their eyes from the high plane of spirituality to the gross blandishments of sensuality, "whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things," Philippians 3: 19.

When men and women are grasping after the things of this world, serving mammon, laying up treasure on earth, whispering to their souls, "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry," (Luke 12: 19), they become an easy prey to Mr. Russell's web of materialism.

In conclusion I will say that, in my next I will show, how palpably the "Millennial Dawn" denies the word of God; and I think I will show some of the most pernicious doctrine that has ever been disseminated by any book claiming to propagate the religion of Jesus Christ. Now will those of our brethren who have become enamored with the doctrine of the "Millennial Dawn" give our review a fair and candid reading? They will have from now till our next issue to prepare their hearts for an impartial investigation of the issues. If they fear we will attempt to make any points by unfair criticism some of them can send Mr. Russell our review and he can make his defense. We hope never to be actuated by such a spirit of unfairness as would move us to take advantage of any man's honest convictions.

THE DANGER SIGNAL.

Brethren Bush, Rosecrans and Sanders are getting up steam for fast running. Don't let any one become alarmed. The road is well ballasted, the ties are sound, the rails are of the best steel, the machinery is in good running order, the crew are well drilled, and while they expect to run sixty miles an hour they know how to use the air brakes in case of need. Clear the track when you hear the whistle.—C. McPherson, in Christian Courier.

Yes, when it comes to "air" or gas "brakes" you progressive conductors are "Charley at the wheel." Neither does any one doubt your "fast running." But you are much mistaken if you think you are running along the "narrow way" laid out by our Master. You have jumped the track and are gliding along the "broad way" faster and faster, as "Brethren Bush, Rosecrans and Sanders are getting up steam for fast running." But you need not warn us, of the Lord's plan, to "clear the track when you hear the whistle;" for we are not on your road—we kept "strait" ahead, along the "narrow way," when you all turned to the left and fell into the "broad way."

So you may puff and "whistle" and clatter along down to that hot depot—where there will be "weeping and gnashing of teeth"—just as fast as you please, without taking the trouble to "whistle" at us—you will not run over us. You "think it strange that we run not with you to the same excess of riot; but the time past of our lives sufficed us to walk in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries.

You say: "Don't let any one become alarmed." But with the warnings of God against such a self-willed, stiff-necked and presumptuous course as you all are pursuing and running in so fast, we would give very different advice. Knowing the terrors of the Lord we would persuade you to stop before it is too late. In our great desire to save the souls of our fellowmen from the destroying vortex of hell, we would cry out in earnest tones: Let every one who is "running" so "fast" down this unhallowed, "broad way"—along which the teeming billions have been hurried to death and destruction—be alarmed, yea, greatly alarmed!

Ah, brethren, these leaders of this way of death, who are boasting that "the road is well ballasted, the ties sound, the rails of the best steel, the machinery in good running order, the crew well drilled," who would make you believe there is no danger, are not the first who have drawn persons into this way of death by saying, Don't let any one become alarmed. This trick began in the garden of Eden when Eve was told not to become alarmed, or words to the same effect. Read 2 Cor. 11: 13-15 and you will see where it comes from.

FROM SISTER HANNAH.

Dear Bro. Jackson:

Since some have taken in hand to write the FIRM FOUNDATION relative to the condition of spiritual matters here, in Polk county, Ark., I deem it but just that I also write you a few thoughts, that you and your readers may know the truth, as regards what has been written by sister Taylor, Eagle Hill. The truth should be held very sacred by those who have obeyed the Spirit and are disciples of Christ in sincerity.

It seems that this sister Taylor thinks there is a bad work going on here in old Polk, in the church, and I don't know but there is, but she has failed entirely to locate the cause. She attributes the evil to old Bro. Keeney, an aged, venerable, experienced and true gospel preacher who has come into our midst from Texas; and has been doing some real gospel preaching for us. He has preached only one discourse in the presence of sister Taylor, or the congregation to which she belongs, and I was present at the time, and I know he never preached anything to cause any disturbance, unless exposing error and presenting the truth would disturb them, and I think such ought to be disturbed until they could not rest in peace, day or night, until they obey the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, which made Paul, and will make all who accept it free from the law of sin and death.

I wish to say a few words about Bro. Keeney and the doctrine he is handing out to the people here. In the first place, he is an uneducated man, but he has been preaching for thirty odd years, and he has strictly followed Paul's advice, in two instances at least, that is, he has studied to show himself approved unto God, a workman that is not ashamed to rightly divide the word of truth, and the advice he gave Timothy to preach the word. He preaches Jesus Christ and him crucified, telling sinners they must believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, if they would be saved from their sins; for without faith it is impossible to please God. He tells them, this faith working by love changes their heart and prepares them for acceptable obedience: then he teaches them, they must thoroughly repent of all their sins, confess with the mouth what they believe with the heart, and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and they shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, for the promise is to them and their children, etc.

Now, Bro. Jackson, if this is not the Law of pardon to the alien sinner, if this is not the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, I am free to admit that Bro. Keeney is preaching a wrong doctrine and causing disturbance.

He does away with nothing put upon record but tells the people, it is given by the Holy Spirit and is profitable, etc. He tells all sectarians that their whole system is wroag and proves it, that faith, repentance, confession and wetting is all vanity, and will prove their eternal destruction, if they live and die satisfied with it. He uses no soft soap.

The trouble is, they have a sort of a preacher at the congregation where sister Taylor's membership is that preaches to suit their conveniences. If they are F. F. people so is he, and if they are a mixed up crowd, some having been baptized by him, or some of his sort, and some baptized by Baptists and proselyted by the shaking process, then he leaves F. F. teaching out for fear of hurting some one's carnal feelings.

This is the sort of a preacher, I suppose, they want, but if a man comes along who preaches the gospel as it was preached by the apostles, when we know they only spoke as the Holy Spirit dictated, why then he is a disturber of the peace and quietude of their carnal minds, is at once denounced as a man. This is a strange kind of fix for a church claiming to be the church of Jesus Christ to get into.

Now, Bro. Jackson, this is my first attempt at writing anything to go before the public in a paper, and I trust you will correct and publish it, as it was elicited by the appearance of sister Taylor's misrepresentation in the F. F. of July 1st.

There are a few true hearted disciples of Jesus here at Philadelphia, who meet upon the first day of the week and attend to the ordinances of the Lord's house as they are taught in his word, regardless of the presence of a preacher. We are a little band of true, loving, faithful Christians, who stand firm upon the one foundation in spite of Satan and his combined hosts, let them appear in whatever form they will. We love to read the F. F. and wish it great success.

Your sister in Christ,
M. A. HANNAM,
Cova, Ark.

THE SEQUEL TO THE "SAMSON RIDDLE" PREACHER.

"Accidents will happen to the best of men." I "accidentally" heard what Bro. Sanders said about starving us out because we oppose their human plans and innovations, and he "accidentally" saw what I had to say about him and referring to him as the "Samson Riddle" preacher. I suppose Bro. Sanders got offended at me for what I said by his advising me to observe what our Savior said in Matt. 18: 6, which reads as follows: "But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me it were better for him that a mill stone were hanged about his neck and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea."

The first meaning given by Webster of the word, offend, is: "To transgress the moral or divine law, to commit a crime, to sin." I had no idea I was transgressing the divine law, committing a crime and a sin, and offending one of "these little ones" when I referred to Bro. Sanders as the "Samson Riddle" preacher. I do not believe yet that I did wrong.

Bro. S. exhorts me to observe Matt. 18: 6. I will try to do so, my brother. Surely the old proverb is in order: "Physician, heal thy self." You know, when you came to Franklin to hold that meeting that some of the brethren and sisters were opposed to the organ. I know every brother and sister there, and I know some of the most intelligent disciples there seriously objected to the organ. You were informed of the "objective" cases before you came to hold the meeting. When you got there you ran rough-shod over the feelings and convictions of these good brethren and sisters, and I know some were offended.

The brother who came out to the gate the night I was en route to Austin, wrote me that a certain brother and sister there would not co-operate with you in the meeting because you would use the organ. Now, dear reader, which of the two men (Sanders and McCarty) should observe Matt. 18: 6?

The readers of the F. F. know very well why Bro. Sanders was referred to as the "Samson Riddle" preacher. If you have forgotten, look up the paper issued March 15, '88, and read what Bro. McGary said and why he said it.

And now, since Bro. S. seems to enjoy notoriety through the FIRM FOUNDATION we will, at his suggestion, notice his new sermon, "The Short Bed and Narrow Covering." With such subjects as the above and, perhaps, many others of like character, how can Bro. Sanders say what Paul once said: "For I am determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified."—1 Cor. 2: 2. The above Scripture should read, to suit the "State Evangelist," as follows: "For I am determined not to be hampered by simply 'preaching Jesus Christ and him crucified,' but I will preach 'Samson's Riddle,' 'The Short Bed and Narrow Covering.' Run rough-shod over the feelings and honest convictions of good brethren and sisters by forcing the organ into the worship."

I suggest that, when Bro. S. writes a letter to his brethren in Houston that he revies 1 Cor. 4: 14, 15, so as to read as follows: "I write not these things to shame you, but as beloved sons I warn you for though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ Jesus, I have begotten you through (or by teaching) 'Samson's Riddle' and 'The Short Bed and Narrow Covering.'" Again: "I am not ashamed of 'Samson's Riddle,' 'The Short Bed and Narrow Covering,' for they, (and many more such things), are the power of B. B. Sanders to the drawing of a big crowd." Again: "Go ye State Evangelist into all the State of Texas and preach 'Samson's Riddle,' 'The Short Bed and Narrow Covering,' he that believeth and is well shaken shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall surely 'starve to death.'"

Once more: "Thus it is written (in the Christian Standard and Christian Courier, et als.) and thus it behooved B. B. Sanders to rise from Bryan and be ordained State Evangelist and that 'Samson's Riddle,' 'The Short Bed and Narrow Covering,' should be preached in the name of the State Board among all the Texans, beginning at Thorp Springs, and ye (progressives) are witnesses of these things and behold the promise is a thousand dollars reward." The gospel bedstead given by Paul and the covering found in the righteousness which is of faith is too short and narrow for such men as B. B. Sanders.

We hate to have to say such things but they are true. I hope that all true soldiers of the cross will stand firmly and continue to walk in the "old paths."

A. J. McCARTY.

RELATION OF A CHRISTIAN TO CIVIL GOVERNMENTS.—No. 2.

He gives the cause he has espoused away in discussing the question. He says: "Now there are a number of officers of the government referred to that were converted to Christ, on whom largely depended the happiness, the peace and prosperity of the people, and not a single line given in reference to their continuing in office." Nor is there, my brother, one line given in reference to their ever resigning, or being dismissed from office.

And now, Bro. Durst, I am greatly at a loss to divine how you can (as you do), frankly admit that the happiness, peace, and prosperity of a people depend largely upon those who hold office, and then complaisantly fold your arms, and remain perfectly passive, and permit the negroes, infidels, whisky sots, anarchists, the vulgar rabble, and ignorant and unscrupulous foreigners, who know nothing and care less about our free republican form of government, to proceed to choose and elect those whose province it will be to enact and enforce a code of laws by which your tender offspring are to be governed, after you shall have crossed the Jordan of death. If you can conscientiously do this, you can do more than God has ever or will ever require his creature man to do.

Bro. Durst refers to Erastus, who Paul says, Rom. 16: 33, was Chamberlain of the city, but Bro. Durst says he was not acting at that time. I regret that my brother failed to inform us where he obtained his information in regard to this fact.

And then Bro. Durst refers us to the case of the Phillipian Jailor, and says, that after he was converted he turned Paul and Silas out of jail of his own accord. My dear brother, you are very much mistaken, he never turned them out at all. If you will consult Acts 16, you will concede the fact that you are mistaken. After the jailer and his household were baptized, he brought Paul and Silas into his house and set meat before them, and rejoiced believing in God with all his house. The record is silent as to where Paul and Silas spent the balance of that eventful night, but the next morning they were in the prison, as you will observe from verse 35, "And when it was day, the Magistrate sent the Sergeants, saying, let those men go." Verse 36:

"And the keeper of the prison, (the Phillippian Jailer), told this saying to Paul, the Magistrates have sent to let you go: now therefore depart in peace." Verse 37, "But Paul said unto them, they have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? nay verily; but let them come themselves and fetch us out." Verse 38, "and sergeants told these words unto the Magistrates; and they feared when they heard that they were Romans." Verse 39, "And they came and besought them, and brought them out."

The Magistrates then desired Paul and Silas to leave the city, and they went to the house of Lydia. So that you will observe that the Phillippian Jailer neither turned Paul and Silas out of prison, nor did he resign his position as jailer, and doubtless continued in office, and was ever after a better and more humane officer.

J. L. BOLLING.

In as much as the Scriptures "thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works," and they do not tell us that Christians may hold office, nor give a line of instruction in reference to the duties of office holders, it is a reasonable conclusion that converted office holders discontinued in office after their conversion to God. If not, by what rule were they guided in office seeking, or in political warfare?

For instance, we have two leading brethren in this county running for the office of county judge. One of these brethren is an Alliance man. The other is a strong Democrat. The contest is becoming warm and exciting. Now will Bro. B. give us the Scriptures for this alienation and strife?

In the next place I see that Bro. B. misunderstood my position. I will state it a little differently that I may get my good brother to see it. If a Christian should hold office, on him would largely depend the happiness, peace and prosperity of the people for whom he acts. Then why is it that not a line in reference to the continued work of office holders, and not a line of instruction in their official work? Will Bro. B. answer?

One would reasonably conclude from your article, that all citizens not Christians, are negroes, infidels, whisky sots, anarchists, vulgar rabble, ignorant and unscrupulous foreigners; and if Christians withdraw from politics, these classes will enact the laws and control our tender offspring. This, my brother, is an insult to our better class of citizenship. Look around you at the office holders and good law-abiding citizens who are not Christians. These good citizens, men of honor, integrity and influence, will guard the temporal interests of the country, and enact laws for the punishment of crime. I entertain no fears in this respect. Self preservation is the first law of nature, and all governments, even to the most unenlightened, guard their interest closely by the punishment of crime, to the full extent of the intelligence of the people. I will here give what I said in my article to which Bro. B. replied, and I want the reader to note, that he made no effort to answer it:

"Where is it stated that the thief stopped stealing; that the adulterer ceased his adulteries; that the converted priest ceased to perform his duties as a priest? What converted persons ceased to do, is not stated, but what they continued to do is often alluded to, commented upon, and instruction given for the performance of duty. This is true, whether their acts were good or evil. If good, they were encouraged in them, and directed how to continue to do good. If their acts were evil, they were affectionately warned to cease to do so, under the penalty of final punishment. If then, these converted officers, continued to perform the functions of their respective offices why were their positions and duties, as officers, never after referred to? We find that every other relationship, position, and duty, from the greatest to the least was alluded to, and minutely given, to guide them in the path of duty; but in no part of the book of God is there a single reference to a single one of these officers, after his conversion, in his official position, nor a line of direction or guidance as such. Will some one of our political brethren explain this consistency with their position. A Christian is taught how to act as a friend, a neighbor, an enemy, a husband, a wife, a parent, a child, a rich man, a poor man, a master, a servant, and as a subject of a civil government. Now there are a number of officers of the government referred to that were converted to Christ, on whom largely depended the happiness, the peace, and prosperity of the people, and not a single line given in reference to their continuing in office; not a line of instruction or guidance in these, the most difficult positions, of civil governments. Can my office-holding and political brethren explain this to the satisfaction of reasonable Bible Christians? I know it is not said, in so many words, that converted officers resigned their offices. Yet we know that the incompatibility of the Christian's calling forced them to do so. We know that Matthew resigned his office. We know that Paul did. How do we know this? Their after life is given, and this shows this fact. Then we see that some resigned whose resignation is not stated. May not all have done so? In every case where the after life is given, they ceased to perform official duty, notwithstanding the mention of their resignation is not given. Does not this raise the strongest probability, that if the after life of the others had been given the same fact would have been shown in the other cases? In Rom., 15: 23, reference is made to Erastus, the chamberlain of the city. We see, however, from references elsewhere given, that at this very time he was not acting as chamberlain—not in office. He was the greater part of his time traveling as an evangelist with the apostles. His title as mentioned in the above Scripture, he had acquired by his former office, just as we call a man who has been a general in the army, General, when he has ceased to be such. One who has been a Judge, Judge, after he has ceased to be one. One who has been a governor, Governor, after he has ceased to be so. While then it is not mentioned that converted officers resigned, or were turned out of office, it is, I think, certain that they all did give up their offices."

He next wants to know where I got my information, that Erastus was not acting as chamberlain. I will give my answer in two parts:

1st. Office holding is incompatible with the life work of the Christian soldier. (See my entire article to which Bro. B. replied).

2nd. Because he was an evangelist of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Lord has ordained that, "they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel."

We now come to the Phillippian jailer. Bro. B's apology to the readers of the F. F. for my misquotations and ignorance of the Scripture presentation of this case, is appreciated: but I must suggest that he failed to notice the foundation for my statements. Is it not true that contrary to law, the jailer took Paul and Silas out of the jail to the river-side and submitted to the law of the Lord as taught by these men of God? The context shows to my mind also, that they refused to avail themselves of the liberty offered, preferring to be publicly released.

After what had transpired the jailer would have been a simpleton indeed, to attempt to continue their imprisonment. He brought them into his house and satisfied their hunger, and rejoiced in the blessings resulting from obedience; while these men of God remained to be released by the authorities themselves.

But you say: "He did not resign his position as jailer, and doubtless continued in office, and was ever after a better and more humane officer." If so, the word of the Lord would have given by precept or example something to this effect. As it is silent in this respect, it is clear that converted office holders stepped down and out, and worked in the Master's vineyard. The fact this jailer was henceforth a "better and a wiser man," precludes the idea that he continued a worker in Caesar's government.

If space would permit, I would just here show how the duties of office holders conflict with our duty to God, but not wishing to occupy too much space with these articles, I will reserve the remainder of Bro. B's, strictures for another issue.

J. S. D.

VARIOUS THINGS AGAIN.

We got to Louisa Court House, Va., the evening of Aug. 24th. On Tuesday the 4th day of Sept. the Goshen Association assembled at Lower Goldmine meeting house, within one mile of where my wife was raised. Notwithstanding the incessant rains and bad roads, said association was well attended, especially the second day. There were twenty-five or thirty preachers in attendance, who seemed to have a great zeal of God; but their zeal was not according to knowledge, but according to money, judging from the amount of speaking and talking there was in regard to the money that had been raised, and to be raised, and the little that was said about the teaching of the Scriptures. In fact, whenever people begin to raise money by means not authorized by the word of the Lord, they soon cease to have much use for the Scriptures that "are able to make us wise unto salvation," and "thoroughly furnish the man of God to every good work." They do not furnish the man of God, or any one else, to such means as are used by the Baptists, our brethren, and many others for raising money; therefore such means are not a good work, no odds by whom used.

If I were going to use means not sanctioned by the word of the Lord for raising money, I would adopt the Methodist system; for they can come as near pumping the last dime out of people's pockets as any one else. In fact, I heard of one circuit rider in North Carolina who, after he had pumped out their last dimes, set his pump to work on the sister's soap grease; but for the truthfulness of that I will not vouch.

Is it not strange, that not one of the above twenty-five or thirty preachers will tell sinners what to do to be saved, according to the instructions given them by the Holy Spirit, through the apostles? And yet they claim to be great Holy Spirit men; but the Holy Spirit they contend for is one that floats about through the air, strikes people when and where it pleases, sometimes on top of the head; better felt than described; and never teach or instruct any one: but the Holy Spirit of the Bible teaches, instructs people, if they will only unstop their ears and listen to what it says. See Neh. 9: 20; John 14: 26; Matt. 10: 19, 20.

To illustrate what I said about their not telling sinners what to do to be saved: If they preach to people about the love of God in the gift of his Son, about the crucifixion, burial, resurrection and ascension of Christ, as the Holy Spirit did through Peter on the day of Pentecost, and the people believed what they preach and ask what they must do, they will not give them the answer the Holy Spirit did, "repent and be baptized every one of you in the name (by the authority) of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the the gift of the Holy Spirit."—Acts 2: 38.

Well, what is the reason they will not give the above answer? It is because they are not of God: "For he that is of God heareth God's words; they therefore hear them not, because they are not of God."—John 8: 47. They are not the Lord's sheep, for his sheep hear his voice, John 10: 27. They are not his servants, if they were they would do what their Lord or Master tells them to do, and he tells them to "preach the word," 2 Tim. 4: 2. Well, if they are not servants of the Lord whose servants are they? Reader you must come to your own conclusion about that, I don't know of but two Masters we can serve.

Again, if people, in the condition, or state of mind, that Paul was in when Ananias went to him, were to ask them what to do, they would not give them the answer that Ananias gave him. Well, why? Because they are not servants of the Lord as Ananias was. Acts 9: 6, and 22: 16. When the Lord appeared to him as he was on his way to Damascus, "he trembling and astonished said, Lord what wilt thou have me do?" And the Lord said unto him, "arise and go into the city and it shall be told thee what thou must do." Not "what you may do if you feel like it, you can be saved as well without it as with it," as the lying teachers are saying now; those teaching for the pious unimmersed and all such. Some may think that I am too plain, too rough, in calling the above class of teachers liars. I do not wish to do wrong, and I believe I have the sanction both of the Old and New Testaments in calling them by that name, and when I have the Bible on my side I feel safe; but if any doubt my having the Bible with me, call on me, and I will give chapters and verses, and they are abundant.

But oh, it is sad to think how eager many, very many people are to have smooth things, deceits taught them instead of the word of the Lord. Isaiah 30: 8-11.

Once more: They claim that they give the answer that Paul and Silas gave to the Philippian jailer, when he asked what he must do to be saved, (Acts 16: 30); and the first preaching that I ever heard in this same Lower Goldmine meeting-house from one of the above described teachers, he took the above answer of Paul and Silas to the jailer to prove that people are saved by faith alone.

When the jailer asked, "What must I do to be saved?" they said, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved and thy house. And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house."—Acts 16: 30-32. Why did they speak unto him the word of the Lord? Because, in order to believe as they had told him he must do, he must hear the word of the Lord, the gospel; for faith comes by hearing of God's word. Rom. 10: 17, and John 20: 30-31.

The prophet Isaiah, years before the introduction of the gospel of Christ, said: "Out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."—2: 2. The prophet Micah said the same thing, 4: 2. Now is not the word of the Lord that the prophets said should go from Jerusalem the same that Paul and Silas preached to the jailer? I think all honest, Bible reading people will say yes. Then hear the Savior: "Thus it is written and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name, (by his authority), among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."—Luke 24: 46-47. But he told his apostles to wait at Jerusalem, (49), which they did, and after the descent of the Holy Spirit which was to guide them into all truth, they preached the crucifixion, death, burial, and resurrection of Christ, and when the people believed these facts, being prepared by Godly sorrow to repent, they asked what they must do. The Holy Spirit through Peter said, (just what sectarian preachers will not say), repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit; they that received his word, (whose word? the Lord's word), were baptized. Acts 2: 22-41.

Now, did Peter preach the word of the Lord, the gospel, that the prophets said should go forth from, and the Savior said should begin at Jerusalem? I believe that every honest, Bible reading man will say yes. Did not Paul and Silas preach the same to the jailer and his house? Yes. And as a proof of it he landed in baptism for the remission of sins, as did the three thousand on Pentecost and Paul. Acts 22: 16.

Why did not Ananias tell Paul to believe and repent? Because he had been a believing penitent for three days, and Ananias being guided in what he said by the Holy Spirit did not tell him to do what he knew he had done.

Why did not Peter tell the three thousand to believe? Because he knew they were believers, and being guided by the Holy Spirit he did not tell them to do what they had done.

Why did not Paul and Silas tell the jailer to repent and be baptized? Because he was not a believer; but they preached to him the word of the Lord, in believing which he was prepared for repentance, confession and baptism, for (not because of) remission of sins; for this same apostle Paul (speaking of the gospel), says: "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.—Rom. 10: 10. And as God is no respecter of persons, all are required to make that confession as all are required to be baptized for remission of sins. E. HANSBROUGH. Bibba, Va., Sept. 10, '88.

FROM BRO. HINES.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

"Earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints."—Jude 1: 3.

Sometime ago a Methodist divine came into our little village and proceeded to "do up" what he was pleased to term "Campbellism;" and in obedience to the above caption, we asked the gentleman to discuss with us our respective claims. After some preliminaries, it was agreed that they furnish S. W. Lane and we J. F. Grubba. So we sent the propositions to Bro. G. and he accepted them, and August the 6th was appointed for the discussion to begin. August 6th came and Lane was here, but Grubba came not. And we do not know why—suppose he has gone over into Babylon. Will he please explain?

Fortunately Bro. Bevill, of Georgia, was holding a meeting at Blum, and consented to come over and meet this modern Goliath by inviting that worthy to discuss with him, which, of course, was refused.

I neglected to say, that Bro. Thomas was eager to meet Lane, but the Methodists would not hear to it. Well that they did not, for Bro. Thomas would have exposed their inconsistencies just right.

Yours for the truth,

BRIEFS.

I have been sick about half the time for the last two months.

Bro. I. C. Stone sent us in a good article too late for this issue.

What has become of Bro. Grubba's paper? We thought it had come to stay.

Names of new subscribers are coming in slowly now. We need our energies redoubled.

Bro. J. W. Jackson was in a good meeting in Blanco when last heard from. Several additions.

In ordering the paper or tracts write your name plainly, and give postoffice, county and state.

Now is the time to send in your clubs. Go to work, brethren, and send us large lists of subscribers.

Bro. McGary is going to move back to Austin to give all his attention to the FIRM FOUNDATION.

J. E. Carnes writes from Itaska, Hill county, that he had preached at Arnot school-house and baptized three.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

Bro. McGary's address is now changed to Austin, Texas, Box 36.

Brethren send in short reports to us of your meetings. We could insert a number of them if we had them.

All parties desiring the "Texas Pulpit," by Lawrence W. Scott, will address him at St. Louis, Mo., and enclose $2 for a copy.

Bro. C. E. Holt, of Tennessee, is helping us to have the F. F. circulated in Alabama, as well as elsewhere. He is a firm friend.

Bro. J. F. McGill has changed his address from Grandview, Texas, to Donnell Chappell, Tenn. He says he is reading the Gospel Advocate.

We do not answer questions unless the enquirers send us in their true names. We have thrown several into the waste basket on that account.

Please read carefully Bro. Bolling and Bro. Durst's articles going through the F. F., and hunt up the scriptural references, in order to decide for yourself.

We have received a copy of a new magazine published in Texas by the Christians. It is the Primitive Missionary and Southern Christian Magazine, published monthly by W. R. McDaniel, Bonham, Texas. We will exchange with it. Vol. 1 commences with Sept. '88.

A letter from Bro. A. R. Vaughn, of Copperas Cove, Texas, states: "I closed a meeting in my own neighborhood (where I have lived fourteen years), with sixteen additions; eleven by confession and baptism three reclaimed and two united with us. One of the number was a Methodist lady sixty-seven years of age.

Bro. E. Hansbrough, when last heard from was in Virginia, but his intention was soon to be in Kentucky. He sent us an article which is in this issue. The health of him and his wife is not good. It is too wet and too cool for them there. Bro. H. expects to put in good work for the F. F. in Kentucky during this month.

READ THIS!—Your attention is called to the notice, "Attention. Readers!" on first and fourth pages, and, hereafter, you are requested to make all money orders payable to A. MCGARY, Austin, Texas, and send all letters, and articles for publication, to A. McGary, Box 36, Austin, Texas. Please do not forget this.

A letter from Bro. J. F. Richards, of Richland Springs, Texas, informs us of the sudden death of his brother Jesse Richards, on the evening of Sept. 9th, and was buried the next day. "He was a true Christian in his humble way, and was strong in the faith once delivered to the saints." Bro. Jesse has only gone before us. It behooves us all to be also ready, for we know not when the hour cometh. We sympathize with his relatives and friends who mourn his loss.

FROM BRO. I. C. STONE.

Bros. McGary & Handbrough:

The ordinary reader is not expected to criticize all he reads. There are many things written and published in our religious periodicals which ought never to appear. Bad examples are set, and evil practices given prominence, (which ought to be severely rebuked), without a word of comment.

Now I don't want to be called a croaker, as some have been, when I call attention to certain things which fall under my notice in some of our religious papers which are held in high estimation among our brethren. I will here mention some of the things which I have seen of late:

I saw in one of the Christian papers, not long since, an article from a College President urging the brethren to not recognize longer a preacher as being worthy to preach the gospel except he be a graduate of college. Advising the brethren to see to it, that no one be allowed to preach unless he could produce a diploma from some college. (I suppose he would rather it should be from his college.) Such a rule would debar every one of the apostles of the Lord.

Then I see in another of our sound (?) papers that some college puffed on account of the wonderful work it has accomplished. Listen to the gush of one speaking of this same college. He says: "Here is one college, at least, which is not permitting oratory to become a lost art. The traditions of the place are all against such ignoble decadence. The very air of (—) the college fosters eloquence." Paul did not want to speak in words of man's wisdom. See 1 Cor. 11; 1, 2, 3, 4.

Then again: This same college president to-day, Sept. 12, will be the chief speaker at a meeting to be held in the Fair Ground at Georgetown, Ohio, in honor and celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth day of Alexander Campbell. Yes, they actually meet to-day to worship A. Campbell; and the editor of the paper who advertises this grand meeting in the Fair Ground, says he will be there to enjoy to the full of his capacity the sweet reminiscences of the life and labors of the immortal and once invincible Alexander Campbell.

How long will it take, under such example and influence, for the disciples to be worshipping the supposed saints? Why, I would not even celebrate either the life or death of St. Paul, much less Alexander Campbell. Brethren, let us worship God and celebrate the death of Jesus Christ.

I see in the "Querists Department" of one of our papers four questions as follows:

1. Is it right to have the Lord's supper in connection with the Sunday School?
2. Is it right to let the class choose the teacher, when most of them are out of Christ, and they choose a man of the world for such teacher?
3. Is a man fit for an elder who cannot pray in public?
4. Please give us your views on Sunday Schools."

First answer: "Yea."

According to this answer, the communion may be taken "in connection with the Sunday School." There is as much authority for the mourner bench as there is for the Sunday School. The communion could be taken after that institution, called the Sunday School, had been dismissed. The Sunday School is simply a human institution and can have no authoritative connection with the church—None whatever. For if we can connect one human institution with the church, you can another. So ad infinitum. The communion is a duty of the church and confined to the church, the body of Christ, and to connect it with a Sunday School is to wholly pervert and degrade it.

Second answer: "It is more consistent to have Christians for teachers; but if such cannot be procured, rather than prevent the study of the Scriptures, let any one take the lead."

"Let any one take the lead." Under such rule some would take the lead to deny and pervert the Scriptures. Would it not be a grand example to see Bob Ingersoll leading a class? He has many disciples now who attend Sunday School. How glad they are to get a whack at a class. But this sage answerer of questions would give them a chance. How I tremble for the cause of our Lord when preachers and editors will encourage such dreadful departures from all that even approximates the right. In the name of our common Lord, brethren, will we uphold the paper that wholly repudiates everything not authorized by the Lord and labors to expose every false way? Where are those who have means and who love the truth enough to push the FIRM FOUNDATION before the people? I am too poor myself; but I hope there are those who love the truth and have the means to aid the F. F. and Christian Quarterly Review: two papers that will defend the truth fearlessly.

Third answer: "Not very well qualified; but, perhaps, as well as any in the congregation."

I say that a congregation in which no one will pray in public, is no congregation of Christians. There have been so much improper teaching, and false teaching in our congregations and among the people, that true christianity is but little understood. There have been too much sectarianism and mysticism and spiritualism tolerated among our people for the true spirit of christianity to be fully comprehended. Some people think that, unless they can make a long, loud prayer, full of enthusiasm and very vociferous, that they cannot pray. Let such read the Lord's model prayer in the 6th chapter of Matthew and learn to pray, and not desire to use a great, eloquent flow of words which some call an able prayer. Christianity consists in knowing God's will and doing it. Why should any child of God fear to ask God's blessings and thank God for that already received?

Fourth answer: "Sunday Schools, if properly conducted, may be the means of doing much good, and all Christians do all in their power to aid them."

Yes, "if properly conducted." But they are not properly conducted; and then what should all Christians do? Should they aid them, notwithstanding? We should aid no evil work. Let every true disciple do all in his or her power to put down the Sunday School and introduce Bible reading by the church, and as many as will come together at any convenient hour on Lord's day. Not meet and engage in worship and have the little children, and the larger ones, and the outsiders all engage in singing sacred songs which they cannot sing with the spirit and with the understanding, and thus mock God. If the young, or the old, want to learn the truth, teach it to them; but don't teach those to worship, or attempt to worship, who have no right to worship. Things have become so mixed that people do not know what christianity is, any more.

I am aware that there are some good things being said and done; but that does not justify us in lightly passing by the evil. I know that there is a bright side as well as a dark side; but the dark side is unproportionably large. I shall do what I can and call on all others of the Lord's friends to do so too.

Some have been wanting to know what we, who do not intend to follow those called, by some, Progressionists, and by others, the New School, intend to do. And it has been suggested that we should withdraw from them. Now I suggest, that we are not the withdrawing party. Withdraw from what? We belong to Christ and if any have come unto us who do not belong to him, let them depart; or, if they apostatize, let them go. We only want to remain where we are.

The New School may be the largest part of the nominal church of Christ, and so mixed among us, that the line could not be easily drawn until they depart, so far as to make the distinction clear. Most of them, I suppose, came from the sects with little or no change, and they only desire to return. The true ones who have come to us from the sects on their baptism, will be baptized for remission of sins and remain in the truth. I have said all the time, let them slough off. All those who are not of us will go out from among us. Their preachers and editors are leading out. They will form unions with the sects, as some of them have been doing, until we will be clear of them. Let us stick to the right, brethren, and trust in God.

May grace, mercy and peace be with you all. I. C. STONE.

The day will come when God will ledge over again all those things that are judged unclean.—[Selected.

We wish to offer a friendly criticism on some remarks of J. G. Conner. In the F. F. of Sept. 15th, he says: Godly sorrow is not repentance, (correct) for Paul said it (Godly sorrow) worked repentance, etc., (2 Cor. 7: 10). Correct again.

Turning from sin is not repentance, so says Bro. Conner, but so says not the Savior. Bro. C. quotes Acts 3: 19, R. V. Says, repentance is not a turn, from the fact, that Peter says, repent and turn. If repentance and turn i. e. from evil to right, are the same, there is redundancy of speech which, according to the rules of language, destroys the force of the sentence.

Well, they are the same, but the R. V. has the wrong word. Convert is the word in the King James revision. Which means, to change from one religion to another. Acts 2: 38 has it, "Repent and be baptized." Acts 3: 19 has it, "Repent and be converted." Wherein do they differ?

If a Jew was baptized i. e. in good faith, has he not thereby changed his religion? And when a Jew was required to change his religion for the religion of Christ, was he not required to be baptized? (2 Cor. 5: 17). Paul says: "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things become new."

We gather from this, that if any man is in Christ, he is a new creature, out of him they are old creatures. Now what makes the difference between the new and the old? Clearly, being in Christ makes the difference. Then, if a Jew enters Christ, his religion is changed, hence, "repent and change your religion by being baptized into Christ." (Acts 3: 19). "Repent and be baptized in the name of Christ." (Acts 2: 38). This, to me, obviates the difficulty, and opens the way to inquire as to what repentance is.

The Savior shall testify. (Matt. 12: 41): "The men of Ninevah shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and behold a greater than Jonas is here." The thing that the Ninevites did is repentance, so says our Savior. Then to determine what the people of Ninevah did, is to determine what repentance is. Now turn to Jonah and see what they did for certain it is, the thing they did, was what the Lord called repentance. (Jonah 3: 10.) And God saw their works, that they turned from their "evil ways," etc. Turning from the "evil way," then is what Christ called repentance. Obviously this is its true meaning. See Jer. 18: 6; Ez. 18: 21, and 33: 11.

It might be that, because Acts 3: 19 puts it in the passive voice, that it is to be (the term converted) rejected. So it is in Acts 3: 25—be converted, be baptized. Man has to be baptized, and man has to be converted. This is the way I understand it, and so preach it. If wrong, I would like to know it. Will try and answer Bro. Hollis' call some time in November. In the field.

"THE BAPTIZER AND THE BAPTIZED."

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

By your kindness we have been permitted to read the F. F. for several weeks, and we have learned to look for its regular visits with pleasure. Its mechanical make-up, superior paper, bold, clear type, make it quite an acquisition to christian journalism.

We have just read and re-read Bro. W. P. Richardson on, "The Baptizer and the Baptized." Bro. R. deals with the subject in a very clear and forcible manner, and we find very little in said article to which we object, but would like to add a few thoughts which suggest themselves to our mind.

The article struck us the more forcibly from the fact that, about nine years since our father and mother—now gone to their reward, peacefully sleeping side by side neath the green turf of Mississippi soil—attached themselves to the church of Christ, both previously belonging to the Methodists. My father having been sprinkled was, of course, immersed, and that too by a preacher who was excluded or withdrawn from very soon thereafter, being guilty of the charges at the time of my father's baptism but not known till afterwards. My mother having been immersed was satisfied with her baptism, hence was not rebaptized: said she was baptized to obey God, thought it a command and thus submitted to it, although the Methodist preacher wanted to sprinkle her. Now, the question is, shall my father's baptism be invalid because of a false administrator? Common sense and reason revolt at such an idea.

Again, my mother was convinced by the same preaching, so if the preacher, as Bro. R. puts it, was an administrator of faith also, her faith was as falsely administered as was that of my father, as was also his baptism. Then what of her faith, was it valid? Certainly so, for seed sown on good ground produce good fruit, although sown by a wicked hand.

Now we drift to our final, and to what is to us the most important question, shall my mother miss heaven with all its glories for the simple reason that she was not again baptized? Remember, that she was immersed by a Methodist minister on her faith, not in Methodism altogether, for if so, she would have been sprinkled. This faith produced from a knowledge of the word of God, believing immersion to be the scriptural mode and a part of that "form of doctrine" that frees from sin, thus, as she thought, she completed her obedience to the commands specified as initiatory to her entrance into the kingdom of Christ. She never had, previous to her immersion, heard our brethren preach.

Again, we must say, we are unprepared to believe her faith and baptism invalid. Now what shall we conclude from the following:

1st. The faith of the administrator does not in any way affect the validity of baptism.

2nd. If so, it is possible for one out of Christ to baptize and by this act to place believing subjects into Christ.

3rd. We need not be re-baptized because the act was administered by a sectarian, for the faith of the administrator does not affect the validity of the act.

4th. As "without faith it is impossible to please God," the act must be preceded by faith on the part of the subject to render the same valid.

5th. Believing that "Jesus is the Christ," that baptism is a command and must be obeyed to secure the blessings of salvation, that immersion is the mode and a part of that "form of doctrine" that frees from sin; this knowledge gained by the word of God, connected with the act of baptism, regardless of the faith of the administrator, places a subject into the kingdom of Christ.

So if the conclusions drawn above are not correct, give us your reasons on the subject.

Yours for the truth,
W. T. ROBINSON.
Roan's Prairie, Texas.

THE PRODIGAL SON AGAIN.

As Bro. McCarty said at the beginning of his article under the above caption, there has been many sermons preached and articles written on the parable of the Prodigal Son, and like him, I do not lay claim to any high degree of scholarship, neither do I claim to be smarter than those of my brethren who have written or preached on this subject; but as God does sometimes choose the foolish things of this earth to confound the wise, I thought I would tell the readers of the F. F. what I thought about the prodigal son.

Like Bro. Mc. I do not believe the two first theories referred to by him, because they do not, in my mind, harmonize with the context and other passages of Scripture bearing on the same subject.

Neither do I believe the one presented by him for the same reasons. If I understood Bro. Mc. he claims that the different parables presented in the 15th chapter of Luke are parallel to each other; that is, that the same application that is made of one should be made of all the rest. To this I agree with him; so let us take them one by one, examine and make the application.

The Pharisees and scribes were the ones addressed, but I do not think it follows by that, that they were the ones to whom the parables were to be applied.

1st. "What man of you having an hundred sheep, if he loose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness and go after that which is lost until he find it."

Application: The owner of the sheep is Christ, the sheep are the members of his church, the one that has gone astray is that person who has heard the gospel, believed it and obeyed it; but is like the stony land on which the seed fell, has soon sprung up, but not having much root has withered and died. Jesus, the shepherd, goes in search of the lost one. What? Jesus go in search of one who has wandered away from the fold? Yes! Well, how? Why just like he goes to the allen to call him to repentance, by his words of love. He says to the sinner: Behold, I stand at the door of his heart and knock, if he (the sinner) will hear my voice and will open the door, I will come in unto him, etc.—Rev. 3: 20.

So he says to those that have gone astray: "My little children these things write I unto you that you sin not, and if any sin we have an advocate with the Father, even Jesus Christ the righteous."—1 John 2: 1. Again: "If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."—1 John 1: 9.

So in this way Jesus, the shepherd, the owner of the sheep, goes out to hunt for the lost sheep, and when the sheep hear his words of love calling him back to the fold, he is then found, and by the shepherd brought back to the fold. Then comes the rejoicing, and so with the woman with the pieces of silver.

Now to the man that has the two sons. They are both his children to begin with, so they can neither of them become his child afterward. But one can be obedient in all things to his father's commands. The other may be disobedient, not obeying any of his father's mandates, and finally leave him, go out from under his counsel and by his actions say, I will not have man to rule over me, as did the prodigal. And finally, after suffering the kicks and cuffs of an unfriendly world, he is made to reflect on his deplorable condition, then arises in his mind the many good things in his father's house, and the many caresses and kind and loving words spoken to him in the past, and the many blessings promised by his father if he would only prove to be a faithful son. All this awakens him to a sense of his lost condition and the weakness of his mind in leaving such blessed associations. Then it is that he says: "I will arise and go to my father."

So he who is once a child of our heavenly Father, but from some cause or other has gone astray, or has said, give me my substance, (my liberty), I do not want to be cramped up here in this little company. The world is wide and full of fun; let me go, give me my liberty, take my name off the church roll.

He goes, but not finding all the solid enjoyment in this unfriendly world that he expected, going from bad to worse, friend after friend forsaking him, finally he begins to reflect, he remembers the blessed association that he once had with the children of God, he takes from his pocket that little Book given him by his mother, or some near and dear friend; he reads, he hears the Shepherd calling; finally he says, "I will arise and go to my Father."

I hope to hear from others on this.
Yours in search of the truth.

RELATION OF A CHRISTIAN TO CIVIL GOVERNMENTS.—No. 4.

"There was an office in primitive times called Centurion, whose duty it was to arrest criminals." Where did my brother learn this fact? A centurion was a military officer, and was captain over one hundred men, and my brother says, it was a Centurion who at the command of the magistrates punished Paul and Silas. This is purely speculation, my brother. You may read the whole history in regard to the case of the Philliplan jailor, and reference is no where had to Centurion. Sargeants are referred to as being sent with the message to the jailor, and they were non-commissioned military officers, lawyers of high rank.

My brother very modestly refers to the case of Cornelius, and argues that he would not have been permitted to remain in office after his conversion. Cornelius was a Centurion, a military man, captain over one hundred men, and we have from the record that he was a devout man, one that feared God with all his house, and gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always. It seems that good men were put in office then, for an angel from the resplendent courts of heaven visited him, and informed him that his prayers and his alms had come for a memorial before God. It seems, from a serious consideration of this case, that Cornelius, military officer though he was, was not quite as odious in the sight of God as our brethren who so earnestly oppose politics seem to think.

Bro. Durst asks: "Can my office-holding, political brethren explain these things to the satisfaction of reasonable Bible Christians?" This is drawing the line tolerably deep. Political brethren, and Bible Christians. Will, my brother, assert that they are not as true and loyal Christians in office as out? and he adds that the Scriptures fail to mention the fact that converted office-holders were dismissed from office, or that they resigned, either, but my brother thinks they did, though he says it is not said so in so many places. No, my brother, it is not said at all. Matthew Levi was a tax collector, when the Lord chose him as a disciple, and it cannot be demonstrated that he was ever dismissed from office, or resigned either. He doubtless became "functus officio," dead to the duties of his office.

In order to demonstrate the fact that it is of the most vital importance that we have God-fearing, Christian gentlemen in office, performing their duty, that in the days of the Lord attended a justices court in my county. I was then a practicing lawyer, (but never was law-fully admitted), and the then justice of the peace was not only a Christian gentleman but also a preacher, and a good one, and he was a great pacificator, always endeavored to suppress litigation, and have his neighbors to adjust their differences and dismiss a suit, if one was pending, and so successful was he in this direction, that I was satisfied that there was no money for lawyers in attending his courts, and he proved a blessing to the precinct over which he presided, and my recollection is, that he was then known as Esqr. John S. Durst.

And I desire here to say, that although Bro. Durst was mistaken in regard to the Philliplan jailor, it was an honest mistake; for I am perfectly certain that he would not pervert, or misquote one word in the Bible for a deed in fee simple to this world, and I have ever, and do now regard him as being as pure a man as I have ever met in Texas or elsewhere. He is one of natures noblemen, and I mean no fulsome compliment to him when I say this, for I know whereof I speak.

But while all this is true of him, his position in regard to the exercise of the elective franchise, is not only wrong, but dangerous to religious liberty, and suicidal in the extreme. In a republican government, personal practical attention to the election of civil officers is the price of civil liberty, a negligent subserviency to the worst elements in a community is the greatest danger that threatens its stability. Republican institutions can only thrive where the best citizens are in authority, and whenever we turn over the elective franchise to the unscrupulous, mercenary, and degraded portion of the community, our republican, free, civil, and religious institutions will go down under a cloud of corruption and debauchery, and we may then bid a long and lasting adieu to religious liberty; and, in the language of that good man, "Bill Arp," we will then be able to read Paradise lost without a book.

If the position assumed by my brother prevails, he may live to witness Bob Ingersoll nominated for president, and John L. Sullivan, the great slugger, for vice-president, and then if the Christians in the United States heed the teaching of my brother and those whose views are in harmony with his, then we will have cause to blush and deeply regret that we are American citizens.

With brotherly love,
J. L. BOLLING.

Bro. B. wants to know where I got my information about a centurion's duty. Please to examine Acts 21: 32; 22: 24, 25; 23: 16, 28; 27: 1; 28: 16. I think you will soon learn that my speculations turn to scriptural facts.

You seem exultant in your strength over the case of Cornelius. He was a good man and an officer. Then you say, "it seems that good men were put in office?" Yes, Cornelius was a good moral man. Now who has denied that good moral men were put into office. Bro. B. would seem to argue that the angel appeared to him for the purpose of directing him to a man who would sanction his course as a good officer and commend him in the continued work. I wonder if he is so blinded by politics that he cannot see the irrelevancy of his argument?

Bro. B. knows that Cornelius was not a christian when the angel told him to send for Peter, and that by Peter's direction he became a christian—not a christian officer, if you please. I would suggest that you must find him in office after he became a christian, if you sustain your point. This you should do, or else show that the Lord taught that office-holding is a part of the work of a christian.

It will not do to assume that his good standing as an honorable, moral, military officer was one of the characteristics of his christian character. The casual reader can see that your argument is pointless, unless you can find him a military officer after he became a christian. You will never find this, my brother, for in the New Covenant, "they shall beat their swords into plow shares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation; neither shall they learn to war any more." Hence my reference to political brethren and Bible christians.

Bro. B. asks me the following question: "Will my brother assert that there are not as true and loyal christians in office as out?" Does Bro. B. think that I am simply airing myself through the F. F.? I generally mean what I say, and certainly I would be very inconsistent not to so assert. This is evident to an ordinary reasoner. If my position is true, how is it possible for one to be as true to the Master in office as out?

It does not devolve upon me to prove that converted office-holders were dismissed from office, or that they resigned. As Bro. B. would say, they became "functus officio," dead to the duties of their offices." That is my idea exactly. They became dead or were separated from the world and alive to the law of Christ. Did you unintentionally fall over on my side, or was it a slip of the pen?

You then give us a little piece of history of days of yore to prove that God-fearing christian gentlemen should be in office. But really what does all this prove?

1st. That as an officer, I was a pacificator, in that I endeavored to suppress litigation.

2nd. That you as a lawyer, (and a christian lawyer, too,) quit practicing in my court because there was no money there for christian (?) lawyers.

Now I can give you instances where officers acted honorably toward their constituency who made no pretensions to christianity. But really do you not think some Bible evidences and examples would be more to the point? I wish in this connection to say, that I stepped down and out of office, and have endeavored to work in the Master's vineyard, as he has taught us.

Bro. Bolling also ceased to practice law, and entered the work as a preacher of the gospel, but still holds to a theory, which he has the manliness to say is our theory, which is, that "christian gentlemen (why not women, too,) should quietly deliberate upon the qualifications and fitness of candidates for office, and then repair quietly to the polls and cast his vote, if possible, for a God-fearing, christian gentleman, and then quietly retire." Italics and parenthetical clause mine.

My dear brethren, the theories of men are leading souls to perdition. Let us be careful how we tread upon forbidden ground.

You again introduce my mistake in the jailor's case, which was disposed of in my former reply. I thank my good brother for his laudations, but would suggest that my character is not the question we are examining. The position I have taken, you say, "is not only wrong, but dangerous to religious liberty, and suicidal in the extreme." I am not so much concerned about the stability of republican institutions, as I am about my citizenship in heaven. If our earthly citizenship is of such vital importance, why were we, as christians, left uninstructed in the onerous duties in governmental affairs? "If ye continue in my word ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." This is the freedom about which I am concerned.

If my position is so dangerous to the interests of christians, why is it that we have no instructions in the Bible in reference to christian workers in politics. God is not the author of confusion and strife. We are not told what party to belong to, what political jurisprudence to advocate, and who to vote for. Hence it is not the work of the Lord. All christians are one in the Lord. This union is maintained by the Lord's will. When we pass beyond his directions, we enter the field of strife.

Bro. B. grows alarmingly enthusiastic in his conclusion, and speaks of our turning the elective franchise over to the unscrupulous, mercenary and degraded portion of the community. Better talk and work more with this class through a united body of earnest christian soldiery, panoplied in the armor of the Master and the two-edged sword of the Spirit. We should remain aloof from the world, with its divided parties, where there is continual carnality, and a grasping for earthly fame, and a sordid desire for wealth with its corrupting influences, engrossing the time, and rapidly hurrying many to perdition.

A united effort on the part of all lovers of the truth in the work and worship of the Master, will neutralize the bombast of Ingersoll and weaken the strongholds of skepticism. The blood-stained banner of the Prince of peace, instead of being trailed in the dust at the feet of a recreant soldiery, will then float aloft o'er the field of victory.

John L. Sullivan could then realize the force of the words of the prophet: "Cease ye from man whose breath is in his nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of?" "No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life, that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier."

Dear brethren, my prayer is, that we may not have cause to blush and deeply regret that we are citizens of Christ's kingdom.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The junior editor wishes to say to the brethren that he cannot engage to hold any more meetings for the summer and fall than he has already promised. Appointments are made up to the time of our college opening in October; and after that time he cannot be absent from congregational and school duties long enough to hold a protracted meeting. We regret that we could not comply with all the requests to hold meetings this year; but we suggest to the brethren that, if they will send us some good, pious young men, who are willing to devote their lives to preaching the gospel, we will train them in the work, so that they can soon do as good service as we can. Thus more meetings can be held when they are needed. Congregations could well afford to pay the board of young men, that they might obtain such a training.—C. M. Wilmeth, in Messenger.

We would advise all "good, pious young men" who want to be ground through the modern pastor machine, to go to the "College of the Bible," at Lexington. Bro. Wilmeth can't put up quite as nice a job at Dallas as can be put up at Lexington—he will leave a few old foggy bumps unpolished that would be smoothed off at Lexington. Paul's appointments never were interfered with by the opening of his college in October. A. McG.

WHAT ARE THEY?

Bro. J. F. Grubbs' meeting at Liberty Hill resulted in four additions. There are unfortunate differences among the brethren in that vicinity, which must, if they continue, prove serious obstacles to successful work there.—Christian Courier.

Why did not Bro. Homan tell his readers what those "unfortunate differences" were that are threatening the "successful work" in the vicinity of Liberty Hill? Some might infer that, there is an element among the disciples in that vicinity, whose fleshly minds are so attuned to the music of an organ that they are endangering "the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace" by trying to add such music to that enjoined by Paul in Eph. 5: 19 and Col. 3: 16. While others might opine that some in that vicinity are reflecting upon the wisdom of God and denying the sufficiency of the Scriptures, by advoating human societies to plan and supervise the work that God has "thoroughly furnished" the plan of in the Scriptures. And others still, might suppose that some in that vicinity were advocating the validity of such baptisms as were submitted to without that "faith which comes by hearing the word of God," but upon such as came by hearing the word of false teachers; and that this class were wanting to shake or squeeze such unscripturally baptized persons into that congregation of disciples.

By all means Bro. Homan ought to have told us which of these forerunners of discord is troubling the brethren at Liberty Hill. All such things are "contrary to the doctrine which we have learned" from the apostles. And Paul warns us against the advocates of such things, in the following words: "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them,"—Rom. 16: 17.

If Bro. Homan is a faithful teacher of God's word he will urge the same course upon his brethren. I wonder if Bro. Homan warned the brethren at Bertram, where he held such a good meeting, against such teachers as advocate the organ, missionary society, unintelligent immersion, and other things contrary to the doctrine learned from the apostles? I think I noticed that he received into that congregation some who had been immersed upon Baptist delusion, without teaching them the way of the Lord more perfectly, and baptizing them "in the name of the Lord Jesus." If he did, he acted without a shadow of divine authority! I can show him the same authority for sprinkling a baby that he can show for this thing which he does, and I challenge him to the test.

Now, if he is an humble, earnest, conscientious teacher of religion, he will try to show this authority. But if he is a proud-hearted presumptuous religious deceiver, he will not try to show it, but will pursue the even tenor of his unauthorized way. A. McG.

SOME ASHDODISH LANGUAGE.

"B." in the Messenger, giving an account of his meetings, says of his Callisburg meeting: "Four persons were baptized, one or two Baptists laid down their unscriptural name."

No such report as this can be found in apostolic meetings anywhere in the inspired record; neither is there room for such an inference as will justify any one to make such a report now. These men all know this as well as they know that, no man may add to or take from God's appointments, or as well as they know that, the Scriptures "thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works."

Do they know that it is transgressing the law of Christ to go beyond the examples of the apostles in preaching the gospel, by inaugurating missionary societies through which to do that that the apostles did through the church? Then they may know by the same light that they have learned this, that they are transcending the law of Christ when they receive into the congregations of disciples, without first teaching them the way of the Lord and "baptizing them in the name of the Lord Jesus," persons who are baptized into the Baptist church upon the theory of Baptist doctrine.

Did Luke say, of Philip's meeting in Samaria: But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women, and one or two Baptists laid down their unscriptural name? He did not. If he or any other inspired man had written any such report or laid grounds for us to fairly infer that they would have received Baptists and others on such unintelligent baptisms, if they had found such religionists in their day, then we would have authority for doing such things now.

"B." in the Messenger, says: "Bro. Rogers and Alsop are old land-mark preachers, with the exception that they have gone astray on re-baptism." But "B." must be mistaken, for we have understood that these brethren will not receive into the congregations Baptists and others who were baptized before they were taught—before they had "heard and learned of the Father."

Doubtless if "B." instead of Luke, had reported Paul's action with the twelve at Ephesus, he would have said: "Bro. Paul is an old land-mark preacher, with the exception that he has gone astray on re-baptism." Bro. Rogers and Alsop can afford to go astray from "our plea" when they have the footsteps of Paul to walk in. A. McG.

EPHRAIM IS WEDDED TO HIS IDOLS.

Bro. J. A. Williamson asked the Advocate to "Please tell us whether sect baptism is good or not?" That paper did not reply to this question in any very cogent effort at solution, nor in a very lamb-like spirit.

The Advocate is becoming quite sore and touchy on that question. Bro. Williamson said he had been reading the Advocate for ten years. To which it replies: "If he has been reading the Advocate for ten years he has seen this question discussed more than a dozen times."

Bro. Williamson might reply that, during this ten years he has been reading that paper, he had seen the question of, "baptism for the remission of sins," discussed more than a dozen times! Why is it that the Advocate thinks a dozen times is a sufficient number of times to discuss the subject of "sect baptism," while it places no limit upon the times the subject of "baptism for the remission of sins" may be discussed in its columns?

If the positions of the Advocate in its effort to stabilize sect baptism, is tenable—which is, that persons need not understand that baptism is for the remission of sins—a dozen times in ten years is just twelve times more than that subject ought to be allowed to be even hinted at in its columns. I know the Advocate denies that it defends "sect baptism," and becomes quite waspish when it is charged with it; but this is only one of its technical quibbles."

The Advocate regards Baptists as members of Christ's kingdom, brethren in Christ. Then when it advocates baptism for the "remission of sins" it is simply adding fuel to the fire of strife that keeps the pot of acrimony boiling between those it considers brethren, perpetuates the dismemberment of what it considers the kingdom of Christ, by persistently thrusting among them a non-essential bone of contention. This is presumptuously tampering with and hindering the union Christ prayed for, from no motive but that of stimulating theological polemics, and exercising its gladiatorial muscle.

As long as that paper teaches that it is not necessary to understand that baptism is for the remission of sins, and continues to teach that baptism is for the remission of sins, and regards Baptists as brethren in Christ, just that long will it be guilty of these charges, and just that long will it be beyond the ken of its very logical editors to extricate it from these charges.

A. McG.

TO THOSE IN ARREARS.

Now is the time to pay for your paper, if you are in arrears, as returns from the crop are coming in. Remember, brethren, that when we found many of you could not pay your subscription without inconvenience, we ceased to urge you to do so, and had the "red cross" removed from your paper, and bore our financial burden through the dull summer months the best we could without giving you further trouble.

You ought to appreciate this enough to now come to our relief with what you owe us. We assure you we would not mention the matter, but we are now needing funds to lay in supplies for the next volume of the paper. We want to begin Vol. 5 with weekly issues, if we can; but we know we cannot unless our old subscribers pay promptly and aid us some in getting new subscribers.

Don't think, "it is but a dollar I owe and that amount can't make any difference;" for when the dollars and half dollars that are due are aggregated, they make a considerable sum, sufficient to lift the financial burden of the paper off our shoulders and give us relief. The fact that you owe but little the very best reason why you should pay up, because you can do so without missing it, and when you all thus discharge this duty, you collectively hold up the hands of the publishers.

We hope this will be sufficient to stir up your pure minds to the performance of this duty, so that nothing more will have to be said upon it. We heartily thank you all, brethren, for past favors and encouragements.

Yours very respectfully and fraternally,

McGARY & HANSBROUGH.

GO WHERE YOU BELONG!

"Baptism rightly administered unites with Christ. The editor of the Baptist Teacher affirms this truth. Peter affirmed the same on the Day of Pentecost. This Baptist sees the truth as the Christians have seen it during the past 60 years. But the 'Land-markers' of the Baptist Israel are crying out 'Campbellism,' to kill the truth taught by the Baptist Teacher. The Lord deliver us from the power of prejudice in all things."—Christian Courier.

You had better pray to be delivered from your own folly, and wicked work of division. It is supreme folly to teach that baptism "unites with Christ," or is for the remission of sins, if it is not necessary that people shall believe it; and you teach that they need not, that a baptism submitted to in utter ignorance of its design is just as valid as one intelligently submitted to. A man had far better be spending his breath whistling five to six miles than to be preaching baptism for the remission of sins, or for union with Christ, if it is not necessary for people to believe it; for his whistling would be merely a waste of time and breath; but preaching baptism for the remission of sins, if it need not be believed, is both a waste of time and a perpetuation of strife and division among those whom you consider brethren in Christ, Baptists and Christians.

Suppose Peter did affirm that baptism is for the remission of sins, other men deny it and preach that denial and baptize those who publicly state that they believe that denial, and you consider the baptism of such as valid as the baptism of those whom Peter baptized on the day of Pentecost.

The Baptist Teacher and the Christian Courier are both fomenters of discord among brethren in Christ, if the Courier's position is correct about the Baptists being in Christ. They had better cease "disturbing peaceful churches" of their brethren with their hobby of baptism for the remission of sins.

Far better would it have been for the church if, "for the past sixty years," the Christians had kept their mouths shut about this non-essential doctrine, (non-essential if the Courier is right), of baptism for the remission of sins. It has divided these the Courier considers brethren in Christ and has kept widening the chasm between them till it has become a great gulf.

The very thing that the Courier ought to do, and that God requires done, if the position of the Courier is right, is to lead its readers into the Baptist church and make a full surrender, reserving only the right to wear the name of Christian instead of Baptist. A. McG.

LAYING HANDS ON ELDERS—IS IT AUTHORIZED?—MANY OF OUR BRETHREN ANSWER AFFIRMATIVELY; BUT I DENY IT.

Now, since there is a very urgent and general demand on the part of our readers for a solution of this question, that a unanimity of sentiment upon it may prevail among us, I hereby tender my services upon the negative side of the question and shall be pleased to fairly divide space with any brother who may espouse the other side. Some of my warmest friends and most intimate brethren entertain the opposite view.

But if we cannot thoroughly discuss this or any other biblical question without marring in the least the good feeling that now exists between us, it is because somebody has and is nursing some pet in his heart that ought not to be there. I may be wrong in the view that I hold on this question; if I am I know that I am willing for it to be shown that I am, for my own good and the good of others. And I don't ask for "the sword" to be oiled in its use upon me in the strokes necessary to put me right.

One old brother told me, while I was in San Saba county that, some of the brethren holding the opposite view, (I believe he said Bro. Jackson), would "whip" me terribly on this question. Another old brother, whom I esteem as a father, has written me that, "if Bro. Jackson could not whip me on the question," he could. So we see there is no lack of advocates for the affirmative side of the question.

But I shall not select my man—let them do that, and let him clearly lay before our readers the "thus saith the Lord," the examples, or necessary inference from which he derives his authority for "laying hands on elders and appointing them to the work." In my reading my eye has never fallen on it. I have found where hands were laid on, but not to appoint to the eldership, nor to appoint to anything else. One well developed case will satisfy me, and then I will cease my opposition to the practice and hereafter advocate it with much more warmth than I have ever opposed it. If our brethren who hold the opposite view cannot clearly develop such authority from the Scriptures, then to continue to practice it is to act precisely as our brethren do who shake immersed sectarians into the congregations.

I do hope none of the good brethren who are so valiantly battling with us against innovations and departures, and deviations from the authorized way, will contend for this practice, which seems to me to be a Romanism, if they can not establish authority for it by an appeal to the Scriptures. The best way to settle the question is to discuss it pro and con as I have herein suggested, so that both sides may be fairly presented and fairly criticized.

I had intended taking up the question in an off-hand way, because so many were writing and asking for my views on it; but since the brethren who entertain the opposite view are so confident of their ability to establish the affirmative side of it, I shall wait to see their opening argument, when I will either accept it or give my reasons for not doing so. Come on brethren, with an eye single to "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

I know that it is thought by many that, a knowledge of the Greek language is necessary to an exhaustive examination and elucidation of this question. While it is true that a knowledge of the Greek greatly facilitates the investigation—if the possessor of that knowledge is not trammelled by biased tendencies, the greatest degree of erudition and sagacity are so far from insuring immunity from the deleterious effects of bias and prejudice, that, this danger is multiplied a hundred fold when the ripest scholarship is combined with these overshadowing and pernicious obstructions. Again, about ninety-nine out of every hundred who are thrusting their Greek criticisms upon the public, are mere smatterers and not scholars at all.

But too much should not be deferred to true scholarship even; for our heavenly Father has so "thoroughly furnished the man of God unto all good works," in the Scriptures, that any humble disciple who will clear his eyes of the "motes" and "beams" of bias and prejudice and will open them fairly and freely to the divine light as it blazes upon the pages of inspiration will obtain far more light than the most profound Greek scholar who cannot free his eyes of these darkening things.

If there is authority in the Scriptures for the practice of laying hands on elders in appointing them to the oversight of the congregation, any man who is familiar with the divine record can show that authority; and that is just what I want to see, and just what I do not believe any man can show. Let not the brother who undertakes to show this authority, take his "text" from anything I have said in this but let him come right up to the work and develop his authority from the word of God, which "thoroughly furnishes" him, if it is a good work to lay on hands. "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."

Some say, it will not do to discuss this question because so many hold the opposite view—that it will offend many who will withdraw their support from the F. F.; and, that the enemy will say, "they are divided among themselves." To this I only have to say, that if we have any readers who will withdraw their support because of a fair investigation of any question that may arise, let them go, we want no such narrow-minded readers, had rather loose than retain such, if we have them on our list—I do not believe we have.

Then, again, if we are divided on this question, it is best to realize it, and like true brethren, appeal to the word of God to settle it and abide the decision. Let the enemy say what he may, he cannot hurt us if we are willing to humbly and reverently bow to the divine authority; and if we are not he ought to hurt us. Let us, "be not ignorant, but knowing what the will of the Lord is."

It is high time that the friends and the enemies of the FIRM FOUNDATION were knowing that, this paper is for the truth, and nothing but the truth, and that it expects to travel upon a plane pre-eminently above the grovelling ways that follow after the voice of the people, and cater to the demands of popularity. Perhaps it would be best to settle other questions before we devote too much time to this one; but as there seems to be an urgent demand for a better understanding of this question for practical purposes among the brethren, the FIRM FOUNDATION will devote a part of its columns to a faithful study of the question. As we are after the "light" it will not do to be afraid of it at any time, when and where it may shine. A. McG.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have seen a number of articles of late in the FIRM FOUNDATION, and other papers, on the subject of Sunday Schools; and serious objections urged against them.

From what I see, I am of the opinion that, the editors and contributors of the F. F. are, in the main, opposed to Sunday Schools. I am a well-wisher of the F. F., and greatly desire that it be right on this, as well as all other subjects.

First, I wish to state that I am most bitterly opposed to Sunday Schools as they are gotten up and carried on by our brethren in many places; and in all cases where the impression is made that the Sunday School is a different institution or organization to the church, then it is hurtful, dangerous, and a drawback to the good of humanity. When thus understood, (that is, a separate work from the church), then it is saying, that the church is not sufficient of itself to meet the wants of man.

Where, then, is the remedy, or how can we reconcile the brotherhood, and have peace and union on this subject? It has been said, that the church at McMinnville is one of the model churches in Tennessee, and hence I wish to state what we are doing here, and see if the objection is not removed.

First, we drop the name, and have nothing that we call Sunday School. Neither have we any officers, such as superintendents, secretaries, or any such thing, and hence no organization aside from the church; and when we meet on Lord's day morning, some brother takes charge or goes forward and introduces the work; all under the special oversight of the elders. We read the National Lesson, no book save the Bible used; no paper used in the exercises; have a number of songs, the church book only used. (I mean the same song book that we use all the time). Then some brother leads in prayer, after which the various teachers take charge of the various classes, all in the Bible; and about one hour is spent in teaching the Scriptures to all who come.

Next, a few minutes recess, then called together again by song, and some of the brethren go forward, read, and offer such comments as the occasion requires, administer the supper and close.

Now you plainly see, as I think, that no one can object to what we do. If there is a brother or sister who reads this, who has any objections to what we do, I wish they would let me know by private letter, or public, so we will be able to right the matter, if it be wrong.

Hence, you see, that it is the Church at work in McMinnville, and not a Sunday School, and all that is necessary to accomplish this desired end is to drop the name Sunday School. So you see, there is something in a name after all.

Our children being thus brought up and thus educated, it is no trouble as a rule, to get them in the church; and the bone and sinew of the congregation at McMinnville are those who were thus brought up. Like Timothy, "From a child thou hast known the Scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation."

We have no organ in the church, yet I often hear it said, that many come to our church to hear singing, or in other words, music, which we make with the instruments God gave us. Hence all the book we want is the Bible, all the organization we want is the church, and all the work we need can be and is done by the church, and when thus operating, we can say we have no side show, or something the Bible says nothing about. Yet you see that we do all the work that any Sunday School can do. Hence you see that, if we drop the name and officers, we have left all we want or need to do the same work. I submit this for the consideration of the brethren, if thought worthy of a place in the FIRM FOUNDATION.

FROM SISTER NICHOLS.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Excuse me for putting in an appearance so soon again. I have no relatives in Christ save one sister, though many in the flesh; I am baffled daily for Christ's sake. Only a short time since, while on a visit to this sister, my soul was grieved at hearing the inconsistencies of the members of the church of Christ criticized in my presence.

Oh that we all would practice what we preach—baptism for the remission of past sins—alas, some practice differently. One said she was going to be baptized and unite with the people of God. Another says, "why be baptized again, the Campbellites will take you without it." I could stand no more, heart ached, I felt as if I should suffocate with shame for those who would take them, to think that any one who claims to be a follower of the meek and lowly Jesus, and pretend to understand and preach his word, could practice such a destructive error. Oh, for God's sake, never be guilty of such dishonesty with God, your souls, and the souls of others.

Truly I can say as did dearly beloved Paul, I die daily for Christ's sake. It hurts me oh so much worse for my brothers and sisters in the Spirit to deal treacherously with the word of the Lord, than to have my relatives in the flesh do and say the worst they can of me. When it is only me, the cause of Christ does not suffer so.

I informed those ladies that no true disciple of Christ would knowingly take one who had been baptized into the Baptist church, into the church of Christ on their Baptist baptism. Why will so many put a stumbling block in the way of the people? "Oh consistency thou art a jewel."

God speed the day when all Christians will speak and practice the same thing, and that too the word of the Lord, by his authority; then we can defend his truth without having it said, we do not practice what we preach, we are divided. Oh that it was as Christ prayed it should be, all one, as he and the Father are one.

May God bless the F. F. and strengthen the hearts and hands that are holding it up, and sending it out to preach the word. With love to all, I remain yours,
M. A. NICHOLS.

ONE DAY WITH THE METHODISTS.

I went to church last Sunday to hear a Methodist preach, and will write you a little of what I heard.

The preacher's text was, "Satan Hindered." He first propounded the question, "Who is Satan?" Answered that he did not know, but that he went about seeking whom he might devour; he got into little boy's and girl's hearts and kept them from the mourner's bench; he got into old boy's and girl's hearts and told them of the pleasures they would lose if they sought religion; he got into the old people's hearts and told them they were too old to seek religion; so he kept them all from the mourner's bench. He did a great many strange things; among others, he invented hip pockets in young men's pants to facilitate the carrying of pistols.

After telling of the freaks of the Devil, the preacher asked every one who wanted to be prayed for to come and give him their hand. He said he would not open the altar until night, but he wanted to know how many wanted to be prayed for.

I may have been very obtuse but I could not see what the prayers were to be offered for, unless it was to be freed from the Devil's inventions, as he did not mention Christ in his sermon. A great many young people and children went forward and gave him their hand. He then prayed what seemed to me a prayer of mockery, trying to tell God his duty to this poor dying world, and begging God to do his duty. I whispered to a lady to know if it was our duty to pray for him that he might read the word of God aright. She told me that the Devil had me. After the prayer the preacher told the prayer seekers, that they must not go by their feelings, or the devil would get them, but they must come to the altar and they, (the preachers), would help them get religion.

How far away God must be from them! Not one word of Scripture was quoted in this remarkable sermon. The devil, not Christ was preached. My little daughter asked me as we were going home: "What did all those little ones go up and shake hands with the preacher for?" I told her I did not know, and asked her if she knew what the preacher talked about? She thought a minute and answered, "The Devil."

I wish to ask a question: Is it right to take children to such places even if we have no other place to go? We have no congregation here. Your sister in Christ.

FROM BRO. CAMPBELL.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough,

With your permission, I will report another meeting held by the church at this place. Bro. J. N. Warlick, the boy preacher did the preaching. Visible result, three confessed Christ and were buried with him in baptism; a congregation was set in order by mutual agreement, discontinuing our old organization at Caddo Grove, and organizing here, about 75 taking membership. Bro. Warlick, though young, is too well known to need a word of praise from us; though I must say, that we are well pleased with his work here. He is faithful and true to the apostolic order, both in work and worship. Success to the F. F.

Your brother in Christ,
G. M. CAMPBELL.

NOTICE TO PREACHERS.

The Church of Christ worshipping at Kaufman, Texas, to the preachers of the Gospel, greeting:

There is an organized congregation of Christians at Kaufman, Texas, with elders and deacons, trying to keep the "Faith" and the ordinances as they were delivered to the Church by the Apostles; meeting on Tuesday nights in prayer meeting for worship and exhortation, in the Sunday School at 9:30 a. m. on Lord's day for studying the Word of God, and at 10:30 a. m. on the first day of the week "to break bread." All preachers who are in good standing with their home churches will receive a welcome by this congregation, in passing this way, and are cordially invited to stop and preach for us in our house of worship; but they are kindly requested not to make arrangements and appointments for holding protracted meetings with and for this church without a call from its elders—or at least an understanding with them.

FROM BRO. KENNEDY.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I am getting the F. F. regularly though it has not been changed from Upper Penasco to Kennedy, as I requested some time ago.

Bro. McGary, when I read the many encouraging letters from our different preaching brethren, it makes me feel like dropping everything and drawing the "sword" and entering the fight. Since my first letter I have received just thirty-six letters from brethren in Alabama, Arkansas, Wyoming Territory, Tennessee and Texas all saying they had read my letter in the F. F. and all asking questions about this country. If these brethren would send self-addressed envelopes with stamp on them, and ask what they want to know about this country, on a piece of paper, leaving space by each query for reply, instead of saying, "tell me all about the country," I would try to answer them all.

I see a letter from Bro. A. G. Ament in the F. F. of Aug. 15, in which he tells of an old sister, the wife of an old preacher who is dead (Bro. K. S. Johnson), who wanted to take the F. F. but was not able. He asks you to send her the paper if you are able to send it to widows and orphans. Now on reading this it occurs to me that this would be a good way for brethren who have money to use it. Why not our brethren who have plenty of this world's goods send in a dollar to send the F. F. to just such people as sister Johnson. Brethren, it would be some consolation to me to know that, if I should die and leave my wife a widow that my brethren would think at least enough of her to see that she was supplied with religious literature, in case she became too poor to buy it. I have no doubt but what Bro. McGary has sent the paper at his own expense. But then this is only one case in many. So let us send in the dollar. Here is mine to pay for the F. F. for sister Johnson one year. I never saw sister Johnson nor Bro. Ament, but both are at work, preparing for that grand meeting which will soon take place near the Palace Royal of Almighty God.

Bro. McGary let us hear how your tent business is getting on. Don't give up the idea of getting it. Certainly each one of your subscribers will send the amount you ask. Let us know just before you fall with it.

We have had lots of rain and prospects never looked finer.

Your brother,
S. E. KENNEDY.

REPLY TO G. H. M. WILSON.

In the FIRM FOUNDATION of Sept. 15, '88, is an article from the above writer in which he criticises an article I wrote in same paper of July 1st, on "What is Truth."

He says, "This is a question in which I delight, as every one should." We are certainly agreed in that, that all ought to delight in knowing that truth that the Savior told the disciples that they should know, and that it should make them free; free from what? Why, sin. In that I have no doubt we agree.

He then quotes what I say about the sects not preaching the truth of which the Savior speaks, and expresses great sorrow that I "should be so rash as to brand with falsehood the denomination, or sect, to which I belong." Suppose I do belong to a sect, as he does, then we are in a damnable condition, for Peter in speaking of heresies or sects says so. 2 Peter 2: 1.

How are these damnable heresies brought about? Why by false teaching as the same verse shows, and that false teaching consists in denying the Lord that bought them. How do they deny the Lord that bought them? Why by denying his word. The Lord says: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16: 15, 16. But the sect to which you belong teaches, he that believes is saved and must be baptized because he is saved, and to get into some sect of the Baptist sect, thereby denying the Lord that bought them. I do not know to what sect of the Baptist sect our friend Wilson belongs.

Again: The Lord through his inspired apostles said to three thousand Jews, who believed that Jesus had died, been buried, risen and ascended to heaven, been made both Lord (lawgiver) and Christ, and were pricked in their hearts by the sorrow produced by faith in the above facts, "repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."—Acts 2: 38.

Now, sir, when they complied with what the Lord, by the Holy Spirit through the apostles, told them to do, were they made free? Did they know the truth of which the Savior spoke? I have been hearing the sects preach all my life, and I never heard one of them give the answer that the Holy Spirit gave as above. Have you?

Again he says: "Every man and woman of any degree of intelligence, knows that the Baptists of all others are the people who teach that God alone converts the soul." The Lord, through his prophet David, says the law of the Lord is perfect converting the soul. Denying the Lord again, unless God and the law of the Lord are the same.

He says: "Baptists alone believe and teach that, 'we are justified by faith and have peace with God,' that 'the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth from all sin.'" You are mistaken, my dear sir, or misrepresent others, when you say that the Baptists alone teach justification by faith and peace with God, and that the blood of Christ cleanses from all sin. I have heard others, many others, teach it, and I have heard others, and the Baptists, too, teach that we are justified by faith alone, and when they do that, they are patterning after him that deceived our mother Eve in the garden of Eden, by adding a smaller word (not) to the word of God, and it is by patterning after him that all sects are made.

He says again, in speaking of conversion: "God in all the work, no conversion without his immediate power, without baptism, without penance, or anything dependent on man."

There is no conversion without His power, which is the gospel.—Rom. 1: 16. But, you see, he had to pattern after the wicked one again by adding that long word immediate, and then he goes on and says, "without baptism, without penance, or anything dependent on man." Does not faith depend on man? The Savior says: "You believe in God believe also in me."—John 14: 1. Is not believing an act of man? Paul says: "But now God commandeth all men everywhere to repent," (not to do penance).—Acts 17: 30. Is not repentance an act of man, to be performed by him, without which he cannot be saved? And he says, "without baptism." Does not Peter say, we are saved by baptism, 1 Peter 3: 21. Denying the word of God again.

He says: "There are three millions of Baptists in the States and Territories besides the many thousands in other countries, who believe and teach as set forth above."—Yes, it is their believing and teaching as set forth above that make them sects, heretics, and as Peter says, damnable; and if friend Wilson had been at Jerusalem when Peter told the three thousand to save themselves, he would doubtless have told him to stop, that he was mistaken, notwithstanding he was directed in what he said by the Holy Spirit. Ah, but friend Wilson would have interpreted it differently, and would have preached his understanding of the word instead of the word, and it would not have made even good nonsense.

FROM BRO. LAXSON.

Dear Bro. McGary:

You will please find enclosed $1 for the tent, 50 cents of which was handed me by Mrs. T. E. Brawley, and also 10 cents for one copy of "Zeke Jackson and the Methodists."

We hope you will come and preach some for us as soon as you can. There is a vast territory southwest of San Antonio destitute of any gospel preacher, except one who is very old and infirm.

Bro. S. W. Smith, an able and earnest proclaimer of the ancient gospel, has removed to Hood county.

There are a great many disciples scattered through the country. At several points congregations have been organized, but we have no houses to worship in.

If you know of any good preacher, such as Bro. I. C. Stone, who can afford to live and labor among poor people please let us know.

I have been unable as yet to secure any subscribers for the FIRM FOUNDATION. It is my earnest desire to see it become a weekly, for I consider it the best and ablest paper published by the brethren.

May God bless and prosper you in your good work, is the earnest prayer of, your brother in Christ,
JESSE LAXSON.
Carizzo Springs, Texas.

FROM BRO. AMENT.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Enclosed I send another dollar which a friend of mine gave to me and requested me to have the F. F. sent to a friend of his in Missouri, whose name and address is as follows: Miss Dollie Mobley, Kearney, Missouri.

In the way of news, Bro. Hawkins disappointed us not only grievously but injuriously, without ever writing us a word before or after same, and that too after coming by and staying with me two days on his way to Georgetown, his last meeting before ours. I can only account for him doing so by surmise; and that I will not express until I find he will not answer me.

We have now affected arrangements with Bro. J. R. Lane to hold a meeting, to begin Saturday night before the third Lord's day in this month.

On the first Lord's day of this month I baptized the last one of our (claimed) members in from the sects, who had never been baptized. We have them all in Christ now. On last Lord's day while singing our closing hymn, two came forward and expressed a desire to make the confession and to be baptized. I announced that we would meet at the river at four o'clock, which we did, and I baptized them in the name of the Lord Jesus for the remission of their sins. So we now have Bro. and sister D. B. Hinman in Christ with us, to whom I sent the F. F. in my last report.

So you see, keeping an orderly house for the Lord, and sending the F. F. out, will preach the gospel. Success to the F. F.

As ever, your brother in Christ,
A. G. AMENT.
Eagle Springs, Tex., Sept. 12, '88.

SEVERAL THINGS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I am about thirty miles from home, at my wife's father's. I had intended to return home to-day, but it has been raining all day, so I concluded to improve the time in writing to the F. F. Life is entirely too short for us to idle it away. Let us work while it is day.

Bro. W. D. Craig and I closed a meeting near Smithville, Ark., last Friday night, Aug. 24, with two additions. Bro. C. is a good preacher, and ought to be well supported.

What has become of Bro. James' series of articles on the "Division of the Word," and Bro. Tant on the "Church of Christ?" I had a great deal of writing on the subject, but after E. HANSBROUGH.

clear.

Messrs. Spencer & Hill,

before BRETHREN:—I received Aug. 7, '88, and say.

Our sectarian friends claim that, because John the Baptist, Christ and Paul mentions repentance before faith that it necessarily follows that repentance must come first. I beg leave to call their attention to the following: Peter speaking concerning the death of Christ said: "Whom they slew and hanged on a tree."—Acts 10: 39. Here Peter mentions the slaying of Christ, prior to his being nailed to the cross.

Again, Paul says: "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."—Rom. 10: 9. Here Paul mentions confession before belief.

Now then, if repentance must come before faith because John, Christ and Paul mention repentance first, then was Christ slain before he was hanged on the tree because Peter mentions his slaying first; and we must confess that Jesus Christ is the Son of God before we believe it, because Paul mentions confession first?

A Methodist preacher recently tried to reduce to an absurdity the idea of putting on Christ in water baptism by saying: Paul says, "As ye put on Christ so walk ye in him; so if you put Christ on in the water, walk in the water, hunt more water and deeper water!" What a profound argument! He had forgotten, probably, about their claiming to put on Christ on their knees in the straw at that. I would therefore say to my Methodist friend: If you put on Christ on your knees, walk on your knees; but if they get too sore, if you put Him on in the straw, work in the straw, hunt more straw and deeper straw!

The simple meaning of the passage under consideration is this: In obedience to Christ we put Him on; and as we put him on in obedience, we must walk in obedience to Him.

It is very common now to see persons with Democratic and Republican badges on, and some professed Christians will disgrace themselves by wearing them and the badge of some secret society. That class of Christians seem to forget that God's people are to be peculiar to others. To me those badges just look like an advertisement that the persons wearing them belong to the devil; for God's people have no need of such marks of distinction, for they are known by their fruits—not by badges. Christians ought to be for Christ first, last and all the time.

Love to all the brethren.

J. G. CONNER.

Strawberry, Ark.

REPORT OF MEETING.

one hour's try:

Scriptures to all who had a good meeting. Next, a few minutes recess, then called together again by song, and some of the brethren go forward, read, and offer such prayer as they themselves approved unto God, a workman that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

We have some little hopes of a discussion between Bro. Tant and the Baptists in the near future; that is, if the Baptists do not back down, or fail to find a man to meet Bro. Tant in discussion. They are left without an excuse.

But about the result of the meeting, is what we wish to mention, that you may know whether Bro. Tant was at work or at play while he was among us. The congregation at this place numbered thirteen when the meeting began; numbering, at the close of the meeting, forty-six, I believe. Bro. Tant labored much on Christian duty, speaking the truth as becometh true preachers of the gospel.

We are pleased to have the F. F. semi-monthly, but would be much more to have it weekly; then I would say, let every friend of the F. F. shoulder his responsibility with unbounded determination to bear the burden and surely we will have a weekly.

Yours for the truth,

WILLIE L. STAFFORD.

Pontotoc, Texas, Sept. 28, '88.

REPORTS.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

I wish to say through the F. F. that on the 23rd inst. Bro. Randolph of Booneborough, Ark., commenced a meeting at this place, and continued over Lord's day. Immediate result was five who had been shaken in from the Baptists made the good confession and were baptized into Christ, and among the number was Bro. A. Allison, who had been preaching for the church of Christ forty odd years, and my mother who is 57 years of age, and has had membership with the church of Christ nearly twenty years.

Bro. Allison says, he will never shake another individual into the church. May God help him to stick to that resolution. For what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Bellial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? * * Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate with the Lord and touch not the unclean thing and I will receive you, and I will be a father unto you and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.

Brethren, let's heed the admonition to stand apart from them and show by our acts, as well as by word, that we are determined to know nothing among them save Christ and him crucified. The truth is mighty and will prevail, (let what may oppose).

The F. F. is having a good influence in this locality. I will look after some money for you shortly. There has been no cotton disposed of here yet, and money is scarce. But you may depend on us coming to your relief soon. If you think this worthy a place in your columns, please make the necessary corrections and publish.

Yours for the truth,

J. T. NEAL.

Hale, Ark., Sept. 29, '88.

FROM BRO. KING.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Please find enclosed one dollar, my subscription for the FIRM FOUNDATION, which you have been sending me since some time last spring, by order of Bro. J. W. Strode.

Can say I am well pleased with it; it is without compromise. This is right, my brother, go on and fear not, for if any soul is saved, it will be by the word, and never by any or all the isms of the whole world. It is truth only that is adequate to the work of saving us alive with eternal glory, and that without mixture, (addition or subtraction).

May you long be spared to wield the sword of the Spirit, consuming the isms like the burning flame the melting wax.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

A. D. KING.

Bermuda, Texas.

FROM BRO. E. L. McMURREY.

Dear Bro. McGary:

It has been sometime since I have seen anything in the F. F. from these parts, and I thought a few words might be of interest to your readers.

The F. F. is still improving; each number gets better; and is filling a long felt want in the minds of the people. It is a clean sheet, free from all unreadable matter. Any and all can read it and be interested. Another good feature of it is, that it calls sin and error by the right name. Sin can't be rebuked too sharply in and out of the church. Men who love the truth will not take offense when they are told of their sins, but will try to profit by it.

Bro. McGary, I want to say to the readers of the F. F., that there will be a debate held in Lavacca county, at Ezell, twelve miles south of Hallettsville, between Bro. C. M. Wilmet, of the church of Christ, and A. R. Miller, of the Christadelphians. It is to commence Tuesday after the second Lord's day in October, being the 16th day. Come one, come all. We would be very glad to have you come, Bro. Mc., if it is possible.

Your brother in Christ.

R. L. McMURREY.

DEBATES.

At Lanham, Hamilton county, Texas, between J. C. Weaver, Methodist, and J. D. Tant, Christian, to begin on Wednesday, 21st of November, and continue eight days.

At Youngsfort, Bell county, Texas, between Mr. Miller, Christadelphian, and J. D. Tant, Christian, to begin Monday, 24th of December, and continue six days.

We will examine the doctrine, teaching and practice of said churches on this occasion. All lovers of truth are invited to attend.

Truly yours,

J. D. TANT.

TO BRO. W. M. HINES.

Bro. Hines, you state a debate was to begin at Blanton Aug. 6, between Lane, (Methodist), and Grubbs, (Christian), and say, Lane came, Grubbs did not, and suppose Grubbs had gone to Babylon.

My dear brother, remember love thinketh no evil of his brother. Bro. Grubbs was with me in meetings during that time at Evant and Liberty Hill, and could not possibly leave under the circumstances. And, inasmuch as he knew Bro. Thomas could meet the Methodist, and the cause would be injured by Grubbs then leaving our part, we thought it best for him not to go.

But as said Methodist at Blanton were afraid to meet Bro. Thomas, a man of our selection, we give them a standing challenge, to meet any representative man among us, (of their own selection), at any time they may wish, said challenge good till Christ shall come.

Again, as for Bro. G., I find him altogether sound in the faith, and don't think it best to insinuate our preachers have wandered off, when they happen to make a failure. May God help us all to love each other more, is our prayer.

J. D. TANT.

Hamilton, Texas.

IN MEMORIAM.

JUNIETTA, daughter of C. W. and S. E. Taylor, was born Sept. 2, 1821, and died Aug. 16, 1898, aged 76 years, 11 months and 43 days.

TO JUNIA.

Adieu sweet child, we mourn for thee,
Yet not as those who have no hope;
"Suffer little children to come unto me;"
These precious words, our Savior spoke.

Thy life, though brief, was passing fair,
We yield thee up to God, who gave,
And each will try to meet thee, where
There is no sin, nor death, nor grave.

We offer our heartfelt sympathies to the afflicted parents, brothers and sisters of this bright, lovely and promising child, and to the grief stricken mother, we would say:

Mourner, all pale with grief and trouble,
Raise thine eyes from earth, above,
To where thy love and lost is gone;
Then thou canst say, "Father, thy will be done,"
For there, too, is my home.

DIED.

J. A. HENDERSON, at his home in Globe, Gila county, Arizona, August 5, 1888, at 2:30 a. m., in the 58th year of his age.

He was born Aug. 11th, 1830, in Morgan county, Tennessee. His father moved to Missouri, where he was raised, and married to Dianna E. Johns in 1852. He moved to Blanco county, Texas, in 1858, where he became a member of the church of Christ, under the preaching of Bro. Tension, since which time he has been a constant proclaimer of the gospel of Christ. He leaves a large family, his wife and ten children, seven boys and three girls, to mourn his loss; and by whom his instructions both for this life and the future are to be remembered, and we know by comparing his works with the word of God, that he has a right to the Tree of Everlasting Life.

Our heads are bowed down in tears and our hearts filled with grief, at the loss of a kind and ever-loving and beloved parent, but we sorrow not as those who have no hope.

His son,

A. J. HENDERSON.

DEAD OR ALIVE.

Baptist preachers tell some nice things on those whom they call "Campbellites," and then proceed to make some claims for themselves, which they attempt to paint in variegated colors of beauty.

They say that we baptize sinners, but that they baptize christians. They claim that a sinner baptized is a sinner still. If they are right in this, yet the baptism of a sinner is as good as the baptism of a christian, because they say that a christian baptized is a christian still. Then, in their view of the matter, the baptism of a christian leaves him a christian, and the baptism of a sinner leaves him a sinner, and baptism does no good let it be administered to whom it may.

According to their view, ours is equal their own, in that neither does any good. In so far as baptism is a burial, it associates with it the idea of somebody dead. Baptists believe that baptism is a burial, they therefore believe that somebody is dead. Who is dead? Will the Baptists please say who? There is either a sinner or a christian dead, but which is it? If it is a sinner that is dead, Baptists bury a sinner, and are about as bad as we are. If it is a christian that is dead, then they bury a christian, and are worse than they think we are.

But let it be either one or the other, since they do not believe that baptism makes any change, a dead sinner baptized is still a dead sinner, or a dead christian baptized is still a dead christian. But here the Baptist preacher administers a correction, "We baptize those who are dead to sin—we baptize a christian." Then it follows that there is no difference between one who is dead to sin, and a christian. In baptizing one who is dead to sin and at the same time baptizing a christian, the Baptists perform the wonderful feat of baptizing the dead and the living at one and the same time.

It is a difficult matter to misrepresent the Baptists on this point. If I say they baptize the dead, that is true. If I say they baptize the living, that is true. If I should say they baptize the dead and the living both at once, that is also true.

What advantage is it, to be dead to sin? It saves a man from sinning. Paul says: "How shall we that are dead to sin live any longer therein?"—Rom. 6: 2. Why does a man who is dead to sin, not live any longer therein? Because being dead to sin he does not love sin, and therefore does not practice it. The advantage then of being dead to sin is, that it stops the commission of it. What effect does ceasing to commit sin have upon sins already committed? Just about as much as ceasing to go in debt affects debts already contracted. As a man may cease to go in debt and yet be a debtor, so a man may cease to commit sin and yet be a sinner.

Now, Bro. McGary, I am going to make a statement here that is a little uncommon, but if it is an untruth, down it and I will thank you for the deed. When a man ceases to practice sin, or commit sin, he is dead to sin. A man may be dead to sin and at the same time be a sinner. Is this true?

Faith, repentance, confession and baptism are the four ingredients that enter into the spiritual compound of sin. Past sins have fastened to man's spiritual vitals and future sins must be guarded against. A good physician prescribes so as to remove the disease and prevent a relapse. Jesus, the great physician, has prescribed so as to remove the disease of sin and prevent a return of it. Neither the remedy or the preventive changes the nature of the sick one. The remedy effectually does its work once for all time. Past sins once forgiven are remembered no more. The preventive is an ever present guard against the approach of sin. Since past sins must be remitted and future dangers well guarded, let us analyze the prescription that we may see the wisdom of the physcian. Baptism is not a guard against the future. Faith and repentance is the preventive and have nothing to do with past sins. It is true that repentance includes a sorrow for past sins, but all to prevent a repetition of them. Baptism in the conditional sense is for the remission of past sins. Faith and repentance prevent sins in the future. In this wise prescription, baptism is the remedy part, and faith and repentance is the preventive part. Take baptism out of this prescription and man is left under the condemnation of past sins. Take faith and repentance out and man is exposed to a sure return of sins in the future.

In conclusion, we return to the first thought, should we baptize the dead or the living? Baptize those who are dead to sin. When those become obedient to the gospel in its every part they are alive unto God to the full extent. Those who are dead to sin must await a resurrection that they may become alive unto God. That resurrection is in immersion. If those dead to sin become alive unto God without immersion, then there is a resurrection without life. When will men cease to render the commandments of God void by their traditions?

LETTER FROM SISTER CARROLL

The following letter was sent by sister Carroll to Bro. Spencer and Hill, editors of the Missionary Weekly, published in Richmond, Va., and she requested them to publish it, and after waiting some six weeks, and hearing nothing from it, she decided to send it to the FIRM FOUNDATION, which paper she takes, and knows it is not afraid for its readers to see both sides of any question pertaining to christianity.

I do not say that brethren Spencer and Hill are afraid. No, no; I would not accuse them of being destitute of that courage that a good soldier of Christ must necessarily have. They must have decided, like some other editors among us, to let such questions "severely alone, and let them die of their own insanity." (or senselessness, weakness); but they won't die; such brethren and sisters will demand of you that you reconcile the inconsistencies of your theory and practice. They are fully aware that it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe, and not by foolish preaching and teaching, as is the case with all inconsistent theories and practices.

We will send the F. F. in which this is published to the Missionary Weekly, and perhaps they will give some good reason why they did not publish the said letter.

E. HANSBROUGH.

Messrs. Spencer & Hill,

DEAR BRETHREN:—I received your letter dated Aug. 7, '88, and sample copy of Missionary Weekly dated Aug. 9, '88.

In your letter you say: "I would like to get you to lend us a helping hand towards putting it (the Missionary Weekly), into each family in your church."

My dear brethren, I did not know that I had a church until you informed me of the fact. I was taught when I left Babylon that I became a member of the church of Christ, and not of a human organization, which it would have to be if it were my church, or yours, or the Methodist's, Baptist's, or any other sect's. Was I taught right?

In your paper, on 7th page, is an article by J. W. Clem, taken from the Christian Evangelist, headed, "Why Re-baptize the Baptists?" and I suppose from the fact that there are no comments made, nor criticisms offered on the article that you endorse it. The Savior says: "All power (or authority) is given to me in heaven and in earth go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit."—Matt. 28: 18-19.

But what were they to teach them? Why we only know by seeing what the apostles taught after they were endued with power from on high, and then we find that they taught the people to believe in Christ as the Son of God and the Savior of sinners, to repent of their sins, to confess Christ, and be baptized for the remission of sins.

The Baptists in this country, (and I presume they do in yours), teach people that they must first be regenerated by a direct influence of the Spirit, they must then repent, then exercise saving faith, and as soon as they do that, they are saved; they must then confess that they believe that God for Christ's sake has pardoned their sins, and then be baptized because they are saved and to get into the Baptist church an institution not recognized in the Bible.

Now if a man comes to you and tells you that he has been taught and believes as above, will you baptize him? I do not believe you would, and if you did, I am sure you would do wrong. But he goes and gets a Baptist preacher to baptize him, and then you will receive him, or at least many of our preaching brethren will. How much better is he by being baptized by a Baptist preacher than if you had baptized him at the start? But, perhaps, you will say, he has been taught better since he was baptized. Then do him like Paul did the twelve at Ephesus, (Acts 19:1-7), for Christ's order is, teach first, then baptize.

Will you please publish the above in your paper and make such comments on it as you may think best, and send me a copy, and I can then tell better whether I would like to lend a helping hand towards putting it into each family of "my church." Yours truly,

M. J. CARROLL.

A WEAK ARGUMENT.

In Christian Leader of Aug. 7th is an article from the pen of Bro. H. A. Branstetter, in which he tries to prove that it is not necessary to understand the design of baptism, from the fact that the Pentecostians, before they were baptized, manifested a willingness to obey the gospel, or, to use the words of Bro. B., "a desire to be saved." I suppose that Bro. B. thinks this is an invincible argument, if argument it might be called. But I will proceed to show that it is no argument at all. And that this may be clearly and properly understood, it will be absolutely necessary to go back to Jerusalem and notice particularly the manner in which these people were converted—made christians.

First, Peter preached unto them, after having received power, or authority from on high. Second, the preaching of Peter, coupled with the evidence that was arrayed before them in attestation of the divinity and resurrection of Christ, together with the fact, that He (Christ) was made "both Lord and Christ"—absolute king and ruler of the universe, which fact I say, being proved to them, by testimony, the refutation of which, was possible, showed them clearly that they were divorced, forever cut loose from the law and ordinances of Moses, and subject to the clemency of another government. Hence the question, "Men and brethren, what must we do?"

The point, to which I wish to call especial attention is this:

1. The death, burial and resurrection of Christ had been preached unto them; these facts, by them, were believed, and if this is the whole gospel, where is the joy, gladness and consolation which the word gospel implies? It is not here; and, if the apostles had stopped here, not one of them would have been saved.

It is also worthy of remark, that they were willing to place themselves under the leadership of the new coronated King, but how to do this was the difficulty. Peter now proceeds to unfold this unto them. He says: Repent, and be "baptized." What for Peter? "For the remission of sins." What! For the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.—Acts 2:38.

Now, who but a sectarian, or some would-be popular preacher, falsely called "Christian preacher," would attempt to dodge the design of baptism as herein set forth? Not one, I dare say, would do it. But the strangest of all things with me, and with many others, is, that men, yea, men of reputation, men who, that in days that have gone by, contended so earnestly for a "thus saith the Lord," and who so berated the sects for their utter disregard of the testimonies of the word of God, have plunged recklessly into the limitless fields of human speculation, and are a disgrace to the cause which they once so gallantly defended.

For about four years, if I mistake not, Bro. McGary and others have been calling upon these recalitrants to furnish evidence from the word of God, that establishes their practice. But instead of complying with their request, thereby forever settling this question, viz: sect baptism, they persist in indulging in vituperation, slander, misrepresentation and ridicule, and "letting them severely alone," etc.

Now, brethren, if these would-be popular preachers and editors could prove sect baptism by the Bible, they would, ere this time, have done it. The fact, that they have not done it, is evidence that they never can. Brethren, subscribe for the F. F., it will teach you the truth.

KING-BROWN DEBATE.

The above debate took place at Pleasant Spring, Izard county, Ark., September 4, 5, 6 and 7, 1888, between H. T. King, of the church of Christ, and James Brown, of the Missionary Baptist church. The propositions discussed were as follows:

1st Prop.—"Baptism preceded by faith and repentance is for (or in order to) the remission of past or alien sins." H. T. King affirmative, James Brown, negative.

2nd Prop.—"In conversion the Spirit operates on the heart of the sinner distinct from the word of God." Brown affirmed, King denied.

The disputants agreed to be governed by Hedge's rules of debate, one of which requires the "point to be so clearly defined that there may be no misunderstanding respecting it."

Bro. King observed this rule to the very letter, and in defining his proposition, showed the precise point at issue to be a matter of time; only. Brown claiming that remission took place prior to baptism, and he claiming that it takes place when a proper subject is baptized. King laid down as a rule, that where salvation is ascribed to one or more things, it cannot be obtained on less conditions than those mentioned, but more may be required. He then showed that salvation is ascribed to baptism, and that therefore baptism is necessary in order to remission. He also showed that all spiritual blessings are in Christ; remission of sins is a spiritual blessing; we are baptized into Christ, therefore baptism is in order to the remission of past sins.

Bro. King presented about twenty-five arguments based on the Scriptures to sustain his proposition, many of which were not even noticed by Mr. Brown. Mr. B's. manner of reasoning was about as follows: "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord—not through baptism." "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life—not he that is baptized."

On second proposition Mr. Brown took the position, that the Spirit operated through the word, but that there was a distinction between the word and the Spirit, as the farmer is from the plow, or the soldier from his sword. He said he was not going off on a wild goose chase, and claims that the Spirit operated without a medium—without the word. He did not give a clear definition of the terms of his proposition any time during the debate, although Bro. King called on him to do so, in almost every speech.

Bro. K. defined Brown's proposition and showed that "distinct" meant, "not united by growth, or any other way;" and that "from" meant, "in another neighborhood, leaving behind," etc., and that therefore he (Brown) had affirmed that the Spirit operated in conversion, without being united with the word by growth or any other way, and in a different neighborhood from the word. So it was manifest that Mr. B. did not understand the terms of his own proposition.

He tried to make the impression that we teach that the "word alone" does the operating. But Bro. K. informed him that we do not teach "word alone" nor "Spirit alone;" but that the Spirit clothed His ideas in words adapted to the comprehension of man, and by those words operates on the heart of the sinner.

Bro. King presented twenty-nine negative arguments on that proposition, showing conclusively that the Spirit always used words in operating upon the heart of the sinner.

Mr. B. referred to the case of Lydia, but during Bro. K's. last speech admitted that her heart was opened just like all other sinners' hearts are, who are saved—that is, by the Spirit through the word; thus virtually giving up his proposition. Bro. King told him as he had given it up, he would not notice another one of his arguments, but would make a few additional remarks to confirm the rest of the congregation in the faith. Bro. King is a good debater, and I am satisfied the discussion at Pleasant Spring will result in good.

The following preaching brethren were present: G. W. Cone, moderator, Newburg; Sam Brown, Mountain View; W. D. Craig, Ask Flat; W. G. Cypert, — Mateney, Melbourne, and the writer.

FROM BRO. BRATCHEL.

Editor Firm Foundation:

I notice a short article in the F. F. of Oct. 1st, over the signature of M. A. Hannah, Cove, Ark., which I desire to notice. The reason why I desire to do so, is because it reflects not only upon your correspondent and reader, but upon sister Taylor as well as upon one of the best organizations in Western Arkansas. In the first place, I am of the opinion that Mrs. Hannah never saw the article, but it was written by her son-in-law, who went off with this old man Keeney a few months ago, who came in this section under dark colors, baptizing only in the name of the Lord Jesus, lopping the Father and Holy Spirit off, or out of the commission.

In the second place, he has not shown himself a sufficient workman. The part of sister Taylor's article is correct. I am the preacher or evangelist to whom Mrs. Hannah has reference. I preach the gospel, God's power of saving sinners, faith, repentance, confession and baptism for, or in order to the remission of sins. The shaking process is something which I do not practice, neither does the church (Two Mile church) to which I preach. I am charged as being a sort of a preacher and that I preach to suit the convenience of the Two Mile church. To this charge I will say it is false, and originated from an impure heart. The author of this statement is the first one who ever used such language about a man who preaches to the line as your correspondent does.

The whole trouble is, that Mrs. Hannah's son-in-law, (James Coker), stands withdrawn from by the Two Mile church, or congregation of disciples. This individual instead of causing division, should try to heal all diseases. This church, its elders, its evangelist, all bow to the line, and read and take and endorse the F. F.

If necessary, in justification of my own self, I will write another article for your readers; if not I'll close with this, so far as sister Hannah or her son-in-law is concerned.

Love the F. F.

Many of them have never been baptized into Christ, yet by this way of doing we admit to the world that they are in the kingdom and patience of Christ, whereas, they are not. I know that Paul says: "But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread and drink of that cup," but that is spoken solely to those who are professed members of the church of Christ. Each one of us knows whether or not "we have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you."—Rom. 6: 17.

Furthermore, the Spirit itself beareth witness with our Spirit that we are the children of God, Rom. 8: 16. Consequently we, individually know for ourselves whether we have a right to partake. But how does this Spirit bear witness? Simply by telling us through God's word what it takes to constitute a child of God, and our own spirits testify as to whether we are what the Scriptures teach a child of God should be.

By my progressive brethren in this country I am often characterized as small-hearted, narrow, contracted, etc., but if I know myself these accusations are false. I wish to stand squarely on the teaching of the Bible. We are taught by the Holy Spirit through the word what to do in order to become a Christian. We are to have faith in Christ, to repent, to confess his name and be baptized for the remission of sins. Then those who have not thus done are not Christians, and ought not to take the emblems, because it was given to the disciples in remembrance of him. If Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, and all such sects are Christians, they are made so by some unrevealed mercy of God. For according to the Bible they are yet in their sins. As this is my first I will close, and at some future time, mention other inconsistencies. C. C. REDWINE.

Bro. E. H. Rogers closed a ten days, meeting at this place on the 14th inst. with ten additions. Six came from the world at large, three from the Baptists and one from the Presbyterians. Also two of this congregation were immersed.

Elder J. W. Watkins, who had been immersed by the Presbyterians, and served them as elder six years, and has held the same position with us for the last two years, became dissatisfied with his sectarian baptism, made the good confession, which was not required of him by the Presbyterians, and was baptized as directed in the gospel. And sister Filipen, the wife of elder Dan Filipen, had been immersed when quite young, and having an imperfect recollection of the manner of her conversion and induction, as regards the confession and the design of baptism, obeyed the law by confessing the Lord with the mouth and being baptized for the remission of her sins. Cleginger, Kennedale; one dollar to — Withers, Bulcher, Cook county; fifty cents to E. Race, Enon; twenty-five cents Tom Randolph, Fort Worth.

Well, that settles that question, but there are several other things not settled, though much easier to settle than that was—doesn't cost so much. But there are a great many who can't make the change to settle—that is, change error for truth.

I asked a wind-shaken man who had been a Methodist, and sought to be a Christian by the shaking process, a few questions, and he seemed to be a man of fine sense in many respects. I said, you were once a Methodist, were you? He said, "Yes, I was a member of the Methodist church for eight years." I said, what is the Methodist church? He said, "A body of people belonging to that church." Well, it is not the "one body" of which Paul speaks, is it? "I should smile it is not," said he. Well, what does it take to make a Methodist? "Obedience to Methodist laws and teaching," he answered. Well, that is not the law of Christ and teaching of the apostles, is it? "Very different in many respects," he answered.

Well, now what does it take to make a Christian? "Faith in Christ and obedience to his commands." What is that faith in Christ? "Faith in Christ is to believe that he is the Son of God." Suppose you were to say, I believe Jesus Christ is the Son of God, but I don't believe his promise, what would you say of his faith? "Well, that faith would be too short," said he. I think so.

Paul says: He that cometh to God must believe not only that he is, but that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. And of Abraham's example of faith it is written: "Abraham believed God and it was accounted to him for righteousness." That is, he believed God's promise, "being not weak in faith he stumbled not at the promise of God, but accounted him able to fulfill his promise. So we plainly see that the faith of the Bible embraces the word and promises as well as the personage of God and Christ. "I believe that sir," said he. Well, now what about the obedience of baptism? Paul says there is but one baptism, now what is that? "That is immersion, nothing else," said he. Is immersion always the one baptism? "I think so." Are all persons that are immersed baptized with the one baptism? "I think so." Some immerse, three dips; is that the one baptism? "No, three can't be one." No, but they were immersed, and when I was a boy, I and other boys went in swimming, and I immersed them, using the Bible formula, was that the one baptism? "No, that was boy foolishness," he said. Yes, but they were immersed. And were the twelve at Ephesus first baptized with the one baptism? Then we see that all immersions are not the one immersion.

But you very truthfully said that people become Christians by faith in Christ and obedience to his commands. Now let us go to his command concerning baptism and we can plainly see what the obedience is. The Spirit by the mouth of Peter gave the command, "Repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Now suppose those individuals had been baptized in the name of Peter, would they have obeyed the command? "No, of course it must be done in the name of Jesus." Yes. Well they were commanded to be baptized by the authority of Jesus for the remission of sins. If they had been baptized for some other purpose, they would not have obeyed the command. Moreover it is impossible for one to be baptized by the authority of Jesus Christ for any other purpose, because the authority of Jesus never authorized any other purpose, hence any baptism for any other purpose is not the baptism commanded by Jesus, hence not the one baptism—not from heaven, hence of men.

As he felt the sand crumbling he said: "That's getting the thing to a pretty fine point." Yes, the point is pretty sharp and pricks some people terribly, but there is just one more question I want to ask you. You say you were a member of the Methodist church, that it is not the one body, and you became a Methodist by obeying Methodist law and teaching, that it was very different from the law of Christ and teaching of the apostles. Now please tell me when and how you became a Christian and a member of the one body? A dry smile stole on his face and he said: "Don't you think there are any Christians in the Methodist and other churches?" Why you say, and we all know that they are not in the one body, and the teaching very different from the apostles, and Paul said: But you have obeyed from the heart that form of teaching delivered you, being then made free from sin you became the servants of righteousness, became Christians. When persons become Christians, they at the same time and in the same way become members of the church—the one body. Now did you become a Christian at the same time that you became a Methodist? Did you become a member of two bodies at the same time, by obeying two very different laws and teachings at the same time? "Ah, said he, you are too hard for me. I must go." Be candid with yourself, consult your Testament and better judgment. Good bye.

Best wishes to the F. F. and brethren.

INCONSISTENCY.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have been a regular but silent reader of the F. F. for about the period of three years, and to-day I find that my love, esteem and christian regards for you and the able corps of writers are waxing stronger and stronger. I wish the paper success. May the brethren everywhere rally to its support, for, without question, its mission is a grand one. Thus far I have been unable to send you any subscribers from this point. This is a new and growing town and the gospel has not been well planted here yet.

We had a two week's meeting recently, but the amount of good accomplished was very small. Bro. Morgans did the preaching. Perhaps it might be well to mention here that he is the district evangelist for the southwestern district of Missouri.

I am glad, brethren, that there are those who stand on apostolic grounds, who preach the same gospel the apostles preached. I am heartily in sympathy with the teaching of the F. F., and if it will not be intruding upon your space or attention, I will say a few words on inconsistency.

From the divine volumn of inspiration, we learn that, previous to the crucifixion of our Lord, the supper was instituted by Him and given to the disciples, and he says unto them: "This do in remembrance of me," Luke 22: 19. Now let us bear in mind, that it was given to the disciples in remembrance of Him. Paul in speaking of this matter says: for as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come, 1 Cor. 11: 26. Let us also remember that Paul is teaching the church at Corinth. Now Christ gave it to the disciples and Paul recommended it to the church.

Notwithstanding the plain teaching of the word of God, we have brethren who are so liberal and progressive, (and, indeed, it is almost universal in this part of Missouri), that in partaking of the emblems they will offer the same to every person who is a member of any church, whether human or divine. Now as there is but one way of becoming a Christian, as there is but one way of getting into the church of Christ, this sort of thing is inconsistent. Many of them have never confessed the name of Jesus. Many of them have never been baptized into Christ, yet by this way of doing we admit to the world that they are in the kingdom and patience of Christ, whereas, they are not. I know that Paul says: "But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread and drink of that cup," but that is spoken solely to those who are professed members of the church of Christ. Each one of us knows whether or not "we have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you."—Rom. 6: 17.

Furthermore, the Spirit itself beareth witness with our Spirit that we are the children of God, Rom. 8: 16. Consequently we, individually know for ourselves whether we have a right to partake. But how does this Spirit bear witness? Simply by telling us through God's word what it takes to constitute a child of God, and our own spirits testify as to whether we are what the Scriptures teach a child of God should be.

By my progressive brethren in this country I am often characterized as small-hearted, narrow, contracted, etc., but if I know myself these accusations are false. I wish to stand squarely on the teaching of the Bible. We are taught by the Holy Spirit through the word what to do in order to become a Christian. We are to have faith in Christ, to repent, to confess his name and be baptized for the remission of sins. Then those who have not thus done are not Christians, and ought not to take the emblems, because it was given to the disciples in remembrance of him. If Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, and all such sects are Christians, they are made so by some unrevealed mercy of God. For according to the Bible they are yet in their sins. As this is my first I will close, and at some future time, mention other inconsistencies.

FROM BRO. TUCKER.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Bro. E. H. Rogers closed a ten days meeting at this place on the 14th inst. with ten additions. Six came from the world at large, three from the Baptists and one from the Presbyterians. Also two of this congregation were immersed.

Elder J. W. Watkins, who had been immersed by the Presbyterians, and served them as elder six years, and has held the same position with us for the last two years, became dissatisfied with his sectarian baptism, made the good confession, which was not required of him by the Presbyterians, and was baptized as directed in the gospel. And sister Ellen, the wife of elder Dan Ellen, had been immersed when quite young, and having an imperfect recollection of the manner of her conversion and induction, as regards the confession and the design of baptism, obeyed the law by confessing the Lord with the mouth and being baptized for the remission of her sins.

FROM BRO. AND SISTER WOODLEE

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Enclosed you will find one dollar, which we are due you on the F. F. We thank you very much for your kindness in sending us the paper, which we could not have taken if you had not credited us. We love your paper and pray that you may be spared many long years in your grand and noble work. I sincerely hope that all who owe you will, like true Christians, pay you up, for they all know a paper cannot be published without money. We remain your brother and sister in Christ.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, NOV. 1, 1898.

ATTENTION, READERS!

From this time on send all money for the FIRM FOUNDATION, or any of our pamphlets, to A. MCGARY, AUSTIN, TEXAS. Make all money orders payable to A. McGary. Please state whether you are a new subscriber or an old one. Write plainly, and give the county, where your post office is not a large town. Don't forget this in sending orders. MCGARY & HANSBROUGH.

A. MCGARY's address is Box 86, Austin, Texas.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

We gave notice that we were going to show the unsoundness of the "Millennial Dawn," and gave our introductory article in our issue of Oct. 1st. It was our intention when we wrote that article, to pursue the subject without intermission in each issue, till we completed the work; but in the bustle and confusion of moving back to Austin, we find that we left the "Millennial Dawn" in a trunk that has not yet arrived at Austin. So we will have to be silent upon the "M. D." till our copy comes in, as we want to give the exact words of such of Mr. Russell's teaching as we may criticize, all of which we have carefully marked in the book.

LET US GO TO WORK.

Brethren, in compliance with the urgent request of many of the true and tried friends of the FIRM FOUNDATION, from all parts of the country, I am back at Austin, in the office of the paper, to stay. So far as my individual preferences went, for a home on earth, I was better satisfied in Fort McKavett than any where I have ever lived. But we all owe our time, talents and lives to our Master who bought us with his precious blood. Again, "In the multitude of counsellors there is safety."

I verily believe that the FIRM FOUNDATION is the only paper on earth that is set for the propagation of the religion of the New Testament in its unadorned simplicity and apostolic parity. Then, it cannot fail to be a good work, to devote our time on earth to the upbuilding of this paper.

When we think of the many disadvantages under which we began the publication of this paper, and sent forth the first issue of 250 copies, carrying it to the office each mailing day, a little bundle in the back of our buggy, and now see the immense wagon load that goes forth every mailing day, its growth seems really marvellous to us; and we are deeply impressed with the power of truth, and our heart overflows with gratitude to those true, courageous brothers and sisters, who have passed through the fire of persecution with us in upholding the banner of truth and wrestling with the lordly innovators who are corrupting and perverting the right ways of the Lord. We wish we had space to give their names; but they are well-known anyway to all our readers.

Then, again, new friends are coming to the front every day. God grant that we may all keep ourselves humble and ever give all praise to the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

But, brethren, while we feel that we have done a good and extraordinary work under the circumstances, we see that the paper has just now reached a point of great usefulness among the disciples, from which it may rescue from the vortex of "progression," where they are being hastened into a deplorable apostasy, all true God-fearing brothers and sisters. To do our best at this, right now while there is hope, we ought to make the paper a weekly. This is not my decision, but it is the decision of hundreds of brethren, north, south, east and west, who are writing to me every mail, urging this move.

Fully realizing my obligations to the many brothers and sisters who have been my co-workers in the past, in building the F. F. up to its present condition of usefulness, and knowing full well that I cannot succeed in making it a weekly without that same support they have given me in the past, I propound these questions to them:

Brethren, do you not believe we could do much more good with the paper a weekly? Do you not believe we can easily make it a weekly if we will try? Are you all willing to try, and begin right now?

Let us all pull together and we will succeed. Then in one year we can drive the theological dudes and cormorants—hirelings—from our borders, and Zion will again experience that peace that should prevail among the children of God. We shall await your decision, brethren.

W. K. HUMAN AND HIS PAPER.

Bro. Homan, instead of being the sober-minded, cool-headed man that some represent him to be, has manifested toward us a very irascible disposition. In fact, he is more like a petulant child than a dignified man. If we say anything about the Courier that does not appear just as lovely to him as he would like it, he flies into a fit, and cuts us off his exchange list, and hurriedly speeds a card to our office to stop the F. F. He has done this the second time.

First he made, what seemed to us, some very unbrotherly and cowardly insinuations at Bro. J. A. Harding for having so many debates—and we so expressed our mind about it in the F. F. When he saw our remarks he wrote us a very insulting private letter and sent a card to the office, ordering the F. F. stopped. In his private letter he denied referring to Bro. Harding. So we replied and begged his pardon for saying to the public that he had referred to Bro. Harding, and we also corrected our supposed mistake, in the F. F. But in our private letter to Bro. Homan we gave our reasons for supposing that he referred to Bro. Harding. He replied to this saying that, he did refer to Bro. Harding, but denied that his remarks about him were offensive. After receiving our letter he condescended to put us on his exchange list again. But when he saw our remarks about T. W. Caskey's infidelic sentiments, in saying the Bible alone was killing churches, he flew into another fit and sent us another card, whizzing, telling us to stop his paper.

Will some brother who is taking the Courier please send it to us? If some reader of the Courier who is not a reader of the F. F. will send us the Courier, promptly, after he has read it, we will send him the F. F. for the kindness. We want to keep our eye on the movements of these plotters and planners of human tricks among the disciples, and so "mark them" that their "good words and fair speeches" will not so easily "deceive the hearts of the simple" for whom they "lie in wait," expecting their "sleight and cunning craftiness" to entangle them in the meshes of their sophisms.

Bro. Homan, and his kind, talk much about the lack of the Spirit of Christ in those who will not go to the same excess of riot with them. They seem to think that they manifest the Christian spirit when they put on their pompous airs and lordly swells, and cut their stilted theological didos. Yea, they think that people will not consider them Christians if they do not ignore every man who does not treat them according to the strictest rules of so-called gentility.

Oh, how much pharisaical hypocrisy is now being manifested by these would-be lords of God's heritage. If Elymas and Paul had both been editing papers when Paul said to him: "O full of all subtilty and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?" doubtless Elymas would have considered this very unbecoming language for a Christian, and would have cut Paul off from his exchange list. And we need not think it strange now when the "perverters of the right ways of the Lord" cut off from their exchange lists those who show them up in their true colors.

SHALL WE HAVE THE WEEKLY?

We are grateful for the material responses to our call upon those who are behind with us, which are now coming in with every mail. Times have been hard and money very scarce; hence, we have not expected many to be able to pay up. But now that returns are coming in to our brethren from their crops, they are showing their appreciation of the FIRM FOUNDATION by sending in their dues to help us in the good work. We hope this will continue till all who are behind will respond in the same helpful way.

We have to furnish the paper to many who are not able to pay at all, which we have ever done and expect to do, cheerfully. During the summer many have subscribed who did not have the money, but as we have confidence in all lovers of God's truth we make it a rule never to refuse, or even hesitate, to send the paper to any who order it. Some of our papers will not send to any one without the spot cash; but whenever we lose confidence to that extent in our brethren, we shall cease to publish the paper.

We would be very thankful if some brother or sister, in every neighborhood where the F. F. is taken, would press upon our readers the necessity of squaring up during this month. We would like to begin the next volume with weekly issues, and can do so if all our brethren will pull together with us, by paying up and sending in a few new subscribers. Let every true friend to the paper determine to make one strong effort right now, and we can have the weekly at the same price we now have the semi-monthly. Shall we have the weekly? Brethren, it is for you to answer by your works.

JOURNALISTIC JEALOUSY.

Bro. Burnett's jealousy rises to fever-heat whenever a new paper is born in Texas. He calls the Primitive Missionary, "A New Moses," and makes its birth the occasion of much tooting on the Messenger horn, blowing its imaginary merits and trying to blow out of existence other papers that he dare not meet in fair controversy, but hides out from them in abject fear, while he belches forth at them volleys of bragadocio, mud and slander.

We have not seen enough of the P. M. to enable us to yet form an adequate estimate of its worth as a factor in the religious embroilment it has been launched into; but we have seen enough to convince us that it is not set for the defense of the whole truth, but is tethered to the stake driven down by "the fathers of this reformation," circumscribed by "our plea." But the F. F. is perfectly willing for the P. M. to have breath, and inhale Texas air freely, and appear before the brethren upon its merits.

Perhaps if the F. F. had been afflicted with "Messenger-itis" till it had to be toxiced on patent insides to be kept alive, it, too, would be peevish enough to call the P. M. "A New Moses," and through jealousy try to snatch the lactated food from its infantile mouth. But the F. F. is in robust health, and with "the sword of the Spirit in hand fears neither old or new papers or combinations. It will not fight nor antagonize any truth, nor league itself with error or untruth. If a thousand new papers should start up in Texas the F. F. has no fears whatever, for it depends for its support upon those who love truth, and it is armed with truth and can not fail till the disciples of Christ fail to appreciate truth—"thy word is truth."

In the Messenger's patent-inside spell of peevishness it seems to attribute its enfeeblement to the F. F., or at least to "A. McGary," and vents some spite in these words: "When A. McGary brought in his hobby of rebaptism to distract and divide the church of Christ, we met him at the threshold and fought him to the death." Yes, Bro. Burnett, you did fight us "to the death" of the Messenger. But knowing your recklessness in making statements about those you oppose, we suppose you aimed for your readers to believe that you had killed the F. F. Then, my brother, let us beseech you to kill us some more, for such deaths are so very agreeable to us that we want to die more and more and keep on dying the same way. But, candidly, my brother, what "re-baptism hobby" have we "brought in"? We have opposed the baptism of all untaught persons, because the apostles always taught the gospel, "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," and baptized the taught—those who learned of the Father and obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine delivered in that teaching. They never baptized the untaught—those who had not learned of the Father.

Then what right have we to do so? Will you tell us? No, you prefer to sling slang and slander. We are willing to join heartily with you in doing the things authorized by the apostles, but we will not consort with you in doing what the apostles did not do, nor authorize us in any way to do.

If we would, we would also consort with Bro. Homan and his coadjutors in their strides beyond authorized bounds, in constructing all sorts of human machinery to obviate the supposed duplicity of our God who claims that He "thoroughly furnishes the man of God unto all good works," in the Scriptures. Bro. Homan might just as properly say of you and the Messenger, "When T. R. Burnett brought in his new hobby of anti-missionary-society to distract and divide the churches of Christ, we met him and fought him to the death."

You say of the P. M.: "Then it will put another foot on McGary's Pegasus, and gallop with him half way to Egypt, and see that he rebaptizes all of the Baptists." Why not gallop with us half way to Egypt rather than remain with you in Babylon? Is half way to Egypt half as bad as all the way to Babylon? If he should put his foot upon your way he would have to see that some of the Baptists were baptized.

If you had lived in Paul's day you would doubtless have accused the great apostle of mounting the twelve at Ephesus on his Pegasus. Bro. Burnett will have to accept the whole truth, or swallow progression entire and consolidate with the Courier. His half-way position cannot survive the conflict between the truth and the Courier forces.

THE SOLE TEST OF CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

Several correspondents have lately asked questions in substance not differing from the following: * * * Ought not candidates for admission to membership in a Baptist church to have a knowledge of the several points of belief that distinguish us from other denominations, and to understand clearly the reasons for holding such beliefs before being received into fellowship? Would you consider that testimony to the Christian experience of a candidate and asking one or two general questions would be a sufficient examination on which to base a favorable recommendation to the church?

W. B. P.

For the answering of such questions as these we must fall back on the teaching of the Scriptures, and on sanctified common sense. It is well, at the very beginning, to make a distinction between what is indispensable and what is highly desirable. Nobody will dispute the proposition that it would be extremely satisfactory if every candidate for baptism that presents himself to our churches had an intelligent understanding of our denominational beliefs, and was prepared to give a good reason for the belief that is in him.

But when we ask, is this essential to church membership? We raise a very important question, and one that must be authorized, first of all, by an appeal to the New Testament. We find in the New Testament but one test required before baptism—confession and personal faith in Jesus Christ. As the making of such confession was certain to expose the one making it to loss of social standing, to reproach, to persecution and quite possible to death, the confession was not made without due deliberation, and in the vast majority of cases was honest. It seems evident that this establishes a general principle: The one requirement for baptism and church membership is personal faith in Jesus Christ.

But circumstances are now so far changed that mere verbal confession is not a sufficient guarantee. A fuller examination of candidates is necessary, unless we would run the risk of introducing into the church many who have not been subject to saving grace. This is the origin of the practice, now almost universal among Baptist churches, of requiring candidates to give some account of their Christian experience, and to answer questions designed to test the genuineness of their conversion.

There is nothing sacred about this custom. It is of comparative recent origin, having been first induced in New England less than 200 years ago. It is simply a means to an end, in many respects the best means, but not the only possible means. So the church is satisfied that a candidate is really born again, the one essential thing is secured. It also appears to be a plain proposition that we have no right to make terms of membership other than are found in the New Testament. Consequently, if any one offers himself for membership who gives credible evidence that he has been regenerated by the Spirit of God, and is ready to obey Christ in baptism, who shall forbid water that he shall be baptized?

If he need instruction in many things, that is just what pastors were given for, and the babe in Christ must be fed first on the milk of the Word, and after on strong meat as he is able to bear it. "He that is weak in the faith, receive ye, but not to doubtful disputations."—N. Y. Examiner.

I found the foregoing in the Gospel Standard for September, and it is worthy of note that the authority for requiring a "christian experience" dates not back to Christ and the apostles, but is only of "recent origin," "is simply a means to an end," to satisfy the church, a "means" adopted by "sanctified common sense" to determine whether "a candidate is really born again, the one essential thing." As if God was not wise enough to originate a "means" that would suffice for all time!

"Who art thou that repliest against God?" And if the plan of adding to His church under the teachings of the apostles did fail in some cases, as is evident from New Testament history, how shall feeble man be able to improve upon it in this age? It seems to me that "sanctified common sense" would better be shown by a strict adherence to the divine means of building up the church of Christ and let the result rest with its founder who is too wise to err.

We need not think to please God by being over zealous for His cause, we may be "ignorant of his righteousness, and try to establish our own and set up tests" of the genuineness of the "conversion" of others contrary to the doctrine of Christ. But when we are content with simply preaching the gospel as did the apostles and early Christians, and receiving "candidates" as they did, we may rest assured that we are doing God's service, and not following the "traditions of men," which make void the law of God. "Circumstances," however they may change, can never warrant us in setting aside the plain precepts of Jesus, "He that believeth and is immersed shall be saved." As to the "rick we run," let us not be troubled about that. The Judge of the earth will do right.

FROM BRO. THOMASSON.

Bros. McGary & Hancock: You will find enclosed money order for three dollars, for which you will please send the F. F. to S. P. Ford and Crockett Green, Flatonia, Texas, and E. Bell, Lockhart, Texas, one year each.

I consider the F. F. the soundest paper now published, and I wish to say to its readers in Fayette, Gonzales, Bastrop and adjoining counties, that we wish to get up a co-operation and put an evangelist in the field. It is but a feeble way of expressing what we need, but now, brethren, with a little effort on our part we will do this.

Bro. Floyd is willing to work for us, but he cannot spend all his time at this work without a support. The question now is, will we support him, and go on in this work? We can do it. Now will we do it? Bro. F. will preach without it all he can, but will we support him, or are we willing to take part in this good work, or let others do it?

I know that there could be a great deal of good done by supporting Bro. Floyd in this work. Bro. F. has been working with his own hands for a support while not preaching. Now, brethren, will you give something? If so, you can forward it to me here at Flatonia, Fayette county, Texas, or to R. W. Floyd, Jeddo, Bastrop county, Texas.

Hoping to hear from the brethren on this most important subject, and praying for the success of the FIRM FOUNDATION, and the cause of the Master, I remain as ever, your brother in the one faith,

G. M. D. THOMASSON.

Flatonia, Texas.

QUERIES.

In Acts 9:17, does it speak of Paul's receiving his sight in the sense of receiving the word of the Lord, so that he might be able to understand and obey it and be filled with the Holy Ghost, or does it mean that it was his natural eyes that were blinded? J. A. W.

By reading the 9th, 22d, and 26th chapters of Acts you will learn the full story of Paul's conversion. When he saw the light he was blinded, naturally or physically, Acts 22:11, and when Ananias laid hands upon him, he received his sight again, Acts 22:18.

Was Paul made an apostle before he was baptized? J. A. W.

Jesus appeared to Paul to make him an apostle; a witness of His resurrection. Acts 26:16, 18. Baptism was not necessary to make him an apostle but was necessary to the remission of his sins, and his obedience necessary before he could begin the mission for which he was chosen. J. W. J.

THE GOOD WORK.

A letter from Bro. J. W. Jackson states that, "Bro. N. B. Sikes held a meeting near his home recently with thirty-six additions." None were shaken in, I presume, as Bro. Sikes understands that baptism is for the remission of sins, and that the confession must be made before baptism, and not baptism first.

Many of our brethren in reporting their meetings claim to have received members into the church by the shake of their hands after taking their confession which was not made previous to their baptism, thus ignoring the plan of salvation.

T. H. G.

AN OLD MAN'S EXPERIENCE.

I am nearly seventy-four years old. Before I was twelve I read the New Testament through several times and came to the conclusion, that obedience to the ordinances and precepts of the gospel of Christ is essential to salvation. I determined, therefore, to be immersed and to live an obedient life in order to be saved.

I had frequent conversations with Baptist preachers upon the plan of salvation, who told me that I was mistaken. That obedience was not essential, that people were wholly passive in regeneration, and hence were saved by grace alone, without obedience. I was so young, I thought I would investigate the divine testimony to see which was right. But instead of being convinced of error, I was confirmed in the truth of my conviction.

Being partial to the Missionary Baptist church, I applied for membership at the age of sixteen, was received and immersed by a very devoted minister, into that body. After which I was solicited to commence preaching, I had a very strong propensity to do so, but was convinced that the preachers would object to my position. So I determined to post up, so I could defend it successfully.

About ten years passed by, and having confidence in my ability, I ventured to begin. I met with no little opposition, but was encouraged by a few to continue. Some preachers were kind enough to endorse the doctrine, while others objected, calling it a dangerous heresy. I persisted in preaching the great necessity of obedience.

Finally, in 1853, I, together with a few others, determined to establish a church based upon, the gospel which the apostles preached under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, as our only rule of faith and practice, bond of union, communion and fellowship. This movement was so very novel, that it produced a great excitement, and no little commotion in the Baptist ranks. In less than eighteen months we numbered about one thousand members, principally from the Baptists. This was in North Georgia.

The disciples in East Tennessee heard of our movement, and requested a conference in order to a union. This was consummated in 1857 upon the above conditions. So we found a union of forty congregations upon the New Covenant alone. To which was added during the ensuing year over two hundred members.

This union movement was approved of the disciples generally, but some objected, on the ground that we excluded the Old Testament as a rule of faith and practice, but held that it was an indispensable source of historical knowledge. We held that the gospel of Christ which was preached by the apostles under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, contains the entire system of redemption complete, and hence all auxiliary societies, such as the disciples were inaugurating for practical purposes, were innovations opposed to the apostolic doctrine and usages.

We held that the Christian institution was, and must continue a unit in its doctrine, its organic structure, its form of government and mode of discipline. We wrote many articles for publication in defense of our position, which produced no little controversy, especially with those who contend for congregational independency. This vexed question is yet unsettled among the disciples.

We are thoroughly convinced from the testimony of apostles and prophets, that the New Covenant contains a full and complete system of redemption, sufficiently plain and tangible for all practical purposes. And hence we have fully resolved to affiliate with those, and only those, who use it as their only rule of faith and practice, bond of union, communion and fellowship.

Before we left the Eastern states we found many brethren called disciples who objected to our position. We came to Arkansas nearly ten years ago, and have visited many congregations in this state, which seem much divided in sentiment on church polity. I have spent my time principally in trying to sustain the position above stated. Several congregations have united as one on the apostolic platform, while others claim to be united upon the Bible alone. Both parties claim to be identified with the apostolic church. Those who claim to be united upon the Bible alone, are generally in favor of the various societies as auxiliaries to the church, also of receiving any one into their fellowship who says he has been "immersed" into any sect whatever, no difference who by, or what for! Thus an issue is formed which our opponents contend is fatal to their plan, and calculated to divide the church.

Those who have adopted the gospel of Christ "as their only authoritative rule of faith and practice, bond of union communion and fellowship," are accused of great wrong, because they refuse to affiliate with those who are teaching and practicing doctrines and usages which cannot be sustained by apostolic precept or example. We all plead justification on the ground that the apostles were commissioned to preach nothing but the gospel of Christ; "which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes it;" and that no man, not even an angel from heaven, dare preach any other doctrine for practical purposes than that gospel which was preached by the apostles under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Our opponents receive into their fellowship such as have been immersed by either Baptists or Pedobaptists, and many hold, that all who simply believe that Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God, and is immersed, simply to constitute him a Baptist or a Methohist are all in the kingdom of heaven, and hence all are children of God, and on their way to heaven; also that there is no tangible form of church government in the New Covenant, and hence each congregation, being free and independent, has a perfect right to constitute any form it sees fit, and establish any kind of society or festival for any other institution for the support of the kingdom of the Messiah that suits the good taste of public opinion, irrespective of the gospel plan of salvation.

We object to any doctrine that cannot be sustained by apostolic precept or example, and hence we have determined not to affiliate with those who teach and practice such things as they admit are not authorized by the apostolic doctrine and usage. So, having the opportunity to prove our faith by our works, on the 23d day of Sept., 1858, I together with all the members of the congregation at White-water, who had simply been dipped into a human-made sect, were immersed by the authority of Jesus Christ into the fellowship of the Father and of the Son, together with the faithful children of God. And now say to all, go thou and do likewise. A. ALLISON.

DON'T BE A COWARD.

Dear Sisters:

I read not long since a letter in the F. F. written by a sister. She said that she especially wished to write to the snuff-dippers, and noble words did she write.

I am often surprised when I think of the number of cowards there are in the church of Christ; for cowards we are in more ways than one. We often see a noble sister who would be willing to lose her life for the cause of Christ, who will risk her life and all she holds dear in this life, to help suffering humanity, yet she will say: "I can't let this bottle of snuff go, I am ruled and controlled by this filthy habit." Yes, I verily believe some would almost rather lose their souls than to let it go.

A sister once said to me: "You know nothing of the strength of the habit. You can never realize how hard it would be for me to stop the use of snuff." I could but answer: "I thank God I do not."

Often we hear mothers lamenting the dangers their children are subject to by the temptations thrown around them, alluring them to drink the intoxicating cup. That same Christian mother will give those children the cup of egg-nogg to drink at Christmas time. Why does she do this wrong? Because of habit. Mother and grandmother did it, and why may I not do the same? Let me ask, if your mother had killed her child, is it any reason you should do the same?

Then, my sisters, should you tempt those children to become drunkards by giving them a taste for the pernicious stuff? A friend of mine who dearly loves strong drink and often imbibes too freely for his own good, once said to me: "I learned to drink through the glass of egg-nogg."

My dear sisters, are we too cowardly to break bad habits and stand in the face of the world saying: "By the grace of God I will be a coward no longer. Hurtful habits and sins I will forsake henceforth and forever."

My dear sisters, we can control the world through our children, if we but understand the power God has given us. We are the mothers of the coming generation, let us instill into the minds of our children the truths of God's word; teaching them to love truth, to be brave and upright in all things. They are to be the men and women of the world after we have passed away. Will the world be better or worse for our having lived?

FROM BRO. McCARTY.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough,

Perhaps many of our readers will remember that last year I was arrested in Walker county, charged with "disturbing religious worship," and after making six trips to Huntsville, a distance of twenty-eight miles, the case was finally dismissed. Our Baptist friends no doubt think they are "doing God's service," but we think they are very much blinded by the god of this world. I am ready to suffer more for the worthy name by which we are called. To God be all the praise. A. J. McCARTY.

FROM BRO. HOLT.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Last Lord's day father, Joseph Holt, and I held a meeting at Smith's Chapel, Ala., had four additions to the one body. Prospects good for many more.

I expect to send in several dollars for the F. F. soon. Every one here, who reads the paper, wants no other. So you see there are yet a few who have not bowed the knee to Baal. My love to all the faithful. C. E. HOLT.

ARE THERE CHRISTIANS AMONG THE SECTS?

We must first see what it takes to constitute a Christian. A man must obey the teachings of the Bible just as it is and not change it and make the Scriptures suit himself. He must believe the gospel, repent of his sins, confess the Savior and be baptized for the remission of sins, Acts 2: 38.

Do the sects teach this? Let us see: They teach that a man is dead in sin and can do nothing to bring himself to life; that the new life must be imparted by the power of God and he must wait till the Holy Ghost is sent into his heart and regenerates him and makes him a child of God; then, he can repeat of his sins.

Is it not a shame to see men leading people off into darkness by their abominable doctrine, which is of the devil? For Paul says: "If any man preach any other gospel than that which I preached unto you let him be accursed," Gal. 1: 10. Now is this so-called doctrine the sects are teaching according to the gospel which Paul preached? I think not. Paul told the Phillippian jailer to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and he should be saved; then he had something to do; he was commanded to believe, and the jailer did not sit down and wait for the Holy Spirit to operate on him, but was baptized the same night.

The sects teach that regeneration must precede baptism, and that all a man has to do is to believe. James says, "the devils also believe and tremble," James 2: 19. If faith alone will save a person the devils will be saved as well as the sects. James says that, "faith without works is dead," James 2: 20; then there is something besides faith. Jesus said to Nicodemus, "except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God," John 3: 5. Then baptism is necessary as well as faith; but not a single instance in the Bible is to be found where regeneration precedes baptism.

Let us be careful how we study the Bible. Jesus says: "Whosoever cometh to me and heareth my sayings and doeth them, I will shew you to whom he is like; he is like a man which built a house and digged deep and laid the foundation on a rock, and when a flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house but could not shake it, for it was founded upon a rock; but he that heareth and doeth not, is like a man that without a foundation built a house upon the earth, against which the stream did beat vehemently and immediately it fell and the ruin of that house was great," Luke 6: 47-49.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

Bro. McGary:

Seeing Bro. Brady's idea of the Prodigal Son in the F. F. of Oct. 15, induces me to write just a few words on that point. I did not see Bro. McCarty's idea of it. Whatever his may have been, Bro. Brady's is certainly wrong. He has it "child of God," or a Christian "falling from grace"—backsliding and being restored, etc. He overlooked the fact that the elder brother (who according to his idea must mean the church, or those children of God who do not stray off) got in a terrible huff and left the house himself. Thus while one was gained, the other was lost.

Did Bro. Brady ever see the church get mad and refuse to meet and worship God any longer, because the backsliders were restored? Do they not always rejoice? What does the Prodigal Son parable mean then? It means, that the Gentile, poor, naked and weary, without religion that will satisfy his hungry soul, is admitted to the favor of God through the gospel of Christ. The elder brother, the Jew (who was basking in God's favor before, and thought he alone was entitled to it), got insulted at this, and refused to divide his privileges with the Gentile. So he quit the house. All of which is literally true. The prodigal occupies the house now, and the elder brother is trying a foreign country, and hog feeding; by-and-by, he will be the returning prodigal, and past experience will enable them to divide the honors of the Father's house in peace and love. J. T. POE.

WHEN ARE OUR SINS BLOT-TED OUT!

*Repent ye therefore and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you," Acts 3: 19-20. I have often been asked to explain the above two verses, and as I consider them equivalent to Acts 2: 38, I conclude as Christ freshened the earth once with his presence, so will he refreshen it when He comes back again. When the great court sits and "death and hell give up their dead," and we all stand before the judgment bar of God, and the books are opened. I say, then, we will know whether our sins are blotted out or not.

Therefore I conclude that the language used by Peter on that occasion is equivalent to, "Repent ye therefore and be baptized for remission of sins that your sins may be found to be blotted out when Christ comes again."

Bro. Jackson, I promised some of our readers a long article on this subject, but I have to appeal to you to help me out. Please give us some of your best thoughts on it, and oblige, your brother in Christ.

"WHY."

In this letter, we will try to show why sect baptism is not valid. They teach that repentance precedes faith. Do the Scriptures teach repentance before faith in order to our salvation from sin? No. For Paul says, "without faith it is impossible to please God," Heb. 11: 6. Then if it was possible to do an impossibility, (repent,) it would be displeasing to God, therefore, sin.

They teach that a man obtains faith by prayer. Is this true? No; for Paul says, "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God," Rom. 10: 17.

They teach that when a man has faith he is then saved. Now if one cannot repent before he exercises faith, and according to their teaching, when one has faith he is saved, we must therefore have salvation without repentance; and Jesus says: "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish," Luke 13: 3-5. So we see their teaching is at variance with the Bible.

What do they contend? Christ? No. Well, what then? "I believe that God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins." Let us examine this confession. Is it unto salvation? No. It is because of salvation, (not of salvation)? Then it is not the confession taught in Rom. 10: 9-10-11, for it was unto salvation.

For what are they baptized? For the remission of sins? No. To be saved? No. Well, what for? To get into the church. Christ's church? No. Why not? Well, if their claim of remission of sins was true, (for there is no remission out of Christ), when they had faith they were already in Christ's church. Well, what is it for? To get into, and have the benefits of some institution called a church; for, by what they call baptism is the only way they can get into a church; then, if there is any salvation in the Baptist church, or any other, no one can enjoy it only by what they call baptism.

Now let us see the conclusion of the whole matter. To commence wrong, continue wrong, and end wrong, will save people from their sins. Then the commandments of men will do as well as the commands of Jesus. Who is prepared for this?

Recently I heard one of our brethren in a discourse condemn the practice of the mourning bench, and call the teachers of that practice false teachers. Yet he will extend the right (wrong) hand of fellowship to the same persons who have received this false teaching and will acknowledge them Christians; provided, when baptized, the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost was pronounced over them. I pray the time will come when we all will teach and practice as the oracles of God direct.

Success to the F. F. and all lovers of truth. J. P. McCONNELL.

CO-OPERATIVE MEETING.

There will be held with the church of Christ in Willis, beginning on Thursday night before the fourth Lord's day in November, a co-operative meeting for the purpose of taking steps to send out and support an evangelist in the destitute field. Therefore we invite all the congregations and disposed disciples in the counties of Montgomery, Harris, Waller, Walker, San Jacinto, Grimes and Liberty, to co-operate with us in this grand work of spreading the ancient gospel over this part of Eastern Texas.

The ground must and is being occupied. Shall we sit still and see it occupied by a perverted gospel, or shall we go up and possess it? Your action in the matter will tell whether you are or not. Let the congregations see to it that each member helps some in this work. Send messengers instructed as to how much your congregation will do. Come one, come all. The harvest truly is great but the laborers are few. Give us your aid. Come, give us the benefit of your long experience.

All those who are coming will write me or Bros. M. C. Leslie or J. M. Walker, and homes will be provided for all. Any one who will come will be welcomed. Come, let us take sweet counsel together.

This call is made by the elders and members of this congregation. I will visit all the churches between this and the meeting. Please publish, and oblige, your brother in the work, W. H. DUKE, Evangelist.

FROM BRO. GRAY.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have succeeded in getting two new subscribers for the F. F., and will also send you one dollar I owe. The last dollar I sent you paid up to July last, if Bro. Gillespie is correct, and I suppose he is. I like the F. F. very much, and hope it will soon become a weekly. And now I would say to the brotherhood at large, let us do all we can to make it a weekly, by introducing it into every household we can. Let us hold fast to our profession without wavering, and whatever we do in word or deed let us do all in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

I am still holding forth the word of life, and what is exceedingly strange, I get along very well without the aid of a "missionary board," or "society," either home or foreign.

Yes, Bro. McGary, let us hold fast to the Lord's plan of spreading the gospel, even if we should be called upon to starve, for "whether living or dying we are the Lord's." But as for the "starving," I am not much afraid, for the righteous has never been forsaken, "nor his seed found begging bread." I think we have some noble brothers and sisters in this locality, but they have never been taught to "exhort one another" when they meet. I sincerely hope they will learn the way of the Lord more perfectly.

Send the F. F. to sister Ollie T. Barnes, and Bro. Frank Hute, both at Muchakinock, Mahaska county, Iowa. Yours for the truth,

W. P. GRAY.

Eddyville, Iowa.

NO NEW REVELATIONS.

"If every preacher would lose sight of every other preacher and read his Bible praying for wisdom from above, finding his model in God's word instead of popular runs, then all preachers would be nearer together and all nearer the truth. An unwilling priestcraft is stealthily crystallizing about us. Error clad in beautiful garments, sits enchanting, and her entreaties are so bewitching that those who would boldly rise and denounce her, must risk the anathemas of those whom she has already deceived."—Gospel Standard, June '88.

There is a great deal of solid truth in the foregoing extract. There is only one thing to which I object and that is the idea of a preacher who reads his Bible "praying for wisdom from above," when he has the Word of wisdom in his hands. Do we not read that, "All Scripture, divinely inspired, is indeed profitable for teaching, for conviction, for correction, for that discipline which is in righteousness: so that the man of God may be complete, thoroughly fitted for every good work."

What need then of looking beyond this source of wisdom, which is God-given. We need not look for new revelations to make us wise unto salvation" with God's word to guide us, and those who turn aside from that are apt to get misled by fables and the ignis fatuus of their own imagination and this course will promote a schism and result in evil to the cause of Christ, and this the extract fully recognizes.

And as to the preachers "losing" sight of each other," reading "their Bibles," instead of finding "their models in popular ruts," the advice might well be heeded, for there is a large measure of jealousy and egotism among preachers, to their shame be it said. And yet they are among the most self-sacrificing men we find in the world, and are abounding in many good works. Yet their deference to "popular" ideas often hinders the truth, and error prevails where truth alone should reign. Then let "preachers" be more circumspect in their ways and learning wisdom from God's word, see eye to eye and speak the same things, then will they "be nearer together and all nearer the truth."

P. H. A.

FROM BRO. LIVINGSTON.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have been thinking for some time I would write you a few lines. Have been taking your paper over a year, and will send up a dollar for it. My time has been out some time. I do not know how much I owe. I like the F. F. better than at first, only have one objection to the position of the paper, and that is this: You hold in order for baptism to be valid there must be a preceding knowledge that it is for past sins. I will not argue this point at present, but simply say, that many of our young people did not understand fully when they joined the church. I'm not talking about the sect, but only the young in the church of Christ.

To make the matter plainer, I joined the church at about fifteen years of age, had an average raising by Christian parents, and believed all I knew of the Bible, with all my heart, knew nothing of sectarian teaching. But still I can't say that I believed baptism was for past sins. My recollection is, that obedience to all the commands would bring eternal salvation. Further than this I cannot remember now. I know there are many people in the same condition, still I understand you to teach that their obedience to baptism is not the one baptism.

I am not trying to make the Bible fit myself, if I know it. But I want to know if I am mistaken in regard to your position. There must be some difference in young and older wicked people, anyway. A man thirty years old who has not obeyed the gospel, certainly has more guilt, as well as knowledge, than the young man who has done but little wrong. You can see what I want from these lines. I want to send the paper to some of my sectarian neighbors and see if they will read it.

J. T. LIVINGSTON.

Barnett, Texas.

My brother, I can only reply to you by saying that the Scriptures clearly and unequivocally teach us that baptism is for the remission of "sins that are past." This our Lord sets forth in very plain language in his commission under which his chosen apostles went forth to teach the nations. If there is any variation in the law of Christ to suit the cases of old and young sinners, I have never discovered it. Baptism is for the remission of the sins of "a man thirty years old who has not obeyed the gospel," or for the man ninety years old, or "fifteen years old." Paul says the Scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works. Then as the Scriptures teach us that baptism is for the remission of sins, without intimating any variation to suit age, sex or color, we conclude that this is God's law for all men, and all time from the beginning of the reign of His Son Jesus Christ till he comes to judge the world.

As the Scriptures teach us this it must be the truth; and our Saviour said, "you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." These things being true, and having the example of the apostles clearly recorded, showing thousands of persons baptized by them, and finding not one instance where they baptized any until they had been taught the truth; and being determined to stand by the truth, and teach and practice nothing more nor less than the apostles taught and practiced on this question, the F. F. does deny that a baptism which is not preceded by this same teaching is the one baptism.

My brother, it weighs not on my feather against "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," which is bound in heaven and earth, if you should be correct when you say: "Many of our young people did not understand, when they joined the church." I verily believe you are right in saying so, but it is only so much the worse for them and their teachers. If some apples are shaken down green that is no reason why the rule to pull only ripe apples should be modified—only in the case of the apples the wrong cannot be repaired, while in the case of untaught persons being baptized, they can be taught and baptized intelligently in the name of the Lord Jesus.

The F. F. is not a law-maker in these divine things. It fully recognizes the fact, that "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" was made and "forever settled in heaven" eighteen hundred years ago.

Some men berate us much because we will not tamper with this heaven-bound law and modify it just a little to suit individual cases; but this is not man's prerogative. What a fearful responsibility many of our brethren are assuming upon this matter! They should tremble at the thought of it! When will any man learn that he is not the judge, and that judgment will be according to God's written law?

Many thanks, my brother, for your club of subscribers.

A. McG.

FROM A SISTER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Enclosed you will find twenty cents, ten cents for the "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," and ten cents for that tent that you are so patiently working for. Only ten cents, and yet it is all you ask of each subscriber of the F. F. Now I am sure if each reader will stop and think, they will at once send in their dime, for we cannot doubt that much good will come from these mites.

I have just received my first F. F., and can say that I am much pleased with it; could not be otherwise, for it contends so earnestly for the truth and nothing but the truth, and that in such a bold manner.

I was advised by our good brother, W. T. Kidwill, to take the F. F., and I shall always feel thankful for his good advice, for it will help me so much in my efforts to teach my sister, a Baptist, who has never heard the gospel preached in its purity. I have been taking the Gospel Advocate for some time and sending it to her, and now I shall send the F. F., hoping it will do even more good than the G. A., for it presents the truth in a clear and forcible manner. A sister,

REPORT.

Commenced a meeting with New Hope church, in Polk county, Ark., on Saturday night before the fourth Lord's day in August, assisted by Bro. — McBride, with two confessions and baptisms. This church is not in order on account of trouble in the neighborhood, as well as the church.

Commenced at Two Mile Saturday night before the second Lord's day in September, and closed Thursday night with thirteen confessions and baptisms for the remission of sins, one restored. Give God the glory. The church is in good order for Western Arkansas, where the cause has not been preached until within the last few years. The church was greatly revived. Since I took charge of this church there have been some thirty or thirty-five added to the saved.

Bro. McGary, I do love the F. F. because of its pure doctrine.

Yours truly,

J. W. BRATCHER.

Dallas, Ark.

A promise should be given with caution and kept with care. It should be made with the heart and remembered by the head.

The nearer we live to Jesus, and the closer our walk is with him, the less inclination we have for pursuits and pleasures in which he is not the object.

Believe nothing against another, but on good authority; nor report what may hurt another, unless it be a greater hurt to another to conceal it.—W. Penn.

WANTS NO COMMISSION.

Bro. A. Allison, of Arkansas, has just sent us a club of seventeen. He says: "I want no commission for what I do for the F. F. I am anxious for a weekly and will do all I can to get it. I have witnessed the immersion of nine within one month, in the bounds of my labors. There are eight or ten churches in this section firmly settled on the FIRM FOUNDATION. Others, I trust, will soon practice its principles, for they are apostolic principles. You may count on a steady increase in this country."

DEBATES.

At Lanham, Hamilton county, Texas, between J. C. Weaver, Methodist, and J. D. Tant, Christian, to begin on Wednesday, 21st of November, and continue eight days.

At Youngsfort, Bell county, Texas, between Mr. Miller, Christian, and J. D. Tant, Christian, to begin Monday, 24th of December, and continue six days.

We will examine the doctrine, teaching and practice of said churches on this occasion. All lovers of truth are invited to attend.

Truly yours,

J. D. TANT.

Bro. McGary's address is now changed to Austin, Texas, Box 26.

In ordering the paper or tracts write your name plainly, and give postoffice, county and state.

Now is the time to send in your clubs. Go to work, brethren, and send us large lists of subscribers.

We do not answer questions unless the enquirers send us in their true names. We have thrown several into the waste basket on that account.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

READ THIS!—Your attention is called to the notice, "Attention, Readers!" on first and fourth pages, and, hereafter, you are requested to make all money orders payable to A. BRO. HERNDON ON ORDINATION.

A. E. Myers, of Bethany, W. Va., is one of our exchanges, publishes a criticism upon the position held by us upon this subject, but unfortunately he has misapprehended our argument entirely. This is the severest criticism that he could have made, for a man who cannot make himself understood to the average intellect, should not write. We will make one more effort to be understood.

He says: "This argument against ordination, if fairly stated, I presume would stand about thus: 'Every specific action must have a word that clearly defines or specifies what the action is: to ordain a person is a specific act, therefore a word must be found clearly defining and expressing what that act is.' The effort, therefore, of those who oppose ordination is to show that there is no such a word, and hence their appeal to all the words rendered 'ordain' in the New Testament, fairly presuming that if there is such a word, it would be found among those thus translated."

We have never opposed "ordination", Tolbert Fanning never opposed "ordination", and we have never yet met with the writer who has! We have opposed the practice of laying on hands as a part of ordination. We teach and practice ordination of elders and deacons, but not ordination by imposition of hands. Is this plain? We contend that the words used in the New Testament in connection with the ordination of elders and deacons, mean precisely what they were intended to mean, and that they were not intended to teach anything that was not in the word. Is this plain? When Paul said to Titus, "For this cause I left thee in Crete, that thou shouldst set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I have appointed thee", we find in the word katastesees only what it means, and do not find "imposition of hands", nor any special ceremony in it. And when it is said that Paul and Barnabas "ordained them elders in every church", we find in the word cheirotoneesantees only what it means, and do not find in it any imposition of hands.

In Acts 6: 3, where the apostles said "whom we may appoint over this business", we hold that they meant precisely what is in the word katasteesomen, and we have no authority for injecting "imposition of hands" into it. When the Holy Spirit said, "Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them", we hold that they meant only what was in aphoriste, and that there was no "imposition of hands" in it.

If "imposition of hands" is part of the ceremony of appointing elders and deacons, or of ordaining them, we must find it in a specific command and in definite words, and we can not find it in these words that were used. In the case of the "seven", they were not elders, and they were not "deacons" as described in 1 Tim. 3: 8-13. There was no congregational organization there, and they were to do only one specified thing. There was a community of goods, and the apostles, because they were the apostles, had taken charge of them, and they, because they were the apostles, took the authority of placing these men over this business—not appointing them, the disciples did that—by praying and laying their hands on them. Notice, that where there is an imposition of hands, there are words used that say exactly that. Who laid on their hands? The apostles. When the apostles come and lay their hands on the heads of any one, we will say, Amen. The apostles did the praying. We cannot see that it is authority for uninspired men to lay on hands and pray for some other purpose.

In Acts 13: 1-3, the laying on of hands is declared by specific words. Whenever you will show us in a congregation at the present day, "prophets and teachers", as therein mentioned, and convince us that the Holy Spirit directed them to ordain any one for any purpose, and they will do it by fasting, praying, and laying on of hands, we will say, Amen; but we will not take it for authority to go to congregations and lay our hands on men that the brethren have selected to be their elders or deacons! Please notice, that the men who laid on their hands, did the praying and fasting. No one else prayed or fasted. To be consistent we must not teach any one to pray or fast in ordination except those who lay on hands.

In Acts 14: 23, "And when they had ordained them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord on whom they believed", we learn that only those who did the "ordaining", did the fasting and praying. But, does the word represented by "ordained" mean "laying on hands"? Does it not mean something entirely different? Thayer's Greek-English Lexicon of the N. T., we suppose the best, and it is the latest, says: "CHEIRO-TONEOO: a, properly to vote by stretching out the hand, b, to create or appoint by vote, c, to elect, appoint, create. Acts 14: 23." Ought not this forever to take this passage out of the list of proof-texts for the laying on of hands? But men will go on quoting it as unconcernedly as if every Greek scholar in the world, said it meant that Paul and Barnabas laid their hands on elders in every congregation!

Our critic says: "Ordination is not a simple specific act at all, but is a series of acts embracing prayer, fasting, and the imposition of the hands of those officiating, say nothing of the choosing of those to be ordained." We can see no meaning in the last part of the sentence, those words after the last comma, and we will consider the other statement. We are willing to accept the statement that "ordination is not a simple specific act"; that is our position; but we deny that the New Testament writers tell us what acts constitute ordination. We admit that they do sometimes specify the acts engaged in when men were ordained—set apart; but we deny that any of these cases are for example in "ordaining" elders or deacons. Just at this place we will say that there is not, in our opinion, a single command or example in the New Testament for "ordaining" men to be evangelists. We will examine the instances that our critic presents.

Acts 6: 3: "When the brethren had made the selection as ordered, they placed them before the apostles to be 'appointed' or 'ordained.' The manner of their 'appointment' is thus described in God's word: 'And when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them.' If this is intended, as an example for us, we must put ourselves in similar conditions. We must have inspired men to lay on hands. We have just as much authority for saying that the conduct of Peter and John towards the beggar at the temple, is an example for our guidance, as to say that this is. We are not apostles and have no right to try to ape them in apostolic work. If this is an example to us, by what authority have we the right to tell all the disciples to pray and then limit the laying on of hands to preachers? Are preachers to be considered as successors to the apostles? Why should one disciple more than another lay on hands? Was this action of the apostles by congregational direction, or was the action of the congregation by direction of the apostles? You cannot say that the apostles prayed and laid on hands by direction of the disciples, but you are bound to say, that the disciples did look out these men by direction of the apostles; now, if this is for our guidance, we must have successors to the apostles, these successors must direct the congregation to look out the men, and the congregation must not look out the men until these successors to the apostles have commanded them; then these successors to the apostles must pray, the congregation looking on, and then lay their hands on the candidates. Are you ready to take this as an example with all of its legitimate consequences? We are not.

"In the case reported in Acts 13, it is said of those that 'ministered to the Lord,' and who were ordered to 'separate me, Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them,' and 'when they had fasted and prayed, they laid their hands on them; they sent them away.' Here the three acts are all stated—fasting, prayer, and the imposition of hands. This, therefore, is scriptural." Of course it is scriptural, but that is not saying that we ought to "ordain" by fasting, prayer, and the imposition of hands. It does not say that it was those "that ministered to the Lord" who did these things; but it says, that there were in the church at Antioch, prophets and teachers, naming them, who, when they were ministering to the Lord, were directed

And as to the preachers "losing" sight of each other," reading "their Bibles," instead of finding "their models in popular ruts," the advice might well be heeded, for there is a large measure of jealousy and egotism among preachers, to their shame be it said. And yet they are among the most self-sacrificing men we find in the world, and are abounding in many good works. Yet their deference to "popular" ideas often hinders the truth, and error prevails where truth alone should reign. Then let "preachers" be more circumspect in their ways and learning wisdom from God's word, see eye to eye and speak the same things, then will they "be nearer together and all nearer the truth."

FROM BRO. LIVINGSTON.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have been thinking for some time I would write you a few lines. Have been taking your paper over a year, and will send up a dollar for it. My time has been out some time. I do not know how much I owe. I like the F. F. better than at first, only have one objection to the position of the paper, and that is this: You hold in order for baptism to be valid there must be a preceding knowledge that it is for past sins. I will not argue this point at present, but simply say, that many of our young people did not understand fully when they joined the church. I'm not talking about the sects, but only the young in the church of Christ.

To make the matter plainer, I joined the church at about fifteen years of age, had an average raising by Christian parents, and believed all I knew of the Bible, with all my heart, knew nothing of sectarian teaching. But still I can't say that I believed baptism was for past sins. My recollection is, that obedience to all the commands would bring eternal salvation. Further than this I cannot remember now. I know there are many people in the same condition, still I understand you to teach that their obedience to baptism is not the one baptism.

I am not trying to make the Bible fit myself, if I know it. But I want to know if I am mistaken in regard to your position. There must be some difference in young and older wicked people, anyway. A man thirty years old who has not obeyed the gospel, certainly has more guilt, as well as knowledge, than the young man who has done but little wrong. You can see what I want from these lines. I want to send the paper to some of my sectarian neighbors and see if they will read it.

J. T. LIVINGSTON.

Burnett, Texas.

My brother, I can only reply to you by saying that the Scriptures clearly and unequivocally teach us that baptism is for the remission of "sins that are past." This our Lord sets forth in very plain language in his commission under which his chosen apostles went forth to teach the nations. If there is any variation in the law of Christ to suit the cases of old and young sinners, I have never discovered it. Baptism is for the remission of the sins of "a man thirty years old who has not obeyed the gospel," or for the man ninety years old, or "fifteen years old." Paul says the Scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works. Then as the Scriptures teach us that baptism is for the remission of sins, without intimating any variation to suit age, sex or color, we conclude that this is God's law for all men, and all time from the beginning of the reign of His Son Jesus Christ till he comes to judge the world.

As the Scriptures teach us this it must be the truth; and our Saviour said, "you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." These things being true, and having the example of the apostles clearly recorded, showing thousands of persons baptized by them, and finding not one instance where they baptized any until they had been taught the truth; and being determined to stand by the truth, and teach and practice nothing more nor less than the apostles taught and practiced on this question, the F. F. does deny that a baptism which is not preceded by this same teaching is the one baptism.

My brother, it weighs not one feather against "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," which is bound in heaven and earth, if you should be correct when you say: "Many of our young people did not understand, when they joined the church." I verily believe you are right in saying so, but it is only so much the worse for them and their teachers. If some apples are shaken down green that is no reason why the rule to pull only ripe apples should be modified—only in the case of the apples the wrong cannot be repaired, while in the case of untaught persons being baptized, they can be taught and baptized intelligently in the name of the Lord Jesus.

The F. F. is not a law-maker in these divine things. It fully recognizes the fact; that "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" was made and "forever settled in heaven" eighteen hundred years ago.

Some men berate us much because we will not tamper with this heaven-bound law and modify it just a little to suit individual cases; but this is not man's prerogative. What a fearful responsibility many of our brethren are assuming upon this matter! They should tremble at the thought of it! When will puny man learn that he is not the judge, and that judgment will be according to God's written law?

Many thanks, my brother, for your club of subscribers.

FROM A SISTER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Enclosed you will find twenty cents, ten cents for the "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," and ten cents for that tent that you are so patiently working for. Only ten cents, and yet it is all you ask of each subscriber of the F. F. Now I am sure if each reader will stop and think, they will at once send in their dime, for we cannot doubt that much good will come from these mites.

I have just received my first F. F., and can say that I am much pleased with it; could not be otherwise, for it contends so earnestly for the truth and nothing but the truth, and that in such a bold manner.

I was advised by our good brother, W. T. Kidwill, to take the F. F., and I shall always feel thankful for his good advice, for it will help me so much in my efforts to teach my sister, a Baptist, who has never heard the gospel preached in its purity. I have been taking the Gospel Advocate for some time and sending it to her, and now I shall send the F. F., hoping it will do even more good than the G. A., for it presents the truth in a clear and forcible manner. A sister,

REPORT.

Commenced a meeting with New Hope church, in Polk county, Ark., on Saturday night before the fourth Lord's day in August, assisted by Bro. — McBride, with two confessions and baptisms. This church is not in order on account of trouble in the neighborhood, as well as the church.

Commenced at Two Mile Saturday night before the second Lord's day in September, and closed Thursday night with thirteen confessions and baptisms for the remission of sins, one restored. Give God the glory. The church is in good order for Western Arkansas, where the cause has not been preached until within the last few years. The church was greatly revived. Since I took charge of this church there have been some thirty or thirty-five added to the saved.

Bro. McGary, I do love the F. F. because of its pure doctrine.

Yours truly,

J. W. BRATCHER.

Dallas, Ark.

A promise should be given with caution and kept with care. It should be made with the heart and remembered by the head.

WANTS NO COMMISSION.

Bro. A. Allison, of Arkansas, has just sent us a club of seventeen. He says: "I want no commission for what I do for the F. F. I am anxious for a weekly and will do all I can to get it. I have witnessed the immersion of nine within one month, in the bounds of my labor. There are eight or ten churches in this section firmly settled on the FIRM FOUNDATION. Others, I trust, will soon practice its principles, for they are apostolic principles. You may count on a steady increase in this country."

DEBATES.

At Lanham, Hamilton county, Texas, between J. C. Weaver, Methodist, and J. D. Tant, Christian, to begin on Wednesday, 21st of November, and continue eight days.

At Youngsfort, Bell county, Texas, between Mr. Miller, Christadelphian, and J. D. Tant, Christian, to begin Monday, 24th of December, and continue six days.

We will examine the doctrine, teaching and practice of said churches on this occasion. All lovers of truth are invited to attend.

Truly yours,

J. D. TANT.

BRIEFS.

Bro. McGary's address is now changed to Austin, Texas, Box 26.

In ordering the paper or tracts write your name plainly, and give postoffice, county and state.

Now is the time to send in your clubs. Go to work, brethren, and send us large lists of subscribers.

We do not answer questions unless the enquirers send us in their true names. We have thrown several into the waste basket on that account.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

READ THIS!—Your attention is called to the notice, "Attention, Readers!" on first and fourth pages, and, hereafter, you are requested to make all money orders payable to A. MCGARY, Austin, Texas, and send all letters, and articles for publication, to A. McGary, Box 26, Austin, Texas. Please do not forget this.

BRO. HERNDON ON ORDINATION.

A. E. Myers, of Bethany, W. Va., in one of our exchanges, publishes a criticism upon the position held by us upon this subject, but unfortunately he has misapprehended our argument entirely. This is the severest criticism that he could have made, for a man who cannot make himself understood to the average intellect, should not write. We will make one more effort to be understood.

He says: "This argument against ordination, if fairly stated, I presume would stand about thus: 'Every specific action must have a word that clearly defines or specifies what the action is: to ordain a person is a specific act, therefore a word must be found clearly defining and expressing what that act is.' The effort, therefore, of those who oppose ordination is to show that there is no such a word, and hence their appeal to all the words rendered 'ordain' in the New Testament, fairly presuming that if there is such a word, it would be found among those thus translated."

We have never opposed "ordination", Tolbert Fanning never opposed "ordination", and we have never yet met with the writer who has! We have opposed the practice of laying on hands as a part of ordination. We teach and practice ordination of elders and deacons, but not ordination by imposition of hands. Is this plain? We contend that the words used in the New Testament in connection with the ordination of elders and deacons, mean precisely what they were intended to mean, and that they were not intended to teach anything that was not in the word. Is this plain? When Paul said to Titus, "For this cause I left thee in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I have appointed thee", we find in the word katasteesees only what it means, and do not find "imposition of hands", nor any special ceremony in it. And when it is said that Paul and Barnabas "ordained them elders in every church", we find in the word cheirotoneesantees only what it means, and do not find in it any imposition of hands.

In Acts 6: 3, where the apostles said "whom we may appoint over this business", we hold that they meant precisely what is in the word katasteesomen, and we have no authority for injecting "imposition of hands" into it. When the Holy Spirit said, "Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them", we hold that they meant only what was in aphoriseite, and that there was no "imposition of hands" in it.

If "imposition of hands" is part of the ceremony of appointing elders and deacons, or of ordaining them, we must find it in a specific command and in definite words, and we can not find it in these words that were used. In the case of the "seven", they were not elders, and they were not "deacons" as described in 1 Tim. 3: 8-13. There was no congregational organization there, and they were to do only one specified thing. There was a community of goods, and the apostles, because they were the apostles, had taken charge of them, and they, because they were the apostles, took the authority of placing these men over this business—not appointing them, the disciples did that—by praying and laying their hands on them. Notice, that where there is an imposition of hands, there are words used that say exactly that. Who laid on their hands? The apostles. When the apostles come and lay their hands on the heads of any one, we will say, Amen. The apostles did the praying. We cannot see that it is authority for uninspired men to lay on hands and pray for some other purpose.

In Acts 13: 1-3, the laying on of hands is declared by specific words. Whenever you will show us in a congregation at the present day, "prophets and teachers", as therein

mentioned, and convince us that the Holy Spirit directed them to ordain any one for any purpose, and they will do it by fasting, praying, and laying on of hands, we will say, Amen; but we will not take it for authority to go to congregations and lay our hands on men that the brethren have selected to be their elders or deacons! Please notice, that the men who laid on their hands, did the praying and fasting. No one else prayed or fasted. To be consistent we must not teach any one to pray or fast in ordination except those who lay on hands.

In Acts 14: 23, "And when they had ordained them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord on whom they believed", we learn that only those who did the "ordaining", did the fasting and praying. But, does the word represented by "ordained" mean "laying on hands"? Does it not mean something entirely different? Thayer's Greek-English Lexicon of the N. T., we suppose the best, and it is the latest, says: "CHEIRO-TONEOO: a, properly to vote by stretching out the hand, b, to create or appoint by vote, c, to elect, appoint, create. Acts 14: 23." Ought not this forever to take this passage out of the list of proof-texts for the laying on of hands? But men will go on quoting it as unconcernedly as if every Greek scholar in the world, said it meant that Paul and Barnabas laid their hands on elders in every congregation!

Our critic says: "Ordination is not a simple specific act at all, but is a series of acts embracing prayer, fasting, and the imposition of the hands of those officiating, say nothing of the choosing of those to be ordained." We can see no meaning in the last part of the sentence, those words after the last comma, and we will consider the other statement. We are willing to accept the statement that "ordination is not a simple specific act"; that is our position; but we deny that the New Testament writers tell us what acts constitute ordination. We admit that they do sometimes specify the acts engaged in when men were ordained—set apart; but we deny that any of these cases are for example in "ordaining" elders or deacons. Just at this place we will say that there is not, in our opinion, a single command or example in the New Testament for "ordaining" men to be evangelists. We will examine the instances that our critic presents.

Acts 6: 3: "When the brethren had made the selection as ordered, they placed them before the apostles to be 'appointed' or 'ordained.' The manner of their 'appointment' is thus described in God's word: 'And when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them.' If this is intended as an example for us, we must put ourselves in similar conditions. We must have inspired men to lay on hands. We have just as much authority for saying that the conduct of Peter and John towards the beggar at the temple, is an example for our guidance, as to say that this is. We are not apostles and have no right to try to ape them in apostolic work. If this is an example to us, by what authority have we the right to tell all the disciples to pray and then limit the laying on of hands to preachers? Are preachers to be considered as successors to the apostles? Why should one disciple more than another lay on hands? Was this action of the apostles by congregational direction, or was the action of the congregation by direction of the apostles? You cannot say that the apostles prayed and laid on hands by direction of the disciples, but you are bound to say, that the disciples did look out these men by direction of the apostles; now, if this is for our guidance, we must have successors to the apostles, these successors must direct the congregation to look out the men, and the congregation must not look out the men until these successors to the apostles have commanded them; then these successors to the apostles must pray, the congregation looking on, and then lay their hands on the candidates. Are you ready to take this as an example with all of its legitimate consequences? We are not.

"In the case reported in Acts 13, it is said of those that 'ministered to the Lord,' and who were ordered to 'separate me, Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them,' and 'when they had fasted and prayed, they laid their hands on them; they sent them away.' Here the three acts are all stated—fasting, prayer, and the imposition of hands. This, therefore, is scriptural." Of course it is scriptural, but that is not saying that we ought to "ordain" by fasting, prayer, and the imposition of hands. It does not say that it was those "that ministered to the Lord" who did these things; but it says, that there were in the church at Antioch, prophets and teachers, naming them, who, when they were ministering to the Lord, were directed to do a certain thing. Quite a different statement. All disciples could be spoken of as those that ministered to the Lord, but these were prophets and teachers, and while they were ministering as prophets and teachers, the command came to them. If this was to be an example to us, we must first prove that elders, deacons, and evangelists were, all of them, to be "ordained" in the same way, and secondly, that Barnabas and Saul were thus "ordained" to be either elders, deacons, or evangelists. The first cannot be done, unless we can find instances where elders, deacons, and evangelists, were each so "ordained" with these three acts performed, and this cannot be done. No one will claim that this was done to make Barnabas and Saul elders, deacons, or evangelists, for they were all these and more, being inspired men, apostles of God in the highest sense. Then it could not be for guidance and imitation. But again: If for our guidance, we must have some men who are prophets and teachers. We have no prophets, and no teachers, of the kind mentioned here, hence it can not be for our imitation. But suppose that by some logical legerdemain we could transfer a duty from prophets and teachers to uninspired men, then we must wait for the Holy Spirit to speak to these men, and tell them to "ordain" certain particular men, before these men could do it. Prof. McGarvey, in his Commentary on Acts, in loco, says: "What they did was doubtless what they had been told to do by the Holy Spirit. But the Holy Spirit simply said to them, 'Separate me Barnabas and Saul to the work to which I have called them.' The fasting, prayer, and imposition of hands was, then, merely their separation to this work. It was a ceremony deemed by infinite wisdom suitable to such a purpose, and, therefore, whenever a congregation has a similar purpose to accomplish, they have, in this case, the judgment and will of God, which should be their guide." This had nothing to do with the congregation, nor the congregation anything to do with this, yet, "whenever a congregation has a similar purpose to accomplish they have, in this case, the judgment and will of God, which should be their guide." Wonderful logic! But according to our usual practice the members of the congregations do not fast, pray, and lay on their hands; some of the members fast, (it is requested by the master of ceremonies that all of them fast); several evangelists are called in, and possibly the elders of the congregation are invited to assist, one evangelist prays, one gives the charge, (where it comes from we do not know), all of them lay on their hands, (while they are doing this generally they do not say anything, because they do not know what to say), and then another evangelist prays. We take the liberty of copying the following printed and copyrighted programme of Ordination. It is written by F. M. Green, and published by John Burns, St. Louis, Mo., 1868. The author in his preface, says: "The author desires to acknowledge special help received from the writings of Alexander Campbell, Prof. J. W. McGarvey, F. M. Bruner, T. W. Brents, and A. B. Jones, and from the direct contributions of Thomas Munnell and Robert Moffett." From such a galaxy of Biblical exegetes, we might expect much light, but from the sample that we have just given from one of them, we must not be too sanguine, but here is the "Form."

ORDINATION OF OFFICERS.

The following outline of ordination ceremonies may be used at the ordination of evangelists, elders, or deacons:

1. A sermon suitable to the occasion may be preached by some preacher chosen for that purpose.

A brief statement by the presiding officers of the church as follows:

We have met to-day to ordain A. B. as a minister of the word (or elder or deacon, as the case may be). I submit to this meeting the following evidences of the fitness of this brother (or these brethren) for the position (or positions) to which he (or they) has been chosen. (Here state the previous action of the church, (or churches if an evangelist), in "looking out from among them", this person (or persons) for the special service of the church. Now if there is a member here, who knows a reason why this ordination should not take place, let him here and now give such reason or forever after hold his peace.

3. The candidates for ordination are invited to take seats provided for them in front of the congregation.

Do you still desire, and is it your wish that these brethren (name them one by one) shall be ordained as the unanimously chosen officers of this congregation? And do you acknowledge them as having full Ecclesiastical authority to officiate for you in the office to which you have chosen them? (The congregation should rise in token of its assent.)

Before ordination, the following questions should be asked of the candidate:

(a) A. B. Is it your desire to preach the word of God? Answer. It is.

Do you promise before God and this congregation, that you will study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth? Answer. I do.

Do you promise that you will exercise the office, with which you are hereby invested in the name of the Lord, according to the true intent and meaning of the new institution as you shall give account to God at his glorious appearing and kingdom, and preach the word, be instant in season, out of season; that you will reprove, rebuke, and exhort with all long suffering and doctrine; that you will not shun to declare the whose counsel of God; and that you will keep yourself pure, watch in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, and make full proof of thy ministry. Answer. By the grace of God I will so endeavor to live, and to do.

(b) C. D. Do you wish to do the work of an Elder? Answer. I do.

Do you accept it willingly, and will you strive to be blameless, vigilant, sober, of good behavior, hospitable, apt to teach, taking heed to yourself and the flock in the which the Holy Spirit hath made you overseer? Answer. By the grace of God I will.

(c) E. F. Is it your desire to accept the work of a deacon? Answer. It is.

Will you assume the duties of this office according to the will of God and strive to live in all gravity and sincerity before God and before men? Answer. I will.

4. Prayer before ordination.

5. The candidates then kneel, and two or three evangelists or elders join in putting hands on the head of the candidate, one of them saying:

(a) A. B. We do hereby ordain you to the solemn and responsible work of the Ministry of God's Word. At your own request, and by the approval of the church, you are hereby set apart to preach the Word and to do the Work of evangelist. May God give you wisdom to make "full proof of thy ministry."

(b) C. D. By your own willing consent and desire, and by the unanimous voice of this church, you are hereby ordained to the office of elder in this church. May God give you wisdom to "rule well" and to "feed the church of God which he purchased with his own blood."

(c) E. F. We do also ordain you to the office and work of deacon in this church. May the Lord give you wisdom to use the office well that you may purchase to yourself a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus. Amen!

6. Prayer after the ordination specially for the candidates by one of the ministers participating in the service.

7. This may be followed by a brief address or charge to the candidate, that he may realize his responsibility, and with all diligence and fidelity to the Lord, and with all humility of mind, and affectionate concern for the brethren, exercise the office with which he has been invested by the cordial and unanimous choice of the church.

8. In like manner the church may be addressed by one of the ministers present, charging them to remember them whom they have chosen to rule over them, or to speak the Word of God to them, "and considering the issue of their life, imitate their faith."

9. Song and benediction.

Now, here is Ordination formulated. How do you like it? Let us look at it. "Now if there is a member here, who knows a reason why this ordination should not now take place, let him here and now give his reason or forever after hold his peace." Where in the Bible do we find such a command laid upon disciples? A special gift is now about to be conferred, a peculiar sanctity is about to cover this man, and after our hands have rested upon him, let no voice of criticism be raised against him! "And do you acknowledge them as having full ecclesiastical authority to officiate for you in the office to which you have chosen them?" "Full ecclesiastical authority." How do you like the phrase? Where in God's Word does it occur? We were once a Bible-speaking people, but now the language of Ashdod is our language. Will some "ordination brother" please point us to the passage of the Bible that speaks of or intimates office in connection with elder, deacon, or evangelist? Of course we do not mean our Common Version of the Bible.

"Before ordination, the following questions should be asked of the candidate." Should they, why? No such questions were asked in the New Testament.

"The candidates then kneel, and two or three evangelists or elders join in putting hands on the head of the candidate." Where do you find authority for all this? But we beg pardon, authority is out of fashion! Our old-fashioned notions and early training make us unconsciously ask for a "thus saith the Lord." We must rid ourself of this habit, or we may be considered old foggy: but bear with us a while longer in our old customs. May we ask, in all humility, where in God's Word can we find the command or the example of evangelists putting their hands on the heads candidates, to "ordain" them? Do not please, tell us that Paul and Barnabas did it, or Timothy or Titus, because you do not know that they did, and then they were more than evangelist; but give us a single instance of a man's doing this, who was merely a preacher. There are a number of such men mentioned in the New Testament. May we enquire why it is necessary to have two or three evangelists, why would not one be sufficient? One of these evangelists saying: "We do hereby ordain you to the solemn and responsible work", etc. What do they mean by "ordain"? Is it a setting apart to a special work? We thought the congregation "set apart" its own servants. No, you say the congregation selects, and the evangelists set them apart. Then a congregation can not have elders or deacons until these evangelists choose to set them apart!

"Here state the previous action of the church, (or churches if an evangelist)." One church may "look out" a man for elder or deacon, but churches must "look out" the man to be ordained an evangelist. Where, oh where, can I find the Scripture for all this ceremony of ordination! As this Minister's Manual, in flexible morocco cover, so as to be carried in the pocket for ready reference, is endorsed by a professor in a Bible College, the presumption is that the embryo ministers will be trained by him to carry out this programme.

We call attention to another statement made by Prof. McGarvey, in his comments upon this incident at Antioch. "Though an apostle by special commission he [Paul] was 'ordained' by his humble fellow-laborers in Antioch." This language can imply only that this "ordination" conferred some honor or power, and that the honor or power was conferred by his fellow-laborers, who were lower in honor than he. No honor or power was conferred, and Paul manifested no humility, when he suffered these prophets and teachers, men on a perfect equality with him according to the narrative, to do whatever they did do, because he knew that they did it by express authority of the Holy Spirit. We deny that the praying, fasting, and laying on of hands constituted the "separating." Let us analyze it. The Holy Spirit said: "Separate for me Barnabas and Saul to the employment to which I have summoned them." Then having fasted, prayed, and laid their hands on them, they bid them depart. These men were fasting and ministering to the Lord when the command came to them, praying was probably part of their ministering, then praying and fasting was not part of the "separating." Laying on of hands in this instance conferred no power, nor inducted into any office, but being a custom as common then, as shaking hands now, by laying their hands on them they sent them away, "blessing them"—asking God's blessing on them. Is not this much the more natural interpretation of the language?

We said awhile back, that there is not, in our opinion, a single command or example in the New Testament for "ordaining" men to be evangelists. We believe that 1 Tim. 4:14, is the only proof-text for that practice. "Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery." For the which cause I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee through the laying on of my hands." 2 Tim. 1:6. "This charge I commit unto thee my child Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before thee, that by them thou mayest war the good warfare." 1 Tim. 1:18. The laying on of the hands of the presbytery was the means through which a gift was given. If a gift is not now given through the laying on of the hands of the presbytery then this is no authority for the presbytery to lay on hands now. If Timothy was "ordained" by the laying on of the hands of the presbytery, surely it is not authority for evangelists to lay their hands on men to make them evangelists. It seems that Timothy had a gift from God that came through the laying on of Paul's hands. This cannot be an example to us for our imitation, unless we can imitate it. We do not claim to be a successor of Paul, or as having his power, and hence, we do not lay our hands on any one, by reason of this incident. Why do men who profess to require a "thus saith the Lord" for what they do, quote these statements to justify their evangelists and elders, in laying their hands on men desiring to be evangelists? We can not imagine.

If the Lord commands us to do a thing, if we do not do it we commit a sin. Did the Lord ever suggest anything that we could do or not do just as we pleased? If we preach without having the hands of preachers laid on our heads, do we commit a sin? Can we have hands laid on us or not as we prefer? We pause for a reply.

But what does "ordination" by imposition of hands mean among men? Dr. Phillip Schaff says: "In the early church the rite of ordination seems to have been regarded as a formal induction into the functions and responsibility of ministerial service, and as having more significance than a mere conferment of the authority of the church." * * *

The Disciples of Christ, Quakers, and Plymouth Brethren, do not recognize any human rite or ordination. They hold all Christians to be equal, and, while they fully accept the doctrine of a divine and inward call to preach, refuse to grant any efficacy to the human ordinance of setting apart for ministerial functions."

From the best study that we can give the subject, we conclude, that all disciples are called to preach the gospel according to their gifts, each man must determine his gift for himself, and not confer with flesh and blood; every disciple has the right to baptize, and join in the celebration of the supper; that there is no class distinctions in the Church of God's Son or in his kingdom, that there are no clergy nor laity, that all are priests; that elders are selected by their several congregations, and the selection is confined to their own congregation; that deacons are temporary and special agents chosen by their congregations for temporary service, and their appointment is their ordination; and that a preacher employed to move to a place and take the oversight of a congregation, to preach to it, to visit pastorally or socially the members when sick or well, to superintend its activities, and, to use a vulgarism, "to boss things generally", is a burlesque on apostolic teaching and practice.—Christian Quarterly Review.

REPLY TO "BRO. JOHN."

In the F. F. of October 15, "Bro. John" offers a friendly criticism on some remarks of mine on the subject of repentance, which appeared in your issue of Sept. 15.

The point of objection with him was, that I took the position that turning from sin was not repentance. When I said, "turning from sin is not repentance," I had reference to the overt act of turning. Repentance is a mental (not a bodily) act. Repentance comes before baptism. Will "Bro. John" tell us what overt act a man performs before confession and baptism? Did the Pentecostians perform an overt act after they were commanded to repent, before they confessed Christ and were baptized? If not, then repentance is not turning from sin, but it is that change in the mind which results in turning from sin.

"Bro. John" admits that if the phrase, "repent and turn" be correct, and "repent" and "turn" mean the same thing; there is a redundancy of speech which according to the rules of language, destroys the force of the sentence. Correct. "Bro. John." But he adds: "They are the same, but the revised version has the word wrong." Very well, let us see what Paul says on the subject: "Repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance." Acts 26:20.

Now "Bro. John," there is one of two things true: (1) My position is correct, or, (2), Paul used a "redundancy of speech which destroys the force of the language," he used. Which will you accept?

I know it is said the Ninevites repented, and also that they turned, but it does not necessarily follow that their turning was repentance, as a change of mind was necessary in order to their turning.

The king of Nineveh appeared to understand the subject better than "Bro. John" does, for he said, "Who can tell if God will repent and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not?"—John 8:9.

The sects urge that we do not give a sinner time to repent before we baptize him; but repentance being a change of mind, will or purpose, it will readily be seen that a person can repent almost instantly. Just as soon as he can resolve to quit his meanness and to spend his remaining days in the service of God, just that soon can he repent, and his repentance is made manifest by his obedience to the gospel.

FROM BRO. A. J. McCARTY.

Dear Brethren and Readers of the Firm Foundation.

There is a man claiming to be a Christian preacher, by the name of O. P. Bounds, going through the country preaching. He passed through our town about two years ago, and while here he delivered several sermons, mostly on Revelations and prophecy. He seems to be pretty well posted on the Bible and history, and is sound on some things, but one thing I wish to warn the brethren against is, his erroneous teaching in regard to the Lord's supper.

He remarked in a sermon last night, (having visited us again), that we had no authority for weekly communion, that is, meeting on the Lord's day, or the first day of the week to "break bread," and said we should observe the Passover once a year, and feet-washing in connection with it. He said other things in his discourse which I regard as unscriptural and when he was done with his subject he called on me to pray and I refused saying, I felt more like talking than praying, and I did so by saying that, the gentleman's name was Bounds, but I did not think he was sound on the communion question, and gave scriptural reasons showing wherein he was wrong.

Bro. J. D. Markett one of our worthy preachers was present and endorsed what I said. I therefore take this opportunity of warning the Churches of Christ against this perverter of the right way of the Lord. The fact of the business is, the general impression is that he is a "non compos mentis." There is a screw loose somewhere about his head. Hoping that all the disciples of Jesus will stand firm or continue steadfastly in the apostles' teaching.

I remain, your brother in Christ.

FROM BRO. LATIMER.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

After looking over the F. F. of Oct. 15, I am reminded of a little work. Please find enclosed one dollar, for which send the F. F. to J. R. Black, (old subscriber), Gordon, Palo Pinto county, Texas. Also one dollar for which send the F. F. to A. M. Guhl, (new sub.), Gordon, Palo Pinto county, Texas. Also one dollar for which send the F. F. to W. S. Jones, (new sub.), Sonto, Palo Pinto county, Texas. This makes eleven dollars and sixty cents I have sent you, without losing that many minutes of time—four of which are new subscribers. Think may be I can get some more before sending this.

I can but feel amused at Bro. Kennedy, and at the same time imagine I see him, with courage enough to face some of the trials of the early preacher. Bro. Mc. let's help him grind that old blade and burnish it, too, if necessary; for I know it has been used and probably laid away, and we hope Bro. K. you will draw the weapon and go forth conquering and to conquer.

I did not get the F. F. of Oct. 1st. Do not know the cause.

There is one thing I want to call attention to. That is, the reason some of the brethren do not like the F. F., because it condemns some teaching they receive not in the Bible. These impressions that are made and riveted in the mind while young are very difficult to eradicate. Then another is, they will not consider. There is a large congregation at Palo Pinto town—don't think any of them ever read the F. F., for reasons known to me. Will send you some of them: Eld. Ham Taylor, Charlie Massie, atty., Dr. Warren, M. D., and J. A. Latimer. Please send a few numbers if any on hand.

Also please find enclosed forty cents, for which send three copies of "Zeke and the Methodist," and one copy of the "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," to J. R. Black, Gordon, Palo Pinto county, Texas.
Yours in hope of eternal life,
HENRY LATIMER.
Gordon, Texas.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Enclosed please find one dollar to pay for the F. F. of '00. I am well pleased with the paper. Your positions are sound. Go ahead.
Yours for the truth,
W. B. STIRMAN.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, NOV. 15, 1888.

ATTENTION, READERS!

From this time on send all money for the FIRM FOUNDATION, or any of our pamphlets, to A. MCGARY, AUSTIN, TEXAS. Make all money orders payable to A. McGary. Please state whether you are a new subscriber or an old one. Write plainly, and give the county, where your post office is not a large town. Don't forget this in sending orders. MCGARY & HANSBROUGH.

A. MCGARY's address is Box 36, Austin, Texas.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Bro. J. T. Showalter, in the Octographic Review, says: "No one was considered in the one body in the days of the apostles without faith, repentance, confession, prayer and immersion." We are informed in the Scriptures that faith, repentance, confession and immersion are the conditions of entrance into the one body, but prayer is not mentioned as a requirement of an alien. Hence we are anxious to learn how Bro. Showalter found out that no one was considered in the one body till he had prayed. Has the brother found some lost apostolic manuscript? We hope he will tell us.

Bro. A. B. West has just returned from Washington Territory. He came by rail to Austin. He called to see us and interested us much with his description of Washington, its gigantic trees, snow-capped mountains and many other things deeply interesting. He says the coast country, where he was, is rife with infidelity. Bro. West is a straight-out gospel preacher; he bows to the apostolic line, regardless of where the chips may fall. He is an excellent debater—terrible on Christadelphianism. He will locate either in Blanco county, (where he formerly lived), or some adjoining county.

Bro. E. W. Herndon's reply to Bro. E. A. Myers on Ordination, in the October issue of the Christian Quarterly Review, which we publish in this issue of the F. F., is worthy of a very careful, unbiased study, which we hope our readers will give it. This question is now being agitated generally among our readers, with good brethren upon either side of it. Hence we shall from time to time publish well-written articles upon either side of the question, in the hope that we may all upon this, as well as upon all other questions, "speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among us; but that we may be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."

In our last issue we notice a call for a "meeting for the purpose of taking steps to send out and support an evangelist in the destitute fields." Now we know these brethren are true and desire to proceed in their labors for the Master, upon the plan directed by inspiration and pursued by the apostles and faithful men who labored under their immediate direction. This plan is thoroughly furnished us in the Scriptures. In the Scriptures we are not furnished with any instruction for such a meeting as the one mentioned above. Some may not be able to see the harm in such meetings, even when they admit that Holy Writ gives no record of any such in apostolic times. But whether a finite mind can see the harm or not, danger lies right at the threshold of every movement the man of God makes that is not furnished in the Scriptures, however slight the departure may be. Small beginnings of this kind have big endings. The small acorn is the beginning of the giant oak. All missionary societies and human organizations that are now distracting the disciples and rending the kingdom of God into contending factions, had their beginning in some supposed harmless co-operative meeting. Brethren let us be content to follow Him who is "head over all things to the church." Evangelists who will not go to preaching till some co-operative meeting insures them pay, ought not to be paid. But true men of God who go forth moved by a burning desire to save souls, ought to be sustained. These unscriptural meetings to "send out and support evangelists" foster the wicked spirit now actuating men who give so much preach for so much money. At such meetings a hundred fold more is said about money than anything else. Let brethren carefully examine the Scriptures and see if they can find one-tenth as much said about money "to carry on the work," as they now find said in one little co-operative meeting to "send out and sustain an evangelist." Why this great difference? Let us examine ourselves and see if we are not all moved too much by money. "The love of money is the root of all evil."

A. MCG.

PAMPHLETS.

We have just one dozen copies of the Outman-McGary debate now in the office. These copies have been sent in by agents sending in what they failed to sell. We had several orders during the summer that could not be filled because we had not one copy of it then in the office. We sell this pamphlet at 25 cents. If any one wants this discussion with the Christadelphians let them send in immediately, as this one dozen closes out this edition.

We learn that both the "Ups and Downs of the Jackson Family," and its sequel, "Zeke and the Methodists," have done a good work for the truth. The "Ups and Downs" shows very plainly the inconsistent course of those brethren who recognize Baptist baptism. "Zeke and the Methodists" does up the main points in Methodist "Grub-ax," with unglved hands. A few dimes invested in these pamphlets can be made to bring many to a knowledge of the truth, if the pamphlets are wisely handed around. See our price list on 8th page.

We have three arguments each of the Harding-McGary debate now in type. There are two more arguments on each side, and then we will offer this pamphlet to the public, at 15 cents per copy, or two copies for 25 cents. This is a discussion upon the validity of sectarian immersion, in which Bro. J. A. Harding is endeavoring to show that we ought to receive those who are immersed under Baptist, Methodist and other so-called orthodox teaching, without re-immersing them. All orders sent in for this discussion will be carefully filed and promptly filled as soon as the pamphlet comes from the press. We presume Bro. Harding will let the Gospel Advocate readers know of it. A. MCG.

DEAF EXCHANGES.

Among our exchanges is the Juvenile Ranger, a very neat and newsy little paper, published at Austin. It is edited by the pupils of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum.

We have several other exchanges whose editors are deaf, but they are deaf in a different way from the editors of the Juvenile. The editors of the Juvenile are physically deaf, deaf from their mother's womb; but these other's "hearts have waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing (spiritual ears), and their eyes they have closed, lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart and should be converted," (Matt. 13: 15)—from their willful and presumptuous inconsistencies and perversions of the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus (Rom. 8: 2).

For instance, the editor-in-chief of the Gospel Advocate says: "No gift can be completed without the giving and receiving. It is the province of the giver to prescribe how and where the gift will be bestowed. It is the province of the receiver to determine whether he will accept the gift where and when offered. If he does not, he deprives himself of the gift. God bestows remission of sins, as the gift of his grace, on man. He has chosen to bestow it in baptism. Man must receive the gift where God bestows it or he deprives himself of the gift." And that same editor knows very well that many persons are baptized who are not willing to receive the gift of remission of sins in baptism—they will not for one moment entertain the idea of receiving remission of sins in baptism. Yet this same editor, to vindicate the doctrine of "our plea," "closes his eyes" and runs roughshod over the rules of consistency, teaching that such persons receive this gift of God, the remission of their sins, in the act of baptism although they were not willing to receive it there, but claimed they had received it before they reached the ordinance of baptism.

Now that editor is deaf, spiritually as deaf as a post. We have been for several years trying to tell him of his inconsistency, but his ears have waxed so gross that he is perfectly deaf to all such sounds.

Again, he teaches that it is very wrong for Christians to have their lives insured—and we think he is right—but he advertises a New York life insurance company in his paper and says: "Advertisers would do well to take advantage of the pages of the Gospel Advocate. The Gospel Advocate is one of the best mediums in the South; it has a large and growing circulation, and the rates of advertising are cheap. J. W. Jackson, manager for this department of the old New York Life Insurance Company, tells us he receives more returns from his advertisement in this paper than any other. We are glad the Advocate readers patronize those who give us a share of their patronage."

We have tried hard to get the editor of the Advocate to hear us upon this matter, but he either can not, or he stops his ears and will not. We speak to him at the top of our voice, saying that, as he teaches that it is wrong for Christians to insure their lives, it is certainly wrong for him to lay that wrong before them and tempt them to do a wrong thing. Now when we speak of some of the virtues of the Advocate they hear it distinctly and catch up the sound and send it on till all of their readers can hear it. But they can't hear us at all when we sound the voice of "reproof."

We hope the editors of the Juvenile will never become deaf in this soul-endangering way. Those who are physically deaf may have sound spiritual ears, and be "swift to hear" the gospel of Christ, and obey it and be saved—the gospel of Christ is God's power to save them that believe it. See Rom. 1: 16. But those who enjoy the blessing of sound physical ears in this world, may be spiritually deaf—as many are—and be slow to hear and swift to wrath, (see James 1: 19), and go down to perdition, where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth. Oh, how many thousand times better it is to be physically deaf, with unstopped spiritual ears, in this life, than to have sound physical ears, and be spiritually deaf. The difference is just as great as that between heaven and hell.

We hope our young friends of the Juvenile will be ever "swift to hear" (with their spiritual ears), slow to speak, slow to wrath; for the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God. "Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity" naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls."—James 1: 19-21. Remember, that God's word is able to save your souls—not some human creed embodying the wisdom of men—"where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?"—1 Corinthians 1: 20. Again, Jesus said: "But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."—Matthew 15: 9.

Will the editors of the Juvenile help us get the pure gospel of Christ into the spiritual ears of its physically deaf readers? Doubtless many of them have never had any better spiritual food than the husks of human wisdom. God says: "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit he can not enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3: 5. The wisdom of this world says: "Man need not be born of water, sprinkling will do—water is not adapted to man's salvation." God says: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."—Mark 16: 16. The wisdom of this world says: "He that is saved may be baptized, but baptism is a non-essential."

But this worldly wisdom, which denies the word of God is, in God's sight, and should be in ours, "filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness," and we must "lay it apart" and receive with meekness the word of God, which is able to save our souls. A. McG.

FROM BRO. B.

A brother writes: I want to ask you some questions for publication:

- (1) Is it right for the members of the church of Christ to kneel in prayer at sectarian worship?
- (2) Is it right for Christians to ask sectarians to return thanks at the table?
- (3) Is it right for Christians to return thanks at eating with worldlings or sectarians table?
- (4) What authority do our brethren have for asking sectarians to lead in prayer in the worship of God?

By answering the above questions you will confer a lasting favor on a weak brother. B.

(1) I do not believe they worship the true and living God who revealed Himself in the Scriptures, but a false god who seeks to deceive by counterfeiting some of the forms of the true God's worship. Therefore I do not believe a disciple of the true God's Son should pay any further respect to their god than to be quiet and orderly as the law of the land requires. If we turn back to the law as it was given by the true God to that people who were typical of the disciples of Jesus Christ, we hear Him say: "I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Then shalt have no other gods before me . . . Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them nor serve them: for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God."

(2) It certainly is not right to ask any one who is a worshipper of a false god to perform any part of the service to the true God. To do so is to virtually recognize such an one a disciple of Christ, when we know he is not. This is, I think, a willful and presumptuous sin. Our brethren who do this generally do it to curry favor with the orthodox (?) world, and to escape the persecution of being called "extremists." Addison Clark once said he called on sectarian preachers in this way to show them respect. I regard such a practice as being more respectful to a false teacher, who is worshipping a false god, than to God. And I regard such brethren, who know better, as being ten fold more wicked than the false teacher whom they cater to and flatter and fawn over.

(3) "In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."—1 Thes. 5: 18. If they call on us to give thanks I do not think we should hesitate to do so; but I do not think we should insist upon doing so, as some do when they go among them; for God will hear our thanks whether they are audible to man's ear or not. Hence, I think when a Christian insists upon giving audible thanks or making audible prayer among sinners, when they do not request it, he is doing no good, but is merely doing lip-service, or "casting pearl before swine."

(4) The very same authority they have for asking them to eat and drink with them at the Lord's supper, which is the very same they have to ask Bob Ingersoll to do either. A. McG.

DIDN'T DECLARE THE WHOLE COUNSEL OF GOD.

J. H. Morris writing to the Gospel Advocate says:

"On my return from Texas I had to come out of my direct way home by the quarantine law in the cities, so as to meet a steamer on the Tennessee river, I find myself at Bridgeport, Jackson county, Ala. And now is the time to be solicited to stop over Lord's day. There having been built in the vicinity a church edifice, a free gift from three men (the Canter brothers) to all denominations of Christians. The first service was held there last Lord's day. I was urged to stay and did so, and preached to a vast throng, twelve hundred perhaps. The emblems of our Lord's broken body were there for all who would partake. The men who have so liberally given the house to the community are all men of the world, have never united with any body of Christians. Some of the brethren think I did wrong in preaching in the house and eating with others, because the house was presented by wicked men. Now, brethren, in your judgment did I commit any wrong? I presented the gospel in as fearless and forcible manner as I ever did. Please answer me in Gospel Advocate."

[We can certainly see no wrong in preaching in this house.—Eds.]—Gospel Advocate.

Do the "Eds." think it was right to set the "emblems of our Lord's broken body there for all who would partake"? Suppose Bob Ingersoll had been there willing to partake, would it have been right for disciples of Christ to have eaten with him? Doubtless some did eat who were just as far from the kingdom as black-throated Bob. Why did not the "Eds." declare the whole counsel of God, in their reply to J. H. Morris?

"How are the mighty fallen!" No wonder we so often hear it said: "The Gospel Advocate is not the paper it used to be." That once grand old sentinel on the wall, seems now to have crawled into a crack, where it cannot see anything to cry aloud against, but missionary societies and organs; and its voice seems to be growing a little husky on these. "All denominations of Christians." That is pure Ashdod! Why did not the "Eds." impress upon him the necessity of "sound speech that cannot be condemned."—Titus 2: 8.

When a Christian, in cool, deliberate investigation decides that "Baptist practice converts men through devices, and is a conversion by men," and declares that, "Their course drives God out of the work," and that, "They have more faith in human dreams, visions and imaginations than in the promises of God, given by the Holy Spirit, sealed by the blood of Christ, and confirmed by the oath of Jehovah," and sums up by saying: "Baptist conversion is wholly of men." And then out of respect for a human "plea," recognizes and receives as Christians these Baptist converts upon their conversion, "which is wholly of men"; and becomes irreconcilably offended at brethren who would correct his error, for calling his attention to the inconsistency of his course, he is sure to become slack-twisted in many points of the faith. This, we think, is the trouble with Bro. D. Lipcomb. We are truly sorry this is the case, but we feel that it is right for us to call attention to these things. A. McG.

FROM BRO. J. B. DAVIS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I am requested to call the attention of the readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION to a case of fellowship worthy of their notice, and in which much good may be done at a very little cost to each one.

Bro. W. B. Carpenter is a worthy man, and through many difficulties and much sacrifice, has made of himself a good minister of the word of God, and has been doing much good in his limited sphere. But he is poor and has a large family, and is without a home he can call his own. He has recently contracted for a small tract of land, for four hundred dollars. Now, brethren, if he has that to make, above a support for a large family, it will take him several years, and in that time he could do very little preaching. But his work is needed now, so I propose to pay off the debt and loose his hands and let him go into the field, while his wife and children dwell happily at their own home.

If sixteen hundred of the readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION will send twenty-five cents each, it will close the matter up. If four hundred will send one dollar each, it will be enough. And I hope the readers of this paper are as liberal as any people. When this was proposed in the presence of T. J. Ison, a man of the world, he said he would head the list with five dollars. How many such men as he can we find who read the F. F.?

There are very few preachers of the ancient gospel in North Louisiana, and Bro. Carpenter is needed in this field. Brethren, do help us to help him, and untie his hands that he may tell the good news of a Savior's love to the perishing, that they may rise up and call us blessed in the great day of accounts. Let four, eight or twelve unite and buy a P. O. order on Homer, La., payable to John Murrell, and he will receipt you for the same. Or each one buy a postal note and send as much as you will. I pray God your hearts may be opened, until you attend to this matter.

Your brother in the spread of the gospel. J. B. DAVIS. Blanchard Springs, Ark.

If Bro. Carpenter was a man who would not go and preach at his own charges all he could, I, for one, would say, don't give him a farthing; but he is not that kind of a man, but a true soldier of the cross. Then, let's help him all we can. A. McG.

LOOK OUT, YOU WILL GET LEFT!

T. W. Caskey, writing in the Courier, of a congregation he had just visited and preached to, says of it:

"They have four elders. None of them can teach, and have sense enough not to try. . . . As soon as they get their house completed, they will make an elder of Bro. Dunn, or some other preacher. . . . They know nothing of our State work. I did not have time to remain, but will visit them as soon as I can. I doubt not that as soon as they understand it they will co-operate. And so will all others, and the preachers that do not will simply get left."

Elders who cannot teach (?) and who "have sense enough not to try" ought to have sense enough to know that an elder must be "apt to teach," and sense enough to know that the name, "elder," is a misnomer when applied to them or their sort. But, perhaps these elders are apt to teach the old fogy doctrine of the New Testament, but have sense enough not to try to teach the modified, new-fangled ways of "our State work"! But this congregation is going to come out of the kinks when they "get their house completed." They are going to have a "preacher" elder—doubtless a modern pastor. Perhaps if Dr. Caskey had diagnosed their case a little closer he would have found that they are just now convalescing from an attack, sigh unto death, from "the Bible alone," which the doctor regards such a dangerous disease. But when this congregation gets its house completed, and a "preacher" elder—modern pastor—who has not got sense "not to try to teach" the tactics of "our State work," Dr. Caskey will take "time" to give them an understanding of this great "State work."

Mark it, you preachers who will not co-operate with "our State work," you will simply get left. If Paul, or any other of the apostles, or all of them, were here and were to do just as they did when they were led by the Holy Spirit, they would simply get left, by these fast brethren of the State work; for they did not then co-operate with any such schemes. Then, brethren, you who will not co-operate with Dr. Caskey and his fast coadjutors will simply get left with the apostles. Can you stand it? A. McG.

WHO ARE THE SCHISMATICS AND HERETICS?

Bro. Burnett in giving an account of his perambulations, mentions Bro. Dr. Harrison's work in the region of McGregor, and says: "His work in this region has been crippled by the re-baptizers, who have sowed the seeds of their discordant, divisive, schismatic heresy in the minds of many of the brethren. They divided and ruined the church at McGregor, as I learn."

Now we have long since despaired of ever being able to set this three feet, Rose Hill somersault straight on this question. But he has readers who have not passed beyond the pale of common sense and reason who will see this. Hence we propound these questions: Suppose the disciples at Ephesus in Paul's day had gone on beyond revelation so far as to have originated the idea that it was not necessary for persons to believe the voice of God about the design of baptism. Suppose they had, through their "sanctified common sense" decided that all persons who had been immersed to "honor God" were Christians, and had called this decision, "our plea." Suppose when Paul met the twelve at that place, (who had certainly been baptized to "honor God"), and taught them the way of the Lord more perfectly and led them to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, they had called his work "discordant, divisive, schismatic heresy," do you suppose, brethren, it would have deterred Paul or changed his course in following the guidance of the Holy Spirit? And if they had divided up the congregation over the matter, could Paul have been justly charged with dividing and ruining the church at Ephesus?

Were the opponents of the organ at Waxahachie, who some years ago left the church because C. McPherson thrust an organ into that congregation, guilty of dividing the church? Bro. Burnett will not say they were. But he is so exceedingly mad at brethren who will not blindly follow the lead of the champions of "our plea," that he is blind and cannot see afar off—no not right under his nose.

A. McG.

CATECHISM.

Scene: In the house of a Baptist, where a Christian preacher goes for dinner. The Baptist has a smart boy, rather inquisitive. The preacher takes occasion to question the boy, when the following dialogue occurs:

Preacher.—Louis, do you know what the Bible is?

Louis.—Yes, sir. It is a revelation from God.

P.—Correct. What does it teach?

L.—Amongst other things it teaches us the will of God.

P.—What is the will of God?

L.—It is God's will that we serve Him.

P.—What do you mean by serving Him?

L.—Doing what He has commanded us, and not doing what He has forbidden.

P.—That's correct, Louis, and that includes that where He is silent on any subject, the organ, for example, we have no right to assume that He will be pleased with its use. We can be perfect if we do exactly what He says to do, and that is all that is necessary.

L.—That's just what mamma says, and she says that, when we repent truly and have faith in God he will pardon our sins. Then she says, we ought to attach ourselves to the church by being baptized into it. Is that what you believe?

P.—Well, Louis, that's not exactly in the right order, for faith must precede repentance, for without faith we can't please God; and baptism is for the remission of sins, and not a door into the church.

L.—(Suddenly remembering a Methodist lady had joined the church the night before, and wanting to draw the preacher out.) Well, may be so, but mamma thinks differently. She thinks sins are pardoned before joining the church. If you are correct mamma is wrong, ain't she?

P.—I guess so, for God has only one plan by which to save people.

L.—I think that myself, but don't know that I understand that plan exactly. Tell me in a few words as you can what is required of a person. We can look for the proofs later.

P.—First, a person must have faith in God. Second, repentance, or turning from sin. Third, he must confess that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and be baptized for the remission of sins.

L.—Is that Bible teaching?

P.—Yes, that is exactly what is commanded.

L.—If that is the plan, and there is only one plan, all that don't follow that plan are still in their sins, are they not?

P.—Yes, I suppose they are.

L.—But I don't want you to suppose so, I want to know.

P.—Well, then, yes. None except those that do these things have any promise of pardon.

L.—Speaking about baptism, what is baptism?

P.—Immersion in water. The subject must be properly prepared, however, before it can be called scriptural baptism.

L.—Well, if I immerse my little brother, five years old, in the river, is that, or would that be scriptural baptism?

P.—No, for a person must be taught the will of God and have faith in the act, that it is for the remission of sins.

L.—But if a person believes their sins are already pardoned and are baptized to get into the church, or because it is one of the rules of the church, is that scriptural baptism?

P.—No.

L.—Then such a person is still in their sins, are they not?

P.—Yes.

L.—And this baptism is not really baptism after all?

P.—No. Scripturally speaking it is not.

L.—And such persons are not in the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

P.—No.

L.—But can't a person get into the kingdom of Christ some other way?

P.—No.

L.—And do you give what you call "church fellowship" to any out of the kingdom?

P.—No. But why are you asking all these questions?

L.—Because I want to. Do you object to telling me?

P.—No, no. I am glad to see you anxious to learn.

L.—Every thing you have told me seems plain and simple enough, and I believe I understand it so far, and if you have no objections I want to ask some more questions.

P.—All right, go ahead; I'll answer them if I can.

L.—Well, you know a lady joined your church last night. She had lived in the Methodist church about a year. She is a good woman, too. I saw her when she got religion at the altar, and she shouted and laughed more than any one I ever saw. She told the preacher she believed in immersion, and he baptized her that way. Now, according to your teaching, this lady has not been in the kingdom all this time, for she never was baptized for the remission of sins, for she said her sins were pardoned the night she got religion, and she was not baptized for two weeks after. You now recognize her as a member of the family of God, for you gave her the hand of fellowship last night. Now what I want to know is, when did she become a Christian, or when did she enter the kingdom of Jesus Christ?

P.—Well, you see, she is satisfied with her baptism, and I have no right or authority to compel her to be baptized again.

L.—If she had been baptized by sprinkling or pouring and felt satisfied with that, would you have taken her into the church on that baptism?

P.—No; for that is not baptism.

L.—Neither is the other, if what you say is true.

P.—But where the person is satisfied with their baptism I have no right to say it is not valid?

L.—You have the Bible to tell you what scriptural baptism is. If you have no right or authority to tell this lady that her baptism is not valid, because she is satisfied with it, you have no right to tell a person that has had water sprinkled on them and are satisfied with that, that it is not valid baptism; for it is a matter of conscience in either case.

P.—But the savior says, "he that believes and is baptized shall be saved," and this lady believed and has been baptized.

L.—But you said a while ago that immersion without faith in it, as being a condition of pardon was not baptism, (or words that implied the same). If that is true, the lady has not been baptized. But if you have no right to say it is not valid, have you any right to say it is valid?

P.—This is not a question for men to decide. She and God for that.

L.—But you assume it is good by taking her into the church. You know, or ought to know, whether or not she has been scripturally baptized. If she has, then all persons that believe and have been immersed, are in the kingdom, no matter what they are immersed for. And if they are in the kingdom, I can't see why they want to leave their church and join yours. And I don't see why you always call them "sects," and say the other churches teach false doctrines, which can't be true if the doctrine they teach and believe brings them into the kingdom. And if it does, that makes your doctrine false, for there is only one way. I'm about to believe that you are not guided by the Book altogether.

P.—But you see—

L.—Oh, don't "but" me about anything till you can tell me when that Methodist lady got into the kingdom. You said at first that such persons were still in their sins, and now, because she shook hands with you after preaching, you recognize her as a sister in Christ. Besides you had just told her in your sermon that she was on the wrong track.

P.—It has been the custom so long to receive such persons in the church that I—

L.—You ought to know better than to talk that way. Custom indeed. It is either right or it is wrong. If you don't know which you ought to study to find out and practice it.

FROM BRO. BRILL.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough,

You oppose Sunday Schools in your paper, and some of our weak brethren understand you to teach that, it is wrong for disciples to teach their neighbor's children the Bible on the Lord's day because some call it a Sunday School. Of course I know what you are aiming to teach, that it is wrong to teach sectarianism or secular teaching.

But I wish you would explain the difference between teaching the word of God, and sectarianism, or in other words, is it wrong for the disciples to teach their own and their neighbor's children on the Lord's day the word of God at home or in school, or school-house, even if some call it a Sunday School?

Please give the scriptural way of bringing up our children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and how we may teach our neighbor's children, if they let us.

Baptized eight into Christ at Shiloh.

Your brother in the one faith,
JOHN F. BRILL.
Nacogdoches, Texas.

BLANCO MEETING.

Blanco City, the county seat of Blanco county, is situated on the Blanco river in the midst of a mountainous country. It has a population of about four hundred. It is a local option town and consequently a very quiet law-abiding place. Educational advantages are good, as they have a large stone building capable of accommodating about two hundred pupils. Prof. Bruce, their teacher, with able assistants, has made Blanco college a desirable place at which to educate the children.

The Methodists have here a good stone structure in which they conduct their services. This is the place where John S. Sweeney and Jacob Ditsler wrestled so long among the Hebrew and Greek roots. From that time until now, (five years since), the Methodists have had full sway here, and being the popular church, they were seemingly sailing on a smooth sea to the desired haven. Their pastor, the Rev. S. G. Shaw, is a pleasant gentleman, well educated, a fluent speaker and thoroughly Methodist in his ways. Of these ways I shall speak more particularly after a while.

The "Union Church" is on the east side of the river. It is a comfortable wooden building, well furnished, and will seat about three hundred persons. It is occupied for preaching purposes one Sunday in each month respectively by the Baptists and by our brethren. The Christians also meet here every Lord's day at 8 p. m. for worship.

The Baptists here are not strong in numbers. I met their pastor, Mr. Bell. He is very strongly prejudiced against us; doubtless the severe drubbing given him by Bro. J. B. Tennison, at this place, about twenty years ago, so turned the "milk of human kindness" in him as to produce naught but bitterness toward us.

The Christians here number about forty. Bro. T. W. James has been their preacher for about one year. He is a noble old soldier. Plain and simple in manner and address, yet strong in the truth and fervent in spirit. He was with me during the meeting and rendered much and valuable aid by his singing, prayer and exhortations, besides acting as baptist. The church, though possessed of good material, was not doing well. An unfortunate difficulty in a neighboring congregation had extended its influence to this place, and had caused the love of many to grow cold. Even now there are heart-burnings and jealousies that hinder the progress of the truth. Is it not strange that Christians will love self more than they do Christ? They will jealously guard their own honor and dignity, and contrary to God's word entertain a revengeful spirit against any and all who may slight or insult them. They forget the honor and dignity of the cause of Christ and lose sight of the sacrifice that Jesus made in order to the peace, love and unity of his followers. They cannot sacrifice anything, however. Self is too important a being, and his interests must be maintained at all hazards. Brethren, heed the admonition to deny self, take up your cross and follow Jesus. See 1 Peter 2: 20-25.

I began preaching on Saturday night, Sept. 1st, and continued until the night of the 23rd, losing one night on account of rain. The attendance throughout the meeting was good, very large on Lord's days. The attention given could not have been better. Indeed, for good order, close attention and a respectful interest these people at Blanco cannot be excelled. During the meeting Bro. C. S. Martin and Bro. Landrum, preachers, were with us part of the time. Eight made the good confession and were added to the Lord.

During the second week of my meeting, Mr. Shaw, the Methodist pastor, came to hear me several times, and concluded that I was making some terrible mistakes. So he announced that on the fourth Lord's day, at 11 a. m., he would reply to me and correct my mistakes. As the Baptists occupied the union church, we attended the Methodist church and heard Mr. Shaw. As perhaps the points introduced will be of some interest to our readers I will give them. In one of my discourses as to "why people do not understand the Bible alike," I had shown:

1. That people cannot understand a thing differently.
2. That differences arise from not understanding.
3. And that the main cause of misunderstanding was the traditions and commandments of men.

In illustration of this latter point I called attention to the traditions embodied in creeds. That most religious parties held to the old scholastic dogma of the Trinity, while we repudiating the language of the schools, adhere closely to the language of the Scriptures relative to the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. In this connection I cited the people to the language of the Methodist Discipline, article 2, which describes Jesus as the "very and eternal God" and contrasted it with John 20: 30, 31, where we are required to believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God.

In the second place I showed that the partisan interpretation of the Greek preposition eis made God's word of no effect. I showed that this preposition always expresses a prospective action and never a retrospective one. Hence the command to "be baptized eis remission of sins," necessarily places the remission after baptism. I had also shown that the Scriptures taught one and but one baptism, and that the action of that one baptism is immersion.

Mr. Shaw's reply was indeed a weak effort. To his credit, however, be it said, that he did not indulge in the usual tirade of abuse and misrepresentation so freely used by those who oppose us. He sought to justify the use of creeds by citing the fact that I preached blackboard sermons, hence wrote my creed on a board, and that as a people we had books of sermons, etc., declarative of our faith and practice.

He said that as eis had many meanings, to, into, unto, we are said to "believe into Christ," and that the rulers referred to John 12: 42, were saved because they believed into Christ. As to the one baptism he believed that it was Holy Ghost baptism symbolized by water baptism. He didn't give any proof of this point. As to understanding the Bible alike, he asserted that it was an impossibility, and that our plea for a unity of faith and practice was simply bigotry and a species of popery. That the Bible did not reveal any form of church government, but left this to man. When speaking of the Trinity, he indulged, of course, in a good deal of sophistry and special pleading for popular favor.

I replied to Mr. Shaw Lord's day night (23rd). He dismissed his meeting and came out to hear. I showed first that the testimony of Greek scholars, and even Mr. Shaw's admission, was in my favor relative to the meaning of eis. That the context, the nature of the subject spoken of, and the laws of common sense, would govern scholars in their selection of the proper word to represent eis in any given case. That of the several meanings given, viz: to, into, in, unto, for, none of them expresses a retrospective action. That it is true that we believe into, repent into, confess into, and are baptized into Christ, but from the very nature of the changes thus made no one can be in Christ until they had taken the last step, or consummating act, viz, baptism.

Relative to the doctrine of the Trinity, I showed that the language of the creeds arose from the Arian controversy, A. D., 325, and that the idea even was contrary to the revelation given us. The Scriptures teach that the Father sent the Son into the world; that Jesus died for our sins, and God raised Him from the dead, and exalted Him (Jesus) to His right hand. That the doctrine of Christianity was that we believe that Jesus is the Christ, THE SON OF GOD. That so long as we are content to accept what is said of Jesus we could agree but when we began our speculations we would differ.

I then took his Discipline and showed that it was recommended by uninspired men as "our form of discipline which has been founded on the experience of a long series of years." While our creed, the New Testament, was given by inspiration of God, 2 Tim. 3: 16, 17; and that we are exhorted to "hold fast the form of sound words" thus delivered, Titus 1: 9; 2 Tim. 1: 18. That creeds were divisive in their tendency, being more or less the opinions of fallible men. That we needed no such documents because the Scriptures "thoroughly furnish the man of God to all good works." That if God had left us without a form of government, it would be presumption on our part to devise one; but that He had not acted thus. We have the "perfect law of liberty" by which to govern the church, and obedience to that which was revealed or given is all that God will require of us.

As to the doctrines taught, I showed that the language of the Discipline, article 2, p. 10, that "Christ very God and very man, who truly suffered, was crucified, dead and buried to reconcile his Father to us," contradicts Paul, who says: "That God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself."—2 Cor. 5: 19.

That the doctrine of justification by faith only, article 6, p. 15, also contradicts the Scriptures.

Paul says, we are justified by grace, Rom. 3: 24. Justified by blood, Rom. 5: 9. Justified by the faith, or by the gospel, Gal. 2: 16. That faith only, was a dead faith and could not save, Jas. 2: 20-26. I also showed that according to the discipline, p. 221, infants are represented as sinners and as saved or regenerated in baptism. This also is contrary to the Scripture.

I then called attention to the prayer of Jesus, that all who believe on him through the word of the apostles might be one, John 17, together with Paul's exhortation: "I beseech you by the name of the Lord Jesus Christ that ye all speak the same thing, that there be no divisions among you; but that you be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment," 1 Cor. 1: 10. All that believe what God has spoken through the apostles, can be one, for by faith we understand, Heb. 11: 3. Faith comes by hearing the word of God, Rom. 10: 17. We cannot hear where God has not spoken, hence can have no faith relative to the things not spoken, and as, "whatever is not of faith is sin," Rom. 14: 23, to practice the things not spoken or written is sin. Besides this I said that creeds originated in human wisdom and that they imposed a yoke upon the consciences of men.

Mr. Shaw interrupted me at this point and said that, "the members of the Methodist church were not required to believe the articles of religion laid down in the Discipline. All that was obligatory upon them was to believe the questions propounded to them on their admission as members. That relative to the articles of religion there was great diversity of opinion."

I thanked him for the correction, but showed the people that such admission was a virtual surrender of the "little book." Of what use can "articles of religion" be if we are not required to believe them? We are required to believe what God has spoken and must do what He has commanded.

At the close of my discourse he announced that he would on the following Lord's day make his reply. I left Blanco the next day and went to Johnson City, sixteen miles north of Blanco, and began preaching there on Tuesday night, and continued until Thursday night, Oct. 4th, ten days. Bro. Martin and wife, late of Austin, are living here. Bro. M. being manager of Dunn's mercantile house at this point. There are a few Christians around here who remain true to the faith, and a good many who had gone back to the world. Here the Baptist element predominated. We had no additions. In fact I made no great effort to obtain additions, but rather sought to bring recreant members to repentance. Though the nights were dark, our attendance was good, and I found here as at Blanco, an orderly, quiet people, who gave attention to the things spoken. I hope for much good at this place, and believe that another meeting soon would result in building up a good congregation.

On Friday, the 5th of Oct., I returned to Blanco in order to assist Mr. Shaw in correcting mistakes. I learned that he had made his reply, and Bro. Martin kindly furnished me with notes of his discourse. Besides this he had announced that on Lord's day, (Oct. 7), he would speak on the subject of "Water Regeneration." Desiring to help him, I dismissed meeting on Lord's day morning and went to hear him. He had a large audience, made up largely of our people, all anxious to hear the promised discourse. But Mr. S. said that on account of his not feeling well he would postpone the subject. He then entertained (?) us for an hour by a labored effort to establish the doctrine of "Justification by faith only." I would like to review this sermon and show what sophisms and inconsistencies men have to resort to when trying to sustain an unscriptural theory, but for the present I must pass it by.

On Lord's day night I replied to Mr. Shaw and introduced some new points for the consideration of the people. I showed them that Methodism was not christianity. That even the Bishops who wrote the pastoral letter in Discipline of 1879, only claimed that it was the "purest existing type of Christianity." Of course if it is only a type it is not the thing itself. Further, Christianity began in Jerusalem in A. D. 33, and Methodism began in Oxford, England, in A. D. 1729. As the world got along without Methodism for 1729 years, it can do without it now. I then showed that Christianity was instituted by Christ and his apostles, and Methodism was instituted by an unregenerated man.

To prove that John Wesley was an unregenerated man when he originated Methodism in 1729, I quoted from Wesley's own words, Vol. 3, p. 56, written Jan. 29, 1738, nine years after Methodism began: "It is now two years and almost four months since I left my native country, in order to teach the Georgian Indians the nature of Christianity; but what have I learned myself in the meantime? Why (what I the least of all suspected) that I who went to America to convert others was never myself converted to God."

On the 74th page of his journal he tells how he was converted by attending a Moravian meeting and hearing one Peter Bohler read Luther's preface to the epistle to the Romans. He says: "In the evening I went very unwillingly to a society in Aldersgate street, where one was reading Luther's preface to the Epistle to the Romans. About a quarter before nine, while he was describing the change which God works in the heart through faith in Christ, I felt my heart strangely warmed. I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone for salvation; and an assurance was given me that he had taken away my sins, even mine and saved me from the law of sin and death."

Here then were such great differences between the two systems that surely no one would trust to such a weak and fallible system as methodism for their eternal salvation. Mr. Shaw would not come out to hear my last speech. He fenced himself in with the usual argument of all men who realize the weakness of their human systems, they don't like debates or disputes. No error does not like to come to the light.

Well, the meeting continued through the week and closed the following Lord's day night, two more were baptized and one took membership with the congregation here. The brethren and sisters generally revived and determined to be more earnest and faithful in their duties. The effect of the meeting upon the popular mind is good and we hope at no distant day to reap many converts.

During my stay at Blanco I made my home with Bro. Dr. Price. Suffice it to say that they treated me well, and I shall ever cherish in grateful remembrance their Christian hospitality. I cannot speak particularly of all whom I visited, but can assure them that I learned to love them all and pray God to bless them abundantly. I sincerely hope that the brethren may continue steadfast always abounding in the work of the Lord, and be sure to sustain our good brother, T. W. James, in the work of the ministry. J. W. JACKSON.

CONFESSION.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

Having seen nothing for some time on the Confession, I will endeavor to say a few words, if you will grant me the space.

Now all of our brethren preach that God has a uniform plan of salvation, and then will dispute their own words. No wonder the hordes of sectarianism are advancing! Oh! consistency, thou art a jewel!

Our brethren are divided, and some gone off into Babylon. Why? Because the sects have been shaken into our ranks and have brought a great many of their ideas in with them, and would not take the Bible alone. Now I can't see why a man who claims that God has a uniform plan of salvation substitutes shaking for confession. We know that Philip required the confession of the eunuch. Let us turn over to the 10th chapter of Romans, commencing at the 6th verse:

6th, "But the righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise, say not in thine heart who shall ascend into heaven. That is to bring Christ down from above."

7th, "Or who shall descend into the deep, that is to bring Christ up from the dead."

8th, "But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth and in thy heart that is the word of faith we preach."

9th, "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus and shall believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead thou shalt be saved."

10th, "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness (baptism), and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation, (remission of sins.)"

Here, in the 8th verse, Paul says, the confession is in the word of faith he preached, and Christ says, "Whoever confesseth me before men him will I confess before my Father which is in heaven."

"But whosoever denieth me before men him will I deny before my Father which is in heaven."—Matt. 10: 32, 33.

Now Paul says, that this confession is made with the mouth unto salvation. Will some of these shakers get the man to salvation without it. If they can, God has no uniform law of pardon. Now a warning to all shakers. Gal 1: 8, "But though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel than that which we have preached unto you let him be accursed." Then he repeats the curse and says, if I please men I am not the servant of Christ.

I would warn my shaking brethren so they may repent of the thought of their heart, and not substitute shaking for confession.

Success to the F. F., and may it ever stand firm against sectarianism, and remain in "the old paths."

Yours in Christ,

ED. EWELL.

Pike, Texas.

FROM SISTER RIDLEY.

Dear Bro. McGary:

The innovators all over the land are doing everything they can to blot out and cover up the old, old story of the cross, by their human machinery. They are running greedily after the error of Balaam for reward. I am sure if this were the day of miracles the dumb beast would cry out against their ungodly proceedings. Oh, what a great array of worldly wisdom they have to carry on their machinery. The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God.

My daily prayer is, that all true followers of Christ may put on the whole armor of God. If their sandals are smooth bottomed I say to all such, change sandals so you can scale the walls of man's machinery and plant the blood-stained banner of the King of kings. I am an old sister, sixty-four years; but I am ready to help hold up the hands of all true brethren. While Aaron and Hur held up Moses' hands, Israel prevailed.

Have you received my subscription for the F. F.? I sent it two months ago. I will do my best to extend the circulation of your valuable paper. I think I can send one or two names in a few days.

L. C. RIDLEY.

REPORT OF MEETING.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Bro. Goldman and myself have just closed a meeting at Pleasant Grove, Leon county. The meeting lasted over two Lord's days. The meeting is one long to be remembered by the people of that neighborhood. The meeting resulted in thirty-seven by confession and baptism, and two restored. To the Lord Jesus be all the praise.

BRIEFS.

Bro. McGary's address is now changed to Austin, Texas, Box 38.

Bro. J. W. Jackson expects to begin a meeting at Ledbetter, the first Lord's day in December.

In ordering the paper or tracts write your name plainly, and give postoffice, county and state.

We do not answer questions unless the enquirers send us in their true names. We have thrown several into the waste basket on that account.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

READ THIS!—Your attention is called to the notice, "Attention, Readers!" on first and fourth pages, and, hereafter, you are requested to make all money orders payable to A. MCGARY, Austin, Texas, and send all letters, and articles for publication, to A. McGary, Box 38, Austin, Texas. Please do not forget this.

BEND DEBATE.

This debate began on the 16th of October, in San Saba county, between Bro. W. B. Alexander, of the church of Christ, and Mr. Elder, of the Baptist church. It lasted four days, in which the truth lost nothing, as truth always gains by investigation.

Bro. Alexander is a good preacher and above ordinary as a debater, and he being selected to hold this debate in his own community, where he has been living for twenty years, shows how the brethren appreciate his labors. I don't think Bro. Alexander came up well on the first proposition, (baptism for the remission of sins). It may be that Bro. A. felt some delicacy in teaching baptism was for the remission of sins, when he had received the sects into the congregation there upon their unscriptural baptism. Also he might have feared the curse of Christ, who teaches it is better to have a mill-stone put around his neck and cast into the sea, than to offend one of his little ones, and inasmuch as he, with many others, thought the Baptists were Christians, and knowing it would be offensive to them to teach baptism for the remission of sins, when they could be saved in teaching it was non-essential, it was under embarrassing circumstances he argued that proposition, looking at the subject from my standpoint.

Mr. Elder claimed, he would drive him to the FIRM FOUNDATION before the debate closed, for he said, those who agreed with its teaching were the only consistent people among us. And judging from Bro. A's argument, I think he has come to the truth at last to stay.

The second proposition affirmed by Elder, was almost a failure. Bro. A. submitted three conversions in Acts to be reconciled by his faith alone system, which will stand unanswered till the day of judgment by those who advocate that theory.

On the third proposition, on the church question, Bro. A. submitted eight propositions, which the Baptists first accepted, and said they would agree to them. The propositions were stated in these words:

1. Christ died for our sins.
2. Christ was buried and rose from the dead.
3. That Christ ascended to heaven and was made both Lord and Christ.
4. That God exalted him to his own right hand, and that he sent the Spirit to guide the way of all truth.

5. That baptism is by the authority of Christ.

6. That baptism is in, or into the name of Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

7. Salvation is only in the name of Jesus Christ.

8. No church not having these features can be a New Testament church.

After accepting these eight items as being true, in the four propositions when Elder affirmed the essential features of the Baptist church, Bro. A. reminded him of this agreement, when he tried to set up the Baptist church in the days of John, and showed the Baptist church could not be a New Testament church, according to this agreement, for the following reasons:

1. It had no death of Christ in it, being set up before he died.
2. Had no resurrection of Christ.
3. Had no ascension of Christ.
4. Had no exaltation of Christ.
5. Baptist baptism could not be by the authority of Christ, as Christ had no authority as law-giver when their baptism was inaugurated, according to their own argument.
6. Baptist baptism could not be in the name of Christ, as Christ had not given baptism in his name when their church was established, if their own arguments were true.
7. Baptist salvation could not be in the name of Christ, as their system, according to their argument, was in force before Christ claimed all authority.
8. Bro. A. showed, according to their agreement, the Baptist church could not be a New Testament church, not possessing the seven items they had agreed upon to make it a New Testament church.

Therefore the Baptist church with all its teaching and practice, was unscriptural and unauthorized by the word of God, and with this grand argument went down the Baptist church at Bend, judging from the looks of Mr. Miller, their moderator, (who was afraid to meet Bros. McGary or Alexander, at Cherokee, a few weeks ago), for he looked worse than mourners at the bench.

Upon this proposition the debate closed, and I think much good was done, for Bro. A. certainly realized the inconsistency in his former teaching and practice, in the debate, and after his argument in the debate, I am certain he is too honest ever to receive the sects into the church any more upon their unscriptural teaching. So you may now count him as one of the workers for the FIRM FOUNDATION.

As for Mr. Elder, he has been educated by the Baptists for a preacher, and stands among their ablest preachers and debaters. He is a young man, and if he will read his Bible and grammar more and study Jarrell and slang less, I yet have some hope he may be converted and be saved.

I remained and taught the people one week after the debate closed, concerning the things of the kingdom of God. I found the cause had almost gone down there. Several members had gone to the Baptists, and had acted more sensibly than those who had not gone to the Baptists, according to their past teaching and practice in that part; for our brethren had taught they were right, and the Baptists also were right, as they would receive them on their baptism. The Baptists taught, they only were right, and would not receive any one without baptizing them, and some of our young members seeing they would have two chances in the Baptist church and only one in the church of Christ, according to the teaching and practice of many of our brethren, tried to make their calling and election sure, while others had not acted so wisely, hence had failed to obey that injunction, make it as sure as ye can.

In the meeting I examined these matters thoroughly between truth and error, and showed from a Bible standpoint:

1. The sects don't believe in the God of the Bible, hence are infidels.

2. Don't believe Christ, and are condemned.

3. Don't confess Christ but confess themselves,

4. Make a wrong confession. Confess because of salvation. Bible confession is unto salvation.

5. Are not scriptural subjects for baptism.

6. Can not be scripturally baptized.

There was much interest manifested. At the close of the meeting Bro. Alexander made an impressive talk, endorsing our teaching as being strictly Bible, and I rejoiced to know another great soldier had been converted altogether to the truth, and I am certain Bro. A. will now do much good for the cause of truth, as he is a good preacher, and has much influence in the West.

After all, I think the debate and meeting did much good in setting the truth before the people, and I only take courage praying God's blessing on all those good brethren and sisters for their interest and help and encouragement shown us while there. I pray we will all meet again when the conflicts of life are over. Yours truly,

J. D. TART.

FROM A PRESBYTERIAN.

Editor Firm Foundation:

After a long delay I will again write a letter for your paper. In answer to some of J. W. Jackson's reply to my first and second articles.

He says, that I admit that there is but one way to heaven. So I do, but I did not say, that the way was through the different churches, only just as far as they taught what Christ and the apostles commanded them to teach, and that as laid down in the New Testament, and that is to point the people to Jesus as the true and living way.

Again, you say, that I should have read my New Testament a little closer before saying that the way to heaven was an overland way, and while I admit that there is just a little water on the way, I still repeat that is an overland route, or that there are no water ways.

Your reference to Jesus coming to John to be baptized, is exactly in harmony with what I understand the Scriptures to teach on that subject. Jesus was a man full of the Holy Ghost, and John said, "I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me." Jesus answered and said, "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." So you see that Jesus was baptized to fulfill all righteousness, and thus laying the first example of water baptism for Christians to follow that we have any record of.

And now, sir, right here in the beginning you see that your water baptism for the remission of sins is false and inconsistent with the teaching of the New Testament.

Now here is a man having no sin coming to John to be baptized of him, or as I said in my other article, to perform the last act, to fulfill all righteousness, and there is no immersion in water in it, and just what we have to do after we have been regenerated, by the Holy Spirit baptism, is then to carry out the example set by our Savior, in fulfilling all righteousness, and not for the remission of sins.

After we have heard the word, believed it, repented of our sins, confessed Christ, and through faith in his promise we feel that our sins are pardoned, and Christ testifying to us through the regenerating power of the Spirit, we must have it symbolized by water, we are then in the one body and fit subjects to follow Christ.

Again, Peter explains in 1 Peter 3:1 chapter, and the latter clause of the 27th verse, where he says, not the putting away the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God by the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Can a man by the act of baptism, give an answer to a good conscience, when, according to your theory, he hasn't got it? For you say a man must be baptized for the remission of sins, and can a man have a good conscience toward God before his sins are remitted?

Now, if your theory is correct, then Peter was mistaken, and should have said, not for the putting away the filth of the flesh, but in order that we may have a good conscience towards God, through the resurrection of Christ.

Again, you say, all who by faith in Jesus have been baptized for the remission of sins are acknowledged to be sons. Now John's man Jesus was baptized to fulfill all righteousness, and not for the remission of sins, and so it is to-day when a man's sins have been blotted out by the baptism of the Holy Spirit, and the love of God shed abroad in his heart, he is then a fit subject to fulfill all righteousness, by having his spiritual baptism symbolized by water, he can then enter upon his Christian duties, with a good conscience towards God, and can truly be called his son.

You cite me to Gal. 3: 27-29: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female, for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to his promise." Christ is also represented as being the head of the body, of the church.

Now turn to 1 Cor. and there you will find how we get into that body. "For as the body is one and has many members, and the members of that one body being many, are one body, so also is Christ. For by one spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free, and have been all made to drink into one Spirit. For the body is not one member but many."—1 Cor. 12: 12-14. Please read the whole chapter and then connect it with Gal. 3: 27-29, and you will see the true meaning there.

In regard to Mark 16: 15-16, I will say, that there is no water in the text, and I do not see how a man can see any unless he has water on the brain.

And now, sir, with the New Testament before us revealing a baptism for the soul as well as the body, and having the concurrence of the old Bible defining the mode, we can easily see what is meant by the commission given here; 15th verse he said unto them, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel, (not baptism), to every creature. 16th verse, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned."

Now I find that the same thing that believes is baptized and is saved. Now what is that thing, is it the body that believes, or is it the soul? We all know that it is the latter. Then it is a plain case, that it is a baptism for the soul. Again, I ask can the body believe? You know it cannot. Is the body saved? I answer, no. So you can see the plain meaning is, that the soul believes, is baptized, and is saved without a drop of water in it.

Then it simply means that the soul, through faith in the gospel, is baptized by an out pouring of the Holy Spirit, and never was intended for the body. Then water being the next pure thing is used as a symbol to show to the world what has taken place with the inward man, or the last act to fulfill all righteousness in answer of a good conscience toward God.

You say my reference to Noah and his family was an unhappy one for me. That Peter says that eight souls were saved by water. Yes, Peter says so, but he says, they were in the ark on the water, and not in or under water, neither did he say they were immersed in water for the remission of sins.

But the apostles tell us that Noah was saved by faith in God's promise. Noah trusted in God, and believed what he said, and God in his Allwise power told Noah when to enter the ark, and then he sent the flood on the unbelieving world of people, and immersed (drowned) them all. So you see that Noah and his family were saved by faith, and not by being baptized in water.

Then you ask, can a man have a good conscience that denies the necessity of one of Jesus' commands, or can he have a good conscience until he obeys the command? Now, as you say, a man must be baptized before he can have a good conscience, why did Peter say that baptism was in answer to a good conscience toward God which is equivalent to a good conscience before baptism?

My article is getting too long already to notice your reply any farther at this time, but I hope to hereafter, for there are several items in your first and second replies that I would like to call your attention to, but time and space will not admit of it at present.

And as you ridicule pouring and Holy Ghost baptism, I will, in conclusion, cite you to some very important Scriptures that you seem to over look when writing to me. Please examine the following:

"Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost, as your fathers did, so do ye."—Acts 7: 51, 52, 53, 54, 55. Also Rom. 8: 14 to 17; Titus 3: 5, 6; Ezekiel 36: 25; Heb. 6: 4 to 6, also 9: 19 to 21. By studying these Scriptures you will find that we have both sprinkle and pour in both the Old and the New Testaments, but I never have been able to find immerse in water in either of them, and I asked you to show me where it is said immerse in the Testament, and you dodged the question by stating that it was a Greek word, and finally wound up by howling water, much water, etc., which was no answer, but was merely said to throw a false impression on my letter. The above are only a few of the Scriptures I have for your consideration, but my letter is too long already, so I will close, hoping you will give it a candid consideration, and excuse all mistakes, bad spelling and writing.

Yours truly,
JACOB KARRA.

Rice, Texas.

If I was ever so much inclined to use ridicule as a weapon in reply to your letters, it would be unnecessary. The quibbles, evasions and perversions of Scripture used by you in support of your unscriptural ideas are too ridiculous to be dignified by the name of argument. Almost any man can fill a few pages of manuscript with captious objections to the gospel of Christ and show his weakness by using such expressions as "water on the brain," "howling water," "no water way to heaven," etc. Men who love the truth and are honestly seeking to know the Lord's will, will not seek to justify themselves in their human inventions, (Luke 16: 15), but will come to the light "that their deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God." John 3: 21. We both claim to be honest men, let us then address ourselves honestly to the work before us.

We both agree that there is but ONE way to heaven. We thus agree because of the plain statements of Scripture. Matt. 7: 13, 14; Heb. 10: 20. Can we not continue in this agreement? Let us see.

A way is a course of life and is made up of the things we do, our actions. But actions or deeds flow from the heart, just as a stream from the fountain, (Matt. 15: 19), and are the expression or manifestation of the principles in the heart, Matt. 12: 34, 35. If the principle is right, the action or embodiment of it will be right. But a stream cannot rise higher than the fountain. There are two sources or fountains whence principles are derived; one divine, one human; one of the Spirit, one of the flesh. It is very evident then, the way that will lead us to heaven must be the embodiment of divine principles sown in the heart. We must go to the "living fountain" of divine wisdom and not to "the broken cisterns" of human wisdom, "that can hold no water."—Jer. 2: 12, 13.

Where are these principles obtained? From the word of God. Can we obtain a divine principle from any other source, or in any other way? No. Then what becomes of your theory of a "direct operation of the Spirit," called in orthodox parlance "regeneration?" Please tell us, if you can, what divine principle these orthodox teachers have after their supposed regeneration, that is not contained in the gospel of Christ? The apostles never taught such a doctrine. The word "regeneration" occurs twice in the New Testament, and in both places is equivalent to dispensation. Matt. 19: 28, Titus 3: 5. The wild theory of regeneration as taught by the orthodox denominations has no foundation either in Scripture or common sense.

The word of God sown in the heart and understood brings forth fruit or action, Matt. 13: 23. We have the word of God and we see the ways taught and practiced by the denominations. Now, if the ways are contrary to or different from the word of God, they are wrong. It is evident that they have not understood the word, or have drawn their principles from some other than a divine source. Let us then repudiate all ways concocted by human wisdom and seek "the good way and walk in it."—Jer. 6: 16.

The way of salvation shown to us by the servants of God (Acts 16: 17) does not lead us into "the different churches," but leads man directly into the church of the living God. Only those who are led by the Spirit of God are the sons of God, Rom. 8: 14. The Spirit teaches that there is one body or church, Eph. 4: 4. It is evident then that the Spirit of God is not the author of these conversions that lead men into different churches through or by different ways. This way taught by the Spirit requires of man belief, repentance, confession and baptism. This you admit. By reference to the cases of conversion recorded in Acts of apostles, you will find that men must do these things in order to remission of sins, or salvation. There is a great difference between a place and the way to that place, so there is a distinction between salvation and the way leading to salvation. One of your difficulties seems to be that as soon as you get to one station on the way, (faith), you imagine that you are at the destined place, salvation. Your feelings deceive you.

When we get faith then let us walk by faith until we arrive safely at our destination. Faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God, Rom. 10: 17. If you hear the word of God alone and believe it you can then do the right thing. Your difficulty is in hearing too many things that God never spoke and dove-tailing them into the divine record, thus perverting the truth and blinding the way to heaven.

Where did you ever read in God's word of water baptism being a type or symbol of anything? Where did you read that Jesus "was a man full of the Holy Ghost" before he was baptized? The fact is that the Holy Spirit was given to Him after His baptism. He was not baptized for the remission of sins, simply because He had no sins to remit. All other men have sins and must obey the divine counsel in order to their remission. John preached "the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins," Mark 1: 4.

You say: "You see that your water baptism for the remission of sins is false and inconsistent with the teaching of the New Testament." John did not preach or practice any other kind of baptism. He preached water baptism; preached it for the remission of sins. Your statement therefore is a flat contradiction of the word of God. The apostle Peter also said, "repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins," Acts 2: 38. Here is water baptism again, and it is for the remission of sins. Ananias said to Saul of Tarsus: "And now why tardest thou arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins calling on the name of the Lord." Acts 22: 16. Water baptism again for the remission of sins. The Son of God said: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, he that believeth not shall be damned," Mark 16: 15, 16. I feel sorry for a man that will put himself upon record with such an interpretation as you give to the Savior's language here. But it only shows to what straits men are forced into in their efforts to evade the truth.

All the above Scriptures teach that baptism is for the remission of sins. The one baptism commanded in the name of the Lord Jesus is water baptism. See also Acts 10: 48, and 19: 5. This is the baptism by which we enter the body. "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body," 1 Cor. 12: 13. It is not with one spirit, nor in one spirit, but by the Spirit. As before shown the Spirit leads us by the word of God. The word of God teaches baptism for the remission of sins; those who obey this teaching according to the word of God are "baptized by the Spirit," or "washed with water by the word," Eph. 5: 26.

But you have such a dread of water, you not only deny the design of baptism, but reduce the Jordan to only a "little water." I will try once more to lead you into the light hoping that you may "open the eyes of your understanding" to see the truth.

The word, baptize, is an anglicized word translated from the Greek. All scholars, not smatterers, of all ages admit that it means to dip, to immerse, to plunge. There is another Greek word, rantizo, which means to sprinkle. There is just as much difference between the two in Greek as there is in English. They cannot be used interchangeably. Jesus used the word, baptizo, which means to immerse; those then that rantize their subjects do not baptize them. You cannot find more in the English word than you find in the Greek word from which it is translated. You can't find sprinkle in baptizo, nor immersion in rantizo, either in the Greek or in English.

There is not a line in Scripture from beginning to end where water (unmixed), was ever poured or sprinkled on man, woman or child for baptism. The authority for such practice will be found in the same chapter that speaks of "total hereditary depravity," "direct work of the Spirit," "missionary societies," "Sabbath Schools," "baptism a non-essential," "baptism a symbol of Holy Ghost baptism," etc. This chapter was introduced by the Mother of harlots, the church of Rome, and is accepted as authoritative by the tradition-loving orthodox religionists of to-day.

Not having space to notice just now all the Scriptures you cite, and show their teaching. I ask your attention to the word of God as to the action of baptism. In every act of obedience to this command the following circumstances are necessary:

1. A place that affords the means of baptism; that is, water, and it must afford sufficient water for the act commanded.
2. The administrator and subject would, as sensible persons, seek such places, and when found would take only such steps as were necessary to the baptism.
3. The apostles were reasonable men guided by the Holy Spirit; hence would not do an unreasonable thing, nor would they in speaking of baptism use unreasonable or unmeaning words.

Matthew and Mark both testify that multitudes went to John and were baptized by him in the river Jordan, Matt. 3: 6, Luke 1: 5. John testifies that "he was baptizing in Enon near Salim because there was much water there," John 3: 23. Luke testifies that Phillip and the eunuch came to a "certain water," Acts 8: 36. In all of these we have a place sought that afforded plenty of water for baptism. In one of them (John 3: 23), the reason assigned by the writer for John's baptizing at a certain place is, "because there was much water there." The conclusion is irresistible that "much water" is needed for baptizing.

Their action at the place must now be considered. We find that both preacher and subject went down into the water, and after the baptism came up out of the water, Matt. 3: 16, Acts 8: 39. Did they do an unreasonable thing? Yes, if Presbyterianism is right. There is not a man on earth with three grains of common sense who would do such an unreasonable thing as to go a long journey to a river, and go down into the water to perform an act that could be done just as well at his fireside and without inconvenience. These Bible men then did not do an unreasonable thing, nor is it now unreasonable to do as they did. Seek a place where there is "much water," and both preacher and subject go down into the water, and then after baptism come up out of the water.

To ascertain what they did in baptism we cite what the apostles said of it. Paul in alluding to baptism speaks of the body washed with pure water (Heb. 10: 22); also as a washing of water by which the church is cleansed, (Eph. 5: 26). Could Paul have had in his mind the idea of sprinkling a "little water" on a person when he spoke of the body "washed with water" when you were sprinkled? Paul meant what he said, so that in baptism, we must have the body washed. Paul again tells us that we are "buried in baptism," and "raised in baptism," Rom. 6: 4, Col. 2: 12. "Buried in sprinkling," "raised in pouring." Nonsense isn't it? Then why try to make Paul guilty of such nonsense? Why not accept these scriptural requirements and forever settle the matter?

In conclusion permit me to invite your particular attention to one of your own quotations: "Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost, as your fathers did so do ye," Acts 7: 51. Please note how the fathers resisted the Holy Spirit. "But they refused to hearken and pulled away the shoulder and stopped their ears, that they should not hear. Yea they made their hearts as an adamant stone, lest they should hear the law and the words which the Lord of hosts hath sent in his Spirit by the former prophets: therefore came a great wrath from the Lord of hosts," Zech. 7: 11, 12.

Many other Scriptures could be cited confirmatory of this, but it is unnecessary. "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." Men heard these words but would not obey; they resisted the Holy Spirit by resisting the teaching, not obeying the words spoken by the prophets. So the Jews did in Jerusalem. Stephen spoke to them, they heard but would not obey, and thus resisted the Holy Spirit that spoke by Stephen. So now men resist the Holy Spirit who reject the words spoken by the apostles for they spoke the words taught them by the Holy Spirit, 1 Cor. 2: 9, 12.

You have this word and can certainly read therein your duty, and I again repeat that, conscience cannot be called a good conscience until man obeys a known duty or command. Peter did not say that baptism was in answer "to a good conscience," but "the answer of a good conscience." Through the teaching of the Holy Spirit man learns that he is a sinner and that through the kindness and forbearance of God, Jesus was given to prepare a way for salvation from sin. Jesus has prepared that way and published it through or by His apostles, and they teach that baptism is an act ordained of God for the remission of sins. Conscience recognizes the authority of Jesus, and is not satisfied or made good until obedience is rendered. But I must close. I hope that you will lay aside all partisan views and come squarely to the word of God and take it and it only as your guide.

J. W. JACKSON.

FROM BRO. REEKS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Just returned again from Louisiana. Met Bro. Lynn, one of our preaching brethren, in Tyler and took his subscription for the F. F. I send the subscription price of the paper for six months for him. Address M. H. Lynn, Paris, Texas.

If any of the parties are in arrears to whom I requested the paper sent at any point, let me know and I will try to get the money and send it to you. It costs me ten cents on nearly every subscription I send you: could you tell me how to safely avoid it?

I have sent several reports of two or three meetings; have heard nothing from them, suppose mine and Bro. Montgomery's were not worthy of a place in the F. F. I will send a brief report of my years work, which is shorter this year than in the past two or three years.

This is a report of my work for this year: At Zion Hill with Bro. Clark, of Terrell, to help, baptized two at Grange Hall. I baptized five at Kuykendall's; one of these came to us from the Baptists two years ago. At Union Hill baptized one. In Louisiana took one confession my first trip. Being sick, Bro. Montgomery did the baptizing. Second trip took one confession.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, DEC. 1, 1888.

ATTENTION, READERS!

From this time on send all money for the FIRM FOUNDATION, or any of our pamphlets, to A. MCGARY, AUSTIN, TEXAS. Make all money orders payable to A. McGary. Please state whether you are a new subscriber or an old one. Write plainly, and give the county, where your post office is not a large town. Don't forget this in sending orders. MCGARY & HANSBROUGH.

A. MCGARY's address is Box 36, Austin, Texas.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

We are so well satisfied with the way the friends of the paper are working and sending in their dues and new subscribers, that we are ordering material for the weekly. But, brethren, do not slacken your efforts for the paper, for it is going to require a very large list and prompt payment on the part of old subscribers, to meet the demands of the weekly.

Some names were received last month to whom we did not send the last issue, because it ran short; but they will all get credit from the time they commence receiving the paper, so that no injustice will be done. We hope to avoid this in the future by publishing a larger number of extra copies than we have been publishing. Names are coming in so fast it keeps us quite busy enrolling them.

The Texas Department of the Guide has moved to Austin. We met A. P. Aten the other day and said to him: "Well, the Texas Department of the Guide has come over to the grounds of the FIRM FOUNDATION." He said he hoped we would get along amicably. And we will if he will just come down off of his stilts and be humble and cease trying to legislate for God. But if he remains in rebellion against the Captain of our salvation, we will put him to the sword.

We had noticed the point in Bro. Richardson's article, that Bro. Durst criticizes in this issue; but in the multiplicity of duties that have crowded upon us since our return to the office, we had forgotten to offer the criticism. We thank Bro. Durst for his remarks, for he expressed the views, exactly, that we entertain. We do not think Bro. "Billy" is often wrong, but are sure he is in this instance. He has written some of the best articles that have appeared in the paper, and we hope he will sharpen up his pencil for constant work with us on the weekly. In his last article he is made to say, "Faith, repentance, confession and baptism are the four ingredients that enter into the spiritual compound of sin." It ought to have said, "Compound for the cure of sin."

We are under obligations to several unknown brethren for copies of the Courier, in response to our request. But we have received a letter from the office editor of the Courier, stating that some one has paid for the paper for us for one year. We wish we knew who to thank for this kindness. Will the brother, or friend, who has done this please let us know the exact date he did it? We have special reasons for wanting to know. So a card giving this information will be highly appreciated.

Bro. J. F. Grubbs has favored us with a complimentary copy of his book, "The Paper Wheel." But our time has been so taken up with other matters since we received the book that we have had but little time to examine it. We have, however, read one chapter. "The Establishment of the Church," which we consider a clear, cogent and conclusive argument for the truth, on this much mooted question. The other subjects discussed are as follows: Eternity Undivided; Creation; This World Created for Man; Man's Relation to Nature, Time and Eternity; Man's Relation to God and Spirits; Man's Relation to Evil; Man Lost; Man Redeemed; Divinity of Christ; The Holy Spirit; The New Birth; and The Resurrection. Then one chapter is devoted to, "A Brief Sketch of The Author." Some brethren think this is a chapter of egotism, that detracts from the book; but, while we think this is an age in which preachers blow their own trumpets entirely too much to impress the world that they are very humble, we think Bro. Grubbs is more modest in this chapter than most of the brethren who write about themselves—we said we had read but one chapter, but we did also read this one. The "Paper Wheel" is printed in a large, clear type, and is a very neatly gotten up book. Price, $1.00. Address, J. F. Grubbs, Paris, Texas.

"It is thought that it will soon be the order for certain preachers to go about the country inquiring of people why they obeyed the Lord when they were baptized? If they do not give a satisfactory explanation, the preachers will dip them again."—Christian Messenger.

It is already the order for certain preachers to go about the country inquiring of people if they are satisfied with their baptism. If they give a satisfactory answer, these preachers will shake them. Paul used to go about the country of Ephesus and ask people, "unto what then were you baptized?" and if they did not give a satisfactory explanation he taught them the way of the Lord more perfectly, and dipped them again, "in the name of the Lord Jesus." If the Messenger complains at the brethren now for dipping persons who have been unauthoritatively dipped, it would have raised the same complaint against Paul if it had existed in his day. Brethren, let us follow Paul's example. I had rather trust the 19th of Acts than the 14th of the Messenger.

Did Luke say, of Philip's meeting in Samaria: But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women, and one or two Baptists laid down their unscriptural names.—Foundation.

No, nor did he say that, "when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women, and one or two Baptists who had been previously shaken in were baptized." Did you ever read a report like this latter?—Messenger.

No, because, as you have repeatedly said, it was more than a thousand years after the apostolic age that there were no Baptists. Again, it was about eighteen hundred years after Paul taught those at Ephesus to lay down their unscriptural baptism and be "baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus," that the practice of shaking them in was inaugurated. So of course we never read "a report like the latter"; but we do read of those who had been baptized unauthoritatively, being taught more perfectly, and baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus—"re-baptized," as you call it. Paul was one of those whom you call "anabaptists," "re-baptizers," etc.

DESPERATE RECKLESSNESS.

Bro. Burnett says many foolish and false things about "A. McGary" and "the Plimsy Foundation." If my veracity had become so plimsy that I could wilfully and complacently make the false statements that he does, I would never expect my readers to believe anything I wrote until it was also signed by two reputable witnesses.

He says: "A. McGary never will forgive Bro. Burnett for asking him where the church was before the days of Alexander Campbell, and demanding the proof text that commands faith in the design of baptism."

The truth is, we told him where the church was before the days of "Alex. Campbell" and since his day; but he would not give his readers our reply, but recklessly and falsely told them that, A. McGary said, if the Church existed before the days of Alex. Campbell, it was an invisible church. We protested against such a perversion of what we said, but he persisted in his shameless course, and still persists.

We told him, the church was, wherever there were individuals who had heard, understood, believed and obeyed from the heart the gospel of Christ. Now if he would just be manly enough to give this to his readers, and then attempt to give a better answer, it would be much better and nobler than misrepresenting us so grossly.

Now, as to the text that commands faith in the design of baptism, we will cite him to the commission given in Mark 16: 15, 16. Here we find the command to the apostles to preach, and the demand that those who hear shall believe, and the things required, to be believed are the things the apostles were going to preach and did preach. They preached that baptism is for the remission of sins. Then we have made out the case as Bro. Burnett has demanded—the "text" he called for. In the Lord's prayer in John 17, we find in the 20th verse these words: "Neither pray I for these (apostles) alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." But Bro. Burnett insists that what they said about the design of baptism need not be believed. Thus he sits in judgment upon God's word, and pronounces the presumptuous judgment, that it need not be believed! A. MCG.

CAN WE CONSOLIDATE?

Bro. Burnett, in a very exultant spirit says: "It has not been two weeks since he rejected a proposition to consolidate with the FOUNDATION forcea." We were astonished when we read this statement; we knew we had not said one word to justify such a statement. But a letter to-day from Bro. Tant explains the matter.

Bro. Tant says: "I have been writing to Bro. Burnett in regard to a consolidation of the Messenger and FOUNDATION. I cannot get him to any definite terms, only you and he cannot work agreeably as editors, stating that both papers can be consolidated by one buying the other out. I got a private letter from Bro. Wilmeth this evening wanting me to push the matter. . . . I hope you will not think me dealing too much in your affairs by examining this matter. Personally I am not interested, as a man of God I am."

Bro. Tant then goes on to show how the cause would be advanced by the F. F. buying out and controlling the Messenger. He is doubtless right in much of what he says upon this.

While Bro. Tant has acted in this matter without the slightest authority from us, and without our having any intimation even, of what was going on, he is a staunch friend and we are satisfied he has labored to promote the interest and usefulness of the FIRM FOUNDATION. Hence we will say that, whenever he gets a proposition from the Messenger, tending to such a consolidation as will leave Bro. Burnett disconnected from it, we will entertain it.

We agree with Bro. Burnett that we could not get along agreeably; for we would not work with a man who has formed the very bad habit he has of misrepresenting his opponents—we suppose it would be hard to break him from this habit, as brethren who know him best say it is of long standing.

But since Bro. Burnett has started the secrets to leaking out, we will quote from a letter just received from Bro. McCarty; for it is best to have all of the facts before us in our efforts to consolidate these two papers.

Bro. McCarty says: "Bro. S. says he met Bro. Barcus who is connected with the Messenger, and he told him that the Messenger was on down grade, only 2,100 subscribers. . . . Bro. S. says the Messenger is bound to go under."

Bro. Burnett says, it "has a better circulation at present than at any time in its history."

Now, Bro. Tant, we leave you in possession of these statements, and as you are in the correspondence, we leave you to conduct it till you obtain some definite proposition. But from what we know of Bro. Burnett and Bro. Barcus, we insist that you be guided by Bro. Barcus' statement in making your estimate of the condition of the Messenger. You need not entertain any proposition from Bro. Burnett to buy the F. F., it is not for sale.

We believe we could work harmoniously with the balance of the Messenger force. We shall, whether we consolidate or not, keep straight ahead on apostolic grounds, refusing to teach or practice what they did not, and earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to them, and against all teaching or practice that goes beyond theirs. If these brethren can work with us upon this principle, it is our duty as true disciples of Christ to consolidate our forces and possess the good land of Texas for Christ, and drive out of this land those who have gone "out out from us" and formed a league with the adversary.

Brethren, we appeal to all God-fearing men and women to rally upon the heaven-and-earth-bound way and let's fight the "good fight of faith," under the command of the Captain of our salvation, doing whatever we do, "in word or deed, in His name," (by His authority). All brethren who are willing to do this can work with us and we with them; those who cannot had better not attempt to consolidate with the "FIRM FOUNDATION forces," for the bonds of consolidation will be broken, the union will be short-lived. God grant that we may soon "all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among us, but that we may be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment." Unto this desirable end, brethren, we "commend you to the word of God's grace."

WANTS TO BE EXCUSED.

Bro. A. Clark feared that it was true, "that it was prejudice that made me (A. Clark) decide not to read a line in certain papers." So he says he was induced to look over two papers of the kind he had for several years refused to read: He says: "In one of these papers I found an urgent protest against allowing these 'progressive' preachers to enter and preach in the pulpits of the 'faithful.' No protest against immoral and hypocritical pretenders."

The editor of the paper in which he saw this did not think it necessary to use a redundancy of speech to protest against "hypocritical pretenders." He thought every one who knows the modus operandi of these progressive preachers and their pretensions to take the Scriptures as a sufficient rule of faith and practice knows that they are "hypocritical pretenders." But Bro. Addison will have to excuse us this time for not being a little more explicit.

Again he says: "The venerable T. W. Caskey is made the subject of ridicule." Yes, so has the venerable (?) Tom Paine often been made the subject of ridicule by this same "venerable T. W. Caskey." And yet Tom Paine never penned a sentence that contained more of the essence of infidelity in it than that sentence from "the venerable T. W. Caskey" in which he says: "The Bible alone is killing churches in Texas."

But he says he laid this "paper down tenderly, and picked up No. 2. In this I read of brethren Bush, Sanders and Rosecrans as running on the road to the 'hot place.' If I were asked to select from the preachers I know in Texas three of as pure and earnest Christians as the State affords I would name these three men." Yes, but unfortunately for this angelic trio, Addison Clark will not be permitted to stand around the judgment seat of Christ, to "select the pure and earnest Christians." He will have to give an account for his own abuses of the church of God, in making it a stepping-stone to the building up of a college for self-glorification, the behests of which institution forces him to league himself with things that tend to the perversion of the kingdom of God's dear Son.

He says, in conclusion: "We never object to fair criticism, in fact we love it; but vile abuse and the consigning to perdition of as pure men as the world contains, I confess is a kind of journalistic pabulum that makes me sick." No man has the right to judge, God alone can do that justly; but God has given us a rule to judge by, and when we judge by that rule, it is God's judgment and not ours. Man has no right to judge who shall be damned, but when he finds where God has said: "He that believeth not shall be damned," he is not judging when he says that unbelievers will be damned, but is merely giving voice to the judgment of God. So of those who pervert the right ways of the Lord, it is only uttering the judgment of God to say that they will be damned, or that they are "running on the road to the 'hot place.'"

Of course Addison Clark does not relish such "journalistic pabulum" as that which speaks of such high personages as "State Evangelists, State Sunday School Evangelists, and other dignitaries who play into his hands and help on his selfish schemes, "running on the road to the hot place." The Pope of Rome would not like such pabulum as would speak of popes running on the road to the hot place. Addison Clark and the pope, and all would-be popes, think that "the hot place" is made only for "the devil and his angels" and obscure "laymen" and "old fogey" preachers. But he should bear in mind that in the great day of accounts, many will say "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?"—perhaps some will then speak of "our great State work," as they are now boasting in Texas. To some of these the great Judge will say: "I never knew ye: depart from me ye that work iniquity." How does our brother like such Bibleistic pabulum as this?

If I were one of these lordly men who are departing from the apostolic plan of work, and exalting a human society in which the "sanctified common sense" of men is substituted for the Will of God, as A. J. Bush, B. B. Sanders, Rosecrans and A. Clark are doing, I know this sort of pabulum would "make me sick," yes, very sick.

Addison Clark says: "Now I must ask to be excused from reading such papers." Well, we are perfectly willing to excuse the president from reading such papers, and would excuse him from the "hot place" if we had the authority. But those in high places must not conclude that God is a respecter of persons, and that the "hot place" is exclusively for men of low estate, whom the world regards ignoble. We fear there will be much astonishment, and "weeping and gnashing of teeth" among the "wise (after the flesh)" "mighty," and noble "when Jesus comes to judge."

Brethren, humble yourselves and make God's word the man of your counsel, and cease attempting to "direct your own steps."

A. MCG.

PLEASE NOTE THIS.

We have on our list some who are far behind and they seem to pay no attention to our efforts to straighten up our books. Those who have written us that they will pay, and those who have written that they are not able to pay, are not referred to in this. But we aim this for that class who seem indifferent to our appeals.

Now, brethren, if you did not want the paper why did you not so inform us, a year ago, when we requested you to do so? We told you then, that you could stop the paper without paying the arrearage, if you felt disposed to act that way. Some took advantage of this offer and stopped the paper. Others, more honorable, paid up and stopped it. But others still linger on our list who do nothing and say nothing. Of course we would like to retain all honorable readers we can, and doubt not that there are many such among those to whom this is written.

But, brethren, you must do something by the first of January, 1889. Let those who have written us that they are not able to pay write again, if they want the paper, and we will arrange them on the list so they will not be bothered. Let those who can pay but have not paid, do so immediately. Let those who are not able to pay now, but who will when they can, say so. Let those who have been reading the paper, but who do not intend to pay for it, show of what sort they are, without further delay. We have heard from a few of these already, but only a few, we are glad to say.

One infidel wrote us that he did not believe the Bible. He said he had compared [the FIRM FOUNDATION with the Bible doctrine and found that the F. F. was contending for that doctrine, strictly. He said if he believed the Bible he would be a strong FIRM FOUNDATION man. He said the paper had been going to him several months, and if it was not paid for to let him know and he would remit immediately. So with his infidelity, he is more honorable than some claiming to be Christians who have been reading the paper.

We have not written this to offend any one, or any class, but to stir up the indifferent to a performance of their duty, among whom, doubtless, are many good brethren and sisters, who are strong friends to the paper. When you write, please try to send a new name with your own subscription.

Fraternally,

MCGARY & HANSBROUGH.

LETTER FROM E. HANSBROUGH.

CALDWELL COUNTY, TEXAS, }
Nov. 10th, 1888. }

Dear Brother and Sister R. and Sister S.:

My wife and I got home from our long trip of six and a half months Oct. 26th, and found all as well as usual, and the FIRM FOUNDATION doing very well, at least I thought so, for it was, as it ever had been, contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, and no paper or preacher could do better than that.

Bro. McGary had moved back to Austin from Fort McKavett, and was living in our house; but he rented another place and moved yesterday.

I left home yesterday morning and came out here, twenty miles, and began a meeting, which I expect to continue a week or ten days. But few brethren in the neighborhood, mostly Baptists, Methodists and worldlings, or rather mostly worldlings, for I don't know where else to put the Methodists and Baptists; for if they are in the church we ought to let them alone, and if they are not in the church they are in the world, unless there is some middle ground like the Catholic purgatory, and if there is any such ground the Bible don't reveal it.

I do not wish to wound the feelings of the Methodists, Baptists, or any other sectarian by my plain talk, for there are many good people among them, people that I love; but people may be good and not be Christians, as we learn from the case of Cornelius, one of the best men we read of in the Bible, Acts 10th chapter and 11: 1-15, and yet he had to hear words of Peter whereby he and his house should be saved, and all that Peter told them to do, was to be baptized in the name (by the authority) of the Lord, and to be baptized by the authority of the Lord, is to be baptized for the remission of sins, and to be baptized because our sins are remitted is to be baptized by the authority of men, and is not worth a cent.

The popular idea that sectarians are Christians is very deceptive and delusive, and many good people are misled by it. If the sects are Christians, then the more sects we have the better it is for the cause of Christ, and the welfare of the human family; and every good man ought to encourage divisions among those wanting, or claiming to be followers of Christ, and not discourage them as some are doing, or claim to be doing; but by their acts, which speak louder than their words, are encouraging them by acknowledging them to be Christians, or, at least, all they lack is a little shaking of the right hand.

The apostle Paul says: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name (authority) of our Lord Jesus Christ that you all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that you be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment," 1 Cor. 1: 10. But what were they to speak? It is very evident that Paul wanted them to be one in their speech; but he did not want them to be one in speaking lies, but the truth, hence Peter says, if any man speak let him speak as the oracles of God, 1 Peter 4: 11, then he will speak the truth.

Now when a man says, that he believes that God for Christ's sake has pardoned his sins, or as another says, that Christ appeared to him by a certain old stump and spake peace to his soul by telling him that his sins were all forgiven, do these men confess Christ in the Scriptural sense of that word? Some of our brethren, yes, preaching brethren, say they do. Do such brethren speak as the oracles of God, or do they speak lies? Verily they speak lies.

But let us look at a little more Scripture about these heresies or divisions. Peter says, speaking as he was guided or instructed by the Holy Spirit: "But there were false prophets among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, (divisions), even denying the Lord that bought them and bring upon themselves swift destruction, and many shall follow their pernicious (evil, wicked,) ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of," 2 Peter 2: 1-2.

Yes, let a man preach the word, the gospel, the truth that the Savior said people should know and that it should make them free, and the above described teachers and those taught by them will speak evil of it, call it Campbellism and yet such teachers and those taught by them are all right, are Christians, in the estimation of some of our brethren, provided they can get their consent to have their hands shook, a union shake. Oh shame, shame on such brethren. Brethren you know they have not made the scriptural confession. You know they were not taught before they were put under the water as the apostles taught, who were guided by the Holy Spirit. Why do you not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?

On our way home we came through St. Louis, Mo., and on the third Lord's day in October we went to the so-called Central Christian church, and heard Bro. Teagarden preach. He said some very good things, but the good things he said were, to a great extent spoiled, (at least to me), by the fact, that he permitted an organ to be bellowing before and after his preaching, and during the time the deacons were passing the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of the Savior. Oh what mockery, at least so it appeared to me.

That same congregation was then corresponding with a Virginia, so-called pastor, with the view of getting him to come and feed and fleece them. He had let them know, so I was told, that he must have three thousand dollars worth of their fleece per annum for feeding them; but he did not tell them the character of the food he would give them, nor what it would be worth to them; but any man who has so little regard for the word of the Lord, that he will charge three thousand dollars a year for feeding his flock would be sure not to feed them on anything much if any better, than the husks that the prodigal son would fain have filled his belly with while feeding swine, Luke 15: 16. He is that character of feeder and flector spoken of by the apostle Paul, "For I know that after my departure shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Acts 20: 28, also described by the Savior. "Beware of false prophets who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves," Matt. 7: 15. But how are we to know them? They come to us clothed in sheep's clothing, dressed in the Christian garb.

Why, brethren, if you are well acquainted with the word of God, as you ought to be, which is the sword of the Spirit, you can take that and open that clothing, no odds how thick it is, and you can see the wolf within. Oh how often the Scriptures warn and admonish us in reference to such teachers, and how slow we are to give heed to the admonitions.

E. HANSBROUGH.

FROM BRO. BURLESON.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Enclosed are two dollars. Please send to Bro. —, Utopia, Texas, one year, and renew sister — subscription one year.

This is the only new name I have been able to get of late, but will continue to try to swell its number of subscribers that it may become a weekly. While the F. F. has a good many opponents it is firmly gaining ground, even in Sabinal canon. Many pretended brethren claim that the F. F. quarrels too much among its own brethren, but that is only a cowardly dodge to avoid the exposure of their unscriptural practices.

Take new courage, brethren of the F. F., those that hear God hear you, and will as long as you continue to push the merits of Christ and his teaching on the attention of the people. Your opponents are those who oppose the true teaching of Jesus.

May the F. F. live long to extol the merits of Him who loved us, and gave His life for us, is my prayer.

J. D. BURLESON.

FROM BRO. I. C. STONE.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough,

While it rains to-day, I have concluded to write a few lines for your readers. I am sorry that I have not been able to increase the number of your readers this fall. I have not travelled much among the congregations this fall on account of the wonderful political excitement. The people have been wild with political excitement; but that is now nearly over, and I hope that people will soon resume their sober senses, especially those who claim to be Christians.

I dislike very much to see professed Christians carried away by any worldly excitement. If the frivolous things of the world can arouse such enthusiasm in their minds, why should not the weightier matters of the kingdom of God and of Christ? Ought not Christians to be consistent? How inconsistent it appears, for Christians to tell the world that the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ is of more importance than anything else and then give more of their time, means and energies to almost any worldly matter. The church and the cause of truth and righteousness never will and never can succeed until Christians act more consistently. Christianity means a consistent life of righteousness. Christianity demands a strict adherence to its own fundamental principles. The principles of Christianity are unique. To adopt and follow them, leads in the one straight and narrow way. To adopt and follow any other principles cannot lead in the way of life. What a lamentable mistake many are making just here. They adopt and follow the doctrines of men instead of the doctrine of Christ, and yet claim to be Christians. A Christian, as I understand, is one who is led by the teaching of the Lord, and not by the teaching of uninspired men.

And as often as this important truth has been set forth in the FIRM FOUNDATION I still see in some of our religious journals such reports as the following: "Bro. —,

I closed a ten days' meeting with Unity church, near Benton City, last Friday night, resulting in thirty-five additions to the church, two from the Congregational church, one from the Baptist, one from the Methodist, two reclaimed, two by letter, and the remainder from the world." Now it seems to me, that such reports as the foregoing have been referred to often enough for those who make them, to have seen their error. The Baptist society, the Methodist society, and all other such societies, are either of the world or else they are divine. They are either worldly institutions, or they are heavenly institutions. If they are divine institutions, then they must have been ordained by the Lord. If they have been ordained by the Lord, then why should we call persons out of a divine institution which has been ordained by the Lord? Is the institution, in which we claim to be and live, a divine institution? If so, then the two must be identical or the Lord has ordained two institutions for his people. If they are identical, then when you call them out of the one into the other what change have they made? You could fellowship them in the one as well as in the other. Such would be a work for which you can assign no good reason whatever.

But, if these are worldly institutions, then those who come from them are simply from the world, too. These things cannot be denied. But they take the two classes, as they call them, in different ways. One by confession and baptism, and the other by a simple twist of the wrist.

Is there any authority for taking any worldlying into the church of Christ by the shake of the hand, or a twist of the wrist? Is it not strange that those who persist in this course will not try to show authority for it? Will they not try to show that God has ordained these institutions or cease to accept their members? I certainly know of no institution that the Lord has ordained in the world but his church. If he ordained any other and intended that men should enter it, he certainly has also ordained the service in such institution.

If the means of entering and of service are the same as in his church, then they must be identical. But if different, then he has two institutions. If he has two, I demand that some define the second. If they cannot do that, I demand that they adhere to the one, and require all parties to enter that according to the law of the same.

I expect to be through what engagements I have in Indiana soon, and if any of the brethren anywhere desire to see and hear me, I should like them to write me at Sumner, Ill., between now and Christmas. My wife is in poor health, and we are not now keeping house, but are with the children. I have concluded to go wherever my labors are demanded.

I have not heard from Bro. Hansbrough since he wrote me from Cincinnati. Hope he arrived home all right.

The F. F. of the 15th is not here yet. I hope the friends will be liberal in sustaining the F. F. May God bless all its readers and contributors. Farewell.

I am now able to see that my sorest disappointments at the time they happened, and my heaviest misfortunes, have always turned out to be my greatest blessings whenever they have been taken as admonitions and warnings, and turned wisely to account.—John Neal.

A SUGGESTION TO BRO. W.P. RICHARDSON.

The F. F. of Nov. 1st just received. The first article is by our esteemed Bro. Richardson. In the main it is a most excellent article. So I think. I seriously object, however, to the following position, and briefly comment thereon.

"Now, Bro. McGary, I am going to make a statement that is a little uncommon, but if it is an untruth, down it and I will thank you for the deed. When a man ceases to practice sin, or commit sin, he is dead to sin. A man may be dead to sin and at the same time be a sinner. Is this true?"

As Bro. McGary said nothing about this, he may have the same idea as presented by Bro. R. Be this as it may, I must take issue with the old idea.

I do not think a man may be dead to sin and at the same time a sinner. Paul says in Rom. 6:7: "For he that is dead is freed from sin." In the 11th verse he says: "Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." My idea is, that when a sinner dies he is at the same time buried. If a sinner dies to sin before he is baptized, he is assuredly released from sin before his baptism, for "he that is dead to sin is freed from sin." This is the Baptist idea, and hence baptism is because of remission of sins. As Paul settles the question that a sinner is freed from sin when he dies to sin, therefore he cannot be dead to sin before his baptism, for he is "baptized into his death," Rom. 6:3.

Again: If the sinner dies to sin before baptism, he is freed from sin before baptism, and it takes place before he puts on Christ. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ," Gal. 3:27.

My understanding of the scriptural expression, "dead to sin," is that it is synonymous with "remission of sins." The death of the sinner occurs at the same time the burial takes place. There are many passages I cannot harmonize with Bro. Richardson's position, and I can with the above position. I will not now write further, but if my position is questioned may say more. Affectionately submitted.

FROM BRO. MCINTIRE.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

It has been a long time since I wrote anything to you. During the last year we have had a great deal of sickness. My old companion has suffered a great deal with fever and is blind and almost deaf. I have not travelled any, but have preached around home. Bros. Frank and Mit Bandy helped in a meeting at Belton near home. Eleven were immersed. We organized with thirty members. We will soon build a house.

I am glad to see that you are running the FIRM FOUNDATION on the gospel track instead of Mc-Pherson's steel rails to Babylon. He and his crew have been on the down grade ever since their State meeting, when they made their creed or calf.

McPherson is badly mistaken in his "steel rails." They are the poorest material of sectarian pot metal, and are on the down grade to Babylon, the second man of sin described by Paul. 2 Thes. 2:6-12. They also have the Spirit that would put to death all the apostolic brethren with us.

Stand fast brethren. The FIRM FOUNDATION has the cleanest dress of any paper in the United States, and I hope you will never defile its pages by publishing such infidel stuff as has been written concerning the wicked dead, that unsettled the minds of some of my dear brethren. Let us watch over the fold of Jesus, for they are few and are like the ten virgins. Half of them have turned foolish and gone after the organ, and will have no oil in their lamps. May God bless you all. Farewell.

FROM BRO. HOLT.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have just returned from Alabama, where I held a very successful meeting, resulting in five additions. One of these had been a member of the Baptist church for several years. But notwithstanding this, he was immersed into Christ. The shaking process in this country has become obsolete.

A few words on church government: The church of Christ is an organization separate and apart from all human institutions; it is not associated with any secret organization; its laws all emanate from Christ, and no body of men has authority to abolish, alter, or amend them. These laws are found in the New Testament, and in no other book are they to be found.

Its officers: These are bishops or elders, deacons and evangelists. Since the church no longer needs the miraculous gifts which were essential to its growth and development in its infantile state, the above named officers are the only ones for which we have any divine authority. Clerks, secretaries, presidents, with all their modern peculiarities were wholly unknown in apostolic times.

Its missionary work: The church was made the medium through which to evangelize the world. Hence we read: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," Mark 16:15. Thus we see they were sent. By whom sent? By the F. C. M. S.? No, but by Jesus Christ. Neither did they have any promises made them concerning their support.

How were they supported? Paul says: "Those who preach the gospel, shall live of the gospel." And again: "The laborer is worthy of his hire." We do not find where any one of the apostles ever received a salary, but their wants and necessities were provided for by the brethren, consisting of free will offerings.

And here we come to the contribution. With respect to this Paul says: "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God has prospered him," 1 Cor. 16:2. Here we find when and how these offerings are to be made. They were to be made upon the first day of the week, and as the Lord has prospered them. This then accords with the rule: Much given, much required; little given, little required.

Brethren, are we following these divine precepts? Are we making any sacrifices? Do we love the things of the world more than the things of God? Awake from your stupidity, and look around you one moment. Behold sectarianism stalking through our land deceiving our nearest and dearest friends and relatives; and then behold, how truth has suffered in the hands of its professed friends, and, with renewed courage, seize the blood stained banner of Immanuel, unfurl it to the breeze, never let it trail in the dust of manism. Put on the whole armor of God, and, finally—listen! "Well done good and faithful servant."

Yours for the one faith,

C. E. HOLT.

TO BRO. J. D. TANT.

In your reply to me in the F. F. of Oct. 15, you say: "Love thinketh no evil of his brother." No, indeed it does not think any evil, but the Bible says, "Reprove, rebuke, exhort," etc., etc.

Now the fact is, in writing my letter to the F. F., in regard to that debate, I thought that I was just as light on Bro. G. as the circumstances would permit; but as you propose to rush into something you know nothing of, and censure me for writing that I supposed that Bro. G. had emigrated, I propose to show who deserves the censure.

The facts are as follows: We, a small band of Christians here at Blanton, had drawn the sword of the Spirit, in obedience to the divine injunction, against error, and in defense of the truth as it is in Jesus; and we were making every blow tell on the enemy. We had challenged the Baptists, who failed to come up. Then the Methodists jumped on us, as they said, "without fear of successful contradiction." We very soon informed them that we had men in our ranks who could and would "successfully contradict their teaching." They tried to back out, but we held them to it. Finally, rather than be called cowards, they asked for an armistice until August the 6th. Man equipped for battle, at the same time warning us to get "our biggest gun" for the fight.

We thought that Bro. G. was about our largest calibre, and had never been known to "hang fire."

So we resolved ourselves into a committee of the whole, and appointed a man to confer with Bro. G. to see if he would consent to meet them. He consented very readily, and wrote us these cheering words: "We have nothing to fear."

So we arranged everything for the debate, and waited for our Bro. Grubbs. Promptly on the morning of the 6th, the Methodists had their "gun" erected and bearing directly upon us, and there was a great commotion in our ranks, at not having our man. We sent a truce to the enemies, camp and asked permission to substitute a smaller "gun;" but of course they did not want to waste time and ammunition in "shelling the woods." So they furled their flag and went away thoroughly disgusted with the "Campbellites." Then we drew off our forces, in still deeper disgust, if possible, realizing that, what the cause of Christ had gained in a year of ceaseless activity and patient work, was lost in an hour by making the very fatal mistake of getting the wrong man.

And all the apology we have had is, what Bro. G. wrote to Bro. S. N. Thomas: "Don't let the brethren get angry with me, the Macedonian cry was too great, I could not resist;" and what Bro. Tant wrote: "The cause would have been injured by Bro. G. then leaving."

Indeed! You think the "cause" did not suffer here, I suppose? I will state, for Bro. Tant's benefit, that Bro. Thomas was not here at the debate, having all confidence in Bro. G.'s ability, he had left everything to him, and had gone west, and was in a meeting somewhere in the west. Also, in the beginning, Bro. Thomas wanted to debate with them, but they would not hear to it.

In conclusion, we all think Bro. G. did us great injustice, but if he desires it we are ready to forgive him. What next, Bro. Tant?

FROM BRO. KIDWILL.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Please be as careful as you can in sending out the F. F. I will do all I can for your paper. I think it is the truest paper published in our ranks.

I find that when we preach the whole truth that no one from the sects ever comes forward and says: "I am satisfied with my baptism."

I wish to write much for the F. F. when I am through with my protracted work for this year.

May God bless you in the good work, and enable you soon to make the F. F. a weekly.

Yours for the truth,

BAPTISTS AND CHRISTIANS.

A friend recently requested me to give in the F. F. the principal points of difference between Baptists and Christians. I will endeavor to comply with this request in this article, without giving anything by way of proof to sustain the correctness of our position. If it should be desired that I give this evidence, I will gladly do so, if any one interested will so inform me.

1st. Baptists believe that the church was established, or set up, by John the Baptist before the death of Christ, and it is correctly called the Baptist Church.

Christians believe that the church was completed, or established, in the year A. D. 33, at the city of Jerusalem, fifty days after the death of Christ, and is correctly called the Church of God, the Church of Christ, the One Body.

2nd. Baptists believe that in entering the church or kingdom, or rather in being converted to God, the sinner is passive in God's hands, and that the Spirit of God must accompany the word to make it effective in quickening or convicting the sinner, otherwise the word is dead and ineffective, and that the word thus energized by God's Spirit leads to repentance, and then in answer to the prayer of the convicted sinner, God for Christ's sake bestows directly, saving faith, by which they are made alive, saved, or pardoned, and must then confess that God for Christ's sake has pardoned their sins, and then be baptized because of the remission of sins, to get into the Baptist church.

The order of the conditions stated stand thus: Preaching, repentance, prayer, saving faith, pardon, confession that God for Christ's sake has pardoned sins, and then baptism into the Baptist church.

The Christian believes that the sinner, by faith in Christ, is led to repent or reform his life, and to confess with his mouth the Lord Jesus, and to be baptized by Christ's authority for the remission of past sins, and that he arises from the watery grave a pardoned person, to walk in newness of life, and by these means or conditions is translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son—into the Church of God, or Church of Christ, which is the One Body.

The conditions and order stand thus: Preaching, faith, repentance, the confession of Christ, baptism for remission of sins, pardon, or salvation from past sins, a member of the One Body, the Body of Christ.

3rd. Baptists believe that when a sinner is pardoned, he is saved eternally, that he cannot apostatize and be lost, or that he cannot fall from grace.

Christians believe it is possible for a pardoned person—a Christian—to apostatize, or fall away and be lost.

There are also points of disagreement in the work and worship of the Church, but the above, I think, embraces, the information desired. It will be observed at a glance, that if they (the Baptists) are right, we (Christians) are wrong. And if Christians are right Baptists are wrong. We differ:

1. On faith and its order.
2. On repentance and its order.
3. On the confession and its order.
4. On who is a proper subject for baptism.
5. On the design of baptism and its order.
6. On how pardon is granted, and when it is done.

Now, in conclusion, I ask, can it be possible for those differing so widely on these vital issues to all be in the kingdom or church of God? Will the reader sit down and carefully compare the foregoing with the things written in the New Testament Scriptures?

J. S. D.

A FEW THINGS.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I will report my meetings in Waller county, Texas. I will first state, that there is not a brother laboring in the county; in fact, there is not a minister of God's kind in Waller or Harris counties. I held two meetings in Harris county. I will say this for the brethren in Harris county, they are sound in the faith and emphatically opposed to the progressive element headed by Bush and B. B. Sanders, who are prominent in the plan or system that had for its origin unsanctified uncommon nonsense. This may seem rather discourteous, but I will be excused when I explain that, the Lord's plan has been ignored, yes, set aside in toto, where ever they have been allowed to control the affairs of the church. I consider it an impugment of divine wisdom. I maintain that the Scriptures are sufficiently clear in the following specifications:

1st. Who should preach? The man who will preach the truth in the love of it. Does that man love the truth who will pervert it? Jesus says, if you love me you will keep my commandments. Paul says to Timothy, preach the word. Again: Take heed to thyself and the doctrine, for in so doing thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee.

I ask, does that man obey this command that inaugurates a system embracing church fairs, jug-breakings, concerts, tableaux, cake-cuttings and baby shows, for the purpose of raising means from all these sources? Said means thus raised for what purpose? To buy organs and support preachers. Now I ask did Timothy in preaching the word mention any of the above named things? Are any of them included in the doctrine to which he was to take heed, and by which he and those that heard him were to be saved?

Again: Paul said to Timothy, all Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, correction and reproof, that the man of God may be perfect thoroughly furnished unto all good works. Is preaching a good work? All answer, it is. Are any of those devices named in the Scriptures a good works? Manifestly not. Then they are evil works, and ought to be frowned down.

Paul says, if any man preach any other gospel unto you let him be accursed, even though it be an angel from heaven.

These progressives are the very men who are perverting the gospel. They may say, in reply, that these are only brought into requisition to aid. I would answer that, that which is perfect, which was perfected by its author, needs no aid of this kind. Remember we are commanded to keep the ordinances as delivered.

2. Scriptural plan for raising funds for the poor and needy and the spread of the glad tidings. When you meet together on the first day of the week lay by in store as the Lord has prospered you. And I will here say, that the Lord's plan is not a failure. Now I will say, I have preached as best I could for nineteen years, and I have opposed these innovations. But I tell you, brethren of Texas, innovations will never cease while innovators live among us. Have they not gone out from us because they are not of us?

I pray God to help me in the future as in the past. I now say with the full assurance of God's word, that I will not fellowship any preacher that belongs to the progressive element. In other words, I will fellowship those men, who teach sinners that God requires faith in Christ and true repentance and a confession of their faith, and upon the good confession baptism for the remission of past sins; and teach the brethren to meet upon the first day of the week to break bread and study God's word, to sing his praise and offer prayers, teaching one another to live faithful, and to contribute as the Lord has prospered them.

I hold that the overseers whom the Holy Spirit has set to rule over them, should know them that labor among them as preachers, and to do that, they should inquire of them, how do you stand on certain questions? and if they are all right, good will result from his labors. He may not be popular with the sects, but God will bless their labors. Stand firm, brethren. Show no quarters to the enemy in any way.

The brethren in Waller county have two congregations established, I believe, by Jones, Dabney and G. W. Harvey. They have had laboring among them Bro. Barcus, now of Dallas, with whom I had the pleasure of laboring in a meeting at Bethany, Montgomery county. He is of good report among all the brethren in all the counties where I have been. Bro. J. D. Tant has labored some in this county, also Bro. D. Pennington. The last one that preached for the congregations at Cuney Bend and Prairie Grove, was B. B. Sanders, who at the latter place had quite an ingathering, some by confession, some from the Baptists on their unscriptural baptism, and went so far as to appoint one of these Baptists elder, and said elder wanted to fasten upon their necks the law of Moses, and they would not bear it, and he showed such a spirit as demonstrates the fact, that he was incompetent to be an elder, or even a consistent Christian, and the fourth Lord's day they withdrew from him and eight others; the brethren there say that Sanders did them much harm, and they are not over it yet entirely. He went so far as to have them pledge twenty-five dollars, telling them he would insure them a meeting this summer. The brethren did not understand the trick, but payed it, I think, promptly. But they don't want any more of his preaching here nor at Cuney Bend.

Well, I held two protracted meetings, for which they remunerated me out of the Lord's treasury according to the Lord's plan. First point, one confession, three by letter, six restored. Last, two by confession—one had been a Baptist, but put on Christ in baptism. She wanted to do her duty and so I immersed her. At this point I had Bro. Tom Kreeger to my help; he is sound and well posted in the Bible. He is blind. I hope the brethren will care for him.

UPON WHAT CONDITIONS, IF ANY, MUST CHRISTIANS EXERCISE FELLOWSHIP?

At the suggestion and by the request of some of the brethren I have concluded to write upon the subject. And, first, is it a scriptural subject? Any one who believes the Bible will not doubt it. It is taught abundantly both in the Old and New Testaments.

Does the heavenly Father propose to forgive the trespasses or sins of people? And, if so, is the forgiveness conditional or unconditional? Does the Bible settle the question? If it does, then to the law and testimony. And now let us examine a few passages in the Old Testament and then in the New.

In 2 Chron. 7: 14, we have this language: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." Again: "It may be that the house of Judah will hear all the evil which I purpose to do unto them; that they may turn every man from his evil way; that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin."—Jer. 26: 3.

I have given the readers two quotations from the Old Testament; but will refer them to some portions of the law given by the heavenly Father through Moses setting forth some of the conditions upon which their sins should be forgiven; and those who feel enough interest in the subject can read them for themselves: Leviticus 4: 20, 26, 31, 35, and 5: 10, 18, 16, 18; Numbers 15: 25, 26, 28.

The above quotations are sufficient to show that forgiveness, on the part of the heavenly Father, was suspended upon compliance with conditions specified under that law.

We will now go to the New Testament and examine some passages under the same law, but new teachers. For a time, God suspended the law of Moses, and gave other conditions of pardon or forgiveness, that His servant, John the Baptist, might give the people a knowledge of salvation and prepare them for the reception of his Son, and as soon as the object of John's mission was accomplished, the suspension of the law of Moses ceased, and then that law continued in force until the Savior took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross, Col. 2: 14.

John the Baptist came to prepare people for the Lord, Luke 1: 17. He preached the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins, Mark 1: 4; and to those who submitted to his baptism, he gave a knowledge of salvation by a remission of their sins, Luke 1: 76, 77. But the Savior in his teaching told the people, "till heaven and pass, one jot, or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled," Matt. 5: 18. And in Luke 16: 16 he says: "The law and the prophets were until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it, and it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle of the law to fail." He then shows them in the next verse that they could not enter the kingdom, be married to him, until the law of Moses, to which they were then married, was taken out of the way, by being fulfilled, because that would be spiritual adultery.

The apostle Paul teaches the same thought when he says: "Know ye not brethren (for I speak to them that know the law) how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth? For the woman who hath a husband is bound by the law to her husband as long as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. So, then if while her husband liveth, she be married to another man she shall be called an adulteress; but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law; so that she is no adulteress though she be married to another man. Wherefore, (that is because of these things), my brethren ye also are become dead to the law, (the law of Moses), by the body of Christ, (that is by his body being broken on the cross), that ye should be married to another even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God," Rom. 8: 1-4. So we find the law was in force until the Savior was crucified, he then said, "It is finished."

Under that law he (the Savior) taught that the people must comply with conditions in order that the heavenly Father might forgive them. He says, "For if you forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you; but if you forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses."—Matt. 6: 14, 15.

We will now examine some passages in the Old Testament in reference to men forgiving each other, and see whether or not that is conditional. In Gen. 50: 17 is the first occurrence of the word forgive in the Bible, and there we find that Jacob instructed his sons to confess their sins to Joseph, their brother, in their evil treatment of him when they sold him into Egyptian bondage and ask his forgiveness.

In Exodus 10: 17 we find Pharaoh confessing his sins against Moses and praying to him to forgive it. But as we are not living under that dispensation or age, we will come to the New Testament. The Savior says, "Take heed to yourselves: if thy brother trespass against thee rebuke him, and if he repent forgive him. And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day and seven times in a day turn again to thee saying, I repent; thou shalt forgive him," Luke 17: 3, 4.

Does that look much like unconditional forgiveness? But some of our brethren contend that the Savior teaches unconditional forgiveness when he says: "For if you forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you: but if you forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses."—Matt. 6: 14, 15.

Brothers, are not the same conditions understood in this last quotation that are expressed in Luke 17: 3, 4? If not, then the Lord is a respecter of persons. Again, do you believe that our heavenly Father requires us to be more merciful and more forgiving to each other than He is toward us? And can you show either under the Old or New Testament dispensations where He forgives the sins of people without complying with the conditions of the law under which they live?

Believing that the above ought to be satisfactory, so that we may all believe and practice alike, we will now turn our attention to the conditions of forgiveness to the alien sinner under the reign of Christ, for a little while, and close. After Christ was crucified, buried and risen, and had staid with his disciples forty days, he ascended to heaven, and was made high priest; "for if he were on earth he should not be a priest," Heb. 8: 4. "For the priesthood being changed there is made of necessity also a change of the law," Heb. 7: 12. The same law that is to be put into the minds, and written in the hearts of people, called the law of the Spirit, Rom. 8: 2; the perfect law of liberty, James 1: 25; because it gives perfect freedom from sin, called also the royal law, James 2: 8; because it is the law of the King of kings and Lord of lords. Said law was given by the Spirit on the day of Pentecost to three thousand people, after they had heard of the death, burial, resurrection and ascension of Christ, in which facts they believed, and being pricked in their hearts by Godly sorrow, they wanted to know upon what conditions, if any, they could be saved. The Holy Spirit answered through Peter, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name (by the authority) of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit," Acts 2: 38.

Now was there any law in these facts preached by Peter? No. Were the three thousand free from sin when they asked what they must do? If they were, they did not know it, hence the law had not been written in their hearts, their understanding. After the conditions of forgiveness were given by Peter and they had complied with them, were they not free from sin? Yes. Then between the believing of the facts preached by Peter, and their freedom from sin, the law of the Spirit was given, which Paul says, made him free from sin, Rom. 8: 2; which James says is a perfect law of liberty, and which must, under the New Covenant, be written in the hearts.

I start out to preaching and tell the people that they must first be regenerated by a direct impact of God's Spirit upon their hearts, they must then repent, then believe, then confess that God for Christ's sake has forgiven their sins, then be baptized because their sins are remitted, and to get into some human organization. Is that the law of the Spirit? No. Is it written in the hearts of those that believe and practice it? Yes. Do they understand it? Yes; or else it is not written in their hearts. Does it give freedom from sin? No. Does it make Christians, children of God? If it does, then tares that the devil sows are as good seed as any. Brethren, look out.

E. HANSBROUGH.

MY SOLEMN PROTEST.

My dear brethren in Christ all over the world. I want to put myself upon record before I cross the river, which I am sure I must shortly do. My name is Christian Hostetler. I was born in the year 1805; am now 83 years old. I obeyed the gospel in 1822, and have been preaching the gospel 63 years of my life, and with all the weakness of my nature, I thank God that my brethren have never had cause to accuse me of an immoral act. I placed myself with W. Scott, Thos. and A. Campbell, J. T. Johnson, J. A. Gano, Sam'l. and J. Rogers, and a host of other great and godly men, upon the Bible and the Bible alone; the New Testament being our guide in all things pertaining to the worship of God, pledging ourselves that we would respect its silence as much as its declaration, so that nothing should ever be tolerated as connected with the religion of Christ, unless it was found plainly taught in the New Testament by apostolic precept or example; and that we would obey and observe all things therein taught.

I have stood firm upon these principles all my life, and I have never received over two hundred dollars in money for my preaching; and of this I am not complaining, for I have always had food and raiment, and have tried therewith to be content. I am now living with my daughter, in the great city of Los Angeles, California, which rolls in wealth and wickedness, pride and folly, to the gratifying of the lusts of the flesh. But this we expect of those who lay claims to nothing higher than the affairs of this world. But to those who are now claiming to be loyal to the book of God, and especially the leaders of this once happy reformation; what have they done, and what are they still doing? I charge upon them (in the fear of God, and in the love of truth and righteousness) that they have corrupted the way of the Lord in many things (and I here enter my SOLEMN PROTEST against them as I expect to answer with them before long), viz: They have driven from the house of God by the use of the organ, and other instrumental music, many of the most pious and godly men and women, that have been connected with them, and this they have done regardless of their conscientious views, their age, their piety, and the amount of money which they have expended in helping to erect these houses of worship.

They have disregarded the teachings of Christ by offending the little ones who believe in him and of the apostle Paul by wounding the weak conscience of their brethren. They have turned the worship of God into an exercise of entertainment, by the use of the organ and select choir, and thereby depriving the people of God from teaching and admonishing one another with psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, and making melody in their hearts to the Lord, as is required in the New Testament. They have set at defiance the command of Jesus Christ, by making dinners and suppers for recompense, while Jesus plainly says; Luke xiv: 12-14. "When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends nor thy brethren nor thy neighbors; lest they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee. But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind: And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee; for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just."

They have turned the house of God into a house of merchandise and revelry, by putting therein Christmas trees, fairs, feasts, jugglings, gambling over quilts, pretty girls, and many other abominable things which are too shameful to mention. These and many of like disgraceful things they have done to please the world, while they knew that it was over the protest, and the meeting of the most pious and godly men and women.

All this they have done, and are still doing, while they confess that none of these things are taught in the New Testament scriptures, and that they are not essential to the worship of God, nor to the salvation of sinners; thereby acknowledging that they do these things for the gratification of the flesh, and the pleasure of the world. And as a result of all this perverting of the law of God, I must die alone, so far as church fellowship is concerned, or must break the covenant which I have made with my God and my brethren in the days of my youth. Shall I break it? Never, NEVER. Shall I break my helper, never, I repeat NEVER. And when the hell sounds out in the city of Los Angeles, and state of California, on the first day of the week, saying to the people, assemble yourselves together, to break bread and worship God, I want to say before I die to Bro. B. F. Coulter, (who is a preacher and a very rich man), and to Bro. J. B. Jones, (whom the people have dubbed the "pastor"), and the congregation meeting on Temple street, that you have driven from you many in your city, who would love to worship with you, if you would worship as the law of the Lord requires, and let me say to the lady at the organ, that every time you set your foot on that organ in the house of God, you set your feet on the heart and tears of the most humble and best men and women in the world and perhaps that of your own father and mother, and you who are affiliating and bidding God-speed to the above charges, are guilty of trampling under your feet the tears and hearts of thousands of the true followers of Christ. Oh, can you afford (like Saul) to kick against the goads? Oh, turn like he did, weep, pray, and cry, "Lord what wilt thou have me to do?" Go to the New Testament, and he will tell you.

Now, this is my last sermon to my dear brethren; I expect to meet it and you and the Book of God at the great judgment day. So, now I bid you all adieu, patiently awaiting the summons from on high, to appear with you all at the bar of God. Your brother in the Lord,

CHRISTIAN HOSTETLER.

(All religious papers please copy.)

We publish the above protest from our aged brother, Christian Hostetler, taken from the Gospel Advocate of Nov. 14, '88, because it sets forth so clearly, so forcibly and so kindly the result of the departures of some, yes, of many of our brethren from the word of God.

He does not in his protest enumerate them all; but the same principle applies to those he does not enumerate. For instance, he does not mention missionary societies that are as palpable a departure from the word of the Lord as is instrumental music in the worship, though he mentions some of the leading brethren engaged in them; but that may be because they have engaged in and contend for instrumental music in the worship; for, when men depart from God's word in one thing, it is easy for them to depart in others.

But missionary societies are far from being the greatest, most mischievous departure from the word of the Lord. Bible Colleges in which many of our ablest brethren are engaged, but which they will not attempt to defend, are far more mischievous in their tendencies and results than are those things enumerated in Bro. H's. protest; because, as a rule, those that are educated at Bible Colleges engaged in and defend these other departures, and as Bro. Hostetler said about Bro. J. B. Jones being "dubbed the pastor," they nearly all, as soon as they are dismissed from their colleges, set themselves down on some of the old, rich congregations at stipulated salaries, push the elders aside, and call themselves pastors, elders, feeders, of the flocks; though many of them are almost beardless boys. Oh what mockery for such characters to call themselves pastors, feeders of flocks, most of whom are much older than they and know far more, practically, about christianity than they do.

I want to ask the brethren who are working in Bible Colleges, especially in Lexington, Kentucky, a few plain simple questions: Do you believe that Bible Colleges are one of the good works spoken of by Paul to Timothy, when he says the Scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God to all good works? 2 Tim. 3: 17. If you say they are classed among the good works spoken of by Paul, will you please tell us where the Scriptures so teach, either by precept or example, or necessary implication.

Paul says to the Colossians, and through them to all other Christians, "Whatever you do in word or deed, do all in the name (or by the authority) of the Lord Jesus," Col. 3: 17. Now can you show your authority for working in such institutions? If you cannot, are you not violating the law of the Lord? The Lord through his inspired apostles gives us the qualifications of elders and deacons that he wants to serve in his church. Now, if he had instituted Bible Colleges would he not have given the necessary qualifications of the president and professors? Again, would he not have told us the text books, if any, that he wanted us to use? Will you please tell the brethren when, where and by whom the first Bible College was founded?

Now, brethren, is there anything wrong in the above questions, or in my asking them? I know that I am not actuated by any bad motive in asking them. Will you please answer or give your reasons for not doing it. Brethren, will you give heed to Bro. H's. solemn protest?

E. HANSBROUGH.

THE TWO LAWS OF PARDON.

Under the last or Christian dispensation, there are but two laws of pardon, as there are but two characters to be pardoned. One of these is the alien sinner and the other the erring Christian.

I first wish to notice the law to the alien sinner. In John 6: 44-45 we have this: "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him; and I will raise him up at the last day. It is written in the prophets, and they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." This shows conclusively no man can come unto the Father unless he first hears and then learns of the Father. You will please remember the hearing and learning must be of the Father and not of men.

The commission as given by Mark says: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned,"—Mark 16: 15, 16. When we find what was to be preached, we then learn what was to be believed. So we turn to Luke and find some of the things that were to be preached: "And he said unto them, thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day. And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem," Luke 24: 46, 47. In this was mentioned repentance and remission of sins which should be preached, and he says among all nations.

Whatever the apostles preached to the aliens was to be believed and obeyed in order to the remission of sins. This preaching of repentance and remission of sins was to begin at a certain place and that place was at Jerusalem.

Let us see now if this was in keeping with what Jesus said to his apostles just before he ascended to his Father. In Acts 1: 6-8,

"When they therefore were come together they asked of him saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power. But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and in Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth."

When the Holy Ghost came upon them they were then his witnesses. And they were to first act as his witnesses at Jerusalem, according to the commission. So what he says just before his ascension and in the commission fit like joint work.

In John 6:45 we are taught we must hear and learn of the Father before coming unto him. If the gospel was to be preached it was to be heard and learned. If, then, repentance and remission of sins should be preached among all nations beginning at Jerusalem, such preaching must be heard and learned. Is repentance and remission of sins the gospel? It is not the whole gospel but a part of the gospel, and that part must be obeyed as well as any other part.

Now we are ready to see what the first apostle preached—beginning at Jerusalem. You will please read carefully the second chapter of Acts and find Peter standing up with the eleven and telling the great multitude about Jesus and when they hear it, many of them cry out to Peter and the rest of the brethren, "What shall we do?" Then Peter said unto them, "repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Thus you see this preaching repentance and remission of sins was preached at Jerusalem first according to the commission.

Not only should it begin there but should be preached among all nations, or to all the world. If a man fails to believe this, he fails to believe that part of the gospel. Paul teaches in Rom. 1:16, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." Salvation is promised to the one who believes the whole gospel—all of the items it contains. For the alien to obtain pardon from his past sins, he must believe repentance and baptism for the remission of sins. For Peter preached it that way.

All of our brethren in Tennessee preach it that way—all that I have heard—but some fail to practice it that way; therefore, when we fail to practice what we preach, we make weak our preaching. Many of our good brethren debate strongly that baptism is for the remission of sins, but will say by their acts persons get into the kingdom—believing their sins were pardoned before baptism. This seems like a contradiction, and I can't see why baptism for the remission of sins should be debated longer, if a person can get in one way as well as another. "Consistency thou art a jewel!"

The Book says: "Whoever heareth these saying of mine and doeth them is like a wise man."

THE SECOND LAW OF PARDON.
The Bible says, "One Lord, one faith, one baptism," but does not say, one repentance. Paul knew man would often sin, therefore must often come to God in repentance.

Sometimes we are asked: "If you preach baptism for the remission of sins, why don't you baptize the man who was once a Christian but sinned, and now wants to come back to the church?" Perhaps we would baptize him if God had not given a law for his case. This law is not to the alien sinner, but for the sinful sons and daughters of God. We find this law given to a man when he sinned after entering the church.

In Acts 8th chapter you find when Peter and John had come down from Jerusalem to lay their hands on those who had been baptized into Christ, Simon saw through the laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given to the persons on whom they laid their hands, and Simon seeing this, desired to give money for this power, so he might be able to give it to others by the laying on of his hands. But Peter saw it was a bad thought in Simon, a sin he had committed. Did Peter say, Simon, I preach baptism for the remission of sins, and you have committed a sin, now you must be baptized in order to be pardoned? No; Peter did not say that, but here is the law to Simon now: "Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God. Repent, therefore, of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee." Repentance and prayer are required in the second law. Whatever Peter preached to the alien sinner we must, and whatever he told the erring Christian we must, and may the Lord help us to do this.

There is no doubt in my mind about us, as a people having the right theory. I find our greatest trouble is, failing to practice what we preach. If we would carry out this divine theory in our life work doubtless people would be converted to Christ more rapidly than they are. There is one way to heaven and one way to hell. Righteousness leads to heaven, and wickedness to hell. Yours in the Lord,

F. C. BOWELL.

FROM BRO. KIDWILL.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Having just returned home from my last protracted meeting for this year, I will give your readers a brief statement of my work. I have been in protracted work most of the time since the first of June. Through my labors 116 have been "added to the church of God," by the "obedience of faith." Many of this number were from the sects, including Baptists, Methodist, Presbyterians and Catholics. Many of them had been dipped, but only two of them said, "I am satisfied with my baptism," and they presented themselves at the first of the meetings, before I had had time to present the whole truth. A man only required a short Bible talk to show one of them that she was not in the kingdom. So she demanded baptism, after making "the good confession." I find that all that is necessary to get rid of all trouble with sect baptism, is to preach the truth faithfully. Where this is done, not one, in one hundred, of those coming from the sects, will risk their baptism for a single day.

We never have to persuade any of them to be baptized as some of our brethren think; but those giving up the religion of their fathers, are in earnest, and desire to be right, and if the preacher will do his duty as God requires, they will obey the gospel, almost without an exception.

I have found many this year who had only been dipped by the sects upon the belief and confession of a falsehood; yet they had been living with us for many years, having been brought in by tenderfooted preachers. But after hearing the whole counsel of God presented many of them have demanded baptism at my hands, and they have always been accommodated. But I will here say (for the benefit of the opposer), that I have not persuaded a single one them. It is only the result of sound doctrine.

I will here present a query for the opposer to the above proceedings: If any one should present himself for baptism after hearing the gospel as preached by the apostles, has the preacher any right to ask that person any questions, only "do you believe with all the heart that Jesus Christ is the Son of God?" though said preacher may know that the person has once been dipped.

The very fact that such an one should demand baptism is clear evidence that, on hearing the gospel, and measuring their former obedience by it, they know they have not obeyed it. I would here suggest that there is as much authority in the Bible, for Baptist experience, as our brethren have for their custom of asking questions as some of them ask in order that they may decide whether those dipped by the sects may be baptized or not. The difference between such preachers and the Baptists is, the Baptists leave it to the church, but in the above case the preacher, decides the matter. This favors the "sect." But more anon.

WORK AND WAIT.—There are two things that always pay even in this not over-remunerative existence. They are working and waiting. Either is useless without the other. Both united are invincible, and inevitably triumphant. He who waits without working is simply a man yielding to sloth and despair. He who works without waiting is fitful in his strivings, and mixes results by impatience. He who works steadily and waits patiently may have a long journey before him, but at its close he will find its reward.—Selected.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There are two $100 rewards in the Messenger. One of them is for a passage of Scripture its editor cannot find—though the New Testament abounds with such passages—and the other is for a case of piles that cannot be cured by one of its advertisers.

Since the election there has been a very perceptible falling off in our receipts. Brethren, this ought not to be the case, our King is still upon the throne at the Father's right hand, wielding the scepter of righteousness, and cannot be dethroned by the united suffrage of all His opposers on earth. Then let's not cease nor slacken our efforts in the work concerning his kingdom. Let presidents be deposed, or invested with the brief authority of this political government, and let those who place their trust in this short-lived power, bemoan the defeat of the one or rejoice at the election of the other; but, by all means, let those whose "citizenship is in heaven," keep their spirits up and "toll on till the Master comes."

HARDING—MCGARY DEBATE.

It will be seen by examining the prices of our pamphlets, on 8th page, that we have changed the price of the Harding—McGary discussion from what we offered it in last issue.

Our printer made an estimate of the cost of this pamphlet and found that it could not be sold for less than 20 cents per single copy, three copies for 50 cents, seven copies for $1.50. We wanted to price it as low as possible, but failed to include one item of its cost when we offered two copies for 25 cents. However, all who have ordered it up to this time will get it at the first price we offered it.

A POOR REASON FOR DISCONTINUING.

A brother writes us that he and several others in his section are going to discontinue the F. F. because we did not publish an account of a debate that took place there, and failed to publish an account of a meeting they sent up. We really do not remember seeing either of these reports in manuscript; but we did see an account of the debate, in the Gospel Advocate. He says they are going to hunt a paper that will publish for them.

Now, if these brethren could see the amount of matter that we have to pass over for the want of space, they would certainly make more allowance for us than they do. This brother says, he has worked for the F. F. and likes it; but he can't afford to support a paper that does not publish for him.

Now, we have good reasons for suspecting that the preacher who did this preaching and debating has stirred up this complaint in that neighborhood. If we had published everything sent us we would have published a very bad report on this same preacher; and the sister who sent us this report threatened to stop the paper because we did not publish her charges against him! But we took the trouble to write him privately about the charges, so that he might have a chance to disprove them if untrue, or make amends in accordance with scriptural directions, if they were true.

Now, if he wants to antagonize brethren against the FIRM FOUNDATION, because it will not sound his praise at his bidding, he and all such brethren as he can thus influence may discontinue the paper without discouraging us very much.

There are many reports passed over by us that would be published if we had the space, and we expect to publish many more than we now do, when we begin the weekly.

We are very sorry to find any of our readers so sensitive and childish as to fall out with us because we do not always do just what they think we ought. Many seem to think, that when an article is not published it is because it is regarded as worthless; but such is by no means the case. A rummage through our rejected matter would show unpublished articles from every editor connected with the paper. A paper has to be published somewhat upon the principle of "cutting the garment according to the cloth." A. McG.

FROM BRO. J. R. W.

Dear Bro. McGary:

The F. F. grows better still; that of Nov. 15 is the best. Then it keeps reaching out for all the clear heads and true hearts. Truth makes friends as well as enemies. Still I have some criticism for one of its editors—not for what he said, but how he said it. Why say, "To ask Bob Ingersoll as either," when any respectable alien or well-meaning worldlying would have made the point as clear, though not so strong, so offensive?

A common fault with editors—generally the older they grow the worse—is, to answer queries too briefly, with their own convictions, rather than by the proofs that produced them. It is easier to say, "I believe," "I think," or, "such is my opinion," than to show by proof how and why. So beware.

J. R. W.
Regency, Texas, Nov. 19, '88.

We don't know for whom Bro.

"Jim" made this snug "shoe;" but we do know that it fits us in some places, very snugly; hence we intend to "wear it" some, even if it does rub our bunions.

However, we come back at him about his Bob Ingersoll-criticism. He says, "Why say 'to ask Bob Ingersoll as either,' when any respectable alien or well-meaning worldlying would have made the point as clear, though not so strong, so offensive."

We do not remember who used this language, and that does not matter now. We should all desire to make our points both "clear" and "strong"—yes, as strong "as you can"! The times demand this. And we do not think any one who desires light will object to strong points. Men who know they are on shaky positions do not like for strong points to be thrust against them; but let them move upon the "rock foundation," where all is strong, where there is nothing rickety or shakily to make them scringe. Then they can stand strong points. As an example, giving us the authority to make these strong points by running them out so remotely as to take in Bob Ingersoll, we quote James 2: 19: "Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils believe and tremble." But we thank Bro. Jim, and hope he will thus favor us often. A. McG.

PLEASE NOTE THIS.

We have on our list some who are far behind and they seem to pay no attention to our efforts to straighten up our books. Those who have written us that they will pay, and those who have written that they are not able to pay, are not referred to in this. But we aim this for that class who seem indifferent to all of our appeals.

Now, brethren, if you did not want the paper why did you not so inform us, a year ago, when we requested you to do so? We told you then, that you could stop the paper without paying the arrearage, if you felt disposed to act that way. Some took advantage of this offer and stopped the paper. Others, more honorable, paid up and stopped it. But others still linger on our list who do nothing and say nothing. Of course we would like to retain all honorable readers we can, and doubt not that there are many such among those to whom this is written.

But, brethren, you must do something by the first of January, 1889. Let those who have written us that they are not able to pay write again, if they want the paper, and we will arrange them on the list so they will not be bothered. Let those who can pay but have not paid, do so immediately. Let those who are not able to pay now, but who will when they can, say so. Let those who have been reading the paper, but who do not intend to pay for it, show of what sort they are, without further delay. We have heard from a few of these already, but only a few, we are glad to say. One infidel wrote us that he did not believe the Bible. He said he had compared the FIRM FOUNDATION with the Bible doctrine and found that the F. F. was contending for that doctrine, strictly. He said if he believed the Bible he would be a strong FIRM FOUNDATION man. He said the paper had been going to him several months, and if it was not paid for to let him know and he would remit immediately. So with his infidelity, he is more honorable than some claiming to be Christians who have been reading the paper.

We have not written this to offend any one, or any class, but to stir up the indifferent to a performance of their duty, among whom, doubtless, are many good brethren and sisters, who are strong friends to the paper. When you write, please try to send a new name with your own subscription. Fraternally,

MCGARY & HANSBROUGH.

FROM BRO. BRINDLE.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Although I am not a subscriber to the F. F., it falls under my observation occasionally, and it gives me great pain to say, you publish many pieces that are very uncalled-for, and some things, to my mind, very absurd, if the writer means what he says every time, and I presume he does.

I notice a piece in your paper of Nov. 15, '88, over the name of W. P. Richardson, to which I wish to call your special attention. In this piece he speaks of the Great Physician and the prescription for sin. He says, faith, repentance, confession and baptism are the constituents of that prescription. In that we agree; but in analyzing this prescription he says: "Faith and repentance are the preventives and have nothing to do with past sins." In this we differ. Of course faith and repentance do have something to do with "past sins". It has a great deal to do with it. So much that there is no pardon without it. And I am surprised (?) at you for putting such a statement in your paper, the F. F. (?)

I will say, just here, that there is nothing more clearly taught in God's word than, that faith and repentance are conditions of pardon from "past sins," and if so, they certainly have something to do with "past sins." Then your statement is not true. I say your statement, because you are responsible for what you publish, if you fail to correct it. Is not that so?

Let us see what the word of the Lord says about it. Paul, an inspired apostle, says: "Without faith it is impossible to please Him" (God).—Heb. 11: 6. And Peter speaking as the Spirit gave him utterance, told the enquiring sinners on the day of Pentecost to "Repent and be baptized for the remission of sins."—Acts 2: 38. Of course he had reference to past sins, for he would hardly pardon sins that had not been committed. Then we see faith and repentance had something to do with past sins in those days, and it has yet, too.

I want you to publish this letter and make such comments on it as you wish.

Yours for the truth,
D. A. BRINDLE.
Clemmonsville, N. C.

It is a rule with us to publish any fair criticism of anything that appears in the columns of the paper. To act upon any other principle would be worse than sectarianism. It matters not with us who criticises or who is criticised, so the criticism is fair, we welcome it for truth's sake and give it publicity.

We admire Bro. Richardson very much. When we first read this brother's criticism, we did not think it fair; but upon a re-examination of Bro. R's. article, we find it is, and that Bro. "Billy" indulged in some speculation along here that led him far from "the truth as it is in Jesus."

We, too, stand corrected by Bro. Brindle, for not reading Bro. R's. article more critically than we did. But when that issue of the paper was published we had just returned to the office, and the press of other duties upon us at that particular time, drew our usual attention from the paper. But we hope to be so benefited by this criticism that we will not be so careless in the future.

We are glad to know that the F. F. is ever viewed by "a critic's eye." Even if an enemy should set us straight we should thank him—and, brethren, many enemies in the ranks of the denominations are reading the FIRM FOUNDATION. We frequently receive letters informing us of the obedience of some sectarian who has been led to the light by the F. F. Then let's be very particular to "speak as the oracles of God."

It is quite manifest from the very significant interrogation points, that Bro. Brindle used in writing this article, that he was moved to write by the spirit of sarcasm as well as that of criticism; but we will try to profit from his effort, none the less.

A. MCG.

Another able, pious and efficient preacher is side-tracked. Bro. Dr. W. L. Harrison, one of our very best evangelists, late of McGregor, has been compelled to partially give up his evangelistic labors for lack of support. He has moved to Troy, and will compound medicine a portion of his time to aid in supporting his family. The cause can not afford to lose such efficient preachers as Dr. Harrison. A little more general liberality on the part of Christians over the state, who would put their means in the hands of the business committee at Dallas, would keep all such workers in the field. We must aim to effect this at the earliest possible moment. To see an able expounder of Bible truth tied down to compounding cathartics and other medicinal preparations is not to be thought of. Dr. Harrison's address for the present will be Troy, Bell Co.—Christian Courier.

The New Testament gives a record of the evangelization of several "pious and efficient preachers." One of these preachers in enumerating some of his trials says: "Of the Jews, five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by my own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness." But none of these things moved him on to the "side-track."

This same apostle said of the common lot of all the apostles: "Even unto this present hour we both hunger and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwelling place; and labor, working with our own hands: being reviled, we bless; being persecuted we suffer it: being defamed, we entreat: we are made as the filth and offscouring of all things unto this day."

Can Bro. Harrison and others who are losing their first love and casting wishful and wooing glances at the young harlot at Dallas, relate a sadder experience than Paul's? If he cannot he ought not to be on the "side-track" waiting for the "filthy lucre" of the "business committee of Dallas," but ought to return to the apostolic track and "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

The power of this business committee which is mangling the consciences of so many brethren beneath its "expedient" wheels, and side-tracking others, to wait for the power of the business committee's "filthy lucre" to start them around its circuits, could not have side-tracked Paul or his faithful co-laborers. When John Mark turned back and refused to go with Paul and Barnabas to the work, he might have been trapped by such a committee; and Demas would, doubtless, have rushed into its protecting embraces. But in this money-loving age they succumb to its overtures by scores. God grant that all such sordid souls may go out from among us quickly. But our earnest prayer is, that the promise and hope of the eternal inheritance, may save the faithful preachers from all such mercenary contaminations. A. MCG.

THE "MILLENNIAL DAWN."—No. 2

First, we will repeat our apology for the awkward break which has occurred in our articles of criticism under this heading: In the confusion of packing up to move back to Austin, our copy of "The Millennial Dawn" was misplaced, and we could not pursue the question in that spirit of fairness, that we designed, without having the book by us for reference. But now that the book is in hand again, we take up the question where we left off, to complete our promised work.

As before said, we read this widely-circulated little book for many pages without finding anything palpably contrary to "sound doctrine," but when we did reach its turning point, the serpent's trail was found upon almost every page—but we cannot afford to cumber our columns with even a title of the objectionable features discovered in its perusal, but shall devote our criticisms to such as appear to have the most fundamental bearing upon "the truth as it is in Jesus."

Mr. Russell has written us quite a tartish communication about our initial article. He asseverates most confidently and boldly that we cannot show anything, unsound in the "Millennial Dawn." But we advise him to restrain his temper and bide his time till we finish our effort, then will be his time. But if his materialistic steed (hobby-horse) is "champing upon the bit" too eagerly to be restrained till we conclude our criticisms of the "Dawn," then let him affirm that, "The future inheritance of the saints, Jews and Gentiles, is to be the literal land of Canaan," and proceed to argue that point in his paper, allowing us a fair division of space, and we will publish his articles in the FIRM FOUNDATION, with such replies as we think necessary, which he will then publish in his paper, till the question is amply discussed. We shall withhold our remarks upon this point till we have time to hear from Mr. Russell. But, in the meantime we will give some attention to other points. On pp. 94-95 of the "Dawn," he says:

"For evidently God has designed the permission of evil for six thousand years, and that the cleansing and restitution of all shall be accomplished during the seventh thousand."

Thus seen, the coming of Jesus as the sacrifice and ransom for sinners, was just long enough in advance of the blessing and restoring time, to allow for the selection of his "little flock" of "joint heirs." This will account to some for the apparent delay on God's part in giving the blessings promised, and provided for, in the ransom. The blessings will come in due time, as at first planned, though the price was paid longer beforehand than men would have expected—for a glorious purpose.

The Apostle informs us that Jesus has been absent from the earth—in the heavens—during all the intervening time from his ascension to the beginning of the times of restitution, or the Millennial Age—"Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things," etc. (Acts 3: 21). Since the Scriptures thus teach that the object of the Lord's second advent is the restitution of all things, and that at the time of his appearing, the nations are so far from being converted, as to be angry, (Rev. 11: 18), and in opposition, it must be admitted either that the Church will fail to accomplish her mission, and that the plan of God will be thus far frustrated, or else, as we claim, and have shown, that the conversion of the world in the present age was not expected of the Church, but that her mission has been to preach the Gospel in all the world for a witness, and to prepare herself under the divine direction for her great future work. God has not yet by any means, exhausted his power for the world's conversion. Nay more; he has not yet even attempted the world's conversion.

This may seem a strange statement to some; but let such reflect that if God has attempted such a work, he has signally failed; for, as we have seen, only a small fraction of earth's billions have ever heard of the only name whereby they must be saved, not to mention their conversion."

Just what he means by saying, "God has designed the permission of evil for six thousand years," is not as easily grasped as we would like. It seems to us to teach and attempt to dodge the consequences of the teaching, in the same sentence. The word, "permission," shades the idea with sufficient ambiguity to admit Mr. Russell turning and twisting room from the consequences necessarily involved in his statement.

If he believes that God designed the evil that has strewn anguish, tribulation and ruin with such an unrestrained hand along the track of time, as it stretches back from this day to that, "when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of men shouted for joy," why does he not say so openly and unequivocally? If God designed this evil, then He intended, projected and planned evil; for that is the meaning of "designed." But Mr. Russell does not say that God designed evil, but that He designed the permission of evil.

Who did God design should permit evil? Is a question we would like to hear him answer. Did God design that He, Himself, should permit evil? Or did He design, "intend, project or plan" that the devil would permit evil? Surely not the latter, for he knew that the devil needed no encouragement, whatever, in this direction. Upon this point we, at present, will give only a passing notice. Surely it needs no effort from us to show to any candid reader, that Mr. Russell's hidden meaning is derogatory to the character of our heavenly Father. In 1 John 3: 8 we learn that the Son of God was "manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil."

In concluding this article we have not the space to more than enumerate the points which we expect to criticise more elaborately in our next.

(1) As to the church failing to accomplish her mission, and God's plan being frustrated, we find the whole difficulty arises out of Mr. Russell's "failure" to understand that God's power for the conversion of the world is not a coercive power. His idea of God's plan, if true, would reduce man to a mere machine, to act as a steam engine, when compelled to act by the direct application of steam.

(2) When he says God has not yet even attempted the conversion of the world he places himself in radical conflict with the plain declaration of the Son of God; for He said to His chosen apostle, when He appeared to him near Damascus: "Rise and stand upon thy feet: for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness (there is Mr. R's. favorite word "witness") both of those things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee; delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom I now send thee, to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me."

Now, it would be useless for me to say that this word "turn" which occurs in this quotation, is from the same original word that is sometimes translated, "Convert;" for Mr. Russell would not think of denying it. So then, to be turned is to be converted, and to be converted is to be turned. But what becomes of Mr. Russell's statement that God has not "yet even attempted the conversion of the world"? It is very evident from what we have shown, that either Mr. Russell or Jesus Christ has made a mistake. We know that our Lord was not mistaken. Then Mr. Russell must be. Then to reason from such a false premise must necessarily lead him into confusion worse confounded.

COMPLAINTS.

There are occasional complaints about not receiving the paper regularly. I want to assure all that I do not think the fault is with us. We believe we now have our office work so systematized that none are overlooked. Please mention the matter to your Post Master, when you fail to get your paper. We do not mean by this that we do not want it mentioned to us; for we are always thankful for any information that might lead to the rectification of any mistakes in this office.

STARVED OUT.

Occasionally we read in Christian papers of preachers who have to quit preaching and go into some secular business in order to make a support. The blame for this course on their part is laid upon the brethren who "failed to support" them. They "starved him out" by withholding their money. The charge is made that Christians are illiberal, covetous and penurious, while the preacher is a whole-souled, self-sacrificing individual, who would work (supported). But as the support (money) fails to come in, the poor preacher goes into some business that will pay.

Some good brethren looking at this state of affairs have suggested as a remedy, the Missionary Society, or Mission Board. They resemble in this an unskillful physician. Their diagnosis of the case is wrong and their proposed remedy fails to reach the seat of the disease. If they will kindly accept some suggestions, I think that we may be able to find a medicine that will not only help the patient but produce a radical cure.

The disease is not confined to the membership of the church. The preacher who is "starved out" often has it, worse than those to whom he preaches. The disease is, a lack of FAITH, and the remedy is frequent doses of the Word of God.

"Faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God." I will now endeavor to show that this diagnosis is true. The preacher lacks faith. The Lord never fails in His promises. The means ordained by Him for the salvation of man, and for the support of those who do "the work of the Lord" cannot fail when used as He directs. The "work of the Lord" is to save man from his sins. Matt. 1: 21, et al. The means for his salvation, is the preaching of the gospel. 1 Cor. 1: 21; Rom. 1: 16, 17, etc. In order to have preaching we must have preachers, faithful men who will do just what they are employed to do. 2 Tim. 2: 2; Gal. 1: 10. These men need a living, a support, and the Lord has ordained that they shall have it by preaching the gospel. 1 Cor. 9: 14. But there is a failure. The preacher is not supported and he quits the field, turns his back upon the Lord, quits working for the Lord and goes to work for himself at something that pays better wages. Or will appeal to the society for aid and this institution helps to find a place, or places, that will promise a good salary.

In so doing the preacher has shown clearly and conclusively that he lacked faith. He says he wants to preach; souls are being lost daily for the lack of knowledge; the harvest is plenteous and the laborers are few. Yes, he wants to preach. But what hinders? "Oh," he says, "I can't be supported. My family will suffer. I must have some assurance that I will be paid for my services before I give my time and talent to the work." He will not believe the Lord, and has no confidence in the means ordained by Him, but he will labor for a society upon their promises.

What would you think of a man whom you had employed to work for you, should he say: "Mr. A. I have confidence in you, and I like the work, but before I can begin I'll just go around and get a few of the neighbors to agree to endorse your promise. You see I want to be sure of the money and want to see my way through."

Yes, the preacher wants to see his way to a good round salary, and then all objections will fall to the ground. To this end he works. His enquiry is "Can I be supported in such a place," or, "will two or three churches employ me to preach for them," etc.

Brethren, all such practices are the rankest sectarianism. The laborers in the vineyard of the Lord were all paid. They received what the Lord promised them. Some wanted more than was agreed upon but didn't receive it, and may be if the parable had been extended, these same men would have quit work on the plea of "starved out."

Some preachers set themselves too high. They expect too big a living. But I only intended a short article and I will simply call attention to the remedy.

If you are a preacher, working in the work of the Lord as Timothy and Paul did, then do not seek to please men, Gal. 1: 10. Declare the whole counsel of God; teach faithfully the word of truth. By so doing you show your faith in God. Be earnest, diligent and uncompromising in the work whereunto you are called. You are not working for yourself, but for the Lord. Do the work faithfully and trust the Lord for the result. You will be supported.

"Faith comes by hearing." So many faint hearted preachers are writing and talking about a "lack of support" that the members believe them to be moved by the "love of money" instead of the love of God. Quit your plans. Depend no longer on the society—it is a broken cistern that holds no water—and go to the people with God's message in your mouth. Teach them the duty of giving, they will believe it and respond to your wants. More anon.

FROM BRO. F. M. W.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough,

Enclosed you find two dollars for which send the FIRM FOUNDATION one year to Bro. J. H. Cook, Sidney, Comanche county, Texas; and as I am very desirous that the F. F. become a weekly, I send you the other dollar to apply on my account. You will find by consulting your record that you are due me the F. F. until Feb. '88, or about that time, but being aware that you were in need of as much money as you can get at present, I am willing to pay in advance, and will forward another dollar, if necessary.

Have not had time to work much for the paper, but have secured this one subscriber, and have spoken to some that are in arrears to be sure and pay up now.

I will not write for publication at present, will wait until the columns are larger and read oftener.

Please send my paper to Sipe Spring, Comanche county, Texas, as Gap has been discontinued.

Your brother in hope of eternal life.

MARRIAGE

On December 2, at the residence of the bride's mother, Bro. J. E. Macon to sister Ruth Haden. Bro. J. T. Eanes officiating.

We are well acquainted with both parties. Bro. Macon is an intelligent, pious Christian man. Sister Ruth is a modest, worthy Christian woman. We offer congratulations in the belief that each has done well; but would say that Bro. Joe is to be congratulated the more for winning such a precious jewel for his companion through life. The young couple have our best wishes for their prosperity and happiness here and hereafter.

WITH THE CHURCH AT WALKER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I see a reference in the F. F. of Nov. 15 to this congregation, and its work, in the following language:

"His (Bro. Dr. Harrison's) work in this (McGregor) region has been crippled by the re-baptizers, who have sown the seeds of their discordant, divisive, schismatic heresy in the minds of many of the brethren. They divided and ruined the church at McGregor, as I learn."

I wish to say to all who are not acquainted, personally, with these matters at McGregor, do not be too hasty in forming your conclusion. I have had the pleasure of laboring in the neighborhood of McGregor, and I labored in the field where the persons live who oppose the receiving of sects upon their unscriptural baptism. A part of the congregation once did worship at McGregor, and I say to all, without a single twinge of conscience, that I never in life saw a more perfect congregation. No political wrangles to be heard. (Bro. Durst, you would enjoy yourself at Walker). No failure to meet and worship the Lord on the first day of the week. No failure to sound out the word of God. In fact, I never expect to have the pleasure of meeting many such congregations.

Now, if the crippling of Bro. Harrison has done so much to build up truth and tear down error, then, brethren, cripple on. But I never heard a brother speak of Bro. Harrison, only with reference to his inconsistency on sect baptism, and his unhallowed union with so many worldly powers. I pray God he may yet see the error of his way, and "come out from among them and be ye separate" as saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, which all are to perish with the using after the doctrine and commandments of men.

Yours for the whole truth,

O. H. MCGAVOCK.

FROM BRO. DANNEY.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Enclosed please find postal note for two dollars for the F. F. The position of the F. F. in regard to sect baptism and the denominations, has been my position for years. I wish I could cut loose from my farm, so I could be out preaching. I would try and put the paper into every family. The Lord bless you and your good work.

Yours for the truth as it is in Jesus.

REPORT.

Dear F. F.:

My meeting at Ledbetter, Fayette county, was hindered much by rain. Three made the good confession and were baptized. We have here a noble little band and they will be glad to have those preaching brethren who "hold fast to the form of sound words" to occasionally visit them.

THE SUPPORT OF PREACHERS.

Some brethren have conceived the idea, that because we oppose the practice of hiring a preacher for a stipulated sum of money—or a certain amount of preaching for a certain amount of money, that we oppose paying a preacher for his work. This is a mistake. For this class of persons I write this article.

1. The New Testament teaches that the gospel is to be preached to the world. When Paul and Barnabas were thus engaged, they were helped on their way by the brethren by whom they were sent to the work. While engaged in the work of the Lord in Greece, Asia Minor and elsewhere, the brethren assisted them in the things needful. We learn also that the churches planted by them, "sent often" to their necessities, Phil. 4: 15, 16.

I want the brethren to note that, 1st, The Lord has ordained that they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel, 1 Cor. 9: 14. 2nd, "Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn," 1 Cor. 9: 9; 1 Tim. 5: 18. 3rd, "If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we reap your carnal things?" 1 Cor.

My dear brethren should realize that it is a binding duty upon them to supply the necessities of those who labor among them in word and doctrine. But how is it to be done? "On the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him," 1 Cor. 16: 2. Now I am free to confess that while this is the general rule to direct our contributions, yet there are times when our benevolence is to be exercised according to the emergency. If we find one suffering from cold or hunger, it is our duty, if able to do so, to promptly relieve him.

In this connection it is well to note that Paul said: "He who soweth sparingly, shall reap also sparingly, and he who who soweth bountifully, shall also reap bountifully." Again, "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly as of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver," 2 Cor. 9: 6, 7.

But how must we give? There are two ways spoken of. 1st, Contributing to be seen of men. How is this done? It may be done by public subscriptions. This is a good way to enlist those ostentatiously inclined. Although there may be a stingy heart lurking within, the love of self, and a desire for public notoriety may induce such a person to place an amount opposite his name that will gain public applause. Some of the most pensions are prompted in subscribing on a large scale, when it is for the public eye. Let me give the Savior's word concerning such persons, "They see their reward."

The other way of giving I will now refer to. It should be done in the fear of the Lord. "Thy left hand is not to know what the right hand does." Our benevolent acts should not be intended for the public eye. "Our Father who sees in secret will reward thee openly" and abundantly. It must be done with cheerfulness, under a sense of duty to God, and prompted by a burning desire for the salvation of souls. But what kind of preachers deserve our support? I would just here sound a note of warning. Beware of hirelings! "He that is an hireling and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming and leaveth the sheep and fleeth, and the wolf catcheth them and scattereth the sheep. An hireling fleeth because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep," John 10: 12, 13.

Now who is an hireling? I think it is the man who makes a profession of preaching for the money that is in it. But how can you tell who he is? He says, "I will not preach without a salary." He gives notice that he will hold protracted meetings if called to do so, and when he is called, he is careful to have understood the terms of service, and that it must be forthcoming according to the terms of the contract. I am sorry to see that a system of this kind is being inaugurated all over the country by those who have been pleading for the primitive order of things.

Again, we occasionally find a person who has gone to the other extreme, and says that a preacher should not be remunerated, but that he should work for a living. Now while it is true that every preacher should work with his own hand when not actively engaged in preaching, yet this principle would confine many efficient laborers to home duties, and limit to a narrow compass their work for the Lord.

No, dear brethren, keep your scriptural workers in the field of usefulness, and help to support them in the work of the Lord. You know not the many trials through which they must pass. The table must be supplied with wholesome food, The family must have comfortable clothing. The doctor's bill must be paid. He can, perhaps, meet all these demands by going to work on the farm or otherwise. But then you need his work in the salvation of souls. Assist him as best you can, and the Lord will bless you. I may write more on this subject.

REFORMATION.

The Bible teaches that in consequence of a certain condition of the church that reformation became a necessity. In the book of Revelations, as given by John, we have a record of the letter written to the seven churches of Asia. This letter shows that under the circumstances reformation becomes a necessity. Departure from God's word at that age of the church, was a sufficient reason for the existence of an effort to reform. Wherever and whenever that reason is found the church is placed under scriptural obligation to reform.

We will attempt to trace a somewhat unusual line of thought as it appears to be plainly marked along down the centuries of the Christian age. To prepare the mind to appreciate the investigation of the subject, we ask permission to submit the following propositions:

1. Like priest like people!
2. That which is infallible cannot be reformed.
3. That which effects a divinely approved reformation must be infallible.

The first proposition is an adage, the truth of which has never been called in question. The second proposition is self-evident. The third proposition is true on the ground that a stream cannot rise higher than its fountain. That reformation produced by that which is less than infallible, is less than a thorough reformation, and cannot have the support of divine approval.

We will now appeal to ecclesiastical annals, and from this source determine whether there was a reason for an effort at reform, and whether the means of reformation were in the professed followers of Christ. During the first three centuries there were many divisions of minor importance, but not until the first half of the fourth century, did these evils assume frightful proportions. In obedience to the call of emperor Constantine a religious convention met in the city of Nice A. D. 325, the purpose of which was to settle certain religious disputes. Arius and Alexander were the chieftains of the contending parties.

Athanasius, Alexander's chief assistant, was quite bold, and asserted that, "Heretics were not to be received though they made use of the very expressions of orthodoxy itself."—Jones' Church History, p. 132. The historian in commenting on this statement of Athanasius, says: "The Scriptures were no longer the standard of Christian faith. What was orthodox and what was heterodox was, from henceforward to be determined by the decisions of fathers and councils."

It appears from this testimony that these leaders of the people had no more use for the word of God—they had departed from it. After the death of emperor Valentinian, A. D. 375, the Arians, through the sympathy of the emperor Valens gained an advantage over the opposite party. Valens called a council of Arian bishops. The decision of this council became the universal church law, and the only source of appeal, and so supplanted the word of God by the decision of a council. See Jones' Church History, p. 149.

Some one may ask, Were there not some professed Christians independent of these leading parties, who were yet true to the Scriptures? Were there not some Baptists distinct from these two leading parties? The first Baptists known to history's page were NOT distinct from these old parties. Benedict in his "History of All Religions," p. 198, says: "A Baptist may be a Calvinist or Arminian, a Trinitarian or Unitarian, a Universalist or Swedenborgian."

So much to prove that the necessity for reformation existed. From the days of the first Pope to the close of the eighteenth century, reformation of the true standard, (under existing circumstances) was an impossibility. This may be somewhat a startling proposition, but the following arguments will only serve to make it more so.

For about twelve hundred years the religious world was divided into Pope and anti-pope parties. Upon these two parties depended all the chances of reformation. We will examine these two parties separately. It was not possible for the Pope to reform. Why not? Because the claim of the Pope made it impossible. But why did his claim make it impossible? I call attention to my second proposition. That which is infallible cannot reform, or be reformed. The Pope claimed and still claims to be infallible. If the Pope of the tenth century had attempted to reform his church, the attempt would have been a denial of the infallibility of the Pope who preceded him, and to have done this would have been a denial of his own claim to infallibility.

Take the claim of infallibility away from the Pope, which must be done before the question of reformation can possibly be entertained by him, do this and the Roman Catholic church, instead of being reformed, dies under the excruciating pain of preparation.

If infallibility cannot be reformed, the Pope cannot be reformed, (without the loss of his claim), and if the Pope cannot be reformed, neither can his church, because the church is not allowed to differ from the Pope.

We have seen, in the first place, that reformation of the church became necessary; in the second place, that in consequence of false claims it was not in the power of Roman Catholicism to effect a reformation. As the last resort, our attention is turned in the direction of Protestantism. Had it the power to effect a reformation? I answer, that it did not. It failed at exactly the same point where Catholicism failed. The claim of infallibility was as much a feature of Protestantism as it was of Catholicism. It is true that the Protestants were without a Pope, but they had (and still have) a class of clergymen who claimed to be called, sent, and qualified to preach. They claimed to be called of God, sent of God, and qualified of God. This was and is the claim of all the Protestant clergy—the claim of all the preachers, Baptists as well as pedobaptists.

The apostle Peter claimed to be called, sent and qualified of God; he claimed neither more nor less than this. The clergy claim to be equal to Peter in the call and the Pope also claimed to be equal to Peter. The Pope and the clergy both claiming to be equal to Peter are equal to each other. The clergy cannot (consistently) entertain the idea of reformation without denying that those of their race who have preceded them were called, as they claim to have been called. If God called them, the call is infallible; if he qualified them, the qualification is infallible, and there is as much claim of infallibility for the clergy as for the Pope. The Pope made a direct claim to infallibility. The clergy made a claim which involved the claim of infallibility. Since infallibility can not be reformed for the reason that cannot consistently entertain the question of reformation, it was impossible for either the Pope or the clergy to reform. It being impossible for them to reform, it was also impossible for the churches under them to reform.

In the beginning of the nineteenth century there was one bold enough to deny the claims of both Pope and clergy, and also to deny the infallibility of all men who have lived since the apostles. Among whom this denial found acceptance was also found the friends of reformation. These friends of reformation could consistently enter upon the work, and they might succeed, provided they were in possession of the means to effect the end.

A perfect church is the model of divine approval. Reformation is the work of bringing the imperfect up to the divine standard. The rule by which this work is to be done must be perfect. If an imperfect rule can effect this end, a perfect rule can effect no more than this, and we would be forced to the absurd conclusion that the imperfect is equal to the perfect. When the church is perfect in faith and practice it needs no changing. What will furnish to the church, perfect faith and perfect practice? The Bible alone will "perfect and thoroughly furnish." The Bible is all the infallibility this world contains. Anything added to it is but an addition of the fallible to the infallible.

As a drop of poison added to a cup of pure water renders the whole less than pure, so fallibility added to infallibility renders the compound less than infallibility. The "sanctified common sense" of this age, and all others, is less than perfect. If added to the perfect, the whole becomes less than perfect. Reformation effected by this compound rule is less than perfect, because it partakes of the nature of its cause. Those who add "sanctified common sense" to the Bible, render themselves powerless to produce Bible reformation.

The infallibility of popery made reformation impossible. The peculiar call claimed by sectarian clergymen made it impossible for them to reform, and now "sanctified common sense" added to the Bible is supplanting the pure word of God, and hindering the cause of scriptural reformation.

In conclusion, I add my bill of complaint. "Sanctified common sense" does not furnish genuine faith, for the Bible does that. It does not furnish genuine practice, the Bible does that. It does not furnish these because they are not in it. Genuine faith and practice are the compounds of genuine religion. Therefore "sanctified common sense" has no genuine religion in it. Like a fish, it never gets its growth, because it aspires to the dimensions of no particular standard. Its growth this year does not indicate its proportions for the next; it is "ever learning, and never comes to a knowledge of the truth." Sometimes it dresses itself in robes like holy costume, and sings: "All hail the power of Jesus' name."

The plant was first discovered about the beginning of the fourth century, for about two hundred years it bloomed and bedded and produced a fruit of popish sweetness. Unlike the tree of life, it bore more than twelve manner of fruits and its leaves were for the poisoning of the nations.

Among the latest records we have an account of an old man who has spent the better part of his life in defense of the truth, who must now soon go to his reward and into the presence of the Judge of all men, with these words upon his lips: "The Bible alone has killed many churches." So ends my complaint for the present. Is "sanctified common sense" from heaven or is it from amongst men?

FROM BRO. ROBERTS.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have by a little effort obtained a few names for your most valuable paper. It is the best paper published by our brethren—it is sound on everything.

Bro. McGary I make no charges for what I have done, for I believe it is the duty of every disciple of Christ to do all he can to advance this truly sound paper.

Truly yours in the faith,
L. F. ROBERTS.

FROM BRO. CAMPBELL.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Seeing nothing in the F. F. from this section of country, I will send you a few lines. The brethren that are taking the F. F. here are well pleased with it.

We have no regular preacher at Joshua. The church meets every Lord's day to study the word and partake of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of our Lord. We have sectism preached here nearly every Lord's day, a perverted gospel, another gospel, and sometimes we hear them preach three facts for the gospel, namely, the death, burial and resurrection of Christ. I believe they generally believe and preach this much of the gospel, and I believe further, that if a belief in these three facts will save people, that a large majority of the religious world is safe; for they claim that faith alone saves, and that faith, is not of themselves, it is the gift of God. They know nothing of the obedience of faith, nor will they have it that their faith comes by hearing.

If faith in a perverted gospel will save people from their sins and bring them into a state of justification, why was Paul so particular to warn the churches of Galatia against such things? See 1st chapter of Gal.

But some of our brethren will come around and convince these persons that they are in "Babylon," and then receive them with their perverted faith in a perverted gospel, baptism and all. Well, I always wanted to ask: "My brother, what about the confession?" Acts 8:37, Rom. 10:10. "Why don't you take their confession?" "Oh," they say, "it would be out of the regular order of things to take their confession after they have been baptized."

Yes, and I am satisfied that this whole business is out of the regular order when compared with the divine standard, and I never have found one of them able to explain this question satisfactorily to themselves. Why not give it up then? Preach and practice nothing, but what you can give a thus saith the Lord for, not thus saith "our plea"? To ask what the word of God teaches is the only infallibly safe course to pursue. Then we would all speak the same thing, then we would all be perfectly joined together in the same mind and judgment," 1 Cor. 1:10.

Well, Bro. Mc., the Presiding Elder, Bro. Bush, has not been around to see us yet, and if he has appointed a circuit rider for this circuit, I have not heard of it. We have a preacher down here in the timber that is a Bush-whacker, and I guess Bro. Bush is a little shy of this country; and further, I suppose he thinks that the influence of that true and tried old soldier of the cross, Bro. L. P. Phillips, would still be in the way of his new gospel.

Right, Bro. Bush, the disciples here are made of good material, and it would take you a long time to shake their faith in the divine order of things, and turn them from the simplicity of the gospel, and I suppose would cost you more trouble and vexation than it would be worth in the end. For we are not very wealthy here, and I think that is the central star of all your machinery. We are at peace among ourselves and prefer to remain so.

Any brother that is satisfied with preaching the old Jerusalem gospel will always receive a hearty welcome here at Joshua.

Success to the F. F.! Go on, brethren! our course is a grand one! For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith, but if any man draw back my soul shall have no pleasure in him, etc. Your brother in Christ,

G. M. CAMPBELL.

THE LORD'S DAY MEETINGS.

It is generally believed by Christians that the Lord's day, the first day of the week, is the stated day for assembling together. Heb. 10:25; 1 Cor. 16:1-3; Acts 20:7. What is the purpose of such assembly? Why do you, my brother, or sister, go to the meeting house on that day? The popular answer is, "to hear a good sermon."

My observation leads me to the conclusion that sermonizing has usurped the place of worship. Very few worship the Lord on Lord's day. They are entertained and pass the hour away pleasantly, but are not profited. Brethren and sisters let us study this subject closely. Spiritual vitality is at a low ebb because of the neglect of this item of worship. Let us have more worship on Lord's days and less preaching.

BRIEFS.

Bro. McGary's address is now changed to Austin, Texas, Box 38.

In ordering the paper or tracts write your name plainly, and give postoffice, county and state.

We do not answer questions unless the enquirers send us in their true names. We have thrown several into the waste basket on that account.

In writing for publication, write only on one side of your paper, write plainly, and be sure to send us your name, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

If you do not receive your F. F. regularly, please notify us as soon as you can, and let us know what numbers you have missed. A postal will be sufficient, if plainly written.

READ THIS!—Your attention is called to the notice, "Attention, Readers!" on first and fourth pages, and, hereafter, you are requested to make all money orders payable to A. MCGARY, Austin, Texas, and send all letters, and articles for publication, to A. MCGARY, Box 38, Austin, Texas. Please do not forget this.
