But you say, have they not obeyed that form of doctrine? They have obeyed just like those in the days of Paul, who had a form of godliness denying the power thereof; but when he wrote to Timothy, he said, from such turn away. II Tim. ii: 5. Now, in connection with the above remarks, let me ask a few questions for our consideration:

1. Does the Bible teach that faith alone is a wholesome doctrine, full of comfort, and that man is justified by faith alone? And that baptism is a non-essential? And where a man is baptized to get into the Methodist Church he is a Christian? If the Bible teaches this, may we not, as evangelists, teach the same? For we could get many more to be Christians (?) by traveling that way. But if the Bible does not teach such, will it not condemn us for recognizing such?

2. Does the Bible teach that a man must go to the mourner's bench and repent till God, in some mysterious way, gives him faith, and forgives his sins? And must he be baptized because his sins are forgiven? If the Bible teaches such, may we not teach the same?—and also practice the mourning bench system of getting religion? For we could excite many to be Christians (?) that way. But if the Bible does not teach such, does not the condemnation of God and heaven rest upon us for recognizing such as being true, by our practice, in receiving them into our fellowship, who have come through that way without commanding them to be baptized into the name of Christ, or obey from the heart that form of doctrine for the remission of sins?

Now, the position I have taken is correct, or it is not correct. If it is correct, may we not accept it? If not, will my brethren please be so kind as to give chapter and verse, and show wherein it is not correct. Any information on the subject will be gladly received; for I want to test the Bible, nothing more nor less.

Now, I would add, in conclusion, I have been reading the Apostolic Guide and Christian Messenger for some time. My name has often appeared upon the pages of both papers. I not only like the papers, but also like the editors, for the kindness they have always shown to me. I have many friends reading those two papers who have known my teaching in times past. And as I would like for those friends to know my present position, I ask the editors of those two papers to please be so kind as to copy this letter in full from the FIRM FOUNDATION, that my friends may know my present position on this subject. Though it is not necessary for me to do more than ask these brethren to do this, for I have too much confidence in Bro. Allen and Bro. Burnett to think they would do less; but I shall wait and see. Truly,

RE-BAPTIZING.

BRO. MCGARY: I would like to say a few words on re-baptizing if permitted, which, I think, will give some light. There are just three positions to occupy, and only three: 1. That all who come to us should be baptized again. 2. No one who has been immersed should be re-immersed. 3. (a) Such as did not obey in good faith, (b) or with the proper understanding, (c) or have the necessary antecedents, should be re-baptized. While those who (d) understood that it was a divine command, (e) and were in earnest, (f) and had the necessary antecedents are properly baptized. There is no way of ascertaining in all cases, who have, or have not done this. "No man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man that is in him." Either of these failures would render baptism invalid, whether administered by us or any one else. Some, doubtless, have believed in the need of baptism, before they are baptized, but failed to understand how it is performed. (Wit. Methodist Dis.) Address to the candidate, page 148-9: "Well beloved, who have come hither desiring to receive holy baptism, ye have heard how the congregation hath prayed that our Lord Jesus Christ would vouchsafe to receive you and bless you, to release you of your sins, to give you the kingdom of Heaven. (On baptism of adults.) Then shall the minister say, Oh, merciful God, grant that the old Adam in these persons may be so buried, that the new man may be raised up in them." After all this talk and prayer, is it reasonable to see that baptism is in order to the remission of past sins? Doubtless, many are too blind to see it, but I have heard many say they understood it was in order to remission of sins, and as some do, we can only take their word for it, and if they deceive themselves, we are not able to help it. I do not think we should teach them that it makes no difference about understanding the import of it, but we must not judge. To believe that God has pardoned already, may not impair the validity of their baptism, provided they are in earnest, and do the thing commanded, for not the hearers of the law, but the doers shall be blessed. I will not say that he who fails to understand what baptism is, and does something else, will receive the promise, nor he who fails to believe, repent and confess previous to baptism will. But that it is possible for a man to do all this, without our taking the confession and baptizing him is quite evident to my mind, though I do think it is not often done. When the facts are clearly set before the people, and one comes forward and says he has complied with the stated terms and desires to unite with us, what are we to do with him? Judge him and say you have not complied? I expect I re-baptize as many as any one, and still I do not say to any, they must or must not. I tell them what Jesus says, and if they say they have complied, I have no way of finding out the reverse.

You say in your reply to Bro. Allen, that you do not hold that it is necessary for the administrator to believe that baptism is for the remission of sins. (March No., p. 3, 1 col.) I see no need of you and Bro. A. cutting at each other further. May be Bro. A. would not require a man to believe that baptism is in order to remission of sins, but if one of our preachers were to preach it, Bro. A. would doubtless send for a Priscilla and Aquilla to teach said preacher more perfectly. If it is necessary to so teach it, it is necessary to so believe, for how shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed, and how shall they believe in Him, of whom they have not heard? If it is necessary to teach it right, it is also necessary to believe it right. But who is to do the judging, who? I have baptized some whom some of our preachers refused, and received some whom others would reject. I judge no man's conscience. I only desire to present the truth, and let every man do his own judging. To believe on Christ is something more than to believe the facts of the Gospel. It is said Abraham staggered not at the promise of God, and therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness, and it was not written for his sake alone that it was imputed to him, but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on Him who raised up our Lord Jesus from the dead. The Gospel is composed of three items, viz: facts, commands and promises. The facts are to be believed, the commands to be obeyed, the promises to be believed and received. To believe the facts, is not enough, we are to believe the promises as well, and that is what gives the supremacy to Abraham's faith, he staggered not at God's promises. (Rom. iv: 20.) And again, in order to come to God, we must believe all things, that He is; and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. So the Gospel of Christ reveals the righteousness of God from faith (in facts) to faith (in promises.) (Rom. iv: 17.)

J. L. CASTLEMAN.

NOT A CLEAR ANSWER.

In the Apostolic Guide of March 26, a Baptist put four questions to Bro. Allen. I here copy the second one and Bro. Allen's reply: "Your leaders and teachers held (at least some of them) that baptism is all that is necessary, regardless of the design by the person. That is to say, it answers the same purpose in procuring the remission of sins, whether administered by a Baptist or Reformer. It is not necessary to understand just why a person is baptized, just so it is done. And consequently a number of Baptist churches would be received into full fellowship in your church without re-baptism." To which Bro. Allen replied as follows: "It is necessary to understand why one is baptized. He must understand that it is done to honor and obey the Savior. Beyond that, the Bible specifies nothing as to its purpose that must be understood by the baptized. When Peter said: 'Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins,' he expressed the purpose of God to bestow the blessing of remission, and not a purpose that must be in the mind of the applicant for baptism. The promise is that the penitent believer shall receive remission of sins when baptized, and not a word about the qualification of the administrator or the purpose of the baptized, except to obey the Savior. And when Jesus has made the validity of baptism to depend on no such condition, we dare not."

The writer of this has been a reader of Bro. Allen's productions ever since he started the "Old Path Guide," and has oftentimes remarked that he is one of the clearest and most logical writers we have. I still think so, when on the side of truth and consistency. His logic is generally faultless. But I am free to admit that what I have recently seen from his pen upon the question involved in the foregoing, portrays a weakness always manifest, even when great and strong minds oppose truth. To my mind, our logical brother fails to meet the issue presented by this querist, and leaves him free, yea, emboldened, to press the question to every one occupying Bro. Allen's position. Please to notice that Bro. Allen says: "It is necessary to understand why one is baptized." Now, we are agreed here. But why is it necessary? Bro. Allen says: "He must understand that it is done to honor and obey the Savior." I think a better answer is, because God has commanded it to be done "For the remission of sins." My dear readers, which of the two answers is the Scriptural one? Is there a single statement to the effect that it must be done "to honor and obey the Savior?" Will Bro. Allen please give it? That it is commanded to be done "for the remission of sins" is not denied.

Now, I have this idea: The command to be baptized is not obeyed so much to honor and obey the Savior, as it is to secure for the faithful, penitent, confessing sinner, through the Christ, the rich and priceless boon of pardon, and adoption into the household of faith. Thus Christ is not only honored as a King and Savior, but the sin-polluted subject is released from the thralldom of sin, and elevated to the position of a son—an heir—a citizen of Christ's Kingdom, through an understanding obedience to His will.

But Bro. Allen says: "When Peter said: 'Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Christ for the remission of sins,' he expressed the purpose of God to bestow the blessing of remission, and not a purpose that must be in the mind of the applicant for baptism."

Now, Bro. Allen, let us look at this a little from your own standpoint:

Why did Peter express this purpose of God, if it was not intended as an inducement to the sinner to seek the promised blessing? And why would the sinner be baptized, upon the hypothesis that he did not understand it to be a condition to secure the promised blessing?

In my humble judgment, my good brother, when you answer these questions from your standpoint, your logic will limp wonderfully again. But, seriously, if Peter simply expressed the purpose of God to bestow the blessing of remission, and this purpose is not necessary to be in the mind of the applicant for baptism, why was that purpose of God expressed at all? Is not the grand object to be accomplished so closely connected with the conditions to be obeyed, that one cannot render acceptable obedience in ignorance of it?

To illustrate; If John's mother commands him to go to the spring and get a bucket of water for culinary purposes, and he goes and brings to the house and pours it into the chicken trough, has he obeyed the command? Why not? He did not have in his mind the purpose in view. If he did, he disobeyed the command.

Then the issue is this: Is a person scripturally baptized who does not understand the purpose or object to be accomplished by it?

Who will affirm? Let us come up to the real issue and let all see who has apostatized from the Faith of Christ. J. S. D.

MADISONVILLE, TEXAS.

Dear Brethren and Readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION: While I believe it is safe and proper to "earnestly contend for every item of faith once for all delivered to the Saints," and when I call to mind the language of Jesus, in Matt. 15: 13, where he says: "Every plant which my Heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up," and if the blind guides—old false teachers—in the days of the Saviour had "planted" many things which the Heavenly Father had not authorized or commanded, and Jesus denounced them, and said that His heav-only Father would uproot and overturn all their false doctrines, may we not safely conclude that all false doctrines and unscriptural "plants," which the same class of men, false teachers, have brought in or introduced, will be treated in the same manner? It might be well for us to mention some of these "plants." The use of the organ in the worship is one. "Missionary societies" is another. "State meetings" is another. "State solicitor" is another. The "modern pastor," another. Church festivals to raise money for the unscriptural pastor, and last, but not least by any means, "sect baptism." We have mentioned seven "plants" which the Father, Jesus Christ, the Holy Spirit, nor the Apostles ever authorized. Where do we find any authority in the law of the Spirit of life for any of those modern plants? I can safely say we have none.

For fear the brethren might not understand me in reference to the last named "plant," viz—"sect baptism," I will endeavor to render myself plainer. What I mean by "sect baptism," is the practice of receiving persons from the different sects without a strict compliance with the law of the Lord, without obeying from the heart, the form of doctrine which was delivered by the inspired Apostles. If this is true, is it not a great sin? Since we have learned the one way, the way the truth and the life, that there is one Lord, the Lord Jesus, the Christ, the one faith, that system of righteousness or faith once delivered to the Saints, the one baptism with its form and characteristics, and the one God and Father, who is above all and through all and in you all. I say since we have learned these precious truths, is it not a great sin for us to introduce and practice and defend a thing for which we have not a vestige of authority in the word of God? It evidently is. Sect baptism differs from the "one baptism," ordained by the Lord Jesus Christ. If it differs in any sense it is another, and not the "one baptism." The truth of the business is, brethren, Baptist baptism is one of those "plants" which the Lord did not ordain, and it behooves us to uproot the old bush and get rid of all of its evil results. Yes drive out all innovations, and contend for the whole truth and nothing but the truth and for the Lord's sake brethren practice what you preach.

I will close with a quotation from the Apostle Paul. "Now I beseech you brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned and avoid them." Romans 16: 17. Remember brethren, the Apostle has reference to those who "cause divisions" and by introducing and defending those innovations, you are the cause of divisions.

Yours for the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

A. J. McCARTY.

HEAVEN GRADED.

Heaven will have different grades (degrees) of happiness.

The degree which each one will enjoy will be proportioned to the fidelity of his obedience. Read Luke xix, 16-19, which will establish the proposition.

Brother A. J. Prichard says: "From the teaching of our Lord in the parable of the talents (Matt., xxv; Gal., vi), and some other scriptural statements, it appears that there will be degrees in the enjoyment of heaven. What a man soweth, that will he reap; if he sows little, he will reap little; if much, he will reap much. I see no way to escape this conclusion. The man to whom Christ gave five talents received five more; the man of two received two more. He gives to every man according to ability. They improved and enjoyed according to ability. Each one enjoyed according to his capacity. God gives us stocks, the capital, but requires us to pay the interest by improvement. Then he would give to every man according to his works. As illustrated, the two-talented man shall have four, the five-talented man shall have ten, etc., enjoyments."

BRO. MCGARY: Dear Sir—I have seen a copy or two of your paper, THE FIRM FOUNDATION, and have read it very carefully, and am glad to observe that you speak right out in meeting, but are you not afraid to take a position that conflicts with many of our most learned brethren? Do you not know that you are producing trouble in Israel? (1 Kings, xviii: 17), and would it not better for the people of Zion to just let us move on in the even tenor of way, as it is so much easier to be like the sects around us, are we not all brethren any way, do not the most of us call them brothers and sisters, and do not we exchange pulpits with them, (that is the preachers?) Do you think there are many of our congregations that would allow you to preach in their houses? "Just try it if you think I am mistaken." I have occupied the same position for ten years, and have suffered much persecution on account of it, but I thank God, many are taking a stand on the Lord's side. The rank and file of the brethren are on His side of the subject, any way. It is the preachers that have got wrong mostly, and I really think it is about time that that the true Israel should make a loud call for back-slidden Israel to come out of Babylon. May the Lord prosper you in the good work. Send me your paper and I will send you the money.

Yours in Christ,

A. G. WOODS.

COLLEMAN, TEXAS, March 15, 86.

DEAR BRO. MCGARY: Since our long ride together on the railroad I have been faithful to my promise, viz: A close student of the F. F., as a result, I will say that in the main, I indorse its teaching, though it seems to me that you sometimes get off of the "Firm Foundation," and get on one not altogether as firm as the title page of your paper denotes. This is most apparent when its pages almost become stained by the combative spirit breathed by some of its scribes against other brethren. Along this line I think a great improvement could be made; also in some of our other papers. I must now say, I scattered a few copies of the F. F. among some congregations for whom I have been preaching, and a result with one of them I had to bury, by baptism, the "doubts" of three old sisters, who came to us from the sects; from ten to twenty years ago.

P. S.—Any preacher who will read and scatter the F. F. among his churches may soon expect to find himself where there is much water. Send it on.

Your Bro, in hope of life,
W. E. HAWKINS.

NASHVILLE, Ark.,—

Bro. McGary, Austin, Texas. Dear Sir:—Enclosed you will find one dollar which I send you to pay for FIRM FOUNDATION. I am pleased with the spirit and contents of the paper—with the teaching contained in its columns. I have failed as yet, to find any wrong or unscriptural sentiment in all that I have read. You may anticipate two things: 1st, opposition to the teachings on the subject of baptism; and 2nd, persecution from within. I mean those who claim to belong to the Church of the living God. The Master said: "A man's enemies shall be they of his own household." How far have some drifted from Apostolic teaching, and to what will it lead? I have been trying to teach the Scriptures for forty-two years; have been a member forty-four years; am in my sixty-fourth year, and can see a great difference now, and when I started out to fight the good fight and the present.

But I did not intend to write only a line or two, and here I am on the second sheet of paper and have not said a tithe of what is in my heart to say.

May God bless you in your efforts to direct the minds of your readers aright. I was pleased with Bro. Mathews' letter; was well acquainted with Bro. Hall, and also Bro. Fanning—have labored much with both. Knew Bros. Speer, Hapwood Scott, S. E. Jones, James Holmes, who made his home with me in Tenn. for twelve years. I also knew Bro. Oreath, one-eyed Jim Anderson, Calvin Curbe, K. L. Anderson, who is the first man I ever heard preach a pure Gospel, J. B. Ferguson, who departed from the faith, Dr. W. H. Wharton, who administered baptism to me in Nashville, Tenn., in the old Church house on Church street, also Bro. Lipscomb, Sr., was present when Davy received his diploma. Also Bro. Bantau, of your state, Bro. Kendrick, of California, his Bro. Allen, Dr. J. R. Howard, who edited the BIBLE ADVOCATE, from 1840 to the close of 1847, published at Paris, Henry City, Tenn. But you see I have filled this page and am ready for the third.

I would stop, but I have failed to name one other dead brother, who died in Austin, Texas, Dr. John R. McCall with whom I was engaged in many battles. To this list I could add many others, but will not trespass on your time or patience further. Is Bro. McCall's family living any of them? If so, please write me; I would like to see Sister Emmeretta Holman and her daughter, Sister McCall. May our kind and heavenly father strengthen you for the work before you, and may you remember the great Teacher's injunction to his chosen Apostles: "Be ye wise as serpents and as harmless as doves."

Your Brother in the faith of Christ,
J. H. VANDYCK.

N. B.—Two questions occur to me; I will ask them. 1. What is a man when he is born of the Spirit? 2. When is a man born of the Spirit? Let me caution you, be careful how you answer. You may draw my fire or sword; if you do, it will be drawn in love. There is much error with many of the teachers now on the subjects enquired about.
V.

To query (1) we answer: He is a child of God, a joint heir with Jesus Christ, a Christian.

To (2) we answer; When he is scripturally baptized. When he obeys from the heart the form of doctrine delivered by the Apostles. We have no fear of Bro. Van Dyck's "fire," in answering these questions, because if we are in error we ought to be set right, and we are confident that he will not employ any carnal "fowling piece" against us. Don't shoot, Bro. V., any way, but put us to the "sword" if we are wrong. We will mail some copies of this issue to the family of Bro. McCall, in the hope that they will give Bro. V. the information he desires relative to that family.

HE THAT IS NOT WITH ME IS AGAINST ME.

—Math. xii: 30.

On the first Lord's day in April, we attended night services at the Honey Chapel, in this city, and heard "Rev." McIntire, of the "Methodist Episcopal Church, North," and "Rev." Calvin Brooks, of the "Methodist Episcopal Church, South"—that is, the northern and southern branches of the great vine—of Methodism. We shall not undertake to explain the climatic influences and causes that brought about these two powerful branches; but one thing may be set down as well settled, and that, is that all horticulturists, who have acquainted themselves with the nature and habits of these branches, are agreed that they are real branches, and not "water-sprouts." On the occasion referred to, there seemed to be perfect harmony between these two representatives of hot and cold sections. From the way they united their efforts that night in trying to overturn a plain statement of our Lord's, if it were not for fear of appearing too "uncharitable," we would say that they both seemed to us to be representatives of a section very far south—too far for branches or main vines either to thrive.

"Rev." McIntire read John xx: 21-23. He said that the language, "Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained," did not mean that the Apostles had the authority to forgive people's sins. He said, if it did, there was no escape from the Romish idea of "Apostolic Succession." He made several good and telling points against the Romanists; and if there were any Catholics present, they, doubtless, wondered why preachers are not more "charitable than to attack other people's religion."

When "Rev." McIntire had concluded, "Rev." Brooks followed in a most argumentative way to substantiate the grounds that his northern brother had taken. If his premise (which he did not lay down clearly) be admitted, then he proved that the Apostles had no more authority than a Methodist preacher—in fact, not as much, because Methodist preachers claim to bring about the forgiveness of sins by a law that is not as much as hinted at, from Genesis to Revelation, while the Apostles never presented any law but such as Christ had enunciated while on earth. "Rev." Brooks said the pardoning power was always, in all governments, vested in the head of the government, the very highest authority, and could be exercised only by the head. He said that if God had turned this authority over to the Apostles, He would have turned everything else over to them. As we said, if his premise were correct, his conclusion would be inevitable. He argued like a man who had some "head religion," uses examples, and said, here argument, like a logjam. His hidden premise was that the Bible does not mean what it says—when it differs from Methodist doctrine.

These men said there was no other passage of Scripture that taught that the Apostles had the authority to forgive sins. They seemed to forget that Christ said to these same men: "Verily I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Math. xviii: 18. Many other passages might be quoted to enforce the Scripture that these men sought to set aside; but he or she who would not believe from these that the Apostles were clothed with this authority, would not believe it, if one hundred other passages were produced. And yet we do not claim that these chosen men were anything more than agents through which the Holy Spirit voiced the Law of God. But, as this is not the first time that "Rev." Brooks has attempted to set aside the Law of Christ, we will briefly give an account of one other time we heard him attempt this wicked project, together with a brief criticism of that unholy effort. The occasion to which we allude, was a discourse we heard him preach, some four years ago, in Madisonville, Texas, which some of our readers will doubtless remember. On this occasion he took the high ground that water baptism was not commanded in the Bible: that wherever the Scriptures alluded to baptism, it was either baptism of the Holy Ghost or baptism of light. If this were true, then the substitution of the word light or Spirit, for the word water, wherever we find water in our Bible, would be right, and would give the true sense of the Scriptures upon that point.

We will try a few passages and let Mr. Brooks see how he likes the change, for we will mail him a copy of our paper. We will first try John iii: 5: "Except a man be born of light and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God"—that takes the water out. Next, try Acts viii: 36, 38, 39: "And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain light; and the eunuch said, see, here is light; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" (38) "And he commanded the Chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the light, both Philip and the eunuch. And he baptized him." (39) "And when they were come up out of the light, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way rejoicing"—if Philip had been a Methodist preacher, and it was light instead of water, he would have rejoiced, too, at getting rid of the water—they do hate water. Now, Acts x: 47; "Can any man forbid light, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?" Try Hebrews x: 22: "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure light."

If Mr. Brooks finds that his "light" is not able to dry up the water, he will "draw near the sprinkling in full assurance of faith alone," but will always have an "evil conscience" in reference to the "washing of the body with pure water."

To cap the climax, Mr. Brooks sprinkled three babies on the same occasion that he preached that water baptism was not authorized by the Bible. He lifted his hand heavenward, and solemnly said: "By the authority of Jesus Christ," he did it. If that authority was not in the Bible, where did he get it? Here is where light is badly needed. What is to become of the religion of Christ, if such teaching continues to be popular with those who claim to love God and His word? I verily believe that the same class of preachers Paul mentions in 2 Cor. xi: 14-15, are to-day swaying the masses and "deceiving and being deceived."

A Methodist preacher will not, dare not, give to an enquirer the answer that emanated from the throne of God, but they give the "commandments and doctrines of men," which Christ has for all time pronounced "vain." If one should become convinced at one of their meeting that Jesus is the Christ, and hence had authority to forgive sins, and should rise up and ask, "men and brethren what shall I do?" Is there a Methodist preacher on the globe that would answer as did the Holy Spirit through Peter, as found in Acts ii: 38? Every one knows that there is not. Why will they not give this answer? Because they are not preaching the same gospel that Peter was preaching. Is there a Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian or any other preacher of any of the popular denomination on earth that would tell a believer whom they might find deeply penitent, as was Saul of Tarsus, when Ananias found him: "Why tarriest thou? arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins? Do they not 'quench the Spirit?" And yet we are expected to bid such teachers God-speed. Did Paul and Barnabas bid Bar-jesus God-speed? Then why should we, who claim to be of the same faith that Paul and Barnabas were, lovers and defenders of the same "doctrine that was delivered to them," be expected to bid God-speed to men who, in this land of Bibles, "pervert the same right ways of the Lord?" We have many old friends and some relatives among the Methodists, who in times past, when we were confirmed in skepticism, tried to convince us oft-times that the bible was true. And now, as we believe it with our whole heart, we in turn, ask them to believe it truly and not follow off men who teach a doctrine contrary to it, and dishonor the God they profess to love and serve. Friends I am not your enemy. "Have I become your enemy because I tell you the truth?"

A. McG.

UNINSPIRED TEACHING.

One of the associate editors of the GOSPEL ADVOCATE, warns his brethren not to "put more confidence in the water than you do in Christ." And yet, strange to say, this associate editor is himself doing the very thing that he warns others not to do. He, once went down into the water, and came up out of it. He did not then believe what Christ and the apostles said about it, because he was baptized into the Baptist Church, and every one who knows anything about Baptist methods and usages, knows that he had to say he believed that God for Christ's sake had already pardoned his sins, before the Baptists would go down into the water with him. To put more confidence in water than in Christ, is to believe that God does not care what frame of mind one goes down into it and comes up out of it, just so he is immersed while down there. That is precisely the view of this associate editor now, and we suppose it was when he was immersed. According to him, if one were baptized to celebrate the fourth of July, just so he had been told and had been induced to believe, that God had commanded it for that purpose, then it would be Christian baptism, because he had had water all over him. If this is not putting more confidence in water than in Christ, we are at a loss to know how one could do so. He says, "man's greatest danger lies in adding to or taking from the word of God." This is true; the man who says that the only thing required to be believed in the Gospel that the Apostles preached, is that Jesus is the Christ, is laboring under that "great danger," for he has "taken from the word of God." The same course of reasoning would make the eating of the "bread" and drinking of the "cup" to commemorate the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, right in the sight of God, and honoring to him, just so some false teacher had led them to believe it was instituted for that purpose—the eating and drinking of wine would "fill the bill;" and if some one should teach that whoever ate and drank must do so discerning the Lord's body, our friend would say: "You are putting more confidence in bread and wine than in Christ." Our friend in calling attention to the deliverance of the Children of Israel at the Red Sea, says "God had promised deliverance, but just when and where, they did not know, but in their obedience they reached the place, and even though they had not been cognizant of the fact, it was still true. So, all who have been immersed, because God commanded it, and honestly done this to please him, are pardoned, whether they knew baptism was 'for the remission of sins' or not." This is wisdom! Come and learn of J. T. Poe, ye ends of the earth! Peter said too much on the day of Pentecost! J. T. Poe says you need not believe what he said! At this late day we learn that they ought to have been baptized a little earlier than they were! The teachers on that occasion should have baptized them before they "gladly received Peter's words" about the design of the ordinance—so says the logic of J. T. Poe—Silversmiths are better authority than fishermen! He says: "God says, he that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved." Yes He does; but J. T. Poe says, "he that believeth a part of it, and is baptized shall be saved." This is the difference between the two doctrines. In making a parallel of passing through the Red Sea and Christian baptism, he seems to forget that when God commanded persons to go forward in baptism, He told them what it was for. If he will read the 31st Chap. of Jeremiah, with his colored specs off, he will discover that "knowing," was to be a principle of the New Covenant. The law was to be written in their hearts, but he thinks only these facts, and not the law, is to be known. Our idea is, that when the Apostles were sent to preach, they were guided by the Holy Spirit in what they taught; and that the Holy Spirit did not lead them to say things unnecessary.

Just as we are going to press, we have received the "Review," containing Bro. Pennington's letter to Bro. Kendrick, and Bro. Kendrick's reply. We presume that Bro. Pennington will reply in the same paper; if he does, he will cover all the points much better than we could, even if we had the space. But as Bro. Kendrick has somewhat involved the FIRM FOUNDATION in this reply, we will briefly notice what seems to be relied upon by him as the most salient point in it. He gives the example of the supposed dead girl, in the dissecting room, and her recovery to life and health, and the young doctor's subsequent marriage of her; and that the doctor married her under the impression that she was a poor girl; but in the course of time it turned out that "she was a millionairess." Bro. K. asks if the doctor's mistake, in supposing she was poor when he married her, would vitiate the marriage compact, or necessitate a remarriage? This is the substance of the question, which would be given in his own words but for the lack of space. Now the answer to this question depends wholly upon circumstances. If the first was a legal marriage, they would not have to be remarried; but if it were a bogus marriage, and his right to her property were contested, and the proof made that it was bogus, he would learn when too late, that he should have corrected the mistake—just like all those who have been led to baptism under false teaching will some day learn that their "marriage ceremony" was bogus. It is quite noticeable how Bro. K. measures this question by Bro. Campbell and other uninspired men. He gets out of these ruts when he fights the organ—his "hobby."

We have just received a letter and an article for publication from Bro. R. W. Floyd. Bro. Floyd says he is going to work on the "Review," and is sorry that his article came in just too late for this issue.

Have just received communications from Bros. Grubbs and McCarty, both containing clubs for the F. F.

Mr. Burnet, a popular Methodist revivalist, has been doing up the wicked little "city of the hills." He has doubtless done a good work for Austin, in a moralizing way. He has handled immorality "without gloves."

Perhaps he has done the cause of Christ some good in this way, and by waking up the people to a realization of the importance of becoming Christians. Yet we are quite doubtful as to whether such men do more harm than good. If they would not pretend to tell the people how to "come to Christ," but would leave that for men who would tell them as the gospel of Christ directs, we would entertain no doubts about there being a predominance of good in their work. But such men know so well how to picture the most prevalent sins, in their real every-day garb and proportions—show them up to the people in such vivid and life-like portraits—that they become almost oracular in the estimation of the masses. They gain their unbounded confidence by making such "center shots" at vice and immorality, that the masses seem to think it impossible, almost, for them to make mistakes in their teaching. Where they say go, the people go; what they say do, they do; never thinking it worth while to consult the Divine way-bill. In this way untold mischief is done. If Christ and the Apostles knew how to tell people to come to Christ, and if they told it correctly in the Scriptures, then Mr. Burnet did not tell it correctly in Austin; for he never did, one time, give the directions that we find given in the Scriptures.

And yet, people who claim to love God and reverence and contend for His word, hung on Mr. Burnet's words with spell bound and rapturous attention, and sent up quaking amens! to his utterances. The people seem to forget that it is the gospel of Christ that is the power of God unto salvation, and not what we think. We may think something is the gospel that is not it at all. The gospel of Christ can only be learned from the word of God. This loose teaching has well nigh driven the word of God into seclusion again. By such teaching the people have been led to disregard the plain commands ordained to introduce persons into the Kingdom of Christ. Christ says: "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God;" and men and women, who are vociferous in their pretensions of love for God, say that water is not at all essential. The lives of pretended Christians, that we see all around us, leading Christianity down with shame and contempt by their many vanities in sensual, fashionable, and forbidden courses, is but the legitimate outgrowth of that false and rebellious spirit that has been infused into those who would otherwise have obeyed a true and unperturbed gospel, by these popular theologians, and clap-trap functionaries called revivalists.

The man or woman who will not obey the law of the Spirit, for the remission of old or past sins, or will not examine the Scriptures to see whether that law has been faithfully delivered by the preacher, but will heedlessly follow the popular way, will not "walk in the Spirit" any longer than it suits their fleshly tastes—which it never suits. How can men and women be expected to add to faith, "virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity, when they are not 'in the faith?'" Who was Peter pointing the prophetic finger at if not at these popular revivalists who preach doctrines of their own manufacture, when he said: "There shall be false teachers among you, who shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of?"

CHRISTIAN LITERATURE.

We have examined Bro. J. F. Rowe's book, the "Apostolic Church Restored." It is replete with an order of information happily adapted to the needs of preachers, and all others who desire a general idea or an abridged insight into what we call "Church History." In short, it is a "boiling down" of something like $25 worth of matter to such a state of solidity as to put into a $1.50 compass; and right well has the "boiling" been done, too. It reduces the reading of volumes, and the research of months, if not years, down to a small book of 348 pages—the very thing needen by so many of our brethren. This book is sold by Bro. G. W. Rice. Bro. Rice also keeps all of the writings of Bro. Franklin, and about all of the current literature of our brethren. Send to him for what you need, brethren, and he will treat you well. Address G. W. Rice, P. O. box 1539, Cincinnati, O.

We have received Bro. E. W. Herndon's pamphlet, "The Church" and the "Christian Quarterly" for April. We have not yet examined his pamphlet, but we have read, with a great deal of interest, the "Quarterly." It is a magazine of 160 pages, which, coming four times a year, makes 640 pages of reading matter for $2—as that is the price for one year. Every one who has the time to read, and the money to spare, would do well to subscribe for the "Quarterly." Its pages are not marred by swindling advertisements, like our weeklies; in fact, it has no advertisements of any character; but its columns are filled with the most matured thoughts from our ablest men. In the April issue of the "Quarterly," we read two articles from Bro. Herndon's pen that ought to be read by every honest-hearted disciple in the land.

In our opinion, these two articles contain the most lucid refutation of the bold assumptions of that class who claim the right to legislate where God left off, that we ever read. We refer to Bro. Herndon's replies to Bro. Moffett on "Our Position," and to Bro. W. L. Hayden on some questions that had been asked by Bro. Herndon and replied to by Bro. Hayden. These articles ought to be put in pamphlet or tract form, and distributed among that class of our brethren who are so rapidly hastening open rupture in the Church by following reckless teachers and editors in building up an institution that God had not provided for, and hence is wholly the work and wisdom of man—the "Missionary Society." We believe that these articles of Bro. Herndon's would open the eyes of many brethren, and hence do an immense amount of good. Just in the proportion that "Missionary Societies," or other human organizations that are designed as auxiliaries to the Church, are built up, is the Church really retarded and injured. To be "co-workers with God," we must understand that He has "done all things well"—that, in giving us the gospel of His Son, and that organization over which He is "head," we have "the power of God and the wisdom of God."

"NOW IS YOUR CHANCE."

The Gospel Advocate proposes to send "a good communion set" to any church or person that will send it a club of thirty names. It does not say whether the set is to be silver or not. It used to offer silver sets. Who knows but this set, it now offers, is a junk bottle and beer mugs, which might be called "a good communion set" in the rural districts? For the same number of subscribers sent by a preacher, they propose to send "one baptismal suit." They say: "We are satisfied all the preachers will appreciate this offer." But they are mistaken about this: we know old pioneer preachers, and many of them, too, as well as many young ones, that all of the money that the Gospel Advocate expects to make out of these ungodly enterprises, could not hire to put on one of these baptismal suits to go down into the water to baptize a person into Christ. These things are

As small straws indicate the direction of the wind, do not these things point out the future direction of the Advocate? We are truly sorry to see this new and evil element introduced into the sanctum of that paper.

If Bro. Lipscomp and Bro. Sewell were to pass "over the river," who doubts but that the Advocate would soon be abreast with the "Apostolic Guide," "Christian Standard," or "Christian Evangelist" in their hurrying, headlong haste for money? If "baptismal suits" are such convenient and worthy things, what a pity that the "Gospel Advocate," with its modern impetus, did not exist in the days of the Apostles. How much shivering could have been spared these men who suffered so much in those days from having to go down into the chilly waters without baptismal suits! Think of the benefit baptismal suits would have been at Pentecost, when Peter preached, and at Solomon's porch. May be Paul would have done more baptizing if he had been provided with a baptismal suit—you know our Methodist friends say he did very little baptizing. Why do our brethren who vend baptismal suits, and those who wear them while baptizing, make sport of Methodist preachers for standing on logs to keep out of the water when immersing their intractable candidates? Brethren, be consistent. For my part, I would prefer standing on a log, to wearing a "baptismal" suit that costs $15—that amount would make me feel better in being given to some poor widow or orphan than invested in a baptismal suit. "Modern pastors" will buy your suits, brethren, but old pioneers, "old fogies," and young ones, too, will do as did the Apostles, or stand on logs, as the Methodists do.

While you are getting up these conveniences, why don't you construct a gum bag for the candidate—yes, let him be done up in a bag, and then buried in the water. This will obviate the necessity of warming the water, too. By all means let the administrator and the candidate go through dry shod, as the children of Israel did at the Red Sea. There is your example.

We were ahead of our regular time in getting out this issue, as we had some business to attend to, at a distance that would have interfered with our regular time. But will not mail till the regular time. This will account for some communications not appearing in this issue, as their writers

Brethren, there is a general complaint about long articles. Boil down your long articles, or write two instead of one.

In the Apostolic Guide of a recent issue is an article from Bro. Munnell, in reply to Bro. O. Kendrick. It seems that Bro. K. had written something about the sinfulness of stylish dressing and jewelry wearing now so common among pretended Christians. So, Bro. Munnell's article seemed to be an effort to set aside the "old foggy" idea, that Christians should not "conform to the world" in such things. We did not see Bro. Kendrick's article that called Bro. M. out, but it was very evident that Bro. M. wrote his reply under the disagreeable effects of a "tight fitting shoe." There was in Bro. Munnell's article a vein of the meanest, bitterest and most malicious venom that we have ever seen from one old Christian to another. Bro. M. belongs to that class, too, who are continually carping about "personalities." These brethren want to be let alone to live as they list. They not only lead men and women to virtually abandon the Church of God for an institution of their own planning and organization, but they teach them to adorn themselves to the very height of the fashion of the world, and to turn the once sacred precincts of the House of God into a place of sensual amusement and "revelling"—where once godly men and women "made melody in their hearts with psalms and hymns and spiritual songs"—"singing with the spirit and the understanding." Now we have the piping of the organ and the operatic squealing and squalling that characterizes all such worldly entertainments from the popular churches down to the bawdy houses; and the choir of the latter may become the choir of the former, if it is proficient in its calling. But all of these things must go unrebuked. The man who will rebuke them, even if his hair has grown gray in God's service, is set down as self-righteous.

Bro. Allen says the candidate for baptism "must understand that it is done to honor and obey the Savior." Then he must understand just what no divine teacher ever said about it. The scriptural idea of the design of baptism, is given in different modes of expression—all, however, in substance, the same—that is, "for the remission of sins." But it is left for such teachers as Bro. Allen and his brethren, who, like himself, have become wise above what is written—"wise in their own conceits"—to make the understanding of something no where said in all God's book, necessary to acceptable baptism. Thus they place their teachings above that of Christ and His Apostles! Where did He or His Apostles say, "Be baptized, to honor, or obey, the Savior?" Where? No where! Did Paul, Peter, John, or the Son of God say it? No, but F. G. Allen said it. We may know now what is meant by the Apostolic Guide; it is the guiding of such apostles as F. G. Allen and such others as are consorting with him in handling the word of God deceitfully, and perverting the Gospel of His Son.

Bro. C. Kendrick is out, in the American Christian Review, on "Our Apostasy." Bro. K. is pointing out a real Apostasy. He has not lost his courage like Bro. Allen, and goes to finding ghosts and raising false alarms, like some poor boy scared at a "pillow in a swing," at night. But Bro. Kendrick's words are well worthy of candid and serious attention. We hope Bro. Allen will regain his wits from the alarm that he took at the F. F., for saying that persons must believe the gospel that the apostles preached long enough to give some attention to "Our Apostasy."

In the "Apostolic Guide," of April 9th, is an article on "Re-Baptism," from Bro. Geo. T. Edwards. Among other things, he says: "Now, suppose one of these falsely taught subjects of baptism should, by some new investigation, or Bible teaching, learn the true design of that institution, and acknowledge that they did not understand the subject when first baptized, would these liberal-minded brethren of ours regard and treat the first baptism as valid and Scriptural, or not? For one, I, who with thousands of others, have been saved from infidelity by the gracious ministry and terms of salvation set forth in the Bible, as the word of the living God, would not value such a baptism as of divine authority, and would uniformly advise what they now call re-baptism." We are astonished to see Bro. Allen let such "heretical" and "apostatical" sentiments pass through the "Guide" without rebuke. It is true, Bro. Edwards winds about in this article, as does Bro. Castleman in this issue of our paper, so that when you come to sum up what he says, you find that:

"He crept in and he crept out,
Leaving his readers in doubt,
As to whether the snake that made the track
Was coming in or going out."

THE Texas Christian—which we never get to see except through the kindness of some of its subscribers—has an article in its issue of March 25th, under the caption of "Baptism of Doubt," that is about such a put-up job, we suppose, as "Methodist" and "Campbellite," in Mr. Nichol's "Grub Ax." A dialogue in the "Christian," purports to have passed between Bro. S. W. Kendrick and a man whose name he has forgotten, whom he calls "Brown" in this dialogue. For our part, we have no idea that such conversation ever took place.

These men can get up real conversations on the subject of sect baptism if they want them; but they prefer to manufacture a "Brown," and put into his imaginary mouth just what they feel able to reply to. This seems to us to be a species of the most craven cowardice that men could be guilty of. Men who are for truth never resort to such dastardly tricks.

A man who would oppose the position of others, by such methods as this, would tie a man's hands behind him, and then average himself on him if he could. And, yet, just such men would have others believe that they are engaged in "high-toned journalism." Pity on such soulless cowards. K. claims to have said to his forgotten opponent: "Then your last baptism was the result of a doubt. Not a baptism of faith, but a baptism of doubt—and that, too, a doubt of what you say you had believed from the teachings of the

But, my dear brother, I shall not live, but in that doubt is danger. This is nice teaching, indeed. No person ever was or ever will be baptized a second, or a third time, either, without first entertaining a "doubt" as to the validity of the previous baptism. The twelve at Ephesus would never have been baptized but for this doubt. These men, in their "Baptism of Doubt," are reflecting upon every one who has been twice immersed.

We have received several good articles from other brethren that would have been published in this issue, but they have to be rewritten before they will do to go into the hands of the printer, and we did not have the time to rewrite them this month. Let those who desire to write for the press, and who cannot prepare an article themselves, get some neighbor to rewrite it for them, and then send it to us. We have many brethren whose information on Scriptural questions is very profound, who cannot prepare an article for the press; but they should not let this excuse deprive the brethren and the cause, of their rich gleanings from years of toil in the Master's vineyard. The cause needs more of such instruction as this class of men will give, and a little less than it is now receiving from A. Ma. and would-be D. Ds. A great deal more from the Apostles, and little less from the "Bible Classes," whose professors "cling" so close to the "confession" in their "Commentaries," and turn it loose so quickly when "Our Plea's" behests are sounded out.

The Apostolic Guide takes W. E. Hall to task for immersing some candidates for the Methodists in St. Louis. This is very strange on the part of that paper, after its teaching that such baptisms are valid and scriptural. Hall did exactly right, if the Guide is a reliable exponent of sound doctrine. I expect Bro. Hall was like the Irishman who was whipped, through mistake, to satisfy the law: While the officer was laying it on, the Irishman kept laughing, and when he had received "thirty-nine," the officer asked, why he laughed? The Irishman replied, "Because it is such a nice joke on ye; faith and ye whipped the wrong man." Bro. Hall doubtless "laughed in his sleeve," because he had such a nice joke on these Methodists—while they intended to be baptized into the Methodist Church, he baptized them into Christ! The Guide ought to join in with him in chuckling over this good joke. But we think that Bro. Hall was simply playing water dog for these Methodists and the bystanders.

REMEMBER: THE FIRM FOUNDATION is offered from now till the end of the year for fifty cents. This puts it within the reach of any one who wants to read it. Again, if it has any friends that will not press its claims upon their brethren and friends, while it is offered at this price, they must be very poor friends. We have heard of some brethren who are outspoken for THE FIRM FOUNDATION when they are with its friends, but as mum as an oyster when they are among its enemies. God pity such men! We are bold to say, that no man can find anything taught by THE FIRM FOUNDATION that is not taught in the word of God. This is not saying that we have always said just what we ought to about our brethren; for we have said many things that we

Bro. J. D. Tant will act as regular traveling agent and correspondent for THE FIRM FOUNDATION.

A WORD TO THE FRIENDS OF THE F. F.

Brethren and Sisters: Will you not all make an effort to induce your friends to subscribe for the paper until the end of the year, at fifty cents? All sorts of evil devices have been set on foot by the enemies of the paper to intimidate its friends, and check its progress. They have tried to create the false impression, that the paper has no friends outside of Texas. Some of the friends of the paper have suggested that we publish a list of the subscribers received during each month, to show its enemies that this is a mistake; and to encourage its friends. But we have our objections to this. We will publish, in our next issue, the number of each club, by whom sent, and the place from which it is sent. Anyone sending a club during this time, who objects to being put in the list, can say so, and we will leave theirs out. The F. F. has subscribers and friends in Canada, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Ohio, North Carolina, West Virginia, Virginia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Kentucky, Louisiana, Georgia, Pennsylvania, Arkansas, Oregon, and California. This does not look much like it was confined to Texas.

Now, if these friends will make a little effort all along the line, from Canada to Oregon, we can enroll a thousand subscribers easily next month. Now, brethren, we assure you that we are not after making money out of the paper. We have stood by the FIRM FOUNDATION now for nearly two years without one cent's pay for our time. The paper has about paid for all expenses, but our time—not quite, however. We have intended, all the time, to put a better qualified man in the office whenever the paper would pay for his time. This we are still striving to make the paper do. Will you not help us, brethren? It has been said by our enemies—who had no better argument—that we were after making money, and making ourself conspicuous. This some of our associate editors and friends know to be false. We tried, in the beginning of the work, to get a certain brother, who is now working for the paper, to be its editor, with our means to pay for the publishing without our name being known in it, because we were too young in the cause to hope to do the good he could.

We only mention this to show that it was neither money nor prominence that we sought, but the establishment of God's authority, where the doctrines of men had been supplanting it. We do not pretend to deny that our course, in many instances, has been wrong and detrimental to the progress of the FIRM FOUNDATION. But we do deny, that, in the main we have aimed at anything but the supremacy of God's truth, and the eradication of all unauthorized practices from among the people of God. In conclusion, we ask again, will you not help on this work by sending up a club this month? A. MCG.

Another letter from Bro. Tant, with a club of fifteen, for the F. F.; and one from Bro. Harris of Cove, Ark., with a club of four.

Bro. Durst gave Christadelphianism (that name is too long for the Bible) a very black eye at Pecan Springs.

Let every true friend try to send a club of ten.

"HOLD FAST THE FORM OF SOUND WORDS."

The great majority of religionists think and teach that there is nothing in a form, so the heart is right. If the heart is right, that is true; but what is the right sort of a heart? It is an obedient heart, one that has been brought in humble submission to the will of the King of kings and Lord of lords, as it is revealed in the New Testament. The Apostle Paul did not view the matter in the light that most of the popular teachers of the present day do, judging from his admonition to his son, Timothy. (II Tim., 1: 13.) He admonished him to hold fast, not only the sound words, but also the form of sound words, in faith and love, which is in Christ Jesus.

The table upon which I write was once in the form of a tree; the tree was carried to the saw mill, and the saw converted it into a plank; the form is destroyed, and it becomes a different thing; the carpenter comes along with his tools and converts the plank into this table. The form is changed, and the form being changed, the thing is changed; it is no longer plank, but a table. A wicked destructionist comes along with his hammer and knocks the table to pieces, and scatters it hither and thither. What is it now? Not a table, because the form is destroyed, though the material still exists.

So it is frequently with Christians. The great destructionist (the devil) comes along with his hammer, made of money, and the love of it is the handle; hence the language of Paul to this same son (Timothy), "the love of money is the root of all evil," which, while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows. Yes, it is the love of money that induces some of our brethren to get up all these societies outside of the Church, and unauthorized by the Word of the Lord, and for which the Lord will hold them to an account and condemn them if they do not repent.

Oh, brethren, "having food and raiment, let us be therewith content." You have erred and are erring from the truth. Let me be one of the humble instructors, warning you, that your souls may be saved from death and a multitude of sins hidden. (James, v: 20.)

Pardon me for this digression from my subject.

We see two animals standing side by side, a horse and an ox,

Now, what makes the difference in these animals? They are composed of the same material, flesh, blood, muscles, etc., but still they are different, and the difference is in the form. Some may say that these illustrations are of a physical character. That is true; but they illustrate the principle.

I will now use some of a different character. We will take the word Levi, the name of one of the sons of Jacob, who was the father of the Levitical priesthood under the law of Moses. We will now change the form of that word, retaining all the letters in each change, and see how the different ideas are expressed in the different changes: Live, Evil, Vile, Veil—and these different ideas are expressed by changing the form of that word.

Our Heavenly Father created Adam and Eve and placed them in the Garden of Eden, surrounded them by all that was calculated to make them happy; told them that they might eat of the fruit of all the trees in the garden, except of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil; and added, "the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Gen. ii: 17. The devil was, doubtless, present, and heard God tell them not to eat of that fruit.

In the course of time (we know not how long), he entered into the most subtle, sly, cunning beast that God had made, and through that beast talked to the woman, and came as near quoting the word of God to her as he could, and told her as much truth as he could, and still told a lie. See Gen. iii: 1-7. He quoted God's word to her, and added one little word to it—not. She believed it, with the devil's addition to it; put forth her hand, and partook of the forbidden fruit. The form of God's word was changed by the addition, and the form being changed, the thing was changed; it ceased to be God's word. And, oh! what ruinous, disastrous consequences resulted from that violation. Sin and death and all the attendant consequences followed.

Now, suppose the devil had approached Eve and just preached the word of the Lord to her, saying, "The day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," would she have partaken of that fruit? Why, no! But when she saw that it was good for food (for the devil, not for her), and pleasant to the eyes, and desirable to make one wise, she yielded to the temptation, and fell, and what was the result? her fall? She believed a lie, sugar-coated with enough truth to make it palatable, and he (the devil) has been operating in the same way ever since, only he has had false prophets and false teachers through which he could accomplish his nefarious or wicked designs; and how often we are warned against them; and if God would pronounce such a curse upon the beast for permitting himself to be made a tool of (Gen. iv: 14, 15), of how much severer punishment shall false teachers in the shape of men be thought worthy, who yield themselves to his service, and do his bidding? It will be worse than going on their bellies and eating dust, and having their heads bruised occasionally. How often we are warned, both in the Old and New Testaments, against such teachers and teaching. Let us give one or two samples of such teaching.

The Bible says we are saved by faith, and the man who says we are saved without it, denies God's word, and is an infidel. A preacher comes along and says we are saved by faith alone. Now, what is that preacher doing? He is adding to the word of the Lord, and has improved on the work of his father, the devil, which he did in the garden of Eden, for the word he adds is a bigger word than the devil added, and the consequences have been more disastrous to the human family. The addition changes the form of God's word, and the form being changed, it ceases to be God's word, and becomes tares sown by the devil, through his agents. It is a dangerous thing to add to or take from the word of the Lord. Let us prove this by some quotations: "Now, therefore, hearken, O, Israel! unto the statutes and unto the judgments which I teach you for to do them, that ye may live and go in and possess the land which the Lord God of your fathers giveth you. You shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall you diminish aught from it, that you may keep the commandment of the Lord your God, which I command you." Deut. iv., 1, 2.

What an important lesson is taught in these two verses. Here are the Jews desiring and striving to enter into the promised land, the land of Canaan, the type of Heaven, and in order to enter in, they must keep the statutes and commandments of the Lord their God, and in order to keep them they must be careful not to add to or take from His word, for if they did either they changed the form of it and it ceased to be God's word.

Again: "Every word of God is pure. He is a shield unto them that put their trust in Him. And thou not unto His words, lest He reprove thee and thou be found a liar." Prov. xxx., 5, 6.

Oh, what a vast amount of reproof, and what an innumerable number of liars will appear in the last day, the day of judgment. Brethren and sisters, I do not want to prophecy smooth things unto you; there is, and has been too much of that done. See Isai. xxx., 8-11.

Once more, "I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, if any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book; and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the Holy City, and from the things which are written in this book." Rev. xxii., 18, 19. Oh, brethren, how careful we ought to be not to add to or diminish from the word of the Lord. We are seeking and striving (or ought to be) to enter into heaven, the antitype of the land of Canaan, and if it was necessary for the Jews to strive, according to the law, in order to enter into the type, how much more important it is that those under Christ should strive according to law in order to enter Heaven, the antitype? and the Apostle Paul says: "If a man strive for masteries, (or eternal life) yet is he not crowned except he strive lawfully." Second Tim. ii., 5.

It is the form of the Bible that constitutes the Bible. Bob Ingersoll uses the same words that compose the Bible to disseminate or scatter the seeds of infidelity all over this land. He changes the form or relation that those words sustain to each other, and the form being changed, they cease to be the word of God, and become tares; but if people did not believe those words as put together by Ingersoll, and obey them from the heart, they would not be enslaved to infidelity, would they? The Apostle Paul, in speaking to the Romans of the same form of sound words (though expressed a little differently) says: "But God be thanked, that you were the servants of sin; but you have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you, being then made free from sin, you became the servants of righteousness."

Now, how could those Roman brethren obey from the heart that form of doctrine and not understand it? and remember, that it was when they obeyed from the heart that they were made free from sin, thereby necessarily implying that obedience from the heart was necessary to freedom from sin. Why did Philip ask the Ethiopian eunuch if he understood what he was reading? Acts viii., 30. Because he knew it was necessary to understand in order to be converted, and that conversion was necessary that his sins might be forgiven; and when the eunuch asked, "What doth hinder me to be baptized?" Philip said, "if thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest." Acts viii., 36, 37. Could the eunuch believe with all his heart without understanding, not only that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, but that baptism is for the remission of sins? for it is evident that in preaching Jesus to him he had preached baptism, and as Peter, on the day of Pentecost, connected remission of sins with baptism, and Ananias, in the case of Saul, Acts xxii., 16, so did Philip in the eunuch's case, for they all spoke as they were moved or guided by the same spirit, and God is no respecter of persons; he does not require one to be baptized for, or in order to the remission of sins, and another to be baptized because his sins are remitted.

The apostle does not say that the Roman brethren had obeyed from the heart the doctrine, but the form of doctrine. They could not obey the doctrine, but they did obey the form of it, and in order to find out what the form of it is, we must decide what the doctrine is, the leading facts of which we find stated in the beginning of this same sixth chapter of Romans, the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, also in 1 Cor. xv: 1-4, and Peter also on the day of Pentecost preached the same to the Jews, three thousand of whom believed and had prepared to obey from the heart the form of doctrine delivered them, that they might be freed from their sins.

The apostle says: "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are (were) buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."—Rom. vi: 3-4. How are sinners baptized into the death of Christ? What is death? One of the leading ideas connected with the word death is separation. A man dies, what does he do? His spirit separates from his body (not his spirit) is dead, hence James says: "The body without the spirit is dead." What occurred in Christ's death? His spirit and body separated; His body went into the grave for three days and nights, and His spirit went to Paradise, where he and one of the thieves that was crucified with Him were together.

How are sinners baptized into His death? Remember they do not obey the doctrine, but the form of it. When Christ died His pure and sinless spirit separated from His animal fleshly body, in which He was so often and sorely tempted, yet without sin. Sinners are baptized into His death, in which death His blood was shed for the redemption of the sins of the world, and as Christ was separated from His fleshly body in His death, so are sinners separated from the body of their sins (sixth verse) when they are baptized into Christ's death, where they come to His blood, which cleanses from all sin. Hence the apostle says: "Therefore we are (were) buried with Him by baptism into death; (not into His death this time) but into our death, into our separation from sin; because baptism is that act of obedience, being preceded by faith, repentance and confession that brings sinners into Christ, into His death, and it was in His death that His blood was shed, not in order to bring about His death."—John xix: 32-34.

Christ was crucified. Sinners must crucify their sinful appetites and passions that the body of sin may be destroyed, separated from them. (Verse 6.) Christ was buried. Sinners must be buried in baptism. Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father. Sinners must rise from their watery graves to walk a new life, a pardoned, a Christian life. "For" (says the apostle) "if we have been planted in the likeness of His death, we shall be also in the likeness of His resurrection." (Fifth verse.) As much as to say if we have not been planted in the likeness of His death we shall not be in the likeness of His resurrection. (What a slam on sprinkling and pouring for baptism.) And in this way sinners obey from the heart the form of doctrine delivered unto them, and they are then made free from sin and become the servants of righteousness, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ.

Now is it necessary for sinners to understand that Christ died for their sins; that he was buried and rose again? If not, then it is not necessary for them to understand that form of doctrine that they are to obey, in order to be made free from sin.

We will now notice for a little while how much regard the religious teachers of the present day pay to the admonition of the Apostle Paul to his son Timothy to "hold fast the form of sound words." The Saviour says: "All power (or authority) is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptising them into the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, etc."—Matt. xxvii: 18-20. The Saviour says that all power (authority) is given to Him in heaven and earth (what a king He is) and it is by virtue of his having that authority that He told His apostles, and through them others, to teach all nations, to preach the Gospel to every creature, and yet there are teachers ("lecturers") who say that He has no authority, is not a king, but will have authority, will be a king at some indefinite future time. Such teachers do not regard Paul's admonition; they change the form of God's word, and the form being changed, it ceases to be God's word, and becomes tares. Oh, how foolish, to say the least of it, is such teaching.

The Saviour also says: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believes and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believes not shall be damned."—Mark 16:15-16. How plain and simple the language of that commission is; but see how the popular religious teachers, the destructionists, have mutilated it. A large number of them come along and teach the people that he that is baptized and believes afterwards shall be saved, and sprinkles or pours a little water on the forehead of an unconscious babe and calls it baptism. Oh what a terrible change in the form of God's word, more than was made by Satan in the Garden of Eden, and but little (if any) behind Bob Ingersoll.

Another large and popular class of teachers come along and teach the people that he that believes the Gospel is saved, and must be baptized because he is saved, and to get into some one of the branches of the Baptist church, institutions unauthorized by the word of the Lord. How much better is this teaching than the teaching of the second class mentioned? and yet it seems there are a good many of our brethren who are willing and anxious to receive persons into the Church of Christ who have been converted by such teachings as the above, as though they had been converted by the law of the Lord. What folly; they care nothing about holding fast the form of sound words.

The Saviour says, "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, thereby prohibiting things not commanded by Him."

The Apostle Paul says, "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof; for correction, for instruction in righteousness that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good work."—2d Tim., 3:16-17. But some of our brethren say, by their conduct, and that is the loudest sort of preaching, that Paul, or the Holy Spirit speaking through Paul, was mistaken, and that the scriptures do not furnish us unto all good works, and hence they get up these missionary and other societies unauthorized by the word of God, and they are as great an abomination in the sight of God as were the sacrifices that King Saul and the people brought from the Amalekites to offer to God. God has not as great a delight in unauthorized sacrifices as He has in obeying the voice of the Lord.—1 Sam'l, 15:22-23.

Brothers, take warning by Saul's case. Paul says they are written for our admonition. So do not add to or take from the word of the Lord, that you may do his commandments, that you may have right to the tree of life and enter in through the gates into the city.

What right have we, if any, to receive persons from sectarian (so-called churches) simply upon their confession that they have been baptized, only as a command, as they are taught, to get into these so-called churches, and not for the remission of sins, as in Acts 11:28? Come, brethren, let us get back to the apostolic practice, and receive persons as did Peter on Pentecost. This will keep out so much sectarianism from among the Disciples in truth. Please give us scriptural truths.—J. W. Bratcher, Dallas, Ark.

(1.) The relation that immersed believers sustain to God when the sincerity of their faith and repentance is not questioned, and who wish to take their stand with us on the Word of God, is a question that has to be acted on. We cannot pass it as a matter of opinion on which each one may hold private views. They present themselves for church relationship with us in our work of restoration. We have to accept them on their immersion, or reject it as not valid baptism. (2.) If we reject it, on what grounds shall we do it? Conceding the sincerity of their faith and repentance, their earnest desire to obey Christ as the prompting motive, if we assume that their baptism is not scriptural we have to make something else; some theory about it, or some qualification on the part of the administrator—a condition of its validity. (3.) This we have no right to do, for there is no intimation in the word of God that anything but faith and repentance are prerequisites to the ordinance. If we add another, we add to God's word on the conditions of salvation. To do this is hereby, as base as Rome ever invented, and as wicked. (4.) Hence it is a very serious matter to cast out as worthless the baptism of one who loved the Saviour and was baptized to obey and honor Him. The Lord will hold no one guiltless who does it. (5.) We are compelled to regard this clamor for re-baptism regardless of the faith and repentance of the immersed, on the ground that there is an additional prerequisite to valid baptism, as the grossest sectarianism. It makes a mere theory, about which the Bible says nothing, a condition of eternal life. There could be no greater departure from a position in which an opinion is to have no place among the items of faith, but in which all items of faith must be clearly expressed by precept or example. Hence those who would act on such a theory to the rejection of the immersion of a sincere believer in Christ, has no place among the Disciples.

We take the above question and answer from Apostolic Guide. The answer is by F. G. Allen, editor-in-chief. I have numbered the paragraphs, and comments below are numbered to correspond.

1. The editor admits that the question of "re-baptism" cannot be passed by "as a matter of opinion, on which one may hold private views." If not a matter of opinion, nor a prudential measure, it must be a matter of faith. Yes, that's it, faith in the word of God. The settlement of the question depends upon faith and not opinion.

2. The language used here is applicable to Methodists who have submitted to sprinkling instead of immersion. Let us see: "Conceding the sincerity of their faith and repentance, their earnest desire to obey Christ, as the prompting motive, if we assume that their baptism is not scriptural we have to make something else a condition of its validity." According to the editor, it would lack form. He would say, however, that the form was an essential part of the thing itself, and that without the scriptural form—burial and resurrection—there was no baptism. So we say that we do not have to make something else. Some theory about it, or some qualification about it on the part of an administrator, "a condition of its validity," but simply appeal to the word of God, where we find that the design of the act "remission of sins," affixed to it by divine authority, is an essential part of the institution, so much so that without this design the baptism is of no value whatever.

3. How about "the good confession?" If it is not a scriptural prerequisite to baptism the editor stands self-condemned. A.

Campbell, Walter Scott, John Smith, Lard, McGarvey, Wilkes, Allen, all teach that the confession is a condition of salvation; that it must precede baptism, and now editor Allen tells us "there is no intimation in the word of God that anything but faith and repentance are prerequisites to the ordinance." Brethren, hunt up your old sermons on "the good confession," and your commentaries, and make the necessary corrections, that is, if you believe what the editor says above, rather than Paul: "The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth and in thy heart, that is, THE WORD OF FAITH WHICH WE PREACH, that if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Rs. x., 8-10.

4. The very thing is here assumed that we deny. No one among us will ever reject or cast out as worthless any one "who loved the Savior and was baptized to obey and honor Him." We deny "that obedience to sectarianism is obedience to God." "Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey his servants ye are to whom ye obey." Men and women yielding obedience to a baptism that they believe to be simply an initiatory rite to church privileges, are the servants of the respective creeds which they believe and obey.

5. It is to be regretted that a man otherwise so amiable and so solicitous about receiving sectarians to the fellowship, now brands his brethren as gross-sectarians. The men whom the editor upholds were baptized in ignorance and in unbelief, yet if they profess to be satisfied with their baptism they are welcomed. We preach and teach that men must believe with all the heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; they must repent of their sins; that they must with the mouth make confession and that they must be baptized in order to the remission of sins." The only "clamor" that we ever hear about this re-baptism question, is by those who, like the above editor, call ugly names and charge us with something we do not do. We teach the items of our baptism as a result of the precept and example, which we have above enumerated, and if this constitutes any one a sectarian, then I am one, for I believe it and teach it. We have no theory about baptism, this is the very thing we oppose. It is the Methodist theory of baptism that makes Methodists; so with the Baptists, it is the theory about baptism that they preach and enforce that makes Baptists. We deny the authority of these theories, preferring to cling to the word of God. We have never claimed a place among "the Disciples," but do claim that we are humble disciples of the Lord Jesus, and placing our trust in Him we fear neither what man may say or do. Where God speaks we intend to echo the words loudly and clearly, neither adding to, nor taking from, nor will we be satisfied with the substitution of "earnest desires" or "sincerity" for the plain teaching of the Apostles of Jesus.

To the readers of the F. F.:

Dear brethren in Christ: Permit an humble brother to make a suggestion: In the first place, the existence of the F. F. depends upon the interest that the brotherhood manifests towards it. Hence we who are in sympathy with it must prove our love for it and what it teaches by using our influence for it. Now, I am not unfriendly to other papers controlled by the brethren, only when they fill their columns with unprofitable matter. Paul says, in his letter to Timothy, all Scripture is given by inspiration and is profitable for doctrine. We all, doubtless, concur with Mr. Wesley in the statement; that what is not found written therein and proved thereby, shall not be required of any one as an article of faith. I am not now disposed to show how far his followers have departed from his wholesome teachings at this point. But rather looking within our own Spiritual family to see what the condition of affairs are. We find in blazing capitals, written by Campbell, Stone, Scott and others no less notable for their love, these words — hark: "WHERE THE BIBLE SPEAKS WE WILL SPEAK, WHERE IT IS SILENT WE WILL BE SILENT!!" Is this principle being observed? If so, whence cometh this Ashdodish language: "The organist will please open the services, assisted by the choir." "Yes, brethren, we had a good meeting; 16 additions; 4 by confession and baptism, 4 from the Baptists and 8 from the Methodists." Now the inference is that all but the first four were already in a saved state, as confession and baptism are a part of the law for the remission of sins; and those whose sins are remitted are in a saved state; for if any man be in Christ he is a new creature. Now, as but four of these have complied with the law of induction, only that four can claim forgiveness. The other twelve were either already in Christ, and hence remain in Christ, or they were out of Christ, and remain out. Now let those who claim that these twelve were in Christ before or after this performance, go to work and show the readers of the F. F. where the Bible authorizes the exist-

tence of a law that brings persons into Christ by such a process. If the Bible is "silent" about such a law then let them be "silent" too, and thereby act upon that loyal and righteous principle enunciated by those sleeping soldiers of the cross, Campbell, Stone, Scott and others. Here is the whole process by which such converts as the twelve mentioned Baptists and Methodists are taken among us: (1) Repentance, (2) Faith,

(3) Salvation, (4) Baptism, (5) Complete—a Baptist or some other sect, (6) the right hand of fellowship extended by those who are legitimately in the "body of Christ;" result, a Christian. Well may we exclaim: Consistency, thou art a jewel!

There are many other things equally as absurd that we propose calling attention to, if some abler pen does not. A word more and we are done. It is said by some of our preachers that the F. F. is controlled by fifth-rate men. Well, I don't think they claim to be so wise but that they might be wiser. But let me assure you brethren, that where the F. F. is freely circulated there is more interest being manifested than where it is not, especially on the subject of the purity of the faith; hence we bid its editors Godspeed and hope they may never become discouraged, but continue to sound the alarm. God will reward you, my brethren, for your fidelity to His cause. Reader, let us put our mite in the Lord's treasury and support only that which will edify and comfort and build up the Church of Christ. It, and it alone will survive the wreck of time. The Church, true to the ancient and apostolic order, will yet come forth "brighter than the sun, fairer than the moon, and more terrible than an army with banners." Then will these time-serving and wishy-washy, milk-and-cider men be utterly confused. I repeat with renewed emphasis, my brethren, go on; God has thousands that have not yet bowed the knee to Baal, nor never will. Here goes for all the subscribers I can get.

B. P. S.

BRO. MCGARY: I promised to write a few lines on "Come out of Babylon, my people." It seems that many persons cannot see the difference between the children born in Babylon and those born of Babylon. The children born of the "free woman" who left home and went off to Babylon, were not born of Babylon. Paul says we are not children of the bond woman, but are as Isaac was—children of the free woman. God's children are all born of the spiritual mother, which is above, which is the mother of us all. Gal. iv: 19. "God's children are all born of this one mother. None of them are born of the daughters of Babylon. Therefore, we should not ask Babylonians to come out of Babylon; but we should invite the children of God from her mystic borders. If by one Spirit we are all baptized into one body, when and where did the Holy Spirit, or the word of God ever baptize any one into a sectarian church? or Babylonian apostasy, which is confusion? God is not the author of these scarlet-rigged ladies—no, not one of them, from the abominable old mother down through her long line of progeny to her most remote descendant. Then we should not invite them out of Babylon, for that is their rightful home till they are "born again." If we invite them, we should invite them as "goats," and take them to the water and knock their horns off and make "sheep" of them. Then they would not be trying to hook God's preachers out of the stand; as this little two-by-four—sectarian Bagby—is trying to do. Let him go to the sects; he will not work by the apostolic rule.

I will send you more names soon. Yours, truly,
Wm. McIntire.

TO BE "LET SEVERELY ALONE."

We clip the following from the "Texas Department of the Apostolic Guide" of May 7:

The present age is no exception to the rule that has prevailed in all the ages, that heresies of all kinds are perennial. When one dies another springs from its ashes, and oftentimes they crowd thick and fast upon each other. Texas is afflicted somewhat in this way. The re-baptism heresy is one of the latest, and when run in connection with the very plausible cry against so-called innovations, has in some places a very taking effect. The best plan is, probably, to let it severely alone and let it die of its own inanity.

As Bro. Aten has sent out this editorial brief by way of warning and advice to the many readers of the Guide we will briefly notice it. His plan is to let what he calls the "re-baptism heresy" alone. And well you may, my brother. This always has been, and I presume always will be, the very best plan to meet a position that one can not meet, and wishes to avoid. Is this the way our good brethren of past days used to meet what they considered heretical? They generally carried their Bibles in their pockets and were ready to use them when an opportunity offered. Why not do so now? Our brother recognizes the Texas cry against innovations as plausible—yea, very plausible. This re-baptism heresy is run in connection with it, and hence has a taking effect. But don't kill it. Let it die of its own inanity.

This is to be done by letting it alone, yes, by letting it severely alone. If it were not for this expression we would conclude that Bro. Aten wished to deal very tenderly with this heresy. But he really wishes to use severe means. It is that the brethren should adopt the policy recently promulgated by the Austin church in reference to the approaching State Meeting, by stopping the mouths of many good brethren who always stand ready with the sword of the spirit, bright with its heaven-born brilliancy, to use against these innovations about which Bro. Aten speaks, and that are now rapidly corrupting the body of Christ. He also means that privately and publicly they are to be assailed as heretics, schismatics, disturbers of the peace, and denied the right of free speech and a hearing before an investigating public. What has become of our boasted freedom from party shackles and party shibboleths? Ah, my brother, hundreds of brethren (and they are rapidly increasing by hundreds), are fully convinced that this question is firmly imbedded in divine truth. Instead of crying "heresy," and advising brethren to "let it severely alone," it would be more honorable and praiseworthy to show your fidelity to what you regard as the truth, and come to the front in an examination of this issue. If it is unscriptural, show it, or else its death by its own inanity will be its life by its own unwasting fulness.

COMMENTS ON ROM. VIII.

Before I proceed with my work, I must say a few words concerning the FIRM FOUNDATION. It is not popular with some people, because it tells them so plainly of their own faults. Most people are willing to heed the social law which requires them to "keep their own performances in the background," so far as their "deeds are evil." True, they generally like to have everybody know how pious they are, how much they give to poor and to the ministry (forgetting that, when one gives alms, he should not let his left hand know what his right hand does); but when the FIRM FOUNDATION comes along and tells them of their faults, they quickly dash it aside and denounce it as a disturber of the peace and harmony of the Church. Surely this is the ground in which the good seed fell among thorns!

The Church, since the beginning of this reformation, has been endeavoring to remove the mote from the eyes of the denominations. This, however, is a good work; but it must be remembered that, in order to successfully combat the faults of people, we must not practice the same things. And it seems to be the mission of the FIRM FOUNDATION to get the beam out of the eyes of the Church. That's right, brethren; let us get our own eyes clear, then we can see well to remove the mote from the eyes of the world.

It must be borne in mind that this letter to the Romans was written to people who were members of the Church of Christ—not to the world. Those members were Jews, who were acquainted with the law of Moses, and Gentiles who, having been among those Jewish captives for some time, had become acquainted with their customs. Now, it was a common thing for people of these kinds to meet and worship according to the law of Moses; or, rather, pretend to do so. Also, there were men going from place to place teaching the disciples that, in order to be saved, they must keep the law of Moses. This Paul denies; and in all his writings we find him eloquently, but plainly, assailing that doctrine. Bearing this in mind, we can easily understand that, when he says "Not of works," he has reference to the works of the law; and when he says we are saved by faith, he means the whole law of initiation into Christ, as well as the pious life that we are required to live after we have become Christians.

But I have already written a long letter, and have not examined a single verse of the chapter under consideration.

9. "But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." 10. And if Christ be in you, the body is because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness. 11. But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Persons who have heeded the Spirit's teachings, who have died to sin—that is, ceased to yield to the sinful temptations; who have put on Christ, by obeying the form of doctrine from the heart; who have kept the "perfect law of liberty," are, doubtless, walking in the Spirit. If the Savior has promised the indwelling of the Holy Spirit in any way "above our comprehension," He will certainly give us that blessing if we do as He has required. The Church is truly the temple of God (I Cor. iii: 16); but the idea that the Spirit takes up His abode in the body of a sinful man and converts him in a manner "above our comprehension," while the man does not an act, is contrary to all reason as well as to the teaching of the Bible. If we have not humble, Christ-like spirits, we are none of His. "But if Christ be in you," if you have submitted your whole self to Him, if you have infused in your own mind His real disposition, by continual submission to His will, and thus made yourself His temple, you are none of His.

"But if Christ be in you," if you have submitted your whole self to Him, if you have infused in your own mind His real disposition, by continual submission to His will, and thus made yourself His temple, you are none of His. "shall also quicken," bring to life again our mortal bodies.

12. "Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh." In this verse the apostle sums up what he has just been saying, with the conclusion that we are not debtors to the sinful lusts of the flesh, but to the Spirit, to live after the Spirit. 13. "For if ye live after the flesh ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." But here several of the denominations interrupt

Paul, telling him to "not be so fast, for these people he is writing to are members of the Church (Rom. i: 7), and," say they, "once in grace, always in grace."

This is the same voice our first parents heard in the garden. They heeded that tempter; and the result was, they were driven from the presence of God. Now, can people of our day heed the tempter and remain in the Church of God? Some of the members of these denominations may deny believing this doctrine; but, to this, we would reply that one had better subscribe to an erroneous doctrine, believing it, than to do so not believing it. This doctrine of "once in grace, always in grace," is calculated to cause indifference to the teaching of the Spirit; hence, feelings are substituted for a guide. Thus, instead of walking after the Spirit, they follow the flesh after all. But some one may say, "He (the apostle) means such things as are not considered right by any one;" and, to this, we say the feelings are the result either of our desires or of impressions made on our mind; and are, therefore, just as apt to be the deeds of the carnal as the spiritual mind. When Paul says "deeds of the flesh," he means everything in the way of religion, not according to the Scriptures.

THE TWO COVENANTS.

It shall be my purpose in this article to contrast the two covenants far enough to discover, if possible to ascertain, the scriptural subjects of each.

My reason for writing on this subject is because the entire sectarian world, and a great many of our own brethren, seem to have overlooked the importance of enforcing these particular thoughts. And hence persons fail to appreciate the liberty secured to them through the gospel of Christ.

Allow me, then, to call attention to Jeremiah, 31: "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah: Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers when I took them by the hand and led them out of the land of Egypt, for my covenant they break, though I was an husband unto them. But this is the covenant that I will make with them in those days, saith the Lord. I will put my law in their inward parts, and will write them in their minds. And I will be merciful to their unrighteousness; and their sins and iniquities will I remember no more. And they shall not teach every man his neighbor and every man his brother, saying know the Lord, for all shall know Him, from the least to the greatest of them." This scripture in its connection is sufficient for our present purpose.

- Then: 1. The old covenant had Moses for its mediator.
- 2. Ministers of the sanctuary.
- 3. Ordinances of divine service.

4. Conditions of admission into membership.

5. These conditions were, to be born in Abraham's house (Israel) or bought with his money.

6. They were to be taught to know the Lord throughout their generations.

7. The promise was that they should inhabit safely the land of Canaan as an everlasting habitation or possession.

1. The new covenant also has a mediator, Christ Jesus.

2. It has ministers of the church.

3. Ordinances of divine service.

4. Conditions of membership.

5. These conditions are, to be born again.

6. The heirs of this covenant are to be taught to know the Lord before they become heirs.

7. They are promised remission of sins, membership in the church of Christ, and the possession of the Heavenly Canaan.

The difference between the two consists of the following items, viz:

- 1. Different mediator.
- 2. Different ministers (who do not have to be taught), having the law written in their mind, etc.
- 3. Different ordinances.
- 4. Different conditions of membership (must be born of water and of the Spirit).
- 5. These conditions imply a second or new birth into heavenly relations.

6. Different from the old in reference to the time heirs are to be taught to know the Lord; these to be taught beforehand, the heirs of the old to be taught afterwards.

7. Different in promises to be enjoyed. In the former the sins were stayed off for one year, but in this there is a full remission of all past sins, and the individual who obeys it has no more conscience of sins.

Now I wish to ask my brethren who love the cause of Christ better than the smiles and praise of the world: Can you not see the importance of making the distinction between those who have been taught first according to Jesus' instruction in Matthew xxviii, 18?

To get this more prominently before your mind, allow me to introduce an example which will decide which side of the present issue you are willing to take. Suppose A. is holding a meeting. After service B. and C. present themselves for membership. A. approaches B., from whom he learns that he has for ten years been a member of the Baptist church in good standing, etc.

Having that day been convinced that baptism to a proper subject is for remission of sins, desires to take the name Christian only, and wants membership in that church. He is received.

A next approaches C., from whom he learns that he is not a member of any church, but says: "If you require a belief in the design of baptism (i. e. that baptism is for the remission of sins), I am not a fit subject for baptism." I ask all those who are opposing the Firm Foundation to come square up to the mark and say what you would do were you in A.'s place? Would you receive B., who was baptized into the Baptist denomination, and in which he lived ten years, during all this time disbelieving the very thing that C. says he disbelieves. Now if you refuse to baptize C. because he disbelieves this proposition, how can you receive B., who was baptized disbelieving it and lived ten years afterwards in the same state of mind? When these are answered I will say more.

EXTREMES.

We did not know till quite recently that it was dangerous to go to the extremes of truth. We see, however, that some of the brethren say it is. I suppose, though, that going beyond what is written is what they mean. They certainly could not object to one's going to the uttermost bounds of the truth. For Paul says that he had not shunned to declare the whole counsel of God. Whole means all, entire, complete, sound; the entire thing. And one of the meanings Webster gives to the word extreme is "utmost limit." Now the question is, is it right for men to go to the utmost limits of the truth? Yea, he who stops short of it will incur the displeasure of the Father. Why call those brethren who preach the whole truth extremists? Preachers that preach ought to commence with Christ and his Apostles, and end with them. Declare the whole counsel of God. Go to the extreme bounds of the truth; add nothing to and take nothing from. Oh! that brethren would quit using such opprobrious epithets to describe each other. I sometimes think that brethren fail to notice the injunction to love one another with a pure heart fervently. So sometimes brethren make a mistake in dealing out truth, and give us wit instead. More love to God and His Son, and their cause, is what we want. Give us truth and love.

Brethren fail to call each other brethren sometimes. The Lord said that he was not ashamed to call them brethren, and why ought we to be? Such names as extremist, hypocrite, the modern apostasy, Tom Barnes's Messenger, are offensive. Brethren, don't do that any more, for the Lord will avenge all such.

I take the Messenger, Texas Christian, Advocate, and the F. F., and read them and like them all very well. Some things in some of them I do not like, but I do not call them ugly names. I read the F. F., and read it carefully, and am proud to say that it is in my judgment sound. Bro. McGary is not, and does not claim to be sinless, but calls for chapter and verse and none is given him. We did not set out to defend Bro. McGary, for he is man enough to do that himself. So if the F. F. is "A Modern Apostasy," the Bible must have been an ancient one. To all whom it fits. Hope, however, that you will receive it in the spirit in which it was written.

Thy brother,

J. W. STRODE.

THE STATE MEETING.

Many of us were looking forward to the State Meeting as a period that could be profitably spent in the investigation of the things concerning the future prosperity of the Master's cause in Texas. But alas! the elders of the Austin church have recently issued a "Circular Letter" to the brotherhood, taking the matter in their own hands as to the representation that will be expected to take part, and the matter to engage the attention of the meeting. This is indeed an advanced step. Heretofore at each annual meeting the brethren would decide by vote, or a committee, where the next meeting would be held. Usually quite a number of points sent up bids for it. The place selected was not to control the proceedings, neither was it so desired, but was expected simply to entertain, and furnish a house in which the brethren at large, by their representation, could assemble from time to time and pursue such course in their deliberations as circumstances called forth.

I was not at the last State Meeting, but I venture the statement that if the Austin church had accompanied its bid with the expressed intention, if accepted, to pursue the course it has done, that another point would have been selected, where the brethren would not expect to be hampered in any such way. But the edict has gone forth, and it has been highly commended by the progressives. It has been evident that for some time such an effort has been planned. I have never been zealous on the State Meeting question, especially since a manifest effort by some to get up some human plan for church work.

Brethren, while our mouths may be closed in these meetings, our pens may be active and our voices heard as faithful watchmen at the posts of duty.

SHORT NOTES.

Summer is coming and will be a busy time for us. Let us remember Christ has said teach them (those you baptize) to observe all things I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you till the end of the world; but, brethren, if we fail to teach them these things when it is the promise of God's blessing resting upon us, I am certain this has been one great cause of our disorganized condition in Texas. We have been too anxious for numbers and have received into the church persons from most of the sects in the state without commanding them, as the Apostles did, to be baptized for the remission of sins; and we would leave them without any one to instruct them, and the result has been that many would wander away, cause strife, divisions and bring disgrace and shame upon the church. No, we are not of the same mind nor speaking to the same thing as long as such are true. Then, brethren let us be careful in our practice as well as our teaching, that we may do the command of our Father, and have his blessings in all we do.

There are two little congregations north of Georgetown not able to sustain an evangelist, but they have come together and agreed to sustain a meeting in Corn Hill (a mission point) during June. That is missionary work in the right direction. How many other congregations will go and do likewise?

I have held a meeting in one town in Bell county, where there were five families, some of each family belonging to the church of Christ; yet, I had to pay my way at the hotel, pay for my horse in the stable and buy candles to light up the house. Brethren, please read your Bibles, learn your duty, be ashamed of the past and do better in the future.

God has ordained that they who preach the gospel shall live by the gospel, yet I recently visited two congregations, met a preacher at both places who had been preaching for fifty years whose clothes were such that I heard some of the members say they were ashamed to see him dressed that way; and I also felt ashamed to know we had brethren who claimed to be Christians, who claimed to take the Bible as their guide, who have such little love for the cause, that they will not support their ministers better. May God help those brethren to become ashamed of themselves for letting their preachers go that way, and may they do their duty that they may finally be saved.

"The Confession."—What is it? I notice three articles in the Texas Christian on the confession, on which I will give a word of comment. Brother C. argues it is necessary to confess Christ before baptism. So do I. He says there is no stated or commanded form by which the confession is made. No, say I, for a man can confess in many forms or different words, and yet be the same. Therefore, this being true, Bro. C. concludes that all the sects at the mourners' bench, or else those who call on God have confessed him; but let us see: First, we know nothing of God only through His word; then when a man confesses that he believes Christ is the son of God, that shows he believes the gospel, for it is the teaching of Christ, and if he believes the gospel he believes baptism is for the remission of sins, for the Bible plainly teaches that. But if he confesses before he is baptized that he believes God has, for Christ's sake, pardoned him, it shows he does not believe baptism is for the remission of sins, which shows he does not believe the gospel, which shows he does not believe in Christ, and Christ said he that believeth not shall be damned.

Let diligence be our moving power, lo! our binding chain; to do God's will, our great desire and we are bound to succeed. Dear brethren of the F. F., in conclusion, let me say to you be strong in God and faithfully perform His will. When I look out upon the condition of the church to-day, I am forcibly struck with our Master's words that a man's enemies should be those of his own house. When I see envy, strife, divisions, jealousy, hatred, parties, organs, societies and such like, all having their adherents in the church of Christ, it is enough to cause every true follower of Christ to mourn over our condition and hang our heads in shame. Yet, let us remember, dear brethren, God is on our side and His word is our guide. The same king who said, 1800 years ago, to preachers of the gospel, He would be with us to the end of the world, is still king to-day. Then let us be faithful and true to the cause he has left us and victory will be ours after awhile. There has not been a time from the first discourse by Peter till now that needed greater zeal nor more earnest devotion to the cause of truth than now. But let us learn, dear brethren, in all our writings to be gentle and kind. Let us show the spirit of Christ and not be too harsh in our criticisms on the errors of others. Let us show the truth and gain their confidence by love. We are in a reformation which will not be accomplished in one day; yet God's word is powerful and shall prevail. May God bless all who contend for the one Lord, one faith and one baptism is our prayer. J. D. T.

DALLAS, Polk Co., Arkansas, May 12th, 1886.

DEAR BRO. MCGARY: A few days ago Bro. Harris, of Cove, this county, handed me the May copy of a little sheet, THE FIRM FOUNDATION, published at Austin, Texas, edited by A. McGary, with request to read it. I did so and found that it contained the very doctrine I had been convinced was right for three years; that is upon the subject of baptism, with other things as set forth by you and many others of our brethren; but permit me to remark that I have thought I was the only preacher of our faith who believed this, hence in order to keep down division; my tongue was tied from so expressing my conviction, but looking over this sheet, the F. F., I find I'm not by myself.

I like Bro. J. L. Castleman's article on re-baptism. . . Indeed, I endorse the foundation upon which you have founded your beautiful and well-gotten-up sheet. I am glad to know so many of our brethren are leaving the doctrines of men (sectarians) and accepting truth. May the Good Lord bless you in this noble work of sending out truth, and that you may still show yourself approved unto God, a sufficient workman.

Send me your paper and I'll send you the money.

Your brother in the one faith,
J. W. BRATCHER,
Co. Evangelist, Polk Co., Ark.

THE CHURCH.

When Moses was about to build the tabernacle, he was directed to make all things according to the pattern, which had been shown him. "Thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it." Ex. xxv: 40; Deut. xii: 32. Jesus, as Son over His own house, said that He would build the antitype—the true tabernacle—the Church. Matt. xvi: 18; Heb. viii: 2. Having received all authority, He gave to His disciples, as under-builders, authority to build in His name. Matt. xxviii: 18-20; Mark xvi: 15, 16. All, who were thus planted together in the likeness of His death and arose to walk in the new life enjoined, became of His body, which is His Church. Rom. vi: 5; Gal. iii: 26, 27; Col. i: 18. The thousands baptized into Christ at Jerusalem were thus made members of the Church at that place. This is true of Rome, Corinth, etc. A disciple at Rome became a member of the Church of Corinth by taking up his residence at Corinth—as an inhabitant of Dallas becomes a citizen of Austin by moving to Austin.

Now if I add anything to the word of the Lord, as a condition of membership, though it be as good a thing as the hand of fellowship, or the kiss of charity, I become a transgressor, and say, in effect, that the Lord failed to give us a perfect plan of organization, and that I am wise enough to improve His plan. But it is seen upon reflection that the supposed improvement is an injury to the building. For it is perfectly self-evident that if anything more than what the Master has enjoined be required to admit one into the "organization," all who do not obey this commandment of men are left out, how holy they may be, while all who do obey it are received, however worldly-minded or covetous they may be. Thus a division is made in disobedience to the Master. John xvii: 21; Rom. xvi: 17; I Cor. i: 10.

Thus it is made impossible to exemplify the idea expressed in the word ~~re-baptized~~ out from. John xv: 19; II Cor. vi: 14-17; I Cor. v: 9-11. A correct rendering of I Cor. v: 9-11 is probably found in Emphatic Diaglott, because it makes sense in itself and is in harmony with the other Scriptures. It there reads in this way: "In that letter I wrote to you not to be associated with fornicators; in no wise with the fornicators of this world or with the covetous and extortioners, or idolaters, since, indeed, you are bound to come out from the world."

A religious party organization is necessarily built upon the assumption of infallibility. It recognizes a creed, either written or unwritten. The adoption of a creed as the measure of the principles of a party, assumes that the party has all the truth, or that it can decide as to how much of the truth is necessary. But the best informed know but little. I Cor. vii: 9.

There is scarcely anything in the whole realm of nature that is clearly understood by man. All must acknowledge that there are many things in the Scriptures that they do not understand. God is infinite. His works and His word partake of His own character. While the wisest man may almost be said to know nothing, below him there is every grade of mental capacity, down to perfect idiocy. We are, therefore, driven back to the Savior's rule: "By their fruits ye shall know them," "Whoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them," "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I."

Party organization prevents growth. No one is permitted to teach a truth that is not a part of the party creed, if it be at variance with the creed, or if it be a part of the creed of some rival party. Each party has its hired clergy whose support and position depend upon upholding the party standard. When any one outgrows the party harness he is discarded—II Tim. iv: 3, 4. If one adhere to the few distinguishing tenets of the party he is accepted, though lacking in Christian character. If the Bible were silent as to the method of church building, the character of modern religious parties would show that they are not churches. Among the many thousand members of religious "organizations" how few there are who study the scriptures! You can not suppose that this state of ignorance would prevail if money could be made by studying them. Though covetousness is called idolatry, and the covetous man is said to have no inheritance in the kingdom, you can scarcely persuade even the preachers that it is wrong to make what they call a "good trade." Members of religious parties are as ready to engage in carnal war as others are, while the hired priesthood totally fail to teach the truth concerning the self denial, labor and suffering involved in the Christian warfare. It does not require a very intelligent unbeliever to see that there is no difference between members of the so-called churches and other people. All can see that they are as eager for wealth, and honor, and ease as other men. The things condemned in the Pharisees as fully characterize modern partisans. Why should it be true, as the clergy would have us believe, that a just judge will reward with unending bliss those who sufficiently desire the praise of men as to belong to some popular religious party, and consign to eternal torture others as good who do not have "a name to live?"

Is party organization necessary for the sake of discipline? It is a sufficient answer to this question to reply that the Lord has not authorized it. To form an untaught organization is to condemn His work as imperfect. Besides, if it is left to man to invent a plan of organization, one man has as much right to do so as another, and this results in a multiplicity of warring factions, subversive of the unity enjoined in the scriptures. If unity among the followers of the Lord Jesus is desirable, it is obvious that it can only be had by accepting the Lord's simple plan of organization, which permits any Christian to receive and fraternize with all who are bearing the fruit of the Spirit. All efforts to secure discipline by man-invented organizations have failed. The only discipline effected is conformity to the dogmas of the party, and perhaps, in some measure, an avoidance of those acts held to be disreputable among men, while more grievous sins, not regarded as disreputable, are indulged in without censure.

Do you ask how to reach the unruly? The scriptures answer: "Teach and exhort one another."—Matt. xxviii: 20, Heb. iii: 13. But you say, "Suppose my brother will not learn?" Well, thou hast delivered thy life.—Ez. iii: 19. You have no power of compulsion. Perhaps your do not know very much yourself. Again you say, "But if my brother continue obstinately unruly, what then?" Again the scriptures answer: "Keep no company with him, that he may be ashamed, yet count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother."—II Thess. iii: 14-15. Again thou hast delivered thy soul. It may be that you are not very good. It may be that you are neither wise enough nor good enough to judge another man's servant. "To his own Master he stands or falls."

R. J. R.

ANSWER TO BRO. ALLEN'S "WORD OF ADMONITION."

In our January issue we asked Bro. Allen, the editor-in-chief of the Apostolic Guide, some questions about Baptist baptism that we did not think he could satisfactorily answer from his standpoint. Neither did he, if we are capable of judging of that matter. However, in the Guide of February following our question, he devoted two columns of his paper to what he was pleased to call "A Modern Apostasy." To this we replied, giving his entire article to our readers, on the front page of our paper; and we requested him to give our reply to his readers.

Well, we heard nothing more from him until the last issue of the Guide, May 21st. In the meantime, we accused him of cowardice in refusing to let his readers see what we had said in defense of our work, against his charge of "Apostasy." But now, since reading what the brother has to say about the matter in his last paper, and having no disposition to doubt what he says in that connection, we cheerfully confess that we acted hastily and indiscreetly in charging him with "cowardice." We had no doubt, when we wrote the things of which Bro. Allen complains, that he had seen our paper and our reply to him. We were very particular, as we always are under such circumstances, to mail him a copy—and we shall send him a copy containing this, by registered package, together with a copy containing our other reply.

We will now give in full what Bro. Allen has to say about our paper, in an editorial note, and, after devoting some attention to it, we will pass to some criticisms that we desire to make upon his leading editorial, under the caption of "A Word of Admonition." We are sorry that we cannot give the last named more attention than we are able to; but as it is now bed-time, and as this must go to press in the morning, we can only "give it a lick and a promise" for the present. He says:

"WE BEG TO BE EXCUSED.—After our leader of this week was in the hands of the printer, and it was too late for correction, we received from a friend another copy of the FIRM FOUNDATION. This indulges freely in railing accusations against us. Its unjust and false charges, its abusive and ungentlemanly language, are such that we are compelled by every principle of self-respect to decline any further notice of it, in any way, in our columns. We have never seen the paper but three times during the two years of its existence, and two of these are the two referred to in this issue of the Guide—each sent by a friend calling our attention to its charges; and yet we are accused of 'cowardice,' of indulging in 'guerrilla warfare' of knowing that we have no Scripture to sustain our position, and much more of the like, because 'we decline to meet him on the open field of fair discussion!' We are curious to know how we are expected to dance to music that we never hear. We are willing that our readers shall decide as to our indulging in 'guerrilla warfare,' 'being a cowardly dogmatist,' an 'ass,' and other such gentle, loving characters. For the sake of our readers, who may be inclined to the theory of re-baptism, we shall go on with the investigation of the question. They can then determine how much truth there is in the charge that there is no Scripture to sustain our position, and that we know it and are afraid to attempt to show it. On account of the evil that will certainly result from this departure from one of the essential principles of Our Plea, if it is not checked, we shall give more attention to it for a while than we have hitherto done; but we can afford to have no controversy whatever with the editor of the FIRM FOUNDATION. He can just go on with his abuse and his misrepresentation to his heart's content. We do not expect to see it, know anything about it, or care anything for it. We are more than willing to investigate the question, in the light and spirit of the Divine Record; but from any further notice of that paper, or anything that may appear in it, we beg to be excused."

Well, we are sorry that he desires to "be excused;" but however much it might gratify us to "excuse" him we have no option in the matter. We are engaged, "about our Father's business" in defending His Son's authority against all manner of opposition and perversion brought to bear against it from every point of the theological compass. If we felt that we had a right, as a faithful defender "of the faith once delivered to the saints," to follow our own innate inclinations, whenever any one said anything about us that was of a wounding nature to our feelings, we would be as willing to excuse you, my brother, as you are to be excused. But we are not our own; "we are bought with a price." Even our Lord and Master who bought us with His righteous blood, did not "excuse" Himself from His opposers when they accused Him even of doing His marvellous works by the power of Beelzebub. Then why should we, who talk so much about having His spirit, and working for Him, turn away in pompous disgust from a known and bounden duty, because some unkind word is said by those opposing us? Would Christ do it if He were here? Ah! my brother, such a course will not do for a true soldier of the cross. When it comes to this wicked spirit of resentment, we are sorry to say that we have as keen a sense of it, perhaps, as yourself, but we thank God for love and courage enough to stand by His truth under the inflictions of many worse indignities than these at which you complain. But right here, while we think of it, we want to put in our denial to the charge of calling you an "ass." Let me tell you, my brother, although you seem to make light of it when Bro. Grim says it: There is a mighty conflict brewing on this baptismal question, between the advocates of "Our Plea," and the advocates of what you call "the most dangerous apostasy of this century." Yes, my brother, there is something more potent needed in this conflict than your "raw-head and bloody bones" summing up of the results that you say follows, if "the theory of the FIRM FOUNDATION be true." You have "Our Plea" while we have God's plea. You have the practice of Bro. Campbell and his honored coadjutors in "this restoration," while we have the footsteps of the apostles of Christ and the faith once delivered to them. We have a "thus saith the Lord" for what we teach on this question, and you have not. That which your "plea" say is a sufficient rule of faith and practice, gives no "rule" for what you "practice" at this point, while it gives the very rule by which we work and for which we contend, and shall ever earnestly contend with all the feeble power we possess. Shall we be expected, in the face of all these God-given advantages, to surrender to any human plea? Men who count numbers may, my brother, but those who love God and fear naught that man can say while God is on their side, however few they may be, whether "seven thousand" or less, have not, and will not, bow the knee to your Baal. So sharpen up your sword for the conflict; we have the truth, and it is mighty and will prevail against your vast majority. But we have indulged in too much of a digression. Since you take umbrage at our words about you, and say that it was ungentlemanly in us, and therefore decide to place us under the ban by proscribing us, and our paper in such a signal manner, permit us to call your attention to some of your language, in reference to another, who had treated you about as we thought (and had some grounds for thinking that you had treated us). This language, too, is only one week older than your complaint at us. You say, of a religious teacher who was opposing what he called Campbellism: "The simple fact is, there is no small amount of pure, genuine, perpendicular, evangelical, orthodox lying in this age of religious liberty." Much more in the same connection could be given, but this is sufficient to show that "thou art inexcusable, oh, man, for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things." You say: "we are curious to know how we are expected to dance to music we never hear." We have not raised the complaint that "we have piped unto you and you have not danced." But our complaint has been in your manner of "dancing," as you call it. If it is to be termed "dancing" we want you to come up to the square dance and cease "dancing the racket." We know some persons have no ear for music. Perhaps this is your trouble. But we assure you that we have sent you our paper every time we have called in question what you have said. We tried to exchange with you, but then our paper is so "small" that you seemed not to notice it. Remember, my brother, you should not "despise the day of small things." Again, do you remember the many "ungentlemanly" —(you being judge)—things you said about Bro. Errett in your controversy with him? But we do not allude to this to justify ourself in such things as we have said to you. But when our large editors set such examples, we ask, should those same large editors be so tight on small ones for following their example? But now for a brief notice of your "Word of Warning"—we will try to follow in your own order. You say, in alluding to the FIRM FOUNDATION: "The sole purpose of its existence seems to be to inculcate the theory that baptism is of no worth whatever, unless administered and submitted to for the express purpose of obtaining the remission of sins." Yes, we hold this view in reference to baptism; but "sole" means single only, alone, solitary, unaccompanied. Now, my brother, you ought to know that your statement that "the sole purpose of the FIRM FOUNDATION is to inculcate what you call our "theory" of baptism, is unjust. Even if you have only seen three of our papers, you could have learned better. We contend for every item of the faith as strenuously as does your paper. If we say more upon the baptismal question than upon other questions, it is because more needs to be said on that; more perversion of God's truth and Christ's "bound" plan of salvation is found right at this point. Now, we follow you as you take up your "first, second, third and fourth." In your first, you say that our "theory" must necessarily lead to direct trouble in the churches of Christ. So much the worse then for that class who "cause the trouble" "contrary to the doctrine we have learned." The same that you say here may, with the very same propriety, be said by the advocates of the organ, against you, who oppose its introduction into churches. But you would reply to them that they were responsible for the trouble, because God had not authorized the use of the organ; and that is our reply to you about your practice of receiving persons from the sects without baptism. The lame, in all such cases, lies against those who act without authority. This, in the very nature of God's government, must always bring trouble, so long as there is a faithful follower of Jesus Christ on earth who believes that the Scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works. So we do not accept what you say about this question being, "a natural and necessary source of discord." The source of discord is in a human plea that attempts to supplant the authority of Christ. But we do accept your view when you say that those who hold to this re-baptism theory are compelled to regard all immersed by the sects or any one else, who did not understand the design of the ordinance when they were baptized, as unbaptized sinners. Yes, that is precisely our view of the matter. This was Paul's idea, of course, when he baptized the twelve at Ephesus, who were certainly baptized to "honor God" in the first instance. Paul did not baptize them over simply to say, "Father, Son and Holy Spirit" over them. The trouble with you, my brother, and those who ~~view this question as it is~~ that you assume the debatable grounds. You say again: "It follows, therefore, that those who are advocating this theory to the alienation and division of the churches (we have heard of no such divisions), and all are responsible for this who are lending their influence to the theory, are condemned by the word of God, unless Christ actually requires it as an item of the faith. Of course, if he conscientiously believes that Christ has made it a condition of salvation, and that he and others will be damned without it, he should advocate it with all his soul." Well, this is what we conscientiously believe, so you ought to respect us instead of pursuing the course you have towards us. Who can understand this question differently, in the face of this language: "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned?" He does not say: He that believe h that I died, was buried and rose again, shall be saved; and no man without doing violence to the word of God can so teach. The gospel that they preached was the gospel He had reference to here, hence the gospel they preached was the gospel that was to be believed, and the disbelief of it—the very gospel that they preached—is damnation. It is easy to determine precisely what that gospel is. Peter preached it about fifty days after this commission was given, and it is so plain that he who runs may read it. But again, my brother, you have stated a principle in these words quoted from you above that has a rebounding motion which falls heavily upon your own head, when you remember the strife and contention and division the question of the missionary society is fomenting in the churches, but we have not the time or space to elaborate now. Well, we must come to a conclusion without even touching many points. Remember that you did not quote one line of scripture in your "Word of Warning." In conclusion, we beg you and others who hold the same views, to come right up to the question at issue. Do not shirk the responsibility that rests upon you; if you do, God will hold you to a strict account for so doing. You claim that you have authority for what you practice. Show us that authority, and if it is from God, it sufficeth, but if from man, we reject it.

Now, Bro. Allen, remember that the right way occurs when we can not work, so try to humble yourself down so as to forget our hasty remarks about you and even "condescend to our low estate" and teach us the way of God more perfectly, if we are wrong. We will accept your efforts in that direction with thankful hearts; and God will bless you if you will turn us away from an error. All you are asked to do is to give us the authority from God's word for what you teach and practice. But if you still determine to notice nothing we say, we can not, however much "our self respect" might incline us to such a course, refuse to notice what you have promised to say. We expect, while you are going over these grounds, to make it a hard road for you to travel. God grant that this question, and all others that afflict the church, causing strife and alienation between brethren, may soon be settled by that word which is "forever settled in heaven." We invite your attention to an article on another page, from Bro. Jackson. A. McG.

J. T. POE, in trying to cover his defeat, says: "I will say here, once more, for the information of all concerned, that I teach 'baptism for the remission of sins,' as earnestly as any one can do; but I teach that it is for the remission of sins to those only who come to it with the heart changed by faith, and the life and character—the doing—changed by repentance. Only such can be 'baptized into Christ,' and 'for the remission of sins.' Thousands can testify to this as my teaching. If it is not correct, then I have the wrong book to learn these things from. Baptism alone is not for the remission of sins." He also says that, if he thought the cause of Christ demanded it, and he could find some brother who would discuss purely in the interest of truth, and not for the purpose of showing himself off—how much he knew about the matter—he would discuss the matter with him. Yea, if he could find some one that held that baptism alone was for the remission of sins, so that he could show himself off, we would have a discussion. But his only chance for such a discussion is for him to run his own position out to its logical and legitimate conclusions, and pummel his own hard head, or make a man of straw, and turn his popguns loose on him as he has done in this instance. We will ask him a question, but he will doubtless conclude that we are of that class who try to show ourselves off, but we assure him that we are willing to take a "back seat" and let him show himself off, or on, or in—anything just so he will give a sensible answer. Question: Since you take the trouble to let all concerned know that you "teach baptism for the remission of sins," will you please give some good reason for so teaching, since you contend that it is not necessary that any one should understand or know it? Why teach what is wholly unnecessary that any one should know? Is it not a needless waste of time and breath? Now don't hide out from this, or rear back on your dignity, but answer it if you can, or confess that it is too hard for you, and we will propound something easier.

WE ARE so anxious that the brethren shall read the FIRM FOUNDATION while Bro. Allen is going over his promised work, that we offer the paper from now till January at 33 1-3 cents in clubs of three, and 25 cents in clubs of ten. That is, three copies for $1, or ten copies for $3.50. We urge the brethren to try and insure it a circulation at these rates—especially among "Guide" readers. We intend to travel pretty close to Bro. Allen over these grounds.

THERE are a great many complaints about the paper failing to reach our subscribers. Brethren, we assure you that the fault is not ours. Bro. Durant and myself do the mailing with our own hands. The fault is in the mails. Help us to locate it. The complaint has become so general that we must find the cause of it. This is a source of great annoyance to us, because so many of our brethren blame us, when we are so particular to avoid it. But do not understand by this remark that we would have you to be silent when the paper fails to reach you. We take it as a favor when we are notified of its non-arrival.

A GOOD brother informs us that the teachings of the FIRM FOUNDATION are not generally understood by the brethren who are opposing it; and he requests us to write a long article setting forth our teachings, so that all may understand us better. To this we must say that there is no room for any one to misunderstand us. That class who are misrepresenting the teachings of the FIRM FOUNDATION will continue to do so; not because they fail to understand, but because they are determined to reject and resist the truth. When men make up their minds to oppose truth, misrepresentation and downright falsehood becomes their chief stock in trade, and they spare no pains to keep constantly on hand a full supply. But it is an easy task to set forth our teachings. We teach what the Book of God teaches, and reject and oppose with our whole spirit, soul and body what it does not teach. If we do not teach all that the Apostles taught, it is because we have not learned it all yet; but will, as we learn it, teach it. As to how persons are brought unto Christ, we have learned from the word of God, and we take it just as it is given there, and are determined to wage relentless war upon all additions, subtractions or modifications of that way. To do what the chosen Apostles of God have not done, nor provided for being done in bringing persons to Christ, when the fixing of this was left in their hands and bound in earth and heaven, is to rebel against God; and this is just what many of our brethren are doing, and what the FIRM FOUNDATION is opposing, and will continue to oppose without any kind of compromise and against all odds. Read your Testament and remember that the F. F. contends for what it says and teaches, and opposes what it does not say and teach. This is our way, and what we oppose. So all who have a Testament can, if they will, post themselves about what the F. F. teaches. But if they will not, and are determined to misrepresent its teachings, they are left without excuse in their wicked work.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS:

Brethren and friends: We feel that we owe you an apology, and that we should have made it to you in our last issue; but as our attention was not called to it in time, and as a duty even performed late, is better than one never performed, we beg your attention and consideration to the following: From time to time, in our past issues, we led you to expect an early change of the F. F. from a monthly to a semi-monthly issue, and, from that, speedily to a weekly. But, brethren, we assure you that it was not part of our intention to deceive you. At the time we were holding out these ideas to you our subscription list was very rapidly increasing, and it was our intention then, and now is, to give you the advantage of our gains in this work, by increasing the matter and by improving the paper in every respect. But the publishing business is an experiment with us. It is a business that we were driven to by sheer compulsion of conscience, to discharge what we conceived then, and do now, to be a bolder and pressing duty due from us to that cause that holds the warmest place in a fearing, trembling heart. So, brethren, when we made these promises, while they were made to you under intentions the very freest from deception, they were made under the unadvised influences of a very rapid but temporary influx to our subscription list; but since that time, in this work, we have had to contend against the depressing influences of hard times, and, that worst of all foes to the progress of truth, false brethren, and deceivers, who are "waxing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." Now, brethren, we hope you will excuse us for whatever disappointment these unfulfilled promises have occasioned. And in conclusion, we desire to assure those of you who love truth, and we believe that most of our readers do love it, that although we confess to you that the paper has not been increasing its subscription list so rapidly as we had hoped it would, we are by no means discouraged, but we feel that we have abundant grounds for expecting the F. F. to do a grand work this fall. Suffice it to say, that those who are standing by "this little sheet," that the perverters of truth, lovers of "our plea" more than lovers of God, place-hunting and gain-loving "pastors" and editors, who are lording it over God's heritage are advising the brethren "to let severely alone"—We say, that those who are standing by it with their means have lubbed the idea that their means cannot be spent in a better cause or one more acceptable to God; hence, brethren, you need not be mourning over the death of the FIRM FOUNDATION because it is not now increasing, financially, as fast as it has in the past. But, brethren, do your duty, and this little defender of God's plea will outlive the angry storm and do valiant service for the Captain of our salvation long after we have passed away. We need make a much more hopeful report to you from a seasonal point of view, if we would barter the columns of the F. F. for paltry dollars to Mammon to advertise his business in. But we will not do it, but will depend upon the power of God's truth to tide us over the belated billows of time. A. McG.

ARGUMENT.

Baptism is a burial out of self into Christ; a resurrection in Christ. Then, to be baptized for remission of sins is an acknowledgment that we can, of and in our own person and character, find no remission. It is a seeking of remission in and through Christ. It is a surrender, a burial into Christ; an entrance into Christ; a fleeing from self; a seeking refuge in him who, in the wisdom of God, is made unto us righteousness, wisdom, sanctification and redemption. It is God's ordained means for entering into him that we may appropriate his wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption. It is a complete, thorough, practical denial of our own wisdom, strength and ability to obtain justification—a full surrender to Christ, that in him we may find redemption and salvation.

Titus, ii: 11; iii: 5. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ."

"Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit, which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior, that being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life."

These Scriptures show clearly that the grace of God does not do away with the necessity of man's obeying the requisitions of the Lord in order to acceptance with God. One passage declares that the grace of God teaches us that we must deny ourselves ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, through this looking for the blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the Savior."

The other teaches us plainly that to be saved by the washing of regeneration, and the renewing of the Holy Spirit, is to be justified by his grace. The washing of regeneration is universally recognized to be baptism. Then baptism is the act in which we receive or appropriate the mercy bestowed through grace. In all gifts there is of necessity the bestowal on one side and the reception on the other. No gift can be completed without the giving and the receiving. It is the province of the giver to prescribe how and where the gift will be bestowed. It is the province of the receiver to determine whether he will accept the gift where and when offered. If he does not, he deprives himself of the gift. God bestows remission of sins, as the gift of his grace, on man. He has chosen to bestow it in baptism. Man must receive the gift where God bestows it or he deprives himself of the gift. A gift must be bestowed and received willingly. If man is not willing to receive it, it is not a gift but a burden forced on him. Hence, to be baptized for the remission of sin, is to receive the grace of God where God bestows it. To refuse to be baptized is to refuse the gift. D. L.

The foregoing argument from the Gospel Advocate is presented to our readers with the request that they study it closely. It is clear, logical, and above all, scriptural. But will Bro. D. L. accept the consequences of his own logic? He might reply that he has nothing to do with consequences, that it is his duty to teach the truth, let the consequences be what they may. This, however, will not satisfy the Apostolic Guide and some others who seem to measure the verity of a doctrine by consequences rather than by a "what saith the Lord?"

The above article is a most complete refutation of that sectarian idea "that it makes no difference whether a man understands whether baptism is for the remission of sins or not, just so he is a penitent, believes when immersed; God pardons him all the same." He is in Christ; has had the gift forced upon him at a time and in a place that he was not willing to receive it. Orthodoxy stands up with bold front and proclaims far and near that God does not bestow the gift of His grace in baptism. They are not willing to receive the gift "where and when offered." Hence they "deprive themselves of the gift." Then Bro. Lipscomb, I ask you, in all kindness, to tell us why you oppose what you call "re-baptism?" You know that the sectarian world, in their teaching and practice, are not willing to receive the gift of God when and where it has pleased Him to bestow it—in baptism. Why are they not willing? They do not understand that baptism is for the remission of sins. Why do they not understand this proposition? Because they believe human tradition, and the word of God is made of no effect to them. A man is made willing to obey God when he believes God's word. The gracious promise once made to Moses (Ex., xx: 24), but universal in its scope. "In all places where I record my name I will meet with you and will bless you," will further enforce the lesson Bro. D. L. gives us. God's name is recorded in baptism. He promises to meet man there and bless him. The blessing is remission of sins. But the orthodox world says no, baptism is not the place—God is not in it, there is no blessing, no good, no remission of sins there. Nevertheless they practice a baptism, they have a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof, they deprive themselves of the gift.

When the Jews profaned the altar of God, He said, "I have no pleasure in you, neither will I accept an offering at your hand." How did they profane God's name and despise it? They offered polluted bread and they said, "The table of the Lord is contemptible." "Ye said also, behold what a weariness is it, and ye have snuffed at it and ye brought that which was torn and the lame and the sick; thus ye brought an offering: should I accept this of your hand, saith the Lord." (See Mal., 1 and 2 chapters.)

Will God respect those religionists now who profane His holy name by speaking contemptibly of baptism? They "snuff at it," call it a weariness—a mere duty, a non-essential, and yet bring their "offerings," "the lame, sick, and the blind," and expect God to bless them! Methodists and Baptists by their teaching make converts and then immerse them. After awhile, some of these converts hearing the Gospel of Christ preached believe, and desire to unite with Christians, in their service to God. They now believe that the gift of God's grace is bestowed in baptism; they now teach it, contend for it, and will denounce as sectarians those who deny it; but because they have submitted to the form of baptism—immersion; had God's name called over them—they tell us they "are satisfied," and many good brethren welcome them and confirm them in their satisfaction. Although the "human institutions" from which they come still repudiate and denounce the doctrine "baptism for the remission of sins," as heresy—and our own brethren and these new converts insist that the doctrine is true, that it is God's word, and they refuse to receive any person that will deny it, they remain satisfied and raise a hue and cry of "apostacy," "heresy," "hobbyist," against those who insist, like Bro. D. L., that God bestows the gift of His grace in baptism; that man must be willing to receive it when and where God bestows; that if he is not willing to thus receive it he deprives himself of it, though he be washed many times. Brethren, let us all walk by the same rule. J. W. J.

LETTER TO BROTHER MCGARVEY.

DEAR BROTHER MCGARVEY:
I see an article from you in the Apostolic Guide, of April 16, 1886, calling the attention of the readers of the Guide to some of the lectures in a certain book called "The Missouri Christian Lectureship," written at the request of the publisher of said book. I am much pleased with said article, both as to the matter it contains and the spirit in which it is written. It is certainly very proper and commendable in you, occupying the position you do as a public teacher, and having the confidence of the brethren and others as you have, to point out the departures from the word of God, of such men as Brethren Longan, Proctor and Hedrick, men who also occupy high positions as teachers and stand high in the estimation of most of the brotherhood, and men who (as you say), before the war, especially Longan and Proctor, "contended earnestly for the faith once delivered to the Saints;" but since the war have been gradually departing from the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, until such sentiments as you criticize in your article are proclaimed by them, and accepted by many as being all right. How sad, how sad, such a state of things.

You say Brother Longan, in his essay on "The functions of the understanding in matters of religious belief," treats it as foolishness to accept as real history the account given of the sun and moon standing still at the command of Joshua and the narrative portions of the book of Job, and not satisfied with his denial of the truthfulness of some of the historic statements in the Old Testament, he must come into the new, and deny that John wrote as he was moved, guided or directed by the Holy Spirit. He says "that even the substance is colored, so to say, by his peculiar personal modes of thinking." Colored with what? Not with truth, for then there would have been no sense in saying it; but with falsehood. He also accuses John of a momentary lapse of memory. Why not accuse his memory of being in a lapsed state all the way through? But John says: "This is the disciple who testifieth of these things, and wrote these things, and we know that his testimony is true." (whether his memory was lapsed or not) John, 21:24. Now, Bro. McGarvey, how much further along has Bob Ingersoll progressed in these matters than the sentiments set forth in the above lectures. I remember that the same author, some years ago, discovered a gospel for the pious unimmersed, and I believed then that he ought to have been withdrawn from, and later developments have confirmed me in my belief; for Paul says: "A man that is a heretic, after the first and second admonition, reject, knowing that he that is such, is subverted and sinneth, being condemned of himself." Titus, 3: 10-11. He has been admonished more than twice. I know, Bro. McGarvey, you speak very highly of his lectures as a whole; but the wicked one has always mixed enough truth along with his falsehoods he was teaching to make them go down well, and it is permitting such teachers and teaching to go unrebuked that has brought about the great difference between the preaching of the present day and the preaching before the war.

You also speak very highly of Bro. Proctor's essay, and say that "it is one of his most thoughtful and most eloquent sermons." It is entitled 'Reasons Why the Bible Will Retain Its Hold on Thoughtful Minds,' and after saying many good things (as you say), he takes a position that makes him deny some of the plainest declarations of God's word, and goes on to say that 'when the old Polytheists saw gods of good and evil, and the Jews angels and demons, we (yes we) see scientific cruses.'

By means of what science did 'we' see or discover these causes? Why, the science that Paul speaks of, 'falsely so called,' when he says: 'O, Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust (the word of God), avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science, falsely so called; which some possessing, have erred concerning the faith.' 1st Tim., 20-21. Yes, he has professed to find the science that will enable him to account for the hogs rushing down the precipice into the sea and being drowned. I reckon the heel flies got after them. Yes, it is the science that leads men off from the word of the Lord to doctrines and commandments of men, that turns their ears away from the truth to fables; but Paul says: "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." Coll., 2: 8.

In regard to Bro. Hendrick, in his essay on "The Philosophy of Remission of Sin," from what you say, he seems to have determined not to go into infidelity little by little, but to make one big jump and land in it at once, and I don't know if his course is not better for the world than that of either of the others, because the readers of his essay will not be near so likely to be deceived as they would by reading the others, and, yet, unless they turn away from their present course, they will all land alike in infidelity. I rejoiced when I read your article, and you came out so boldly, and yet so kindly, and exposed their false teachings; not only that they might be benefited, but that others may be notified, warned, that they may be saved from the evil effects of such teaching; and now, Bro. McGarvey, if they are actuated or led by the right spirit, governed by the right motives, will they not retract what they have taught; take it back as publicly as they taught it, or defend it, and show from the proper source, the Bible, that what they teach in their essays is right. If they were teaching on political, philosophic or scientific subjects, and such a demand was made of them, to establish the truthfulness of what they taught, by an appeal to the standard works on those subjects, would they not, even as men of the world, be bound to comply with the demand or retract? That being so, how much greater the obligation to establish what they have taught in these essays by the standard, the Bible, or retract, they claiming to be Christians, to be animated or led by the spirit of God. What is more manly, more noble than for men, and especially Christian men, to confess their wrongs and sins and turn away from them. Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that you may be healed (or forgiven). James 5: 16. And now, Bro. McGarvey, I have no idea that you were seeking popularity, or governed by an sinister or improper motive when you wrote your criticisms on those lectures, but that you wished to pull the beams, yes, beams, out of the eyes of those brethren, the eyes of their understanding, and prevent, as far as in your power, the bad effects, on others, of their false teaching; a very commendable desire, indeed. And now, may I not, as one who loves you as a brother in Christ, ask you to turn your attention in another direction; towards yourself, and see if you have not at least some notes or splinters in your own eye that ought to be removed by the great spiritual oculist, the Savior, by his word, that you may see more clearly how to cast the beams out of the eyes of your brethren?

You remember that some time ago, I think it was in January, 1886, you were requested by Bro. McGary, of Austin, Texas, to write an article in the Apostolic Guide, on the necessity of making the scriptural confession before baptism, because so many of our brethren were denying its necessity in order to cover their practice in receiving members from sectarian churches into the body of church of Christ (as they said) without having made it, and your attention was called to your position on that subject, as set forth in your commentary on Acts, and also to the position you took on the same subject at the state meeting at Bryan, Texas. In reply to Bro. McGary's letter, you said that you did not have time to write the desired article, and that if you did, you would have to take grounds in opposition to him, and then went on and took positions inconsistent. Yes, entirely inconsistent with the position you took in your commentary, and at Bryan, on the same subject. Bro. Garvey, there is no man that can conscientiously occupy, at the same time, the two positions, as set forth in your commentary and your letter; and you became offended at Bro. McGary for publishing your letter, when you did not request him not to publish it, and I can't see that he did wrong in doing it, for you ought not to have desired to teach him anything on that subject that you would not have been willing for the world to see. Yea, rather anxious that they should see, if it were the truth. And now, are you not under obligation to retract one or the other position? for you must know that they cannot harmonize; no, that would be a bigger job than the one undertaken by Joshua when he commanded the sun and moon to stand still, for the Heavenly Father can, through his servants, cause the sun and moon to stand still; but he can not harmonize truth and falsehood.

If, after deliberating over the matter, you conclude that your present convictions on that subject are expressed in your letter, ought you not to take back what you have said in your commentary, and if the sentiments expressed in your commentary are still your conscientious convictions, ought you not to retract and acknowledge as wrong what you said in your letter? It may appear to many to be presumptuous in one so obscure, so insignificant as I am; to write to one of your standing, as I have; but we learn that God has chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the mighty. 1st Cor., 1: 27-28. James says: "Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth and one convert him, let him know that he that converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death and hide a multitude of sins." James, 5: 19-20. May I not be instrumental in turning you from your error, saving your soul from death and hiding a multitude of sins?

One other item, and I will close this perhaps already too lengthy letter. The Apostle Paul says: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." 2d Tim., 3: 16. That being so, I am constrained to ask you where is any scriptural authority for Bible colleges; in one of which you have been working for years and to which I went one year; but I did it ignorantly, and am willing to confess that I did wrong; not that I am opposed to educating people, but the church of Christ is the school of Christ, in which he designs men shall be educated to preach the gospel in which he (Christ) is head, or president, and the apostles the professors, and the Bible is the text book, and the only text book.

The Methodists have the same right to build Bible colleges and use the Methodist discipline as a text book; that our brethren have to build them and use the books they are using. The principle is the same, and so with all the other sects and their books. Whenever we leave the Bible, there is no stopping place. If Bible colleges are a good work, then the Bible gives us the necessary instruction in reference to them, and if the Bible says nothing about them, they are not a good work, or Paul was mistaken; and if they are not a good work, they are of necessity a bad work, for there are but the two kinds. Again Paul says: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly (abundantly) in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord, and whatsoever you do in word or deed, do all in the name (or by the authority) of the Lord Jesus." Coll., 3: 16-17. Now, Bro. McGarvey, where does the Lord authorize the work in which you are engaged, I mean your Bible college work, not your preaching. If you know where, will you please inform the brethren, and if you can not show the authority for it in the Bible, ought you not to quit it, as you claim to be governed by the word of the Lord? To conclude, Paul says: "No man knows the things of a man, save the spirit of man that is in him." 1st Cor., 2: 11. No man knows the motives that have prompted me to write this letter but myself. My Heavenly Father knows them, and I know that no bad motive has influenced me to write it, and now, will you please answer it in the Apostolic Guide, or, if you prefer it, write to me privately, and I will not publish it in the FIRM FOUNDATION, if you will give me any good reasons why I should not (I mean this letter), otherwise I will, if the editor thinks it worth publishing.

Your Brother in Christ,
E. HANSBROUGH.

TO S. SCARBOROUGH AND OTHERS,

"Members and Ministers of the Church of Christ."

I find in the Christian Messenger of March 27, 1884, a very singular document, entitled "Special Notice." To it are appended thirty-three names of "Members and Ministers of the Church of Christ," not a few of whom have distinguished themselves as public teachers, and won a good report among the disciples in Texas. These "members and ministers" I declare their own fellowship with a certain teaching, which the Messenger denominates heresy, and "protest against any editor of a Christian paper admitting said teaching into the columns of his paper."

The heresy, as defined by the "Special Notice," is "Preaching the rebaptism of all who unite us from other churches, although they have once been immersed and are satisfied with the one baptism."

This is strange phraseology to be found in a Christian publication and purporting to emanate from "members and ministers of the Church of Christ." The circumstances that called it forth must be very peculiar. Though I have for years been an interested and rather close reader of the publications of the disciples, I do not now remember having met with anything that would serve as a billet for such a bullet as this. To my mind, the document needs explanation, to say the least. Re-baptism, as such, to say nothing of the individual having "been once immersed in the name of Christ, and being satisfied with the one baptism," I have never known advocated, by preacher or paper devoted to the advocacy of primitive Christianity. The controversy, so far as I have observed it, has been as to whether persons who have submitted to immersion under the direction of a false faith (not in the name of Christ), in order to enjoy the fellowship of a human establishment, calling itself a church, have, by that false faith and the false confession which it exacted, attained the end of scriptural baptism, or merely the end proposed by the false faith. The conclusion has almost universally been that, as there is no intrinsic efficacy in water, or the mere act of immersion, as to the washing away of sin, but that the efficacy is in "obeying from the heart the form of doctrine," nothing can accrue from compliance with the requirements of the false faith except the denominational privileges which it proposes. Hence the question has never been about rebaptizing persons who have been baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, but as to whether persons who knew not His authority, and yet submitted to a baptism under other authority than His, can, when they learn His law in the case, readjust their faith and purposes to the newly learned law, so as to transmute the obedience which they rendered the human requirement into obedience to the Lord Jesus.

But if, in the waywardness of human conceit, any preacher professing to be a disciple of Christ, is found guilty of preaching that persons once baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus shall again be baptized in some other name, in order to "unite with us," the thirty-three, or any other would-be standard body of members and ministers, or for any purpose over and above, aside from, or contrary to the law of Christ, we say, let such a one be anathema maranatha. And let every Christian editor publish and fully expose such heresy and heresy, so that neither he nor it may find shelter among us.

But, in the absence of any such well defined case or character, some of us humble members and obscure preachers, who hope, "through much tribulation, to enter into the kingdom of God," are loth to admit the necessity for such a papal bull as this, issued by the self-constituted council of thirty-three, to be sent booming blindfold o'er a Christian land. Nay, brethren, you must have picked up an undischarged bomb from a Romish battle-field, and thought to try your hands by touching it off.

But this is a dangerous experiment—shooting off old shells just for the sport. They sometimes play havoc with the handlers. But, to be serious, brethren, who called this council? Who constituted this body ecclesiastical? Where does it sit? Are you the Church? Are you the "representative men" of the Church, to whom it has been delegated to say who shall be fellowshipped and who shall not—what shall be published and what shall not? Brethren, though I have learned to revere some of your names, and though your number doubles the sacred figure 3, I must question your right to publish blank bulls of excommunication, with sign-manual and the seal of your sacred influence affixed, to be served on any supposed offender at the caprice of any clerical tramp that may find it convenient to play legate for your august body. What right have you to pass sentence of excision as "members and ministers" to the number of thirty-three, or even of seventy times seven, unless you do so as the executives of Christ's law, installed by His authority? And, even then, sentence can only pass against those duly impeached and convicted of infracting that law.

Where is your prisoner at the bar on whom you pronounce this awful sentence? In what open court have the witnesses confronted him? Has he ever heard the charges, or been allowed to open his mouth in his defense? Or is it a star chamber you have? Possibly it's a Spanish inquisition, from whose dismal portal the black coach goes forth at the hour of midnight to apprehend the suspected, and convey him to the secret tribunal, where, on ex parte testimony, the defenseless victim is adjudged guilty of heresy, and doomed to perpetual prison or death. Permit me to remind you, brethren, that the Church and the world have not heard the name of the accused; nor is there a court of record where the indictments can be found. You have reckoned without your host. You have discharged a poisonous shaft in the camp of Israel, for the effects of which you will be held responsible. Nay, rather, you have hurled a boomerang, thinking, perchance, it might crush some man whom you have not the courage to engage in fair and manly encounter, that careens at random, like through the ranks of the innocent and guilty of the latter there be any. Now, brethren, the writer must confess to the misfortune of having been caught in the meshes of a false faith. He once, like Saul, "verily thought he ought to do many things contrary to the name of Christ, which things he also did," such things as going to the mourning bench and begging for pardon in disobedience; and that Christ would do, and had done, many things that were not promised in His name; but he now thanks God that the reading of His word brought him to the true faith as it is in Christ Jesus. And when he learned the faith of Christ, he did not try to modify it to suit former notions or former actions. He did not endeavor by any feat of clerical legerdemain, of post facto hocus-pocus, to convert his submission to Baptist usages into obedience to Christ. He thought it best to heed the holy injunction, "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins." He considered himself embraced in the "every one," and accepted the apostolic declaration that "There is no other name given under heaven among men whereby we may be saved." Faith in this name displaced the false faith that remission comes without obedience and out of Christ. And though he had made the false confession that "God for Christ's sake had pardoned his sins," and though he had received the false baptism that is the meet concomitant of these false antecedents, he counted it as naught when he came to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus—the truth that makes free, indeed. He was not a mere proselyte from a waning Baptist community to a revival movement in "Our Church." He never learned to regard "our Church," "our denomination," "our preacher," "us," or "this reformation" as a saving power or concern in and of itself. When he learned the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, he learned to look to Christ for salvation. Hence union with Christ was the one thing needful, the one thing sought. And this union, he was persuaded, could be effected only by obeying from the heart the form of doctrine declared by the apostles. He found nothing in the Bible to justify the thought of substituting Baptist usages, Methodist or Presbyterian ritualistic requirements for hearty—that is, intelligent—obedience to the law of Christ. He that would honor Christ and enjoy His blessings, must be baptized, because Christ has commanded it, and not merely to perform the ritualistic "non-essential" of some usurpation that would displace the authority of Christ. Hence it is manifest that, having submitted to the baptismal rite of any such usurpation, and then uniting nominally even with those who have obeyed the Lord, does not infiltrate the empty rite or render valid that which was of itself void.

This twelve at Ephesus, though they had received baptism in God's faith under imperfect teaching—a teaching in the right direction, too, as far as it went—had to learn the law of Christ and be baptized by His authority—"in the name of the Lord Jesus."

This document puzzles me!

For whom was it meant? Was it meant for me and those who stand with me? I can not see for whom else. For the character it describes can not be found—"preaching the re-baptism" of those already immersed and "satisfied with the one baptism." That's a myth. It must be meant for us who have no faith in water and mere form and ceremonies. So we are read out of the fellowship of the thirty-three. Has it come to this, that seeking safe ground is reprehensible, and teaching others to enter in the straight gate is damnable heresy? Or must we endeavor to modify the plain teaching of the word so as to make it suit a certain class of sickly sentimentalists that say, "If one thinks a thing is right, and acts accordingly, he is safe?" Must we apologize to our religious opposers by telling them that all this apparently earnest appeal that we have been making for a return to primitive teaching and practice was only intended as an entering wedge for a new sect, and that, having gained that which we desired by it, we are willing to take rank along with the denominations and admit that fealty to Christ is a mere matter of poetry.

Nay, good brethren, some of us can not afford to back down and say: It matters not whom a man obeys, or for what purpose, if he only means well. That is Mr. Ingersoll's doctrine, that all well-meant worship of idols should be accepted by Jehovah as homage indirectly done to Him. But we have not so learned Christ; if it so be that we have heard Him, and been taught by Him, as the truth is in Jesus, that we put away concerning our former conduct the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitfulness of human lust; and be renewed in the spirit of our mind, and put on the new man, which, according to God's word, is created in righteousness and true holiness. Very different this from what you and Mr. Ingersoll's teach, that, going to the idol's temple, or to the sanctum of sectarianism, to find release from sin and conforming to the requirements or the idolatrous shrine—in which is received the "mere ordinance of the church" (sect) as "a sign and a seal" of sectarian privileges—one gains concerning his former conduct, in this old man, which is corrupt, according to the deceitfulness of human lust, all that is in Christ Jesus.

So, then, according to your and Mr. Ingersoll's theory, it matters not whether it be Baptist, Methodist, Mormon, Mohammedan or Pagan form of religion that makes the proselyte, just so (immersion) is administered, his walking fellowship in your broad range so easily sanctifies the old man with his former deeds and sets him at once upon the highway of human holiness. For does not each of these religions christen the proselytes into its sect favor and fellowship? Is not the rite they each administer that of the sect, and not that of Christ? Take, even, that sect which has must scriptural aspects, the Baptist; does it not, by its sovereign sect usages, in this age of the world, and especially in Texas, require the candidate for membership to confess "that God, for Christ's sake, has pardoned his sins;" and this, too, with the understanding that repentance has preceded faith and secured the pardon as a condition precedent to the reception of baptism as a means of admission into Baptist fellowship?

Now, is it possible that such proselytism as this can make its victims Christians? Are we to turn from the plain teaching of the apostles and assure the victims of this false gospel that if they will only "unite with us" it will convert all their false faith, false confession, and false baptism (a "non-essential," "mere ordinance") into genuine obedience to Christ? If so, then has Mr. Ingersoll discovered the true theory of religion, and heathenism is Christianity under another name; the canonized paganism of the Romish establishment of Christian philosophy.

But I am reminded that your edict proposes to put a quietus on this question; that you have muzzled the press, so that this nor aught else, contrary to your authoritative ideas, can enter the columns of a Christian paper. And your effort seems to be effectual, in part, at least, for I have written to the Messenger, and failed, so far, to get a hearing. Still I give you this bit of MS. Will you read it among yourselves, even if you can not allow it to go into the columns of a Christian paper? And, if you still think it your special prerogative to judge the brethren and disfellowship those who insist on obedience to God rather than obedience to man, or made institutions, we, who are not satisfied with the blind obedience rendered to the ordinances of men, must forego the high favor of your fellowship and the privilege of the columns you control; and content ourselves with the fellowship of those whom the Gospel has made free, and communication with those who know no master but Christ.

How men of your opportunities and professed convictions could get their consent to put forth such a manifesto as this "Special Notice," is the wonder to me. You certainly did not consider its possible effects—that it might become a stone of stumbling and a rock of offense to the weak and unwary, and an instrument of deception in the hands of the wicked. Suppose, for example, some earnest, but not very well informed seeker after the way of life, should be caught, as was the writer, in one of these modern sectarian cubes, and, from the reading of the Scriptures, as in his case, should become convinced that he had missed the right road, seeing he had submitted to Baptist usages, instead of apostolic precepts, how is he to correct his course? Is he to be assured that merely changing company will cause the steps he has taken on the Baptist by-way to cover that part of the Christian highway which he had missed? If not, how then? Is it to be expected of the timid seeker after truth, just emerging from the darkness and thralldom of sect-dominion, that he will have the boldness to defy the decision of this venerable body of thirty-three, and say: I must decide this matter for myself? Will he not rather say: They are learned; they are experienced; they know better than I do; and they have decided that an immersion in water, as a religious formality, no matter as to the convictions or purposes of the candidate, is valid baptism? Though, as he reads and reasons, he may be troubled with the reflection: this is not exactly what is presented to my mind by the New Testament, nor what these ministers present in their sermons, for I read that Paul commanded the twelve at Ephesus, who had been baptized "unto John's baptism," to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, and I hear these ministers preach that baptism without a hearty faith in the Son of God and a turning away from sin is utterly worthless. He, nevertheless, will try to satisfy himself that these "ministers and members" would not have him or any one else be content with less than, or something different from, what the Lord requires. So in this proneness to pay deference to human experience and human judgment, if not even to human presumptions, many an honest soul has been led to live in doubt and fear for years, not knowing whether or not the demands of the gospel have been complied with as to the act of baptism. This state of doubt and the manner of treatment it receives from some preachers have driven some into utter skepticism. But not a few of the more thoughtful and conscientious have, little by little, climbed the scale of truth till they have reached a plane above the level of the preacher that places the validity of baptism in a ritualistic dipping, and demanded by the obedience of the faith; to be buried with Christ by baptism into His death.

Behold, brethren, ye are proud to be called Christians, and rest in the gospel, and make your boast of the knowledge of God, and know His will, and approve the things that are more excellent, being instructed out of the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus; and are confident that ye yourselves are guides of the blind, a light to them that sit in darkness; instructors of the foolish, teachers of babes, who have the form of knowledge and the truth as it is in Jesus. Ye, therefore, who teach others, teach ye not yourselves? Ye that say one must believe on the Lord Jesus, repent of his sins, confess the name of Christ, and be baptized according to the holy commandment for the remission of sins, refuse ye to allow men to do and teach these things? Ye that make your boast of the law of Christ, do ye not dishonor Christ by teaching that men need not obey from the heart the doctrine of Christ? For the cause of truth is reproached among the sects, as it is written, "Without faith it is impossible to please God," and "whatsoever is not of faith is sin."

But ye say that a ritualistic immersion, without the faith of the gospel, without the preparation or purification of the heart that the gospel requires, makes one a Christian. Thus ye make void the commandment of the Lord, and put the bludgeon into the hands of the enemies of the truth. With what force may they now not say: "Did we not tell you that these Campbellites, who call themselves Christians, teach 'water alone regeneration' and 'water alone salvation'?" And here we have it put on record by themselves. Here are thirty-three of their representative 'members and ministers' that have published to the world that immersion alone, no matter by whom or for what purpose administered, entitles one to membership in their church and a home in glory. Here's salvation in the water, just so there is enough in which to immerse. There is no question now but that they place all the efficacy in the formal act of immersion. They will not admit that our faith or our profession of religion is valid; but our baptism, without any valid faith or confession, if it but be immersion in water, is their one saving ordinance and all-powerful 'Christian baptism.' If this is not 'water regeneration' and 'water salvation,' human language could hardly express anything of the kind."

Thus do they comfort themselves, and thus will they confute those who endorse this modern creed. Brethren, behold yourselves as in a glass.

Allow me to suggest, that a much more effective way—and a Christian way—to settle such questions as this, is by presenting the clear teaching of the Scriptures on any given subject, as in contrast with any error that may be advanced or held, so that the people may be convinced, as intelligent, thinking creatures, as to what is the truth in the case. For this clerical dictum, that would strangle investigation, stun conscience and muzzle the press, smells of the smoke of the Vatican, and is wholly out of place in a free country like this, and among a people who take the Bible for their guide.

J. A. HENDERSON.

This document, as may be seen from its contents, was called forth by that remarkable "Special Notice," published in the Christian Messenger, early in 1858. Although the author applied to that paper, he could not get a hearing. He afterward sent a somewhat revised copy of this (the original draft) to the Texas Christian, at Thorp's Springs. But, as he suspected and suggested, that paper refused to let it see the light through its columns. And now, late, after the loss of some of its freshness, but none of its vigor, it comes to the paper that wears neither golden bit nor brazen muzzle.

THE CHURCH.—No. 2.

Baptism is the appointed act of induction into the church. Before baptism we are out of the church. When baptized into Christ (Gal., 3:27) we are new creatures, walking in a new life, called out from the world. If there is any other way of "joining the church," it will be easy to show it. One quotation from the New Testament will settle the matter. If no other method can be found, it follows that those who have been baptized into Christ, and are really living the new life, are in His church, wherever they may be. Popular usage treats them as out of the church until they conform to some man-made method of admission. Two or three or fifty persons having been baptized into Christ in the same town or neighborhood, or having been made disciples elsewhere, and having migrated to the same town or neighborhood, are not recognized as a church until they go through the form of what they call "organization." Having organized, another disciple coming among them is not held to be a member of the church at that place until a certain formality called "joining the church," is observed. Now, if there is any authority in the scriptures for this procedure, in precept or example, we ought to be able to find it. If that was the apostolic practice, is it not a marvellous circumstance that all the New Testament writers are silent concerning it?

If, then, there is but the one way of "joining the church" known to the scriptures, how can any one who regards their authority, perform the farce of taking into the church a Baptist or Methodist or anybody else without baptism? If the applicant's former baptism was valid, it brought him into Christ, that is, it made him a member of Christ's body, which is his church. If so, how can obedience to any commandment of man improve his condition? Can one be in the church and out of the church at the same time? When ambitious men began to speak perverse things, to draw away disciples after them, it became necessary to devise some means of distinguishing and separating their followers from others, to hold them for their exclusive support and aggrandizement. Hence party creeds and party names and party organization. ~~It~~ ~~was~~ ~~not~~ ~~uncommon~~ ~~to~~ ~~find~~ ~~that~~ ~~these~~ ~~parties~~ ~~designed~~ ~~to~~ ~~persuade~~ ~~those~~ ~~who~~ ~~are~~ ~~supposed~~ ~~to~~ ~~have~~ ~~become~~ ~~disciples~~, ~~that~~ ~~they~~ ~~are~~ ~~out~~ ~~of~~ ~~their~~ ~~duty~~ ~~if~~ ~~they~~ ~~do~~ ~~not~~ ~~"join~~ ~~the~~ ~~church."~~ This is sectarianism, pure and simple—more to be deplored than a party name or a party creed, because it is the very act of forming a party.

On one occasion the hand of fellowship was given to Paul and Barnabas, not to admit them into the church, but to express authoritatively the apostolic approval of their course in preaching to and receiving the Gentiles, without requiring them to come under the law of Moses. There can be no impropriety in giving your faithful brother the hand of fellowship every day. But it is peculiarly improper to make this act play a part in admitting one into the church. To do so implies that you have some authority or discretion in the matter, when, in truth, you have none. You are obliged to fellowship all who come in according to law, until by rebellion they forfeit their relation. If you do not, you cut off yourself. You have no choice in the matter. R. J. R.

BRO. ALLEN'S ATTITUDE.

A BLIND LEADER OF THE BLIND.

It will be remembered by all readers of the Guide and those who read our last issue, that Bro. Allen held out the idea to his readers that he was going to furnish scriptural authority for receiving immersed sectarians into the Church (?) on their unintelligent immersion. But, in all candor and seriousness, we would ask those who read his "Reimmersion Scripturally Considered," if if they have been able to glean from it scriptural authority for this practice? And we would ask him, in no taunting spirit, but in the spirit of earnestness, if these husks of "wordly wisdom" and fag-ends of sophistry that have grown so stale and innutritious are the best he can furnish intelligent men and women who are hungering and thirsting after the truth? We grant that his effort is about as strong an argument (?) as we have ever seen from his side of the question; but he has blustered so about our position being "A Modern Apostasy," and the most dangerous thing of the nineteenth century; and then made his readers such unstinted promises in the way of scriptural authority and unget-over-able argument, that we were roused up and stimulated with the idea that this famous logician was going to give us some over-looked proof text, and lighten up the dark and gloomy way that intervenes between our position and the grounds upon which he stands, with that "light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world": For if this "true light" can be thrown upon the way so that we can go over to where he is, by "walking in the light," we would gladly abandon the obnoxious grounds we occupy for the pleasure grounds upon which he stands. But we will never attempt the journey if we have to turn our back upon the "Sun of righteousness" and walk in our own shadow, or the shadow of any other man, though he be the acknowledged leader of all of the unsuspecting and misguided Christians on earth.

Brethren, we beseech you to beware of those who are now leading you! There is a responsibility at this point that rests upon every individual man and woman of the King's army. "Watch!" "Prove all things: hold fast that which is good." Remember, brethren and sisters; that "Whatever ye do in word or deed must be done by authority of the Lord Jesus."

Now, we would repeat our question: has that authority been given by Bro. Allen? or does it exist?

We mean no disrespect to Bro. Allen, or other popular leaders, when we say that his article has not a vestige of authority in it, above that usurped and exercised by those whose zeal for a human plea has, step by step, wooed and won them from the path and footsteps of the apostles into that broad and broadening way that rapidly diverges from the "straight and narrow way" into the thickest fogs of Babylon and the kingdom of darkness.

Human nature is too weak to refuse the reins of place and power when tendered to them; and when these reins are once put into human hands, their grasp grows tighter and tighter.

The great mass of the brotherhood is greatly responsible for the manner in which many men are to day acting as "lords over God's heritage." God forbid that we should ever say one word tending to disparage a cheerful rendering unto every worthy Christian, all that is due him as a Christian, from Christians. But we must "learn not to think of men above that which is written." "Let no man deceive himself." If any man among us seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God; for it is written He taketh the wise in their own craftiness. And, again, the Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise that they are vain.

Therefore, let no man glory in men; for all things are yours, whether Allen; or McGarvey; or Errett, or Lipscomb; or Barnes, or McPherson, or Hall, or Clark, or Penn, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come—all are yours; and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's.

It is high time, brethren, that each soldier of the cross was girding about his loins with truth, and putting on the breast-plate of righteousness, so as not to be tossed to and fro, and carried about by every wind of doctrine that the sleight of men, through cunning craftiness, may set to ensnare them.

We dare say that, under a cool, quiet state of the mind of the brotherhood, Bro. Allen would not have offered his "Reimmersion Scripturally Considered" for any consideration. But after the public mind has been worked up to fever-heat of prejudice, by these lordly pastors and hierarchal college men and their pliant subalterns, crying "hobby! modern apostasy!" etc., anything, almost, will pass for argument.

We ask not the sympathy of our brethren unless we can show good grounds for opposing this practice of receiving men into the Church by a shake of the hand instead of by obedience to the Gospel.

But we simply request a candid and impartial hearing. This, true brothers and sisters in Christ, will grant us, while many will fall into line against us, at the beck and call of these eminent dignitaries, and echo their epithets against us throughout the land. We say we mean no disrespect to Bro. Allen in what we may say about his positions, because, when a man once espouses the cause of error and becomes its tutelary to that extreme extent that Bro. Allen has in this case—as evidenced by his acrimonious allusions and unsavory epithets directed at those who differ from him on this question—it is the rule that he becomes blind to questions of right or wrong, and looks only in the direction that promises protection to the cause he defends. His cause is "our plea"—the grounds occupied by the fathers of "this reformation." If their grounds were wrong at any point, he is wrong at that very same point; and he does not intend to re-examine these grounds. He is very much like Paul when he was opposing truth and persecuting the followers of Christ. Paul said he thought he ought to do many things contrary to Christ. He even bound men and women and compelled them to blaspheme, and gave his consent unto their death. His fathers had a plea, too; and he, doubtless, brought more Scripture, and argued for it with a zeal and determination far beyond anything that Bro. Allen has done for "our plea."

While Paul opposed Christ, and sought to serve God through the long established customs of the fathers—although he was eminently wise in the eyes of his friends and followers—he was supremely foolish in the eyes of God and the little army of the faith. So it is with Bro. Allen and others who are wedded to a mistake of our fathers, that virtually renders the word of God of none effect.

Bro. Allen's article, promising so much, turns out to be simply a desperate effort to muddy the clear waters of truth, so that casual and superficial readers may be caught in his snares of sophistry and become lost to the real issue.

We must apologize to the reader for the length of our introductory remarks, and come to the consideration of Bro. Allen's attitude. Yet much more needs to be said right along the line we have been traveling: ~~and now, what excuse shall we render for occupying the seeming attitude of thrusting ourself upon a man whose "self-respect" forbids his noticing what we say?~~ In the eyes of the genteel and punctilious ones of the world, and those who "conform to the world," we are aware that our attitude will appear very abject and groveling.

But, however scornfully Bro. Allen may spurn the idea of noticing what we say, and seek to shield himself and his untenable attitude behind the code of ethics that control the worldly-minded, we will have him to understand that we bid defiance to all such puny barriers, and step across them as we would a mark in the sand, when the truth of God demands it; and if we thereby subject ourself to the sneers and scoffs of those who render obeisance to the "God of this world," our duty is to set a face of flint to all that may come from such quarters, and, with unswerving tread in the pathway of duty, "rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer shame for His name." God grant that we may never fail of the courage to pursue this course.

Bro. Allen says: "We start with the commission of Christ to His apostles. This is the fundamental law of the Kingdom. On it all others are based, and to it they must conform. It contains our only authority for baptizing. What it does not authorize us to do, we may not do. What conflicts with it is prohibited by virtue of the conflict. This commission states that the immersed believer is pardoned. Faith and repentance are made the conditions on which remission is promised to the immersed. It is not stated here nor elsewhere that one must understand what baptism is for, and have that purpose in view as a condition of receiving the promised pardon. Every penitent believer, therefore, who is immersed, as the Savior here directs, has this promise."

We can heartily subscribe to most of this language, though there lurks in it two fatal mistakes.

There are other things said by Bro. Allen in his article that we shall notice at another time. But, for the present, we shall show wherein we differ from him upon this quotation, which we shall do in a few words, and then devote the remainder of this to holding up a very palpable inconsistency of his, to the perception of all candid eyes. But if the vision of any is blinded by that very effective veil—prejudice—of course they will not see; for none are so blind as those that will not see. This class, like their blind leader, will all fall in the ditch.

Now we will pass briefly over his language to see where we agree, and where disagreement sets in. Yes, the commission is the fundamental law of the Kingdom, upon which all others are based and all must conform to it. Yes, it contains the only authority for baptizing; and what it does not authorize, may not be done; and what conflicts with it is prohibited. It is also true that the commission promises salvation to the immersed believer—that is, to the immersed believer of the Gospel that the apostles were sent to preach and did preach—not to a Gospel (?) perverted and limited by human bounds to meet the special demands of human creeds and "pleas;" but the pure, unsmoothed word of God by which faith comes.

But we will not dwell here at present. When he says that "faith and repentance are made the conditions on which remission is promised to the immersed," we say no! "Confession with the mouth" is just as much a condition as any other that he has named; and yet he has left it out, and intentionally, too, we suppose; because he knows that his plea for the union of immersed sectarians, must inevitably go down under the weight of "the good confession" the moment he takes it aboard of his rickety craft. But we shall also defer our affirmative argument for the confession to some future issue of our paper. We here promise that it shall be given in due time. But now we want to see how Brother Allen's record stands on this question. We want to show how he, like Brother McGarvey, "clings to this confession" as one of the indispensable conditions or antecedents to immersion, when he is not hampered by the immediate and special demands of "our plea;" and then how he slips it off of his theological chess-board when he goes to play a game for this plea. How sad it is to see brethren who are capable of doing so much for Christ thus surrender themselves to the vile spirit of sectarianism. We invite the reader's attention to language found on pp. 229-230 of the "Old Path Pulpit." Here Brother Allen says: "I once immersed an old lady who had been a devoted Methodist for, perhaps, forty years. I was baptizing, and she came up unexpectedly to all and demanded immersion. Without a word, except to take her confession, I immersed her. As she came up out of the water, she exclaimed, in the hearing of all, 'Thank God! I no longer have any doubts about my baptism.' This showed that she had been in doubt about it, but she had kept her doubts to herself. I had never before heard her express a doubt upon that point, and I had a reasonable right to know her mind, for she was my own dear old mother!"

Three very important points are developed by this record of the doings of the man who now would have us believe that confession is a non-essential. (1) It develops the fact that under the serious and solemn circumstances of the immersion of his own dear mother, when all else but the right ways of the Lord were forgotten and far from his mind, which was in no frame for trifling with truth and right by weighing them in human scales, he took the confession of his mother before he would immerse her. (2) It shows that although this old lady had made what Bro. McGarvey calls "a statement," and which statement passed current for a valid confession at the bar of the kingdom of the clergy, when "our plea" is on trial, it passed for naught on this very significant occasion. (3) It shows that although Bro. Allen and his coadjutors in this wicked work of exalting "our plea" above the all-sufficient rule of faith and practice, have held that the confession was a matter that concerned only the administrator; that it was his means of determining whether or not the candidate was a fit subject for baptism—a believer. We say that although this has been their position when pressed at this point, it was not so considered by Bro. Allen in this case, for he surely entertained no doubts, nor even a shadow of a doubt, about the condition of his own dear mother's mind in reference to the Christhood of Jesus of Nazareth. Surely not, since she had been a "devoted member of the Methodist church for perhaps thirty years!"

Reader, we desire that you shall fully understand the object we have in view in examining this conduct of Bro. Allen where his mother was the candidate for baptism and he the administrator. Remember that we have taken this case just as we found it upon the pages of his "Old Path Pulpit"—as it pleased him to send it forth to the world. Far be it from our intention to say one word fraught with the slightest suggestion in reference to this reverent event that would lead in the direction of levity or irreverence. It would have been an occasion of rejoicing for us to have seen that son "bury" his dear old mother with Christ. It was doubtless a profoundly solemn and impressive sight to behold. But we are deeply in earnest about this question, and we do not intend to treat our readers to child's play in reference to it. We intend to measure these popular leaders up and down and on every side, whose love for a human plea leads them to issue such pronouncements as a "A Modern Apostasy" against those who are "striving together for the faith of the Gospel." Then we would have the reader to understand that in examining this case Bro. Allen has reported in his popular book that he acted upon the very principle that virtually nullifies the baptism of every Methodist, Baptist, or other sectarian that ever went down into the water under "orthodox" (?) teaching. His "taking her confession" was and is a virtual repudiation by him of Methodist confession (?) for she had doubtless made the same confession that all other Methodists make, and he would not accept it. Why, then, would he accept it on the part of others? Why would such a confession (?) on the part of some other man's mother, or father, or brother, or sister, be accepted by him and rejected when it was his mother? Will this sage teacher, come down off of his high stilts of self respect long enough to give us some light right along here, and thereby act consistently with the true humble spirit of sure-enough christianity?

Brethren mark it, he will not notice this, unless he decides to empty himself of himself, and confess his fault, and rectify the error that he has been teaching, for he had as well undertake to stop the earth from revolving on its axis as to try to harmonize his course in reference to his baptism of his mother, with his teaching and practice in reference to receiving immersed persons from the sects. The two practices will not harmonize. This reputed logician may attempt to weave them together by some sophistical process, but when he has finished it up it will be just as strong as a rope of sand. Now, if he acted exactly right when he baptized his mother, does he do so when he acts differently, which he does when he baptizes others without this same confession, or accepts them as scripturally baptized when baptized by others without it? If he is anxious to find the real "apostate," we will lend him our assistance. We would have him to understand that quite a number of Guide readers will see this and will expect him to rise and explain. Will he do it? This is only the beginning. We are reading the "Old Path Pulpit," my brother, and we intend that you shall be tried in our columns by your own words. "By thy acts thou shalt be justified and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." But this is already too long. A. MCG.

WALDO, Ark., May 31.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Through the influence of Bro. Bright of Nevada county, Ark., I am a reader of the FIRM FOUNDATION, and am well pleased with it. My time is about out, and my money too, but if you will continue it to me I will pay you in a month or two. I don't want to miss a number.

I want you to give me some light on the fifth verse of the third chapter of John. What birth did our Savior refer to when he said, "except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the Kingdom of God?" Our Sunday school teacher said the water referred to the natural birth. Don't you think the Spirit and water both refer to the new birth? By answering the above you will greatly oblige a brother and friend.

W. H. RUSSELL.

We have never been able to see a possible hope of harmony with the general scope of the teachings of the New Testament for any other position in reference to this language of our Savior than the one that it refers to the teaching of the Spirit which culminates, or eventuates, in true Christian baptism. Paul says, "By one Spirit we are all baptized into one body." Again, the same apostle says, "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." The "one body" must be the Kingdom of God. To put on Christ must be to become His subjects, which can only be done by becoming a member of His kingdom, or church, over which He is head, and which our Lord said could not be done except through a birth of water and the Spirit.

We believe, then, that we do the truth no violence when we paraphrase it thus: "By the Spirit sent down from heaven we are all led into the Kingdom of God through the washing of regeneration; or, by the Spirit our hearts are prepared for obedience of that form of doctrine delivered to us, by which we are baptized or born into the one body—the Kingdom of God." Our "orthodox" friends, to which class we presume the Sunday school teacher that our brother refers to belongs, hold that the language, "by one Spirit we are all baptized into one body," has reference to the baptism of the Holy Spirit.

If this be true, then we are all aliens to the kingdom of God, for none of us have been baptized by the Holy Spirit, else we would manifest it through the same signs that always accompanied Holy Spirit baptisms in the primitive days of the church. Why not? Will not the same cause produce the same effect? Then, according to this, if we are saved we must be saved outside of the Kingdom of God. But this is simply worn-out nonsense, that is radically at variance with every page of the Volume of Inspiration. Paul says: "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost." Is baptism of the Holy Spirit ever called a washing? What is called a washing? Every one acquainted with the Word of Life, which makes us free indeed, knows that water baptism is the washing here referred to. See Acts, 22:16; Eph., 6:26; I Peter, 3:21. The last, though not using the word "wash," uses "putting away the filth of the flesh," which is the very same idea differently expressed.

That Sunday school teacher, and all others who, like him, are shut out from the glowing beams of the Sun of Righteousness by the black pall of sectarianism, ought to go to the foot of their classes until they learn that the Lord said, "Except a man be born again he can not see the Kingdom of God," and that in the explanation of this language He said "Except a man (not a baby, as his natural birth theory needs it) be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the Kingdom of God." So, then, it matters not how much water may be used at the "natural birth," or elsewhere, for except those who have been thus born and washed at their first, or natural birth, are born again of water and the Spirit, they can not see or enter the Kingdom of God.

Again, if the Savior did not here have reference to baptism when He spoke of the birth of water, He has contradicted himself, for He has said in another place that "He that believes and is baptized shall be saved." And if to believe the Gospel and be baptized does not include the birth of water spoken of in John, 3:5, then in the latter our Lord has promised salvation, where in the former he has denied it, unless He proposes to save outside of, as well as in, His kingdom. Were the three thousand at Pentecost outside of the kingdom when Peter began his preaching? If they were, then they were translated into the kingdom by hearing and gladly receiving the words of Peter and being baptized; or they were saved by this, and were yet outside of the kingdom, and must yet be "born of water and the Spirit," to get into it. What act will more nearly assimilate a birth of water than immersion in water? Will these "orthodox" Sunday school teachers, or their D. D.'s tell us? If there be such a thing as a "birth of water," immersion is the thing itself; and, when it is complied with by one who is led to it by the teachings of the Spirit, it becomes wholly and in fact what our Lord spoke of in John, 3:5; and what Peter wrote of when he said: "Seeing you have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit" (that is just how the truth came—"through the Spirit"); and again, when he said: "Being born AGAIN (having been born again) not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and bideth forever." We must say that some of our brethren contradict Peter at this point by holding to a theory and a plea that validates corruptible seed—when they are irrigated. Peter, in speaking of these brethren having been "born again," must have referred to the same thing our Lord did, when he said: "Except a man be born again." He does not mention the water, because he was writing to those who knew as well as he did, that immersion in water was a part of the process of "being born again"—they knew it, because they, as Peter told them, had been thus born. But our Lord did explain it to Nicodemus, who had not been born again. Peter was assuring his brethren, who, it seems, were on the eve of falling away, not that they had been born again; but that that word, or incorruptible seed, which had superinduced their new birth, would live and abide forever—that it was sure and steadfast, and would not fail of any good thing it had caused them to hope for; that, whether it had promised something one day ahead or one thousand years, it would all surely be fulfilled; for one day is with God as a thousand years.

Yes, my brother, as surely as that one must be born of the Spirit, so surely is it that he must be born of the water, because the conjunction "and" in our Lord's language binds them together unto the same end. Then, as you say, they both refer to the new birth.

A brother has written us, requesting us to review an article by one of the editors of the Apostolic Guide, on this same subject. We have not that issue of the Guide at hand, but we remember that the writer of that article took the position that our Lord's language to Nicodemus could not apply to any but Jews. We have not the space to elaborate on this, to us, very strange position, neither do we think that it requires many words to show its error. "Except a man (not a Jew) be born again, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God." Then, if this does not refer to Gentiles as well as Jews, Gentiles can have no part in the Kingdom of God. But Paul says: "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles." There is no such a "wall" between Jews and Gentiles as this that said editor is trying to erect. Both Jews and Gentiles must come into the Kingdom of God or be lost; and all who do come in are baptized in by the one Spirit. As surely, then, as that a belief of the gospel and baptism induced by the gospel, is a "birth of water and the Spirit," so surely is it that the birth spoken of by Christ refers to all men and all ages. Gentiles have all been born "of the flesh," and they must be born "of the Spirit," or all be damned—they must become "new creatures," which they cannot become, unless they are "born again," which they cannot do unless they are "born of water and the Spirit." A. McG.

TALK WITH THE SISTERS.

DEAR SISTERS: Did you read Bro. Adams' contribution, a few issues back, entitled "Reasons Why a Traveling Methodist Preacher Should not Smoke?" I am so glad he sent it, and asked the question "if it is wrong for Methodists and preachers, generally, to chew and smoke, and sisters to dip tobacco, why not discard the vile habit at once?" I say so, too. No doubt the money spent for tobacco alone, in the United States, would feed and give shelter to all of its poor; and when we consider the thousands who have never heard the pure gospel of our dear Savior, and who will never hear it until Christians send men to preach it to them, and compare the paltry sums contributed for this purpose with the large amounts of money expended for this one sinful and injurious habit, it ought to make us hang our heads in shame, and throw our filthy mops and bottles from us forever. I have entered houses where not a book or paper was to be seen, and upon asking why they did not take any periodicals, would receive the reply, "we are not able," but at the same time the women would be engaged in that most repulsive pastime, snuff dipping, and the men chewing or smoking, while their only light at night would be a brass hand-lamp, without chimney, poisoning the atmosphere that they breathed with its sickening smoke. Why, the women's snuff bill alone would furnish the house with nice bright lamps, and periodicals enough to take up all of their spare time. Let us calculate it. Most snuff dippers use a bottle a week, treats counted in, which, at thirty-five cents a bottle, would make $1.40 per month, or $16.80 per year. This is enough to pay for almost every Christian publication in the United States. But this is not all. It is poisonous to the body and mind, a fact attested by a majority of the most intelligent physicians of the world; and I venture to say there is not one physician that would tell you it is beneficial. It destroys the energy of many, almost entirely enervates others, and brings on fatal and slow diseases, which are incurable as long as the habit is persisted in. This much for the body; now for its effects upon the mind. It blunts all the sensibilities, injures its capacity for concentrated thought, and in thousands of cases produces violent insanity. Now let us look at it from a Christian standpoint. The apostle says, "be temperate in all things," and perhaps in no case is this injunction so disregarded as in the use of tobacco, as few, if any, tobacco users, are temperate. Again, Paul says: "Wives, be in subjection to your husbands," and I have never seen a man yet who approved of his wife using tobacco; so she violates this command. Again the command is: "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together," which is the manner of some snuff dipping sisters, I know. Weeks will elapse without their presence at the Lord's table, and the reason assigned is, "I could not get through my work in time;" yet they will take a half hour, or an hour of this time, to seat themselves comfortably and dip snuff, no matter how late.

Sisters, do you think God accepts such weak excuses? I think not. I know full well that this habit has become the "right eye" and the "right hand" with many sisters. That they love it better than their husbands, and better than our dear Savior who loved us and gave himself up for us, is proven by their clinging to it in the face of Scripture. But the Savior commands you to "pluck it out" and "cut it off," lest your whole body be cast into hell.

Again, the Scripture saith: "Whatsoever ye do do all in the name of Christ," or by his authority. "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatever ye do, do all to the glory of God." Now, can you dip snuff to the glory of God? or does Christ authorize you to do it? Never! never did Christ authorize the indulgence of an injurious, useless, carnal appetite.

Paul says: "What know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ?" Again, "Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost?" Then have you a right to defile this temple thus? Truly, "she that useth tobacco sinneth against her own body."

Please read I Cor., 1. Imagine, if you can, Mary of Bethany seated at Jesus' feet with a snuff mop in her mouth, and having to run to the window every few minutes to spit, or busy Martha preparing His meals with snuff streaming down the corners of her mouth. Do you think they would have escaped rebuke? And yet I have seen zealous (?) sisters get up and leave the meeting-house during preaching, ostensibly to attend to their babies, but really to dip. So completely had this carnal habit become master of them that it rendered the gospel powerless to interest them. How sad! how deplorable!

Now, let us sum up its deleterious effects in a few words:

1. It involves the expenditure of millions; yea, billions of dollars, that might be used to furnish bodily and spiritual food to God's poor.
2. It injures the body by poisoning every vital organ.
3. It blunts the mind.
4. It injures the soul, in that it causes us to squander hours; yea, years of priceless time, that should be profitably employed in the performance of Christian duties.

Oh, let us be careful lest in fostering these darling habits and sins we lose our immortal souls.

N. B.—If, on reading this, one sister should resolve to cast off this filthy habit, and do so, and write me of it, I would feel gloriously rewarded. S.

THE LITTLE PREACHER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Experience teaches me that the little preacher has a hard time. He is usually poor in this world's goods, and therefore almost illiterate, and must work five or six days in each week in order to support himself and family, and during the week prepare a discourse for Saturday night and the Lord's day and then be ridiculed for his ungrammatical speech. For several years prior to my obedience to the gospel, I greatly desired to be a preacher. I entertained some hopes of receiving an education, although my parents were poor. But now I have reached the age of 22, have been preaching three years, and have but little learning, and my hopes in that direction are vanished. I must be contented with being a "little preacher," for in this age of the world a person is not apt to become what is termed a "big preacher" without a liberal share of education, but every member of the body of Christ has its office to fill, and I hope yet to come off more than conqueror, through him that loved us and died for us.

I am persuaded that there are but few who know how to sympathize with the little preacher.

Many persons are like I used to be; they think the true gospel preachers receive a direct call from God, and that they do not have to study at all in order to preach, but they think that God just puts his words in their mouths (like he did in the apostles) and all they have to do is

THE LITTLE PREACHER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Experience teaches me that the little preacher has a hard time. He is usually poor in this world's goods, and therefore almost illiterate, and must work five or six days in each week in order to support himself and family, and during the week prepare a discourse for Saturday night and the Lord's day and then be ridiculed for his ungrammatical speech. For several years prior to my obedience to the gospel, I greatly desired to be a preacher. I entertained some hopes of receiving an education, although my parents were poor. But now I have reached the age of 22, have been preaching three years, and have but little learning, and my hopes in that direction are vanished. I must be contented with being a "little preacher," for in this age of the world a person is not apt to become what is termed a "big preacher" without a liberal share of education, but every member of the body of Christ has its office to fill, and I hope yet to come off more than conqueror, through him that loved us and died for us.

I am persuaded that there are but few who know how to sympathize with the little preacher.

Many persons are like I used to be; they think the true gospel preachers receive a direct call from God, and that they do not have to study at all in order to preach, but they think that God just puts his words in their mouths (like he did in the apostles) and all they have to do is to open their mouths and let the word come. I believe some preachers(?) hold to that doctrine; they fail to study, and perhaps that accounts for the miserable failures they make when trying to preach. But when we learn that inspiration ceased with the apostles, and take into consideration the directions given to an uninspired preacher was to "STUDY to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth;" and then, that the little preacher, with but little education, working hard from sun up to sun down five or six days in the week, and during that time prepare two or three discourses, and then riding his poor worked down horse, or walking from five to thirty miles on Saturday or Lord's day to deliver them to perhaps an unthankful, mocking congregation, then we certainly can see that the little preacher has a hard time.

Sometimes a brother, moved with pity, will try to raise a little money for the preacher, and he approaches another brother and kindly asks him if he can not throw in something, but the brother replies, "No. I don't believe in anybody preaching for money, and if I had known he was coming here for our money I would not have listened to his miserable talk; he can't preach, nohow." "Yes, but his family is in actual want," urges the other. "It makes no difference," comes the reply, "let him stay at home and work for them like I do. If I have to pay my way to heaven I'll not get there." Now such an one as this need not scare himself about getting to heaven for he'll not get there any how unless he changes his course considerably.

Suppose everyone should stay at home like he did, there would be no preaching. If there had never been any preaching there would be no salvation, for "It hath pleased God through the foolishness of preaching, to save them that believe."—I Cor., 1: xxi.

As a rule, men do not believe in paying the preacher, because they do not want to pay him.

Just let a "big preacher" come along and preach a few times, nearly every member is willing to give him something. You approach that brother that did not want to pay his way to heaven, ask him if he can give something to this preacher (he reasons in his mind that perhaps this man is pretty well off, and nearly all the brethren are contributing to his support, and should I fail to do so I would become unpopular and would lose my influence in business circles), he answers, "certainly, he's worth listening to, and besides he spends his entire time studying and preaching."

Thus the little preacher is robbed of his just rights, accused of preaching for money, and the "big preacher" carries off the fleece of the flock and is praised greatly for his self-sacrifices, when perhaps he has done nothing like as much good as has the little preacher.

And pray, what humble proclaimer of the gospel would not devote his entire time to studying and preaching if he was supported? God knows, that I, for one, long to see the day when I can abandon all secular pursuits and devote my whole time to the study and preaching of His glorious truths.

Again; sometimes a little preacher goes into a neighborhood where the gospel has never been preached and labors faithfully for a considerable time, and quite a number of his hearers are almost persuaded to be Christians, and about this time along comes one of those "fine haired," college-bred preachers, and he, by his flowery speeches and wisdom of words completely charms his entire audience, he gives an invitation, a goodly number present themselves for membership, and it is heard on every hand: "See what this preacher has done; he has done more good in preaching two or three sermons than that other fellow did in six months;" when, in reality, the "little preacher" deserves all (or nearly so) the credit. No use to go back there; the itching ears of the people have been tickled so by the grand oratory of the "big preacher," that a common preacher is now beneath their notice.

I do not wish to be understood to oppose educated, talented preachers. I am far from it. Would that we had a hundred-fold more than we have. But I do object to the little preacher being almost or entirely overlooked, as is the case at present.

I also object to those worldly-wise, money-loving preachers, who, in order to show off their learning, use such big words the common class of people can't understand them, nor learn from them anything more about Christianity than an Arkansas goose knows about Nova Scotia; for such preachers are not only a nuisance, but they are detrimental to the cause of Christ.

But my article is getting too long. I do hope the brethren will speak out on the subject of supporting the gospel. If the world says we are preaching for money, just let them say it; it is their sin, not ours; and we had as well fail to teach any other part of Christianity as this.

And now, Brother McGary, you may do as you like with this essay; if it is not worthy a place in your valuable paper, consign it to the waste basket.

In Christ, your brother,

[There is too much truth and good sense in your letter, Brother Conner, for the waste basket. It needs to be well weighed by the brethren generally. — A. McG.]

"Christianity claims the allegiance of mankind. It is a gospel for the whole human family, that it alone justifies missionary endeavor. But signal as are the successes of Christianity, on some fields of its promulgation; nearly three-quarters of our race are outside the boundaries of its influences, are most of them ignorant of its very existence. By the latest and most careful estimates, above ten hundred millions of mankind are then the legitimate but yet unreached objects of what claims to be an intendedly universal religion. But who are these thousand millions who are to be sought after, and gathered into the Gospel fold? Among them are individuals and classes, certainly, of great intellect and teaching; some races marked by mental acuteness and subtlety, but most of them ignorant, degraded, darkened, and all of them strangers to the ideas and habits of minds made familiar to us by long contact with Christianity. Obviously, if these multitudes are to be reached at all, it must be by a gospel of extreme simplicity. If any hope is ours to win these various and benighted millions to the Christian faith, then Christianity must be presented to them in a form suited to their capacities, level to their grasp, fitted to their wants. Then it must be the plain necessary truths of salvation and, in general, these alone, which the gospel messenger must proclaim. Then it cannot be the refinements of scholastic divinity, or the points of difference which separate good men in the explanation of the gospel scheme, which can profitably be ventilated on heathen soil. The missionary enterprise long ago theoretically learned—though it has never ascertained exactly how practically to deal with the facts—that denominational differences among Christians are stumbling blocks on pagan grounds. It is learning now that doctrinal differences are stumbling blocks no less. This is a truth, indeed, which the Holy Spirit apparently attempted to teach early. The new converts of Antioch were troubled and perplexed by the subtleties of Jerusalem divinity. All they knew of the gospel came from Jerusalem; but Jerusalem had various voices. The one voice said this, the other voice said that; but both coupled with their sayings, "Unless a man do this he cannot be saved." And it required nothing short of a council whereof the Holy Ghost is a member, and himself nominated in the decree, to start afresh, and in their simplicity, the gospel demands. The painful fact is in many ways brought home to us, that the points of speculative opposition, on which the schools of divinity among us separate, and on which churches and parties in churches divide, are simply obstructive when transferred to missionary work. What they are among ourselves is not now the question; what they are when carried to regions where strange people await in ignorance the rising on them of a little-gospel light, is not a matter of conjecture. When it comes to be a troublesome question to Japanese inquirers: "What is the efficacious principle of the atonement?" or "What the exact extent and basis of the predestinating decree?" or "What the method and fullness of Biblical inspiration?" Or when South Sea Islanders, under the teaching of Bishop Patterson, find themselves perplexed about the precise character of Christ's bodily presence in the Eucharist, till the noble Bishop, with all his sacramentarian training, rises to the apostolic height of such a simple presentation of the Supper, aided by illustrations drawn from their own pagan festivals, as the poor heathen Christian can understand and respond to. Why then it becomes us to remind ourselves, for the sake of a world ready to perish, how simpler than the simplest of our theologians the saving message of the Gospel, and the plain condition of eternal life. Mortifying as it may be for us to consider how large a part of our strength here at home is spent on questions non-essential to salvation, whether of ourselves or of others; imperative is it to consider it and to act on it, if the Gospel of Christ is ever to be effectually addressed to the souls of ignorant, feeble, toiling heathen men, whether of foreign lands or of our own.

A Missionary Gospel is a simple one. It has been from the first. The precise nature and results of Adamic connections, the ontological distribution of the Divine personalities, the reconciliation of responsibility and decree, discussions of the provinces of resistable and irresistible grace, proving or disproving or final perseverance in holiness, explications of the relative efficiency of the Divine and human factors in the conversion of a soul, have no place therein. It rang out first in the simple declaration: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved," and it has no other utterance to-day. Let it be that one of the great general creeds of Christendom, enumerating its more than fifty definite abstract particulars concerning the inherent nature of the Triune Personality, declares: "This is the Catholic faith, faith, except every one do keep whole and undefiled, without doubt, he shall perish everlastingly." It comforts us, nevertheless, to see that a great and accepted missionary of the Gospel has said: "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." And it is the Divine witness to the efficiency of the Gospel, preached in large measure, in the simplicity of its first promulgation that we celebrate to-day. Whatever power there has been in this has been in the hiding of its strength. I call your attention to but one more witness to the father's faith, which speaks out of this seventy-five years of missionary history. This is the witness of a continually enlarging conception of Gospel truths, and of the comprehensiveness of the kingdom of God. The simplicity of the conditions of salvation, and of the terms of entrance into the Kingdom of Heaven, have just been spoken of. But the simplicity of these things should not blind us to the fact that the Gospel is the wisdom of God, and that the Kingdom of Heaven is a Kingdom of infinite knowledge and truth. The Gospel is not the "power of God" to the salvation of the soul from death only, but is the "wisdom of God," also, to the satisfaction of all the proper demands of man's intellect and heart forever. And it is one signal testimony to the dignity and divineness of the missionary enterprise, that it has done so much to enlarge the boundaries of our knowledge in things human and divine."— ("Annual Sermon" at the great Missionary Congress, at Boston in October, by Rev. George Leon Walker, D. D., of Hartford, Conn.)

The above extracts are very significant, and very clearly show the evils of sectarianism, and the necessity for a oneness according to the teachings of the Word of God. If "Denominational differences" are wrong and sinful abroad, they must also be at home, and who can tell the mischief wrought upon humanity by these divisions? Eternity alone can reveal.

"COME OUT OF HER, MY PEOPLE."

(Rev. xviii: 4.)

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have concluded to write an article for the FIRM FOUNDATION, making the above quotation its basis, because so many of our brethren quote it to justify their practice in opening their arms and receiving these Babylonians into the Church of Christ (as they say) without the scriptural qualification of preparation, "without having their horns knocked off." The Savior says: "Others sheep I have which are not of this fold; them, also, I must bring, and they shall hear My voice; and there shall be one fold and one Shepherd." John, x: xvi. My sheep hear My voice, and I know them, and they follow me. (27th verse.)

All, as far as I know, that believe the Bible, agree that the other sheep spoken of in the 16th verse refers to those among the Gentiles who would hear the Savior's voice; they were sheep prospectively, not at the time, and would become sheep by hearing and obeying his voice; and after the Savior had fulfilled the law of Moses, and taken it out of the way, nailing it to His cross, after He had broken down the middle wall of partition, between Jews and Gentiles, so making peace, then the prospective Gentile sheep and the sheep of "this fold" come into the one fold, having the one Shepherd, the Lord Jesus. How did the Gentiles enter that fold? By hearing and obeying the voice of the Shepherd. How did the Jews enter that fold? They were not born in it, but they entered by hearing and obeying the voice of the Shepherd. Hence, Jesus says: "Now, you are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." John, xv: 3.

Now, the idea I wish to impress mostly by the foregoing is that the Gentiles, at the time that the Savior used the language quoted, were sheep prospectively, and could not get into the fold without obeying His voice. (See case of Cornelius, Acts, x and xi: 1-14.)

The sheep represent the people who follow the Savior; and, speaking about the Jews, the Heavenly Father says: "But this thing commanded I them, saying, obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be My people; and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you." Jer. vii: 23. Notice: By hearing and obeying the voice of the Lord (our Law-giver) it brings us into the one fold.

The Savior, when at the grave of Lazarus, lifted up His eyes and said: "Father, I thank Thee, that Thou hast heard Me. And I knew that thou hearest Me always; but, because of the people who stand by, I said it that they may believe that Thou hast sent Me." John, ii: 41, 42.

We learn from this quotation that the Heavenly Father always hears His Son; that His prayers are not unheeded and in vain, as many of our prayers are.

Just before He died for the sins of the world, He said: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them, also, who shall believe on Me through their word, that they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they, also, may be one in Us, that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me." John, xvii: 20, 21.

Now, did His Father, hear His prayer? If He did, have not all that believed on Him, through the words of the apostles, been one, in one fold, in one body, in one Church? And if they have not all been one, then Jesus was mistaken when He said He knew His Father always heard Him.

Now, can they believe on Him in any other way than through the words of the apostles? If so, there was no use in the death of the Savior and His apostles to establish that word. People may hear and believe mixed seed, but then it is tares, and not the word of the Lord or the apostles.

The Apostle John was permitted or empowered by the Holy Spirit to look down through time to a certain age of the world, and see a certain woman sitting upon a scarlet-colored beast, dressed in a very gaudy manner, and decked with gold and precious stones, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornications; and upon her forehead a name written, which is, Babylon The Great, The Mother of Harlots and Abominations of the Earth. Revelations, xvii: 1, 5. She is now a right old woman, bowed down with years and sinfulness; has a large number of children, called harlots; and is still bringing them forth, and all her names indicate, bad traits of character, and her characteristics impressed to a great extent upon all her children, for they all go whoring after that that is forbidden. John was also permitted to hear an angel say: "Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen;" and "he heard another voice, saying, come out of her, my people, that you be not partakers of her sins, and that you receive not of her plagues." Rev., xviii: 2-4.

Come out of what? Babylon, confusion? Is not that language prophetic? and are not the Lord's people spoken of there, prospectively, His people, as the sheep among the Gentiles, of which the Savior spoke in John, were prospectively so?

So, I believe that my brethren generally will agree with me, that the people told to come out of her were the Lord's people, prospectively. Then, how were they to come out? How did they get in? Not by a birth of flesh and blood, as the Jews were born into the Abrahamic covenant; but by complying with the laws of induction into these various Babylonish organizations, the daughters of that old Mother of Harlots. Then, how can they come out? By complying with the conditions of the law of the Spirit. Well, what is that law? Is it to take them by the hand and shake them out? If so, brethren, show us the law, and we will go to work and shake them out as fast as we can, for they are in a bad condition, and need shaking badly, if that will get them out.

Oh, brethren, that is not the way to get them out; they must hear the voice of the Shepherd. Well, what does the Shepherd say? He says, "Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark, xvi: 15, 16. That is what the Shepherd says, and if people will believe and obey what he says, whether they are in Babylon or in the world, will they not get into the fold?

A preacher comes along and tells the people that they must first repent of their sins, then believe, and that faith is a direct gift from God, then they are saved, and then they must confess themselves by telling an experience, and then be baptized because their sins are remitted. Now, brethren, does compliance with those conditions take them into the fold of Christ, or does it take them into one of those Babylonish institutions; which?

Again, Paul says, "For by our spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free;" yes, or Babylonians? 1 Cor., 12: 13. What body is that? It is the Church of Christ. Proof: Eph., 5: 23. "For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the Church, and he is the Savior of the body."

But how does the Spirit baptize the people into the one body, or Church of Christ? Not by taking hold of them and putting them under, for the preacher does that, but by his instruction. See Acts, xiii: 1, 4; and by going to Acts, ii: 33, 41, we learn that three thousand heard the Spirit preach the death, burial, resurrection and ascension of Christ. They believed what they had heard; were pricked in their hearts; wanted to know what to do to be saved; were told by the Spirit to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins. There is the law of the Spirit, that made Paul free from the law of sin and death—the law that was to be put into the minds of the people and written in their hearts under the new covenant. Heb., 8: 10. Now, when they complied with the law as given by the Spirit, were they not baptized by the Spirit into the one body or church? and was not the law of the Spirit written in their hearts? Yes, for they gladly received it in connection with the promises; but the understanding of the facts before they heard the commands, or law pricked their hearts, was not good news. But Brother Allen, in the Apostolic Guide of June 11, says that the last clause of the law, "For the remission of sins, must necessarily to be understood, and that Peter simply expresses the authority by which these are done, and their purpose, to the divine mind." Brother Allen, how do you know? As you say, "to the law, then, and the testimony, and as a greater one than you or I—the Lord Jesus, through his inspired Apostle Peter—says, 'If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God.' 1 Pet., 4: 11: 'Brother Allen, will you tell the brethren where the oracles of God speak, that way, and, if you cannot, ought you not to take it back?"

THE PIPE AND THE STICK.

One of your subscribers, who is a young preacher, has been an inveterate user of tobacco. While talking with him one day he resolved to break off the habit, and in the same breath requested that the same arguments might be presented to your readers, fully confident that it would have a good effect upon them also.

It is indeed strange that, in a Christian land, in the nineteenth century, anything need be said or written on the subject. True, there is no command reading, "Thou shalt not use tobacco," neither is there such a command regarding gambling and dancing, and yet we all understand the evidence of Holy Writ is against it. Do we not yet comprehend that we are the children of the Most High? Do we not see the very heavens and earth clear? Do we remain in the smallest degree the great sacrifice that was made for us? The Maker of heaven and earth gives us freely his own beloved Son, and that Saviour bought his life blood not too precious to be poured out to wash us clean away, and make us fit for his presence. Are we not to be transformed to his glorious image? to be made perfect through suffering? Brethren, we cannot be sanctified or set apart for the Master's use, if we are for our own. We are bought with a price not less than the blood of the pure and sinless Son of God. We therefore conclude that our bodies, souls and spirits, time, talent, money and influence belong to the Purchaser. "Our bodies are to be a living sacrifice, which is but a reasonable service."

"Oh, yes," say you, "I take delight in meditating on these glorious things, but how does that apply to using tobacco?" "Much every way." You profess to follow closely in the footsteps of a Saviour who would not, at the suggestion of Satan, satisfy his natural appetite. Think you he would stoop to defile his mouth with tobacco? It seems blasphemy to mention his pure name in that connection, and yet, if it is right, why not? Do you think he is pleased when you do it? I trow not.

You, brethren, with pipe, quid and stick, when you were set apart for the Master's use, left your mouth out of the account, didn't you? That seems set apart for a very different purpose. How could you greet the brethren or anybody else, with a holy name? Methinks even Judas would not have had the heart to kiss the pure head of our Saviour with such reeking, poisonous lips. The command, "Cleanse yourselves from all filth of the flesh and spirit," did not include your mouth, eh? "Not filth?" you say. When my white dress catches a big splotch from sister's or brother's mouth, I call it that; and that disgusting mass which I have helped clean from the church floor—what is it, brother? Alas! I fear it will be a spot on your robe of righteousness when you come to stand before the great white throne. You will not laugh then, when in thunder tones you hear, "He that is filthy, let him be filthy still."

Again, if you are not your own, only the stewards, how dare you take the Lord's money to buy that which you know he does not approve; spend his time in consuming it, your influence in defending it. "Oh," you quickly reply, I don't do that way at all. I tell my children not to use it. Indeed! that is what you understand by letting your light shine that they may see your good works. Consistent, isn't it? You are responsible for the conduct of all who are younger than you (that is, to some extent). You, their guide, continue in a practice which you tell others is wrong. Now, be candid and answer, what is wrong with it? And when you knowingly permit in your presence what you call that by that awful name, presumptuous sin? Now you say, "I would gladly break off, but cannot." How much have you tried? Have you yet resisted unto blood against this sin? Remember the promise to him that overcometh. Please read the second and third chapters of Revelations, to all your mind with the glorious things promised him that overcometh, then kneel and pray with David, "Keep back thy servant from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me; then shall I be upright, and I shall be innocent from the great transgression." Brethren, perhaps in your own strength you cannot overcome. O, look up! Take it to the Lord in prayer. "Christ is able to save to the uttermost all that put their trust in him." Let us trust in the Lord, not alone in our own strength. "Having the hope within us, let us purify ourselves even as He is pure."

Hoping these few words will have the effect which our brother so much desired. Amen.

NOT SOUND ALL THE WAY THROUGH.

In an article from Bro. Burnett's pen in the Messenger of May 5, headed "On the Rail," he says: "From Pilot Point we ran down to Denison and spent one night and part of a day. Bro. Wm. McIntire was here holding a meeting. His extreme views on baptism are well known to our readers. He will not receive any one from the sectarian societies that have been immersed, without a reimmersion. When he preaches where there is a church when a Baptist comes forward to take fellowship he turns him over to the elders of the church, and they dispose of him as they see proper. When he preaches in a place where there is no church he will receive no one without confession and baptism. On other points he seems to be sound and scriptural."

Bro. Burnett says that Bro. Mc has extreme views on the subject of baptism. What do you mean by extreme views, Bro. Burnett? Does Bro. Mc. Intire believe that water alone will save or bring persons into the kingdom? Is it possible that Bro. Mc. believes in water salvation? No, no, here is the trouble. Bro. Mc. does not believe in the baptism of "Sectarian Societies," but in the one baptism, which is for the remission of sins. Well, Bro. Mc. the charge is not so serious after all; you are in good company, you have our Savior, the Holy Spirit, the apostle Peter, and a host of others on your side of this "extreme" position. So then you need not be uneasy. While you would, of course, like to have Bro. Burnett on your side, you seem to prefer to be with Christ and the apostles. The Baptists take the issue with the Holy Spirit. It says that baptism is for the remission of sins—is that extreme? Under some circumstances, Bro. Burnett seems to think it is. It would not be, in the heat of a discussion, when used to "point an argument." So Bro. Kendrick thinks, and Bro. B. too, I suppose. Re-immerse them, Bro. Mc. that is right, for they have only been baptized into the Baptist Church—because their sins had been pardoned, and you know that the Baptist Church and the Church of Christ are not the same, consequently you must reimmerse all who come to us from the Baptists or any other sectarian order to put them into Christ. Paul says: "For we are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus; for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ."—Gal., iii: 26-27. Again, Bro. Burnett says: "He will not receive them without confession and baptism." Is this what Bro. B. calls "unsound and unscriptural?" Is not the confession with the mouth one of the antecedents of the one baptism? Is the confession with the mouth a part of the "one faith?" Bro. B., is there anything wrong or "extreme" in confessing Christ and being baptized for the remission of sins? Is it not sound and scriptural? If not, why not? Will you please tell the readers of the Messenger? I like the Messenger and its opposition to societies, but I do think it is unsound and radically wrong in defending sect baptism. Why is the "Missionary Society," which is an unauthorized human body that is supplanting the "one body" over which Christ is "head"—any more an innovation than is a sectarian baptism, inaugurated by man, and which is supplanting the "one baptism" ordained of God? I do hope all good brethren will cease the practice of receiving persons on such baptisms and earnestly contend for the "one Lord, one faith, and the one baptism." Brethren, let us be loyal to one King.

CHURCH LETTERS.

The practice prevailing among us, in reference to grant "Church Letters," is wholly unscriptural. Each Christian is generally considered a member of the congregation where his or her name is recorded on the "Church Register," until released by the granting of a letter in a formal way by the consent or vote of the congregation. Hence, when a Christian moves to a new field, no matter how well known he may be, he must take with him a letter of dismissal from his old congregation that he may "put it in," or "take membership" in another. As a result, it is frequently the case, that Christians hold their letters for an indefinite period of time, neglecting to become active workers for the Master, because they have not yet taken their letters. How long shall we keep along in sectarian ruts? Where do you read of a Christian taking membership? Where do you find the primitive workers reporting that a certain number of brethren took membership? A Christian is a member of Christ's body wherever he may live, by virtue of the sacred relationship to his Lord and Master, and in duty bound, as a faithful subject, to assume his humble vocation in His vineyard.

Of course, I do not mean by this, that he must associate himself with those not at work by the direction of the Master Overseer. But a Christian has very incorrect ideas of the duties imposed, if he does not realize the necessity of ever being an active worker in the Body of Christ.

Is it not humiliating, to think of a Christian remaining aloof from the sacred relations in the Body of Christ with a Church Letter in his pocket, waiting his own time to take membership, and to be recognized as a member of the Church? We have but two instances (if I mistake not) of the giving of letters to Christians. Let us turn to them and consider their import.

In 1 Cor. 16: 3, letters were given those who carried the liberality or bounty of the congregation at Corinth to Jerusalem.

Evidently the conclusion is that this congregation saw fit to send the weekly contributions by some of their number, with letters explaining the purpose for which their bounty was sent.

The other instance we find in 2 Cor. 3: 1-3. Now, perhaps, it is reasonable to conclude from this scripture that a Christian may (not must) take a letter of commendation to a locality where he is unknown. But most assuredly it will be incumbent on him to at once go to work, and assert his rights, where none dare to debar him of any Christ-given privilege.

These things being true, should we not cease to exact from Christians Church Letters, before recognizing them as members of the Body and entitled to all its blessings and privileges?

We should also cease to hold Christian members of a congregation until released by letters. Our teaching should make all realize the obligation resting on them as children of God wherever they may be, and each one will be an "Epistle read and known of all men." J. S. D.

FROM THE FIELD.

Bro. McGary:

I am still trying to sound out the Gospel here in Williamson county; have just closed one meeting with the congregation on Berry's creek, ten miles north from Georgetown. Four were reclaimed, 17 added by baptism, and 3 taken from the Baptists, which would cause me to ask if God has willed that we should be baptized for the remission of sins, where has He ever willed that we should receive into our fellowship those who have been baptized because their sins are forgiven?

I am now laboring under embarrassing circumstances in a meeting at Corn Hill. I got the Baptist church house here one month ago to hold a meeting, but one day before the meeting was to commence, they voted me out. I then challenged them for debate, which they refused.

I was then refused the Methodist church here by their pastor; then tendered a large, new house by an unbeliever. After which the Methodists gave me their house. The Baptists ran a meet-five days in opposition, and then closed. I am still preaching. Eight have been added up to date. Interest taken is good. I shall remain here for some time.

This is a fine mission field here for some good, active young preacher to labor in to build up the cause.

Money is very scarce now in the country, yet I am very much encouraged to work for the F. F. as I find so many good brethren who are willing to accept its bible teachings that it will be only a short time before we will have a very large circulation. I hope all the brethren will do all they can for the F. F. this fall and let us change it to a weekly as soon as possible.

Oh brethren, let us be faithful, zealous and earnest and we are bound to succeed. Our cause is right. We have God and the bible on our side. Then let us do God's will and victory and eternal life will be ours.

J. D. TANT.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRIST.

Much is said and written by our teachers, scribes and brethren generally, about the Spirit of Christ—as to who has and who has not the Spirit of Christ. It is highly important, too, that this question should always be kept prominently before the minds of the people. Men and women should be brought to realize the fact that “if they have not the Spirit of Christ, they are none of His.” But the great difficulty lies in the sad fact, that a large majority of those who would teach the people upon this grave and cardinal question, are, themselves, rank strangers to it. While they descant so learnedly, fluently and sanctimoniously about the spirit that men and women must be filled with and actuated by, in time, that they may be raised and glorified in eternity, they, themselves are “the servants of sin,” and prompted in all they do and say by that wicked spirit that “worketh in the children of disobedience”—the spirit of the prince of this world. But may not the people know what the true Spirit of Christ is, and become the recipients of it? Certainly they may, if they bear in mind that, “many false teachers are gone out into the world, and will try the spirits whether they are of God.” The “Spirit of Christ,” which must be in every true Christian heart, is not some tenuous, ethereal sparklet that drops down out of the upper realms from a sempiternal bonfire, into some remote cavern of a heretofore depraved heart, and continually blazes and beams with a heaven-born warmth and brilliancy till it burns all “earthly, sensual and devilish” impulses out of that heart. And yet, this seems to be about the idea that the popular teachers would convey—Our brethren, too, are growing alarmingly “orthodox” on this question. But it is nevertheless true that “if we have not the Spirit of Christ, we are none of His.” The necessity for the possession of this spirit, becomes commensurate to the importance of gaining that felicitous abode in the eternal city of God. To fail of the one is to miss the other. Then it is of paramount importance that we arrive at definite conclusions in reference to the Spirit of Christ, as to what it is, and whether or not we possess it. This, as said above, may be done by a “trial of the spirits” that are abroad in the land, claiming to be that spirit. We shall not attempt to institute a critical analysis of the Spirit of Christ in this, nor to untie all of the gordian knots that “deceived and deceiving” theologians have, by “orthodox” legerdemain tied in the threads of this question. But we desire to pursue the question only so far as to meet a present, a very popular and very fatal delusion, that seems to have so effectually locked up the sense of so many good brethren, and which is so seriously threatening a total eclipse of the “Sun of Righteousness.” How, then, may we know what the Spirit of Christ is, and when we possess it? The Spirit of Christ is the Spirit of Revelation. It is the spirit that actuated Jesus of Nazareth in all He said and did. It is the same spirit that inspired, moved and guided His fore-runner, and His ambassadors, in what they said and did. That spirit that constituted the main-spring of the fundamental principles upon which the God-man, his harbinger and chosen apostles, treated the different classes of individuals whom they met and moved among while upon this earth, is like its immutable Author, “The same yesterday, to-day and forever.” Then, those who act upon that same heaven-born principle and dealings with the several classes of men that were on earth then and are here now, treat them and speak of them as these God-sent men did then. The same love of God that blazed in their bosoms, and the same spirit that guided them in their intercourse with men, will, if in us, guide us to speak and write and act as they did. Will it not, brethren? Then we have a record of their sayings and doings, together with the attendant circumstances under which they spoke and acted while guided by the Holy Spirit. Hence we are fully equipped for the “trial” of the different spirits that are leading men and women to-day. If one says uncomplimentary things of another to-day, it matters not what excuse may exist for it, it sends a pious (?) shock thrilling through the sanctimonious hypocrites all over the land; and is caught up and wafted up and down the ranks that are reeling from the effects of the inebriating wines of Babylon that they have sipped from the spewings of a drunken and besotted clergy, who “outwordly appear righteous unto men; but within, are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.” Had this same class of men lived in the time of our Lord and His righteous teachers, they would have hounded upon their tracks with their sanctified howlings and lamentations, until they would have rent the very heavens with their holy (?) disapprobation. Had they been present when John the Baptist said to the Pharisees and Sadducees, “O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?” they would, doubtless, have “fallen in the wilderness” stark dead of broken hearts. If they had been present when Jesus told the people of the corruptness practiced by the Scribes and Pharisees, calling them hypocrites in unreserved and unequivocal terms, as found in Matt., xxiii, they would, doubtless, have stopped their righteous (?) ears and fled the city with all possible speed. If they had been on the island of Cyprus, and present when Bar-jesus tried to turn Sergius Paulus from the same faith that they are now trying to turn the people from, and had heard Paul when he said to their counterpart—B. J.—“O, full of all subtlety and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?” We say, if these brethren of to-day had been present, they would doubtless have gathered up a “Special Notice” of at least thirty-three signers, to have prevented Paul's preaching again on that island. If they want us to speak well of men, then they must point us to men worthy of it, so that we may “speak the truth and lie not.” But, when we speak of such characters as

Bar-jesus, or our modern Scribes and Pharisees, we shall speak of them as did Paul and our Master. Those Scribes and Pharisees made as long prayers, perhaps, as do our modern ones, and disfigured their faces nearly as much, for aught we know, yet this did not shield them from the just rebuke that the Son of God showered upon them, and these same hypocritical subterfuges shall not deceive us into praising them, or shelter them from a like rebuke whenever we have occasion to allude to them and their diabolical crusade against truth and right. We want to give a few brief illustrations of the course that these men pursue—and yet they would have brethren to consider them good, holy and righteous. We will take three men who stand at the top of the ladder of fame among the brethren of Texas, for they are three of our biggest Texas preachers. We shall say nothing that we cannot prove, but we will withhold names: (1) We knew a preacher to speak very disparagingly of a certain congregation in Texas, as to their ignorance of the law of Christ and their worldly-mindedness; and at the same time he spoke to the writer about the unworthiness of a certain preacher whom we both knew. About ten days from that time we saw, in one of our papers, a report from this preacher, of his labors with said church; and he praised it to the utmost bounds, and lauded said preacher to the skies. (2) Was an old preacher who spent the night with us. That night he told us of the meanness of a certain other old preaching brother. The things he told us on this old brother made him out the meanest character we have ever heard of for a preacher. The next we saw, this old brother who had told us of this meanness on the other old brother, was lauding this same mean man in a so-called “Christian paper.” (3) Is a preaching brother who wrote us some months ago that a certain other big preacher had sold out the cause of Christ. About two months after writing this, we saw a report from the brother who had written us, of a meeting he had held, and in that report he held his meeting, to get this brother who had “sold out the cause of Christ,” to hold them a meeting. Now, brethren, these matters are not overdrawn, nor even presented in the fullness of their enormity. They are as true as the gospel is true. These men all stand high in the church. They have much to say about who is and who is not actuated by the Spirit of Christ. What is to become of the people under such leadership? We shall not continue this to show how far our popular editors have been led off by the same wicked spirit. In conclusion, we will confess that we often step from under the influence of the Spirit of Christ, and are in those unguarded moments led by the wicked spirit that works in the children of disobedience. But, thanks to God, we have not strayed so far from the way of the Spirit of Christ as to cater to or conform to the ways of the world and become puffed up with the pride of the world, in order that "all men may speak well" of us. The Spirit of Christ is the spirit of the bible—the principle upon which our Lord and his apostles dealt with men.—God grant that those that name the name of Christ may depart from the ways of this world, and arm themselves with courage to act upon the principle set forth in the Guide Book. A. MCG.

THE STATE MEETING.

As the state meeting is near at hand, and as many have inquired of us about it; and some have thought we ought to have urged our readers to be present to take part in it, we offer the following brief explanation of our silence in reference to it:

1. This meeting is not to be conducted upon the principles of equal rights and privileges of all brethren, as the circular letter of the elders clearly shows, but is to be run in the exclusive interest of that reckless, impatient and heretofore disappointed clan, who have banded themselves together to inaugurate "Missionary Society" tactics in the State.

2. It is a meeting which is to be supervised by a church that we were conscience-bound to withdraw our affiliation and membership from, on account of its general tendency to worldliness and open rebellion against the laws of Christ at many points.

3. Because we can see no possible good to grow out of such opposition to the reckless methods that these brethren are aiming to employ, as that of meeting in mass to oppose them by the sheer force of number—when the Word of God, which has been often shown these brethren to be against their course—fails to restrain and prevent them from pursuing the dictates of their own rebellious course, in vain will other efforts be put forth to do so. Farther expostulations and scripture directed at these brethren upon this question, will be simply "Casting pearls before swine, which they will trample under their feet, and then will turn again and read you." Let them go, and go quickly. Since they have found an institution that seems to them to be better adapted to their work than the Church of the living God, the sooner they go off to it, and the farther they go in that direction, the better it

4. Many brethren who are opposing the methods and course of these brethren with all the vim and vigor of their "soul, body and spirit," are every whit as much to blame as they, for this prevalent spirit of unrest and independence that is manifesting itself with such a full swing among the brethren all over the land. When one thing is done without the authority of Christ to sanction it, it opens the way for every other that may desire to enter. Those who recognize sect baptism—a baptism unlike any on record, a baptism no where nor in any way authorized by Christ, and hence not the "one baptism"—lay the foundation for "Missionary Societies," instrumental music in the churches, etc., etc.

But, while we shall take no part, whatever, in the Austin "State Meeting," we shall be pleased to entertain as many of our brethren as we can, and can furnish welcome homes among true Christians, who, like ourself, have no part or lot with the meeting, for all brethren who will call upon us. We expect to attend the "State Meeting" just as we would a Methodist Conference. A. MCG.

We wonder if our big editors who refuse to notice the FIRM FOUNDATION, because, as they say, "it deals too much in personalities, and 'feeds on carrion,'" never think of their readers having sense enough to see that these excuses are mere subterfuges, employed in the hope of hiding the real reason that actuates them in their cowardly dealings with us? These same editors and teachers are ready to forego all of these things, even when they really exist, on the part of Methodist, Baptist, or other sectarian papers, to get a discussion with them! These papers might call them thieves and robbers, and in the same breath, agree to discuss the action or design of baptism with them, and these brethren would hold that, although such charges were unfounded, and ungentlemanly, they should bear all these indignities for His sake and the gospel. But when we say anything about them, they make a mountain of it, to hide behind. Besides, they have said twice as hard things about us as we have about them. What we have said about them is because they resist the truth. What they say about us springs from their wicked and rebellious hearts, that have waxed hot against us for teaching things contrary to "our plea"—things that give honor to God instead of to the fathers of "this reformation." We call on them for authority for certain things they practice, and because they can't give it, they turn upon us in that wicked spirit that always actuates wounded error, and with all manner of wicked insinuations and falsehoods, seek to render the truth odious, and thereby dodge the responsibility that rests upon them. We intend to show what inconsistent attitudes they are placing themselves in to defend and perpetuate a plea that is purely of worldly wisdom. We have received many new readers on our reduced offer, and we intend to continue the offer, to catch as many of their readers as we can. By the time that we double our present circulation, which we will do by the first of September, they will be forced to meet the issues. To meet them is to meet their own defeat, and they know it. Their Waterloo lies not far ahead of them.

We have just received a letter from a preacher who has been heralding "our plea" over Texas for many years. He is a shaken Baptist. He says: "You and I can not discuss anything; we are both too stubborn. I think you deal entirely in personal abuse rather than fair argument; and hence I prefer to keep out of such. If you could lose sight of your opponent, and see only his arguments, you might accomplish something; but you can't. You will change for the better later on, or, leaving the doctrine of Christ entirely, you will turn infidel."

Perhaps we do follow our opponent too closely and too far sometimes. But this we have to do, or stop the chase entirely, for there is never any argument to follow. He says he teaches that baptism is for the remission of sins as earnestly and zealously as any one. But ask him why he does this, and he immediately scents the danger of personalities, and "crawls in his shell." We know that this friend is stubborn, and he has admitted it to us more than once; which is commendable. But what we object to most in him is his cowardice. He is really afraid to try to give one good reason for teaching that baptism is for the remission of sins. He seems to think that there is a probability of our turning infidel. Now if we were teaching the people that it is not necessary that persons should believe that God's ordinances were for what He said they were for, he might find some grounds for what he has said at this point. It looks to us like those who teach this are nearer the grounds of infidelity than those who believe all that God says on these questions, and teach others the necessity of believing the same. Our friend is down on that road, beckoning us; and because we will not go in the same direction, and he will not come back to where we stand, we are "both too stubborn."

And because I get after him for straying off down the road to perdition, and tell my readers who it is down there, he thinks I am too personal, and ought to quit that, and "follow arguments" that he has never made!

He must think we are good on the "follow!"

OKNAVILLE, Tex., March 14, 1886.
A. McGary:

Please explain through the FIRM FOUNDATION, Matthew, xi: 14, (concerning John the Baptist), and also Matthew, xvii: 13, and also St John, i: 21. I send these passages that you may understand the subject. What I want to know is this: Was John the Baptist Elias, or was he not? Oblige your friend,
R. C. ANDERSON.

We understand that John the Baptist was Elijah in character and spirit. Surely he was not the very flesh and blood man Elijah; and this is the sense in which we understand him to deny that he was Elijah. In fact, it seems to us to be the only possible way to harmonize the different passages. John was doubtless well acquainted with the history of Elijah and his manner of removal from the earth. Knowing that Elijah had been translated bodily from the earth, and that every Jew was well acquainted with the wonderful occurrence, we suppose that John understood the priests and Levites when they asked him: "Art thou Elias?" to inquire if he were the flesh and blood man Elijah that was translated. Hence, he answered that he was not. It is even probable that John lived and died without the he exhibited or even possessed any of the characteristics of Elijah. Others could have noted these characteristics and their correspondence to those of the great prophet Elijah much more readily than John. John, of course, did not realize his likeness to Elijah unless it was directly revealed to him. This, we suppose, was not done, else he would have understood the priests and Levites. It is not necessary that a man shall know that he is fulfilling prophecy to do so. In fact, we are satisfied that many men have fulfilled prophecy without entertaining the remotest idea of the fact. John, of course, knew that he was fulfilling some points of prophecy. So then the "Elias which was for to come" was not to be the flesh and blood Elias. At least this is our understanding of it.

WE INVITE special attention to Bro. Henderson's article, which will be found on another page. It is quite lengthy and aged, but it merits a careful and candid perusal by all lovers of truth. Though it has been consigned to the shades of privacy and seclusion for the space of two years, by the decree of the august group that it sought to rectify and reform, yet the ravages of these years have not wasted its features of efficiency, or in any way impaired its very marked adaptation to the urgent demands of the cause of Christ, for "the pulling down of strongholds, and the casting down of imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and the bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."

Brethren, there is an ominous threatening in the direction Bro. Henderson points. These mitered and supercilious heads that are lifting themselves up and demanding homage, must come off, or irreparable mischief to the cause of Christ will speedily ensue.

Those who have not been reading and studying the signs of the times, and who think that all fears in this direction are imaginary, will soon awake to a sad realization of the true state of the affairs of the cause of Christ; and, when it is too late, will deprecate the deafness and inattention with which they have treated the warning words of brethren who are now pointing out and trying to avert these impending dangers.

Human standards are being lifted up and followed instead of the one only true Standard of God.

BRO. A. P. ATEN, Texas editor of Our Plea Guide, has somewhat against Bro. Durst for "feeling on" him" (A. P. Aten) in a paper which he says "shall be nameless." We suppose the reason he does not like to name it is because the name FIRM FOUNDATION suggests to his mind the "sandy" foundation upon which his theological huckster-shop is located. Bro. Aten says: "A paper that delights to feed upon carrion should not complain if a self-respecting people should adjudge that its very touch is contamination." Now, Bro. Durst, let's try to accommodate this self-respecting element for a while by leaving A. P. Aten out of our bill of fare and let nothing as common or unclean be fed upon in the future. If he had the humility of David, he could truly say: "Mine iniquities are gone over mine head; as a heavy burden they are too heavy for me. My wounds stink and are corrupt because of my foolishness."

OUR OFFER.

We will send the FIRM FOUNDATION from now—beginning with the August issue—till the end of the year, for 25 cents. Now is your chance, brethren, to send up large clubs, and thereby aid in the dissemination of the truth. An ever-ready room for the cause of "hard times." Every body who is willing to read the truth may do so under this offer. We want to give every body an opportunity to see our "worldly-wise" clergymen handled "without gloves" for five months. After five months we expect to adhere strictly to the price of $1.00 per annum. We shall confidently look for many new names under this offer. Will our friends disappoint us?

CONVENTION OF CHRISTIAN BROTHERS AND SISTERS.

According to previous announcement, the 10th and 11th of July. Owing to an usurpation of authority by the elders of the Austin congregation, in inviting only those to take part in the meeting who had, or could, endorse the work carried on through the Sherman Board, there were not as many brethren present as there would otherwise have been. From the beginning of the meeting it was evident that the Progressives intended, if possible, to organize a full-fledged modern Missionary Society, with all its attachments.

The committee soon brought in resolutions to this effect. An effort was made to change the word delegate to the scriptural word messenger. Brethren Carlton and Gano urged the adoption of this amendment, as one of the fundamental rules in this restorative movement is "to adopt scriptural language in the use of scriptural ideas." Bro. Carleton said that no scholar would say that these two words conveyed the same idea or that they were identical.

The amendment was put to the house and rejected. Thus the word of the Lord was voted down and disregarded. I was then somewhat prepared to take in the situation of things. Hence, in the discussion that followed over the plan proposed for missionary work, I was not so greatly astonished as I would have been to see the manifest disregard of Bible teachings. Bro. Dimmitt said: "We are without chart or rudder on the financial subject." He asked the question: "Are all the deeds of the Apostles recorded? How do we know they had no building fund?" Again, he said: "The churches should make collectors of one or more of the deacons, and the members should be assessed, and the churches should withdraw from each member that fails to meet his assessment, unless they are unable to pay." I was astonished to hear these thoughts from one who had grown grey in the cause, and who carries with him a reputation for godli-

Is it possible that brethren are drifting from the ancient landmarks? I think many are doing so. How different the language of Bro. Dimmitt from Paul. "Let each man do according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver."—II Cor., ix: 7.

From another standpoint Bro. Dimmitt argued that he opposed church sociables, festivals and such like, for the purpose of raising money for the Lord, because such things are of doubtful propriety—doubtful, because the Bible is silent in reference to these things. And so we say, in reference to all innovations. O but a jewel consistency is!

Bro. A. Clark suggested that "if these things are not now accepted, that we will some day come to business." Meaning, evidently, that the time would come when these business expedients would be adopted.

I used to think Bro. Clark was a Bible man, but alas, he too has forsaken the old path, I fear.

Bro. Smith, of Dallas, said: "We have had all harmony and no work, in the past, and I am now for work even at the expense of harmony." Solomon says: "A wicked man walketh with a froward mouth. He soweth discord." And again: "The Lord doth hate him that soweth discord among brethren." This Bro. Smith also said: "We have never succeeded in the past, because we had no head, and we all know that nothing succeeds without a head." Paul said: "Christ is head over all things to the church." These society brethren thus reject the divine head. It is very evident from this that they do not even claim Christ as head of the society. This wonderful statement of Bro. Smith's called forth not one criticism nor dissent.

Warnings from many good brethren were promptly checked in their incipency by the rulings of the progressive chairman, W. K. Homan, whose heart, hand and purse were ready and anxious to contribute to the doctrines of men.

The resolutions were finally passed, and immediately upon the announcement of the result, C. McPherson lead in the song, "All hail the Power of Jesus' Name," over the birth of this bastard babe. A lady just in my rear exclaimed in a tone sufficiently clear to be distinctly heard by myself and others. "All quiet on the Potomac." Another one by her side said: "Oh I am so glad we've got a Society." J. S. Kendrick, of Dallas, exclaimed: "We are casting oil upon the waters." Insults into the face of the Christ, thought I. Just at that a good sister on my left, whose cheeks were crimson with the blush of shame for these misguided people, and whose tears were rapidly trickling down her face, and she remarked that their voices sounded more like the voices of demons than grateful praise.

They then began to receive the cash and to take pledges for the work inaugurated, and soon had on paper about $1250. J. S. Kendrick said: "This is the way to do business," and asked, "Why have we not been doing this all the time?" Does any one know who prevented them from raising all the money they could under the former plan?

I will now give a few thoughts from my standpoint, dear reader, and leave the subject with you.

It is evident that there is a division of sentiment among us, in reference to the work of the churches. What has caused this division? Remove the cause and the division will cease. The Bible does not divide Christians. That which is dividing us is not in the Bible. Therefore the cause of division is outside of the Bible, and should be at once removed. We are permitting human devices to do the work. When we stand before the great Judge, brethren, how will we answer the question "Who hath required this at your hands?" If the first Christians could work together in the advancement of the cause of Christ without a Missionary Society, why can not we do so? Now why not work just as they did, with the same zeal, the same love, and the same Gospel? "Go," says the Master, "and preach the Gospel." Teach sinners the sinfulness of sin, and how to come to Christ for pardon. Teach Christians to fight the good fight of faith as the Captain of our Salvation hath commanded. If we do this, my brethren, no impediments by sinful men will clog the wheels of scriptural progress. When a special object demands our attention, either in the support of the poor saints, or sending the Gospel to the destitute, let the congregations do what they can in alleviating suffering humanity, and in sounding out (not sounding in) the truth. If it becomes necessary for two or more congregations to unite in this work then let them co-operate as they did primitively, without conventional and parliamentary usages. Let us be careful that we do not attempt to bind our brethren by conventional rules or man-made plans. So long as an effort of this kind is attempted there will be division, both in feeling and in work. I will here make an acknowledgement, and let it be plain, that I do not love my brethren who disregard the law of the Lord like I can and do those who like the mariner's needle, always point to the correct source of attraction. And while on this subject of love, I will say that some timely thoughts were given on it during the meeting. Our attention was called to the source of love, the object of love, the importance of love, and the practice of love. But I wish to call attention here to the test of love. "But whose keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in Him."—I John, ii: 5. "And this is love, that we walk after His commandments."—II John, i: 6. "By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep His commandments. For this is the love of God that we keep His commandments, and His commandments are not grievous."—I John, v: 2-4. "If a man love Me he will keep My words."—John xiv: 23. Love to God and love to the brethren does not prompt Christians to introduce things unauthorized and that produce discord and contention, and to vote down the plain words of the Lord like they did at this State meeting. My dear brethren, you are mistaken in your love for the Lord and for your brethren.

But Bro. Dimmitt said: "Who knows the apostles did not have a building fund?" Hence, who knows the apostles did not have a Missionary Society. There is one thing we do know, my brother; one of these apostles says: "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God and of Jesus, our Lord, according as His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of Him that hath called us to glory and virtue."—II Peter, i: 2-3.

Another one says: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."—II Timothy, iii: 16-17.

And again: "If a man also strive for masteries, he is not crowned except he strive lawfully."—II Timothy, ii: 5.

Hence the things which have been given us, will teach us, reprove us, correct us, perfect us, thoroughly furnish us, give us life and godliness, and insure an entrance into the city of the living God, where we will be crowned for our lawful striving, and an adherence to the will of the Master. What more could we desire?

Now, in conclusion, I will say that there is just as much authority for a Missionary Society and its annual conventions, as there is for a State meeting, and none whatever for either. Remove these difficulties, brethren, and each one go to work as the Master has taught in his word, and the cause will prosper as in days of old, and the work will be approved by the Lord.

J. S. D.

COVETOUSNESS.

In the judgment of the All-Wise One, covetousness was supposed to be so inconsistent with righteousness that a law forbidding it was made one of the ten engraven on stone, that it might never be forgotten.

An apostle calls the love of money the root of all evil. He says that covetousness is idolatry, and that the covetous man has no inheritance in the kingdom.

What is covetousness? It is simply nothing more nor less than the desire to possess what belongs to another. It is often necessary to make exchanges, but in doing so, if you desire to get what belongs to another for one cent less than its full value you covet that much, and "he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much." The only reason that theft is wrong is that you take what belongs to another. The secrecy of the act does not determine its venal character, for if you secretly give to another you do no wrong. The robbery itself is the sin, whether it be done on the highway or in secret, or in the way of trade. Jer., xxii:13; Hab., ii:9; Mic., iii:9-12. It is the robbery alone that injures, and this injury fixes the character of the act. The taking of a dollar from one in a trade injures him just as much as if taken from his pocket at the midnight hour, and indeed he is really as helpless in the one case as in the other.

You covet if you desire to gain in trade, and thus forfeit your inheritance, and you wrong the other party when you do so gain—not doing as you wish others to do to you—for all gain in trade is made by taking advantage either of another's necessity or ignorance. One man is a mere child in intelligence compared with another. Even a simpleton may know much more of the value of property and of the condition of the market than a wise man, having made that knowledge his chief concern. If you oppose your judgment to that of another you suppose that you know something more of the matter in hand than he does, and if you take advantage of his ignorance you may as well take advantage of the ignorance of a child. His age can make no difference in the character of your act, or in any degree excuse your covetous desires.

If another puts an article upon you which proves to be of less value than it seemed, you give him an ugly name. If you do not say it you think it, and wish to get even with him. Is such an act any worse in him than in you?

But you say that others will take advantage of you and fleece you. Well, they will appear before the same Judge with you. If you suffer as a Christian happy are you. Immortal life is worth something. If you do not covet you will not so often need to trade. The most unthinking man can see that all unnecessary traffic springs from the desire to get what belongs to others. Is it not hypocrisy to entertain and flatter your neighbor on Sunday, and try to make him think that you love him, and on Monday rob him? Most of the so-called charity and hospitality we see comes from two motives—both reprehensible—namely, to gain the praise of men and to get as much, or more, in return. "Verily they have their reward." "When thou makest a feast call not thy friends." "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers."

Old men can remember when the people were generally contented with their lot. But machinery, the public schools, the public press and a larger liberty have changed all this. The ease with which great fortunes have been acquired has excited the cupidity of all classes. All now want to be ladies and gentlemen. We live in "perilous times." The railroad has introduced city ways and city wants into the most remote rural districts. While wants are increasing in number and urgency, the profits of industry are going more and more into the hands of the few, for only wealth can operate extensive manufacturing and transportation enterprises, and the larger concerns are gradually swallowing up the smaller. Hand labor can not compete with machinery, but must depend upon hiring's wages for subsistence. Every improvement in machinery diminishes the number of laborers required, while the number wanting employment is all the time increasing, thus placing the poor completely in the power of the rich. The general diffusion of knowledge among the masses has disqualified them for serfs. It does not require a philosopher to see the present tendency. See Zeph., i:18; Jam., v:3-4; Rev., iii:14-20.

Every day the labor problem becomes more difficult of solution. While money is constantly gaining power, and using it in controlling legislation in its own interest, and forming syndicates for purposes of extortion and oppression, labor is organizing and preparing to resist. The world is in a ferment, "the sea and the waves roaring, and men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." Meanwhile, those who have the ear of the people are crying "peace and safety."

Are not our modern "churches" as fully engaged in covetous practices as other people? How many "church members" are there who would not think their brother foolish to make a losing trade rather than a gaining one? Is this just what the Scriptures and Christian charity require him to do—to suffer loss rather than injure another. How many would willingly see their children married to those who are much poorer than themselves? though an apostle does say that "they who desire to be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition." How many would not rejoice to see a daughter married to a millionaire, who had acquired his wealth by stock gambling, and other covetous and swindling practices, if he but have the odor of respectability? No one can see any real difference between the so-called churches and other people in regard to covetousness and general worldly-mindedness. Of course those who do not study the Scriptures can not know what manner of life is required, but those who do read and think ought to see that modern religious parties stand in the same relation to godliness that the Scribes and Pharisees did in the time of the Savior. Indeed, it is questionable if they did not less merit the Savior's cutting reproofs than modern parties do. They were very diligent students of the law, which is more than can be said of modern parties. They were very devout, and they were so strict in their obedience to the letter of the law that they paid tithe even of mint and dill and cummin.

It can not be said that they were less sincere in these acts of devotion than people now are. Probably a larger proportion of them were like Paul—who lived in all good conscience while opposing the truth—than could be found in modern parties. They were certainly very zealous, but the Savior called them hypocrites and serpents, and it was his sharp censure of what was supposed to be the very cream of piety that excited their hatred. If he had prophesied smooth things, and flattered them, they would not have hated him. If he had adopted the modern style, and addressed them in polished platitudes and honeyed accents, his apparent success would have been much greater. Were he preaching among us, he would be called very rude and coarse.

Jesus, the apostles and prophets, used great plainness of speech. No other kind will do any good. The things they condemned are the things now highly esteemed among men. But if you speak plainly all nice, polite Pharisees will combine against you and ridicule you, and you will lose all your influence for "good." Of course you will. That is what the Savior said. But, then, you can have the happiness of suffering shame for His name. The apostles succeeded in gaining attention only by reason of spiritual gifts.

Can "accredited denominations" altogether unauthored by the word of truth, whose members engage in all kinds of covetous practices—in any pursuit that promises wealth and honor—be churches? It ought to be self evident to every one that the Church of our Lord Jesus Christ is composed of all those, and of those only, who do His will.

"Do you honor the Lord when you recognize those worldly organizations of human invention as churches? Can you be blameless if you hold a membership in such organization, or if you attend its meetings, and say by that act, "This is the way; walk ye in it?" Do you suppose that it was the right thing for the Jews to patronize the altars of Baal because it was popular to do so? Do not modern parties constitute Babylon the great (Papal mother and Protestant daughters), typified by that Babylon of many provinces of the Euphrates, into which all the Jews were carried except a few of the poorest people? Does not the Lord mean something when he says "Come out of her, my people, that ye partake not of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues?" But "the Pharisees, who were covetous, heard all these things, and they derided him." R. J. R.

"THE STATE MEETING CONVENTION OF CHRISTIAN BROTHERS AND SISTERS."

The above is the name of the organization or society instituted at Austin recently. The writer did not arrive until the second day, but it was very clear to any one that a rule of action had been agreed upon by the "principal men" among them, that no one should participate in the discussion unless he or she would enroll their names, which would be equivalent to joining their "society." This rule was adopted before the writer arrived; and when we would ask a question we were denied an answer on the grounds that our names were not written in the calf's book, instead of the Lamb's book of Life. When they were thoroughly "shown up" several brethren ordered their names removed from the roll, prominent among whom were Brethren Gano, Hawkins, Tant and Wilneth. Several brethren came to co-operate, but rather than co-operate through the "Missionary Society" (which the above was admitted to be) they carried their means back home. It will be thought by some that none opposed this M. S. except editors and correspondents of the FIRM FOUNDATION, but this is a mistake, since we know of a great many brethren who are willing to admit that the FIRM FOUNDATION is right; they are neither editors or correspondents. We take the liberty just here, however, to say that the FIRM FOUNDATION is endorsed by the ablest talent in the United States, and is rapidly coming to the front as one of the leading periodicals of the church of Christ, and one of the few that speak as the oracles of God.

We will not say that we do not endorse the action of the Austin church. We do not believe in sectarianism of any sort. For this reason our "city pastors" are crying out "modern apostasy, heresy," etc.

But let them cry out as much as they please, we expect to continue to oppose humanism as long as we live, even though our reward here be nought but persecution. We shall expect brethren who favor the word of God as our only rule of action to warn others not to have "the name of the beast written in their foreheads and in their hands." To all those who attended the State meeting at Austin, these appeared indeed "perilous times." If others are incredulous concerning the above, let them send to the Austin Statesman Publishing Co. and get a copy of their paper for the time the meeting was convened and they will find that the picture here presented is not overdrawn. Now, brethren, allow us to make still another appeal "to you who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity," let us make a united effort to save Texas from sectism. Kentucky, Illinois, Missouri and Kansas tolerate Missionary Societies, and at last the beast has set its ponderous foot on our free and fertile soil. No longer can we hold out the "Bible alone" as our "rule of faith and practice," without realizing that some of our brethren have departed from the faith. With prayer for all I am your brother in defence of the truth as it is in Jesus. J. F. G.

FELLOWSHIP WITH CHRIST

Paul tells the church of God at Corinth that they were called unto the fellowship of Jesus Christ, our Lord.—I Cor., i: 9. The Apostles enjoyed this fellowship with Jesus and with the Father.—I John, i: 3. "Truly our fellowship is with the Father and with his son Jesus Christ." God calls man to this fellowship.—I Cor., i: 9. By the Gospel.—I Thes., 2: 14. The Apostles enjoyed fellowship from what "they saw and heard."—I John, i: 1-2. They declare these things to us that we may have fellowship with them. If we have fellowship with Christ we will have fellowship with the Apostles and with each other, and this we will have if we walk in the light as he is in the light.—I John, i: 7. Hence "to walk in the light" and "to have fellowship one with another" are related to each other as Cause and Effect. If there is no fellowship it is evident that the Cause that produces it is absent, viz.: "walking in the light." If not in the light, are walking in darkness and do not know where we are going.—I John, ii: 11. To "walk in the light" is "to do the truth," and "to walk in darkness" is "to do not the truth."—I John, i: 6. Again, to have fellowship is to have love for our brethren, and to love God and Jesus, and to have this love is in the light, and if he continues in love will abide in the light and in the fellowship. How easily we can assure our hearts. "By this we know that we love the children of God when we love God and keep his commandments."—I John, v: 2. And we know that we love God when we keep his commandments; "for this is the love of God that we keep His commandments; and his commandments are not grievous."—I John v: 3. "But whoso keepeth His word, in him verily is the love of God perfected; hereby we know we are in Him."—I John, ii: 5. To "keep His word," "do the truth," "obey His commandments, all equivalent expressions. Some conclusions: 1. God calls or invites to fellowship by that Gospel declared to us by Apostles. 2. "Seeing and hearing" those things declared by Apostles necessary to the fellowship. 3. To see and hear is to do the truth, obey the commandments, walk in light. 4. To walk in light is to be in Christ. To be in Christ is to have fellowship with the Father and the Son. 5. We know that we are in Christ when we have obeyed the commandments or done the truth.—I John, ii: 5. 6. The claim made by the orthodox denominations that an individual is converted in Christ, his sins forgiven before he has done the truth or obeyed the command, is a false claim. 7. If two parties are not in fellowship with each other, it is conclusive evidence that either one or both of them are not in the light but are walking in darkness. 8. If to believe with all the heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, repent, confess with the mouth the Lord Jesus and be baptized for the remission of sins is the word, or truth, or things declared by the Apostles to be done or kept in order to the fellowship; then all who obey this doctrine of Christ are in the light; those who do not obey it are in darkness. Brethren, if we are in the light we ought to abide in the light by walking even as He (Jesus) walked. J. W. J.

FELLOW HELPERS TO THE TRUTH.

"Beloved thou doest faithfully whatsoever thou doest to the brethren and to the strangers, which have borne witness of thy charity before the church; whom if thou bring forward on their journey after a Godly sort thou shalt do well, because for His name's sake they went forth, taking nothing of the Gentiles. We therefore ought to receive such, that we might be fellow-helpers to the truth."—III John, v: 8. To help those who faithfully preach the truth is to be a fellow-helper, a co-laborer in the truth and a co-partner in the reward to be given those who turn many from sin to righteousness. Brethren, do not forget to do good and to communicate of your substance to those who labor in word and doctrine, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased.—Heb., xiii: 16. Remember that those whose hearts are filled with the love of money, who covet wealth, have erred from the faith and will pierce themselves through with many sorrows. They should not "trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God who giveth us richly all things to enjoy." They should do good, be rich in good works ready to distribute, willing to communicate, laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life."—I Tim., vi, 17-19.

DEAR BRO. MCGARY: I have just read Sarai's most excellent "Talk with the Sisters," and I want to tell her how heartily I endorse what she has written. But I should like to ask her which one of the apostles said, "Be temperate in all things." Perhaps it was the same one who said, "God tempers the winds to the shorn lamb." But this by the way. I want every sister—and brother, too, for whatever argument is put forth against snuff-dipping applies with equal force against tobacco using in any form—to read and reread Sarai's article. Study its truth, made so searching by the every day facts and the scripture she has brought out. The world is noisy with the reports of the battles of prohibition of whisky selling. We are everywhere called on to pray, work, and vote for prohibition. Christians invoke the powerful aid of Cæsar's arm to put down whisky. This may be very well, but I think, brethren, that in this matter we fall under the condemnation of Jesus, who said, "Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment." We see the effects of whisky on society more prominently, and therefore we judge whisky to be one of the greatest evils of the age. While I would not take away one tittle of the disrepute of whisky drinking, I still believe we make a distinction in sins that the Spirit of God does not justify us in doing. Read Gal., v, 19-21. The arrangement in this passage of the works of the flesh is by no means a thing of chance. I believe the Spirit placed them in this order to show us that God does not look on sin as we do; that he does not call some sins great, and others peccadilloes, from their apparent effect on human society. The only difference in sin recognized by God is the motive that prompts sin. "To be overtaken in a fault"—and that means to be overcome by a sudden temptation—is not so sinful in God's eyes as a willful, deliberate disregard of the laws of cleanliness and purity. Every transgression of God's law is sin, and if whisky drinking is sin (and I don't question it), it is because it is a deliberate indulgence of an unclean, impure and hurtful appetite, condemned by the Spirit of God. So, then, tobacco using in any form being, so far as the motive goes (and I do not think I should err if I said so far as the effect goes, too), no less unclean, impure and hurtful, is not a whit less of sin than whisky drinking, for the same unholy lust incites them both. I have seen a brother, earnest and good, being asked to wait on the table of the Lord's supper, disgorge from his mouth into his hand a huge quid of concentrated filthiness, and then stand before the church and God and ask God's blessing on those who "partake of these emblems with clean hands and pure hearts." Oh, diabolical farce! Oh, sinful mockery! Can any hand be clean that touches the unclean thing? Can any heart be pure that willingly takes into itself, through the mouth, stomach, blood, and brain, this polluted poison of hell? Oh, holy brethren, I beseech you be clean. I beseech you remember that you owe it to yourselves to live clean, sober lives, for your bodies are the temple of the Spirit of God, and he that defiles this temple him will God destroy. You owe it to your children to keep yourselves unspotted from the world, for they look to you as to God. You owe it to the sacred vow you made when you yielded yourselves to Christ, to walk in newness of life; and, lastly, you owe it to God, who made you, to live clean, holy, Christ-like lives, for you are not your own; you have been bought with a price, even the precious blood of the Son of God. Then forsake your filthiness, oh, my brother and sister, lest after all your good works, you hear the voice of a clean judge say, "Let him that is filthy be filthy still." W. LIPSCOMB, JR. AZLE, TEXAS. WAELDER, TEXAS. Dear Bro. McGary: Suffer me to make a few remarks through your valuable paper, as one who loves truth, and is ready to defend it. Seeing that there so many so-called Christians that have made their way out of the Bible, introducing many things that are foreign to it, which things are greatly disturbing Israel, it behooves all true followers of Jesus to rally to the aid of the FIRM FOUNDATION, and hand in hand march against all innovations. Yes, brethren, let us down with these monsters who are marring the peace of Zion. Truly the peace of Zion has been broken up by innovations, among which are "Missionary Societies, State Meetings and Sunday School Conventions." Every Christian should cry these things down. If the Bible is a perfect rule of faith and practice, in which we find all things that pertain to life and godliness, which will make the man of God perfect, as Paul and Peter teach us, then all of these untaught and "unfurnished" things above named are worse than worthless, by becoming hindrances to the progress of true Christianity. Then they are not of God, and if not of God, they are of satan, whence all things that are not of God come. Then brethren, behold satan on his satanic throne, giving his satanic orders to his satanic subjects to carry out his satanic work, that he may weaken the church of God, and overthrow truth and right in this world, and rob the Son of God of that which He purchased with His blood. Oh! How many are in satan's service who claim to be the servants of God! We know them by their fruits of strife, contention and division that they are working in the Church of Christ. Dear brethren, can we not prevail on you to come back to the Bible that we may all walk by the same rule, and have peace and harmony? Oh! Brethren, come back to God's Word. Will you not? Do let us take it as our rule of faith and practice, speaking where it speaks, and observing silence where it is silent, that our labor may not be in vain. May the truth prevail, is the prayer of your brother in Christ,

ROBT. W. FLOYD.

UVALDE, July 8.

Dear Bro.:

On going to the office to mail previous card I found F. F., and have read it. It is still good, strong and true; but tartness tempered with love is rarely amiss. May the Lord help you to keep straight on and improve at every step. To my mind the F. F. is to be the stay of the cause in Texas. As soon as I get moved I must help to increase your list. My wife tells me that her memory is that the S. M. was to convene on the 7th, so I am not there and can't be. No great loss. Please write me the result.
Fraternally yours,
J. R. WILMETH.

TALKS WITH THE SISTERS.

DEAR SISTERS: Having been apprised of the rapid increase in circulation of the FIRM FOUNDATION—especially of the large number of sisters who have added their names to its list of subscribers—I deem it not unwise to rehearse some thoughts previously expressed on the subject of Christian women's dress, for the benefit of our new subscribers as well as some of the old, who seem not to have profited much by my former letters. As I said before, my characters were not imaginary, and I have watched closely to see if even one had discarded any of the forbidden articles of dress— forbidden, not by me, but by the Holy Spirit. But I am pained to see rings still worn, bangs and frizzes still deforming the brows of many whom I thought would cast these idols aside, when shown that they were forbidden by the word of God. But not so, alas! They show only too plainly that they love the world, and the things of the world, far better than their Savior, for He says: "If ye love me ye will keep my sayings."

Dear sisters, the aim of the FIRM FOUNDATION is not to ride the re-baptism hobby, as is slanderously reported by its enemies, but to contend for the whole truth, irrespective of human tenets, and one of its main objects is to enforce practical Christianity, which has, for ages, been overshadowed, or supplanted, by a sickly sentimentality called religion, which has no kinship with Christianity.

In what does Christianity consist? Not in dressing in our best and going out on sunshiny "Sabbaths," as many of our brethren call the Lord's day, and partaking of the typical bread and wine, and after this has been done, spending the rest of the Lord's day in driving around the city; or, if in the country, spending the time with a neighbor in idle gossip, while children are running wild and untaught? Indeed no, and if we are pursuing this course, dear sisters, we should pause, seriously consider, and find if our conscience holds us blameless. How many Christians make the most trivial excuses for remaining away from the Lord's house; and spend the day, perchance, in novel-reading or in perusing the sensational newspaper gossip, that is so impure and so degrading in its tendency. This is all wrong, and God will not hold us guiltless when we so squander our time.

Sunday religion has so long been predominant that the fewest number of Christians realize that Christianity is a practical thing, an everyday matter, a daily, hourly adherence to the straight and narrow way that leads to eternal life. A weak sentimentality, a vague conception of God's truth, has prevented a sound, practical conception of Christianity, and thousands of honest people have stumbled blindly along day after day, year after year, age after age, waiting for some grand opportunity to prove their religion, while they (if they only had known what true Christianity was) might have filled every day and hour with good deeds. All of us, I might say, have been brought up with this false idea of Christianity. If not reared under its shadow, constant association with it, has blinded us in a great degree to the simplicity of the Christian life. We read God's word with this veil over our eyes, and when we come to such passages as "let your women keep silence in the churches, for it is not permitted unto them to speak," we cry, "O, that applied to the women of ancient times, because they were degraded and ignorant, and not competent to speak; but now it is different. Women have the same advantages with men and should not be expected to 'stay at home and bear children,' but should leave home and children and lecture on temperance and preach, etc. Why, look at the noble women of to-day who are accomplishing so much good by their public efforts." Yes, but how infinitely much more good would they accomplish by staying at home and making happiness for husband and children and training them for the everlasting household of God. Again, "I would that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array, but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works."—I Timothy, ii:9-10. Again, Peter writing of women says: "Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning, of plaiting the hair and wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel."

Now, how do Christian women accept these plain passages?

Here, again, the veil woven by false teaching and practice obstructs our mental vision, and we defend our sinful violation of these commands by saying, Peter and Paul did not mean that for us. Why, all Christians wear jewelry, nowadays. What harm is there in it, anyway? The idea of God condescending to think of such trivial matters is absurd. Why, I am obliged to wear this engagement ring; my husband would be offended and think I had ceased to love him, should I remove it; and this other ring was my dead mother's, and it would be slighting her memory to refuse to wear it; and I am obliged to wear this chain because the locket has my dead father's picture in it. And thus a thousand excuses are made for "slighting the memory" of "Him, who was rich, but for our sakes, became poor," who was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin. Dear sisters, I know many of us fall into these errors thoughtlessly, many ignorantly, and our preachers and teachers fail to call attention to these passages, because the majority of them violate them by wearing gold watches and chains, rings, shirt and sleeve buttons, and they do not fancy having "physician, heal thyself," hurled at them. But even when they do hold them up to us we have all so fully imbibed the prevailing false idea that preachers are infallible, that we fail to comprehend the full, practical meaning of these passages, and thus the Word of God is made of none effect by inconsistent teachers.

But this need not be any excuse for us. Of course, sisters young in the cause cannot be expected to know everything at once, but must learn daily and cast off each sin as they become cognizant of it until they are fullgrown in Christ. But the older ones need not be misled by false teachers, for they have had time to learn for themselves from our Guide book, and they will not be if they consult it daily. If they err, after being in the church so long, it is not because they are misled, but because they are glad of any excuse not to obey God. How many who really seem to want to serve God in deed and in truth, try to see how nearly they can walk with the world and yet not depart entirely from His precepts. We are all too apt to fall into the error of gauging ourselves by others and going just as far as others go. But how foolish! Paul says we "must not measure ourselves by ourselves," but must strive to come unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ that we may grow up into him in all things. Let us then try to realize that Christianity is no mere sentimental emotion, but a real, practical, earnest matter, one on which hinges our eternal destiny. Let those just born into the fold begin the new life by leaving off those things forbidden in the plainest and most unmistakable terms, the plainest of which are the rules laid down for dress. Sisters, we all know that vanity, the love of admiration, is the besetting sin of our sex, and the Holy Spirit knew it, hence laid down plain and unequivocal rules to guide us in the matter of dress. "Soberly and modestly, with sobriety and shamefacedness," excludes frizzed and banged hair and gaudy, elaborate dressing, all of which bespeak an empty mind. "Not in gold and pearls," excludes jewelry; "not in costly array," condemns silks, satin, and such like. Why, just think of the time consumed in making and putting on showing apparel! How much could be accomplished toward training your children's minds and strengthening your own with the daily manna of God's precious word! "But," says one, "why has God implanted the love of admiration and beautiful dress in us, if it is not to be gratified?" You might as well ask why he has implanted the love of dancing and theatre-going or any other worldly pleasure in us. God does not implant it, but the wicked one, and it all comes from the lust of the eye and the lust of the flesh and the pride of life, and has been fostered by foolish, worldly parents. But granting that God did implant this in us, when our first parents sinned they forfeited all the pleasures our Father had prepared for them, and were expelled from Eden, and the only way for us to arrive at their former happy state is to abjure those worldly lusts, born of sin, and "count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge which is in Christ Jesus."

Another raises this objection to plain dressing, namely, that God created us male and female for a purpose, and it is right for us to array ourselves and teach our daughters to dress so as to render themselves attractive to the opposite sex. This is strange argument for a Christian! Would not this be appealing to the senses and catering to the lust of the eye and flesh? Most assuredly it would. What is mere physical beauty compared to beauty of mind? One pure mind and guileless heart is worth a world of beautiful faces. We should have a high ideal of Christian womanhood and try to live up to it, and those men whose hearts and lives are pure will seek us, while we will have no charms for the lewd and lustful. As I said above, many violate these rules, simply because their attention has never been called to them, but those who read this will no longer have this excuse. Read the second chapter of I Timothy and third chapter of I Peter and dress accordingly, regardless of husband, father, mother, sister or brother. Remember, our Savior has said, "He that loveth father and mother more than me is not worthy of me." Cast their wishes and opinions aside as mere chaff, compared with the word of God. Whenever a Christian woman casts off these pet vanities she shows that she realizes her responsibility as a child of God, and intends to let her light shine before others. Dear young sisters—babes in Christ—and old sisters too, ponder over this letter, and strive to realize its full import, and determine to forsake all forbidden pleasures. Remember that practical Christianity consists in filling our minds with God's simple precepts, and trying to live up to them to our utmost ability, prayerfully repenting of our many falls, and daily walking in the shadow of the cross. Then, when the cry is raised, "Behold the bridegroom cometh," even though it be at the midnight hour, we can go forth to meet him with lamps trimmed and burning, and enter into the marriage supper of the Lamb.

SARAI.

SOME THOUGHTS AND SUGGESTIONS OFFERED TO BRETHREN.

"Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.—Matt., xxviii, 19.

This commission is to be preached to two classes of men. It is divided into two parts, thus: 1. Go teach, in order to make believers, baptizing them. 2. Teach them, the baptized believers, to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you. This commission immediately concerns only the two characters or classes. Every man and woman who sits under the sound of the preacher's voice belongs to one or the other of these classes, i. e., he is of class 1, and is untaught unbeliever, unbaptized; or to class 2, and is taught, a believer, baptized. The first class is the world, and comprises the ignorant, the blinded, the unwashed, the unsanctified. The second class is the church or kingdom, the wise, the saved, the sanctified.

I see the fields white before me with these two classes, and heartily believing that this commission is given to me as a follower of the Lord Jesus, I go forth to preach the gospel of God's grace.

A Baptist, hearing this preaching, becomes interested. I labor publicly and privately with him, striving to teach him the way of the Lord more perfectly than he now knows it. At first I am somewhat puzzled as to what class the man belongs, but as he claims to be a child of God, saved and having long since had his sins forgiven, I find myself classing him in the second class, or the church. Especially am I confirmed in this when I remember that most of our wisest and best brethren have had not a doubt that Baptists are in the kingdom of Christ. I find that the man, though earnest and eager to learn, is yet untaught and in error regarding faith, repentance, confession and baptism. I am here puzzled still more when I recall the words of the prophet, "they shall all be taught of God." However, with such eagerness on his part to lay aside error and learn truth, I with joy lead him into the light. He gladly lays aside what man had taught him, and learns that faith comes by hearing the word of God, that repentance necessarily follows instead of preceding faith, that the Lord has demanded that we confess him before men, and that baptism as well as these preceding steps is for or in order to salvation. His eyes are opened. He can so easily, on almost every page of the Book, read the pure, simple, harmonious plan of salvation, as revealed for our acceptance. He exclaims with David, "the entrance of Thy Word giveth light." He is asked if he is satisfied with his baptism. "Oh yes, that's all that I am satisfied with, for all the rest was wrong, but I certainly was sincere in that act, and went down into the water only to obey God." So the church receives him with a shake of the hand.

Now, brethren and sisters, what have we done? We have, unauthorized by our king, received as a child of the kingdom one whose baptism had preceded the teaching commanded by the king, when he has told us it must follow the teaching; thus making his law void by the traditions of men. Ah, brethren! this is a serious thing, and we, perhaps, by failing to declare the whole counsel of God, cause this good, earnest inquirer, to make a fatal mistake right here.

Let us give ourselves to study, that we may show ourselves workmen that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word, and let us give to each his portion in due season. If immersed sectarians are pardoned, they are in Christ, "fitly framed together for a habitation of God through the Spirit." Can these inharmonious parts or members be fitly compared to the human body, and appropriately be called "that glorious church, without spot or wrinkle," "holy and without blemish?"

Let us no longer go among them with so much argument and contention over words to no profit, sowing discord where all should be peace and love. Let us consistently bid them God speed, and rejoice that they are converting ten souls to Christ to our one. It is anything but a glorious work to tear down their faith, which came as a gift from God, bringing peace to their souls; to show them the uselessness of their repentance which came before their faith, and amounted to little else than an agonizing prayer for faith at a mourner's bench; to show them that, instead of confessing, they had really denied Jesus and his words, when, before witnesses, they declared that God for Christ's sake had pardoned their sins. Oh, is it not a fearful thing to take away all these and leave them only—water? For what else is left in their conversion but water? and we know that man is not justified by water only, and that the doctrine is neither wholesome nor comfortable. It does not help us out of the trouble to say, "he now truly believes through the word of Apostles, his repentance is a glad and intelligent turning to walk in newness of life; his confession, made before men, is a good one, and does not deny the word of the Lord." No, it does not help matters to say this, for it is all on the wrong side of his baptism, and therefore not according to the divine pattern given us.

"Ah," you may reply, "if I were to tell them their baptism is worthless, it would be contrary to our time-honored custom." Well, no matter; every custom which God has not approved must be abandoned sooner or later. "Well, but the wise and beloved fathers of this reformation received them as members of the one body." Were they any wiser, or do we owe them more love than Peter and Paul? They at least were not inspired, while Peter and Paul were. Paul, looking at this same subject of building into the Spiritual building, said, "Let every man take heed how he buildeth thereon." If we recognize two ways of building on this foundation, i. e. (1) baptizing, then teaching; and (2) teaching, then baptizing, are we taking heed how we build, are we building as Paul built?

The Lord says unto us as he said unto Paul, "I send thee to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins."—Acts, xxvi, 18. We see that the first thing here is to open their eyes, the second to turn them from the power of Satan to God, that (third) they may receive remission of sins.

Now, brethren, here comes the Baptist and the Methodist, desiring membership with us, claiming that they have been in Christ enjoying the forgiveness of sins and the "inner witness of the spirit" for many years—only the eyes of their understanding had not been opened before.

Is it not strange, brethren, that we, who are "children of the light," are caused to believe that these converts were born blind into Christ? Ah, what a deformity! Sons and daughters of God, born spiritually blind! There may have been a time when God winked at (or overlooked) such ignorance, but His word intimates that He will no longer do so. He now commands these ill-taught ones, as did Paul at Ephesus (Acts, xix), to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus; and to be baptized in his name (or by his authority) they must first be taught—and the teaching must be Apostolic. The teaching of God brings all into the kingdom in the same way, speaking the same things.

Some are crying out in genuine terror, "the FIRM FOUNDATION is going to divide the church!" Well, dear brethren, it must divide; error will not continue to walk in the narrow path with truth; she loves a broader and more flowery way. "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" So long as weak, erring man presumes to walk in his own instead of the Lord's way, so long will offenses come, so long will parties exist. The sin of "dividing" will certainly not lie at the door of those who insist on the Lord's way of entrance into his kingdom.

I. B. MAXWELL.

WAELDER, TEXAS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have just received the FIRM FOUNDATION, and after examining it I wish to say a few words for Jesus. I believe with all my heart that the truth must be presented to the world and understood, in order to salvation by it; I therefore rejoice to see in the columns of the F. F. the truth so nobly defended, so plainly set forth, that all can understand it.

Notwithstanding this, some of the wise are apparently in the dark and can not see the truth as it is in Jesus; but this is not the first time that such has been the case, for our Savior while on earth reproved the faithlessness of the wise of earth, by saying: "I thank thee, O Father, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes."

Not only in sectarian ranks is this ignorance found, but in our own midst we see great confusion brought about by theories or positions taken by men, without one line of scriptural authority. There are three positions taken at the present time. The first is, that the gospel is a mystery, and can not be understood by man without a spiritual instructor; or, in other words, without the Spirit of God acting directly upon the heart of man, and opening up to his understanding the mystery of godliness. If the above be true, who is responsible for man's condemnation? If man is in an unsaved condition, and God proposes to save him by a system or law, and that law or system is so complicated or obscure that the mind of man can not comprehend it until it is made known to him by the direct work of the Spirit, and God fails to send the Spirit to perform this work, God, of necessity, is responsible for man's condemnation, and man must suffer on account of God's negligence.

This first position, therefore, we reject for three reasons. 1. It makes God unjust. 2. It can not be made to harmonize with the Bible. 3. It is untrue from beginning to end.

The second theory is the negative of the first, declaring the Bible to be no mystery, that it needs no spiritual instructor, that it can be understood; thus denying in full the first position, and referring us to many proof texts, such as Isa., xxxv, 8; II Tim, i, 10; Titus, i, 3; II Cor., iv, 31, and many other passages of like import, which infallibly prove the second position to be true so far. But after proving so clearly the simplicity of the gospel, they will tell us it is not necessary for man to understand the gospel, that he can be saved without this knowledge. If this be true, there are many unmeaning declarations made by our Savior and his apostles. Knowing that the words of our Savior are full of meaning, we therefore reject the second theory.

Now we will notice the third, which affirms that man can and must understand the gospel in order to be saved by it. As one only of these three positions can be correct, the other two are necessarily incorrect, and we can certainly determine, with the Bible before us, which of the three positions is in harmony with it. The first having even no shadow of scriptural authority, the second denying the first and proving the simplicity of the gospel, it is unnecessary to notice either further, except to deny the last of the second, and affirm and prove that man must understand the gospel in order to be saved by it. Thus believing, we proceed to prove the third position to be true.

All admitting that the Bible is the revealed will of God, we ask, for what has it been given? Paul answers, for the salvation of man, for he says it is the power of God unto salvation unto every one that believes. Hence, if the gospel is God's power to save, does he exert his power in any other way? If not, how does he propose to save by the gospel? Paul says, "by the foolishness of preaching." Hence foreseeing this Jesus says, "Go, teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit." Teaching, therefore, being the first thing necessary, we ask, what must we preach? Jesus says, "Go preach (or teach) the gospel." To teach means to make known. Hence whenever the gospel is taught, the learners know or understand it. The gospel then must be proclaimed or taught that man may hear with his ears, understand with his heart, that he may be healed; or in other words must be taught the truth, that he may know the truth, and be made free by the truth. We find, therefore, that man must hear, understand and obey from the heart, in order to be made free from sin. For Paul says, "God be thanked that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness." Obedience from the heart is certainly intelligent obedience; hence when we obey a command we must know or understand the design of it, as the scriptural heart is the seat of the understanding. For instance, when we believe, we must know that it is in order to salvation; when we repent, we must know that repentance is a reformation of life; when we confess Jesus, we must know confession is unto salvation; when we are baptized, we must know that baptism is, "for the remission of sins," and to bring us into Christ, into his death, where we come in contact with his blood, that cleanses from all sin. We must know these things in order to "obey from the heart;" for we can not obey from the heart things that were never understood by the heart.

From the foregoing argument we conclude the third position to be correct, viz., that man can and must understand the gospel in order to be saved by it. My heart's desire and prayer to God is that we may all understand the truth, and be saved.

Your brother in Christ,
ROBERT W. FLOYD.

BRO. ALLEN'S ATTITUDE CONSIDERED.

NUMBER II.

In our last issue we showed from the "Old Path Pulpit," that Bro. Allen set his seal of non-validity on Methodist confession of faith, by refusing to accept it in the case of his own mother who had been a "devoted Methodist for perhaps forty years." Yes, after she had been professing Christ through Methodist forms and ceremonies, singing and praying of Him as "Lord of all," for nearly half of a century, he required her to confess with her mouth that she believed, with all her heart, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, in order to that "one immersion" that he would not administer unto her on less than this "good confession." In this he was right. But how does it look to see him now denying that this confession is necessary? If his mother had been immersed instead of sprinkled, would that have conferred force or validity to her Methodist confession? As Bro. Allen thinks it sacrilege to reimmerse one who has been once immersed, how about demanding the confession of one who has once confessed?

We hold that those who have been won to false theories of religion through the perversion of the gospel of Christ, are wrong in faith, wrong in repentance, wrong in confession and baptism. These false teachers are promulgators of another gospel, and those who accept it are the victims of delusive fancies that come, not by hearing the word of God, and hence, is no part of "one faith" that liberates the soul from the thralldom of sin. So then, we could consistently demand the good confession of those who come from these human and creed bound societies. But how can Bro. Allen do so? Consistency binds him to the acceptance of their confession, and to regard every step taken by them as good and valid, save that of effusion for baptism. Let him, then, explain to his brethren, why he demanded the good confession of his mother, instead of beginning with her first(?) false step—effusion for immersion. Ah! my brother, you will never be able to get up an explanation that will be plausible. So we shall be surprised if you attempt it at all. You can very conveniently hide out from this duty that devolves upon you as a pointer out of the "old paths," by scrupulously guarding your "self respect" a while longer. Prudence is said to be the better part of valor—which we dare say you need not to be informed of.

But now, to some points found in your article, "Reimmersion Scripturally considered." You say:

"We start with the commission of Christ to His apostles. This is the fundamental law of the Kingdom. On it all others are based, and to it they must conform. It contains our only authority for baptizing. What it does not authorize us to do, we may not do. What conflicts with it is prohibited by virtue of the conflict. This commission states that the immersed believer is pardoned. Faith and repentance are made the conditions on which remission is promised to the immersed. It is not stated here nor elsewhere that one must understand what baptism is for, and have that purpose in view as a condition of receiving the promised pardon. Every penitent believer, therefore, who is immersed as the Savior here directs, has this promise."

We wonder if our brother thinks that there is any issue between us, as to whether those who are "immersed as the Savior directs" have the promise of pardon? Surely he does not think that we deny this? But what we deny, is, that those who are led to immersion by false teaching, are immersed as the Savior directs. His direction in this commission, is, to teach and then baptize. And we find that this is the course that inspired men pursued. And we also find that where they found those who had been immersed without having been taught, that they taught them, and reim-mersed them. When our brother says that, "It is not stated here nor elsewhere that one must understand what baptism is for," we think that he is greatly in error. These apostles were sent to preach the gospel, and salvation from past sins is promised to that class who believe what they preached and are led by that preaching to be baptized. When they substantiated the astounding proposition, that Jesus had burst the bonds of death and ascended to the right hand of the Father, thereby exemplifying to the world that He is the Lamb of God that takes away the sin of the world, they were then ready and anxious to hear His law for the remission of their sins. The prophet Jeremiah had foretold, some six hundred years before this, that the subjects of the new covenant should have the law put in their inward parts and written in their hearts. So, on the memorable Pentecost, when the law of this covenant was first promulgated, it was written in the hearts of the enquirers, when they were answered, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ; for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." If this was not the law, where is anything that looks like the law that was to have been written in their hearts?

There is no law in the three facts of Christ's death, burial and resurrection. This was part of the gospel that they were to believe. How could this law be written in their hearts unless they understood it? The understanding of this law is the writing that takes place, or, there is no such writing, and hence, the old prophet was mistaken. Let no man who hopes to enjoy the confidence of intelligent and candid men and women, who live in the nineteenth century of the Sun of righteousness teach them that they need not understand the law of the Spirit of life in order to obey it from their hearts.

Moses E. Lard, than whom no abler man has lived, has well said: "I have now stated the sense in which we believe baptism to be for, in order to, remission of sins, namely—that it is one of the three joint conditions appointed by the Savior for this specific end. This, with us, is an item of faith, held as firmly as we hold the resurrection of the dead." But Bro. Allen calls this a "theory." If it is a theory, it is one that can be traced back to the author and finisher of the faith. It was put in the mouth of Peter by the Holy Spirit, in answer to men anxiously desiring to know the law of the Spirit of life. If this is a theory, it is one in which there is no danger to the soul. But there is a theory that we think is fraught with great danger. It is that theory, that men and women need not understand or believe that this ordinance of God is for, or in order to, what God has taught that it is for, in His word that liveth and abideth forever. And this is a theory that Bro. Allen and his coadjutors, in substituting "our plea" for God's plea, are clinging to with a tenaciousness that threatens to divide the church of God and brand a well defined item of the faith as nugatory. He says that what conflicts with the commission of Christ, which is the fundamental law of the kingdom, is prohibited by virtue of the conflict: And so say we. Does Peter's answer, as found in Acts, ii, 38, conflict with the commission? No! Does that teaching to-day which says that men and women must hear, understand and believe the very same Gospel in all its parts that these inspired men preached, conflict with their teachings, or the fundamental law of the kingdom? No; no, brethren; but that teaching and theory which says one need not understand or believe what they said as to the design of an ordinance of God, does conflict with this fundamental law of the kingdom, which says preach it, and he that believes what you preach and is baptized shall be saved. Yes, there is a very marked conflict right along here, and it is the duty of those who are responsible for it to remove all theories till perfect harmony is restored. If they will not do so, then it is so much the worse for them. Men and women may be immersed in all good conscience toward God, but unless their immersion amounts to a "birth of water and the Spirit" it is no better in God's sight than the sprinkling of unconscious babes. And it does not amount to a birth of the spirit unless the good seed of the kingdom is received into the heart and leads to an intelligent obedience of the ordinance of baptism. "He that receives seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word (of God) and understandeth it." And this is the word which by the Gospel (of Christ) is preached unto you. No man can come to Christ or see His kingdom unless he is born of water and the Spirit. No man is born of water and the Spirit until the incorruptible seed of the kingdom is sown and received into his heart. This is the way that God draws persons to Christ. It is the way that the law of God is written in their hearts. He who hears and learns of the Father looks for forgiveness in the ordinance of baptism. He who hears and learns of men expect forgiveness when they believe in the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, and when they believe what is false—that their sins are forgiven before baptism. This is the difference. Here is a "conflict," and Bro. Allen is found on the side of that which conflicts with the fundamental law of the kingdom. Hence, according to his own rule, his course is prohibited by this fundamental law. Every plant that our heavenly father has not planted must be rooted up. This we are trying to do. These noxious sectarian plants can never be uprooted by dressing and pruning them by Bro. Allen's process, but will grow and shed their baleful and poisonous fruits in the kingdom of Christ to its great detriment, as they are now doing. If our teaching is a theory so is Bro. Allen's. So, contrast the two "theories," and see, brethren, which has the most hurtful tendency. One says you need not understand or believe the law of God for the pardon of sins that are past, while the other says you must understand and believe it or you can not "obey it from the heart." We fear not the decision of honest minds upon this question. Again, Bro. A. says: "It (the commission of Christ) contains our only authority for baptizing." Where, then, is any authority in it for baptizing those who do not know what they are being baptized for? Oh! where is it? Then, if that authority is not there, whence cometh the authority for receiving and recognizing them as born of water and the Spirit, when they have been thus unscripturally baptized? True, men and women are beginning to wake up to a sense of the awful enormity of this inconsistency, all over the land, thank God. But consistency will force Bro. Allen to cease to recognize sect baptism from the standpoint of the confession. His course in reference to the baptism of his mother seals his fate for him, as a rejector of sect baptism, or as a palpably inconsistent man. A. M. G.

THE ENNIS DEBATE.
 Tuesday evening Bros. T. H. Gillespie, A. J. McCarty and the writer reached Ennis, to attend the Sweeney and Jarrell debate. Bro. McCarty and the writer were assigned quarters at the pleasant and hospitable home of brother and sister Goss, whose kindness and affability towards us will ever be remembered. We met several brethren at Ennis whom we have long desired to meet face to face, prominent among whom were Bros. T. R. Burnett, W. P. Richardson, Lockhart, J. P. Pinkerton, W. H. Bagby, W. B. Stirman and N. B. Gibbons. Though never having met them, we had heard much from and of them. On Wednesday at 10 a. m. the discussion which had been under headway for two days was resumed, with Mr. Jarrell in the lead, trying to perform the impossible task of proving that the Baptist church is the church founded by Christ and the apostles; this in substance. Of course his time was worse than wasted. In fact, although he occupied the attitude of an affirmant, his real position was that of abuser, for he spent his time, both when in the affirmative and negative, abusing Christians, and taunting them with the nickname given by their enemies, and in ridiculing the gospel of Christ just as it reads in God's book, calling it "stuff." On Thursday morning, Bro. Sweeney opened the discussion, affirming that the church to which he belongs is identical in teaching, faith, practice, work and worship, with the church established by Christ and the apostles—in substance. He clearly and forcibly laid down the conditions of the law of the spirit of life for the remission of sins. In reply, Jarrell opened on him with our inconsistency in receiving Baptists without re-immersing them, and with our present divided condition on this question, as well as on the Missionary Society question. Although he did not handle these points with anything like the force with which they might have been handled, he being no part of a logician, yet his parading them before the audience seemed to put Bro. Sweeney on his guard, and he did not attempt to advance one step further with his proposition. Just at what point Bro. Sweeney saw the greatest danger we do not know, but that he saw it somewhere was very manifest. From that time forth he preached the truth, on what we call first principles, and doubtless sowed many seed-truths that may some day bear fruit in some heart in that vast audience. He is a grand man, a logician of the first order, if we are capable of judging, though many brethren expressed themselves as being disappointed in him, because he passed three days without establishing his proposition. But the trouble was not with Bro. Sweeney; it lay in the undeniable fact that we are so divided that that proposition can not be sustained by all the logic of earth. If Bro. Sweeney's honor and fairness had been less, he might have risked more, and possibly would have been able to run roughshod over Mr. Jarrell; but it was very evident that he saw dangers ahead that he knew could not be surmounted by fair means. We take Bro. Sweeney to be a very fair disputant, and a conscientious Christian. We learn that he has progressed to the full measure of the popular standard as to "pastoral" and Missionary Society religion. But we are led to indulge the hope that he has seen the danger to the progress of truth with which these human and divisive plans are fraught, and that he may yet be led by the love of truth to stand upon the walls of Zion and cry aloud against them. We learned that he stated privately, at Ennis, that he had become quite doubtful about the validity of any confession but that demanded by the disciples. He said publicly, while discussing: "Where is Bro. McGary? I am about ready to accept his position." This, however, was not taken by us as a candid acknowledgment, but as a joke thrown at Jarrell, and at us too, for aught we know. But had he taken our position—the truth—at the outset of that discussion, we dare say that Mr. Jarrell would have been as badly defeated as any man ever was. We hope that he will stand upon that position the next time he discusses with a Baptist, but if he will not accept it, we hope he may meet some Baptist who will be able to show up his departures from apostolic teaching in their true light. If our brethren will not accept the truth for the love of truth, we hope that they may be driven to it by these enemies of truth. God has often used wicked instruments to punish His rebellious children. In the meantime may investigation and controversy go on, bringing out the truth clearer and brighter, and God grant that error may be defeated every time, especially if advocated by our brethren who make such pretensions to loyalty to God's word. God hasten the day when we can affirm without fear of successful contradiction from all the powers of the wicked one combined, that our teaching, faith, practice, work and worship, are identical with that of the Apostles of our Lord. THE STATE MEETING.

Well, the State Meeting has come and gone like a dream, and as far as intercourse with Christian brethren and sisters is concerned, it has left a very pleasant memory. We had the pleasure of entertaining a house full during the entire meeting, among the number sisters Mollie Connor and Emily Brooks, from our native county, Madison, old friends and sisters in the cause. Also brother and sister Gillespie, the latter our sister in the flesh as well as spirit; Bros. A. J. McCarty, J. D. Tant, T. H. Gillespie and J. F. Grubbs. We were also gladdened by short visits from other brethren, among them Bros. Kendrick, C. M. Wilmeth and W. E. Hawkins. Sleep seemed to have forsaken our eyelids, and it was with the greatest reluctance that we could tear ourselves away from such delightful, spiritual intercourse to obtain even a few hours of needful rest.

In this sweet converse with true brethren and sisters we were made to realize so keenly the force and beauty of John's language, "We know we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." Why, fleshly ties are as ropes of sand, compared with the strong cable of pure love, that binds together the hearts of all true Christians. This much for our home intercourse.

At the daily meetings at the church our hearts were wounded oh! so deeply, to see the majority of the assembled brethren scorning and insulting the word of God, our perfect law of liberty, by advocating and voting in enterprises nowhere mentioned in that law, except among the works of the flesh.

From what we could see, not one sound brother or sister took any part in the proceedings, considering that to call for a "thus saith the Lord" from that assembly would be, indeed, "casting pearls before swine," after seeing such utter contempt shown for God's plans. But our hearts yearned towards a few of them, who seemed anxious to do right, but had not the courage to forsake the popular and most numerous party and come out wholly on the Lord's side.

In our frequent discussion of these ills, and suggested remedies, we found it necessary, for convenience sake, to have a shorter name for both parties, so forthwith dubbed our progressive brethren "Progs," and the old fogies "Fogs." Comparatively few old fogies were present (and they only as spectators), owing partly to the Christianly(?) circular sent out by the Austin church, locking their mouths; and partly because most of them were engaged in the grand work of bringing souls into the fold of Christ, and therefore could not come.

No sound Christian can cooperate with any such body as the so-called Convention of Christian Brethren. We realize only too surely that they are "not of us," and the sooner they go out from us the better it will be for the cause we love so well.

We were greatly disappointed in not meeting Bro. J. F. Rowe, of the American Christian Review, who had promised to be with us—merely as a spectator, however. We went to the depot to meet him, but instead received a letter stating that he could not come, on account of the hot weather and his health. We have been a reader of his noble paper for several years, and longed to grasp the hand of the man who has had the courage to so long withstand the onslaughts of the various enemies of the truth. We hope to meet him at the grand mass meeting to be held at Dallas next year. If not, let us all stand firmly for the truth, and we will meet with the redeemed hosts on the eternal camping grounds.

L. B. McG.

We have quite an encouraging letter from Bro. G. W. Warrick, of Sulphur Rock, Ark., in which he says:

"Dear brethren, let every one of us become an agent for the F. F. Let every one see that he gets even one new subscriber for it, and if we can't do this, we can buy an extra copy and send it to some poor brother or sister unable to pay for it. In so doing, we will not only hold up the hands of the editors and collaborators in the work, but will be the means of shedding much light on gospel subjects. Would to God that every sister and brother in the land would become a subscriber to it, that its visits might become weekly instead of monthly.

"Dear Bro. McGary, stand firm, the truth will prevail. Your paper is growing in favor daily with the brethren, and ere long your subscription list will be swelled to thousands."

We have not space for the whole letter, but will extract an incident from it in a few words. He says a preacher, a society man, preached to his congregation in June, and a Baptist came for ward desiring to unite with us on his Baptist immersion. After the preacher had turned him over to the church, Bro. W. arose and showed the inconsistency of Baptist teaching on that subject. Whereupon, the elder rose and said it had been the custom from the rise of the reformation to receive them on their old baptism; that the Campbells, Scott, Stone and others did so, and he intended to defend it. Bro. W. then told them that seeking no higher authority than Campbell, was what had caused the editors of the F. F. to dub all such "Campbellites." Whereupon he said, "I had as soon be called a Campbellite as a McGaryite." Bro. W. replied, "I had, too, but there is no need of either."

The Baptist was not received that day. The society preacher said he had never, in thirty years preaching, met with but one man who advocated rebaptism, and that the brethren would not countenance him, and that he drifted off into Texas and was lost sight of.

Bro. Warrick says: "It may be you, Bro. Mo., as the society brethren have no use for you." No, we are not the man. We were born and bred in Texas, and have not been out of the State since we obeyed the gospel, four years ago. A. McG.

BRETHREN Carrington and Gano were appointed on a committee, by the Chairman of the recent State Meeting, to create a fund of at least $50,000 for the benefit of superannuated preachers. They at once accepted the position, and proposed to head the list with donations of $100 each.

Now we are a little curious to know why these brethren could not consistently endorse the plan adopted for missionary work, and yet can join heart and purse in the plan for the support of superannuated preachers? You join with others in saying, We have a Bible plan for sounding out the gospel. Have we not also a Bible plan for the support of the poor saints?

Why not contend for consistency in all things? J. S. D.

BRO. C. KENDRICK, of California, delivered one of the best talks of his life at the recent State Meeting. This vallant old soldier of the cross unsheathed the old Jerusalem blade, and exposed the works of men, in the spirit that an affectionate father would plead with his erratic child. But his warning voice passed as an idle tale. Now if our good old brother will lay down some glaring inconsistencies nearer home, and stand out upon the broad platform of God's entire truth, his last days will be his best days, and over the river he will surely receive the Master's approval and an everlasting reward. J. S. D.

THE July issue of the F. F. is the size we hope to be able to adopt at an early day. Send along your names, brethren, that we may be able to increase the amount of reading matter. We want to make the F. F. a visitor laden with matter that will stand the most critical test of our best scripturalists, and at the same time adapted to the minds of babes in Christ.

We earnestly ask your assistance in contending for the ancient landmarks. We will neither swerve to the right nor to the left, but will try to follow where the master leadeth.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

A recent rapid increase in the circulation of the FIRM FOUNDATION has necessitated a change to a larger subscription book, and in transferring names mistakes were very likely to occur. So if any brother or brethren have failed to receive the July number of the paper, just notify us and it will be made right, whether the mistake occurred that way or not. We do not wish one subscriber to miss even one number. A. McG.

OMNISCIENCE.

That selfish deed, however small;
An evil thought, which nurtured, grows.

A heart all cold to others woes.
God sees it—all!

The little duty barely done—
Each sacrifice, however small;
An unkind thought checked in its birth;

The smile to cheer another's death,
God sees it—all.

He sees it all—the right, the wrong;
Nothing can be too great or small;

The feeblest effort in His name—
The sorrow, happiness, or shame.
God sees them—all.

HEEDLESSNESS.

Alas, I have walked thro' life,
Too heedless where I trod;
Nay, helping to trample my fellow-worm

And fill the burial s d;
Forgetting that the sparrow falls
Not unmarked by God.

The wounds I might have healed
The human sorrow and smart
And yet it never was in my soul
To play so ill a part;
But evil is wrought by want of thought,
As well as by want of heart.

ODDS AND ENDS.

If our religion is not true we must change it. If it is true we must propagate it.

There is one kind of exercise which does not fatigue us—the exercise of forbearance.

Obedience, we may remember, is a part of religion, but love, which includes obedience, is the whole.

A noble preacher said he never felt that he had done good in preaching unless he made some one sad, glad, or mad.

A man protesting against error is in the highway toward uniting himself with all men who believe the truth.

Some people are always finding fault with Nature for putting thorns on roses. Had we not better be thankful that she puts roses on thorns?

No soul was ever yet saved, and no good deed was ever done, to-morrow. Be careful, dear reader, lest to-morrow find you beyond the world of probation.

OH, THAT MAKES A DIFFERENCE!
Are not most of us like this little boy in regard to our own shortcomings? The bright little four-year-old made an assertion, which his father called in question. The father then asked: "If Mary should tell anything not exactly so, what would you say?" "I'd say she told a lie." "If brother should say anything that was not just so, what would you think about it?" "I'd think he told a lie." "Well, supposing you should say something that was not exactly so; what then?" "I'd say I'm mistaken."

Dear Brother McGary:

I have been favored with several copies of the F. F. lately, for which I am very grateful. I have learned to esteem you very highly for your great zeal for the truth, and for your fearless and manly defense of your positions. But, permit me to say kindly, that I am not yet convinced of the correctness of your position concerning re-baptism. I do not think that you can prove from the Scriptures that absolute knowledge of the leading design of baptism is essential to acceptable obedience. I have not been a constant reader of the F. F., but in your efforts that I have seen, you have, to my mind, failed to prove Scripturally and logically, your position.

Baptism is the initiatory rite of the New Covenant, and of course we all believe and teach that no one can Scripturally claim any promise or blessing, under that covenant, without baptism. While this is true beyond a doubt, does it necessarily follow that a person must certainly apprehend all the blessings conferred by baptism, before he can be Scripturally baptized? I suppose that you will answer, that its design must be understood. But I ask what design? Is the remission of sins the only design of baptism? I think not. Baptism is also designed to represent the death, burial, and resurrection of our dear Savior (see Rom. vi.: 3, 4; Col. ii.: 12). To the obedient believer it seems designed as a pledge of his resurrection (1 Cor. xv.: 29)—“Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead if the dead rise not at all; why are they then baptized for the dead?”

Here the phrase, “for the dead,” is perfectly similar to “for the remission of sins” in Acts ii.: 38, and is undoubtedly indicative of design. But the result indicated can not be achieved “if the dead rise not;” hence it must be consummated in the resurrection. Does not this show that baptism points to the resurrection, and is designed to be an assurance to the obedient believer, of his hope in that glorious promise? It is also designed to stand as a line of separation between the world and the church, just as the flood is made to stand as a line of separation between two worlds—the antediluvian world and the present world. (See 1 Pet. iii.: 20, 21).

Again, I would call attention to the expression, “baptized into Christ,” found in Gal. iii.: 27. When a person is baptized into Christ, he is certainly, by this act, brought into “all the privileges, honors, and blessings, which Christ confers;” and each one of these is a design or reason of his baptism. Now I would kindly ask, how many of the ignorant pagans do you suppose, to whom the Apostles preached the Gospel, fully apprehended all the foregoing designs or reasons of Christian baptism, before conversion; especially when you consider that many of them turned on hearing only one discourse? Then they did not postpone their baptism as they sometimes do now. Sometimes it was administered the “same hour of the night.” In such cases it is evident that all of its designs were not understood. Now if a misapprehension of one of its designs would render it of no value, why would not a misunderstanding of any other design have the same effect?

Again, in the “law of pardon,” baptism is not the only command to be obeyed in order to remission. Repentance is in order to remission just as much as baptism. “Repent, and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins.” Here are two things to be done for the same purpose or result, and the result is the remission of sins. The two things to be done are: 1, repent; 2, be baptized. The result is the remission of sins. That remission is equally the design of repentance is further shown by the expression, “Repentance unto life,” in Acts xi.: 18. Now, if the design must be understood in order to acceptable baptism, must it not be understood in order to acceptable repentance when it is equally the design of both? Most certainly. But who made known to Saul the design of repentance before Ananias came to him? Ananias was sent to tell him what to do, but he did not tell him to repent. This he had already done without having heard a declaration of its design.

Now another consideration, to show that acceptable obedience may be rendered, without fully understanding the command, much less its design. The Savior commanded his apostles to “go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature.”—Mat. xvi.: 15. Now it is certain that this command was not understood for more than eight years after Pentecost. Then it required a vision to convince Peter that he must go to the Gentiles. Yet all this while, his labors under the commission, so far as they extended, were doubtless accepted.

In conclusion I would say that I have exhibited a few of the objections that, to my mind, seem to have some weight against your position. I hope that you will consider them; and if you think them futile, expose their futility.

But you are logically the affirmant, and I shall expect you to lead on and exhibit the proofs of your teaching on this most important question; and when I am convinced I assure you that I shall not be long in turning.

Most respectfully,
S. N. SHOUSE.

BLOOMINGTON, ILLINOIS.

Editors of the Firm Foundation,

DEAR BRETHREN:—The February number of your paper was mailed to me by some one, I know not whom. But, whoever it was, let me say to you, please accept my thanks for the favor. There is nothing like, or at least nothing equal to, a firm foundation upon which to build. The Master said: “He that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him to a wise man who built his house upon a rock, and when the winds blew, the rains descended and the floods came and beat upon that house, it fell not, for it was founded upon a rock.” I have carefully read the paper, and found much in it to interest and edify me. Never having seen it before, I am not certain that I exactly understand the issue between the editor and Bro. McGarvey. Does Bro. McGarvey admit with Bro. McGarvey that the thirty-seventh verse of chapter eight of Acts of Apostles is an interpolation?

I perceive by the tone of the FIRM FOUNDATION that it is sifting our brethren, and severely criticising them, in regard to certain customs and practices among them, especially the custom of receiving immersed believers from other churches who never made the good confession with their mouth. Bro. McGarvey takes issue with Bro. McGary, affirming that he “finds in the Scriptures no prescribed form in which this confession must be made.” He says in his commentary, this verse thirty-seven, in Acts, VIII, which is an interpolation, has been used chiefly for the purpose of determining the confession which was originally made by candidates for baptism. Extremes beget extremes. I hope that none of the brethren will be like the Indian's tree, more than straight. I do not propose to enter into the controversy. If Bro. McGarvey can show that the good confession can be scripturally made in different forms, and tell us what those forms are, we will be thankful for the favor. Since Jesus put the question directly to His disciples: “But whom say you that I am?” Simon Peter answered: “Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.” Since then, this confession made by Peter and endorsed by Jesus, has been trammelled many ways by the opinions and traditions of men. In the meeting held here this winter, Bro. Clark, the “pastor” of the church, put the question to the candidates for immersion in this form: “Do you believe with all your heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and your Savior?” I have known one church and two preachers who put the question to candidates in this form: “Whom do you believe Jesus Christ to be?” It is not supposed that pupils are as wise as their teachers; young converts will generally answer as they think the preacher wants them to. I sat with my pencil and paper one day, in a Baptist church, and marked the questions and answers in the examination of eighteen candidates for membership through baptism into the Baptist church. Most of the questions were untaught, but they said they felt Christ was the Son of God. They felt that God, for Christ's sake, had forgiven their sins; they felt very bad when they were convicted, but very happy when they were converted. They felt very good because they had felt so very bad, and by a majority vote they were received through immersion into the Missionary Baptist Church. I have immersed some three thousand in the course of my ministry. Every one of them said “I believe with all my heart that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.” Being satisfied with this confession, I immersed them by the authority of the Lord Jesus in the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit.

I have immersed some twenty who had been immersed before, but as there is but one baptism, and that not to be repeated, I decided that their immersion was a nullity before I immersed them. There is no authority for re-immersion; but I confess that I have received some hundreds into the fellowship of the Disciples of Christ, upon their immersion at the hands of sectarian preachers. I have, always, or nearly so, taken their confession, since we must always confess, and never deny Christ. But you have called my attention afresh to a subject that always embarrassed me, viz., receiving members from the same. I hope you will probe it to the bottom. Please give this a place in your paper, and send me the next number of the Sure Foundation.
D. D. MILLER.

CATLIN, Ind., July 22, 1886.

Dear Bro. McGary:

As there has nothing from me appeared in the F. F. for so long a time, I have concluded to offer a few thoughts suggested by an article which appears in this week's issue of the A. C. Review over the signature of "J. L. R." "J. L. R." says: "It is to be regretted in some respects, that our brethren in the West have waked up a controversy involving valid baptism. The question was considered at an early day by some of our most prominent brethren who discourage rebaptism when it is administered by an intelligent and worthy Baptist like G. C. Smith of Kentucky." He seems to think that there are some unworthy Baptists. I would like to know upon what grounds he considers one Baptist more worthy than another. Is it on account of his superior intelligence? It seems to me that if the Baptist teaching is wrong, the more intelligent ones would be the more culpable. And according to "J. L. R." the Baptists are wrong, for he says in this same article "that the apostles teach very clearly that the institution of baptism is preceded by faith and repentance, as well as its connection with the death of Christ. It is there, and there alone, that pardon, peace and acceptance are found."

Again, he says: "It is the alpha and omega of the Christian profession and the repository of the grace of God." The Baptists nor any other sect teach this. If this be the truth, they teach falsehood. How then can they be worthy? Again, "J. L. R." says: "If I were to be immersed, there could be no objection urged against him (G. C. Smith) as an administrator." Now, if I were to be immersed, I certainly would seriously object to being immersed by any one outside of the kingdom of Christ. If I were to be immersed by one outside of the kingdom, not knowing the fact, I might be excusable, but to be immersed by an outsider knowingly, would certainly be a crime.

We have raised no objections with regard to the administrator where the baptized were ignorant and acted in good faith themselves; but to be immersed knowingly by an alien is a very different thing.

Again, "J. L. R." says, "As has been intimated, the desire for the institution presupposes the existence of faith and repentance." That is, because a person desires to be baptized he has faith and repentance. What does he mean here by faith? I suppose he means the faith of the Gospel. If the adherents of sectarian teachers have the faith of the Gospel, then the teachers must teach the Gospel. If they teach the Gospel, then "J. L. R." does not; for their teaching is very different. The faith of their adherents is in a perverted Gospel. Their faith leads them in a way very different from the way of truth; but according to "J. L. R." it leads them into Christ all the same. If this be true, why should we be calling to sectarians to come to us? If sectarian teaching and the practice growing out of that teaching, will lead to salvation, why oppose it, although it may be never so false? Of all the inconsistencies I have ever known, this is one of the most glaring and shameful. But then this matter was considered at an early day by some of our most prominent men. And I suppose that because these men were prominent men, we must be satisfied with their decision. That is pretty good Methodism; but it is not Christianity. It is our duty to know the truth and still more, to follow it when we do know it. When Jesus gave the commission he said, preach repentance to the people and remission of sins in the name of Jesus Christ. Paul teaches that when we obey from the heart the form of doctrine which was delivered by the Apostles, we are then made free from sin and become the servants of righteousness. Peter, according to his commission, says, repent every one of you, and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins. Did Christ authorize them to preach more than the Gospel to the people? If not, then repentance and remission of sins in the name of Jesus Christ is a part of the Gospel. The form of doctrine is to die to sin, be buried with Christ in baptism, and raised to walk in a new life. This, too is a part of the Gospel. If otherwise, the Apostles would not have dared to preach it. Did "J. L. R." ever know a Baptist to teach that in obeying the form of doctrine from the heart persons are made free from sin? I venture to say he never did. They teach them that after they have been made free from sin by some other means, that then they may obey this form of doctrine to become a full and accepted Baptist. In this they evidently have the form of Godliness, but deny the power. But then many of our friends say, oh, well, no matter if they do deny the power, God will bestow it all the same. Will they give us their authority for saying so? I guess not. For Bro. McGary has called upon F. G. Allen and others in vain for their authority. But "J. L. R." asks this very sage question: "Let us suppose two parcels of prussic acid to be on the table where two persons are sitting. One is a chemist and knows all about the poison. The other knows little or nothing. Should they both partake, would the ignorance of the one prevent the poison from taking the same effect on him as on the other?" Is not that a wonderful argument? I answer him, certainly not. And for the same reason when men by mistake go into human organizations, aiming to go into the kingdom of God, their mistakes do not alter the law of the Lord, they will suffer the consequences—and so will their leaders who take the poison knowingly, both will fall into the ditch together.

But if the two parcels on the table had been plainly labeled poison, the one need not to have been ignorant concerning it. Sectism is clearly labeled poison. Then why take it? The plea of ignorance made by sectarian apologists for the pious immersed, is about worn out. It seems that it makes no difference with them what one believes or does, just so he is immersed, that saves him. It is no wonder to me that sectism flourishes when there are only a few of us to oppose it, while so many of our editors and scribes are giving it aid and comfort.

They will cry out that the sectarian organizations are no parts of the kingdom of Christ—only human institutions, but the people in them are Christ's subjects. Then a person may be a subject of Christ's kingdom while out of it as well as when in it. But we have the truth and are fully able to defend it. But then the devil has the ears of the people and it is a hard matter to get them.

We, however, will persevere. We defend God's cause now—he will defend ours after awhile.

I remain, yours as ever,
I. C. STONE.

ALBANY, Texas.

I read a piece in the F. F. some time ago, written by a sister, on the subject of Pride. After denouncing pride in various forms, she then says: "But there is such a thing as laudable pride, which prompts us to be neat and keep our children so; but this, too, becomes sinful when we devote our whole time and thoughts to these things, neglecting the weightier matter of cultivating the minds of ourselves and children, thereby rooting out the noxious weeds that are ever ready to spring up in an uncultivated field." I can't find any approval in God's book, of pride in any form or in any degree, nor can I see when or where a Christian has any need for it. I will give a few quotations to show God's condemnation of pride: Prov. xi. 2; xiii. 10; xvi. 18; xix. 23; Mark vii. 22; 1 Tim. iii. 6; 1 John ii. 16; Luke i. 51; 1 Tim. vi. 4; James iv. 6; 1 Pet. v. 5. There are many more Scriptures against pride, but these cited are sufficient to show us pride is a principle which God does not desire His children to cultivate; and if we seek to please Him, it must never enter into our motives.

The writer simply used the wrong word to express her idea, and my dear sisters, let an old mother, 71 years of age, admonish you not to use language that you do not need, to express your thoughts.

Let us endeavor to speak as the oracles of God. If you will cultivate order and system in all your habits, you will be able to keep yourselves, your children, and your houses neat and decent, and yet have an humble and quiet spirit, without one spark of pride. We see that our Father is an admirer of beauty too, but it is the inner beauty which appeals not to the eye of flesh, the beauty of holiness. "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us." Psalm xc.: 17.

ELIZA J. FUSTON.

ARLINGTON, Mo., July 12, '86.

Bro. McGary:

Although I belong to Bro. Connor's class of preachers, called "little preachers," and oft times termed "one horse preachers," I comprehend the truthfulness of his article on the labor and hardships of that class of servants of the church. But why should such terms as "big and little preachers" be used among us, seeing we all claim to be brethren in one family. If we will respect person, above this we should respect character, for our Father in heaven teaches us that he is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted of him, and being thus taught that God is a respecter of character, we observe that character is based upon principle. The principle upon which Christian character stands is the will of God.—Matt. xii: 46, 50.

The will of God is composed of the sayings or teachings of Christ.—Matt. vii: 24.

The teachings of Christ constitute the word of God.—John xiv: 24.

The word of God is the truth.—John xvii: 17.

And a knowledge of the truth is necessary to freedom from sin.—John viii: 32.

The will of God is composed of two grand and component parts: First, God's will to alien sinners. Second, God's will to his children or the Christian. In regard to the second part of the will, all agree, I presume, that knowledge is necessary, in order to acceptable obedience to this part of God's will.

For the children of God are admonished to add to their faith knowledge.—2 Pet., i: 5-6.

They are to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth.—2 Pet., iii: 18.

And thus by obtaining a knowledge of the truth, and yielding obedience unto the truth.—Rom., vi: 16.

We may have our fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life.—Rom., vi: 22.

Where, I would ask, is the preacher, "big or little," that will object to this conclusion? If you find him, please let him speak through the F. F. But when we revert to the first part of the will of God, some will say: "It matters but little whether a person has sufficient knowledge to understand the import or design of an act of obedience to God's will, just so an individual is honest, it's all right and acceptable." Yes; and Mr. Sectarian will say: "It don't matter whether I obey the will or not, just so I am honest and feel all right, I will be saved, according to thy faith, so be it unto thee." Now, my brother, let us stop and ask, what is God's will concerning this matter. "For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God, our Savior; who will have all men to be saved and to come unto the knowledge of the truth."—1 Tim., 2, 3-4.

Thus we see that God wills or desires that men should have a knowledge of the truth. Remember this truth is the Word of the Lord, and the Word of the Lord is by the Gospel preached unto us.—1 Pet., 1:25.

This Word of the Lord is composed. First, of facts to be believed. We will not, I might say cannot, believe a thing unless we have a knowledge of it. Second, of commands to be obeyed. In order to obedience to a command from the heart, we must have a knowledge of or understand the design of the command. The sectarian world does not understand the design of baptism, but says, "It is a non-essential," or "merely an outward sign of an inward grace," and therefore conclude that they can be saved just as well without baptism as with it. No one understanding the design will so conclude. Third, of promises to be received and enjoyed. God has given us exceeding great and precious promises.—2 Pet., 1:3-4.

The first of which is remission of alien or past sins. The design of obedience to the commands given to the alien sinner, is receiving and enjoying this promise. Therefore he is willing to see with the eye, hear with the ear, understand with the heart.—Matt., xiii:15.

Believe with the heart.—Rom., x:10.

Obeys from the heart.—Rom., x:10.

And thus seeing, hearing, understanding, believing and obeying, he comprehends the design, receives the promise and goes on his way rejoicing.—Acts, viii:39.

In sweet anticipation of promises reaching forward to the glorious home of the soul that awaits all the finally faithful, who endure the cross, despise the shame, that they may wear the crown in glory.

J. C. GLOVER.

SUFFERING.

There is nothing more clearly taught in the scriptures than that the Christian life is a life of suffering. It is a dying daily, a laying of the body on the altar of sacrifice, a death in life.—Rom. xii: 1. Were it not for the hope of a reward for this suffering, the Christian would be, of all men, most miserable. The Captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering. The head suffered, and the body is to fill up that which is behind of the sufferings of Christ. "If we suffer with him we shall reign with him," and if we be without chastisement we are bastards and not sons. Let the reader pause here and read attentively.—Rom. vii: 17; Phil. i: 28, 30, and iii: 7, 11; 1 Pet., i: 7, and iv: 12, 13—and other scriptures bearing on this subject.

True, our popular teachers tell us that we may enjoy the good things of this life and have a pleasant time that we may be rich and respectable and popular, and bask in the smiles of the world, at least that part of it which is called good society—that means the gilt-edged variety. But such teachers were foretold.—II Tim., iv: 3, 4; Isa. xxx:10. If we allow them to deceive us it will be our own fault. The Savior said: "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." They were not hated because they were Apostles, but because they did not mix with the world, but kept themselves separate, unspotted from the world.—II Cor., vi: 14, 18. This separation was typified in the law, which required the Israelites to be holy and separate from others. The vessels of the temple worship, which it was not lawful to use for any other purpose, are held by the Apostles as types of Christians in this temple. Our Lord said: "Woe unto you when all men speak well of you." Are we to suppose that he did not mean what he said? In the typical age the Jews were required to pursue a course that would certainly bring upon them the hatred of all people. But they wished to have the esteem of others and did not obey the law and they suffered the consequences. The desire for the praise of men leads to covetousness, extortion, oppression, war, and all the evils that afflict humanity. Few can resist its influence. Few can rise above the general level of intelligence and virtue. Hence we find that whatever system of religion or ethics gets to be fashionable, is esteemed worthy of all reverence, as Mohammedanism, Catholicism, Protestantism, with its many popular organizations, all traveling in one direction, and in a broad and beaten way. When anyone rises above the general level and points out popular fallacies, he must expect the condemnation of the populace. But this is the work the Master has laid upon his disciples—to teach the truth and oppose untruth. This is the warfare, Eph. vi: 12. The prevalent teaching and practice is as different from scripture teaching, and the practice of the worthies whose sufferings are therein recorded as a much traveled road is different from an unfrequented path. The orthodoxy of two hundred years ago, which taught that, before man was created, the Lord selected the few whom he intended to save, was no more unreasonable than to suppose that he will bestow immortality upon one for "getting religion," or upon another for being baptized. Our fathers, not seeing that the election spoken of had reference to the Lord's plan, formed before the foundation of the world, of choosing a certain family for a certain purpose, and of afterwards taking out from among the Gentiles a people for another special purpose, both purposes looking to the ultimate purpose of blessing the world, very naturally accepted what is called Calvinism, for the truth. But we now have not so good a reason for the prevailing notion that we may obtain immortality without suffering.

No popular teaching can be the truth. The Christian religion so antagonizes the animal desires that not enough people will come under its sway to make it popular. When any teaching becomes popular, the salt has lost its savor. The Lord certainly meant something when he said of the narrow way, that few would find it. The reason is, that few are willing to make the sacrifices which a walk in it requires. Many want the reward and expect to obtain it, but they do not want it to cost them much. Paul says: "All who would live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." Can we suppose that He alluded only to those who lived in the early days of the church? The righteous in the typical age were persecuted down to its very close. Human nature is the same now that it was 1800 years ago. Since the kings of the earth have withdrawn their support from the mother of false churches, and her daughters have become so numerous, rich and respectable, and no one is strong enough to have supreme control, it has been found necessary to establish by law, religious toleration; and the daughters, for the sake of respectability, have found it to their mutual interest to recognize each other as churches. But this does not imply that the offense of the cross has ceased. No reproach attaches to that jeweled thing worn for show; but the pressure of that cross, which the man of faith must shoulder and carry to his death in vindication of the truth, is as heavy now as it ever was.

But it is said that men are now intelligent, and are coming every day more and more under the influence of the Christian religion—that the world is much better than it used to be. It is claimed that Christianity is making great progress, and soon, from Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strand, a loud chorus of triumphant praise shall ascend. But the Savior and Apostles did not expect this age to close in this way. They supposed that men would grow worse and worse, as the Jews did, while they made great pretensions to godliness, and said if they had lived in the days of their fathers, they would not have done so wickedly. The Apostles supposed that the last days of this age would be perilous times. Let any one who has ears to hear read the description in II Tim., iii:1-5. Christianity in the seventh and last period of the dispensation, as represented by the church of Laodicea, is said to be purse proud, and will be rejected. We are taught that this age closes with judgments and fiery indignation. It is called in both Testaments, "the great day of His wrath."

All will suffer who imitate the Savior and Apostles and prophets. We should learn something from the history of six thousand years. The teachings of the holy and wise of no age, have ever been popular. The Scriptures and all history teach that men love darkness. The lesson was learned in the Philadelphian period that all men have rights. But only in its relation to religious and political autocracy, has the lesson borne much fruit; and this fruit is turning to the bitterness of communism. But that the individual has the right to learn and teach truth that demands sacrifice, or that exposes the hypocrisy of that which is highly esteemed among men, cannot be conceived. We have thrown off the yoke of a single regal pope, but still wear the chains of the multitudinous pope of democracy. This pope concedes the right of the individual to do wrong—to make and sell whisky, oleomargarine, and a thousand other adulterated and poisonous compounds, to defraud and swindle in everything the hand touches, but not to teach an unpopular righteousness that will bring down the pride of man and compel him to condescend to men of low estate, and love them, even as he loves himself, however much they may be despised and oppressed by others, and however much reproach, such a cause may bring. If you would imitate and honor your Master, you must cultivate a supreme contempt for the opinion of those who know nothing, and do not desire to know anything of those matters about which they judge you.

It is not expected that these truths will appear other than as foolishness to those who, though they may belong to some religious party, have not time to study the Scriptures, or to think of anything but something to eat or wear, or what the world may think of them. But it is hoped that those who wish to obey the Master, will ask themselves if they can expect to stand approved if they are not bearing their share of labor and reproach and suffering. Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the religious parties around you, you can in no wise enter into the Kingdom of Heaven.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

We have concluded to give some extracts from a few of the many letters we are receiving every day. It is not vanity that leads us to offer them to our readers, for we know that our poor efforts are lauded far beyond their deserts. So far as the opposition the F. F. receives is concerned, dear readers, it does not surprise nor grieve us. We now know and knew before the first number of the book was printed, that with the many it would be exceedingly unpopular, therefore we expected opposition. The only thing that grieves us is the unmanly style of warfare adopted by our brethren, who can neither deny our teaching, nor affirm their own.

Bro. J. W. Strode says: I feel bound to drop you a few words of encouragement. May God bless you in promulgating fully his law. I pray and work for the success of the FIRM FOUNDATION. May it indeed prove an anchor to the ship of Zion, and weigh her down so she may not drift from her moorings. Let the "progressives" either return to the shore or deserting the gallant ship altogether, betake themselves to an ugly, fast sailing, but very treacherous little craft called "human expedients." This rapid little barque will soon bear them to the open sea of sectarianism. Stand firm, my brother, though floods of abuse pour upon you. Man cannot harm you. Let us pray for those who oppose the Truth, for indeed they know not what they do. Since they cannot, like true soldiers, bravely meet you, they divert the minds of their readers from the true issues by abusing you and the F. F. God bless you and yours.

Please send FIRM FOUNDATION to _____ He is a preacher of the Gospel, but undecided on the baptismal question, being a reader of the A. Guide. By the by, I see nothing in the last two numbers of that paper. Are they reserving fire, or is their battery squelched? If you don't watch closely you will be "Aten up" alive, All-en a minute. Go on; make it interesting to them at any rate. * * *

P. H. A.

Bro. A. R. Vaughn writes: Am glad that you are satisfied with what little I have done for the F. F., and I certainly feel it my duty to do all I can for the circulation of the paper, so long as it utters no uncertain sound. Dear brethren, we see a necessity for the paper to be changed to a weekly, and the reason is this: Those scribes who advocate innovations and improvements of God's way, those big 'I's, who by virtue of their college educations, take it upon themselves to be teachers, come every week in their visits, and oppose the truth, trying to deceive honest hearts on these questions. Therefore the F. F. should make weekly visits, and by the friends of the truth actively circulating it, good, honest brethren can see both sides of the question, and decide which is the Lord's side and which is man's. I will ask all the preaching brethren one question: If you were holding a meeting, and a number of persons were to come forward asking you to baptize them, declaring that God for Christ's sake had pardoned their sins, would you baptize them? If so, where is your authority? If not, how can you receive others thus baptized? Good, honest brethren, please seriously consider this question and answer it. * * *

Bro. H. Goodin, of Ill., writes: I send you a club of eight, wishing to avail ourselves of the baptismal controversy. True, we are strangers in the flesh, but have had much pleasure in perusing your paper, which has been sent me on several occasions. I certainly admire the bold spirit manifested, and the bold stand taken by the F. F. in its battle against all humanism. May God aid and bless you in the work. * * *

Bro. R. L. McMurrey writes: Have been a reader of F. F. some time; like it very much. Am truly glad to know that there are some bold soldiers of the cross who fear not to declare the whole counsel of God. Oh that we had more men who would hew to the line and spare not! I want to ask you a question, Bro. McGary, not for controversy but information. Would you receive a man who understood that baptism is for remission of sins at the time he was baptized by a Baptist? [Answer: Yes; provided his faith, repentance and confession were scriptural.]

Bro. R. W. Buchanan writes: That he will get the F. F. all the subscribers he can, and that he wants it to spread from the Colorado river to the ends of the earth. * * *

Bro. Wm. Y. M. Wilkerson writes: When the F. F. was first sent to me, I suppose by Bro. Bright, of Prescott Ark., I did not like its position as regards baptism, although I was baptized after I had been preaching for two years. Was led to this step by hearing one of our brethren speak on the evidence of the Spirit. I found that the water was not a witness in my case, consequently I was baptized. I now think the F. F. an ably edited paper. Some time ago there was an appointment published by Bro. W. W. Young to begin a protracted meeting with New Salem congregation, in southwest part of Craighead county, Ark. He asked me to meet him there to assist him. The meeting went on from Friday till Monday night, with eleven added. One old brother was baptized, who had belonged to the church for fifteen years, or rather he had considered himself in the Church. I did not know that I was advocating the doctrine of the F. F., but that old brother seemed to think I was. He declares himself now satisfied as to being in the Church of Christ, is firm, well-posted, has a good influence, and a man well-to-do in life. The congregation numbers about two hundred.

A very intelligent sister writes us a few kind words, which we so highly appreciate that we make the following extract: I have read with interest the July number of F. F., for which accept my thanks. I like it all over—name, size, print matter and all—yes, and hobby too. It tends to a much-needed reformation. I have received several numbers, for which I thank somebody, I don't know whom. But I am glad there is such a paper. I should like to write for it occasionally if Sarai did not say exactly what I would say, so there is no use of my writing a word. Please give her an appreciative shake of the hand for me.

Bro. S. J. Moore writes a letter from Park Station, Maury county, Tenn., which will strongly appeal to the tender sympathies of all true disciples of Christ: Being just able to hold my pen, I shall try to let you know how much I like your paper. Oh, the consolation it has been to me for the twenty-one months that I have been confined to the house and bed, to read the F. F., then turn to the Word of God and find its teachings corroborated by that high and holy authority. It is indeed cheering, dear brethren, with death staring me in the face most of the time, to find the cause nearest my heart so ably defended. It sends joy unspeakable to my heart. Please send the July number, as I did not get it, and I am having it read by the many brethren and sisters who visit me. I think it safe to say you will get a good list of subscribers from here this fall. Brethren press on. The mighty Truth will yet prevail. Brethren, remember an afflicted brother in your prayers.

LETTER TO BROTHER POINDEXTER.

DEAR BROTHER POINDEXTER:—When I was with you at old Muddy Creek meeting house two weeks ago, and you and I were carrying on a protracted meeting, a lady came forward to unite with the congregation, who had (as she thought) been baptized by the Dunkards, or German Baptists, who dip three times, face foremost, for one baptism. You talked to that lady and she told you that she was satisfied with her baptism, and you remarked to the congregation that as "our practice is, we will receive her," and she was received by you (not the congregation), for you did not consult them, which we ought to do when we do things contrary to God's Word.

Now, Brother Poindexter, my object in writing this letter to you is to ask you for your authority for what you did. As far as I could see, the whole thing depended upon her being satisfied, and upon "our practice." If the Lord authorizes what you did, then you call it by the wrong name when you call it "our practice," "our plea." The Baptists take the votes of their members, when any one makes application to be baptized, and they call it their "usage," their "practice," and have you not called on them for their authority for what they do, and failing to show it ought they not to quit it? and if you fail to show the Scriptural authority for what you do, ought you not to quit it?

I have heard you preach as plainly as any man in reference to the one baptism, spoken of by the Apostle Paul (Eph. iv:5) that he who believes in Christ with all his heart, repents of his sins, confesses his Savior with his mouth, and is buried (not three times) with his Lord in baptism, for the remission of sins (not because their sins are remitted) has complied with that act which the Apostle calls the "one baptism," and I have heard you say privately that you would not be satisfied with any other than that. Why? Because you do not believe any other to be Scriptural, or authorized by the Lord. Then how can you consistently encourage that woman to be satisfied with her dippings, for such (as you say) is not authorized by the Lord?

I saw a question put to the Apostolic Guide some time last spring, by a brother in Arkansas, in reference to this same German Baptist baptism, and I think it was Brother Allen answered his question, saying that their baptism was all right; that their doing more than the Lord requires does not invalidate the act, if they are satisfied. Well, then, that is the baptism he ought to practice; just so it is all right, and satisfies the people.

Now, Bro. Poindexter, another lady comes to another meeting we might hold, and she says she believes in Christ; she has repented of her sins; she has confessed her Savior, or made a statement, or told an experience; all of which is the same, and she had a little water sprinkled or poured upon her, and she is satisfied with her baptism,—would you receive her? Oh, no. Well, why not? Because she has done too little. Indeed; does doing too little invalidate the act, or keep it from being the act, any more than doing too much? If so, where do you learn it?

W. T. Moore, the great missionary of the great Foreign Missionary Society of our brethren in the United States, sent to the great city of London, receives those that have a little water sprinkled or poured upon them, if he is rightly represented by the Guide; but Bro. Allen objects to his position. Why? Because it is not Scriptural. But I would just as soon stand where he (Moore) does as to stand where you and Bro. Allen do. But I would not like to stand where any of you do. Why? Because it is a sandy foundation; for the Savior says, through his inspired Apostle, "Whatsoever you do in word or deed, do all in the name (or by the authority) of the Lord Jesus."—Col. iii: 17. And he further says: "Every one that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, who built his house upon the sand."—Matt. vii: 26. Now if we hear his sayings we will do all that we do by his authority. Bro. Poindexter, do we want our houses to stand? If we do; let us build upon the sure foundation, by hearing and doing the sayings of the Savior. Let us walk by the same rule, mind the same things.—Phil. i: 16.—and let that rule be divine, not human. Let us "Stand fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together for the faith of the Gospel."—Phil. i: 27. We were not striving together the night you received that lady, with one mind, and the reason we were not was that we were not walking by the same rule, and if we have done wrong heretofore let us repent and do so no more.

You have heard me preach a good deal, and if you have ever known me preach or practice anything not taught by the word of the Lord, point it out to me and I will take it back as publicly as I taught it and acknowledge my wrong.

I trust, Bro. Poindexter, that you will not become offended with me for writing you this letter, and I will keep a copy of it and have it published in the F. F., and if you wish to reply to it you can do so in the same paper or any other that you may choose, but I would like to see the reply.

Your brother in Christ,
E. HANSBROUGH.
Mocksville, N. C.

TO OUR AGENTS.

Let me impress upon you, brethren, the great importance of writing names and post-offices very plainly, and also of giving the names of the counties. Very often names are written so illegibly that it is almost guess work to decipher them. A great many complaints are made of the paper failing to reach brethren, and no doubt, much of this is due to illegible writing. Please remember this. I would also request agents and subscribers, whenever it is at all practicable, to send us postal notes, money orders, or money, and not stamps, as we have an immense quantity of stamps on hand now and find it very difficult to dispose of them. Of course, from remote places where such conveniences are not to be had, we do not expect them, and would not, on this account, deter one single brother from subscribing. So, if you can do no better, do not hesitate to send stamps. Remember, from now till the end of the year the paper can be had for 25 cents, or five copies for $1. We want to get the F. F. into every honest brother's and sister's hands in the land. Upon this offer we have received many new names, so push it on, brethren.

A. MCG.

ARE THEY CHRISTIANS?

The Baptists have just concluded a meeting near my home with quite a number of converts to their theory of Christianity. I attended some of their meetings, heard their teachings, saw the excitement, and witnessed the baptisms. Sinners were exhorted to come to the anxious seat, and there they sang and prayed over them till they felt their sins forgiven them. Each mourner was singled out, and at least two volunteers called for from those claiming to be members of the church, for the purpose of making his or her case a special object of prayer till the burden of sins was cast off by the Great Deliverer. The excitement became intense. One by one these sinners were visited by the miraculous power of God's Spirit, resulting in the instantaneous conversion of their souls. All sinners were admonished to come now, while the waters were troubled. Jesus had manifested himself in that place, and they should seize the favorable opportunity of His august presence while he was ready, waiting, and anxious to set the captives free. If they delayed, He might never come again. The Holy Spirit might withdraw itself from them and leave them to grope their way in eternal despair and misery. Hence the exhortations to accept now, that he might throw around them his blood stained banner, and keep them from falling away. Each convert would relate a so-called Christian experience, embracing in the main their fearful condition till Christ manifested himself to them in a feeling sense of forgiveness of sins. They felt the influence of the Spirit wooing them to Christ. They felt that God, for Christ's sake, had pardoned their sins.

Herein we heard the confession of their faith, which is not that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, but that God had forgiven their sins.

After this confession of their faith, their cases were then submitted to the members, and by vote they were accepted as proper subjects for Christian fellowship. After baptism they were received into Baptist fellowship. Thus is demonstrated to the world that the Baptist church is a sanctum sanctorum, whose entrance is more carefully hedged and guarded than is that of fellowship with Christ. Now, brethren, it is well known that the FIRM FOUNDATION considers the Baptist one of those systems of religion which does not convert souls to Christ. We ask you who think to be a Baptist is to be a Christian, to seriously consider these samples our pen has given you. Christ was not Scripturally presented to these people. Remission of sins was not preached in His name, or by His authority. You will say these poor people are in error, in ignorance. How then can you, by a shake of the hand, translate them out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son? The facts are not overdrawn. We have been seeing these things all of our lives. Are they Christians? Are they children of the light? I venture the assertion that not one of this entire number thus converted by the Baptists can give a scriptural answer to the question: "What must I do to be saved," and not one can give a scriptural reason for the hope that is in him. Yet you will have it that they were baptized to honor God, and therefore the baptism is valid. Dear brethren, God can be honored in his appointment, only as he has commanded. We may well ask as our Savior asked the Pharisees: "The Baptist baptism, is it of man, or is it of God?" If not of God, to observe it then is to dishonor God, and not to honor him. Our good Bro. Ray and his wife have had charge of a Union Sunday School at this point, for a long while, where they have been using the popular Lesson Leaves to impart spiritual instruction. A goodly number of the above converts have long been their pupils. Four of them are their own dear boys, and three or four others closely related. O, my brother, is this the fruit of your labors? Have you sowed the seed of the Kingdom? Have you been rearing these boys of yours in the nurture and in the admonition of the Lord? But then, perhaps, our brother and sister think the Baptist plan of making Christians is scriptural, and that after awhile their boys can be transplanted from one garden to another by a hearty shake of their hands. But what about the Lord's Supper? They will not permit you to eat with them, and they cannot eat with you. I earnestly suggest a revision of your Lesson Leaves, for future work. In conclusion, I make an earnest appeal to my brethren to throw off the mark of the beast and take a firm stand for God's mode of conversion. Let us henceforth take heed how we build into the spiritual building of God. Let's measure up by the Divine measuring reed and not by the human. No longer halt between two opinions but have the courage to come out on the side of Truth. J. S. D.

MADISONVILLE, TEXAS,
August 10, 1886.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I began a meeting at Willow Hole, twelve miles west of Madisonville, on Saturday night before the first Lord's day in August, and closed at night on second Lord's day. The result was six were baptized into Christ for the remission of their sins. Two of this number were received into the fellowship of the church years ago, but after reading the FIRM FOUNDATION, and learning of the inconsistencies of the "shaking process," they desired to be intelligently and Scripturally baptized into Christ, and were. Quite a number of others said they were convinced of the truth of the Gospel; but did not have courage enough to come out before men and confess Christ. I made my home at Dr. Hill's, a very pleasant and agreeable home, indeed. The Doctor is a brother in Christ, and knows the old Jerusalem Gospel from A to Z. Dr. McFall, an old resident of Madison county, and his wife were baptized by the writer during the meeting. The Doctor has been convinced a long time that the disciples of Christ occupy the only safe and Scriptural grounds, but for lack of courage he put off obeying the Gospel till this meeting. We have every reason to believe that the Doctor has "counted the cost." It costs a great deal to be a Bible Christian in these "perilous times." Drs. Hill and McFall are practicing medicine together. Most doctors manage to have calls to attend to just at the time for meeting, but these two brethren, although doing a large practice, managed their calls so as to be on hand at every service during the whole meeting. Old Brother Vernon, one of the elders who labors in word and doctrine was on hand most of the time. Bro. Roberts, too, who was one of the elders, was on hand most of the time. The brethren have not been doing their whole duty; have not been meeting on the Lord's day, nor observing the ordinances, for a long time, and consequently Bro. Roberts has become very much discouraged. I think the brethren are determined now to go to work and establish the cause of Christ permanently there. We had large and attentive audiences throughout the meeting. The Baptists are strong in this neighborhood. Many of them were thoroughly convinced of the scripturalness of the positions we took, and in fact wanted to "join the church," but seemed to be satisfied with their (Baptist) baptism, and so we just let them stay satisfied. The great trouble, brethren, is this: Bros. Kendrick and Hamilton, in days gone by, have preached "Our Plea" instead of God's Plea to these people, and in fact they have received a great many into the church upon their baptism by giving them the right hand of fellowship, and the people know this to be a fact, and so it is a little hard to get them to fully understand why we (I) don't do just like Bros. Kendrick and Hamilton did. I desire to say right here for the benefit of Bros. Kendrick and Hamilton, that very near all whom they "shook" in, have learned the way of the Lord more perfectly. They have gone and have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine (not our plea) which was once for all delivered by the inspired apostles. I do sincerely hope that all who have been deluded by "our plea," not only in this neighborhood, but elsewhere, will come out of their Baptist shells and put on Christ by being baptized for the remission of their sins. The brethren want me to hold another meeting for them at the same place, and inasmuch as there are several in on their Baptist baptism. I would say to all such who are identified with the brethren there and elsewhere, brethren, (1) did you hear the pure Gospel before you were baptized? (2) Did you repent of your sins before you were baptized? (3) Did you confess with the mouth the Lord Jesus Christ before you were immersed? and (4) were you baptized into Christ for the remission of sins? If you cannot answer all these plain, simple questions in the affirmative, then I can safely say, having measured you by the Divine rule, you are found wanting. Now, my beloved, will you come right square up to the Divine rule or standard and obey from the heart that form of doctrine? I do hope you will. What we need most of all and worst of all is a reformation in the church. We have too many in our ranks who have been converted to "our plea" and its false claims instead of God, Christ and His Holy Word. What we want is men and women who are thoroughly converted to Christ and the truth. Jesus said to his disciples once: "You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." Brethren and sisters, let us try as near and as hard as we can to restore apostolic Christianity in theory and in practice, and the Lord will bless and prosper us. To His glorious name be all honor, glory and praise now and evermore. A. J. McCARTY.

THE PLEA.

The plea that is now agitating and may I say, dividing, our brotherhood, originated in the mind of Bro. Thomas Campbell, while he was a member of the Presbyterian or a branch of that church, known as "Seceders." He advocated a plea for union and a communion with all sects upon the Word of God, against all creeds of men. At the same time he believed in and practiced infant baptism in the "Seceders" church. He, at the same time, presented a written declaration of his faith, in which he declared that where the Bible speaks, we ought to speak, and where it is silent, we ought to be silent. For advocating this plea, he was dismissed from the Seceders' church. His son, Alexander Campbell, was at that time searching history to find support for infant baptism. I refer the reader to the history of reformatory movements, by Bro. J. F. Rowe. I will now give Bro. A. Campbell's own statement of his confession and baptism. He says: "My faith in creeds and confessions of human device was considerably shaken while in Scotland, and I commenced my career in this country under the conviction that nothing that was not as old as the New Testament should be made an article of faith, a rule of practice or a term of communion amongst Christians. In a word, that the whole of the Christian religion exhibited in prophecy and type in the Old Testament, was presented in the fullest, clearest and most perfect manner in the New Testament, by the spirit of wisdom and revelation. This has been the pole star of my course ever since, and I thank God that he has enabled me so far to prosecute it, and to make all my prejudices and ambitions bow to this emancipating principle. I continued in the examination of the Scriptures, ecclesiastical history and systems of divinity, ancient and modern, until July 15, 1810, on which day I publicly avowed my conviction of the independency of the Church of Christ, and the excellency and authority of the Scriptures, in a discourse from the last section of what is commonly called "Christ's Sermon on the Mount." During this year, I pronounced one hundred and six orations on sixty primary topics of the Christian religion, in the western part of Pennsylvania, Virginia and the neighboring part of Ohio. In conformity to the grand principle which I have called the pole star of my course of religious inquiry, I was led to question the claims of infant sprinkling to Divine authority, and was, after a long, serious and prayerful examination of all means of information, led to solicit immersion on a profession of my faith, when, as yet, I scarce knew a Baptist from Washington to the Ohio, in the immediate region of my labors, and when I did not know that any friend or relative on earth would concur with me. I was accordingly baptized by elder Matthias Luce, who was accompanied by elder Henry Spears, on the 12th day of June, 1812. (Christian Baptist, page 92.) If the reader will examine the history of the reformation by Bro. Rowe, he will find that A. Campbell was the first man in the great movement toward the ancient order of things. He first convinced Elder Luce that an experience according to Baptist theology was a tradition. He and his wife, sister, father and mother made the confession with the mouth, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and were baptized the same day for the remission of sins. After this movement of this great man, his father gave way to his son. His son took the lead in the great reformatory movement. Whether or not he advocated the plea commenced by his father, he has in all of his debates and writings advocated the principles of the F. F. The reader will please read his work called "The Christian System," on the Christian Confession of Faith, page 58. He says: "The church is built on the sublime and supreme proposition that Jesus of Nazareth is the Messiah, the son of the living God.

No one can intelligently believe this proposition, and not turn to God with all his heart. There is no other confession of faith on which the Church can be built, on which it can possibly stand one and undivided, but on this one. With the heart man believes this proposition in order to justification, and with his mouth he maketh this confession of it in order to his salvation. So Paul explains it, Rom., x, and thus we have one Lord, one faith, and one baptism, among the immutable reasons why Christians should maintain unity of spirit in the bonds of peace." Christian System, page 59. Again in his book on Christian Baptism, page 229, he says: "Without hearing there is no faith, and without faith there is no fitness for baptism, and without the profession of that faith no one can be a fit subject for Christian baptism. It is, indeed, unquestionably true that faith in the heart is essential to the enjoyment of every Christian precept, promise and covenanted blessing; but faith in the heart unprofessed, or Christ in the heart unconfessed, would not, according to the practical decisions of the Christian Apostles, authorize any pastor, evangelist or professor to baptize any man or woman. With the heart man believeth for righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made for salvation. Hence the call upon the candidate: 'Dost thou believe?' or 'If thou believest with all thy heart, thou mayest.' The confession elicited by such a formal way of putting the question is: 'I believe that Jesus is the Messiah, the Son of God.' Many of the Corinthians, we are informed, heard, believed and confessed. Now, had they not confessed their faith, could either Paul or Luke, or any one else say that they believed." Bro. Campbell could see a formal way of putting the question, 'Dost thou believe?' or 'If thou wilt confess with the mouth, the Lord Jesus.' and it looks like any man can see that in the New Testament with one eye, and it half out, unless he has them both blinded with sectism. Bro. Campbell could see the "one baptism," and that, too, for the remission of sins. Christian System, page 179, he says: "The doctrine of remission is the doctrine of salvation; for to talk of salvation without the knowledge of the remission of sins, is to talk without meaning. To give to the Jews a knowledge of salvation by the remission of their sins, was the mission of John the Immerser, as said the Holy Spirit." This he did by immersing them in Jordan for the remission of sins (Luke i.: 17; Mark i.: 45). These extracts from Bro. Campbell's writings show most conclusively that he made the confession and also a knowledge of the design of baptism, absolutely essential to a scriptural baptism. All the writings of the brotherhood have taught the principles of the FIRM FOUNDATION, whether they saw it or not. They are all against the progressionism of to-day. Bro. R. Milligan's "Scheme of Redemption," page 455, says: "If any further evidence is necessary to prove that confession, as well as faith, repentance and baptism, is a divinely appointed condition of pardon and of admission into the Church of Christ, here on earth, it may be found in the following passages: Matt. x.: 32; 1 Tim. vi.: 12, 13; Heb. iv.: 14; Heb. x.: 23; Heb. iii.: 1; Rom. x.: 10. So you see Bro. Milligan agrees with Bro. Campbell, and I say a man that can not find a New Testament example for taking the confession can be properly classed among those "who have closed their eyes lest they should see." Bro. Ezzell's Great Legacy has the principles of the FIRM FOUNDATION nearly right. He says: "Where there is no genuine teaching, there is no genuine faith; and where there is no genuine faith, there is no genuine baptism." If he had put the confession in, he would have had it right. Bro. Caskey in his book on the church, questions one and two, makes sport of sect-baptism. Now, in the face of all this evidence, why will our progressive brethren contend that these refess the Son of God before men, and to be baptized for the remission of sins. Moses disinherited himself of the earthly Canaan by trespassing against the Lord, in taking to himself the honor of fetching water from the rock, instead of giving God the honor. Should we not take warning from this, and try to realize fully that only the most implicit obedience is acceptable to our Heavenly Father?

THE WOLF AT THE DOOR.

"Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?"

Brethren, the plea of poverty and hard times is so common that it makes little impression on those who hear it. We are such grasping and insatiable creatures that when our cup of blessing is overflowing, we still reach our greedy hands out for more, so blinding is the "love of that root of all evil." Hence, the cry of "hard times" comes with each new year. When there is such a bountiful crop that our barns and smoke-houses are filled with grain and meat, and our cotten-fields are white with lint for the loom, the bountiful blessing is forgotten, while our land is being filled with murmurings about "low prices."

While we do not charge every individual with being thus grasping and ungrateful, yet all will acknowledge that it is common, and we see Christians manifest this spirit about as much as those who are not Christians.

But brethren, a real cry of want and distress now reaches our ears. The excessive drouth which has prevailed all over our State this year, has been far worse in the northwest counties than elsewhere, and it has continued so long that grain and cotton crops are an absolute failure. Those counties have not raised a particle of food for man or beast. The grass is so parched that stock of all kinds will surely perish, being too weak to stand the drive to better pasturage.

Starvation certainly stares these poor fellow-creatures, in the face, unless those who have been more fortunate heed their cry of distress and come to their relief. Caesar's government is making appeals to all for help for the sufferers. This is well. The call will no doubt be liberally responded to, but when we remember the vast number to be helped, we know the supply will be at best vastly inadequate to the demand.

Brethren and sisters, our holy religion teaches us that to manifest our love for our Master, it must not be in word only, but in deed. To do good, and to communicate, forget not, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased." Let us remember that he who has ascended on high has no need of our gifts, but our offerings are well-pleasing to him, when for his sake they are given to his poor and needy. "I bring rich gifts to thee; what hast thou brought to me?" We have never had so good an opportunity as this to show our love for Him who has done so much for us. Perhaps we have never sacrificed one desire of our own, never denied ourselves one comfort or even luxury for his name's sake, seeing there was no necessity for such sacrifice or denial. But we can no longer have this excuse, for here is the opportunity at hand; here are those of the "household of faith" who will surely suffer if we do not relieve them. Let us not say to them, in hypocritical tones, "I am so sorry for you; depart in peace; be ye warmed and filled," and yet not give them those things that are needful to the body, for James tells us that such sympathy as that will profit us nothing.

Those churches of Christ which are paying out so much per month for the unscriptural appendage of a hired "pastor," would do well to allow him to depart for pastures new, go to studying the Word for themselves, and consecrate their money to the Lord's poor in those destitute counties, and God will not be unrighteous to forget your work and labor of love which ye show toward his name, in that ye minister to the saints.—Heb. vi: 10.

We have written to Bro. W. E. Hawkins, at Coleman City, to learn the actual state of affairs. Let those who will help—and we doubt not that every reader of the F. F. will contribute something—send to us, and we will receipt for it, and send to Bro. Hawkins, or other brethren in that section, who will see that it is distributed where most needed. Send what you can, brethren and sisters, if it is only 25 cents. Contribute each Lord's day as you are prospered, and it will be "an odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing to God." A. MCG.

To these valuable gleanings of Bro. Wise's, we beg leave to append an extract or two from our lamented Bro. Talbert Fanning, which will be found in two copies of the Historian. He in answer to a query as to whether we should receive members from the sects without baptism, says: "If the party believed with all the heart, made confession that Jesus is the Savior—was baptized to follow Christ, we presume nothing more should be required in regard to baptism." Again, in Historian, of August, 1872, he says: "We cannot see how it is possible for one who is ignorant of the truth, to obey the Gospel acceptably. For instance, suppose a person is persuaded that the change of feelings which results from the confidence that God loves the world and is willing to save sinners, is the direct revelation of the spirit that his sins are pardoned and he is truly a child of God, and still he submits to baptism, not to be saved or to secure a good conscience, but merely to join a Baptist or any other party, is such obedience to God? We cannot regard it as such, and all such persons, in our judgment, should upon believing through the truth, cease from sin and obey from the heart that form of doctrine required in baptism in order to be made free from sin and become the servants of Righteousness."—Rom. vi: 17, 18. There is much more from him on the same subject, namely the validity of sect-baptism, but we have not space to quote it all, but enough has been given to prove that Bro. Fanning was squarely with us on this question, our progressive brethren to the contrary, notwithstanding. A. MCG.

Bro. Jacob Sturgeon, of Logansport, Mason county, West Virginia, writes the following cheering words:

I received your excellent pamphlet, with which I was well pleased, because it has the ring of pure metal; I think it is pure gold without any of the dross of sectism mixed with it. I would to God that every professed follower of the Lord was a subscriber, or at least an honest reader of your paper. Go on, dear brethren, wielding the Sword of the Spirit both right and left, and if any do not wish to be hit by it, let them get out of its way. As a faint expression of my appreciation of your noble work, I herewith send you subscription price till January, 1887. I will try to send you some more subscribers soon if I can. I wish to get all the discussion between you and Bro. F. G. Allen on what I consider a very important subject; one which, in my humble opinion, has done more to bring about the divided and distracted state under which the Church is now groaning, than any other one thing of which the human mind could conceive. I mean the unscriptural practice of formally receiving persons from the sects without baptism. I say formally, because no man under heaven, no, not even an angel from heaven, can really initiate a person into the Church of Christ in any other way than by the appointment of the great Head of the Church. I advise all persons who have been thus deceived to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, because a mistake here would be a fatal one. *

Bro. W. G. Cummins, from McMinnville, Tenn., writes: I am glad you are still able to render people dissatisfied with their efforts to honor God by submitting to an unauthorized baptism for an unauthorized purpose. Go on in the good work, laboring all the time, to keep from a resentful spirit. It takes a brave, combative man to do the important work you are engaged in, and such a man is always in danger of having and showing too much resentment. I am prepared to show from Bro. Jacob Creath's own writings, that he understood the "for," when submitting to baptism at the hands of his Baptist father, who named at the time that it was for remission. If you should ever desire to show that, I am at your service. I have been wanting to write something for your paper, but have been suffering too much. Am an invalid.

Bro. Jesse Gross, from Eugene City, O., sends the following words of cheer: I wish I could send you many names, but oh, how unpopular the truth is! I have been much alarmed lest the F. F. might stop. I would love to see a congregation that was willing to live according to the instructions given by Jesus and the Apostles, though this is rather more than I can hope for. Bro. McGary, I am confident you have cause for complaint, but I sometimes think it might be better for you to choose language a little more mild. Stay with Jesus and the Apostles while you live and you will live with them, after death.

I thank you much, dear brethren, for your kind and timely reproof. I feel that it is often needed, and it is an evidence to me, of your love for, and an interest in the truth. Such gentle reproof is powerful to stay the inclinations of the "old man," and helps us to remember that suffering Savior, who, "when He was reviled, reviled not again." A. MCG.

BRO. SHOUSE's article has been on hand some time, but has been withheld because our space was taken up in response to tirades that were being made against us by Bro. Allen, who has espoused the cause of "our plea" vs. the truth as it is in Jesus. Even now, we have to give space to this, that we had intended devoting to a response to things said by Bro. Allen. But several brethren in Bro. Shouse's section have requested the publication of his article, and a reply. We always intended publishing it, but should not this time, but for these requests. Bro. Allen has shown the "white feather" so plainly anyway, that nothing he has said is entitled to a formal reply. He refuses to notice anything we say, because the task that we have laid out for him is a harder job than he feels disposed to undertake, although the rules of logic and fairness bind him to its performance. His "self respect," so-called, however, furnishes him a hole to dodge out through. But, now to Bro. Shouse's position. In the outset, I must inform you, my brother, of your very great mistake in saying that I am logically the affirmant on this question. It is, indeed, a new system of logic, and one at war with all others, that would put us in the affirmative in reference to sect baptism. We are denying that such baptism is valid, are we not, my brother? You are arguing that it is valid. Who, then, is the affirmant, the man who teaches that it is valid, or the man who denies it? I am sure that you will not deny our affirmative teaching on this question, for we affirm and teach that those who hear, understand, believe and obey the Gospel just as presented by the Apostles, in which Gospel the design of the ordinance of baptism is clearly taught, are Scripturally baptized. You cannot deny this, hence there is no room for argument on that proposition. But you teach that those who do not hear, understand or believe that part of the Gospel which teaches the design of baptism, are also scripturally baptized when they are immersed. This we deny, and demand proof. Here is room for discussion, on your teaching and practice. As a fair disputant, you are bound to prove your affirmative teaching. Will you again say that we are logically the affirmant? My brother, the reputation that you enjoy for uprightness and Christian integrity forbids that I should for one moment expect you, after calling your attention to it, to adopt such a species of unfairness as this, that has characterized and rendered disgraceful so many of the efforts of our opponents. Then we shall confidently expect your next to be a fair, open and manly affirmative argument on this question as per your teaching and practice. But as your article bears the evident marks of intentional fairness, and is so free from the marring features of dogmatism that are so prevalent in most of the articles from that side of the question, we will waive our rights as to logical attitude this time, and offer some thoughts in response to what you have said.

You say: "No one can claim a promise or blessing under the New Covenant without baptism." But you ask: "But does it necessarily follow that a person must certainly apprehend all the blessings conferred by baptism before he can be scripturally baptized?" Now, my brother, to say the very least of this, it is raising a false issue. Where did we ever say or intimate such a thing? So we will say no more upon this than to call your attention to the fact—Again you ask: "Is the remission of sins the only design of baptism?" We would answer, without the slightest fear of successful contradiction, yes. But, to avoid special attention to his views of the Baptists, as found on page following stunning questions to the Baptists: "Did they (the preacher, the administrator, that the subject of immersion. The sidereth the poor," saith the Psalmist, and such consideration will win for us the precious welcome, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the founda-of this modern music box in pub- ces. Those who are so thankful select his own means of making church music - afterward with their discipline. They say they preach very well, but I don't know what their faith is." Now, we don't know what the "Campbellites" preach, for we never heard one preach; but if you have reference to Christians when you say Campbellites, I can tell you where you can find our discipline at once: read the New Testament through from the first of Matthew to the last of Revelations, and then you will know what our faith is; read every word carefully, adding nothing or leaving out nothing. There seems to be various changes in the New Testament. The text which reads: "And he took them the same hour of the night and washed their stripes, and was baptized, he and all his straightway." Acts, 16: 33, seems to have been changed to read thus: "And he brought them out of the inner prison into the outer prison, and there he washed their stripes and there they baptized him." They were out of the prison before he asked: "What must I do to be saved?" He then took them and washed their stripes and was baptized. Now, if they were baptized in the house or prison, they went into it after they had come out. This change, no doubt, is very applicable to the sect which believes that when a person dies naturally, if he has a spoon full of earth put on his head, he is buried. There is also another sect which would have the text which reads: "whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely," changed to read thus: "And whosoever" can "let him take the water of life freely"—Rev., xxii: 17. There are many who would like to have the text which reads, "repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost" (Acts 2: 38), changed to read thus: "repent and then be baptized because you have received the gift of the Holy Ghost, or because your sins have been remitted." These all believe a person must be a fit subject for the eternal haven of rest before he is baptized." Now, if they are Christians before they are baptized they are Christ's before they are baptized, and Christ will own them in the resurrection if they are faithful to the end. Now, if Christ will own them in heaven without baptism, why will you not own them as brethren and commune with them in this world, receive them into your church and be as brethren? If Christ will, we should. "Except ye be born of water and the Spirit ye cannot see the kingdom of God."

All is not "the Gospel" which is proclaimed from the sacred desk. "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world." 1 John, 4: 7. Our hearts bleed to see so many people deceived by a power which is not of God. We see it in all meetings where there is more zeal for converts than there is for truth and righteousness. Nowhere does God say that we are to know that we are Christians by our feelings; nor to know that others are Christians by their loud shouting. This is not God's way of testing the matter. Nowhere are we commanded to "get religion," as many do (falsely). Religion is a something that is eminently practical; it goes with a man into all his daily avocations. The religion of far too many is a Sunday. There are also many who seem to renew their religion at every protracted meeting, i. e., at those protracted meetings where they "get religion." We heard a preacher of this kind say that "he believed the ends of the earth would finally be saved (that were saved) by the truth as it was preached by their denomination." Now, the truth of the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation; but the truth which they preach is so mixed with opinions, feelings and experience, that methinks those who preach nothing but truth will be instrumental in saving more souls than those who preach only a part of the truth. All is not the Gospel which is proclaimed from the sacred desk. G. C.

JOB JACKSON'S REASON'S FOR JOINING THE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Pastor of a Christian Church—See here, Job, what's this I hear? They tell me you've joined the Baptists.

Job—Well, I guess how it's so, parson. Can't say there's any harm in that; can you?

P. C.—Well—not exactly. But I was not prepared to hear that. It surprised me, for I thought you had just about made up your mind to join us.

Job—Well, I guess how that's about so, too. But I was a waitin' and a thinkin', and wanted to be on the safe side.

P. C.—Well, how's that, Job? I don't understand.

Job—Well, parson, you know I like your people and your preaching, for you make things look very nice and scriptural; and, as I said, I had a'most made up my mind to join your church. But I thought I'd go over and hear Elder K., and compare notes; and you see that old elder's head's pretty level as well as pretty long. Now, you preached that faith, repentance, confession and baptism bring one into the church, didn't you?

P. C.—Yes.

Job—Well, Elder K. preached the same things, but—

P. C.—Well, but his confession is different from ours.

Job—Well, but that's just what I was going to say. Your confession is that "Jesus Christ is the Son of God," and the Baptist confession, that "God for Christ's sake pardons our sins." That's the difference.

P. C.—Well, that's difference enough, isn't it, since we have the scriptural confession?

Job—Well, yes; I was just going on to explain that difference, how it looks to me.

P. C.—Well, go on and explain.

Job—You see the Scripture is not all on your side. God does pardon sin, doesn't He?

P. C.—Yes.

Job—He pardons through Christ, doesn't He.

P. C.—Yes.

Job—That's the scriptural way, isn't it?

P. C.—Yes; but He don't pardon before obedience, before baptism.

Job—Well, I don't care much whether it's before or after, just so He pardons. You admit He pardons, don't you?

P. C.—Yes, of course I do, but always according to His own plans.

Job—He hasn't got two different plans, has He?

P. C.—No, sir; according to the great commission and the teaching of the Apostles, there is but one plan given for all nations under heaven.

Job.—You believe God pardons persons who are converted by the Baptist plan, and receive them into your church, don't you?

P. C.—Well, yes; but it—

Job—Well, I know you preached and practiced that way whether you believed it or not. So, when I compared notes, and saw you and the Baptists, both believed the Baptist plan right, and the Baptists didn't believe your plan right, that showed two votes for the Baptist plan to one for your plan; and as I was always sort o' democratic, I thought it safer to be on the majority side. Then another thing. I thought for the present I'd rather associate with a people that practice just what they preach, and won't take into their fellowship those who believe and practice differently. And you see another advantage I have now, if I should yet conclude your plan better than that of the Baptists, all I will have to do will be to come over and shake hands with you, and all will be right. But I couldn't go from your church to the Baptist church without being baptized again. So them's my reasons for joining the Baptist church.

TALKS WITH THE SISTERS.

DEAR SISTERS:—In looking over a Christian paper, yesterday, and reading the obituaries, as I always do, I was impressed, as I have often been before, with the number of consistent Christians that die, and yet how few we find living. It seems that one only has to die to become a consistent Christian, which is certainly very discouraging to the living. We read of persons who have lived consistent Christian lives for from twenty to fifty years, but I can't help from wondering if they really did come up to the divine standard; or do these assertions arise from an improper conception of what constitutes a consistent Christian walk? We frequently read thus of women, and men, too, who were leaders in all these unscriptural societies, who violated every rule laid down for dress, who frequented the theatre and all such forbidden places, and yet, after death, they are held up as models of Christianity. Now, is not this wrong? Is it not misleading to non-professors? The friends and acquaintances of such characters are very apt to read these obituaries, and very naturally compare the lives of the subjects with what has been said of them after death, and so prone are we to measure ourselves by ourselves, or by a human instead of a divine standard, that young or ignorant Christians and non-professors are apt to fall into the error of thinking that if they only follow in the footsteps of these "consistent Christians" (instead of Christ) they will be saved, which makes a Christian walk quite an easy one. It is true that there is no true happiness or contentment found in any other manner of life on this earth, and also Christ has said: "My yoke is easy and my burden is light," but, as a learned brother has said, He meant that it was light compared with the ceaseless round of work in the old Mosaic dispensation; for He also said we must take up our cross daily, signifying that, to follow Him, we must bear our cross as He had borne His, and we know how heavy it was. We know that the prevailing idea of Christianity makes it quite easy to live it. The fewest number of people seem to have anything like a proper conception of Christianity; hence so many misleading obituaries.

I would not have my readers think that I believe friends and pastors wilfully misrepresent in these things; but death always draws a veil, as it were, over the faults of its victims, and remembers only their virtues. But in writing of the dead, Christians should not represent them as perfect, but mention their faults as well as virtues, that the living may shun the faults and copy the virtues. Not long since I was impressed with the just way in which a brother wrote of a grand old soldier, recently deceased, who had spent more than half a century in his Master's cause. He spoke of his many trials and victories, but also candidly mentioned some serious faults of temper which he possessed, but never fully overcame. He loved this old brother, but truth demanded that he speak of these shortcomings. I hope none will be offended at what I have written. Let those whom it fit be profited by it. I do not mean that there are no consistent Christians; neither would I discourage the writing of obituaries. There are many beautiful lives that we might do well to imitate, in so far as they imitated Christ, and a sketch of such lives is very encouraging to those who are following on. But let us not make the road to eternal life too smooth by unduly lauding inconsistent Christians, for thereby we may cause some to stumble and perhaps fall of the warder. Oh, if I only knew it could be truthfully said of me, when I have passed through the "dark valley," "her constant desire was to please her Saviour." I should be very thankful. Very little more could be truthfully said, I fear. Another thing I noticed in that paper was the number of lives of Christian men offered for sale. For instance, the life of Bro. F., $1.50; of Bro. Smith, ditto; Judge R., $2, etc., with an earnest exhortation to the brethren to buy, read and imitate. On reading these, I thought of a history so simply and beautifully written by four men, eighteen centuries ago; the history of one "who spake as never man spake;" who, though tempted in all points like as we are, yet was without sin;" who, though he could have called down twelve legions of angels in his defense, used not his power, but like a lamb led to the slaughter, meekly suffered the shameful death of the cross, that we might have everlasting life. Oh, where is there another such a record? It has no parallel, and yet we are urged to imitate poor weak men, instead of this grand model. We must pay out large sums for these histories of fallible men, when this most wonderful of all histories can be purchased for a mere pittance. Yes, the record of God's dear Son can be had for five cents, yet we will pay fifty times that much for the biography of a puny man, full of faults. Is it any wonder, then, that our scribes are constantly holding up to us, as examples, the dead veterans of the cause of Christ, instead of Christ, and urging us to hold on to their erroneous teachings, instead of the "faith once delivered?" Dear sisters, and brethren, too; let us read again this touching story of "Him who went about doing good," and follow him daily in His lowly walk, that we may dwell with him forever in our Father's house, "that house not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens."

SARAI.

NEATMAN, N. C., Oct. 5.

Bro. McGary:

On the second of this month I heard a "missionary Baptist" preacher, by the name of John H. Caudle, preach at a district school house. He used these words: "I preach more of my personal experience than I do from the Bible." Now, this preaching of "personal experience," instead of "sowing the good seed of the kingdom, the incorruptible seed, which is the word of God," and "which will live and abide forever," will account for the present divided and unhappy state of the religious world. God requires us to be united, and has prepared the means for this union. In our Lord's memorable prayer for this union among His disciples, which is found in the seventeenth chapter of John, we find these words: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on Me through their word." The preaching of "personal experience," instead of the words of the Apostles, which are the words of the Spirit, which are the words of Christ, which are the words of God, prevents this union, for which the Son of God so fervently prayed. In the chapter from which Mr. Caudle spoke on that occasion, we have the same principle of union among the Disciples of Christ, enunciated in these words: "Now, I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no division among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment. 1 Cor. i: 10. But this divine injunction goes unheeded, and is trampled under the feet of the worldly-wide theologians, who prefer to preach their own "personal experience," and thereby breed and perpetuate schisms, contention and divisions. Thus they insult God, and cause unsuspecting thousands to "fall into the same ditch" of destruction where they are shining as "angels of light" and "ministers of righteousness," while they are in fact "Satan's ministers." See 2 Cor. xi: 14-15. Mr. Caudle spoke principally from 1 Cor., i: 21. "For after that, in the wisdom of God, the world knew not God; it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." The difference between how Paul said it pleased God to save them that believe, and Mr. Caudle's idea of how to save them, is, that Paul said it was to be done by the "foolishness" of preaching, while Mr. Caudle seemed to think that it was to be done by the preaching of foolishness; and right well did he act upon that principle, too. He preached his "personal experience," which is this world's wisdom, and Paul says: "The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." 1 Cor., iii: 19. If the object to be attained is Methodism, then sow Methodist seed—which is the "personal experience" of Methodist preachers—and if there is any harvest it will be a crop of Methodists. If Baptism is the end to be gained, then sow Baptist seed, which is the "personal experience" of Mr. Caudle and other Baptist preachers; and if any product is gathered it will be a crop of Baptists. But if the object is to make Christians, then sow the word of God, the good seed of the kingdom, and if there is a yield at all, it will be a gathering together of "heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ." In conclusion, we warn Mr. Caudle against offering dying men and women his "personal experience." Rather "preach the word." "Every Scripture inspired of God is also profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction, which is in righteousness: that the man of God may be complete, furnished completely unto every good work. I charge thee in the sight of God, and of Christ Jesus, who shall judge the quick and dead, and by His appearing and His kingdom, PREACH THE WORD." "What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord. Is not my word like as a fire? saith the Lord; and like as a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?" Jer. xxi: 28-29. Can Mr. Caudle say as much for his "personal experience"? To those who hear and give heed to these men who preach their "personal experience," we would say: "Hearken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you; they make you vain: they speak a vision of their own heart (or 'personal experience'), and not out of the mouth of the Lord. * * * But if they had stood in my counsel, and had caused my people to hear my words, then they should have turned them from their evil way and from their evil doings." Jer. xxiii: 16-22. G. A. C.

ARKANSAS LETTER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

The cause of Christ is at present in a prosperous condition. At my three last appointments I buried eleven persons with Christ in baptism, as in Acts ii: 38, and Roms, vi: 4. There are only two organizations of disciples now in my field of labor, Polk county. One of them I found in working order, and the other I partly organized, or reorganized. I will organize one more on my next round. Let me say, that the organizations which I put on foot are in working order, believe and teach baptism for the remission of sins, on the hypothesis that sectarian baptism, so called, never made a Christian. Neither by this do men enter the body of Christ. It is no part of baptism. There can be only one baptism (Eph., iv: 4) by which men enter Christ, with the necessary prerequisites—faith, repentance and confession—although Bro. Allen only has faith and repentance. Can you tell me if he fails to take the good confession, although he requires faith in Christ—repentance, or reformation of life—how, by baptism, he can get men into the body of Christ; or can baptism be legal without the confession? I say not. If all persons were to hear the same Gospel, believe the same facts, and be baptized for the same purpose, to accomplish the same end, or to obtain the same blessing, there would not be so much sectarianism in the congregations of disciples today. If Bro. Allen's theory is correct, that the sectarian baptism makes Christians, why not remain with the sectarians. If Methodist baptism makes Christians, why not remain a Methodist? It is just as well to be a Methodist as a Christian. Now, brethren, if this is the teaching of the word of God I must confess my ignorance of what the Gospel is. Brethren, let me lay aside all sectarianism, and the traditional works of uninspired men, and adopt the practice of Christ and the Apostles.

Next Monday, which will be Monday after third Lord's day, I will start to Montgomery county to assist Bro. J. N. Wood to hold two meetings; then I will return to my field of labor, and commence my summer meetings.

Brethren, let us live humbly and prayerfully, that God may bless us in our meetings; that sinners may, by our light, be brought to Christ. I hope, while I am riding over the mountains of western Arkansas, that I may be remembered by my brethren everywhere in their prayers. May the Lord bless us all is my prayer.

J. W. BRATCHER,
Polk county, Arkansas.

Bro. McGary:

I to-day remit to your address No. 1, Vol. 3, of the FIRM FOUNDATION. There is so much "wormwood" about it that I do not care to take or have it about my house any longer.

The Master says we may judge a tree by its fruit, and certainly if we try this one by that infallible rule, we will conclude that it should be cut down and cast into the fire, for instead of bearing the fruits of the Spirit, it produces hatred, malice, envy, backbiting and divisions among God's people, etc., and I don't care to propagate such fruit any longer.

Paul says to the Roman brethren: "Mark them that cause divisions among you, and avoid them." And following that injunction, I am compelled to avoid you and your paper; for the one thing you have accomplished is to divide the faithful, and set one half to speaking evil of the other.

That you may see your error, face the enemy and do battle for the Master, instead of preaching mutiny in his camp, is the prayer of your brother.

REMARKS.

If some one would just take this subject in hand and prove that our paper is engaged in the baleful, mischievous and reprehensible work that the above letter charges upon it, they would sound the death knell of the FIRM FOUNDATION; for, so soon as we were led to see its work in such a deleterious light, we would immediately set about to consign it, with all of our fond hopes and ardent expectations for its ultimate triumph over the enemies of truth, to the deepest possible grave of oblivion, and would write its epitaph with our own hand. This is the surest and speediest way for the enemies of the paper to kill it. If it is as vile, noxious, virulent, corrosive and poisonous as its enemies say it is, its death should be greatly desired by them—and we know it is desired, from the many underhanded, shameless and ignominious attacks the touring journals have made upon it. So, then, let us have the proof from some quarter, that it is engaged in this wicked work. We know that we are more or less liable to be biased in its favor, and blinded to such evidence, even if it should exist; but we are willing their discipline. They say they preach very well, but I don't know what their faith is." Now, we don't know what the "Campbellites" preach, for we never heard one preach; but if you have reference to Christians when you say Campbellites, I can tell you where you can find our discipline at once: read the New Testament through from the first of Matthew to the last of Revelations, and then you will know what our faith is; read every word carefully, adding nothing or leaving out nothing. There seems to be various changes in the New Testament. The text which reads: "And he took them the same hour of the night and washed their stripes, and was baptized, he and all his straightway." Acts, 16: 33, seems to have been changed to read thus: "And he brought them out of the inner prison into the outer prison, and there he washed their stripes and there they baptized him." They were out of the prison before he asked: "What must I do to be saved?" He then took them and washed their stripes and was baptized. Now, if they were baptized in the house or prison, they went into it after they had come out. This change, no doubt, is very applicable to the sect which believes that when a person dies naturally, if he has a spoon full of earth put on his head, he is buried. There is also another sect which would have the text which reads: "whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely," changed to read thus: "And whosoever can 'let him take the water of life freely'—Rev., xxii: 17. There are many who would like to have the text which reads, "repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost" (Acts 2: 38), changed to read thus: "repent and then be baptized because you have received the gift of the Holy Ghost, or because your sins have been remitted." These all believe a person must be a fit subject for the eternal haven of rest before he is baptized." Now, if they are Christians before they are baptized they are Christ's before they are baptized, and Christ will own them in the resurrection if they are faithful to the end. Now, if Christ will own them in heaven without baptism, why will you not own them as brethren and commune with them in this world, receive them into your church and be as brethren? If Christ will, we should. "Except ye be born of water and the Spirit ye cannot see the kingdom of God."

All is not "the Gospel" which is proclaimed from the sacred desk. "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world." 1 John, 4: 7. Our hearts bleed to see so many people deceived by a power which is not of God. We see it in all meetings where there is more zeal for converts than there is for truth and righteousness. Nowhere does God say that we are to know that we are Christians by our feelings; nor to know that others are Christians by their loud shouting. This is not God's way of testing the matter. Nowhere are we commanded to "get religion," as many do (falsely). Religion is a something that is eminently practical; it goes with a man into all his daily avocations. The religion of far too many is a Sunday. There are also many who seem to renew their religion at every protracted meeting, i. e., at those protracted meetings where they "get religion." We heard a preacher of this kind say that "he believed the ends of the earth would finally be saved (that were saved) by the truth as it was preached by their denomination." Now, the truth of the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation; but the truth which they preach is so mixed with opinions, feelings and experience, that methinks those who preach nothing but truth will be instrumental in saving more souls than those who preach only a part of the truth. All is not the Gospel which is proclaimed from the sacred desk. G. C.

JOB JACKSON'S REASON'S FOR JOINING THE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Pastor of a Christian Church—See here, Job, what's this I hear? They tell me you've joined the Baptists.

Job—Well, I guess how it's so, parson. Can't say there's any harm in that; can you?

P. C.—Well—not exactly. But I was not prepared to hear that. It surprised me, for I thought you had just about made up your mind to join us.

Job—Well, I guess how that's about so, too. But I was a wait-in' and a thinkin', and wanted to be on the safe side.

P. C.—Well, how's that, Job? I don't understand.

Job—Well, parson, you know I like your people and your preaching, for you make things look very nice and scriptural; and, as I said, I had a'most made up my mind to join your church. Is not my word like as a fire? saith the Lord; and like as a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?" Jer. xxi: 28-29. Can Mr. Caudle say as much for his "personal experience"? To those who hear and give heed to these men who preach their "personal experience," we would say: "Hearken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you; they make you vain: they speak a vision of their own heart (or 'personal experience'), and not out of the mouth of the Lord. * * * But if they had stood in my counsel, and had caused my people to hear my words, then they should have turned them from their evil way and from their evil doings." Jer. xxiii: 16-22. G. A. C.

ARKANSAS LETTER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

The cause of Christ is at present in a prosperous condition. At my three last appointments I buried eleven persons with Christ in baptism, as in Acts ii: 38, and Roms. vi: 4. There are only two organizations of disciples now in my field of labor, Polk county. One of them I found in working order, and the other I partly organized, or reorganized. I will organize one more on my next round. Let me say, that the organizations which I put on foot are in working order, believe and teach baptism for the remission of sins, on the hypothesis that sectarian baptism, so called, never made a Christian. Neither by 'his do men enter the body of Christ. It is no part of baptism. There can be only one baptism (Eph., iv: 4) by which men enter Christ, with the necessary prerequisites—faith, repentance and confession—although Bro. Allen only has faith and repentance. Can you tell me if he fails to take the good confession, although he requires faith in Christ—repentance, or reformation of life—how, by baptism, he can get men into the body of Christ; or can baptism be legal without the confession? I say not. If all persons were to hear the same Gospel, believe the same facts, and be baptized for the same purpose, to accomplish the same end, or to obtain the same blessing, there would not be so much sectarianism in the congregations of disciples today. If Bro. Allen's theory is correct, that the sectarian baptism makes Christians, why not remain with the sectarians. If Methodist baptism makes Christians, why not remain a Methodist? It is just as well to be a Methodist as a Christian. Now, brethren, if this is the teaching of the word of God I must confess my ignorance of what the Gospel is. Brethren, let me lay aside all sectarianism, and the traditional works of uninspired men, and adopt the practice of Christ and the Apostles.

Next Monday, which will be Monday after third Lord's day, I will start to Montgomery county to assist Bro. J. N. Wood to hold two meetings; then I will return to my field of labor, and commence my summer meetings. Brethren, let us live humbly and prayerfully, that God may bless us in our meetings; that sinners may, by our light, be brought to Christ. I hope, while I am riding over the mountains of western Arkansas, that I may be remembered by my brethren everywhere in their prayers. May the Lord bless us all is my prayer.

J. W. BRATCHER, Polk county, Arkansas.

Bro. McGary:

I to-day remit to your address No. 1, Vol. 3, of the FIRM FOUNDATION. There is so much "wormwood" about it that I do not care to take or have it about my house any longer.

The Master says we may judge a tree by its fruit, and certainly if we try this one by that infallible rule, we will conclude that it should be cut down and cast into the fire, for instead of bearing the fruits of the Spirit, it produces hatred, malice, envy, backbiting and divisions among God's people, etc., and I don't care to propagate such fruit any longer.

Paul says to the Roman brethren: "Mark them that cause divisions among you, and avoid them." And following that injunction, I am compelled to avoid you and your paper; for the one thing you have accomplished is to divide the faithful, and set one half to speaking evil of the other.

That you may see your error, face the enemy and do battle for the Master, instead of preaching mutiny in his camp, is the prayer of your brother.

REMARKS.

If some one would just take this subject in hand and prove that our paper is engaged in the baleful, mischievous and reprehensible work that the above letter charges upon it, they would sound the death knell of the FIRM FOUNDATION; for, so soon as we were led to see its work in such a deleterious light, we would immediately set about to consign it, with all of our fond hopes and ardent expectations for its ultimate triumph over the enemies of truth, to the deepest possible grave of oblivion, and would write its epitaph with our own hand. This is the surest and speediest way for the enemies of the paper to kill it. If it is as vile, noxious, virulent, corrosive and poisonous as its enemies say it is, its death should be greatly desired by them—and we know it is desired, from the many un-derhanded, shameless and ignominious attacks that our leading journals have made upon it. So then, let us have the proof from some quarter, that it is engaged in this wicked work. We know that we are more or less liable to be biased in its favor, and blinded to such evidence, even if it should exist; but we are willing that our readers shall see, hear and sit in judgment upon this question, and we promise to yield an unhesitating deference to their verdict. So let the case be made out. But this is not intended to invite to our columns the bald and unsupported statements of such rash and bitter malevolence as the above.

If the question was one involving jobbery in county cross-road politics, or twisting and turning some smutty case in a justice's court, where "jack-leg lawyers" are in demand, we would expect this brother to be able to treat the question with some degree of understanding. But when it comes to expecting such brethren to throw light on Gospel subjects, or point out the rights or wrongs of this or that course in reference to Christianity, it is about like expecting an exquisite solo from a corn stalk fiddle. Yet we mean no disrespect to the author of this letter. He has written us several articles for publication, none of which, however, seemed to us to contain anything worthy of our space or the attention of our readers; hence we did not publish them. They were all full of fealty to the "one man pastorate," and general fidelity to "progressive" tactics, with nothing to sustain them but his own air of bombast and self-importance. If any of these communications had contained even an effort at proof, they might have been published. Neither would this letter have been published, but for the fact that we have been repeatedly informed of this brother's efforts to cripple the influence of our paper in his section, by bringing these same charges against it; and, because it furnishes us a basis to say some things that need to be said in another quarter. Now, what have we advocated, and what have we opposed in the FIRM FOUNDATION that justifies this brother and others in bringing these serious charges against our paper? We have no desire to deny anything we have taught, nor to shun the full force of any of its logical outcomings. As we have before said, we are well aware that we have some times, in the heat of controversy, been seduced by the unfairness of older brethren, in their opposition to truth, into a style of expression that was wrong, and this we shall not attempt to justify. If all brethren who write much in defense of hotly contested questions, or in opposition to such questions, can't see that they have made the same mistake, it is because they are too full of themselves—"think more highly of themselves than they ought to think"—such are dangerous teachers. But now as to what we have advocated and what we have opposed. We claim that, as an affirmative exponent of the gospel of Christ, no man has a right to traverse broader grounds: (1) than that which lays the foundation for the positive institution—the Church—inaugurated in the world by Christ; (2) those which point out the steps or conditions of entrance into this institution; (3) those that furnish the "all things to be taught" for their government after they have come into this institution. Now, in reference to these affirmative grounds, we have simply taught what has been bequeathed to us through the volume of Inspiration. Short of the divine "measuring reed" we have not stopped. Beyond its bounds we have not ventured. This we state without fear of successful contradiction; and in the spirit of candid inquiry for truth, we challenge those who have perused the pages of the FIRM FOUNDATION, from Canada to California, to place their finger on one word to the contrary. If, then, we have taught all of the conditions of entrance into the Church of Christ, that Divine teachers taught; and all of the conditions to be "added to the faith" of those who have taken these initiatory steps, that divine teachers have authorized to be "added;" and, if we have not gone beyond these bounds in either particular, who can say that our affirmative teaching has anything in it to justify the grave charge that this brother and others bring against the FIRM FOUNDATION? Brethren and sisters, if it cannot be shown that we have added to or taken from the divine way, then this charge is slanderous and false, and ought to be retracted and never repeated. But it is the negative grounds that we and our associates in this work have occupied, that has given rise to these wholesale and sweeping tornadoes of abuse that have sought to mangle and bury the FIRM FOUNDATION beneath the virulence of their convulsive jury. Yes, here lies the sum of our offense and guilt. So far as our affirmative grounds extend, there is not found a vestige of footing for these foes, among "false brethren," to found an objectionable point. The foundation, the superstructure, the way into the superstructure, and the subsequent rule that is to govern and shape the life after entrance, when presented from our affirmative standpoint, goes unchallenged and unquestioned by these brethren. But, what is it that we deny, that gives rise to all of this opposition, enmity, vituperative and envenomed abuse and malediction, from those who claim to love God and His truth, and to reject all ways that are devoid of a "thus saith the Lord?" We are not so much surprised at the opposition of that class of our brethren, who have openly, boldly and defiantly broken over the "thoroughly furnished" bounds of inspiration, and are being led by the brilliant torch of their "sanctified common sense" to the gratification of their impatient greed for "loaves and fishes" and popularity. This is the class that seek to improve on the "good works" that "pertain unto life and godliness" as they have been thoroughly "furnished unto the man of God" in the Scriptures, through the inauguration of a missionary society; or, on the music in the worship, by the introduction of an organ, even when it drives out their brethren; or, on the eldership of divine appointment, by the one man power, as exercised by the "modern pastor," who "feeds the flock of God"—upon the dainty pabulum fixed by the Bible-college bill of fare—and he does it, too, by the "constraint of filthy lucre." Now, we say that we are not surprised at the opposition of this class, who have struck out upon this bold line of innovation, with its concomitant adjuncts or appendages, such as "church fairs," "temperance societies," young men's and young ladies' "Christian aid societies," sociables, etc. To this class our brother, the author of the above letter, who is a lawyer and politician, belongs. But we are astonished beyond measure at those brethren and sisters who oppose the things we have enumerated, for their opposition to our negative position. There is but one thing that the FIRM FOUNDATION opposes, that this class of brethren can base their opposition to our paper upon. That is, our denial of the validity of any immersion submitted to, under the ignorance and perversion of the mind of the subject as to the divine appointment or end of the ordinance; or, of its validity in the absence of the "good confession of the Lord Jesus with the mouth." The FIRM FOUNDATION denies and opposes this, because that that "thoroughly furnishes us unto all good works" has left it out and prohibited it, by the same rule that it has left out and prohibited the "missionary society," instrumental music in the churches, etc.—only with this additional strength in favor of our negative position in reference to sect immersion: It has furnished us an example in the nineteenth chapter of "Acts," where Paul refused to recognize the immersion of about twelve persons, who had doubtless been immersed, to "honor God," and that, too, under an immersion once bearing divine sanction and authority. But, to say the very least, it cannot be denied with any show of reason that our negative ground upon this question is triable by the very same rule that obtains as to the negative grounds of our brethren who deny and oppose "missionary societies," instrumental music, and the "modern pastor" system, with its entire train of "progressive" paraphernalia. When this class of our brethren raise the cry of "apostasy," or "disturber of the peace of Zion," against us for denying the right and opposing the practice of brethren receiving into the congregation those who have been dipped in water, but did not "draw near" the ordinance with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having their hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, they should remember that they employ a principle against us that rebounds upon their own heads with fearful force; for we deny the rightfulness of this practice, for the very same reason, and greater ones, too, that they deny the rightfulness of the introduction of instrumental music in the congregations—because it is unauthorized by precept and example, and hence is adding to a "perfect" and "thoroughly furnished" system; and because it causes strife, contention and division. Besides, God demands that the "taught" shall be baptized, which, of itself, forbids the baptism of the untaught. He demands that this ordinance shall be approached only by those who discern its divine end or design—those who obey it from the heart, which can only be done when the heart understands what it is doing—"they that received seed into the good ground are they that heareth the word (of God) and understandeth it." This is the class that "see with their eyes, hear with their ears, and understand with their hearts, and are converted and healed." And, in addition to this, the Holy Spirit presents us an example in the case of the twelve at Ephesus, that leaves us without excuse for supposing that a mere act of will-worship in the water will please God. In conclusion upon this point, we say to this class of our brethren, just as they say to those who are marring the peace of the congregations with godless music—give us one vestige of authority for receiving these persons on such baptism, and we will surrender the point forever, and cheerfully join you in its advocacy. Is this not a fair proposition? But you, like the advocates of the organ, the missionary society and the modern pastor, want us to yield the point without proof, and "restore peace." But peace bought at the sacrifice of conscience and departure from the "heaven and earth-bound way," is a peace we do not desire and will not enjoy. So long as the Bible tells us what Christ authorized to be preached, and clearly delineates what those whom He authorized to preach it did preach; and so long as it tells us whom Christ authorized to be baptized in His name, and then tells us in the simplest words and plainest example what class they did baptize—so long will we oppose any other teaching and any other baptizing, however winding, twisting and intricate the theological process for the evasion of the truth may be. If it is different from the revealed way, it is another way, and we shall ever oppose it for that reason. Brethren, let us have that peace that a return to the "word" "as the man of our counsel" will bring—that peace that characterizes true disciples of Christ, and manifests itself in "all speaking the same thing and having no divisions, but joins together in the same mind and the same judgment." Oh! for such a peace to take the place of this incessant state of wrangling and anarchism that is overshadowing the kingdom of heaven with a darkness like the night of death. "It must needs be that offenses come, but woe unto that man by whom it cometh." Brethren and sisters, there is a fearful responsibility somewhere for all of this. Who will be able to stand when the day comes for it to be accounted for?

But now, in conclusion, we return to some points in our brother's letter, and in the spirit of brotherly love we beg our readers to read and weigh these charges and our defense. He accuses our paper of causing "hatred, malice, envy, backbiting and division among the people of God," etc. He quotes St. Paul's language to the Roman brethren, where he says: "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them." Rom., xvi: 17. When we hear a brother quote this Scripture who advocates "Missionary societies," or other unauthorized things that get up divisions and offenses among the people of God, as all such unscriptural things do, we wonder why he does not feel the "sharp edges of the sword" ripping right through his ungodly joints and marrow, and dividing asunder his wicked soul and spirit. The only reason such men do not feel this effect of that language is, because they are such spiritual paralytics that they are past feeling. "As Janes and Jambres withstood Moses, so do these also resist the truth: men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith." But back to the language of Paul about those that cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine we have learned. "The doctrine we have learned" makes no provision for "missionary societies," instrumental music in the churches, the modern, lordly "pastor;" nor for the baptism of untaught persons, or their reception among the people of God, except through teaching and baptizing, as a part of "all nations;" like Paul received "about twelve of Apollos' converts" at Ephesus. We say, the "doctrine we have learned" of God knows nothing of these things. Yet they are causing "divisions and offenses." Who now causes these divisions and offenses, contrary to the Bible doctrine, we have learned? the men who oppose them from a sense of right and conscience, as the "doctrines and commandments of men," or the men who introduce them and contend for them. The very question ought to burn a blister on the cheek of honest brethren who have been led into the advocacy of these things. They all stand or fall together. The authority for one fixes it for the rest. Convince me that man has the right to baptize one who has not been taught the truth, or to receive him into the Church after another has thus baptized him, and you will convince me that man has a right to inaugurate "missionary societies" to convert the world, and to introduce instrumental music for the fun of his converts; or that he may do anything else that his fleshly mind may dictate. The Firm Foundation occupies the only tenable ground anywhere in the whole circle of this "wrestling against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places"—and against "false brethren," and an apostatized brotherhood. But our paper is charged with producing hatred, malice, envy, backbiting and divisions. Because our paper opposes the introduction of all of these elements of innovation and discord, and speaks openly, boldly and uncompromisingly against the men who persist in the advocacy and introduction of these schismatic and divisive things, we subject ourselves to these slanderous charges from the mouths and pens of such false teachers and their very flexible subalterns. Because we refer to such men as "reprobate concerning the faith," men of "corrupt minds and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness," we are accused of being utterly devoid of the Spirit of Christ and of being led by the evil spirit. Such men quote to us, as condemnatory of our course against these evil and seductive teachers, the following Scriptures: "Charity thinketh no evil;" "judge not, that ye be not judged," and the passage: "Mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them." Now, if we were nursing evil in our hearts against God and man, or judging persons by the narrow rules of a selfish and perverted heart that was "destitute of the truth;" or were abandoning Apostolic grounds, and troubling our brethren by introducing things "contrary to the doctrine of Christ," these Scriptures might have some application. But as we are only led by love for the truth to speak of the evils of men who are speaking perverse things and drawing away disciples after them and their pernicious system of making merchandise of the Gospel, "charity thinketh no evil" has about as much application to our work as it does to our Master when He said to the wicked Pharisees: "Woe unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whitened sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness. Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity." Was the Son of God "thinking evil" when He uttered these words to these men? What spirit was He actuated by? Some of our modern Pharisees ought to have been present, to have said to Him: "Judge not, that ye be not judged; for with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged"—and yet Christ said, "I judge no man."

Was Stephen "thinking evil" when he said to the enemies of truth: "Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Spirit; as your fathers did, so do ye"? What spirit was Stephen actuated by? Was Paul "thinking evil" when he said: "Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world, and is departed unto Thessalonica. * * * Alexander, the coppersmith, did me much evil; the Lord reward him according to his works"? What spirit was Paul led by? To say these things about these men in the New Testament, was giving it greater publicity than to have published in a hundred papers like the FIRM FOUNDATION. But these brethren say that "Christ, Stephen and Paul could afford to say this; they were led by the Holy Spirit." Yes, and right there is the difference—men who keep secret the false teaching and perversions of their brethren, out of respect to these brethren, clearly manifest, by so doing, that they love these brethren more than they do Christ; and hence they are not worthy of the name of Christian. All such courses are dictated and actuated by an evil spirit. We will never have peace in Zion till men who advocate these divisive things are disciplined for it—withdrawn from, as for other offenses against divine government.

Let brethren and sisters who love the truth refuse to receive these disturbers of the peace, those who teach these unauthorized and divisive things. Let them remember these words of John: "If there come any unto you and bring not the doctrine of Christ, receive him not into your house, neither bid him Godspeed; for he that biddeth him Godspeed is partaker of his deeds." If the brethren of Texas are true to these heaven-born words of John, they will send A. J. Bush, Alexander Holt and C. McPherson away empty, and all others who are now planning a systematic crusade against truth in Texas, by stirring up strife and contention by their human plans for merchandising in the livery of heaven. If it is wrong, if it produces hatred, malice, envy, backbiting and division among God's people, to contend against all or any of the enumerated innovations, then God is the author of "hatred, malice, envy, backbiting," etc., because He has commanded us to earnestly contend for the doctrine once delivered to the saints: "the doctrine which we have learned," and it is impossible to do so without opposing these things that are contrary to this "delivered doctrine." The FIRM FOUNDATION shall continue to oppose all of these things and speak of them in no uncertain sound, and against their originators and advocates, as enemies of truth, who are "waxing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." We are willing to abide the decision in the hearts of all true disciples of our Master, and to meet at the bar of God all such perverters of the right ways of the Lord, with all we say and do against them.

FAITH.

In all the ages of the world's history, and during each of these successive ages, or periods, have been questions, or propositions, peculiar to the respective ages, whether politically, socially, or religiously. Without mentioning all the various questions and propositions which have agitated the mind of man at these various times, I will proceed to notice the subject which appears in the caption, and show its relation to other questions contemporary with it.

The subject of faith, as a system or force superseding the law, was entirely new in the days of the inspired Apostles and prophets of the New Testament, hence the great persecution waged against the principles.

The law of Moses and the faith of Jesus Christ constituted the issue of that age of the world. After the Gentiles were admitted into Gospel privileges there was really no other question than this. The law of Moses constituted the force employed by our Heavenly Father to induce obedience on the part of the Jews. Paul, in reasoning on this force, calls it a schoolmaster to bring us to Christ, and since faith has come—that grand system which is called faith—then we are no longer under a schoolmaster. But we are under something, and that something, whatever it is, is not the law, for we are not under a schoolmaster, but under faith.

Then it becomes us to inquire into the meaning of this faith. First allow me to state that the term faith occurs but twice in the Old Testament, once in Deuteronomy, xxxii: 20. The second in Hab., ii: 4. The latter has been frequently quoted by the Apostles in order to show the application of the then present system of government under which they lived, viz: "The just shall live by faith," which would be easier rendered as follows, viz: "The just by faith shall live." Webster defines faith primarily as an action of the mind in believing or accrediting testimony. Secondly, a system of doctrines, etc. Any thinking man would know that Paul would not contrast the simple action of the mind with that great moral code that was given to the Jews on Mount Sinai, by which, as a system of government, they lived for about fifteen hundred years; but he was contrasting that grand system of teaching, which was destined to supersede all other systems of government in the world, and will last as long as the present will of the Master shall be in force. I shall now proceed to ascertain what this faith is. Rom., i: 5. Paul says: "We have received grace and apostleship for the obedience of faith," etc. We see that it is something to be obeyed. Again (Rom., iii: 27), he calls it a law of faith. This accounts for the expression "obedience of faith." Law will benefit no one unless obeyed. We see, then, that Paul was contrasting the law of words and the law of faith.

This law of faith is called by Paul, in Rom., viii: 2, "the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus" is called by James (i: 25) "the perfect law of liberty."

This law of faith is found in the Gospel (see Rom., i: 17), but from Rom., v: 1, we learn that we are "justified by faith." Titus, iii: 7. We are "justified by grace." According to the old axiom that, "things which are equal to the same thing are equal also to each other." Then "grace" and "faith" are equal to each other. Again: We are said to be "saved by grace." Eph., ii: 5-8. Saved also by the Gospel. 1 Cor., xv: 2. This makes grace and the Gospel equivalent. If this reasoning be correct, then—

1. Justification by faith.
 2. Justification by grace.
- Therefore, grace and faith are equivalent.
3. We are saved by grace.
 4. We are saved by the Gospel.
- Therefore, grace and Gospel are equivalents.

Then, since faith and grace are equivalents, it follows that faith and Gospel are equivalents. This view harmonizes with the idea that it is a law of faith. But just here we will lay aside our pen until next month, when we propose to show when and where man received the faith.

Editor Firm Foundation.

DEAR SIR:—I read your paper monthly and am very much interested in its contents and pleased with the firm, bold manner you have of handling all subjects. I am especially pleased with the position you take in reference to baptism. Now will you, through the columns of your paper, answer the following question: "To what Church do you belong?" By a full answer to this you will oblige others beside myself.

Yours truly,
T. B. ROBERTS.

We thank our friend for his kind and encouraging words. If he will take the pains to ascertain what Church the 3,000 on Pentecost were baptized into, he will have found the Church to which we "belong." There are lords, spirits, faiths, baptisms and bodies many, but there is of God but "one body, one Spirit, one hope of our calling, one Lord, one faith, and one baptism." That "one body" is the Church of the living God, the body of Christ. That "one Spirit" is the Spirit of truth. That one hope of our calling is the hope of the riches of the promised inheritance. That "one Lord" is our Lord Jesus Christ. That "one faith" is the faith delivered to the saints as recorded in the New Testament Scriptures, and must be heard, believed, obeyed and earnestly contended for by all true disciples. That "one baptism" is that baptism authorized by the "one Lord," which began to be administered for the remission of sins to as many as "gladly received the word" that their sins would be forgiven in submitting to it, on the day of Pentecost, and by which, all that thus submit to it, "put on Christ. We submitted to that baptism, and hence, in so doing, "put on Christ," which constituted us a member of the "one body." This, my friend, is the Church to which we "belong."

OUR "PET."

Brother O. M. Wilmoth said something in the Messenger soon after the Sweeney-Jarrell debate about our getting a "crumb of comfort" at that debate, for our "pet position on the baptismal question." This get-off seemed so very good to him, that he has rehashed it in the Preacher—his quarterly "monthly." We did not intend to notice what he said from his first mention of it, partly because his "progressive" brethren were peppering him on all sides, and because we did not suppose he would regard it worth warming over, as he has. But now, as he has so far survived the attacks of the "progressives" as to stand in the exalted spheres of editor of the Messenger, editor of the Preacher, and President of a Bible college, we will give him a "crumb," perhaps not of "comfort," but of truth, that he may chew on till he gets hungry for another and better to nibble around again: At the Sweeney-Jarrell debate Bro. Wilmoth said to us: "I will never admit in debate with another Baptist that they are in the kingdom." May-be he intended this as a "crumb of comfort" to us. If he did, he is very mindful of our comfort; for he had previously told us that "If all the brethren would accept your position on the baptismal question, I would too." That is he would "pet" it too. He likes popular pets. I wonder if the "missionary society" and the organ will ever become popular enough to enlist his caresses and sympathies? Besides, Bro. Wilmoth was not very shy of our "pet" about the time of that debate; for he tried to lead Bro. Burnett right close up to it, tried to convince him that it wouldn't bite. Now, he should not forget how near he came to our "pet" without getting hurt.

SHALL WE HAVE THE WEEKLY?

Many of our readers are again expressing a desire for a change of the paper to a weekly. Some suggest that we raise the subscription price of the paper till it will justify us to run it as a weekly with our present list. We do not like this plan, but if we could get one thousand new subscribers by the first of January, we would be willing to take the chances and begin a weekly with the new year. We can run over our list and select two hundred and fifty of our subscribers who could easily send us two thousand new subscribers by that time, with a little effort. We base this estimate upon what they have done in the past. Now, let every one who is really anxious for the change to a weekly, write us how many names they think they can send us by that time, at one dollar each, and then go to work, and we will have the weekly without much trouble. The change, you see, depends on our friends. If they will put forth a little exertion we will have the weekly, and at the same price as the monthly. It is not money making that actuates us in this work, but the love of truth. Come to the front, brethren, and let's have the weekly.

Some features of Bro. Robertson's article, "Search the Scriptures," we do not endorse if we fully understand him, but we have not the space this issue to state our objections fully.

TRIP TO MADISON COUNTY.

Madison county is our old home; and we have many dear friends and beloved brethren and sisters there. This is the field of labor in which Bro. A. J. McCarty has been faithfully engaged in the Master's work for about two years, and he has accomplished grand results for the truth. Bro. McCarty had appointed a meeting to begin at Midway on the ninth of October, and Bro. Lee wrote us that the brethren would expect us to be with them. So, on the eighth instant we boarded the train at Austin, for Marquez, in Leon county, where we found Bro. McCarty ready to take us to Midway, a distance of forty miles. We reached Midway in due time for night meeting, and had the pleasure of hearing Bro. Levi Spear, whom the brethren there had prevailed on to stop over and attend the meeting. The meeting continued till Thursday night. Bro. Spear did most of the preaching, and he is "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth," and presenting it, point foremost, right at the sinner's heart. We hope never to be led into the vile aims of flattery, but we must say that, while Bro. Spear is a man of very limited education, outside of the Bible, we dare say there is not a Lexington or Add Ran graduate in Texas, of only two years' experience in preaching, who can excel him in presenting the Gospel of Christ. This shows where the preacher ought to be prepared for his work—in the Church, and not in a Bible college.

The visible or immediate results of this meeting did not reach the expectations of the brethren. Some, who had once enacted the solemn play in the water, of having the names of Father, Son and Holy Spirit said over them while they were obeying a doctrine and commandment of men, after learning the way of the Lord more perfectly, as did the twelve whom Paul found at Ephesus corrected this false step by being baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. But our special meetings in the daytime, for Scriptural investigation and exhortations to the brethren to a closer walk with God were very enjoyable, and will, doubtless, prove fruitful of good to the cause at Midway. There were several hindrances to the progress and success of our night meetings, which were intended more particularly for aliens—to instruct them in the way of truth and life, that they might know how to come to Christ. The most prominent and potent of these interferences we will here mention. A false teacher—such as mentioned by Paul in 2 Cor., xi: 14-15—had been holding a meeting at Midway. He calls himself a "Congregational Methodist." He set one night to pay his respects, or rather disrespects, to what he calls "Campbellism." His charges were so bold, flagrant and untrue that Bro. McCarty accosted him at the conclusion of his attack, and tried to show him how unjust and cowardly his course was. This led to a controversy between them next day, on the street. In this controversy Mr. Reagan, for such is his name, charges that Bro. McCarty called him a liar. In this way he got up a bad feeling among his brethren and followers, against our brethren, which doubtless kept many from coming out to our meetings who would otherwise have attended. Besides, he began a meeting at the same time, a short distance away in the neighborhood. His charge against Bro. McCarty was false, but it doubtless served his purpose. Bro. Harris heard this conversation, and he and Bro. McCarty both stated positively that nothing like it was said by him. This man Reagan preached to the people that there was no such thing as water baptism commanded or taught in the Bible. He said at one time, when the world was in a state of idolatry, worshipping false gods, baptism was practiced by heathens, or true teachers baptized heathens; in turning them to the true God, but that it never was designed or intended for a civilized people. But Mr. Reagan must have concluded that the Midway people were an uncivilized, idolatrous people—heathens—because he took two of his converts to the Trinity river and immersed them, and claimed that he did it by the authority of Christ, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. He is worse, too, than what he calls "Campbellites," because, when he does take to the water, it takes more of it to satisfy him than them. He got so far out into the muddying current of the Trinity that he had to call to his audience on the bank for help. He took his converts in up to their necks. In giving this account we mean no disrespect to the two parties who were immersed that evening, though we believe that sprinkling would have been as much God's baptism as was their unintelligent ducking on that occasion, for neither has divine sanction. But what must an intelligent, thoughtful and candid mind decide when it finds a man who claims to be preaching the Gospel of Christ, and denying that water baptism is commanded or taught in the Bible, in a river up to his neck, baptizing people "in the name or by the authority of Christ?" Now, we might criticize this man's course at great length, and could show up many of his inconsistencies, but we desist, hoping that our friends who see this may be led to compare his teaching with his practice. It shows that the people are determined to resist the truth when they will encourage and cling to such false teachers as this man Reagan has proven himself. One of his converts, who is one of our dear friends, to whom we are bound by ties that reach back to the merry days of boyhood, told us that Mr. Reagan would meet us with a view to the investigation of the Scriptures, but we told him at the time that he was mistaken. Such men pretend to think it wrong to discuss differences before the public. However, they seem to see no wrong in a cowardly, one-sided affair of their own, where they attack and mistreat those who have no chance to reply.

"THE UNPARDONABLE SIN."

A brother at Liberty Hill says that we have "committed the unpardonable sin"—"blasphemed against the Holy Ghost." He says that whoever disbelieves that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, is guilty of "the unpardonable sin." He charges that we have committed this sin because on one occasion, at Liberty Hill, we stated publicly that there was a time when we did not believe that Jesus of Nazareth was the Christ, the Son of God. We admit that we made this statement. Now, if this frame of mind in reference to Jesus, sealed our doom, of course our subsequent belief and obedience of the Gospel passed for naught with God. We were not included in the terms of the commission where it is said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." No; the apostle Paul and the writer were excluded! If this brother at Liberty Hill had been present at Damascus when Ananias said to Paul: "Why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord," he doubtless would have said: "Not so, Ananias; you pervert the right ways" of the Lord, this man Saul is guilty of "the unpardonable sin," for when he started down here he did not believe that Jesus was the Christ, hence there is no "washing away of his sins, neither in this world nor in the world to come." Poor Paul! Well, if this brother is right, we will try to make the most of it, and thank him anyhow, for classing us with the great Apostle. But we suspect that the "unpardonable sin" that we committed at Liberty Hill, was in refusing to receive two Baptists on their Baptist baptism—unpardonable by this and other brethren who want to measure by human standards. Now, if we are correct in our supposition, while we are truly sorry to act in such a way that our brethren become so embittered against us, that their hearts refuse to forgive us, yet we had rather rest under their malice that is nursed in their hearts against us, than to act contrary to our convictions, and thereby sin wilfully against God, as we would have done if we had acted so as to have pleased this brother in that matter. But how stands the matter with our brother who will not forgive us for acting up to our convictions? Well, if we read correctly, neither will God forgive him his sins, if he ever commits any, and surely he does not claim to be sinless. My brother, "when ye pray, forgive, if ye have aught against any, that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses." Mark, xi: 25-26. The man who harbors malice and bitterness in his heart against a brother, even when that brother has acted wrong, is in a sinful and lost condition; he is no better off, if he persists in that course, than the man who blasphemes against the Holy Spirit (whatever that is). And yet we fear this brother has thus steeled his heart against us for doing that which we believe and shall ever believe was right in God's sight.

A. McG.

Our "Gospel No. 2" is crowded out of this issue, by matters that demand immediate attention.

Bro. T. H. Gillespie, from Dallas, Texas, is visiting us at present. He is for the whole truth—does not agree with the shakers by any means. He is an old friend of ours.

In the A. C. Review of October 21, as its new editor is knocking around among his exchanges, he thrusts us with the following: "The FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas, A. McGary, editor. While many of our preachers and some of our papers seem to think that too much time and attention has been given to 'first principles,' Bro. McGary is decidedly of a contrary opinion. His paper is just bristling with information on these points." Now, while it is true, as Bro. Treat says, that we do not believe that enough has been said on "first principles"—for so long as persons are to be converted to Christ through the divinely appointed process; and so long as false and sectarian teachers pervert the divine process of conversion, and "make it of none effect," through the doctrines and traditions of men; and, so long as our brethren become particeps criminis in this perverse work by declaring that these men preach the Gospel which Christ intended men and women should believe, so long will it be necessary to treat on "first principles." Yet if he means to convey the idea to his readers that our paper deals exclusively with "first principles," when he says it is "just bristling with information on these points," then his little understriking snap is "just bristling with fabrication and misrepresentation." If he pursues such a little, slimy and dastardly course as that, towards his brethren, the "Old Reliable" will very soon deteriorate into a little unreliable. By all means, Bro. Treat, let us have open, manly criticism instead of this pusillanimity. If you think the Review has drifted a little, under Bro. Rowe's guidance, from the moorings of "our plea," on the baptismal question, and desire to sound the shibboleth of "orthodoxy" on that point, then open your editorial duct, and let it come in a "certain sounding" flow, instead of this roundabout and eely course of irony you have directed at the FIRM FOUNDATION.

Bro. S. Strickland, who has preached the Gospel for more than fifty years, but who has all of this time been relying on Baptist baptism, has recently made the "good confession and been baptized for the remission of sins." This grand old soldier, whose "time of departure is at hand," can truly say: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." Yes, he has fought a fight that many of his old "yoke-fellows" are not able to fight—that fight which leads one to "examine himself to see if he is in the faith." How many of our old brethren and sisters, instead of making this "fight" to overcome their prejudices sufficiently to measure themselves by the divine rule, draw themselves up into a knot of prejudice, and "measure themselves by themselves?" Such will find, as they have denied the faith, or the rule of faith, in their own measurement, while they have measured others so strictly by the divine rule, that they will be judged as they have judged others, and will miss the crown of righteousness after all. May God's blessings abundantly attend Bro. Strickland through his remaining years, and may he receive that "crown of righteousness which the Lord will give all that love His appearing."

"STATE SUNDAY-SCHOOL EVANGELIST."

Rosecrans is in Austin dosing the Church on "foolishness" in reference to its "needs in Sunday-school work." We say foolishness, because Paul says that the "wisdom of the world is foolishness with God," and that is just the kind of wisdom he is displaying. We heard him last night, and among other things, he told them that the way to get the young men of the city to attend the Sunday-school was to hang the walls of the Church with nice pictures, and give them good music. In this way, he said, they would be won to the "house of God, and would pass right on into the Church." The Gospel is the power of God, with young men, when preceded by nice pictures and good music, according to the logic of the Sunday-school Evangelist.

Bro. Poe is opposed to reporting as added to the church, those shaken in from the denominations, as many of our brethren do; but while we are pleased to see him open on this ugly and unauthorized practice anywhere along the line, we can't see why "our plea" has not the same right to demand these reports, to which Bro. Poe enters his protest, that it has to authorize the practice which gives rise to such reports. We would invite the candid attention of all of these brethren, to "Job Jackson's reasons for joining the Baptists," which will be found in another column.

If our brethren will rally to our support as we think they will, in securing new subscribers, we shall strive to give them a weekly paper that will be in every way worthy of their efforts. One very essential feature would be the addition of a well arranged Question Department, which, when properly conducted, will greatly facilitate the study of the Scriptures. We have many questions now lying unanswered for the want of space to introduce them.

Brethren, let's have the thousand new subscribers and the weekly by January 1. But don't wait for some one else to get the new subscribers; if you do they will not be gotten. But let every one work like the whole thing depended on his or her efforts, and success will be easy.

Bro. A. J. McCarty is to hold a discussion with a hard-shell Baptist, in Madison county some time in December, and Bro. J. D. Tant is up at Evant with a "chip on his hat" waiting for a bristling Baptist of the Missionary "branch" to knock it off, then the "fur is to fly."

MARK THEM WHICH CAUSE DIVISIONS.

We take this occasion to warn the brethren against A. J. Bush, Alexander Holt, C. McPherson, or any other man or set of men, who are causing divisions or offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned. "Avoid them" and all such. They are planning a systematic canvass of our state in the interest of their human plans. Wherever they go they will sow the seeds of schism, strife, discord, contention and division. They are the "perverters of the right way of the Lord," and hence merit the censure, reproof and rebuke of all true disciples of Christ. If they come into your section they will not "bring the doctrine of Christ." They come to tell you that God has failed to "thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works," and to tell you that they came to lead you into a "good work" that they have been led into by the "sanctified common sense" of the lordly few who organized the Texas Missionary society. They come to tell you that you are not "complete in Christ" till you adopt their "prudential measures."

Brethren and sisters, will you receive these enemies of truth, these fomenters of discord and division, who are making merchandise of the Gospel? If you do, you become partakers of their evil deeds. They will introduce organs and "missionary society" ideas in your midst, that will never cease to disturb the body till they bring open rupture. Who will have the courage to send these progressive vampires away empty and haggled to pieces with the sword of the Spirit? Thank God we know one section where the brethren declare they will not receive them as brethren. A. McG.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Brethren, you who are in arrears know how your account stands, without any information upon that point from us. Then don't wait for us to present your account. If you are willing to help sustain a paper that faithfully contends for the whole truth without addition or subtraction, just as it was "delivered to the saints," and as it is "bound in heaven and earth," then settle up what you owe and renew for another year, and induce as many more as you can to do the same. We need all the help you can give us in this way; but if you are opposed to a position and a paper that is just as extreme as the whole truth and nothing but the truth, then write to us and send us what you owe us, and order your paper discontinued. OBITUARIES.

Died on the sixth day of last month (September), in Coryell county, Texas, my eldest daughter, Mrs. Mary Roberts, in giving birth to her second infant. She was seventeen years, six months and twenty-two days old. She obeyed the Gospel two years ago last July, and was a true Christian to the day of her decease. She bore her sufferings during her illness, which lasted about a month, with Christian resignation and fortitude, and departed with a sweet smile on her lovely features. It is indeed very hard to give up a child so dear; but I know that our sad loss is her unspeakable gain. Her funeral was attended by a large concourse of sympathizing friends and neighbors. A few tender words were spoken by Brother S. N. Shouse, who, two years previous, buried her with her Savior in baptism. She leaves a devoted husband and two very young children, to whom her death is indeed a sad loss. It seems hard that death should claim one so young, whose life seemed so full of bright promise, yet our Heavenly Father knows best. We ought to try to be reconciled, our consolation is that she rests with her dear Savior.

We must learn to live without thee,
But it's only for a time,
We shall see thee, know thee, love thee,
In that purer, fairer clime.
A. B. VAUGHN.

Died, September the thirteenth, at his father's home, four miles east of Hillsboro, Texas, Brother James W. Swindall. Jimmie had not obeyed the Gospel when he was attacked by hemorrhage of the lungs, but during his protracted and increasing illness he obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered, which was administered by Brother N. B. Sikes. He was young in years as well in discipleship—being only in his eighteenth year. He did not fear to "pass over the river," but said he was ready and willing to go any moment. He leaves to mourn his loss a kind father, an affectionate mother, four loving sisters and three bereaved brothers, besides many warm friends. May these sorrowing relatives and friends so live as to meet him on the blissful shore of sweet deliverance. TOY FREDLEY.

TO SOME POSTMASTERS.

Postmasters who have been tampering with this paper, and depriving the rightful owners of it, if there be such (which we begin to suspect, from some information we have), had better not repeat these tricks, unless they want some trouble with "Uncle Sam." We believe we could make out a case now, if not several. There has been so much complaint from our subscribers on this point that we are going to try very hard to catch up with certain postmasters. While we would dislike to give any one trouble, if we do catch up with such tricks as are herein indicated, justice to our subscribers, as well as to the cause we advocate, would force us to seek redress through the hard hand of the Federal Court. A hint to the wise is sufficient.

"HEZEKIAH JACKSON" AND THE PASTOR OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

["Hezekiah Jackson" is the father of "Job Jackson," whose conversation with the "Pastor of a Christian Church" was reported in the last number of the FIRM FOUNDATION. Since that time, let the reader understand that "Job Jackson" has died, and that that same "Pastor" wrote his obituary in a Christian weekly paper, in these words: "Job Jackson, the elder son of Hezekiah and Hannah Jackson, departed this life on the 5th instant. I never stood over the grave of one and talked with more confidence of their future than I did over his. He is at rest in Jesus. He was a strict member of the Baptist Church."]

Soon after Job's death, his brother, Zeke Jackson, was met and accosted making any preparation for your eternal welfare?

Z. Yes, parson; I am seeking peace with God every night at the altar of prayer, at our meeting out at the old school house. I am the more anxious to become a child of God since poor brother Job urged it upon me so in his dying words. I thank you so much, parson, for your cheering and assuring words about brother Job's being at rest with Jesus.

P. Yes, Job is at rest, thank God. And now you ought not to lose a moment's time, my boy, in putting your soul on the way to the same glorious inheritance that he has gained.

Z. No, parson, I don't intend to rest till God speaks peace to my soul, just as he did to dear brother Job's that night I saw him rise from the mourner's bench with such a heavenly glow upon his face, clappin' his hands and a kissin' and huggin' everybody in his reach. He just made them woods ring with his religion that night. Oh, I shall never forget it, parson, and I want to git that same religion and go to rest in Jesus. Won't you come out to our meetin' to-night, and help to get me through, by praying for God to baptize me with the Holy Ghost, like he did Job that night?

P. Well, Zeke, my boy, I would do anything to assist in your conversion that was right.

Z. Well, parson, don't you think it is right for me to be seeking religion at this meeting, and requesting the prayers of my friends for God to send down his converting power into my heart?

P. No, Zeke; I do not. God has already sent down His converting power. The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation, and that Gospel is so plainly written in your New Testament, my boy, that you need have no trouble about learning your duty and pleasing God by obeying the Gospel of His Son.

Z. Where will I find it so plain as that, parson? I want to read it.

P. Did not our Lord say to His Apostles that whatever they bound on earth should be bound in heaven, and what they loosed should be loosed in heaven?

Z. Yes, parson, He said that. P. Did He not tell them to tarry in Jerusalem until they were indued into the whole truth, and bring to their remembrance all things He had commanded them?

Z. Yes, that is about what He said.

P. Is there not a book, called Acts of Apostles, that gives an account of their preaching and proceedings under these instructions; and does it not take up their acts, beginning by calling their names, and telling that they were abiding in an upper room at Jerusalem—right where they had been told to abide?

Z. Yes; go on, parson; that's the way to tell it.

P. Does it not give a very graphic account of how they were endued, as Christ said they should be, in these words: "And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance?"

Z. Yes; it begins to look like they are gitin ready to "bind and loose" something. Go on.

P. Did not Peter, to whom the "keys of the Kingdom" had been given, "standing up with the eleven, lift up his voice and say: Ye men of Judea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken unto my words?" And ought not you to hearken unto his words, too, Zeke?

Z. Yes, parson, that's right; go on.

P. Did not Peter then preach to them that Jesus, whom they had crucified, had arisen from the dead, and had been exalted at God's right hand, and had been made both Lord and Christ?

Z. Yes, parson, that's just the way it reads in my book; go on, I am a keepin up with you, and a watching you mighty close, because poor brother Job said that you Campbellites made things look very nice and Scriptural, and he had a'most made up his mind to join your church once.

P. Well, then, when Peter preached these three facts of Christ's death, burial and resurrection, to these people, and they believed them, did they not ask him what they were to do? Did they not ask him what they were to do?

Z. Yes, parson, that's just as shore as we are standin' here; but parson what about the gift of the Holy Ghost. You left that out, didn't you?

P. I am not talking about the Holy Ghost now; that was not promised to them until after they had repented and been baptized; was it, Zeke?

Z. Well, no.

P. Well, Zeke, you need not be troubling yourself about the Holy Ghost, you "hearken to the words" of Peter, and do the things he said do, for they are bound in heaven and earth, and God will comply with all the promises He has made. If He does not give you this gift of the Holy Ghost it is because you do not need it, and if He does give it to you, and you do not know what it is, it will not effect your salvation, for Christ is the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey Him. That's it, by boy; you just obey His Gospel, and you need not bother your brain about the gift of the Holy Ghost.

Z. Well, parson, that looks mighty simple and plain, I admit.

P. Does your preacher out at the old school house tell you all to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, or does he tell you to come up and pray and be prayed for at the mourners' bench? Be candid, Zeke.

Z. Well, he tells us to come up and be prayed for; and then when we feel our sins forgiven, and say so to the church, the church will take the vote as to whether or not they will receive us into its fold by baptism.

P. Who is right, Zeke, Peter, or your preacher? Honor bright, my boy.

Z. Well, if there is any difference in their teaching, Peter is right of course.

P. Well, is there not a broad difference in their teachings?

Z. There seems to be, parson, and I am going to look into this thing. Good day, parson; I will go to preaching at the old school house to-night, but I shall tell some things I have learned, and not be led any more to do things that the apostles never told people to do. I am inquiring for their duty.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

P. Good day, my boy, and may you be blessed in your wise decision.

Zeke was on hand that night at the old school house, at the Baptist meeting. The preacher spread himself on the "prodigal son," and it seemed to uncle Hezekiah and aunt Hannan Jackson (who had given him some close points on Zeke's case) that the fitting points and stirring exhortation would so thoroughly mellow up their boy's heart, who had been prompt at the mourner's bench for several nights, that he would surely get through that very night. But to their very great surprise and chargin, when the call was made for mourners Zeke kept his seat. Others went up, though, and the next thing was a long, loud, and very warm prayer for a "Pentecostal shower." "Holy Ghost and fire" was plead for with a vehemence and importunity that made the old school house tremble like a leaf. At its conclusion all joined in on, "I am bound for the promised land; oh, who will come and go with me," etc., with an earnestness that fairly made the welkin ring with melody. Then there was a wild rush of the most joyous actors, into the audience after those who were holding themselves aloof from the efficacious bench, to coax them to its charming touch. Among them was aunt Hannah, after her boy Zeke. But Zeke stood unmoved, with book in hand, despite the pleading and pulling of his mother, till the hallelujah wave had tired itself to a comparative calm. Then, with a clear, cool voice, he spoke to the preacher in these words: "Parson, I am anxious to be saved and become a child of God, and if you will tell me what to do, and read it out of the book, or tell me where to find it so I can read it, I will do that thing, but I will not come to that bench again till I find instruction in the Bible to do so. The cry of disturbance was promptly raised by the preacher, and an officer being on hand, Zeke was immediately arrested and hastened off to jail, at which Aunt Hannah fell in a swoon and was carried home insensible. A neighbor boy gave uncle Hezekiah the information that Zeke had been seen that evening in town, in close conversation with the "pastor" of the "Campbellite Church." This bit of information immediately solved the problem that had been engaging uncle Hezekiah's mind, to decide the cause of Zeke's conduct. Uncle Hezekiah hastened off to town and went direct to the jail, to see what he could do towards effecting Zeke's release from prison. On his arrival there the first sound that his ear catches are the words of the "pastor of the Christian Church," admonishing Zeke, through the duty from the word of God, which will teach you to be baptized for the remission of sins, upon the confession with your mouth that you believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God. Zeke, my boy, fidelity to the word of God binds us to this confession alone; and, in clinging to it, we have every assurance which inspiration can give that we are right. And again, Zeke, those only preach Jesus correctly who give to immersion the same prominence which belongs to it in Apostolic discourses. This prominence you know Baptist preachers do not give it. Zeke, God will bless you if you will hold out faithful. Remember that he that loves father, mother, brother or sister more than he loves Christ is not worthy of Him."

Here uncle Hezekiah put his hand on the "pastor's" shoulder, and said:

"Parson, I could not have believed that you would have caused us the trouble and agony of heart that you have."

P. Why, Bro. Jackson, what's the matter?

J. Why, sir, you have broken up the peace of our home, which was already draped in mourning over the death of our dear boy, Job. The seeds of discord that you have sown in Zeke's young and tender heart have fruited in the distraction of my wife, the incarceration of my only boy in a felon's cell, and, in the interference with and breaking up of a revival meeting which was replete with the promise of a rich harvest of souls for Christ. Why, oh! why, parson, have you inflicted us with all of this pain and loss?

P. Bro. Jackson, I am at a loss to understand you. How have I caused these things?

J. You, sir, have caused it by interfering with that young boy, who is now a pining victim to your pernicious work.

P. How, Bro. Jackson, did I interfere with Zeke? Do tell me?

J. Why, sir, when his young heart had been touched by the parting words of his dying brother till it had begun to turn away from the frivolities of the world, and just when it was on the eve of embracing religion, which was in a measure counteracting the deep grief of his old mother, and beckoning back her mind from the very verge of insanity over the death of Job, you met him and filled his mind with that which has caused all of these heart-aches and troubles, which will end, God only knows where.

P. Bro. Jackson, you are mistaken! God forbid that I should ever be guilty of such charges. My brother, do please explain yourself. Tell me what I have done that merits such heart-wounding rebuking as

J. Parson, did you not meet Zeke last evening and converse with him about religion?

P. Yes, I talked with him quite a while on that glorious theme; but I did not discourage his religious bent of mind, but on the contrary I urged him to press the matter of his soul's salvation, and never rest till he learned his duty, as revealed in God's word, and did it.

J. But did you not speak to him disparagingly of the preaching of our Baptist preacher?

P. Well, Bro. Jackson, I did ask him what the Baptist preacher told him to do for the remission of his sins; and when he told me, I compared it with what Peter said do. Surely, there was nothing improper in that; was there, Bro. Jackson?

J. Yes, there was something improper in it, if it is wrong to influence a young boy to act contrary to the wishes and counsel of his aged parents, and wring the heart of his feeble old mother to the point of insanity, and bring upon himself and us the suffering and shame of a felon's cell, all for nothing, it was improper.

P. But it was not all for nothing, Bro. Jackson. It was for his soul's salvation. I was endeavoring to teach him the truth that he might obey the truth. Peter says to those who had done just what I was trying to induce Zeke to do: "Seeing you have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently; being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." That, Bro. Jackson, was just what I was trying to lead Zeke to do—to be born, not of corruptible, but of incorruptible seed. I must be plain with you Bro. Jackson. My objection to Baptist teaching is that they practically deny that God does or can convert sinners in the use of his own appointed means, and they substitute for God's appointments man's inventions and devices, and accept, as evidence of pardon, human dreams, visions and imaginations, instead of God's assurance. Hence Baptist practice converts men through devices, and is a conversion by men. Their courses drive God out of the work, Bro. Jackson. They have more faith in human dreams, visions and imaginations than in the promise of God, given by the Holy Spirit, sealed by the blood of Christ, and confirmed by the oath Jehovah. Baptist conversion is wholly of men. Now, entertaining these views as conscientiously as I do, can you censure me for warning your boy you, for according to your own and the admission of your representative men, the Baptises preach the same Gospel that you do. You admit that they preach the Gospel, for you say that the death, burial and resurrection of Christ is the Gospel, and there never was a Baptist preacher that did not preach that.

P. Yes, but the Apostles are to be our exemplars in the work of preaching, and bringing persons into the Church; and here is where Baptist doctrine so utterly fails, while we follow the Apostles. Did they baptize believers on a simple confession of their faith in Christ, without an experience involving a sense of pardon? So do the Disciples; but so do not the Baptists. Did they tell inquiring sinners who believed that Jesus was the Christ, to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins? So do the Disciples; but so do not the Baptists. Bro. Jackson, I love you and dear old sister Hannah, and it is really a sore trial to me to occasion you the pain that I have, but I must not let my love for any one—even though it should be my own father or mother—stand between me and by duty to my Master, to point people to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world; and to earnestly contend for the doctrine he delivered to the Saints, Paul, Peter, John, James, Jude, etc. My dear brother, when you and aunt Hannah and I pass through the gates of pearl, and meet around the Throne, in the golden paved and Jasper walled city of the New Jerusalem, where we will know each other even as we are known, and where we are sure to meet if we hold out faithful to the end, then you will fully know the sincerity of my efforts and purposes to lead your dear boy out of darkness into the marvelous light of the truth as it is in Jesus. My dear brother, I pray you, do not reproach me so for my conscientious efforts to save the soul of your dear boy.

J. If, sir, I could believe your pretensions and asseverations of honesty of purpose and conscientiousness I could not find it in my heart to blame you, even after all of the injury and mental agony that has flowed from your counsel to my boy. But, sir, you you are a self-convicted hypocrite; and all of this trouble is occasioned by an effort to gratify your wicked spirit of proselytism, which spirit has no the slightest tinge of honesty in it, but is wholly partisan, earthly, sensual and devilish. You are a knave, sir, in the livery of heaven, and I can prove your hypocrisy upon you. You have victimized the happiness and honor of my family to gratify your unholy purposes.

can prove that I am a hypocrite; do it now and you will oblige me, and I will confess it when it is shown to me.

J. I will do it. Did you not labor as hard to proselyte Job as you have Zeke?

P. Yes, I tried to show Job the truth.

J. Did he not turn from all your counsel and endeavors and join the Baptist church? And did you not even pursue the poor boy with your doctrine, trying to entangle him after he had joined the Baptist church?

P. Yes, Job joined the Baptists despite all my efforts to show him the truth, and I did argue the points with him after he joined.

J. Did not you say, in the obituary you wrote, that Job was at rest in Jesus; and that he had lived a strict member of the Baptist church? And did you believe what you wrote?

P. Yes, I wrote it and believed it, and yet believe it.

J. Well, sir, if Job could hear your doctrine and reject it, and live and die a strict member of the Baptist Church, and then go to rest in Jesus, could not Zeke, too?

P. Yes, he could, I suppose.

J. Well, if Job, and Zeke, and Hannah and myself can all pass through the gates of pearl into the golden paved and jasper walled city—the New Jerusalem, by living strict members of the Baptist Church, can't all of Adam's race do the same, since God is no respecter of persons?

P. Well, yes, I suppose so; if they can conscientiously believe the Baptist doctrine to be right. But I can't conscientiously believe it.

J. Who's trying to get you to believe it? We are willing to let you alone in your belief, that you may do all the good you can, and convert as many sinners to Christ as you can get to believe your teaching; but you are not contented with this, but even want to make inroads upon the faith of those whom you admit to be holding to a doctrine that will lead to rest in Jesus if strictly lived up to. What, sir, could justify you in such a course? I could excuse you if you believed that we were in a lost condition; but since you believe that we are in Christ, and traveling on to the golden paved and jasper walled city of God, there is no plausible excuse for you. Your hypocrisy consists in and is made manifest when your sentiments as expressed in Job's obituary are compared with those you have brought to bear upon Zeke.

P. I can't see it, Bro. Jackson.

J. You can see it if you would; but you won't. Any man who can follow the simplest line of reason from cause to effect can see your inand continue in them, is downright hypocrisy. This is just what you and thousands of your kind are guilty of, and will ever be until you change your base.

P. But this charge rests wholly upon your assertion, Bro. Jackson. Give the proof if you please.

J. Well, you admit that Baptists are in a saved state, that if they live and die strict members of the Baptist Church they will go to rest in Jesus. Then you say that none preach Jesus correctly but those who give to immersion the same prominence that is given to it in Apostolic discourses; and you say that Baptists do not give it this prominence. Is this not inconsistent? Can any but hypocrites hold to and attempt to defend such an inconsistency? Again, you say Baptists drive God out of the work. Baptist conversion is wholly of men. And yet you admit that they bring people into covenant relationship with God. Is this not inconsistent and hypocritical? Again, you say that we must not depart from Apostolic practice and example; and that if we do, our work is offensive to God.

Then you ask: Did the Apostles baptize believers on a simple confession of their faith in Christ, without an experience involving a sense of pardon? So do the Disciples, but so do not the Baptists. Did they tell inquiring sinners, who believed that Jesus was the Christ, to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins? So do the Disciples, but so do not the Baptists. And yet you say that Baptists do bring them into Christ. Can't you see here your inconsistency and hypocrisy? If you can't, God pity your inconsistency and stupidity! But I must go and attend Zeke's trial.

P. Let me say just one thing before you leave. It is the unscriptural name that you wear that I object to. When you are asked what Church you belong to, what reply do you make?

J. I say I belong to the Baptist Church. What Church do you belong to?

P. The "Christian Church."

J. Well, I must go. Zeke needs my presence at his trial. I will agree to give the chapter and verse containing the name Baptist Church, whenever you furnish me the one that contains "Christian Church."

Good day.

[An account of Zeke's trial will be given in our next.]

THE WORD ONLY.

Mr. Moody spoke of the word of God being the word only, meaning it is without the presence and power of God. I called this almost blasphemy. Mr. Moody quotes Paul, 1 Thes. i: 5: "For our Gospel came not unto you in word only, but also manner of men we were among you for your sake." Paul says the Gospel did not go to the Thessalonians in word only. That is a strange passage to quote to prove that it is word only.

Does Mr. Moody think God sent it to the Thessalonians in power and with the Spirit but sends it to others without the power and Spirit, in word only? This may harmonize with his idea of a partial God, partial atonement, and special election of some to salvation, leaving others to everlasting damnation. But this idea directly contradicts God, who said "God is no respecter of persons." And "God will have all men to be saved and to come unto the knowledge of the truth." 1 Tim. ii: 4. "He is the propitiation for our sins, and not only for ours, but for the sins of the whole world." 1 John ii: 2.

The passage Mr. Moody quotes leaves him without excuse in affirming the word of God is the word only, when Paul says it is not in word only, but in power and with the Spirit of God. What that word has at one time, it always has. It is an incorruptible seed.

If he will read Acts xvii: 1-10 he will find Paul went to Thessalonica and "three Sabbath days reasoned with them out of the Scriptures opening and alleging that Christ must needs have suffered and risen again from the dead, and that this Jesus whom I preach unto you is Christ, and some of them believed and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few."

There is the way the word came to the Thessalonians. Paul out of the Scriptures reasoned, opened up the truth to their minds. In receiving it, they received the power and Spirit that dwell within it. "The word of God is the seed of the kingdom." "The word of God is quick and powerful, sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." Heb. iv: 12. "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." John vi: 13: "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever." Peter i: 22. All the germinal power, the Spirit power that man receives, is in the word of God, and every man who receives that word into a good and honest heart, receives all the power and the Spirit dwelling in that word.

The word can only be helpful as it is understood and believed. The power and efficacy of that word can only be appropriated by the heart as that word is understood, digested and assimilated to the spiritual wants of the soul. Received into the mind and not understood, its various truths never brought to bear on the affections of the heart, it gives no strength or vigor to the soul, just as food gulped down may pass through the stomach undigested, unassimilated, unmingled with the secretions of the body, and may pass through the body giving no strength to the system. So many believe the word is from God, but never study and learn its various truths. These truths never are digested and mingled with the various affections of the heart, the spiritual man within us. So man may believe the Bible and yet be afflicted with leanness of soul, and perish as a spiritual dyspeptic. Let him study, ponder, digest and assimilate the truths of the Bible and he receives the fullness of spiritual power. Miracles accompanied the apostolic ministry, but they imparted no additional power to the word of God. They showed it was the word of God, and men willing to take the medicine; the healing power was in the medicine received, the converting influence was then, as now, in the word of God, and no greater then than now. D. L.

The above, from the Gospel Advocate, is worthy of careful study. So much is being written and preached about "the influence of the Holy Spirit," "the operation of the Holy Spirit," etc.; that I have sometimes thought that the orthodox world needed a scripture somewhat like this: "I determined to know nothing among you but the Holy Spirit and its power;" or perhaps like this: "But we preach not ourselves, but the Holy Spirit and its power, and ourselves your servants for fifty dollars a week."

"All the germinal power, the spirit power, that man receives is in the word of God, and every man who receives that word into a good and honest heart receives all the power and spirit dwelling in that word." Every one untrammelled by the mystic teachings of orthodoxy will accept this proposition as an axiomatic truth. Nevertheless many, who profess to be free from the shackles of sectism, have not the moral courage of the above writer. The majority of the religious world believe in this abstract theory of spirit influence; hence the great difficulty of getting them to believe in God's word, and practice the things therein taught. Sometimes, when I have insisted in my teaching that the power of the spirit that moves a man to action is in that word, theory, opinion or thing believed, I am denounced as a "heretic," "a disturber of the peace," and sometimes an "apostate." And this, too, by those who profess to believe the truth set forth above by D. L. Honest men, in religion, will act in accordance with their faith. Their religious acts or works are the fruit of their faith. Now, there can be no fruit without a seed, and the same kind of seed will always produce the same kind of fruit. Good seed of the same kind always have in them the same kind of germinal power—spirit power. Look at the religious world. They are divided into many sects or denominations. Do they "walk by the same rule"? No; their religious practices differ widely from each other. But why these differences? From what seed did they come? Did they come from "the seed of the Kingdom"—the word of human wisdom, sowed them in the vineyard of the Lord, and thereby defiled the vineyard and the fruit thereof. See Deut., xxii: 9. The "germinal power—spirit power" that is in that word preached by each denomination, dwells in the heart of every honest man who receives that word, and leads that man into that particular church whose doctrine he has received. It was my lot, not long since, to hear one MARTIN, who professes to be a Missionary Baptist. He is very plain, positive, dogmatic, and—unscriptural. The seed he sows is summed up by himself thus: "Salvation is by grace through faith, and that alone, and once saved, are saved for all time to come." He would receive no one who believed in the possibility of apostasy. He stated distinctly that they "baptized people because they were saved, and that any one who would try to do anything for his salvation had no religion." This man MARTIN says he has baptized 575 persons this year. He explained the reason for baptizing thus: "Though baptism is a non-essential—that is, a man is saved without it—yet, out of gratitude to God for the salvation already received, he yields to baptism."

I only refer to this man as an illustration of the mixed seed that is being sown. Is such preaching the Gospel of Christ? Is it the seed of the Kingdom? Will such a baptism put one into Christ—into the Kingdom? If I believed it I would hasten to join MARTIN. Good brethren are deceived by the specious plea that these sectarians all believe in Jesus Christ. So do Catholics and Mormons. It is one thing to believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and quite a different thing to believe in and practice what He taught. There were some anciently of whom it was said: "They feared the Lord and served other gods." So now there are many who believe in the Lord Jesus and walk in their own ways. Every man who is led by the Spirit of God is a son of God, is in the Church of God, and is in fellowship with the Father and the Son, because he is walking in the light; and more than this, he will have (not may have) fellowship with every other one who walks after the Spirit. Rom., viii: 14; 1 John, i: 7. Now it is evident to every one that the Spirit of God will never lead a man to believe anything that is contrary to or that contradicts the word of God. Why not? Because all the Spirit power by which man is led is in the word of God; and if man believes anything that is opposed to or that contradicts that Word, it is absolutely certain that the Spirit of God is not the author of his faith. Again, the Spirit of God will never lead a man to practice anything for accord with that which is written. Am I right in these statements? If you admit the truth of D. L.'s reasoning, then you must admit the truth of what I have written. Now I ask, in conclusion, will D. L., and all who believe with him, have the moral courage to accept the legitimate consequences of this scriptural teaching? Will you still aid and abet sectarianism by accepting their work? Will you still contend for an "imperfect obedience" or an "honest ignorance"? Still say that it is not necessary to understand the design of baptism in order to receive the blessing?

Read D. L.'s piece again, and note this: "The power and efficacy of that word can only be appropriated by the heart as that word is understood, digested, and assimilated to the spiritual wants of the soul." The sin sick soul gladly learns of salvation through Christ, but how obtain it? How satisfy the deep craving of the earnest, honest soul that wants salvation? There is but one way appointed in the word of God by which this "spiritual want of the soul" shall be satisfied. Men have invented many ways, and all of these men made ways lead into human institutions. Oh! you answer; they have faith; they believe in Christ. Yes, they have faith, but they show by their works that it is not a faith in Christ. I have no confidence in a faith that does not include what Jesus commanded. But they are honest, and they obey, or follow, their understanding of the word. So did good old mother Eve. The preacher in that instance set an example that thousands of preachers have closely followed. He put a false interpretation upon God's word; Eve believed it, and following her understanding of that word; she transgressed. Preachers now will stand up, just as Martin above alluded to, and Major Penn, and Jarrell, and Ray, and flatly contradict the word of God. They will tell the people that baptism is not for remission of sins; that salvation is by faith alone; that a sinner is not commanded to do anything but "believe in Christ," and that when once saved it is impossible for him to apostatize. They ridicule "the good confession," deny the power of the word of God, while they impose themselves upon the people as "called and sent of God to preach the Gospel." How can such seed produce good fruit? Is it mixed seed, and therefore polluted? The power and spirit dwelling in it is anti-Christian; it is not the power and spirit of God, for these cannot lead a man to believe and do anything contrary to that which is written. The converts to such preaching, though honest and conscientious, written." But with all their failures, liberal brethren, "our plea" brethren, bid them God speed, and welcome them into the fold. What signifies it if they did not understand the word of God? What if they are "afflicted with leanness of soul," and are "spiritually dyspeptic," a good dose of "our plea" will cure it all. Brethren, let us be consistent; more than this; let us be faithful to the word of God. Why was God's wrath manifested against Israel? "For great is the wrath of the Lord that is kindled against us, because our fathers have not hearkened unto the words of this book, to do according unto all that which is written concerning us." 2 Ki., xxii: 13. Why did the people thus forget God and walk in their own ways? "For the people turneth not unto him that smiteth them, neither do they seek the Lord of hosts. Therefore, the Lord will cut off from Israel head and tail, branch and rush, in one day. The ancient and honorable he is the head, and the prophet that teacheth lies; he is the tail. For the leaders of this people cause them to err, and they that are led of them are destroyed." Isa., ix: 13-16. The pastors, or prophets, caused the people to err. See Jer., 23. It might be said now of these preachers, as then of those prophets: "I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran; I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied. But if they had stood in my counsel, and had caused my people to hear my words, then they should have turned them from their evil way and from the evil of their doings." Have we any counsel of the Lord, any words written to which we must conform in our teaching and practice? If we are to observe to do all things according as it is written in order to blessing, prosperity and good success in spiritual life, will the religious world attain these blessings just as well by not doing all things according as it is written? In the great "day of days" when the Lord Jesus, with an innumerable convoy of holy angels, and in the glory and power of the Father, shall assemble the nations before the great white throne, to be judged, by what rule or law or principle, will judgment be administered? They are to be "judged out of those things which were written in the books according to their works." Rev., xx: 11-14.

We have the book of the new covenant, the Gospel of Christ, all things that pertain to life and godliness given by divine power (2 Pet., i: 4) are written therein, and they are written that we may believe (Ja., xx: 30-31) and do the will of God, or obey in all things. Heb., 5; Rev., 22, et al. May God help us to walk in all things according as it is written.

A PERVERTED GOSPEL.

BRO. BURNETT—Please answer the following questions in the Christian Messenger: 1. Is the Gospel of Christ perverted the Gospel of Christ? 2. Is the preaching that repentance precedes faith, and remission of sins precedes baptism, a perversion of the Gospel of Christ? 3. Is the baptism of a person who believes a perverted Gospel a valid baptism? Wm. K. HAMBLIN.

Your difficulties all turn upon the question, what is a perverted Gospel? And this turns upon the question, what is the Gospel? Paul defines the Gospel, in the Epistle to the Corinthians, to be the death of Christ for our sins, the burial of Christ, and the resurrection of Christ. This being the Gospel, any perversion of it so as to set aside these three facts would be a perversion of the Gospel. For instance, if a man should preach that Christ did not die for our sins, and was not buried, and did not rise the third day—that would be a perversion of the Gospel. If a sinner should believe this perversion and be baptized on such faith, the baptism would not be valid. To preach that repentance precedes faith or remission of sins precedes baptism, is not to pervert the Gospel, for faith and repentance and baptism are not the Gospel. They are commands under the Gospel; and are to be obeyed, not believed. If one should get these commands so confused in his mind as to not obey them, his obedience would not be valid. But for a sinner to believe that repentance precedes faith would not cause him to repent before he believed, for that would be an impossibility. Nor would his supposing that remission precedes baptism cause it to so precede, or prevent him from receiving remission in baptism, provided he would go forward and be baptized. All the confusion on this subject arises from the failure of brethren to distinguish between the facts and commands of the Gospel. The facts are to be believed, the commands to be obeyed. We are not to believe the commands and obey the facts. Hence the person who believes the facts, (death, burial and resurrection of Christ,) and obeys the commands, (belief, repentance and baptism,) is validly baptized, and is in the kingdom of God. B.

Brethren have a hard time in answering questions. Bro. Burnett, in the above answers, has not written in his usual clear, logical and Scriptural style. In the effort to avoid falling into or endorsing what he calls "re-baptism" he has fallen into confusion.

1. "Paul defines the Gospel in the Epistle to the Corinthians, to be the death of Christ for our sins, the burial of Christ and the resurrection of Christ." Paul does not define the Gospel in this place; he simply declares to them the first things preached to them: "For I delivered to you among the first things what also I received first that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures."—McKnight's Trans. To demonstrate the fallacy of we cite Paul's own language. He pronounces a curse on man or angel that preached any other gospel than the one he preached. Gal. i: 8-9.

His first preaching, according to Luke, was in Damascus. "He preached Christ that He is the Son of God." Acts ix: 20. Paul in giving an account of this same preaching, says, Acts 20: 19-20: "Whereupon, O King Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." See sixteenth to eighteenth verses, inclusive, for the commission given him. "But shewed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem and throughout all the coasts of Judea and then to the Gentiles that they should repent and turn to God and do works meet for repentance." In the above preaching Paul "fully preached the Gospel of Christ." Rom. xv: 19. Again, Paul preached "the word of the Lord." Act xvi: 32. Baptism was a part of that word, as context shows. Paul preached "the faith," Gal. i: 23, and "obedience to the faith," Rom. i: 5-10-20. Believing with the heart and confession with the mouth were parts of that word of faith Paul preached. Rom. x: 8-10. Paul also preached that "Jesus is Christ," Acts xviii: 5; the word of God, Acts xviii: 11; Christ crucified; 1 Cor. i: 23; the Gospel, 1 Cor. xv: 1-4. In preaching the Gospel he taught obedience to it. 2 Thea. i: 8, Rom. x: 10. Men obey commands, they cannot obey facts. Hence commands are a part of the Gospel. To return to Bro. B.'s definition of the Gospel. He says to pervert the facts is to pervert the Gospel; to pervert the commands is not perverting the Gospel, they "are not the Gospel," but "commands under the Gospel." "Suppose a man should preach that Christ did not die for sins, was not buried and did not rise the third day; that would be a perversion of the Gospel." Wrong again, my brother; not a perversion, but a positive denial of it. To suppose that a man would believe such a negation of facts and still submit to baptism is a stretch of imagination akin to that of the Methodist class leader who read Num. xxii: 21 as a proof of infant baptism.

"To preach that repentance precedes faith or remission of sins precedes baptism is not to pervert the Gospel." It is admitted that faith, repentance, confession, baptism, remission of sins, are not our Gospel, but they are parts of, or elements of, the Gospel of Christ. Faith, repentance and baptism are commands of the Gospel—not under it nor over it. Can a man preach the Gospel without showing the people how to turn to God? The object of preaching is to turn men to God that they may receive forgiveness of sins. To turn them to God, one must show them and living way," in which they must walk. The man who preaches a way contrary to the way of the Lord, is a perverter of the Gospel. Those who believe his preaching are perverted—turned away—from the way of the Lord. I heard Bro. B. preach a discourse on the parable of the "Sower and the Seed," in which he demonstrated that the word of God—the seed of the kingdom—sown in the heart always produces Christians. That Baptist seed made a Baptist, Methodist seed a Methodist, and so on. He was clear and emphatic in teaching faith, repentance, and baptism as parts of that seed of the kingdom and these to be taught and obeyed in due order. Now he must alter his notes of that sermon, so as to admit the "ignorant immersed."

To return however to Bro. B.'s suppositions: "If one should get these commands so confused in his mind as to not obey them his obedience would not be valid." If a man does not obey, his obedience is not valid! What the writer meant by this paradoxical statement I cannot say. I guess this: If by means of such preaching as Baptists, Methodists, and sectarians, generally preach, the sinner should believe that repentance precedes faith, and remission precedes baptism, his mind would naturally and legitimately be in a state of confusion. Like causes produce like effects—mixed seed a perverted Gospel, or confused mixture of Gospel commands produces—confusion; and that while in this confusion he does not obey the commands as they are written yet he does obey that which is delivered by aforesaid preachers, and hence his obedience to their perversion is not valid. This may not be the right guess as to what Bro. B. meant, but I am sure it is the right solution of the subject.

Finally Bro. B. I think you are wrong in supposing all the confusion to "arise from the failure of brethren to distinguish between the facts and commands of the Gospel." The confusion arises from brethren apologizing for the errors and perversions of the Gospel by sectarians. Men do not discriminate between obedience to the Word of God and obedience to a perversion of that word. In conclusion, though not solicited to do so, I answer Bro. Hamblen's questions, as they are numbered: 1. No. 2. It is. 3. It is not.

J. W. JACKSON.

As Bro. Barnett has promised to show the authority for recognizing sect immersion, as soon as the brethren express the desire for him to, we will add these thoughts to call his attention to a few points that obtrude themselves out of his answers to Bro. Hamblen, so that he may be dressing the rough off of them; for coming argument on this same line it sadly needs some preliminary attention. He says that if a person "believes the facts, (death, burial and resurrection of Christ), and obeys the commands (belief, repentance and baptism), he is validly baptized. Now there is one extra faith sticking out right there! Have you forgotten that Paul says there is "one faith?" Let's see, now, if we are right. "Believes the facts (death, burial and resurrection of Christ)"—that is one faith. Now then: "Obeys the commands (belief)" that is faith number two! Now, my brother, if you wanted four steps or conditions in the commands, why did you not put it, "belief, repentance, confession and baptism?" Was it because the "plea" could not stand the "good confession?" You had better get rid of one of these faiths before you champion the cause of the "plea"—even if you have to swap it off for a mourners' bench, for the Bible is silent about the mourners bench; but it is not silent about the number of faiths—it says "one faith." Again, what God has joined together let man not put asunder. In the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians, where you say Paul is defining the Gospel, he joins eight facts together; and you put them asunder, by selecting three out of the eight and calling them the Gospel. Now, if Paul is defining the Gospel here to be facts, then this is the way to state the Gospel: "Death, burial, resurrection, seen of Cephus, seen of the twelve, seen of above five hundred brethren at once, seen of James, seen of all the apostles, and seen of Paul, of Christ." Now remember, we say that if he defines the Gospel here, then it consists of these eight facts, instead of three, as you teach. Let us see by what rule you stop at three facts here after you start Paul to defining the Gospel? You can't do it, my brother! We deny that these three facts are the Gospel. They are no more the Gospel than the foundation of a house is the house. If these three facts are the Gospel, tell us, my brother, how we may obey facts, else we perish! You, my brother, sometimes give your pen an ironical flourish, and say that we are trying to "reform the reformation." If your two faiths, and obeying facts theory—eight facts, at that—is "this reformation," do you not really think it needs a little reforming? Paul said that in the faith he preached was confession with the mouth. Well, the faith he preached was the Gospel he preached. Then, in the Gospel he preached was confession with the mouth. But as confession with the mouth is neither of the three facts that you say is the Gospel, and, as you are determined to whittle the Gospel down to three facts, no more and no less, with your "four plea" that Paul preached in his Gospel, off, and then take the language of the same Apostle and cut five eighths of it off, in order to turn the remaining three eighths against the very faith or Gospel which he said he preached. This is fidelity to "our plea" with a vim! You stand sadly in need of reformation, my brother; and if you would permit us to reform you out of these meshes of "our plea," you would yet be a useful man in the Kingdom of Christ in rolling back the tide of innovation that is coming down upon us like an avalanche. Let us show you another place where your theory needs reforming, and we leave the matter with you. You say that Paul limits the Gospel to three facts; hence you teach that faith, repentance, confession and baptism are no part of the Gospel, but commands under the Gospel. Well, Paul says, in the same place where you say he defines the Gospel to be these three facts, that they were saved by the Gospel. So according to your theory, they were saved without faith, without repentance, and without baptism. But your theory and Paul's do not harmonize; for Paul says in another place: "Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith, without the deeds of the law;" and, again: "Without faith it is impossible to please God." Peter said of the Gentiles: "God put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith." Yet you say that faith is not the Gospel, nor a part of it. But if it is impossible to please God without faith, it is impossible to be saved without faith, so your Gospel without faith will neither save souls nor please God. You had better drop it. A. McG.

A CORRECTION.

Dear Brother McGary:

How did you get your information in regard to the baptism performed by Mr. Reagan in the Trinity, as you were not there? I was the only one there who could be dubbed Campbellite. No such scene as you describe occurred. One of the parties to be baptized went into the water to try the bottom, I suppose. He suddenly got into deep water and lifted both hands, but not in fright, made a kind of grunting noise, which I can't make with my pen, and said, "deep, deep," and in the least time again said, "deep, deep." Mr. Reagan went in immediately and immersed him. The other one went in and was immersed, all as nicely as I ever saw, and no calling to any one on the bank for help. Now here is your statement: "He got so far out into the muddy, rolling current of the Trinity that he had to call to his audience on the bank for help. He took his converts in up to their necks." The first one got in nearly to his neck, but that was an accident. Further on you say: "But what must an intelligent, thoughtful and candid mind decide when it finds a man who claims to be preaching the Gospel of Christ, and denying that water baptism is commanded or taught in the Bible in a river up to his neck baptizing people "in the name or by the authority of Christ?" He was not up to his neck. He was no deeper in the water than was necessary. He did say that water baptism was not a command. Then why baptize at all? Is it not a sin to do a thing in the name of Christ that he has not commanded? Mr. Reagan said Acts ii: 38 was not water baptism; no water about it. It was the baptism of repentance, and that they had to repent to that degree that it was called a baptism. He admitted that they had to baptize themselves in repentance. Why, then, did Peter say be baptized, if they had to baptize themselves in their own repentance? But Mr. Reagan pleased the people of Midway and vicinity well, for he preached "smooth things," Is. xxx: 10, to all (except us Campbellites); said they were all right if they were sincere in what they did. He and another preacher of his order said that Campbellites would be saved if they were sincere. Paul thought he was doing God service when he was persecuting Christians. He was sincere, but he could not have been saved while he was willing to take the life of any one. But suppose Mr. Reagan had got into such a dilemma that he had to call for help. No sin in that. But he did a thing "in the name, by the authority of Christ," and said Christ had not commanded it. To do more than is commanded is transgression. How dare a sincere man do in the name of Christ that which they think he has not commanded.

Mrs. M. A. BONHAM.

We thank Sister Bonham for apprising us of our mistake in reference to this affair. We certainly have no desire to misrepresent anyone. If we desired to overdraw the ridiculousness of this man Reagan's teaching and doings, our mind is not inventive enough, if all its powers were taxed to their utmost, to present a picture that would surpass the naked facts in reference to this case just as Sister Bonham has detailed them. For a man to preach to a people that there is no authority from God for a thing, and then go and do that thing under the solemn form of, "by the authority of Jesus Christ I baptize you," is to pass out beyond all bounds of competition in the play of burlesque. If Peter meant that they should be immersed in repentance when he said be baptized, as found in the thirty-eighth verse of Acts, second chapter: "Repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ every one of you for the remission of sins," then its meaning is, repent and be immersed in repentance for the remission of sins according to his and all "orthodox" teachers' interpretation of "for," as it occurs in this passage, these people were commanded to repent and then be immersed in repentance because their sins had been forgiven. They teach that "for" here carries the idea of "because of." Again, if that is the meaning of "baptized" in this case it must be the same mean-they all preached the same Gospel, and Paul called down curses on any man who preached any other. So, according to Mr. Reagan's construction, Acts viii: 36-38, should read this way: "And as they went on their way they came unto a certain water; and the eunuch said, see, here is water; what doth hinder me to be immersed in repentance? And Philip said, if thou believest with all thy heart thou mayest." (This looks like putting faith before repentance—that is, before that big amount of repentance.) "And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God" (not, "I believe God for Christ's sake has pardoned me"). "And he commanded the chariot to stand still and they went down in the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he immersed him in repentance." And Acts x: 40-48, should read: "Then answered Peter, can any man forbid water, that these should not be immersed in repentance, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we? And then he commanded them to be immersed in repentance in the name of the Lord." We wonder when Mr. Reagan will get out his translation?

Well, Sister Bonham, you asked where we got our information about that baptism. We got it from the ferryman, right where they were "immersed in repentance," in the Trinity. Bro. McCarty and Bro. Spear were with us when we crossed there, and that was the way it was detailed to us, not in the very words that we give, perhaps; but that was it in substance, as we understood it. We remember that something was told us about someone getting in the boat and reaching out to assist them out of the deep water. However, we are thankful to you for your correction.

Dear Brother McGary:

I do hope you will succeed in making your paper a weekly, but my close observation and acquaintance with our papers for thirty years go to show that there is very little money in a weekly unless you get a large advertising patronage, and this is objectionable to a large class of brethren. The way I happened to write you from Coleman for a sample paper was amusing. I was sitting in an old, dirty hotel, talking to a lawyer of prominence who lived at Athens, Ala. He learned I was a preacher, as well as a business man, and he abruptly remarked: "There is not a single Christian newspaper now published in the world that I know of." I told him he was mistaken. "No, I am not. I am a Methodist, and you belong to the Christian church, but that makes no difference."

THE FIRM FOUNDATION.

I like the name of your paper, when I was a boy we used to sing, "How Firm a Foundation, Ye Saints of the Lord." The words carry me back about forty years ago, when I

Tenn., on account of bitter opposition. The sheriff would not even open the courthouse for him to preach in, although the county judge had given permission. When the small congregation had assembled, composed mostly of Gen. James Layne's, Pat Samuels' and my father's families, and seeing the house closed and no chance to get in, Bro. Johnson requested me and Will and Reuben Samuels to go just across the street and buy a large goods box. He gave us the money to pay for it. We brought it and placing it by the side of the courthouse he mounted it, and I have often wished I had his photograph as it is now painted in my mind's eye. A man, small in figure, low in stature, but perfect in development; small feet and hands, full, open face, and high forehead. And as he stood on that box, with one foot just before the other, as few men could stand, straight as an Indian, he commenced singing in a clear, sweet voice, "How Firm a Foundation." My mother, the sweetest singer I ever heard, soon joined him, and by the time the song was through God had sent His angels to notify the people that His servant was in the courthouse yard ready to tell the message of His love. I have seldom seen so large a crowd gathered in so short a time. Without delay he opened a short, pointed prayer, and taking this text: "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ for it is the power of God." Such a discourse I never have heard, nor never expect to hear, in this world. Bro. Johnson was in his prime. His brother, Dick Johnson, had just been elected to the vice-presidency of the United States. A few years before this he had resigned his own seat in Congress to become a preacher. He was willing, and did spend his fortune and take his place among the poor and despised of earth that he might wear a crown of life. Such a man, such surroundings, such a scene I never expect to see again. Strong men wept bitter tears and offered themselves as willing subjects anxious to confess Christ, even before the invitation song was sung. My mother was so much rejoiced that she clapped her hands and shouted for joy. My father stood erect, with folded arms and uncovered head, in the blazing sun, unmoved as a statue, except the great tear-drops that fell from his clean-shaven chin. And when the invitation hymn was sung, "Am I a Soldier of the Cross," father was doing his best singing, "How Firm Foundation." I never heard him sing but two songs; one was "Yankee Doodle," and other was "How Firm a Foundation." Neither had much tune, but he always got the words right. I saw and heard my brother George, who was then a Baptist preacher, deliver a discourse on Christian union, "The Firm Foundation," and at its close invited all who were willing to accept the Bible as their only creed, to speak when it speaks, to be silent when it was silent, to accept Christ as their leader, to wear no other name than that of the bridegroom, to come forward and give him their hands. My mother came first; then father, and then about sixty others. They were known no longer as a Baptist church, but a band of the Disciples of Christ. These were not re-baptized, because the question had not then been united with them, also. They were required to submit to immersion. I do not say that because these Baptists were honest and were satisfied with their immersion, therefore they were right. No, no. But I do say, from my understanding of the Scriptures, that immersion in water of a believing penitent is in order to the remission of sins past, whether the administrator is in the regular line of succession, or the candidate understands the design of baptism. Neither of these conditions were required by the early church; nor any questions that look even in this direction were asked by Christ or the Apostles.

My little son, ten years old, who confessed the dear Saviour and wanted to be baptized, was thought by some to be too young to join the Church. I went to his side and lovingly laid my hand upon him and said:

"George, do you know what you are doing?"

"Yes, sir."

"What do you want to do?"

"I want to be baptized."

"What for, my son?"

"Because Jesus tells me to be."

And this is about all that the wisest and best know about it. Jesus says so—that is enough. Yet, in this age of latitude and expediency, and great anxiety to have numbers, no matter where they come from, or how they come, I think we need a check, such as you may be giving to our brethren. I know a few preachers among us who would open the doors wide open and receive sprinkled, poured, immersed—or even without any baptism—if it were not for a few old fogies who are a thorn in their flesh. I have already written too much, but cannot close without telling you that your opposition to missionary societies, organs, and general progression away from the simple teachings of the Scriptures, I fully endorse, and bid you God speed. One fault I find, the same I have often told our dear Bro. Lipscomb, you are too rough with your antagonist. Show them some quarter and perhaps they will see their errors sooner.

Your Brother in Christ,

V. M. METCALF.

I have dashed this off at random, in a hurry. If you wish to publish only that about Bro. Johnson do so, or all, as you think best.

V. M. M.

[We thank this dear brother for his kind words. We admit that there is some ground for his objection to our "roughness." We are not sure that we ought to offer any apology for it; but we beg him and other brethren to remember that it would take almost a perfect man to stand against the torrent of opposition, swollen and maddened by the hatred, spite, and all manner of evil that our opponents can bring to bear against us, without losing control of himself sometimes. As to what Bro. M. says about the validity of the baptism of those who are baptized without knowing its scriptural design, we will offer no criticism here. He will find that idea combatted elsewhere. May God's blessing ever attend him and all other

J. J. McFarley

ONE LORD, ONE FAITH, ONE BAPTISM.

The reader will please read the first six verses of the fourth chapter of Paul's letter to the Ephesian brethren. He wrote this letter while in prison suffering some of the many things that the Saviour said he should suffer for His name's sake. Acts, ix: 16.

The apostle had preached to and converted these Ephesian brethren, had opened their eyes, turned them from darkness to light and from the power of Satan to God, and now he admonishes them, and through them all other brethren, as a Christian duty to endeavor to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. How could they keep the unity (or oneness) of the Spirit, there being but one spirit? Why by observing the teaching and being governed by the instruction of the Spirit, and that unity or oneness is set forth by the Saviour in His prayer (and He spake as He was moved or guided by the Spirit. Acts, i: 2.) when He prayed first for Himself, then for the apostles, that they might be one as He and His Father are one, then for all them, also, who shall believe on Him through their word that they all might be one as He and His Father are one, that the world might believe that God had sent Him. John, xvii. The Apostle Paul also admonishes the Corinthian brethren to keep or observe the same unity of the Spirit when he said to them: "Now, I beseech you, brethren, by the name (or authority) of our Lord Jesus Christ that you all speak the same thing and that there be no division among you, but that you be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment. 1 Cor., i: 10. He also exhorts the Philippian brethren to stand fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together (not apart) for the faith of the Gospel. Oh! brethren, are we giving heed to these admonitions? Are we speaking the same things? If so, how is it that some are speaking in favor of instrumental music in the worship and some against it; some in favor of missionary societies, some against them; some in favor of Bible colleges, some opposed to them; some in favor of Church fairs, festivals, etc., and some against them. But what things are they to speak? Why Peter says, "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God." 1 Pet., iv: 11. Now, where do the oracles of God speak about missionary societies, Bible colleges, Church fairs, festivals, etc.? Brethren, where? Simply nowhere. Then are not those who speak about and contend for them violating the law of the Lord and failing to give heed to the admonition of the Apostle to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace?

"There is one body and one Spirit." What body is it of which the Apostle is speaking? Not the physical or literal body of Christ, which was broken on the cross, but the Church (not Churches), which is His body. Proof. Paul says: "God has put all things under His (Christ's) feet and gave him to be head over all things to the Church, which is His body." Eph., i: 22-23; also, iv: 15-16, and v: 23; and in Col., i: 18, he says, "That He sages, to show that he was speaking of the Church (not Churches) of Christ.

"One Spirit." There is one Spirit that animates or gives life to that one body, or Church—the Holy Spirit. The Apostle James, speaking of a literal or physical body, says: "For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also." ii: 26. As it is with physical bodies so it is with other bodies. Take the spirit that gives them life out of them and they are dead, I care not whether it be political, scientific or religious bodies. To illustrate: Take the Democratic spirit out of the Democratic party or body and it is dead; take the Roman Catholic spirit out of the Roman Catholic Church and it is dead, and so with all the other sectarian bodies or Churches; and if you take the Spirit of Christ out of the Church or body of Christ it is dead. Hence Paul says, "Quench not the Spirit!" Thess., iv: 10. He is the same spirit that testifies in reference to Christ's being the Son of God and the Saviour of sinners, and that comforts the Christian in all his trials, tribulations and afflictions in this life, through His exceeding great and precious promises. Hence the apostle, as he was directed by the Spirit, says, "Wherefore comfort another with these things." 1 Thess., iv: 13-18. He is the same Spirit by which all that put on Christ are baptized into the one body, the Church. 1 Cor., xii: 13. How are persons baptized into the one body or Church by the Spirit? Does the Spirit take hold of them and put them under the water and lift them out? Why no, the preacher does that, but he is instructed to do it by the Spirit, and if he is a faithful preacher he will do as the Spirit tells him and not put a few drops of water on his or her forehead and call it baptism. Rom., vi: 4; Col., ii: 12. We see that Paul and Barnabas were sent out from Antioch by the Spirit in the same way, by His instruction. Acts, 13: 1-4.

"One hope," which the Christian has as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil: Heb., vi: 19.

"One Lord, or Law Giver," a fact which the religious world, especially preachers to a great extent, fail to recognize, for they are often getting up laws for the government of the Lord's people, and particularly in reference to raising money. The same Lord spoken of by the Psalmist David when he says the law of the Lord is perfect converting the soul. xix: 7; the same that Paul calls the "King of Kings and Lord of Lords." 1 Tim., vi: 15; and Peter says, "He is both Lord and Christ," Law Giver and Anointed Priest. Acts, ii: 36; and who says of Himself after He conquered death and rose from the grave, "All power or authority is given to Me in heaven and in earth." Matt., xxviii: 28. Oh! what a King and Law Giver the Christian's King is, and yet there are some who deny that He is a King or has a kingdom in the face of these and many other plain declarations of God's Word. It is strange what poor presumptuous man will do.

"Many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of His disciples, which are not written in this book; but these are written that you might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and believing that you might have life through His name. John, xx: 30-31, and that the Saviour spoke of in His prayer when He prayed that all who believed on Him through the words of the Apostles might be one, as He and His Father are one, that the world might believe that God had sent Him. John, xx: 30-31. And that Paul says, "Comes by hearing the Word (not of men) but of God. Rom., x: 17. And that he admonishes the Philippian brethren "With one mind to strive together (not apart) for." Phil., i: 27. And in speaking of the same faith he says: "My speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in the power of God." 1 Cor., 2: 4-5. The wisdom of men is foolishness with God, hence Paul did not want their faith to stand in that; but many of our brethren in this age seem anxious that the faith of others should stand in that, hence they are getting up their worldly wise institutions, such as missionary societies, Bible colleges, etc., and it is strange that not one of them can be prevailed on to show a single passage of Scripture to justify such things. I know they go into "philosophy and vain deceit," and far fetched inferences trying to sustain them. But not a thus, saith the Lord, do they produce, and some of them even go so far as to say they "Will become offended if further efforts are made to draw them into a discussion on these subjects." But, Bro. McGarvey, I see you are into it with Bro. W. L. Williams, and he seems to be getting the better of you, for he is in favor of both missionary societies and instrumental music in the worship, and upon the same principle that you justify missionary societies he will instrumental music in spite of you, and upon the same principle that you condemn instrumental music he will missionary societies, and upon the same principle that either of you can justify missionary societies, instrumental music in the worship or Bible colleges I can justify baby sprinkling or the Romish confessional. Now, Bro. McGarvey, if you don't believe me try me. But is it not strange that any of our brethren will say that they will become offended if they are called upon to show their authority for what they are engaged in and at the same time say they are engaged in a good work, and Paul says that the Scriptures furnish us to all good works? 2 Tim., iii: 17. Is it wrong, then, to call upon them for their authority? Is it not right? And if they become offended, like the Scribes and Pharisees did at Christ and the Apostles, whose fault is it?

"One baptism." About this item there is more controversy than all the others put together, and why? Not because the Scripture teaching on that subject is not plain, but because it is the act, with the right prerequisites, that brings the sinner into a saved state, and the wicked one, through his ministers, is trying to keep him out of that state by false teaching, but the Saviour says, Matt., vii: 15. "And Peter says, "As there were false prophets among the people, so shall there be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies (or divisions), even denying the Lord that bought them." 2 Pet., ii: 1. How do people deny the Lord? By denying His Word, spoken by Himself or through His Apostles. Look at the divisions that are gotten up in the religious world over this item of the faith by the teachers who fail to teach as the oracles of God. Some say sprinkling is baptism, some pouring, some that nothing is baptism unless the subject is dipped. Some say that either believers or unbelievers may be baptized, others that none but believers can be scripturally baptized. Some say that it is for, or in order, to the remission of sins, others that it is because of remission of sins and a door into the Church. But what is the one baptism of which Paul speaks, "To the law and the testimony." We will notice, first, the baptism of John a little. We learn from Matthew, iii: 11, that John baptized with or in the water unto, or in order to, repentance, that is, he told them that his baptism was for, or in order to, the remission of sins if they repented, and that was an inducement to them to repent that they might obtain remission in baptism, hence it was called the baptism of repentance (or that led to repentance) for the remission of sins. See Mark, i: 4; Luke, iii: 3. Those who submitted to John's baptism were evidently seeking a good conscience, the forgiveness of their sins; but they could not do that without understanding that baptism was for the remission of sins, and Luke says, in reference to John, "For thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways, to give knowledge of salvation unto His people by the remission of their sins," i: 76-77. How could he give them a knowledge of salvation by the remission of their sins? Why by telling them that if they would repent and be baptized their sins would be forgiven. That was God's message to them by his servant John and they believed it, and Bro. McGarvey says, in his commentary on Acts, that 1 Pet. 3: 21, speaking of baptism, should be translated: not the putting away the filth of the flesh, but the seeking of a good conscience.

Bro. McGarvey, how can people be seeking a good conscience in obedience to that act and not understand the design of it? Did the three thousand, on the day of Pentecost, understand what they were baptized for? If they did not, how do you understand it so well? and why are you so confident in your "debates" with others, and why do you labor so hard to make them understand it when they are just as well off without that understanding? Bro. McGarvey, the people need a little light along here. The Saviour, in the commission, put salvation, or pardon, after baptism, and Saul was told to "arise and be baptized, and wash away (or for the remission of) his sins, calling on the name or the authority of the Lord, all of which, with much other instruction on that subject, are portions of the word of the Kingdom, and the Saviour says, not, then cometh the wicked one and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart." Mat., xiii: 19. "But he that received seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word and understandeth it." Mat., xiii: 23.

A man tells me that he has believed in Christ with all his heart; has repented of his sins; has confessed with his mouth the Lord Jesus, and has been buried with him in baptism for the remission of sins, and asks me if his baptism is right, is scriptural, and I tell him yes. Another man comes along and tells me that he first repented, then believed, then confessed himself, by making "a statement" that he believed that God, for Christ's sake, had pardoned his sins, and was baptized because his sins were forgiven, and to get into the Baptist, or Methodist, or some other sectarian institution, and asks me if his baptism is right, is Scriptural, and I tell him yes, have I told the truth in both instances? If so, then I do not know what constitutes a lie. Now, should we accept the last man as having submitted to the one baptism? If so, then Paul was mistaken when he said "if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned except he strive lawfully." 2 Tim., ii: 5.

E. HANSBROUGH.

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 19, '86.

THE GOSPEL No. 2.

"Without faith it is impossible to please God," Heb. xi: 6. In this transitory life of vanity and vexation, without the influence of faith in the heart (we do not mean that "orthodox" moonshine called faith, but we mean what Paul defines faith to be: "Now, faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Heb. xi: 1), it is impossible for us to take the eyes of our affection off of temporal things, and fix them upon things that lie over, beyond the dark valley and shadow of death. Take science in all of her departments and avenues of knowledge, and although she may unlock secrets that have lain buried in the rocky bowels of the earth since the morning stars sang together, and survey the starry realms with mathematical exactitude and demonstration, she is utterly powerless to fasten the eyes of her votaries upon those objects which she acknowledges to lie over in the unseen world. "Without faith" this promised land and its adorable objects must ever, utterly and inevitably fail to engage the attention of the sojourners in this bustling, temporal domain. From the first opening of man's eyes till their vision is blunted by the glare of death, this world is wooing him with its attractions, allurements and blandishments, appealing to "the lust of his flesh, the lust of his eyes and the pride of his life." And if that history which began in the stable of Bethlehem and diffuses itself throughout the unparalleled conduct of its Author and Actor, from that and from that waking which demonstrated to an unbelieving world, that "the gates of hell could not prevail against it," nor any other soul that "does the will of God"—we say if this history does not cross the path of man's mind in this temporal pilgrimage, and engage, and deeply impress itself upon the senses of his intellect, his affections will never be transported beyond the confines of time and space, but will be wasted upon things that perish. He will sow to the flesh, and will reap the reward of the flesh, which is corruption. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal., vi: 7-8. Hence Paul wrote to the Roman brethren—who had heard, weighed and accepted this history, which acceptance in its turn became such a "power" in their minds and hearts that it "worked in them both to will and to do of God's good pleasure," which "pleasure" was, that they should "obey from their hearts a form of doctrine He had delivered to his chosen saints, and had bound in heaven—thus: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." Rom., viii: 1-2. God has always, under His dispensations, had a law for the forgiveness of sins. While His law for the forgiveness (or the rolling forward as some express it) of sins was in the shedding of typical blood, as it was, till Christ opened up the New and Living way, by the shedding of His own blood, God could not be "pleased" by any substitute that man might choose to offer instead. So it is now, under the reign of Christ; substitutes and will-worship pass for naught with God and His Christ. When the nails pierced the quivering flesh of Jesus of Nazareth, and pinioned his sinless form to the tree of the cross, they were also "nailing" the Old Covenant, which had God for its Author, to that same cross; and those same nails forever oppose their jagged points against all of the forms, substitutes and "doctrines and commandments of men," that worldly wise and foolish men may, in their blindness, inaugurate, and deceive others to "vainly" practice. Yes, there is a heaven-appointed law that liberates a soul from its thralldom to the guilt and consequences of its past sins, sins that were superinduced by "the spirit that worketh in the children of disobedience." But in order for this law to avail, it must "be obeyed from the heart." It all of its forms be complied with' and in their proper order, unless the obedience springs from faith in Christ, it profits nothing. "Without faith it is impossible to please God." Oh! how we would like to rivet this fact in its true, divine import, upon the mind of the reader. There is no room for proxies in this faith that "pleases God." Those who have grown up under the Sunday shadows of that "orthodox" superstition which passes current for Christianity, and who, though they may make the spacious chapels ring with their prayers every Sunday, are in the very blackness of darkness, "having no hope, and without God in the world." A man who cannot "give a reason of the hope that is in him"—a Scriptural reason, has no hope—no Scriptural hope. Since a fountain cannot rise higher than its head, these men can point to no higher hope than their false hope. Hence the teeming millions that are following them are blindly tramping in fancied security, the "broad way to death." They have a faith, but it is not "the faith and truth, that came by Jesus Christ." It is like their hope, false. They berate that faith that "comes by hearing the word of God." Rom., x: 17. That faith that is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Heb., xi: 1. That faith that John said the Scriptures were written to produce: "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his Disciples, which are not written in this book; but these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through His name," (or through his authority.) John, xx: 30-31. These teachers call this faith "historical faith," and so it is; and as Paul says there is "one faith," and these divine men recognize that "one faith" as "historical faith," their "saving faith" must save them for the black prince of darkness, if it saves at all. God grant that all honest persons who may be wasting their time and deceiving their souls by this delusion, may be induced to turn their minds back, and fix them upon Jesus of Nazareth, and grapple with the problems that come up in His history till they may decide at the court of their own individual judgment bar, that He was and is the Son of God; and then they will be ready to believe the same witnesses, when they tell that the binding power of earth is vested in them. Then, and not till then, will they believe and obey from their hearts the Gospel they preached. This hereditary respect that has passed from sire to son, and from mother to daughter, for the name Christ, without fixing the deep realities of "Christ and Him crucified" upon their hearts, has fell enn, question propounded by our Lord: "Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" If some great personage should rise up in some quarter of our globe in this day, and claim to possess knowledge of buried treasure to the amount of billions, come where on this continent, and should convince a hundred thousand Americans that what he claimed was true; and should furnish these one hundred thousand persons with specific written directions as to where they should go to each receive fifty thousand dollars, and should direct them all to the same point, do you suppose, reader, that these one hundred thousand persons would be found from Maine to California crying, lo! here, and lo! there is the place? No, you do not; but you would expect to find them all centered at the same point, and you would not be disappointed. So it is with reference to faith in Christ. He has furnished the testimony of His Christhood, given specific written instructions, where all who desire a share in His inheritance must come to receive a liberation from all that hinders them from that adoption, that makes them heirs, introducing them into that "narrow way" that leads to the abundant and everlasting enjoyment of this inheritance. His written instructions are so "plain that he who runs may read it;" and yet those who profess to believe all He says about it, with the instructions in their hands, are crying lo! here, and lo! there. What is the matter? Lack of faith! These conflicting cries have discouraged and disgusted thousands of honest persons, who would come to the point that Christ has fixed so plainly; but they have very rationally concluded that He must have been an imposter, instead of a true teacher, to have been the originator of all of this confusion. Such persons have not thought it possible for these honest people to be mistaken about Christ directing some here and some there. In conclusion, we say, without the slightest fear of successful contradiction, that when one believes in Christ, has real faith, that one will not be led by any man away from the teaching of the very men who furnished the testimony of His Christhood, the Apostles. No other kind of faith can "please God," because no other kind has the power in it to lead men and women out of the great, bustling thoroughfare of this world, into the "straight and narrow way," the "peculiar" way, the extreme way—because it is extreme, when tried by the human standard, the popular way of the world. That is why it is "impossible to please God without faith," because it is impossible to please Him without this "straight," "peculiar" and extreme way. And it is impossible for men and women to digress so far from their old habits, from the popular current in which they have been drifting so long, "without faith," without this soul arousing and moving principle, revealed through Christ, this principle that manifested itself in that revolution which marks the history of its early votaries, where it is said that they "sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need." And again: "And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; neither said any of them that aught of the things he possessed was his own; but they had all things common. And with great power gave the Apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus; and great grace was upon them all." Truly, it is doubtful if Christ would find this faith on the earth, were He to return now. To try to lift the affections and hopes of men and women to that inheritance that is promised only to those who break away from the popular courses of this world, without first firmly rooting true faith, historical faith, "Christ crucified" in their hearts, is as unreasonable as to expect to build a substantial building in mid-air, with no foundation but atmosphere. And yet this is the kind of foundation that many men and women, yes, by far the greater portion of them, are expecting to rear Christian character upon. For such a character as is "pleasing to God," "other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ"—that is, the Christ of the Scriptures, the Christ that demonstrated His right to promulgate a law, and did promulgate it through chosen men, and "bound it in heaven." Not the Christ that breeds and glorifies division among men by the propagation of innumerable creeds and confessions of delusive faiths. Not the Christ whose Disciples are crying lol here, and lol there; nor the Christ who excuses the honest ignorance of those who have counterfeited some of the ordinances of Jesus of Nazareth. These are all false Christs, and we should not "go after them." But the true Christ who sent his Apostles to preach His Gospel, and promised salvation to those who believed that Gospel, and obeyed it; and threatened condemnation to those who did not believe what they preached. Reader, do you believe with all your heart, the record God has given of His Son, through the word of the Apostles? or are you frittering away the day, standing only on the "sandy foundation" of hereditary respect? If on the latter, every time you make an effort to look up to that higher life, the sand will give way under you. "It is impossible to please God without faith."

MIXED.

Bro. Poe, in giving an account of a meeting held by himself and Bro. Castleman, five miles from Prairieville, has this to say about it:

"Bro. Castleman had given me out and closed his meeting, being too sick to continue; but as a big crowd had gathered there on Lord's day, I preached to them. Bro. Castleman's work at this place resulted in one baptism, two from the Baptists (shaken in) and one mourner. The mourner came forward at the very first invitation and knelt at the bench. At the same time another lady came forward and began to labor with her, trying to help her through. This came near upsetting Bro. Castleman. He did not know just how to work the mourner's bench, and so he fell back on the old plan, and tried to convince the lady that she must be saved by the Gospel, and in the same way that the people were saved in olden times. But she could not see it that way, and as she could not go to Christ through a mourner's bench, she would not go at all."

Bro. Castleman shirked his duty when he refused to try to work that lady through by the mourner's bench system. He believes that those who pass through the water, whether by the mourner's bench route or any other, are baptized into Christ. This being true, it is optional with the seeker which route he or she may choose. For a man to recognize two ways of coming into Christ, and then refuse to assist one who happens to choose between these two ways, is for him to set his own preferences up against that right which God grants to men and women. Who is Bro. Castleman, that he can "withstand God"? Again, what does Bro. Poe mean by saying that Bro. Castleman "tried to convince the young lady that she must be saved by the Gospel, and in the same way that the people were saved in olden times?" Were these two Baptists that were "shaken in" saved as the people were in olden times? If so, give us the proof. And when you furnish the proof, we shall want to know if she was not traveling the same route they traveled. Did they not reach the water through the mourner's bench route? In giving this report, it shows clearly that a Baptist preacher would have done more for Christ at that meeting than both of these brethren, if Baptists bring persons into Christ as these brethren teach. A Baptist preacher would have worked her into the water. Again, what does he mean by saying that Bro. C. tried to convince the young lady that she must be saved by the Gospel? Is not the Gospel the three facts of Christ's death, burial and resurrection? This is what these brethren teach. Then why talk about her being saved by this? What persuasion did she need on this? Did she not accept these three facts as freely and fully as these two preachers? Give us some real, true light on these dark spots, my brother, if you please. Why could the lady "not go to Christ through a mourner's bench?" Is God a respecter of persons? Did not those two that were "shaken in" go that way? Ah! if some Baptist preacher had been there you would have stood off mutely, while he respected the ladies' wishes and God's approval (if your doctrine is true), and worked her through. Then you would have virtually approved his work by receiving her, just as he left her, into the church. This course is like a man who is too honest to steal, but when another steals he will help enjoy the fruits of the theft.

A. McG.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I wish to ask you a few questions to be answered through the columns of the F. F. Bro. McCarty has been preaching for us here at Midway for about two years. Not long ago we had a meeting, to appoint Elders and Deacons. It was decided that there was not anyone capable of being an Elder; so here we are without an Elder or Deacon. Now for the question:

1. Has any of us any right to wait on the Lord's table, that is not suitable for an Elder?
 2. Will our worship be acceptable in the sight of God and our Savior Jesus Christ?
 3. Has a Disciple of Christ any right to join any human institution, such as Farmers' Alliance, prohibition societies, etc.?
 4. Has a Christian any right to hold office, such as justice of the peace, county commissioner, etc.?
- Please give scriptural answers, and by doing so you will do me, and probably many others, good, for many of our brethren are joining the said Farmers' alliance and other secret organizations. May God bless you and your efforts in sounding the pure Gospel; may men and women believe and obey it from the heart, is my prayer.
- A. BROTHER.
Midway, Texas.

Questions 1 and 2. Yes; we suppose that any member in good standing could attend to this duty; if not, we are at a loss to know why not. If this ordinance were to be dispensed with everywhere till true, Scriptural Elders could be found in the Churches to administer it, we opine that the Lord's death would be shown forth in but few localities in Texas. Yet, this thought is entitled to no weight if there is any Scripture to support the contrary view.

Questions 3 and 4. Most of these questions have been asked us by many brethren this month. We believe that Paul's language to Timothy covers all of these points: "No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier." We believe that all such organizations are called into existence by that very principle of brotherhood that is in man's nature, and, which would be fully met in a true band of Disciples of Christ, living in loyalty to the Great Head. We do not believe that it is well pleasing to God, to see His sons and daughters seeking other associations and combinations than those found where he has provided for "all things that pertain unto life and Godliness." (2 Peter, i: 3.) It would not be right to do, as a member of any of these human institutions, what might not be done as a member of the church. Then what may be done by Christians, as members of and in the Alliance, temperance society, Masonic lodge, etc., may be done as members of and in the church. Doubtless many good brethren differ from us on these points, which is their right, and we shall not fall out with them about it; but we do believe if the church was living as it should, that no Christian would be found taking part in any of these institutions, or desiring to. If Christians may take part in all of these human organizations, and hold office in Cæsar's government, and be filled with the spirit of politics, wherein will that "peculiarity," that is to mark them, consist? On this point we invite attention to an article by Bro. Durst, in another column. Read it. We think it is worthy of a careful weighing by all political Christians.

SPIRITUAL DARKNESS.

Dixon Williams, a popular Presbyterian revivalist, has been preaching in Austin this week. Night before last he opened up in the temporary capitol building. He had one corner fenced off with curtains. At the conclusion of his discourse, which was drawn from Naaman's case, he called on his brethren to go out in the congregation and persuade their friends to go into his curtained cloister. The signal for this jerking, scuffling, pulling and hauling programme, was the song; but when the song commenced, to Mr. Williams' surprise, the Holy Spirit, which had been plead for so importunately to move upon the hearts of his brethren, failed to manifest Himself in the work; for not one of the sisters budged a peg towards jerking the audience. This failure of the Holy Spirit to take part in the work seemed to throw the evangelist into a fit of rage, and he dismissed the audience very unceremoniously, and vented his pent up animus upon his sisters. Poor things! we sympathized with them, as they were being stung by the keen cuts of his theological lash. They were not to blame for the Spirit's failure to move upon them. But last night the effort to live things up was more successful, and a few were inveigled into his monastic corner.

He went in then and lifted his voice lustily for God to come right then and "bless these three that are in here!" After snubbing and groaning and stirring up a little bedlam back there for a few minutes, he had them bewildered sufficiently to lead them at his will. So he called on them to "confess Christ before men;" hence he led them from behind the curtain, and while the organ and song were drowning out every other sound, he knelt down with them for a few moments at the entrance of his mystic trap, and it was all over! This mockery is passing for the preaching of the Gospel in the city of Austin, and is drawing an immense throng every night. There is no God, no Christ, no Holy Spirit, no reason, no revelation in it. It is as far from God and all that is holy as the basest superstition that ever was mentioned in the darkest corner of heathendom that the foot of man ever trod upon. Why will people in a free Bible land, in the boasted light of the nineteenth century, suffer their souls thus trifled with? Oh! why will they? God grant that this thick darkness of superstition may be dispelled by the "true and marvelous light of the truth as it is in Jesus." A. McG.

Bro. Levi Spear has written us that he will soon move to West, in McLennan county. The people in that section need not "sit in darkness" any longer, after Bro. Spear locates among them, for he is a true, strong Gospel preacher—a "laborer worthy of his reward," and we hope the brethren in that section will "hold up his hands" while he is engaged in the good work of proclaiming the Gospel of Christ in their midst. Bro. Spear does not wait for the plan of ciphering out how much will be given for his services, to move him, but trusts in God's plan of, "all things working together for the good of them that love Him." God has put enough power in the Gospel to save sinners, and provide food, raiment and shelter for all men who will live a life of nonconformity to the world and preach that Gospel. Men who want things that Christians should not have, are bound to concoct plans and work by these plans to get these excesses. We are glad to know that such a true gospel man as Bro. Spear will be in watching distance of one of the focal points of the planners—Waco.

The Guide is gaining ground daily in Texas—Texas Dept. A. Guide. You are right about that. With such fast stepping fellows as you and C. McPherson to measure and direct its "progress," what is to prevent it from "gaining ground"? It commenced about the "Old Paths," but it has kept gaining and gaining till it is about now neck and neck with Major Penn's sagged legs, and with the Methodist Conference system. If McPherson hadn't gotten in Clined to another organ, he would doubtless have had the Guide in the very middle of the "broad way" by this time. But you will get it there before long. McP. is faster than you, only because his legs are longer. Your heart is as loyal—to mammon as his.

INFANT BAPTISM.

Justin Martyr, Irenæus, Polycarp, Origen, Cyprian, and a host of others, bear united testimony to the fact that infants were admitted into the church by baptism, and that this practice rests upon the authority of the universal church, and as it had been delivered by the Lord and his Apostles. And thus it continued until about the beginning of the sixteenth century, when a few extremists arrayed themselves against it.

Those who put themselves in opposition to this doctrine do so on the ground that there is no command to baptize children, and that children are incapable of exercising faith and repentance. Will they be so kind as to answer the following:

There is no command requiring women to receive the Lord's supper. Shall they, therefore, be debarred the privilege? If they are admitted to the holy communion without a command, why not admit infants to the sacrament of baptism?

There is no command requiring the observance of the first day of the week as a day of rest and worship. Shall we, therefore, refuse to observe it?

We provide, as far as we are able, for the bodily comfort and well being of our children, notwithstanding the fact they know nothing of what we are doing, and shall we refuse to avail ourselves of the spiritual blessings which are so freely offered for their benefit?

If faith and repentance, in every case, are essential to salvation, then what is to become of infants? The opposers of this doctrine prove too much.

If we take from the church the right of admitting her children (infants) into her fold by baptism, we must then believe that the tender and liberal dispensation of the gospel is less indulgent than the rigorous dispensation of the law, for under the latter they were admitted. We must further believe that the sweet innocence of the new-born babe is less acceptable to God than the penitence of the hoary-headed sinner; that while they who are mature are required to become as little children, before they can enter into the kingdom of God, little children are excluded from the kingdom for the simple reason that they are children. More than this—awful thought!—we must stand by the graves of our little ones and have no covenanted assurance of their salvation and immortality! For if they are cut off from admission into the church militant, what certainty can there be of their admission into the church triumphant?

Nineteen-twentieths of the religious world believe in the doctrine of infant baptism. They accept it as being of divine authority, and that the accumulation of evidence is of the strongest character, and therefore they give to their little ones that which God has never denied them.

Those who do not believe the doctrine would do well to search the scriptures and carefully read the history of the church from the beginning, and while so doing bury their prejudices entirely out of sight.—Texas Churchman.

As the Churchman and the FIRM FOUNDATION pass through the same press, and as they both claim to be disseminating the unadulterated gospel of Christ, and as we of the F. F. have thus far failed to find any authority in the scriptures for "infant baptism," and have for this reason "arrayed ourselves against it," and have therefore fallen under the Churchman's charge of "extremists," we beg a little light of you on the question. Now, it is right that we should impart light and information to all who desire it, when we have been favored with larger measures of it than they. So the Churchman will please give us a ray on this point, instead of keeping it "under a bushel." Remember, my friend, that Justin Martyr, Irenæus, Polycarp, Origen, Cyprian, and the "host" you mention, whatever they may say on this or other questions, can furnish us no light except as they may reflect that "true light." If they speak not according to the words of the law and the testimony of the saints, to whom "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" was delivered, it is because "there is no light in them." These fathers, though renowned they be, came upon the stage of action from the first quarter of the second century to the last quarter of the third, I believe. At any rate, they were a little too late to add anything to that economy which, in the wisdom of God, "gives us all things that pertain unto life and Godliness"; "thoroughly furnishes us unto all good works." Now if the Lord had said of these fathers, as He did to and of His chosen Apostles, "Whatever you bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatever you loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven," we would be ready and anxious to hear from them; but as this matter stands, we are careless about what these fathers say, for in these matters we are determined to know no man after the flesh.

Our Lord did not pray for those who believe on him through the words of Justin Martyr, Irenæus, Polycarp, etc., but He did pray for those who believe on Him through the words of Peter, Paul, John, James, Jude, and other Apostles of His choosing.

Again, it is best to settle one question at a time. We do not claim that there is a positive, direct and express command for women to take part in the communion of the Lord's supper; nor for the observance of the Lord's day. But authority is derivable in other ways than through express command. If, after you show us the authority for infant baptism, you want light on these other points, all you need to do is to say so, and we hereby promise to furnish it. If you show scriptural authority for infant baptism, then it is an imperative duty of all parents to baptize their infants. We have a dear little two months old daughter that is a sunbeam of the whole household. Now if this dear little girl is a sinner against God, I want to know it. And if God has authorized her baptism, she shall be "buried with Christ in baptism" as soon as I am apprised of those facts. It is your duty, my friend, under these circumstances, to show me the light and turn me from the error of my way. If my baby is lost, the responsibility is yours, if you know of this authority and do not point it out to me. You say: "Those who do not believe the doctrine would do well to search the scriptures and carefully read the history of the church from the beginning, and while so doing bury their prejudices entirely out of sight."

Now there are too many churches for us to read the history of them all. You would have us to read the history of the Episcopal church; another the Methodist church, etc., etc., until there would be no end to our labor. We have already "searched the scriptures," and have failed to find it. Now, my dear sir, the shortest way is for you, who know right where it is, to point it out. Do let us have it. We hereby bind ourselves to "bury all prejudices out of sight." Come on! If we do not believe in infant baptism how does it follow that we "believe that the sweet innocence of the new-born babe is less acceptable to God than the penitence of the hoary-headed sinner"? It seems to us that this is your trouble. We believe that their innocence, without a drop of water, is acceptable to God; but you seem to think that their sweet innocence passes for naught with God till some presumptuous priest sprinkles a few drops of water in their innocent faces. We have stood by the grave of one of our innocent babes, that had never received this Romish rite, and yet we had a "covenanted assurance of his salvation and immortality," in those words which say: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Again, you seem to think, as nineteen-twentieths of the religious world believe in the doctrine of infant baptism, that therefore it is right. Nineteen-twentieths, and far more, believed that Christ was an imposter. Did that make him one? Nineteen-twentieths of the old world were on one side, and Noah and his family were on the other; which side was right? A. McG.

J. J. Honeygar

Dear Bro. McGary: I wish I could send many names, but oh, how unpopular the truth is! I have been much alarmed lest the F. F. might stop. Many, who claim to be in the body, call us Christadelphians, and say that we will be ashamed of the F. F. in less than two years. But I pray and work for its success. I am truly glad to know that there are some bold soldiers of the cross who fear not to declare the whole counsel of God. Oh, my brother! hew to the line, and spare not, for I do believe the Lord has raised you up to save His church; and may you live long on the earth to work for the Master, is the prayer of a mother in Israel. Bro. Mc., give us a lesson on Christians joining the Farmers' Alliance, as some of our leading members belong to it who read the F. F. N. C. R.

This dear old sister has spent many years in the kingdom of Christ. Her kind and approving words to us are the more comforting and encouraging to us because she has known us from childhood, on up through the earlier part of our ill spent manhood. In this same letter she sent us ten names and $10. We hope that she, nor others, will ever have occasion to be ashamed of the FIRM FOUNDATION till they become so unlike Paul that they will be "ashamed of the Gospel of Christ." Those who call "the friends of the F. F., Christadelphians, either do so from a wicked, misrepresenting spirit or from ignorance—perhaps both.

While we believe, too, that God has raised us up to do the very work we are doing, we do not believe, as some might understand, that this raising up was through any other means than the Gospel. It is God's will that we should will and do His good pleasure. So it is with all. And all who will receive the Gospel of Christ in their hearts and be guided by it, and go to work in whatever sphere is best, the Gospel will guide him right where God wants him to go. If he says or does things that he ought not—as we often do—then he is taking the matter in his own hands; for the Gospel never leads people to do what they ought not to do. But if there be the proper love and reverence for the Gospel in his heart, he will turn back from the evil way to doing God's good pleasure, for that is what the Gospel will work in him to will and to do.

We understand that Brother Grubbs withstood State Evangelist Bush to the face, at Temple, a few days ago, because he was to be blamed. He wanted filthy lucre so badly that he called on some of the brethren to adopt the Methodist hat plan on the audience. But Bro. Grubbs protested against that course; whereupon the State Evangelist found him a Methodist who hated the crowd for him. These progressive digressives are stepping along so rapidly that they will soon out-Methodist the Methodists. Bro. Bush is finding some up-hill work in introducing "progressive" tactics, and there are some still steeper places for him to climb in Texas, if he attempts to canvass the State. No wonder he has dropped on the district plan, and appointed focal points. He surrounds himself with the progressives in this way, and is not disturbed by the old fogies. Thus he has a few days of frolic at these focal points, if he fails to raise any funds. This is more pleasant to him than to be bumped over the rough hills, to meet the sharp edges of the Sword of the Spirit, and be driven off empty and pierced, even to the dividing asunder of the joints of his whole State machinery. If the brethren will all treat him as Bro. Grubbs did at Temple, they will make short work of his disloyal methods.

FAITH CURE.

In the days of the Apostles, when any were sick, the Holy Spirit instructed that the Elders should be sent for, and they would "anoint the sick with oil and pray over them, and the Lord would raise them up." But our friend and brother-in-law, W. H. Kittrell has got it down to a finer point than that, up in Erath county. Even the women up there, under his spiritual tutelage, can "raise them up by anointing them and praying over them. In this day of progress these gifts have passed from the elders to the ladies. We learn that when the oil is not handy, by being a little extra in the importunity of their prayers they raise them by prayer alone.

The doctors of medicine had as well begin to hunt fields for their pill business; for when these doctors of divinity begin to move on their business with these powers, and divide out these gifts to the ladies, materia medica has seen its best days in that quarter. Will has tried for a long time to convince us that these powers could be brought into requisition if we only had sufficient faith. We have never had that degree of faith yet. We are a sort of a Thomas on that point, and have been upbraided much by him for our unbelief; but we love him as a dear friend, and it would only require the proof to disciple us to that faith. Bring on your proof, Will.

Some time back, some brother wrote to us to try to get the railroad company to give free transportation for a part of a car load of produce for the drought sufferers in Western Texas. But we mislaid the letter, and have never come across it again. There was considerable confusion at our house during the past month, anyhow, occasioned by sickness in our family. If the eye of the writer of that letter should fall on this, he may understand why we did not answer him. We hope he (whoever he is—for we have forgotten name, place, and all but the fact that we received such a letter) has long since found a way to send his liberality to where it was needed.

FOR DROUGHT SUFFERERS.

Since our last issue we have received the following amounts for the drought sufferers:
From the Church at Woodland, California, through T. S. and E. W. Elston.....$23 00
From R. T. Peck and wife, Kosse, Texas..... 1 75
Total.....$24 75
MINERAL WELLS, Texas, Nov. 20, 1886.

A. McGary, Austin, Texas,

Dear Bro:—I hereby acknowledge the receipt of yours of the fourteenth instant, containing post office order for $24.75, for which you will please accept the thanks of this congregation. It is the only response to the appeal we made, as yet, and I fear some will suffer in the extreme yet. I assure you it will be distributed to them this day. May the good Lord bless you in all your efforts to do good in this life, and in the end give you a righteous man's reward, is our daily prayer. Your Bro. in the one faith,

W. W. Hood.

Since making out the statement above, we have received $5 through Bro. T. C. Mitchell, of Willow, Texas, from the Mt. Zion congregation, for the drought sufferers. We will send this, also, right forward to Bro. Hood; to be used as directed.

SOW INCORRUPTIBLE SEED AND CULTIVATE PROPERLY.

"Be instant in season, out of season."

Dear brethren, as another year is almost numbered with the past, and as we must soon bid it adieu forever, perhaps it is not out of order to write a few thoughts upon the above language of Paul.

While life is full of changes and we are to some extent governed by circumstances, let us remember the promise of happiness is to those only who endure to the end.

It is with pleasure I note some changes that have occurred this year, and with much sadness I have to remember others.

And while I, with perhaps many others, have made some mistakes, it is with a view to correct them that I write to you on this occasion, hoping that we may learn lessons of the past that will help us to better direct our lives in the future.

Our Saviour while here, commanded the Apostles to teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Teaching them to observe all things I have commanded you; and lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Matt., xxviii, 19.

Paul says: I have begotten you through the gospel. 1 Cor., iv, 15. Again: Paul pronounced a curse upon man or angel who would preach another gospel. Gal., i, 8.

From the above we draw the following conclusions:

- 1. It is our duty to teach and baptize all who are willing to accept of the truth.
- 2. We then become their fathers in the gospel, and as it is the duty of fathers to bring up their children in the way they should go, so should we teach our children in the faith to observe all things commanded of God.

And if we fail to teach them to observe all things, we have not obeyed the command, and can not expect the blessing of God; if we teach them more than what is commanded, the curse of God is upon us.

Now, let us ~~draw~~ upon the above propositions:

- 1. We are commanded to teach and baptize by the authority of God. What for? Remission of sins. Acts, ii, 38. Therefore, if we receive into our fellowship those who have not been taught and baptized by the authority of God for the remission of sins, we become partakers with them, and are condemned. 2 John, ii, 8.

But, says one, must we become judges? No, no! Christ is judge, and has given you his word to go by, and has said his word is the seed of the kingdom. Luke, viii, 11.

Again: Christ prayed only for those who believe on Him through the word of the Apostles. John, xvii, 20. Now, we must remember that every kingdom has its own kind of seed, and will produce its own kind of fruit. Therefore, if I go out sowing Baptist, Methodist or Presbyterian seed, I shall reap what I sow. Gal., vi, 7. And in as much as we can baptize only believers, or receive those only who have believed on Christ through the teaching of the Apostles, and as these people have believed on him through these doctrines of man, or some death bed tale, or some mourner's bench hugging experience, all of which the Apostles did not teach, and as they have not believed on him aright, therefore we can not, consistently with the teaching of the Bible, receive them on their unscripural dipping.

Once more: By one Spirit we are all baptized into one body; that is, by the directions of one Spirit; and as the Spirit of God says nothing about these different bodies, and has never directed persons to baptize those who are already Christians, as they all teach, they are not baptized into the one body, neither can we receive or recognize them as such. You may say they have all believed on Christ, and have been baptized as some of us, but that will not help the matter, even if it was true; for they have not believed on him through the Apostles' word. It is a different kind of seed and will produce a different kind of fruit. What if they have been put under water, will that make them Christians? I can sow corn and cultivate the same ground for fifty years, and corn will be corn and cotton will be cotton, for every seed will produce fruit after its kind.

On the second proposition I will only say, as we become their father in the gospel, there are many duties resting upon us. If we baptize them and leave them in that condition, they are babes in Christ, and not able to feed themselves, and will soon perish and go back to the world; and as a father, in this life would be looked upon with contempt who would not provide for his children, so let us remember how our Heavenly father looks upon us when we fail to teach them to observe all things commanded by him. Hence the admonition to be instant in season, out of season.

I know many of us are in the habit of preaching during the summer and bringing many into the fold, then fail to teach them, and many go back to the world and bring reproach upon the church. Brethren, such should not be. As the dreary hours of winter have come again, so we can have but few public meetings, let us not forget to go from house to house and instruct all young converts to hold out faithful, so they may be ready to help us in the great work next summer, and will not be to convert again. But let us be careful what we teach them. We can not teach them to organize in societies unknown to the word of God; we can not teach them to shake people in from the sects. We can teach them none of the innovations nor inconsistencies practiced by many of our brethren, without bringing the condemnation of God upon us.

But let us teach them to be instant in season, out of season. Let us teach them to do good while we have opportunity. Let us teach them to live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God, and He will bless us in this life and in the life to come. May God help us to be faithful and do more good in the years to come than we have this year, is our prayer.

THE LOVE OF MONEY.

"But godliness with contentment is great gain; for we brought nothing into the world, and neither can we carry anything out; but having food and covering we shall therewith be content. But they that desire to be rich, fall into temptation and a snare, and many foolish and hurtful lusts, such as drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil; which some reaching after, have been led astray from the path, and have pierced themselves through with many sorrows." 1 Tim., vi: 6-10, Revised Version.

I want every Christian to read the above quotation very carefully. It seems that many have either overlooked this Scripture or have failed to give heed to its teaching. From a standpoint of worldly gain there is no difference between many Christians (so-called) and those who make no pretensions to Christianity.

Man's desire for money increases in proportion to his success in accumulating. The more he gets the more he wants. He is not content with food and raiment, but he desires to be rich and falls into temptation, and many foolish and hurtful lusts, such as drown men in destruction. Oh! brethren, let us be careful, lest this desire grows on us to such an extent that it will completely overcome us.

If all professed Christians would really stand on the Lord's side, what a grand army there would be con-

But instead of that many are reaching after riches, and are led astray from the faith; and will realize when too late that they have pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

Who will answer the important inquiry: "What will it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul, or what shall he give in exchange for his soul?"

With food and raiment let us therewith be content; and if we have more than a living, let us give it to the cause of Christ.

Now, let us look at the condition of the Church of Christ, in regard to money matters. The popular "pastors" are, for the love of money, supplanting the Scriptural bishops, and introducing their human catch-penny expedients, and are thereby creating division and carnality. In this condition they are as surely in a state of condemnation and sin as was the church at Corinth. See 1 Cor., iii: 1-4.

Again, Paul says: "The carnal mind is at enmity against God; it is not subject unto his laws, neither indeed can be." How careful, oh! how careful we should be, not to divide the Disciples of Christ, lest we become the enemies of God. Some brethren very earnestly oppose all innovations, but are as far astray practically as those whom they oppose.

Nearly all of our editors teach the Gospel through a few columns of their paper, and the remainder is filled with advertisements, and some of them gross frauds. Thus, for the love of money, they barter off their columns, advertise fraudulent houses and lend their influence in palming off frauds upon their readers. They actually aid their advertisers in deceiving their readers, and by so doing become partakers of their sins. Some of our religious papers advertise things that even secular papers refuse, such as the "Standard Silverware company," "Four per cent Long Loans," "T. S. Gardner," "True & Co., Augusta, Maine, etc.

Deal with these companies, fail to get what you send for, write to the editors, and they will tell you they are very sorry for your loss, and add that they make the utmost efforts to keep out such advertisements.

Is this true, brethren? Can you not keep them out? Could you not refuse to advertise at all, and keep them out that way? Well, but you say, "the paper would not pay if we did not advertise." Pay! pay! is that what you are working for? Just so it pays expenses, and makes you a living, is all that you should desire. Remember, "The love of money is the root of all evil."

I had rather pay $2 per year for the Gospel Advocate or the A. C. Review, once a month, filled with good reading matter, than to pay that amount for them filled with advertisements as they now are. Brethren, let us have pure literature or none. We must not do evil that good may come.

What would you think of a preacher who would preach forty-five minutes, and then for a few dollars stand and talk fifteen minutes longer, about the merits of Dr. J. H. McLean's strengthening cordial and blood purifier? Would he not act as consistently as you do in filling up your columns with so many spurious catch-penny advertisements?

Brethren, remember that covetousness is idolatry, and that idolators cannot enter the kingdom. Remember, too, that all liars shall have their part in that lake which burns with fire and brimstone. I say to the F. F. to go on in your good work, and never, for any consideration, allow advertisements to enter your columns. Keep thyself pure, and may God bless you. Would to God I could impress the responsibility resting upon all Christians.

Yours for the truth,

CHRISTIANITY AND POLITICS.

Since the contest for worldly honor has, for the present, somewhat subsided, we can venture a few suggestions that, we hope, will be weighed in the light of divine truth.

My first suggestion is that religion and politics, like oil and water, will not mix. There is always a dividing line between them. I once bought a can of oil (it was not all oil) that was about half water. We always knew when the oil was consumed—the lamp went out. So it is with those who are filled with politics and religion—their religion soon burns out and the lamp goes out. It would be very difficult to find a Christian that entered the recent contest for political fame who came out shining with scintillations from the pure oil of unadulterated truth. Our Bro. Aten, editor of the Texas department of the Guide, notwithstanding he was a candidate himself, clearly acknowledges the corrupting influence of politics. In his editorial note of November 19, he says:

"If any of us have been led away by the delusion and snare of politics, it is a good time now to clothe ourselves in sackcloth and throw ashes on our heads as the heat and excitement are over."

Yes; and like our brother, if defeated, one ought to be prepared to commence at once the humbling process. But what about the successful ones? They have been elevated, both in themselves and in the estimation of the world; and it would be indeed too hard for them to stoop to the humbling process suggested by Bro. Aten. Besides, two years in Caesar's government will about exhaust all the oil of love and devotion to the Master, and leave a mind filled with politics and worldly desires generally.

My second suggestion is that politics produces alienation among brethren. If every case of this kind produced by even the recent contest was brought to light, it would be a fearful spectacle. I know a number of them myself. Brethren who once loved each other are now alienated. Some congregations that worked in peace and love are now inactive and dying. This causes us to inquire into the reason for this, and opens the way for our third and last suggestion. It is contrary to the Scriptures of divine truth for Christians to become politicians.

Paul taught Timothy that "no soldier on service entangleth himself in the affairs of this life; that he may please him who enrolled him as a soldier." (N. V.) 2d Tim., ii: 4.

Now, when brethren entangle themselves in politics (things of this life) and produce alienation and strife, is it not evident that they have stepped aside from the service of the Master? (Christians are admonished to keep on the whole armor of God, and to take the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God; and when they do this their entire time and service will be given to the work of the Lord. Remember, brethren, that "Christ gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." Titus, ii: 14.

Many things could be presented under each of the above suggestions, but will let these suffice for the present. If any political brother thinks his course sustained by the Scriptures, we would like to read his defense. J. S. D.

Editor Firm Foundation:

I see from recent reports by our Bro. John T. Poe, that from the way he is alluding to the current practice of "shaking in the Baptists" among our brethren, that he, too, has abandoned that unscriptural procedure. When was he baptized, and by whom? Glad to see him falling into line. Still they come. JOHN.

Write and ask him, my brother; we have not heard of his being baptized; but we, too, had noticed his allusions to the practice of receiving the Baptists on their unsanctified ducking, as "shaking them in." We have been much alarmed about him, because we know him to be usually so clear headed that we feared that his persistence in opposing the truth sprang from an error in the wrong place, rather than of the head. All conscientious opposers of the organ and the missionary society will ultimately accept the truth on this question. They must either lose their sincerity of heart, their minds, their present views of the organ and missionary society, or their opposition to our teaching. Some of these changes are inevitable. A. TO THOSE PAID TO THE END OF THE YEAR.

With this issue the time of about one thousand of our subscribers expires. We hope, however, that they will all renew, and in sending up their renewals send us many new names. To any of them who will send up three new names, and $3, we will give a free copy for one year. The termination of Zeke Jackson's "experience with the pastor" will more than compensate those who are willing to see the absurdities of the shaking theory, for the price they may pay for a year's subscription. Besides, we hope to improve the paper in many respects, from time to time, during the incoming year. Brethren, we need your support in the work. Respond promptly if you please.

OUR "pastor," who has kicked up such a rumpus with the "Jacksons," seems to bank high on several of our leading men. We recognized some of his language as that of some of our prominent brethren, and marked it. These plagiarisms—for such they are—will be found italicized. It is strange how our young "pastors" will seek to justify themselves by the words of our Bible college professors, and our popular editors. Why do they not store their minds with the word of the Lord?

THIS issue ends the time of our 25 cent subscribers. Many of them have assured us they will renew. Doubtless the greater portion of them will. We hope they all will. Send on, brethren, promptly, so as not to miss the January issue.

TRUTH.

TO ALL THE BRETHREN AND SISTERS IN CHRIST.

Take courage, dear brethren,
The Lord is your friend,
And He will sustain you
Till your stewardship shall end;
And then you'll remember
He said in His word
"Your labor is never In vain in the Lord."

The battle is raging,
But Truth is the same;
'Twill overcome error
And put it to shame.
With the sword of the Spirit
And courage to fight,
You'll vanquish dissenters
And put them to flight.

The world with its votaries
Will ever oppose
The Truth and its colleagues,
And join with its foes.
Be steadfast, dear sisters,
Contend with your might,
The victory'll be ours,
The triumph of right.

Truth is invincible
And will not succumb
To perversion, no matter
From whence it may come;
And all its defenders
Fresh strength will receive From God, if they'll ask Him
His assistance to give.

MR. REAGAN'S ARTICLE.

Editor Firm Foundation:

With mingled pleasure and disgust, I have just been reading the November number of your paper. I rejoice to know that any person denounces the shameful church fairs, festivals and various gambling schemes practiced by the modern fashionable churches. But it is rather difficult to excuse those who build upon the firm foundation of the word of God, as expressed by your dynamiting anathemas against organs and instrumental music in churches, since an inspired pen so highly commends and urges the people to worship God in that way. See Ps. 150, "Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind."

In your trip to Midway you compliment me very much, by advertising my wonderful success in Madison county. The people preferring to go six miles to attend my meeting rather than remain with "you-uns," and hear the same instruction for allans, is certainly no fault of mine. You say, "some" being better instructed, were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. Why did you not say "one?"

It is hardly necessary for me to deny setting a time, while at Midway, to pay either my respects or disrespects to Campbellism, or that I said water baptism was not designed for civilized people, or that I called to the audience for help when immersing a candidate. I suppose there is not a single individual at Midway who will tell you that I said or did any such things. If the Bible does not teach water baptism (as you represent me as saying) then this ordinance was designed for no one—not even the uncivilized. Oh! criticism, what an inconsistency! Writers should know whereof they affirm. The continued shameful wrangling at Midway led me to deliver a lecture on the subject of baptism. It was my respects to that subject, not to so-called Campbellism. I now have the manuscript which I read and commented on, and no one can truthfully say I either ridiculed or ignored the sacred ordinance of baptism. True, I gave my opinion, which was based upon many arguments, that probably the ordinance should have ceased after the nations became Christianized. The perpetuity of the Lord's Supper is spoken of, but where do we read that baptism should be perpetuated, to wrangle about till the Lord comes again? If this ordinance was designed as an oath of allegiance, why should it be perpetuated, except to make disciples of the nations?

Every one present knows that I did not call for help at the river. I did say McCarty insulted me, and his remark was equivalent to saying I had lied. I so considered it, and told him I did, but do not remember that he denied, or made satisfactory acknowledgments, when I got up to leave him. I still say I have no talk for him on any subject, until he proves himself more gentlemanly in his address. Such a man, if he had truth, would drive some of us away rather than draw us toward him.

I stated (and I repeat it) if any one will show me where the Bible plainly teaches four conditions for the pardon of sins, viz: faith, repentance, confession and baptism, and that immersion in water is that baptism; I would surrender and make application for membership with the so-called Campbellites. No discussion is necessary; only give me the chapter and verse; I want no opinions, but simply the plain word of God. I am referred to John, iii: 5. But who knows that being born of water means baptism? That is a wild guess. In Rom. vi: 3, and Col. ii: 12, who will dare say that water baptism is plainly expressed? I can never certainly so understand these passages. By comparing I Cor. xii: 13, we can make a reasonable conjecture. I am also referred to Acts, ii: 38. But surely any one makes a wild guess to think of water baptism here, for the baptism of repentance is preached for the remission of sins. Mark, i: 4. Surely St. Peter and Paul know very well how an alien could get rid of his sins, at least as well as any before the light of the nineteenth century dawned. They did not mention but one condition—faith. See Acts, x: 43, and xiii: 38, 39. You may call me "false teacher," fool or thief, but thank the Lord you nor your "striker" McCarty, is to be my judge. I stand or fall to my own Master. If you were inspired, and so acknowledged, you might be excusable for your harsh judgment and criticism.

I told Bro. Mitchell I was willing to have a quiet conversation with you, but I was compelled to hasten to my appointment immediately after preaching, the day when you were present. So, you see, your boasting was unnecessary. I can give you the names of many so-called Christians who will tell you that I always give your sort the best "cleaning up" I can, but don't wish to be insulted.

Now, then, you will please accept a piece of good advice from one who has so patiently written you—Either do better, or change the name of your paper to the Rotten Foundation.

Now, then, let us get right, remain so, be kind to all, and do all the good we can.

H. M. REAGAN.

Mr. Reagan rejoices to see any one oppose church fairs, festivals, etc., but when we oppose instrumental music in the churches he calls that "dynamiting anathemas." He refers to Psalms CL to sustain the use of the organ in the worship. Well, let's consult his proof text: "Praise him with the sound of the trumpet; praise him with psaltery and harp. Praise Him with the timbrel and dance; praise him with stringed instruments and organs. Praise Him upon the loud cymbals; praise Him upon the high sounding cymbals." Ps. CL: 3-5. Now, there is a rule of logic that, that which proves too much proves nothing; hence if this Scripture proves that we should use the organ it proves also that we should use the trumpet, psaltery, harp, timbrel, stringed instruments—which would include the fiddle, banjo, Guitar, etc.—and loud and high sounding cymbals. Oh, my!

What a musical time one could spend at Mr. Reagan's church. And this Scripture demands dancing, too! Why, he must be a converted dancing master. Mr. Reagan please let us know when you get your musical troupe thoroughly organized for your Midway church, we want to come down and see how it works. You have one good fiddler to start on. We used to play with him in our rollicking days; but he is honest, and I am sure he is conscientious in his recent religious professions, and you will have to convince him that the Lord demands it or he will not draw a bow for you in the worship; but convince him and he will do you good service. This grand concert that David demands(?) will work splendidly for the Methodist church, if you will convince those Midway and Madisonville Methodists that it is demanded or authorized—and you do that when you prove that the organ is, for they all stand or fall together. When you get this musical department in working order you can have a good time at your protracted meetings. You can just haul up the straw and start your band, and the dance and the straw tumbling and hallelujah whooping can all run by the same music. You will outstrip Major Penn with his little panoramic "gospel tent." But, if you should not want this variety concert, then this Scripture you refer to proves too much for you, and you had better act sensibly by deciding that it proves nothing. Again, on this point, you quote: "Let every man be persuaded in his own mind." This, too, proves too much for you; for if it proves anything it proves that I have a right to my mind on this organ question, too; and away goes your right to object to my opposition to it, which you call "dynamiting anathemas." So this proves too much for you if it proves anything. My dear sir, it seems that you are unfortunate in the selection of proof texts. You know Peter speaks of the "unlearned and unstable wresting Scripture unto their own destruction." While Peter does not have reference to such destruction as you will meet at my hands, he does have reference to a "destruction" that will surely overtake you when you are called upon to give an account to God for the way you have handled and perverted his word, if you do not speedily repent and find, and obey, the four commands or conditions that you claim never to have found in the Bible, for persons to obey for the remission of sins. And, while on this point, we hereby agree to meet you before the Midway people, and affirm that these four conditions, faith, repentance, confession and baptism, are authorized by the Scriptures. You, in turn, to affirm your doctrine of faith alone, as you have stated it in your article. Then we affirm that "that baptism is immersion." You, in turn, to affirm that it is sprinkling or pouring, or either one, as you may desire. But we want it understood that the discussion must be an orderly, dignified affair, such as intelligent and conscientious people can afford to attend. Certainly you can not bring up any plausible excuse for objecting to such a discussion, since you express the desire to see these conditions if they exist. And, to say that you are opposed to discussion, after requesting this publication of your article, will be looked upon by all candid people as merely begging the question, if you should offer such an excuse. Now I desire to repeat, that all I said about your preaching and that affair at the Trinity was told me and written to me by different persons in that community. I know the parties and believe that they said and wrote just what they thought was true. If they were mistaken on any point I am satisfied it was not intentional. I am sure they were not as far mistaken as you hold. You are liable to make mistakes, even if you are "called and sent." You tell things that are not true, and you tell them on the Apostles of Christ. You say Paul and Peter named no condition for the remission of sins but "faith;" while the facts show that the first time Peter ever preached the Gospel of Christ, when the convicted part of his audience wanted to know what they should do, he said, "repent and be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins." He did not even mention faith, not because faith is not necessary, because it is the beginning and must go hand in hand with every other condition, till all the system of salvation is a system of faith.

Again, Paul said that he preached "confession with the mouth." See Acts, ii: 38, and Rom., x: 8-9. Now read these and see how you have misrepresented these God-sent men. We could point you to many refutations in the Scriptures of what you said. Now if I had to go into the misrepresenting business, I had rather be guilty of ten misrepresentations of a false teacher who would say that baptism ought to have ceased in the days of the Apostles, and then would stand in the river with his hand lifted towards heaven and say: "By the authority of my Lord I baptize," than to be guilty of one on an Apostle of God, who bore stripes and imprisonments and death for the consistent truths that God had sent him to preach.

the mantle of charity over this mistake of yours, and suppose that it was not intentional on your part, but the result of ignorance, bred and nursed by that awful parent prejudice. We are willing to let this mantle hang there till you have sufficient time to correct this misrepresentation of Peter and Paul. But if you do not correct it, after our pointing you to it, we shall conclude that your "conscience has been seared with a hot iron." Whether we did misrepresent you or not, we have permitted you to be heard in the matter; and, besides, Sister Bonham corrected it as far as she knew—"so-called Campbellite" as she is. So you stand charged in our columns with nothing but such things as you have admitted. So, then, let me insist on your clearing up matters between you and your God by confessing your misrepresentation of His Apostles. For the present I can spare no more space to your blunders, which abound, that have not been noticed. But I will settle the other points with you at Midway, if you do not have to "hasten" to some other "appointment," or appoint some excuse to hasten out of it. If you do, in our next issue I will give attention to what you have said in the main. Hoping to meet you before the Midway people soon, and that we may spend a pleasant and profitable week there together, I close for the present.

However, I must ask you why you call Bro. McCarty my "striker." Really, do you claim that you did that in the proper spirit? If you call him my "striker" because he does kind offices for me, then you may call me his "striker" too, because I love him as a brother, and will do as much for him as he has ever done for me, or ever will. I think you ought to apologize to him for this, I must say, ungentlemanly fling, if you use the word "striker" in its usual sense. But I will pay you for this, if I meet you at Midway, by "heaping coals of fire on your head."

And yet a word: You want to know why we did not say one instead some, in our report of the result of our Midway meeting. Well, the reason I did not was because the understanding was, when I left, that two were to be baptized. If this is not satisfactory on that point, let me know. I now say one, as there was but one really. So you see we are willing to correct wrong impressions, as all true Christians are.

As to our advertising your wonderful success at that time, we only have to say that you are welcome to all the glory and honor that you can glean from that report, after all the corrections that you have insisted upon have been made. If it is right that "the devil should have his due," it is right that his ministers should, too. Now, don't swell up with rage because we allude to you as a minister of Satan, for we mean no insult to you by it. We do not "prophesy smooth things," but call them by their right names. If you are perverting the Gospel of Christ, or teaching false doctrine, then you are in fact Satan's minister. One must be working for Satan or Christ; there is no middle ground. If I am advocating false doctrine, I admit that I am a minister of Satan. A man may be ever so conscientious in what he does, and yet be a minister of Satan. Saul, of Tarsus, when he started down to Damascus, was a minister of Satan. I believe that you are a perverter of the Gospel of Christ, a propagator of false doctrine; hence I verily believe you are one of "Satan's ministers." See 2 Cor., xi: 13-14. If I did not believe this I would not oppose you. You refer to my brethren as "so-called Campbellites." I suppose you understand the import of the language you use; hence, to call us "so-called Campbellites," as you do, is virtually admitting that we are not really "Campbellites." Then you evince a very bad spirit when you call us that against our wishes.

In conclusion, I will say, that I will handle all the issues you have raised, and let your Midway brethren see how I do it; and if you will furnish us with your address we will send you a copy of our paper as long as our examination of your position continues. We will see whose "foundation is rotten." You build on David.

In this I could not spare the space to give your points all attention; but if you can meet me at Midway in a fair, honorable discussion of our differences, I would much prefer it. Write about the matter at your earliest convenience. A. McG.

THE MADISONVILLE-DEBATE.

There is much that we would like to say about this debate, that we will not have the space to say. But we shall devote what space we have to the mention of such things as we think will best subserve the interests of truth. First, while we learn that the sectarians of Madisonville—which, as a class, are of the most bitter and unreasonable type that I have ever met, especially the Methodist portion of them—claim that Dalton gained a victory over Bro. Burnett, we do not consider that the debate was wholly fruitless of good results. On the questions of the design of baptism, and the operation of the Holy Spirit, we think that any fair-minded person who gave attention did not fail to see that Bro. Burnett sustained his grounds. Mr. Dalton is a very pleasant and forcible speaker, but is perfectly reckless with the Scriptures. His stock in trade consists of a few passages selected here and there from the Old and New Testaments, and wrested from all their contextual surroundings, which he uses for their sound instead of their sense; and an inexhaustible fund of anecdote. In the latter he is entitled to the palm. We have seen Methodists who could equal him in his game of hop, skip and jump through the Scriptures, but when it comes to anecdotes, he stands ahead of anyone we have ever met. He charmed Senator M. Y. Randolph, who was our Chief Moderator, with his unceasing flow of wit and anecdotes.

The Methodists, we learn, refused to lend their house for the discussion, but we were pleased to note that many of them attended the discussion; and after Mr. Dalton proved himself to be as much opposed to the truth as they are, they opened their house to him and formally invited him to preach for them, which he did. We learn that their laudation of Mr. Dalton has been unstinted ever since. This is simply another striking of the hands of Pilate and Herod in the mutual object of crucifying Jesus of Nazareth. But there are some members of the Methodist church at Madisonville for whom these remarks are not intended, because they are not applicable to them. Even some who labor under more or less prejudice against what they really believe to be "Campbellism," as they call it, instead of "the truth, as it is in Jesus." While every individual is responsible for all of the prejudice that abides in his own heart, yet we are free to admit that our brethren at Madisonville, and perhaps none more so than the writer, who used to live there, are responsible to a certain extent for a goodly portion of this bitter flame of prejudice that is rankling in that place against the truth.

We have not the space here to even touch the details that make up this sad state of religious affairs as they exist in that sectarian ridden and ungodly village. If, when Bro. Hamilton first planted the cause in that place, he and the young band of converts there had added to their faith the Christian accomplishments of, "courage, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and love;" that is, if they had "put on the whole armor of God," and had ceased to "conform to the world," but had shown forth in their lives that "peculiarly" that must ever mark the true disciples of Christ, there is no estimating the good that would have resulted.

Doubtless by this time all honest-hearted sectarians, as well as those who make no profession of religion in that section, would have cast their lot with Jesus. Of course there are some there, as well as elsewhere, whose hearts and consciences have been so seared with and encrusted in the delusive and benumbing "doctrines of men," that there is little hope of ever penetrating them with the fruitful seed of the kingdom, the incorruptible seed, which is the word of God. These are like that class referred to by our Saviour when he said: "This people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them." We know a few in Madisonville who occupy precisely this position; and some of this class pass in the eyes of the world as the best Christians in the community. They are praised for their pious lives and kind offices to the sick. In these praises, pronounced by men, they "have their reward." If such persons were sound in the doctrine of Christ, Christ would get the glory for whatever they might do for "the least of his brethren," and they would get their reward in the crown of eternity. But as it is, such persons oppose with all their hearts the law of Christ for the remission of sins and entrance into His kingdom. They institute doctrines of men which introduce persons into human institutions, which institutions generate and perpetuate division, strife and contention among people who would do God's will but for those systems that foster prejudice and Bible ignorance. Every act done as members of these human institutions, which calls forth the praise of men, is robbing God of that much glory. Why is it that persons who are willing to toil for a lifetime in building up some human system, are not willing to bestow that labor upon that institution which has Christ for its head and eternity for its reward?

While we were at Madisonville, we heard of a very sober, quiet and honorable young man saying of a certain zealous and leading lady of the Methodist church, that she did more real harm to the true teachings of Christ than the two saloons in that place. And when we come to think seriously of the remark, and weigh it in the light of many things we have heard that lady say in trying to bolster up Methodism and tear down truth, we are forced to regard the assertion as literally true. How sad the thought! We saw the same lady manifesting great interest in Mr. Dalton's behalf during the debate, and she was doing the same the night he preached at the Methodist church.

Now, for the sake of some of our honest Methodist friends at that place, we are going to give a little insight into the doctrine of that man whom they honored so because he was opposed to "the Campbellites."

We have no soft words for error, wherever we may find it; but handle it as we would a deadly viper. But while this is true, it is done out of no improper spirit, but proceeds from a faith in Christ and the New Testament Scriptures, which contains His word, which is as immutably planted in us as are the facts of the last Presidential election, and Grover Cleveland's Presidency. That is, we have no more doubt about the facts related of Christ in the Testament than we have in the main facts above stated in reference to the Presidency of Cleveland. This firm belief in the Scriptures has led us to study the book with the idea of harmony and consistency of parts being a marked feature of it; and we have not been disappointed. It is the religion that we have imbibed from reading the book that gives us our hatred of false doctrines that are trying to supercede the law of Christ. So, then, the only excuse we offer for opposing what we conceive to be error and false doctrine, is the love we have for Christ and his blood sealed system of redemption. When men espouse the cause of human and sectarian causes, and then make a scrap book of the Bible to destroy its sense, and support their ungodly theories with its sound, thus "wresting Scripture to their own destruction," as well as to the destruction of the thousands, they deserve exposure by the shortest and surest methods that will meet the demand. Now we want to call attention to just one point that appeared in that discussion, which Bro Burnett called attention to, but we desire to elaborate a little farther. This one point is enough to show any candid mind, who believes the Bible, that Mr. Dalton's theory of religion is subversive, in tendency, of the Bible. He said that Mr. Burnett and his brethren were preaching to try to make the truth plain to the people. He said that they did make it plain, too, that he understood it thoroughly, and that it was plain and plausible, but, that therein laid its condemnation, or words to this effect. He said that the will of God was that the people should not be taught. He wrested a small scrap from Jer., xxxi: 34, to sustain his nonsensical theory. Bro. Burnett then referred to the language of the commission, which says: "go teach all nations." Where is the mind that is so obtuse that it can't see here that Mr. Dalton is opposing the truth of God? What could be plainer to a candid mind? Jesus said: "No man can come to Me, except the Father which hath sent me, draw him; and I will raise him up at the last day. It is written in the prophets, and they shall all be taught of God. Every man, therefore, that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto Me." John, vi, 44-45.

Herein lies the fundamental principle of discipleship; but Mr. Dalton denies it, and berates any doctrine that inculcates it. And the Methodists of Madisonville cry out hosanna to him for it; and for his almanac lore. But Mr. Dalton and other mystifiers and fox-fireists hold that to be "taught of God" is God's work by direct operation on the heart with sparks of the Holy Ghost. (This, Jesus Christ, the Apostles nor the Scriptures know anything about. It is a figment of deluded brains. When Christ sent his ambassadors into the world, He sent them to "teach," make plain. David said: "Teach me thy way, O Lord, and lead me into a plain path;" but Mr. Dalton says it must not be made plain, and our Methodist friends honor him for it. Our Lord appeared to Saul of Tarsus as he was on his wicked mission, to Damascus, to "make a witness of him to open the eyes of the people, and turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they might receive forgiveness of sins (mark you, after they had turned), and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith, (not by faith alone, but by the obedience of faith, see Rom. i: 5, and Rom. xvi: 26), that was in Him. So says Paul himself—see Acts xxvi: 18. And of which Paul goes on to say: "Whereupon, O King Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision, but shewed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all of the coasts of Judea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance." What works? says Elder Dalton. Why, Paul, that is a pernicious doctrine; you teach that they have to do the turning, and do works. I have denied this at Madisonville, and the Methodists of this place have received it so joyfully, that they would almost have plucked out their eyes and given them to me, and they would pluck out yours, Paul, in rage, and call you a "Campbellite," were you to preach that doctrine at this place. When I denied that doctrine for four days with all of my foxy sharpness, and almanac learning, they opened their house for me to preach in, which is proof, conclusive, that they would shut it against you or any one else that would deny what I taught.

But we must close this, by giving the religious experience of Mr. Dalton, or a portion of it. We will let him tell it out of his little "Salvation" book, which he sold at Madisonville.

We only have space for a short portion of that experience; but we promise our readers more of it at some other time. In giving an account of his tussle with the Lord, the Lord wanting him to preach, and he trying to outdo the Lord. He says: "My health began to give way; my liver became enlarged, dyspepsia seized hold on me, and it finally grew into inflammation of the bowels, and I lost flesh until I was almost a skeleton, and I finally had some kind of a spell that would throw me to the earth as a dead man, and I finally promised the Lord that if He would deliver me out of that I would do anything He said, and I began to mend, and I was afraid to say 'I will not' any more." See page 7 of his book, "Salvation." Now, believe this who can; I can't, for one. We will call attention to the fact that, although these people have so much to say about "heart-felt religion," he does not mention that his heart was involved in this wrestle with the Lord at all; it seems to be confined to his "liver and bowels." O, shame! This is what you may call "liver-felt religion."

Any one writing to Mr. Dalton about his obedience, instead of writing as Paul did to the Romans about their obedience, should say: "God be thanked that, though you were a servant of sin, but you have obeyed from your liver and bowels that form of doctrine delivered unto you, you were then made free."

But it seems that our Methodist friends will welcome it, whether it comes from the liver and bowels or heart, just so it is contrary to sound doctrine. Friends, why will you thus steel your hearts against truth? Brethren of Madisonville, I know some of you are as true to Christ as you can be under the circumstances. Do not be discouraged because the enemies of truth combine against you. If that class hated your Master they will also hate you, and "the doctrine you must earnestly contend for." "Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you."

PROCES CITY, TEXAS.

DEAR BRO. MCGARY—Enclosed you will find $6 for the FIRM FOUNDATION.

We have but few brethren in this country, and it seems that some of them cannot stand the FIRM FOUNDATION. It may be that I can get some more names by the first of January. I will send all that I can get.

We would be glad to see the FIRM FOUNDATION changed to a weekly. I think it is the best paper now published in the State or anywhere else, and it has a friend as long as I live. I don't want you to let it stop coming to me; and when you want money please let me know and I will send it to you. I intend to do all I can for it.

Hoping that you may be spared many years in your good work, I remain your brother "in Christ."

BRO. BURNETT SEEKS SHELTER UNDER BAPTIST SUCCESSION.

Bro. Burnett is tugging at it again, with his eyes full of fog, trying to extricate himself from the quagmire he ran into, while trying to evade the force of some questions propounded to him by Bro. Hamblen. Poor fellow! his position is so quicksandy that the more he struggles the deeper he sinks into trouble. He had better be quiet and let his theory have an easy death. But he thinks if he can get his pursuers off on a hunt, to find the Church of Christ seventy-five years ago, he can get out, while they are off on such a jaunt. Now, we, for one, shall not accommodate him to any such a "hide-and-seek" play as that. He pretends to know of "prophecies" that involve our position in serious and inextricable difficulties. Well, if he has such Scriptures why does he not bring them up? We might say that we had Scriptures proving that "the man in the moon" was named John Smith, but we doubt if anyone would believe it until we produced them; and so it is about Bro. Burnett's statement on this point; we, for one, don't believe it, and will not till he proves it. The thing that he should have done was to have removed some, to us, very palpable difficulties that he has permitted to linger about his position.

1. He ought to get rid of one of the two faiths that he employed in his reply to Bro. Hamblen, or prove that Paul was mistaken in teaching that there was only one faith.

2. He should show us what right he has to stuff "our plea" in Paul's mouth, and separate nine facts that Paul states in the same connection, and disjoin three of these facts from the other six, and call these three, Paul's definition of the gospel.

3. Since he limits the gospel wholly and solely to these three facts, he should show us how facts one, three or nine can be obeyed, since the Scriptures so abundantly teach us that the gospel must be obeyed.

4. He should tell us which of the two contradictory positions that he has taken—one in his reply to Bro. Hamblen, and the other in his reply to us about his reply to Bro. Hamblen. (1) That the facts were not to be obeyed. (2) That when we die to sin, and are buried by baptism and raised to walk in a new life—"thus we obey the three facts." Why did he not write rationally, and say "thus we obey the commands," and symbolize the three facts? Does he think his readers are so stupid that he can stuff such nonsense as the idea that a fact can be obeyed, down their throats? or is he really so badly befuddled over this question that he has so far lost his wits as to regard such a feat as obeying facts possible? Again, why does he try to play the monkey trick on us, by trying to make a cat's-paw of our position to pull his burning chestnuts out of the fire, by trying to hold us responsible for a nine fact gospel, and to show how such a gospel could be obeyed?

Now he is the one who is responsible for a nine fact gospel, until he shows his right to break in upon Paul's language and divide it where Paul did not, and call part of it the gospel. And, then, when he shows this right, to thus separate what Paul joined together, he must tell us how to obey three facts. This will give him a job that will be unfinished when the cold clods separate him from this sphere of action. It is so sad to see our leading brethren blinding themselves with prejudice, and crippling their influence for good and usefulness in the kingdom, by pursuing such inconsistent courses to defend the unauthorized practices of a human "plea," that all candid and conscientious brethren must and are losing confidence in their integrity. Bro. Burnett is not the only one of our leading brethren from whom the confidence of the brotherhood is gradually slipping. It is very evident that Bro. Burnett had rather accept the fallacy of "Baptist succession," than accept the truth in reference to sect baptism. If not, why does he call upon us to point out the church as it existed seventy-five years ago? He, nor any others who may be casting about for footing for this dogma of "our plea," need not deceive themselves by supposing that our brethren, who are opposed to sect baptism, can be frightened, in the least, by any "pillow in a swing" that they may hang up about the grave-yard of the past, whether seventy-five or seven hundred years ago. They will be followed in their opposition to truth wherever they may go, so soon as they begin to fix up plausible looking obstacles. But, before Bro. Burnett can decoy us back into the shades of seventy-five years ago, he must remove the difficulties that we have pointed out to him for which he is responsible. By all means he should attend to present troubles before he can, with propriety, insist on our rambling with him into the past. The only possible relief he can find in the lumber of the past will be in the old, broken chain of "Baptist succession." He has contributed his mite in the breaking of that chain, and now he will have to go to work and weld it, to be benefited by it.

He can rattle the old broken thing at us as long as its jingle is pleasant to him; but the noise he can make with it is all there is of, it till he mends it. This he ought to do if he can, for if his theory is true its missing links ought to be brought up and welded in. Go to work, Mr. Blacksmith; if your "hammer" is as hard as your head you will not wear it out. Your reaches for sympathy, in referring to us as "reformers of the reformation" looks weak to us, coming from a champion debator, who conducted one side of "the liveliest discussion that ever took place on the American continent." If there is anything reprehensible in trying to "reform the reformation," then you are as guilty as we. Your opposition to instrumental music in the worship, and Missionary Societies, look to us, like efforts to "reform the reformation." A. McG.

MADISONVILLE, TEXAS, December 14, 1886.

Dear Bro. McGary:

It has been quite a while since anything has appeared in the F. F. from my pen, and fearing the readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION might think I had fallen from grace, or had gone back on the F. F., I will introduce myself again to its readers. My heart's desire and prayer is that the F. F. may stand and continue to contend for the faith. While it is true there has been a great deal said on the baptismal question, still I do not believe too much can be said and written in defense of the truth, and against false positions and inconsistent practices of brethren who know better. I will make a short quotation from the Apostle Peter. Writing on baptism and its design, he says: "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ." The new version has it: "The interrogation of a good conscience toward God." The living oracles has it, "The seeking of a good conscience." What is meant by "the seeking of a good conscience?" Is it not true that the Apostle is writing here about baptism? and does he not say that it saves us? I say therefore he is writing about the design of baptism. On another occasion this same Apostle said: "Repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins." I believe that these Scriptures plainly teach that baptism is a divine ordinance, representing the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus Christ, the place where the alien sinners were taught by the Apostles that God would meet them and bless them and free them from sin. Paul says: "We walk by faith and not by sight." The sinner is taught first to believe in Jesus Christ, and so, "by faith," he walks right up to the divine ordinance, baptism, "seeking a good conscience." How are our consciences made good or pure? I answer, by the blood of Jesus. Let Paul speak; he says: "For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer, sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh; how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God." Again, the same writer says: "He (that is Jesus) had by himself purged our sins." The N. V. says: "When He had made purification of sins." That is, by the shedding of

His blood, He has opened up a way for the purification of sins. The new and living way opened up in the house of David for sin and uncleanness. The worshippers under the old covenant did not obtain a perfect conscience. In speaking of the offerings made under the law, the Apostle says: "For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things can never, with those sacrifices which they offered year by year, continually make the comers thereunto perfect. For then would they not have ceased to be offered, because that the worshippers (once purged) should have had no more conscience of sin? But in these sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year." But Jesus is the end of the law for righteousness for every one that believeth, having shed His blood on the cross, died unto sin once and was raised to die no more. He has brought life and immortality to light by the Gospel. And now the sinner is taught to believe in Jesus, and by faith turns from his sins, confesses his faith with the mouth (Rom. x: 10.) and in full assurance of faith he draws near to God, with a true purpose of heart to have the heart (or conscience) sprinkled by the blood of Jesus from an evil conscience and the body washed with pure water. This is why the Apostle Peter says the sinner goes to baptism "seeking a good conscience." When the Gospel is preached fully and faithfully, the sinner is taught by the preaching of the Gospel where he may expect to obtain a good conscience. Baptism, in the Gospel, is the place where Jesus has promised to meet the sinner, and this is the reason for his going there and "seeking a good conscience." "Know ye not (that is, don't you know, as you were taught before being baptized) that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death?" For this very reason, then, all who come to God or Christ are buried with Him by baptism into death, when His blood was shed, and by which all obtain a good conscience, a pure heart and the remission of sins by faith. "The word of faith," or the Gospel, teaches us where we may expect to receive it by faith. Right here lies my greatest objection to Baptist teaching. They do not teach their converts to seek a good conscience in baptism, but they teach them to seek it at the mourning bench, and they must have a good conscience before they will baptize them. Peter's converts were taught to seek a good conscience in baptism. Baptist converts are taught to seek it at a mourning bench in the straw. They claim to receive the pardon of their sins by faith, before baptism. Some of my brethren say they do not receive pardon, as they expect, before baptism. This is a delusion. But they do receive pardon after their Baptist baptism, in spite of the delusion. Now, if they do, it is not an act of faith. That is, they do not receive remission of sins by faith. I say, therefore, it is a sin. For Paul says, "whatsoever is not of faith is sin." Baptists and Methodists rejoice more in a delusion than in the promise of God spoken by the Holy Spirit, sealed by the blood of Jesus, and confirmed by the oath of God. I say, therefore, Baptist baptism is not valid.

-A. J. McCARTY.

We learn from private letters, that our readers are much interested in the dialogue that is being published in the F. F. about the "Jacksons" and the "pastor;" hence we are sorry that the sequel of that affair has been crowded out of this issue, but it will appear in our next issue.

Sister E. W. Elston, who has favored us with the poem on the first page, is seventy-eight years of age. She lives at Woodland, Cal. We have a large list of subscribers there, for which we are under obligations to Bro. T. S. and Sister E. W. Elston. From that town came the largest amount of money that has passed through our hands from any one congregation, for the Texas drought sufferers. Bro. T. S. Elston is eighty-three years old. May the choicest blessings of God ever cluster along the untraveled part of their pilgrimage to the Jordan of death, and may they finally pass peacefully over into the land of eternal bliss, is the prayer of their brother who, though having never met them, loves them for the truth they love and have so faithfully labored to advance.

We could not feel quite justified to start a weekly at this time, but we have been greatly encouraged by the earnest efforts of our brethren to send us this one thousand new names. Though they have not sent us anything like that number, we have unbounded confidence in their sympathy and willingness to aid us all they can in the good work. We desire to show that we appreciate their efforts in this direction; hence, we begin the new year with semi-monthly issues, and will work to weekly issues as rapidly as circumstances will admit. Our readers will see that in the two issues per month they will get something more than one-third more reading matter than we were giving them, at the old price. Let every one who is willing to become a regular agent for the paper, write us for our special commissions to regular agents. We want to engage its very best friends as its agents; and we desire to pay them a fair price for their work. Some brethren will not have a commission for the work they do for the paper; but all who are willing to act as regular agents ought to have a commission for it, and we are more than willing that they shall have it. We have never felt any fears about the success of the paper nor the ultimate triumph of the truths it inculcates, over the hybrid doctrine of a human "plea," which has well nigh obliterated the line between the Church of Christ and the sectarian bodies that are but the offspring of Romish hierarchy. True brethren all over the United States, are rallying to the tenable and apostolic grounds that the FIRM FOUNDATION is advocating, for which we are truly thankful to God. The Scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works. A. McG.

TALKS WITH THE SISTERS.

Christmas has come and gone once more, "the old year lies adying," will soon be draped and palled and laid away by Father Time, forever. It is a solemn, deeply solemn thought, that we are one year nearer our eternal destiny. Is our faith so steadfast that we can say, "nearer our Father's house?"

This year has been one of calamities to our country. Our own fair State has suffered and is still suffering from a terrible drought, and hundreds of souls are sad to-night with thoughts for the morrow—many of them our brethren and sisters in Christ Jesus. Yet, many of us have not felt a want, nor suffered a pang, save as when "one member suffers, all the members suffer with it." But have all of us given even this tender sympathy? I fear not. I know some (and fear there are many) who have not made one sacrifice, even the smallest, to give even a dime to relieve these suffering members. Alas! such, seeing their brethren in need, have been guilty of saying, "be warmed and filled," yet have withheld the means to accomplish this warming and filling. How much has been spent this week in taking long, expensive trips for only a few short days of pleasure, one Christian, perhaps, spending enough to clothe one of these poor families comfortably for the winter; for they lack clothing as well as food. Again, hundreds of dollars have been spent for gifts, by some who, had you asked a dollar of them for the needy, would have replied, "We can't afford it." Will God hold such guiltless? I mean this for Christians; we can expect no better from the world. I recently heard of a Christian (?) woman who had bought $10 worth of tickets to a public entertainment, but had not one dollar for her poor, needy, preaching brother, to whom it would have been a boon. How dwelleth the love of God in such? Verily, they will have their reward in the fearful sentence, "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto the least of them, my brethren, ye did it not unto me. Depart, I never knew you." This coming year, oh, may our faith grow brighter and stronger, impelling us to work. We cannot gain Heaven on "faith alone," though many seem to think so, faith without works being dead. But this is not what I set out to write about at all. Slang was to be my subject, so I will offer a few thoughts and a little advice on Christians using slang. Now, this talk is for the sisters, but it is public and if the brethren choose to read it, editors and all, I shall not object. Slang is apt and very expressive, hence its popularity; and so thoroughly have many slang phrases become incorporated into our language that it is difficult to avoid them. But our language has been very aptly compared to a piece of patchwork, being composed of words from nearly every language in the world, therefore there is no excuse for the use of slang, with such rich resources to choose from. Speaking of Ashdod, to my mind nothing could be more Ashdodish!

I once heard a young girl, who claimed to be a Christian, say that a conductor on a train "made a mash on her." Another Christian (?) girl made frequent use of the vulgar, indecent expression, "dry up and bust," and that to young gentlemen, too. Shame, shame, that any young lady, much less a child of God, should soil her lips with such expressions. Can we imagine our Saviour, Paul or Peter using such language? Fancy the following conversation between Paul and Peter, when Paul withstood Peter to the face: "Halloo, Peter, I hear these Jews 'got away with you,' and made you 'go back on us.'" "Well," says Peter, "you did no better. You were up at Jerusalem with a 'chip on your hat,' waiting for some bristling rabbi to knock it off, then 'the fur was to fly.' The first thing you know some Jew will 'put a head on you.'" "No, sir," says Paul, "some of them are 'powerfully stuck on me, you bet.'" "Well, I hear Demas has 'gone back on you.'" "Yes, yes, Demas is a 'bad egg.'" "Well, when you write to that church just 'skin him,' do it kindly, but 'skin him,' he needs it." Says Paul, "Did you hear of my last fuss down at Phillipi?" "No, what was it?" "Why, they took me and bound me and"—"Oh, yes, 'I catch on,' now. You let them know you were a Roman, did you?" "You bet I did, and you better believe they 'cut dirt,' and let me alone." Imagine Paul saying, "Our fathers were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea, and did all eat of the same spiritual 'grub.'" These are some samples of Christian conversations in these modern times. Just pause and compare them with the simple, pure and grand language of Holy Writ. How do they compare? For answer we should hang our heads in shame.

Dear sisters, where do you suppose slang originates? Where bangs did, I expect, for I have always noticed that the girl that wears bangs talks slang. Both, I doubt not, had their origin among females of very questionable reputation. Think of this, whenever you are tempted to use a slang phrase, will you? A Christian's speech should be pure. Remember we are preparing and hoping to spend an eternity with our Saviour and a host of sinless beings, hence we should keep our lips unsullied. Let us say with the sweet poet, Frances Havergal,

"Take my tongue and let it sing, Ever, always, of my King."

Let us employ our lips in teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing with grace in our hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever we do, in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord. SARAL.

WHEN DOES THE SINNER DIE TO SIN?

Believing that the answer to this question, as taught us in the sixth chapter of Romans, is not generally understood, I will venture an explanation that to my mind seems to be the correct one. The idea conveyed by brethren generally differs but little from the sectarian idea. To avoid baptism for the remission of sins, the Baptists and others say that the sinner first dies to sin, and then on account of his death is buried with Christ in baptism; and hence as he dies to sin before he is baptized, he is separated from sin before baptism, as the radical idea in the term death is a separation. Our brethren have taught that as a person must be, in fact, dead, before he is buried literally, so the sinner must be dead to sin before he is buried in baptism. They draw a distinction between the practice of sin and the guilt of sin, and say the sinner is dead to its practice, when he stops sinning, but is not freed from its guilt till he is buried with Christ in baptism. This position is explained by the following illustration. The liar is dead to lying when he stops lying and resolves to do so no more. But he is not released from the guilt of lying till he obeys the Gospel. Now, I do not think either of the above interpretations is correct. I understand that the sinner's death and burial occurs at the same time; and hence when he dies with Christ, he is at the same time buried with Him; and when he is buried with Him he dies with Him, and at the same time dies to sin.

Paul did not say that he and the Roman brethren died to sin and on account of it were then buried with Christ by baptism. It was an act finished in the past, and the context clearly shows that he had reference to baptism. The fourth verse reads: "Therefore, we were buried with Him through baptism into death." Now take notice that the word death, in the 3d, 4th and 5th verses includes also the burial of Christ. So, then, we establish the fact that when the sinner dies with Christ he is at the same time buried with Him. Now, look at the 7th verse, "For he that is dead is freed from sin." If, then, the sinner dies to sin before he is baptized, he is released from sin before he is baptized, for Paul says: "He that is dead to sin is freed from sin." The Baptists would then be right in their understanding of the design of baptism. But to show that they are wrong, we call attention to the fact that if the sinner is freed from sin before baptism he is freed from sin before he gets into Christ. "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into His death?"

Again, if the sinner is freed from sin before baptism he dies to sin before baptism; and this is outside of the death of Christ, for we are "baptized into His death."

And still further, if the sinner dies to sin before he is baptized, he is freed from sin before he is baptized; and if he is freed from sin before he is baptized, he is freed from sin before he puts on Christ. "For as many of you have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." We conclude, therefore, that no immersed person with those views has ever obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine delivered by the Master, and hence we oppose the pretended transplanting process by the shake of the hand. Such persons having never died to sin, by obeying from the heart the form of doctrine delivered unto us, have most assuredly never arisen to walk in newness of life. We earnestly exhort all such to yield unreservedly to the will of the Lord. J. S. D.

REPORT OF A MEETING.

This, when made, will be the first report I ever wrote of a meeting held by myself, or any one else, and I do not make this because of any great "visible results" (for there was only one that obeyed the gospel), and as to the invisible results, I know nothing about them, as I could not see them. It is very common to read reports, "So many baptized, so many received from the Sects, and a great deal of prejudice removed." The prejudice removed, I suppose, is the "invisible results," and they, with me, are like the invisible church. I know nothing about them, and my object in writing this report is to call attention to some things said by a certain Methodist Episcopal preacher (I know not whether he was North, South, East or West). His name is Miller, and he says he is pastor of the Methodist Church at Del Rio and at Brackettsville, devoting one-half of his time to each. Pastor means feeder, so he feeds each of those flocks half of their time on Methodism. Now, I ask if the prodigal son would have starved physically on the husks that he had to eat all the time, will not the above churches starve spiritually, being fed only half their time on the husks of Methodism? Surely they will; but, perhaps, they will come to themselves, and go (not return) to the Heavenly Father's house, where there is abundant provision made for all that hunger and thirst after righteousness.

I commenced preaching at Brackettsville on Saturday night, the fourth day of this month, continued preaching until the next Saturday night, and on Lord's day and night said Miller preached, it being his appointment. He commenced his services, both at 11 o'clock and night, by engaging in what I suppose might be called secret public or public secret prayer, I don't know which, then read the 6th chapter of Paul's letter to the Ephesian brethren, commenting mostly on the 10th to 20th verses, and said many good things in reference to the Christian's armour and prayer; but, like Satan in the Garden of Eden, he spoiled it all by indorsing the doctrine of faith alone being a "very wholesome doctrine and full of comfort," as taught by John Wesley and the Methodist discipline, and he quoted Wesley as proof. We knew before that Wesley taught it, but deny that any inspired man ever taught it.

In speaking of baptism, on Sunday night, he said that it was only mentioned about thirty times in the New Testament, therefore it is not necessary or essential to salvation. I do wonder. I suppose if the Lord had mentioned it thirty-five or forty times, then it would have been necessary. But I suppose he forgot what his discipline teaches, where it quotes the language of the Saviour to Nicodemus, John, iii: 5, and says that the water spoken of there has reference to baptism. If that be so, then a man cannot enter the kingdom of God without being baptized; and the kingdom of God and the church of God, the kingdom of Christ and the church of Christ are the same. Matt., xvi: 13-19. So his discipline teaches that baptism is necessary to salvation; and I expect that when he was ordained a preacher, and so "much divinity" was conferred upon him, that he promised to preach and defend the doctrine of the discipline; but I expect he forgot it the night he heard him, with all his divinity. Yes, but "Abraham and all those worthies mentioned in Heb. ii were saved without baptism." Yes they were; and why? Because there was no law requiring baptism at that time; but "the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change of the law, Heb., vii: 11-14. But when was the priesthood changed? When was Christ made a priest? Not while He was on earth, Heb., viii: 4 (all the false teaching that He was baptized to make him a priest to the contrary), and after He died He became the author of eternal salvation to them that obey Him: Heb., v: 7-9.

"But then a man gets away out on the plains where he can't be baptized, what is to become of him?" No, there is not even water enough to sprinkle him, or cool his parched tongue. Poor fellow, I have heard of him so often, ever since I was a little boy, and I thought he was dead long ago; but I suppose he is not, and as baptism came in lieu of circumcision, I reckon the best way to dispose of his case is to circumcise him—that suits the sandy plains. But Paul says, "Foolish and unlearned (or untaught) questions avoid," 2d Tim. 2: 23; and as the scriptures do not teach anything about such cases, Mr. Miller and I had better avoid them. That is all that I will say about what he said about baptism, except that he said that "He would baptize some children the next Sunday." In that he was mistaken; he cannot baptize unbelievers, those that are not capable of obeying from the heart that form of doctrine delivered to them, that they may be made free from their sins. Rom.: xi: 17-18. The Saviour says, he that "believes and is baptized shall be saved," Mark, xvi: 16-18; and the man who says, he that is baptized and believes afterwards shall be saved, changes God's word and will be held accountable for it.

He also said he "did not believe it was right to unsettle people's faith." What a pity the Saviour did not understand that matter as friend Miller understands it; it would have saved Him a great deal of labor and persecution in trying to unsettle the faith of His Jewish brethren; and then He even came from heaven to unsettle the faith of that grandest of all men, the Apostle Paul. Yes, and Paul was so honest, conscientious and zealous in his opposition to Christ—and what great persecutions he afterwards endured because his faith was unsettled. And the Apostles went among the Jews and Gentiles, upsetting their faith and turning them from idolatry and darkness to light and the power of Satan to God. What a pity, if friend Miller is right. Yes, and some of our brethren are getting to be as tender-footed as the Methodists about unsettling the faith of those who have come, and may desire to come, on their unscriptural dipping, called baptism, missionary societies, etc.

He further said he "could pray for and work with all denominations, even the hard shells;" and I suppose the Mormons, for they are a denomination, and "the Lord has greatly blessed them," for they are becoming quite numerous. Why, he is a hard shell himself, if he only knew it—so hard that the word of the Lord will not make any impression on him. Yes, harder than rock, for Jeremiah says that the word of the Lord breaks the rock in pieces, xxiii: 20. He (Miller) says the word of God is dead, powerless, unless it is energized, quickened and applied by the Holy Spirit. Then, if God does not send His Holy Spirit to quicken and apply His word to the hearts of sinners, they are passed by, reprobates, non-elect and can't be saved, while those to whose hearts He sends His Holy Spirit and applies the word are saved. So, you see, he is as hard shell as any, and more inconsistent.

But Paul says: "The word of God is quick (or living) and powerful (full of power), and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." Heb., iv: 12. And Peter, writing to the brethren, says being born again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which lives and abides forever." 1 Peter, i: 22-25. Paul and Peter both testify that it is living, full of power and will abide forever; while friend Miller says it is dead, powerless. Reader, judge you who tells the truth.

But what is denominationalism? Divisions. Then friend Miller says he can pray for and work with divisions; just what Christ and the Apostles could not do; for Christ taught and prayed against them. Matt., xii: 25; and in John xvii, after praying for his Apostles that they might be one, he prayed also for all that might believe on Him through their word, that they all might be one; verses 20-21; and Paul speaking as he was guided by the spirit, says: "I beseech you, brethren, by the name (authority) of the Lord Jesus that you all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that you be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment." 1 Cor., i: 10. See also Phil., 1: 27, and Eph., iv: 3-4. The Apostle Peter is also quite plain and pointed on this subject. But there were false prophets among the people (the Jews) even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies (divisions, denominations) and through covetousness (yes, that is it, the love of money) shall they with feigned works make merchandise of you. 2d Pet., ii: 1-3. Yes, brethren, it is the love of money that gets up Bible colleges, missionary societies, church fairs, festivals, etc.; or if it is not that, will the brethren please tell what it is, for it is certain the word of the Lord does not get them up. I will close this article by making one more quotation from the Apostle Paul, where the Lord through him classes heresies (divisions, denominations) with adultery, fornication, murder, drunkenness, revelings, and such like, the works of the flesh, and says that they who do or practice such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God, Gal., v: 19-21. Brethren, how careful we ought to be about introducing these innovations and departures from the word of the Lord; for we are assured if we do or practice such things, we shall not inherit the (everlasting) kingdom of God.

A few days after our last report of funds received for drought sufferers, we received $1 from Bro. B. H. Woodson, of Prescott, Arkansas, for that purpose, and we have sent it to Bro. W. W. Hood, of Palo Pinto county.

In Bro. O. M. Wilmeth's notice of our reference to his saying that he would be willing to accept our position in reference to sect-baptism if all the brethren would, he says: "Bro. McGary is so tender of his pet that he would part with his best friends before a hair of it should be hurt. But his insinuations that cowardice keeps us from accepting his extreme views will not be received by those who read the Preacher. We have become accustomed to slurs from professed friends."

Now we are sorry that Bro. Wilmeth seems to regard our profession of friendship for him as unreal. We would say to him, in all seriousness: "Am I become your enemy because I tell you the truth?" No, my brother, I am not your enemy. But I will say to you, and to as many of the readers of the Preacher as may have a chance to see it, that if they are indisposed, as you think they are, to receive what we say about what you said about accepting our position—we did not "insinuate" it, but said it right out as we generally say things—we will overwhelm them so with proof that they will have to receive it. You speak of our "extreme" views. Now, my brother, we all have some extreme ways. For instance, for you to advertise yourself as a "Teacher of the Bible and Belle's Letters" is extremely ridiculous for a disciple of the lowly Nazarene. Where did Peter, or Paul, or the Master, ever put such extreme handles to their names? We have no objection to your reference to our religious views as "our pet," and you are quite right when you say we would part with our best friends before a hair of it should be hurt. We shall stand by it with all the powers we possess, "regarding not the person of men," but earnestly contending for the faith ("our pet") once delivered to the saints. A. McG.

"Rev." (?) R. T. Hanks defines a "Campbellite-Christian as one who takes his name from Christ and trusts in baptism to save him; a Baptist-Christian, as one who takes his name from baptism and trusts in Christ to save him." And I would define a Christian (without the handle) as one who hears God's word and obeys it from his heart, and receives salvation in the way that God has appointed.

Such reverent flings from a "Rev." called and sent Baptist, only serves to show the spirit of the adversary in opposition to the truth. The people who hear and read are not likely to be led far astray by such "cuttle fish" correspondents. No Bible reader trusts in baptism to save him or her, only as it is the appointment of God, much less is willing to take "his name from" an ordinance prescribed by Christ. In reference to His name, He alone can save, but only those will be saved who come in the way He has taught. Let Rev. (?) Hanks try again. P. H. ADAMS.

SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES.

NUMBER TWO.

Another cause for the contempt with which the bible is treated is the rivalry among the "churches" for worldly favor. The great want is numbers and popularity. The result is, the so-called churches are filled with men of the world, who have no thought of studying the Scriptures or giving up worldly pleasures or friendships or associations. Men of this kind are in such preponderance as to be the controlling element and give character to the whole body. In our readiness to go with the current, even those who desire to do right partake of the general feeling that the Christian religion is but little more than a form. But few, indeed, study the Scriptures, and they who do show any concern, for the most part read with attention only those parts which are supposed to furnish proof that the worldly institution to which they belong is the church. "From the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." They can talk on other subjects, but you cannot interest them in the one important subject of a holy life. Only when you touch their party pride can you interest them in religious matters. Our Lord used the most vigorous language to impress upon our attention the necessity of being wholly devoted to Him, in thought, and deed, saying: that unless we hate even our own lives we cannot be His disciples. It is supremely unreasonable to suppose that He will make the great distinction of giving immortal life to some for doing nothing and punish the rest for the same thing—among them the thousands of millions who have never had an opportunity of hearing and obeying.

Among the bids for popularity are a college bred "ministry," fine church edifices, Sunday schools, church fairs and festivals, organs and choirs, and various societies. Educated clergymen are desired on the ground that they are better qualified to teach than those without college training. But we see as much difference of opinion and as many disputes among them as among the uncultured. Besides, their college finish in a measure unfits them for further progress. They have a reputation for great learning to uphold which would be brought into jeopardy if they should learn anything that would require them to frankly and humbly confess that they had been wrong. It is too much to expect that poor, weak sinners, placed in exalted and dignified stations, will become fools that they may be wise. Dignity (which is only another name for pride) does not set very well on such poor creatures as we are, and of all kinds of pride, a sanctimonious pride is the most unbecoming. The humble, poor, and even the ignorant, being more free from aspirations for distinction, are better prepared to imbibe and impart the spirit of the bible than those who desire to be leaders. They who are educated for preaching make a trade of the business and preach for hire. Every where now, except in the back woods, the preacher is hired to preach to the church! The more brilliant and dignified he is, and the better prepared to proselyte our "best citizens," and to add to the respectability of the party, the higher the price he commands. A hireling is expected to work to please his employer. We have only to look once at the religious parties around us to see that the interest of the employer is an interest in the progress and popularity of the party rather than in the promotion of righteousness. The hireling, then, is obliged to confine himself to the work of building up the party. His support depends upon it, and what is of more consequence, his honorable standing in the party depends upon his success in bringing into the party men of wealth and popularity.

"A little leaven leavens the whole lump," and much leaven makes the whole loaf very sour. Religious parties are thus so filled with worldly minded men as to make it impossible for a member "to keep himself unspotted from the world"—to "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness." Be assured these commands mean something more than to refrain from going to dances. The churches are thus so toned down to a level with the world that they cannot understand how one can care for the truth for its own sake. They can no more comprehend how any one can be so foolish as not to make his religion subordinate and tributary to his respectability than an honest man can understand the subtle casuistry of a paganized Christianity. They cannot conceive that any one need bear reproach in these good religious times, when he can so easily be in the fashion. Whatever the multitude sanctions is right. With noisy self-righteousness, the missionary is sent forth to play the gentleman in other lands, while the heathen at our doors are hated and oppressed. The "church" and the world join hands to scoff at any zeal for righteousness outside party lines, with party banners flying and a grand flourish of party trumpets; and the unthinking man who can make a long prayer before men, but does not think it worth while to study the Scriptures, will listen with resentful impatience if you try to teach him that what is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God. The idea that one not in a worldly organization is out of the church has been so industriously propagated by partisans, in their zeal to increase their numbers, that nearly all believe it to be true, and the great question with those who care is to find the right church; but failing in this, rather than be lost, they join some party teaching things they regard as false as the best they can do. As an inducement for all to come into the fold, the preacher takes pains to tell them that our religion does not call upon us to relinquish the pleasures of this life, stigmatizing as "gloomy" that austere devotion that characterized Elijah, and Jeremiah, and Jesus, and Paul, and all the saints of all time. Jesus, indeed, said, "My yoke is easy and my burden is light," but he certainly did not mean to contradict all his other teaching when He said it. He was but contrasting the law of the spirit of life with the law of sin and death, signifying the confidence with which we can approach the Father through Him, in the liberty wherewith He has made us free from that yoke which neither they whom He addressed nor their fathers were able to bear.

Whether the minister be educated or not, he is not permitted to do more than ring the changes on the few ideas that constitute the creed of the party. He meets every requirement if he be "sound in the faith," and can set forth to advantage the party's claim to be the church, or present in an acceptable manner the doctrine that fashionable denominations have agreed to call orthodox, particularly if he can make himself and his teaching popular, but woe unto him if he teach heresy. Think of it. A coterie of poor, foolish sinners, nine-tenths of whom do not pretend to study the scriptures, and nine-tenths of the other tenth read with the purpose of justifying themselves before men in their choice of a church—men engaged in all kinds of covetous practices, extortion and oppression, presume to say what is heresy, and dictate to another one of God's creatures what he shall learn and believe and teach! Look at the marvelous beauty of this thing, and "come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean; and I will receive you and will be to you a father, and ye shall be to me sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." An agreement in certain opinions is placed above an obedient life, while some of those opinions may be based upon such a misconception of the Bible as to make it quite unintelligible. A large part of the Bible is prophecy, which it would be foolish to say was not for our instruction. The prophets give an outline of the plan for the restoration of all things. A knowledge of the plan of redemption, as a whole, is indispensable to a proper understanding of the relation of the parts of the plan to each other. Besides, we, who see not the miraculous gifts of the Spirit, find the evidence of the truth of the Bible in the fulfillment of the prophecy. We cannot believe without evidence. That others believe is no evidence to us. We cannot have a reason for the hope that is in us except from a personal examination of the evidence, and our chief reason comes from a knowledge of the prophecies and of their verification in the facts of history. Peter speaks of a sure word of prophecy, unto which we do well to give heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place.

It is hard to see how any one can deceive himself with the thought that he cares for the lord or His truth, while he does not study His word earnestly and diligently. There cannot be a more foolish self-deception. If you neglect the lamp of life the Lord has graciously given, and go to an educated "ministry" or hireling priesthood for light, you will die in darkness, no matter how many nice long prayers you make or how many tears you shed. Unless you study the Bible as though you mean something, and from the abundance of the heart constantly speak of it, the real truth is you care nothing for its author. You may profess to believe because others do, as the heathen believes in his gods, or to escape an orthodox hell, but you cannot have the one intelligent faith.

Enclosed you will find $1 in payment for the FIRM FOUNDATION, which I regard as the best paper of its kind in Texas. I noticed that some parties want you to stop their paper. To such I only say, they don't want to hear the truth. I don't want my paper stopped, for I would feel lost without it, and my home would indeed be lonely without the cheerful presence of the FIRM FOUNDATION; for it is not only a good paper, but is the only paper that holds forth a form of good Bible doctrine, and contends for that firm foundation that Christians can hope, by placing their feet upon, to gain the glorious promises in the sweet beyond. May you ever prosper in the good work and be the cause of much good for our dear Master, is my prayer. Sincerely yours,

S. Z. JAYROE.
HALLETSVILLE, TEXAS, December 10, 1886.

A. McGary, Austin, Texas:
DEAR BROTHER—I have in my possession a little money for you, which I will remit at the earliest opportunity. J. W. Page has paid me for his, and wants the F. F. to come on; Thomas Hudgeons has paid me $1 for F. F. for 1887; Joul Pontou paid 50 cents for his for 1886; W. T. Chambers, 25 cents for his for 1886; D. C. McGee, $1 for F. F. for 1887; W. D. Slay sent me $1 for F. F. for 1887, also 25 cents for F. F. for 1886; J. I. Scogin sent 25 cents for his for 1886.

I am going to school, and do not go to town often. I do hope and pray that the F. F. will stand, and will do all in my power to aid in holding it up; but you know that I am a small "fire cracker," and cannot do much. Did you see the blaze of that Roman candle that was fired at me from Bonham, Texas? May the good Lord save us all at last is my prayer.

Receive people into the church as did the Apostles in days long gone by, and sing praises as they did. Evangelize as they did, and have care for the poor, sad saints as they had. Brethren, will you not cease this quarrelling and have that brotherly love so strictly commanded by our Savior, remembering that an Apostle has said: "He that hateth his brother is a murderer, and we know that no murderer hath eternal life." Shall these cries for peace go unheard? God forbid. We love the church; hence our feeble petition to the brethren for more love and peace. Lord, forgive. This is written to show how one, at least, feels about our present condition. My heart is sick, my soul is gone out. O, for that rejoicing of a united people. My soul longeth for the union of God's people. In hope of a return to the old land-marks,

I am thy brother,
J. W. STRODE.

LANDERSVILLE, ALABAMA.
Dear Bro. McGary:
My December number never came to me. Did not know whether my time was out or not. I do not want my time to get out, for I would not be without the F. F. for $10, but I have no money now. We have failed in a crop and money is scarce, but I want it understood I am a life subscriber, if you continue to stand as you are. I have been fighting for that position for twenty years.

J. W. SNEYGLY.
Bro. E. W. Dabney says that he is not big enough to hold religion and politics both at once. He says that when religion goes in politics goes out, and when politics goes in religion goes out.

NASHVILLE, ARK., Dec. 21, 1886.

Bro. McGary, Austin Texas:

DEAR BRO.—I send you a few names for the FIRM FOUNDATION, and trust your list will increase so that you can give us a weekly paper for 1887. I will write occasionally for the paper, if you will not lose my valuable articles in the future. I will rewrite the article and try to have it reach you so as to begin in the first number for the coming year. The subject is important—the most important in the New Testament—and is less understood than any subject in the teaching of our Master. To understand the third chapter of John's Gospel and teach just what Jesus and the Apostles taught, is to destroy all the teachings of sectarians.

I am looking for Bro. McJunkin here from Saratoga, in Howard county, and as soon as I hear from him will send the money to pay for all names sent you on your 25 cent offer, and if not too much trouble, please turn to your subscription book, get in your list of names and I will forward you the money to settle all at once. New names will be sent in list to themselves.

Mr. A. B. Cox, Washington, Hempstead county, paid $1; J. H. Van Dyck, Nashville, Howard county, will pay $1; C. B. Jones, Nashville, Howard county, will pay $1.25; J. G. W. Yowell, Nashville, Howard county, will pay $1.25.

Jones and Yowell, I believe are all that I sent you from this office; but examine your list and see who and what amount is due you, and I will remit money to settle at once.

A happy and useful New Year to you, my strange brother in the flesh, but dearly beloved in the Lord, because you are true and faithful to the word of our great King, Christ, the Lord. May you follow after God's word, and fear not what man can do to you; remembering that you have been bought with a price, even the precious blood of the Lamb of God. Farewell, Bro. McGary. God bless you.

J. H. VANDYCK.

CEDARVILLE, CRAWFORD Co., ARK.
December 12, 1886.

MY DEAR BRO. MCGARY—Your card to hand in which you solicit my co-operation in Arkansas. I have read the FIRM FOUNDATION, Vol. 2, No. 7, and infer from it that you and your associates are uncompromising advocates of the apostolic doctrine, form of government, church polity and administration, and opposed to all innovations, human traditions and doctrines of men, either taught or practiced in the name of religion or as elements of Christianity. Also, that you would rejoice to see the whole family of God united in one, and but one, co-operative body, actively engaged in the grand and heavenly work of human redemption, fighting the man of sin as a grand army under the blood stained banner of the Prince of the house of David.

If my conclusion is correct, and if the object of the FIRM FOUNDATION is simply to vindicate the claims of the New Covenant in behalf of suffering humanity, as the only guide in religious service in order to the salvation of man from sin and its legitimate consequences, we bid it Godspeed, and cheerfully pledge our time, our pen and means for its circulation in Arkansas.

I have been devotedly teaching the above principles for forty years, and am much firmer in my convictions of their truth than ever before. I know from experience how to sympathize with you and all others who are "evil spoken of" by false brethren.

By your permission, I will write a series of articles on church polity. Truly yours for the truth,

A. ALLISON.

DECEMBER 9, 1886.

A. McGary, Austin, Texas:

Enclosed please find $1, for which please continue the FIRM FOUNDATION to me. Only sorry to say that I haven't more subscriptions to send you. The only objection I have to your paper is that it is not larger and its visits more frequent. I have this to say, however, in regard to your paper: If there were more adherents to the doctrine advocated in your paper there would be more unity existing in the religious world in reference to the way the truth and the life than now exists, and that unity would be warranted by the word of God. When we look at the fruit borne by those claiming to be the followers of Jesus Christ, which is clearly exhibited both in word and act, and take into consideration the parable of the Savior, as given in Matt. xiii, we at once conclude that there are not enough of those that received seed into good ground; too many that have received seed in stony ground and among thorns, in order to the production of the fruit required in the Law of the Spirit of Life. Yours in the faith.

M. M. CANVASS.

DEAR BRO. MCGARY—It is with pleasure I have read the FIRM FOUNDATION one year. It is full of scriptural information, and is so plain that anybody can understand it. May God help you to fight the good fight with patience, ever looking unto Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith. Every true Christian ought to take the FIRM FOUNDATION and get as many to reading it as possible, for there is as much difference in the Christian congregations as there is between them and the sects. May God help us to get together. I had to leave San Saba county, Texas, on account of the drought. I am living in a Baptist settlement. They hit me on all sides. I must have the paper another year. I have not the money now, but will send it as soon as I get it. From your brother in Christ.

In God we trust.

J. H. FRANKLIN.

ALVARADO, JOHNSON Co., TEX.,
November 31, 1886.

DEAR BRO. MCGARY—I will give $5 to make the FIRM FOUNDATION a weekly paper. I will give half now and the other half when you commence its weekly publication, or before if you need it to commence with. If the brotherhood will help you to make the F. F. a weekly paper we then can get ten to one subscribers.

I have been trying to get subscribers for the F. F. They all say it is too high for a monthly paper.

Wishing you success, I remain yours in Christ. Give my love to your better half, sister Lucie. May the Lord bless you all.

W. M. WISE.

ODESSA, LAFAYETTE COUNTY, MO.,
December 20, 1886.

DEAR BROTHER—I see in the supplement of December that Bro. D. Pennington says he will be one of two hundred that will send five names. I am glad to see the interest of my dear Bro. P. I will say that I will be one of one hundred that will send ten names for the weekly F. F., and then will try and send ten more, for I do think if there ever was a time when sound doctrine should be advocated, that time is now, when we have so many innovations in the Church of Christ. Dear brother, let us fight the good fight of faith, that we may lay hold on eternal life.

Dear Bro. McGary, whether you think that you will be able to make the F. F. a weekly or not, I will send six names for the monthly, but my heart's desire and prayer to God is for the weekly.

W. C. DONALDSON.

FIELD CREEK, TEX., Dec. 11, '86.
Mr. A. McGary, Austin, Tex.:

DEAR BROTHER—My subscription expired with the August number of the FIRM FOUNDATION. That makes me sometime in arrears. Find enclosed $1 to pay for the F. F. till next August. It is poverty that has caused me not to pay sooner. Please excuse me this time.

Send the paper, to Field Creek, Llano county, hereafter. You have been sending it to Pontotoc, Mason county, heretofore.

Am very grateful for your sending the FIRM FOUNDATION unpaid for during this time. I assure you I appreciate it. I read every word of each issue. I hope I shall never miss getting a single copy, so long as it continues to teach (as it ever has done) the unadulterated truth.

Yours in the hope of the "everlasting salvation,"

JAS. R. GRAHAM.

PARADISE, TEX., December 16, '86.
Dear Bro. McGary:

I suppose the time for which I have paid for the FIRM FOUNDATION is nearly expired. I am under the necessity of asking you to discontinue it, at least for the present. The scarcity of money in our district is the cause of my not renewing my subscription. While I do not accept your position on reimmersion, I can admire your unflinching devotion to your convictions. I have specially enjoyed Sarai's pure and wholesome articles. My unceasing prayer and labor is for a greater consecration to Christ. Your brother,

W. LIPSCOMB.

ALTO CHEROKEE Co., TEXAS,
December 14, 1886.

BRO. A. MCGARY—A few days ago I got a copy of the F. F. from a brother in this neighborhood. It is the second one I have ever seen. I am well pleased with it. I send you $1 for the paper. Send it to Alto Cherokee county, Texas.

I think, as soon as I can scatter a few copies in this neighborhood, I can get a few more subscribers. I like your stand on the old landmarks.

We have plenty of truth in the Bible, but none to sacrifice or swap for modern innovations. The truth in the hands of only a few is better than an error in the hands of many. Let us remember that purity in the house of God is better than great numbers. R. H. L. McKNIGHT.

MACY, BRAZOS COUNTY, TEX.,
December 15, 1886.

BRO. MCGARY—I have read the FIRM FOUNDATION about eleven months, in which I find no fault. We want truth, nothing more nor less. I have been trying to get a club of ten or fifteen names, but times are so hard they say they cannot get the money.

Enclosed find $5, for which please give each name equal credit for your paper, for as long a time as you can afford: F. M. Ferguson, Crabtree, Haywood county, N. C.; Miss Victoria Baird, Ashville, N. C.; Mrs. Mattie McDonald, Macy, Brazos county, Tex.; B. J. Coleman, Macy, Brazos county, Tex.; Polk Anderson, Macy, Brazos county, Tex.

We will help you more as soon as we can. We want a weekly paper as soon as we can get it. Dear brother, go on in the service of the Lord. We do not expect the world to receive it, but the true Christian people will. Your brother in Christ Jesus.

POLK ANDERSON.

DEAR BRO.—Send the F. F. to the names below, and I will send you the money soon.

Send it to Bro. W. B. Fuller, Fairview, Wilson county, Texas; J. M. Mathis, Fairview, Wilson county, Texas; E. W. Huse, Benton, Atascosa county, Texas; T. P. Fuller, Pleasanton, Atascosa county, Texas.

I will get up some more names and send you by the first of January. Many of the old subscribers will renew by the first of January. We all wish the F. F. much success. May you be successful.

Ever yours, H. H. TURNER.

Report of my labors for 1886: Traveled 2,700 miles, preached 320 discourses, immersed 76 persons into Christ, married 12 couple, officiated at 4 graves, received $221, made some rejoice in the good cause, some got gloriously mad. The brethren are getting tired of the shaking process. Some few, however, are holding on to sect baptism. May God bless you in your noble work. Go on in the spirit of meekness—use the one tried sword.

A. McGary, Austin, Texas:

DEAR BRO.—Please find enclosed 50 cents, which you will credit to my account and keep the F. F. coming. Will do all I can to help you on with your undertaking.

Your brother in Christ,
E. D. MCCOY.

VOCA, McCulloch county, Texas.

Dear Bro.: I suppose my time is up the second time for the F. F., but not like your lawyer brother, I want the paper continued. I hope every old subscriber will get a new one, and renew. You will find enclosed $2. I think "Job Jackson's" reasoning was very good, in case he might want to join "our plea." I remain,

Your Bro.

AN INTERESTING CORRESPONDENCE.

Bro. Hawkins—The committee of brethren appointed at Austin want a good, active evangelist for that region. They have asked me to look out for one suited to the work. They wish one to hold meetings, organize counties and districts for co-operation, get good men to take the Bible and preach the gospel. Can you be induced to take the work in that region? The committee would pay you a living salary. You to raise what money you could in the field in which you labor, the committee being responsible to you for your salary. Let me hear from you at your earliest convenience. Fraternally,
A. J. BUSH,
Thorp's Springs, Texas, Oct. 17.

A. J. Bush, Thorp's Spring, Texas:

MY DEAR BROTHER—Your card of the 17th, ult., was received on my return home some days ago, and contents duly noted. To say I felt flattered by the preference shown me by yourself, and, at the same time, tempted to extend my hand for a share of the lucre at the disposal of "the committee appointed at Austin," is to state the facts rather mildly.

For twelve years I have labored for my Master, and looked to Him and Him alone for my reward. At times my way has seemed difficult; and, but for the cheering and re-assuring promises found in His blessed word, that he careth for those who put their trust in him, I might have hesitated, or even turned my back upon the work I had undertaken. Most of my time I have labored where the brethren were too poor or too little taught to give me more than a meagre support. This may be partly my fault; for I confess that I have devoted much more time in preaching to the unconverted than the instruction of those already enlisted. But under all my privations and so-called hardships, I have ever been better cared for and more kindly treated than was our blessed Savior and his earlier followers. I have always had a place whereon to lay my head.

Whether or not I am "suited to the work" in which I am engaged is not for me to say. I have been reasonably successful in presenting the claims of the gospel. Since "the State Meeting" I have baptized nearly one hundred believing penitents, and set several congregations to keeping house for the Lord by weekly meetings. It may be that "the committee of brethren appointed at Austin" can find a man better "suited to the work" in this region. If so, the field is large, and I will do the best I can by looking along the highways and hedges for those the Master desires brought to the feast.

I try to "set in order the things that are wanting" in every congregation, for which, and with which, I labor. So far as "organizing county and district operations" or what not is concerned, I can say that I am authorized, by the word of God and the church, which is at Coleman, only to organize churches and set in order the things that are wanting in them. Beyond this I cannot go without turning my face toward Rome.

You say you want the gospel preached by him who labors here. If I am not preaching the gospel it is because of my weakness or ignorance of its teachings. So far as I have been able to learn it, I try to declare the whole counsel of God.

The "committee" would pay a living salary. That is the great temptation. The instincts of a husband and father call loudly on me to trust more in the promises of men than in those of God. The devil made a much greater promise than this to my Master. He said he would give him "all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them," if he would but do his will. May not I, with so illustrious an example for my guidance, rejoice that my faith is sufficiently strong to refuse to accept this "living salary" from "the committee of brethren appointed at Austin?"

But "salary" is a word so bewitching! It has in it the idea of now, crisp bank bills; of the musical clink of silver and gold. It is a nice word. It keeps gentle company as the world goes. It is not for the despised of earth, but for the elite. Brother, did Paul get a salary? Did he instruct Timothy and Titus, his beloved sons in the gospel, to preach for salaries? Perhaps he forgot it. But how can this be, when guided, in all things, by the Holy Spirit?

Again; I would be expected to raise what money I could, in my field of labor. How could I raise money? Paul wrote before to the disciples at Corinth that they must raise the money; that there should be no gatherings when he came.

No. Bro. Bush, I cannot accept the commission and accompanying "salary" emanating from "the committee of brethren appointed at Austin," or elsewhere, except from Jerusalem; for "The law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." My commission emanates from a higher source than that you represent, and the promise of a reward is from one much more responsible.

Now, my dear brother, I have given you an outline of the thoughts that have suggested themselves to my mind since the receipt of your card. With your knowledge of the Bible, you will find it an easy task to elaborate each line of thought to a much greater length than is convenient, or necessary in this letter.

May the Lord open your heart, my dear brother, to a fuller trust in his promises, and give you a greater degree of faith, in the prayer of one that loves you. Truly and fraternally yours,
W. R. HAWKINS,
Coleman, Texas, Nov. 9, 1886.

Coleman, Texas, Nov. 9, 1886.

We have two reasons for publishing this correspondence between Bro. Bush and Hawkins: 1. Because we have been requested to; and, 2. Because we heartily approved of Bro. Hawkins' action in the matter, and desire to contrast it with the action of some others who have been wooed and won from the same views that Bro. Hawkins holds on this missionary question, to those embraced and presided over by Bro. Bush. Bro. Bush know full well, when he addressed that letter to Bro. Hawkins that he entertained views adverse to the work Bro. Bush was aiming to enlist him in. There is no doubt about his knowing it, for he heard him express himself fully and freely on that point at the "State Meeting." But these men needed Bro. Hawkins in their business in Coleman and the adjoining counties. He has an influence in that section that they think could mould those brethren in their machinery moulds. So, when all other arguments had failed on him, they concluded to Bush-whack him, and ensnare him with a "salary." When a man has been bought himself he can the more complacently bid on the consciences and convictions of others. If he has been won by the potent argument of "filthy lucre," he is sure to estimate its power in winning others. Doubtless this denier resort that was tried on Bro. Hawkins succeeds oftener than it fails.

Bro McGary:

DEAR SIR—Inclosed please find two dollars, for which please receipt me one dollar for my subscription, and one for Bro. Wm. Montgomery, Harper postoffice, Gillespie county, Texas. I have worked some for your paper, but without any success, partly on account of scarcity of money, but principally on account of some bitter enemies you have here, who oppose you in your noble defence of the truth. Chief among them old Bro. ——. I saw him last Lord's day, at the close of his meeting, call on an old M. E. divine to follow him; recognized him as a brother, one who had grown gray in the work of sect Babylon. This is the color of your enemies, and I hope you are aware of the fact that their name is legion. Bro. McGary, is it right in the sight of God for us to engage with the sects in their unscriptural harangues, to bow with them in their prayers or rise with them in their singing, which is evidence to them that we consider them safe as far as salvation is concerned? I notice most of our brethren engage in worship with them. If God requires it of us, I am guilty of sinning every time I happen to be at sectarian meetings, and stand condemned before God, and as soon as it is pointed out to me as a sin for not taking stock with them, I am more than anxious to repent of this, my wickedness. Speak out, my dear brother, by letter if no other way.
Wm. E.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 18, 1887.

Dear Bro. McGary:

It is true we live in the same great city; however, duty seldom permits us to meet and speak of the many matters of interest that so much concern us at present, though we can write. On last first Lord's day I was requested by one of our ablest preachers of Austin to accompany him to his appointment at Merrittown, twelve miles north of Austin, which point we reached at 11:30, almost frozen, and here met the Methodist circuit rider, (or circus rider). After an introduction, my big brother, without request, surrendered all claims to the day, and volunteered his services to exhort (as he calls it) for the circus man, which proposition was accepted. After the first performance was over, the ring-master, I will call him, requested all to come forward who would agree to pray once each day for a great revival throughout his circuit. (Methodist religion of course.) My big brother was among the first in this performance. What do you think of my big brother? Can he work for Christ and carry out the above mentioned obligation? Is it not equivalent to saying, "Brother circus man, your popular circus is the church. Eph. iv:1. I will exhort the people to come to your mourners' bench, and will there pray with them for their pardon," and as an evidence of pardon, they must feel deep in their hearts the impression made by the spirit, (of anti-Christ). And does he not say that Paul should have exhorted for Elymas—Acts, xiii:8-10—instead of reproving him so roughly? Also, that he was beside himself when he wrote Gal. i:8-10. I guess all say the same who want to exchange for popularity the gospel—Mark, xvi:16—which is the power of God unto salvation: Rom. i:16, 1st Cor. i:18. Brethren, let us preach the gospel.

I also attended a so-called prayer meeting on Wednesday night at the city church, though the programme was wrecked by one brother occupying the entire time in a chit-chat sort of way. One side of the house remunerates the brother for his Lord's day preaching, though I am satisfied the other side would tip the scales against them for his silence were they permitted to do so. The theme at the union meeting (Baptist church) on Lord's day evening was "Greater reverence for the Lord's day." However, they got no nearer it than the Sabbath, (Saturday).

Yours, in the one hope,
J. D. MARKETT.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, FEBRUARY 1, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to McGary & Hansbrough, or to the FIRM FOUNDATION. All checks or money orders should be made payable to McGary & Hansbrough.

SPECIAL OFFER.

We will send the Farm and Fireside for one year, to any one who will send us one new twelve month subscriber for the FIRM FOUNDATION. The Farm and Fireside is a very useful paper for house-wives. It is a monthly, published at Springfield, Ohio. For a club of five or more new twelve months subscribers, we will send the getter up of the club and each of the new subscribers a copy of the Farm and Fireside for twelve months.

WE will give the FIRM FOUNDATION and the Christian Preacher both for twelve months for $1.50.

IN OUR last issue we stated that the conclusion of the dialogue between the "pastor" and the "Jacksons" would appear in this issue; but there has been such confusion in moving and starting an office of our own that we have left it out, but we hope to give it in our next.

WE aim to get the paper out on the 1st and 15th of each month, and would have commenced with the new year, but for the delay occasioned by our recent change of offices. We have bought out the Texas Law Review office, and have moved it to 1203, East 12th street, where we will be pleased to meet our brethren who may visit Austin. Henceforth we will publish the paper ourselves, and hope to have each issue out on time.

ONE of the most bitter enemies of the F. F. is a brother who does not believe that confession with the mouth is absolutely necessary, nor that the design of the ordinance of baptism need be understood in order to its validity. Yet he once authorized the writer to state in the FIRM FOUNDATION that he held that both of these conditions were absolutely necessary. Neither does he believe that the administrator cuts any figure as to the validity of baptism. And yet, this brother has been twice immersed, and is now talking about making a trip to California, to get Bro. C. Kendrick to baptize him. But he is so deceitful that we do not know that he really means what he says. He makes some pretensions to Greek scholarship, and says that the original word eis, from which "for" is translated, as found in Acts 8:38, in that particular place does not carry the meaning of "in order to." When he meets the writer he says we are doing a good work, but he tells others that we are very ignorant and presumptuous. We hope if he does go to California that he may try the briny waters of the Pacific thoroughly, to see if it will not cleanse him of deceit—although baptism is not for the filth of the flesh—maybe a third dipping, and in salt water, too, may reach the seat of the leprous spot.

SINCE our last issue we have received seven dollars and twenty cents from Corinth congregation, Sullivan county, Indiana, for Texas drought sufferers; also, one dollar from Samuel R. Engle, of same state and county. We have sent the same to Bro. W. W. Hood, of Palo Pinto county, to be used for the needy in his section. This is truly the work of the Lord, and the brethren ought to abound in it. It is better than building meeting houses, hiring pastors, or even subscribing for papers. Will the readers of this paper seriously think of their duty in this matter? Remember, that while many of you are surrounded by comfort, even affluence, many in the drought stricken region must go hungering and shivering through the northern blasts of this winter unless you slacken the tension of your purse strings and help to supply their necessities. If you will not help these, you would not help your Lord and Master if He were here; for He said that when His disciples fed and clothed their needy brethren they were feeding and clothing Him. See Math. xxv: 31-46. Brethren would you clothe and feed Jesus Christ if he were here? Then prove it, by doing these things for his destitute disciples and brothers and sisters. Some brethren are disposed to regard the reports from the drought-stricken region as overdrawn, but we have abundant grounds for believing that actual suffering is starving many families in the face in that section. The county judges of that section have held a meeting and petitioned to the state and general governments for relief, and to the people at large. Doubtless there will be a liberal response from these governments, but it takes time to move the ponderous machinery of a government, and many may suffer in the mean time, and besides Christians should not depend upon Caesar to feed and clothe their brethren. True Christians will not.

"Implicit faith has been sometimes ludicrously styled fides carbo-naria, from the noted story of one who, examining an ignorant collier on his religious principles, asked him what it was he believed. He answered, "I believe what the church believes." The other rejoined, "what, then, does the church believe?" He replied readily, "The church believes what I believe." The other, desirous if possible to bring him to particulars, once more resumes his inquiry: "Tell me, then, I pray you, what it is that you and the church both believe?" The only answer the collier could give was, "Why, truly, sir, the church and I both believe the same thing." This is implicit faith in perfection, and, in the estimation of some celebrated doctors, the sum of necessary and saving knowledge in a Christian."—Campbell's Lectures.

"LANDMARKERS AND JOHN SMITH. (RACCOON?)"

We see an indirect attack upon the F. F. under the above heading in a recent issue of the Guide, by Bro. S. W. Crutcher. We presume that Bro. Crutcher enjoys the reputation of an honest, truthful Christian, but in his article he very grossly misrepresents us. We can see no excuse but that of blinded prejudice for his doing so, either, since he wrote about us from what he claims to have seen in a copy of our paper, which, he says, "fell into his hands."

Our enemies among our brethren (false brethren) are more furious and fearless in their misrepresentations of us than our sectarian friends, if they are not sectarians, too. Bro. Crutcher says: "An issue of one of their papers fell into my hands, and I found a lengthy article in it against both Bro. J. W. McGarvey and F. G. Allen, because they would accept as valid a baptism administered by a Baptist minister." Now, with due deference to Bro. Crutcher, we boldly say that he saw no such thing in that paper, and we will give him the entire range of all that we have said from our first issue to the last to bring up any attack that has been upon Bro. McGarvey, Allen or any one else, because they would accept as valid a baptism administered by a Baptist minister. Then why will he say things about our teaching that have no foundation in fact? This class of brethren have decided upon "letting" us and our paper "severely alone;" but when they think they can give us a crippling thrust they forget their "letting alone" tactics, and say too much, more than the facts will justify. Now why did Bro. Crutcher assign the position to us, that we oppose sect baptism because of the administrator? He can't show one word that justifies him in charging that upon us. If we would take that position, then they would be in for a discussion. "Severely letting alone" would not be the order of the day then. Now if Bro. Crutcher will try to show where we have attacked Bro. Allen, McGarvey, or any one else from the grounds that he has stated we did, then we will believe that he so understood us. We will give him ample space in our columns to show it, or to confess that he was wrong; and we will send him a copy containing this to let him know what our readers will be expecting from him. We did attack Bro. McGarvey and Bro. Allen upon their inconsistencies. Poor Bro. Allen, he has passed "over the river" and left his to mar his otherwise useful and consistent labors in the "vineyard" of his Master. We hope that Bro. McGarvey and other prominent brethren who have made the same kind of a record for themselves, will not pass over the dark valley of death and leave theirs in the same condition. For, while death calls out all of the good there is in its vic-times, and has a general ameliorating tendency upon all their faults, these glaring inconsistencies in reference to sect baptism cannot be effaced by it. If such brethren could cultivate a little more humility while they are living, to enable them to either give their reasons for changing their long entertained and published views bearing on this question, or confess their inconsistencies, it would make them feel better while they live, and remove from their records, that will survive death, a deformity that will mar them throughout future generations if they are not corrected. Now, we will give the points upon which we criticized Bros. McGarvey & Allen, and it is the very article Bro. Crutcher alludes to in his misrepresentation of our position. Bro. Allen asked some Baptist the following questions: "Did the apostles baptize believers on a simple confession of their faith in Christ, without an experience involving a sense of pardon? So do the Disciples, but so do not the Baptists." "Did they tell inquiring sinners who believed that Jesus was the Christ, to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins? So do the disciples, but so do not the Baptists." Now, we held and still hold, that these are inconsistent questions, or rather, they manifest an inconsistent attitude in any man who will admit that with all of this marked difference between the practice of the Apostles and the Baptists, that there is no difference in effect—that both end in Christ. As to Bro. McGarvey, he said upon the confession: "Fidelity to the word of God blinds us to this confession alone, (referring to the confession as found in Acts viii: 37) and, in clinging to it, we have every assurance which inspiration can give that we are right. And again, on baptism, he said: "Those only preach Jesus correctly who give to immersion the same prominence which belongs to it in apostolic discourses." We also said that this did not look like clinging very closely to this confession, when he recognizes, in its stead: "I believe God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins," and neither does this Baptist confession, which he is endorsing in his latter days, look much like "giving to immersion the same prominence that belongs to it in apostolic discourses," since it is made before they are immersed, and Baptists will not receive them to immersion till they do make it. This is not all we have said about the inconsistencies of these brethren. Neither it is all we expect to say about it. But there is just as much of the position that Bro. Crutcher assigns to us in this as he can find in anything said by the writer, or by Bros. Hansbrough, Durst, Jackson, Stone, Grubbs or McCarty, or any other contributor to our paper. Now, that it is in order for Bro. Crutcher to show that what he has said is true, we will say no more on that point. As to what Bro. Crutcher has to say about Bro. John Smith, while it is highly probable that a brother who will misrepresent his brethren as he has us in his article, may also misrepresent Bro. Smith, we are willing, for the sake of argument, to treat it as strictly true. Then what of it? Should the FIRM FOUNDATION cease to advocate a question because Bro. Smith held a contrary view? This, it would seem is Bro. Crutcher's idea. Let us look at the illustration that he gives as Bro. Smith's, though we would have thought Bro. Smith was too sensible for that: "It is like this; if you were to get a deed to ten acres of land at government prices, you might hold that deed for years and regard it as almost valueless; but if a gold mine is discovered on that land you begin to appreciate it as never before. I see a beauty and a significance in baptism now that I did not see when I was hearing the old Baptists of our day talk of this door into the church; but I saw from the commission that my title was clear."

Bro. Crutcher seems to think that this illustration sustains or strengthens the position that we are opposing, but it does not. We are not trying to overturn established claims. We do not deny that when a man gets a title to a tract of land that he is entitled to all of the gold mines that may be found on it. But we are opposing bogus titles. We are denying that a man will get a gold mine on a false or bogus title. To the law and the testimony to try title, is our work. Can't you see the point? Bro. "Raccoon" John Smith could if he were here.

A. McG.

"THE THIRD EPISTLE OF PETER."

We give in this issue of the FIRM FOUNDATION the third Epistle of Peter, or the clergy's looking glass, taken from the Burnet edition of the "Christian Baptist," pages 166, 167 and 168, and we give it because we think it so well suited to, and descriptive of, many of our preaching brethren now, especially in cities; and we would advise them to read and re-read it and be profited thereby.

E. HANSBROUGH.

CHAPTER I.

The Style and Manner of Living.

Now you who are called and chosen to go forth to all nations and among all people, in time present and time to come, to preach the word, see you take to yourselves marks, nay, many outward marks, whereby you shall be known by men.

Be you not called as men are called; but be you called Pope, Archbishop, Archdeacon, or Divine or Reverend, and Right Reverend, or some like holy name; so may you show forth your honor and your calling.

And let your dwelling places be houses of splendor and edifices of cost; and let your doors be decked with plates of brass, and let your names, even your reverend titles be graven thereon; so it shall be as a sign.

Let your garments in which you minister not as the garments of men, neither let them be "seamless garments woven throughout;" but let them be robes of richest silk and robes of fine linen, of curious device and of costly workmanship; and have you robes of black and robes of white, that you may change the one for the other; so shall you show forth your wisdom and humility.

Let your fare be sumptuous, not plain and frugal as the fare of the husbandman who tills the ground; but live you on the fat of the land, taking "good heed for the morrow and wherewithal you shall be fed."

And drink you of the wines of the vintage brought from afar, and wines of great price; then shall the light of your spirits be the light of your countenances, and your faces shall be bright, even as the morning sun shall you show forth your moderation and your temperance in all things.

Let the houses in which you preach be called churches, and let them be built in manner of great ornament without, and adorned with much cost within; with rich pillars and capitals, and with fine altars and pedestals, and urns of precious stones, and cloths and velvet of scarlet, and vessels of silver.

And let there be rooms for the changing of robes, and places for the precious metals and mitres.

And let the houses be divided into seats for the congregation, and let every man know his own seat; and let the first seats in front of the altar be for the rich that pay by thousands; and the next for the poorer that pay by hundreds; and the last for those that pay by tens. And let the poor man sit behind the door.

And let the seats be garnished with cushions and crimson cloth, and with fine velvet; for if the houses of players and vain people who deal in idle sayings and shows of mockery, be rich and gorgeous, how much more so should be the houses that are dedicated to him "that is meek and lowly of spirit."

CHAPTER II.

The Choosing of Ministers.

When you go out to choose holy ones to be of your brethren, and to minister at the altar, choose you from among the youth, even those whose judgments are not yet ripe, and whose hearts know not yet whether they incline to God or Mammon.

But you are wise, and you shall know the inclining of their future spirits, and you shall make them incline to the good things which the church has in store for them that are called, even those that shall be called by you.

Then shall you have them taught exceeding many things. They shall not be as "ignorant fishermen," or husbandmen, or men speaking one tongue, and serving God only by the knowledge of his law.

Nay, you shall make them wise in the things of your wisdom; yea, exceedingly cunning in many mysteries, even the mysteries which you teach.

Then shall they be fitted for the "laying on of hands," and when the bishop has done his office then shall they be reverend divines.

But if any man believe that he is called by God to speak to his brethren

"without money and without price," though his soul be bowed to the will of the Father, and though he work all righteousness, and "speak as with the tongue of an angel"—if he be not made a divine by your rulers and by the hands of a bishop, then is he not a divine, nor shall he preach.

He that is chosen by you shall give you honor, and shall be honored by men, and honored by women; and verily he expects his reward.

CHAPTER III.

The Performance of Preaching.

When you go to the church to preach, go not by the retired way where goes those that would shun the crowd, but go in the highway where go the multitude, and see that you have on the robes of black, and take heed that your pace be measured well, and that your march be stately.

Then shall your "hearts be lifted up," even as the hearts of mighty men shall they be lifted up. And you shall be gazed upon by the multitude, and they shall honor you; and the men shall honor you, and the women shall glorify you, even by the women shall you be glorified.

And when you go in, go not as the ordained, prepared only with a soul to God, and with a heart to men, and a spirit filled with the Holy Ghost; but go you with your pockets full of papers and full of divine words; even in your pockets shall your divinity be.

And let your sermon be full of "the enticing words of man's wisdom," and let it be beautified with just divisions, with tropes and with metaphors, and with hyperbole, and apostrophe, and with interrogation, and with acclamation, and with syllogisms, and with sophisms, and throughout let declamation be.

And take good heed to your attitudes and your gestures, knowing when to bend and when to erect, when to lift your right hand and when your left, and let your motions be graceful, even in your attitudes and in your gestures let your grace be. Thus shall you be pleasing in the eyes of the people and graceful in their sight.

Let your voice at times be smooth as the stream of the valley, and soft as the breeze that waves not the bough on its bank; and at times let it swell like the wave of the ocean, or like the whirlwind on the mountain top.

Then shall you charm the ears of your hearers and their hearts shall be softened, and their minds shall be astounded, and their souls shall be inclined to you; and the men shall incline to you, and likewise the women; yea, to your sayings and to your persons shall they be inclined.

And be you mindful not to offend the people; rebuke you not their sins; but when you rebuke sin, rebuke it at a distance; and let no man apply your sayings to his own case; so shall he not be offended.

If a brother shall raise up the banner of war against brother, and Christians against Christians, rebuke them not; but be some of you on the one side and some on the other; and tell the one host that God is on their side, and the other host that he is on their side; so make them bold to kill. And even among swords and lancets let your black robes be seen.

Preach you not "Peace on earth and good will to men," but preach you glory to the victor, and victory to the brave.

If any man go into a foreign land and seize upon his fellow man, and put irons on his feet and irons on his hands, and bring him across the great deep into bondage; nay, if he tear asunder the dearest ties of nature, the tenderest leagues of the human heart; if he tear the wife from the husband, and force the struggling infant from its mother's bleeding breast, rebuke him not!

And although he sell them in foreign slavery to toll beneath the lash all their days, tell him not that his doings are of Antichrist; for lo! he is rich and gives to the church, and is esteemed pious, so shall you not offend him, lest peradventure he withdraw himself from your flock.

Teach them to believe that you have the care of their souls, and that the saving mysteries are for your explaining; and when you explain your mysteries, encompass them round about with words, as with a bright veil, so bright that through it no man can see.

And lo! you shall blind the judgments of men, (and more especially of women,) as with a band of iron; and you shall make them blind in the midst of light, even as the owl is blind in the noon day sun; and behold you shall lead them captive to your reverend wills.

CHAPTER IV.

The Clergy's Reward.

"In all your gettings" get money! Now, therefore, when you go forth on your ministerial journey, go where there are silver and gold, and where each man will pay according to his measure. For verily I say you must get your reward.

Go you not forth as those that have been sent, "without two coats, without gold or silver, or brass in their purses; without scrip for their journey, or shoes, or staves;" but go you forth in the good things of this world.

And when you shall hear of a church that is vacant and has no one to preach therein, then be that a call to you, and be you mindful of the call, and take you charge of the flock thereof and of the fleece thereof, even of the golden fleece.

And when you shall have fleeced your flock, and shall know of another call, and if the flock be greater, or rather if the fleece be greater, then greater be also to you the call. Then shall you leave your old flock, and of the new flock shall you take the charge.

Those who have "freely received" let them "freely give," and let not men have your words "without money nor without price," but bargain you for hundreds, and bargain you for thousands, even for thousands of silver and gold shall you bargain.

Over and above the price for which you have sold your service, take you also gifts, and be you mindful to refuse none, saying, "Lo! I have enough!" but receive gifts from them that go in chariots, and from them that feed flocks, and from them that earn their morsel by the sweat of their brow.

Yea, take you gifts of all, and take them in gold and in silver, and in bread; in wine and in oil; in raiment and in fine linen.

And the more that the people give you the more will they honor you; for they shall believe that "in giving to you they are giving to the Lord;" for behold their sight shall be taken from them, and they shall be blind as bats, and "shall know not what they do."

And you shall wax richer and richer, and grow greater and greater, and you shall be lifted up in your own sight, and exalted in the eyes of the multitude; and lucre shall be no longer filthy in your sight. And verily you have your reward.

In doing these things you shall never fail. And may abundance of gold and silver and bank notes, and corn, and wool, and flax, and spirits, and wine, and land be multiplied to you, both now and hereafter. Amen.

BRO. BURNETT'S PERVERTED GOSPEL.

Personalities are ugly things when spoken—more ugly when written. Our weapons of warfare are not carnal, but mighty, through God, to the pulling down of strong holds, casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God." Too many of us, however, are like the untutored savage, who hunts his prey with poisoned darts; we dip the Truth into the venom of malice, and send the poisoned shaft, winged with envy, to rankle in the hearts of—our brethren. "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of." Brethren, in our discussions let us avoid personalities.

I have never claimed infallibility. I realize every day that I still live among men, and that as man, I am still cumbered with some of the weaknesses and infirmities that pertain to human nature. I am sorry that my 'frail memory' led me into such a mistake as to charge Bro. B. with teaching "that faith, repentance and baptism are parts of the seed of the kingdom." Bro. B. denies having so taught, hence I was mistaken. Bro. B. says: "The position they (Bro. McG. and myself) occupy involves consequences which we are not at present prepared to accept." We should never stop to speculate about consequences. The religious world is now flooded with error flowing from the fountain of imagined consequences connected with the fall of man. The strongest argument (?) generally resorted to by sectarians in their opposition to the gospel doctrine of baptism for the remission of sins is that they are "not prepared to accept the consequences." Bro. B. should not use sectarian thunder.

Besides this, it is illogical to charge the consequences of any doctrine upon him who maintains it, unless he expressly avows them. Hedges' Logic. The question with us should be: "How readest thou what is written in the law?" Lu. x: 26. This principle applies, also, to what our brother says about "the antagonism (of our position) to the position held by the fathers and all the leading lights of this reformation." I delight to read and study the works of our great and good men, but I am not prepared to accept any doctrine simply because they teach it. "To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to this, it is because there is no light in them." Isa., viii: 20.

Bro. B. adds further: "It" (our position) "is in direct conflict with the plain statement of the Scriptures." This is the "most unkindest cut of all." My dear Brother, you will confer an everlasting favor upon us by citing us to some of those plain statements of Scripture that are in direct conflict with our teaching, and I, for one, promise to abide by the plain statements of Scripture. Let them conflict with whomsoever they may.

With regard to the seed of the kingdom, Bro. B. says: "He taught that faith, repentance and baptism are produced by the seed, and are no part of the seed." (Italics mine) He makes his figures to go on all fours. For his meditation, I give an extract from one of the "leading lights" of this reformation in his comments on the parable of the Sower and Seed:

"The fruit is the course of life which the word requires; therefore, dropping the figure, the fourth class continue to obey the word of God, while the others either never begin, or beginning, sooner or later, they discontinue their obedience." McGarvey's Com. on Mat.

The word of God produces faith, repentance and baptism because it requires these things of man. In obeying them, man obeys the word of God; they are, therefore, parts of the word of God.

"A thousand baptisms planted in the heart of a man would not produce a single sprig of Christian life." A thousand is not necessary; only one baptism required by the word of God. Can a man have Christian life without obedience to "the Name of Jesus?" John xx: 30-31. Can obedience be "from the heart" unless the law to be obeyed be first in the heart? The promise of God under the New Covenant is: "I will put my laws in their mind and write them in their hearts."—Heb. viii: 10. How can Baptism be obedience unless conscience (a faculty of the heart) recognizes the authority that commands it? And how can Christian life be enjoyed unless the "heart is sprinkled from an evil conscience" in baptism?

Bro. Burnett still insists that Paul defines the gospel in 1 Cor. xv: 1-4. I still deny it, and again ask his attention to Paul's language: "For I delivered to you among the first things what I also received first, that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures."—McKnight's Com. on Epistles; Living Oracles, Lango Com.

Paul's declaration of these three facts cannot with any propriety of speech be called a definition of the gospel. Paul does not define the gospel at all, but does speak of it as a system, consisting of different elements. What these different elements are we learn by taking the preachings of the apostles and their writings.

"For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, because it is the power of God for salvation to every one who believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. For the righteousness of God by faith is revealed in it in order to faith; as it is written, 'but the just by faith shall live.'" Rom., 1: 16-17—McKnight's Trans. The "righteousness of God," here said to be revealed in the gospel, is something that man must submit to or obey—see Rom., 1: 20-23, and all of Rom., x.

I referred in my last to Paul's manner of speech that Bro. B. might see that in no single instance was an attempt made to define the gospel, much less to limit that definition to three facts. Take the following Scriptures, and you can readily understand that the gospel of Christ is something more than three facts:

"And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, 'In thee shall all nations be blessed.'" Gal. iii: 8. "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel shall live of the gospel." 1 Cor., ix: 14. See also, 18th verse. See 2 Thes., 1: 8. But Bro. Burnett says, "We have in the New Testament the gospel, the commands of the gospel and the promises of the gospel. A logical mind should not confound these distinct things." Common sense is sometimes better than logic, especially when that logic leads to such confusion as above quotation. Any one can see that Bro. B.'s use of the word "gospel" in the above extract is expressive of a plan, system or scheme in which are included commands and promises. This is the true use of the word, as evidenced by the writings of "the fathers and leading lights of this reformation," Bro. B. included. No logical mind will fail to distinguish between facts, commands, promises and threats. These distinct elements are combined together by divine wisdom and presented to man as the gospel of the Son of God, that grand system of divine philanthropy through which man may appropriate and enjoy life. The gospel is glad news. So it is; but what glad news is there to poor, lost sinners in the three facts disconnected from the commands and promises? What glad news even in the promises, unless man be how shown to attain and enjoy them? Go to some sectarian meeting and there you will see the facts of the gospel preached, and the promises also, while the commands are either ignored or perverted. Yet according to Bro. Burnett they do not pervert the gospel, because they preach the facts just as he does.

How did those false brethren in Galatia pervert the gospel of Christ? They wanted to add some of the commands of the law to the gospel. Such an addition would pervert the gospel from that end for which God designed it. Please tell us, Bro. Burnett whether facts can be perverted or not. I can understand that a fact may be denied, doubted, disbelieved, but cannot see how it can be perverted. Commands and promises may be perverted; and herein we find some of the evils of sectarianism. They presumptuously claim to receive and enjoy promises before obedience, and they pervert God's commands from that end for which he designed them.

As to your questions, Bro. Burnett, I would ask, "What is the chaff to the wheat?" "He that observeth the wind shall not sow; and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap."—Solomon.

Bro. Burnett asks:

1. Where was the church of Christ seventy-five years ago? A. Wherever there was an assembly of saints congregated according to the New Testament teaching, and observing the ordinances as therein delivered.

2. Did Alexander Campbell and his co-laborers set up a new church? Sectarians say they did. I do not believe they did.

3. If the church of Christ failed on earth, what will you do with those Scriptures which said it should never fail?

When I find those Scriptures I will then know what to do with them.

4. Was the little stone spoken of by Daniel destroyed and lost, and did Alexander Campbell cut out another just like the first?

No, it was not lost, but there was a great deal of rubbish piled on it, and Alexander Campbell and his co-laborers pulled away a great deal of that rubbish, and brought again to the light that Foundation first laid in Zion.

J. W. JACKSON.

CATLIN, Ind., Jan. 4, 1887.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Being at home, and having a little leisure, I have concluded to write a few lines for the FIRM FOUNDATION. The present time requires constant, diligent teaching. In the midst of the variety of teaching of the present day, the people seem to be dreadfully bewildered. It seems that instead of looking to the Word of Truth for a perfect way, they incline to follow after the cunningly devised fables and false teaching of sectarian babblers. While this is the case, it becomes the more necessary that we the more earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. Jude says: "Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you and exhort you that you should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Now, if we examine this passage closely, we will see that it contradicts a very prominent sectarian doctrine. Sectarians teach the people that faith is an immediate gift of God. That in answer to prayer God bestows faith—the faith. That faith and remission of sins are simultaneous gifts with grace in passing into Jesus Christ. Notice, then, that Jude says that we are to earnestly contend for the faith that was once delivered unto the saints. The faith that was delivered to the saints was the faith of the gospel. This we may learn certainly, by searching the word of truth. In the first place then, Paul says, "faith comes by hearing the word of God." Rom. x: 17. "Whoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved. How, then, shall they call on him in whom they have not believed; and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard?" John says: "Many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of His disciples, which are not written in this book; but these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and believing you might have life through His name." This certainly is true faith, since it leads to life in the name of Christ. This is the faith we must earnestly contend for. In any other kind of faith there is no saving virtue. Any other kind of faith only leads astray. Persons who claim to receive faith directly from heaven, believe so on false testimony. They have been told by those who themselves have been deceived; and thus they have been led to expect something not promised in all God's word; but is contrary to that word. What does Paul say again in his letter to the Hebrews? "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip; for if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by those who heard him?" This salvation began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by those who heard him. In confirming this salvation the faith must have been delivered. First, Christ delivered it to the apostles, and secondly, the apostles delivered it to us. Hence Christ prayed for all who should believe on Him through their word. He prayed that they might all be one. So all who believe on Christ through the word of the apostles are one, or his prayer was not heard. But at the grave of Lazarus Jesus said that His father always heard him.—John xi: 42. If those who believe on him through the word of the apostles are one, then they must be separate from others. For if others are one with such why did Jesus use the above language? Why did not he include those who should believe on him through any other means? Simply because there were no other means intended to be used. And all who presume to use any other means, render themselves obnoxious to God, violate His law, and propose to go according to their feelings. Notwithstanding all this, some will receive them as Christians.

We will now appeal to Paul once more. He says that when Jesus met him going to Damascus, and he had fallen to the ground, Jesus said, "Stand upon thy feet; for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister, and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in which I will appear unto thee, delivering thee from the people and from the Gentiles, to whom now I send thee, to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them that are sanctified by faith that is in me." Acts, xxvi:16, 17, 18. He was to open the eyes of the Gentiles. Not their natural eyes, but their understanding by a presentation of the truth of the gospel; and by so doing he was turn to them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God. Yes, Paul was to do this. No praying for the Holy Spirit and fire here. How vain and silly, then, are those who try to persuade God to abandon the means which He has ordained for the salvation of the people; and to adopt some other means. Sometimes they are presumptuous enough, even, to ask God to try some untried means, as if God must make experiments to ascertain what was necessary to accomplish His designs. Yet with some, this presumptuous wickedness is Christianity.

The apostle James says: "Of His own will begat He us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of His creatures." "Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word which is able to save your souls." James 1:18-21. But he says that one must be not only a hearer, but a doer of the word. The word then directs what should be done. From this it is clear, that God expects us to do His commandments, that we may have right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates into the city. Where, then, is the commandment to pray to God for faith and pardon direct from heaven? It is not to be found in all the New Covenant.

The apostle Peter also bears testimony to the same effect. He says: "Seeing you have purified your souls in obeying the truth unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that you love one another with a pure heart fervently; being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which lives and abides forever. For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withers, and the flower thereof falls away; but the word of the Lord endures forever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you."

They were born of the seed of the kingdom, which is the word of God. All Christians are begotten by the word, and born of water. All who claim to be begotten and born in any other way, disclaim the Lord's way, deceive themselves and are simply blundering in total darkness; blind leading the blind, and must inevitably fall into the ditch. There can scarcely be anything more different than gospel faith and sectarian faith; and yet how few care to make any distinction. Instead of earnestly contending for the faith, they will compromise the faith without any contention. If to-day the kingdom of Christ was left altogether in the keeping of compromisers and sectarian apologists, it would be soon wholly abandoned, and all the marks of its identity obliterated. Many are seeking to efface all the distinguishing characteristics of our religion, and to reduce the church to a miserable sect, and by that means bring about a peace. The devil has tried various schemes ever since the establishment of the church, to destroy it, but this last scheme to get Christians to fraternize with sects is likely to prove the most effectual of all his manoeuvres. I, with you and a few others, are to-day holding the fort. If we could induce enough of the brethren to take the FIRM FOUNDATION—to bring it pretty generally before the brethren and give it strength, it would be more encouraging.

Brethren and friends, let us do all in our power to give strength to the FIRM FOUNDATION, as it is yet the only paper that will defend the whole truth. Some others are near the truth, but not quite bold enough in its defense.

We pray and labor for the success of the F. F. We hope God will bless all its friends. With kindest regards I remain Yours, in bonds of love,

I. C. STONE.

WEST, TEXAS, Jan. 3, 1887.

Dear Brother McGary:

It is something so unusual for me to take a pleasure trip, I feel like I must write to tell you about it. Availing myself of excursion rates for the holidays, I stepped aboard the north bound train of the Missouri Pacific railway on the morning of the 20th of December, en route for the Christmas meeting at Dallas, and arrived at Fort Worth 7:15. Being accustomed to rural districts and small villages mostly, Fort Worth appeared like a large place. While standing on the platform, notwithstanding the din and confusion—dominant in which was the whistling of engines and whooping and yelling of hack drivers—I caught the words "FIRM FOUNDATION." Looking in the direction from which the words came, I saw two gentlemen starting towards town. My curiosity—or interest I might say—being somewhat aroused, I followed them, that I might, perchance, hear more upon the subject. Of course, I inferred at once that they were brethren, but as brethren will sometimes differ, and very widely, too, we know with sorrow, so these brethren differed upon the merits of F. F.; one saying it had the truth, the other opposing it emphatically. I said not a word. Did not make myself known—but had a strong impulse so to do, to congratulate the one on his stand for the truth and endorsement of F. F., and to aid him in converting the other into a subscriber for the same. I felt an almost irresistible desire to inquire of the parties their names, but thinking this would appear too impertinent, I returned to take the train for Dallas. Boarded the Texas Pacific, and arrived at Dallas 9:25 p. m., in time for meeting. Not knowing where the church was I hesitated whether to take a street car or bus or walk. Decided to walk. I had not gone far, however, before I was accosted by a polite negro barber asking if I did not wish to have my hair cut. My hair was rather long, and having dressed hastily to take the train at 8 o'clock not taking time to comb, I presume the barber had good reason for thinking it needed attention, so I consented. During the cutting and shampooing he said, "You are a preacher, ain't you?" How that darkey took up such an idea I don't know, unless he detected in me two characteristics of most preachers, viz: Impudence and Ignorance. Any way I felt better and looked better to the amount of fifty cents. Again I took the street to look for the church, and soon found myself in front of a church labeled "Commerce Street Christian Church." It proved to be not the church I desired to find; for I found upon inquiry it had an organ in it, and knowing this was not one of the appurtenances of the Church of Christ spoken of in the Bible, I concluded somebody had made a mistake in placing the name "Christian church" upon it; so I turned to find the other church of the city bearing the same name, but without this human addition, the organ. I soon arrived at Bryant street Christian church, found open doors, and Bro. Wilmeth talking to a small audience, mostly preachers. Upon closing his talk he called upon the "pastor" of Commerce street church to lead in prayer. He prayed that God might increase our faith. His language manifests a lack of knowledge of the Gospel of Christ, and his manner has none of the Christian love and courtesy that usually characterizes a follower of Christ.

The meeting adjourned, the next consideration was a stopping place, or temporary home. I was certainly fortunate, for my home was with Sister Rawlins, a true Christian woman of the Apostolic order, capable of administering to the physical wants of her brethren in the way of good fare, etc., and also of admonishing them and instructing them in the way of the Lord more perfectly. I would that we had more Priscillas, who are not afraid to point out to the preachers their faults and to rebuke their vanity.

We have some good brethren and sisters in this church. Bro. Gano preaches for them. I was very favorably impressed with him—think him a good man and a good preacher. Brethren Joe Harding and Thomas Burnett were there with their bee gum hats, tall enough to make three hats for any preacher. Bro. Joe is a wide-awake man, full of love and zeal for the good cause. Bro. Burnett is a "Messenger" man all over, and tries to make the impression on the brethren that the Messenger has the Progressionists to fight. I love Brother B., and desire his good, but I believe he is between two fires, and must warm by one or the other sooner or later. He knows the truth, and if he does not stand upon it and advocate it he will be punished for not doing it. We don't want any "fudging" by any one. Let every one stand on one side or the other. I, for one, "hate every false way," and will not support any man or paper that cannot give a "thus saith the Lord" as authority for everything taught, and would say to brethren everywhere, especially in Eastern Texas—Houston, Trinity and Angelina counties—to withdraw themselves from those professed teachers who would bind upon them the doctrines and commandments of men summed up in their missionary societies. Let us stand fast in the liberty wherewith we have been called, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. Our Master said: "If there come any unto you and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed, for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deed."—2 John, 1:10.

I know well that "The love of money is the root of all evil," and is causing much of the trouble in Texas to-day, and I would pray to my brethren everywhere, pander not to this evil, but, guided by the law of God laid down in His Book, lay by of your means as the Lord has prospered you, and support those noble preachers that go forth proclaiming the Gospel in its purity and simplicity, being no respecters of persons, proclaiming it to the poor as well as the rich. In this way you will be honoring the Lord with your substance, and not risking His displeasure in remitting His money to Treasurer Smith, Bishop Bush or Candidate McPherson.

All these thoughts, and many more, were called up by meeting with the brethren and hearing the many things of vital interest to our Master's cause discussed by them. Enough for the present. Shall take next train homeward bound. More anon. Your Brother in Christ,

LEVI SPEER.

A WANDERING STAR.

Bro. Burnett is making a furious effort to taunt us into a pursuit of his burly-burly, helter-skelter stampede away from the question at issue. We said that he could not point out a Scripture that would involve our position in any difficulty. To this he says we are "ignorant of the fact that there are prophecies which teach that Christ's kingdom shall not fall on the earth." He proposes to add to our "stock of Scriptural knowledge" by citing us to Dan., 11:44. He wants to know of us if this Scripture "looks like the man in the moon, whose name is John Smith?" It looks about as much like him as it looks like the position of the man who teaches two faiths, and who says in one article that the facts of the Gospel are not to be obeyed and then crosses himself in his next by saying, "thus we obey the three facts," whose name is Tom Burnett. Poor fellow, we have kept him skipping about, saying, "tis and 'tain't, you shall and you shan't, you will and you won't, you'll be damned if you do, and you'll be damned if you don't," till he is waspish about it. But he ought not to blame us for this, he is such an artless dodger that his bobbles are so palpable that everybody sees them. We said his head was hard, and he says ours is empty; perhaps we are both correct. He advises us to "harden ours up, and fill it up, by rubbing it against the Scriptures, and against church history;" but we don't believe that there is much profit in merely rubbing one's head against things. This is what is the matter with Bro. Burnett, he has been rubbing his head against the Scriptures, and Orchard's history, till he has bruised it a little on the outside, which has caused it to swell up so that he advertises one of his debates as, "the liveliest discussion that ever took place on the American continent." We realize very sensibly that we need more knowledge, and are ever willing and anxious to receive information, but we do not fancy the rubbing process, we have seen its bad effects on our brother. Daniel said that in the days of certain kings the God of heaven would set up a kingdom which should never be destroyed, but should stand forever. Our Lord said to his chosen ambassadors, "Thus it is written and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day: And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. As repentance and remission of sins began to be preached at Jerusalem, so was it to continue to all nations and all time. But Bro. Burnett says: "Seventy-five years ago there was not a body of people on the earth that baptized believers in order to the remission of sins." Well, Acts 11: 38, shows us just how it began to be preached at Jerusalem, this was the Lord's work. Now if it is true that seventy-five years ago no people were teaching and practicing as the Lord directed, then, seventy-five years ago there was no church of Christ on the earth. Now this is the way that the continental debater fixes it up, and you know he has been "rubbing his head" against history. To change the Lord's way and teach and practice another, is to "teach for doctrine the commandments of men," and our Lord says it is vain; but Bro. Burnett says that is not, if you will not "pervert the three facts" of Christ's death, burial and resurrection. The Lord said: "they that receive seed into the good ground are they that hear the word, and understand it," but the Bonham light who has "rubbed his head," says it is only necessary to receive three words, "death, burial and resurrection," and, that you may deny everything else that the Lord and his apostles said, and yet you have received the gospel that they preached in receiving these three facts. Where did he get this? He must have gotten it by rubbing his head against "our plea." Who will you believe, brethren? "Let God be true and every man a liar." He says: "Our very first article on the re-baptism question bogged down the advocates of the new heresy, and they utterly failed to reply to a point in it." It was muddy enough to bog anything; but it was too thin to stick, it was a perfect loblolly. As for "points," we had as soon undertake to find the point of an India rubber ball, as the points in his articles on this question. He says that, "this re-baptism theory is itself a perversion of the gospel." Mark you he has heretofore said that there is no way to pervert the gospel but by denying the facts of Christ's death, burial and resurrection. He says: "Paul defines the gospel, in the epistle to the Corinthians, to be the death of Christ for our sins, the burial of Christ, and the resurrection of Christ. This being the gospel, any perversion of it so as to set aside these three facts would be a perversion of the gospel. For instance, if a man should preach that Christ did not die for our sins, and was not buried, and did not rise the third day—that would be a perversion of the gospel. If a sinner should believe this perversion and be baptized on such faith, the baptism would not be valid." (I wonder!) "To preach that repentance precedes faith or remission of sins precedes baptism, is not to pervert the gospel for faith and repentance and baptism are not the gospel." Now you see what he calls a perversion of the gospel. But now he says: "This re-baptism theory itself is a perversion of the gospel." Do we deny the death, burial and resurrection of Christ? As hard pressed as he is, he will not say that we do. So then, he crosses himself here, by saying that we pervert the gospel, when he does not mean that we deny the three facts, since he has said that the only way to pervert the gospel is to deny these three facts. He ought to "rub" both sides of his head alike. When we get to crossing ourself as he has done in three clear instances, we want some one to show it to us, and we will beg pardon of our readers for presuming upon their stupidity. But Bro. Burnett's position forces him to pursue this soxy course; the trouble is he is not an artful dodger. He can do very well defending the truth, but this plea is too much for him, he will have to equalize his head-rubbing. He says: "According to it (our position) a man has to believe that Jesus is the Christ, the son of God, (so then we do not pervert the gospel according to his first definition of perversion) and, that baptism is in order to the remission of sins before he can be baptized." We shall now have a new confession. "I believe Jesus Christ is the son of God, and that baptism is in order to the remission of sin." Well, we will make him a confession that he must accept or reject the rule of logic he has applied to us: "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and, that he died, and was buried and rose the third day for our justification." He says: "The confession must be as long as the faith. The old Christian Confession will not do. It is too short for the new faith. Our re-baptizing friends have "reformed the reformation" until they have got it out of the Bible. Good-by Phillip and the eunuch!" He recognizes the Baptist confession: "I believe God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins;" so according to his logic and his teaching and practice his confession should read: "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that he died, was buried and rose again the third day, and that God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins"—the confession must be as long as the faith. Good-by Phillip and the eunuch!! But we could make his confession much longer, by his logic, but this is long enough for him to begin to prepare for the additions from time to time. We dislike this style of discussion, but Bro. Burnett is to blame for it. He complains that we do not give our readers what he says. We hereby agree to give his articles in full, if he will give ours in full. If he will affirm his teaching and practice in reference to sect immersion, and go to work to prove it. Let him do this and leave consequences with God. What God said through Daniel or any other prophet is consistent with the doctrine once delivered to the saints. God does not need Bro. Burnett to go on before to watch out for consequences. If he will teach the truth as it is in Jesus it makes no difference whether he knows of any one who taught the truth seventy-five years ago or not, the "Kingdom will not fall on earth." We take issue with Bro. Burnett on his interpretation of these prophecies, but we shall not permit him to decoy us from the real issue on sect baptism, into a debate on these prophecies. If we did, he would run off to something else when we got him into a tight, which we would be sure to do. If, in an argument on the real issue, he tries to support his position by these Scriptures then we will notice him. But he teaches that Christ authorizes the immersion of persons who do not know the design of the ordinance. This we deny. Now let him give some proof, and not run off to Dan. 11: 44. There is just as much pertinency to the issue, in the first verse in the Bible: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Therefore, people need not understand the truth to obey! That is just such logic as he employs. Every one who has read what has been said between Bro. Burnett and myself must see that Bro. Burnett has fled from us in hot haste all the time. I showed that he employed two faiths. Now notice again: "The facts are to be believed the commands to be obeyed. We are not to believe the commands and obey the facts."—He had taken the position that the gospel consisted wholly and exclusively of the three facts of Christ's death, burial and resurrection. But we showed that the gospel had to be obeyed. See Rom. x: 16 and 2 Thess. 1: 8. So he had to give up his three fact gospel or teach that it must be obeyed. So he just gulped down the idea that facts can be obeyed!! and denied what we have just quoted from him, by saying that we die to sin and are buried by baptism and rise to walk in a new life, and "thus we obey the three facts!!" He is worse than the Baptist who dreamed that he swallowed "the wagon." That was only a dream, but Bro. Burnett swallows this nonsensical idea of obeying a fact, wide-awake in broad day-light! I had rather undertake to swallow a whole wagon and team, than try to obey one fact, much less three. So much for that contradiction of himself. Next: "The person who believes the facts, (death, burial and resurrection of Christ,) and obeys the commands, (belief, repentance and baptism) is validly baptized, and is in the kingdom." So then the conditions are, faith, belief, repentance and baptism."—Good-bye Paul with your "one faith;" and good-by Phillip and the eunuch, you are left out entirely!! So he is guilty of the sin of adding to and taking from the Scriptures both in this one sentence, for he added one faith and took the good confession entirely from the plan of salvation. Paul, the "faith" you say you preached, in which you say you preached confession with the mouth, (see Rom. x: 8-10) is set aside by this man who has rubbed his head against the Scriptures and church history. He has taught that the facts are not to be obeyed, and then contradicted himself. He has employed two faiths, by saying that we are to believe the facts, (death, burial and resurrection of Christ) and then after believing these facts, are to obey the command (belief, repentance and baptism). He has stated that the only way to pervert the gospel is to deny the three facts, and then has accused us of perverting the gospel, while he admits that we do not "pervert" the facts. Yes, he has done all of this, and yet he has not gained a point for his master, "our plea." Now if he does not correct or confess these blunders and go to work to prove his teaching, it is because he knows that he can't sustain his position. We call upon him and beseech him to come up like a man to the defense of his position. We challenge him to come out of the brush and meet the question fairly, and we promise to discuss the issue with him upon the strictest principles of dignified Christian courtesy and fairness. Will he do it? We conclude by referring him to Bro. Jackson's article. A. McG.

"The Christian religion according my creed," says Dr. Beattie, "is a very simple thing, intelligent to the meanest capacity, and what, if we are at pains to join practice with knowledge, we may make ourselves acquainted with without turning over many books. It is the distinguished excellence of this religion that it is entirely popular and fitted, both in its doctrines and its evidences, to all conditions and capacities of reasonable creatures—a character which does not belong to any other religious or philosophical system that ever appeared in the world. I wonder to see so many men, eminent both for their piety and for their capacity, laboring to make a mystery of this divine institution. If God vouchsafe to reveal himself to mankind, can we suppose that he chooses to do it in such a manner that none but the learned and contemplative can understand him? The generality of mankind can never, in any possible circumstances, have leisure or capacity for learning or profound contemplation. If, therefore, we make Christianity a mystery, we exclude the greater part of mankind from the knowledge of it; which is directly contrary to the intentions of its author, as is plain from his explicit and reiterated declarations. In a word, I am perfectly convinced that, an intimate acquaintance with the Scripture, particularly the Gospels, is all that is necessary to our accomplishment of true Christian knowledge. I have looked into some systems of theology, but I never read one of them to an end, because I found I could never reap any instruction from them. To darken what is clear by wrapping it up in a veil of system and science, was all the purpose that the best of them seems to me to answer."

"TRUE AS STEEL."

The Review of December 30 contains the following (which is as true as steel) from the prolific pen of Bro. Treat. In a short editorial he says: "And as for the denominations around us, there is not one which does not need that some one should teach them what they never knew—the first principles of the kingdom of God." This is so true that I am afraid Bro. Treat and others will not accept its full meaning. Viewing, it I say, from every point of the theological compass, I do not believe that Bro. Treat will accept it, for it forever settles the question of sect baptism. What do you mean by the expression "the denominations around us," my brother? I suppose you mean the Methodist, the Baptist, and all sectarian churches. And you say "there is not one which does not need that some one should teach them what they never knew." What is it they never knew? Bro. W. B. F. Treat, editor-in-chief says, "the first principles of the kingdom of God." Well what are "the first principles of the kingdom of God?"

We all agree that the Gospel fully and faithfully preached to the unbelievers are "the first principles of the kingdom of God." But we will let Luke answer. In reporting Phillips work down at Samaria, he says:

(Acts 8-12), "But when they believed Phillip preaching the things concerning the kingdom and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." Phillip preached "the things concerning the kingdom of God." In the 5th verse Luke says, "Phillip preached Christ unto them." In the 35th verse it says: "Then Phillip opened his mouth and began at the same Scripture, and preached unto him Jesus." This man—the eunuch—received from Phillip "full instructions upon the subject of immersion" says Brother McGarvey. He believed the preaching of Phillip, confessed his faith with his mouth, (verse 37. Rom. x: 10) and was buried with Christ by baptism, for the remission of his sins, and was raised up to walk in a new life, and so he went on his way rejoicing. Bro. Treat says this is the teaching every one of these sectarians need. See if he doesn't; (1) he says there is not one which does not need something, (2) that thing is to teach them what they never knew, and, (3) that which they never knew is "the first principles of the kingdom of God." Now we have it, away goes sectarian immersion, because the editor-in-chief of the "Old Reliable" says not one of them—"the denominations"—have ever been taught the gospel—by their preachers—or "the first principles of the kingdom of God." If they need yet to be taught the Gospel or the first principles of the kingdom of God, the very principles which must be implanted in the heart of every sinner in order to his conversion. What does their immersion in water amount to? Bro. Treat says they have never been taught.

I say their immersion amounts to nothing. It is simply an unsanctified ducking received at the hands of an enemy of God and a "perverter of the right way of the Lord." This looks hard but it is nevertheless true, and it is high time the brethren were all confessing it as Bro. Treat.

Now, Brother Treat, you headed your article, "Courage," will you have the courage to come out if you have not already done so, and take your stand on the safe side, condemn the unauthorized practice of receiving sectarians in the fellowship of the church without teaching them "the first principles of the kingdom of God" and then baptizing them into Christ for the remission of sins? You know the brethren are doing it, and doubtless you have done the same, if you believe what you have written, you are bound to admit the practice to be wrong. I have been a regular reader of the "Old Reliable" for a long time, and have worked for it and will continue to do as long as it stands firm on the truth, condemns and exposes the false doctrines of men and contends earnestly for the faith. J. McGarvey.

TENNESSEE, Jan. 10, 1887.

A. McGarvey. DEAR BROTHER:—Your letter of the first received, and it affords me great pleasure to know you think me worthy of the agency of so valuable a paper as the FIRM FOUNDATION. I am willing to do all I can in circulating it, but as to becoming a regular agent, my circumstances are such as will not allow me to do so. I only hope it may be conducted in the future as it has been in the past, for I heartily endorse the doctrine it advocates. Your brother in Christ, W. W. Mc.

WE have perfected arrangements with the Farm and Home, a semi-monthly agricultural and home paper, to furnish it to our readers very cheaply. It is the best agricultural paper we have read and we have been reading it one year. We will send it free to any of our readers who will send us one twelve months' subscriber for the FIRM FOUNDATION.

ALVARADO, Tex., Jan. 15, 1887.

Dear Bro. McGary: I send you one dollar for the FIRM FOUNDATION. I have read several numbers and truly think it is a paper that every Christian in Texas should try to support. Surely you teach the way of the Lord more perfectly than many others. Why I think so is because you do not believe that persons should be added to the church unless they are baptized into Christ, and show their faith by their works. Truly, that is right, for faith without works is dead, being alone. Shaking in persons who have been baptized into a human organization, is a singular way to do business, when we are told to do everything in decency and in order. If that is in order the chapter and verse would not be objectionable. It would appear from that that hand-shaking was the power of God unto salvation. May you live long to earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. S. K. MCGOWEN, Jr.

LUFFKIN, ANGELINA CO., TEXAS, December 23, 1886.

Dear Brother McGary: I have promised to evangelize in this county one year. I have just returned from a trip to the southern portion of the county—in the rural districts—where we have never before been heard. I set the people to reading wherever I go, and hope I may be the instrument in God's providence of effecting much for the cause in this section of country. I am now in my 70th year, and this is the last year, ending in November next, if I live, that I can venture so far from home. Bro. Aus. the brethren have been taught to believe you a disorganizer, but I stand square every time, and declare the F. F. to be the best religious paper in the world to-day. I suggest that you send a number or two to Bro. T. J. Dunn, Luffkin, Angelina county, Texas. He is a deacon in the church of Christ, not Christian church, and he is sharp and reading with the view of preaching. Also, send me the F. F. to Luffkin, care of N. W. Garvin, he is an elder in the church, and the most pious and working one I have ever met, and by sending the F. F. to me, he will get it and read it. Don't you suppose me to be weak kneed, far from it. I preach that people should be baptized for remission of sins, and urge them so to do. Yours in the one hope, J. L. BOLLING.

"OUR PLEA" MUTILATED.

In view of the fact that many brethren are now taking the position that "The Good Confession" is not a pre-requisite to baptism for the remission of sins, I propose to show that they are driven to this in their efforts to substantiate sect baptism, and also, that in this they strike a death-blow at one of the cardinal principles of "Our Plea," and hence are at variance with the "Fathers of this restoration to the primitive order of things." In the recent up-lifting of hands in horror, at the position of the F. F. on the baptism question, they have diligently heralded the cry of heresy, hobby and a departure from our plea. Now if the principles of "Our Plea" are so sacred that it must be venerated and preserved intact, evidently it will appear that these brethren are self-convicted of the great crime they so persistently charge upon others. In the first place, I will call attention to the position of "The Fathers of the reformation" on this question, then to what has been said by our leading men following, and lastly to the glass houses from which our accusers are assailing us. Our readers will please preserve the matter presented, and read it connectedly. I will only have space in this article to refer to what has been written by Bro. Campbell. In the "Christian System," pages 58-9, we find the following: "The only apostolic and divine confession of faith which God, the Father of all has laid for the church, and that on which Jesus himself said he would build it, is the sublime and supreme proposition, that Jesus of Nazareth is the Messiah, the Son of the living God. There is no other confession of faith on which the church can be built—on which it can stand one and undivided—but on this one. With the heart man believeth this proposition in order to justification; and with his mouth he maketh this confession of it in order to his salvation."

Again, "Campbell on Baptism," pages 18 and 19. "The Christian confession, into which we are baptized, and on which we are admitted into the church of God, has been rendered superlatively conspicuous by the emphasis laid upon it by the Lord Jesus Christ in person when he first elicited it at Caesarea Philippi from the apostle whose name was Simon Rock, or in the Greek, Simon Peter.

The question propounded to the apostles was: "Who do you say that I the Son of Man am?" Cephas responded, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God." On this the Savior responded: "Thou art called Rock, and on this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hades shall not prevail against it."

This confession must be made by every applicant for Christian baptism in order to his being constitutionally builded upon the divine foundation, or as we usually say, admitted into the Christian kingdom or church. No minister, or church of Jesus Christ has any divine right or authority to ask for more or accept of less than this in order to Christian baptism. We ought, indeed, to know that the person so professing understands what he says, and gives evidence of the sincerity of his confession; but further than this neither right, reason nor revelation interrogates any man, Jew or Gentile."

MORE ABOUT BAPTISM.

Dear Bro. Allen:—I notice in Texas department editorials a reference to a letter from Bro. Charles, who says 'one brother who' "has been made, by the clear reasoning of Bro. Allen, to give up the re-baptism heresy. He is not the first one I have seen, either." Then you added, "all of which goes to show that the Guide is needed in such parts of Texas as are turned upside down by the riders of that hobby." Of the above I have this to say: 1st. The brother or brethren who were "made to give up the re-baptism heresy" I think were made to do exactly right. But if he meant that they discarded the doctrine that sect baptism was unscriptural they did very wrong, and only demonstrated the doctrine of "falling from grace."

2nd. He (or they, rather) were doubtless weak brethren, and you will confer a great favor on your readers by giving name and post-office address in full in the Guide. But I don't look for such favor.

3rd. That "clear reasoning of Bro. Allen" on this subject has entirely escaped my notice. On the contrary, in discussing the question he refused to publish my articles in opposition to sect baptism. That looks like "clear reasoning" (?) This is Christianity (?) with a vint!

4th. That is courtesy (?) towards brethren in the phrases "re-baptism heresy," "hobby," etc. Have not the advocates of sect baptism some Goliath who is able to discuss this matter in some way, so as to get us off "this hobby." Or are you afraid it is a live issue and will kick you over? It has seemed for some time that the latter was your apology for not undertaking the task.

5th. We affirm that obedience to the gospel as set forth by the apostles, is for the remission of sins. (All admit.) Anything as obedience differing from the above is not scriptural. (Question in dispute.) Obedience rendered to the sectarians is not scriptural.

Will you declare the negative?
J. F. GRUBB.

Dear Brother McGary:

According to promise I send you one dollar for my paper and one dollar for another brother. I think I will get one or two more subscribers for the Firm Foundation. I think it is one of the best papers I have ever read. May you succeed in getting one thousand more subscribers is the prayer of your unworthy brother.

Send the FIRM FOUNDATION to J. W. Hoover, Headsville Post Office, Robertson county, Texas. H. S.

FALSE CLAIMS.

A. J. Bush claims that Bro. Ezzell's work in Angelina county and this, is in part, at least, the fruits of the Missionary Society. Two years ago Bro. J. L. Bolling went over there, under the commission "go preach," etc.—the Lord's plan—and he sowed the seed for about two months. Then Bro. Harry Hamilton, and B. J. and Aaron Speer went over on the same plan, held a meeting and had thirty or forty additions, among them Bro. Wright, a Methodist preacher, who has been preaching ever since on the Lord's plan. These brethren received $30 without contract; and last August Bro. Ezzell went there and held a meeting without any Missionary society at his back and had fifteen additions, and they remunerated with cash, and sent Sister Ezzell some things. And now Bro. Bush claims this as the work of the society. This is a false claim, such as Christians should not make.

A. McGary:

DEAR BROTHER.—I have tried hard to get quite a number of subscribers for the F. F. but succeeded only in inducing four to subscribe. This arises not on the account of antipathy or dislike to your paper but from the fact that we, here were in the very midst of the devastating storm of the 20th of August, which cut short the prospect of paying our debts, and besides we are building a church house, the old one having been wrecked in the storm, which will be quite a strain upon all the brethren here. We hope you, however, will get enough subscribers to make the F. F. a weekly.

Yours as ever,

THURLOW, Green County, Ky., }
December, 20, 1886. }

Dear Bro. A. McGary:

I am here almost alone among sects. They love everything but the gospel, and believe sectarian baptism is valid. My mother left the Baptist church some four or five years ago, and joined the church of Christ. I have tried to convince her that Baptist immersion is not baptism, and also my wife. Bro. McGary, you are right; and hold to it. I pray God that you may live long to advocate the truth. It is a hard place in here; all against the truth, and a great many will not even read the truth. I love the truth, and that is what I am going to work for. I have not the money now to pay for your paper, and I can't get it, nor can I get any subscribers; but send it along and I will pay you just as soon as I can. I will do all I can for your paper. It is the only true paper that I know of.

Yours truly,

WILLIAM M. SUBLETT.

A. McGary:

DEAR BROTHER—I am going to get as many subscribers to the FIRM FOUNDATION as I possibly can, as there is more information in one page of the FIRM FOUNDATION than there is in the full paper of any I read and I do honestly think that the brethren that desire the truth in its purity presented, should work to the interest of the FIRM FOUNDATION. There is no paper published by our brethren that stands as solid on Bible principles. There is none that gives us Bible instruction so simple, so plain and yet so deep, as the FIRM FOUNDATION. The Review, the Advocate, the Messenger, though considered sound by some, they are not what they ought to be. They are far, far behind the F. F. So, if possible, let us make a weekly of it. I have three subscribers now; hope to get several more by the 1st of January. May the Lord bless you in your noble work.

Yours in Christ,

ROBERT W. FLOYD.

P. S.—Bro. McGary, if you do not get the money by the 1st of January, please send the first number to the following names: Milburn Harrell, Jeddo, Bastrop Co., Tex.; G. B. Taylor, Waelder, Gonzales Co., and Mrs. Sarah Probst, Cubro, DeWitt Co., Texas.

DEAR BRO. MAC.—I have succeeded in getting two more subscribers for your most valuable paper. Many of the brethren here say amen to the out-spoken truths promulgated through the F. F. Every one wants it to come weekly as soon as possible. I inclose the names of H. W. Marls and Elder T. W. James, Weatherford, Texas, with two dollars. Please forward to them, beginning with present month. I will still do what I can for you.

DEAR BROTHER—Inclosed please find $3, for which send copies of the FIRM FOUNDATION for one year to Garrett Crainblett, Cynthia Laport and Thomas McGill, at Tappan, Ohio. I see you give your old subscribers a free copy one year for three subscribers and three dollars. If you think I deserve it, and you can afford it, you can send me one for my effort; if not, I do not require it at your hand. I expect to do what I can for the further circulation of the FIRM FOUNDATION in this section, believing it to be my Christian duty, as it is greatly needed. Praying that God will bless you and crown your consistent efforts with abundant success, I am your humble brother in Christ Jesus,

SPECIAL OFFER.

To every one who will send us one new twelve months subscriber to the FIRM FOUNDATION we will send as a premium, either of the following useful papers for one year.

The Farm and Home.

The Farm and Fireside.

The Ladies' Home Companion.

The selection to be made by you.

The Ladies' Home Companion we have never examined very carefully, but a lady acquaintance who has, assures us that it is a splendid ladies' paper. The other two papers we have examined, and find them to be very useful for all housekeepers. We have been a regular reader of one of them for twelve months, and have gathered many, many valuable hints on the various questions of farming, gardening, fruit growing, stock raising, bee culture, house-building, and, in fact, on all matters pertaining to farm and home life. No house keeper should be without one of these papers, since they may be had so cheaply as we offer in this. They are all semi-monthlies. This offer will hold good till the 15th of March.

Some of the friends of the FIRM

FOUNDATION will have no commission for the work they do for it, and yet are constantly at work for us.

To these friends we offer the following to assist them in procuring new subscribers: For every club of three or more we will send either of the above papers to each member of the club, and also one to the sender. We will send either of these papers to any one who is in arrears with us for twelve months' subscription, who will remit us the same by the 1st of March, and renew for twelve months with the cash.

PUBLISHERS.

WE will give the FIRM FOUNDATION and the Christian Preacher both for twelve months for $1.50.

ZEKE JACKSON AND THE PASTOR.

Owing to the intermission in this serial narration, which began in our November issue, and the fact that we have received many new readers in the meantime, we have thought it best to give a synoptical review of the grounds covered by the preceding articles, as an introductory to this one:

"Job Jackson" became interested in the preaching of the Christians, and attended their meetings till he fully grasped the length, breadth, height and depth of "our plea." "The pastor of the Christian church" being acquainted with Job's earnest attentions in this direction, and learning that he had lately expressed a preference for the Baptists, accosted him upon the matter, when "Job" admitted that he had for a while been charmed by the simplicity and apparent scripturalness of "our plea," but he had weighed well the pros and cons between us and the Baptists, till he had discovered "the dead fly in the ointment" of "the plea." He said he always tried to select the safest side of all questions; and that as the doctrine of the "Disciples" and Baptists both made the Baptists right, and the Baptist doctrine did not make the "Disciples" right, he would cast his lot with the Baptists. And, he further said, he preferred to be associated with a people who practice what they preach, and will not receive into their fellowship those who believe and practice differently. And he said that he had the advantage of his baptism, if he should ever conclude that the "Disciples" were right; but that that would not be so if he joined the "Disciples" first; "for," he said, "if I should then want to join the Baptists I would have to be 're-baptized,' but I can go from the Baptists to the 'Disciples' any time by a mere shake of the hand."

So "Job" went to the mourners' bench and "got religion" and joined the Baptists. But he lived but a short time afterwards. When he died this same "pastor of the Christian church" wrote his obituary, concluding with these words: "I never stood over the grave of any one, and talked with more confidence of their future than I did over his. He is at rest in Jesus. He was a strict member of the Baptist church." Job's father and mother were strict Baptists. His death left them with only one child, Zeke, a wild, rattling country boy; but his brother's death had the effect of checking his heedless ways, and filling him with serious reflections. Under these propitious circumstances a Baptist meeting commenced in the neighborhood, under the ministrations of the same preacher who had prayed Job "through" at the mourner's bench. Zeke soon became an earnest, sobbing seeker at the mystic bench; and the glamour of "orthodox" conversion was rapidly knitting its witching web about his young, susceptible heart, which was in turn acting as a healing balm upon his father's and mother's aching hearts, which had been torn by Job's death.

The most vigorous efforts were being put forth for Zeke by the circle composed of the preacher and the most successful supplicants for Holy Ghost and fiery outpourings. But just at this juncture, (the meetings being held at night only) Zeke went to town during the day and met the "pastor" of the Christian church. The pastor had touched a very tender cord in his heart by his flattering and consoling obituary of Job. When once they were in conversation it very naturally turned into the channel of religious topics. The pastor was not long in availing himself of the hold he had upon Zeke's heart to gain a footing for the truth. He very soon led Zeke to see the wide difference between Baptist and apostolic teaching. Zeke was an honest boy. It is only in the genial soil of an honest heart that truth will thrive and bring forth fruit to perfection. An hour's conversation with the pastor, during which time several passages of scripture were impressed upon his mind, which satisfied him that the Baptists were wrong, and Zeke was out of all notion of becoming a Baptist. That night when mourners were called, Zeke, supposing that truth was admissible and welcome anywhere that people were trying to learn the way of life, undertook to contribute his new bit of knowledge on the all important question. But to his utter surprise the cry of disturbance was raised by the preacher, and, an officer being present, he was promptly arrested and hurried off to jail to await a trial for "disturbing religious worship." When once in jail, the "pastor" of the Christian church exercised himself in every way to mitigate his troubles and console him with the thought that he was in bonds for the truth's sake. Although his father and mother were very much exasperated at his conduct in daring to call in question Baptist doctrine and usage, yet the parental fire that burned in their hearts was too warm to allow their only child to languish behind the chilly bars without its ardent rays being felt by him. So his father, (Uncle Hezekiah) went next day to see what he could do for him. When he reached the jail he found the "pastor" of the Christian church instructing Zeke from the word of truth. The old man had some hot words with the pastor. He told him of all the trouble that had ensued from his impressions and influence upon Zeke's mind through his other conversation; and pointed to Zeke in a felon's cell as the product of that influence. He showed him how wrong and heartless it was for him to interfere and influence his boy and prejudice him against the religion of his old father and mother and departed brother, and introduce this discord and additional sorrow into his already grief-stricken home circle when there was no just ground for it that the "pastor" could plead in extension of his conduct; for he told him that his obituary of Job settled the fact that he, at least, believed that those who lived strict Baptists went to "rest in Jesus" when they died, and that, as no higher incentive than to "rest in Jesus" after death could actuate the heart of man, or move one man to instruct another in religion, his course in this matter must have sprung from some improper and sinful motive. When Zeke's case was called for trial it was continued to another term of court for the want of some important testimony by which his Baptist prosecutors intended to establish his guilt. The details of his trial will be passed over. Suffice it to say that he was finally convicted, and his fine assessed, which with the cost that had accrued amounted to about one hundred dollars. The pastor of the Christian church and Zeke's father kept up their daily visits to see him after his case was continued, till his father became offended at the repeated allusions to the shortcomings of Baptist doctrine by Zeke, and his copious quotations from the scriptures to enforce them, and this finally drove the old gentleman away full of rage. The pastor had kept a sharp eye on Uncle Hezekiah's visits and had studiously timed his so as not to collide with him again; and he kept Zeke supplied with points and scriptures against the Baptists. Although Zeke had learned enough to see many defects in Baptist theology, the pastor could not eradicate the idea from his mind of direct the question "Do you believe with all your heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God," he approached Zeke, and asked him to stand up, which he did, and in a clear, confident tone he said:

"Zeke, my dear boy, do you believe with all your heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God?"

Zeke.—"Now, parson, why do you ask me that? I believe with all my heart that in answer to my prayers while in prison, God for Christ's sake pardoned my sins, and now I want to be baptized to honor God, because I have the witness of the Holy Spirit in my heart that I am accepted of God."

Pastor.—"Zeke, I cannot baptize you on such a statement as that. The Christian Confession into which we are baptized, and on which we are admitted into the church of God has been rendered superlatively conspicuous by the emphasis laid on it by the Lord Jesus Christ in person, when he first elicited it at Caesarea Philippi, from the apostle whose name was Simon Rock, or in Greek, Simon Peter. The question propounded to the apostle was, "Who do you say that I, the Son of Man, am?" Cephas responded, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God." On this the Savior responded, "Thou art called Rock, and on this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hades shall shall not prevail against it." This confession must be made by every applicant for Christian baptism in order to his being constitutionally builded upon the divine foundation; or, as we usually say, admitted into the Christian kingdom or church. No minister or church of Jesus Christ, has any divine right or authority to ask for more or accept of less than this, in order to Christian baptism. So, Zeke, as glad as I would be to have you cast your lot with the people of God, I cannot transcend this fundamental principle of our plea upon which this reformation is so immutably planted, and sustained by the scriptures. Fidelity to the word of God, therefore, binds us to this confession alone, and in clinging to it we have every assurance which inspiration can give that we are right. So, Zeke, I press the question. Do you believe with all your heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the Living God?"

Zeke.—"I believe that God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins, and I desire to be baptized into the Christian church, to honor God, who has sent His Holy Spirit into my heart and converted me. Can any man forbid water, parson, that I should not be baptized, who have received the Holy Ghost as well as you?"

At this stage the pastor seemed to be in a dilemma, and turned to the audience and said: "As we have no right to ask for more or accept of less than this authorized confession, I, as a faithful minister of the gospel, must cling to it, which lays me under the painful necessity of withholding further action in the young man's case. He then dismissed the excited audience on short notice. The news seemed to take the wings of the wind, for by morning Uncle Hezekiah and Aunt Hannah and the whole Baptist fraternity in Zeke's neighborhood were agog with excitement and glee over it. There was a consultation meeting at Uncle Hezekiah's that day, composed of Uncle Hezekiah, Aunt Hannah, the "parson" and several more of the prominent members of the Baptist church. The object was to determine upon the best way to get Zeke from under the "Campbellite" pastor's influence before he had time to argue him out of his orthodox conversion, and "souse him into their heretic body." They knew the pastor had gained a strong hold on Zeke's affections by his attentions to him while in prison, and by his standing for his fine. But now they felt sure that if they could reach him in time they could counteract his influence, and perhaps lead Zeke right into the Baptist church before these tormenting "Campbellites" could regain their "proselyting wits." After a close session it was decided that Aunt Hannah should take her buggy and drive in after him. Zeke was a great "mammy's boy," hence she, above all others, stood the best chance to persuade him back home. While this Baptist confab was going on at Uncle Hezekiah's about the ways and means to get the absent and down-cast boy back under the benign influence of the parental hearthstone, and into the Baptist church, his heart, after its repulse in seeking admission into the "church of his choice," had turned in the direction of "Home, Sweet Home," and he had strolled out of town in that direction, and was down by the road side offering up the supplications of his heart for guidance and blessings in this trying hour.

As he arose from his humble posture he cast a long look up the oft-traveled highway, in the direction of that dearest spot of earth, and glimpsed in the dim distance a vehicle. A second glance was enough to fill his troubled heart with contending emotions, for he recognized the coming object as his dear old mother's buggy, drawn by the familiar jog-trot of "old gray," and the driver, he knew, could be none other than "mammy." He would have felt like shrinking from such an unceremonious meeting after all that had passed; but he took her approach to be an answer to his prayer—God's doing—therefore he felt impelled to rush right forward and embrace her, which he did. A few moments of clasping, and flowing of joyful tears, and Zeke was by her side in the buggy homeward bound. As they neared home they were seen by the Baptist preacher in time for him to influence Uncle Hezekiah to enact the part of the father in the case of the Prodigal Son. So when they drove up to the gate Uncle Hezekiah "ran and fell on his neck and kissed him." This was very unexpected to both Zeke and Aunt Hannah. Then the parson and the Baptist neighbors that were there all extended to him a warm greeting. At the dinner table Zeke told of his impressions in jail, and of his prayer by the road side that morning and its immediate answer; and all hands were satisfied that he was a child of God, and that all of the troubles and annoyances that began on that night that he was arrested for disturbing the worship, were God's inscrutable dealings to bring about his conversion. The very warm reception they had given him, right along in connection with his road-side prayer, filled Zeke so full of love and gratitude for them all that he, for the first time, lost sight of all that the pastor had taught him about Baptist inconsistencies and errors, and with his best judgment overshadowed by this sudden boom of love for them, he regarded them as the best people in the world, religiously and otherwise. The parson saw that there was a golden opportunity to add Zeke to his "charge," and put him beyond the pale of "Campbellite" influence; so as all of the prominent members of the Baptist church were present, he put them to the vote as to whether they would receive him. They voted to receive him, and after having him re-state his experience, and state that he believed "that God for Christ's sake had pardoned his sins," he was immediately baptized into the Baptist church. After a warm hand-shaking the neighbors returned home and left Uncle Hezekiah, Aunt Hannah and Zeke a happily reunited family circle, doubly bound by the spiritual band.

WOLF CROSSING, Burnet Co., Tex.,
January 31, 1887.

Bro. A. McGary:

I write you a line for to solicit the FIRM FOUNDATION. I think it worthy the name it bears. It stands by the truth, disregarding the powers of all and any who love not the truth. Through Bro. J. J. Laramore I got some numbers—I don't know how long. Did he pay? If not, what are my dues? I send you a dollar for the present volume. Please let me know the first opportunity.

I have laid by my sword. Ago has stopped my horn, but not my zeal. The wolf has got among the flock, or satan with his devices. The organ, the sociable, the ice-cream party and concerts, to make money to pay their fancy leaders, who can preach thirty minutes without giving a "thus saith the Lord."

I am now near 83 years old; have been 67 years a pastor after truth; a teacher 27 years, unable to teach but privately. May God grant you years of usefulness in support of the truth as it is in Jesus. Stand fast, and having done all, to stand in your lot in that day.
Your brother in the one hope,
J. H. MAEON.

CATLIN, Ind., Feb., 11, 1887.
Brethren McGary & Hiansbrough:

Since there is a temporary lull in hostilities along the line here, I have concluded to throw a bomb among the enemies in your front. My enemies in the Review have been whacking away at me altogether with small arms; but I see Bro. Burnett has opened on you with his artillery. It seems, however, that he cut his fuse too short and his gun went off too soon, and came near blowing him up. Your second shot spiked his piece, or dismounted it. In this department, I believe that I have silenced all but Bro. Holloway, and I don't know exactly what has become of him. I gave him a shot two weeks ago and he has not returned the fire yet. There is one thing certain, we have compelled them to do one of two things, either to abandon sect baptism or "our plea." So far, they have chosen to abandon the plea. The plea used to be "without faith it is impossible to please God." That faith comes by hearing the word of God." That the signs that Jesus did were written that all might believe that Jesus is the Christ, and believing they might have life through his name. That believers should repent, confess Christ and be baptized in his name for the remission of sins; and that the gospel was composed of facts, commands and promises; and that all these taken together constituted the good news of salvation through Jesus Christ. This is the way I learned the gospel, and until very recently if any one should have preached any other gospel, he would not have been recognized among us as a sound gospel preacher. Now, in order to defend sect baptism, they declare that the gospel includes nothing but the three facts, viz: the death, burial and resurrection of Christ; and, therefore, if the sectarian believes these three facts and is dipped in water he is saved. But they say, "the death of Christ is nothing, or would prove nothing without the resurrection; neither would the burial prove anything without the resurrection;" so these three facts all centre in the one great fact of the resurrection. Thus they have conjured up a triune fact gospel for the people. Now I suppose that if they should ask the people generally if they believe that Jesus died, was buried and arose again, that ninety per cent would answer yea. All the common people want, then, is to be dipped in the water according to this triune fact gospel. And indeed, I think their chances far better than the common sectarian, but I would not be willing to risk the chance of either.

Now let us examine the case of the sectarian. Let us suppose, for the sake of the argument, that the death of Christ is not a fact, but is the genuine faith. Ask the sectarians to believe these historical facts and he would say to you "That is only historical faith—that is not the faith of the gospel. Our faith is direct from heaven—it is an immediate gift of God." They will not acknowledge these gentlemen's three fact gospel. And when these, their apologists, say to them "baptism is for remission of sins," they will not accept that, even. So all the means that their apologists offer them are obstinately resisted. Notwithstanding all this, when they declare a different faith and another design, these men will declare that God accepts them all the same as if they had believed his word and obeyed his voice.

Now, we are going to test this by logic. The Bible declares that there are two great Spirits—a good Spirit and a bad spirit. One is the Spirit of God, and the other is the spirit of Satan. All persons are led by the one or the other. Those led by the Spirit of God are the sons of God. Those led by the spirit of Satan are his children. So testified the Savior. Sectarians go to a mourners' bench, or altar of prayer, and pray for and claim to get religion. This is either true or it is false. If it is true, then it is of God; for God is the author of all truth. If it is false, then it is not of God, for God is not the author of anything false. But if it is false it is of Satan, for he is the author of all falsehood. Again: If it be true, then "our plea" is false; for that plea contradicts the getting religion system, and ever has. So these apologists must totally abandon "our plea" or else they must admit that those poor, deluded creatures have been led thus far by Satan or his agents, which is the same. But further, our plea says baptism is for the remission of sins. This is either true or it is false. If it is true, it is of God; but if it is false it is of Satan. If it be true, our plea is right and therefore of God; but if it be false our plea is false, and therefore of Satan. If it be true, then the sectarian is wrong—his position is false and therefore of Satan. These apologists say he is wrong, and therefore they must admit that in this, too, he is led by Satan. So you see, according to their own showing the sectarian is led from the start until he is baptized, by falsehood and therefore by Satan; but they say when Satan has thus led his dupes through that God meets him as he gets them out of the water, and there forces him to relinquish his prey whom he has blinded and led so far captive at his will, making them believe that they have been saved. If they have been led in falsehood, it has been by the devil; but if in the truth, then our plea has been false all the time. Which horn of the dilemma will the apologists take? They must take the one or the other, there is no other escape. In the above case, they might fitly represent God, or illustrate the idea, by the eagle that perches himself on some high perch above the river and watches the fish hawk until he seizes a fish and starts home with it, when the eagle swoops down on him with a terrific scream, and the hawk relinquishes his prey, and the eagle bears it off in triumph. This is what they must claim for God or abandon their position. This makes short work of it, and they cannot meet this case. Truth is bound to be finally victorious. I intend to drive them from their position, or drive them clear into Babylon. Press them on all sides, and may God bless you all. Farewell,
I. C. STONE.

"OUR PLEA" MUTILATED.

In my former article I closed with a quotation from Bro. Campbell on the confession. It was then my purpose to continue by presenting similar expressions from his co-laborers; but that I may not be tedious, I will simply say that this was the position of Walter Scott, B. W. Stone, Thos. Campbell and other primitive laborers of the reformation. I presume this is not questioned.

I will next call attention to some extracts from a few of the leading workers following them. Bro. Ben. Franklin wrote as follows: "The confession that God requires is the grandest confession that man can make, and the making of it is the best evidence a man can give that his heart is right. If such a confession as this—that takes in God and man, heaven and earth, the Savior and his words, the whole revelation from God—the sublime confession that Christ is the Son of God, made in a proper manner, will not show that the heart is right, you need not add any such catechisms or experiences as are common in these times. They are all perfect nothingness compared with this great confession, which, like the spider's web, may catch flies and gnats, while the dangerous wasp and hornet pass through with ease. The safe ground, and the only safe ground, is to follow the simple and infallible leadings of the Spirit of God." See writings Benj. Franklin, pages 243 and 244.

Again, on page 270, alluding to Rom. x: 10, he says: "Here we have precisely what is to be believed in the heart, confessed with the mouth, and the object of it. We must confess with the mouth the Lord Jesus; believe in the heart that God raised him from the dead, and the object is salvation. But now for the order of this item. Is it the first, second, third or fourth? It cannot be the first item; it cannot be the second. It is a pre-requisite to baptism.

I will now give an extract from the "Gospel Plan of Salvation," by Dr. Brents: "Having seen that this fact, which was attested by God, and confessed by Peter, is the truth to be believed in order to overcome the world, and confessed, in order that God may dwell in the party making it, it may be well to see how it is confessed. Two important facts are made apparent: First, the confession is to be made with the tongue. Second, God has determined that it shall be made, and therefore it cannot be dispensed with or ignored by those who would honor His authority." Pages 255 and 256. On page 258 he says: "Kind reader, have you made this confession with your mouth to your salvation? If not you may have to make it to your eternal condemnation, for we have seen that the doctrine has gone forth that every tongue shall confess that Jesus is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

Again on page 259: "If this is what must be confessed with the mouth unto salvation, after faith and before baptism, and it is not made, will we get the salvation unto which it should have been made? If Timothy made the good confession for eternal life, may we dispense with it and still get the eternal life for which he made it?"

On page 260 we read: "If this is what has to be confessed, will it be safe to substitute a narrative of our dreams, feelings and imaginations in the shape of an experience, instead of the confession required by the law of the Lord? And if these dreams, feeling and imaginations constitute all the confession made prior to baptism, when do the parties confess that Jesus Christ is the Son of God? or that Jesus is Lord to the glory of God the Father to their own salvation, and for eternal life, and which secures the dwelling of God in those who make it?" You who have the book turn to it and read his entire article on the confession. He concludes his argument with the following noble thoughts: "If the word of God is perfect, let us come to it and be satisfied with it."

I now call your attention to what Bro. McGarvey has put upon record in his "Commentary on Acts." Please read from page 99 to page 105. On page 100 he shows that Timothy made the same confession that the Eunuch made, that it was the good confession, and that the good confession that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God; that this confession was an item in the word of faith everywhere preached by the apostles. On page 101, he shows that the truth declared in this confession is, beyond controversy, the foundation of the church of Christ, and is so declared by Jesus himself in Matt. xvi: 16-18.

On page 103 he says: "That this confession was the only one required of candidates for immersion by the apostles, is universally admitted by those who are competent to judge. It is likewise admitted that they regarded it as a sufficient confession. This fact alone should teach men to be satisfied with it now. He, indeed, who is guided by the Bible alone, can not require of men any other confession than such as he finds authorized by Bible precedents. Neither is it possible that he who implicitly follows the apostolic precedent can be misled, unless the apostles, the Holy Spirit, the new testament, can mislead him. Fidelity to the word of God, therefore, binds us to the confession alone, and in clinging to it we have every assurance which inspiration can give that we are right."

On page 100 he shows that under this confession bad characters crept into the fold, but concludes that: "Surely if a test of sincerity which could let into the fold such wolves as these was sufficient for the inspired apostles, we may be content with the same, unless we object to wisdom and zeal superior to theirs." The reader will please keep these things in mind to the conclusion of these articles.

THE FIRM FOUNDATION.

FIRM FOUNDATION.
AUSTIN, TEXAS, FEBRUARY 15, 1887.

about like Bro. Burnett does on this question—utterly refusing to offer even an explanation of his on us. We think his "experience" was a godless article, "manufactured out of whole cloth," and shall ever think so till the gospel of have to have the "liver" complaint to enter the Old Covenant, for the moment they were born of the seed of Abraham they were in it. But.

VALIDITY OF SECT BAPTISM.

Baptism may be invalid for two reasons:

baptize penitent believers. Therefore, Baptist baptism is invalid. Baptism is valid to a penitent believer and to a penitent believer world, and that they everywhere preached the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus, and never (except in this one case) repeated the in because of unbelief."—Heb. III:18-19. What was it that these Israelites did not believe? "Likewise when the Lord sent you from Ka-pardoned, never a member of the church."

Now, remember that Bro. Harding holds that Bro. Campbell was baptized without knowing the design of baptism. Then listen to Bro. Campbell as he speaks on page 521, Christian Baptist:

"Knowing that the efficacy of this blood is to be communicated to our consciences in the way God has pleased to appoint, we 'stagger not at the promise of God,' but flee to the sacred ordinance which brings the blood of Jesus in contact with our consciences. Without knowing and believing this, immersion is as empty as a blasted nut. The shell is there but the kernel is wanting."

Take back what you have said, Bro. Harding, or you treat Bro. Campbell much worse than we do! You make him write his own condemnation! You make him write himself "never baptized, never pardoned, never a member of the church!" You make him put his own immersion on a par with a "blasted nut!" It seems that dear Bro. Campbell receives his most fatal wounds in the house of his friends. And while Bro. Campbell's case is up, we will show that his theory and that of the hated FIRM FOUNDATION, are the same on the good confession. If Bro. Campbell's theory was one thing and his practice another, we are not after drawing the contrast between them—we will leave that for his friends to do. It seems that they would read his condemnation ten times over to save "our plea." But if we are in theory with Bro. Campbell, and then our practice is in harmony with that theory, how does it make us such terrible enemies to Bro. Campbell? If all of the dead that Bro. Harding's theory reads out of the church were marshaled before him, we think he would not want to deal with ghosts again. But to Bro. Campbell's theory on the confession:

"The Christian confession, into which we are baptized, and on which we are admitted into the church of God, has been rendered superlatively conspicuous by the emphasis laid on it by the Lord Jesus Christ in person, when he first elicited it at Caesarea Philippi, from the apostle whose name was Simon Rock, or, in Greek, Simon Peter. The question propounded to the apostle was, 'Who do you say that I, the Son of Man, am?' Cephas responded, 'Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God.' On this the Savior responded, 'Thou art called Rock, and on this rock I will build my Church, and the gates of hades shall not prevail against it.'"

This confession must be made by every applicant for Christian baptism in order to his being constitutionally bulled upon the divine foundation; or, as we usually say, admitted into the Christian kingdom or church. No minister or church of Jesus Christ has any divine right or authority to ask for more or accept of less than this, in order to Christian Baptism."—pp. 18-19; Campbell on Baptism.

Bro. Harding, will you and our other brethren who have become so much alarmed at consequences please tell us who all this language of Bro. Campbell cuts off? You are all familiar with it, but you have never been able to trace its consequences from Bro. Campbell's statement of it. But when we advocate it, behold the consequences!! We simply pronounce, as a blasted nut, without the kernel, but a mere shell, the same immersions that this language of Bro. Campbell's does—not because Bro. Campbell says it, but because it is in harmony with God's truth. But all this is foreign to the real issues involved in the question. Such lamentable courses are pursued by our brethren, who want to shield their unauthorized practice, and can't do so by fair argument. Bro. Harding holds that the advocates of the "Missionary Society" are responsible for the proof that authorizes it, and so he does in reference to the organ advocates. And we hold that the onus of proof devolves upon him and others who advocate the validity of unintelligent immersion. We will not stop to define it; he knows what we mean. I have written him a private letter, proposing to discuss this question with him, and put it in pamphlet for circulation. I have proposed to be at the expense of this work, looking to the sale of the pamphlet for my trouble and expense, and have promised to divide all profits, if there should be any. It remains to be seen whether he feels able to prove his teaching and practice or not. If he does he will certainly accede to our proposition. The only way to get right at this question and settle it, is for the man upon whom the burden of proof devolves to go to work and furnish it: "Is the immersion of one who does not know the design of the ordinance Christian baptism?" Now, who says it is? J. A. Harding. Then the proof must be furnished by J. A. Harding. Will he produce it? We do sincerely hope he will if he has it. This rambling, incoherent and fruitless species of controversy that our opposing brethren are responsible for, is neither pleasant nor profitable. If they will not stand by their own affirmation, and bring to its support the proof that they think substantiates it, then there is something wrong in their machinery, and they know it. To require us to furnish proof for our negative position, is to show the white feather, at least.

If Bro. Harding declines to enter into a fair, systematic and logical discussion of the question upon our proposition to him, then we will give his article a thorough overhauling, and try to handle every point or supposed point in it, which we have not now the time to do. We have great respect for Bro. Harding, and would be pleased to examine the best arguments he can make on this question. If he understands us to agree with his view, that the simple fact of believing that Jesus is the Christ is "the begetting," he misunderstands us, and yet we could admit this for argument's sake, and yet show that his argument is fallacious. We believe that if any man has the courage of his convictions on his side of the question he has. Hence, we expect him to give us his strength on the question.

A. McD.

"BE NOT CONFORMED TO THIS WORLD."

The above language is found in Paul's letter to the Roman brethren—xii: 2, and the subject of not conforming to the world on the part of Christians, was suggested to my mind by looking at the manner in which a certain lady was dressed not long since on the cars.

One of the leading objects of the apostle in this epistle is to cut off the false teaching of the Jewish brethren who were contending that those who were converted to Christianity, both Jew and Gentile should observe the law of Moses. The apostle in the first chapter 10th verse lays the foundation of his masterly argument, and says, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it (not the law of Moses) is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes, to the Jew first and also to the Greek," and I have often wondered why some of our three-fact-gospel brethren do not quote that as a definition of the gospel, instead of I. Cor. xv:14, for the apostle was defining the gospel there as well as in Corinthians; and in Corinthians he mentions other facts as definitely as the three facts generally quoted. The fact is he was not defining the gospel in its parts in either place; but in Romans laying the foundation to cut off the Judaizing teachers, and in Corinthians the false teachers who were denying the resurrection, and he brings in the resurrection as one of eight facts, then why select three and reject the others, as many of our brethren do?

The apostle continues his argument to the 12th chapter, showing the superiority of the gospel over the law, representing the law as dead, and Christians as being married to Christ, the gospel being the ceremony by which the marriage relation is brought about—Romans vii: 1-4; and in the gospel is contained the law of the Spirit that made the apostle free from sin, and by which the Spirit's law people are to be led, in order to enter the Haven of Eternal rest—Romans viii: 1-17; and he begins the 12th chapter with an admonition to the brethren to present their bodies living sacrifices. Under the law the Jews presented the bodies of dead animals as sacrifices, but under the gospel Christians are told to present their bodies living sacrifices, and then he admonishes them not to be conformed to this world, and when I see so many who claim to be followers of the meek and lowly Savior conforming so much to this world that you can't tell by their walk that they even pretend to Christianity, it makes me feel like writing and talking very plainly; and now brethren ought you to become offended at me for doing it? I will try to write plainly, whether you hear, or whether you will not hear, Ezek. ii: 5—and first I will begin with the sisters, as suggested in the beginning of this article. The apostle says: "Be not conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind that you may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." What is the object of not being conformed to the world, and being transformed? It is to prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God, and it is the best proof that can be given; but they that fail to give heed to the admonition of the apostle, fail to prove what the will of God is, do they not? Oh, then, how careful Christians ought to be in their daily walk and conversation. The apostle James enforces the same thought in different language when he says to the brethren, "lay apart (or put away) all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness and receive with meekness the engrafted word which is able to save your souls"—1: 21. James was writing to Christians who had heard, believed and obeyed the gospel, and had been made free from all their past sins—Romans iii: 25—yet they are told to receive with meekness the engrafted word which is able to save their souls. When the Savior says in the commission as recorded by Matthew: "All power (or authority) in heaven and earth is given to me, go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit," that part of the commission when complied with makes Christians of people, brings them out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of Christ—to the remission of past sins, having believed and obeyed the gospel; but the Savior does not stop there, he further says: "Teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." That embraces what James calls the engrafted word, engrafted into the gospel, which James tells the brethren is able to save their souls. The salvation spoken of there is the everlasting salvation, the same that Paul tells the Philippian brethren to work out with fear and trembling—ii: 13. It is that abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom that Peter speaks of. II. Peter 1: 2.

But James says "lay apart (put away) all filthiness." Now, brethren, if we give heed to that admonition, or command, it will do away with all our whiskey-drinking, tobacco-chewing and smoking, will it not? Yes, sisters, and it will break all of your snuff-bottles, for if ever there was a filthy, disgusting practice, dipping snuff is, and James says put away all filthiness, and now, brethren, ought we to say we cannot break off from these habits? Yes we can, for the Lord does not require us to do anything we cannot do, now does he? We must take up our cross and follow our Savior, if we gain the crown at the end of the race.

"And superfluity of naughtiness." This is a big item expressed in few words, and it embraces all such dressing as I saw when the writing of this article was suggested to my mind. And now sisters, will you let me be plain in my talk to you, and not become offended at me? and even if I knew you would become offended, ought I not to write and talk plainly on these subjects? But we want to talk about some of this superfluity of naughtiness, or overflow of wickedness, of which the apostle speaks. Go to any of our cities, towns, villages, and many places in the country, and you will see many women claiming to be Christians dressed with great humps on their lower backs and upper fronts, thereby calling attention to those portions of the body that modesty and the word of the Lord forbid attention should be called to unless they think they are doing as Paul speaks of when he says: "and those members of the body which we think to be less honorable, upon these we bestow more abundant honor, and our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness, for our comely parts have no need"—I. Cor. xii: 23-24; but if that is the application they make of that scripture, it is wrong, which they will see by looking at its connection. See also the amount of jewelry that dangles about their necks, in their ears, on their wrists and fingers, and then read I. Tim. ii: 9-10, and I. Peter iii: 3-4, and then see if the admonition does not apply to their case, to lay apart all filthiness of naughtiness. What is it but conformity to this world? All such apparel, and the wearing of bangs, (and even some old gray-headed women wear them, and how foolish, how imbecile it makes them appear) is a violation of the law of the Lord. Oh, sisters, hold yourselves up before the looking glass that the Lord has furnished you—James i: 23—and adjust your apparel as becometh those who claim to be followers of the meek and lowly redeemer.

And now let me close this article with a few words of admonition and exhortation to my preaching brethren, especially the pastors of city congregations and rich congregations in the country. Pastor means feeder. Are you feeding your congregations on the sincere (or unadulterated) milk of the word that they may grow thereby? I. Peter ii: 2. Are you declaring to them the whole counsel of God as Paul says he did?—Acts xx: 27—If so, how comes it that so many of your members are so much conformed to this world? Are you admonishing the drinking, gambling, dancing, theatre-going, gold and pearl and costly array wearing members of their danger, and letting them know if they continue in that course they will not inherit the kingdom of God? If you are, and they will not give heed, then you have done your duty; but if you are not, will God hold you guiltless? But I fear many of you cannot conscientiously approve these sins, for you are guilty of the same, for I have seen the gold chains, the gold studs and finger rings shining on some of you myself.

O, brethren, wake up to the responsibility of the position you occupy; live right lives yourselves, and admonish others faithfully and thereby save yourselves and them that hear you. I. Tim. iv: 13-16. E. HANSBROUGH.

The Texas Christian does it up dextly when he arms the "State Evangelist" against his adversaries with the following quotation from Shakespeare:

Hal.—"I see an amendment in thee, Jack; from praying to purse-taking."

Fal.—"Ah, it is my vocation, Hal. It is no harm for a man to labor in his vocation."

Who but the editor of the Texas Christian could ever have thought of invoking the great histrionic draftsman to delineate the difference between the vocation of a preacher of the primitive gospel and that of a money lister for the State missionary organization?

Bro McGary:

It is about time that I would renew my subscription for the FIRM FOUNDATION. I think I did not miss any. I like it well. I have tried to get some subscribers, but failed. The most common excuse was "I have as much reading matter as I can manage." But there are some who think that the F. F. is too sharp—too much for contention. I cannot say that. I try to compare it with the Bible, and I think it is not far wrong. It is true that it differs from all the papers that I read, but if the difference consists in its being nearer the teaching of Christ and the apostles, so much the better. We find in reading the Bible—Old Testament and New—that all those who taught the word of the Lord most faithfully endured the greatest persecution. We read in the 7th of Acts that Stephen when testifying against his countrymen, the Jews—the chosen people of God—in the last of his address said: "Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted, and they have slain them showed before of the coming of the Just One, of whom ye have now been the betrayers and the murderers," etc. When they heard these things they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth. But he being full of the Holy Spirit looked up steadfastly into heaven and sees the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God and said, "Behold I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God." Then they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord, and cast him out of the city and stoned him, etc.

There are many of the present day who earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints, who would have the same law were it not for the strong arm of the law. I inclose $2; one for the F. F., and one for the poor brethren in Texas who suffer on account of the drought. I often wonder that they are not more liberally supplied. Yours in the hope of the gospel. JOHN McDONALD.

It becomes our painful duty to record the death of Sister LUCY E. CLARK, aged 25 years and 4 days.

Truly "in the midst of life we are in death." On the morn of the 20th of January, 1887, her spirit left its clay tenement for "the home of rest." The deceased was a Christian in profession and practice, and did, in her life and deportment from the time she became obedient to the faith, recommend the excellency of the Christian profession to all her acquaintances; and during her long illness, and in her death, she did exhibit to her numerous friends how tranquilly and cheerfully a Christian can meet death and resign the spirit into the hands of a gracious and divine Redeemer. She said to the writer a few days before her death, "without an anxiety about anything on earth, having committed all my interests into the hands of my faithful and gracious Heavenly Father, I am ready at any time to cross over the river." Our dear sister leaves a true and devoted husband. Though not a member of the Church of Christ, he was true and faithful to her unto the day of her death. I hope he may, before it is too late, bow to the authority of King Jesus, follow the example of his dear wife, and in the end meet her on the sweet shores of deliverance, where there is no death, and where sorrow and crying shall forever flee away. A. McGary, Austin, Texas:

DEAR BROTHER—It is with pleasure that I have read the F. F. I would not be without it for ten times the price paid for it. It is just what the people in this nineteenth century need to bring them back to the one fold and the one shepherd. It is the very thing our brethren need to open up their eyes that they may see the broad road that they are travelling in to some extent, and that they may be brought back through its teaching to the straight and narrow path that leads to peace and happiness, because straight is the way, and few there be that find it. There are a few that endorse the F. F. at present. My prayer is that you may be spared to a good old age, to wield the sword of the Spirit, fearless of contradiction, and that you may continue to sound out the truth to the people as it is in Christ Jesus, and by so doing, a great reformation will take place, and all true Christians will come back and stand upon the Rock of eternal ages. Our blessed Savior prayed that we might all be one, even as he and his Father are one, and never will that memorable prayer be answered until we all come back and build upon the one Foundation—Jesus, the chief corner stone. Go on Bro. Mc. Preach the word; be instant in season and out of season; rebuke with all long suffering and doctrine. You will find one dollar inclosed for the F. F. Yours in the one faith.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I am entirely too slow as a solicitor to become an agent for a paper, but I am going to do all I possibly can for the circulation of the F. F. If I were to send you a great many subscribers, I might ask you to give me something, but I would be willing to take it in the form of the F. F. Some time since I wrote you a short article for publication, but it has not been published. If you never received it I would re-write it, but if it went to the waste basket all right. I will wait till some of your better writers get tired, or I will try to write something more readable next time. Now, if I thought you had time to write to me I would want you to tell me a few things; such as: What become of the debate over in Llano? I never hear anything more of it. Who is Job Jackson, that troubles the Parson so? If you do not wish to give his real name just pass the last question by, but don't fail to publish that trial. Many are anxious to know how it came out; especially some want to know how the Parson came out, because the last that was heard from him he appeared to be getting in still deeper. I should like to hear from you, but do not allow me or my scribbling to interfere with your grand work.

With best wishes for your success, I am yours for the truth.

W. P. RICHARDSON.

BRO. RICHARDSON:—Your article was never received, or it would certainly have been published. Your articles are not likely to see the waste basket. (1.) Since I have heard nothing more from the Llano debate, I suppose the Baptists must have backed out. (2.) "Zeke Jackson and the Parson" is continued in this issue.

A. McGary, Austin, Texas:

DEAR BROTHER—I sent two names from Tzell, T. R. Garner and L. P. Jones. I arrived home this evening. Found the F. F. of February 1st on hand, and seeing that so many of the brethren are content with the old hand-marks, I could scarcely restrain myself crying outright, and reading your article and that of Bro. Jackson in reply to Bro. Burnett. I think they were simply grand. I will work for the F. F. if you wish, and think me worthy to solicit subscribers, and the only commission that I want is enough to pay the expense of sending you the money received. There are many good brethren who want the F. F. but are not able to pay in advance. Now, if it is not congenial with your wishes to send the names without the money, please let me know. I want the F. F. to grow in circulation, and will only recommend good brethren. Would like to hear from you on these points. May success attend you. Your brother,

W. H. D. CARRINGTON'S VIEWS.

Editor Firm Foundation:

In your last issue you have not stated my position accurately. I therefore send you this revision of that statement:

I have for a half century earnestly contended that faith, repentance, confession and baptism are each and all conditions precedent to the remission of sins. That the death and sufferings of Jesus of Nazareth are the sole, meritorious and procuring causes of remission of sins, and that faith with all the heart, repentance, confession of that faith with the mouth and baptism are instrumental causes for remission, and indispensable to the enjoyment of remission of sins.

TIME—A PARAPHRASE.

The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Await alike the inevitable hour—
The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

Gray's Elegy.

BY WELTHEA E. BRYANT.

Time waits not in his course for man or child,
But onward sweeps, with eager, rushing haste,
And like a torrent in its thundering wild,
He spares unto us neither soul nor chaste.
He reaps all things o'en with his cutting scythe,
The courtly dame, the infant of an hour,
The warrior brave, the maiden young and blithe—
"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power!"

He cuts them down at morning's earliest dawn,
And breathes no word of flattery in their ear,
Yet to his close embrace each one is drawn—
No more the loved one's voices can they hear.
He leads them on with dread, relentless strength,
And not a moment's penance can they crave;
The hoary mountains own his sway at length,
"And all that beauty—all that wealth e'er gave!"

There is no power on earth that man can trust,
No strength but yields itself unto the days,
No adamant lower or marble bust,
That can the power of Time forever brave.

The humble cottager and monarch gay,
The stately oak and modest untold flower,
The creeping insect, and the beast of prey,
"Await alike, the inevitable hour!"

Some dark, rash act oft tempts a wearied soul,
And then one more is marshaled midst his train,
For murder's form perchance has reached the goal,
And intercessions then are all in vain.
Ambition also points her finger up;
In Fame's clear fountain bids another lave;
But ah! he drains too deeply of the cup;
"The paths of glory leads but to the grave!"

PROGRESS OF THE PROGRESSIVES.

Bro McGary:

I seldom ever ask space in the F. F., because I well know the size of the paper cannot possibly furnish space for all, even our most able writers, hence I feel that I am asking almost too much when I ask you to publish this. Notwithstanding, I would like the brethren to know the state of affairs as they exist at present in this part of the vineyard of the Master, that it may be some encouragement for those who are to-day facing all opposition and contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, to know that there are still a few that have not bowed the knee to Baal. About four years ago the little congregation of disciples was set in order at this place by old Bro. Jesse Sewell, of Tennessee, and since that time, with a very few exceptions, we have lived in peace, although, in many instances discipline has been neglected. Yet, in the main, things continued quiet until about a week ago, when Bro. W. J. Jones made his appearance in our midst for the purpose of, as he stated, to present "my (his) plea." I understand by that that, it (his plea) was according to the prescribed formula of the Waco convention, the moving power being $41 per month with extras. But God be thanked that this missionary move was boldly opposed by two of our elders, viz: Bro. A. G. Ament and Bro. W. F. James, who are ever ready to contend for the old apostolic landmarks. Now, it seems that Bro. Jones was impressed with the idea that his mission would be objected to from the fact that he stated to an alien on his arrival here that if the doors of our house were closed against him, he would hire a house or get a sectarian house to preach in; and this, to my mind, was evidence that he either knew his mission was unscriptural, or he was determined to force the teaching on us, even at the sacrifice of the peace and harmony of the church. But when interrogated on this point, he said he knew that Bro. McGary had published this matter, and he further knew that some of us endorsed the F. F. Now there are just two ideas in regard to this; one is that the elders and brethren that read the F. F. endorse a teaching that is unsound and heretic in its character; or, on the other hand, the teaching was scriptural, and with his before his mind he felt a little ashamed to make a request of brethren that would be met with an open Bible, and asked for a "thus saith the Lord." Yet they cry aloud against the F. F., and charge all of the division and strife that exists to-day to it; and even in his case on this particular occasion, it was said the F. F. was the cause. They certainly give us very little credit for reading the Bible. Now I can say this, and I am responsible for what I say, and that is that Bro. W. J. Jones can charge himself with driving the Austin forged and Waco-finished wedge that split the McGregor church open. But can we be surprised when such men will stand before an intelligent people and say that to-day men receive the Holy Spirit after baptism as of old? We may expect the evidence of pardon to be feelings next.

It is being stated here that Bro. Burnett has completely annihilated you on the all-important question of baptism. Also, it is said that Bro. B. has asked you five questions which you refuse to answer or can't answer. Now, Bro. Mc., I feel sorry for you. However I will offer you a suggestion that may aid you in your trouble. Now, if the questions are scriptural or pertinent to the issue, and you can't answer them, forward them to me or old sister Sallie Jones. The above statement was made by Bro. W. L. Harrison, who at the same time said that the confession was not a prerequisite to baptism, and that to understand the benefits to be derived from obedience was unnecessary, which Bro. H. was challenged to discuss, but backed down like a little man.

May God help us to find the right way and pursue it, is the prayer of your brother in hope.

J. P. DIFFY.

McGregor, Tex., Jan. 20, 1887.

Yes Bro. Burnett has been plying us with questions in the hope of drawing us away from his blunders. If Aunt Sallie Jones can find him a place to hide out up there at McGregor, where his friend Dalton will be handy to treat him for the liver complaint, he would doubtless be very thankful to her. It is said that, "a fool can ask more questions than a wise man can answer." While we do not say that Bro. B. is a fool, nor that we are a wise man, we think he has asked some very foolish questions, considering the issue at stake.

"THE NEW BIRTH."

NASHVILLE, ARK.,
Jan. 22, 1887.

Dear Brother McGary:

Dear sir:—During the past year I proposed two questions to you and the same were proposed to Bro. Burnett. You each answered them very nearly alike, and each answered incorrectly, for your answers are not according to scripture, and you know that we, as a people, have agreed to speak when the Bible speaks, and when it is silent to be silent, and this is correct, for an apostle has said if any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God speaks, (1 Peter, iv: 11); with this scripture before us we will proceed to the statement of my questions and your answer.

My first question: What is a man when he is born of the Spirit. In your answer you say he is a Christian, a child of God, an heir of God, and a joint with Christ to an inheritance that is undefiled and that fades not away. If you will turn to the third chapter of John's gospel and sixth verse, you can read the statement of our Savior or an answer. He taught Nicodemus a grand and true lesson, one that few men are willing to accept as true. He says that which is born of the flesh, is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit. Now you and others say he is a Christian a child of God, etc., but Jesus said he is Spirit; and what is a Spirit if Spirit has neither flesh nor bones as we have, as men have. You remember that Jesus appeared to his disciples, and they were affrighted and he said unto them, be not affrighted, for it is I; handle me and see for yourselves, for a Spirit hath not flesh and bones as you see me have. What have we? both flesh and bones, and as we have these, are we Spirit? by no means. But when will man be born of the Spirit? This is an important enquiry for the reason that all religious parties do teach that a man to become a Christian, or child of God, must be born of the Spirit and that unless the sinner is born of the Spirit he cannot be saved from sin. If I have read the New Testament correctly, man will be born of the Spirit in the resurrection and not before this and when he is raised from the dead, he will be Spirit. This is my faith and I obtained it from God's word. Paul, in his letter to the Romans, viii: 11, makes the following statement; If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. Suppose we ask Paul when will God do this, and when this is done by God, what we will be. This question is answered by Paul in his letter to the Corinthians of old. 1 Cor. xv: 35. But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? His answer may be read at or in the 4th verse. It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. In this chapter, the fifteenth of 1st Cor., Paul presents an unanswered and unanswerable argument in support of Christ's resurrection, and the resurrection of all of Adam's posterity. This argument of the grand old apostle has never been answered, and can never be shaken. What does the apostle write about? The resurrection. The resurrection of whom? First, the resurrection of Christ, and then the resurrection of man's body, and affirms of this that the body of man dies, is quickened and resurrected; that it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in power; it is sown a natural body, it is raised, what, a spiritual body. We read this from the word of God. Give book, chapter and verse and our faith and teaching must be and is correct. But it may be urged by men that this teaching destroys or ignores the office and work of the Spirit in the salvation of the sinner; by no means. The Bible reveals three kingdoms. First, the kingdom of nature or world; second, the kingdom of grace or church, and third, the heavenly kingdom or eternal state. Now we will examine briefly these three kingdoms or states and the terms and conditions of admission into each. How did the first commence? was the first man begotten and born into the natural kingdom. No, not if the Bible be true. But God took him out of the earth, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and he became a living soul, and Eve was taken out of or from man's side: made of his rib. These two entered into the natural kingdom thus, but all others have been first begotten, then quickened, and then born. There is no exception to this law of creation or birth. Let me repeat this order of heaven: Adam and Eve were neither begotten, quickened or born into this state; God placed them here, but we who come after them are first begotten, secondly quickened and thirdly born into the world; to this rule of existence there is not a solitary exception. Adam and Eve to perpetuate, to preserve, animal life must have air, water, food and raiment, so must all their offspring. All things necessary to the life of Adam and Eve are necessary to our life. Did they require food, so do their children; must they have air, so must we; do they thirst for water, we, their children, must have water or samish; raiment, or suffer from cold. How did the kingdom of Grace have its beginning? How did the church begin? Why? God, to establish the church or kingdom sent John, the Harbinger, to do a certain work, and what was the certain work? First, He come baptizing to make Christ manifest to Israel, and second to prepare a people made ready for the Lord. When this work was completed, John was cast into prison and beheaded. John i: 31. We now ask how many did John prepare and where did he find the rough material. In the seed or from the seed of Abraham it must be taken for this the covenant of God. Then in order to find the number prepared by John who are to enter the second kingdom or gracious kingdom of the Lord we will consult our standard of authority, the New Testament. He came unto his own seed, and his own received him not. John gospel, i: 11. This certainly refers to the seed of Abraham, the Jews and to decide how they entered the state Grace or kingdom, we will quote the twelfth and thirteenth verses of the first chapter of John's gospel, remember the church or kingdom is to begin, and to start it, God gave his Son a certain number of persons out of the nation of the Jews. He, Christ, came unto his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name; which are born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but the will of God. Can we from the scriptures determine who these persons were and how many there were in numbers we shall see. To ascertain this, we will direct attention to the seventeenth of John's gospel, sixth verse, I have manifested, made-known, thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world; thine they were thou gavest me, and they have kept thy word. Who are these and how many of them John xvi: 11 will tell us who they are and how many God gave him. While I, Christ, was with them in the world; I, Christ, kept them in thy name; those that thou gavest me I, Christ, have kept, and none of them is lost but the son of perdition; Judas who betrayed him, that the Scriptures might be fulfilled. Now we learn who were taken out of the world or Jewish nation and given to Christ. Doubtless all will agree that God took the twelve apostles from among the Jews, John prepared them and where these were baptized with the Holy Ghost on the Pentecost the kingdom of grace or church of God commenced and not before men those born of water and spirit and had these obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine that to-day and since Pentecost must be obeyed to make men and women Christians, Thus we learn the kingdom of grace had its beginning. These apostles constituted the body of Christ, but had no life until the Lord breathed into them His holy spirit on Pentecost. God made Adam's body first, then breathed into it life. God made the body of Christ or the church first out of the apostles and then breathe into it spiritual life by the baptism of the Holy Spirit. In the third kingdom Enoch and Elijah entered without being born into it but all who will enter without being born into it but all who will enter this kingdom must first die and be born from the dead to enter it. Since Adam and Eve enter nature's kingdom without birth, hence others have all been born into this kingdom by one universal law of propagation and since the twelve apostles of Christ entered the kingdom of Christ without a birth of water and spirit none can or will enter this birth of water and spirit into the church of Christ. There is a universal law of entrance into the world and the same is true of the church; one universal law of adoption or remission of sins, no exception since the days of the apostles. God put this into the spiritual state birth, but not begetting and quickening and birth. But we enter by being begotten with the word the seed of the kingdom for an apostle this "you hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins," and are all born of water. Enoch and Elijah enter heaven without a birth from the grave but all others to enter the holy of holies. Let me ask candidly of the reader to examine carefully the thoughts presented in this paper compare every one with the teaching of God's word and see if they are not worthy of reception. Now let me conclude this article. We say the seed is begotten with the word by the spirit in the apostles that he is pricked or quickened in heart; confess with his mouth the Lord Jesus Christ and is born of water, enters the kingdom is a child of God; a Christian that the Spirit of God dwelling in him till he dies; that God will raise up all such to an eternal inheritance reserved in heaven. There the natural is turned or converted into the Spiritual, and we are thus adapted to to the state of the Spirit. We shall cease then to live by air, water, food and clothing, but will live on that that is by God's wisdom made necessary for our happiness and eternal existence. To all this the language of Jesus in the eighth verse of third chapter of John agrees. "The wind bloweth when it listeth, and thou heareth the sound thereof but canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth. So is every one that is born of the Spirit. The man or one born of the Spirit is just like the thing Jesus is talking about be that wind. Spirit or any other thing, this doesn't matter. We remember when Jesus rose from the dead he commanded the twelve to go to Jerusalem and to tarry there until they were endued with power from on high. John says they were there and went into an upper room and for fear of the Jews they shut the doors and the same day as the disciples were within this room, Jesus appeared to them. None could tell where he came from or how he got in, and when he was through he vanished out of their sight and none could tell when he went or how he got out. This gives us a perfect understanding of this oft quoted but little understood passage, one that all the leaders of sectism flee to to confound the minds of men and women and by which they seek to establish a mysterious work of God's Spirit in the hearts of sinners to accomplish salvation.

Bro. McGary, give this subject your best thought and may you be comforted by the indwelling of our heavenly Fathers good and gracious Spirit led by his word in all the conflicts that may come in the future of this life, and like Paul of old see the crown of life which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give all his followers.

J. H. VAN DYCK.

We have not the space here to reply to this, to us, very vulnerable article. We are now in a discussion with Dr. W. A. Oatman, a Christadelphian, in which we affirm that when a man is scripturally baptized, he is then and there "born of water and the spirit." We will, however, offer some remarks in reply to Bro. Van Dyck in our next. Our discussion with Dr. Oatman will appear in pamphlet at 25 cents.

BRO. HANSBROUGH TO BRO. HARDING.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 30, 1866.

Dear Bro. Harding:

I have frequently thought with pleasure of the acquaintance we formed in Murfreesboro, Tenn., and, though you were sick, yet the little time that I had the pleasure of spending with you was, to me, (whether to you or not) a source of much gratification.

I had, from your writings and from what I had heard, formed a favorable opinion of you; but when I saw you, heard you talk and preach, it was still more favorable. I admired your zeal and your knowledge with and adherence to the word of the Lord. Do not conclude that I am trying to flatter you, for that is something I do not think I am much given to. I also admire the courage, and at the same time the kind spirit you manifest in combatting the erroneous teachings of those occupying high position among our brethren. I see in the Gospel Advocate of Nov. 24th, an article from you headed "An argument for Bro. Allen," in which you show so plainly and so kindly the fallacy of his reasoning in trying to justify Missionary Societies and Sunday-schools, and at the same time condemn instrumental music in the worship. They stand or fall together, and many other things that are practiced by some of our brethren stand or fall with them.

It is strange to me that a man of Bro. Allen's sense will bring up such an argument as he did to justify Missionary Societies, and oppose instrumental music in the worship. He says that the fact that instruments were used in the tabernacle service, and left out in the worship under Christ, is evidence that it is wrong, is sinful, that it contravenes the law of the Lord, and because Missionary Societies were unknown in the tabernacle service, and consequently could not be left out in the worship under Christ, therefore it is right to introduce them. What reasoning. Let us try it by common sense as well as the word of the Lord. Baby sprinkling was unknown in the tabernacle service, consequently could not be left out, therefore it is right to introduce it in the service under Christ. I wonder if he and W. T. Moore have not been corresponding lately to fix up some principle that will justify Moore in the course that he has been pursuing in England?

Paul said to Timothy, that from a child thou hast known the Holy scriptures, that are able to make thee wise unto salvation. Was Timothy made wise in reference to Missionary Societies? If so, where? Yet he was made wise to salvation; then Missionary Societies are not necessary to salvation; but they are looked upon as being necessary to raise money, and there is the trouble. He also says "the scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God to all good works." 2 Tim. iii: 15, 16, 17. They do not furnish the man of God or anyone else, to Missionary Societies, therefore Missionary Societies are not a good work, and are of necessity a bad work, for there are but the two kinds. Peter says God's "divine power (the gospel) hath given us all things that pertain to life and godliness." 2 Peter i: 3. But his gospel has not given us Missionary Societies, therefore Missionary Societies do not pertain to life and godliness; then they must pertain to death and ungodliness, because they are rebellious against God's will. Oh, how careful we should be. Paul in writing to the Colossian brethren says, "Let the word of Christ (not of men) dwell in you richly, and whatever you do in word or deed, do all in the name (by the authority) of the Lord Jesus." Col. iii: 16-17. Now where does the Lord authorize Missionary Societies? Simply nowhere.

Then when Bro. Allen or brother anybody else organizes or works through Missionary Societies to do the work that the Lord designs shall be done by his church, "he is contravening the law of God," is a rebel against his government, whether intentionally so or not.

Bible colleges are another institution that the Lord never authorized, and I do believe that they are the greatest curse among our brethren. They are manufacturing young pastors by the hundreds annually, who are setting down on the congregations, at stipulated salaries, and they push aside the elders, that are of God's appointment and do all the worshipping such as it is, and the result is that the congregations, instead of growing in grace and in the knowledge of the truth shrink up and die, and the great majority of them so far as my observation goes are in favor of some or all of these innovations or departures. Bro. Harding, if Christ had wanted Bible colleges he would have instituted them, or authorized his apostles to do it, and he would have given the qualifications of the president and the professors, as he did of the elders and deacons; but he knew that He was president or head Himself, and that His apostles were the professors, the Bible the text book and the only text book, and the church the school in which he designed the preachers to be educated. Oh, what a perfect system God has given us; but look how even our brethren who claim to take the word of the Lord as their only guide are doing, perverting the right ways of the Lord.

Again, Bro. Harding, where did the Lord ever authorize his preachers to take sectarians by the hand and shake them out of the sectarian institutions in which they may chance to be, and into (as they suppose) the church or body of Christ, when they have not been taught as the Lord instructed his apostles to teach and as they did teach them. Bro. Harding, let us do what we do by the authority of the Lord. Just here I have two questions for Bro. Harding and I hope he will give direct, positive yes or no answers to them. Do you believe that a man that has been taught that he must first repent, then believe, then confess that he believes that God for Christ's sake has pardoned his sins, and that he must then be baptized because his sins are forgiven, is scripturally baptized? And that too when he has never made the confession with the mouth that you and most of our preaching brethren require of one who has never made any pretensions to Christianity? Do you believe that the baptism of such an individual is anything like as near scriptural as that of the twelve at Ephesus, as recorded in Acts xix: 1-5 (and if Paul asked them if "they were baptized with their baptism," we have no account of it,) but they were satisfied, I suppose, by the instruction of the apostle, "in the name, (by the authority) of the Lord Jesus, and they could not be baptized by his authority without being baptized for or in order to the remission of sins."

Some month or so ago you wrote an article in the Gospel Advocate on the new birth, and Bro. McGary replied to it in the FIRM FOUNDATION, and sent it to you. Did you get it? If not, I want him to send you another; if you did, why did you not answer him?

Will you please write to me in reply to this, and if I am in the wrong point it out to me, and I will turn from it; but do it with the word of the Lord, and not with far-fetched inferences as many of our brethren are doing to justify themselves in that for which they have no authority in the word of God.

Your brother in Christ,
E. HANSBROUGH.

"OUR PLEA" MUTILATED.

I now ask your attention to some selections from the pen of our lamented Bro. D. S. Burnet: In his sermon on "The Good Confession," in the Living Pulpit. He takes as his foundation I. Tim. vi: 14 He says: "What the text calls the good confession is exacted of every candidate for baptism, and upon it, rather than any other consideration, apart from his hearty faith in it, the party is admitted to that holy institution." On page 51 he says: "The Good Confession that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God, is the creed and foundation of the Primitive Church." Again, page 56: "If the Good Confession is the marrow and fatness of the gospel; if it is the rock chosen on which to found the church, no one could object to its being divine." On page 60 I read: "Christ made the Good Confession before the Jewish high priest and Sanhedrin, and died for making it." On page 62 he adds: "The confession by which Jesus died is appointed for our life." Same page: "This confession of Christ is a condition of salvation from sin. There is no recognition before God and angels without it." And lastly, on page 66, he says: "The position of the confession in the gospel economy brightens its beauty. It immediately precedes baptism in the name of Christ, for the remission of sins."

The reader will please note carefully what I now offer from the pen of the gifted Tolbert Fanning. "At the basis of the Christian life, is placed "The Good Confession," from which all acts of acceptable service flow; and without which, as the beginning corner, no satisfactory beginning step can possibly be taken. While the confession was at the threshold of the kingdom of heaven, we have long regretted that near twenty years of our life were spent in fruitless efforts to learn what it is to profess faith in Christ. We were simply ignorant of the thought that confession is essential in coming to Christ. The word had not reached our heart—that is "the word of faith" which the Father had revealed. The apostle Paul, in addressing "the man of God" said "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses. I. Tim. vi: 12. This good profession, or rather confession of the name and authority of Christ is the simple and only authoritative creed of believers in Christ. The form is in the words of the Good Spirit. Hence the Lord pronounces blessings on all "who believe on him as the Scriptures say.—John vii: 38. With these plain statements from the word of God, we can but see that the good confession is in the words of the Spirit, and in the forms of the New Testament.

Why not? All the elements of religious instruction we find in the Scriptures. We are to believe and confess in the words spoken by our Lord, or reported by his chosen ambassadors, who were pronounced "blessed" because "They brought glad tidings of good things," and we may conclude that there can be no Christian confession but in the terms given by the Spirit. If we are correct in this conclusion, the forms of faith, which are confessedly the offspring of scientific investigation, and which have required ages of arduous toil to bring into shape, can have no connection whatever with the "good confession" of the early Christians. See Religious Historian—pages 220, 231, 232; Vol. 1. No. 8. We have now heard from Campbell, Franklin, Brents, McGarvey, Burnet and Fanning. I could continue with similar statements from many others, but will let these suffice. In my next, I will give some practical conclusions.

WHO HAVE BEEN BAPTIZED?

Answer:—They that have been born again, John iii: 5; been buried in baptism, Rom. vi: 4; been planted in the likeness of His (Christ's) death, v: 4; been resurrected, Col. ii: 12; they that have gone down into the water, Acts viii: 33; that have come up out of the water, v: 39; that have had their bodies washed with pure water, Heb. x: 22. They that have gone through the above in good faith have been scripturally baptized. No one else? No. Any action that does not meet all these conditions is not baptism, hence the subject is not baptized. If not baptized, where is he, and what is his condition?

Answer. According to the scripture he is out of the Kingdom, John iii: 5; out of Christ, Gal. iii: 27; not born again, John iii: 5; not saved, Mark xvi: 16; sins not remitted, Acts ii: 38; not blotted out, Acts iii: 19; not washed away, Acts xxii: 16; he is not regenerated, Titus iii: 5; not justified, 1 Cor. vii: 11.

GEO. W. SPURLOCK.

Those who are not sectarianized can be induced to subscribe for the F. F. But if they think God has not revealed the how they are past redemption. Let such alone.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, MARCH 1, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to McGary & Hansbrough, or to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to McGary & Hansbrough.

IN OUR last issue, in the twenty-eighth line from the top of the fourth column on the first page, the word "extension" should be read "extenuation."

BRO. BURNETT says that the "re-baptism" question was settled almost to unanimity forty years ago. How was it settled, Bro. Burnett, and who signed the agreement? Did it have more than thirty-three signers? If you had "rubbed your head against" Acts xix a little oftener you would not have said forty years ago, but about eighteen hundred and forty.

BRETHREN, boil down. Throw your words into the kettle of judgment; build around it a hot fire of criticism, and while the mixture is boiling, skim off all the malice and cruelty and prejudice. Boiling always brings such ingredients to the surface. Then, in order that the mixture may be palatable, put in large quantities of common sense; spice it with kindness and brotherly love; let the salt of Truth permeate the whole mass, and then serve it up with the sauce of Love. This recipe, warranted to cure all chronic cases of spiritual dyspepsia. Try it.

THE suggestion made some time ago to "boil down" is a good one. Who has heeded it? How many times a day do you boil up, and perhaps boil over? This boiling up and boiling over is a losing process, for whenever it happens others will see, (if you do not) that you have "lost your temper," and the hot, scalding words that splashed over causes the loss of many friends. Don't practice this, but boil down; and when you've well boiled down you'll find that you have gained a "good degree and great favor in the faith of Christ."

WE WOULD not have any one to infer from our reply to Bro. Burnett that we intend to let him "severely alone." By no means. "We are not our own" but have been "bought with the blood of Christ," and while we would prefer not to discuss with a man who will wilfully misrepresent us, yet if such men say that which seems to us to have a tendency to obscure or shadow over truth, we shall feel it our duty to throw the light of truth upon it. We do not intend to have any set discussion with any man who will not affirm his teaching and practice on this question. This we never expect to see Bro. Burnett willing to do. He is a good defender of positions that have been defended by others, but he is a copyist, and when thrown out of old groves cannot take care of himself. We saw this in his debate with Dalton. When Dalton would make some new dodge, Bro. Burnett would appear at great disadvantage; but when he would follow the old route over which Bro. Franklin and others had followed, Hardsbells Bro. Burnett would pierce but shot into him. He is an able opponent of Missionary Societies and State machinery work. But he can't affirm the teaching and practice of "our plea" on sect immersion, for no one has ever traveled this route before him and blazed it out for him. We think some of the advocates of his side of the question will soon feel compelled to stand in the fore front on this question and stake the issue. Whether they do or not, they will continue to lose ground till there will not be a corporal's guard of them left. The honest, candid element of the brotherhood will not stand by them in their inconsistent predicament much longer. The truth is winning friends so fast any way that we can afford for them to dodge about—if they can.

"The FIRM FOUNDATION man will amuse our neighbor now while we get a rest."—Ark. Dept. Texas Christian.

If you are tired, you had better unload some of the unscriptural lumber you have on board. Then you can rest. It must make you tired to carry a state meeting, state evangelist, state board, hired pastors and organs, and try to walk by the Bible.—Christian Messenger.

Well, it is said to be a "poor wind that blows no one good luck." Bro. Burnett's recent windy effort to blow away all but three words—death, burial and resurrection—did give you Bush-whacking progressives a respite from the severe castigation that he was laying on you for your money-loving tricks. But you had better pant fast; for we have punctured that little three-ply-gospel-balloon and let the wind out; and he has fallen so flat that he is mad enough to burn (ett) up and skin you Bush-whackers to cover it up.

WELCOME TO HIS GLORY.

If Bro. Burnett has merited any prestige, glory, renown and eclat by his babbling, fiddle-faddle retreat from the question at issue, along which route he has left monuments of self-contradictions by the score, we are willing that he may revel in it all without further molestation from us after this. But to us his course is peculiarly marked with pusillanimity. He calls our last "Another flash." How he could see a flash from his distant hiding place to which he so precipitately fled from us is the wonder. The issue is: "Is immersion under denominational teaching and usage valid, or authorized by the Lord?" He holds that it is, while we deny it. He did not have the courage at first to stand like a true conscientious soldier and vindicate his teaching by the sword of the Spirit, but sidled off in the brush like a guerilla and engaged in slurs and invidious insinuations about "the new reformation." Now, he complains at our slung. He borrows the style of Dalton, and refers to us as the "great editor of the great organ," and calls it the "Flimsy Foundation"—according to the rule that most people would judge of the "greatness" of "organs," the FIRM FOUNDATION is much "greater" than the Messenger; for according to Bro. Burnett's own statement to us about his paper, we have many more readers than the Messenger, while the Messenger is twelve years old, and the F. F. is only two and one half years old, though we claim no pre-eminence over him for this. But after his style towards us, how can he have the cheek to talk about our slang? Most of the slang we used at him was such as he had used. We have as much right to use his slang at him as he has to use Dalton's at us. But I am willing to admit that such a style is very wrong in both of us. Bro. Burnett said:

We are not to believe the commands and obey the facts. Hence the person who believes the facts, (death, burial and resurrection of Christ,) and obeys the commands (belief, repentance and baptism,) is validly baptized, and is in the kingdom.

We showed that this process was, (1) faith, (2) belief, (3) repentance, and (4) baptism; and we besought him to explain it or abandon (1) or (2) as superfluous. But away he fled to Daniel ii: 44! He was suddenly taken with a fondness for prophecy! Then, after his saying that we are not to obey the facts, we reminded him that the gospel had to be obeyed, and referred him to 2 Thes. i: 8. Then he said we die to sin, are buried with Christ in baptism, and rise to a new life—thus we obey the three facts. We showed him that no sane man would talk about the impossible feat of obeying a fact. Then he replied with his vacant, swaggering gabble about the "new reformation." He said that the only way to pervert the gospel was to deny the three facts of Christ's death, burial and resurrection. Then he said we were perverting the gospel, when we were not denying the facts of Christ's death, burial and resurrection! We asked him to reconcile these conflicting things; but, no, sir! he wanted to know where the church was "seventy-five years ago!" We had heard him in an oral discussion, and found that he was a very "short horse" in debate anyway, and "easily curried" if we could only get up to him; so, we were willing to divide time with him in a sort of a loose way, as he was not willing to affirm his teaching. But we found that though he was a scrub in most respects, he was a thoroughbred in his heels—and as swift as the wind on the retreat. If we had crowded him a little further he would have asked us, who Cain's wife was, and would have told his readers that we said her maiden name was Jane Smith! Now he wants us to turn him over to Bro. Jackson or Durst. As he has rumbled Dalton's thunder at us, we will return him some of the same primitive stock, by telling him, "that he is like a boy playing marbles, when he gets beat, he wants to change laws." Well, he can have either of the laws, Jackson or Durst, but we insist on his not fudging so any more. We will mention some of his fudges with the law he is so tired of: He says of us:

He says that Christ's kingdom was destroyed, or so nearly destroyed that no man could find it or hear of it on the earth, and that Alex. Campbell, an unbaptized sinner, not in the kingdom himself, went out into the wilderness and began to preach the gospel, and set up a new kingdom like the one that had been destroyed!

Again he says:

Bro. McGary will not flatly deny the scriptures we have produced, and affirm that the church did not exist somewhere in the world before the days of Alex. Campbell; but he has whittled the kingdom down to so fine a point that he says if it existed at all it was invisible! He has got it down to an invisible kingdom!! At first he denied the existence of such prophecies as taught the perpetuity of Christ's kingdom, but when we produce them, he accepts them as true, but says the kingdom was invisible.

Brethren, to this we hardly know how to reply. It almost dumb-founds us. In justice to truth, and in the fear of God, and in the love of all true disciples of His Son, we cannot do less than to brand it as false in warp and woof, without a scintilla of truth in it. We call upon Bro. Burnett for a confession of this great sin of putting words in our mouth that we never thought of. Is the brother run stark mad over his defeat? "Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbor; for we are members one of another. Being angry, sin not; let not the sun go down upon your wrath." Ephesians iv: 25. A brother from another state has written us about this flagrant perversion of facts by Bro. B. He said Bro. Burnett's paper would lose two-thirds of its subscribers for this. It ought to lose all, unless he corrects his misrepresentation. The very hot-bed of purgatory could not hatch a more bald-faced one. Forgive me brethren for calling attention to it in such marked terms, for I do it, not for personal considerations, but for the sake of the truth! It was manufactured to obscure. We cannot afford to drabble the skirts of the truth-seeking FIRM FOUNDATION in this cauldron of bubbling venom any more, till it cools down sufficiently to manifest some respect for the truth. Whatever else may be said of the F. F., it will not manufacture words for others. I know Bro. Burnett was vexed into this course by our taunting him with his contradictions. Then he was so eager to get us to say something about the kingdom so he could hide behind it. But we saw what he was after and would not follow him off. This disappointment to him in his lop-sided and twisted condition was more than he could bear, so he just manufactured the position, and told that we said it. If he will show where we said one word about an invisible kingdom, or anything else he here states we said, we will take the position out and out or confess that we have misrepresented him. We intend that many of his readers shall see how he has acted, as we have a goodly list of of them. And now let our readers pass the paper around to Messenger readers, so they may see the tricks resorted to in order to support a human plea. We will send a copy of this issue to any Messenger reader that any of our brethren will suggest. May God forgive our brother for this heinous sin.

And now, in conclusion, a word to Bro Jackson, Bro. Durst, or whoever becomes his next "law." Deal tenderly with him, for on this question, you see he is very soft. Besides, his last article clearly evinces the fact that he is badly jaundiced; perhaps, in his frequent association with Mr. Dalton, he has caught his terrible "liver complaint." He has become so sensitive on some points that they must be studiously avoided by you, or he will paint you up in false colors. So don't ask how many faiths he employs in his defense of sect baptism? nor, whether persons obey facts or commands? Nor, if the FIRM FOUNDATION perverts the gospel? If he wants to talk about Dan. ii: 44, and the church seventy-five years ago, you must humor him, or he will say that you say the church existed then but was invisible, and he will throw in exclamation points to fasten the position upon you. Just let him have rope, and he will wind himself up, but you must not call attention to his wriggling when he gets his foot in a loop. If you will treat him this way he will stay in a good humor, perhaps.

"WHAT IS THE GOSPEL?"

This question is asked by Bro. Bro. McDaniel in a recent issue of the Messenger. Then he proceeds to answer it himself; but he does not answer the question as one who "rightly divides the word of truth." This he ought to do in the future, and "be ashamed" of his non-observance of Paul's injunction on this point. He who fails to "rightly divide the word of truth," is a poor "workman;" for however desirous he may be to advance the interests of truth, the effects of his labor will have an opposite tendency—will retard the progress of truth, and thereby contribute to and foster the interests of the adversary. Notice Bro. McDaniel's answer to his question. He doubtless believes it to be Paul's answer, but while it is Paul's language, it is not his answer to the question. He answers: "That Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures"—I. Cor. xv: 3-4. Then he asks, "does this include re-baptism?" Now, let us employ his scrappy rule of interpretation and we will have Paul crossing himself, or defining the gospel to the Corinthians one way, and to the Romans another! To the Romans he says: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God." Now, then, we have it! The "power of God" is the gospel! Bear in mind, Paul says it (the gospel) is the power of God. Now, if either of these must be taken as Paul's definition of the gospel, the latter must be, because there is no abrupt severance of it from five other facts that the apostle has bound together with the force of copulative conjunctions. Our brother-in-law, W. H. Kittrell of Erath county, is very earnestly and zealously teaching that "the power of God" is the gospel. He claims this from the passage we have quoted. He holds that miracles, such as were performed by Christ and vouchsafed to his ambassadors, are still resident with the people of God. He claims that whenever these powers cease to remain with the church, that then there is no gospel, because Paul says "the gospel is the power of God." We think he is standing on as safe ground on this point as Bros. McDaniel, Barnett, or other brethren who have a theory to defend which forces them to teach that Paul defined and limited the gospel to three facts. He is far more consistent. Now, suppose we permit Paul to speak on this question again, and ask him, "what is the gospel?" Attention! "The word of truth, the gospel of your salvation."—Eph. i: 13. Yes, it is that same "word of truth" which he told Timothy to "rightly divide." According to Bros. McDaniel and Burnett et al., it is rightly divided when the "workman" has said, "death, burial and resurrection!" But to his question: Do the three facts "include re-baptism?" No, my brother, not if you mean, does the theory that limits the gospel to the three facts include what you call re-baptism?" This narrow-contracted idea was "cut and dried" for the very purpose of excluding it, hence it does not include it. But we would ask you a question, which, when you affirm you must support with the proof: Does the word of God from first to last deliver a gospel that includes an unintelligent baptism?—sect baptism?

A. MCG.

THE NEW COMMISSION.

Bro. Aten, have you heard of the new doctrine? It is, that obedience, to be acceptable, must be performed with full knowledge of the design and all the blessings connected with that obedience. I hope then, that they will not take offense if I formulate their new commission as follows: "Go preach the gospel to every creature; he that believes, knowing what faith is for; and repents, knowing what repentance is for; and confesses the Lord Jesus, knowing what confession is for; and is baptized, knowing what baptism is for, shall be saved." I would ask my beloved Bro. A. C. Hill, of Manor, if he endorses the amendment—the supplement. I ask this question to find out your status, Bro. Hill, on this question. Truly, if Solomon were living now, he could not say that "There is nothing new under the sun."

W. J. JONES.

Thorp's-Springs, February 1887.

I clip the above from the Texas Department of the Apostolic Guide of February 18th. We hope that Bro. Jones will not take offense when I call attention to the new commission as taught by himself and others. Here it is: "Go preach the gospel to every creature; he that believes, not knowing what faith is for; and repents of his sins, not knowing what repentance is for; and confesses the Lord Jesus, not knowing what confession is for; and is baptized, not knowing what baptism is for, shall be saved." Now, I would ask my beloved brother of Thorp Springs, "if he endorses the amendment, or supplement?" Now let's be fair and honest with each other, and true to God. Because many of us teach the necessity of understanding that baptism is for the remission of past sins, Bro. Jones and others, in order to justify their course in receiving sectarians on their unscriptural baptism, would attempt to ridicule us in the style of the above "New Commission." If, because we teach the necessity of understanding the design of baptism, you are justified in formulating for us the foregoing "New Commission," are we not justified in formulating this one for you, because you teach that it is not necessary to understand its design? My Brother, I fear your logical mind has become clouded of late. You did not reason thus when you lived at Manor. I well remember the pleasant hours passed at our home, and that of a near neighbor brother, before you moved away. We listened to many good things, then, from you, in the advocacy of re-baptizing those from the sects. Your statement to us that you had always acted against your convictions when you received them without baptism, is clear to my memory. Now, my brother, have you been asleep on this question, and but recently aroused to discover this "new doctrine?" Or, did you fall to discover it 'till the recent light in the Bush appeared? While Bro. Jones is trying to elicit the status of Bro. Hill, he may, if he will, take the witness stand himself. Will the Texas Department of the Guide please copy this? If it will, then Solomon would take back that old saying of his if he were here.

A CANDID(?) MAN'S VIEWS EXAMINED.

J. T. Poe claims to have received a letter from some one who called him a "candid man," and asked for his views on re-baptism!—Passing by the hints and insinuations that we find in this candid man's reply, and which always characterize his writings, we purpose noticing some points in his reply. He says: "True Christian baptism, in my opinion, is that which is done or submitted to by penitent believers, and done solely because God commands it to be done." He ought to have read Bro. W. P. Richardson's article before he wrote his; for Bro. Richardson shows that Baptists do not baptize penitents, but those who have passed out of the penitent state. So then, put his position and Bro. Richardson's together, and Baptist baptism is branded as a nullity. But J. T. Poe says they must be baptized solely to honor God. So he nullifies all baptisms submitted to for the remission of sins!! The three thousand on Pentecost were not baptized solely to "honor God," but also for the remission of their sins; therefore, according to this "candid man," their baptism was rendered null and void because it was not "solely to honor God!"

Again, he says: "The type of our baptism is found in the baptism of the Israelites in the cloud and in the sea. God commanded them to go forward; they obeyed, not knowing what design or purpose God had in view. Their obedience, however proved to be their salvation from their enemies." Reader, suppose a man who had never seen a silver dollar should ask another who had one in his pocket to give him a minute description of a silver dollar. Suppose this man, instead of pulling out the dollar and showing it to him, should ask him to go to the mint that he might show him the stamp of the dollar—the type, what would you think of him? You would either think that he was a simpleton, or that there was some feature of the silver dollar that he did not want the man to see—that he might be enabled to pass a counterfeit dollar on him. And this is just the view to take of J. T. Poe's action in this reply of his to this suspicious looking letter which is filled with flummery of himself. Suppose when the new capitol building is finished in Austin some brother should visit me and want me to show him this stupendous structure. Suppose I should take him to the building and turn his back to it and point to its shadow, and say, behold our magnificent building! He would have good reason to think that I was loony, or that there was something about the building itself that I did not want him to inspect. And this is the reason that some men now turn back to the Red sea to explain baptism. There is something about the antitype, Christian baptism, as it is delineated to us in the splendor of that "true light that lighteth every man that cometh in the world," these men don't want the people to see. Think of "one of our soundest Texas preachers" turning a man's back on baptism as it commenced to be taught and administered by the apostles of Christ on the first Pentecost after His resurrection, and was preached and practiced throughout the world, and recorded and explained thoroughly, and inviting him to the Red sea to explain what it is! Such a man clearly shows a preference for types and shadows over the realities. Well, they have a reason for this course and it is an unholy one. But this is not the worst feature of his ramble back to the Red sea. He perverts the facts when he gets there. We invite this candid man's attention to the law and to the testimony. If he speaks not according to this word, it is because there is no light in him. If his light turns out to be darkness, how great is that darkness! We think his "soundness" will disappear before God's truth like dew before the morning sun. "Candid" men should know whereof they speak when they attempt to enlighten on these grave and momentous questions. Remember he says: "God commanded them (the Israelites) to go forward; they obeyed, not knowing what design or purpose God had in view." Let the reader examine Exodus xiv, and he will see how this candid man deals with the facts of Scripture. The children of Israel complained when they saw Pharaoh closing in upon them, and hemming them against the sea; but Moses said: "Fear not, stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord, which he will show to you to-day; for the Egyptians whom ye have seen to-day, ye shall see no more forever." Now in view of this language of Moses to them, what kept them from seeing "the design or purpose God had in view?" Will this "sound" and "candid" man tell us? If they did not know the design, it was because they were idiots or unbelievers. Maybe he means the idiots and babes didn't know the design.

Men have sought out many inventions to evade the force of truth. The words "sound" and "candid" will have to lose their usual significance before they will be applicable to such men. Although the writer has been twice immersed, and is ready to submit his case to all "candid men," and "Queen Sabe," too, when he pulls off his cowardly mask, he had rather be dragged through the Red sea by the "heels" for a third one than to pervert God's word as J. T. Poe does in answer to himself, to try to drive a plausible peg for his Baptist ducking to hang on, which, in the language of Dr. Burleson, is no better than if he had been kicked into a river by a mule. The twelve at Ephesus could have plead the type at the Red sea in justification of their baptism before they were "re-baptized," with as much propriety as J. T. Poe can plead it in justification of his and others not according to "the pattern given." If our candid friend had been there he certainly would have tried to argue Paul out of "re-baptizing them;" and, if he had failed, would doubtless have sought out some partizan paper, if there had been one in Ephesus, and under cover of some such mask as "Ariel," or "Queen Sabe," would have called Paul a hobbyist, and told the twelve that next time they would have to "baptize themselves," or be "hung up by the heels and let down in the water." But such a cowardly course would not have deterred Paul nor his honest converts, and it will not deter honest men and women to-day. Who cares for such criticism from men who pervert the word of God as J. T. Poe has done in reference to the Israelites at the Red sea? J. T. Poe points out the two extremes, and would have his readers understand that he occupies the "golden mean." But he is either extremely ignorant of the scriptures, or extremely deceitful in handling it, as we have proven above. He can choose either horn of the dilemma he prefers. If he is ignorant, he ought to learn more before he attempts to enlighten others. If he is deceitful in handling God's word, he ought to repent of it along with the balance of his sins, and be baptized by the authority of Christ, even if he has to be "swung up by the heels," and let down into the water. By the by, does he not suppose that the twelve at Ephesus were baptized, in the first instance, to "honor God?" If they were, and he is correct, Paul did wrong in "re-baptizing" them—unless they coupled some other design with it, thereby invalidating it by not doing it solely to "honor God." He says:

"There is a baptism practiced often which is not in obedience to God, but to man, or to one's self in many cases. The Baptists, for instance, have a man, a Christian (sins all pardoned), that is they destroy his enemies with some of the plagues of Egypt, or something else, and after Pharaoh and his host are all destroyed, they cross a man over, that is, after he is pardoned, and they baptize him; not for remission; not because God commanded it, but to make him a Baptist."

This is right heavy against the Baptists, but it must be true, for he ought to know, as he was baptized by them, and is standing on that baptism to-day! But we presume he stands there and recognizes Baptist baptism with all of this deformity he has described, because he wants to avoid extremes and be "candid" and "sound." He has in this, dug under his own position, and let it drop in. He now has no ground from which to oppose us, only from the stand point of exceptions. But "candid" men do not argue from exceptions, but from rules. J. T. Poe has written to us that we know how stubborn he is, and hence we ought not to try to drive him. He also said the best way to do him was to let him alone. Well, we have let him alone for good reasons, for quite a while. But when he wants to be let alone by us he must not pervert God's word in our sight. A. MOG.

BRO. HARDING'S LETTER.

144 HOWARD ST., DETROIT, Mich.,
February 5, 1887.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Yours of January 29th received. I like your proposition for a published discussion, and I admire the kind, fair spirit which you display. I am willing to assist you in the matter of bringing out the light on this subject. I have, however, one proposition to make, viz: That you should affirm your faith. The question is not so much one of baptizing as of re-baptizing. The real question in dispute is this: "Is the knowledge that baptism is for the remission of sins necessary to the validity of the ordinance?" I deny it. If you will affirm this proposition, we can have the debate you desire.

I teach the people whom I baptize that baptism is for remission as fully and as earnestly, I presume, as you would desire. The question is, "What shall be done with those who were immersed before they learned the design of the ordinance?" You affirm that they should be re-baptized; I deny it. The onus probandi is with you.

A man ought to be willing to affirm and defend his teaching and practice. You teach immersed Methodists, Baptists, etc., that they should be re-immersed, and when occasion offers you do re-immersed them. Now, it behooves you to give a scriptural reason for thus acting. I don't re-immersed these people; you say I ought to, hence it falls to your lot, according to the rules of debate, to endeavor to show me that I ought to. You are the one who act in the premises, hence it devolves upon you to justify your action.

J. A. HARDING.

We have taken the liberty of publishing this letter of Bro. Harding's, believing that he will not object. It will be seen from this letter that there is first to be a debate about the debate. But we regard Bro. Harding as an honest man, and one of the strongest of our opponents on this question. But his usual logical accumen is turned upside down on this question by the weight of "our plea." We believe that when we turn it right side up by these remarks, he will shoulder his responsibilities like a true man and come right up to the front with the scriptures which he believes authorize the practice we are opposing. Of course he believes that the scriptures are sufficient to settle it. We fully agree with Bro. Harding when he says that "the Scriptures teach in three ways, viz: by precept, by example, and by necessary implication." So we grant him the entire range of these avenues of authority to bring up his authority for baptizing a man who does not know the design of the ordinance, or, has not made a scriptural confession. But for the present we are to show that Bro. Harding is responsible for the proof. If we fail in this, and he proves that this duty devolves upon us, we shall not shirk it. From our present angle of viewing this question, it is a matter of surprise to us that a man of Bro. Harding's usual clearness of perception could become so befogged as to decide that the onus of proof devolves upon us who are denying. But the follies of human nature are so manifold that the very best of men may become blinded with prejudice, without realizing that there is a particle of it in them. We are sure that Bro. Harding is in this condition, but we believe that he differs from many of our bitter opponents, in that he has the courage to institute a self-examination. Hence we had rather discuss this question with him than any man we know. But who must furnish proof? Bro. H. says he teaches the people he baptizes that baptism is for the remission of sins. Now, while this is not the point we are now driving at, we cannot refrain from expressing our surprise at his teaching that which it is unnecessary for the people to believe. It is a waste of time, and genders strife. He says: "The question is, 'what shall be done with those who were immersed before they understood the design of the ordinance?'" Yes, this is the question. Now, if the Lord authorized their baptism then they should be received upon it, of course. Right here comes up the real issue: "Did the Lord authorize their baptism?" The man who says He did, every man that ever heard of logic knows is responsible for the proof. Who, then, is this man? J. A. Harding. That settles this point, unless Bro. H. has discovered some new system of logic. But Bro. Harding says: "you affirm that they should be re-baptized; I deny it. The onus probandi is with you." Too fast, my brother! I deny that they have been authoritatively baptized. I try not to affirm negatives. But he says: "A man ought to be willing to affirm and defend his teaching and practice. You teach immersed Methodists, Baptists, etc., that they should be re-immersed, and when occasion offers you do re-immersed them. Now it behooves you to give a scriptural reason for thus acting." Now this is as broad as it is long, and a little broader. We can say to you: A man ought to be willing to affirm and defend his teaching and practice—especially so when his teaching is affirmative teaching. You teach immersed Methodists, Baptists, etc., that they have been baptized by the authority of Christ, and when occasion offers you shake them in. Now, it behooves you to give a scriptural reason for thus acting, since you teach that the scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works, and we deny that it furnishes you unto this. Again you say: "I don't re-immersed these people; you say I ought to; hence it falls to your lot, according to the rules of debate, to endeavor to show me that I ought to." I can say, too: I don't shake these people in. You say I ought to, hence it falls to your lot, according to the rules of debate, to endeavor to show me that I ought to. You teach that men ought to oppose the introduction of the organ into the worship, and I am sure you are right but I don't think you ought to be required to furnish the proof that the organ is not authorized. Do you, Bro. Harding? You can't twist me into affirming a negative. Shall we have the debate?

A. MCG.

LUFKIN, Angelina county,
Jan. 28, 1887.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have never desired to have my name appear in any of our literature, but on the 30th inst. I went as a delegate from Nanomay church, this county, to represent that church in a district co-operation meeting, to convene at Palestine, Texas, Bro. A. J. Bush being the prime mover; and after participating in that meeting (as delegate) I wrote a brief communication for the columns of the Gospel Advocate; but after much deliberation, I concluded to write this communication for the columns of the F. F.

I had never been present at any one of the state meetings held by those who compose the church of Christ in Texas, although I have had opportunities to do so; but when Bros. N. W. Gaun and W. W. Dunn, elders of the church of Christ known as Nanoway, requested me to represent the church in the meetings at Palestine, I consented, and was present during the deliberations of the meeting. And whilst I entertain a very kind regard for Bro. Bush, and all those who participated in the meeting at Palestine, I cannot refrain from entering my solemn protest against the proceedings of the machine from first to last, because it proved to be an innovation, and unwarranted departure from apostolic teachings and practices, and was counter to the declaration of the great Apostle to the Gentiles, "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished to all good works." 2 Tim. iii: 16, 17. This scripture was addressed to Timothy who was preparing for the ministry, and we who preach should give earnest heed to what the apostle hath here said, because there is not a single word of scripture that is not freighted with meanings. I am informed that Bro. Bush represents the machine wing of the split which recently occurred in the state co-operation meeting recently held at Austin. I am further informed that Bro. Bush receives $1200 annually, and his travelling expenses all paid, for his services in organizing district co-operations, all of which is paid him by the board who run the machine. And now if this machine business is a good work, and Paul was not mistaken, the scriptures will furnish authority, and a precedent for the missionary work, for you will remember the declaration of Paul is that, "The scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God to all good works." After a careful perusal of the New Testament scriptures, I fail to find where Paul ever received more than $1175, in payment for a years preaching, and Bro. Bush received $1200 and all expenses paid. I learn that Paul, whilst sojourning at Corinth, worked at the tent making occupation, and that on each Sabbath day reasoned (preached) in the synagogue, and persuaded the Jews and Greeks. I learn further from 2 Cor. ii: 9. that Paul was not chargeable to any man, and that he kept himself from being burdensome to the brethren. I therefore respectfully suggest that Bro. Bush reduce his salary to $1175. Our Savior walked from Galilee to Jordan, thirty miles, to be baptized of John, and was a homeless wanderer, had not where to lay his head, and if Bro. Bush can find one word of authority for the work in which he is engaged, it will be found in the second chapter of Jude, or seventeenth chapter of Mark, for nowhere else in the New Testament is authority to be found.

Bro. Bush was selected as chairman at the Palestine meeting, and appointed several committees who reported the result of their deliberations, but Bro. Bush revised the reports until they suited him, and then they were received. Bro. Smith was present in the meeting representing the church of Christ at Bryan. Sister Sallie J. Wright, from Huntsville, was present representing the church at Huntsville and J. L. Bolling was present representing Nanomay church, Angelina county. Bro. W. H. Duke, from near the town of Willis, Montgomery county, was also present, but not representing any church. Bro. Duke is a one legged man, one of nature's noblemen, and a Christian gentleman, of fine attainments, and a very poor man, and has a large family, and is devoting all his time and his every energy to the ministry, and I did fondly hope that the machine at Palestine would aid her good Bro. Duke, but not one cent was appropriated to enable him to live and proclaim free salvation to wretched fallen man. And now brethren and sisters of Texas, and elsewhere there are two horns to the dilemma that present itself to us, and the momentous question for us to consider is, which shall we accept? We must make up our minds to abandon the apostolic teaching, and practice, and adopt the machine with all its innovations and departures and follow in the wake of the Methodist society; or we must stand firm upon the Bible. If one could have been blindfolded, and taken into the meeting at Palestine, and have been ignorant as to what character of meeting he was attending, he would have been forced to the conclusion that he was attending a Methodist meeting, and that the object of the meeting was to raise means to pay a Methodist circuit rider. And now permit me to say, I am too old to seek the applause of man; I am in my 70th year, though but four years old as a preacher, and I further remark that I detest flattery, but I solemnly declare that the F. F. published by Bro. McGary, though almost everywhere spoken against, is by far the soundest literature extant to-day, and I am not one of Bro. McGary's strikers. If any he has. Praise me, or blame me, as you choose, brethren and sisters, I but speak the truth. I have been of the opinion in the days gone, that Bro. McGary was too cutting and harsh in his language, and to him I here say, indulge in as much hard argument as you will, but clothe your thoughts in softer words, let hard argument and soft words prevail in all you say. And to you I say: "Cry aloud. Spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show the people their transgressions." Isaiah lvii: 1.

Deeply impress our brethren and sisters, with the vital importance that attaches to a strict conformity to the teachings of the inspired apostles. They have given us the marks along on the guide posts that lead to the tree of life. Warn our brethren and sisters of the great danger that awaits us if we tolerate innovations and departures; this course may fail to make you and the F. F. popular for the time being, but you can realize that you have stood as a faithful watchman on Zion's walls, and have not failed to warn the people.

I cannot conclude this communication without expressing the brotherly love that pervades my heart for all the brethren and sisters whose acquaintance I made during my brief sojourn at Palestine. I was the guest of Bro. Avery during my sojourn, and I can truly say that until reason shall become dethroned, I can never cease to love him, and sister Averyt as a dear brother and sister. J. L. B.

THE CHRISTIAN'S GUIDE.

MADISONVILLE, Texas,
February 3, 1887.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Quite a number of brethren in these parts have asked me why I do not join the Farmer's Alliance, and what are my objections to it. As we have a goodly number of readers in Madison county who know me, and hoping to do them good, and others too, who are willing to be governed by God's word, I will, in my humble way, try to give Scriptural reasons why Christians should not join the Alliance or the Grange. I have many good brethren who are now members of these human institutions, and let me say, brethren, before I begin, I do not wish to offend you, but hope to do you good by getting you to stick closer to the teachings of our infallible standard. I admit in the outset, that the purposes of the Alliance are good, and that it has accomplished good, as a worldly institution, for those to whom it properly belongs, but Paul says to the Christians in Corinth. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." "Well," says one, "the apostle was writing about the marriage relation." Admit that he was, the force of the argument is not lessened. Matrimony is a natural and necessary relation of this life, while the Alliance is a mere conventional, human expedient. If Paul's injunction has any force against a Christian being unequally yoked with an unbeliever in the natural and necessary relations of husband and wife, with how much more force would it stand against his or her being "unequally yoked with unbelievers" in an institution which the scriptures do not provide for or approve? And let no one think for a moment that there is not a yoking together in the alliance or any of these human institutions, for we have the fact confessed to us in such words and expressions as "Let us put our shoulders to the wheel and all pull together, and we can accomplish wonders. Let us work as one man for the up-building of our common interest." "Yes," says one, "we don't allow any one to join us who does not believe in the Bible, for we require every one to put his hand on the Bible and take an oath," etc. I answer this is my greatest objection to this institution. My brother, you violate the plain teaching of Jesus and James when you go with these human organizations and take an oath. Jesus says, "But I say unto you swear not at all; neither by heaven, for it is God's throne; nor by the earth, for it is his footstool; neither by Jerusalem, for it is the City of the great king; neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black. (But you can get into the alliance by it, Jesus to the contrary notwithstanding). But let your communication be yea, yea, nay, nay, for whatsoever is more than (than yea or nay) these cometh of evil." Matt. v: 34-38. James says: "But above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath, but let your yea be yea and your nay nay, lest ye fall into condemnation." James v: 12. I ask you, my brethren, did you take an oath when you joined the Alliance? James says, "neither by any other oath." This most certainly includes the Alliance oath; so you see, this is another wrong. You violate the teaching of Paul when you become unequally yoked together with unbelievers and haters of God's truth and of the pure gospel, for every Baptist preacher in the county (except one, and he was a member) belongs to the Alliance, and there are some ten or twelve of them, and if they are not unbelievers and haters of God's institutions and divine appointments, then I am badly fooled. So, you see, here are two wrongs. "But," says one, "does not the Alliance teach faith, hope and charity?" Certainly the Alliance employs these pleasing platitudes just as a great many other worldly institutions do; but the faith, hope and charity of these worldly institutions fall very far short of the faith, hope and charity of the Bible. The faith of the Bible is a faith unfeigned; the hope of the Bible is the hope of heaven and eternal life, and the charity of the Bible is the charity that never faileth. True Christian faith takes the Bible as its guide, and does not take it second hand; as coming from the Alliance, but from God. Paul says, "prove all things, hold fast that which is good." Let me prove what I have said. Paul says in Col. ii: 8, "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, after the..."

ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power." I ask, then, if Christians are complete in him—in the body of Christ, which is the church—have they any need of the Farmers' Alliance or any other human organization or institution, principality or power, to teach them faith, hope and charity or any other good thing? I think not. This being true of the church, and all those who are faithful and true to it, I prefer to hold to Christ and the church as the source of faith, hope or charity, or any other good thing, and give God the glory through the church of Jesus Christ, rather than give the Alliance the glory for the little moral good it has filched from the church. Paul says: "Set your affections on things above, and not on things on the earth."—Gal. iii: 2. Notwithstanding this plain admonition of the apostle, some good, intelligent brethren whom I know that profess to love and honor Christ, seem to set their whole hearts on the Grange or the Alliance and other human institutions; neglecting the assembling of themselves together in the sanctuary of the Lord, or any attempt to carry on his service, or encourage others to do so. Why apply themselves to the services of the Alliance and Grange, attending their meetings, contributing to the treasury, and making speeches for the entertainment of its members. How comes this that men professing to love and be followers of Christ, are full of wisdom and eloquence, to instruct and build up and admonish these human institutions, and yet never have a word of encouragement or a prayer for the church of Christ, and rarely ever a nickel or a song? Our Savior said: "Ye cannot serve two masters; ye will cleave to the one and despise the other." I for one, brethren, prefer my master, even Christ. These are some of my reasons for not joining the Alliance or any other human institution. Brethren let us all try to be more loyal to our King and obedient in all things.

Yours for the "Old Paths."
A. J. McCARTY.

EXTRACT FROM AN UNPUBLISHED ARTICLE.

Some months ago, we published an article from Bro. W. T. Breedlove, on, "What is Scriptural Baptism." We then informed him if he wrote again expecting us to publish it, he must affirm his teaching and practice and furnish us his proof. He is a good writer, and doubtless a good man, but we cannot consent to publish an article we have just received from him for the reasons above mentioned—he does not affirm his teaching. We already have more articles from his side of the question than we can publish, and will not publish any until they gain courage to come up to the issue with us for their teaching. We have no space. We will, however, give the only apparent points in his article. He says: "I do not believe that a perfect understanding of all that Christ said is necessary in order to faith in Christ. Such an idea is contrary to the scriptural idea of babes in Christ needing 'the sincere milk of the word that they may grow thereby,' for since no one can have more than a perfect understanding of Christ's words, Christians would be born, like Adam and Eve, full grown. Again, the scriptures teach us to grow in grace and in the knowledge of Christ. The knowledge of Christ is contained in the word of Christ. How can he who understands it perfectly, grow in the knowledge of it?"

This appears to us to be the cream of Bro. Breedlove's article. If there is any point, any strength in the article we have given it. Our readers can see that an argument from this position is entirely gratuitous; for we agree with him. But as we have never taught that persons must have a perfect understanding of all that Christ said, before they can be baptized, any argument drawn from it against our position flies as wide of the mark as the distance from pole to pole. But we would ask him, if persons become full grown Adams and Eves when they learn that baptism is for the remission of sins? Is there no room for one to grow in grace and in the knowledge of Christ after he fathoms this deep proposition? According to Bro. Breedlove's idea, the idea that baptism is for the remission of sins ought not to have been revealed till our "brother in the kingdom, and patience of Jesus Christ wrote the things he saw on the isle of Patmos. If it is so deep it ought to be clothed in symbolic language lest some one should grasp its depth before his baptism and be born an Adam!!! Why did Peter feed this strong diet to unborn babes? Did he make three thousand Adams and Eves on the day of Pentecost? or, did he "shoot too high," above their comprehension he said, "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus for the remission of sins"? Bro. A. McGary:
Being one of your 25 cts. subscribers, and having received one of your January numbers, I write this note to assure you that I am a subscriber to the F. F. Just as long as I can raise the money to pay for it and will send you all the names I can. I think I can send you two any how. Just send the paper to the undersigned to the P. O. named above. I am not a preacher but I think I know what truth is when I see it or hear it, and if any one needs truth, I think it is myself and the F. F. suits me precisely. H. B. Francis, one of the old time M. E. church members is delighted to read the F. F. after I have finished; he is going to subscribe for it as soon as he can. I just received my December number last evening, and asked him to subscribe for it and he said he was afraid of it; I asked him why, he said he did not want to lose what little Methodism he had accumulated. So nothing more. Send me the paper, and I will send you the cash next week.
I remain yours for the truth,

ANOTHER BAPTIST SQUIB LET OFF.

"Bro. W. H. Jarrell, of Dallas, has recently been making it tell for Bible truth against the errors of Campbellism in North Texas. His new book titled "Salvation in Water," is meeting a warm reception in the Blackwaxie section in Texas, where the reformers are trying to plant their errors for truth. Some of them are very angry and are saying hard things as they are not willing to meet his arguments. They will not affirm their organization to be a scriptural church! They want a debate, but will not meet Bro. Jarrell and defend their position on the church. If they, Campbellites, take the Bible—the Bible only—and will not defend their organization as being scriptural, how on earth can they expect to gull an intelligent public and take the Christian name. It is high time all Baptists knew in Texas that Campbellites cease to claim to be the Christian church, and let us quit calling them the Christian church.—E. B. Hardin, Whitesboro, Texas, in Tenn. Bap., Dec. 25, 1886.

So they bark and sneeze. Jarrell's book has given our Baptist friends(?) the spirit of persecution afresh, a complete new baptism, for they swallow down whatever is given to them by their scribes. Jarrell's "Cart load of quotations" with his "Italics," is playing havoc "in the Blackwaxie section" no doubt, something will get muddy there yet. That waxie soil is rather sticky, and if the rains descend plentifully it brings fine crops as well as any in the State, and no doubt but the character of the people is something like the soil, so that if those "Reformer's" should happen to sow the "seed of the kingdom which is the word of God," there might be a collapse of some of those Baptist churches in that section. "Truth is mighty and will prevail" and it will not take an investigating and candid people long to see who is trying to "gull" them. Let them read the Bible and rightly divide its teachings. Then compare these with the teachings of men, and I will risk the assertion that Jarrell's tissue of misrepresentations will turn more Baptists to the truth than "Reformers" from it. As to the name of the church, there is no trouble about that if we only call Bible things by Bible names, and practice Bible teachings, all difficulty will vanish. It is sectarianism that makes trouble, comparisons to the "branch churches" is invidious. They cannot bear the light of fair inquiry and consequently cry heresy at every attempt to present the truth as God's word reveals it. The church we read of in the Bible is not the "Christian church," though composed of Christians, so that our Baptist friends(?) however much they may "write in love," needn't make much ado about it. They had better attend to their own houses and find out where they stand. The Fox that got into a difficulty and lost his "brush" found it quite difficult to persuade his fellows to adopt the cut short style. So if they can't "swallow a Cam(pb)el(l) let them strain out the gnat" that chokes them. P. H. ADAMS.

EAT THE FOOD YOU HAVE.

A gentleman who visited with great regularity the Philadelphia Penitentiary, the inmates of which his piety prompted him to instruct, had given a Bible to a convict, who would ask him, at each visit, with much shrewdness, some difficult question formed from passages of the sacred volume; each time declaring he would not go on if this was not first explained to him.

The gentleman was unable to persuade him that it would be best for him first to dwell upon those passages which he could easily understand, and finally said to him:

"What would you think of a very hungry man who had not eaten a morsel of food for the last twenty-four hours, and was asked by a charitable man to come in and sit down at a richly covered table, on which were large dishes of choice meat, and also covered ones, the contents of which the hungry man did not know. Instead of satisfying his exhausted body with the former, he raises one cover after another, and insists on finding out what these unknown dishes are composed of. In spite of all the advice of the charitable man to partake first of the more substantial dishes, he dwells with obstinate inquiry on nicer compounds, until, overcome with exhaustion he drops down. What do you think of such a man?" "He is a fool," said the convict, "and I will be one no longer. I understand you well."
[Dr. Leiber, in Armory.

ATHEISM.

"What can be more foolish," says Jeremy Taylor, "than to think that all this rare fabric of heaven and earth could come by chance, when all the skill of art is not able to make an oyster? To see rare effects and no cause; a motion without a mover; a circle without a centre; a time without an eternity; a second without a first—are things so against philosophy and natural reason, that he must be a beast in his understanding, who does not assent to them? The thing formed says that nothing formed it; that which is made is and that which made it is not. This folly is in finite."

Every thought and feeling is a painting stroke, in the darkness, of our likeness that is to be; and our whole life is but a chamber, which we are frescoing with colors that do not appear while being laid on wet, but which will shine forth afterwards, when finished and dry.

We are indebted to Bro. H. P. Adams for some valuable clippings which will be found in this issue. Also to Bro. J. W. Jackson for some.

WHY DO WE RECEIVE PERSONS FROM THE SECTS UPON THEIR BAPTISM.

[From the Christian Leader.]

I ask this question for information, hoping some informed scribe will be pleased to answer through the Christian Leader or Review. If sectism is to be the nursery for the reformatory movement, then it is time for boasting of our simplicity and greatness to cease. If the apostles and the early churches are to be our guide in matters of faith and practice, then why not follow them? Why claim one thing and follow another? Why charge the sects and religious partisans of inconsistency, then commit another equally as glaring? There is no midway ground for the Disciples to occupy or tolerate; for this would be certainly compromising some of the principles on which a restoration depends. I will suppose a case in order to present the question more forcibly—I think perfectly clear and tangible.

Suppose a foreigner should come to the United States, take up his abode in some beautiful village for some years, and form an ardent attachment to its liberties, and institutions and citizens, with an honest preference for our institutions, and we would continually point out and contend with him about his condition and practice. But, for some reason, he has failed, perhaps through ignorance of the demands of the law, or that he held certain parts of the ceremonial provisions of the law were not essential in his estimation; therefore, if he were to present himself at the proper place at some election, would it be right that he should be allowed to vote? one will contend that he should. He might be an excellent man, perhaps far more worthy and better qualified in many respects, than thousands who are entitled to the privileges. But he has not even filed his intentions; has failed to give the regular notice to the proper authority; of course he has never been naturalized. Still, all can perceive that in removing the hinderance from his voting, without complying with the regular form required by the law, we would break down the whole naturalization law, and thereby overturn our civil liberty. But the law sets a bar or limit which hinders the citizens of the whole world from overturning the liberties we now enjoy. Does not this illustrate the case or question before us? A citizen of France may renounce his allegiance to his home government and go to Germany and take out naturalization papers and become a German citizen, then abandon Germany, come to the United States and offer himself to this country and claim to be a Frenchman, and upon that plea, claim he renounced France ten years ago, had never gone back, owed no allegiance to France. Would the United States receive him upon this plea? It is true, he left his native country, and renounced all allegiance to it, but did he not swear fealty to Germany? Has he renounced his allegiance to Germany? Did he exhibit his papers bearing evidence to this effect? Well, no. Now apply all this to the case in hand, in the kingdom of Jesus Christ, and his laws and requirements. We claim to follow Jesus Christ and the apostles, as taught and practiced by them—all the commands, not a part of them—all of them. Whenever you practice all the commands, this alone will oppose all sectism. This alone will oppose all spurious practices or counterfeit religion. Counterfeit religion leads to superstition and all manner of crazy notions, as experience telling, dreams, Spirit-seeking—a wrong view of faith. Through this process they arrogate to themselves a superiority over others. Thus, with all this batch of superstition they present themselves for membership with us, and we are ready to throw open our arms to receive them upon their "we have been immersed," and all the other counterfeit teaching and former practices they bring in with them. Is not this practice overturning the foundation of the Restoration? As in the illustration above, they renounced the world, and swore allegiance to some sect or partisan leader in it, they inherited falsehoods there indoctrinated, a very inconsistent and insidious life of superstition or extravagancy, inverting the entire system of apostolic teaching and practice, and bring all this long train of thoughts and habits in among us; a people practicing differently. It is evident to every Disciple in the land, from the days of the Campbells down to the present time, there has been a steady opposition to the form of doctrine we teach, by the sects of every name. The apostolic commission given by Christ, to teach and convert the world, is held by them of little esteem, or rather non-essential in the turning of sinners to God. Therefore they hold it very differently from the apostles and early Christians, as taught us in the New Testament. Then, if they were right in their faith and practice, the sects are wrong to-day (or any other day), the way they practice, both as to the commission and receiving members. If the sects are wrong, which we know or say they are, then we do a wrong to Christianity, a wrong to the plea we present to the world, in accepting sect-baptism, also wrong some of the brethren.

A child born of the United States must be twenty-one years old before he can cast a vote, under the laws of his country. But a grown up foreigner can have all the privileges in a very short time. So the alien sinner must take all the apostolic rounds before he can come in among us, and be admitted to all the privileges, but the sects can walk right in among us, and have all the privileges in a short time like the foreigner.

Is this right? We wrong the brethren in advocating a thing we know is not in accordance with inspiration. One faith, one Lord, one baptism, one God and Father above all and in all, should be the earnest cry of every Disciple in the land. This ago demands it; the cause which we plead demands it; all truly converted Disciples demand it; all truly pardoned Disciples demand it; Christ commands it; all who are not sectarians demand it; the very spirit of Christianity demands it. The brethren should require every preacher to preach and defend it, or step down and out of the way of the true light of God, and go to their own place, Judas-like. Sect notions are rife—all the world has been since the 15th century and downward. Swarms of partisans have appeared on the stand, each one, bending to the dictum of his party leader, each one justifying his party course and tolerance in religious matters of faith. Now this party practice has fastened sect-tolerance on the world. Therefore, let us, if possible, sweep this toleration from our ranks and be [us] clean. Each old and new partisan leader claims toleration for himself and is willing to grant toleration to others simply because he wants it.

Now that idea has become as much the law among Protestant Christians as any custom among Roman Catholics or the man of sin. We have not cleared our reformatory skirts altogether of sectism or its customs, in some things, by any means. The last twenty years proves this beyond a doubt. Think back, will you, brethren, and reform. We do not like to be thought less charitable than other people; so we act. Let us move the other for good. Let us be as charitable as the Bible will let us.

I will close as this is longer than I intended. If you think fit, Bro. Rowe, send it out for consideration, as this move must be made sooner or later, or we will become a sect.

We are getting up a club for the Leader, as we like its tone and the stand it has taken. Send it on. We want it. We will do all we can for it here. J. A. CONNER.
PRAIRIE CREEK, Or.

BRO. HANSBROUGH TO BRO.
HARDING.

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 25, 1886.

Dear Bro. Harding:

Some days ago I received a postal card from you acknowledging the receipt of my letter, and yesterday I got the Gospel Advocate of December 22d, in which you give my questions and your answers, and in regard to my first question your answer is "Nowhere." Then why do you do it? When Paul says "whatever you do in word or deed do all in the name (by the authority) of the Lord Jesus." And you say he has not authorized you to do it, and yet you do it, and in the same Advocate you criticize the Evangelist pretty severely (not too much so) for scoffing at the idea that we must have a "thus saith the Lord" for what we believe and practice. And, now Bro. Harding, where is the chapter and verse—a "thus saith the Lord"—for taking persons by the hand, or in any other way welcoming them into the body or church of Christ, when they have been so differently taught from what the apostles taught and from what you teach? Will you please give the chapter and verse, as I requested you to do in my other letter? Bro. Harding, I believe you will be as much troubled to find it as those in favor of instrumental music in the worship are, to find a "thus saith the Lord" for it.

In regard to my second question, asking you—"Do you believe that a man that has been taught that he must first repent, then believe, then confess that he believes that God, for Christ's sake, has pardoned his sins, and that he must then be baptized because his sins are forgiven, is scripturally baptized?" You did not give a "direct, positive, yes or no answer," and why did you not, Bro. Harding? Is it because you know a man must be scripturally taught in order to be scripturally baptized? and if the above teaching is scriptural, then you ought to quit teaching the way you do, and quit debating with sectarians in reference to the design of baptism, unless it is necessary to understand it. Instead of a direct answer to the above question you say "the man who believes in his heart that Jesus is the Christ, and who, upon a verbal expression of that faith is baptized because he understands the Lord wants him to be, is scripturally baptized, no matter how much he may understand or misunderstand—no matter in what form of words the confession is made." Chapter and verse—a "thus saith the Lord," again, Bro. Harding, if you please. I would as soon take your word as any other uninspired man that I know of; but it weighs but little when compared with the language of our Savior: "When any one heareth the word of the kingdom and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart"—Matt. xiii: 19; but he that received seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word and understandeth it"—Matt. xiii: 23. Now, Bro. Harding, is not the language of the Savior—Mark xvi: 15-16—the language of Peter on the day of Pentecost—Acts ii: 38; the language of Ananias to Paul, Acts 22: 16, and many other passages that might be quoted in reference to the design of baptism, a part of the word of the kingdom? and is it not necessary to understand it according to the language of the Savior in Matthew? Bro. Harding, can a man eat the loaf and drink the wine, representing the broken body and shed blood of Christ, and not understand what he is doing it for? "A direct, positive, yes or no answer, if you please." In regard to the twelve at Ephesus your reply is: "These men did not believe Jesus to be the Christ, the Son of God—they were not baptized upon the expression of any such faith. They were baptized into John's baptism, into which men were baptized confessing their sins, not confessing Christ." Exactly! Is not that the confession that sectarians make now? They don't confess Christ, but confess their sins and "that God for Christ's sake has forgiven them." These twelve were baptized to obey God—to honor Him. Their baptism was for remission of sins, and they thereby obtained a knowledge of salvation. It was the baptism that all of John's disciples submitted to while he was preparing a people for the Lord. They were told "to believe on him that should come after him, that is on Christ Jesus." That is what the apostles were told when they were baptized. They did not know about the sufferings, death, resurrection and ascension of Jesus until just before Pentecost, yet they did not have to be baptized after they learned these facts, which you say is the reason the twelve at Ephesus had to be re-baptized. If your position is right, Bro. Harding, Paul could just have pointed their minds back to the accomplishment of these facts, and their baptism would have been all right, just as the baptism of the apostles and first disciples of John was right. The trouble with their baptism was that it was after John's baptism had ceased, it was not done in the name (by the authority) of the Lord Jesus, for if it had been then they would have heard of the Holy Spirit, for the baptism required by the Savior was in His name, into the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, and for the remission of sins, and a baptism that is not for that is not the baptism required, yet you will receive just such characters, who have been dipped (not baptized) by others; but I would tell him that he was mistaken, he did not believe in Christ, for to believe in him is to believe his word. I would "expound to him the word of God more perfectly." I would tell him the law of the Spirit as given to the three thousand on Pentecost—Acts ii: 38; the same that Paul says made him free—Rom. viii: 2; and I would tell him he must strive according to it, and not the law of man. Bro. Harding, would I do right? "A positive yes or no answer." You conclude your remarks in reply to my question with these words: "It is an awful thing to claim to do a thing by the authority of the Lord when he has not given the authority, and I have never yet seen the authority for the rebaptizing one, who, as a genuine penitent believer, had been immersed." Yes, Bro. Harding, it is an awful thing; but the trouble with sectarians is that they are not genuine believers, when tested by the counterfeit detector, the word of the Lord, hence I will not invite them in on their unscriptural baptism (so-called), and I would like to see your authority for doing it. Will you please publish this in the Gospel Advocate so that the readers of that paper will see both sides, and if you do not publish it please send it back to me at Austin, Texas and oblige

Your brother in Christ,
E. HANSBROUGH.

To the above letter we have not received any reply; it has not been published in the Advocate or sent back to us, and we have concluded to publish both letters, and his replies to my queries, and let the readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION see how they are disposed to "let us severely alone," though I yet have hopes that Bro. Harding will publish and reply to my last letter. It seems to me that he is too good a man not to be willing to affirm and defend his teaching and practice.

E. HANSBROUGH.

"WHY DO YE NOT UNDERSTAND MY SPEECH?"

Several reasons may be assigned for not understanding that which is spoken or written.

1. The "speech" may be expressed in ambiguous terms; hence convey no certain meaning.

2. The meaning may be so enveloped in figures of speech, symbols or metaphors, as to preclude the possibility of being understood.

If these reasons exist, then the speaker is at fault. But in no instance can it be charged that Jesus ever used ambiguous speech. The words of Jesus were plain, simple words, and had a distinct meaning. True that he often spake in parables; often used metaphors. But did he do this on purpose to veil his meaning? Yes, to a certain class. On one occasion His disciples asked Him, "Why speakest thou to them in parables? He answered and said unto them, because it is given to you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given"—Matt. xiii: 10, 11. It is very evident, then that it was designed by Jesus that a certain class should not understand his words. But why should this class be excluded from a knowledge of the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven? The answer to this supplies us with reason No. 2. Jesus says it was not given to them to know these mysteries. But why not given to them? Was it through the partiality of God, or was the cause located in man? Jesus explains: "And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Isaiah which saith, 'By hearing ye shall hear and not understand, and seeing ye shall see and shall not perceive; for this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed, lest at any time they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears, and understand with their hearts and be converted and I should heal them.'—Matt. xiii: 14, 15. The difficulty was in man. His heart had 'waxed gross;' that is, sensual. 'Filled with earthly and sensual desires, especially with reference to the expected kingdom of the Messiah.' * * * This closing of their eyes is treated (15) as the fatal act. * * * The evil state of the heart might have been overcome, had it not been for closing their eyes. Their continuance in sin and unbelief, therefore, was the result of having voluntarily closed their eyes against the light which had come into the world, causing parables and dark sayings to be as intelligible to them as the simplest lessons which Jesus taught; their ears were equally closed against both."—J. W. McCl. Com. on Matt. Reason number three may then be assigned as the cause of reason number two, and we may safely conclude that all the reasons for not understanding the word of God are to be found on man's part.

Can we now find representatives of the class above alluded to? Are there not men who wilfully shut their eyes to the testimony of Jesus? who close their ears against the accumulated facts of over 1800 years' triumph of the truth as it is in Jesus, and wilfully and maliciously seek to brand Jesus as an impostor? And yet they are honorable men! So were those Jews; they had a righteousness of which they boasted, but the motives that prompted it centered in self. Just so with all so-called liberals; they have a righteousness whose centre and circumference is self; and like their proto-types above mentioned, they will continue to revolve in this narrow sphere until the vengeance of God shall awaken them to the dread realities of eternity.

But there are others who do not understand the words of Jesus, and we must try to ascertain the reason why. "But woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men, for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in."—Matt. xxiii: 13. Here is a class who cannot go into the kingdom because it is shut to them. And by whom? By scribes and Pharisees. How could these wicked men shut the kingdom against men? "Woe unto you lawyers, for ye have taken away the key of knowledge; ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered." Luke xi: 52. They did not understand Jesus, because they were deprived of the means by which to obtain an understanding. The lawyers, or scribes, and Pharisees, the teachers of the people, had by their traditions and commandments of men made the word of God of no effect.—Matt. xv: 1, 9; Mark vii: 5-13. The people believing their teachers, followed them, and did not go into the kingdom. How many now who are earnestly seeking to enter into the kingdom of heaven, but cannot go in because the kingdom is shut up to them? Not shut by the authority of Jesus; oh, no! for "when once the master of the house is risen up and hath shut to the door," ye may in vain knock for admission. Jesus, however, is willing that all may now enter; the portals are wide open; the feast is spread and the invitation is given to come and partake without money and without price. Why not go in? The doctors of divinity, like their predecessors, have taken away "the key of knowledge." Traditions, opinions, interpretations, etc., etc., are preached, believed and acted upon. Men and women are deceived. They rejoice in the prospects of a hope that will prove to them a snare and a delusion. Like causes produce like effects. Blind leaders then deluded the people with their traditions, and thus prevented their understanding and entering the kingdom, and thus it is now. These lessons might be extended; but I desire now to examine some other points relative to not understanding the words of Jesus:

An effort is frequently made to justify the divisions of Christendom by saying that "we cannot all understand alike." There is some force in this saying when we see the mighty efforts of our own brethren in trying to force men and women into the kingdom against their own understanding. The Methodist does not understand that baptism is immersion only; but does understand it to be sprinkling, pouring and immersion. Methodist and Baptist do not understand that baptism is for the remission of sins; but they do understand that it is "because of remission," a "door into the church, etc., etc." Now why do they not understand these plain teachings of scripture? Because they believe tradition, and do not believe the word of God. Paul says: "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen, were not made of things which do appear."—Heb. xi: 3. So it is by faith that we understand that baptism is for the remission of sins, and it is by faith in tradition that the Baptist believes that God has made him free from sin before and without baptism. His faith is wrong. He may believe that Jesus is the son of God—the Messiah of prophecy; but what will it profit him unless he believes the words of Jesus and does them? Note carefully this circumstance recorded in John, eighth chapter—Jesus is teaching the Jews, and the 18th verse says: "As he spake these words many believed on him." Here then are believers. "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Believers and not yet free! Away goes salvation by faith alone. But these Jews were just like our religious friends, they claimed to be free. "We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man, how sayest thou Ye shall be free," Jesus shows them now that he is talking of bondage to sin: "Verily, verily I say unto you, whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin. If the Son therefore shall make you free ye shall be free indeed." Believers in Jesus and not yet made free from sin, though they claimed to be free by virtue of being Abraham's children (verse 39). But why make such a claim and persist in it? Because they did not understand his words—verse 43—and Jesus assigns a reason why they do not understand—"even because ye cannot hear my word." Their course is something like those disciples mentioned in John vi: 60, who said "This is a hard saying, who can hear it." They had closed their ears to the words of Jesus, and thus shut themselves out from understanding and from salvation, though they "believed on him." Jesus says again, "he that is of God heareth God's words." The beloved John also says, "We are of God. He that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we the spirit of truth and the spirit of error."—I. John iv: 6.

Friendly reader, would you be made free from sin? You must understand God's word. Do you say you cannot understand it? If so, why? Or do you say "I cannot understand as you do?" I am not seeking to persuade you to adopt my understanding of the word; rather to go to the word; there you will find sufficient testimony to prove that Jesus is the Christ, the son of God; that life is through his name; there you will find all those "words of eternal life" which you must believe and do in order to be made free. Then you will find that believers must repent of their sins, confess with the mouth the Lord Jesus, and be baptized for the remission of sins. If you hearken to these words you will be one of those of whom John writes. Then I beseech you to let the eyes of your understanding be opened to the wondrous beauties of God's word, and that you be swift to hear the commands therein enjoined, that you may rejoice in the day of the Lord Jesus that you have not run in vain, neither labored in vain.

J. W. JACKSON.

Be diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord.—Rom.

CATLIN, Ind., March 5, 1887.

Brethren McGary & Hansbrough:

I have concluded to write another article for the FIRM FOUNDATION while I am at leisure. You can insert it when you have room. I will quote from II. Peter, first chapter: "Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to those who have obtained like precious faith with us, through the righteousness of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord, according as his divine power has given unto us all things that pertain to life and godliness, through the knowledge of him who has called us to glory and virtue: whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these you might be partakers of the divine nature having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. And besides, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue." In the foregoing, the apostle addresses those who had obtained this precious faith through the righteousness of God and the righteousness of Jesus Christ. How are we to understand the apostle here? If we cannot understand him, we shall not be benefited by the lesson which he is teaching. A want of understanding is the cause of the different and antagonistic views among us. The faith here spoken of is the same as the faith spoken of by Jude in connection with the common salvation, the faith of the gospel. This faith and peace was according to, or in accordance with, the all things that pertain to life and godliness which God had given in giving a knowledge of Christ who called them to glory and virtue. God gave a record of his Son, "and he that believeth not God, hath made him a liar: because he believes not the record that God gave of his son." "This is the record; that God has given us eternal life, and this life is in his son."—John v: 10, 11. Now what have we? The faith is obtained through the giving the all things that pertain to life and godliness. God had given a knowledge of Christ who called them to glory and virtue; this knowledge was given in the record that God gave of his son; and the record is, that God has given to us eternal life in Jesus Christ. Now, since eternal life is in Christ, no one can have that eternal life out of Christ. He must enter into Christ to reach that life; therefore it is most evident, that in giving the all things that pertain to life and godliness, the means by which all must enter into Christ were given. This, I think, all can understand. Then, since it is evident that the means have been given by which all must enter into Christ, this question may here be asked, is it necessary to understand any of those means? Let us now follow the apostle Peter a little further. "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these you might be partakers of the divine nature." By these what? By receiving all things that pertain to life and godliness and complying with them as well as trusting in the exceeding great and precious promises. By all the means set forth as necessary to bring us into Christ, where we are made partakers of the divine nature, for no person out of Christ has that divine nature; for the apostle says that those persons have escaped the corruptions of the world, which corruptions were of lust. Now, the apostle says this is all through knowledge, or information concerning Christ, or him who called them to glory and virtue. Now, kind reader, when you read this, read in connection with it the first chapter of 2d Peter. If indeed it is not necessary that we should know why we are to have faith, nor why we should repent, nor why we should confess Christ, nor why we should be immersed, in the name of common sense why were Jesus and the apostles so careful to give the reason of every one of these items? Again if any one of them may be passed without understanding, why may not any other? And why may not all? If I need not know why I am to obey one command, why need I to know why I am to obey another? If I need not know any, then upon what are the exceeding great and valuable promises based? Are these promises made unconditionally? Everybody who knows anything of the Bible, knows they are every one conditional; and that, therefore, the object, or design, of every act of obedience must be given. There is no such thing as receiving the divine nature, or in other words, having our minds conformed to the mind of Christ in total ignorance of his design. Paul says, "We have received the Spirit of God that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. Which things we speak not in the words that man's wisdom teaches; but which the Holy Spirit teaches." And in the last verse of the chapter he says, "We have the mind of Christ."—I. Cor. 2nd chapter. If Christ revealed his mind concerning our salvation, certainly the things that he proposed for us to do were in his mind, and of necessity, the design of those things were in his mind. If they were not, then how came he to say, "He who believes and is baptized shall be saved," and "except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God?" And further, if the apostles had the mind of Christ, how came Peter to say, "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins?" This seems to be the revealed mind of Christ. Is it possible that his mind thus revealed, need neither be believed nor understood? Christ labored to imbue the minds of all his followers with his mind, and he told the apostles to teach the people the righteousness of God which was revealed in the gospel; but now we have a class of preachers and editors who are trying to make the people believe that Jesus revealed these things in vain, and because some of us are trying to maintain an intelligent Christianity they call us heretics and apostates.

I would like to say much more, but I cannot say it all in one or two short essays. I may write a pamphlet. Read, dear friends, and see for yourselves.

I hope God will bless the truth and all who defend it.
Yours, in the hope of eternal life,
I. C. STONE.

Bro. BARNETT admits that he is between "two fires" as Bro. Spear said. But he says: "It does not follow that he will warm by either one of them. They are hot-fires." Well, if a fire can't warm by itself, how can we? We would like to know the reason why. But there is no need of his warming by any fire. He keeps himself warm constantly running from this issue.

WE HAVE received $5 more for drought sufferers, and have sent it to Bro. W. W. Flood. The sender is a young lady—a sister in Christ; but she requested us not to publish her name. She has done a good work. In truth, this is the work of the Lord. Paul says: "My beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."—1 Cor. xv. 58. This young sister lives where one of those congregating, popularity-seeking, lucre-loving, missionary society pastors constitutes a ward on the body of Christ. She will not contribute one farthing towards the support of this false teacher nor the godless enterprises that he is manipulating either unsuspecting brethren into, but she will feed and clothe Jesus by helping to clothe his needy disciples and brethren. (1) And just one word of the sisters would discover the wickedness in these human devices, as this sister has, and possess the courage of their convictions as she does.

Bro. BARNETT still complains that we did not give our readers what he said against our position. We are glad that he can't say we gave them more than he said, and charged him with saying things that he did not say. He fails to tell his readers that we proposed to publish all he might say if he would affirm his teaching. He slipped about so loosely, and slipped away from the issue so miserably that we admit that we did not think it worthy of publication. He now complains at our lack of "innocence"—alludes to our last as "blackguardism." He published that we said things that we never even dreamed of saying, and we called it false, and repeat that it is. Will he deny it and submit his decision to candid brethren? If he will we will. The mock apostle said that certain persons were liars, and the truth was not in them. Was he a "blackguard?" Now the truth is that Bro. Barnett has grossly and flagrantly and willfully misrepresented us—we say willfully, because he has not corrected it when told of it, but has rather elaborated his misrepresentations. All who read the Messenger and Firm Foundations know this. We are sorry that it is so. We do not intend to engage in a quarrel with him. He asked us to turn him over to Bro. Jackson, and when we complied with his request he said we were afraid to debate. We have never said we would not debate with him. If he will confess his sin of misrepresenting us, or show that he has not done so, and will promise not to do so in the future, and will affirm his teaching, we will enter in the discussion of the question with him, agreeing to publish every word that he says if he will publish ours. But we would rather discuss with a fairer and silder man. When we have to kill a snake we don't want to have to beat an itail.

Here is the new commission, according to the revised information, fresh from Austin: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth shall be baptized and he that believeth not shall be damned, unless he has been immersed because he believed he was already saved, or to commemorate the battle of New Orleans, or the death of Napoleon Bonaparte, or any other purpose. If you find such shake them into the name (author-ity) of the father (of this resurrection), of the son (Durant), and of the holy spirit (of proslaveryism). Is not this an improvement?"

Here is the fifty year old commission, that came to Bonham from unimpaired men, and is obtained from Bonham: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth shall be baptized and he that believeth not shall be damned, unless he has been immersed because he believed he was already saved, or to commemorate the battle of New Orleans, or the death of Napoleon Bonaparte, or any other purpose. If you find such shake them into the name (author-ity) of the father (of this resurrection), of the son (Durant), and of the holy spirit (of proslaveryism). Is not this an improvement?"

THE CALF BACK AT BONY.

On March 1st the thoroughbred missionary calf which was born here on the 11th of last July, was on exhibition at his birth place. From the attention that this young heifer had received we expected to see it well fat. But in, and behold! it appeared to be suching but skin and bones, when Bro. Bush got back here with it. The poor thing was so puny and emaciated that, though it had been advertised for exhibition on March 1st and 2nd, it could not overcome the fatigue of the 1st sufficiently to undertake the 2nd, but had to rest. Unless they can find better grazing ground for it than the range afforded it, it will hardly survive the winter. There was, however, one noteworthy feature of this exhibition. Bro. A. C. Hill, who was here in July when this calf was born, and who had the same with streaming eyes, at the time of "All hail the power of Jesus' name," etc., when he saw it was a calf, was now on hand trying to keep it alive for the spring drive. But Bro. Hill says it is not the same calf. If he is correct in this he places Bro.

Bush in an awkward fix. Has Bro. Bush gone to "mavericking?"—that is what they call calf-stealing in Western Texas. Bro. Bush has no right to drive any calf but the July calf. But he was driving this one to a certainty. So, if Bro. Hill is right, Bro. Bush manifests a talent that would have made him rich if he had gone to some frontier county, directly after the war. But this "mavericking" business has ceased to be tolerated, Bro. Bush; so if this is not the same calf you were employed by the Homan-McBervous Calf company to herd, you had better be a little careful. But we think Bro. Hill is mistaken. We fear our good brother has been roosting so high up on the fence of the calf lot that he has strained his optics so that he doesn't know a calf from an elephant.

THE CHRISTADELPHIAN DISCUSSION.

Orders are beginning to come in for the discussion with Dr. Oatman. The pamphlet is not yet ready to send out; but all who want to read it would do well to order it at once. It is the only written discussion extant between our brethren and the Christadelphians, so we hear. We have been placed under circumstances that impelled us to examine the Christadelphian fabric from top to bottom. We are aware that others could have done this work much more effectually than we; but we hope to be able in this discussion to point out a short route to cut these materialists off from literalism. Those who have not come in contact with these people and had an opportunity to study their doctrine, are very liable to embarrassment when attacked by attached by them. This is our chief reason for engaging in this discussion with them, that all who might feel disposed to have an insight of their very subtle theories might do so, and at the same time have the advantage of our matured reflection on the same. The pamphlet will be sold at 25 cents, five for $1, or twelve for $2.

THE AUSTIN CONFERENCE.

At the Quarterly Conference held here under the auspices of Presiding Elder Bush, Bro. Chaloner compared that class of brethren who are opposed to these worldly-wise plans and operations, to a man standing on the street corner in a city, with folded arms, refusing to assist in saving a burning building because he does not like the plan by which others are approaching the building. As we were the only representative present of that class that this example was designed to fit, (it was a slander), we felt it our duty to request a brief hearing, which was kindly granted us. The idea conveyed by Bro. Chaloner was, that the brethren who oppose the methods of the Texas Missionary Society, fold their arms and refuse to try to save souls to Christ because they don't like the way these brethren work. We called attention to the fact that there were several preachers living in Austin who have not, and would not for their right arms, work by these human plans. But we pointed to the work they were doing to save souls. We told them that one of these preachers had been twice this winter, at his own charges, two hundred miles west to preach for a people where a brother lived who thought the gospel would be received by his neighbors, but who wrote: "We are too poor to pay anything." This same brother preaches all over this country, never stopping in winter quarters, though he has passed his three score years. It is needless to go into details, but we dare say that Bro. Hunsbrough, Darré and Pennington, who live right where this sweeping charge of Bro. Chaloner's was made, are further from folding their arms and remaining inactive than any three men that will ever be induced to preach by the "filthy lucre" of this Texas machinery. After briefly enumerating the work that was being done by these preachers of Austin, we asked these brethren if they were like the man who folded his arms and refused to assist in extinguishing a burning building because he did not like the way others went at it? We told them that a man who would not go to the work till he was hired was not worthy of the work nor the support of the brethren. We could have pointed to scores of brethren in our state who are opposed to all human plans, that are laboring with all their might upon the Bible plan, saving souls. We could have pointed to Junius Wilkins, the exquisite pastor and hireling of the Austin church, who was a central figure in their meeting, and who preaches four sermons—yes, very sermonic ones—and receives one hundred dollars per month for it. Yes, we might have compared him with any one of these Austin preachers who wait not for plans and bargains to move them, but go right ahead in the work, trusting in the God-given assurance that, "all things work together for good to them that love God;" but we did not. At the adjournment of their meeting one of their number accosted the writer, telling us that he used to occupy precisely the grounds we do, but he had seen its fallacy. He had seen a good man preach, and preach without receiving pay for it till he had to go to farming for a support. We asked him if the man quit preaching. He said no. We asked him if he starved or came near it? He said no. We told him that we knew of a splendid preacher too, who had to work with his own hands to support himself and others that were with him, but that he did not quit nor adopt human plans to raise his salary; and besides that, he was whipped, and imprisoned, and shipwrecked, and stoned and dragged out of a city for dead; and was in perils of robbers, in perils of unbelieving and persecuting Jews, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness; and yet he did not resort to human schemes and expedients to obviate these buffetings through the alleviating balm of a salary. If Paul had been like our modern pastors, when the vision appeared to him of the man of Macedonia calling him to "come over into Macedonia and help us," he would have cried out: "How much will you give me? I could trust God, but I can't trust men!" Brethren, this hiring, contract system, shows itself to us in full blast in our city "pastors" who, as a class, have reached the very acme of dandyism. They are wicked hirelings who are indulged and sustained in their lazy, foppish ways and ungodly lives, to the great detriment of true Christianity. We know they are highly esteemed among men; but if God's word is a safe rule to judge them by, their lives would not be less godly nor their influence less hurtful to real Christianity if they were all hired out in their respective cities and towns as bar-tenders in the most fashionable drinking saloons. Good Lord! what is to be the outcome of this pernicious system?

By-the-way, the preacher to whom that brother referred as one who had to go to farming for a support has, since that time, been employed by this pretentious, provident(?) human plan, and was so badly imposed upon by it that he was entirely broken up financially. He is now very much opposed to the Texas Missionary Society—or anything for the spread of the gospel but the apostolic, Holy Spirit, New Testament plan. The devil is the founder of all devices to supplant God's plan. A man that will declare "all the counsel of God," and reject all of the adulterations of human wisdom and "pleas" would not be employed by these societies. This shows the devil to be the boss of all such institutions. If Bros. Bush, McPherson, Homan, Dimmit, the Clarks and other leading brethren of Texas, who have in the past been true to the principles of Christ in theory and practice, by heeding and adhering to the divine enunciation, that the "Scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works," "all things that pertain unto life and godliness"—we say, if they have become tired and restless and ashamed of this "strait and narrow way" that never was designed to suit "many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble," and have turned off after such worldly-wise and popular leaders as Bros. Errett, McGarvey, Graham, et al., who have inaugurated a human institution to supplant the heavenly one, over which "Christ is head over all things," in spreading the gospel of the kingdom; and if Bros. Jones, Hill and others who have heretofore refused to walk after the lead of these worldly-wise guides, and have remained faithful to our Captain so long, have at last been carried off "by their dissimulation," while it is well calculated to move all true disciples with the deepest emotions of sorrow, it should not be allowed to create the least despondency in us. No, no! dear brothers and sisters, but let's "be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might." Put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places" (yes Bible college presidents and professors and high dignitaries in the church) wherefore let's take unto us "the whole armour of God, that we may be able to withstand the evil day" ("the perilous times" are surely upon us) "and having done all to STAND. Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breast-plate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; (not "our plea") above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all of the fiery darts of the wicked, and take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God;" and "which is able to build us up and give us an inheritance among all them that are sanctified." Thank God! If we do what God has directed us to do, and refuse to go beyond His direction, believing that He has "thoroughly furnished us unto all good works; all things that pertain unto life and godliness" (see II. Tim., iii: 16 and 17, and II. Peter i: 3) we may rest assured that God will esteem us highly, while the world and false brethren will dis-esteem us and delect us, and gibe and taunt us with such things as "hobbyists," "extremists," "new reformers," "anabaptists," etc., but we should thank God that we are counted worthy to suffer shame for His name. "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution"—II. Tim. iii: 12. Our hearts should go out in fulness of love to all true teachers of God, but we should not think of men above what is written, "having their persons in admiration because of advantage." No, brethren and sisters, if our wisest leaders go beyond the limits of our "perfect law," they should not be followed one step, whether McGarvey, or Errett, or Garrison, or Lipscomb, or Harding, or Clark, or Hall, or Homan, or Bush, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are ours; and we are Christs; and Christ is God—I. Cor. iii: 22, 23. To beware of false prophets or teachers is a duty as incumbent on disciples as baptism or any other command. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

"OUR PLEA" MUTILATED.

We have seen that the good confession, made with the mouth, that Jesus is the Christ the Son of the Living God, has been presented by the leading men of "This Reformation" as a necessary pre-requisite to valid baptism. In the recent examination, however, into the validity of sect baptism, quite a number of brethren have taken the position that this good confession is not a necessary pre-requisite to scriptural baptism, and in their efforts to justify their course, they seem to have entirely lost sight of this item in "Our Plea." Now, if the confession so strongly urged by Campbell, Scott, Stone, Burnet, Fauning, Brents, Franklin, McGarvey and others is to be disregarded, then those who thus teach have assuredly departed from this item of "our plea," and hence they, too, are lending a helping hand to "reform the reformation." We therefore hold that these brethren are self-convicted of the great crime of mutilating "Our Plea." The impartial reader will readily see that if the confession is a necessary pre-requisite to scriptural baptism, it is inconsistent and erroneous to recognize those who have not made it, as members of the Body of Christ. If, as Bro. Campbell taught, "the only apostolic and divine confession of faith which God the Father of all has laid for the church, and that on which Jesus himself said he would build it, is the sublime and supreme proposition that Jesus of Nazareth is the Messiah, the Son of the Living God, and there is no other confession of faith on which the church can be built" be scriptural, then he who teaches otherwise differs both from Campbell and the Holy Scriptures. Now, "Our Plea" guarded closely in days past this distinguishing feature. We are, however, free to admit that there lies right along by its side another plank that mars its strength and beauty, and it is because we urge an agreement throughout with the word of the Lord, that some say we have departed from "Our Plea." We claim it is inconsistent and unscriptural to recognize any as Christians who have not come to Christ according to his directions. If in this we have departed from "Our Plea," be it so. We have no sympathy or affection for "Our Plea" only as it reflects the light of divine truth. In the meantime, do not forget that the very brethren who are now endeavoring to show the validity of sect baptism, apply unmercifully to "Our Plea" the pruning knife, and sever therefrom one of its strongest members. A. Campbell says: "This confession must be made by every applicant for Christian baptism in order to his being constitutionally bullded upon the divine foundation, or, as we usually say, admitted into the Christian kingdom or church. No minister or church of Jesus Christ has any divine right or authority to ask for more, or accept of less than this in order to Christian baptism." This we heartily endorse. Consistency, then, demands that we reject sect baptism, and urge the scriptural confession as a pre-requisite to scriptural baptism.

But I am here reminded that Paul True recently said in one of our leading papers that "This question (re-baptism) was thoroughly discussed forty years ago, and settled by the 'Fathers of the Reformation.'" He forgets that the "fathers of the reformation" were no more inspired than was John Wesley, John Calvin, or Martin Luther. We prefer to settle all such questions by the Word of the Lord. May I suggest, without giving offense, that while Paul True may be true as to the decision of the "fathers of this reformation," he is not true to Father Paul, whose mission was to open the eyes of the Gentiles, and to turn them from darkness to light. Hence we ask Bro. Paul to join us in teaching the things given by him for whom, I suppose he was named, and whose instructions he is not keeping in remembrance. It does not look disciple-like to attempt to settle scriptural teaching by the "Fathers of this reformation." But I am asked, "Do we claim to be wiser than they?" So it could have been asked of John Wesley, of Calvin, of Luther, and of those wise priests and popes of all past ecumenical councils. Should we not, then, lay aside such puerile objections, and go to the fountain-head for the pure waters of life? "But," says an objector, "the F. F. teaches that the confessor must understand that baptism is for the remission of sins." In return we ask, "Why do you object to this? Does not the Savior say that he who receives the seed (the word of God) in the good ground, is he who hears the word and understands it? Do you believe this? If so, where lies the issue between us?" Permit, just here, a thought to give my position: As a sufficiency of sunshine and moisture is necessary to develop the germinal properties of seed into life, and additional rays and moisture is needed to perfect its growth, so the heart of man receives a sufficiency of the good seed of the kingdom to instruct him in reference to the first principles of life, and then he continues to feed upon it until developed for the higher life to come. I know of no simpler lesson than that repentance, the confession, and baptism resulting from faith or belief in Christ, is for the remission of past sins. My little four year old boy knows the meaning of candy, marble, ball, and knife. Hence if I say, "My son, I will give you one pound of candy for your marble, ball, and knife," he would understand me perfectly. So would he, if I should state the order of the giving. Now, when he arrives at an age when he can understand the terms, repentance, confession and baptism, why will this not be as simple a lesson, as the

the other? Our opposing brethren assert that a person may be scripturally baptized not knowing what it is for. Then, I ask, has such a person received the seed into a good and honest heart? Let's compare the answers. Our Savior says: "He that received the seed into a good and honest heart is he that heareth the word and understandeth it." Our opposing brethren would say that "He that receiveth the seed into a good and honest heart, is he that heareth the word and may or may not understand it." This parable represents the law of pardon or new birth. This being true, the law of pardon must be understood to be obeyed.

Now, in conclusion, remember that this investigation has to do with the means of becoming a child of God, and all references to those in the kingdom are foreign to the issue. It is hoped that every vestige of humanism will be eliminated from our teaching and practice and our reliance be only in the word of the Lord.

TALKS WITH THE SISTERS.

I have been silent some time, dear sisters, hoping that some of you would come forward with some wholesome admonition in my stead, but not so. The few who have, from time to time, added to the interest of the paper by contributions, have ceased to write. Now, does this arise from lack of interest or lack of courage, which? If the former, you may know your hearts are not right, for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." If your hearts are in the service of the Lord, you will feel like speaking or writing words of encouragement to your sisters and brothers. If you have not courage, because of lack of education, let me assure you that nothing sent the writer will be published without thorough correction. I say this because I know that there are many older sisters whose education is limited, but who are competent to instruct and advise the younger sisters, because of a longer experience in the school of Christ. One of the smartest women the writer ever knew, and one whose sayings were axiomatic, was one who had never been to school but six weeks in her life. So, dear aged sisters, mothers in Israel, let me exhort you to write for us, and rest assured, we will take pleasure in making all necessary corrections in your communications. There are younger sisters I know, too, who are deeply interested in Christianity, and are so capable of strengthening others, yet bury the talent God has given them, because they do not care to make the exertion necessary to write. Will such be held guiltless? Let each one's conscience answer. If we make no sacrifice of either time or means for Christ, then are we indeed ungrateful and unprofitable servants. Let me suggest to the capable sisters, that they take a little time from scanning the Weekly News, the farm papers, and various organs of the press and devote it to writing a few words to strengthen their weak, tempted sisters. This would be an act of self-denial, resulting in spiritual growth to them. Are we commanded to keep up with the news of the world? Does it improve us any? On the other hand, are we not commanded to admonish, rebuke and strengthen each other in our Christian life? If so, is it not wrong for us to stay selfishly at home, neither visiting our neighboring brethren, nor writing to help those more distant? The ever ready excuse is "no time," why I have not time to read my Bible." This is only too true, because that farm paper and state news must be read, it would never do to miss the details of that horrible murder here, or that interesting divorce suit over in England. Then there's Demorest and Godey's book that must not be neglected for anything else, or the end of that splendid love story might be missed, or some sister might cut a basque long when it ought to be short. Then, (why, I like to have forgotten it) there is that fine congressional speech of Mr. So-and-So on the "inter-state commerce bill," or "deep water." All such must be read, for we must keep posted as to how the world moves on, and the Bible, a secondary matter, must wait till some more convenient season, which never comes. Well, yes, perhaps late Saturday night there is a hurried reading of the lesson for Lord's Day, as a kind of penance for wasting so much time in other reading. My sister, my brother, "be not deceived, God is not mocked, whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." It were far, far better that such papers were kept from our homes, than that we should devote ninety-nine one hundredths of our time to them, and one lone hundredth to the word of God which is able to save our souls. But while we are on this subject, let us, in fancy, go to the Lord's house, and see how they come out with that lesson so hurriedly prepared. We get there a little late, perhaps—but everybody is always late; the table is laid with snowy cloths; our heart is touched as our glance rests on the emblems of our dear Lord's body and precious blood; we are filled with love for those around us. Let us draw near that animated group of sisters near the front. How eagerly they discuss—the Bible lesson? Not so fast, listen! "Yes, my cabbage is up, and peas ready to stick." "No, I have no chickens yet, my hens have done mighty bad." "That's a pretty dress; did you make it by Butterick? Why, the over-skirt loops at the side, and I declare! a narrow ruffle on the skirt instead of a wide one." Disappointed, we turn away to over-hear that earnest discussion among those brethren in the amen corner. As we approach we hear these words: "It beats anything I ever tried. At first I thought it was hard"—"Hard to understand our lesson?" we inquire, or—"oh, no, we were talking about a new Disc harrow I have just bought. I did not understand it, at first; but I tell you it's fine, fine. Would not be without it for twice the price, etc." Well, a song is sung at last, by a very few, and the lesson read, then they pause for questions to be asked. Where is that animation now? Our "harrowing" brother is terribly bored, picks his teeth, apparently deaf and mute. That fashion-loving sister must be silently planning that new dress, for she certainly does not hear one word that is said; several sisters are watching their babies, while a few faithful ones are trying to edify each other in the living and abiding word. The supper is indifferently partaken of, only a very few seeming to realize the solemnity of this privilege; a hymn is sung vigorously by all, now, because it is a dismissal from that most irksome duty—Lord's day meeting. Now, dear sisters, is this over-drawn? Is it not a fair picture of many Lord's day meetings? Why this apathy? Because we allow ourselves to be so engrossed with worldly cares that we have no time to sit at the Savior's feet. It is true that very many have almost every moment occupied with apparently necessary duties; but when we do have a little leisure, do we spend it reading God's word? No, but we will spend hours learning some new crochet stitch, or how to drape an over-skirt, or in making paper or zephyr flowers. Ah, sisters, we will never reach heaven this way! What does the apostle say? "Set your affections on things above, and not on things on the earth." If we knew we had only a week to live, what would we care for all the crochet stitches known to women, all the fashions? How paltry they would appear! Yet the brink of the grave may be crumbling under the feet of many of us, while our few precious moments are being thus frivolously wasted. Let us drop all of this folly, sisters, and have courage to live as a peculiar people, who have no continuing city here, but seek one to come. May God help us to overcome these evil desires, and to finally obtain, one and all, "a crown that fadeth not away."

ZEKE JACKSON AND THE PASTOR.

Although Zeke had joined the Baptists, and was continually hearing unfavorable remarks and allusions from his father and mother and the Baptist neighbors, about the "pastor of the Christian church," his mind still retained the most vivid remembrance of the many kindnesses, and the diligent and faithful watch care the pastor exercised over him, when all others had turned away from him, and left him to the merciless prosecution and persecution of a superstitious, hyper-orthodox fanaticism; and, though he had not seen or heard from the pastor since the night he had refused to receive him into the "Christian church," his heart was still as true to him as the needle to the pole. True, he did not understand the pastor's course in refusing to receive him into the church, but he bridged over this difficulty by supposing it was defensible upon some of the higher grounds of theology that "lay members" could not travel. Besides, while there were slight discrepancies between his own religious experience, (which dated from an impression felt at the dark, drear, midnight hour while in prison) and the pastor's theory of regeneration, Zeke knew full well that some of the "spots" and "wrinkles" of Baptistism that the pastor pointed out to him, were really there, and kept the Baptist church from fitting the apostolic mould; and these objectionable features really constituted broader grounds than existed between him and the pastor. But he had no doubt about the rectitude of his course in joining the Baptists. They were his second choice, and he had been rejected when he made an effort to "unite" with the church of his first choice. As he could not be a Christian Christian, he had become a Baptist Christian. The greatest source of annoyance to him now was, the unscriptural name "Baptist." He had all the while indulged the vain hope that he could show his brethren the unrighteousness of wearing such a name, when the Bible thoroughly furnished them every needed designation. He had often alluded to this, but he now saw that his efforts in this direction were not only unavailing, but that they were no longer kindly received. What was he to do? His conscience impelled him to labor to rectify this, to him, fatal imperfection. He verily thought that if his brethren could hear the convincing arguments of the pastor on this question, some of them would be won and become his co-workers in this greatly desired reformation. He had said less to his father and mother on this question than to others, though he thought that if they could hear what he had from the pastor on the question they would readily yield the point; but he had feared to open the argument, lest he should make some blunder and drive them further off. He finally decided to go and see the pastor, and lay the matter before him in the hope that he could devise some feasible plan to operate on. So without intimating such a thought to any one, he went to town and called on the pastor. The pastor approached him with the same cordiality that had ever characterized his actions toward him. This moved Zeke so that he could not speak for a while, but when he recovered his equilibrium, he assured the pastor that his friendship for him had lost none of its former fervor. The pastor told him he had heard of his joining the Baptists, and endorsed his course. He then began to offer excuses for refusing to receive him into the "Christian church;" but Zeke stopped him, and told him no explanation was necessary, as he had no doubt of his sincerity in what he did; and that he regarded it as the inscrutable workings of divine providence, and that he rejoiced to know that they were brethren in Christ all the same. Zeke now laid the purpose of his visit before him. But the pastor did not at first look on it very favorably. He was not hankering after any more of Uncle Hezekiah's short-rib thrusts. But when Zeke expressed the strong hope, that many of the Baptists would lay down their unscriptural name, when convinced that it was wrong to wear it, and expressed so much confidence in the power of the pastor's argument on that point, the pastor began to entertain it more favorably. His keen, proselyting eye reached away beyond the object that actuated the unsuspecting Zeke, and discovered a golden opportunity to shake Zeke, if not other Baptists, out of "Babylon." (?) If he could only get Zeke, after all of the stir there had been over his case, and the chagrin he had felt about it, it would be a feather for his theological cap that he would be proud to plume it with. He was even willing to face Uncle Hezekiah, when spurred by such an incentive, so he was not long in laying a plan and delivering it to Zeke. This plan was, in substance, that Zeke begin right away to remove from the minds of Uncle Hezekiah and Aunt Hannah some of their prejudice against him, and, that, however he might succeed at this, for him to publicly request the use of the meeting house for him at the Baptist meeting the next Sunday, for a meeting to begin the second Lord's day at 11 o'clock; and if they refused it, for him to announce the meeting any way, and have an arbor constructed in the most convenient locality. He said that nothing would be lost by their being shut out of the house. He told Zeke to act in it as if he had not consulted with him about it. So Zeke returned home flushed with the hope of success. The pastor had told him to introduce the conversation to his father and mother, by telling them of his meeting him (the pastor) that day as though it was an accidental meeting; and to tell them how friendly he (the pastor) was—that this showed that the pastor was not as bad a man as his father took him to be. In short, he had laid out all the details of the plan carefully to Zeke. When at home he mentioned meeting the pastor and waited for a reply, which soon followed from both his father and mother, for their curiosity was aroused.

Uncle Hezekiah asked: "How did he act, son?"

Zeke—"Daddy, he was as glad to see me as you and mammy would be if you had not seen me in ten years."

Uncle Hez—"The hypocrite!"

Z—"No, daddy, that man is no hypocrite. His friendship for me is as genuine as gold."

Uncle Hez—"Well, my son, I hope you may be right in this, and that he may never deceive you. But when a preacher of the gospel twists about as I have found him doing, and causes others the trouble and worry that he caused through you, just to gratify a spirit of religious partyism, I know nothing more appropriate to call him than hypocrite. And such men will bear watching, son."

Z—"Daddy, you must not forget that we all have more or less religious partyism. And besides, I take a different view of this whole affair from the one you do. I just believe God's hand was in it from first to last—special providence, daddy; you know you believe in it, and mammy does, too. Think what a wild boy I was! Ain't you glad I have changed?"

Aunt Hannah—"I am, son, and don't think you are far wrong about it. All of your trouble and imprisonment may have been the refining fire God led you through to burn up your dross."

Uncle H—"That may be true, and I think it is, but this does not make that "Campbellite pastor" any better. Look what he said about Job, and then turned right around, and caused us all the trouble he did trying to turn Zeke away from the very course that he admits Job pursued to "rest in Jesus." If people go to heaven on a certain route, there is no justification in ones causing all this trouble trying to turn one away from that route. Surely he can't point them to a way that will lead them to a better place than heaven. I admit that this was all providential work, but that doesn't make that "Campbellite proselyter" any better. God often uses wicked instruments to carry out his ends. I, for one, don't believe he ever used a wickedder man than that "Campbellite pastor."

Z—"But, daddy, you forgot that while we all admit that other churches will take people to heaven, we will all work to build up our own churches. You would make a Baptist out of that pastor now, if you could."

Uncle Hez—"You are mistaken, son. If Judas Iscariot were here I would rather see him offer for membership in our church, than that wicked Campbellite."

Z—"I am sho' if you all knew more of the pastor you would not think so hard of him. I do hope if he ever comes here you will treat him well, or if ever you have a chance to do him a favor you will do it for my sake. Mammy, I don't believe you would mistreat any one who stood by and befriended your boy when everybody else had left him. I am going to get him to preach out here, if I can, to show him and others that I have not forgotten his kindness to me, and I do hope you and daddy will be respectful enough to go and hear him."

To this the old people made no reply, and at the Sunday meeting Zeke asked for the use of the house for the pastor to preach in. It was put to the vote of the house, and the request, by a bare majority, was granted. His mother voted yea, but his father was silent. So Zeke made the appointment for his meeting the next Sunday at 11 a. m., and at night.

LETTER TO BRO. J. W. JONES.

In the Texas department of the Apostolic Guide of February 18th, '87, is a short article from Bro. Jones headed "The New Commission," which article is replied to in a very appropriate manner by Bro. J. S. Durst in the FIRM FOUNDATION of March 1; but there were some thoughts and questions suggested to my mind by said article that I wish to call Bro. Jones' attention to, and "I hope he will not take offense."

I have been rather intimately acquainted with Bro. Jones for some years, and know something of his style of preaching, and he was one of the first teachers and preachers that caused my wife to decide to "obey from the heart that form of doctrine delivered," that she might be made free from sin, she having been previously dipped (not baptized) and received, by vote, into the Baptist church, and she says she has, ever since then, felt grateful to him for preaching so plainly on the pre-requisites of baptism, especially the necessity of making the "good confession," (which she had not done) and also the design of the institution; but lo, and behold! he has discovered a new, and he supposes, a better way, but by what light he discovered it, I know not; but of one thing I am sure, it was not that light that emanates from the Sun of Righteousness, whether it emanated from "that Bush" or not. But I, as well as Bro. Jones, would like to know how Bro. A. C. Hill stands in reference to those "new commissions" spoken of both by Bro. Jones and Bro. Durst; but then I am reminded that I must not call anything new, lest I make Solomon a liar. That being so, Bro. Jones, how is it that three or four years ago you contended so earnestly for the very things taught in what you are now pleased to call the "new commission?" Surely it was not new to you then, if it was to Solomon. Or were you at that time in a state of somnambulism, and, like the man walking in his sleep, did not know what you were doing? I mean at the time you were visiting Bro. McGary and Bro. Durst, and when you told them that you acted against your convictions of right when you took the sects on their, so-called, baptism; the same time, also, that Bro. McGary interested himself in your behalf, and got Bro. Hill to raise $45 for you in the Austin congregation. But to return to the question asked Bro. Hill: Suppose Bro. Hill answers the question, and says he endorses the "new commission" as set forth in the FIRM FOUNDATION, would that be any evidence that he would endorse it six months hence? Judging from your case it certainly would not; because there are so many lights now, (whether new or old) which may be discovered, and by which we may walk. And now, Bro. Jones, you are by no means the only one that this language applies to. Why, two years ago I met with the brethren at the Rock School House, where Bro. A. C. Hill is one of the elders of the congregation, and the great State Evangelist, Bro. Young, who was then traveling over this state making speeches in the interest of an unscriptural, and therefore ungodly institution, called a missionary society, spoke, and after he got through, Bro. Hill was called upon to say something in defence of the truth, which he did, and said he was opposed to missionary societies; but, I am credibly informed that he is now endorsing that which he then said was unscriptural. What new scripture he has discovered, or by what new light he is now walking, I know not. Will he please explain? He can have the columns of the FIRM FOUNDATION to explain in; but he may think that this paper is too unpopular, if so, perhaps Bro. Aten would give him space in the Texas Department of the Guide, unless he (Aten) still wants to "let the FIRM FOUNDATION severely alone."

Now, Bro. Jones, I am told that some time ago (heard it recently) you wrote an article which was published in the Texas Christian, saying that your mind had undergone a change (converted) on the subjects involved in the "new commission." Bro. Jones will you please tell us what power was brought to bear on your mind, that brought about that conversion? Was it the word of the Lord? If so, the conversion is right, (for all conversions are like the power that brings them about) and you ought to be able to show where the scriptures teach that you occupy the right position, and that you are right in denying that it is necessary to understand the design of the Lord's requirements, in order to acceptable obedience. Now, Bro. Jones, let us try and see if there cannot be another conversion brought about, and we stand together as we once did on these subjects; for you, or I, or both need conversion, and James says, "if a brother errs from the truth and another converts him, let him know that he that converts the sinner from the error of his way will save a soul from death, and hide a multitude of sins." So I think I would be doing a big work if I convert you and Bro. Hill back to the truth, from which you have so woefully erred. And the Savior says, "In vain do you worship me, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men.—Matt. xv; 9. Missionary societies and receiving sectarians on their human teaching and so-called baptism, are not taught in the scriptures, therefore they are the doctrines and commandments of men. You now take the position that it is not necessary to understand what faith is for. Has the Lord told us what it is for? If he has not, then it is not necessary for us to understand it; but if he has told us what it is for, is it not necessary that we understand it? So with repentance, so with the "good confession, and so with baptism, which are all stipulations or conditions upon which we enter into the church or body of Christ. Grant, for the sake of argument, that the Lord has not told us what faith, repentance, and confession are for, then we do not understand what they are for. But has he told us what baptism is for? If he has not, then how do you know so much about its design? If he has told us what it is for, and it is not necessary for us to understand it, then why will you go about debating with sectarians in reference to its design? Why, Bro. Jones, I would not spend my time in that way unless it was to bring myself into notice, and that would be contrary to the meek and retiring spirit of Christ! But maybe, since you have moved a little further north, breathing a little colder atmosphere, and under different surroundings generally, you are ready to give us the design of baptism, if not baptism itself, as some of your near neighbors are doing in regard to the good confession. Yes, so great is their glee over their mutual agreement to abandon the "good confession," that they "pulled off their old gloves" and shook hands in token of their determination to throw away a sufficiency of God's word to cover the unscriptural practices of "Our Plea." They may also have thought they could shake the sectarians in better with their old gloves off. But they ought to remember that a day will come when a higher power will do some shaking. Oh, Bro. Jones, are you ready for that? Stop and think, my brother, and don't let your surroundings, like the tree frog, change your colors.

Up to this time there has been no controversy, among our brethren, about the design of faith, repentance or the confession, but the fight has been about the necessity of understanding the design of baptism in order to acceptable obedience in that institution. Let me ask you a few questions, and bring this article to a close. Can individuals obey from the heart that form of doctrine spoken of,—Rom. vi: 17—and not understand the design of baptism? If they cannot, then are they made free from sin without obeying it from the heart? The Savior told the apostles to go teach all nations. Teach them what? The gospel, the word of the Lord; the law of the Spirit, of the New Covenant, is to be written in their hearts, and after being taught, they are to be baptized. Now, we find by reading the Acts of Apostles that the apostles taught them under that commission. Now, I ask you, did the apostles teach them right? If they did, then do those that teach them differently from what the apostles did, teach them right? If they do not, then does such teaching bring them into the church or body of Christ? If it does, then what advantage has true teaching over false teaching?

Peter says that baptism is not the getting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer (or, as McGarvey and the Emphatic Diaglot render it, the seeking) of a good conscience. Now, Bro. Jones, how can a man be seeking a good conscience in baptism, and not understand its design? Will you please tell us? Is it not the design of baptism that gives it any worth? Take its design from it, and is it not simply a ducking? Those (as they suppose) submitting to it, without understanding its design, is it not to them simply a ducking?

Can you get this published in the Texas Department of the Apostolic Guide, and reply to it, and if they will not publish it in the Guide, will you answer the above questions and we will publish it in the FIRM FOUNDATION?

Your brother in Christ,
E. HANSBROUGH.

THE NEW COMMISSION.

Bro. Aten, have you heard of the new doctrine? It is, that obedience, to be acceptable, must be performed with full knowledge of the design and all the blessings connected with that obedience. I hope then, that they will not take offense if I formulate their new commission as follows: "Go preach the gospel to every creature; he that believes, knowing what faith is for; and repents, knowing what repentance is for; and confesses the Lord Jesus, knowing what confession is for; and is baptized, knowing what baptism is for, shall be saved." I would ask my beloved Bro. A. C. Hill, of Manor, if he endorses the amendment—the supplement. I ask this question to find out your status, Bro. Hill, on this question. Truly, if Solomon were living now, he could not say that "There is nothing new under the sun."

W. J. JONES.
Thorpe's Springs, February 1887.

Now, Bro. Jones, if you will allow me, I will give you my status in the matter of the "New Commission;" but first, I wish to ask a question:

What do preachers preach for? Evidently to instruct the people, who are presumably ignorant. To give them testimony with regard to something of which they know nothing. In matters pertaining to temporal business many are not well instructed, consequently they are "botches;" but in spiritual things there must be more certainty knowledge. "Without faith it is impossible to please God" Why? Because, "he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and is a rewarder of those that diligently seek him." Well, then, we know what the first step is, and what effect it has. When we learn that in order to come properly to God our lives must be pure, that except we "repent we shall perish;" "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord;" consequently we know what repentance is, and its cause and effect. Again we learn that "whosoever will confess me before men" etc. We know that we cannot be followers of Christ and conceal the fact. This brings us to another important and essential step—the consummating one in the process of turning to the Lord, viz: being "buried with him by immersion into his death," and a rising to a new life in him. Do we know anything about what this means? What it is for? If not, the preacher has failed to do his duty. Or is the whole process a blind affair? No! no! no!!! The eyes of our understanding being opened by the word of the Lord, we see the necessity of a prompt obedience to the gospel, knowingly, intelligently, heartily. You, Bro. Jones teach that faith purifies the heart, with Peter, with Jesus and Paul, that "God commands men everywhere to repent; and that with the mouth confession is made unto salvation, of that which is believed in the heart that God has raised Jesus from the dead. Then let "the obedience of faith" go on, and as the first gospel sermon in fact, let men be immersed into the name of Christ for the remission of sins," that they "receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." But suppose a man comes forward who reverses the teaching of Jesus, "he that believeth and is immersed shall be saved," who "deceitfully handles the word of God" by teaching men that they "must repent before they can believe." That "as soon as they believe they are saved." Do they both instruct the people aright? No, you respond. Well, then, "let God be true, if every man is found a liar." Talk about ignorance excusing a man with the Bible in his hand, or that an act performed in ignorance under the advice of a false teacher will be recognized by the King of kings and Lord of lords. As well teach men that they can be naturalized in Europe to a citizenship in the United States of America. There was a time when "God winked at ignorance in men, but now he commands all men to repent" in view of the day of judgment, and both teacher and people are responsible to Him for the manner in which they hear and heed, and that responsibility cannot be waived in the light of God's word. "Heir stehe ich: Ich kann nicht anders, Gott helfe mir! Amen."

I will give an extract from Bro. Alexander Campbell on this subject, Christian Baptist, page 422: "To those who are aware of the use and importance of being explicit in the promulgation of law, or in the commencement of any institution, it will at once appear that had not Christian Immersion been designed primarily for the remission of sins, the apostles committed a most injurious error in giving birth to the idea, and in raising the expectation of an inquisitive audience to look for the remission of sins by or through immersion into the name of the Lord Jesus. Suppose, for example, when these three thousand were afterwards dispersed through the community, as many of them were, to a great distance from Jerusalem, and that one or all of them had been asked, for what they had been immersed on the day of Pentecost; what answer could they have given but "for the remission of their sins?" If they believed either the words of Peter or their own experience they could not otherwise respond. Had not this been the true meaning of immersion, the apostles laid the foundation of universal imposition and deception by thus commencing the administration of the reign of heaven. If ever any practice demanded circumspection in the institution and explanation of it, this one did; and if ever any person or persons were qualified so to do, these persons were. So that the inference is inevitable that the apostle meant what he expressed, and that in the act of immersion the remission of sins was bestowed. . . . I argue, and who can argue otherwise? that whatever immersion was to Paul, it is the same to every person, man, woman and child; barbarian, Scythian; bondman or freeman, who had the same faith Paul had when Ananias immersed him."

But enough. This is "explicit," and I am sure no one will charge Bro. Campbell with not knowing what he was writing about, or that there is any uncertainty about his teaching. "Let us all speak the same things."

Fraternally,
P. H. ADAMS.

WELCOME EVERMORE.

BY J. F. GRUBBS.

Just beyond the rolling river,
Where our partings will be o'er,
Where no pain and sadness ever
Will be felt and feared no more;
Where no sickness sin and sorrow
E'er can enter any more,
But in that eternal morrow
We'll be welcome evermore.

Down beside that wondrous river,
Wait the forms we've loved before;
Bidding us to falter never,
With their voices as of yore;
Soon we'll join the angel chorus,
Singing on the golden shore;
Joining those who've gone before us,
Singing welcome evermore.

Perchance there is a sainted mother,
Waiting on the other side,
Or perhaps a father—brother,
Who the door has opened wide;
Oh! don't you hear that whisper
Coming from the other shore?
It may be an angel sister
Saying, welcome evermore.

I've a father, sister, brother,
Waiting for me over there;
Where we hope to meet each other
In that realm so bright and fair;
Where we'll meet and live with Jesus
On the bright and golden shore,
Where delightful prospects please us
With his welcome evermore.

Let me bid farewell to pleasure,
And their seasons here below,
For of them I've had a measure—
Of their bitterness I know—
Then turn away from sin and sadness,
And engage in them more,
And you'll hear with joy and gladness
Jesus' welcome evermore.

On the other shore they'll meet us—
Forms that we have loved before—
With their angel voices greet,
Smiling as in days of yore;
Down beside that balmy river
Glad hosannas o'er and o'er,
'Mid the glad rejoicings ever,
We'll be welcome evermore.

THE BAPTISMAL QUESTION— WHAT IS THE ISSUE?

The last half century's discussion of baptism, we had thought, had so well defined its metes and boundaries that no one of ordinary understanding need be uninformed as to the act itself, or its place and purpose in the plan of salvation. The unmistakable act with all its vital environments has been so often and so forcibly set forth by the master minds of "this reformation," that it seems nothing but the dullest indifference or a determination not to see, could prevent a clear perception of its scriptural import. Yet we find even preachers and editors differing, and that among those claiming to take the precepts and examples furnished by the scriptures as their guide. How they find the ground for the difference it is difficult for some of us to see. Where lies the issue?

The FIRM FOUNDATION (if I understand its position, and if I do not I want the editor to correct me,) insists that the gospel should be preached in all its fullness of facts, commands and promises; and that every one that believes with the heart respecting this righteous plan of justification preached, confesses its author with his mouth in order to salvation, and obeys from the heart the form of doctrine in baptism, is thereby inducted into the church of Christ, or reign of grace, and is consequently made free from sin and become the servant of God. To this the scriptures and the writings of "the current reformation" agree. Who, then dissents? Some editors and contributors of journals claiming to maintain "our plea" seem to dissent, for they set up the hideous howl of heresy! heresy! The cry is against the FIRM FOUNDATION. Where is the heresy? Will any of the papers that have been denouncing the FIRM FOUNDATION tell us what particular point in the plan of salvation should be omitted so as to conform to their new standard of orthodoxy? Do they object to having all the facts of the gospel preached? If so, what fact should be left out? Will any one claiming to stand upon the one foundation of apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone, object to a single point in the position above stated? We think that all this ground has been too thoroughly canvassed, and all its butts and boundaries too well defined and defended by pleadings from the divine statute for any conscientious man of respectable attainments in the truth as believed among us, to gainsay a single item in this position. On what ground, then, is the issue made with the FIRM FOUNDATION? From what we can discover, it is about this: Some—who claim to represent "our plea"—are disposed to take risks outside of the law of the Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus for the salvation of at least a few souls. They assume that faith in feeling, a profession of feeling, and submission to a denominational ordinance, somehow associated with a desire to honor God, may possibly serve as a substitute for the belief in order to righteousness, the confession in order to salvation, and the baptism into Christ. The friends of the FIRM FOUNDATION refuse to share in the risks of such a plea. This is the issue. This is the head and front of our offending. We prefer to walk by the light of the law of Christ, and to lead others in the same safe way, and think it far from convenient to waste our time in defending doubtful or false ways. We think it best to give good heed to the apostolic injunction: "Take heed to thyself and unto the doctrine; continue in the things taught; for by doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee."—I. Tim. iv: 16. Proceeding upon this principle, we think it much better to present the plan of salvation so men can understand and obey it, than to waste our efforts in speculating about whether God will save those who did not understand, and could not obey it. Whether God, in His infinite goodness, will save those ignorantly immersed into the fellowship of a denomination, or those merely rantized ("the pious unimmersed") for the same purpose, is something of no concern whatever to him who believes and teaches the gospel of Christ as the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes it. If the good and great of the past (such as Campbell, Wesley, Luther, etc., etc., often referred to by speculators about other gospels, as examples requiring the gospel of Christ to be varied in order to suit it to their individual cases) believed it and died in the faith, they are safe without any speculation on the subject. If they didn't believe it, our speculations can not save them. And in any conceivable case we deem it unsafe and uncalled for to attempt to reconcile the unquestionable requirements of the gospel to that which is exceptional, abnormal, or doubtful. Above all, we certainly should not—as was the case with clinic baptism—take that which was irregular and abnormal and foist it upon the church as the rule. For example, suppose the deceased Campbells and the living Lipscomb had all received baptism in ignorance of its place and purpose in the plan of salvation—a thing which we are very far from supposing, though some are wont to assume it—this is anything but a reason for keeping those to whom we preach in ignorance as to the design of baptism. If the gross humanisms of those times had blinded them to the import of baptism, that would not blind us to perpetuate that blindness. Christ said, "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." It is our imperative duty as the ministers of Christ to plant this truth in the understandings of the people. In the days of the Son of Man on earth men could not be converted because they did not understand, and we doubt that any are converted now without the understanding being enlightened. Let us, therefore, enlighten our neighbors, both by precept and example, so that they may understand with the heart and be converted, that the Lord may heal them. "Ignorance is the mother of devotion" only to those who are devoted to false theories. "Ignorance is bliss" also to those who know not that they are already condemned, because they believe not the only begotten Son of God. But ignorance is anything else but instrumental in saving from sin. It is light that makes manifest; the true light enlightens the mind and saves from sin. Hence the Savior enjoined, "Let your light shine before men," etc. In no other way can this be so effectually done as by preaching the whole truth and practicing exactly what we preach. No apology for error, however plausible, will ever commend the truth to the consciences of thinking men as does the truth demonstrated in the life. It is in keeping with this law of mind that the Savior said, "Whosoever, therefore, shall break one of these least commandments and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven; but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." If doing and teaching the commandments of the Savior, causes those who break them and teach men so to call us heretics, and say all manner of evil of us falsely for his sake, let us endure it patiently, for he will call us great in his kingdom.

"If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the doctrine which is according to godliness, he is proud, knowing nothing, dotting about questions and strifes of words whereof cometh error, strifes, railings, (cries of heresy) without any proof of false teaching) evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness, from such withdraw thyself."

let us try and see if there cannot be another conversion brought about, and we stand together as we once did on these subjects; for you, or I, or both need conversion, and James says, "If a brother errs from the truth and another converts him, let him know that he that converts the sinner from the error of his way will save a soul from death, and hide a multitude of sins." So I think I would be doing a big work if I convert you and Bro. Hill back to the truth, from which you have so woefully erred. And the Savior says, "In vain do you worship me, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men.—Matt. xv: 9. Missionary societies and receiving sectarians on their human teaching and so-called baptism, are not taught in the scriptures, therefore they are the doctrines and commandments of men. You now take the position that it is not necessary to understand what faith is for. Has the Lord told us what it is for? If he has not, then it is not necessary for us to understand it; but if he has told us what it is for, is it not necessary that we understand it? So with repentance, so with the "good confession, and so with baptism, which are all stipulations or conditions upon which we enter into the church or body of Christ. Grant, for the sake of argument, that the Lord has not told us what faith, repentance, and confession are for, then we do not understand what they are for. But has he told us what baptism is for? If he has not, then how do you know so much about its design? If he has told us what it is for, and it is not necessary for us to understand it, then why will you go about debating with sectarians in reference to its design? Why, Bro. Jones, I would not spend my time in that way unless it was to bring myself into notice, and that would be contrary to the meek and retiring spirit of Christ! But maybe, since you have moved a little further north, breathing a little colder atmosphere, and under different surroundings generally, you are ready to give us the design of baptism, if not baptism itself, as some of your near neighbors are doing in regard to the good confession. Yes, so great is their glee over their mutual agreement to abandon the "good confession," that they "pulled off their old gloves" and shook hands in token of their determination to throw away a sufficiency of God's word to cover the unscriptural practices of "Our Plea." They may also have thought they could shake the sectarians in better with their old gloves off. But they ought to remember that a day will come when a higher power will do some shaking. Oh, Bro. Jones, are you ready for that? Stop and think, my brother, and don't let your surroundings, like the tree frog, change your colors.

Up to this time there has been no controversy, among our brethren, about the design of faith, repentance or the confession, but the fight has been about the necessity of understanding the design of baptism in order to acceptable obedience in that institution. Let me ask you a few questions, and bring this article to a close. Can individuals obey from the heart that form of doctrine spoken of,—Rom. vi: 17—and not understand the design of baptism? If they cannot, then are they made free from sin without obeying it from the heart? The Savior told the apostles to go teach all nations. Teach them what? If they did, then do those that teach them differently from what the apostles did, teach them right? If they do not, then does such teaching bring them into the church or body of Christ? If it does, then what advantage has true teaching over false teaching?

Peter says that baptism is not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer (or, as McGarvey and the Emphatic Diaglot render it, the seeking) of a good conscience. Now, Bro. Thorp's Springs, February 1887.

Now, Bro. Jones, if you will allow me, I will give you my status in the matter of the "New Commission;" but first, I wish to ask a question:

This brings us to another important and essential step—the consummating one in the process of turning to the Lord, viz: being "buried with him by immersion into his death," and a rising to a new life in him. Do we know anything about what this means? What it is for? If not, the preacher has failed to do his duty. Or is the whole process a blind affair? No! no! no! The eyes of our understanding being opened by the word of the Lord, we see the necessity of a prompt obedience to the gospel, knowingly, intelligently, heartily. You, Bro. Jones teach that faith purifies the heart, with Peter, with Jesus and Paul, that "God commands men everywhere to repent; and that with the mouth confession is made unto salvation," of that which is believed in the heart that God has raised Jesus from the dead. Then let "the obedience of faith" go on, and as the first gospel sermon in fact, let men be immersed into the name of Christ for the remission of sins," that they "receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." But suppose a man comes forward who reverses the teaching of Jesus, "he that believeth and is immersed shall be saved," who "deceitfully handles the word of God" by teaching men that they "must repent before they can believe." That "as soon as they believe they are saved." Do they both instruct the people aright? No, you respond. Well, then, "let God be true, if every man is found a liar." Talk about ignorance excusing a man with the Bible in his hand, or that an act performed in ignorance under the advice of a false teacher will be recognized by the King of kings and Lord of lords. As well teach men that they can be naturalized in Europe to a citizenship in the United States of America. There was a time when "God winked at ignorance in men, but now he commands all men to repent" in view of the day of judgment, and both teacher and people are responsible to Him for the manner in which they hear and heed, and that responsibility cannot be waived in the light of God's word. "Hör stehe ich: Ich kann nicht anders, Gott helfe mir! Amen."

I will give an extract from Bro. Alexander Campbell on this subject, Christian Baptist, page 422: "To those who are aware of the use and importance of being explicit in the promulgation of law, or in the commencement of any institution, it will at once appear that had not Christian immersion been designed primarily for the remission of sins, the apostles committed a most injurious error in giving birth to the idea, and in raising the expectation of an inquisitive audience to look for the remission of sins by or through immersion into the name of the Lord Jesus. Suppose, for example, when these three thousand were afterwards dispersed through the community, as many of them were, to a great distance from Jerusalem, and that one or all of them had been asked, for what they had been immersed on the day of Pentecost; what answer could they have given but "for the remission of their sins?" If they believed either the words of Peter or their own experience they could not otherwise respond. Had not this been the true meaning of immersion, the apostles laid the foundation of universal imposition and deception by thus commencing the administration of the reign of heaven. If ever any practice demanded circumspection in the institution and explanation of it, this one did; and if ever any person or persons were qualified so to do, these persons were. So that the inference is inevitable that the apostle meant what he expressed, and that in the act of immersion the remission of sins was bestowed.

I argue, and who can argue otherwise? that whatever immersion was to Paul, it is the same to every person, man, woman and child; barbarian, Scythian; bondman or freeman, who had the same faith Paul had when Ananias immersed him."

But enough. This is "explicit;" and I am sure no one will charge Bro. Campbell with not knowing what he was writing about, or that there is any uncertainty about his teaching. "Let us all speak the same things."

Fraternally,

P. H. ADAMS.

"When I gaze into the stars they look down upon me with pity from their serene and silent spaces like eyes glistening with tears, over the little lot of man. Thousands of generations, all as noisy as ours, have been swallowed up by time, and there remains no record of them any more, yet Arcturus and Orion, Sirius and the Pleiades are still shining in their courses, clear and young as when the shepherds first noted them from the plains of Shinar. WELCOME EVERMORE.

BY J. F. GRUBER.

Just beyond the rolling river,
Where our partings will be o'er,
Where no pain and sadness ever
Will be felt and feared no more;
Where no sickness sin and sorrow
E'er can enter any more,
But in that eternal morrow
We'll be welcome evermore.

Down beside that wondrous river,
Wait the forms we've loved before;
Bidding us to falter never,
With their voices as of yore;
Soon we'll join the angel chorus,
Singing on the golden shore;
Joining those who've gone before us,
Singing welcome evermore.

Perchance there is a sainted mother
Waiting on the other side,
Or perhaps a father—brother,
Who the door has opened wide;
Oh! don't you hear that whisper
Coming from the other shore?
It may be an angel sister
Saying, welcome evermore.

I've a father, sister, brother,
Waiting for me over there;
Where we hope to meet each other
In that realm so bright and fair;
Where we'll meet and live with Jesus
On the bright and golden shore,
Where delightful prospects please us
With his welcome evermore.

Let me bid farewell to pleasure,
And their seasons here below,
For of them I've had a measure—
Of their bitterness I know—
Then turn away from sin and sadness,
And engage in them more,
And you'll hear with joy and gladness
Jesus' welcome evermore.

On the other shore they'll meet us—
Forms that we have loved before—
With their angel voices greet,
Smiling as in days of yore;
Down beside that balmy river
Glad hosannas o'er and o'er,
'Mid the glad rejoicings ever,
We'll be welcome evermore.

THE BAPTISMAL QUESTION— WHAT IS THE ISSUE?

The last half century's discussion of baptism, we had thought, had so well defined its notes and boundaries that no one of ordinary understanding need be uninformed as to the act itself, or its place and purpose in the plan of salvation. The unmistakable act with all its vital environments has been so often and so forcibly set forth by the master minds of "this reformation," that it seems nothing but the dullest indifference or a determination not to see, could prevent a clear perception of its scriptural import. Yet we find even preachers and editors differing, and that among those claiming to take the precepts and examples furnished by the scriptures as their guide. How they find the ground for the difference it is difficult for some of us to see. Where lies the issue?

The FIRM FOUNDATION (if I understand its position, and if I do not I want the editor to correct me) insists that the gospel should be preached in all its fullness of facts, commands and promises; and that every one that believes with the heart respecting this righteous plan of justification preached, confesses its author with his mouth in order to salvation, and obeys from the heart the form of doctrine in baptism, is thereby inducted into the church of Christ, or reign of grace, and is consequently made free from sin and become the servant of God. To this the scriptures and the writings of "the current reformation" agree. Who, then dissents? Some editors and contributors of journals claiming to maintain "our plea" seem to dissent, for they set up the hideous howl of heresy! heresy! The cry is against the FIRM FOUNDATION. Where is the heresy? Will any of the papers that have been denouncing the FIRM FOUNDATION tell us what particular point in the plan of salvation should be omitted so as to conform to their new standard of orthodoxy? Do they object to having all the facts of the gospel preached? If so, what fact should be left out? Will any one claiming to stand upon the one foundation of apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone, object to a single point in the position above stated? We think that all this ground has been too thoroughly canvassed, and all its butts and boundaries too well defined and defended by pleadings from the divine statute for any conscientious man of respectable attainments in the truth as believed among us, to gainsay a single item in this position. On what ground, then, is the issue made with the FIRM FOUNDATION? From what we can discover, it is about this: Some—who claim to represent "our plea"—are disposed to take risks outside of the law of the Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus for the salvation of at least a few souls. They assume that faith in feeling, a profession of feeling, and submission to a denominational ordinance, somehow associated with a desire to honor God, may possibly serve as a substitute for the belief in order to righteousness, the confession in order to salvation, and the baptism into Christ. The friends of the FIRM FOUNDATION refuse to share in the risks of such a plea. This is the issue. This is the head and front of our offending. We prefer to walk by the light of the law of Christ, and to lead others in the same safe way, and think it far from convenient to waste our time in defending doubtful or false ways. We think it best to give good heed to the apostolic injunction: "Take heed to thyself and unto the doctrine; continue in the things taught; for by doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee."—I. Tim. iv: 16. Proceeding upon this principle, we think it much better to present the plan of salvation so men can understand and obey it, than to waste our efforts in speculating about whether God will save those who did not understand, and could not obey it. Whether God, in His infinite goodness, will save those ignorantly immersed into the fellowship of a denomination, or those merely ranted ("the pious unimmersed") for the same purpose, is something of no concern whatever to him who believes and teaches the gospel of Christ as the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes it. If the good and great of the past (such as Campbell, Wesley, Luther, etc., etc., often referred to by speculators about other gospels, as examples requiring the gospel of Christ to be varied in order to suit it to their individual cases) believed it and died in the faith, they are safe without any speculation on the subject. If they didn't believe it, our speculations can not save them. And in any conceivable case we deem it unsafe and uncalled for to attempt to reconcile the unquestionable requirements of the gospel to that which is exceptional, abnormal, or doubtful. Above all, we certainly should not—as was the case with clinic baptism—take that which was irregular and abnormal and foist it upon the church as the rule. For example, suppose the deceased Campbells and the living Lipscomb had all received baptism in ignorance of its place and purpose in the plan of salvation—a thing which we are very far from supposing, though some are wont to assume it—this is anything but a reason for keeping those to whom we preach in ignorance as to the design of baptism. If the gross humanisms of those times had blinded them to the import of baptism, that would not bind us to perpetuate that blindness. Christ said, "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." It is our imperative duty as the ministers of Christ to plant this truth in the understandings of the people. In the days of the Son of Man on earth men could not be converted because they did not understand, and we doubt that any are converted now without the understanding being enlightened. Let us, therefore, enlighten our neighbors, both by precept and example, so that they may understand with the heart and be converted, that the Lord may heal them. "Ignorance is the mother of devotion" only to those who are devoted to false theories. "Ignorance is bliss" also to those who know not that they are already condemned, because they believe not the only begotten Son of God. But ignorance is anything else but instrumental in saving from sin. It is light that makes manifest; the true light enlightens the mind and saves from sin. Hence the Savior enjoined, "Let your light shine before men," etc. In no other way can this be so effectually done as by preaching the whole truth and practicing exactly what we preach. No apology for error, however plausible, will ever commend the truth to the consciences of thinking men as does the truth demonstrated in the life. It is in keeping with this law of mind that the Savior said, "Whosoever, therefore, shall break one of these least commandments and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven; but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." If doing and teaching the commandments of the Savior, causes those who break them and teach men so to call us heretics, and say all manner of evil of us falsely for his sake, let us endure it patiently, for he will call us great in his kingdom.

"If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the doctrine which is according to godliness, he is proud, knowing nothing, dotting about questions and strifes of words whereof cometh error, strifes, railings, (cries of heresy without any proof of false teaching) evil surmings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness, from such withdraw thyself."

A TRIP TO LAMPASAS.

On Wednesday, March 16th, Bro. McGary and I arrived in the town of Lampasas, about an hour by sun and put up for the night with Bro. Holder. While eating supper we learned that the Methodists had closed a protracted meeting there about two weeks before, and that the Baptists had commenced one as soon as they closed, which was still being carried on by a certain Rev. Carroll, and, I suppose, D. D. We concluded to go and hear him that night. He read Luke xviii: 9-14, giving an account of the prayer of the Pharisee and Publican to show the necessity of prayer, and the power that it had to move God and make him willing to forgive the sinner. In reading it he read the fourteenth verse right, "I tell you this man went down to his house justified, rather than the other;" but in quoting it which he did at least half a dozen times afterwards, he said "this man went down to his house justified," and left off the words "rather than the other," which words show that neither of them were justified.

Now any divinity that has to be sustained by such a perversion of God's word as that is surely sickly and is greatly in need of D. D.s, but a healthy divinity needs no doctoring, has no need for such quacks to patch it up. Said Carroll is a fine looking man and said some good things in a very impressive manner; but like his great prototype or exemplar (Satan) when he deceived our fore-parents in the garden of Eden, he mixed so much falsehood with the good he said that it vitiated the whole.

Four, as I suppose good, honest-hearted people, went up to the altar of prayer at the invitation of the preacher, and complied with all his instructions, and submitted to all his manipulations; but without obtaining what they desired, and what they had a right to expect from what their preacher had told them they would receive—a feeling sense of the pardon of their sins. They were bound to conclude that they had not been actuated by the proper motive when they went up to be prayed for, or that their preacher had told them lies, or that God had failed to do his part.

The next morning after attending to some matters of business, we went to see our brother Dr. Atkins, not a D. D. but an M. D., for he is not identified with a people who, as a class claim that there should be doctors of divinity, though some are looking earnestly in that direction, and such should step down and out, and go where they belong, to some of the sectarian parties.

The Doctor was very social and communicative, seemed to feel a good deal of interest in the welfare and success of the F. F. Said that he had from the time he embraced Christianity, believed the principles for which it contended were right, and that he had always opposed receiving sectarians on their unscriptural, so-called baptism; that he himself was immersed by a Brother Northum who was opposed to receiving members from any of the sectarian bodies without their making the confession and being immersed, understanding that baptism is for the remission of sins. That he and Bro. Baird had once stood together on these subjects, and that Bro. Burnett, editor of the Christian Messenger, had converted Bro. Baird, and tried to convert him, but without success.

It is strange to me, however, that one of Bro. Atkin's talent and capability of setting forth and contending for what he believes, does not contend more earnestly and industriously for what he considers a part, at least, of the faith once delivered to the saints. He may have what he considers a good reason for his present course, but I hope he will consider the importance of the matter, and come out boldly in defence of what he seems so thoroughly convinced is the truth.

We went to hear the Baptist again that night. He read Luke xiii: 24, "Strive to enter in at the strait gate, for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in and shall not be able;" and, if possible, he perverted that scripture more than he did the scripture he read the night before. He dwelt more upon the words "enter in" than any other portion of his text; said a great many came right to the door and did not enter in; gave a good many reasons why they did not—all of them of his own fixing up—and was either not aware of the scriptural reason why they did not enter in, or studiously avoided giving it, if the latter it was because the shoe fit him too tight. Let us read it: (52). "Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge; ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered."—Luke xi: 52. How did they hinder them? why, by their false teaching, just as Mr. Carroll did the two nights we heard him. He did not tell those four persons how to enter the kingdom of Christ, (and I think the same parties were up the second night) according to the scriptures. Suppose he had told those persons to do as Peter told the 3,000 on Pentecost—Acts ii: 38; or as Ananias told Saul—Acts xxii: 16—or as Paul and Silas told the Philippian jailor—Acts xvi: 31, varying his instructions to suit the condition of the parties seeking to enter, what would have been the consequences? Why, the Baptist brethren would have stopped him from preaching the first church meeting they had. And yet, conversions occurring under this Carol sort of preaching are just as good—as acceptable—to many of our brethren (not to the Lord) as those that occurred under the preaching of the Holy Spirit through the apostles, just so they can get hold of their hand and shake them. Oh, what a transforming influence that hand shaking has! Why, baptism in lieu of circumcision is nothing compared to it, for baptism in lieu of circumcision only takes the place of one item while this powerful hand shaking takes the place of faith, repentance, confession and baptism.

TALKS WITH THE SISTERS.

Dear Sisters:—Another issue of the F. F. is before you, and no recruits for the sisters' department yet. Surely, my appeal fell only on stony ground. Where are sisters Titworth, Elston, Fuston and Huston? We would be so glad to have any one of them write again. Sister Huston's letter on "Tobacco," was not without points. Will she not give us another? But should any decide that their talent is not in this line, they can do a good work by persuading others to read the F. F. You can certainly use your tongues, if not your pens, in this good work, and to much better advantage, than in gossiping, repeating slanders, and criticizing the weaknesses and short comings of others, a common and very hurtful fault among women, arising from empty-mindedness. We fall to fill our minds with either earthly or heavenly wisdom, and hence, when we meet, have nothing to discuss but our neighbors. Let me urge you, then, to employ your tongues and a small part of your time, in trying to get your neighbors to subscribe for the F. F. It certainly is the only paper among us that is perfectly fearless in proclaiming the truth. There is no conservatism with it. It advocates unflinchingly, every item of the gospel. "But it fights so much," one says. "It stands bristled, ready to pitch into every one that attacks it." Well, that is exactly what Paul said do. Put on the whole armor of God, and stand (not run) ready to quell the darts of the wicked one. Now, these darts are being hurled thick and fast by false brethren within and enemies without. They are misrepresenting the teaching of the FIRM FOUNDATION, dubbing it a "new gospel," and thus misleading many honest brethren, who want the whole truth. It is not a personal fight, but a question as to whether the blessed truth shall be obscured by false teaching; and the fight must needs go on until the gospel banner shall be held aloft, unsullied by one single commandment of men. All, doubtless, regret the necessity of so much discussion, and sometimes there is a retaliative spirit shown, which is wrong; but then, there are a great many things being said on the other side to provoke retaliation and anger, and it is but human to yield. But let me say to the writers, that they have the truth, and know it, and it is not necessary for them to employ the weapons of derision and retaliation to show honest people the truth. Such language only angers, and serves to becloud the truth. But I fear that those who object to the spirit of the paper, only make this an excuse behind which to hide their real objection. I fear the F. F. makes the Christian path a little too narrow to suit a great many. It is too exclusive to admit of fellowship with Odd Fellows, Masons, Alliances, etc., and it cuts off theatre-going, dancing, fine dressing, vanities, etc., etc. But is it the F. F. that forbids these things? If so, why should you be guided by its teaching? Why indeed! Because you know it but holds forth the teachings of the Holy Spirit on these questions! You object to it for the very reason that you object to reading your Bible, viz: because it condemns you every time you read it, for who of us is there, that is not guilty of some of these sins? Then, sisters, if we are going to read papers for the sake of our souls, let us read one that will not prophesy only smooth things, but will hold up to us the admonitions of Holy writ, and try to keep us in that narrow way that alone leads to eternal life. Let us endeavor then, to put this paper side by side with all the (so-called) Christian publications, that are misguiding honest men and women, that they may learn the way of the Lord more perfectly. One good sister, of her own means, has twice paid for several copies, that she might send it to friends to read. This is an example worthy of imitation. We are commanded to abound in the work of the Lord; and this is His work, because it is spreading His truth. No drone can be saved, as faith without works is dead. Then stand not idle in the vineyard of the Master, but do with your might what your hands find to do, and God will abundantly bless you.

SARAI.

WHAT IS BAPTISM?

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have been requested to write some for the FIRM FOUNDATION on the above named subject; if you think it worthy of note you will please give it space in your paper.

What did the Savior mean when he told his apostles (Matt. xxviii: 19) to baptize those that had truth? This question must be settled. Back of it lies the divinity of Christ, and the power that has been given to him. You cannot neglect it without neglecting him, and woe unto the man who does this. It is said (Luke vii: 30) "that the Pharisees and lawyers rejected for themselves the counsel of God being not baptized of John, the Baptizer."

Of how much sorer punishment, think ye, shall ye be judged worthy, who now refuse to be baptized by Christ's authority, thus treading under foot the authority of John's Master? The importance in which baptism is held is seen in the fact that you cannot enter any sect without what they call baptism.

The sects may tell you that you are in full fellowship without it, but none of them will take you into full fellowship with them without your obedience to what they call baptism. It is a test of loyalty to the divine authority; to refuse to submit to it is an insult to the one who commanded it.

Since the apostles were to do the baptizing, what element were they to use? Did Christ tell them to baptize with the Holy Spirit or with fire? No; for they did not have the power to do this. (The preposition with that is used in connection with baptism, is not used to denote the act performed in baptizing, but the element used.) From Acts x: 47, we learn that the element used was water. Peter said, "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized?" Water was the only element the apostles used.

What action did they perform? Immersion is the only action he required. There must be the right element, right action, right subject, and upon the right authority—that of Jesus Christ, but that immersion and immersion only is baptism, you are presented with these indisputable facts about baptism: From Rom. vi: 4, Col. ii: 12, we learn that baptism is a burial; "We were buried with him in baptism." Eph. v: 26, Heb. x: 22, we learn that, as a result, the body was washed. If you have not been buried in baptism, if your body was not washed, you have not been baptized, there is nothing truer than this; it is worse than foolishness to talk of burying a thing with an element less than the thing buried; this cannot be done, hence nothing less than immersion can be called baptism; we do not read that pouring or sprinkling is baptism. True, water could be poured or sprinkled upon one until he was completely submerged or overwhelmed, and thus, baptized, but the pouring or sprinkling would not be the baptism.

We do not read that the apostles baptized in houses, or that they had water brought to them, or that it was contained in bowls and pithers; but that they always found it in its native place. Acts viii: 16, "They came to a certain water." John iii: 23, "Because there was much water there." Acts viii: 38, "They went down into the water," we have already shown that men were buried. Matt. iii: 6, Mark i: 5, Baptism took place "in the river Jordan." Mark i: 19, Acts viii: 39, "They came up out of the water." This is all out of place in sprinkling and pouring.

We do not read that they took the water and sprinkled or poured it on the taught; but we read that they took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized: this was wholly out of place if pouring or sprinkling was the practice.

No scholar of note will translate the classic Greek word for baptize by sprinkle or pour, with all the boasts, money and learning of those who sprinkle and pour for baptism. They have never given us a translation of the New Testament in which the Greek word for baptize is translated by either of these words. Immersionists have given us several translations where it is translated immerse; why is this?

All those who sprinkle and pour admit that immersion is baptism. No immersionist will admit that either sprinkle or pour means baptize.

CHRISTIANITY AND POLITICS.

TAPPAN, Ohio, March 7, 1887.

Dear Brother McGary:

My attention was attracted by an article under the above heading, from one J. S. D., in the December number of the F. F., and inasmuch as the writer rather modestly challenged investigation, I had hoped that many of our political brethren would, ere this time, have come out in their defence. But I have so far just looked in vain. Although the writer and I are entire strangers, (except through the article above mentioned) I trust that, in order to a better understanding, he will permit me to ask a question. He tells us, "It is contrary to the Scriptures of divine truth for Christians to become politicians." He also states, "That there is a dividing line between religion and politics." Now, the question is, where is the dividing line? There are many who think that a Christian should vote, but should not hold office. Your language quoted above will no doubt be construed by many so as to make the dividing line between voting, and canvassing as a candidate and holding office. If this is your meaning, will you please to answer another question? If it is wrong for a Christian to canvass as a candidate for office, and to hold the office when elected, is it not wrong for a Christian to vote for such a one to do such a wrong? I have not voted for officers in worldly governments for several years, and do not intend to again, until I learn that my citizenship is in this world. (Phil. iii: 20). My prohibition brethren tell me that I fail to do my duty; that I should help to save our country from the liquor curse, by voting the prohibition ticket; but this I cannot do, until I learn that the ballot is the power of God unto salvation.—Rom. i: 16.

Christians should be ashamed to use a power for salvation which God has not authorized, but which, upon investigation we find forbidden. Although Christian people generally pay little or no attention to the relationship which they sustain to worldly governments, I trust the time is speedily coming when they will be awakened from their slumbers. A new book, of which Bro. John Cameron is author, published by John Burns Book Co., of St. Louis, Mo., entitled the Great Image Interpreted, price $1.50, makes a bold and daring attempt to bring us clear outside of the smoke of Babylon. The author even dares to expose the false conclusions from true premises, deducted by R. Milligan and A. Campbell. Brethren, read it. The author marks out a line of investigation from the garden of Eden to the end of time, worthy of this age of investigation in which we live.

May God bless and crown the efforts with success of all those who dare to be consistent, until faith in false Christs, (a Christ that will pardon the sins through prayer of those who turn away their ear from hearing the law and so on), and false powers shall be driven from our ranks with the weapons that are mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds, is the prayer of your humble brother in Christ Jesus.

CHILTON, Falls Co., Tex.,
March 17, 1887.

Bro. McGary:

As I have never written anything for the F. F., will you please let me have space in your paper to call the attention of your readers to a statement made by Bro. Diffey, of McGregor, in vol. 3, No. 7. It is in regard to Bro. Harrison's position on the confession.

Now, Bro. D., you stated that he, Bro. H., did not believe that the confession was a prerequisite to baptism. My brother, are you sure that you did not misunderstand him on the confession? I am inclined to think you did as I have been with him and talked with him on this subject, and I must state, as a matter of fact, that he does believe and teach that men must make the confession, and that with the mouth, and before baptism. But he does not believe that there is any set form of words that every person, under all circumstances, must make alike. And I ask, do you? I do not. For instance, if you were to talk to a lady or gentleman on the subject of Christianity, and he or she should say to you, "Now, I believe all that the Bible says about Jesus, the Christ, and therefore demand baptism at your hand." What would you do? Would you demand of such a one anything more? or would you mock such a one by calling on him to say that he believed that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of the living God?

Well now, I have given you Bro. H.'s position. I had the pleasure of meeting him since the publication of your article, and we had some talk on the matter, and he felt aggrieved at the false attitude that you have placed him in before the brethren, and you know that such will not do him any good among those that do not know him. Now what I have written is with no unkind feeling for any one, but out of love for all. If you were wrongly impressed in regard to the matter, please so state.

With brotherly love to all God's children, I remain your brother in hope of eternal life,

J. R. LANE.

We publish this because we want every man and every question to have fair play in our columns, though we have no idea that Bro. Diffey intended to misrepresent Bro. Harrison. If Bro. H. entertains the views in reference to confession that Bro. Lane expresses in the above, then surely Bro. Diffey has not misrepresented him. A confession(?) as vague and indefinite as Bro. Lane loosens it out to, would be no confession at all. That which proves too much, proves nothing, and that teaching which liberalizes(?) the question to take in everything, takes in nothing. But while there is no set form of words to which we are bound by the scriptures, there is a clear, definite idea to be expressed and we have it expressed in scriptural phraseology: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," Math. xvi: 16; and, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God," Acts viii: 37, are synonymous expressions, or the same in substance. "I believe that God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins," can never be regarded by candid people as expressive of the same idea. Were it not that our brethren are trying to legalize this statement of "orthodox" heresy, that misguided men and women are deluded with, to justify their unintelligible and unauthorized immersion, there would be no effort made to justify any variation upon the confession of the Scripture. All true, loyal Christians are satisfied and will so remain, with a scriptural form of words. Who does not love the word of God better than the words of uninspired men? We are not like Bro. Lane on this question. If a person would not express to us in some determinate intelligible form of words that he believed Jesus Christ is the Son of God, we would not baptize him. "All that the Bible says about Jesus," is too indefinite. We find it said in one place in the Bible, "He hath a devil." And it is said in the Bible that He cast out devils by the power of Beelzebub. We don't want such ideas to form any part of the confession we have to approve.

MINERAL WELLS, March 9, '87.

A. McGary, Austin, Tex.:

DEAR BRO.—I received your favor yesterday, containing postoffice order for five dollars—will distribute it to-morrow morning. Thanks to you for your efforts in our behalf. I think all can get through, now, with what assistance they are getting from other sources without you sending any more. Doubtless you know of others that cannot, and you can send it to them, and may the good Lord reward you according to your work. You wish me to send you statement of the amounts you have sent us, and I give it as follows:

First, postoffice order.....	$24 75
Second " ".....	5 00
Third, " ".....	8 20
Fourth, postal note.....	1 00
Fifth, postoffice order.....	5 00
Sixth, postoffice order.....	5 00

Total..... $48 75

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, APRIL 1, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to McGary & Hansbrough, or to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to McGary & Hansbrough. Office, 1203 East Twelfth street.

SOME who subscribed for the F. F. to the end of 1886, and now wish to discontinue their subscription, failed to notify us of it, until we had sent them many numbers of the paper on the new year. Up to this date, upon request, we have dropped their names from our list, but hereafter arrearages must be paid before any discontinuance will be made. This is the law, and we think it fair to both parties.

W. J. JONES' PLEA.

W. J. Jones, evangelist for the central district, says: "I presented my plea at Troy, and the response was about seventy-five dollars in pledges and money. The work goes gloriously on. Pray for me. It requires almost infinite courage to do the kind of work which I am doing in this district, but God help me to have the nerve. The opposition is fierce and relentless." We trust that with singleness of purpose in his good work, Bro. Jones will persevere and make a record which he will not fear to face at the judgment bar.

The above is clipped from the Guide of March 18th. Bro. Jones, you will discover, is the evangelist for the central district. He was selected by the district meeting at Waco. He is now engaged in the work for which he was employed. He says, in the above, that he presented his plea at Troy, and the response was about seventy-five dollars in pledges and money. Now, you will notice that the responses were in accordance with the nature of the plea. Bro. Jones' plea, therefore is a money plea. "And the work goes gloriously on." That is, the work of responding to Bro. J.'s money plea. In this work, too, he is desirous of the prayers of the brethren. Notwithstanding the work of presenting his plea and the money responses goes gloriously on, yet the indications are, as presented by himself, that he needs the prayers of the brethren; for he next says that "It requires almost infinite courage to do the work that I am doing, but God help me to have the nerve." That is, he wants the help of God, and the prayers of the brethren to aid him in presenting his plea. Now, we have it at last, in plain, and unequivocal words! And then, Bro. Aten "trusts that with singleness of purpose, in his good work, Bro. Jones will persevere and make a record which he will not fear to face at the judgment bar." Now, may I suggest, brethren, if you really desire to make a record that will bear the test at the judgment bar, that you be more absorbed in saving souls, than in raising money to advance my [your] plea.

Try to get the brethren to meditate more on the word of the Lord, and the good work of sounding out the truth, will go on in the Lord's way.

I fear the Divine plan is rapidly being supplanted by our plea and my plea.

J. S. D.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

In the Christian Leader of November the 4th, is an article from the pen of Bro. G. W. Rice, headed "Further Review of E. A.'s Desperation." He has this to say of a "Presbyterian divine:"

"In another place, E. A. makes a very unjust allusion to a Presbyterian divine. I take the liberty of my own accord, to say that a more honorable and upright man does not walk the streets of Cincinnati. He fills high and responsible places and offices in the church to which he belongs. A scholar and Christian gentleman in every sense of those words. I have known him personally and by general reputation for a quarter of a century, and the testimony here given is in accordance with all public opinion and sentiment."

Now, Bro. Rowe, I was very much surprised when I saw this in the Leader. What does Bro. Rice mean by it? Think of it! G. W. Rice, who has been one of the editors of the "Old Reliable" for a great many years—one who has been considered a sound and safe leader of the people—and now associated with the Christian Leader. I say, what think you brethren, of what I have quoted from his pen? Let us look at it again: He is, "a scholar and a Christian gentleman in every sense of those words." Is Bro. Rice any more than this? Are you a "Christian gentleman" in every sense of the word? If so, how did you become a Christian? Were you a Christian before you "obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine?" You know you were not. Are there more ways than one of becoming a Christian? Has this "Presbyterian divine" obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine once delivered unto the saints? If not Bro. Rice, why in the name of all that is right and consistent did you say that he is a "Christian gentleman, in every sense of those words?" What does the word Christian mean in the Bible "sense" of the word? Peter says: "If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed, but let him glorify God in this behalf," that is, in this name. Is this "Presbyterian divine" entitled to this "worthy name by which we are called," having never obeyed the gospel of Jesus Christ? If not, why then do you dishonor God, Christ and the Holy Spirit, by calling this sectarian divine a Christian. I do most emphatically deny his being a Christian in the Bible "sense" of the word. He may be a "gentleman," and I have no doubt that he is in "every sense of the word;" but not a "Christian gentleman." I do hope Bro. Rice will repent of this. Let us have a little light on this. Please explain yourself. I hope you will publish this Bro. Rowe, as you said you would do so when they were fair and right. I am pleased with the Leader, and will do all I can for it, if it stands firm on the truth and on consistent grounds, but when such loose and unsound, and, I might say, reckless statements as the above are passed by unnoticed, I think it is high time to call in question the soundness of the writer, if not the paper, and offer some criticisms. I hope, therefore, Bro. Rice will come to the front like a man, explain matters, repent of what he has said, and apologize to the brotherhood for it. There is no other honorable way to get out of this inconsistency.

Your brother in Christ,

A. J. McCARTY.

[This article was sent to Bro. Rowe for publication, but was not published. At Bro. McCarty's request we publish it.—A. McG.]

"SPEAK THE TRUTH IN LOVE," BUT "LIE NOT."

We are in receipt of a letter from one of the staunchest friends of the FIRM FOUNDATION, in which he says: "Bro. McGary, your manner of speaking to and of your opponents gives me trouble. I hear it said: 'Bro. McGary don't talk like a Christian.'"

Now, brethren, we admit that this fills us with deep concern and some sincere regrets.

During the two and one-half years that we have been publishing the FIRM FOUNDATION some brethren who have been strong adherents to the apostolic doctrine it disseminates, and who have warmly supported the paper by pen and otherwise, have all the while remonstrated with us about our "style of writing." These friends have never lost any hold upon our esteem, but have rather endeared us to them more and more by their brotherly and sisterly efforts to correct our real and seeming faults; for we readily confess that we have sometimes been at fault in this matter. But we can never hope to employ that popular style that characterizes some men's preaching and writing, in contending for the faith of the gospel of Christ, and opposing the theories and dogmas and traditions of men, and if we did, it would be extremely sinful in us, unless our convictions should undergo a very radical change; for we regard it as gross a sin to "conform" to the cajoling, sawing and wheedling sycophancy that is required to please the "itching ear" of the public, as to "conform" to the varying, shallow, ludicrous foppery and dandyism demanded by the god of this world, through "the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life" in decking our decaying tabernacles of clay, upon which the grave worms must so soon feast. Brethren and sisters, "Be not conformed to this world," but "a peculiar people," has a much broader signification than, I fear, a great many of us imagine. But I am truly sorry that it is being said by my brethren that I "don't talk like a Christian." I hope I am a Christian, and that I do not deceive myself in feeling that the motive I have borne in my heart these two and one-half years I have been publishing the FIRM FOUNDATION and contending for the faith as conscience has pointed the way, has, in the main, sprung from the very depths of the pure fountain of "faith, hope and love." If it has not, I am self-deceived, beyond measure! That I have said many things that I ought not, I cheerfully confess; but brethren, please remember that I have been standing at the helm of the FIRM FOUNDATION while it has been running a gauntlet of the fiercest spirit of opposition and persecution; the most trying ordeal through which any principles have ever been borne since these same unsullied ones were being "thoroughly furnished" by those who enjoined upon us the duty of "earnestly contending for the faith" that has been and is yet being defended upon the pages of our paper.

Brethren who have grown gray in the kingdom of Christ, and some in the sanctums of our oldest religious papers, and who stand high as leaders in the brotherhood, have ruthlessly violated every principle of Christianity in their treatment of the FIRM FOUNDATION. Such things have caused us to stumble often, which we regret. But we beg our brethren not to judge us too harshly till they have given due consideration to the adverse circumstances under which we have been toiling in our contention for the faith, as a conscience which has received its schooling from the word of eternal truth, and the examples of men moved by the Holy Spirit has pointed the way. I would beg those fastidious and over-sensitive brethren and sisters who can't bear nor forgive the outbursts of over-burdened patience, that have too often been given expression in the FIRM FOUNDATION, to remember that even the great apostle, when surrounded by, and subjected to, a bitter opposition that ignored his individual rights and privileges, gave vent to his impassioned soul by saying to the high priest, "God shall smite thee, thou whited wall." Did Paul "talk like a Christian" when he said that? But was he not a Christian?

Brethren, our eyes are so full of the smoke of Babylon that we often step along in the footprints of the hypocritical Pharisees than in those of Him who so severely condemned them. It is not always the soft, smooth and pleasing words that proceed from an unfeigned or Christian heart. Listen at these two expressions and say which came from the purest heart—which "talked most like a Christian?" "Go and search diligently for the young child, and when ye have found him bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also."—Mat. iii: 8. How soft and pleasant it sounds! Now, listen again: "Go ye, and tell that fox, behold, I cast out devils, and I do cures to-day and to-morrow; and the third day I shall be perfected." I dare say that a majority of that class to-day claiming such a large measure of spirituality that they can't bear the plain speech of the FIRM FOUNDATION against the enemies of truth, would condemn these words of Jesus who spake as never man spake, and approve the words of the soul-hearted Herod, if they did not know who were the respective authors of these expressions. Then why should we defer to the tastes of such brethren?

If Paul should rise from the dead and stand before some of our popular assemblies, state meetings, conventions or missionary societies, and should say: "Take heed unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Spirit has made you overseers" (?) "to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his blood: For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them. Therefore watch * * * * And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up and give you an inheritance among them that are sanctified. I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel. Yea, ye yourselves know, that these hands have ministered unto my necessities and them that were with me." We say that if Paul should now rise and speak these words, and not be known to be Paul, he would offend and insult a large majority of such meetings. The objection to his reference to our modern pastors and place hunting, and timeserving and bargaining preachers by representing them as "grievous wolves," would make a pretext for objecting to his style, when the real offending would be in his vivid and life-like portrayal of their ungodly characters. The brotherhood has become so priest-ridden by these "wolf"-like pastors and priests, that it can be truly said of a large majority of them, "like priest like people." Hence they, too, are crying out, hold! while the priests are being put to the "sword." Their "itching ears" have been tickled so long by the soothing lotions that these doctors have been pouring into them, that they can't "endure the sound doctrine" that is so different.

In conclusion we will say that we hope to avoid saying anything in the future that is dictated by an improper spirit. But we are not courting that popularity that is to be gained by speaking and writing smoothly and pleasantly of evil, however highly esteemed that evil may be among men.

We entertain none but the kindest feelings for the brother from whose letter we have quoted, but thank him very much. He sent us a club of subscribers in the same letter. This shows how he loves the truth.

A. McG.

[Since writing the above we have received a copy of the Gospel Advocate containing an article from Bro. J. A. Harding, in which he says some things along this same line that we shall try to make room for in another column. They are so true and so fitly written.

THE TEN POINTS CONSIDERED.

Bro. Burnett says of our teaching:

"1. It contradicts Paul. 2. It contradicts Daniel. 3. It requires a new interpretation of the prophecies. 4. A new kingdom. 5. A new gospel. 6. A new definition of the gospel. 7. A new obedience of the gospel. 8. A new faith. 9. A new confession of faith. 10. A new condition of fellowship in the churches of Christ. These ten points stand established, and have not been touched by the champions of the new doctrine. We ask all brethren everywhere to consider them seriously and prayerfully."

(1). Wherein do we "contradict Paul?" Did Paul tell alien sinners to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and they should be saved? So do we.

Did Paul deliver to such persons, first of all, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures, and that he was buried and that he rose again according to the scriptures? So do we.

When they believed these facts and turned their hearts to Jesus as the King and Law-giver, did he deliver to them that form of doctrine that had Christ for its author—write the law of the Spirit of life in their hearts, so that they might hear with their ears and understand with their hearts, and be converted, and be healed? So do we.

Did Paul teach persons the truth, that they might know the truth in order to be made free by the truth? So do we.

Did Paul "thank God without ceasing because the Thessalonians received the word of God from him, not as the word of men, but, as it is in truth, the word of God which effectually worked in them also that believe?" So do we thank God when any one now receives that same word.

Did Paul call the gospel "three facts?" No. Neither do we.

Did Paul teach people that they had to obey three facts, to escape the "vengeance" of Christ? No. Neither do we.

Did Paul teach persons that the doctrine of Christ, and the word of truth, and the gospel of our salvation are one? So do we.

Did he teach Timothy to rightly divide three facts, or the word of truth, the gospel of our salvation? He said study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth—"the gospel of our salvation." So do we teach.

Did Paul ever say that a man might contradict a part of the word of truth, and yet not be perverting the gospel so long as he taught that Christ died, was buried, and rose again? No. The Messenger readers know who does say this. We do not say it.

Did Paul ever baptize, or authorize others to baptize, or in any way indicate that men and women who had not heard, understood and believed the word of truth might be baptized into Christ? No. Neither do we.

Did Paul ever re-immersion persons who had once been immersed to obey God, because their immersion was not in accordance with the authority of Christ? So have we.

Did Paul teach Christians to "all speak the same thing, and have no divisions among them but to be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment?" So do we.

Did he ever commend unto them "our plea" as a means of bringing about this state of union and agreement? No. Neither do we.

Did he commend unto them the word of God's grace for this purpose? So do we.

Did Paul teach us to deny ungodliness, and worldly lusts, and live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world? So do we.

Did Paul say to those who were corrupting and perverting the gospel of Christ: "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel?" So do we marvel at men now for being removed from the word of truth unto another gospel—the three fact gospel—"our plea," with its schismatic tendency, and long train of evil fruits that are being shed in every direction; which is all owing to departure from the word of God's grace, which thoroughly furnishes the man of God unto all good works, and which does not furnish us any missionary society but the church of Christ; any music for the worship of God but psalms and hymns and spiritual songs; any baptism but the "one" which is preceded by the "teaching" of the truth, the product of the "one faith" which comes by hearing, understanding and believing the word of God, (not the word of men).

Did Paul say: "Though I or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which I have preached unto you let him be accursed?" So do we.

Did Paul ever preach to men and women any of the doctrines that the sectarian and so-called orthodox bodies preach to-day? No. Neither do we.

Did he preach the doctrine of "our plea" on "Christian union" to the twelve at Ephesus, and ask them if they were satisfied with their baptism, and shake them into the church?

Did he ever preach this doctrine, anywhere, or leave one line on record, authorizing men to preach it? No. Neither have we.

Now, we appeal to all candid readers to know if our doctrine "contradicts Paul." We challenge the world to produce one word Paul ever wrote that we have ever denied or ever will! It might be charged that our doctrine "contradicts" Campbell, McGarvey, Errett, Garrison, Lipscomb, Sewell, Wilmoth, Burnett, Poe, Clark, Homan, McPherson, Jones, Hill, and thousands of uninspired men, but we defy the powers of all of those brethren living, and all the world besides, to point to one word of Paul's that we have or will deny. Then why charge us with it.

But Bro. Burnett says (2): "It contradicts Daniel." Well, we have no time to show the falsity of this charge by going into detail as we have in reference to Paul. But we love and revere all that Daniel wrote, and would not wilfully deny anything he said. Suffice it to say that if we contradict him it is by teaching what Paul taught. Then Paul denied Daniel if we do.

Bro. Burnett says, (3) "It requires a new interpretation of the prophecies. So does Paul's teaching, then.

He says, (4) "A new kingdom." So does Paul's teaching, then, for we have the same law for entrance, and for government after entrance, that Paul delivered.

(5). "A new gospel." So did Paul, then; for we preach the same gospel that he preached, and warn men against preaching three fact ones, or any other, save the one Paul preached.

(6). "A new definition of the gospel." We call the gospel "the word of truth, the gospel of our salvation," just as Paul did. If we are misled, it has been by following Paul, as we thought he "followed Christ."

(7). "A new obedience of the gospel." We can't see how there is any new obedience in what we teach. We teach people the law of Christ for the remission of sins, that they may be baptized understandingly. We admit that we do not tell them to obey three facts, because Paul never told them to; and, besides, we do not believe they could do such a thing.

(8). "A new faith." We can't see how we do this. Paul says, "faith comes by hearing the word of God." We teach them this word of God. We confess that we do not teach the words of Bro. Campbell or any other uninspired man, nor the doctrine of "our plea," only such of it as we find in the word of God. If this course causes us to deliver a new faith, then we are guilty.

(9). "A new confession." Now, what confession did Peter make that Christ said was not revealed to him by "flesh and blood," but by the heavenly Father? "Thou art the Christ the Son of the Living God." This is the confession we teach; and we will not recognize one that is not in substance the same. Our confession, then, is over eighteen hundred years old (that is not very new) and was revealed by God. There is a confession or statement that has been revealed many hundreds of years later. Bro. Burnett recognizes this one, but we do not. It is in these words: "I believe that God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins." This statement, falsely called a confession of Christ, is made to suit the false doctrine of abstract operation of the Holy Ghost, and instantaneous regeneration. The idea being false and contrary to sound doctrine, of course the statement of it is.

(10). "A new condition of fellowship." How can this charge be true, when we teach the same gospel that Paul taught, and refuse to recognize any different and contrary to his teaching. We contend for baptizing into Christ the very same class of persons that Paul and other inspired teachers baptized—the taught. We refuse to baptize any other class, or to receive them after others have baptized them. Paul's example at Ephesus is a sufficient reason for it, but almost every page of inspiration forbids the practice of "our plea." The authority to baptize the taught, in the very nature of language and thought, forbids the baptism of the untaught. Of course the teaching is to be the teaching of the word of God, and not of men—which is vain. In fact, all the controversy and trouble we have with our brethren, is about things outside of the word of God—things that men want to add to that which is already "perfect." Things which they have no rule for in that which they have said time and time again, is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

OFFERS A THOUSAND DOLLARS.

The Baptist Gleaner offers the Messenger and the Review one thousand dollars to write out and print "what Campbellites believe." "The Messenger and Review do not know anything about what the Campbellites believe, and cannot write it out."—Christian Messenger. Here is the information, Bro. Burnett, present it and draw your money: Campbellites believe that those who have been immersed are saved, whether they knew what God appointed the ordinance for or not. But they believe that Baptists and all others who are wearing unscriptural names are in Babylon. They believe that the scriptures authorize them to go unto all nations preaching the gospel to some and baptizing them for the remission of sins; and shaking those in Babylon out with "the right hand of fellowship." These Campbellites claim to believe that the scriptures are a sufficient rule of faith and practice. Their only authority for this shaking that we have seen, is Haggai II: 7—"And I will shake all nations." You need not send me my part of the thousand dollars, Bro. Burnett, I will give it to you to furnish me a better proof text than this one for shaking people into to Christ.

If temperance prevails, then education can prevail; if temperance fails, then education must fail.

[Horace Mann.

We send out some sample copies of this issue, hoping that true brethren into whose hands it may go will subscribe and induce others to take it also. Because we refuse to go where God has not directed, and counsel our brethren to abide in the doctrine of Christ, and reject all deductions of men who have become wise above what is written, certain popular leaders are trying to cry us down with false accusations, to stifle our warning words against a "plea" of uninspired men that is fast leveling the gospel of Christ to an equality with the doctrines of men. We hope the friends of the paper will press its claims before the public and help us widen its circulation.

REPLY TO BRO. JONES' QUERY.

I will now answer your query addressed to me in the Guide of February 18, that you may know "assuredly" my "status" on this question. Allow me, first, to say that you surely do not understand our brethren who believe in redemption (so called), or else I misunderstood them; but I hear that Bro. Durst will reply to your article, and also formulate a commission, hence I leave to him to state their position in full. I understand them to hold and teach that no baptism is valid unless the candidate has first made, with the mouth, "the good confession," and understands, at the time of his baptism, that it is for, or in order to, the remission of sins. This I do not believe nor do I believe the "new commission" as formulated by you. I have yet to learn that, under apostolic teaching, the belief of a promise is anywhere made a condition precedent to valid baptism. Faith to save must be directed to where there is salvation; that is, in Christ. Hence, under the gospel, the mind is constantly directed to this superlatively grand and glorious personage as the world's only hope and the source of all spiritual life, peace and rest. Let us then, my brother, continue to point the sinner to Jesus, teach him to believe on, love, trust and obey Jesus, and God will take care of his promises and all else on that side of the line.

A. C. HILL.

Manor, Texas.

The foregoing appeared in the Guide, of March 25, that Bro. Jones may know assuredly Bro. Hill's position. Bro. Hill understands us to teach, "that no baptism is valid unless the candidate has first made with the mouth, "the good confession," and understands, at the time of his baptism, that it is for, or in order to, the remission of sins. He says he does not believe this. It is now in order to ask him a few questions. Will he be so kind as to answer them plainly, in their order, that we too may know "assuredly" his "status" fully in this matter?

First.—Do you believe the scriptures teach the necessity of making "the confession"? If you do not, please give your reason.

Second.—Is it necessary to preach that baptism is for, or in order to the remission of sins? We want a yes or no.

Third.—Is it necessary to understand the things that are necessary to be preached? Yes or no, if you will.

Fourth.—If remission of sins can be obtained without understanding the things precedent thereto, why the necessity of preaching them?

Bro. Hill, you are a practical man. Now, in your clear and practical manner—explain these things if you please.

Again Bro. Hill says, "I have yet to learn that, under apostolic teaching, the belief of a promise is anywhere made a condition precedent to valid baptism. Faith to save must be directed to where there is salvation; that is, in Christ." Now Bro. Hill, while the belief of a promise is not given as a condition of pardon, do you believe any one can get into Christ without looking to the promise of remission of sins as the direct ultimatum? The enjoyment is realized by the sects before they reach Christ; for, as you truly say, "Faith to save must be directed to where there is salvation, that is, in Christ," and Paul teaches that we are baptized into Christ; therefore, they do not possess the faith that saves, for their faith directs them to salvation before baptism. Is this the faith that saves? This is the kind of faith upon which they are baptized. Is it valid? Perhaps our good brother can give us light. This is what we want; and, as he has shown us a partial face, we want to take a good look at every feature of the question. Will you write again?

J. S. D.

Apostolic Guide will please copy.

AWAY GOES THE CONFESSION!

This is the only way to make a show of consistency:

"Some of our brethren have a custom of requiring confession of those who come to us from other churches, just as though they had never made a start in diving life. I think this an insult to those parties, and I, for one, have ceased to practice it. God grant that we may be charitable just so far as a non-interference with divine truth is concerned. Let us remember that we, also, may be sectarian."—Christian Evangelist.

The Evangelist, with the above was sent us, with the request that we "rip it to pieces."

All we can see in it is that it is an abandonment, not only of a fundamental plank in the platform of "our plea," but also a clear departure from the word of the Lord—a surrender of the faith Paul said he preached, see Rom. x: 8-10.

Bro. Campbell, the founder of "our plea for Christian union," gave the form of the confession in these words: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God," and said of it: "This confession must be made by every applicant for Christian baptism in order to his being constitutionally builded upon the divine foundation; or, as we usually say, admitted into the kingdom or church. No minister or church of Jesus Christ has any divine right or authority to ask for more or accept of less than this, in order to Christian baptism."—Campbell on Baptism, pp. 18-19.

Now who is right, the Christian Evangelist and its associate conspirators against Alexander Campbell, who made this form of words a capital item of "our plea," or those who follow Campbell, in this matter, because he followed the "Captain of our Salvation?"

But there is a so-called confession of Christ given in these words: "I believe God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins."

There are false doctrines preached in this world under the guise of Christianity. These preachers deliver to the people, instead of the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus, laws of men. These laws of men all purport to be the law of Christ. Their confession is formulated to give expression to their law—and not the law-giver. It is true, they put the name of Christ and God in this formulation, but it clearly denies both the Father and the Son. The Father says: "This is my beloved Son;" and again: "It shall come to pass, that every soul that will not hear him shall be destroyed." The Son says: "He that believes and is baptized shall be saved." Hence the statement formulated by these false teachers denies both the Father and the Son, by saying salvation comes before baptism! But some of them immerse their deluded disciples. However, they will not immerse one till he has denied both the Father and Son. Take the Baptists for instance, if two men should come forward for baptism under Baptist teaching, and one should respond to the catechism in a manner that would harmonize with their doctrine, that is, deny the Father and the Son, they would immerse him. If the other should express the doctrine of the New Testament and say that baptism was for the remission of sins, and that he wanted to be baptized for that purpose, upon the confession that Peter and the eunuch, and Timothy and all primitive disciples made, they would reject him! Yet he would be the very kind of person that the Lord authorizes the baptism of. This shows that if one could come to the light under their teaching they would reject him! They will not baptize any but those in the dark, those the Lord has not authorized to be baptized, and refuse to baptize those he did authorize the baptism of—the taught.

It is true, Bro. Campbell's plea authorizes union with those who have been immersed under this false teaching. This is inconsistent with what he taught on the confession, and what he taught about the necessity of understanding the design of baptism before submitting to it, which we will not quote now. But this only serves to show that the wisest of men cannot fix up a "plea" upon the religion of Christ, with one item more or less in it than is "furnished" by the scriptures, in which we are given "all things that pertain to life and godliness," without some part of that plea being inconsistent with some other part. So, when we accept Bro. Campbell's position on the confession, we have Campbell, and Paul, and Peter, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Heavenly Father who revealed this confession to Peter, and the faith once delivered to the saints on our side.

But when we accept Bro. Campbell's position on shaking in sectarians, we turn our backs upon the Sun of Righteousness and walk in the shadows of Campbell, McGarvey, Errett, Lipscomb and other fallible men, and by so doing those confessions(?) "revealed by flesh and blood," and, which deny God and His Christ are exalted to the eminence of the one revealed by the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.

But we are told that it is "an insult" to our sectarian neighbors and their popular parties, to require the "good confession" of them when they desire to turn away from the traditions of men and blind leaders, and pass in at "the strait gate"! Hence our modern Esaus are selling this item of the faith Paul preached, for a thin pottage of sectarian popularity—what a dish of slop for such an enormous price!

BRO. HARDING REPLIES.

WINCHESTER, KY.,
March 12, 1887.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Your issue of the 1st instant, containing my letter and your reply was received yesterday. I hasten to answer.

I believe that such a pamphlet as you propose would do good, and I am not willing that the proposed discussion should fall through on account of any hair-splitting distinctions which may arise between us as to the wording of the propositions. In order to bring about the debate, therefore, I make the following propositions:

Suppose we put upon the title page of the pamphlet something like this: "A Discussion of the Re-Baptism Question; by J. A. Harding, of Winchester, Ky., and A. McGary, of Austin, Texas." Then I will open out in such an article as you describe in your first letter, and you will reply in one of equal length. You will then return to me the proof sheets of my article, and of your reply, and I will then send in a second article, and so on until each has written five articles. Of course the ordinary rule of debate, that "no new matter should be introduced into the final negative" should be observed.

If this proposition suits you, upon your notifying me of it, I will go to work at once to fulfill my part of it.

2. If this first proposition does not suit you, I offer a second one as follows: I will state a proposition and affirm it in three articles, if you will affirm one in three. I will affirm this one:

He who believes from the heart that God raised Jesus from the dead, and who makes this faith known with his mouth is a fit subject for baptism.

On this proposition we will write three articles each. I suggest that you affirm as follows:

The knowledge that baptism is in order to the remission of sins is necessary to the validity of the ordinance.

On this second proposition each of us will write three articles also, and then we will have twelve instead of ten articles in the pamphlet.

Now, brother, the way is open to you for the debate that you proposed, and if you cannot accept it, and proceed with the discussion, then I must conclude (to turn your own words upon you) "that the dark clouds of prejudice have dimmed your vision."

As certainly as I know my own heart, I have no bias, no prejudice against the truth. My earnest prayer and honest endeavor shall be continually for the advancement of the truth of God, the way of righteousness.

Sincerely and affectionately your brother.

J. A. HARDING.

We assure Bro. Harding that we shall not interpose any hair-splitting distinctions to hinder the discussion. It is not hair-splitting to contend for such a course as will put him upon the proof of his teaching and practice. He and I both teach people to be baptized for the remission of their sins, upon the confession of the Lord Jesus. Other men teach that none are fit subjects for baptism until after their sins are pardoned; and their converts are required to voice the false doctrine they have received in their hearts, instead of making the confession that Bro. Harding and I believe to be the proper expression to precede baptism. Now, the contemplated debate between us is about this class of persons. He holds that they are baptized into Christ—"born of water and the Spirit;" I deny it. There is no disagreement between us about that class who hear the truth, believe the truth and obey it, as did the converts of apostolic times. If Bro. Harding denied that this class are in the kingdom, or that baptism is for the remission of sins, or that "the good confession" is a pre-requisite to baptism, then the duty of proving would devolve upon us, and we would not hesitate to submit for his consideration such evidence as we believed would substantiate our teaching. If I went about recognizing as Christians those who were sprinkled in babyhood or any other time, or who have had water poured on them for baptism, and was receiving such persons into the church(?), and Bro. Harding or any one else should deny my right to do so and call upon me to show my authority for it, I would not turn upon him and tell him to prove that I did not have the authority! And if he should insist that it was my duty to affirm my right or authority for it in a clear specific proposition, I would not think that he was contending for "hair-splitting distinctions;" but I would proceed to discharge my duty by affirming my teaching so that it might be discussed freely and fully upon proper grounds. The only way to settle this question or any other is, for the rules of debate to be followed. To attempt a fair discussion upon any other plan is sheer folly. It is like quitting the open plain and dodging about in the brush—a sort of ambushade. I do not mean that Bro. Harding is this style of debater, for I regard him a fair, conscientious man; but he stands on this question in a tight place. When he shoulders the responsibilities of his teaching in a clear affirmative proposition he will be loaded down to the guard; but it is his duty to do so or abandon the position.

We are truly tired of and sorry for the wrangling that our brethren have led us into heretofore, by dodging their responsibilities in the discussion of this question. We greatly desire to avoid the like in the future. "If it be possible, as much as lieth in us" we want to write, and "live peaceably with all men." Hence we have decided to engage in no set discussion in the future, except such as promise fair dealing, which can only be hoped for in such as bind each side to shoulder their responsibilities. In conclusion, we must say to Bro. Harding, that if he refuses to enter into the discussion on the conditions we have submitted to him, we are willing to abide the decision of all intelligent men and women who have read our correspondence in reference to it, as to who is the most prejudiced or biased. If he will affirm his teaching in a fair, open proposition, we will deny it, and shall hope to controvert it with him in such a way as to retain his good will and confidence after it is over. It is for him to decide whether we shall have the debate. But I very respectfully decline all propositions that tend to lead into a discussion of this question, upon the broad, loose and indefinite grounds that Bro. Harding's letter seems to me to point out. We can accomplish more for the truth by pointing out the inconsistencies here and there in the teachings of our opponents, than by wasting our time in such unsatisfactory controversies. But when we find a chance to meet the real issue upon open ground where candid people can behold the contest as it goes on upon a straight course, in the light of God's truth, then count us in. We are led to conclude from Bro. Harding's letter that he realizes that we are right about who should affirm. Now let him come up with his argument.

A. MCG.

Let our prayers, like the ancient sacrifices, ascend morning and evening. Let our days begin and end with God.—Channing.

We never think of the main business of life till a vain repentance reminds us of it at the wrong end. [L'Esrange.]

TO ALL TO WHOM IT APPLIES.

Feeling my incapacity, it is with diffidence that I unite my voice with that of sisters who have preceded me in exhorting a non-conformity to the fashions, and amusements of the world. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord. Touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you; for what agreement hath the temple of God with idols," "ye are the temple of the living God. The battle between right and wrong is being waged; we must espouse one side or the other. If you be for God, serve him, if for Baal, serve him. But, my sisters, you once made your choice—you gave yourself to Christ, your Redeemer, the Living God, who bought you and gave himself for you, that he might present you spotless before his Father. "Behold me, and the children thou hast given me." And now, oh, my sisters! shall we be of that happy family? He makes it entirely optional with us. "If you love me you will keep my commandments, and my commandments are not grievous." Let your adorning be that of a meek and quiet spirit, not the putting on of gold or costly apparel." The rich man was clothed in purple and fine linen, Lazarus in rags; but what a change after death! The one is lost forever, the other carried to Abraham's bosom!

Human nature, to a degree, controls us all. How many of our poorer brethren and sisters, whose souls are precious in the sight of God, feel as though they had no place in a fashionable crowd? And alas! our churches have become advertisements for the fashionable millinery and mantua-making establishments, and the plainly clad can no longer feel at home amongst them; consequently, absent themselves from the house of God and from the table of the Lord. Where will the responsibility rest at the last day? Think of this, my dear sisters, and if we are guilty, let us reform from our worldliness, and let us return to our first love and to primitive Christianity.

WOODLAND, California, March 28th, 1887.

TO THE SISTERS.

I have just finished reading a letter in the FIRM FOUNDATION written by "Sara." That she may know that her words are read and appreciated by at least one sister, I pen these few lines.

I have often thought of writing, and giving a word in favor of my Master's cause, yet I feel so insufficient for the task that I have put it off from time to time.

But I feel that though we are weak, a word spoken for the right will surely not be lost, but as seed sown in good ground may spring up and bring forth fruit unto the Lord's honor.

I have often thought—with our sister—that our Lord's day meetings are conducted with too much apparent unconcern. Surely, when the Lord has given us six days in which to labor and prepare for worldly enjoyment, one day should be devoted entirely, and without reserve to religious thought and the Lord's service.

This may, at first thought, seem impracticable. But could we not, at least dismiss all anxious care from our minds, and even though we may be compelled to minister to the physical wants of man, this being the work assigned by the Lord, do it cheerfully, as unto him, and in thankfulness still raise our thoughts to him in praise for his mercy and favor.

"Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." When in the house of God we are speaking of trivial, worldly affairs, and thinking how we can best advance them, is it possible for our hearts to be filled with the spirit of the meek and lowly Jesus? Most assuredly not!

The least we can say for the careless, thoughtless conversation in the Lord's house, is that it will have a most unhappy effect on the unbeliever. Let us, then, in all earnestness, strive to keep down worldly thoughts. Or, at all events, not let our worldly thoughts find outlet in words.

In conclusion, dear sisters, I will say that each of us should feel we have a place to fill in the great work of advancing the cause of truth, and we should ever stand firm and battle for the right against every foe. May we take the Bible for our guide, and our watchwords ever be

Heavenly Father, aid me—guide me;
Thou the mortal's truest friend;
Help me to fulfill my mission,
Nobly, bravely to the end."

OBEDIENCE.

"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."—Rom. 1:16. In the power of God unto salvation, it is said, "Believe on the Lord Jesus and thou shalt be saved"—Acts xvi: 31. Therefore, belief or faith in the Lord Jesus is essential to salvation, as God has commanded us to believe on him. God has given us the ability to believe the testimony of His Son, and in that sense, Faith is a gift of God. Faith is the power of God to move men and women to enable them to be saved. It is in the power of man to believe not, and be damned, as he is a free agent. In the gospel of Christ, the power of God unto salvation, it is said: "Unless you repent you shall all likewise perish. God has commanded us to repent, therefore repentance is essential to salvation. God has given us the ability to repent of all our sins, and in that sense, repentance is a gift of God.

It is a power of God to move men and women to enable them to depart from iniquity and be saved. It is also in the power of man to continue in sin and likewise perish, because he is a free agent.

In the gospel of Christ, the power of God unto salvation, it is said that "With the mouth confession is made unto salvation," and as God has commanded us to confess the Lord Jesus with the mouth, therefore confession is essential to salvation. God has given us the ability to confess that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, and in that sense, confession is a gift of God. It is a power of God to move men and women to enable them to confess unto salvation. It is also in the power of man to confess not, and be denied by Christ before the Father in Heaven, because man is a free agent.

In the gospel of Christ, the power of God unto salvation, it is said, "Be baptized every one of you in the name (by the authority) of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. God has commanded baptism for the remission of sins, therefore baptism is essential to salvation. God has given us the ability to be baptized for the remission of sins, and in that sense baptism is a gift of God. It is a power of God to move men and women to enable them to obey from the heart the form of doctrine delivered to the saints. It is in the power of man to refuse to be baptized for the remission of sins, and be condemned, because he is a free agent, and can do as he pleases.

Bro. A. McGary, Austin, Texas:

Inclosed find postal note for $1, which you will please place to my credit as a subscriber for the FIRM FOUNDATION. I have been bothered with granulated sore eyes for several months, during which time I have done but little reading, but an oculist from the Lone Star State stopped in our town a few weeks back and commenced doctoring my eyes, and has got them in pretty fair business shape again. Whatever I can do toward strengthening the pen of the writer, or holding up the arm of the speaker who is battling in defence of the gospel of our blessed redeemer, I am certainly willing to do. But the time has come when we have got to put on a detective look in our own camp. Doubtless we have those among us who would, if not held in check, barter away for human traditions, the great truths upon which is hinged our eternal interest. Yes, they are apparently so good that they move with muffled feet lest they should disturb some sectarian speaker, who is exhausting his wits in attempting to cover up the plain truths of the gospel of our blessed Redeemer. The early reformers met the enemy upon open battlefield, and wherever a battle was fought victory perched upon the banners of truth. Yes, they invaded the camps of the enemy, and oftentimes routed them from their strongholds, and to-day if all our preachers would stand shoulder to shoulder, armed with the sword of the Spirit, filled with the love of the truth and in solid phalanx would move forward, trusting for victory in the God of our salvation, sectarianism would vanish before us, as mist before the rising sun.

Bro. McGary, I perhaps have already written more than you will want to waste your valuable time in reading. Trusting that you may do much good during your stay upon earth, and may be numbered with the final faithful in the world to come, is the desire of your humble brother,

J. C. HANCOCK.

McGREGOR, March 10, 1887.

Brethren McGary & Hansbrough:

In the issue of the FIRM FOUNDATION dated March 1, in my article headed "Progress of the Progressives," I stated that Bro. W. L. Harrison took the position that the confession was not a prerequisite to baptism, in which Bro. H. says I misrepresented him. I certainly so understood Bro. H., for it is not my desire to misrepresent any one, much less a brother. I cheerfully make this correction in justice to Bro. Harrison, and will endeavor to state, in Bro. Harrison's own words, as near as I can the position the brother takes: Bro. H. stated to me, a few days ago, that he believes and teaches that confession is a prerequisite to baptism, but does not believe nor teach it (the confession) should be embodied in any prescribed form of words; hence, if a person should rise in his audience and state that he believed with all his heart the entire teaching of the gospel, he (Bro. H.) would baptize him on such confession. Please insert this in next issue and send Bro. H. a copy. Your brother in Christ,

J. P. DIFFEY.

[We wonder if Bro. Harrison would baptize one who might rise and say: "I believe God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins?" If not, how can he consistently recognize as valid the baptism of those baptized by others on such a confession?—A. MCG.]

QUINCY, Newton Co., Ark.,

A McGary:

DEAR BROTHER:—I received a copy of your firm paper a few days ago, that was sent to Witt Spring, and I am so well pleased with it I am going to try to get a club for it. I did not know that there was a man in our ranks that had courage to publish a paper on your platform. I am an old fogy preacher in the mountains, and preach every Lord's day. Imagine you see an old man start out Lord's day, afoot, eight or ten miles, with his old Bible in hand, to preach to 50 (perhaps, if the day is fine, 300) persons, and no pay; preach his discourse, and start home to sleep close to his plow handles, and you have my picture.

We came to this county three years ago from Tennessee, and our people had not been represented here until then. There are now three working congregations here, in a circumference of thirty miles, the ancient doctrine gaining fast, and I can truly say no shaking in Baptists in our midst. This is more than I intended writing. You can do as you please with it, but enter my name on your subscription list, and I will send the money soon, as I want to canvass for the FIRM FOUNDATION, and send several names and money.

Yours in the one hope.

OBITUARIES.

W. H. D. CARRINGTON.

Bro. W. H. D. Carrington died at his home in the City of Austin, at 5 o'clock on the evening of the 24th of March, and on the evening of the 24th, was buried in the city cemetery, by an unusually large assembly of friends and acquaintances. After a memorial service at the residence of the deceased, the body was conveyed to its last resting place, and after the reading of a lesson from the word of God on death and the resurrection, it was lowered, and after the grave was filled, it was covered with wreaths of beautiful flowers as tokens of remembrance. Notwithstanding we counted six Christian preachers present the services were conducted by Dr. Wright of the Presbyterian church.

Bro. Carrington was one of our oldest Texas preachers, and an old citizen of Austin. Being a lawyer, the legal fraternity turned out in a body to pay their last tribute of respect. As we turned away homeward, we were caused to reflect seriously over the necessity of fighting the good fight of faith, that we may lay hold on eternal life.

Dear brethren let us try to be faithful unto death. J. S. D.

DEATH OF NOAH ELDRIDGE.

When God is pleased to take the aged, even when in full possession of their powers it occasions but little surprise, but when death suddenly comes on the young, full of physical health and vigor, it comes with a terrible shock to us. Such was the death we now record. Noah, up to his last illness, had ever enjoyed the best health, and seemed destined to become a talented and useful man. In his 18th year he obeyed the gospel at Bertram, Texas—he was not "ashamed to confess his Savior before men." Noah's seat was never vacant at church or Sunday school. At the time of his death he was a member of the Methodist Sunday school at Apalachicola, Fla., near which place he lived. There was no church of Christ near and no members but his father's family. Although living in a cesspool of vice, its contaminating influence, did not penetrate his pure, young life.

In disposition he was gentle, sympathetic, lovable and humble, and it seemed that all who made his acquaintance became attached to him at once. He died the 6th inst. in his 20th year. Our hearts are bowed down with grief at the sudden ending of such a useful and beautiful life, but we sorrow not as those who have no hope.

When you see a fellow mortal
Without fixed and fearless views,
Hanging on the skirts of others,
Walking in their cast off shoes;
Bowing low to wealth and favor,
With uncovered, abject head,
Ready to retract or waver,
Willing to be driven or lead;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your mortal shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow,
Just the things which his must lack.

When you see a theologian,
Hugging close some ugly creed,
Fearing to reject or question
Dogmas which his priest may read;
Holding back a noble feeling,
Choking down each manly view,
Caring more for forms and symbols
Than to know the good and true;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your mortal shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow,
Just the things which his must lack.

When you see a politician
Crawling through contracted holes,
Begging for some fat position
In the ring or at the polls,
With no sterling manhood in him,
Nothing staple, broad, or sound,
Destitute of pluck or ballast,
Double-sided all around;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your mortal shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow,
Just the things which his must lack.

A stronger word
Was never heard
In sense and tone
Than this—backbone!

A modest song, and plainly told—
The text is worth a mine of gold—
For many men most sadly lack
A noble stiffness in the back.

PERPETUITY.

Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.—Matt. xvi: 18. Of something it is said, the gates of hell shall not prevail against. Some people say it is the church against which the gates of hell shall not prevail. Will the scriptures bear this interpretation? I think not, and submit my reason for so thinking. The gates of hell is the unseen world, the place of departed spirits of men. The church might fall in consequence of apostasy, but when it became an apostate church it would not then be in the land of spirits. We can conceive of only two kinds of churches in this respect—a dead one and a living one. A dead church is not in the land of spirits; neither is a living one. The spirit world has nothing directly to do with the church, or the church with it. Then, if not the church, what is it against which the gates of hell shall not prevail? It is that upon which the church was built. Jesus Christ is the Son of God. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.—I Cor. iii: 11. When Jesus died he went to the spirit world, and for a time was a prisoner—a contest ensued. The spirit world prevailed not; Jesus himself prevailed, rising from the dead—"was declared to be the Son of God by a resurrection from the dead."—Rom. i: 4. Jesus was under the dominion of death three days, but this is no reason why any one should say that the prediction (the gates of hell shall not prevail against it) was a failure. The logic of some would force them to this conclusion, but such logic is only an excuse for not accepting the truth, and may serve as a jungle in which to hide when closely pursued.

The scripture that now remains to be examined, is Daniel's prophecy. No other use of these prophecies is made except to show that the kingdom set up in the days of "these kings shall never be destroyed." Some of our brethren have been quite busy in the adoption business. They have adopted the Baptist method of interpreting prophecy—adopted their conversion, their confession, (no confession at all), their baptism, and but one thing yet remains to be adopted, and I reckon they have not thought of that yet, and that is the Baptist hand of fellowship. They persist in shaking them over again—I suppose this ought to be called Ana-shakism.

But, to return. These groovy thinkers can conceive of nothing that will secure the perpetual existence of the stone kingdom save a succession of churches, and if it was to save their souls from perdition, they can't find the chain. They are about like a setting goose—you may take all the eggs out and throw away the trash and loose feathers that they have gathered about, and they will go back and set anyhow, because they remember that they used to set there.

Three things are necessary to the perpetuity of that kingdom, seed, and good ground, and seed sowing. If ten men who never heard of the Bible were to come in possession of it—read it, understand it and obey it, it would make them christians, and form them into the kingdom of Christ. The seed is the kingdom in germ, and as it grows in a good and honest heart it loses none of its qualities to them. The kingdom has existed in its germ development from the days of the apostles to the present. I deny that it has existed from that day in the church organization development.

Here is a chance for some one to take issue who feels like undertaking a hard job. The ancient catalogues of the books of the New Testament, together with the great collection of ancient Greek manuscripts are the overwhelming testimony we have of the perpetuity of the kingdom in its germinal state of development. If there was no church two hundred years ago baptizing believers for the remission of sins, the kingdom did not exist at that time in the church stage of development, but this fact, 'if it is a fact,' does not authorize any logical mind to say that Daniel was a false prophet.

Jesus was the foundation of the church, and he predicted that death should not prevail against him. Notwithstanding this prediction, he yielded to death, but a man who believes the Bible does not believe that death prevailed against Him. Daniel said the kingdom should never be destroyed. If the church died, the fact no more proves him to be a false prophet than the death of Jesus proves him to be a false prophet. So much for that old, stale, ignorant, Baptist method of interpretation of prophecy; but since this method needs thorough ventilation we will pursue this thought some farther. To interpret any given passage of scripture in such a way as to render some other passage utterly useless has ever been the method of sectarian teachers. "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed."—Dan. ii: 44. It is thought by many, in order to sustain the character of the prophet, that it is necessary to contend for the perpetual existence of the church from the days of the apostles to the present time, either in its organized or its unorganized condition, but while attempting to help the prophet at one point they cripple him at another. "He shall speak great words against the most High, and shall wear out the saints of the most High, * * * they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of times."—Dan. vii: 25. If the church has always existed from the days of the apostles till now in an organized or unorganized condition it is not true that the saints were worn out. This church succession theory was doubtless brought into existence to support "Official Grace," and ought to have died at the close of the dark ages. When these church succession theorists attempt to interpret "Shall wear out the saints," their interpretation is not an interpretation at all, but a contradiction of that which they profess to interpret. The persecutors attempted to destroy the kingdom: they succeeded in part, and in part they did not succeed. They attacked this holy citadel at three points: 1. Killed all the christians. 2. They offered worldly ease and aggrandizement to destroy honesty of heart from the face of the earth. 3. They attempted to burn up the word of God that was scattered over the world on parchments. They succeeded in gaining the first point. They did wear out the saints as the prophet said they would. This point was of minor importance relative to the object they had in view. They did not succeed in destroying honest hearts from the earth. They did not succeed in destroying the word of God. Since the days of the apostles the word of God has ever been sown broadcast over the world, and since their day there has ever been resident upon the face of the earth many men having good and honest hearts.

Thus we find the seed and the soil resident together all along the line. The kingdom in its germ state of development is deposited in the soil in which Jesus said it would grow. In this state of development the kingdom has been perpetual in its existence, and it has not been perpetual in any other.

Who will say that it has, and go to work to find the proof?

 te to Bro. W. J. Jones, the same proposition, erwards learned that ad always acted con-onvictions in shaking them in. I also heard he said before he was employed by the society, that if the society did not employ him he would go to the FIRM FOUNDATION. If that be true I am led to believe that when the society withdraws its aid from him he will again act contrary to his convictions in shaking them in. Then it is not reasonable to suppose that a man in that frame of mind would like to discuss the subject at issue.

Then as I have waited in vain for them to produce a man who would affirm their practice of shaking them in from the sects as being scriptural, and they have failed to do it, I today, in view of the one way that leads to life eternal; in view of that great day when we shall stand before God; in view of the many souls who are seeking after the right way, but have been led astray by these teachings; in view of the great responsibility that rests upon me to proclaim the truth, I submit to all lovers of truth the following conclusions, hoping you will consider them well, and act as truth demands:

1. The teaching of the F. F. on the baptism question is right or wrong.

2. It is the teaching of the Bible to obey from the heart or understanding, that form of doctrine; it is not called in question by any of our brethren that a man does wrong when he is baptized understanding baptism is for the remission of sins; they claim it is not necessary to understand.

3. That if it is right to obey understandingly, then those only who are thus baptized then can be saved.

4. If it is not necessary, as many claim, to understand baptism is for the remission of sins, yet, if a man, according to this argument, does not commit a sin by understanding baptism is for the remission of sins, it is better to so understand it, and be on the safe side, and make it as sure as he can. And as many of us can not accept their teaching that it is unnecessary to understand, let us write some thirty or forty letters on the following proposition:

Baptism, as taught by the denominations of our time, is unscriptural, unauthorized by the word of God, and we can not consistently receive such into fellowship with us upon their unscriptural baptism by giving them a shake of the hand, without compromising the truth and violating God's law, which tells us to do all things by His authority.
 Also, I further suggest that some, or all of these letters, be published through the F. F., and that next January a committee receive them and select from them twelve letters setting forth the Bible teaching upon this subject; and these letters be published in pamphlet form worth ten cents each, and that 5000 be published for distribution, that the people may be educated upon this subject. Also, that all who are willing to have the pamphlet write to Bro. McGary how much they will pay by first of January next, to get the tract out. I am willing to pay $25.00, and I can almost hear Bro.

 Hansbrough say put him down
 $50.00, Bro. McGary $50.00, and when I think of Brothers Wurts, Carter,
 Millard, Hamblen, Jackson, Grubbs,
 Stone, McCarty, Vaughn, Strode, and many others who will give $25.00, besides many who will give less, and perhaps some, more, I know we'll have no trouble in raising money to publish the pamphlet.

The only question is, has the time come for such? If so, let us hear from all interested. What say you, brethren?

Truly yours for the one way,
 J. D. TANT.

SEVERAL THINGS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Having made arrangements so that I was not compelled to remain at one place all the time, I started on March 18, (with only enough money to take me to my first appointment) to spend my time in preaching the good news of salvation to a dying world.

I am backed by the promise of no man, but by the promise of God—
 "all things work together for good to them that love God;" fully intending to present the truth to the people to the very best of my ability, just so long as I am supported; and when the support is cut off, stop and go to work with my hands till I shall be able to resume my preaching.

If every preacher of the gospel would go to work, putting his trust in God, and not in missionary societies, inaugurated without divine authority, by man, what a vast amount of good they could do! and how much time, talent, ink and paper would be saved. But I must not in-dulse in the expression of all the thoughts that present themselves here.

I have now been out a little over two weeks, and I have not been able to work half the time on account of sickness, but hope to be able to go to work again to-morrow night. I am now in Randolph county, Ark.

"Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers" (II Cor. vi: 14) is a command that is ignored by too many professed christians. When we quote this to our brethren who are yoked together with unbelievers by an oath in some ungodly secret organization, they reply, "it don't mean that."

When we quote it to those who are about to be yoked together with an unbeliever in marriage, they say,
 "it don't mean that." Then, I ask, in the name of reason, what does it mean?

If a solemn oath, (which, by the way, is positively forbidden), binding you under certain obligations, with unbelievers, does not constitute a yoking together with them,
 I am at a loss to know what would?
 And again, if marriage, which brings persons into such close relationship as to make one flesh, would not constitute a yoking together, methinks there is nothing that would. The fact is, each of them is a yoking together, and both are therefore forbidden, and should not be tolerated by Christians.

Sometimes preachers who object to Christians marrying sinners, are called upon to solemnize the rites of matrimony between two such parties, and notwithstanding we are admonished to not be partakers of the sins of others, he will, for the sake of popularity, or for want of sufficient courage to refuse, or for the sake of the two or three dollars he hopes to receive, or probably all of these put together, ignore the admonition, and will, by complying with the request, assist a brother or sister to disobey a command of God!
 What will be his reward? Would to God our preachers were more conscientious!

"Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John to be baptized by him.—Matt. iii: 13. "And the eunuch said: "See, here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?"—Acts viii: 36. Our brethren claim to take the Bible as their only rule of faith and practice. That is certainly right, but I insist that they should practice what they preach.

It is a custom among us to walk out in front of the stand after a discourse, and say, "If there is one here who wishes to obey the gospel, let him make it known by giving us his hand, while the brethren are singing." Then comes the song, the louder the better: then the preacher, with all the force he possesses, pictures the horrors of hell, the beauty and fellicity of heaven, telling them of the shortness of life, the certainty of death: he continues in this way till in many instances the minds of many in the congregation are excited to the highest pitch. Then they are under the control of the preacher, and he says "come," and they do come. They are immersed, their excitement wears off, they lose all interest in religion, and their last state is worse than the first, and christianity is charged with being a failure. What is the matter? Simply this: Every time you ask a sinner to give you his hand in token of his determination to obey the gospel, you act without divine authority. When Christ wanted to be baptized he went to the administrator and demanded it of him.
 When the eunuch wanted to be baptized he said to Phillip: "See, here is water, what hinders me to be baptized?" Are not these examples given us for a purpose? Phillip didn't have to beg the eunuch to obey the gospel, so far as the record shows; neither did he have to scare him half to death; but his heart was purified by faith, and he wanted to be baptized. When Peter preached on Pentecost there was no begging, so far as we know, but they that gladly received his words were baptized.
 When they believed Peter's preaching they were baptized. The "gospel is the power of God unto salvation," and when an individual be-

He loves the gospel with all his heart, he will need no begging to get him to obey it.

If you have to beg a person in order to get him to be baptized, you will have to beg him to get him to do his duty after he is baptized. If you must excite a person to get him to obey the form of doctrine, you will have to keep him excited in order for him to do any good—and then he won't. Preach the gospel in a plain, simple manner, pointing out the way of life, holding up to the world the promises of the gospel, and threatenings of the Bible to the disobedient, asking the people to accept Christ, and live for heaven. And I am sure all whose hearts are purified will make known their desire to obey the gospel without us doing what the Bible does not authorize—ask sinners to give us their hand in token of their determination to obey. Let us practice what we preach.

Bro. McG., some time ago I wrote a short article for the F. F. on the subject of the "Holy Kiss." I have waited patiently for its appearance, but have not seen it. I suppose you thought other matter with which you fill your paper was of more importance, and probably you were right, but I insist that we must either obey the command to "Greet one another with a holy kiss," or give a lawful reason for not doing so.

It will not do to say that it was a custom in the days of the apostles to greet each other with a kiss, but since then the custom has changed to shaking hands, unless it can be shown from the Bible that we have a right to change customs.

Will you publish this and tell your readers what you think about the matter?

I remain your brother in Christ,
J. G. CONNER.

We heartily endorse Bro. Conner's "Several Things," except that portion which seems to convey the idea that the heart is purified before baptism. This is a mistake that is very frequently made, and that too, by some of our ablest men. We are told that Bro. Campbell held this view. But we must say that it is a mistake nevertheless, even at the risk of being regarded sacrilegious for dissenting from the father of this reformation. I know Peter said of the conversion of Cornelius and household: "God put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith." But this was not by faith in the sense of "faith only," but by the faith—the "obedience of faith."—Rom. 1: 5. If it were by faith in any other sense it would be by faith that precedes repentance, and we would have impenitent hearts, purified. If this were true, then the chief rulers who believed on Christ, but would not confess Him for fear of being put out of the synagogue, had pure hearts. The Lord said, "blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." According to this doctrine then, of purification before baptism, "faith alone is a wholesome doctrine, and full of comfort." But, brethren, one and all, it is a woeful mistake, like many other crotchets of "our plea," and we should speedily rid ourselves of all such. Now, this same Peter who said God purified the hearts of these people by faith, said afterwards in his epistle: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth, through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently."—I Pet. 1: 22-23. These persons had been born again. Then they had purified their souls by "the obedience of faith."

We have had Bro. Conner's article on the "Holy Kiss," for quite a while. We have, from the first, intended publishing it, but have been supplied with other matter that we deemed more important just now. If we know our own heart, we fear no question. If the "Holy Kiss" is a duty that devolves upon us, we are willing to learn it. So Bro. Conner may rest assured that his thoughts on this matter will be given to our readers, but we can't promise it immediate publication. We like to read and publish the thoughts of brethren who seem as earnest and self-sacrificing in the interest of truth as he does. So he may now know that we will welcome him to our columns as a regular contributor. We hope the brethren in his section will encourage him in the course he has started out upon. God's blessing will be with those who proclaim a pure gospel to the world, independent of the money making schemes that all missionary societies are moved by. For He has promised that "all things shall work together for good to them that love Him." It is all fixed, and all a man has to do to reap the blessing, is to "go and preach the gospel"—not a doctrine or "plea" of uninspired men—but "the gospel," "the word of truth"—"the faith once delivered to the saints." There are honest hearts enough anywhere to sustain the man who will do this. The power is in the seed, the truth, to cause the honest soil in which it falls to yield a living to him that sows it. No danger of the ox that treadeth out the corn being muzzled where such a man goes. But if he wants to be a fop, dressing contrary to God's teaching, God has not put power in His gospel to gratify this "pride of life or lust of the eye." If he wants to lay up money "for a rainy day," God has not put power in it for that. These things, and all that are contrary to christian principle are not blessings, but cursings. God promised that all things would work together for good to them that love Him, (not for bad. Often the things which we take as bad, are good in disguise. Treasure laid up on earth is bad for us; its rust will eat as a canker.

A CASE.

Take this case, Bro. McGary: An evangelist in the church of Christ preached a sermon in which he showed clearly that faith, repentance, confession and baptism are conditions of forgiveness, and that he who has complied with all of them has both believed and obeyed the gospel, has become a member of the body of Christ, and a Christian. At the close of the discourse, along with two or three others, came one from the Baptist church. After the preacher had heard the others make the good confession, he turned to the one from the Baptist church and said, "Now I will hear from you." The brother from the Baptists then arose and spoke as follows: "Sir, I believe every word in your discourse. I am convinced that you people hold the truth; that you are on apostolic ground; that you have, as you claim, returned to the ancient order of things. I come desiring to identify myself with you, because I believe it to be my duty. I am sure I now see the truth, and, looking back at the obedience I rendered, I am satisfied with my baptism; in fact, if I were to go and be baptized this evening I do not believe that I could beat what I did before. I want to drop the name Baptist, and every unscriptural thing held by that people, and live with you." He was received. Bro. McGary, what objections have you to this case? I have not given you this case in order to puzzle you; or simply to give you a job, but because I want to know how you dispose of it.

J. R. JONES.

NASHVILLE, ARK.

We take great pleasure in publishing the above: (1) because it gives a chance to show the real issue involved in the baptismal controversy, and (2) because we have confidence in the man who propounds it. We met Bro. Jones once, and have read with interest much that he has written for the Messenger—especially his articles on the parables of Jesus. However much he may differ from us on this question, we love him and regard him a sincere man and teacher. But to the question: We will suppose a case first and submit it: Suppose when the twelve at Ephesus, who had been baptized "unto John's baptism," heard Paul preach, they had said: "Sir, we believe every word you preached in your discourse. We are convinced that you people hold the truth. We come desiring to identify ourselves with you, because we believe it to be our duty. We are sure we now see the truth, and, looking back at the obedience we rendered, we are satisfied with our baptism; in fact, if we were to go and be baptized this evening, we do not believe that we could beat what we did before."

Now, who believes Paul would have received them? Let no one suppose that because in the case of the twelve we do not find the same irregularities that are to be found in sectarian converts of to-day, that, therefore the cases are not parallel in principle. These twelve were certainly baptized to honor God.

But we would say to any man who did not think he could "beat" a baptism preceded by sectarian teaching, that he had better not be baptized; for if he did he would not in fact beat it. As to what "objection" we have to this case Bro. Jones has presented, we regard that man no nearer the kingdom than before he heard the brother preach, and no nearer than a perverted gospel could bring him. There is a standard for baptism given in the Scriptures. We would judge this man's baptism as others, by that standard. If it comes up to it, it ought to be accepted; if not, it should be rejected.

If, when he was baptized, he went to the ordinance with the law of Christ, in reference to the ordinance written in his heart, and the Law-giver confessed with his mouth, so he could truly "draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having his heart sprinkled from an evil conscience, and his body washed with pure water," his baptism was authorized by Christ. But, if his conscience had been rocked to sleep by some false teacher who taught instantaneous and direct regeneration, so that he went to the ordinance with an easy conscience, believing that his heart had already been "sprinkled from an evil conscience" by a direct stroke of grace, he might as well have been buried in sand, or slipped off of a log and dropped in a creek, as to have gone through with the farce he did. From whence comes our right to judge one way or another, except we judge by the divine rule? Suppose a sprinkled man should rise and say: "Sir, I believe every word you preached in your discourse. I am convinced that you people hold the truth; that you are on apostolic ground; that you have, as you claim, returned to the ancient order of things. I come desiring to identify myself with you, because I believe it is my duty. I am sure I now see the truth, and, looking back at the obedience I rendered I am satisfied with my baptism; in fact, if I were to go and be baptized this evening, I do not believe that I could beat what I did before. I want to drop this name Methodist, and every unscriptural thing held by that people and live with you." If we have the right to pronounce his baptism (?) invalid, we have the same right to pronounce the other man's so. We have no right to decide upon either case except as we do so in the light of truth. When they are both brought under its searching beams neither is valid. We judge no man.

Had Christ expressed his will in regard to missionary societies, either for or against, they would then have belonged to the items of the faith, like the organization of churches, and we would have been tied down to his direction. But since he has said nothing, they do not belong to that class of things, do not fall within the purview of such law.—Guide.

Had Christ expressed his will in regard to the Methodist conferences, either for or against them, they would then have belonged to the items of the faith, like the organization of churches, and we would have been tied down to his direction. But since he has said nothing, they do not belong to that class of things, do not fall within the purview of that law! and we have a Methodist conference, or may not have one, as we choose! Now, don't any of you old fogies call this an advance toward the great iron wheel, and don't you say this is not good Christian logic!!!

[Christian Messenger.

Had Christ expressed his will in regard to the immersion of the untaught, either for or against it, it would have belonged to the items of the faith, like the organization of churches, and we would have been tied down to this direction. But since he has said nothing about it, it may be done or not, and after it is done we may, or may not recognize it as of divine sanction. So "our plea" has decided to exercise its liberty in this matter, and recognizes it, and issues its edict that all who will not, shall be called "hobblers," "heretics," etc.

CATLIN, IND., April 1, 1887.

Dear Bro's. McGary & Hansbrough:

Still the war goes on. In the Leader of this week a pretended brother by the name of E. T. Stevens has a long article on re-immersion. He says his was a Baptist conversion and a genuine Baptist immersion, and boasts that he has held high positions in the church for many years. Then he declares that we and the Baptists are just the same. Thus through our own papers are we constantly being given away. Then, in the "Octographic Review" comes one J. K. Speer, the man who, some years ago, climbed up the theological tree and fell out. He now tells of another fall he has had. He says that he was re-immersed, and that he re-immersed quite a number of others; but it has been the experience of all, so far as he can learn, that no relief came from their re-immersion. In the name of common sense, what relief did they expect? He, and those of whom he speaks, must have been ignorant sectarians, and must have expected to experience some ecstatic feeling on being immersed. What other relief could they have looked for? Then, he says: "If one is to know all about baptism, and the benefits to be derived from it before immersion, then it will be as well to defer it until the death bed, so as to learn nothing new about it after observing the institution? Is not that a grand idea? It sounds just like the man was yet up that theological tree. Who has said, one must understand all about the consequences of baptism? They continue to harp on that while it is their own statement, and not ours. The truth is, God has promised remission of sins upon certain conditions. If salvation is unconditional, one of two things must be true. Either God will save all men, or else he will save a certain elected number. He will do just to suit Himself, without consulting man at all. If this be true, then there was no use in giving man any revelation of His will. And if He had, it would have been to let man know that He intended to save him unconditionally. But God has not made any such revelation; but has revealed that salvation is conditional, and therefore must of necessity state the conditions. What, then, are the conditions? The first is faith. "Without faith it is impossible to please Him."—Heb. xi: 6. "Many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of His disciples, which are not written in this book; but these are written, that you might believe that Jesus is the anointed Son of God; and believing, you might have life through His name."—John xx: 30-31. He that believeth not the Son, shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him."—John iii: 36. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."—Mark xvi: 16. "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" "And they said, believe on the Lord Jesus Christ,"—Acts xvi: 30-31. Who can misunderstand the design of faith? Who will say that it is not necessary to know the design of faith? How can one fail to know the design? All surely know that God requires faith, for that which is not of faith, is sin. Repentance is also a condition of salvation. Jesus says, "Except you repent you shall all perish."—Luke xviii: 3-5. He also told the apostles to preach repentance.—Luke xxiv: 47. Peter said, "Repent."—Acts xi: 38. Is there anyone who does not know the design of repentance? In preaching the gospel they were distinctly told to preach repentance. What did the apostles understand that they were to preach the gospel for? For fun, or for the salvation of the people? They evidently understood that it was for the salvation of the people; and the people understood the same.

Confession is another condition. Paul says, "The word is nigh thee; even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith which we preach." What is the word of faith which they preached? Let Paul answer: "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and believe with thy heart that God raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." "For with the heart man believes unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto (in order to) salvation."—Rom. x: 8-9-10.

Other passages might be quoted; but we deem it unnecessary. Paul here declares that they preached this as a part of the word of faith, and all the denials of our opposers can never alter it, nor induce any intelligent, honest Bible student to disbelieve it. It is there, immutable. Baptism is another condition of salvation, as clearly stated, and defined as well as any other. Jesus said, "go into all the world and preach the gospel to all." "Go teach the people and baptize them." Baptize who? The taught. Is any one ignorant enough to believe that the people would have submitted to baptism without a purpose? How would they have induced the people, men and women, to have gone into the water to be buried in baptism without assigning any reason for it? There is nobody ignorant enough to believe any such nonsense. Christians do not believe so now. When the Samaritans believed Phillip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women."—Acts viii: 12. Phillip is not said to be preaching the three facts only. He was preaching the things (in the plural) concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ.

With what is the name of Jesus connected but with baptism? What caused the Ethiopian officer to say, "See, here is water, what hinders me to be baptized?" Evidently he had been instructed that he must be baptized in order to be saved. All these wiseacres who are now tumeling so much about re-immersion used to know this. Hundreds of sectarians have been met and vanquished on these and similar questions, but now the fight is with those who ought to, if they do not, know better. These same men, at the beginning of this controversy, were wonderful advocates for "our plea;" but of late they have abandoned "our plea." They have given up the good confession and the design of baptism. Next, I expect them to begin to declare that no one need know the design of repentance or faith. Already they cannot tell why one should know the design of faith, and not know the design of baptism. How it is possible for any intelligent person to believe that God would make salvation conditional, and yet not state the conditions, I cannot imagine. Or how it would be possible for him to state the conditions and conceal the design. If I should say to a bootmaker, if you will make a pair of boots I will give you five dollars, would not the design be to get a pair of boots, and the condition the payment of five dollars? God says, "if you will believe the gospel, repent, confess Christ and be baptized I will pardon your sins. Is not remission of sins the design, and these four items the conditions?

Now, I ask, how can the promise be received, or believed, without knowing the design following the conditions? It is impossible. No one can possibly confide in Christ's promise of remission of sins without knowing the conditions.

I now ask any one of those on the other side to tell us how anyone can confide in Christ's promise of pardon without knowing the conditions on which that promise is made? This they will never try to do. This they must do, however, or they are forever silenced. Come up, gentlemen, and answer, or you are forever beaten. There is an immeasurable difference between confiding in the promises of Christ for salvation, and the promises of uninspired men. How is it possible for anyone to believe that Jesus will accept those who will not confide in His promises for salvation, but will do something else, confiding in the promises of men? Will Christ abandon His own appointments and accept those of men? It is impossible that He can, for if He should, then He makes himself a liar. He has said His words shall not pass away; and if He now abandons the plan of salvation which He has revealed, His word has failed. He never promised to forgive anyone's sins at a mourners-bench in answer to prayer; and when men pray for Him to do so, if it were possible for Him to do so, and He should, that moment His revealed truth in the plan of salvation would be forfeited; he would cease to be Christ; the whole scheme of redemption would be destroyed, and irreparable ruin would be wrought throughout God's universe. But then our sectarian apologists say, ah, it is all right for men to pray to Christ to abandon His own revelation. When they thus blaspheme, and get others to do so, and delude them, if they will dip them in the water, they are all right.

Will any one of them meet me before the people and investigate this subject? If any one will, let him speak out.

Insert this when you have nothing better.

God bless you all.

I. C. STONE.

BROTHERLY LOVE.

APRIL 2, 1887.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I would like to say a few words in my feeble way, in reference to members of the church of Christ calling each other "brother" and "sister."

You all know, who read the word of the Lord, how often Christ and the apostles bid us love one-another. Unless we do love one-another fervently, with a pure heart, we do not obey our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ.

When I see Christians meet and call each other "Mr." and "Mrs.," and don't seem to think any more of each other than if they did not pretend to be members of the church of Christ, I think there is but little brotherly love there.

We are told to come out from the world, and be a peculiar people. Worldlings address each other as "Mr." and "Mrs.," we should say

"sister" and "brother," as did the primitive Christians. If we all would practice it we would love each other more. I speak from experience. I have been called sister but few times since I came to this neighborhood, still, I feel it my duty to thus address them all. I asked a sister if they all did that way? She said they did, except the preacher, who sometimes said brother and sister.

I must acknowledge I would love them more, and feel better and more at ease with them, if they were not so distant, careless, or selfish, which of the three I can't tell.

I believe we ought to treat every member of the church of Christ as we would our family, the older as father and mother, the younger as brothers and sisters. It would then be so much easier for us to obey that great commandment, "love your neighbor as yourself."

Use this if you think it will do any good; if not, lay it aside. We want the best; that which is calculated to do most good. M. A. N.

We heartily endorse every word of Sister M. A. N.'s letter. "We know we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." Therefore, if we have passed from death unto life, we will be willing to claim kinship with each and every member of God's household. If we are ashamed to confess our Christian relationship, then we are ashamed to confess our Savior, for He said, "In as much as ye have done it unto the least of them, my brethren, ye have done it unto me," and he that is ashamed to confess me before men, him will I be ashamed to confess before my Father which is in heaven." I know it is not stylish so to do, the custom having become almost obsolete among our city brethren, the objection being raised that it sounds "common," (vulgar). Well, perhaps so; but we read in the record of our Savior, that the common people heard Him gladly, and we are encouraged.

Many thanks to sister M. E. Mc. for her cheering words to us, and beg for more. She speaks of her unworthiness, which causes us to think of our own most forbly. I hope my dear sisters do not suppose for an instant that we consider ourself up to the divine standard which we hold up. As we have before said, were we to have waited till we were free from sin, we would never have touched pen to paper. We never write a letter that does not condemn us on some point, still we try never to write with a beam in our eye. But should a sense of unworthiness deter us from writing altogether? We think not. It only serves to make us appreciate more keenly the trials and failures of others. But this we do: "Forgetting the things that are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, we press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Now, a word of explanation to Sisters Elston and Vienna. In our last letter we stated that there were no recruits for the sisters department, but what was my surprise and pleasure upon opening the paper to find their earnest and most excellent letters. We suppose they came too late to be submitted to us for inspection, so, rather than deprive the readers of the immediate enjoyment of them, the editors decided to correct them themselves. Write oftener dear sisters. Your efforts are highly appreciated.

In our last, the printer made us say that Sister Huston's letter on Tobacco was not without "points," which should have been "fruits." As all the sisters know, it was bristling with sharp points, which so pricked the brethren as to make some of them give up the habit, which was the "fruits" we meant. Let us here whisper, with deep regret, that we have not heard of one sister quitting snuff. Shame! shame! Dear sisters, "we are persuaded better things of you," things that accompany salvation. Let us not be disappointed in you.

PURITY, RATHER THAN POPULARITY.

Editors Firm Foundation:

BRETHREN:—For many years (even before I made any profession of the Christian religion) I was strongly impressed with the idea that if the congregations claiming to be the true followers of Christ are negligent of one duty more than another, that duty is the putting forth of proper efforts to keep themselves, as congregations, "unspotted from the world." It is to be hoped that none will conclude I am advocating the up-building of congregations "without spot and blameless," but that all who read may be willing to "come and reason together."

One need not only search the scriptures, read papers published in the interests of the Christian religion, to become thoroughly convinced of the vast indifference upon the part of congregations concerning this matter; but by merely looking around home almost any of us can at once see the truth of the above statement. With this prominent fact staring us in the face, it becomes one of the duties of every true Christian to first ascertain the proper way, then labor earnestly and faithfully to accomplish the desired object. I am thoroughly convinced that in this part of Texas there is vast room for improvement among the congregations, to say nothing of the sects and non-professors; and after reading the F. F. and other papers, I am equally convinced that we do not stand alone in spiritual wants. One of the most popular pleas with the sectarian world, also with the outside of today is, that we, who claim the name of Christians only, permit persons to remain as members of the church with little or no regard to their daily walks in life. As to the grounds for, and the correctness of such pleas, I will only refer to the conscience of every professed follower of Christ who may read this article.

But where is the remedy for this already great and growing evil?

By what means can the desired and very much needed effect be brought about, that will not only result in a lasting benefit to the church for all time, but one that may be felt throughout eternity?

To my mind, one, and the first, remedy that should be applied to bring about the desired effect, will be for every congregation to adopt for their rule of faith and practice, Purity, rather than popularity. If I were a sectarian, or if these lines were intended for a sectarian paper, the foregoing idea would not have been presented for fear of having written something only for the waste-basket. But since I am convinced that the F. F. is published in the interest of true Christianity, I present this subject, trusting that some one of your editorial staff or correspondents may assist in fully presenting it to the minds of your readers. Evidently one move in the proper direction will be for each congregation to rid itself of every member who is a member only in name; or, in other words, those who have their names enrolled on the church book, but spend their time in the service of Satan. It is useless to personify, yet we can call to memory with very little effort, a goodly number who have been recognized as members of the Christian church for years, yet not one of them is ever seen in the meeting house; not even on extra occasions.

Some who read the foregoing will be ready to exclaim: "Oh! it will never do to drop the name of Mr. A. from our list, as he is our main dependence financially; or Mr. B., on account of his family;" or Mr. somebody else, for some equally frivolous reason. Well, sectarians, by the same rule, retain their vast number, and by so doing, have proven to every reflecting mind that they prefer popularity rather than purity.

If wrong in the foregoing conclusion, I stand ready and willing to be corrected.

Many, doubtless will be ready to say, "judge not, that ye be not judged," "physician heal thyself;" or, that congregations, by attempting to rid themselves of unruly, negligent members, are liable to have too small a membership to constitute a congregation.

All who meditate on the foregoing quotations, will do well to also examine the following places in the New Testament: I. Tim. vi: 3-5; 2 Tim. iii: 2-6; 1 Peter iii: 8; iv: 14-17, v: 2-8; 2 Peter ix: 6-11; 1 John iii: 13, 14; 2 John, 9-11. If the foregoing references are not sufficient, the general epistle of Jude may be read with profit to the inquiring mind.

While if any congregation claiming the name of Christian only, is not in possession of genuine material sufficient to prove itself worthy that name, the disorganization of such a one will certainly prove of no disadvantage to the Master's cause, neither can it, in any conceivable way, prove injurious, spiritually to any one.

Some members approve the use of the organ in conducting church services, that the attention of others may be attracted; or, in a word, they are seeking popularity. Do not even the sects the same?

Others cry out that "some publishers," also ministers of the Christian church, "are a little too strict," simply because said publishers and ministers present the gospel in its original purity only. I have heard the very same cry from the sectarian world, from the earliest dawn of my remembrance, until the same has become an ear-sore to me, as much so as chronic complaint among those who utter it.

The foregoing has been written merely as an introduction to what I believe to be one of the all important subjects in which the true Christian world in this, the nineteenth century, should be most earnestly interested; also one in which every true disciple should earnestly endeavor to bring about the much needed reformation, taking for their watchwords: "Purity, even as God's Word is pure."

Dear Sister Sarai:

I have missed your letter so much in the last few numbers of the F. F., and was so glad to hear from you again. I do not want you to quit writing any more, for I know the sisters love to read your good, true letters.

I have often thought I would try to write a few lines for the F. F., but have not had sufficient courage to make the start. I feel so weak, and fall so short of my duty to my blessed Master, that I hardly know how to admonish others to do right.

We are all, here at this place, a set of drones in the hive, for none of the brethren will take hold of the work. We do not meet, as is our duty, on the first day of the week. The sisters are not doing their duty either, for they are nearly all members of the Alliance, and also some of the brethren, and you can't make them believe but that they are engaged in a good work. But the Bible furnishes us unto all good works, and we fail to find anything that justifies their being members of the Alliance. "Come out from among them, be ye separate, saith the Lord," and I, for one, did come out, for I have not met with them since I professed the faith and obeyed the gospel, and do not expect to again.

My dear sister, write on, and admonish the sisterhood, for they need to be. Oh! how true your letter in regard to our conversation when we meet to partake of the emblems of our dear Lord's body!

Oh! may God help us to overcome the sins of this life, that we all may commence a new and purer life; one that will lead to a glorious life beyond this vale of tears!

Dear Bro. McGary, I would say to you, fight on, and you will receive your reward. Contend for the faith delivered to the saints, oppose all false ways, if you receive naught but persecution here. Think of the one who died for us, and of His chosen apostles; how they suffered, and thank God that you are counted worthy to suffer shame for His dear name.

I hope you may live long to work for our Master, and you will hear a welcome "Well done good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

Your sister in Christ,

M. E. MC.

FLORENCE, WILLIAMSON CO., TEXAS,

In the FIRM FOUNDATION of the 15th we see your special offer. We send you inclosed in a letter at our own risk, because it is so far to an order office, one yearly subscriber to the F. F., and $1.00. Please send me Ladies Home Companion. Send the F. F. to Amanda H. Caskey, Florence, Williamson county, Texas, and the Companion to S. W. Caskey, same address. I tried to get some more names, but failed, not because they did not like the paper, for 'tis the soundest paper published, admitted by almost all, but because they haven't got the money. In the future we expect to send in names as fast as we get them. Times are so pressing now it's very hard to raise money for anything.

We are in hopes the F. F. may spread through this country and arouse the so-called people of God to see where they stand. It's true we all have the Bible, and we think it speaks very plain on what it takes to make men Christians, but after they are made Christians where do we place them? Under the care of the elders? One says yes, that is the place for them to be fed on the milk of the word. We believe there's where they were once placed, but where do they go now? Turned loose in the broad field. What do they feed on? The cream of the world. Now, instead of the elders of the church feeding the flock, they turn them loose.

Bro. McGary, what the so-called church needs to-day, is more religion; more of the Spirit of our Master. There are churches all over the country that try to keep house for the Lord, but it's a cold, formal sort of worship. Go to church, sit down; some of the sisters will say, why don't you sing some? After awhile some one starts out on something, and you will see some of the sisters, old and young, go to laughing and talking. Is this religion—is it any part of the worship? No, indeed it is not.

What about the elder, then? Well, he comes in with his lip dropped down, and the wrinkles on his forehead, and some brother says, isn't it about time for service? Yes, says another. Another says, Bro. A. won't you officiate to-day. It's not my appointment; when I preach I want to know it so I can prepare something. Is this the Bible elder? No. Where is the elder now days, Bro. McGary, that has the qualifications of an elder? To my opinion, Bro. McGary, the so-called church of Christ to-day is a cold, formal service, and in the formal act Christ is injured more in the house of His friends than in the house of his enemies. And then, to cap it all, the church hires a preacher at some set price to come once a month and indoctrinate the church, instead of sending out the gospel where some good could be accomplished, they keep it in all the time. This is not according to the old pattern. If all this money was taken and distributed among the needy of our land, it would be the best preaching that the church could do, and the deacons should see more about the needy than they do. You remember in the Bible where the needy were neglected. What did the apostles do? They chose seven men to attend to this matter, but now it takes all the money to pay the pastor.

Bro. McGary, I believe the religious papers ought to write more on the importance of these things. It seems that people's minds are better reached through the medium of papers than through the reading of the Bible.

Is this kind of a church in the favor of God? If so, are the Baptists?

If God, in the end, saves such a church as this, may not I get up a church and be saved? If Christ has a church, where is it? Now, we know we can take the Bible and find a church, and but one church, but where is it now? Is it in existence, and will God save such a people as this? If he does, where is the justice of our God? None at all. I do hope that the firmness of the F. F., and its continued drinking into the spirit of inspiration may cause the church to see where they stand, and impress upon them the importance of doing more for religion, and not pay so much for pastors. These things have bothered me a great deal.

We hope to send you some more names soon.

Yours very respectfully,

S. W. CASKEY.

Some Questions of Profound Importance Asked by Bro. T. W. Brents, in Gospel Plan of Salvation, Pages 259 and 260.

If the belief of the fact that Jesus is the Son of God is the faith that overcomes the world, will believing that he is the very and Eternal God do the same thing?

If this is what must be confessed with the mouth unto salvation, after faith and before baptism, and it is not made, will we get the salvation unto which it should have been made?

If Timothy made this good confession for eternal life, may we dispense with it, and still get the eternal life for which he made it?

If God has determined that every tongue shall confess that Jesus is Lord to the glory of God the Father, and we fail to make it unto our salvation, will we have, to make it in the final day to our eternal condemnation?

If Jesus has promised to confess before his Father such as confess him before men, will he still confess us if we fail to confess him?

If God dwells in those who confess that Jesus is the Son of God, will he also dwell in those who do not confess this fact? Does not the language imply that He dwells only in such as make this confession?

If this is what has to be confessed, will it be safe to substitute a narrative of our dreams, feelings, and imaginations, in the shape of an experience instead of the confession required by the law of the Lord?

And if these dreams, feelings and imaginations constitute all the confession made prior to baptism, when do the parties confess that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, or that Jesus is Lord to the glory of God the Father to their own salvation and for eternal life, and which secures the dwelling of God in those who make it?

Now, you who cry out hobby, extremists, etc., etc., put on your studying caps, and answer each of those questions, please.

Bros. McGary and Hansbrough:

In the midst of the confusion of the present one is better prepared to see the necessity of understanding the design of their obedience to the divine behests of our King—to know whether or not they are to be made children of the "Most High," or sectarians. In Matthew (xxii: 29) Jesus says to the Sadducees: "Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God." And this may be given with equal propriety to-day, for so much error in our land, not knowing the scripture. I am satisfied that if people were better acquainted with the word of God there would be fewer sectarians in the world to-day than there are. When Phillip first accosted the eunuch, he said: "Understandest thou what thou readest?—quite different from preachers of the present day. They say: 'It don't matter whether you understand or not.' No matter if the Bible does say: 'For all shall know me—(Hebrews viii: 11)'. But, continue they, 'they are in bondage, and we invite them out.' This is very good, but do you refer them to the law? James says something about a law of liberty—liberates people from bondage, and I am quite sure that if they had understood the plan of salvation they never would have gone into the so-called bondage. Paul says: 'Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved. For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.'—Romans xi: 1-2; What is the result of their ignorance? Read third verse, which says: For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God. Their establishing their own righteousness is clearly the result of ignorance—and finds its counterpart in the teachings of Bob Ingersoll; and yet, after all their zeal, Paul was praying that they might be saved. We have thousands to-day who are zealous, but it is not according to knowledge. Certainly if the Israelites could not get in on account of their ignorance, the result of which was to do something else than what was commanded, we can see no hope for the unfortunate ones of to-day. Well, what is to become of them? Well, if they are truly ignorant, and have no means of ascertaining the true way, they are to be pitied; but if they have preferred the council of blind guides instead of following the "Heaven given council," they deserve all that will be sent upon them.

The Bible says, faith comes by hearing the word of God. Not so, say friends, parents, and blind guides. We are saved before we come into confession! The Bible says, there is one body—the church. Friends, parents, and blind guides say, we are glad that there are so many. And further say the blind guides, "children are totally depraved." Jesus says, except you become as such you cannot enter into the "kingdom of heaven." This is the first time I ever heard that one had to be totally depraved to enter heaven! No wonder the Savior said, "woe" unto scribes, etc. This surely is the result of ignorance. The Savior says, Matt. xiii: 19, When any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and "understandeth" it not, then cometh the wicked one and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart. Preachers to-day take away that which is sown, by telling them it is a non-essential, when, if they understood it better, they would say the Lord does not deal in non-essentials, Acts xvi: 14, whose heart the Lord opened. The Lord opened her heart, or the eyes of her understanding, and she attended (obeyed) the thing spoken (commanded) by Paul. Read Acts xxvi: 18. To open their eyes and to turn them from darkness to light, etc. Truly, the ark is coming over the threshing floor, but remember Uzza.

O, Lord! help us to remember aright, that we may all know what the perfect and acceptable will of the Lord is. Soon we may have to try the awful realities of being judged at the bar of God, from which there is no appeal. Either enter in or depart from the presence of our King. Sad, how sad!

DEAR BRO. MCGARY:

I read the F. F., although I am no subscriber. I love the position of the F. F. very dearly; it has a noble purpose to work for, and is accomplishing much good, I hope. Realizing the weakness of man, and his liability to err; also, the temptation you have from your adversaries, I wish to caution you against too harsh or severe a defense. I thought your remarks about Allen, in the last number most too severe, though I don't consider myself a judge, I only give it as my opinion, thinking it will be some encouragement to you to know there is one more earnestly hoping that you may succeed.

My object in writing to you is to ask some questions, and I hope you will answer them, as some of them are bearing heavily on my mind.

1. Is it according to the New Testament for a man to be elder or deacon, who is not married, or never was?

2. Is it proper to keep a church book and make a record of all the transactions, such as the names of members, names of those withdrawn from?

3. Have we any authority to offer the Lord's supper to any one not a member of the church of Christ?

4. Please give an explanation on Matthew 5th chapter, 34th verse, and James V: 12.

From your brother in Christ,
JNO. W. THOMPSON.

(1) No. (See I Tim. iii: 1, and 8 12). The ruling of their families well manifest their fitness to rule the house of God. The Scriptures give us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works—a sufficient rule of faith and practice. In the Scriptures we know nothing, hear nothing, of any elders or deacons, save married ones, such as have families. To have another kind is to depart from the word of the Lord—become wise above what is written.

(2) "I know no reason why we should not. Everything should be done decently and in order. We have the same right to keep this record that we have to use a song book. But if we had been told what kind of a song book or church record to have it would be wrong to have another kind, as in the case of the elders and deacons.

(3) None whatever. We have as much right to invite Bob Ingersoll to the Lord's table, as to invite any who have not been "born of water and the Spirit, (this will exclude all unintelligently baptized)." Paul said, "Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat." But it was the kind of men he was writing to that were to examine themselves and eat. He wrote to christian men; men who had obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered to them. Then it would be, let every man who has been "born of water and the Spirit"—obeyed that form of doctrine—examine himself and eat.

(4) We believe this has reference to their ordinary conversations in which they swore by all of these things, heaven, earth, Jerusalem and their own heads. We do not believe that it forbids judicial oaths, nor any solemn, serious asseveration of the kind. Paul said to the Corinthian brethren: "I call God for record upon my soul, that to spare you I come not as yet unto Corinth." II Cor. 1:2-3.

BRO. MCGARY:

Please explain through the F. F. the following verse, which is found in 1st Corinthians v, 5, and reads as follows: "To deliver such a one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the Spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." Does it mean to exclude such a one from the visible Kingdom of Christ in order to bring him to repentance and finally save him?

By answering the above you will oblige many friends.

J. D. SILMAN JR.

There are two kingdoms, the kingdom of darkness and the kingdom of light—the Kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of God's dear Son. This lascivious man had been translated from "the kingdom of darkness into the Kingdom of God's dear Son;" but his carnal mind had not yielded to the Spirit, but was serving the old master, and causing him to live after the flesh.

Then, Christian fellowship meant more than merely eating the loaf and sipping wine together. It meant that fellowship that "looked not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others; (See Phil. ii: 4). It meant a family of souls redeemed from the dominion of the god of this world—non-conformists to this world; (See Rom. xii:2)—an organized body of disciples of Jesus of Nazareth, to live the simple, pure, holy life that "in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation" would appear "peculiar." It meant that when one of these suffered all were to suffer; when one was full and rejoiced, all were to be full and rejoice. It was a school for instilling into the hearts of men and women, through the hope of the gospel, the pure principles of Christ sufficiently to enable them to overcome the world and become meet for that "crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge will give them that love his appearing."

But this man, like the sow that was washed and turned to her wallowing in the mire, had turned from the holy commandments delivered unto him, and was now living, among christians, a life of excessive vice. He had to be put away from among them, or he would corrupt the whole body. If they permitted him to continue among them following his sinful course, they would lose all possible hope of influencing the outside world. His own soul would be lost, the light of the body would be obscured, and the kingdom of God disgraced, and the "joints and bands" so loosened that the whole body would ultimately fall asunder.

But, by withdrawing their brotherly watchcare and association from him, and "having no company with him," they would show to the "crooked and perverse nation" among whom they lived, that such characters had "neither part nor lot" among christians. Besides, it might cause him to see the enormity of his guilt, and repent, and "confess his fault" to his brethren, and be received back into fellowship with them, and afterwards, "denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world," so that "his spirit might be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus."

Now, we are sure this is correct in principle; and this principle applies to us, and should govern us in all matters of open and public sins among us.

But this particular case may have met a severer penalty than we have described. We know that the apostles of Christ could inflict severer penalties than this. (See the case of Ananias and Sapphira, and Elymas the sorcerer; one in Acts v, the other Acts xiii). It may be that something of this kind was visited upon this incestuous man, that is, like the infliction upon Elymas.

But, this would not alter the principle in the least. If such an infliction was visited on him, it was because such a manifestation was necessary to show that God's hand was with the faithful. Such a manifestation is not necessary now, for we have a record of God's miraculous dealings with them, and that record is so very conclusive and immovably fixed that we have even greater evidence than they had. God always has furnished miracles when they were absolutely needed, and only when they were so needed. They never will be needed again till Christ comes to reward the faithful and drive from his presence those who "know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." If men should rise from the dead and preach the same gospel to the people, they would not believe more than they do; and if they did not preach the same gospel all who believe the Scriptures would not accept their teaching.

BRO. MCGARY:

Please give a column, or as much as suits you, to the following scriptures: John xvi: 9, and Matthew xxiii: 29. Some brethren say they will not subscribe for the F. F. because so cheap a paper will soon fall or not be worth reading.

J. G.

As to John xvi: 9, we refer the reader to Acts ii: 22-37. When this is read we consider it a fulfillment of this Scripture. Here was the Spirit using Peter as an instrument in the performance or execution of the work that our Lord says it would do. Whenever a man now brings these same proofs to bear upon an infidel, if that infidel has the fruitful soil of honesty in his heart, he will feel the pangs of guilt. It is an awful sin to disbelieve Christ, the only just and pure man who ever set foot upon this earth, while His Book, and the annals of eighteen hundred years are teeming with irresistible and overwhelming evidence to substantiate His divinity. (Matt. xxiii: 29.) We think the balance of this chapter fully explains the thought.

These hypocritical Pharisees were ready to act as did their unrighteous ancestors in persecuting and killing the just men and prophets God sent them. They were "building the tombs of the prophets that Christ would send—(see verse 24). They were doing this by stiffening their necks against the holy, heaven-born principles that he was enunciating and would send these prophets to teach—they were inaugurating an opposition to the "true light," that would eventuate in the crucifixion of Christ, and the death of those He sent. They were "garnishing the sepulchres of the righteous," in that they were enacting the same part towards Christ, the Son of God, that had sent these righteous men to their sepulchres. Herod and Herodias were to John the Baptist what Ahab and Jezebel would have been to Elijah; this is the principle Christ expressed in this language to these Pharisees.

As to the objection that our paper is too cheap to live and be worth reading, we only say, such persons are merely hunting excuses. The paper has already lived through the fiercest storms of opposition and persecution.

BRO. MCGARY:

As I have never written anything for the F. F., I have therefore concluded to ask you a few questions to direct your mind into a channel of thought, that my mind has never been clear on:

1. Did not the first churches elect delegates as financial agents to travel and stir up the churches in regard to their contributions?

2. If the churches had such agents, how were they chosen?

3. Did not Paul recommend expediency in collecting funds?

4. If Paul used expediency, then may we not use some expediency?

5. Is not preaching the gospel through the press, without scripture authority or precedent?

6. Does not the fact that Paul took wages for his services, imply a stipulated salary?

7. What particular scripture does a stipulated salary contravene?

Hoping for a full answer to each of the above questions, I am your brother in hope of immortality,
D. PENNINGTON.

1. I know of no such church officials as "delegates," or "financial agents." If you do, it is your place to let us know where you found it out, and show how they were chosen. We deny that the words "delegate" and "financial agent" are in the word of God. We suppose the reason these words are not there is because the ideas they convey are not Bible ideas. This also answers the second question.

2. Expediency, Webster defines time: (1) The state or quality of being expedient; fitness or suitability to effect a purpose intended; desirableness, advantage. (2) The quality of aiming at selfish or inferior good at the expense of that which is higher, self-interest; self-seeking. But why go into the definition of the word? We may, with as much propriety, say that Paul used expediency in baptizing people. Paul gave directions how to collect funds. If you call that using expediency, then we give you an affirmative answer to this query.

A. Yes, we may use just as much expediency as Paul used. I suppose when we become wiser than Paul, we may go beyond him in expediency.

Q. No! The apostles spoke and wrote the gospel, and thus contented for the faith delivered to them. So may we. Printing is only an improved method of writing.

A. It does not imply such an idea to me. In fact, it sounds like a rebuke to impugn such an idea to him who said: "I have envied no man's silver, or gold, or apparel. Yet ye yourselves know that these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and to them that were with me."

You had as well undertake to convince me that Paul were a plumb line, and twisted a gold-headed cane over the world, as that he preached for stipulated salaries.

It contravenes the principle that runs through and through christianity. To furnish you all this is contravenes, would be to submit for your re-consideration the New Testament Scriptures. I will cite you two scriptures, and if they do not satisfy you, let me know and I will add ever so many more. Peter wrote to the elders: "Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy gain, but of a ready mind."—1 Peter v: 2

Now, this principle will, of course, apply to an evangelist, or any servant of Christ as well as to an elder. A stipulated salary makes the preacher a "hireling."

Our Lord said: "He that is a hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth; and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep. The hireling fleeth because he is a hireling, and careth not for the sheep."—John x: 12-13. It is as true of one "hireling" as another. Preachers ought to be sustained in the good work; but when they go to setting a price on their preaching, they are making merchandise of the gospel, because hirelings, and ought to be scorned by all true disciples. Now, remember, that if you want one hundred scriptures against the stipulated salary principle, call for them.

In conclusion, may we ask you a few questions?

It is reported that you are about to seek shelter under the Bush. Is it true?

Did you not tell me that you did wrong in taking that Sun Arminian work?

If you live to this state machinery, what are you going to do about immersed saints, when they come desiring to unite with you? You have committed yourself thoroughly on this point. Is it possible that A. J. Bush will employ a man who will ignore this fundamental feature of "our plea"? If you receive them, unless you have changed your views, you will indeed be a "hireling." Are these reports true? I hope they are not!

FROM DAWSON.

Dawson, Texas, March 25, 1887. Bro. McGary & Household:

We, the Christian people at Dawson have just completed a church building exclusively for church purposes; and, against the wishes of some of the congregation, the house is being used for the prohibition party to make public speeches in, and discuss the constitutional amendments' merits. Of course they open services with prayer, and say it is church work, and yet we are called upon to vote on the question.

Now is this a gospel amendment? If so, it does appear to me that this is at least one step toward uniting church and state.

Give us your views, if you please, on the propriety of the above mentioned proceedings.

Your brother in Christ,

JEFF. A. DAVIS.

If King Jesus has commanded his subjects to take part in the political measures and movements of Caesar's government, it is right for the house to be used in that which pertains to the work, and brethren have no right to object. But if the Lord has not directed his disciples to take part in such things, it is wrong for them to do so, since he has "thoroughly furnished them unto all good works;" and it is doubly wrong in them to offend their brethren by using their house in which to perpetrate this wrong. We regard the principle the same as that of bringing an organ into the house of worship against the wishes of brethren who oppose its use. We do not believe that Christians ought to use the ballot-box at all. The ballot-box is not the power of God unto salvation, nor to enforce the duty of temperance.

The Lord has not commanded aliens to be temperate, but his subjects. There will be no difference in eternity between the man who withholds in the gutter from intoxication, and the one who totally abstains from the use of whisky, if they are both aliens from the kingdom of Christ. But if there is a vestige of authority for Christians to take part with the government of Caesar and yoke themselves with them in united efforts through the ballot-box, we wish some one would show that authority. We would delight in exercising that right, if it is ours. But as long as the King's code contains the following, and nothing on the ballot-box side, we cannot conscientiously join in any political movement, viz: "No man shall warreth (for Christ) nor completh himself with the affairs of this life, that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier. And if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned except he strive lawfully," (by the law of Christ,—2 Tim. ii: 4-5. "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of Christ" (by his authority).—Col. iii: 17.

"We are complete in Christ," because he has thoroughly furnished us unto all good works—all things that pertain to life and godliness. If it is our duty to take part in measures that are to be settled by the ballot-box, it is not true that we are complete in him; if this is a good work it is not true that we are thoroughly furnished unto all good works, unless the scriptures somewhere authorize us to do these things.

Men can make plausible arguments to draw disciples away on these questions, but it is our duty to "beware, lest such men spoil us through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ."—Col. ii: 8. To follow after Christ is to follow the directions he has given us in his word. When we turn from his word, we turn our backs upon the "true light," and blunder along in the darkness of our own shadows—we become wise above that which is written. We would rejoice to know that not another drop of whiskey would be distilled while the world lasts; but we do not intend to transcend the authority of Christ to prevent it. It is our business to eradicate the evils of life through the gospel, "the power of God," and not through the ballot-box, a power of Caesar.

Cranks may say we are favoring whiskey because we will not oppose it through the ballot-box, but we care naught for that. If they will furnish directions from the King to whom we are subject, for a different course we will heartily abandon this one. We are opposed to adultery, fornication, lasciviousness, and all uncleanness, but we do not intend to oppose them through Caesar's ways, but through the thoroughly furnished way of the King of kings and Lord of lords.

Why not force the whole world to be baptized, by an appeal to the ballot-box?

THORSTON, TEXAS, April 10, 1887.

Brother A. McGary:

Dear Sir: I will pen a few lines to you: dispose of it as you deem prudent. I have recently made a tour through north-east Freestone and the western part of Leon counties, taking in Buffalo, where I got you a few subscribers; could not do much, as money was scarce in that country.

I preached all the time that the weather was suitable, for about three weeks, on the Lord's plan, and here let me say that I never visited a more destitute field before in life. I know not the number that never heard the ancient gospel preached before in life, and the people received it gladly. I took in Union, Mustang, and Keechi. We have five or six brethren scattered over a territory of about ten miles. Bro. Norman lives near Mustang, and he knows how to treat a preacher and his horse; in fact, his family all appreciate a minister; his parsonage is Buffalo, Leon county, Texas. He lives ten miles from that point, and will welcome any of our preaching brethren that are willing to labor for the good of the cause.

I propose laboring up my meeting with a protracted effort in the near future, as the people are anxious to hear more concerning this way that is everywhere spoken against. And here let me say to our traveling evangelists who are willing to labor where there are souls to save, and not reach money in sight, to give them a call. Who will be first to go? Seems to me A. J. Bush could afford it, but I don't think he will hardly attempt it, as it would not result in much good toward "our plea," nor the Lord's plea.

Now, dear brethren in Christ, I will state my experience as best I can in a few words. After laboring in the cause of my Master for seventeen years, principally in Robertson, Freestone and Limestone, and occasionally in Hill and Navarro, Leon and Falls, McLennan and Houston counties, I have never, in the first place, failed to be reasonably sustained. I have never, with few exceptions, had an agreement with my brethren as to how much I was to get, and in those cases I am free to acknowledge I did wrong, and ask pardon. I have, it is true, been subjected to some things that were unpleasant, but never suffered like my Master, so I will not complain.

Brethren, let us keep prominently before the minds of the people, Christ, and when he enters the domain of man's affections, love for the world and the things of the world will no longer abide.

R. P. SWEENEY.

Dear Bro. McGary:

It is with much pleasure that we have read the FIRM FOUNDATION about nine months, and we can say that we are delighted with it, and find no fault in it. It is the only paper that we have ever seen that we thought was just what it ought to be. You have great opposition, which is no more than we expect from the world. We marvel not if the world hate us and persecute us; but when it comes from the brethren as it does, we do marvel, and cannot understand it. We can't see why all that love the Lord cannot take his word, and teach it as you do. We can't see why they are so bitter against you and your paper. I reckon the time has come when they "will not endure sound doctrine." It will require a great deal of patience on your part. I would say to you, let patience have her perfect work. Let them talk about your "theory," your "new doctrine," "new commission," etc; let none of these things move you, but continue to rebuke, reprove and exhort with all long suffering.

I would like to see more such articles as Bro. McCarty wrote on the Farmers Alliance; that was grand, and many thanks to him. This is the only way we can show the evil of these things, viz: single them out and speak of one at a time. Hoping you may be spared many years in your good work, I remain your sister in Christ.

ZEKE JACKSON AND THE PASTOR.

The "second Lord's day," (Sabbath, as the "orthodox" call it,) at 11 o'clock a. m., found the old meeting-house in the Jackson neighborhood jammed and crammed full of people anxiously waiting for the "new preacher." Some of every "branch" of the great "orthodox" (?) "vine" were there—that is, "the vine of Sodom; whose grapes are grapes of gall, and whose clusters are bitter; and, whose wine is the poison of dragons, and the cruel venom of asps." Duot. xxxii: 32.—and some of no vine, as the saying goes, but, are really of the same planting and pruning as this "orthodox" (?) monstrosity,—the enemy, who "sows tares among the wheat"

The preacher took, for his subject, "The name."

He read for a "text" Isaiah Lxii: 2, "And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory: and thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name."

He argued that if the Lord had not somewhere given this "new name," His prophecy had failed! He said that none who believed the word of God, and who believed in the wisdom, omnipotence and fore-knowledge of God, could believe that this prophecy had failed. He said that, He, with whom "one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day," could not fail to fulfill this promise and prophecy. As sure as it is that God cannot deny himself and his own words, that sure is it that he either has or will name his people by a "new name"—new or different from any they had ever been known by prior to this prophecy.

He asked if it had not been fulfilled? He answered it affirmatively; and proceeded to substantiate the fact by an appeal to the Scriptures.

He said that Acts xi: 26, gave that "new name:" "They were called Christians first at Antioch." He met the objection that is sometimes brought to weaken this argument, which is, that this name was given (by the enemies of Christ in derision,) by an appeal to the fact that the apostles who were filled, guided and moved by the Holy Spirit, adopted the name, and ever afterwards used it. He said, that the mouth of an apostle into which the Lord put words that were to be delivered to the people, was, in the sense of this prophecy, "the mouth of the Lord." He said, that when they spoke what the Lord gave them to speak, their mouths were the Lord's. He referred to the Savior's words to his disciples when he instructed them as to the course they should pursue when their enemies should arrest them and carry them before the rulers: "But when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought before hand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate; but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye: for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost." Mark xiii: 2. Paul said to the Ephesian brethren, that Christ came and "preached peace to them." See Eph. ii: 12-17. But it was through the person of an apostle that he "came," and through that apostle's mouth that He preached to them. So, when the mouth of the apostle was preaching the words that were delivered to him of Christ, his mouth was "the mouth of the Lord." He called attention to the fact that, Peter said: "If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf. For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it begin first at us what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God? And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear? Wherefore, let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator." I Pet. iv: 16-19. He said, the characters "Christian," "us," "house of God," "the righteous," and, "them that suffer according to the will of God," all refer to the first character mentioned,—"Christian." This name Christian, then, is the "new name" that the "mouth of the Lord was to call" His people. It is that name that the "whole family in heaven and in earth are named. Eph. iii: 15. Viewing them as members of this family, they have been variously called, by the "mouth of the Lord," brethren, saints, disciples, children of light, children of God, children of promise, heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ; but nowhere are they called, by the "mouth of the Lord," Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Baptists, Lutherans or Campbellites. He said, surely, in giving a new name for His people, God intended that they should wear that name to the exclusion of all others. "He is a jealous God." He was displeased at the Christians at Corinth for calling themselves after Paul, Apollos, or Cephas. He reproveth them for it through the apostle Paul. If, then, God was offended at His people for calling themselves after the ambassadors of His Son, into whose keeping the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus was entrusted, and bound on earth and in heaven, how much more displeasing it must be to Him to have them wearing the denominational epithets that we hear upon every hand to-day, and, whose name is legion!

If there is "nothing in a name," as these "orthodox" (?) teachers tell us, then this "new name," given by the "mouth of the Lord," is certainly as good as any! And since some people believe there is something in a name, and, that, therefore, this "new name given by the Lord is better than these names given by men, it certainly is the only name upon which there can be perfect harmony and union on this question. Those who love and revere it above every name given by men, will stand by it and wear it, but they can not part from it and wear another. But those who hold that there is nothing in a name, can surrender their human names, in which there is nothing, and accept a name given by the mouth of the Lord, in which there is ground of union, if nothing else. He said that union among the children of God was an absolute desideratum and bounden duty; and the neglect of it would consign its teeming millions to the darkest abode of hell! Those who cannot wear this name on earth and be united with those who do wear it and love it because God promised it through the prophet Isaiah and gave it eighteen hundred years ago, cannot wear it in heaven; for it is the family name, "in heaven and earth," and he who wears it here may wear it in heaven; but he who will not wear it here will not be permitted to wear it "over there." He neglects the counsel of God and follows after men. He tramples the prayerful utterances of the Son of God under his feet: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." John xvii: 20-21.

While the pastor was delivering his argument, of which the above is but a synopsis, Zeke was so impressed with it that he was continually looking at first one and then another of his Baptist brethren to see what effect it seemed to have upon them. He plainly saw that his mother was impressed with the correctness of the pastor's position.

At its conclusion, Zeke invited the pastor home with him to dinner.

Uncle Hezekiah was puffed up considerably with rage at some things said, but he was too much of a gentleman to treat him rudely at his own house; so he avoided all reference to religious topics; and the pastor was more than pleased at this, for he had a mortal dread of the old man's near-cut routes at his inconsistencies. On the way home aunt Hannah told her husband, how irresistible the pastor's argument appeared to her. She said:

"Husband, where can you find any escape from his position?"

Uncle Hez.—"Well, wife, don't we all call ourselves Christians?"

Aunt H.—"Yes, we do; but not to the exclusion of human names. In fact, if we are asked what church we belong to, we are sure to answer in a name that God never gave his people. The Corinthians that he mentioned, doubtless called themselves Christians in the same way that we do; but they had the names: Paul, Appollos, and Cephas, and these names were taking the lead, just as our name Baptist takes the lead with us."

Uncle H.—"Well, wife, I am truly sorry to see you sprouting for Campbellism."

Aunt H.—"How am I sprouting for Campbellism? Is it Campbellism to accept the truth?"

Uncle H.—"No, it is not Campbellism to accept the truth. But it is Campbellism to accept some truth and some Campbellism. There is no church or doctrine wholly destitute of truth. What I mean to say, is, that there is no use in allowing this man to unsettle your church relations on a non-essential matter."

Aunt H.—"But this, if true,—and it looks mightily like it is true to me, old man—is not a non-essential matter. If God has given this "new name," as that man seemed to me to prove, then it seems that it is essential that we all wear it."

Uncle H.—"Wife, I see you and Zeke are both chock full of that fellow's new doctrine."

Aunt H.—"Don't say new doctrine. I heard no new doctrine from him, husband, and if I should I would pay no attention to it. Don't be alarmed. What have I said that seems so alarming to you? I have only said I believed that God did give the name "Christian" to His people; and that I agree with that preacher that we ought to wear it and other names that God has given us, and leave off names that men have given us that keep us from wearing these God-given ones."

Uncle H.—"Well, I will tell you what I will agree to: If you will ask that pastor at the dinner table if he believes you will go to heaven after you die, if you continue a strict member of the Baptist Church till that time, and if he says no, I will not open my mouth if you and Zeke both join him to-night. But if he says you will go to heaven by remaining a strict Baptist till death, then, truly, this "name question" is a non-essential, as we can go to heaven wearing the name we have worn so long. Is that not fair?"

Aunt H.—"Yes, that is fair; but you had better wait till somebody talks about joining him. I would not join him if I were to unite with that church. But I don't know that I have any notion of doing that."

Uncle H.—"Well, I know what it will lead to. I have seen too many go to them from our people, not to know that you and Zeke are sprouting for Campbellism. But will you ask him the question I suggested?"

Aunt H.—"Yes, I will, if you will promise not to insult him about it."

Uncle H.—"Agreed. I promise not to say a word at the table nor on our premises, about his reply; but I will ask him some questions at his meeting to-night, if I feel like it, after hearing his answer to you."

At the dinner table, sure enough, aunt Hannah accosted him thus:

"Parson, what will become of me in eternity, if I live a strict member of the Baptist church till I die, will I be lost?"

Parson.—"W-e-l-l, no, madame; we, as a people, do not teach that strict Baptists are lost. If you live and die, a good, strict, consistent Baptist, I can't see why you should not go to rest in Jesus."

It was all that was said on the subject of religion under the roof that day.

On the way to meeting that night uncle Hezekiah said to aunt Hannah:

"Well, wife, what's the difference in holding to the name Baptist or giving it up for this new name that fellow is talking about, after all? If you hold to the name Baptist and live a good, strict Baptist, you will go to "rest in Jesus" when you die. This, your new name Solomon, admits. Could wearing this new name and living a strict Campbellite, or whatever you may call them, do more than this for you? Could it waste your soul to a more exalted niche in the sempiternal realms than, to rest in Jesus? If not, then what is the use of breaking up our church relations here which are hallowed by such fond memories and cemented by the sympathies of so many hearts that would be wounded, and some, perhaps, that are now at rest in Jesus, just to gratify the vitiated caprices of this jack-leg theologian? If he could show that we are not in Christ and would die out of Christ and be lost if we remained where we are, then I would say, let's hunt safer ground. But we are too old, and too well satisfied with the work of grace that the Holy Ghost has done in our hearts, to now act the part of children, and be "tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine" that sap-headed, college-bred Campbellite pastors may, "by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive," concoct to break up our happy relations and lead us captive to their wicked, proselyting aims."

Aunt H.—"Yes, that's true. I confess that he made some impression on me, and there is no telling where it might have ended, had you not got me to put that question to him. I am so glad you did. I now see that it would not only be useless for me to change my church relations, since I could gain nothing by it in the end, but it would be sinful in me to take an unnecessary step that would give so much pain to my dear husband and others. I want to do right in God's sight and be saved. But, husband, I believe that he will get Zeke. How mean it is in him to be unsettling people, and working all of this worry and vexation for nothing but to gratify his spirit of proselytism."

That night the pastor spread himself on "Christian Union." He read the Savior's prayer, as recorded in John xvii, where he prayed for the Union of his chosen disciples and ambassadors. But he dwelt with particular stress on verses, 20-21: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

He showed the pertinency and wisdom of the divine aim: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. He said that the present distracted and divided condition of Christendom had done more to strengthen the arms of the Lord's enemies, and obstruct the diffusion of the glorious light that came down from above, than all other influences combined. He said that if the now scattered and estranged children of God, who are up in arms against each other, would cast from them everything that has not God for its author, peace and harmony, love and enthusiasm would loom up all over the land, and prevail till its heaven-born results would dispel the dark state of skepticism and unbelief, that is hanging over our country like the sepulchral day of "the faith once delivered to the saints"—yes, my friends, he said, if you will all discard everything not taught in the word of God, and let the Bible be the common center, the rallying point for all believers, and all rally there, and stand there, believing that book to be a sufficient rule of faith and practice, you will witness the answering of that prayer of the Lord Jesus Christ. We will all be one, even as he and his Father are one; and the world will believe that God sent Christ to bless the sons and daughters of anguish. He then asked who was willing to further bear the responsibility of trampling Christ's prayer under their feet, by clinging to these divisive things that have been handed down from the traditions of men—"doctrines and commandments of men?" He then quoted Paul's words to the Christians in Corinth, who had commenced to divide up and wear different names: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name (or authority) of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no division among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." I Cor. 1:10.

He selected an invitation song: "There is a Fountain Filled with Blood," etc., etc., and said he was going to see how many were willing to unite with him on the Bible, and take it as the man of their Counsel, and help to answer this prayer of the Lord Jesus Christ for union among those who believed on him through the word of his apostles—not through the word of uninspired creed-makers, who are unwittingly breeding contention and division, and hindering that which the Son of God so much desired and so fervently prayed for.

The song was about half sung when the pastor tossed the Bible out in the aisle in front of the stand and came out of the stand and walked down to it, and asked if there was no one in that audience who would meet him at that Bible and unite with him by agreeing to discard all human names and divisive things? At this juncture Zeke Jackson met him and they shook hands over the Bible. He then offered Zeke a seat near the stand. When the song was over, the pastor called on several members of his church who had come out from town, to come forward during the singing of another song, and extend to Zeke the hand of fellowship, which they did, and Zeke was at last a member of the "church of his choice."

When the audience was dismissed, uncle Hezekiah said that he wanted just one word, and the audience waited to hear it.

He told his brethren, that he wanted them to remember that this same preacher had refused to receive Zeke when he offered himself to him for membership some months before. His objection then, he said, was that he could not consent to baptize him on the confession or experience Zeke gave. But now, after the Baptist minister has baptized him on that very same experience, or confession, this man receives him, and you have seen how he did it. Now, what I request of him is, to show his authority for refusing him in the first instance, and for receiving him by hand-shaking as he has to-night. If he can't furnish that authority to-night, I request him to come back and do it when it is convenient. If he will, he can take me and my wife in, too, for we do not want to keep up any religious alienation between ourselves and our only boy. Again, he quoted a Scripture which says: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment." Now, I want to know if the church into which he has just shaken Zeke, is thus united, speaking the same thing? Do they all even speak and act as he has done in receiving Zeke? He knows they do not. They all agree that the Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice; but some of his brethren are calling for this "rule" that he has worked by to-night, and it has not been shown. I read their papers and know whereof I speak. Many of their members are coming to the Baptist church. A leading lady among them, and very intelligent, too, left their church at Huntsville, Texas, a few days ago, and came to us, the Baptists. Her name was Mrs. Dean, if he desires to call it in question let him do so. This is getting to be right common among them. And why should they not come? According to the teacher who is before us, they can go to heaven, or to rest in Jesus, by living strict Baptists. We, too, are in the kingdom of Christ, as he will and has admitted. Then why leave us to go to them where there is so much fighting and division? They are not only fighting over this very question of receiving members, but they are involved in schisms and contentions and fierce conflicts over the organ question, and the missionary society question. I tell you, brethren and friends, if you can go to heaven in the Baptist church, those of you who are already Baptist had better remain with us, and you who may become interested in religion had better come to us, and not go into this boiling, gurgling Campbellite pot."

The crowd dispersed; and, on the way home, uncle Hezekiah and aunt Hannah decided to be very temperate towards Zeke, and to go and hear his preachers when they come there, and expose their sophistries and inconsistencies till Zeke would become ashamed of his course and return to the Baptist church.

Everything went off pleasantly for a month. One day Zeke went to town and received a letter from an old brother who signed himself: "Raccoon Bill Jones." He said he lived in the mountains of Arkansas, and was going to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ through Texas. He requested Zeke to make an appointment in his neighborhood for him at a certain time, which was then two months off. Zeke made the appointment. He was anxious to know how this old man found him out, for he knew he was old from the palsied look of his writing.

"The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple."—Ps. cxix: 130.

"To know wisdom and instruction; to perceive the words of understanding."—Prov. 1: 2.

What more does one need through words than plain ideas? Words are signs of ideas expressed to one's understanding of what the speaker or writer designs to convey to the second party as information.

2. The scripture is satisfying desire. "Neither have I gone back from the commandment of his lips; I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than necessary food." Job xxiii: 12.

"And I will delight myself in thy commandments, which I have loved."—Ps. cxix: 30. The inner man longs for moral, intellectual and spiritual food, as well as the outward man does for food to support the physical man. The spiritual food cometh down from above; this food cometh down through God's word. Manna came down to feed Israel before they entered the promised land; all fell in the wilderness but two—Caleb and Joshua. This is no doubt typically foreshadowing two things will survive this wilderness we are in, i. e., God's word and man's spirit will live to pass over into the promised land of rest.

3. The scriptures inspire hope. "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope."—Rom. xv: 4.

4. Imparting joy. "And these things write we unto you that your joy may be full."—I. John 1: 4.

"I will delight myself in thy statutes; I will not forget thy word." Ps. xix: 16.

"I rejoice in thy word as one that findeth great spoil," (treasure).—Ps. cxix: 162.

When the burden of the soul is removed there is joy. None can have joy unless he has obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine read in the New Covenant, and not out of it. Joy comes from a pure conscience in taking God's word for just what it says. Guilt is found where disobedience begins; joy is found where obedience ends. Examine thyself, and feel the truth.

5. The scriptures are comforting and consoling. "So when they were dismissed they came to Antioch, and when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the epistle, which when they had read they rejoiced for the consolation."—Acts xv: 30-31.

"This is my comfort in affliction, for thy word hath quickened me," (or made alive).—Ps. xix: 51.

6. The scriptures are sanctifying and saving. "But these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name."—John xx: 31.

"For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Greek."—Rom. 1: 16.

"So then, faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Rom. x: 17.

"Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word which is able to save your souls."—James 1: 18.

Christ, the founder of Christianity, has laid down fundamental laws to govern this system individually and collectively in his kingdom; and these laws are found embodying the entire New Covenant, where you find his birth, life death and resurrection, and all that was lacking for the edification of the body was given through his inspired ambassadors, by the Holy Spirit.

7. Nations are blessed by the scriptures. "Keep, therefore, and do them, for this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations which shall hear all of these statutes, and say surely this nation is a wise and understanding people."—Deut. iv: 7.

"What advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision? Much every way; chiefly because that unto them was committed the oracles of God."—Rom. iii: 1. God through the scriptures was educating and preparing the world for the reception of the New Covenant founded in the sacrifice and blood of His Son, that through him the world might have hope to come. This nation is blest with the scriptures, moral and spiritual light, yet darkness, moral and spiritual darkness is brooding over this nation to-day. With all our boasted sciences and natural facilities, sectarian ignorance spells its own name in large letters that the wayfaring man, though a rotten-hearted infidel need not misread division among pretended Christians.

This nation's pride will come up before God, and be placed in the balance and weighed in justice in time to come. The howl of party leaders sends the flaming firebrand smoking and blazing under the very altar of God, ready to destroy pure worship throughout the habitable globe. Everything seems to be turned upon the fatal wheel of human corruption and human expediences to hasten the down-fall of apostolic worship, and crown the man of Sin in all his glory.

8. Deprive the nations of the advantages of the Scripture and a moral and Spiritual curse would follow.

These are some of the advantages of the Scriptures to mold, shape and confirm one's life for all time. They mark out the path of life or death. The Scripture is very pointed in its own sphere of operation; it leaves nothing out of its line of operation but what can be understood sufficient for all.

9. They present the dignity of the founder of the Christian religion. They present his action one, his purpose one, his plan one, his law one, its design one, its action one, its faith one, its baptism one, its Father one, its salvation one.

Bro. McGary, the battle is coming on, friends and foes are wheeling into line slowly but surely. Sectism will never be plainer exhibited on the subject of one Faith one Baptism than the coming contest. It grows gradually. This restoration will never be complete until sect baptism is wiped off the church record of this reformation. Why talk about an apostolic restoration as long as we dive into sectism for building material? Do we not preach one Faith, one Baptism? and then receive Methodist immersion as valid? Away with such stuff. It is a popish calf as blind as the blind gazer whom Jesus restored; it neither sees men nor trees walking. It is one of the polished relics of popery brightened or ventilated with three huge eyes, sprinkling, pouring or immersion. Now, which way will that calf go if one should present himself for membership in a Methodist organization? He can have his choice of the three "modes." Sprinkling is first, but if that will not work, pouring, if not that, then immersion will do. But any way baptism is non-essential, but he is required to undergo one of these non-essentials.

I received several copies of the FIRM FOUNDATION. I like its position: it is a plain dealer in Bible facts. I will distribute them among the brethren here, though they are taking the Leader; some taking none, for the lack of money at this season. I would like to have it and will send you the money some time this summer, if that will suit.

Send sample copies to Elder J. M. Jones, Island City, Oreg.; Elder Boyle, Eagle Valley, or Pine Valley, Oreg.; D. Fonch, Star, Ada county, Idaho; Wm. Ryals, Boise City, Idaho. Will send you more names by and-by. J. A. CONNER.

If I can put one touch of a rosy sunset into the life of any man or woman, I shall feel that I have worked with God.—[George MacDonald.

TO THE BRETHREN AND SISTERS IN CHRIST, GREETING.

It has been my desire for some time to write a few words of encouragement, not only for the F. F., but all true lovers of apostolic teaching.

Its strict adherence to the truth as it is given in the blessed Book of Inspiration, should endear the F. F. to every child of God.

Since I read Bro. Pennington's appeal to the sisters, I could no longer refrain from writing, knowing him to be a true self-sacrificing preacher of the gospel of Christ.

To him and all others who are thus battling like valiant soldiers, fully panoplied with the armor, which is the word of God, breasting the storms and strifes, and the fiery darts of emissaries, which are being hurled furiously against the true and never dying word of God. May God's choicest blessings be with you, and may your lives be spared long upon the earth, and may you be instrumental in turning many benighted minds from darkness to the blessed light of the gospel; and may it enter into the hearts of all true Christians to minister to your necessities. This is the prayer of one who loves all the children of God.

Dear Sister Sarah, I have drifted away from the thoughts of which I intended to talk:

Out here in this southwestern section of country, we have not absolutely escaped the drouth, the great scourge of our fair land; yet we are not suffering from its consequences so much as others, less fortunate, who live in other parts of the state. But we deeply sympathize with them, and the more, it seems, from our inability to extend the helping hand. Oh, how it would satisfy our anxious minds, if we could send to our dear suffering brethren the relief necessary.

I love to read the F. F. The tone, generally, seems, so far as I am capable of judging, to be scriptural.

My sister, I am so well pleased with your article on "Slang." How lovely it would be, if all lovers of the Lord would refrain from using such phrases as are so unbecoming a child of God, and speak and write in the language of the apostles: the language of the Master. When he was among and walked and talked with the children of men, he left an example of pure speech and deportment that characterized him in all of his intercourse not only with disciples, but all others. Thus he is made our guide, our glorious guide: will we follow him?

Now, in conclusion, dear sisters who may read this, let me, who has passed the meridian of life, admonish you to follow closely in the footprints of Him who is our great exemplar, and thus by our modest demeanor put to shame many who claim to be children of God, yet deny him by refusing to sacrifice pride and fashion, and walk humbly and quietly, adorning thereby their profession. Let us remember we are not our own, but that we are bought with a price, the blood of the Son of God.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, MAY 1, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to McGary & Hansbrough, or to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to McGary & Hansbrough.

Bro. A. B. West of Blanco county, was in the office this week. He will soon move to Washington Territory. He says he fully endorses the FIRM FOUNDATION and will labor to circulate it in his new field when he gets there. Bro. West is said to be a strong gospel preacher, and a good debater. He has had many debates with the Christadelphians, and they have learned to give him a wide berth.

We hope our brethren will not send any more money through us to the drouth sufferers. Let them learn themselves where it is most needed and send it direct to the needy—not that we are not willing to take the little trouble upon ourselves, but we expect to be away from Austin the greater portion of the summer. The readers of this paper have done a good deal for drouth sufferers this year, along with their "hobby-riding." We hope they will do more and more in that line.

Bro. and sister Jackson, of Smithwick Mill, gave us a call. They are Christians of the primitive type. They have been readers of the F. F. from its beginning, and are in full sympathy with its teachings. It is a rare thing to meet with a woman who is as well informed in the scriptures as sister Jackson. She is truly one of the mothers of Israel. Woe to the college fledgling preacher, who falls into her hands with his cultivated didoes and Bible college trumpery; his pin-feathers will fall rapidly.

"TRIAL OFFER."

We will send the FIRM FOUNDATION on trial, to any one till the 1st of September, for 25 cents. Or, we will send five copies for that time for $1. Brethren, work us up a thousand new subscribers on this offer. We intend to show to all honest readers, that no man who opposes the organ or missionary society, can be a consistent man while he recognizes sect baptism, unintelligent immersion. This is the only paper in existence that is contending for the gospel of Christ, just as the Lord has delivered it, without addition or subtraction.

HARD TIMES.

While the cry of hard times is rending the air in every direction, remember, brethren, that it costs actual cash to publish a paper. It is costing us about ninety dollars per month to publish the FIRM FOUNDATION. And this is saying nothing about any cost save that of the mechanical work, paper etc. You see we have not filled your paper with humbug advertisements, or any other kind; though we have never believed it wrong to publish legitimate advertisements in a religious paper, any more than it is wrong for a man to earn a living at any honest, laudable occupation in connection with preaching the gospel. But we have not done it, and do not expect to unless we should change the paper to a weekly. So, brethren, we earnestly request you all to aid us by sending new subscribers; and those who are behind with us, by sending in what they owe. The amount of one or two dollars may seem a small matter to you; but if the few hundred dollars due us in such amounts were sent in now it would very materially lighten our burden. Let every brother and sister send us a new name on our "Trial Offer." The FIRM FOUNDATION is the only paper, that we know of, in the world that can produce "a thus saith the Lord" for everything it teaches and practices as items of the faith. Then brethren, help us to circulate it and thereby be co-workers in the good work.

THANK THE SISTERS.

Some time ago, a brother, for some reason, ordered his paper discontinued. To-day we are in receipt of a letter from him, saying that his wife wants the paper—he calls for back numbers! Well, we are glad to have the paper in that family, for the head of it is a good, sound gospel preacher, and he knows we are contending for the truth—not a "hobby."

It is remarkable how the sisters who read the FIRM FOUNDATION awhile love it, and work for it, even when their husbands would discontinue it,—we have several instances of this,—and it causes us to think that these sisters are really the better half of such husbands.

When a woman loves Christ's truth, you may scoff at it, and thorn-crown it, and rend the very skies with cries of, "Away with it!" and attempt to bury that truth beneath the malice and scurrility of popularity-seekers and "our plea" fanatics, but she, like her sisters, Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary the mother of Christ, and other women who loved the Author of this truth so dearly, will linger about it with her "spices and ointments," of faith and love to the last! Thank God for the dear, true sisters who are helping the FIRM FOUNDATION. They sometimes write us and request us to be gentler in our style, and administer needed reproofs; but we love them only the more for this, and try to profit from their counsel. Those who will not try to correct their own errors and shortcomings are surely poorly fitted to correct the same in others.

A. McG.

GORDTHWAITE, BROWN Co., Tex.,
April 12th, 1887.

Dear Brother:

I seat myself to let you know I am well and I hope this will find you well and enjoying all the blessings of life.

But I am sorry to have to tell you of my sad condition. I am bound to call on my brethren in Christ for help. My folks are crying for bread to live on. I can't sell anything I have. I have offered to discount 80 per cent. on the dollar, had rather do this than call on my brethren for help. I don't think it right for me to call on the world. I have been a member of the church for about thirty-four years.

I wrote to Bro. Lane. I send you his letter. You can see what he says. I did not receive any of the help that was sent by the state. I want you to help me according to the command laid down in the Bible, my brother; for we are bound to suffer if we can't get help from our Christian brethren. I can't get any work to make a living. I want you to read this letter to the church in Austin, and see if my brothers and sisters there will not help me. I would like to read your paper, too. May the love of God be with you. Your brother in Christ.

L. B. WALTON.

We know no more about this brother than we learned from his letter. We believe that it is best to know under such circumstances whether or not a man is worthy of help before we contribute much. But we read his letter to our little band that "meets from house to house," and a small contribution was raised for him. Since then, we have received ten dollars from the Midway church, to be sent to where we find it is most needed. We have written to parties where this brother lives to learn more of the facts in his case. But it would be much better to make a mistake in sending to an unworthy person than to withhold of our substance and let a worthy one suffer. So we hope all of our readers who can, will send him a little help. We did not read his letter to the "Austin church." We had several reasons for not doing so. They would not be apt to do much for him, anyway. These tight times, it is about all they can do to pay their pastor—whom they imported and enjoy—inter se—at the price of one hundred dollars per month. Besides, they have to contribute some in the way of "donation parties." A man and wife have a hard time to live in this capitol city, and keep up with the fashions on less than one hundred dollars per month; and, if he did not keep up with the fashions, he would not keep up with his brethren and sisters, and they would soon become ashamed of him and discharge him. But there are a few of that church who are not so wedded to their pastor and the fashionable circle in which he moves, who will see this. They may withhold a part of their tax for the pastor and send it to our needy brother. It won't hurt the pastor to wear cheaper kids and a cheaper bee-gum for a few months, anyway. So, brethren of Austin, suppose you let him try it, while you help this or some other destitute brother.

BROTHER BURNETT STILL PLAYS HIDE-AND-SEEK.

Bro. Burnett is still harping that we got tired of him and turned him over to Bro. Jackson. Yes, we did get tired of him, and our readers know what tired us—he kept running from us and crossing his track in such a fox-chase style, that we refused to follow after him. Besides, he put words in our mouth that we did not use, and threw mud so that we saw it was a regular mud-slinging affair, or nothing, so we did get tired of it. He does not deny anything we teach, but our denial of his right to do that which the apostles never did. He denies our negative! This is the way the "liveliest debater on the American continent" tries to hide out from his true position. Well, he pretended, when he was on his precipitate retreat from us to Dan. 11:44, that he wanted to discuss the church-perpetuity question. Now, Bro. Richardson and Bro. Jackson both propose to accommodate him. We will now get another look at the sole of his foot. We told him he would run from there if anybody got after him. He still says that Paul defined the gospel to be the death, burial and resurrection of Christ. We deny it, and our denial is worth as much as his affirmation. We will submit MacKnight's translation on this point, to our readers. I believe it is considered the best translation of the the epistles extant: "Now I make known unto you, brethren, the gospel which I preached to you, which also ye received, and in which ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye remember in what manner I preached to you; unless indeed ye have believed rashly.

"For I delivered to you among the first things, what also I received FIRST, that Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures."—I Cor. xv:1-4.

Yes, Paul did make known unto them, the same gospel he preached to them—he had no new one to declare—and his was not merely the three facts of Christ's death, burial and resurrection, but "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus"—the law delivered by Him who died and was buried and rose again. The first thing he did was to tell these facts, and that demonstrated Jesus' right to deliver this "law of the Spirit of life." That is the way preachers ought to do now. But many go and preach these three facts, and then instead of giving to the people who believe these facts, the "law of the Spirit of life," give them the doctrines of men, the law of creed-makers. Bro. Burnett is forced to say that these men preach the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ; and if his theory were correct, that Paul here defines the gospel to be the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, Paul, if he were here, would be bound to agree that these false teachers and perverters were preaching a pure, perfect and complete gospel. This is the predicament these "our plea" fanatics get themselves into. But these quirky perverters of the truth have about gone to the end of their rope of sand. In discussing with those who are opposed to recognizing the unintelligent and unauthorized duckings of sectarianism, on the authority of "our plea," Bro. Burnett is forced to contend that these sectarian preachers, who hate "the truth as it is in Jesus," and pervert it and deny it, are preaching the gospel of Christ. He is forced to narrow the gospel down to three facts in order to defend the work done by these enemies of truth. But here is what he says about the Baptists when he is not defending their work to justify the inconsistency of receiving their members without immersing them: "Do they not to-day wear an unscriptural name, have a human creed, use the anxious seat, relate experiences, confess feelings instead of faith," (why should they not if it suits them best, since it is just as valid an antecedent to baptism as the confession of faith?) "teach a direct operation of the Spirit, deny that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation; teach that faith comes by praying and not by hearing, and many other things contrary to the apostolic doctrine and practice?" Again, he says: "When the eunuch said, 'See, here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?' did Philip say: 'If thou canst confess to a feeling of love shed abroad in the heart thou mayest?' He made no such confession, and such confession was unknown in the apostolic age. Paul said: 'If thou shalt confess with the mouth the Lord Jesus—not the love shed in the heart.' Baptists do not confess the Lord Jesus with the mouth, nor confess their faith in him as the Son of God, but confess to feeling something in their hearts." Here he clearly charges that the Baptists do not do what the apostle of Christ demands as an antecedent to baptism; but to defend his practice and "our plea" he will endorse their baptism all the same! A man who would attempt, before intelligent readers, to harmonize these broad discrepancies and palpable inconsistencies that Bro. Burnett is found trying to maintain, must possess a superabundance of cheek; and if he feels no compunctious gnawings about the region of his soul after the effort, it would take something like the shower that destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah to work repentance in him.

A. MCG.

IS THE BIBLE TRUE?

There are a great many sensible and good men and women in this world that would answer the above question in the affirmative, and yet contend that it is not necessary to believe and obey the gospel of Christ, in order to be saved; and such characters are generally driven to that conclusion by the ungodly lives of some who claim to be followers of Him who "became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him."—Heb. v: 9.

Now, if the declaration of the apostle is true, that he became the author of salvation to all them that obey him, is it not necessarily implied that he is not the author of salvation to them that do not obey him? I think every sensible thinking person will give an affirmative answer to that question also, otherwise, why should Paul make any distinction between those who obey and those who do not? Paul, in speaking of God, says: "Who will render to every man according to his deeds: to those who, by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, and honor, and immortality, eternal life; but unto them that are contentious and do not obey the truth: but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil."—Rom. ii: 6-9.

Now, Paul says that indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish will be visited upon every soul that obeys not the truth. What truth? The truth that the Savior says makes us free.—John viii: 32. The truth that Peter said, "the brethren in obeying it had purified their souls."—I Pet. i: 22. The truth that is expressed in that form of doctrine that Paul tells his Roman brethren they had obeyed from the heart, and that they were made free from sin.—Rom. vi: 7. But there can be no obedience without law. What law? "The law of the Lord that converts the soul."—Psalms xli: 7. The law of the "Spirit of life in Christ Jesus that frees from sin."—Rom. viii: 22; also Acts ii: 38.

Where is that law first expressed, to the sinner, the alien? The Savior, after his resurrection, after he had conquered death, and all power or authority in heaven and earth was given to him, authorized his apostles to "go and teach all nations."—Matt. xxviii: 19-20. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believes and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believes not shall be damned."—Mark xvi: 15-16. There is the first expression of that law to the sinner, by complying with which he is taken out of the kingdom of darkness and inducted into the kingdom of God's dear Son.—Col. i: 13; the Savior having previously said to Nicodemus: "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."—John iii: 5.

Now, can people, by living moral lives, refraining from evil practices, and visiting the sick, and feeding the hungry, clothing the naked and doing good generally, enter the kingdom or church of Christ without being born of water and the Spirit? Christ says not! If they can, I see no use in the death of Christ, nor any sense in the above quotations of Scripture; besides we find an account of one of the most moral men in the world who was in a lost state until he obeyed the above law, until he was "born of water and the Spirit."—(See Acts x and xi: 1-14.)

We have written this by request.
E. HANSBROUGH.

Dear Bro's. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have been a reader of your good paper, and God grant that you may be spared long to battle for the truth as it is in Christ. Oh, that all of our preachers would proclaim the truth as they used to! How it pains my heart to hear of Bro. Jones' departure! How will it be with you, brother Jones, at that last great day? Where are brothers Carrington and Kendrick? May God bless old brother Strickland, for he is my father in the gospel! What happy times we used to have when we went to hear those old soldiers of the cross battle for the Lord, with the Sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God; and we all had to use our Testaments to silence our foes!

But how is it to-day, my brethren and sisters? Are we all contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints? I am glad to know brother Pennington is still holding out faithful. I do not see anything from brothers Dyches and McFaddin. Wake up, brethren and sisters, put on the whole armor of God and fight the good fight of faith! Oh, that I could once more on earth meet with these old Christians! There are old sisters Holman, McCall and Simpson: if we could meet, what a little heaven on earth it would be, just a little taste of glory! What will it be, dear sisters, when we meet in the mansions prepared for the children of God, if we only hold out to the end! Now I want you to read the 25th chapter of Leviticus, where a blessing is promised to the obedient, and a curse to the disobedient. Also Deut. xxix, where it says the anger of the Lord and his jealousy shall smoke against the man, and all the curses written in this book, that forsakes the word of the Lord to serve other gods. I Kings, xvii, we read that Elijah, the prophet of God, cursed the earth by declaring there should be no rain nor dew for three years, because the Israelites forsook the commandments of God and followed Baalam. Hear him address this question to the people: "Why halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, follow him." And the people answered him not a word. Then said Elijah unto the people: "I, even I, only remain a prophet unto God, but Baal's prophets are four hundred and fifty men." Now, my brethren, this time reminds me of that, when only a few remain true to God's word. While there are six hundred ways of serving Baal, there is only one way to serve God. Let me say, with Elijah: "If the Lord be God, serve him!" All of this shows that this people had once been the children of God, but had turned from his law and made a law of their own. Now, my brethren and sisters, what think you would become of us, were we under that law? or think you God is less strict concerning the law of Christ, than He was the law of Moses? Yet every transgression of that law was punished. What, then? Are we better than they? No, in no wise; for we have before proved to both Jews and Gentiles that they are all under sin. As it is written, "there is none righteous, no, not one; there is none that understandeth; there is none that seeketh after God." God has said: "One Lord, one Faith, one Baptism;" man says six hundred faiths and three baptisms. Which, think you, is right, God or man? God is truth, and He has said: "In vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men." How it pains me to know there is so much vain worship! May God help us all to study and strive to do our Father's will. Oh, that I could say one word that would cause even one erring child to turn and live! I say unto you, my friends, fear not them that kill the body, but fear him, which after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell. So said our Savior, and also, "he that denieth me before men, shall be denied before the angels of God." To refuse to follow Him, is to deny him. Oh, that men could turn and serve God according to his word! Now, bro. Hansbrough, I am in my fifty-first year, and have never written anything for publication. If you see proper you can correct and print this. My love to all my brethren and sisters in Christ. "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and enter through the gates into the city."

Your sister in Christ,
E. H. WEST.

Dear Brother McGary:

In your criticism on my article I think you failed to evince the fact, that I was too loose. While it may be the fact, and, if I know my own heart, I have no desire to loosen up so as to include anything the Lord has left out, and I have no objection to being set right on any anything I may be wrong on, for my motto has been, ever since I came from under the Methodist yoke: "The truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. But back: You said in your article that, that which proves too much, proves nothing, and so say I.

Now let me try you by this rule: You will remember that I was speaking on the confession, and, after talking to one about becoming a Christian, and such an one should say, now I believe all the Bible says about Christ, and demand baptism at your hand; and you say this is loosening up the matter too much, and to prove this you cited the passages that say, he hath a devil and cast out the devil by Beelzebub, the prince of devils.

Now you know that no man could believe any two propositions so diametrically opposed one to the other, and that upon the same testimony, and that no one who believed him to be a devil or an impostor ever did ask to be baptized in Christ's name for the remission of sins, and if this does not prove too much it is because this rule has failed to hold good.

And, as to the other passage which says, to Christians: "If any man has a quarrel against any, forgive one another, as God for Christ's sake has forgiven you. Now I believe that God for Christ's sake does forgive, and that where, when and just the way He promised to do so. I am not one of the number that loves the commandments of men more than God, and therefore have no desire to legalize any of the hundred and one human inventions of this or any other age, which is but an attempt to subvert the Lord's order for the salvation of the race. I am heart and hand with every brother in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, to earnestly contend for the Faith once for all time and places delivered to the Saints, for this is the only way that God can be glorified on earth or in heaven—by doing all we do in the name, or by the authority of Christ.

But I have said enough at present, perhaps too much.

Your brother for the truth,
J. R. LANE.

ELD. J. S. SWEENEY, THE GREAT DEBATANT, ON EDUCATION.

In the American Christian Review of March 17, 1887, is a portion of a speech made by Bro. Sweeney at a union prayer meeting on the subject of the education of our children, and upon some of his remarks I wish to make some comments and call his attention to them.

He says, "I would have schools for all the children in the country; and I would have only Christian men and Christian women—a good many women—for teachers. I don't mean I would have them all of the church I belong to, in the denominational sense. I would be willing to have some of all denominations of Christians. I don't know that I would exclude even Mr. Craddock's church. (Catholic, I suppose). I would have godly men and women, I mean Christian men and women—at least Christians at heart—for teachers in our schools."

Now, brethren, I wish you would read carefully the above extract from Bro. Sweeney's remarks on education at a union prayer meeting, (union on what?) and then remember that Bro. Sweeney is one of the greatest debaters in the United States, and even goes to Canada debating with sectarians, (whom he calls denominations,) to prove to them that they are wrong in faith and practice in regard to the first principles of the Christian religion, and that they have never complied with the law of the Spirit by which Paul says he was made free from the law of Sin and death, and by compliance with which law all have been made free from that day to this, that have ever entered the Kingdom, or Church of Christ; and then turns around and calls them "Christians, and Christians at heart." Yes, he even recognizes the members of that old Mother of Harlots, as well as her daughters. Yes, he has been running with and after the great linguist, Dr. Ditzler, (Yes, Dr. of divinity, and the divinity must be sickly to need doctoring,) and has been debating with him (about the non-essentials), (not necessary to understand them) in so many different languages, that he has forgotten the pure Speech of Canaan, and has taken up with the language of Ashdod. I don't believe he can now pronounce Shilobeth, he has got his speech so mixed: See Judges xii: 6, also Nehemiah xiii: 23, 24, and if he can't, I would not advise that he should be slain; but I believe that the brethren ought to stop him [from traveling all over the country debating with sectarians, and his brethren at home ought to stop him from preaching there, unless he quits using the language of Ashdod.

Listen! He says, "I don't mean that I would have them all of the church that I belong to." Bro. Sweeney, what church do you belong to? I suppose you will answer the church of Christ, the Church of God, and you would not have them all belong to that church! Then pray what church would you have them belong to? Will you please tell us?

Listen again! "Christian denominations," "Christians at heart!" It seems to me that Dr. Ditzler ought to give him graduating papers, at least in the language of Ashdod, if no other. Oh, shame, shame: talk about Christian denominations, Christian divisions, Christian heresies, "Christians at heart." Brethren, ought we not to hang our heads in mingled shame and disgust when our champion debater talks that way in the presence of that old Mother and her daughters? Where, oh where, are we drifting!

How do the Apostles Paul and Peter talk about these denominations, divisions, heresies? Why, Paul says they are the works of the flesh, "and they who do (or practice) (and, I suppose, encourage,) such thing, shall not inherit the kingdom of God."—Gal. v: 19-21.

So, Bro. Sweeney, it behooves you to be on your guard. Peter says: "but there were false prophets also among the people even as there shall be false teachers among you who privily (secretly, slyly,) (yes, at union prayer meetings,) shall bring in damnable heresies, (divisions, denominations,) even denying the Lord that bought them (by denying his word) and many shall follow their pernicious ways by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of."—II Pet. ii: 1-2.

Bro. Sweeney, we ought to be very cautious about either teaching or encouraging the teaching of falsehood, and thereby keeping up these damnable heresies, or denominations.

One more item and I will stop. He says, "No one wields a mightier influence over the child in casting its character and shaping its future, than its school teacher. I am a little jealous of the teacher of my children in school. The good teacher generally gets into the hearts of pupils, and impresses himself or herself into their very lives." Yes, Bro. Sweeney, you had better be not only "a little jealous," but greatly jealous of your children's teacher, for she will "impress herself into their very lives," yes, and make Roman Catholics of them, and you will be held accountable for it, for you say she is a Catholic: But you say: "She loves God and Jesus."

Now let us see if she loves God and Jesus: John says, "and this is love that we walk after His commandments," that is, after God's. Again: He that saith I know Him and keepeth not His commandments, is a liar and the truth is not in him.—1st John i: 2.

Again the Savior in addressing his disciples says: "Now you are clean through the word which I have spoken to you."—John xv: 3. And then tells them if they keep his commandments they shall abide in his love: "Whoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them I will liken him to a wise man who built his house upon a rock."—Matt. vii: 24.

Does that Catholic teacher walk after the commandments of God? Does she say she knows Him and don't keep his commandments? If so, she is a liar. Has she ever been made clean through the word of the Savior? If not, she is not in the vineyard and can't do His will as a Christian. Does she hear the saying of the Savior, and do them? or does she hear the sayings of the Pope and Priest, and do them? Which, Bro. Sweeney? Does she love God and Christ? Will you please answer in the FIRM FOUNDATION, or some other paper, and send me a copy. Your brother in Christ,

E. HANSBROUGH.

THEY KNEW.

In the re-baptism controversy now going on, I have taken no part. Whether or not a knowledge of the fact that baptism for the remission of sins is essential to its validity, I have neither affirmed nor denied in anything that I have written. I have not kept silent, however, because I regard the question of no importance, but because I prefer to let abler pens deal with the question. But this much I affirm, and think I am able to prove, that in apostolic times believers knew for what they were baptized. My first proof is based upon the fact that the apostles preached remission of sins or forgiveness to the people—"And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." "Through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins."—Luko 23, 47, Acts 13, 38. This forgiveness or remission they preached was either conditional or unconditional. If conditional, they so preached it. "It was conditional," you say. Very well; then they so preached it, and here is some of the proof: "And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name." Notice, repentance and remission were to be preached in connection, not one without the other. Now listen at the preaching: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out." Acts 2, 38, and 8, 10. Now, since the apostles preached to the people a conditional remission, it follows that the people knew that they would receive the remission when they complied with the conditions; and since baptism was the last in the list of conditions, it follows that they knew they were being baptized in order to receive remission of sins.

My second proof is found in Mark 16: 15, 16. Jesus said to the apostles, when he sent them with "the word of this salvation" to the people, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Here Jesus promised salvation (the same the apostles preached—salvation from sin, remission or forgiveness) to the believer when baptized. Who will dare affirm that the apostles baptized believers without making known to them the fact that they had the promise of salvation, from Jesus himself, when baptized? Nobody, I presume. Well, then, does it not follow that those believers, if they had any confidence in the promise of their Savior, expected to receive remission when baptized? But if they expected to receive remission when baptized, of course they knew they were being baptized in order to receive it.

Third proof: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." This was said to persons who had just been made believe by "hearing the word of God," and who therefore, in great earnestness had cried out, "What shall we do?" Do for what? The answer shows, if Peter did not misunderstand them. "For the remission of sins," Peter said. The matter stands thus: Those inquirers wanted to know what to do for the remission of sins, and Peter told them to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins. To say they did not know what they were baptized for, is to say they were a set of blockheads.

I introduce Acts 10: 4, in the fourth place: "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." In connection with this I quote: "For there is no other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." From these passages it is evident that the apostles, in their day, made known the fact fully and clearly to the people, that salvation or remission is found in, or comes by, or through the name of Jesus. So then, the people whom they taught, know this. At the house of Cornelius, the apostle Peter, having preached the facts of the gospel, that Cornelius might hear and believe them, continued by saying, "To him (Jesus) give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins. When Cornelius heard this, if he was the sort of man I think he was, he got two ideas: 1. That remission of sins is received through the name of Jesus. 2. That the believer is the one who receives it. Immediately after Peter had spoken the above to Cornelius, kinsmen and near friends, "he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord." (Jesus.) When Cornelius heard this, if he was still the sort of man I think he was, he now knew two other things, in addition to the above two. 1. He knew that he was at that time a believer. 2. He knew it was his duty to be baptized in the name of Jesus. Here is the sum of what he knew, after Peter had commanded him to be baptized: He knew that the believer is the one who receives remission; knew that he was a believer; knew that remission is received through the name of Jesus; know that he had to be baptized in the name of Jesus. He knew, therefore, as well as he knew that his name was Cornelius, that he, being a believer, had to be baptized in the name of Jesus for the remission of sins to which he was entitled through that name.

My fifth, and final argument for the present, is based upon the fact that the rejoicing of apostolic converts followed their baptism. The eunuch, when baptized, went on his way rejoicing. The jailer, when baptized, sat meat before Paul and Silas, and rejoiced. Here it is: They rejoiced because they were saved or freed from sin, as they thought. But they rejoiced as soon as baptized, which shows they thought they were freed then. Now, unless they were fooled in the matter, they obtained freedom where they expected it. Their rejoicing immediately after baptism shows where they expected. They did not, they could not, expect remission when baptized, unless they were being baptized for remission. If I pay a man a dollar for a hat, I expect the hat when the dollar is paid. Why? Because I know I am paying the dollar in order to get the hat. In apostolic times the people knew they were baptized in order to get remission of sins.—J. in Christian Messenger.

CYPRESS INN, Tenn., April 11, '87.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Enclosed you will find one dollar for which I wish you to send me the FIRM FOUNDATION for 12 months. It has the right tone. It has the ring of the old Jerusalem Blade. Dear brethren, you are engaged in a work that will, if persisted in, add bright stars to your crown "over there." Therefore press on, you, without a doubt, are standing upon the "Firm Foundation." The Foundation which is laid in Zion, on which, he who builds, should take heed.

Hence, the course you are pursuing will greatly add to the quality of the church, if not the quantity, and this is the very thing we so much need. The fact is, that almost every innovation which has crept into the church since the beginning of the current Reformation, has been devised and introduced by those who have been "shook into" the church, instead of having been baptized into the Christ. Indeed, it is high time to call a halt, and rouse up the drowsy watchmen of this, so called, enlightened age. Yes, the great trouble is, that those whose influence weighs greatly with many, have, in the last few years, recalitrated—turned back to the Flesh pots of Egypt.

I tell you it is hard for a man, when he does so many things among the sects which has such a tendency to popularize, elevate and exalt him in the eyes of the world, not to have some inclinations to participate in them. So it has turned out with many of our preaching brethren, who, a few years ago, manifested so much zeal and courage in defending the truth; that no one even dreamed in so short a time they could be found with their pockets filled with gold wedges of Babylonish mould.

But alas! It is so, and what must be done? Let us do exactly like Bro. McGary, and others; place our feet upon the Firm Foundation and cry aloud and spare not. Brethren, wake up, the night cometh when no man can work. Let us not fear to declare the whole counsel of God. Yes, let us be like Joshua of old, when his people were preferring idols to the living God, said, (let others do as they may) "but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

So, hoping and praying that you may live long to proclaim the truth, I am your brother in Christ,

C. E. HOLT.

NOT RE-BAPTIZED BUT RE-MISSION.

"Bro. W. H. D. Carrington, who was re-baptized by Bro. McGary, says he is very sorry he was re-baptized, and that he is not in sympathy with the new heresy."—Christian Messenger.

Who is making the noise about re-baptism? Bro. Burnett, who is teaching and contending for re-baptism? Nobody. The new Testament teaches baptism for remission of sins—baptism into Christ—baptized into one body.

We know of no other way that men can attain to remission, but to be baptized for re-mission; and this is what we claim and teach. But Bro. B. has misunderstood us, and got the "re" in the wrong place: hope he will recant before he makes a stumbling block of the sacred ordinance of heaven. But how new is this "new heresy?" and who first practiced it? Over eighteen hundred years ago, a preacher came to Ephesus and found twelve men that had been baptized: he interrogated them and found that the eyes of their understanding had not been properly enlightened, he taught them the way of the Lord more perfectly; and when they heard that, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

Were they "re-baptized," Bro. B.? If so, Paul introduced the "new heresy," and the new heresy is just as new as the New Testament. And now if you will read the 42nd verse of this same chapter (Acts 19) you will find these twelve men "were very sorry that they had been re-baptized, and was not in sympathy with the 'new heresy.'" Bro. B. should be the last man to complain of innovations and sectarianism in the church. Jesus said: "I am the door, if any man enter by me (baptized into him—into the one body) he shall be saved, but if any climb in any other way, the same is a thief and a robber." You have persuaded and induced thieves and robbers to climb in other ways, and now you should not complain at them for following their occupation.

Now, Bro. B., in brotherly love, let me ask you this one question, and please give us a direct answer

—yes or no: Is a Baptist—a member of the Baptist church—a member of the church of God? Now you have negatived that question ten thousand times: you have told them that they are not, ten thousand times, and it is recorded in the Messenger ten thousand times. Now, please tell us if you are authorized to take them by the hand and thus induct them in, when God has ordained that "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body—the church. And then publish your report, "So many added to the church by confession and baptism, and so many from the sects." That is to say, so many by the Lord's way, and so many by our plan. And this is what you call the reformation; and those who oppose it are the "new reformers of the deformity." Well, you have the "re" in the wrong place again. Restoration is what you need; and may God help us all to lay aside all malice, and envy, and strife, and evil speakings, and false accusations, and receive the truth in the love of it, and exclude all such man-born creatures from the body of Christ, that we may keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

But now comes Bro. Jones, the associate editor of the Messenger, with the open words, and unerring counsel of God, in his hand, and reads the decision of the whole matter, from which there is no court of appeal. Let him who rejects it remember that he rejects the counsel of God against himself.

Christian Messenger please copy.
A CHRISTIAN.

BOTH SIDES.

It is hard to decide a question without both sides begiven; at least, this is so with uneducated people. Most persons take the word of the speaker or writer unquestioned; or turn a deaf ear to what he says and never investigate a single thought presented. Since this is so, it becomes the duty of the true soldier to arouse a desire for investigation. Why are people so careless? We would suggest, as a means of arousing people, that the whole article of an opponent, in most cases, be given, whether we disagree with all of it or not. If the FIRM FOUNDATION had given the whole of the Messenger's arguments regardless of points, the reader could have seen at a glance how Bro. Burnett dodged about, like a fish in shallow water, to avoid the real issue.

We talked to a sister, recently, who reads the Messenger, but does not take the F. F. She thought the Messenger had "riddled" the F. F. That sister is an intelligent woman, though she has but little education. From this we are bound to concede that the Messenger has succeeded in blinding at least one of its readers. We intend to have that sister read the F. F. which contains the other side of the argument.

When we talk to persons outside the church of Christ, and many who claim to be in the church, if we fail to give both sides of the question, our arguments fall powerless. For example, let a preacher travel a smooth road, taking care not to cross any one's line, and what effect will his sermons have? Why, the people will say, he is a good man. But what will the Master say at his coming? A man cannot declare the whole counsel of God and always "prophecy smooth things." Some of the counsel of God is not very smooth to most people. If it were, there would not be so much kicking at the F. F.

"Let us speak where the Bible speaks, and where the Bible is silent let us be silent."

We should speak in kindness; that is the spirit of christianity, but we should not neglect to tell the whole truth, just because it might hurt some man's feelings. Hence, we say, go on Bro. McGary, Bro. Hansbrough, and all others who are fighting the good fight. You will win ere the close of the day.

Sister Sarah, continue your good work. The Master will reward you.
JAS. R. GRAHAM.

THE CHRISTIAN MESSENGER AND THE BAPTISTS.

The ridiculous "Reformation" of the nineteenth century has made the whole world sick over their interminable wrangle over organs, and pastors and plans and elders and everything else belonging to their system except the one ritualistic and popish doctrine of baptism as a saving ordinance. In this there is general agreement.—Baptist Gleaner.

There are so many men among us who are trying to imitate the Baptists and other sectarians and run off after plans and organs and pastors and other unscriptural things that it takes a good deal of labor to hold them to the old paths. It is not surprising that it makes the Baptist world sick to see some of us condemning the departures from the Bible that would bring us down to a level with the Baptists—a miserable sect in Babylon. [And yet Bro. B. will take one of these miserable fellows and raise him to a level with himself by a shake of the hand.—J. W. J.] We are trying to go by the Bible—you are not—and departures from the scriptural model that cause us to contend and labor, you would never notice. Of course you cannot appreciate our efforts to maintain scriptural teaching and practice, and it has no effect upon you only to make you sick to see others so much more zealous for the divine model than yourselves. Notwithstanding the serious digressions in regard to plans, pastors, and organs, thank the Lord, no one has yet diverged far enough from the old paths to wear human names, hold a human creed or use a mourning-bench as a means of grace and salvation. We yet hold enough undivided truth to make sick a good multitude of Baptists every year. Yea, about six thousand annually vomit up their unscriptural name, creed, sect, bench and practices and come to the Bible. [And are generally received by Bro. B. and others according to an old prescription: "Well shaken before taken."—J. W. J.]

If you did not have a most vitiated taste in your mouth, you would not call baptism a ritualistic Romish ordinance. Peter says 'Baptism doth also now save us,' and Jesus says, 'He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved,' and you know they are not ritualistic Romanists. We have a unanimous agreement among ourselves on this point, and with Peter and Christ; and the Baptists have a unanimous disagreement. It is strange that they should unanimously agree to contradict the Scriptures. It would make the world sick to see you do this, if it did not see you do so many sickening things that it has got used to it.—Christian Messenger.

It is stranger still that the editor who wrote the foregoing should say that the Baptists are in the kingdom of God. "A miserable sect in Babylon," and who "unanimously agree to contradict the Scriptures" in the kingdom. It is passing strange! Then, when one of these miserable Babylonians learns something about Jerusalem and wants to go up to the house of the Lord, to walk in His ways: when he leaves behind him the old city, with its heathenish customs and names, and gives up his contradictions of the Scripture, Bro. Burnett and others will welcome him with open hands, without obedience to the Lord. What matters if he was born in Babylon? what's the difference if he did contradict Peter, and say baptism is not for the remission of sins? and contradict Christ, saying that he was saved before and without baptism? He was dipped-washed, and may express himself as satisfied with that Babylonish washing and the brethren will say all right, come ahead; it don't make a particle of difference about your contradicting Christ and Peter, just so you now believe them. We'll just count that washing you got over there as genuine—so come along—SHAKE! The washings of Babylon will not do for Jerusalem. If God still has any people in Babylon and they will heed the call to come out, they must sanctify themselves according to the cleansing of the sanctuary before they can make acceptable offerings. They must do like God's people did in Corinth, Acts xviii: they heard, believed and were baptized. J. W. JACKSON.

Bro. Burnett in his war against the Baptist Gleaner says: "We think now of a statement made by the Savior which Christians believe, that the Gleaner would give a thousand dollars to have expunged from the book. It reads: 'He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved.' Also another statement, made by an inspired disciple of Christ, which Christians believe, that the Gleaner would give another thousand dollars to have expunged from the book. It reads: 'Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins.'"

Do you believe the above statement, my brother? Baptists do not. Do you believe the "statement" made by "that old heretic named Simon Peter (your words) as follows: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit?" Baptists do not. Why, then, do you strengthen their hands by your virtual endorsement of their claims to be the church of Christ or Christians? Your exposition of their inconsistencies, can do but little good so long as you accept them as in the kingdom of God—Christians—in spite of their inconsistency and contradiction of God's word.

When you advocate the reception of Baptists (without obedience) you say that we do not believe commands,—that there is positively no good news in a command,—but above you say we believe the statements made by Christ—Ananias and Peter.—"The legs of the lame are not equal."

I rejoice, however, to see that you have at last found out where the difficulty lies. It is in the faith of the Baptist. We believe God's word, they believe Baptist tradition; believing God's word, we obey it; they, believing Baptist tradition, obey it. When they open their hearts to the reception of the truth, and believe the word of God, we will receive them upon their obedience from the heart to that word.

Bro. Burnett's special attention is invited to the foregoing.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN ON DROUTH SUFFERERS.

It is remarkable that the greatest and loudest calls for help come from persons claiming to be drouth sufferers in Texas, appears in Journals that are opposed to all systematic missionary work. We presume the calls are from the same class of brethren. It is generally the case that those who will do nothing for the cause of Christ will not do much for their families. And many who are suffering from their own indolence, say it is the drouth they are suffering from.—Texas Christian.

It will be remembered that the paper from which this editorial is clipped, is published in the interest of the society brethren and of Ad-Ran college. We have seldom seen a thing which displayed more uncalled for venom than this. His effort is to make it appear that there is no suffering among our brethren in the west. That their suffering is all due to their own indolence and bad management, and that therefore, they ought to receive no help. In the name of our Master we ask Bro. C. to read up. Has he forgotten, or did he know, that the legislature—after looking into the matter—appropriated $100,000 to help the sufferers in the west? Does he know that the committee to distribute this fund have gone among the sufferers and report terrible destitution? Does he not know these things? He does know. Then why this attempt to paralyze help? First he would make it appear that there is no real suffering, save such as is common to laziness. Second, that the call is made through papers "opposed to all missionary work," and he presumes the calls are from the same class. Here is a pointer thrown out to the society brethren to prevent their aiding in this work, and calculated to stifle all efforts for the sufferers. If Bro. Clark knows a single paper published among us, which is opposed to systematic missionary work, we should like him to point it out. There is no such paper. He says again, "It is generally the case that those who will do nothing for the cause of Christ, will not do much for their families." This is terribly unkind. He has come to think — it seems — that there is nothing being done, save what is reported through his paper. While there are thousands being converted, by the church working after the Lord's plan, he imagines "no one is doing anything for the Lord's cause but us." Well my brother, if you will just look around you, and out of yourself a little, you will find there are thousands who have not bowed the knee to Baal, who are at work for the Lord. Hundreds are laying hold of this opportunity to do something for Christ, by helping his hungry disciples. Christ will take it as done to him, whether we feed these hungry brethren or try to keep others from doing it, as you have done. It is bad enough to have had no rain for nearly twenty months, without being accused of indolence and laziness. But we are charitable enough to believe you only wanted to keep your society brethren from aiding in this work, and not to prevent others. We hope this is all. We could not reasonably expect them to do much, they are too busy raising money to pay preachers, and the worst of it is, they have more preachers than money. But while you are raising money for preachers, we will go on, and will raise all we can for the poor saints. Our Master is hungry—in the person of his disciples—and we must feed him. If any of the brethren want proof that there is real suffering west, we can give it to them and if it stops all the preachers in the state for a whole year, we ought to save our brethren from starvation. The churches are responding to our calls—thank God—and help is coming in. Received ten dollars this morning from the church of Christ at Nebo, Tenn. We are sending money where it is greatly needed, just as fast as it is received. Let brethren everywhere heed this call. History is repeating itself. The brethren in the first age of the church had a chance to show their love for Christ, by aiding famine stricken brethren in Judea. We have the same opportunity given us in our brethren west, and the Lord will say of us at last, "in as much as ye did it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me." Send money to T. R. Burnett, Bonham; or to me at Longview, Texas, and it will be forwarded to the needy.—John T. Poe, in Christian Messenger.

We heartily commend these words to our readers. Perhaps, as the editor of the Texas Christian has not had a chance to fumble with funds for drouth sufferers, he feels slighted and envious over it, and gratifies his animus by this effort to create the impression that these unfortunate brethren are lazy and unworthy. A man who would retard or in any way hinder a flow of Christian liberality to these destitute brethren and hungry women and children, would be an unsafe medium through which to send help—Such a man's heart is so cold that his hands are doubtless clammy and sticky. The slanderous insinuations of such heartless wretches about certain journals being "opposed to all systematic missionary work," is not apt to weigh very much.

—A. McG.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have just been reading sister Saral's letter in which she makes an appeal to the sisters for more thoughts from them on the subject of practical Christianity, and it is strange to me that so few have responded. Is it possible that the older sisters let the love of the world crowd out the love of the truth? It is a fact greatly to be deplored, these sisters are greatly neglected, I mean the young sisters. While they are surrounded by all the allurements of a proud world, they greatly need the advice of those who are older to assist them in fighting against the sins of the flesh. But a failure to get this, is often the cause of their failure to live right. I am always glad to get the F. F., and read sister Saral's talks to the sisters, and regret that she does not write more. While the brethren are trying to suppress the vain desire to run off after the innovations of the day, the sisters should not be neglected. Imagine a young sister, just starting out to live the Christian life, in a congregation where the older sisters try to follow all the fashions of the nations around them; whose children are allowed to spend the Lord's day on the creek fishing, or at some sectarian Sunday School, and are never made to attend the Lord's house, and take part in the work of studying the word of God. What will be the result of such influence as that? Furthermore, when the Lord's day comes, and the hour arrives for worship, the young sister goes there, expecting to be taught something of what she ought to do, but the older sisters, if there at all, have read that women ought not to talk in church, and they try to follow that rule, especially about the things that pertain to eternal life. But they do not forget to tell how many chickens they have raised, or of some new pattern they have found, or of some new report they have heard.

"Set your affections on things above and not on things on this earth." Why is this so neglected? Is it not because the mind is so full of the things of this world? The older sisters are not always to be blamed for this state of affairs. The young sisters, of course, will be influenced to some extent by the older ones, but they themselves are at fault in this matter. How often is it the case that they go to church and refuse to take any part in the worship, but spend their time while there talking to some one that is not a member of the church, about some new thing that is going the rounds. If this is the way they spend the time while at church, what think ye they do the rest of the week? My sisters, do you deny yourselves of any ungodliness and worldly lust? If so, in what respect? Have you laid aside any of your ruffles, or have you stopped any of your worldly amusements? Did it ever occur to you that you would have to do this if you ever reach that "sun-bright clime?" You who have children to raise, do you ever teach them how to pray by praying with them? If we neglect this, can we say that we have done our best? Dear sisters, let us give more of our time to the study of the word, that we may be able to teach it to our children, that they may rise up and call us blessed.

Your sister in hope of eternal life.

"Do you Believe there are Good Christians in the Different Denominations?"

This question was asked me by an intelligent class-leader of the Methodist church, who was surrounded by his friends and kindred Cornelius like.

I replied: "In order to a scriptural answer, we must of necessity, determine what is essential to constitute a good Christian." After some deliberation, all were unwilling to answer. I was requested to give an answer. I said: "In my judgment, one who believes the gospel of Christ with all his heart, and obeys from the heart all that the gospel requires of him, is a good Christian." To this all agreed. It was also agreed that nothing more nor less than faith in the divinity of Christ as the Son of God, and implicit obedience to all the ordinances and precepts of the gospel of Christ are indispensable elements of the christian religion.

Upon these agreements, I proceeded to answer the first important question. I used the following illustration: Bro. B., an old-side Baptist preacher, was pastor of a large church of the same faith on the one side of us, and Bro. A. was our Presiding Elder who ministered to the M. E. church on the other side. "Suppose," said I, "that we get Bro. A. with all our Methodist brethren to meet with Bro. B. and get him to preach his doctrine in full and every element of church polity, all of which his brethren cheerfully endorse. After a full investigation of the doctrine and usage of these Baptists, we ask the Presiding Elder and all his brethren: "Do you believe the doctrine and practice of these Baptist brethren?" All will doubtless answer, we do not believe it! Next in order: Bro. B. and all his fraternity will hear Bro. A. preach the Methodist doctrine and discipline in full; being interrogated, all declare they do not believe the doctrine nor discipline of the Methodist church. Now, suppose Bro. B. preaches and practices the gospel as did the inspired apostles, neither more nor less, can we find a good christian among those who do not believe and obey it? Again: Suppose our Presiding Elder preaches and practices the gospel as did the inspired apostles, neither more nor less, can we find a good christian among the unbelievers?.

The same is true of all denominations. If any one of them teaches and administers the gospel of Christ as did the inspired apostles, it follows as a logical sequence that all those who differ from this apostolic model and teach and practice otherwise, are to some extent unbelievers and hence under condemnation. For Jesus says, "He that believeth not shall be damned." No one dissented from the answer.

"Then we have no patience to controvert with these one-sided, scrap-clipper, bushwhackers of the Foundation who never let their readers see but one side of the question."

"An honest confession is good for the soul." The above scrap is clipped from the Christian Messenger. Who is the one-sided controvertor? Is it not the man who will not affirm his own faith and practice, but tries to force his brethren to affirm negatives? Whenever Bro. Burnett can accumulate a sufficient stock of patience and courage to affirm that his practice in receiving immersed sectarians is scriptural, we will give his article in full. If he will not debate both sides of the question, we are determined that not only our readers but also the Messenger readers shall see his inconsistencies; and to this end we sent the FIRM FOUNDATION to more than 700 of his readers free of charge. Shall we have both sides of the debate, Bro. Burnett? The Messenger readers will demand it of you, either to show your scriptural authority for your faith and practice, or to cease your warfare against those who are contending for the truth.

Bro. McGary:

I desire to answer a question propounded by Bro. Lane. He says there is no set form of words that every person under all circumstances should make alike, (that is, the confession); by which, we would understand him to infer that some persons under some circumstances should use some set form of words to express the confession. Now, my brother, please tell us who these persons are and under what circumstances.

Again: He (Bro. L.) says: "If a lady or gentleman was to talk to me on the subject of christianity, and say he believes all the Bible says of Jesus, would you baptize him, or would you mock him by asking him to state that he believes that Jesus is the Christ?" I certainly would, my brother; and, if that is what you call mockery, I had rather mock man than to mock God. God is not mocked, neither is He slack, as some men count slackness. Such a statement would be entirely out of order, because men's belief or faith never precedes their understanding; hence, the necessity of teaching. A falsehood taught, believed and obeyed will never save any man.

Do you think so, Bro. Lane? Let us come to the Book of books and be governed by its teachings.

Please answer the above in the next issue of the F. F.

Your brother for the truth,

A brother writes: "Bro. McGary, I have been a subscriber to the FIRM FOUNDATION since Sept. a year ago; but please discontinue it. I like it very well but I had rather read the Bible than it. I paid in advance for the first year, will pay the rest soon."

We are glad the brother has read our paper till he has learned to love the Bible. There can be no better work than that of turning back the wandering brotherhood from where the "advanced thinkers" of "our plea" have led them, to the volume of truth which is a sufficient rule of faith and practice. When we can turn them back to the Bible we are willing to drop them from our list; but when they turn from the FIRM FOUNDATION, to those papers that are advocating "our plea" we part from them reluctantly and with a sigh—yes, my brother, the Bible is better than all of the papers.

Do good by stealth, and I wish to find it fame.—[Pope.]

TAKEN SEVERELY TO TASK.

We see that Mr. J. C. Denton, of Madison county, a good, clever Hardshell preacher, takes us to task in the "Herald of Truth," a Hardshell organ that heralds the dreams, imaginations and liver complaints of that "elect" people—elected to tell these outrageous yarns. Mr. Denton seems to have taken umbrage at us for calling Madisonville an ungodly village; and for referring to a certain Methodist lady as one of whom a certain young man said, "she is a greater stumbling block in the way of truth than every drinking saloon in this town;" and for defending the faith once delivered to the saints, against the nonsensical fabrication that Mr. Dalton,—Mr. Denton's Goliath,—is trying to palm off on the people as his conversion, the process of which was through the "liver and bowels" of said Dalton.

Mr. Denton thinks we are a very "venomous" fellow. He says we challenged him for a discussion. Now, in spite of the pernicious hallucinations that so woefully darken his mind and direct his heart "away from the truth as it is in Jesus," we believe that he is a truthful gentleman; hence, we believe the printer made him say we challenged him, when Mr. Denton intended to say McCarty. He divides his article between McGary and McCarty.

In conclusion, although Mr. Denton anticipates a great flow of venom from us when we reply to him, we have to say, that we feel no unkindness towards him, instead of unkindness our feeling toward him is that of commiseration. He is duped and led by such prophets as are described in Jeremiah xxiii: 28-32. Poor fellow! if it be possible, we hope the light of truth may some day shine into his heart.

Bro. McGary:

I am well pleased with the doctrine you advocate. Hope you will continue steadfast in the doctrine of Christ to the day of your death. Reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long suffering and doctrine: the time has come when men are turned away from the truth, lusting after this world preaching, the doctrine of devils; living fat on high salaries, crowding out the old soldiers of the cross; following after the devilish lust. Brother McGary, keep yourself pure and separate from sinners, let the church have one sound paper. Yours in hope of eternal life,

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

I thought I would write an article for the FIRM FOUNDATION, and if you think proper, publish it, if not, you can give it room in the waste basket.

I will direct my thoughts to our public teachers. We will read Rev. xxii: 14, "Blessed are they that do His commandments that they may have right to the tree of life and enter in through the gates into the city." I fear that many of our public teachers have failed to obey this Scripture, have failed to comply with other instructions which I will soon notice. If teachers do not the commandments, they will not have right to the tree of life: consequently, cannot enter into the city. Then they should make full proof of their ministry. Jesus says: "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit."—Matt. xxviii: 19. Is this all? No; if it was, a large per cent. would hear, "well done." Jesus further instructs the same teachers, 20th verse: "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." I understand that it is as much the duty of a teacher to instruct the immersed as it is to teach the unimmersed; and, if the Master's instructions had been faithfully obeyed, there would not have been so many lukewarm congregations.

The apostles obeyed the Master, therefore, we should follow their example. It is said of those baptized: "And they continued steadfastly in the apostle's doctrine, (teaching), and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers."—Acts ii: 42. They could not have continued in the apostle's teaching unless they had been taught; it is not so popular to teach men to deny themselves and take up the cross and follow Jesus, as it is to go out and preach sentimental discourses: for thereby they obtain a "great" name and receive a rich reward in the way of praise, money, etc., and should they do as Paul, rebuke sharply in those who claim to be Christians, they would be informed that they did not send for them to preach to the church but to convert sinners. It seems like the chief object is to have numbers, whether they obey the gospel or not, for I verily believe that many are added to the congregations that are not added to the church, and especially those that have come from the sects, on their baptism so-called.

It is an admitted fact that there are many noble exceptions, for we have many brethren who will not barter the word of God for a mess of red pottage; whilst there are many others that court the friendship of the world, and prophesy smooth things to that extent that they are invited and take part in the union meeting, so-called, and thereby bring reproach upon the church of Christ. In this they are unlike the disciples of Christ, for he (Jesus) says to them: "They shall put you out of the synagogues: yea, the time cometh that whosoever killeth you will think he doeth God service. And these things will they do unto you."—John xvi: 2-3. Notwithstanding this forewarning, they obeyed their master and suffered accordingly. But alas! there is a change in this our day of Bible knowledge. What prompted the disciples to obey the Lord and suffer the loss of all things? They loved the Lord with all their heart. Why do men act as they do now? For the love of money and praise of men. Eternal life was placed before men as an incentive to suffer for Jesus, but it appears eternal life is lost sight of, and the life that is, is the chief concern.

The teachers of to-day have wandered away from the old paths in search of things condemned in the Bible, and prominent among them is money. Paul to Timothy vi: 10, says: "For the love of money is the root of all evil, which while some coveted after they have erred from the faith and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." The Bible union, in order to obtain money, have organized societies unknown in the Bible, and under the pretense of preaching the gospel, have sent their agents around on their circuits to stimulate the brethren to give. What for? To support the leaders of the societies.

We had a visitor in our section, to raise money to be sent to headquarters, at McKinney, so I was credibly informed. I did not see the brother, and I learned he expressed a desire to see the writer, having learned he was a renter and a poor man. He further expressed a desire to enlist the writer. I had rather follow the plow and labor at my own expense, than to go into the societies. In the first, I can honor my Master; in the latter, it is possible I would be honored by a few here, to the dishonor of my Master. I was told by a good brother and sister that the above mentioned visitor said to this sister, in about this language: "The grass is putting up, and you can make and sell butter, and the 19th of (a certain month) could send up her dollar." Now, instead of this manner of begging, if the public teachers would lay aside their unholy language and commence to instruct the members in their various duties,—when they have cleansed their own skirts by following the example of the apostles,—then the brethren will give of their means to support all the worthy preachers; and if there is any unworthy ones, they should not have a support. If they continue, we may expect them to go to the extent the Methodists did, in our boyhood days: If they failed to receive the money, they would tell the sisters "they would take a hank of thread;" and we may soon expect our brethren to call for a twist of tobacco.

We would not have any city pastors if our teachers had done their duty, for, after instructing the church, they would leave the flock in the charge of competent elders, and would depart to the country to preach to the world, having been assured that himself and family would be cared for. Again: If our teachers would teach like Peter, Paul, James, John, and others of that day, pride would not be encouraged as it is, and the poor disciples would feel themselves welcome in the presence of their rich brethren. But, alas! the preachers, by their large salaries, have set the example of fine dressing: they wear fine clothes, gold chains, rings, etc., and dress their families fine; hence, the spirit of trying to excel has led the once humble, loving Christians away from the teachings of Paul and Peter to that of men. And the millinery shop is resorted to, where they bedeck themselves in an unbecoming and unchristian-like manner; therefore, the poor brethren are driven away, feeling themselves unworthy to associate with their rich neighbors. I understand the Bible to teach that we are one body, many members; but one body, the rich christian in this world's goods and the poor christian in this world's goods, should all be rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom of God, then there would be no room for a spirit of rivalry, but each should strive to educate and encourage humbleness, meekness, love and such like.

I fear that many have their good things here. Paul said, he shunned not to declare all the counsel of God. If our teachers would do like Paul, they would instruct those brought into the kingdom that it is wrong to visit saloons, theatres, shows, fairs, dances and play-parties, and would encourage them by precept and example to be rich in good works, by reading and learning their duty from the Bible, and following the Master, who went about doing good. Alas! we often hear that preachers are regular visitors at such places, thereby encouraging their flocks to conform to this world; therefore there is no such thing as renewing their minds, and as a natural consequence they are useless members of the church, with one exception, they pay the pastor.

There are many things we would like to say, but fearing we may weary your patience, and your readers, we will close by saying, my dear brethren we love you with a pure heart fervently and may you be spared long on the earth to contend for the truth, in the prayer of your humble brother,

JAMES P. MCCONNELL.

Editors Firm Foundation:

BRETHREN:—On the fourth Lord's day in March, I worshipped with the brethren in Bonham, and heard Bro. Burnett preach. His subject was the "Foundation of Christianity." He mottoed with I. Cor. iii: 2: "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." His sermon, I think, had as much gospel in it as it has ever been my privilege to hear at one time.

The language, "As a wise master-builder buildeth thereon," (I. Cor. iii: 10) he very forcibly illustrated by referring to architecture. The builders (workmen) must always follow the directions of the Architect (master builder.) They must work on the material he prescribes. They must work in the way he prescribes. Teachers must instruct the persons Paul directs them to instruct. They must place such material in the church as he directs and in the way he directs. Paul tells them to preach the gospel, not death-bed scenes, dreams, nor feelings. When the people have believed the gospel, and it has made them repent and confess Christ, he tells the teachers to baptize them into the church of Christ.

When telling what the foundation was, he said it was not the 39 articles of faith, nor the 25 articles of faith, nor any other system of faith compiled by man, but it was the gospel that Paul preached, no more nor less, and those who were on these foundations were not in the church, but those only who were on the gospel foundation.

I was beginning to think he had been reading the F. F., but lo! I found out in conversation with him after meeting was over, he had not reached so high a point in christian intelligence.

He said he had been to Denison, holding a meeting, and as part of the results, had "captured one Baptist." He "did not do him as Bro. McGary would have done, take him to the creek and give him a washing."

I would like for Bro. B. to show where any apostle tells us to place a Baptist in the church by merely shaking hands. Where can he find any Pauline directions for such a course? He was surely not following the advice of Paul, when he said "baptize them into the church." The only time Paul met any Baptists, he did as "Bro. McGary would have done."

How much of this foundation was this Baptist standing upon? Surely not more than faith and repentance. But right here, I am told, he had been baptized. If so, judging him to be like the rest of the Baptists, he had not made the confession, as Bro. Brents defines it, before performing that solemn act, and as Bro. Burnett teaches confession is preparatory to Baptism, I conclude that if he had taken his Baptist man to the creek and given him a washing, he would have been a cleaner soul.

I was surprised to see Bro. Burnett take the position he has on "what the gospel consists of. Among my first gospel lessons, taught by such men as J. M. Biard, Charles Carlton, R. P. Henderson, S. R. Exzell and J. H. Lynch, I learned the gospel was facts to believe, commands to obey and promises so that we could hope, and have christian joy, and so I yet opine. Take Bro. Burnett's definition of the gospel, and see the prospect for salvation, so that it may become good news. It is this: Jesus, in whom there was no guile, was treated worse than any other person that ever lived; was wickedly crucified and his body placed among the common dead, but his Father, the God of the universe, raised him triumphantly from the grave and made him ruler over everything." Simply this, nothing more nor less. This robs the gospel of obedience, by which our souls are purified, and also of hope, by which, Paul says, we are saved.

Now, I ask: Will the preaching of the gospel, and it alone, as Bro. B. defines it, save any one? It never did it when preached by the stirring eloquence of the Holy Spirit as it rang from the cutting tongue of Peter. If Peter, or some one else, had not advanced them beyond the point to which their information had brought them when they said: "What shall we do?" they never would have been saved. Yet, Paul tells us, the gospel saves.

Bro. B. can't call up a single case in his own experience of a single conversion by the preaching of the death, burial and resurrection, no more nor less. If he had the history of conversion from Pentecost down, he would still be wanting in evidence.

If Paul did say this is the gospel, he did not qualify it as Bro. B. has.

I care not who teaches the three facts alone, it can do no more than to produce faith; and, as the gospel saves, salvation by faith alone would be true. Bro. B., you will have to say nothing about this when you go to debate with the Methodist?

They tell us the Baptists obey from a Bible standpoint, because they will submit to nothing but immersion. I affirm that a majority of the Baptists are baptized because it is customary, and because it is the dictate of the church. Else why do they submit to the decision of fallible persons when they must know, if they know anything about the New Testament, there is not the shadow of authority for it.

I know a case which happened at Gober, Fannin county, Texas, in which a lady "professed" and asked a Baptist preacher to baptize her, but he would not do it because there was no church organized at that place, at that time, to hear her "experience." Suppose there had been one there and it had heard her "experience" and voted to receive her. In obedience to whose command would she have been baptized? Surely not the Savior's.

If it is not necessary to know the result of baptism, why did the Holy Spirit tell us what it was for? and why do all of our preachers labor so hard to teach its purpose? "All scripture . . . is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness."—(II. Tim. iii: 16.) Then, pray tell us of what use are those passages, whose primary object is to teach us the benefit to be derived from baptism?

What would any brother think of any one who would eat and drink at the Lord's table and at the same time not know what it was for? Paul says such persons "eat and drink damnation to themselves, not discerning the Lord's body." But according to Bro. B's. logic on baptism, it is equally acceptable to the Lord, if we eat to show to the brethren, or to the sects, that we love them and consider them christians.

When will our wise ones ever look closely and see just how much our Lord has allowed us to deviate from the strict construction of the writings of divine truth?

C. G. TEFTELLER.

"GREET ONE ANOTHER WITH A HOLY KISS."

BRO. MCGARY:

As the mission of the F. F. is to "reform the reformation," and as I think there is a needed reformation in regard to our manner of salvation, I will, with your permission, give your readers a few thoughts on the "holy kiss." (Rom. xv: 16; I. Cor. xvi: 20; II. Cor. xiii: 12; I. Thess. v: 26; I. Pet. iii: 8.)

Ever since I have taken any interest in reading the Bible, I have wondered why professed christians did not obey the command to "greet all the brethren with a holy kiss."

When I was a little boy, I would say: "When I get grown, I am going to make a church of my own and make all the members kiss each other when they meet."

When I reached the age of eighteen, I heard the gospel preached, and obeyed "from the heart, that form of doctrine delivered" me; supposing that the people calling themselves Christians had a good reason for not greeting each other with a kiss. So, for a year or two, I said nothing on the subject, other than inquire of a preacher, occasionally, concerning the matter. I was informed that the reason was, the custom of greeting was changed since the days of the apostles. But I was not satisfied. So I wrote an article to the Gospel Advocate on the subject, thinking that perhaps he (Bro. D. L.) could give a reason for its non-observance, but said article never saw printer's ink.

Next, I wrote the A. C. Review on the subject. Bro. Rowe replied by quoting from some D.D., to which he added, in substance, that "it can not be denied that ancient Christians practiced greeting each other with a kiss; but that it was a church ordinance, to be perpetuated as such is not sustained by the divine record."

I replied to this, asking several questions. My second letter was published, but not one of my queries were answered; but in lieu of this, he said: "If the young brother thinks the 'holy kiss' to be a church ordinance, let him back it up with his proof and send it along. 'Visit the sick,' 'clothe the naked,' 'feed the hungry,' are commandments, but not church ordinances."

I replied to this twice, but could not get in the A. C. R. any more. This was last winter. I have kept silent on the subject until now. And as I am sure that the F. F. is not bound up by "our plea," nor anything else but the truth, I am hopeful of obtaining a favorable hearing through its columns.

Remember, it is commanded at least five times to greet each other with a holy kiss—with a kiss of charity, etc.

Now, I claim that, unless there can be found a rule by which to divide the commandments of God, we are under obligation to observe this command.

Moses, prophesying concerning Christ, said, "that we should hear Him in all things whatsoever He shall say unto you; and it shall come to pass that every soul that will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among his people."—(See Deut. xviii: 18; Acts iii: 22-23.) Christ said of his disciples: "I have given them thy word."—(John xvii: 14.) Now then, the apostles were guided into all truth by the Holy Spirit, and as they were thus guided, they said, "Greet ye one-another with a holy kiss."

But it is said, that the custom of greeting has changed since then. I ask, by what authority was it changed? and who changed it?

If the custom of greeting was changed by divine authority, show it—chapter and verse, remember. If it was not changed by divine authority, it must have been changed by the world.

And Paul says: "Be not conformed to this world."—(Rom. xii: 2.) But Bro. Rowe says it is not a church ordinance, but a command. He also says that "visit the sick," "clothe the naked," etc., are not church ordinances. Does he mean by this that we are not to observe anything but church ordinances? Because "visit the sick" is not what he calls an ordinance, must we not visit the sick? I know Bro. R. will not take such grounds as this; yet it is just as reasonable as to say that the "holy kiss" is not binding on us, because it is not a church ordinance.

Jesus said: "If you love me, keep my commandments." John says: "This is the love of God that ye keep his commandments." God has said through his apostles: "Greet one-another with a holy kiss." Will we do it? Do we love God? If so, will we not do as he bids? If you should tell your son to go and kiss your daughter, and he should shake hands with her and not kiss her, would he obey you in so doing? Has God given us some commandments that we must obey, and some that we need not? If so, where is the dividing rule? God has said: "Blessed are they that do his commandments."—(Rev. xxii: 14.) Will we be blessed if we don't do them?

But perhaps I have written enough for this time. Let us all try to be consistent. If we say we take the whole Bible (of course that part that is applicable to us) for our rule of faith and practice, let us not leave out a part of it. There is no non-essentials in God's word.

Yours for the whole truth,

JAMES G. CONNER.

CHRISTIANITY AND POLITICS.

In the F. F. of April 1st is an article on the above caption, by S. E. Snedeker, of Tappan, Ohio, in which he asked me a question which would have been answered sooner, but for my removal from Austin to Junction City. He asked me the question, "Where is the dividing line between religion and politics?" I will answer, that it is right at the time and place when one is translated out of the kingdom of darkness, and into the kingdom of Christ. It is then that his citizenship is changed from earth to heaven.—(See Phil. iii: 20, R. V.) From that time he is one of those peculiar people mentioned by Paul to Titus, (ii: 14), "zealous of good works." These good works, God has ordained that we should walk in them.—Eph. ii: 10. There is no difference, in principle, between voting and holding office: hence, that class of brethren who hold that it is the duty of Christians to vote, but should not hold office, are inconsistent. The dividing line is not then between voting and holding office, but is when our citizenship is changed. If it is wrong for a Christian to be a politician and to hold office, it is certainly wrong for him to vote for one to do such a wrong. Political (so-called) Christians are greatly divided in their political convictions, and as a consequence politics has created more division, perhaps, among Christians than anything else. God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all the congregations of Christ.

From the tenor of your article, I judge that we stand together on this question. The gospel being the power of God unto salvation, and Jesus the captain of our salvation, surely as true and valiant soldiers of the cross, we should employ our time and talent in the use of the implements of warfare he has commanded us to take. (Eph. vi: 17.) Therefore, my brother, you and I can walk and work together, for we are agreed. We feel strong in this position. Stand fast in the liberty wherewith God has made us free. Let's try to keep on the Lord's side, and remain aloof from many things that some brethren are advocating that will disrupt and hinder the advancement of apostolic christianity.

J. S. D.

WILSON Co., TEXAS, April 29, '87.

BRO. MCGARY:

I write to say to you by way of encouragement that I have seen a few numbers of F. F., am well pleased with it and fully endorse your position. I have been studying the Bible nearly forty years, preaching thirty years. Your paper has the right name,—may God bless your efforts. I would like to have your paper, but am not able to pay for it.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, MAY 15, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to McGary & Hansbrough, or to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to McGary & Hansbrough.

BRO. J. W. JACKSON is visiting us for a few weeks, and while here will occupy the editorial chair.

REMEMBER that it takes money to pay printers, and though the amount due by each subscriber may be small, if promptly remitted it will help the work forward. If you do not know how your account stands with us, drop a postal to us and find out.

I FOUND the FIRM FOUNDATION folks busy as beavers and happy over the good prospects. Bro. Hansbrough, though sixty-three years of age, is full of energy and activity; full of zeal in the cause of Christ, he works vigorously and abundantly on the divine plan for the advancement of the kingdom and the conversion of sinners. May God spare him to us for many years.

I HAVE had the pleasure during this trip of meeting Sister Sarah, who has a good article in this issue. I wish all those who complain of having no time to study or write could visit our sister's home for a day or two. She is not cumbered with much serving and yet she "guides the house" and makes you feel at home, and finds time to read and study and write. "Where there is a will, there is a way."

SEVERAL brethren who have ordered the Christadelphian discussion have written to us to know why it has not been forwarded. In reply to all of them, and for the information of others who have ordered the pamphlet, we will say, that it will be ready to mail by the 10th of June. The delay has been occasioned by Dr. Oatman's failure to send in his arguments promptly. The argument on the Kingdom, is now finished and most of it in type. Those who desire to read this discussion would do well to send in their orders. Price, single copy, 25 cents; five copies, $1.00.

BRO. MCGARY is very busy; in fact, he is the busiest man I've seen for some time. Just now he is engaged in demonstrating that the Christadelphian title to the land of Canaan, though written clear enough does not bear the official seal (circumcision in the flesh) and is therefore bogus. But you must read the discussion. The argument on the kingdom question is closed now, and the second proposition will be written up and the book ready for mail by the 10th of June prox. Those who desire to read a complete refutation of the errors of Christadelphians should send their names forward for the book. Twenty-five cents per copy or five copies for one dollar.

OUR PAPER.—Reader are you sufficiently interested in the Redeemer's Cause to identify yourself with us in our work to restore primitive christianity? Do you love Christ? If you love Christ you will rejoice to see the religion, He gave us, taught and practiced just as it was once delivered to the saints. You will love to work with those who are earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. Help us then to teach the truth by extending the circulation of the FIRM FOUNDATION.

WELL—here I am in the sanctum sanctorum of the FIRM FOUNDATION, seated in the editor's easy-chair ready for a familiar chat with our many readers. Leaving my home on morning of 4th inst. I worried through the black mud to Hillsboro, boarded the M. P. R. R. at that place and 6:30 p. m. arrived in Austin. Bro. McGary met me at depot and I was soon domiciled under his hospitable roof. Nothing of special interest was noted on the trip. I found that the rain of 2nd and 3rd insts. had extended all along the route of our travel to this point and everybody and everything was glad.

"TRIAL OFFER."

We will send the FIRM FOUNDATION on trial, to any one till the 1st of September, for 25 cents. Or, we will send five copies for that time for $1. Brethren, work us up a thousand new subscribers on this offer. We intend to show to all honest readers, that no man who opposes the organ or missionary society, can be a consistent man, while he recognizes sect baptism, unintelligent immersion. This is the only paper in existence that is contending for the gospel of Christ, just as the Lord has delivered it, without addition or subtraction.

THE DIVINE MODEL.

"See that thou make all things according to the pattern" is a divine injunction that should be heeded by all the workers in the vineyard. God proposes to save man and if man is saved it must be according to the purpose or will of Him who worketh all things according to the counsel of His own will. God saved Noah; and yet Noah worked out his own salvation. God purposes: gives to man the pattern; commands him to do the work according to the plan and specifications.

In above instance, God commanded Noah to build the Ark; He gave the plan and specifications, and Noah did the work.—Gen. vi. Paul says that "By faith Noah being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house."—Heb. xi: 7. Why does Paul say Noah had faith? Because he believed God and did all the work as God commanded. Suppose that Noah had used his "sanctified common-sense" and altered the dimensions of that ark in the least particular, would Paul have cited him as an example for christians to imitate? If Noah had not worked (prepared) the ark, would God have saved him? Well the same principles are in force in the divine government now. It is the purpose of God to save man. Why? Because man cannot devise a plan by which to save himself. The power that rules man, and destroys him must be overcome by divine power. If man is then saved from sin, it is by the power of God. But all of God's power for the salvation of man is in Jesus. "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth."—Matt. xxviii: 18. But the power to save must be where it can be applied in the work of saving. So this power is given under heaven among men: Acts iv: 12, "For there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." But this power must reach man, must be applied. Hence, Paul says, "the Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes it."—Rom. i: 16. Can man be saved from sin without the power of God? Can God's power save man unless man works according to the divine pattern given to him? It took God's power to save Noah, but the work done in order to that salvation was done by Noah?

So now salvation is for man and that salvation is in Christ. God is in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself.—II. Cor. v: 19. All the promises of God are in Christ.—II. Cor. i: 20. This includes remission of sins.—Eph. i: 7. To be in Christ is to be in the one body; to be a member of His body is to be a partaker of the divine nature.

In working or building a man into Christ so that he may enjoy salvation, what plan should we follow? Follow the divine pattern given. God has spoken through His Son, and the Son through Apostles, and these guided by the Holy Spirit have given the divine pattern and all specifications for working out salvation both here and hereafter.

1. Preaching the gospel. 2. Hearing. 3. Believing. 4. Repentance. 5. Confession with the mouth that Jesus is the Son of God? 6. Baptism in the name of the Lord Jesus for the remission of sins. An examination of the work done by the master-builders first appointed by the Lord demonstrates the correctness of above items in the order given. Shall we work according to this pattern? Or are we at liberty to change or modify it at our will? If we follow the divine pattern will the work be done right? Yes. If we change the pattern the work done will correspond to the changed pattern, and the result will necessarily be changed. Baptists and Methodists change the divine pattern given. They have models or patterns of their own. They work diligently according to the pattern given them by their wise men, and the result is that they make Baptists, Methodists, not Christians.

They build material into human institutions, not into Christ. Some of them after a while get their eyes open and desire to leave their human institutions and be enrolled with Christians. Some of our good brethren with "sanctified common sense" say: "Come on, all right, we'll receive you." How do they receive them? By the right hand of fellowship. Where is the authority for this? In what part of the divine pattern was this shaking process laid down? Now, brethren, in receiving this material into the church, you are bound to admit: That the material was prepared according to the divine pattern—hence is in Christ. If in Christ, they are entitled to all the promises of God, where they are. What additional blessing do they obtain by the shaking process? None whatever. Again, when you admit that their work was right, you condemn yourself; for, if the pattern or model taught and practiced by Baptists and Methodists is right and brings men and women into Christ, we are wrong; if they have the divine pattern and work according to it, we are not following the divine pattern. Brethren, let us all walk by the same rule, mind the same thing, and speak the same glorious gospel of Christ committed to our trust. Let us take heed how we build upon the one foundation already laid, Jesus Christ the Son of God.

If we must work according to divine pattern in order to build proper material into Christ, it is also necessary that we continue to follow that divine model given for building up and perfecting the spiritual man in order to an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom.

T. R. BURNETT AND THE BAPTISTS.

In the Christian Messenger of April 18th Bro. Burnett tries to defend his theory of interpretation. I do not wish to add anything to what I have written upon this subject just now; not because I have said all that I can say, (as Bro. B. charges) but because I have said enough to show conclusively to an unbiased mind that Bro. Burnett's assumption is incorrect: That Paul does not define the gospel, and that the gospel is not restricted in its use or application to the three facts of Christ's death, burial and resurrection.

But Bro. Burnett brings forward some arguments, in support of his practice in receiving Baptists without obedience to the gospel, which I shall notice. He asks: "Why did not Bro. Jackson meet what I said on the new birth?" I was trying to get you to discuss the issue between us, viz: your theory of a three-fact gospel, but you wouldn't stick to the point. Again: "I laid down an argument there which I defy all the ana-baptists on earth to set aside." It is very ugly in you, my brother, to preach one thing and practice another. You should not call men by names that they repudiate. I reckon that those whom you maliciously style anabaptists have as much love for the truth, as much zeal for the cause of Christ, and fully as much piety, as the editor of the Christian Messenger.

I here give that unanswerable (?) argument: "John says, 'whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is begotten of God.'" Now we affirm that every honest-hearted Baptist believes that Jesus is the Christ before he is baptized. Is he begotten of God? What else is necessary to bring him into the kingdom? He must be born of water or baptized? "Will Bro. Jackson say that a person who is begotten of God and born of water is not in the kingdom of Christ?" In Christian Messenger March 2d, Bro. Burnett also says: "Baptists are in the kingdom by virtue of the new birth and not by virtue of belonging to the Baptist denomination."

1. I deny that Baptists teach "the new birth" as taught by the Apostles; and hence their faith and practice is not in accord with the Scriptures.

J. R. Graves says that one mark of the model church is: "The membership all professedly regenerate in heart before baptized into it." In explanation of this mark he says: "That none but christians should be baptized and thus added to the church. I mean a person should give satisfactory evidence that he has been regenerated in heart, made a new creature in Christ, before he is baptized. All human societies—and by this test they may infallibly be known—baptize and add to the church in order to save. Baptists do it, because they believe the subject is saved. This is the grand characteristic that makes Baptists a peculiar people, that separates them from all other."—Old Landmarkism, page 57.

2. Many children are born crippled, deformed, idiots, and some dead. To be born of water may admit a regenerate person (see above) into the Baptist church, but not into Christ's kingdom. Jesus said: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."—John III: 5. Will you please to note that there are two elements here joined together of which a man must be born. It is not water alone, nor spirit alone; nor begotten by the spirit before born of water, but "be born of water and spirit." Jesus did not explain this birth, nor does he here explain the antecedents to it. It is only through the preaching and teaching of the Apostles that we learn what the new birth is, and who are the proper subjects of it. Any interpretation of a parable, or a metaphor that contradicts or perverts the plain statements of John's word, is certainly inadmissible. We do not go to parables, metaphors and symbols in order to explain that which is already plain and literal; on the contrary, metaphors are understood only in the light of that which is plain and literal.

Bro. Burnett will admit the Apostolic teaching and order as taught and obeyed, was as follows: 1. Preaching Jesus. 2. Believing. 3. Repentance. 4. Confession. 5. Baptism for the remission of sins. Those who obeyed this order were in the kingdom—they had entered the kingdom; hence, they were "born of water and spirit." Now, my brother, please tell me which one of these items can be omitted (from 2 to 5 inclusive) and yet have the new birth? In order to sustain your practice and give comfort to the Baptists, you leave off "for the remission of sins." They not only leave it off but positively deny that baptism is for the remission of sins, and yet they are "in the kingdom by virtue of the new birth."!

3. When a man is "born of water and spirit" he is born again; but he cannot see the kingdom of God until he is born. Remission of sins is in the kingdom of God, placed there by the authority of Jesus. Now in Nature, there is no individuality, no personality, no son, no daughter, no seeing, before being born. In the kingdom of Heaven there is no son or daughter, no enjoyment of the blessings and privileges of the kingdom until "born again." It is not only absurd, but a perversion of God's law of birth, for a man to claim those privileges and blessings given only to children when born. Baptists do not teach the new birth that Jesus teaches, because they pervert the law of generation, the law of the spirit of life, and claim that an unborn child can see: that it is a Christian, a son or daughter, and then they pass it through a bath or birth from water, to get into the Baptist church.

Bro. Burnett will please note the foregoing, and give us some more information about the Baptist new birth.

WHAT IS CAMPBELLISM?

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

After reading the article in F. F. of April 1st, in reference to "What Campbellites Believe," the above question presents itself to my mind.

Before proceeding, I will say, that no man, in a real discussion of a real and solemn subject, will ever bring forward an unreal argument, unless he feels that he has received a real "drubbing" and really has nothing real to offer as a real argument or objection. For the same reason it is fair to presume that the term, Campbellism, is used by the present sectarian world, when speaking of the Christian church. I know nothing of the orthodox phantom called Campbellism. I have never met with this term in any standard lexicon. From the best information I can get, Campbellism is a vague, imaginary, religious bugbear or scarecrow, that originates and exists only in the disordered and overheated imagination of distempered and ghostly sectarians, who thus try to frighten the superstitious from the truth of God; and those who believe in "Old Wives' Fables," "Mother Bunch Stories," and such like, may be influenced by such trash; but the cool, reflecting, intelligent and reading portion of mankind never will be frightened by "a specter" that has no positive existence.

"It is to be seen only in the dismal, gloomy and misty swamps of spiritual Babylon, and is witnessed only by those who have not clear conceptions of revealed truth, because they look through sectarian glasses or other defective lenses."

It is an "optical illusion" that is never perceived by the eye of faith through the telescope of divine truth. This apparition is, no doubt, produced by the morally and traditionally corrupt miasma that infests the before mentioned doleful regions. The reader will now understand that Campbellism is only an imaginary thing.

It has been asserted that Campbellism teaches "a water baptismal regeneration." If this be true, the majority of sectarians are strong Campbellites, especially those who endorse the sprinkling of unconscious babes. If to believe and teach this monstrous dogma constitutes Campbellism, then sectarians are guilty, for they teach it; but, if to plead for the union of all God's people upon the Bible alone, to teach that the Bible is the only rule of faith and practice—that it contains all articles of faith to be believed, all the commandments to be obeyed and all the promises to be enjoyed—if to believe and teach these things be Campbellism, then sectarians are innocent and the Disciples are guilty.

In reference to Elder A. Campbell, of Bethany, Va., I would say, that all christians should be proud to claim him as a brother and co-laborer; yet none were ever baptized into his name, neither was he crucified for any. Hence, according to Paul's reasoning with the Corinthians, I have no right to wear his name or be called a Campbellite; and he who thus stigmatizes me and my brethren, against our expressed wish, shows himself to be destitute of Christian courtesy, and wholly void of good breeding.

Their persisting to call us by names which we disown, can only be accounted for upon the old adage, "that misery loves company." They advocate a human system, have a human creed, and wear a human name.

We simply claim to be disciples of Christ, or Christians, and if partisan bigots reproach us for it, they are only fulfilling a declaration Christ made to his disciples: "And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake," etc.

In conclusion, will say that, although the sectarians far excel us here at Blanco in numbers, in holding here at Blanco in numbers, in holding protracted meetings, in popularity, in church festivals, and other innovations; we, as a band of disciples, continue to hold our regular meetings for the purpose of commemorating the death of our once crucified but now risen Lord.

Wishing the F. F. success in the future, I remain your brother in Christ. R. W. GILLESPIE. Blanco County, Tex., April 12, '87.

BUT ONE, YET MANY.

Paul, to the Ephesians, said: "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as we are called in one hope of our calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all."—(Eph. iv.) And to the Corinthians he said: "For though there be that are called Gods whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many and lords many): but to us there is but one," "howbeit, there is not in every man this knowledge."—(Cor. viii.) Now, as that was a true contrast between the ignorant, idolatrous worshippers who had not the knowledge of the truth, and the disciples of Christ who had the knowledge; even so it is true today and applicable to all the above named units.

Let us apply the rule and observe how true: "One body, howbeit all men have not this knowledge;" for there be that are called bodies many, and churches many; their organs and by-laws—the traditions and teachings of men. But to us there is but one,—the body of Christ—the church of the living God, the pillar and support of the truth.

"One Spirit: howbeit, all have not this knowledge, for there be that are called spirits many"—mysterious, direct, abstract, deaf and dumb spirits. But to us there is but one—"the Holy Spirit—and he shall abide with you forever."

"One Hope:" but all have not this knowledge, for they hope they have religion, hope they are a child of God, hope they are one of the elect, "hope without the substance of things hoped for." But to us there is but one hope, which is an anchor to the soul, both sure and stedfast, and reaches to that within the veil.

"One Lord: howbeit all men have not this knowledge," for there be that are called lords many and christians many, to-wit: Human lords and divine lords, embodied Christ and disembodied Christ, a dead Christ in the tomb and a living Christ in our unknown, unlearned, unscriptural, unreasonable, ungodly spirit land, preaching to spirits of dead men. I have not the patience to treat such a sacrilegious-blasphemous heathenish contradiction of revealed truth, with anything short of contempt; for with us there is but one Lord Jesus Christ, who died for our sins and rose again for our justification.

"One Faith." Though there be that are called faiths many and beliefs many: faith preceded by repentance, which is sin; faith without works, which is dead; faith in a belief of three facts, which are short and wanting; faith that is prayed down, which is never obtained; faith that is mysteriously, abstractly, directly given, which is no faith. But to us there is but one faith, the assurance of things promised, the confidence of things not seen,—a compound of belief with all the heart, and an unwavering and unshaken trust.

"One Baptism:" Howbeit many men have no knowledge about this, for there be that are called baptisms many and modes many: Sprinkle-baptism, pouring-baptism, infant baptism, because-of-baptism, Baptist baptism, all of which is no baptism. Then the slanderous so-called re-baptism, which is misrepresented baptism. But to us there is but one baptism—for remission of sins, into Christ, into one body.

"One God:" Yet, gods many: There are those whose belly is their god, and many whose money is their god; others have a god afar off; an angry, disobedient god who will not come at their bidding; others have a dumb god, of a dead world; others a very illiterate, weak god, who tried to make a revelation, and made a mystery, and failed to express his will to the understanding of wise men, and being so weak they had to appoint doctors to doctor his divinity, kill or cure; others have such an inferior god to themselves that they had to revise and improve his rules and regulations and plans, and they have greatly excelled him indeed; and it is thought that they will soon dethrone him and sit in the temple of God and declare themselves to be gods. But to us there is but one God and Father of all—the giver of every good and perfect gift; the Father of light in whom there is no variableness nor shadow of turning; the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, in whom we trust and through whom we approach, a throne of mercy and pardon, and if faithful, a treasure laden with rich and precious promises of a resurrection from the dead, an entrance through the gates into the city and a right to the tree of life

Where the anthems of rapture unceasingly roll,
And the smile of the Lord is the feast of the soul.

To His name be glory, honor and praise forever more. Amen.
Fraternally in brotherly love.

HOPE.

In answer to your query, sister Sarah, I reply, "here I am!" With much interest I read your exhortations; I then feel my great lack of persuasive powers, still, I know that duty says, if I possess one talent, it should be put out on interest, that the Master, whose steward I am, may receive his own when he comes again; therefore, if I, in my weakness, can induce one soul to turn, or return, to their allegiance to the Lord, to whom they belong, I shall feel that I have achieved a victory over him that has the power of death. This hope inspires me with energy to speak to my sisters, also to my alien friends, on that all important subject, the soul's salvation, which is in jeopardy, whilst ever the world is permitted to compete with the Lord for the possession of their hearts. "Give me thy heart," says the Lord, "I, thy God, am a jealous God." He will not be satisfied with divided affections: "You cannot serve two masters. Love not the world, neither the things of the world. He that loveth the world, the love of the Father is not in him." "A new commandment I give you, that you love one-another." Do nothing by which a brother or sister should be made to stumble. If one comes into the assembly of the saints, with the marks of poverty upon them let us endeavor to make them feel that they are with Christians who possess, as well as profess, that love which is characteristic of the followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, "who had not where to lay his head." And what should be our deportment in the house of God? The table is there spread with the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of the Lamb of God, "who taketh away the sins of the world." Should not our conduct show that we realize the importance of that sacrifice? and never engage in light and frivolous conversation and jesting? thereby diverting the minds of others, who might be won by a consistent, christian course. That we may all realize our obligations to the Lord, to the world, and to each other, is my prayer.

The Christian's course should ever be Obedience to the Lord,
And in His precepts ever walk,
As taught in His own word.

A. P. ATEN AFTER THE BAPTISTS.

In the Texas department of the Apostolic Guide of March 25th is an article from Bro. A. P. Aten headed, "Baptismal Remission," in which he criticises something said in the Texas Baptist and Herald. Most of which criticisms are very good because they are Scriptural; though I am sorry that there is not that consistency between his teachings in those criticisms and his teaching and practice on other occasions that there should be.

A certain Rev. R. T. Hanks, a pastor of one of the Baptist churches of Dallas, had asserted that a "Campbellite-Christian is one who takes his name from Christ and trusts in baptism to save him, and a Baptist-Christian is one who takes his name from baptism and trusts to Christ to save him," to which language, with some other set forth in the same article, brother Aten objects very seriously, and asks the question, "who more competent to settle a question like that (that is, whether they trust in Christ for salvation or not) than the people themselves?" Again he says: "Are we not pledged to believe and obey its holy teachings?" (that is the teachings of God's word), and then goes on to say:

And yet this latter-day scribe assumes that he of all others understands our theory and practice, and that unless we have progressed beyond the "remission dogma of Alexander Campbell," we cannot claim to trust in Christ for remission!

It need be a matter of very little consequence whether we, in this year of grace, are ahead of or behind the distinguished individual named, but it is a matter of concern to know whether our practice is in accord with the teachings of holy Scripture. According to that Scripture, Christ died for our sins. In doing this, he brought salvation within our reach. He was thus the procuring cause, and we trust in him for salvation as such. But we are very anxious that we do not stop short of reaching him as the Author of our salvation. In this, doubtless, we differ from our Baptist friends in the proportion that the teaching of the apostles differs from their teaching. Christ and the apostles taught clearly, and in this we follow them, that baptism was a prerequisite to remission of sins, while the Baptist doctrine is that remission of sins is a prerequisite to baptism. The teaching of the chief apostle was, "Repent and be baptized for the remission of sins." The teaching of Baptist apostles is, "Repent and have the remission of sins in order to be baptized." Which is scriptural, astute scribe? You may call it "baptismal remission," if you like, but it does not change the immutable decree of Christianity's great Founder, when he says, with an emphasis, that you would do well to heed, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," which you, in your pitiful plea for an emasculated gospel, would even dare to change to "He that believeth and is saved shall be baptized!" Yes, most emphatically, we trust to Christ for salvation, but we would show that trust by obedience to all his requirements as some "other Christians" do not do, and we have an abiding faith that on some great day the Lord will welcome his obedient followers to their happy home on high as those who have done the "will of his Father who is in heaven."

Now, Bro. Aten, you say, "we are very anxious that we do not stop short of reaching him (Christ) as the author of our salvation." To whom is he the author of salvation? Why, Paul says, "He is the author of eternal salvation to all them that obey him."—Heb. v: 9. Now, Bro. Aten, is not that equivalent to saying that he is not the author of eternal salvation to them that do not obey him?

Again: Peter says, "Seeing you have purified your souls (how?) in obeying the truth through the spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, love one-another with a pure heart fervently: being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever."—1 Pet. i: 22-23. How did these brethren purify their souls? By obeying the truth. When did they obey the truth? When they were born of incorruptible seed. What is the incorruptible seed? The word of God.

Now, Bro. Aten, a Baptist preacher comes along and preaches to the people that they must first be regenerated by a direct operation of the spirit of God upon their hearts, they must then repent, then believe, then "make a statement" that they believe that God for Christ's sake has pardoned their sins, then be baptized because their sins are forgiven, and "to honor God" and to get into the Baptist church. Now what sort of seed is that? And when people are born of that sort of seed, (and they can be born of seed), I ask, into what are they born?

Again: Bro. Aten comes along and preaches to the people, and tells them about Christ, the author of salvation to them that obey him, tells them that they must believe in him with all their heart, then confess him (not themselves) with their mouth, and be baptized for (not because of) remission of sins. Now, Bro. Aten, what kind of seed have you been sowing? and when people receive that seed into their hearts and are born of it, I ask again, into what are they born? Are they born into the same state or relationship that the first class are? If so, what difference does it make as to the character of the seed that is sown? Tares are as good as anything else, even if the devil, by his agents, does sow them. But you say, and very truly, that "Christ and the apostles taught clearly, and in this we follow them, (well, then, whom do the Baptist preachers follow? The doctrines and commandments of men, and their worship is vain,) that baptism was a prerequisite to remission of sins, while the Baptist doctrine is, that remission of sins is a prerequisite to baptism." What a difference in the seed they sow, and what a difference in the crops produced by the two kinds of seed.

Bro. Aten, can you change the character of the crop produced by the tares simply by a shake of the hand? If so, you seem, in that respect at least, to exercise more power by the shake of your hand, than was ever exercised by any of Christ's apostles.

Christ said: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit."—Matt. xxviii: 19. Teach them what? Why the gospel, the word of the Lord, that was able to make the taught wise unto salvation. And, you say, that the teaching of the chief apostle was, "Repent and be baptized for the remission of sins." The teaching of Baptist apostles is, "Repent and have the remission of sins in order to be baptized." Now, what is an apostle? One sent. Whose apostle was Peter? Christ's. How do we know? Because he preached the gospel, the word of the Lord. He sowed the seed of the kingdom.

Whose apostles are these Baptist preachers? Why, they are the devil's. How do we know they are? Because they sow tares. How do we know they sow tares? Because we can't find what they sow in the word of God, the only test we have to judge them by.

Yet, according to the teachings of many of our brethren, the seed sown by them and the crop produced is as good as any, just so "it is well shaken before taken."

E. HANBROUGH.

QUERY DEPARTMENT.

I would like to ask the brethren a few questions concerning baptism, that is administered unto the people for the remission of sins; When we were baptized, were we planted together in the likeness of Christ's death and are we in the likeness of his resurrection? One would say yes; if I understand the teachings of God's holy word, I say no. Peter said to the Pentecostians that wanted to know what they must do: "Repent, and be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."—(Acts 2:38.) Was Peter right? If he was, then we are wrong; for we have been baptized in the name of God and the Son and the Holy Ghost: So we are in the likeness of three instead of one. We cannot find anywhere in the New Testament where we are commanded to be baptized in the name of God or the Holy Ghost, (but the Son), and his name is Jesus Christ. Then why practice it? It is not lawful and cannot be right. I want to hear from some one on this subject. Truly your brother,
B. G. LEDWELL.

The "one baptism" that must be obeyed in order to the remission of sins is commanded "in the name of the Lord Jesus." "In the name" means by the authority of; hence baptism for the remission of sins is by the authority of the Lord Jesus.—See Acts 2:38; x:48; xix:5.

We are baptized into the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit.—Matt. xxviii:19. "In the name" and "into the name" are very different expressions. The former, as stated above, means by the authority of; the latter indicates entrance into new relationship. So that when one is baptized "in the name," (by the authority of) the Lord Jesus for the remission of sins, he becomes a child of God, a joint-heir with Christ, and a partaker of the Holy Spirit that dwells in the church. J. W. JACKSON.

WAELEDER, TEXAS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

There was a question put to me the other day, by a gentleman who was once a Baptist. He says he was shaken from that to something else, but not into the church of Christ. He wants to know what church he belongs to. Can you give him light on the subject? Said man is a reader of the FIRM FOUNDATION. Answer the above and oblige, your brother,
ROBT. W. FLOYD.

There can be no change of relationship from one power or authority to another power or authority without obedience to an act of authority. The gentleman spoken of above changed his relationship from the world to the Baptist church by obedience to the form of doctrine taught by Baptists. If he received Christ or put on Christ when he obeyed that form of doctrine, he should have continued there: "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in Him."—Col. 2:6. But Baptist form of doctrine is not the form of doctrine taught by the Apostles of the Lord Jesus, and if the gentleman wishes to come out from under the power or authority of a human institution he must obey from the heart the form of doctrine taught by inspiration. "Shaking hands" is an act of courtesy showing goodwill—love. As practiced in the church to-day it is without precedent or authority in the word of God; and as this gentleman is only a shaken-Baptist we advise him to become a Christian by obedience to the authority of the Lord Jesus.

J. W. JACKSON.

Bro. McGary:

What do you think ought to be done with an intelligent Christian who claims to be in good standing and full fellowship, that passes right by the place where the disciples are assembled on Lord's day morning, and meets with the Methodists, or instead of meeting with the disciples, goes to hear the Methodists pervert the gospel, and even encourage them in it by singing with them? I know of several disciples who have recently been guilty of doing that very thing. To my mind it seems perfectly clear that it is high-handed rebellion against the authority of our King. If they did not know any better it would be quite different, but these to whom I refer know better. I claim, therefore, that they, and all such, sin against Christ and are walking disorderly. What do you say?
ANDREW.

I think that such Christians are acting very badly, and should be talked to about their conduct, and led to do better. There is no plausible excuse for such a course of conduct on the part of Christians, but sometimes the whole body is to blame as much as they. If a congregation does not afford the true elements of worship, and the means by which young christians may grow in grace and in the knowledge of Christ, then they will become tired of the meetings and seek the attractions afforded by their sectarian neighbors, unless their own congregation copies these attractions from the sects. It is generally the case that the church is derelict in its duty when its members prefer sectarian association. It may not be so in this case, and yet it may be. The only way to hold the body together and prevent this running off for other association, is for the body to go to work really and truly upon the divine plan, that they "may grow up into Christ in all things, which is the head: From whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."—Eph. iv:15-16.

A. MCGARY.

I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God.—Rom. xii:1-2.

WAELEDER, TEXAS, May, 1887.

Dear Sisters:

I am only a little girl, fourteen years of age, but I feel it to be my duty to let my light shine. Jesus has so commanded us, and to do this we must be steadfast and immovable, and zealously work for the cause of our blessed Redeemer. As a sister has said, when we meet to partake of the emblems of our Lord's death, it is sinful to spend the time talking about our fine dresses, or chickens, or gardens, but how often is this the case.

Dear sisters, if the Catholics were again to gain enough power to kill all the christians who would not give up the faith, how many would there be that would hold to the Bible and burn up with it? But when we think of it right, it would be far better to burn for a few moments, than to give up the Bible and burn forever and ever.

Let us try to be educated in the school of Christ, which we can be, if we study God's word. I have never been to school but very little and it was just out here in the country; but my parents teach me the Bible, and that is far better than all other schooling. Now I am old enough to read and instruct myself. I read the Bible before I became a christian, and I have read a great deal more since. I have been a christian one year. Of course, all young christians or babes in Christ, have to feed on the sincere milk of the Word, that they may grow and become strong. We are to abound in good works; therefore, if we have anything to give, let us give it to some needy person, or orphan child, and not go and buy some rich child a gold ring or such like, expecting to get twice the value of it in return. We need nothing more than food and raiment here, for we can take nothing with us when we die; therefore, if we have anything to give, let us bestow it where it will do the most good. Let us visit our neighbors, more especially in sickness; be friendly and sociable, not thinking ourselves better than others, but esteeming every one better than ourselves. Be not selfish, for God has not picked out one corner of heaven for some people, and one for another, but we shall all be the same there.

Again, we must not forget that "bridle" for our tongues, which are unruly members, and, unbridled, are apt to backbite and gossip. I heard a young lady laugh and say she had hit a streak of luck, that she had joined the church (Baptist) and it had made her so popular. This lady may have been a Baptist, but she was surely no christian.

So you see, dear sisters, that some people join the church from very different and sordid motives, such as to gain popularity, etc., and but very few go and obey the commands for Jesus' sake. Some may say I am judging, but you see we are allowed to judge a tree by its fruits. All christians are judged by their fruits or works. It ought to be an easy matter to distinguish christians from worldlings, even at public places, by their conversation and walk. They should never be heard talking about their neighbor's dress or bonnet, or gilded ribbons, etc. No such talk should ever be named among christians, for we are told no backbiter shall ever see heaven. Remember, dear christians, that we are either working for Satan or for God; helping to build up Satan's kingdom or God's, one or the other all the time. There is no standstill ground. We are either travelling the broad road that leads to destruction or the narrow path that leads to life everlasting. Remember we cannot keep this narrow path if we have our minds fixed on getting rich, or fine dressing, or sensational reading. But we must study God's word, for that is our guide book from earth to heaven. Let us consider our Savior's trials, and it will help us to overcome our own. Your sister in Christ, MOLLIE BAILEY.

It is with great pleasure that we submit this young sister's letter to the readers of the F. F. It would do credit to older heads than hers, and her example of the study of God's word, is worthy of imitation by little, old and young. It is not often we see a young christian, young in years especially, possessed of so much zeal, and such a clear conception of practical christianity. They generally act as if they think nothing is expected of them, but everything of the older christians. How often are they ashamed to speak a word for Jesus, or to acknowledge allegiance to him, by refusing to take part in forbidden pleasures when tempted.

A sister has written, requesting that I write on the duties of young christians, and show them that there are not two rules for governing christians: a stringent one for the old, one less so, for the young. Paul's language does not read, "You old christians must not be conformed to the world, but I can not expect any better of the young;" nor Peter's: "You old sisters, let not your adorning be with gold and pearls and costly array (and bangs and frizzes), but the young sisters may wear such, because they are becoming, and without them they would look so plain as to excite comment; besides such adorning is necessary to win husbands for them." The young seem to argue thus: "Surely God does not expect me to be sober, temperate and 'peculiar!' It would be going against nature: young people are obliged to have fun, talk foolishly and dress gaily. Old people can afford to give up all these things, but life would be so dull to me without them. Besides, it would make me so unpopular, and I would just live and die an old maid! Life is long before me, anyway, and when I get older I will be willing to give up all these things and serve God sure enough."

Well, as to popularity, I repeat what I have once before said: If any young christian woman will leave off the follies, which only attract worldly men, and live up to her duty as a child of God, noble, christian men, such as she can only scripturally wed, will seek her; not for her personal beauty, which is but for a day, but for her virtues, which will live throughout eternity. No christian girl should seek, or even desire the admiration of worldly men; and certainly she could not take a more disastrous step than to wed such a character. "Be not unequally yoked with unbelievers," is a divine injunction that should deeply impress itself on the heart of every young christian, when the time arrives for this important change. This unequal yoke will indeed prove a galling one, for she will either have to come in constant conflict with her husband's will, if she strive to please Christ, or turn back on her Savior, if she would please her husband; which former means an unhappy home, the latter an eternal death. In either case it were far better to remain a virgin.

As to that long life stretching before you, let me say: the future is not yours, to-night your souls may be required of you. "Now is the accepted time, to-day is the day of salvation." To-day only can you call yours, to-morrow may never dawn upon you. I know it is hard for the young, and for us all, to deny ourselves all these coveted things, these idols, but it is a test of faith in, and love to God, and the reward promised those that overcome, is very precious. You will not have long to strive, for time is fleeting and bears us on, on rapid wings, to the yawning grave, that awaits us one and all.

Only a daily prayerful study of God's word, can enable us to place a proper estimate on earthly pleasures. As we read of that "inheritance incorruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away," our earthly idols seem clay indeed, contemptible beyond expression. Such an inheritance is promised to all the faithful: is it not worth ten thousand such worlds as this? Oh, then let us all strive to gain it, even though our way lead through the fiery furnace of self-denial, and scorn of men. When the journey is over our Savior will sweetly say, "They shall walk with me in white, for they are worthy." SARAL.

EVANT, TEXAS, April 26, 1887.

Dear Brother McGary:

I've been reading your reply to Jeff A. Davis in the F. F. of April 15th, and I must tell you how altogether heart-sick and disappointed and astonished I am to see the stand you have taken on the subject of opposing whisky through the ballot. I have given the subject some thought of late, and have come to the conclusion that a true christian cannot choose, but work for prohibition in every possible manner not actually prohibited by Bible teaching.

'Tis true I'm no great Bible student, yet I have read the Word enough to know there is no exact formula given for every act of our lives. Doubtless the Giver made our brains for some purpose and left some things to our own discretion.

Really, if your child should fall into the water, you would not let him lie there and drown because the Bible does not specify the exact manner of getting him out.

Oh, how much better would it have been for countless thousands of human beings had they been drowned when innocent little ones, rather than to have lived to become miserable drunkards, degrading the God-given intellect, that makes man a little lower than the angels to something beneath the brutes.

Oh, how can a mother or a father ever rest and leave one stone unturned to prevent, when they know there is a possibility of their little one becoming drunkards? How do we know they will not? If it were only those who had come to years of discretion, who were enticed by the vile stuff, one might muster a grain of patience; but to see the innocent little ones led into the downward road by the rum-seller, who lies in wait for the souls of men, patience no longer seems a virtue. And how a christian can refuse to work to clear such a great source of sin and misery from God's beautiful earth, passes my comprehension.

Be assured you are on the wrong track, Bro. McGary, when you try to excuse yourself from your duty in any such way, and God will not hold you guiltless. But I hope you will reconsider the situation, turn square about, hold up your head, vote and work for prohibition like a true-hearted, pure-minded, noble christian gentleman is sure to do.

Are we not doing God's work when we prepare people to receive His word? How can they receive His word when they are besotted with drink? and when whisky has gained such power over them that they cannot throw it off, is it not the christian's right to assist them to do so? And did not the disciples cast lots the first business attended to after Jesus' ascension?

I may be very stupid, but I fail to see anything against sound Bible teaching in a man voting against so great an evil as whisky selling, or on any other matter pertaining to the proper government of our country. Did not Jesus respect the laws of his country? and teach men so? thereby recognizing the necessity of a country being governed by laws. How important, then, that those laws should be regulated by God-fearing men.

All honor to those christian gentlemen at Dawson who have opened their church building to so good a cause. MRS. LOIS WURTS.

I do not disagree with the sister about anything she says about the evils of whisky. And more, if I could believe that it is right for christians to entangle themselves with political measures and yoke themselves with unbelievers in the broils and contentions of the ballot-box, I would say, every time, work and vote with your might against this fluid that dethrones reason, paralyzes the cord of love that binds man and wife, and invests hunger and rage with the place of peace and plenty. But I believe that it is wrong, absolutely violative of Christian principle, for christians to mix in politics or vote at all. Believing this, I cannot conscientiously take any part in any question that is to be settled by the ballot-box; for we may not do evil that good may come of it.

No, my sister, I would not stand by and see my child drown because the Bible did not prescribe the exact manner of getting him out of the water. And if our government should order an election to determine whether or not children should fall in the water, or should be pulled out when they did fall in, I would not vote on it, but would get my children out upon the principle of providing for my household. And I would get my child out of a grogshop upon the same principle; and I would keep him out by the authority of Christ or not at all: because I am told to do everything, whether in word or deed, by the authority of Christ.

I have received several letters on this same question, and had some to talk with me, in efforts to change my views; but, strange to say, not one line of Scripture has ever been tendered me on the question. I am not anxious to ventilate this question just now; what I have said has been drawn out. But if any brother wants to prove to my readers that it is their duty to vote on any question, I will divide time with that brother till he is satisfied. After the pending election is over, I intend to probe this question to the bottom, if I can. If the church was in a good, healthy condition in reference to other matters that I conceive to be hindering the cause more than this voting question, I would make this sister's letter the occasion of a series of articles on this question. But I am anxious to see prohibition succeed. Any brother whose conscience prompts him to vote, will surely vote for prohibition; but, as proud as I would be to see whisky defeated, I would not vote on the question, with my present convictions, if I knew my vote would dry up every drop of whisky in the world. A. McG.

Since writing the above, the Advocate has come with some thoughts from Bro. Lipscomb on the same question, which are so timely that we herewith append them:

If it is wrong to vote, it is wrong to vote for prohibition. I have presented this to none save those who think it wrong to vote. If voting in civil affairs by christians is wrong, to vote to secure temperance is to do evil that good may come. If voting is wrong it is because it violates the law of God. For us to vote when something very desirable is presented, is to say we will obey God ordinarily but when something very desirable comes up we will violate his law to attain it. That kind of obedience is not such as God demands. A man who ordinarily votes believes it right to vote but refrains now because he does not wish to vote against whisky, is guilty of self-deception. A man who believes it wrong but votes now because he desires prohibition, does evil that good may come. We have no disposition to press the question of the right of voting or not voting, at the present time. But brethren, whisky was just as great an evil in the day of 'the Savior and his holy apostles as it is to-day. Neither the Savior nor any of his apostles ever made or urged a crusade against drunk-ness, polygamy, murder or any other special crime. They did not appeal to civil law to support or help them. They directed their energies to the one work of converting men and women to Christ, knowing when this was done it cured all sins. Those who now say this fails impugn the wisdom of God and claim a superior wisdom for themselves. We are content to stand with Christ and the apostles and rest in the wisdom of God. D. L.

I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Greek.—Paul, in Rom. 1: 16.

I am not ashamed of the tradition of men; for it is the power of Satan unto deception to every one that believeth, to the sinner first and also to the dupes.—Sectarianism.

I am not ashamed of a perverted hand-shaking gospel; for it is the power of Our Plea unto the capture of all those weak-minded persons that believe the word of man in preference to the word of God. —[Our Plea Defenders.

Advice to young women: Never marry a young man who carries a cigar in his mouth, and drinks ardent spirits in any degree.

Advice to young men: Never marry a young woman, who, passing through the kitchen, will step over the broomstick, rather than pick it up, and put it in its place.

Enemies are as necessary to the proper development of the full-grown man as friends. When lived that man that amounted to anything but could count his enemies by the scores?

The true past departs not, nothing that was worthy of the past; no truth or goodness realized by man ever dies or can die; but all is still here, and recognized or not, lives and works through endless changes.

Females, perhaps, more than males, desire to be beautiful, and that they can always be if they will. Beauty is not so much in form as expression, and the expression comes from the inward state; hence the good are always beautiful, and the evil can never be lovely.

Budaeus, the librarian of Francis I., and one of the most learned men of the sixteenth century, was once engaged in deep study in his library, when his servant came running to him in great fright to tell him that the house was on fire. With perfect calmness, and hardly raising his eyes from his book, "Go," said he, "and inform your mistress 'tis her concern. You know I never interfere in domestic matters."

A clergyman the other day was preaching upon the common blessing of mankind as sunshine and shade—day and night, the benefits of wakefulness and of sleep. At the last named point he looked up from his manuscript and saw a large number of his audience enjoying a peaceful nap, when he added, "but what is good for the people is often annoying to the preacher, and I am inclined to leave you in your lazy slumbers, to wake up in a world that may not be so comfortable to listless sinners."—Selected.

ORDER, HEAVEN'S FIRST LAW.

Editors Firm Foundation:

Order is much spoken of and even commented upon, but frequently lost sight of, especially at times and places where it should be rigidly observed, and by those, too, upon whom a vast amount of responsibility rests.

The class to whom I wish to direct particular attention at this time is Sunday School superintendents and teachers. It is distressing to observe the disorder, confusion and general lack of system in some of the schools in this part of Texas. Recently I visited one in which order seemed very nearly obsolete.

Immediately after the opening exercises, singing and playing the organ, the classes, in going to their respective places of recitation, moved in a general "stampede style," creating more confusion than ought to exist anywhere. Some five or ten minutes having thus been spent, the recitation of lessons began from lesson papers. During this part of the programme, order was only partially observed by some of the classes. Even in the Bible class, composed principally of young men and women, while one was reading, or the teacher endeavoring to explain some portion of the lesson, others were to be seen engaged in whispering, smiling—"almost out loud"—casting glances about the house; in short, observing almost everything except order.

Without consuming time to speak of all the classes in detail, we will pass to what is termed the infant class, consisting of, perhaps, a score of boys and girls, aged from four to seven. The conduct of this latter class was evidently enough to bring shame upon the hardest hearted, I care not what his calling or profession may be. One of the boys succeeded in shoving his classmate off the bench, thus causing the latter to fall headlong upon the floor, and, as a natural result, the remainder all joined in a hearty laugh. Other actions were indulged in which, perhaps, would not be proper to mention in the columns of newspapers. Suffice it to say, they were altogether out of order in a Sunday School.

Previous to dismissal, the superintendent requested that all remain for preaching, but as soon as disbanded, the majority left the house in regular "stampede style," most of the elder scholars endeavoring to reach the door first, by crowding through the aisles; while some of the small boys were attempting to "trip others up" as they passed by.

I have never attempted to superintend a Sunday School, but would suggest the word ORDER as a text for all those who have heretofore attempted to conduct schools without it, and would insist that they "stick to their text" till order is strictly observed.

All will agree that anyone attempting to conduct a day school without order, is a practical failure, and ought to be branded as such. Evidently, the rule will hold good with superintendents of Sunday Schools. True, the former is employed for a consideration and can not reasonably demand his pay till all contracts have been lawfully complied with; but the latter has voluntarily assumed a position upon which a great deal of responsibility rests: and the final result, also his individual reward for his labors, eternity alone will tell.

Teachers in our Sunday Schools can assist greatly in securing good order, but where the superintendent falls in this particular, all will ultimately prove a failure.

The failure upon the part of a general to have everything in order has resulted in the loss of many a victory upon the battle-field, even with the majority of soldiers at his command. So the head manager of any Sunday School who falls in this one point, order, is most certain to lose the final victory, which should be his chief object to gain. That Sunday Schools properly conducted are approved by the word of God, I have no doubt; but when order is wanting, many other things are wanting also: the chief thing being a proper superintendent.

The sooner such can be secured, the sooner may we expect improvement all along the line.

We are forced to admit that many children are not properly managed at home, for which a burning shame rests upon parents or guardians. However, it is not to be presumed that said parent will object to the children being properly managed while in Sunday School; and, if children do object now, they will praise their instructors in after life for having thus corrected, or even chastised, them. Without order, very little can be accomplished. With order, success is certain.

If "Order is Heaven's first Law," evidently it can't be out of place to adopt it in Sunday Schools. How many superintendents are willing to try it?

SEVERAL THINGS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Having a few leisure hours I will spend a part of them in writing for the FIRM FOUNDATION.

I find an abundance of preaching needed in this part of the moral vineyard. I have very good attendance and attention wherever I go.

I never fail to do my best to show all sinners (including sectarians) just where they stand, regardless of feelings. Some preachers are terribly afraid of hurting somebody's feelings, and in consequence of this they prophesy "smooth things," and gain the esteem of the world and—the devil; and when one does obey the form of doctrine delivered him by such an one, he is one of those sentimental fellows, with his feelings stuck out on him like a huge sore, ready to be run against by everything that comes along.

Such an one will not put on the armor of God, for he is not one of the fighting kind himself, but one of those "whatever you are I am" sort. Brethren, should we try to please the world? If we are anxious concerning the salvation of mankind, will we not try to show them where they stand, even if they do get mad? Shall we tell sectarians that they can be saved just as well where they are, as anywhere else; and then try to get them to give up their unscriptural name, creed and practices in general? If they are Christians and on their way to glory, where they are, we are travelling the wrong road, and had better abandon it at once, and get in with them and all travel along together, for their route is much more popular than the one we are on.

My support thus far has exceeded my expectations. Of course, it, by no means, compares in amount to the enormous sums given to some of the society preachers, but if the brethren will continue to be as liberal in the future as they have since

I have started out to spend my time in preaching, I will not be apt to suffer much for the necessities of life.

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Gal. vi: 7.

It matters not where you apply this rule, it holds good. "If you sow to the flesh * * * you reap corruption," because the flesh is corruptible, and it takes something more powerful than the flesh to produce anything that is incorruptible—"a stream cannot rise above its source."

"If you sow to the Spirit, you shall reap everlasting life," because the fruit of the Spirit is "love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law (Gal. v: 22-23); and there being no law against such things, and the law being that which killeth, and the Spirit that which giveth life: "He that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap everlasting life."

Again: If you sow wheat, if you reap anything from that sowing, you reap wheat; if you sow oats, you reap oats. You can never raise a crop of oats by sowing clover, millet, barley, or anything else but oats. Isn't that so? Did you say yes? Very well; let's try again.

If you sow Methodist seed, if you reap anything from that sowing, you reap Methodists; if you sow Baptist seed, you reap Baptists; if you sow Campbellite seed, you reap Campbellites; if you sow the seed of the kingdom, you reap Christians.

How do you sow the seed of the kingdom? "The sower soweth the word."—(See Matt. xiii; Mark iv.) We sow the seed of the kingdom by preaching the word of God.

How do we produce Christians? The seed falls into honest hearts, and springs up—honest persons believe and obey—that makes them Christians.

The gospel preached, believed and obeyed makes Christians. Methodist doctrine preached, believed and obeyed makes—Baptists? No. Makes Christians? Not by a jug full. Methodist doctrine preached, believed and obeyed makes Methodists, and nothing more.

Baptist doctrine preached, believed and obeyed makes nothing on this green earth but Baptists; and shaking hands with them will not make them Christians. No, if we wish to make Christians of them we must preach the gospel to them: they must believe and obey it—that will make Christians of them—nothing else will. Brethren, are not these things true? "Whatsoever a man sows that shall he also reap."

"We that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves. Let every one of us please his neighbor for his good to edification: for even Christ pleased not himself."—Rom. xv: 1-3.

We should never get the idea into our heads that a new born babe in Christ will move right off on the Christian race, with the same speed and steadiness that an older member will.

A child must learn to crawl before it can walk, and when it begins to walk it makes a great many missteps.

So will young Christians make many awkward steps, and some of them may actually be sinful, but when such is the case let those who are strong in the Lord not become angry with them and say they do not want to do right; for we that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak and not please ourselves.

"Speak gently to him who in error you know not how great the temptation may be: You know not the effort—how earnest and well yielding to weakness he stumbled and fell."

"Let every one of us please his neighbor." The object of every intelligent being in life, is to be happy, and in seeking after this one great prize, a great many people simply follow the inclination of the flesh, and the result is, the more they gratify them the harder they are to satisfy, and by pursuing this course they become almost hopelessly involved in sin and iniquity, and reach that point where, instead of happiness, all is misery and degradation.

But christianity is ennobling in its nature; it is calculated to make man happy and contented; and the apostle Paul recognizing the fact that true happiness consists in making others happy, says: "Let every one of us please his neighbor." "For Christ, (to whom we are to look as being the 'author and finisher of our faith,' and he also is the one we ought to follow), pleased not himself;" so we should not be so selfish as to want to please ourselves, whether it pleases others or not. But we are not to please our neighbors by failing to do our duty as Christians: by participating with him in card playing or frolicking, drinking with him, or doing anything that would be calculated to demoralize him or ourselves, but to please him "for that which is good unto edifying." Edify means, to build up, or instruct, to improve.

Then the way we are to please our neighbor is, by instructing him, by improving him in the way of righteousness. By doing this we will not only benefit our neighbor, but will also benefit ourselves, and we will both be happier by it; and after having done our duty in this world, and passed into eternity, we will rest in that haven of eternal felicity, where unbounded happiness reigns supreme!

Bro. McGary, in your issue of April 15, you say: "We heartily endorse brother Conner's 'Several Things,' except that portion which seems to convey the idea that the heart is purified before baptism. This is a mistake that is frequently made, and that, too, by some of our ablest men."

Now, if it is a mistake that the heart of man is purified before baptism, I have been preaching a mistake for over four years; and I will tell you, preaching mistakes is a dangerous business. I assure you I have not so taught simply because it was a part of "our plea," but because I understood it to be a part of the faith once delivered to the saints; and, if I am wrong, I am very anxious to get right. You may be correct, but I do not see the point as yet, and I would like you to say something more on the subject.

Will you be so kind as to tell your readers what there is in baptism to purify the heart? I have never taught, knowingly, that the soul was purified before baptism; but there is certainly a difference between the heart and soul. It would not do to say; "God breathed into Adam the breath of life, and he became a living heart."

Peter said, the heart was purified by faith, and the soul was purified by obeying the truth. So far as I know, all the preachers in this country teach that the heart is purified before baptism. Please set them right if they are wrong.

I remain yours for the whole truth,
JAMES G. CONNER,
Sulphur rock, Ark.

As we lay no claims to the science of psychology, we shall not attempt such a treatise as would be required to draw those nice distinctions of that science which mark the separate identity of the heart and soul of man. For all practical purposes such definitions of the word as are given by our standard lexicographers will suffice. Mr. Worcester defines the word, "soul," thus:

1. That part of man which is considered distinctly from the material body, as giving it life, sensibility, and understanding; the immaterial and immortal part of man; the mind; the spirit.
2. The vital or animating principle; heart; life.

It will be seen that this definition does not admit of sufficient room for two processes of purification: one for the heart, and then a separate one for the soul. But brother C's position requires the two separate processes!

Mr. MacKnight, in his paraphrase on I. Pet. 1: 22, says: "Wherefore having purified your souls, by embracing the gospel through the influence of the Spirit (this sentiment Peter delivered in the council, Acts xv: 8-9), so as to have attained an unfeigned love for your Christian brethren, ye will without doubt love one-another, not from a carnal passion, but from a pure heart continually"—the parenthetical clause shows that this scholarly man understood the soul and heart of man to be too nearly allied to admit of separate processes of purification.

If brother C. will not deny that purifying, cleansing, healing, and forgiving, are synonymous scripture terms, then he will abandon his position—and we have no idea that he will deny it. It is needless that we should remind him that sins are forgiven in baptism. Then, if these terms are synonymous, man is cleansed, healed or purified in baptism. Now let him concentrate the functions that the Scriptures ascribe to the heart, and he will have all of man that comes within gospel range. Did Peter tell three thousand souls, whose hearts were already purified by "faith alone," to repent and be baptized in order to purify their souls? Oh, no, my brother, he said: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins"—that was the consummating step of the process of the purification of their hearts or souls from their past sins. Any other view will involve you in the same trouble that our sectarian friends are in, hugging their "wholesome" unwholesome doctrine, which is so "full of comfort" that will some day render them so uncomfortable. Will you cling to your position till we bring to bear upon it the arguments our brethren have overwhelmed the doctrine of "faith alone" with so often? Surely not, my brother! If your position means anything it means purification without repentance, without confession, without baptism—without good works—purification by "faith alone"—dead faith—"but wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?" Paul, in arguing with the same class of persons (Jews who wanted to bring the Gentiles under Mosaic customs), that caused Peter to use the language of Acts xv: 8-9, said: "Now we know that what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law: that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God. Therefore by the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin. But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets; even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe; for there is no difference (Peter said God put no difference between us (Jews) and them (Gentiles), for all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."—Rom. iii: 19-23. And in concluding this argument, the apostle said: "Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith (not faith alone) without the deeds of the law."—Rom. iii: 28. The same apostle says in Gal. ii: 16; "Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified (or purified) by the faith of Christ." This is what Peter taught us, and not that the heart was purified by "faith alone," but by "the obedience of faith,"

(Rom. xvi: 16); "by obeying the truth."—I. Pet. i: 22.

Bro. Conner asks us: "Will you be so kind as to tell your readers what there is in baptism to purify the heart?" Yes, I will, my brother: It is the blood of Christ, and the authority of Christ. Is not that enough? It is just as easy to tell what there is in baptism to purify the heart, as to tell what there is in it to "purify the soul;" and Peter said: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth."

I tell you, brother Conner, there is danger in attributing purification of the heart to "faith alone." It is virtually the old "orthodox" dogma warp and woof. Don't you see that your failure to see anything in baptism that purifies the heart, is just like the sectarian failing to see anything in it to forgive sins?

I do trust, my brother, that you will see the true position on this question. It would be a pity for us promising a young disciple as I esteem you to get much farther out in the fog of Babylon.

A. McG.

BRO. ALLEN'S BOOK.

Bro. McGary:

I have just read the "Old Path Pulpit," by F. G. Allen, and, while there are some things imperfect in it, I am glad to see he occupies the same position you do in the F. F., and is opposed to "Our Plea" of shaking them in from the sects on their unscriptural teaching.

But, that all may know Bro. Allen's position in the matter, it will be well enough to call attention to some of his teachings:

On page 46, in "Old Path Pulpit," Bro. A. speaks of the feelings and experiences as given by the denominations in our time, and says, "that such was wholly unknown in the days of the Apostles: that they were simply required to believe in Christ, and confess his name before men." Then he says: "When one believes with the whole heart that Jesus is the Christ, he believes, as a consequence, all that Christ says, and does all he directs. He thus believes the whole of the New Testament, because Christ is its author." Then, on page 47, brother A. says: "The confession includes all truths, and it cannot be made more comprehensive."

Remarks: According to brother A., it was required, and is necessary to confess with the mouth:

1. That Jesus Christ is the Son of God.
 2. The sects do not make the confession, for brother A. says their confession is wholly unknown to the word of God.
 8. When a man believes with his whole heart that Jesus is the Christ, he believes, as a consequence, all Christ said. Then, to believe in Christ, is to believe what he said; to deny what he said is to deny Christ.
- Therefore the conclusion of the whole matter, according to brother A's teaching, is this:

1. The sects do not make the confession, for their confession was wholly unknown in the Apostolic age.

2. Therefore when the sects deny or disbelieve baptism is for the remission of sins, they deny or disbelieve what Christ said: for he taught that baptism was for the remission of sins, and, in as much as they don't believe that, they don't believe in Christ, and Christ said: "He that believeth not shall be damned."

Then, according to brother A., the sects, when baptized, are unbelievers or infidels, and if it is right to receive such into the church, why not baptize all unbelievers, even if it had to be done by force? Also, why not baptize the children? Will some brother of "our plea" answer?

Again: On page 150, brother A., in speaking of the Lord's additions, says: "We see how the Lord added those at the beginning. We have no intimation that He ever changed his plan. On the contrary, these were the first fruits of His divine system, perfected for all time. Hence, He adds people to-day just as He added them then, consequently, if we are added as they were on the day of Pentecost, we may rest assured the Lord does it. If we are added in some other way, we have no such assurance. Other ways will do for doubt, speculation and uncertainty; but if we would rest upon the assurance of God's word, we must comply with its holy requirements."

Our only comment upon this is, we turn and read and find, "they that gladly received His word were baptized." What word did they gladly receive, death, burial and resurrection of Christ? No, no; for that had pierced their heart. Then they wanted to hear the gospel by which they could be saved, and Peter told them to "repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

Questions to "our plea" brethren:

1. Why did they gladly receive his word, and why were they baptized, if they did not believe baptism was for the remission of sins?

2. Could they have been baptized without believing baptism was for the remission of sins and not transgress the law of God? If so, how? For Peter commanded them to do a certain act, (be baptized), looking forward for a certain result, (remission of sins), and had they performed the act not believing the promise of remission of sins would follow, it would have been an act without faith, and whatsoever is not of faith is sin, says Paul.

Then how can you, my dear brethren, expect to escape the wrath of God when you claim to work by the authority of Christ, and will welcome and shake into his church those that have never received gladly the Word of the Spirit that said baptism was for the remission of sins, and have not come up to the divine standard, and have not, according to brother A., the assurance of God's word. May God help you to look well to this matter.

Once more: On page 157, brother A. says: "In this age people are added to a great many churches. All will admit the church to which the Lord added those on Pentecost is the church we should be added to now. To be added to this church is to be where the Lord wants us; to be added to something else, though it be called a church, may be of no value." Also, brother A. says: "This church is clearly defined in the New Testament. Its name, its worship, its organization, its government, its conditions of membership that constitute it a distinct institution, are clearly revealed in the New Testament.

"If the institutions to which we are added, called a church, corresponds in these essential features to the church described in the word of God, whose first converts the Lord thus added, we may rest assured we are added to the same. But if the church to which we have been added have some other name or conditions of membership, or organization, or government, we may know it is not the divine institution to which the Lord added those first obedient to the gospel."

Then, on page 158, brother A. says: "In the church of Christ is the blood of atonement, the forgiveness of sins, and the habitation of God through the Spirit. The churches of men, however grand and alluring, however much they may embody the wisdom of men and glory of the world, contains not these divine and glorious things."

Now, I would like to give some more of brother A's teaching, but this is enough for this time, only let us sum up the whole matter.

Then, according to brother A's book, I find,

1. God has one church.

2. It has a certain name.

3. Was established at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost.

4. People have to believe with the whole heart Jesus was the Christ, and are required to confess what they believe before men, and were baptized for the remission of sins.

5. And in the church of Christ they had the forgiveness of sins.

Also I find brother A. teaches:

1. There are many churches of men.

2. That if any of these churches have a different name to that church found in the Bible, (which they all have); that if any were to set up at a different time or place to that we read about in the Bible, (which they all were); that if any are added to these churches and are not added like they were to that church on the day of Pentecost, that is, believing baptism is for the remission of sins, (which none of them desire to add a person that will believe such), that such persons have not the blessings or the assurance of the blessings that are promised to those who come in according to the divine rule.

Now this shows plainly brother Allen did not believe in shaking them in from the sects. And, if he did shake them in, will some of his friends please reconcile his teaching with his practice.

Now, dear brethren, in conclusion I will say, that many of you are shaking them in: which is right or wrong? We have called in question your practice, and have called upon you time after time for your authority from the word of God, but instead of giving chapter and verse, you would run off after the kingdom, or Campbell, or consequences. We only ask you for the authority of such, not consequences. We have shown clearly such was not the teaching of the word of God, and in reply we have been put down as disturbers, anabaptists, and many other ugly names. Why is this, brethren? Have you no authority for your practice? Also we have taken your greatest authors and shown their teaching was contrary to your practice of shaking them in, and now in as much as you will not affirm your practice in this matter, in order to arrive at the truth on this question, I make the following affirmation, which may be applied to any one seeking for the truth, who will take the negative.

1. Baptism, as taught by the denominations of our time, is unscriptural, and we cannot with the word of God, consistently receive such into the church of Christ on their baptism.

Now, if any brother desires to investigate this for information, and will let me know, and secure the paper in which it can be examined, we will give it a thorough Bible investigation.

Of course, it is the duty of the other side to affirm their teaching on this question, but they will not; hence, we make the challenge to see if they will investigate.

Write me at Hamilton, Texas.
Yours for truth, J. D. TANT.

SECRET ORGANIZATIONS.

"The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?"—I. Cor. iii: 19; i: 20.

One will say these organizations are not the wisdom of this world. Ah, indeed! Well, we read in Rom. i: 20: "The invisible things of Him (God) from the creation are clearly seen." Then "the invisible things" of these organizations are not of God, unless they date a good way back. Whose wisdom are they?

Again: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, (right doing): that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."—II. Tim. iii: 16-17. What more could the "man of God" wish? But where in all the Scriptures do we get instruction in the righteousness of yoking ourself with unbelievers? I suppose we will have to go to the second chapter of Jude for the information.

Naaman, when directed to wash in the Jordan, thought the waters of some other stream would be as good. So we, when directed: "Whosoever ye do, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus," are apt to think it would do as well to do some things in the name of a temperance society, a grange, an alliance, etc.

What I have said does not apply to any one outside the church of Christ. If allens wish to unite their strength in promoting the welfare of the people, I have no objections.

ONE DEPARTURE OPENS THE DOOR TO OTHERS.

Quite recently the progressive brethren, Bush and Stapp, held a series of meetings at Huntsville, Texas, and had quite a revival. They reported success, and a bright future for the church. Even before the increased zeal produced by this meeting began to cool, the members go to work in behalf of the church. But how do they propose to work? Please notice the following clipping from the Huntsville Item of April 28th:

CHURCH SUPPER.

The ladies of the Christian church will give a supper at the Skating Rink, to-morrow (Friday) 29th inst. at 8 p. m., for the benefit of the church. Admission, 50 cts.; children, 25 cts.

Now, dear brethren you all know that this is not the kind of fruit that is produced by gospel teaching. But when brethren begin to travel toward Babylon, you may expect such results. Brethren should seriously consider these things, and halt before they lose sight of Jerusalem. J. S. D.

CLOVERDALE, IND., May 10, '87.

Dear Bro's. McGary & Hansbrough: Having some sample copies of the F. F. I find it the best paper I ever read. It is just what we need in this locality. I find it straight goods. I am reading * * *, I received the F. F. and the * * * the other day, and the F. F. was taken up and read and the * * * was "laid in the shade." I have three names on your trial offer. Will send you the list as soon as I make up the number, which will be in a few days. I will do all for your paper that I can. Will ask you to supply me with sample copies of each publication from now on until I notify you to stop. I will write you something for publication in the near future. Bro. J. W. Perkins is preaching for us. He is on my list for the F. F. Will be glad to have a reply by private letter. Your brother in Christ, T. J. N.

A clergyman's widow gave this advice to a young lady friend the other day: "Jane, if ever you marry a minister, marry one who, in an emergency, has enough of God in his heart to go from the pulpit to the kitchen and pare the potatoes for dinner without grumbling."—Ex.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, JUNE 1, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to McGary & Hansbrough, or to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to McGary & Hansbrough.

Bro. Whitmill Holland, of Mason, Texas, gave us a call last week, and met with us at our Lord's day meeting, where he gave a good, practical talk on Christian duty. Bro. Holland is a warm friend to the FIRM FOUNDATION.

We would be glad if our brethren in different sections of the country would write short reports of the summer meetings and gospel success during the protracted meeting season. Such reports will be very interesting to our readers. This is not inviting brethren to give long blasts upon their own horns, as are too frequently found in reports of meetings. Keep yourselves a little in the background, brethren, and let us have such news as will give God the glory and impart zeal to the lovers of truth. However, we are glad to be able to say, that we have had no occasion to find such fault with any of our contributors.

WHERE THERE IS A WILL, THERE IS A WAY.

A sister writes that she has been trying to raise some money to send to destitute brethren; but she says money is so scarce that she could not raise any, so she and other sisters went to work to see how many chickens they could raise for the destitute. They got the chickens together and sent them twenty-eight miles to market. They realized seven dollars. They say they will soon add three dollars more, which will be ten dollars, then they will forward it to their needy brethren and sisters. See, brethren, what can be done when there is a willing heart.

SPECIAL OFFER.

We will give the Oatman-McGary discussion, and the FIRM FOUNDATION till the 1st of January, 1888, for 75 cents.

The questions discussed in the pamphlet are as follows: "The only Kingdom of God taught in the Scriptures will be re-established on earth by Jesus Christ at the time of his personal return to earth; and faith in this Kingdom is requisite in order to valid Christian baptism."

W. A. Oatman affirms:

"Is a man 'born of water and the Spirit' when he is immersed in water by authority of Jesus Christ?"

A. McGary affirms.

"Seek ye out of the book of the Lord and read, no one of these shall fall."—Isaiah xxiv: 16. We may seek from men and their books, and will be sure to fall. What a precious promise that is, that, if we go to the word of the Lord, we shall not fall.

LOGANSPOUT, W. VA., April 30, '87

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have neglected to send the money for your noble paper, but I herewith send it to you.

I would to God that we had ten thousand such papers in circulation among our people, for I think the church needs conversion before it can convert the world to pure apostolic christianity; for the leaven of sectarianism has been brought into the church and it has worked till it has well nigh leavened the whole lump. But I am truly glad that there are still a few that have not bowed the knee to Baal, but are yet contending for the faith once delivered to the saints: Such men as I. C. Stone, A. J. McCarty, J. D. Tant, B. R. Hefly, J. W. Jackson, E. Hansbrough, and several others that I will not mention: God bless such men. For nearly forty years have I been an unyielding, unflinching and uncompromising advocate of apostolic christianity, and I am not willing now to give away anything for which I have contended so long.

If the doctrine promulgated by the FIRM FOUNDATION be heresy, I glory in such heresy, and would to God that all who wear the christian name were similarly affected. Go on, my dear brother, I think that the Lord has roused (raised) you up for a good purpose.

Yours in the one hope of eternal life,

JACOB STURGEON.

MINEOLA, TEXAS, May 7, 1887.

A. McGary:

SIR:—I have been honored (?) by three copies of your paper styled "Firm Foundation" being sent to my address. I don't think water, which you and others are trying to build on, a "firm foundation." Please don't send me any more of them and you will oblige

WASH LYLES.

One Lord, one Faith, one baptism.

We publish these two letters that our readers may see how differently some brethren regard the FIRM FOUNDATION. We might publish hundreds bearing the sentiment of the first one, and others occasionally adverse, though not quite so pointed as brother Lyles'.

Many thanks to brother Sturgeon for his kind words. It is sad indeed to us to find such a spirit among brethren who oppose our paper, as is breathed in brother Lyles' card. We are sure there is nothing in the F. F. opposed to the "one Lord, one faith, one baptism." It is passing strange that those who so loudly cry for a return to primitive christianity, and plead the sufficiency of the Scriptures to that end, could entertain such sentiments as brother Lyles' letter manifests, against a paper that pleads for the Bible in all things, and opposes all additions, subtractions or alterations of the doctrine it has delivered us. In conclusion, we beg to inform brother Lyles, that the insult to him, in sending him "three copies" of the FIRM FOUNDATION was not ours, or we would beg his pardon. However, we will send him this issue as an acknowledgment of his favor. Publishing his card will enable our readers to learn that he does not appreciate the paper, and we suppose none of them will trouble him with it in the future. A. McG.

Dear Brother McGary:

It has been some time since I have written anything for the benefit of your readers; one reason was, that my last communication failed to appear in the F. F., another reason may be attributed to the fact, that it is not wise or prudent for correspondents to fill the editors' hook with something which would be of no interest to the public, therefore, of its unworthiness, I suppose, it was not placed in the F. F.

The cause of Christ in this, my field of labor, is on the advance. The many uncalled-for, unauthorized sayings is still going the rounds: such questions as rebaptism, organ, etc., and are being discussed among the brotherhood, as well as among our editorial columns. These are questions which the Bible knows nothing of. Paul never once thought of re-baptism, for he says there is but one. This, of course, is the one Peter said was for (or in order to) the remission of sins, with the necessary prerequisites.

I am truly glad to see through the F. F. your boldness in the defense of the ancient gospel. I am well pleased with the present look of the F. F. since it has become a semi-monthly.

When any one believes the gospel, repents (reforms) and confesses their Lord with the mouth and is understandingly buried with their Savior, is he not a christian? or are they sectarians? (not a christian).

Well, suppose one repents of their sins and believes, for remission of sins, and is baptized because their sins are remitted or pardoned, what is he or she, are they christians or sectarians? (Yes, sectarians.)

Suppose, again: A. believes the facts of the gospel: repents and confesses his Savior with the mouth, and is buried with his risen Lord in baptism by a Disciple; then he goes to a sectarian organization (Baptist society) and they, the Baptists, baptize him into the Baptist society, what is he? Is he a christian, sectarian or Baptist? or is he either, if so, how did he become so? This is for light.

Enclosed find one dollar, which you will please place to my credit for the F. F., and send it on. Your brother in the one faith,

J. W. BRATCHER.

Dallas, Ark., May 4, 1887.

Such a person as you describe would be a Christian. He would be truly one of God's people in Babylon, to whom the call, "come out of her," would be applicable. Such a person would become a Christian by "believing, repenting and confessing his Savior with the mouth, and being buried with his risen Lord in baptism. He would reach Baptist street in the Mystic city, by wandering off into the Baptist church; no matter whether they received him through their ducking, called baptism, or received him on his valid, scriptural immersion. His Baptist ducking would not vitiate his scriptural immersion; it would simply be a part of their system of foolishness in which they had become entangled and snugly domiciled in Babylon. But there are more streets in this Mystic city than Baptist street. Her suburbs are rapidly encroaching upon so-called Jerusalem.

A STARVED CONGREGATION.

On last Lord's day one of our brethren applied to Rev. Junius Wilkins, pastor (and you know pastor means feeder) of the Christian church in Austin, to get the meeting house for Bro. J. W. Jackson to preach in at night during the week, not interfering with said Wilkins' appointments. At first he advised the brother to see the officers of the church in reference to the matter; but after a little reflection, he said the congregation was too much fatigued with the Lord's day devotions to attend services at night during the week, and under the circumstances it would be best not to see the officers, and he felt justified in saying he knew brother Jackson could not get the house.

Now, the point that I wish to call the attention of my readers to mostly is, what he said about the condition of his congregation. He had been their pastor, or feeder, from eight to twelve months, and they are too fatigued, so much overcome with the Lord's day services that they are unable to attend services at night during the week, and he is so well assured that such is their condition that it would be useless to go to see the officers about getting the use of the house. Now, if that is so, that they are as sickly, as weakly, as he represents them, I ask, upon what sort of food has he, as their feeder, been feeding them? Why, it seems that the food that they have been living upon is worse, less nutritious, than the husks upon which the prodigal son fed; for he had strength of mind sufficient to determine to return to his father, from whom he had wandered a great way, and sufficiency of physical strength to carry out his determination; but these prodigals, wanderers from God's word, in and about Austin, have not even strength enough to go a mile to get to the place of devotion, that is, if their pastor (feeder) does not misjudge them; and who is better qualified to judge the condition of a flock than he who feeds it? But then I am aware that that pastor is a hireling, and the hireling cares not for the flock but the fleece, "yea, the golden fleece," and he may misrepresent them, for whenever a man can get his consent to become a hireling, a stipulated salary preacher, he is in a fair way to become a misrepresenter.

DEAR BRO. MCGARY:

I have not words to express myself, but just wave the glorious banner of truth, and cry aloud and spare not. May God bless and prosper you. Give all the lovers of truth a chance to fall in line and speak out. I have fallen in love with the F. F., and think I will be able to send some subscribers soon.

It should be in every christian family. I tender you my kindest regards and many thanks.

In brotherly love.

J. C.

Dear Bro. McGary:

From some cause we did not get the FIRM FOUNDATION of March 15 and April 1. They did not reach our office at all; I thought through some misfortune, perhaps, they had not been published, but I see in the last number an allusion to an article in the F. F. of April 1.

Now if you think that it is through neglect in any way at your office, that we have lost so much good reading, and you have the back numbers, you may send them with our next, they will still be new to us; if you have not the back numbers, all right.

I greatly rejoice to know that we have such a host of men who, in the face of such opposition and persecution, dare to be consistent. Bro. I. C. Stone stands the storm well; because he has laid his foundation upon solid rock, his opposers will exhaust their strength against him and still he will stand.

Since Jesus Christ the Son of the living God offered up prayer to the Father for all them who would believe on him through the apostle's word, (John xvii: 20), many have believed on him through the apostle's word, and many have believed on him through testimony that came from a different source entirely. Some who had believed on him through the apostle's word, may have had their faith overthrown by the teaching of Hymeneus and Philletus, (II. Tim. ii: 17-18), and believed on him through their teaching, and repented of their former sins, and confessed the Son of God as they represented him, and been immersed. They would have been immersed penitent believers, but who will venture to say theirs would have been valid immersion? A man might believe on Jesus Christ through the word of the Jews.—(John viii: 28).

The apostle's word requires that men believe on Jesus Christ as one who will remit their sins on certain conditions. Those who believe and teach him as one who will remit sins on other conditions than those given by the apostles, do not believe on him through the apostle's word, and as the apostle's word is the only testimony through which men can believe on Jesus, as the Christ the Son of the living God, I conclude that those who believe upon any other testimony, get it from a false source, and consequently, believe in a false Christ.

There was nothing wrong with the immersion of those twelve mentioned (Acts xix) if their faith had been founded on testimony from the proper source, but it was not; consequently, Paul must give them the proper testimony, which they believed and were immersed, and God demonstrated his acceptance of them in miraculous gifts.

Brethren, let us stand by the word of the apostles, and not substitute for their word, the doctrines and commandments of uninspired men, which some are doing by teaching that all immersed penitent believers are Christians, no matter upon whose testimony they founded their belief; whether upon the testimony of wicked Jews, Roman Catholics, Methodists, Presbyterians, Adventists, Campbellites, or the testimony of the apostles of Jesus Christ. Many are teaching Christ as the author of division, and many believe in him as such.

I would rejoice to see Christians agree so we could all walk together, speak the same things, be of the same mind and of the same judgment.

Bro. McGary, we will expect some very unpopular teaching from your pen after the pending election is over. The brethren are better prepared for it than we imagine. You will meet opposition, yet you will meet sympathy, and above all, you have the truth, the author of the truth, and the lovers of the truth to support you.

Brethren and sisters of the F. F. I am not ashamed that I have been permitted to associate with you in your writings, but rejoice in the noble instructions you give in order that we may be led not to love the lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the eyes, and the pride of life, which are of the world and will pass away, but to love to do the will of God that we may abide forever. Let us put on the whole armor of God that we may be able to withstand the wiles of the devil.—Yours in hope of victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

ERROR AND TRUTH.

"We deny that there is any righteousness of God revealed in the design of baptism in order to faith. Faith is produced by facts, and not by the design of baptism.—Christian Messenger.

Well, regardless of your denial of plain, revealed truth, we will affirm that "the righteousness of God is revealed in the design of baptism in order to faith, and in order to the obedience of faith." And we deny that the "three facts" are sufficient for either: and the proofs are abundant from alpha to omega of the New Testament. We will give just a few examples, which will be sufficient for the free reader who is not under the yoke of the old mother of error, to-wit: Sectarian fellowship in the churches of Christ.

Now, what is baptism? We answer: It is a birth of water and the Spirit.—(John iii: 4). Mark it, kind reader: water and the Spirit, i. e. baptism in obedience to, and according to the directions of the Spirit.

What are the directions? "Repent and be baptized for the remission of sins."

Now, what are the designs of this baptism? God promises salvation—remission of sins—entrance into the kingdom.

What produces the faith? God's promise.

On what is the faith based? On the promise of salvation.

What is the obedience of this faith? The obedience of the command annexed to the promise in order to the blessing.

Now that the belief of the three facts is indispensable, no one denies but that belief does not comprise the faith of the gospel, and hence is not of itself the gospel; but that the faith of the gospel is produced by the promise of God, and consists in belief, trust and confidence in God's word, is apparent in the following examples:

"Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."—Heb. xi: 1. Will any one attempt to make that apply to the three facts? Try it on.

"But without faith it is impossible to please him, for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."—Heb. xi: 6. Try that on.

"Through faith also Sarah herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised."—Heb. xi: 11.

Once more: "He (Abraham) staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God. And being fully persuaded that what he had promised he was able also to perform. And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness. Now it was not written for his sake only, that it was imputed to him, but for us also to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on Him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead."—Rom. iv: 20-24.

Now faith comes by hearing the word of God; and where God speaks faith springs up: and the man whose gospel and faith stops at the cross and tomb, has stopped his ears, and should cease to pervert the right way of the Lord and learn it more perfectly.

Fraternally yours,
A. CHRISTIAN.

PROHIBITION LETTER.

"Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savor, so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honor."

It is indeed surprising to see a man, who has such a reputation for wisdom and honor as our esteemed editor, take a stand against prohibition, judging from what I read in an "Anti" last night. I know his article will be quoted by all the rum organs in the state, a notoriety I would not suppose a Christian would covet—a dead fly, truly.

And, though I wish to give our editor credit for being strictly honest and sincere, I cannot see why he should warn Christians against the ballot-box, the very thing that makes our country a refuge for the oppressed in other lands. How they crowd our shores! But if all Christians and good people were like our editor, would this be the happy America it is to-day?

Alas! no. Satan is not yet tied, and Christians are told to be ready unto all good works, and, if ridding our country of alcohol is not a good work, I fail to be informed on the subject. We prohibit other things: for instance, the sale of oleomargarine. Who grumbles at that? But there are those who are taking our pure bread stuffs, wheat, rye and corn, for which thousands of helpless children are starving to-day, and converting it into a death dealing drink, that destroys soul, body and spirit. Suppose some men sell our editor's children and wife adulterated food and diseased meat, and a vote of his would compel him to quit it, would he withhold it? I trust not. He might say: Oh, yes; but they were deceived, while the whisky men advertise their wares truly.

No, never; if they advertised truly, we should see on the signboard: Death, misery in every form, and liquid hell fire. It may sometimes be distilled from grain, but oftener from logwood, strychnine, fusil oil and tobacco, and distilled in the cellar of the saloon at that—isn't it?

Let us thank God for the ballot-box! And they who would "do good unto all men, especially to the household of faith," do all they can to stem the tide of evil. We are nearing the time when Satan is to be bound a thousand years, and when prohibition shall reign throughout our land. It will cripple his Satanic majesty a good deal. If we could also vote out all houses of prostitution and gambling hells, and have a compulsory education law, we might expect to see the dawning of the great millennium. Lord hasten the work. Let us look at our innocent, sweet faced children, and whatsoever our hands find to do, that do with all our might, if we would be good citizens, and Paul seemed to think that an object.

Hoping this will meet our editor's approval, I am,

Yours Respectfully,
E. M. HUSTON.

The Christian Evangelist thanks the Christian Messenger and Review for their valuable service in putting down the re-baptism heresy. It says, if these two papers were as sound on every other question as on this, it would not find any fault with them. If the C. E. will show wherein the Messenger is not sound on any question, it will correct its unsoundness at once.—Christian Messenger.

Well, yes, the Messenger has done some valuable service in advancing what he calls the "re-baptism." Since this debating editor shouldered his theological club and began "the putting down" process, our subscription list has more than doubled itself. We therefore join in with the C. E. in tendering our thanks for the "putting down." Put us down some more, brother Burnett.

PREPARING FOR DODGING.

On account of the fact that the Christian Messenger speaks of a new Daniel and a new Foundation, I send these few lines to the F. F. for publication.

Why does the C. M. give me the appellation of new Daniel? Is it an attempt to injure my character as a preacher by virtually accusing me of claiming to have the power of a prophet? Is it to publish to the world that I am the new, in contradistinction of the old Daniel—that I have uttered a prediction, and that that prediction is a contradiction of the old Daniel? I uttered no prediction of any kind, and gave no man any reason for calling me a Daniel.

Is it possible that this irony is intended to belittle me, that I might not have too much weight in the future? When I wrote the article referred to by the C. M. I signed my name in full; if men can't call me by that name I would rather they would not call me at all.

The C. M. says, "the new Daniel says: 'In the days of these kings the God of heaven shall set up a kingdom the seed of which shall never be destroyed.'"

There is but one way of fairly representing an opponent, and that is by representing him in his own chosen terms, this I presume the C. M. knows to be true; so his mistake cannot be a mistake of the head.

When I teach that baptism is for the remission of sins, my sectarian neighbor represents me as teaching water salvation or water regeneration, this is the manifestation of the spirit of sectarianism, and I pity the professed christian that falls into such practice. Does the editor of the C. M. berate sectarians for nicknaming christians, calling them Campbellites, and hope to escape the charge of inconsistency when he nicknames the papers published by his brethren? I never expect to find any man who has no faults, but I never expect to find anything as utterly destitute of good manners as the C. M., unless I have entirely failed to get a correct standard; my old preceptors who taught me in my boyhood days, taught me that it was the height of bad manners to give nicknames.

When I say there was a kingdom in purpose, all is right. I may say there is a kingdom in promise, in prophecy, in a preparatory state, and all is right, and I suppose I could get a fair representation all along here; but when I say that the kingdom has existed in its germ state, my proposition must be colored to suit my opponent without regard to justice. The Bible teaches that the word of God is the seed of the kingdom: it also teaches that the children of the kingdom are the seed of the kingdom, (Matt. xiii: 38); so the word of God and the children of the kingdom are equal.

If some one was able to show that there had always been christians or children of God, it would establish the perpetuity of the church in its organic development. If the children of the kingdom are the seed of the kingdom, and the word of God is the seed of the kingdom, it follows that the word of God and the children of the kingdom are equal, so if the word of God has been perpetuated, it is not going outside of the record when we say, the kingdom has been perpetuated in its germ state.

Since this is all so unreasonable that it may turn the theological stomach of the C. M., we will close the treatment of the case with a pungent dose of his own nostrum, to quiet things:

When the C. M. is talking to the Gleaner, the Baptist church is a miserable sect in Babylon; but when in other company, the Baptist church is in the kingdom.

1. The Baptist church is in Babylon. 2. The Baptist church is in the kingdom.

Will the C. M. please tell us where Babylon is? It seems to me that the C. M. has turned Babylon into the kingdom, but if I am mistaken in this, and Babylon is not in, but out, and the Baptists are a miserable sect in Babylon, it follows that the Baptist are a miserable sect out of the kingdom.

Will the C. M. please harmonize his own statements as to the attitude of the Baptists? I suggest to the C. M. a theological blacksmith shop for home repairs.

W. P. RICHARDSON.

THE LAW OF PARDON.

"The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus (says Paul) hath me freed from the law of sin and death."

"The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul."—David.

Our king says: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord: shall enter into the kingdom of heaven: but he that doeth the will of my Father who art in heaven."

The term LAW denotes a rule of action prescribed by one in authority for the obedience of those who are subjects of law. A monarch forms all the laws by which his subjects are governed.

Sin is the transgression of law by the law of the kingdom. Subjects are converted from other institutions and inducted into the kingdom of God's dear Son. Hence, all genuine subjects of heaven's king are converted by divine law, called "the law of the Spirit," simply because the Holy Spirit revealed it. This will be admitted!

Let us now consider this revealed "law of the Spirit" as it respects the alien sinner, which is designed to prepare his mind, change his heart and character, and induct him into Christ, into his church or kingdom. The church is not the kingdom, but it is an indispensable element of the kingdom. Now, bear in mind, that if any one is scripturally converted and enters the church according to "the law of the Spirit of life," he is not only a member of the body of Christ, but he is in "the kingdom of heaven." He has been "delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son." This is a definite, tangible written law, the obedience of which is indispensably necessary to pardon. We therefore call it the law of pardon as respects the alien.

We now refer you to the revealed law, as it is written by inspiration:

1. "This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased (says God) hear you him." Moses said to the children of Israel: "A prophet shall the Lord your God give unto you * * * HIM SHALL YOU HEAR IN ALL THINGS WHATSOEVER HE SHALL SAY UNTO YOU." Thus we have the first element of the law that pertains to pardon.

The penalty reads: "It shall come to pass that every soul that will not hear this prophet, shall be destroyed." Says one: "To hearken is simply to obey."

Now tell me what ordinances and precepts of the gospel of Christ are essential to pardon? The law requires you to observe "ALL THINGS whatsoever" Christ requires of you, which if you fail to do, the penalty is not removed.

2. The second element of the LAW of PARDON reads: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." This element is addressed to no one but such as have heard the "all things" essential to life and godliness. It is applicable to no one else, from the fact that faith in Christ is the result of hearing the evidence concerning him. The PENALTY reads: "He that believeth not the gospel shall be damned."

3. The third and fourth elements of the law of pardon are combined and read as follows: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name (i. e. by the authority) of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

These elements of the law of pardon are evidently addressed to those only who have heard the facts of the gospel as did those on the day of Pentecost, and believe them with all the heart. The penalty annexed to these elements is precisely the same as the others. It reads: "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be PUNISHED WITH EVERLASTING DESTRUCTION." There is also a gospel precedent requiring the candidate for baptism to CONFESS before the administrator his faith in the Lordship of the Son of God. Phillip said to a candidate or applicant for immersion: "If thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest be immersed." The confession is in order to baptism and precedes it.

The entire law of pardon to the alien sinner is now perfectly plain. It is unquestionably "the form of doctrine" which all penitents must obey from the heart in order to be made free from sin. All the converts of whom we read in the gospel, heard the gospel, believed it with all the heart, confessed their faith in the Son of God, repented of all their sins and were all baptized into Christ and thus put on Christ.

Hearing the gospel is essential to faith in Christ, for faith comes by hearing. Faith in Christ as Lord of all, is essential to a change of heart and of character. Says Paul to his brethren: "You are the children of God by faith in our Lord Jesus Christ." Hence no one on earth becomes a child of God but such as hear and believe the gospel.

Bear in mind, my dear friend, that the Savior himself puts faith before baptism, and baptism before salvation or remission. He says to his ministers: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth (the gospel) and is baptized shall be saved; but he that (heareth the gospel and), believeth not, shall be damned."

Remember, that this commission requires every minister on earth to preach the same doctrine called "the gospel" to all the kindreds of earth, with a promise that all who believe this doctrine and are immersed as a result of faith in the truth of this doctrine "SHALL BE SAVED."

Now, dear reader, you hear a great deal of talk about baptism, its prerequisites and designs. Much has been said about THREE FACTS of the gospel being all that any one is required to believe to make him a fit subject for baptism: that these "three facts" constitute that form of doctrine which the apostles speak, that he and his brethren had obeyed from the heart in order to pardon. Did you ever read of the obedience of facts? If so, please tell us where to find it.

It is held by the opponents of the position of the FIRM FOUNDATION that all who believe that Jesus died for our sins, was buried, and arose from the dead, and are immersed into, or as an act of, this faith by any one, no difference whether the administrator is in the church of Christ or out of it, he, the immersed believer, is in Christ, and hence, a member of the body of Christ. Such a baptism is recognized as valid, as a scriptural baptism, and said member is therefore entitled to membership and full fellowship in the church of God.

Is this sect baptism valid? Is it scriptural baptism? One says yes. The F. F. says no! Who is in the affirmative? Those who say yes. In this issue, who is right? Those who affirm, or those who deny?

Let us see: Millions of Greek Catholics believe these three facts and immerse their adherents. Thousands of Mormons believe these three facts and immerse the believers for the remission of sins. All protestants believe these three facts, and millions are immersed not for the remission of sins, but because they are saved before baptism. The Savior put his salvation after baptism, but protestants put their salvation before. Who is right? Those who hold that the baptism of all those who simply believe these three facts, and pervert the gospel of Christ in almost everything else that pertains to christianity, is valid, are, in our judgment, simply tolerating all the heresies that pertain to those respective sects above indicated. Think of it: are all right in doctrine and practice. Is Catholicism, Mormonism, Universalism, and every other ism that we read of, all right? If so, tolerate all alike. If not, reject the heretic and his works.

Will brother Burnett, or any one, affirm his position?

KNOCKING IN VAIN.

"Knock and it shall be opened unto you," said the Master. But if a man knocks at the door of a sect, according to the gospel, it shall not be opened to him. The proudly styled orthodox churches of our day, with all their improvements, shut the door on him who knocks just as people knocked in the days of inspiration. He must stand without till he gets his consent to submit to some unscriptural tests of fitness.

Not long since a man approached a Baptist preacher, and sought to enter the Baptist church. Among other questions, the minister asked: "Do you believe that God, for Christ's sake, has forgiven your sins?" Applicant (hesitating): "Did people believe and confess that under the preaching of Christ and the apostles?" Minister: "We think so, and we never admit people to baptism and membership in our church unless they feel they are already saved by grace through faith; we don't baptize sinners." "I read that Peter's confession of Christ was revealed from heaven, (Matt. xvi); that the eunuch confessed that he believed Jesus Christ was the Son of God, (Acts viii); that if we confess, with the mouth, the Lord Jesus, and believe, in the heart, that God raised him from the dead, we shall be saved, (Rom. x: 9). So this confession of Christ (1) from heaven, is divine, (2) is fundamental, is the rock upon which we built, (3) is in order to salvation. I want to be saved, and can't confess that I believe I am already saved. The scriptural confession is in order to salvation, places salvation before me as something to be sought; the confession you require places salvation behind me as something already obtained. I can't confess what you require unless you show me where Christ or his apostles took such a confession before admitting people to baptism, and give me some light to prove I am already saved."

Minister: "We don't follow an isolated instance as Phillip and the eunuch, but base our practice on the general tenor of Biblical teaching. 'We know,' says John, 'that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren.' If you love the brethren, you know you are saved. Don't you feel that you love God's people?"

Applicant: "I am not yet in the church, and have no brethren to love but sinners. It seems I need to become a brother before I testify how I am getting on in loving the brethren. How anybody feels is no evidence. If a man believes error, he feels that it is truth. Jacob believed and felt that Joseph had been torn in pieces by ravenous beasts, for twenty-two years, but all the time he believed a lie, and his feelings followed his faith. What I want is truth. Let me have one example where people were asked to confess that they believed their sins were pardoned before they could be baptized into Christ, and I will conform to it."

Minister: "I believe you think baptism is in order to the remission of sins. We don't believe in baptismal regeneration."

Applicant: "If you will find one instance of the confession you require, I will make it, and be baptized. Then, of course, if I confess I believe I am already saved before baptism, I can't believe at the same time that baptism is in order to salvation."

Minister: "I have no special passage to give you. I commend you to the general tenor of the Scriptures."

He never got in. He knocked in vain at that door. Was that the door of God's church? It is sad to think that every person in the large body called the Baptist church has confessed a confession that no man ever confessed under the ministry of Christ and his apostles. It is sadder yet to contemplate that every man who confessed it, confessed what was false. Still sadder is it to think that this falsehood is not a harmless addition to the divine confession, but one that sets aside the divine simplicity of the sinner's duty, destroys the force of many scriptural statements about confession and baptism, and divides the Lord's people into parties. "Reader, take heed what you hear," what you believe, what you confess; and remember God has given you full light in his word, and that there is a church into which you can enter upon a scriptural confession. B.

The above is clipped from the Guide of April 29th. The writer, I presume, is W. L. Butler, one of the Guide's editorial contributors. He says: "The proudly styled orthodox churches of our day, with all their improvements, shut the door on him who knocks just as people knocked in the days of inspiration. He must stand without 'till he gets his consent to submit to some unscriptural tests of fitness." Now I wish to submit a few questions to Bro. B. If a sectarian knocks at the door into Christ's Body, and does not knock just as people knocked in the days of inspiration, should he not stand without, till he gets his consent to submit to the scriptural tests of fitness? Is he not knocking in vain? Does not the case you give in the foregoing extract, clearly show this fact? If no example can be given where people were asked to confess that they believed their sins were pardoned before they were baptized into Christ, why do our brethren receive so many from the sects upon this confession? Now, brother B., I fully endorse your position, if I fully understand and am glad to see it in the Guide. It is the position advocated by the F. F., and on account of which we have been called "New Reformers, Schismatics, Extremists, etc. As you truly say, such persons knock in vain at the door. I join with you in the following expression: "It is sad to think that every person in the large body called the Baptist church, has confessed a confession that no man ever confessed under the ministry of Christ and his apostles. It is sadder yet to contemplate that every man who confessed it, confessed what was false. Still sadder is it to think that this falsehood is not a harmless addition to the divine confession, but one that sets aside the divine simplicity of the sinner's duty." Then why is it that we are divided just at this point? Why will we continue to receive immersed sectarians by the shake of the hand? We have quit this practice. Are we right? If not, why not? Will you please tell us? J. S. D.

SLANDER.

If any lover of the truth can read the Ashdod statements of the advocates of sectarian fellowship in the churches of Christ, without blush and shame, they must certainly be pre-hardened for the task.

Just hear the champion in a few assertions, and then reflect for a moment, and you will say we are justifiable in preferring the charge of slander. In replying to brother Strode, he says:

"If brother Burnett is more charitable toward the Baptists than the Bible allows, it is very strange that the Baptists hate him with such bitter hatred."

This we know is true: the Baptists do hate him; and we know more, from brother B's own statements, he hates the Baptists with a bitter hatred. He charges them with unbelief, disobedience, false teachers, blind guides, etc. He makes heinous charges against their baptism, "because of," instead of "for the remission of sins." He says they are a "poor, pitiful sect in Babylon." This shows the spirit existing between them—antagonistic enemies. Now, what does he say about their relationship? "Baptists believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and are baptized into the body—the church—and are in the kingdom of God." Why, indeed, they are his brothers in Christ—members of the one body, "Where there is neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, male nor female, but they are all one in Christ." "Now see that you hate one-another with a bitter hatred from a pure heart fervently." Is not that clear as mud?

Again he says: "What we meant by a true Baptist was, a converted person that has been brought into the kingdom of God as Baptist doctrine requires." There is the first time in the annals of the church that any disciple ever penned the slanderous words, "brought right into the kingdom of God as Baptist doctrine requires." Every word of Baptist doctrine required to bring a person into the kingdom as they claim to teach and practice is, first, repentance, then to pray down faith and the very moment they believe, in they go—accepted of God. The very doctrine that he himself says is false and contrary to the doctrine of Christ, yet he says they are brought into the kingdom of God by it. Baptist doctrine does not admit of baptism to bring persons in, yet he says they are baptized in. Moreover, we learn from this Ashdod editor, that the very Baptist church is in the kingdom.

Listen: "The Baptist church was not hitched on to the kingdom of Christ. It is a faction formed within the kingdom, and instead of being perfection to the kingdom, it is an imperfection." Indeed, we would suppose it would make a very imperfect thing out of it. But he continues: "After fifteen centuries, a faction was formed in the kingdom, composed of baptized believers, (a kind of conclusion) which took the name Baptist and crystalized a little party around that name."

A little party? The Baptists are no little party; and when we consider the different kinds and sects of Baptists, we find they greatly outnumber the Christians, hence the Christians are the "little party" in the church of Christ.

Oh! is he not a lovely "Bride adorned for her husband?"

Now, is there a disciple of Christ on God's green earth that believes it? Not one. Even the author will not own his deformed calf when he turns around and looks at it. Just think of it. The "Baptists are members of the one body—brought in by Baptist doctrine, and hate the Christians with a bitter hatred;" and the Baptist church is in the Christian church; a larger thing in a smaller thing; an antagonistic and entirely different body in a body; two bodies diametrically opposed to each other in one body: in the kingdom of God—"a poor, pitiful sect in Babylon." Why the thing is out of joint at every angle—the most self-contradictory statement ever fabricated on the churches of Christ, and we enter our protest against it, and against the mother of it; and we are determined to put it to an open shame, and drive it to its resting place in oblivion, that it no longer mar the peace, and sunder the unity of the Spirit, and adulterate the body of Christ. Those who will persist in the pernicious practice regardless of brotherly love, unity of spirit and word of the gospel, let them down the thing and slap on Beecher's ox-yoke, it is far more honorable, and far less sinful than the above false and sandy breastworks.

Why, sir, the editor has been down in Babylon so much with his Baptist brethren, that he speaks the language fluently. He was down there with old battle-flag Ray for a long time, and while down there he discovered that "the church was with the Baptists in the days of A. Campbell," but Campbell and others took it away from them. And Ray waved his flag and gathered the false cudgel and beat him over the head, and sustained the fact, that if the church was with the Baptists, it is with them yet. And the editor did compromise and donate to the Baptists that part of the kingdom known as Babylon, and now they form "a kind of con-cision in the kingdom—a poor, pitiful sect in Babylon.” And when he gets one of them to “jine the church,” (though they are in the church), he says he don’t want them to “re-faith, or re-repent, or re-re-re-baptize.” That is just what we don’t ask or want. “Re” is a prefix and means to produce the same again. We want no reproduction of their repentance, faith, or baptism, for it is no account; and if they were to re and re and re it would only make them worse.

Bro. Burnett says their repentance “before faith is sin—for that which is not of faith is sin.” He says the Baptists do not believe the word of God, and would give a thousand dollars to have “for remission of sins” wiped out. Now, according to the author of these confusions, what is their faith, repentance and baptism? Let the reader answer: and then let the reader look up a “baptized believer—in the kingdom of God—who does not believe the word of God, and hates the Christians with a bitter hatred.”

Kind reader, can you be led to believe that the church of the living God, sacred body of Christ, the bride, the Lamb’s wife, is a mongrel mass of sects? And again, do you think the bridegroom will own those who have been induced to live in adultery to him, not having been lawfully married to him? And, my preaching brethren, do you remember that the injunction of heaven rests upon you to take heed how you build upon the one foundation of Christ, or do you prize the displeasure of God and applaud men in building on “hay, wood and stubble,” more than the approbation of God, the rejoicing of angels, the glory of Christ in building on “gold, silver, and precious stones?” The hay, wood and stubble to be burned up, and you to suffer loss; whereas, if you build gold, silver and precious stones, when tried by the fire, will stand as a bride adorned for her husband.

And now my aged brother and elders of the church of Christ, (of which I am an elder also), “over whom the Holy Spirit hath made you overseers,” will you, dare you sit dumb to the obligations that are incumbent upon you, and see and hear those of whom we would hope better things, induce persons into your fellowship who have not obeyed the gospel of God’s dear Son; those who desire the way of life to know; those who, if properly taught, would receive the engrafted word, which is able to save their souls; those who would gladly obey from the heart that form of teaching that would make them free from sin, and the servants of righteousness—their hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience and their bodies washed in pure water, and go on their way rejoicing in a knowledge of the truth in Christ Jesus: instead of being deceived and rocked to sleep in error, to meet Christ in shame?

My yoke fellow, will you not add to your faith, courage, and rise in the manhood of your obligations, and call the hurtful practice to a halt, and teach the people the way of the Lord more perfectly.

And now, in conclusion, I will say to brother Burnett: “I have written what I have written,” and, of course, it will not look beautiful to you (if you chance to see it) for it is seeing yourself as others see you. But not one of your readers will point out an untruth or misrepresentation. True, I said “Ashdod and Babylon,” which signifies unscriptural and confusion. I also said “slander,” all of which the readers will say is applicable to your assertions. God forbid that I should cast any undue reflections on any brother, or create any party feeling, but when a brother of whom we would hope better things, will persist in such confused contradictions, in support of his unlawful teachings, which break down the walls of Jerusalem, and bring uncircumcised Gentiles into the holy city, (so to speak), we are in duty bound and commanded to “cry aloud and spare not—the wolf, the wolf.”

I have been reading the Messenger for quite a while, and am proud and pleased to see its defense of many truths, and against sectarianism. But we are awe stricken to see “the sow that was washed return again to her wallow in the mire.” Why, sir, the organ invasion, the society errors, the pastor bigot, and all such, are only baby errors of the old mother that you are holding up and trying to pass upon her crutches. But the food you feed her on is not palatable for her, and every mess you give her makes her weaker and she will soon die of her own shame. We mean these things, and time will reveal the truth of them; but we are sorry to see you seduced into so many errors. But you will say we have multiplied many words but have not met your arguments. We answer: An affirmative that negatives itself, has no negative.

Now, here is our platform, my brother, come up a little and stand with us, it is God’s word, hear it:

“Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship has righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.”

Here I anchor. Fraternally yours, fare-you-well, A. CHRISTIAN.

It is said that the Baptists have a very bad disease among them, known as “a kind of conclusion.” The doctors have prepared a remedy, which is to be “well shaken before taken.”

Brethren, stop grinding: One of my neighbors says he lived a consistent member of the Christian church for twelve years, and then joined the Methodists; says he was baptized for the remission of sins, but didn’t get it till he got religion. Down goes your “new heresy:” it’s tried and failed—here is a living witness. Methodists just gave him a dose of “shaking before taking.”

A. C.

Dear Sisters:

I have just been reading your interesting letters in the F. F. and I wish to express my appreciation of the valuable lessons and words of admonition, and I hope many more will give a few words for this grand and glorious work.

I have often desired to join “the faithful few,” who have enlisted in the work, but, as others have said, “I feel so insufficient” for the task, I have remained silent. Yet I feel that if I can speak only a word for Jesus, it will not be lost; and I can not think of anything that I could say, (to one and all, and on which I could feel more sure of the approving smile of my Heavenly Father), than, to read and study your Bibles more, and the trashy literature of the day less, that tends to pervert our views of life instead of enlarging them.

We need more education of the heart, education in the Christian graces, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity. Ah, when we consider thoughtfully and seriously that these things must be seen in our lives, we will have to apply the ninth verse of the second chapter of Peter to ourselves; and no one of them, I think, is oftener needed than patience, and could we always remember, that “a soft answer turneth away wrath,” there would be fewer angry words spoken. Let us all remember, kind words can never die, and let only such be recorded in the Lamb’s book of life.

I hope all who read this will pass my imperfections by, and pray for me that I may grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

YOUR LITTLE SISTER.

The following letter was written from Henly, Texas, to G. W. Warrick, Sulphur Rock, Ark.:

DEAR NEPHEW:—As pa has finished his letter, I will write you a few lines to let you know how glad I was to hear from you. You wanted to know if we take the F. F. Yes; have been taking it ever since you sent us that first number, and the more I read it, the better I like it. At first I thought it was a little hard, but the apostles used great plainness of speech, and the F. F. teaches just what the apostles taught. I have thoroughly tested its teaching by the word of God, and am thoroughly convinced that its position on baptism is in keeping with the word of God, and I am determined to be baptized again, the first opportunity. I do not consider my baptism valid, as I never was taught what baptism was for:

whether it was for the remission of sins, or to get into the Baptist church. There is one thing I do know, and that is, I was in good earnest in trying to serve my Master, but still I was not going according to his word; so I thank you very kindly for sending me the paper, for it is more than likely that I never should have secured the light that I now have on the subject.

I shall have to close for the present, hoping our Heavenly Father’s richest blessings may be with us all now and forever.

Your loving aunt,
MARY J. WARRICK.

Bro. McGary:

Being unwilling to contribute to the support of a paper, laboring (as I believe you are, from the tone of your paper,) to perpetuate the greatest of all moral evils, you will stop my subscription, and present bill for payment.

Very Respectfully,

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I enclose you herewith money order for $1.25, to be appropriated to the support and propagation of the great truths so ably taught and contended for by the FIRM FOUNDATION.

If you should at any time need help, let me hear from you.

OBITUARIES.

Sister Louisa Newsom died at her home in Leona, Leon county, Texas, on the 6th of April, 1887. Sister Newsom lived to a “ripe old age,” being at the time of her death nearly seventy-three years old. She was a true and devoted Christian, and was faithful to the cause of our dear Redeemer unto the day of her death. Sister Newsom had served forty-three years of her life in the cause of Christ, having obeyed the gospel in 1844, in the State of Missouri. One by one the “true and tried” are passing over the river to wait the resurrection morn. Let all the Saints rest in Jesus until he comes to claim his own, and take us home to dwell with him forever more. Amen. A. J. MCCARTY.

Died, in Austin, Texas, on the 18th day of May, 1887, our Sister, Ellen H., wife of Bro. J. D. Markett. They had been married about four years, and she had been a member of the church of Christ about three years, during which time her conversation (or conduct) had been as it becometh the gospel of Christ, (Phil. 1:27), and we have every reason to believe that her condition is bettered. We sympathize with brother Markett in his great loss.

PARDON, BAPTISM, ETC.

Dear Bro. Stone:

I see an article from you, of April 15, in the FIRM FOUNDATION, on the condition of Pardon, etc. Will you permit me to ask you a few questions? Hope you will take no exceptions, if I am a stranger to you personally.

1. I see you take the position that it is necessary to know the design of faith, and repentance, and confession, and baptism, in order to receive the remission of sins, when complying with these conditions.

2. Again you ask: "Is not the remission of sins the design of these four items or conditions?"

3. Then you say: "I ask how can the promise be received or believed without knowing the design following the conditions? It is impossible. (Italics mine.) No one can possibly confide in Christ's promise of remission of sins without knowing the conditions." This is very plain and emphatic, and as strong ground as can be taken with any show of reason.

You ask: "How can the promise be believed and received without knowing the design following the conditions? It is impossible. No one confides in Christ's promise of remission of sins without knowing the conditions." These conditions must not only be complied with, but their design must be understood for the party to be blessed or accepted when complying.

Now, my first question: Is it essential to understand what faith is in order to believe, or to understand what repentance is in order to repent, or confession to confess, or what baptism is and what it is for, that it may be accepted? If so, as you affirm, is it possible for the children, and ignorant colored people, such as we all baptize, to understand all these things? How many even of grown persons can tell you what repentance is? I will here assert that one-half of the grown members of the various churches, if asked, will say, that repentance is sorrow for sin. And they so understood it when they were baptized; and hence, their repentance was not genuine, according to your teaching. And how many believe with all their heart in Jesus, that have never asked themselves what faith is, and how it is to be obtained?

Can we not all do things without understanding what they are? We see and hear, but how? We fall down, now why, what throws us down? We think, what is it and how is it done. We believe, how? Can you explain all connected with these phenomena? Did you fully comprehend all connected with your marriage? How good a wife you got? how much fortune she had, etc.? If not, you ought to be married over again, to enjoy all that your marriage meant, according to your teaching.

I saw a deaf mute make the good confession by a nod of the head. Will this do? But the book says this must be done with the "mouth," and hence, according to your position, it will not be accepted.

I was called on some years ago to baptize a man, privately, (by his choice.) We rode two miles to the river, and talked the matter over all the way; after we both went into the water, and found a suitable place, I proposed to go out and pray, which we did, and then turned immediately and went to the place selected, and I baptized him, forgetting entirely to ask him if he believed in the Lord Jesus. Now, as this was neglected, according to your theory, he was not pardoned. But did he not confess as much as the deaf mute? Was not every step that of a "working faith?" "Actions speak louder than words."

But there is another condition of pardon that you did not mention, and seems to be unnoticed by many writers of your views, but as clearly taught as to make the confession: "Calling on the name of the Lord." You will admit this, no doubt. Now how many think of this while standing in the cold water and full of excitement? for the calling must be done in the act of being baptized. Suppose the little girl, or boy, of ten years, or grown man, does not think to do so at the time: why, of course, no pardon, as the terms are not complied with. The conditions are infallible, and must be infallibly complied with by fallible creatures or no pardon!! Although the heart is full of prayer or the spirit of it, as also every act that brings them there. I feel that I want to stop here and thank our heavenly Father that he does not require such absoluteness as you and some others do.

Again you say: "No one can possibly confide in Christ's promise of remission of sins without knowing the conditions." Do not the Pedo-Baptists confide in the promises without knowing that they are not baptized, or having made the good confession, or calling on the name of the Lord in baptism? Certainly they do, and seem to be as happy as you or any of us. They "confide," whether justifiable in doing so or not. And how many of our old brethren from the Baptist ranks understood what baptism was for when they were baptized? Would you have them under again? Such is your teaching, and it has created a good deal of uneasiness in the minds of some here, and, I suppose, elsewhere.

Did John the Baptist baptize for remission of sins? Yes. Well, suppose any one had not so understood him and was baptized to "fulfill all righteousness," would not he have been accepted? Not by you. How many thousands and hundreds of thousands have been baptized to "fulfill all righteousness," (to do right), and did it with the whole heart, because they knew that Jesus requires it? Does not your system cut them off because they did not know that remission of sins was received in baptism?

Your son has done badly, you tell him if he will confess his sins against you, ask your pardon and promise to amend his life, you will forgive him; but he is a little fellow and don't exactly understand what confess means, but commences rejoicing and says, "papa has forgiven me," and he says, "I will be a better boy now." Would you say: No, I have not forgiven you; and turn your back on him, or give him hickory? No, you would not be so cruel, when you believed your son's heart was right, and his head also, as far as it could understand, as he had complied with all the conditions but one. But what is man's compassion in contrast with that of our heavenly Father's?

Is there a man, or woman, living that understands fully and absolutely what faith in Jesus as the Son of God is, or what the confession means? or what it is to be baptized into Christ, into his death, to put him on, to be buried with him and resurrected as he was, in one baptism? Much less do they understand all or any of these things when they are infants in Christ.

Jesus says: "That servant who know his Lord's will and did it not shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few." Now, with this principle before us, may we not justly say, and he that knows not his Master's will and does no deed worthy of stripes, shall not be beaten at all? And I have no doubt but there are hundreds of thousands that do the best they can, under the circumstances, to serve God, and in trying to serve him, do nothing worthy of stripes.

He also says: "Where little is given little is required." Now, with these principles before us, as given by our Lord, can we be so cruel as to teach that no person will be pardoned unless they fully understand all the conditions of pardon when they comply with them?

Do you not misrepresent those that oppose your extreme views on the conditions of pardon when you say: "They have given up the good confession, and the design of baptism?" I, for one, think as much of those two conditions as I ever did, and I have never read of one of our preachers that have given them up. Because we do not accept your opinions, is no proof that we reject the word of God.

Kindly your brother in Christ.
I. N. HODGEN.

Woodland, Cal.

Dear Bro's. McGary & Hansbrough:

I am just home from a month's tour in Southern Illinois. On my return I found here a reply to an article of mine which appeared in the F. F. of April 15. The reply (if it be a reply), is from the pen of one I. N. Hodgen, of Woodland, Cal.

I shall not try to do much more than answer his questions and expose some of his awkward positions. His first question is: "Is it essential to understand what faith is in order to believe?" I will answer by asking, can a person believe a proposition without knowing what the proposition is? Why is faith so clearly defined by Jesus and Paul if people need not know what it is? Paul says without it, it is impossible to please God.—Heb. xi: 6. Again, Paul says faith comes by hearing the word of God.—Rom. x: 17. Now does not one know when he has heard the word of God and believed it?

He asks further: "Must one know what repentance is in order to repent?" Again I will ask: If one does not know what repentance is, will he ever know whether he has repented or not? Is there any assurance of faith with that individual who does not know whether he has obeyed or not? If I know not what faith is, I know not whether I have it or not. If I do not know what repentance is, I do not know whether I have repented or not. If I do not know whether I have been baptized or not, it is because I do not know what baptism is. How could any person in such a condition have any shield of faith or helmet of salvation? That is just the condition of the sectarians; and I suppose that I. N. Hodgen would fain reduce us to the same condition.

The children and the colored people can understand all the conditions of salvation. If persons do not know what repentance is, it is because they have not been taught. Jesus told the apostles to teach all things that he commanded. But while such men as brother Hodgen teach the people that they need not know these things, we may expect ignorance to prevail. He says: "Many believe that repentance is sorrow for sin." I say, that if any one has a sufficient sorrow for sin, such a one knows how to quit it. They would not be sorry if they did not know it was wrong. Knowing it is wrong, is knowing to quit it. And knowing to quit, is knowing to repent. There is no argument in such talk as he gave in the above.

Then he says: "How many thousands believe with all their heart in Jesus that never asked themselves what faith is, and how it is obtained." That is, they believe in Jesus and do not know how they obtained that belief. Now, I do not believe that proposition at all. Can you, my dear sir, tell me of anything you ever believed but cannot tell me why you believed it? Did anybody ever believe a proposition without any testimony? Could he believe the testimony without knowing what the testimony was? It is not respectable nonsense.

"Can we not all do things without understanding what they are?" Bro. Hodgen may be one who can; but I never go it blind in that way. If I do not know what I do nor how I do it, I may be all the time out of the way. That is the way the sects do, for whom brother Hodgen tries to apologize. You see, if all would go to the law of the Lord where he tells what to do and how to do it, we would all be and do alike.

He then says: "We see and hear, but how? We fall down, now why, what throws us down?" I do not know what he means here.

He talks about my marriage and getting a fortune afterwards. I see no connection between that and baptism at all.

Then he refers to a deaf mute confessing Christ. I have seen that, too. God does not require a deaf person to speak. They can only make signs. If I were brother Hodgen I would not offer such an argument. If I could do no better than that I would give it up.

He says he baptized some one and forgot to take his confession. What of that? It was his mistake and not the candidates. That amounts to nothing.

He seems not to know what calling on the name of the Lord means. He says this is another condition of salvation. Ananias told Saul to "arise and be baptized, calling on the name of the Lord." In baptism only do we come to the name of the Lord. Coming to the name of the Lord in baptism is calling on the name of the Lord. Not like the sects call on the Lord to come right now and bless them. If brother Hodgen disputes this I can prove it. He talks about the little girl or boy forgetting to call on the name of the Lord! For such light talk as that I have no adequate reply. It absolutely demands none.

He says: "I feel as if I want to stop here." I think if he had stopped, his silence would have been as edifying as his words are.

He says: "You say no one can possibly confide in Christ's promises of remission of sins without knowing the conditions." Then he says: "Do not the Pedo-Baptists confide in the promises without knowing that they are not baptized, or without making the good confession, etc." To which I answer, no. They do not confide in the promises. Will he tell us what promises they confide in? Have they any promises outside of obedience to the gospel? If so, what are they? If Pedo-Baptists hold to and practice the truth, then we do not. If they practice not according to the gospel, then where is their promises? They have nothing to confide in, but the promise of men. But our friend tells us that they seem to be as happy as anybody. Certainly. The Catholic goes to the priest and has him to intercede for him, and goes away as happy as anybody, too.

Again he says: "How many of our old brethren from the Baptist ranks understood what they were baptized for, and would you have them under again?" What does the notions of a few old Baptists have to do with the law of the Lord? I suppose that if it should happen that a few Baptists have made a mistake, the Lord must go back on his ordinances to accommodate them. The Pedo-Baptist is as honest as the Baptist. If the Baptists' ideas must be recognized, must not the Pedo-Baptists', too? If the law of the Lord must be set aside in the one case, why not in the other? Will our brother accept sprinkling?

He says that my "arguments have created a good deal of uneasiness in the minds of the people there. I am happy to know that some are beginning to know the truth. If sectarian is right, we ought to join them; but if wrong, we ought to wholly reject it. Truth and error will not mix.

Bro. Hodgen asks again: "Did not John baptize for the remission of sins, and if any one had been baptized to fulfill all righteousness, would he have been accepted?" Now, I fail to see any force in that. John preached to the people the baptism of repentance FOR the remission of sins.—Luke iii: 3. When Jesus came to be baptized, he told John that it became them, (he and John) to fulfill all righteousness. No such doctrine was preached to the people.

Again he says: "How many thousands are baptized to do right, and do it with the whole heart, etc." I will ask, how many thousands sprinkle babies to do right, and do it with the whole heart? Paul persecuted the saints to do right, and did it with the whole heart. Are you answered, brother Hodgen?

You compare the sectarian to a little child who has done wrong, and his father tells him to confess his wrong, and he does not know what it is to confess. If they are as ignorant as a little child, and cannot learn, I suppose that God will not hold them responsible; but they are not. They can learn what it is to repent, to confess or to believe. When they confess, they say, God has forgiven their sins, which is not true. It is a mistake, and they will not submit to baptism for remission of sins. God deals with intelligent individuals, and addresses himself to them that they may understand. If they need not understand the conditions of salvation, then why are they all stated with their design? Bro. Hodgen will not try to answer this one question. I tried get brother Holloway to answer it and other similar questions, but he would not. neither will brother Hodgen.

Bro. Hodgen says that Jesus said: "Where little is given little is required." Suppose he does. How much more is given to him and to me, than to the sectarians? To them is given the whole revelation of God. Will God require less of them, than us? He gave them the same commands he gave me. Must I obey and they not? Away with such lame, lopsided logic!

I say again, that, if any one can not understand the conditions of pardon, God will not hold him accountable. If God failed to give conditions that can be understood by ordinary minds, he has lied himself, which is impossible. It is a direct impeachment of God with folly to make such a statement, and I would not dare to do so. But anything to save the sects.

You say: "Do you not misrepresent those who oppose your extreme views, when you say they have given up the good confession and the design of baptism." No, sir, I do not. When you take the confession of a falsehood, (that God for Christ's sake has forgiven my sins), for the good confession, have you not given it up? When you say, they need not understand the design of baptism, but may be baptized for some other design, have you not given it up? Will you tell us? If that is not giving it up, what is? You misrepresent us when you say that we have extreme views. Is God's word extreme? If we are, so is it; for we go by it precisely.

You say that you think as much of them as ever. If so, you never thought much of them, surely.

Will you please tell us what you mean by our opinions? We venture no opinions. God never authorized a sect. There is no authority for them in all God's word. They are an abomination to him, and I fear that all who try to apologize for them are, too. If I should bid them godspeed I would be partaker of their evil deeds. But I have written enough for one time.

As ever, for the truth,

I. C. STONE.

Catlin, Ind., May 21, '87.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have been reading the FIRM FOUNDATION some months now, and I can say I have been well pleased with some thoughts you have given through its pages. While I am pleased with some things, I cannot agree with you on some other things you advocate. However, I am very glad to see you so zealous, firm and bold in the things you advocate.

I believe in and do baptize the persons from the denominations who come to me for baptism, and are not satisfied with their former baptism. But if one presents himself after I have preached the gospel of Jesus, which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, and says he has been a member of the Baptist church, and he has been baptized, and did it to obey the Lord and not to get in the Baptist church; he says he wants to put aside all humanism, and what could you do but give him a "shake of the hand" on that? If you should insist on his being baptized again, what would it amount to if he has no faith in it? You might put him under a hundred times and it would do no good. But when one presents himself and says he has been baptized, and did it to get into the Baptist church, or to satisfy the preacher, we could not receive him because God would not.

I see your position is, in order to obey the Lord, we must know that baptism is for the remission of sins. I understand remission of sins is a promise and not a command to be obeyed; therefore, it is our business to do the obeying and God will fulfill his promises. Does the son obey his father when he does what his father tells him, not understanding his father's motives in the command? If the son should say to his father, I will not obey you because I don't understand what it is for, that would be wrong. Solomon said: "Fear God and keep his commandments for this is the whole duty of man." F. C. SOWELL.

Columbia, Tenn.

We are much pleased with the above article from brother Sowell. He manifests a kind and Christian spirit in setting forth his objections to some of the teachings of the FIRM FOUNDATION.

He says he baptizes those who come to him who are not satisfied with their baptism, but if they are satisfied, he receives them on their (so-called) baptism.

Now, brother Sowell, can you tell what constitutes the difference between the baptism of the above parties? Is there any, except one is satisfied and the other is not? If there is, I cannot see it. Yet you make a distinction between them, and is not the basis of your distinction their satisfaction or dissatisfaction? Now where did the Lord authorize you to do that?

A man comes to you after he has heard you preach the gospel of Christ "which is the power of God unto salvation," and tells you that he believes what you preached, and that he had water poured on him several years ago to honor God, to obey God, and is satisfied with it, and that he now wants to turn away from all humanisms, would you receive him? You say, no. Well, why? He comes up to the standard that you have erected to measure them by. But you say that he has done too little, that he has not obeyed the Lord, that he must be buried in water in order to obedience. That is true, he did not obey the Lord, therefore did not honor him. Another case that came under my observation in North Carolina last year: A lady came forward who had believed, repented, and made "the good confession," and had been dipped three times for one baptism: would you have received her? I think I hear you say no. Why? Why, you say she did too much. That is true: but then she was satisfied, and if you take in any because they are satisfied, you ought all, and not be a respecter of persons.

You bring up the case of a Baptist and ask: "What could you do but give him a shake of the hand?" I would teach him the way of the Lord more perfectly, and if he were not willing, after being taught, to submit to the authority of the Lord, by making the good confession and being baptized for the remission of sins, (not because his sins are remitted), I would tell him to stay where he is.

The Savior, in giving the commission, says, "teach them, then baptize them." They must first be taught—taught what? The word of the Lord, the gospel. Do the Baptists do that, brother Sowell? If they do, then you ought to preach just what they preach, and you are in the wrong place.

You say: "I understand remission of sins is a promise and not a command to be obeyed; therefore it is our business to do the obeying, and God will fulfill his promise."

Heaven and happiness are promises, but must we not do what the Lord tells us to do in order to enjoy them? And does not the Lord tell us to be baptized for the remission of sins? But you say that it is not necessary for us to understand that it is for that. Do you preach that that is what it is for? If so, why do you do it? When we obey the Lord in that institution, we are baptized for the remission of sins, and if we are baptized for any other purpose, it is not to obey the Lord, but man.

Brother Sowell, I am sixty-three years old, I have mixed with the human family a good deal, and I have never seen a Baptist whose baptism was as near the one baptism spoken of by Paul (Eph. iv: 5) as the twelve at Ephesus spoken of in Acts 19: 1-6, and yet Paul did not ask them if they were satisfied with their baptism, but they were baptized in the name (by the authority) of the Lord Jesus; and to be baptized by his authority is to be baptized for (not because of) remission of sins, and if we can't understand that, we can't understand that Christ's blood was shed for the remission of sins, and it is only in the understanding heart that the seed does any good.—Matt. xiii: 19.

Write often, brother Sowell, and give us your objections, as well as your approval, of the teaching of the F. F. Your brother in Christ,
E. HANSBROUGH.

Bros. McGary and Hansbrough:

A copy of the Christian Standard (?) has just fallen into my hands, and I desire to lay before your readers a bit of news which it contains. It says that the Northern Indiana Christian Ministerial Association, (whatever that may mean), held its 23rd annual meeting this year with the church of Christ at Wabash, on May 10th. The report is made, as I suppose, by one B. I. Radford.

Now, dear brethren, give ear while I give you an alarming bit of news: "On Thursday morning Bro. L. R. Norton presented the subject of church organization. He advocated the establishment of a presbytery. He maintained that the thing is scriptural, and that it is needed among us." These are some of the needs which demand such an institution:

1. "Somebody to decide upon the propriety of ordination to the ministry, and attend to the same.

2. "A court of appeals in matters of discipline and difficulty.

3. "A wise and prudent body to decide upon the organization of churches and to look after weak and lukewarm churches, in the bounds of the presbytery."

After a brief discussion, a committee of five wise brethren was appointed to consider the matter and report to the next annual meeting, which is to be held at Kokomo. It is intended that large time shall be given to the discussion of this important theme. The morning session was fully rounded up and finished by an address from that sweet and sincere soul, A. McLean, upon missions.

Now, there it is. One more year and we have a presbytery and a high court to decide who shall, and who shall not, preach. If a man who has a conscience, and who is too honest to submit to the dictation of these lords, wants to preach, they can say, no, sir. If a congregation wants to worship without an organ, or without a pastor, or free from any society or board, they can declare such congregation disorganized. It is to be an ecclesiastical court to lord it over God's heritage, with all the authority of the pope. No true Christian will submit to any such arrangement. This highhanded scheme is the dividing wedge. We will soon see how many friends the Lord has. I am anxious to know how many of those who even call themselves Christians will submit to this tendency to popery. I have been fully aware, for a long time, that these progressionists were going into sectism. And I am now prepared to believe that the shakers will go the same way. The words of the Lord will come true. "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leads to life and few there be that find it."

Here I desire to give your readers another scrap of intelligence: In the Christian Evangelist of May 5th, I find an article upon church service. It is contended that, in order to make the service more interesting and appropriate, we should introduce suitable symbols and a liturgy similar to the Catholics or Episcopalians. That they should be introduced through the Sunday School. That they should be first in a crude form, and after a while the children will demand them. Thus, you see, to what use the Sunday School is to be applied. Through it, symbols, types, images and liturgies are to be introduced. Through the Sunday School have been introduced the organ, the festival, the picnic, the Christmas tree and all other innovations. They can buy the children with a little fun, and train them to vote out the Bible and vote in the liturgy.

In the Standard (?) and Evangelist (?) you find little else than missionary society, woman's board of missions, missionary convention, Sunday-school convention, ministerial association, preacher's institute, children's day, eulogies of Beecher, Talmage, or some other sectarian Rev. D. D.

Rev. B. B. Tyler, of New York, thus delivers himself on Joseph Parker, D.D., of London. Parker is writing what he calls the People's Bible. Tyler says, vol. 5 brings us to the book of Judges. "These discourses," he says, "are suggestive. Parker is stimulating. He almost intoxicates me." Parker intoxicates him spouting his congregationalism; but Paul or Peter don't seem to move B. B. Tyler. He will receive a man or woman from the Reformed church on a letter. He will fraternize with all the sects and bid them godspeed. The truth is, there is but one thing now to be done to save the church of Christ from final apostasy again, and that is, for every disciple of Christ to take steps to ascertain who are true, and as soon as arrangements can be made, to disclaim any further fellowship with such heretics. If true disciples cling to them, they will ultimately be crushed and become powerless. They will all be carried away in this whirlpool of iniquity. I ask, brethren, what shall we do? Immediate action is demanded. They are forming districts and sending out their evangelists (emissaries) to capture the congregations. They will come to an innocent congregation claiming to be engaged in a simple co-operation, and they will get them to pledge so much money, and get them hitched on until they have them fastened, and behold, it is a society with a president and other officers. It is only an auxiliary to the great ecclesiasticism that they are aiming to establish.

Cut clear loose, stand clear, brethren. "Touch not, taste not, handle not, the unclean things." It is all an effort to destroy the church, and establish a human society like the Catholic or the Episcopal society. The devil is the father of all these societies and institutions. I desire to hear from as many as possible, that we may take some action in concert to save the purity of the church.—If the Lord and the Bible have any friends, they must know each other, and stand firm against the encroachments of this ministerial association. Shall we have a presbytery and a high court of appeals? We must martial our forces.

Hoping to hear from all the friends of Jesus, I remain, yours in hope,

I. C. STONE.

Editors Firm Foundation:

I received your kind and welcome letter; was greatly encouraged to think that we have two men in this broad land that stand flat-footed on the Bible, and the Bible alone.

Brethren, I am one that came from the sects to the church of Christ, and I thank God I saw the error of my way before it was too late. I have been, or supposed myself to have been, a member of the body of Christ for eight years, but last winter, while studying the Bible, I saw that I did not belong to the church of Christ at all, for I had not made the confession, as is required of candidates before they are baptized into Christ. Rom. x: 10, says: "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth, confession is made unto salvation." And then I found that, according to Acts ii: 8, "I must be baptized in the name (or by the authority) of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins"—all my past sins. Now I am satisfied, as I am out from under the cloud of error. Now it is the Bible, and the Bible alone, for me. Your brother in Christ,

Bro. McGary:

Excuse me for demanding your attention for a moment or two; but the truth is suffering in these parts, under the mighty hand of sectism. Go on, dear brother! Show them no quarters in any direction; fight them with the severest means that you are authorized to use, and may God bless you with success.

Truly your brother,

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, JUNE 15, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to McGary & Hansbrough, or to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to McGary & Hansbrough.

As all the editors of the F. F. are absent at present, the responsibility falls upon brother T. H. Gillespie to edit this issue.

A note from brother J. W. Jackson informs us that he is horse hunting. We suppose his horses have strayed off. But he continues to send in new subscribers.

Bro. E. Hansbrough is in Blanco county preaching to sinners, and teaching Christians the way of the Lord more perfectly, and working up an interest in the FIRM FOUNDATION. He expects to be at home about the time this issue of the F. F. goes to press.

Bro. A. McGary is off, west on a prospecting tour, and will be absent about three months. As he has his family with him, and is prepared to camp all summer, we hope he may enjoy the trip, and come back much improved in health and strength. He needs this rest and recreation.

Bro. G. W. Jarvis, of Creedmoor, called at our office and gave us the names of some subscribers, and paid for them himself. He said he wanted to help the cause, along some way, and he would do that much any way. Thanks, brother Jarvis. Call in again. We are sorry that neither of the editors were at home at that time, but our office boys entertained him cordially. Bro. Jarvis is a firm friend to the F. F.

We are sorry we did not get Dr. Oatman's replies in time to publish the discussion in June, as we expected, but we promise to have the pamphlet ready just as soon as we possibly can. All who wish to read the work can send in their orders at once, and it will be mailed to any address at the prices previously published: One copy, 25 cents; five copies, $1.00; one dozen copies, $2.00. Will be glad for our friends to send us some clubs for this discussion.

SPECIAL OFFER.

We will give the Oatman-McGary discussion, and the FIRM FOUNDATION till the 1st of January, 1888, for 75 cents.

The questions discussed in the pamphlet are as follows: "The only Kingdom of God taught in the Scriptures will be re-established on earth by Jesus Christ at the time of his personal return to earth; and faith in this Kingdom is requisite in order to valid Christian baptism."

W. A. Oatman affirms: "Is a man 'born of water and the Spirit' when he is immersed in water by authority of Jesus Christ?" A. McGary affirms:

A letter from brother Tant, of May 30, says, the Baptists shut him out at Evant recently. Well, the progressives at Austin refused the house of worship to brother Jackson, of Hillsboro, a few weeks ago. We expect no better of sectarians, therefore we justly conclude the progressives are sectarians.

Bro. Stone's letter, on third page, concerning the drift of our brethren in Indiana, "into this whirlpool of iniquity," is very timely. It is sad to realize the fact that those who pretend to understand the teaching of the New Testament, concerning our duty as Christians, are fast falling into a self-made society, by adding to their rule of faith and practice, the traditions of men and the doctrines of devils.

All notions entertained by Christians, that are out of harmony with the word of God, originate from the seed of the devil, and when it springs up into the form of words, and develops into the form of actions, those words and actions are the tares amongst the wheat, sectarians amongst Christians. If the word of God has not been entirely choked out of their hearts by these tares—these doctrines of devils—then there are hopes that they will return to their first love, and obey the Lord in all things, and be restored into the love of God. But if the love of the world, the lust of the eyes, the lust of the flesh, and the pride of life, have so warped their judgment, that they consider wrong to be right, and right to be wrong; and so changed their purpose, that they exchange the worshipping of God to the serving of the devil, and the serving of the devil to the worshipping of God, then there is no power in heaven or earth to save them from an everlasting destruction from the presence of God forever.

If persons, who have known the way of life, will harden their hearts against the word of God, and will not read where it condemns their preaching and practice; and shut their eyes against the writings of our brethren in Christ, and will not read what they write in condemnation of their wilful errors, and departures from the truth; and close their ears against all preaching and teaching to show them their errors; it is wilful disobedience on their part, and they must suffer the consequences of their evil doings sooner or later. And as God does not propose to force men and women into his service, therefore, they must choose whom they will serve. "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness." Rom. vi: 16.

I hope that all who read brother Stone's letter may be doubly forewarned of the evil tendencies of these departures amongst us, and not be entangled in them. And I hope all who are entangled therein will come out, and stand aloof from any, every and all ecclesiasticisms forever after.

THE LINE OF DISTINCTION.

The line of distinction between the world, and the church of Christ, was drawn by the Holy Spirit of God more than eighteen hundred years ago, and it is so plain, to-day, that any one can see it who will turn around and face it, and open his eyes and look: and can understand with his heart, if it has not been hardened or prejudiced.

No one is expected to see this line with his back turned against it, or with his eyes shut, or with his face veiled with the mists of Babylon. No one can see it who is not able and willing to discriminate between the word of God and the tradition of men. A man who is so blind as to accept, indiscriminately, the word of man and the word of God, so as to be unable to tell which is which, is almost an irresponsible being in the sight of God. The line is marked out in the word of God, therefore draw nigh unto God and he will draw near unto you, and, having your hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, his word will shine brilliantly into your hearts, and everything pertaining to life and godliness will present themselves in a light, so true and so beautiful, so grand and so glorious, that you will forever after thank God that you had the ability and the opportunity to hear the word of God, to understand it, to believe it, and to obey it from the heart. I do not mean that you will immediately understand everything written in God's word, but you will understand enough to be prepared to grow in grace and in the knowledge of God, by having the courage to obey each and every command, and to perform each and every duty devolved upon you as a disciple of Christ.

The line is marked out; our duty is plain. Whatever the word of God condemns, is on one side of this line—on that side with the world, the flesh and the devil—and whatever it approves, is on the other: on that side with God's chosen people, God's church, God's Holy Spirit and with God himself.

God's word says, "ye cannot serve two masters;" ye cannot serve God and the devil, and, if you try to hold to the word of God on the one hand, and to human opinions on the other, you are trying to perform an impossibility, for God has said you cannot do it. Do you not try to make God out to be a liar, when you try to do what he says you cannot do? Are you not trying to make God out a liar, when you teach for doctrine the traditions of men? Are you not aware that you are teaching the traditions of men when you teach what is not in the word of God, and what is not to be inferred therefrom? Is it possible that you have come to the conclusion that man's word is as good as God's word? that man's opinion is just as much the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, as the gospel of Christ? Is it possible that we have become so warped in our judgment, so dull of comprehension, or so stupid in our own imagination, and so indifferent to our soul's salvation, as to be unable to discriminate between the word of God and traditions of men? as to be unable to understand the voice of our shepherd? and as to be unwilling to sacrifice one moment's ease and luxury for the eternal salvation of our souls?

I fear some of our brethren are being deceived by the wiles of the devil. I would be sorry to think that they had never been converted to the word of God; or to think that they had lost their minds, or had turned hypocrites and liars. Either they are liars or the word of God is untrue; or the word of God is true, and they are yet in their sins. There is the line of distinction.

WHO IS A PROPER SUBJECT OF BAPTISM?

This question, like many others connected with the plan of salvation, has been asked and answered by many, though, it appears, that the answers that have been given, do not at all agree; for, while some teach that a speechless babe is a proper subject of this ordinance, others that adults only are proper subjects, and that, too, after they have been pardoned, justified and saved; it appears that we must look to some other source for information concerning this subject, than that of theologians, creed-makers, etc.

Jesus, in his last words to his chosen band, his ambassadors, said: "All power is given unto me in heaven and earth: go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, etc."—Matt. xxviii: 19-20. Hence, we see plainly that the disciples were to teach the nations before baptizing them. This being so, it follows that all not susceptible of teaching, cannot be scripturally baptized. Then, infants, idiots, and all irresponsible persons, are excluded; neither do they need to be baptized, for Jesus taught, "that of such is the kingdom of heaven," such as they are now, without baptism. But many who oppose this innovation, have as false conceptions as respects who is a proper subject of this ordinance, as those who believe and practice infant baptism. For, before baptism, they must have an individual saved, sins all pardoned, and this must be made known to the church, by relating what they have felt, imagined, or dreamed, and the church, after hearing their experience, takes a vote as to whether or not their experience is sufficient to entitle them to membership in the church to which they desire to attach themselves. If what they relate is considered sufficient evidence, they are received; if not, they are rejected.

From whence comes this power of church authority? Not from God, for he says concernig his kingdom, that: "It shall not be left to other people."—Dan. ii:43-44. But why are they received? Evidently because they are regarded as "born again, justified, saved." Now they have a rule by which they receive them (as they term it) into church fellowship, and that is by baptism; and to make it more ridiculous, more blasphemous, they use the heaven-appointed formula.

Now, do such characters, in coming to baptism, believe it to be a divine command, forming a part of that heaven-born plan which God has devised through his Son to be his power unto salvation to every one who, from his heart believes and obeys it? Or do they not regard it as merely a "door into the church, a church custom," a thing to be done, or not done, as suits their tastes, circumstances, etc.? I say this latter idea prevails throughout sectdom; and I have my doubts as to whether there was ever an individual scripturally baptized among the sects. Indeed, there have been more time, talent, learning, etc., wasted by some who claim to be occupying apostolic ground, in defending this unscriptural practice of "our plea," than any other one item that has engaged the attention of the great men of this reformation.

Now, brother Burnett, and every other defender of this unscriptural practice, viz: that of receiving these ungodly, untaught, sectarians upon their so-called baptism, know there is not a passage of scripture in the Bible in support of this practice; and why will they continue to vilify, ridicule, and misrepresent, those who contend for the gospel, such as it was preached by the apostles? Surely it is not love of God and his word which causes them to persist in this unscriptural warfare against those who are contending for the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. They surely must have formed a league with Balaam, and must be in close alliance with those who are trying to undermine our glorious, sublime and heaven-born institution—the church of Christ.

But back to the subject: We said that teaching must be done prior to baptism. Paul says; "How can they call on him in whom they have not believed, and how can they believe in him of whom they have not heard, and how can they hear without a preacher, and how can he preach except he be sent."—Rom. x:14. "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."—Rom. x:17. To teach the gospel, or preach the gospel, is to instruct those to whom they were sent. To whom were they (the apostles) sent? "Go preach the gospel to every creature."—Mark xvi:16. "Go teach all nations,"—Matt. xxviii:19-20. "Thus it is written and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and rise from the dead the third day, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."—Luke xxiv:46-47. Hence we see from the above scriptures, that the apostles were to preach the gospel to every creature, and this preaching was to begin at Jerusalem. Accordingly, Jesus instructs his disciples to "Tarry in Jerusalem until ye are endued with power from on high."—See Luke xxiv:49; and when the day of Pentecost was come, they were, according to the commandment of Jesus, assembled in Jerusalem. The Holy Spirit from on high visits them, their lips are unsealed, their tongues are loosed, and they begin to teach the people. What did they teach them?

1. They taught them that Jesus, whom they had wickedly slain, was raised from the dead.
2. That they were witnesses of the fact.
3. That this manifestation of the Spirit was the fulfillment of a prophecy made by Joel.
4. That Jesus, whom they had crucified, was then seated at the right hand of God, exalted to the throne of the universe.

When they heard this they were pricked in the heart, and cried out unto Peter and the rest of the apostles: "Men and brethren, what must we do?" Now, Peter had preached, what some are pleased to call it, the "death, burial and resurrection" of Christ, and about three thousand believed it, and if this is all the gospel, this surely establishes salvation by faith alone. But Peter does not stop here and call this the gospel, but continues: "Repent and be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."—Acts ii:38.

Now, of what does the gospel consist? 1. Facts to be believed. 2. Commandments to be obeyed. 3. Promises to be enjoyed. Thus, we see, that these people were not left in ignorance concerning the design of the commands of God, but were told plainly what they were to do those for, and were not left to guess them out, as some would have it.

T. R. BURNETT AND THE BAPTISTS.

For the information of those of our readers who have never met brother Burnett, we will state he is the senior editor of the Christian Messenger, published at Bonham, Texas. He is an experienced debater, having held several debates with Methodists and Baptists, and two written discussions. One with W. S. Price, a Methodist, and the other with D. B. Ray, a Baptist. The "Ray-Burnett" debate is a small book, 117 pages, and "is, perhaps, the liveliest discussion that ever took place on the American continent." (Burnett's own words). Bro. Burnett's antagonism to the FIRM FOUNDATION has not only caused him to write some un-christian things about us, but has brought him to the front as a champion for the Baptists. In thus acting, he is inconsistent. If he was incorrect in his delineation of Baptist faith and practice in the Ray-Burnett debate, and correct now, he should, as an honest man, stop the sale of the little book, retract his hard speeches against the Baptists, and—join them; that is, if they would shake him well before taking.

But he thinks that he was exactly right in the Ray-Burnett debate, and knew just what he could prove to be Baptist faith and practice; if right then, his present course must be wrong, and dictated by some other motive than a desire to establish the truth. He now says:

Baptists are in the kingdom by virtue of the new birth and not by virtue of belonging to the Baptist denomination.—Christian Messenger, March 2, '87.

Note the following extracts:

"Try to expel Christ from his kingdom." Another falsehood. Christ is the head of the kingdom. We wear his name, accept his authority, and take the plan of salvation as given in the last commission, without any improvements or amendments. Baptists will not do this. They refuse to wear even the name of Christ, will not call their church after him, denounce his commission as Romanism and the doctrine of devils, and take the thief on the cross as their model conversion. This is the way they expel Christ from their kingdom."—Ray-Burnett debate, p. 104.

"Christ places salvation after baptism and says, 'He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved.' Baptists invert this order and say, 'he that believeth and is saved shall be baptized.' They do not teach the doctrine of Christ, but call it Campbellism."—Page 108.

Now, reader, which is right? Can Baptists expel Christ from their kingdom, and still be in the kingdom of God? Can they get into the kingdom without the doctrine of Christ? The new birth is the doctrine of Christ. Baptists do not teach it nor do they believe or obey it, hence are not in the kingdom of God.

"It has already been observed how he holds that the sinner must repent before faith, pray before faith, mourn before faith, seek the Lord before faith, and we now add that it is a tenet of Baptist doctrine that regeneration precedes faith. If our friend denies this, we are ready with the proof."—Page 84.

Of course brother Burnett could prove this point then, and he knows now (when not writing against the F. F.) that Baptists do not teach a scriptural new-birth. They do not believe that baptism is a part of the new-birth.

"Baptists differ from us as they differ from the New Testament. They have an unscriptural name, creed, language, organization, government and communion; confess feelings instead of faith, have displaced baptism from its position in the christian system, and put the mourning-bench therein, preach a direct operation of the spirit not through the truth as the power that converts, deny the doctrine of salvation through faith, and belong to a church that is unknown to the New Testament. We differ from them on all these points."—Page 109.

If brother Burnett is correct in his specifications above, and the Baptists are now in the kingdom by virtue of the new-birth, then we are not in it. How a church that "is unknown to the New Testament" and that differs from the New Testament in all of those fundamental and essential points that characterize a church of Christ can be in the kingdom of God by virtue of the new-birth, is a mystery solvable only by rules of interpretation furnished by the senior editor of the Christian Messenger.

This is sufficient for this time. I hope that our Baptist friends who read this will diligently compare their faith and practice with that given in the New Testament by the authority of Christ. Please remember what James says about faith: "Even so faith if it hath not works, is dead, being alone."—Jas. ii:17.

J. W. JACKSON.

WHIRLWIND.

Brethren of every station in life are wriggling, turning, twisting and working every stratagem in their efforts to find some passage of Scripture which favors shaking the world into the church. You, every one of you, brethren, who have preached a sermon on the obedience, have told the hearers the design of obedience: so did the Savior, so did the apostles, and so do the preachers of the gospel of today. The man who preaches otherwise is a perverter of the gospel. It could not, in the very nature of things, be a gospel without giving the design of obedience to it. "Gospel means glad tidings; good news," you say. Well, how can it be glad tidings, unless it includes the design—a promise? It would not be very good news to me to learn that I must be buried, if there were no promise of any benefit to be derived from it. Besides, the heart (of the Bible) being the understanding, how could I obey from the heart while I do not understand what my obedience is for? It is strange, very strange, that men will talk of obedience, the design of which is not understood—not from the heart—meeting God's approbation. Such would be will worship. It does no good to tell these brethren of these things. They know them. But we have some hopes that those who are yet unsettled on this question, will see the truth, and henceforth hold fast to it. JAB. R. GRAHAM.

A Chinaman in San Francisco was rudely pushed into the mud from the street-crossing by an American. He picked himself up very calmly, shook off some of the mud, bowed very politely, and said with a mild, reproving tone to the offender: "You Christian, me heat en; good-by."—Ex.

It is sometimes of God's mercy that men, in the eager pursuit of worldly aggrandizement, are baffled; for they are like a train going down an inclined plane; putting on the brake is not pleasant, but it keeps the car on the track. Ex

WHAT SHALL WE PREACH?

"The law of the Lord (that) is perfect converting the soul," or some supposition as to the possibility or probability of a part of this law, supplemented by various devices being a means of salvation?

Brethren, let us hold fast and hold forth the form of sound words that men may hear, understand, believe, obey, and be saved from sin, supposition and uncertainty. We might gain more favor with the world, and especially with religious partisans, if we should simply insist on a sincere "profession of religion and compliance with the ordinances of a church," than to insist on strict compliance with the gospel of Christ; and thus might we gain more accessions to our plea and more cash for our pockets; but could we thus win souls to Christ and a holy life, and insure the crown of life to ourselves and them?

Persuading people to believe that we are a liberal, progressive and popular denomination, ready to receive and encourage all religiously inclined persons to join our ranks as a means of popularizing our enterprise, and getting money to carry on a system of proselytism, is quite a different thing from praying men in Christ's stead, to be reconciled to God. This latter is the true work of the minister of Christ; it makes men Christians, followers of Christ, saints, friends of God, and workers together with God. If this we do, we shall save ourselves and others. If we gain little that is earthly by it, it is godliness and has heaven for its gain. Therefore let us ever endeavor to declare the whole counsel of God, being assured that he is a rewarder of those that diligently serve him.

J. R. WILMETH.

ARE THEY CHRISTIANS, OR ARE THEY CAMPBELLITES?

Dear Sisters:

As my desire is great in having a part in contending against the evils of this world, I will pen a few lines, though weak they may be, yet certainly will they be written in accordance with the law of the Spirit.

I met with a sister in Burnett, not long since; and she soon began to speak about Sister Saral's being so plain, yet spoke of her in the highest terms. Our short talk was quite pleasant. In a short time she left for home; and, lo! and behold, I saw there was a considerable hump on her back. Yes, and it made a considerable change in my mind. It is certainly easier for some to talk religion, than to do religion. Some people are called "Campbellites;" perhaps, these are the ones.

Dear sisters, God, in his holy word, has commanded us not to be conformed to this world. O! do you expect to enjoy the promises, if you do not obey His commands? You certainly do not. Perhaps I am, like some say, too flat on the back. O, let me be as flat on the back as

I may, rather than place a hump there to be round, and at the same time, disobey one of God's holy commands: "be not conformed to the world." O, sisters, I hope you will consider the case, and put on the whole armor of God, that you may be able to withstand the wiles of this world. Sisters, if our Savior were to make his appearance today, would any of you like to have your hump on? or would you throw it off? The blessed Savior has commanded us to be ready.

I saw another sister spending some time in learning a beautiful crochet stitch; when she gets the piece of trimming done, and puts it in what she wishes, do you think it will add anything to a robe of righteousness, beautiful as the trimming may be? "The lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life," are not from the Father of Lights, but are of the world; the world passeth away, but he that doeth the will of God, endureth forever. Read the eleventh and twelfth verses of the second chapter of Titus; these are certainly commands we have to obey, if we enter in through the gates into the city; for the blessing is only promised to those who obey his commandments. Jesus said, that many would say to him, when he comes again, that they have done many wonderful works. O, do you think that these things are a part of the wonderful works? Perhaps they are. But, what did he say to them? "Depart, I never knew you." O, be not deceived: God is not mocked; for whatsoever we sow, we shall reap. If we sow to the flesh, we shall reap corruption, and if we sow to the spirit, we shall reap life everlasting.

Sisters, are you not willing to deny yourselves of all ungodliness and worldly lust for a season, for the sake of enjoying eternal life with the blessed Savior, who died for us, that we might live with him forever, in perfect happiness beyond this vale of tears?

I had a short talk with a highly esteemed sister a few days ago: She was in that idle habit of using tobacco. I said the apostle John said, keep ourselves from idols. She said it was an idle habit, but it made no difference if the heart was right. Sister, do you believe the heart can be right, when we transgress the law of God, willfully, knowingly, and intentionally? We are told to put off the old man with his deeds, and put on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make no provision for the flesh to fulfill the lust thereof. These are positive commands; are you going to strive to obey them? Then it will take striving.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough, you can cast this into the waste basket, as you did the other one, if it is not worthy of a place in your noble paper. May God bless us, that we may know the truth and that we may strive to obey that and nothing else, is the earnest desire of

A SISTER.

E. G. SEWELL ON SECT BAPTISM.

Bro. McGary:

I am glad to notice among our good and great men, brother Sewell, of the Advocate, has come out on the right side at last. And when such men as brother Sewell comes out as he has, it shows that it will be but a short time before our plea of shaking them in from the sects, will soon be among the events of the past. But, that all may understand brother Sewell, I quote from him, as found in the Advocate of April 20, 1887, under the head of "Law and Liberty."

Brother Sewell, in speaking of sect baptism, says: "In the New Testament, also, we are as positively forbidden to add to or take from what God has commanded as were the Jews of the Old. God has commanded, in connection with the gospel, everything that is necessary to convert and save sinners; and to do just what he has required, is to obey the gospel; to refuse to obey these things is to refuse to obey the gospel, or in other words, is to disobey God. And any change made of these requirements will as certainly bring ruin upon those who make them, as that ruin that came upon the sons of Aaron, when they changed God's appointment regarding the burning of incense."

Once more, brother S. says, in speaking of the commission: "That God put things in a certain order, and to reverse this order, is to change God's plan of saving man, and substitute one of human wisdom in its place."

Bro. S. also says: "These changes as utterly destroy these conditions of pardon, as laid down by the Son of God, as anything can be destroyed. And this is not all, by thus putting baptism out of its place, they utterly destroy baptism altogether."

Now, if I understand brother S. upon this, God has required certain things at our hands, and has arranged them in certain order, and to change the command, or reverse the order of what is commanded, we change God's plan, and abolish the things commanded altogether. Therefore, as the Baptists and other sects reverse the order of God's command, by placing repentance before faith, and salvation before baptism, they then cease to be commands of God, and become substitutes of human wisdom, which shows they have never obeyed, scripturally, that form of doctrine, and cannot be recognized as members of the church of Christ, by a shake of the hand. If this is not brother S's position, will he please correct and reconcile this teaching with any other position he may take?

Again brother S. says: "Where the word of God says, 'repent and be baptized,' these men say, 'pray and be prayed for,' promising the sinner the same thing God promises them upon repentance and baptism, to-wit: the remission of sins. This again, is a thorough change wrought upon the divine plan. God's authority is set aside, and human authority put in, as much so as did Nadab and Abihu, when they set aside the fire God commanded, and offered strange fire."

Then, brother S. concludes by saying: "The only safety for humanity, therefore, is, to accept the word of God as it is, and do just exactly what it commands, and as it commands it; add nothing thereto, and take nothing therefrom. To add anything is rebellion, instead of a mere exercise of human liberty, or of human expediency; and upon no other principle can unity and harmony ever prevail in the work and worship of the Lord's people."

Questions to brother Sewell:

1. If these people have, by their teaching, transgressed the law of God, as Nadab and Abihu, is there any scriptural promise of them being saved?

2. If none, do not our brethren do wrong in saying, they form a part of the kingdom, and will finally be saved, if they have only been immersed?

3. If people are made free by the belief of the truth, (that is, to believe with all the heart Jesus is the Son of God), and obedience of the gospel, can they also be made free by the belief of a falsehood? (That is, God for Christ's sake has, in answer to prayer, pardoned them), and a submission to the form of doctrine, denying the power thereof; for Baptists will not baptize a man, in our country, who believes the gospel: he must believe and confess a lie, before they will baptize him.

4. If such are not made free, do not many of our brethren, (not yourself, according to your teaching), transgress the law of God by promising them life, and welcoming them into the church by a shake of the hand?

5. Have we any authority to baptize any person upon the belief of a lie, as all sects do believe when baptized? If not, have we the authority to receive those into our fellowship who have been baptized upon the belief of a lie?

6. Is sect baptism, as taught and practiced among the sects to-day, authorized by the word of God? If not, is it right to recognize such as being true?

Will the F. F. publish this, if they think best, and will the Advocate copy it; and will brother Sewell please consider these questions, and give me light? For I am seeking after truth. And, while I endorse brother S. in saying, we must take the gospel and not add to, or take from, in order to have unity among our brethren, I do want to know, is it not adding to the word of God, by shaking them in from the sects? If not, please show where sect baptism, as taught and practiced in our time, is ordained of God, and then I will accept it.

Yours for the right way,
J. D. TANT,

QUERY DEPARTMENT.

Bro. McGary:

In our Bible lesson last Lord's day, found in the third chapter of Acts, the question arose about the lame man, whether or not his healing was conditional or unconditional on his part. Please explain through the F. F. and oblige your brother in hope, J. D. SILMAN. Glen Cove, Tex., May 9, '87.

It was conditional; see verses four and six: "Look on us;" "rise up and walk." J. W. J.

A brother writes: "I have a strong desire to fit myself for the ministry: 1. What is the best plan to pursue? 2. Is it the best plan to use the lesson leaf in the Sunday School or the Testament? Give answer through your columns."

If you have the determination to make the attempt, and the zeal to proceed you will succeed.

1. The best plan is to study, to show yourself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth, and shun profane and vain babblings: for they will increase unto more ungodliness.

2. It is best to use the Testament, the word of God, any and everywhere. Any one incapable of understanding the gospel of Christ, after hearing it preached and presented in its purity, and in its simplicity, is not a responsible being in the sight of God. Lesson leaves and Sunday-schools are sectarian inventions and innovations, unknown to the Scriptures; and are not given by inspiration of God, and are not profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, and, through them, the map of God can not be perfect, cannot be thoroughly furnished unto all good works. T. H. G.

Bro. McGary:

I write you a few lines to inform you what steps the church has taken at this place, (and I first will say, that this is the first piece I ever wrote to an editor for publication, consequently, if I get no answer, I will not be disappointed.)

About the 8th of this month, the members voted the modern Sunday School into existence, appointed a superintendent and secretary, and organized against the protest of two brethren, myself and Bro. Hawkins, and we are still protesting against the new order of things. 1st. Because they do not show any authority for what they have done; and now they have limited the time for Lord's day services to fifteen minutes, in order to go to hear the sects preach. That you may understand the above, I will give you the programme: Meet promptly at 9:30, a. m.; Sunday-school services close at 10:45, a. m.; worship closes at 11, a. m. So you see, serving the Lord is a short horse, at this place, by these Sunday-school brethren.

Now, you have an idea how things are carried on here, so please give us some advice concerning this way of doing, if you can, that will help brother H. and myself to not be set down on by these popularity seekers, as I call them. As brother J. W. J. is now in the editorial chair, and knows this part personally, I would like to hear from him on this subject, through the FIRM FOUNDATION, if you think proper at this time.

I remain, yours in the hope of eternal life, through the way marked out by the Savior and his Administrators, (the apostles), or not at all, W. M. HUTCHISON. Hillsboro, Texas, May 22, '87.

Bro. Hutchison, you must remember that this is a fast age in which we are living, and that the world is travelling railroad and telegraph speed, and that many of those claiming to be followers of the meek and lowly Redeemer, are trying to keep up with the world, sects and all; and have, in their ruinous, break-neck speed, gone away beyond the word of the Lord; and have adopted many things, for which they acknowledge there is no divine authority: such as missionary societies, the modern Sunday-school with its institutes and other attendants, instrumental music in the worship, church fairs, festivals, etc., and yet they are more zealous in defending and practicing them, than they are in those things that the Lord requires.

To illustrate: Not long since, and not fifty miles from here, I heard a brother say, he would walk upon his knees, about six miles, if he could not get there any other way, in order to vote the prohibition ticket, something that the Lord never told him to do; and yet he often fails to meet with his brethren on the Lord's day, which the Lord tells him to do, and it is not more than half the distance, and he has a good, fat horse to ride.

Now, to what authority does he submit most readily, that which is human or that which is divine? I leave that for him to answer.

Another case: I know a certain preacher, named Williamson, who, I am credibly informed, says, that brother Driskol, and I, and the FIRM FOUNDATION are making more infidels, and that we are doing more for the devil than we are for the Lord. A pretty serious charge, is it not? Yet, he is going over the country lecturing on prohibition, something the Lord never told him to do, to the neglect of preaching the gospel, which the Lord says do. Now, whose servant is he? The apostles tell Christians, servants of the Lord, to do whatsoever they do in the name (or by the authority) of the Lord Jesus.—Col. iii: 17. Now, brother Williamson, where does the Lord authorize you, or any other preacher, (and you are not the only one) to quit preaching the gospel and go to lecturing on prohibition? If you know where, you can have space in the FIRM FOUNDATION to show it; also to show where brother Driskol and I teach infidelity; for, to make infidels, we must teach it: and if you have that regard for your word, that even a worldian, (let alone a Christian), ought to have, you will substantiate what you say in regard to a serious charge as that.

And now, brother Hutchison, you see that the brethren at Hillsboro are not the only ones that, in their mad race for popularity, have gone away beyond the word of the Lord.

But I must stop and give brother Jackson a chance to express his views in reference to these things, as requested. Your brother in Christ, E. HANSBROUGH.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have never written a word in my life, for any of our papers, though I am now sixty-nine years of age; but I am so well pleased with the F. F. that I thought I would write a letter of encouragement for it; however, my eyesight is falling so fast, I am afraid I shall make a poor out of it.

In regard to this thing of understanding obedience to the gospel of Christ, to be essential, it is something I fully believe to be true. How any one can obey from the heart anything they do not understand, is something I do not fully understand. The first time the gospel of Christ was ever preached, (viz: on the day of Pentecost), sinners heard it, understood it, believed it, and obeyed it, and met pardon. If the record is true, then to say they did not know it, is out of all reason, for it says, "they that gladly received his word were baptized"—the remission of sins—through obedience to the command. Would they have gladly received his word if they had not understood it? Would they have been baptized, in obedience to the command, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name (or by the authority) of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins," if they had not fully understood that baptism was for the remission of sins? Do not tell me they did not understand it, when it is so plain that the wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err in the same understanding of it.

May I say to you, my brother: Slack not your determination in this glorious enterprise. Add to your faith courage, and follow the popular missionary society and organ grinders with the lightning blaze of eternal truth. Drive them into the dark corners of the earth, and let the light of the gospel even shine in upon them there till there is no longer any hiding place on earth for them, and they may see the error of their way, repent of their sins, turn to the Lord and live, and have the promise of life that now is, and of that to come.

You are at liberty to reform these few lines, and publish them, if you wish. We intend to do all we can for the F. F. Bro. Cook gave you my address and name as a subscriber. Yours in hope of the triumph of truth, S. C. ROYAL. Montague, Texas, May 24, '87.

We are pleased to publish such letters as brother Royal's for the encouragement of others, who are almost persuaded to turn loose the world, and stand firm upon the Rock of ages, to drop the societies and all other human inventions, and contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints.

T. H. G.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

May God bless you with all others who are battling for a "thus saith the Lord" for their faith and practice; for it seems to me that many have departed from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils.

Bro. McG., you did right in refusing to further babble with brother Burnett; for Paul told Timothy to "shun vain babblings, as they will increase unto more ungodliness." If a brother is honestly in an error, he will not take issue against the truth, except for the sake of investigation; and, if he loves the truth, he is not afraid of its hurting him: he will receive it, and obey it, and not dodge around a fair discussion. But if he is not honest, which many are not, he will dodge the issue, and misrepresent those who hold the truth; and imitate Hymeneus and Philetus (who, concerning the truth, have erred,) saying, it is not necessary to understand what baptism is for, and are trying to overthrow the faith of many. Brothers and sisters, this proves the divine authority of the blessed book, which infidels deny. "This know also, that in the last days, perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemous, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, displeasers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God: having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away."—II Tim. iii: 1-5. Brothers and sisters, let us heed brother Paul's admonition.

Also: "Ever learning, (how to form societies; and how to introduce instrumental music in the house of God, as a means of worship; and to place the sects into the body of Christ, by a shake of the hand, with their sect faith, and without the confession of Christ, without a knowledge of what baptism is for; and without the authority of the Lord Jesus for everything they do), and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth. Now as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, so do these also resist the truth: men of corrupt minds: reprobate concerning the faith."—II Tim. iii: 7-8. This prophecy of the apostle is being fulfilled in this our day, and that, too, by those who claim to be Christ's disciples, as well as others of the world who make no pretensions to religion. The apostles had to contend with false brethren, and so do we. Surely, the love of money is the root of this evil.

As for error, we are all liable to err; and for a brother to entertain an error, or even write an error, is no evidence why he should dodge the truth, and misrepresent the truth itself, but it is right to confess our errors, and depart from evil; and, as God is faithful and just, He will forgive us our sins if we ask Him.

It seems to me, we had as well receive immersed persons upon any one unscriptural confession and faith as another. So, if we can validate an act performed by any one, ten or fifteen years ago, by looking back to an act of ignorance, and say we are satisfied with our baptism, we can also validate any other act of ignorance; and, we had as well baptize our children also, for they can learn what it is for, after they become men and women, and if they are so taught, they can look back and say, we are satisfied with our baptism. If we are satisfied with ignorant baptism in one instance, why not in all? and if there is nothing in the design of baptism, is there anything in its mode?

Now, brethren, this will not do. Ignorance is unbelief. Paul did, what he did ignorantly, in unbelief. If we are ignorant of a fact, how can we believe it? for faith comes by hearing; and how shall they believe on him of whom they have not heard? Then, if we have to hear to understand, and understand to believe, and believe to obey, and obey to please God, it follows that an act done ignorantly, in unbelief, is not valid; for without faith, it is impossible to please God.

"But," says one, "the sects did believe." Yes; they did believe something, but what was it? They believed and confessed what was not true, viz: That God for Christ's sake had pardoned their sins before baptism. They also believe that God's holy command, to be baptized, is a non-essential.

"But," says another, "they believed the 'three facts' of Christ's death, burial and resurrection." So they did; and so did the devil believe and tremble. The devil did not obey from the heart that form of doctrine, and neither did the sects. But listen: the devil made a true confession and the sects do not. The devil said: "Jesus, thou Son of the Most High God;" and the sects say, "I believe that God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins." The reader can judge the correctness of these statements by reading and hearing. I fear there are some like the disciples of old, who are ready to say: "This is a hard saying; who can hear it?"

Brothers, Jesus says, "If you love me, keep my commandments." So let us do. Let us not manufacture infidels and sceptics by contending for and upholding theories and practices which lead to the division of the brethren, the death of the body, and the destruction of the soul, but let us be governed by God's word, which is able to make us wise unto salvation.

Bro. McG., please read this article and correct the mistakes in spelling and wording, (as my education is limited), and then, if it is otherwise worthy, please publish it.

Show me my errors, and I will confess them. Your brother in the one hope,
J. F. COKER.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

Enclosed find 25 cents for trial of your F. F. until first of September. Please send it to H. G. Schneider, Paige, Texas. Now, brethren, this is a mighty small club. I have talked with quite a number of the brothers, and the reasons they present for not subscribing are these:

1. "Times are mighty hard; I cannot afford it." Yet, we see those same ones using tobacco, smoking cigars, and wearing fine clothing, and, some of them, jewelry.

2. "I have my dues to pay in the Lodge, and I am taking the papers that are published by the Lodge—really, I do not see how I could subscribe; and, if I did take it, I could not find time to read it, for my spare time is so taken up with —" Well, with what? "Why, I must attend to the duties which are intrusted to me by the alliance, or grange, or so and so."

Thus, you see, the words of Jesus (where he said, "No man can serve two masters") are true. There are many who were opposed to secret orders, and they were good and true brethren, until the alliance, with all of its glow and fine talk, came into existence among us, and carried them away; and now, they are using all of their energies in favor of that institution. They can not find time to read the F. F., because they must read the alliance papers, so as to keep posted on alliance matters.

But, I truly believe, the whole cause lies just here: The F. F. condemns just what the Bible condemns, and, as the Bible teaches us, "we must not spot ourselves with the world," and the F. F. sounds out the same thing, they can't stand the F. F., and a large portion of the Bible, both go; as they have no need of anything that condemns their god of this world. There are many who worship this alliance, or some other institution of earth. True, they do not worship it to save their souls; no, oh, no! but in order to save the almighty dollar, in comparison with which the soul's salvation is a secondary matter.

I know some that have not given twenty-five cents to the church for four years. Yes, not one nickel, neither for evangelists, the poor, or for the emblems; but they pay all assessments, and all dues, in the lodge, without a grumble. Then, again, there are some that will scarcely ever attend night meetings because the night air does not agree with them—they take cold. Yet, these same cold-takers will ride five or six miles to a night meeting of an alliance, or some other order. Then again, some will not even ride, on Lord's day, to meeting—"team too tired, or it is too far: why, it's five miles down there!" Yet, I have known some of these same (so-called) brethren to ride forty miles to an alliance meeting. Now, is not that their worldly god?

Then, when told of their duty, they get mad. Yes, get mad and say: "Well, I never will go to hear brother so and so preach again, because he is always talking about duty, duty, and to keep yourselves unspotted from the world, and that you must touch not, taste not, and handle not, that which perishes with the using, after the commandments and doctrines of men."

No, such preaching, such papers, and such parts of the Bible, must stand back with such men. Truly, "by their fruit ye shall know them," and, as their fruit is a worldly fruit, they are of the world.

The time is upon us when oily, or soapy, or sugar-coated talk will not do, nothing but the pure, unadulterated word of God:

Then, brethren McGary, Hansbrough, and all of you who write for the F. F., cut with the sword of the Spirit, and spare not. It may purge, and it will purge out all dross from among us, and then the church of Christ will prosper; but while there is more dross than gold it will not. I did not intend to write anything for publication, because I can't fix it up in proper style, but seeing where sin lies, I could not help but try to raise a cry against it. If you think this worth anything, fix it up and print it; if not, just cast it aside, and I will not try to write again.

Yours, after the pure faith,
W. H. FLOORE.
Paige, Texas, May 10, '87.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I have been reading the F. F. since last August, which makes about nine months, and I am well pleased with it. I think it is the very thing the people have been needing for some time, to get them right. I never felt much interested in the first few issues of your paper, but, since I have read more of them, I have become very much interested, and I would not take five times the cost of it and do without it. It explains just what I wanted the people to read; and if they would read it more than they do, then read the New Testament, to see if the F. F. teaches anything contrary to what it teaches, it would be better for them than to read the newspapers and sectarian papers so much, in which there is no good, but in which there is much evil, they would become more interested in the good work of our blessed Savior.

Now, brothers and sisters, let's every one of us, that can raise 25 or 50 cents, or a dollar, send the F. F. to one or two, or more, of our friends who have not had the opportunity of reading it, in order that they may become interested in the study of God's word. By so doing, you see how it would help the cause, and one quarter of a dollar is not much to any one. While he would not miss it, it might be of great use to the cause of Christ. I am going to do all I can for it. So, brother McG., please send the F. F. till September 1st to E. D. Harper, Austin, Texas; Bro. John Thompson, Rockwall, Texas; Thomas F. Jarvis, Hamilton, Lonoke county, Ark., and I will pay you when I come to Austin.

Bro. McG., if you think this worthy of room in your paper, you can publish it; if not, drop it in the waste basket.

Yours truly, in the same faith,
G. W. JARVIS.
Creedmoor, Texas, May 24, '87.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I send P. O. money order for the F. F. for twelve months. I have read the Christian Messenger one year, and I can say it don't give the F. F. justice. Until I read the F. F., I thought that the C. M. was riddling it: still I wondered why the C. M. did not use more Scripture and not so much slang; but it is simply because it confounds the truth with error. I have read the F. F. enough to know that it is "Firm"—battling for "the faith" once, for all time and places, delivered to the saints; doing all that it does in the name, or by the authority, of Christ, and that is the only way that God can be glorified on earth or in heaven; for it is written: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and enter through the gates into the city."

But, perhaps, I have said enough. Your sister in Christ,
S. N.

SCANDAL.—They say! Who are they? Who are the cowed monks, the hooded friars, who glide with shrouded faces in the procession of life, muttering in an unknown tongue words of mysterious import. Who are they? The midnight assassin of reputation, who lurks in the by-lanes of society, with dagger tongues sharpened by invention and envenomed by malice, to draw the blood of innocence, and hyena-like, banquet on the dead. Who are they? They are a multitude no man can number; black-souled familiars of the inquisition of slander, searching for victims in every city, town, and village, wherever the heart of humanity throbs, or the ashes of mortality find rest. Oh! coward, coward world-skulker! Give us the bold brigand, who thunders along the highways with flashing weapon that cuts the sunbeams as well as the shades; give us the pirate, who unfurls the black flag, emblem of his terrible trade, and shows the planks which your doomed feet must tread; but save us from the they-sayers of society, whose knives are hidden in velvet sheaths, whose bridge of death is woven of flowers, and who spread with invisible poison even the spotlessness of the winding-sheet.—[Musical Reporter.]

The worst debt a man can owe is an old grudge. Better abandon all such claims.—Ex.

"Crafty men condemn studies," said Lord Bacon; but he only spoke for what the priests had practiced with the common people for ages.

"Piety," remarked an Arkansas preacher to his congregation the other day, "does not consist in noise. The Lord can see you give to the needy just as easily as he can hear you pray the roof off."—Ex.

There is one place where change cannot put its finger; there is one name on which mutability can never be written; there is one heart which can never alter. That place is the Most Holy, that heart is God's, and that name is love.—Ex.

EVIL HABITS.

Editors Firm Foundation:

While writing upon the above subject, my remarks will be confined chiefly to the professed followers of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

One of the greatest of evil habits that presents itself to my mind, is, evil speaking. There are so many kinds of people in this world that we cannot attempt to either write or speak without wounding the feelings of some. Therefore, if anything written in this article applies to the case, or cases, of those who read it, I trust they will not charge me of being too personal.

Evil speaking is so common, even among professed Christians, that it is very seldom, if ever, we find a body of them, who meet at the same house, entirely clear of tattlers, tale-bearers, and those who seem to delight in pointing out the faults of others.

Old feuds, in some congregations, that should have, and, perhaps, would have, long since been settled and buried forever, are frequently resurrected and kept alive, to the detriment of, not only the said congregation, but to the cause everywhere, simply by an intemperate, improper use of the tongue. If any who read this can call to mind a single case, in which they are guilty of having taken any part, it is to be hoped that, in the future, they will "bridle the tongue" before using it too long or too freely.

Loose and idle conversation, to the utter neglect of spiritual things, is too often indulged in, especially by brethren, at the house set apart for worship, even upon the day we are commanded to keep holy. If we will all attend, strictly, to our Father's business, while at His house, upon His day set apart for worship, what a vast improvement many of us will make. Suppose we all resolve to try.

The habit of reading irreligious books and papers, to the utter neglect of the Bible and publications in the interest of christianity, is practiced to an alarming extent among the brethren. While doing this, we are not only neglecting to obey the command, "search the Scriptures," but failing to contribute our mite toward the support and maintenance of those brethren who are willing to sacrifice property, time and everything of a temporal character, to assist in sending the gospel to a dying world.

Brethren, we should all read the Scriptures and Christian papers more, and politics, or other worldly matters, less, if we expect to be rewarded finally as faithful soldiers of the cross of Christ. By doing this, Christian parents will not only grow stronger in the Lord, but will exercise an influence over their children that will tell through time and eternity. Parents, provide plenty of christian literature for your own household, and your children will call you blessed.

Indulging in the use of by-words is a habit so much indulged in, that I will merely make mention of it here, and pass on to that of using tobacco. I am aware that this will press heavily upon those who indulge, but all must admit it is a useless, expensive, injurious, filthy habit, and, if forsaken, the result would be an improvement financially, physically and, perhaps, morally.

If all Christians who chew, smoke or use snuff, will keep a correct account of the amounts they spend during one year, to satisfy this one evil habit, also of the amounts given to the support of the gospel during the same period, and then have this statement published in the F. F., or some other paper, it is possible the majority would resolve to do better in the future. How may we try this? The evil habit of using tobacco is increasing to an alarming extent here in Texas. The majority of boys, from five years old upward, are to be seen smoking cigarettes whenever an opportunity is offered, thereby laying a sure foundation in early life for disease in old age; thus rendering their manhood and old age a misery to themselves and a nuisance to their associates. Those who use tobacco will not deny the truth of any of the above statements; yet many fathers will permit their sons to smoke, and their daughters to use snuff, without even advising them to do better.

Many will say, if they use tobacco and pay for it, it's nobody's business.

A similar saying is frequently uttered by the drunkard. But, however plausible this may seem to man in this world, the subject will, no doubt, present itself very differently in the day of final reckoning, when we must render a strict account of the deeds done in the body, "evil habits" not excepted. We should all think seriously of these things and act accordingly.

Instrumental music in the church is an evil habit, increasing in most places as rapidly as circumstances will permit. Many congregations are divided upon this subject. Therefore, some of the attendant evils are presented at first sight, viz: strife and division. Twelve or fifteen years ago, sectarians would not use the organ here in Blanco, simply for the reason that they were not able financially. Now they imagine there can be no music in Sunday-schools without the instrument; but, for some reason, they have not yet extended the evil habit into church services. Why they are so partial, I am not prepared to say, unless they have not yet advanced sufficiently into the ways of modern Babylon.

During Sunday-school services, all, especially the children, are invited to gather as closely about the organ as convenient; but as soon as the hour for preaching arrives, the instrument is closed up, thus practically teaching one thing in the Sunday-school and another from the pulpit. "O consistency thou art a jewel!"

Idleness, playing so-called "innocent games," are evil habits much indulged in. If we have no employment for our hand, we may read and improve our minds, and thereby abandon the practice of being idle. Some will try to argue there can be no harm in spending a portion of their time at "innocent games;" but I have never heard of one attempting to show wherein was the good resulting from such practice. It is a waste of time to say the least of it; and we will be called upon to give an account of the manner in which we spend our time.

No doubt, many who read this will be ready to call the author an extremist, but I had rather be saved finally by being extremely careful as to how I live, than to plunge headlong into hell, just for the sake of being too liberal concerning God's word and my duty.

How many professed Christians are willing to leave off evil habits and substitute good ones, in order to reach the home of the finally faithful? That we may all fully resolve to do more good and less harm in the future, is my prayer.

Yours in the one faith,

R. W. GILLESPIE.

BROS. MCGARVEY AND HARDING ON PEDO-BAPTIST MINISTERS.

Bro. Harding recently put to Bro. McGarvey the following question: "When God's people are assembled, and a Pedo-baptist minister comes into the midst of them, is it right, according to New Testament teaching to call upon him to lead the prayers of the assembly?" Bro. McGarvey, in a short reply, said he would, and gave his reason for it. To this, brother Harding replied, and if space would permit, would give in full his unanswerable position. Notice the following extract: "What is a Pedo-baptist minister? He is a religious teacher, who makes void the commandments of God by his traditions. He teaches the doctrine of infant baptism, (which is a tradition of men), and changes immersion into sprinkling; that is, he substitutes a human device for the Lord's appointment."

Now, my brother, permit me to substitute another class for your consideration. What is a Baptist minister? He is a religious teacher who makes void the commandments of God by his traditions. He denies that baptism is for what the Scriptures teach it is for, and substitutes an unscriptural design, (which is a tradition of men), for the Lord's appointment.

Now, if the Pedo-baptists make void the commandments of God, and their worship is in vain, because infant baptism is a tradition of men, I would understand you to teach that it is necessary to understand who are the proper subjects of baptism, and also the action of baptism; and because these things are not properly taught and understood, that, therefore, these Pedo-baptist ministers are teaching the doctrines of men, and hence their worship is in vain, and should take no part in the worship of the saints, because they are not in the kingdom of God. We would then arrive at the following conclusion from these premises: It is necessary to understand the teaching of the Scriptures in reference to the proper subjects of baptism. An infant is not a proper subject for baptism, because it cannot be taught. An adult entertaining the idea that sprinkling is baptism, is an improper subject for baptism, because he does not understand the Scriptural teaching upon the action of baptism. Now then, we arrive at the following facts: There must be a Scriptural subject and a Scriptural action of baptism to qualify a person for the kingdom of Christ, and the worship of the saints. This being the case, I submit, for your further consideration, the following:

If it is necessary to understand who are the proper subjects of baptism, and the action of baptism, and these things are necessary to an introduction into the kingdom of the saints, why is its design not necessary to be understood also? Now, brother Harding, as you asked brother McGarvey to publish your article, we also ask you to publish this. If you reply to it, we will give it to the readers of the F. F. Do to others as you would have them do to you.

Affectionately submitted.
JOHN S. DURST.

TALKS WITH THE SISTERS.

Dear Sisters:

I shall take for my text, to-day, Paul's language to the Philippians: "Let your moderation be known unto all men." Now, there is a style of speech, to the use of which, the whole world must plead guilty; politely or technically termed hyperbole, modernly termed exaggeration, scripturally termed lying. Now, as to the world's use of it, we have nothing to say; but as to christian's indulging in such intemperate language, we have a few words of admonition. We will notice three forms of exaggeration. The first is that form, which most injures the one that employs it; the one, that were it true, would call in requisition an extra corps of doctors and grave-diggers, to sew up the split sides and bury those that "just die a laughing" several times a day, "split their sides," "kill themselves," and are "scared to death," whenever frightened; who "are nearly killed" when they stub their toe, etc. It is just as expressive to say, "I was very much amused," badly frightened, etc.

The next form I shall notice is, that employed when angry, and which we seem to think is justifiable, because prompted by anger. Such expressions as, "I have told you forty times to do that," when perhaps, it has been twice or three times. Or, "I could walk a hundred miles while you are turning around; or, you are as slow as a snail; or, it takes you an hour to get to the buggy after your hat is on and the house shut," and many other such expressions equally untruthful. The Apostle tells us to be angry and sin not; hence we are not excusable on the score of anger for such intemperate speech. More than this, such language is exasperating to those to whom it is addressed, and stirs up anger; therefore it is doubly sinful.

The last form is that, so prevalent, of tinting or highly coloring everything heard and repeated; a habit so productive of misunderstanding and disruptions among friends and neighbors. This fault often comes from a desire to be entertaining; but it were far better to be dull and uninteresting or tediously prolix in detailing everything, than to create a false impression, by coloring a statement to make it interesting. I know christian (?) women and men, too, who are notorious for over-drawing and misrepresenting every thing they repeat. What untold harm such characters work, until people learn to estimate them properly, which they are very apt to do, as is evinced by such remarks as the following: "Where did you hear that? Why, sister or brother A. or B. was telling me. Oh, well, if that's where you got it, you can safely deduct three-fourths from it, and then doubt the other fourth." What a criticism upon a child of God, and what a shame that it can be true of any professed follower of Christ! Nevertheless, such is the case. Now let each and every christian who reads this, examine him or herself and ascertain to which of the three classes he or she belongs. If to the first, remember our Savior said we shall account for every idle word we speak, at the judgment seat of Christ. This is a fearfully solemn thought, and should serve to make us take heed how we speak, that our communications may not exceed yea, yea and nay, nay, for more than this cometh of evil.

Of the last two, I will say, Paul tells Titus to use "sound speech that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part, (or opposed to us), may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of us." Now, can such language as the above cited be called "sound speech?" Cannot the enemies of the cross have much evil to say of us? For what worse can be said, than that we are liars, thus making us children of the devil, who is the father of lying? What a fearful reproach to the cause of Christ! Can unbelievers respect or be won by a religion that is no check to its votaries, and in no wise distinguishes them from others? Paul commands, "put away lying," and John says, "no one that loveth or maketh a lie, shall enter into the heavenly city." The trouble is, none of us seem to realize that this is lying; nevertheless it is, though perhaps, without evil intent, but a terrible example to set our children, if we desire them to be truthful. Now, let us prayerfully consider this fault, and with God's help, determine to put it away forever, and we can do it. We can never reach heaven with this fault; on the other hand, if we overcome it, we are promised an entrance into that city which only the pure in heart shall see. SARAI.

Each day's light on the days responsibilities brings with it the sight also of the provision of the God of all grace, whose promises to his children are always larger than his commands.—Selected.

THE FOUR LEADING DEPARTURES.

Dear Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

There are four things which are derogatory to the church of Christ of which I wish to speak to the readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION, viz: The Bible Colleges, or Christian Colleges, the modern Sunday-school, the Missionary and auxiliary societies, and the receiving of sectarians into the church on their so-called baptism. I candidly believe that the education and training of young men for the ministry in our Bible schools was a grand mistake, and the first cause of the present tendency to apostasy. Young men were induced to go to these schools to prepare themselves to preach; and the idea was held out to them that, if they thus spent their time and money in qualifying themselves, that they should have the preference of employment by the congregations, and that they should demand a salary according to their ability. The fruits of this sowing are now being reaped. We now have our proud, plug-hat pastors; our liberal, broad-gauge preachers and editors. We have some honorable exceptions. I am not to be understood as opposing education by any means; but the idea of manufacturing preachers to order as our colleges do. Young men go to these colleges with the understanding and design of receiving pastorates with high salaries, and, of course, enter the ministry as they would law or medicine as a profession. And in order to get the highest price, and be most popular, they engage in any and everything that will be agreeable to the people. They are to-day selling us out to sectism. Some are clamoring for a Presbyterian form of church government, some for symbols, or images, and a liturgy in the worship, similar to the Catholics—witness, the Christian (?) Standard and the Christian (?) Evangelist. Their high-toned, college-bred editors and contributors are progressing toward Rome with rapid strides. If the five wise brethren, who were appointed not long ago, at Wabash Ministerial Association, to consider the propriety of establishing a Presbytery do not accomplish it, it will be because the brethren will not submit to it. I am satisfied that a great many will not only submit to it, but will be glad to adopt it; for one here at Catlin says, he thinks it would be a good thing. So brethren, we may begin to prepare either to accept it, or to fight it.

We are told that the liturgy, the prayer book and the symbols are to be brought in through the Sunday-school. Yes! The Sunday-school was invented and inaugurated for the sole purpose of training the children for any work desired. It came with the deceptions plea that, it was to teach children the Bible. What is the result? It has brought in the organ, the picnic, the festival, the Christmas tree, and has done more evil than all the Bible they have learned will ever do good. Instead of learning the Bible, they have learned that, for so much Bible, they must have so much fun; they have learned to vote the elders out, and the organ in; they have learned that the Sunday-school is first, and the church second; they have learned to disregard the Bible and the church, and to regard the Sunday-school and the band of hope, and all manner of human societies and institutions; they have learned that girls and boys, and even unbelievers, can teach the Bible; they are trained to believe it necessary to have lesson-leaves and Sunday-school papers, so that editors can make lots of money by publishing little slips with a few Bible verses on them, which enables them to pay big Sunday-school workers to run around and urge the people to push the Sunday-school work. Simply a money-making device by which they can make thousands of dollars for one Bible, selling it by scraps to the people. Why cannot the people see that it would be better for each to take his Bible to the meeting-house on the Lord's day and read and examine a chapter all together? Because these Sunday-school evangelists (?) are running around leading the people to their own ruin and their children with them. All can see the results now among us if they will. Through the Sunday-school will the church be supplanted if there is not a stop, and that soon.

Next comes the society craze. Nothing is now proposed to be done through and by the church. Is it proposed to have the gospel preached by the church? No; but by a society. Is it proposed to feed the poor, or clothe them, by the church? No; but by a society. Is there anything proposed to be done in the name of Christ? No, sir; everything is proposed to be done in the name of some human organization.

Will not God be jealous of his own name and institution? Will He accept any such work? If he will, I certainly have studied his will to no benefit. Will some of these college-bred Biblical scholars show me where God has ever accepted any worship or service which he did not ordain himself? Did He ordain any society but the church? They know He did not; and what they do, they do knowingly. They know that the church has no president but Christ, and vice-president nor corresponding secretaries. They know that it does not require so much money to become a member of the church. They know as well as I do that God never authorized any of these societies; and they know as well as I do that when they form them, that it is a wicked presumption; that they can devise more appropriate means for accomplishing God's designs than He did. If they do not know these things, then they are altogether too ignorant to be teaching in Israel. If the common people would but open their eyes they could see where they are being led. Says one, don't you believe in co-operation? I believe that if any Christian has anything to give for preaching, or for any other good object, that he has a right to give it to that object in the name of a Christian, and in no other. I believe that if any number of Christians wish to give to any good purpose, that they can put their means together and give it in the same way without any president, vice-president, or any such thing.

Last, but not least, is the receiving sectarians. From the beginning this has been a most ignorant and unreasonable practice. There has of late been so much said, and so well said, that it is not necessary for me here to say much. I can not see how it is possible for sensible men to believe that God would ordain certain conditions upon which he proposes to save the people, and when the people are not satisfied with those conditions, and adopt other conditions of their own invention, that He will abandon His plan and accept theirs. But then they say, why they do what He said to do. They believe, repent and are baptized. What do they believe? For what are they baptized? Do they believe what Jesus and the Apostles say about the conditions upon which they are to be saved? No, they do not. They say they are saved by faith alone and deny all the other conditions that Christ ordained. They then go into unbelief and do some of the things that Jesus said to do; but they deny his authority for the design of those conditions and do all they can to nullify the design; and yet some say, ah, well, he will accept them. All the proof we have of it is, their word without any backing.

I am glad the people are beginning to see through this flimsy teaching. I am getting letters from many parts of the country endorsing my position, even from women. I think these sapient doctors will get ashamed of their ignorance after a while. The sectarians themselves begin to see the awkward position they are in, and ere long they will make fun of a set of doctors who are ignorant enough to declare sectism untrue, unscriptural, and then turn and receive all of its devotees, if perchance, they have been dipped in water, no matter for what design.

Here I will rest for the present. Wishing many blessings on the F. F. and all its friends. If one is a friend to the F. F. I know he is right; but if he does not want it, I know who he is.

THE PERFECT LAW OF LIBERTY.

The Apostle James, in writing to his brethren, telling them to live a christian life, says: "But whose looketh into the perfect law of liberty and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed."—James 1: 25.

The question arises, what is law? It is a rule of action for the government of those that are, or ought to be; under the law; but there is also a meaning or definition back of that: It is the expression of the will of the law-giver. Human law is the expression of human will; divine law is the expression of divine will. What is the character of the law spoken of in the above quotation? It is divine, because it is perfect, and no human law is perfect.

It is the same law spoken of by the Psalmist, David, when he says: "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul."—Psalm xix: 7. The same that the Apostle Paul calls the "law of the Spirit," which, he says, made him "free from the law of sin and death."—Rom. viii: 2. The same that he speaks of when he says: "The priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change of the law."—Heb. vii: 12; and the same, speaking of the new covenant, where he says: "I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; and I will be to them a God; and they shall be to me a people; and they shall not teach every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, know the Lord: for all shall know me from the least to the greatest."—viii: 10-11. The Apostle here, as in most of his epistles, is contrasting the law of Moses, which was written on tables of stones, and the gospel of the new covenant, written in the minds and hearts, and is showing the superiority of the gospel over the law.

Under the law, they were born into the relation of children by reason of their fleshly descent from Abraham, and they had to be taught afterwards, and they were circumcised, not to make them children, but because they were children; and were taught as they grew up; but under the new covenant, the gospel, they have to be taught before they enter into the relation of sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty.

Proof: Under the gospel, the new covenant, Christ, the Christian's high priest, the King of kings and Lord of lords, says: "All power (or authority) in heaven and earth is given to me, go ye therefore, and teach all nations (to be taught first) baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit."—Matt. xxviii: 18-19. "The priesthood is now changed, and the new law of necessity comes into existence, they are made citizens of the kingdom, (not by a fleshly birth as under the old covenant,) but by being born of water and the Spirit, and without which birth they cannot enter into the kingdom of God."—John iii: 5.

The prophet Isaiah, speaking as he was moved or guided by the Holy Spirit, of this same law, says: "And it shall come to pass in the last days, (of the Jewish dispensation) that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow into it; and many people go and say, come ye and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths, for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."—Isaiah ii: 2-3. The prophet Micah iv: 1-2, speaks of the same law going forth from the same place, which is to be written in the hearts or minds of those that become the people of God.

When were the above prophecies fulfilled, that the law went forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem? Never, until the first Pentecost after the Savior was crucified, and he had conquered death, risen and had ascended to heaven, and the priesthood was changed, and he was made both Lord (law-giver) and Christ, (anointed priest); but before he ascended he commissioned his Apostles to go forth and preach the gospel to every creature, saying to them: "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name (by his authority) among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."—Luke xxiv: 46-47. Still they were not ready to go forth proclaiming the law, and the word of God, until they were endued with power from on high, (Luke xxiv: 49); therefore he told them to wait at Jerusalem.

Now they are at the right place, Jerusalem, and the right time has come; they are endued with power from on high, filled with the Holy Spirit, to guide them into all the truth, (John xvi: 13); which truth the Savior said should make people free, (John viii: 32); and Peter preached the word of the Lord to them by the Holy Spirit sent down from heaven, (I. Pet. i: 12). Three thousand heard, in the sense of believing, and were pricked in their heart, (no good news yet, though they heard the "three facts"), and they want to know what to do to be saved. Their hearts are now prepared, by Godly sorrow, brought about by Godly faith, the faith the result of Godly or divine testimony to receive the law of the Spirit, by complying with which law they were made free from the law of sin and death; the same that Paul says made him free, and Paul and Silas preached the same "word of the Lord" to the Philippian Jailor and his household, (Acts xvi: 32); their hearts were in like manner prepared to have the law of the Spirit written in them, with which law they also complied, and rejoiced in their freedom from sin: having obeyed from the heart intelligently, understandingly, the law of the Lord, the law of the Spirit.

Did these parties make the "good confession"? If they did not, then they did not comply with all the conditions of the law, and they could not be said to be free from sins; or can we fail to comply with one or more of these conditions, and still be made free? If so, how many can we dispense with, and which are they? Will some of "our plea" brethren please inform us?

How many of the conditions of the law making foreigners citizens of the United States can they dispense with and still become citizens? A good, honest lawyer would say, not one; and a good, honest, intelligent preacher, (I mean intelligent in the Bible,) would tell the sinner, the foreigner, the alien, that he must comply with all the conditions of the law of the Spirit, of the law of the King of heaven and earth, in order to enter His kingdom, or church. Brethren, is this so? Paul, illustrating this same thought, says: "If a man also strive for masteries (or eternal life), yet is he not crowned except he strive lawfully, or according to law."

Two preachers begin a meeting together; one teaches the sinners that they must believe in Christ with all their heart, having presented to their minds the testimony necessary to that end, that they must repent of their sins, that they must confess with their mouth, the Lord Jesus, and be baptized for the remission of sins. A dozen come forward and manifest a desire to obey the Lord and enter His kingdom? Now have they had the law that was to go forth out of Zion, and the word of the Lord, that was to go forth from Jerusalem, written in their hearts? My brethren, as far as I know, say, yes. The other preacher gets up: he tells the sinners of the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, the "three fact gospel," and that they must be regenerated by the direct operation of the Holy Spirit on their hearts; they must then repent of their sins, and then believe, and, that as soon as they believe, they are saved, and they must then be baptized because they are saved, and to get into some branch of the Baptist church, or some branch of the Methodist church, or some branch of some other human organization. Now I ask, have they had the law that was to go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord that was to go forth from Jerusalem, written in their hearts? Most of my brethren say, no. Then, have they entered the kingdom of Christ? Most of my brethren say, no. But some of them, (for instance, brother Burnett), say yes; and, if he is right, then complying with the human law brings them into the kingdom, or church, of Christ as effectually as complying with the law of the Lord, the law of the Spirit; and Paul was mistaken when he said, "If a man strive for masteries, or eternal life, yet is he not crowned except he strive lawfully." Brethren, will giving them a hearty shake of the hand, whether the gloves are on or off, make amends for the above described false teachings? If so, be diligent in shaking.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, JULY 1, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to McGary & Hansbrough, or to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to McGary & Hansbrough.

No one can scarcely conceive of the duties and responsibilities of an editor until he has experienced it awhile.

Recent letters from brother McGary say he is enjoying his trip finely. He is, by this time, at McKavitt, Menard county.

Bro. J. W. Jackson writes that he will go to Peoria, Hill county, to attend a debate between brother Grubbs and a Baptist, commencing June 13th.

We will send the F. F. for four months, and give the Oatman-McGary discussion, for 50 cents; or five names for two dollars—commence at any time.

Bro. Hansbrough returned from Blanco the 12 inst., where he gave the brethren some straight talk, and then he went across the Colorado river to fill one of his appointments at Moore's school-house.

The conclusion of the Zeke Jackson article was ardently expected for this issue, but for some reason, unknown to us, it has failed to make its appearance at this office. But if its author, or authors, will send it in we will publish it in next issue.

The readers of the F. F. will be glad to know that, for the last two months, the paper has been published and mailed ahead of time, accounted for by the fact of our having a reliable man to set the type. So, articles intended for publication, must be sent in earlier.

We will change our special offer, as back numbers are scarce, and will commence with the date the money is received, and, for 25 cents, will send the F. F. to any address for four months, on trial, or five copies for one dollar. All can avail themselves of this opportunity at any time.

We call attention to Sister Sarah's article, "Talks with the Sisters," in this issue. It is with pleasure we publish it for the benefit of us all. We acknowledge ourself guilty of the use of extravagant expressions, similar to those she mentions. Let us avoid the appearance of evil.

We suggest to those who write, or expect to write, for the F. F. that they write to the point, write legibly, and write on only one side of their paper. Do not paste the leaves together, but page them correctly, and sign your name in full, with date and place, to insure publication. Life is too short to waste in deciphering lengthy, pointless hieroglyphics by anonymous scribes.

Christians must remember that they have been bought with the blood of the Son of God, and that they must do all that they do in the name of Jesus Christ. They must not be conformed to the world, but be transformed, by the renewing of their minds, that they may prove what is good and acceptable and perfect will of God. They must not only abstain from evil, but they must learn to do good through God's church—the body of Christ—to the glory of God the Father.

I have seen nothing in print in one year which surprised me more than the faltering of the Guide over the question of asking an unbaptized clergyman to pray in the worshiping assembly. Let us see: 1st. Before a child is recognized of its parents, and named, it must be born. Think of an unborn child calling upon its father. 2d. Our Savior's first prayer, of which we have any account, was immediately following his immersion. 3d. The apostles never asked unbaptized men to pray. 4th. If unimmersed clergymen be asked to pray, may we not as well ask any other alien to pray? We have seen such dishes as this served in some of our papers, but who would have thought of finding it in the Apostolic Guide. In St. Louis such things are tolerated, from Cincinnati they come frequently, but from Jerusalem never.—A. Ellmore, in Christian Leader.

That is no worse, brother Ellmore, than to receive sectarians by hand-shaking out of one human organization into which they had been dipped, into another which they vainly imagine to be the church of the living God. Paul said, the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation, but these goats amongst us say, hand-shaking is the power of God unto salvation. All their argument and reasoning in the world will never change the immutable will of the ever-living God.

I have been a reader of brother I. C. Stone's writings for the last twenty years, and I have never seen anything from him that I did not consider good; but, in this issue of the FIRM FOUNDATION, is an article from him headed, "The Four Leading Departures," that is the best, in my judgment, that I ever saw from his pen, and the best, for its length, that has ever been published in the FIRM FOUNDATION. It strikes at the tap-root of nine-tenths of the innovations and departures of our brethren, which is Bible Colleges. Do away with them and the influence they have, and are exerting among our brethren, and we would soon be working together again in union, harmony and love, as we did forty years ago. But, if we continue them, it will not be ten years before we will be divided into at least two, if not more, parties. Now, brethren, you, that are in favor of and working in Bible Colleges, will you not show the Scriptural authority for them, or abandon them? It seems to me if you love the Lord, you will.

E. HANSBROUGH.

Bro. Burnett, in his reply to Bro. McGarvey, says:

"The principle that would cause Isaac Errett to forego his organ music, out of respect to John W. McGarvey's conscience, would cause John W. McGarvey to forego his missionary society out of respect to Thos. R. Burnett's conscience."

Now, why is it that the same principle will not cause Thomas R. Burnett to forego his hand-shaking delusion out of respect to the word of the living God? The reason is clear. McGarvey knows why Errett will not, Burnett knows why McGarvey will not, and God knows why Burnett will not. McGarvey believes that Errett sees but will not accept the truth, and therefore believes he is not honest. Burnett believes McGarvey sees but will not accept the truth, and therefore believes he is not honest. God knows Burnett will not accept the truth, and therefore—"Repent of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if, perhaps, the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee. For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity."—Acts viii: 22-23.

T. H. GILLESPIE.

Bro. McGary:

If it is true, as many of our brethren teach, that the moral law, as contained in the ten commandments, was done away or abolished at the death of Christ, please explain the following Scriptures: Matt. v: 17-19; Rom. iii: 31; Rom. vii: 12-14, and James ii: 8. What law is called "the law of sin and death," in Rom. viii: 2?

W. B. P.

Bluff Springs, Texas.

It is not stating the position properly to say that, "the moral law as contained in the ten commandments was done away or abolished." The law was taken out of the way and nailed to the cross—not "the moral law as contained in the ten commandments," but the whole law; see Col. ii: 14. It was a schoolmaster to bring the Jews to Christ, that they and the Gentiles might be justified by faith; see Gal. ii: 24. There were certain moral obligations contained in that law, which are also obligatory upon the subjects of the new and better covenant; but these things are not required as any part of the old law, but as of the law of Christ. They are principles twin-born with justice, and will live while justice does, and die with it, if they ever die. These same principles are found in all political governments of civilized people, and are sedulously guarded by clearly defined legislation; but not as any part of the law of Moses or Christ, or any other law, but because civil liberty and justice demand it.

When Texas was a republic her laws threw a safe-guard around them, and guaranteed their enforcement and protection to her subjects; and she does the same as a state of the United States. But Texas does not now engraft these principles in her law, as a part of her old law when she was a republic; nor because they were contained in the ten commandments; nor yet because they are found in "the perfect law of liberty"—the law of Christ. It may just as properly be said, that these moral principles are in all political governments, as a part of the law of Moses, as they are in the law of Christ, as a part of the old law. That logic which would make "the moral law of the ten commandments," still in force, as a part of the old law, because the law of Christ enunciates the same principles, would make the mouth and eyes of man part of the "whale and every living creature," because God made the whale and these creatures and gave them mouth and eyes before He made man and gave him mouth and eyes.

We can see nothing in Matt. v: 17-19, to warrant the conclusion that brother P. seems to have reached. Paul said: "The law was our schoolmaster (Jews) to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith." Now if Paul knew what he was talking about, when this was accomplished, the law had served its purpose—every "jot and tittle" of it was "fulfilled," and none of it "destroyed." If a law is not fulfilled when all of its ends have been subserved, how can it ever be fulfilled?

As to Rom. iii: 31, "Do we then make void the law through faith?" I must say, I see as little to sustain the position of brother P. as in the other. Suppose brother P. wants to go to Dallas. There is a dirt road from his place to Austin; there is a railroad from Austin to Dallas. Bro. P. travels the dirt road from his home to Austin, and there takes the railroad to Dallas. Does his taking the railroad for Dallas make the dirt road, from his home to Austin, void? Certainly not; although he has no further need of that road; for he is now upon a better road, the railroad, and it will take him to Dallas, where the other could not have taken him.

Rom. vii: 12-14. Yes, it is true, that "the law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good." God was its author, hence it could not be otherwise; but it was only good to the end for which its Author designed it, which was, to bring the Jews to Christ, that they might be justified by faith. As holy as was the law, and as holy as was the commandment, "there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof. For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did, by which we draw nigh to God."—Heb. vii: 18-19. In Rom. vii, where Paul speaks of the holiness of the law and commandments, he says: "My brethren, ye are dead to the law by the body of Christ."

Where is there anything in James ii: 8 that justifies the conclusion that any part of the old law, as that law, is in force? No where. Nor is the idea to be found in all of the divine volume. Brethren, we should not permit the old Jewish vall to dangle in our face, which prevented Israel from seeing "to the end of that which was abolished."—II. Cor. III: 13. "God is love," and the center and circumference of His purposes, whether manifested through Moses, or the more perfect and "better covenant" of His Son, is love unfeigned—"perfect love." But this love aimed at through this "better covenant"—this demand of the royal law—that we shall love our neighbor as ourselves—is not demanded as a part of the old law; but as that pure, heaven-born principle which came down from the Father of lights from whom every good and perfect gift cometh.

In conclusion, we answer that "the law called the law of sin and death," in Rom. VIII: 2, is "the law in our members," spoken of in Rom. VII: 23. Paul says: "I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members. O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?"—Rom. VII: 23-24. Then he goes on to thank God for something that follows. Read it carefully. Note the words I have italicized in this quotation, and you will find the same expression in them that occurs in the second verse of the next chapter—"the law of sin and death." It was the law of Moses which could not deliver from this "law of sin and death." But the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus could and did and does.

A. McG.

Dear Bro. Gillespie:

Your postal of the 2nd of this month came in due time, and should have been answered ere this. You will excuse me, for I have been quite busy with the founder of the "F. F.," who is here on a visit with his family. Well, you may be curious to know what has been engaging our time, and I must tell you.

In the early days of the editor, he lived in an adjoining county to mine, on the Trinity river, where game of all kind abounded, and the honey bee did "improve the shining hour." Over there, you know, he used to trace the "busy bee" to his home, and, very naturally, acquired a fondness for the product of its labors. From the manner in which many brethren are attempting to give the characteristics of his nature, one would suppose there is nothing sweet in his make-up; but the writer can testify that this is not the case, at least, in camp, on the Johnson Fork of the Llanco. There is another mistake that devolves upon me to correct. Some would seem to judge that the editor would "beard a lion in his den." Be this as it may. I can testify to the fact, that a Mexican musk-hog, at the first show of fight, put a lofty notion into his head, and a tree was affectionately embraced, and a call for help rent the mountain air. This occurred while we were running a "bee line;" and being unarmed we, in due time, beat a retreat homeward. But as the editor is not in the habit of giving up a line of thought, it was suggested that the fort be carried by force of arms: So for three days we have diligently urged the enemy to be consistent; and to renew the attack, but as usual, he has retired, and has concluded to let us "severely alone." So we were non-plused. His wife at once embraced this as a favorable opportunity to cultivate domestic duties, and with some persuasion he was placed over the wash tub, and for three or four hours he humbled himself to the cleansing process. So I am, at last, brought back to the point, that our editor doesn't seem to be afraid of anything. So you see we have been quite busy. When we get time, we will write more.

THE HOLY KISS.

A brother from Arkansas, asks us if it is not a command to greet one another with a holy kiss—if so, why is it not insisted on and practiced? We have never regarded it as a command to kiss, but where the salutation is with a kiss as was common in those eastern countries, that kiss should be a holy one, not a licentious kiss. The purpose is not to command a salutation by a kiss, but if we salute by the kiss, let it be a pure one. But we find a sensible exposition of the question by Bro. Moss in the Christian Herald, of Oregon, that we publish in lieu of anything we may say.

"In I. Cor. x: 16 and 17 verses, Paul says the bread is the communion of the body of Christ and the cup the communion of the blood of Christ, and that all are partakers of that one bread. In verse 21 he speaks of the Lord's table. All these refer to the Lord's supper and to its observance as a public act of worship, in which all must participate. In chapter xi: 2, Paul speaks of the ordinances or public acts of worship, and in the 20 verse, of the Lord's supper as one of them. In the 23 verse he says he received it of the Lord Jesus and delivered it to them. Doubtless, then, Paul commanded the observance of the Lord's supper as a public act of worship, indeed as the most important part of the worship. Rom. xvi: 16-20. "Salute one another with a holy kiss" I. Thes. v: 26 "Greet all the brethren with a holy kiss." I. Peter v: 13 "Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity." Once it is salute and four times greet, but every time it is a kiss, not once the kiss as it is "the Lord's Supper," "the bread," "the cup," "the Lord's table." Examine the context of the above quotations and note the Romans. The churches of Christ salute you, certainly not by a kiss, but by Paul's letters, as, also, Timotheus, Galus, Tertius and others mentioned, saluted by the letter, not by a kiss. To the Corinthians, "The churches of Asia salute you." By Paul's letter of course. "All the brethren salute you," clearly by the letter. "The salutation of Paul with mine own hand," surely not a kiss. Peter mentions the church at Babylon, and Marcus his son. Of course it was by or in the letter the saluting was done. The kiss is mentioned but five times and only as one method of saluting not the only one, nor the one most used. In all this there is no intimation of nor allusion to a church ordinance, or act of worship, either public or private, indeed, had it been instituted or commanded as part of the worship, or as a church ordinance, the apostle would not found it necessary to command it in these places. When we with our hearts in it, salute our brethren in any of the ordinary ways of saluting, we meet the requirements of scripture in regard to saluting or greeting, as we could not possibly by transferring one greeting to the house of God, and then doing something as an act of worship, which in its very nature cannot be such. Our brotherly salutations and greetings are for ourselves and cannot be any other part of our worship. They are acts connecting our relations to one another and have no immediate reference to our acts of worship. To sum up the matter, washing of feet and the kiss were not instituted by the Savior. They had been social and hospitable institutions for hundreds of years. Baptism and the Lord's Supper, were instituted by him, as they were unknown before his time. Feet washing and the kiss are not ordinances, or acts of worship and service to God. Baptism and the Lord's Supper are. Foot washing is mentioned as a good work, and the kiss as one way of greeting, in the epistle, but neither is mentioned as part of the worship or service of God; while baptism and the Lord's Supper are both public acts of obedience to Christ. Foot washing is to be done whenever and wherever needed. We are to salute at meeting and parting, in any usual way. Baptism is to be attended to ever, as our solemn act of obedience to God and Christ, and but once. The Lord's Supper is to be observed in the house of God upon the first day of the week in memory of the death of Christ, as our most solemn act of worship. Foot washing and a kiss are required by, and grow out of our relations to one another. Baptism and the Lord's Supper are required by and grow out of our relations to God and Christ. Foot washing and a kiss are of human origin. Baptism and the Lord's Supper are of divine origin."—Gospel Advocate.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

"How firm a foundation ye salute of the Lord, He has laid for your faith in His excellent word."

"For other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid."

Having measured the F. F. by the measuring reed of heaven, we find it built upon the "foundation of apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone."

Here we come with another list of subscribers, earnestly contending for and desiring the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. And still we admonish one-another, and inquire:

On what are you building, my brother? To-day may be sunny and fair, But the morrow may bring us the tempest, my brother, So choose your foundation with care.

The house built on the sand, my brother, May do well for the calm of to-day, But be wise in the sun of the present, my brother, And build for the future, I pray.

The house that is built on the rock, my brother, No tempest of earth can o'er-throw; While you are building, build safe, my brother, On the rock that is steadfast and sure.

Let the rock that you build on, my brother, Be Jesus, the hope of us all; The house built on this foundation, my brother, Shall stand when the mountains shall fall.

Enclosed find one dollar for the F. F., to be sent to M. D. Palmer, Kennedale, Tarrant county, Texas; E. Race, Enon, Tarrant county, Texas; C. G. Clevenger, Savoy, Fannin county, Texas; Dud Barnett, Bonham, Fannin county, Texas.

My kindest regards and best wishes to you all.

J. CLEVINGER.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I send you a report of brother W. R. Carpenter's work. He is preaching first Sunday, and Saturday before, at a school-house in Bossler parish, called Pine Grove, where he baptized two at his last appointment.

At Rocky Mount, second Sunday and Saturday before.

At King's Cross Roads, third Sunday and Saturday before, and at Walnut Hill, Ark., fourth Sunday and Saturday before.

Two others have been brought into the church from the Baptists under his preaching this year.

Bro. C. is only one year and a half in the ministry, but throws his whole soul, mind and body into the work; therefore he does it well. He has to work hard in the cotton-patch five days in the week. We want to help him, so he can give more time to the ministry.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Please find enclosed seventy-five cents for the Oatman-McGary discussion, and FIRM FOUNDATION till the 1st of January, 1888. Send it to the address of Egbert McKee, Midland, Greene county, Indiana.

I would to God that the F.F. was in the hands of every person on God's green earth that professes to wear the Christian name. I am not a subscriber to your paper yet, but I live near brother Stockrahm's and I get his copy to read, and am much delighted with it; and will work to help swell your subscription list all I can in the future.

Yours Respectfully,

SHOULD CHRISTIANS VOTE?

Dear Bro. McGary:

I am in receipt of the two last numbers of the F. F. I am at a loss to know who is doing me this favor. I appreciate it all the same, nevertheless. I would have subscribed for your paper some time ago but for one reason, (hard times.) I like the F. F. in the main, but I write this especially to let you know that I do not like your position on the question of prohibition. I have carefully read your references, II. Tim. II: 4-5; Col. 2: 8, and Col. 3: 17, and for the life of me, I cannot see what bearing any one of them has upon the coming election. Paul is giving them instructions in regard to their duty as Christians, and not in regard to their duty as citizens. You quote Col. 3: 17, " whatsoever you do in word or deed, do all in the name of Christ;" which you very correctly say, is to do it by his authority. It does seem to me that some of our smartest men make a terrible blunder on this one passage. I understand Paul to mean just what he did in his charge to Timothy to preach the word. He was to preach just exactly what the Holy Spirit had revealed; no more, no less. So Paul says to the brethren at Colosse: "Let every word and deed be said and done by the authority of Christ." Which from the very nature of things, could not apply to anything but the work of the Christian as such, and the church to which he belongs; in other words, he just means to follow the divine model in all matters of religion. How could it apply to matters not revealed? If you are going to apply that scripture to every day affairs of life, how dare you use a single word that is not penned by inspiration? Or how dare you commit, or do, any deed not authorized by inspiration? Has Christ authorized you to ride on the train, or publish the F. F.? One more question here: If the Comanche Indians were invading your neighborhood, which would you meet them with, the Bible, or a shot-gun?

To take your position on Col. III: 17, you have no right to engage in any matter on earth unless you find it in the New Testament, either by precept or example, which would leave a man in an awkward condition in his every day affairs of life. You had as well argue, that the Christian has no right to defend or protect himself from the midnight assassin, as that he has no right to vote for the suppression of the whisky traffic. I think the most of your "hobbies," (so-called), are sound; but this one will not hold water, unless you bottom it with better proof than the scriptures cited. I think the suppression of the whisky traffic will be one of the grandest victories for God that has ever been won by mortal man; and, unless a radical change comes over my mind I shall give my vote and influence for it. However, if you, or any one else, can show, by the scriptures, that such a course is contrary to the divine will, I will retract, and that with a vim. Would like to hear from you again on prohibition.

Yours in hope of glory,

ADD HALL.

Thorpe Springs, Tex., May 10, '87.

We have received many communications criticising our views on the voting question, but none of them have offered us any scripture to show the rightfulness of their course, or the wrongfulness of ours. We are often informed, by such brethren, that it is our duty to raise the prohibition banner, and labor with all our might to break up the whisky traffic, through the ballot-box. But our "duty" is laid down in that volume which "thoroughly furnishes the man of God unto all good works," and if it does not some where and some way direct us to do work through the ballot-box, then such work as that is not a good work, and is no part of the duty of the "man of God." We deny that there is any direction or authority in the whole scope of that volume for subjects of Jesus, to do such a work in such a way. Now, let him who thinks there is, produce one scintilla of direction or authority for such work in that way, and we will readily agree that it is our "duty" to engage in it, and go at it with all the means and influences that we can possibly bring into the work. Brethren are wasting their time and betraying their blindness and ignorance of the right ways of the Lord, when they talk and write to us about our obligations to labor in ways and for measures, that God, who has "given us all things that pertain to life and godliness," has not even hinted at. I believe with my whole heart that "the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men." He has hidden "all of the treasures of wisdom and knowledge in Christ." "In him dwelleth all of the fullness of the Godhead bodily," and we are "complete in him." If this be true, then the ambassadors of Christ, who delivered His gospel, "which is bound in heaven and earth," to the world, have left some kind of directions for this work that our brethren are doing through the ballot-box, or they are turning their backs on Christ and walking in their own shadows, not to the honor and glory of the Creator. The Scriptures impart authority in three ways, viz: by precept, by example, and by necessary implication drawn from its precepts and examples.

Now if these zealous advocates of Caesar's power, the ballot-box, can't show the command, example, or necessary inference for this work in the way they are clamoring for it, they must think they are wiser than the Lord. Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God: for it is written: "He taketh the wise in their own craftiness." And again the Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain. "Therefore let no man glory in men: for all things are yours; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come, and Christ is God's."—I. Cor. III: 18-23

But how do men become truly wise? By studying "the holy Scriptures which are able to make them wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus," and which is "profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."—II. Tim. III: 15-17.

But whence cometh this wisdom that fills these "prohibition" Christians who prate so much about the good works of the ballot-box? From such men as Doctor Carroll, of Waco, who is so ignorant of the truth, that he thinks John the Baptist set up the kingdom of Christ; and that it is impossible for a Baptist to "fall from grace," even if he should die a drunkard. Yes, and from astute politicians, who aim to make the prohibition question a stepping-stone to official positions that they are triggering for. These are the men who are leading many of our brethren away from the power God has given to eradicate all evils in the world to the power of the ballot-box. When they are overcome by God's power, the victory will be Christ's, and His kingdom will reap the glory of it; but when these evils are prohibited by the power of Caesar, Caesar's kingdom will get the glory and honor that follows. Christians are told to "do all things to the glory of God."

A few of our readers have informed us that, they don't want to read the F. F. any longer, since we will not trample our convictions under foot and toady to their political schemes for doing what God has provided for through the gospel of His Son. Well, we can give up such readers with few regrets. Such narrow-minded men could never be rallied under the true banner of King Jesus, anyway. They are not even able to bear milk—if the Scriptures provided for such a light diet as tea-kettle tea, we would prescribe it as their only diet for about twelve months. They have grown dyspeptic on the nice condiments that their fleshy appetites have heaped to themselves.

They say we are in favor of whisky, and advancing the cause, because we will not vote and work for their side. But, if an election should be ordered to determine whether or not people should wear gold, we would take no part in it; yet we are opposed to Christians wearing gold, for the law of Christ forbids it; but we would not prevent it by prohibitory measures that Caesar or other rulers of human governments provide; but by planting the good seed of the kingdom of God in the hearts of the people. Forced obedience is no obedience in God's sight; He will have "obedience from the heart" or not at all.

Every one who has written us upon this question, except brother Hall, has jumped clear over the issue. It is not whether Christians shall vote on the question of prohibition, but shall they become actors in political questions at all? And we are willing that both sides may be heard fairly and freely in our columns. We do not fall out with those who differ from us on this question. God forbid that we should ever dwindle into such a bundle of littleness as to refuse to hear, and weigh well, anything our opponents may say on this or any other question that relates to the kingdom of God. We were loth to touch this question under the circumstances, because there were so many other questions, that seemed to us, to demand investigation before this one, and which pave the way to this one. But we were drawn out on it, and when we write in reference to the religion of Christ, we would write our true sentiments, if we knew we would lose every subscriber on our mailing list at one stroke of our pen.

One brother who has informed us that he wants his paper discontinued because of our views on this question, was at Austin during the recent United States senatorial contest, and enumerated to us his objections to the F. F. In this conversation the whisky fumes on his breath were almost stifling. But if he can't be induced by the high and holy incentives held out in the gospel of Christ, to leave off whisky guzzling, the prohibitory barriers that Caesar's arm may stretch around liquor to hedge him off will not save his besotted soul from that place prepared for the devil and his angels. God will have voluntary submission to His law, super-induced by heart-power.

There are many men and women plunged head and ears into this political contest—for it is political, the asseverations of prohibition cranks to the contrary notwithstanding—who are bringing more reproach upon the kingdom of God, and damning more souls by their influence upon young disciples, and those without, in violating the law of Christ in reference to striving for gain, and conforming to the fashions and ways of the world in their manner of life, than all of the drinking saloons on the continent. It is the giddy-headed, fashion-followers in the church who are so unreasonable and intolerant on this question. There are many good, true men and women who disagree with us on this question. Some, too, who are associated with us in editing the F. F.—brother Grubbs and brother Tant; but we love them and respect them, because they do not manifest that narrow spirit which would prescribe all who will not fall in line with them.

As we have been forced into this question, we may write a series of articles on it. But for the present we will notice a few points in brother Hall's article and close. Bro. H. says, he can't see any bearing II. Tim. II: 4-5, and Col. II: 8, and Col. III: 17, has on the coming election. Well, it was not written with special reference to the "coming election." It is broader than this little affair which seems to have added the understanding of so many brethren till they run clear over the issue without seeing it. These Scriptures enunciate a broad principle that reaches away beyond this little whisky whirl-wind, in which so many lazy Christians, who laid down to sleep at baptism, have waked up into a little political frolic—though we do not class brother Hall with these, for he has our unqualified respect and confidence as a true worker in the Master's vineyard; but I refer to a different class. A short time ago, a certain brother said to another: "I intend to vote for prohibition. If I have to walk to my voting place, which is eight miles off, on my hands and knees." The other brother knows him well, and says that he often falls to meet with his brethren on Lord's day, which is not a fourth of the distance, and he might ride. So, then, he would go four times as far on his hands and knees to help in the work of Caesar, than he would ride on horse-back to help in the work of the Lord, and to show forth His death, which is expressly commanded by the law of Christ. This is the class I refer to, and their name is legion. But if brother H. can't see the principle we contend for, clearly expressed in these passages, I am at a loss to know what has so effectually blunted his vision. He admits that Col. iii: 17, teaches that, whatever we do must be done by the "authority of Christ." Then since the authority of Christ is revealed to us in the New Testament, whatever we do must be done by the direction of the New Testament. Is there any direction in that book for Christians to become entangled with unbelievers in political schemes to carry measures, that are only authorized by Christ to be carried by the power of the gospel? Is there any kind of authority, in this book of authority, for Christians to vote? If so, where is it? But brother H. thinks that such a construction would inaugurate a principle that would deprive us of authority to ride on a train, or publish the F. F. But he is mistaken, we think. The apostles travelled on foot, and on sailing vessels. Sailing vessels were public carriers, then they travelled on public carriers when it suited their convenience. Railroads are public carriers, hence we may ride on public carriers. The apostles spoke and wrote the gospel, and thus contended for "the faith;" so may we. Printing is an improved method of writing; so we have fairly implied authority to ride on railroads, and to publish the gospel. We will admit that we have no right to do "anything that is not authorized by inspiration." That is just the thing we are contending for; but all authority is not expressed in direct commands, or statements. As before said, example, and necessary implication, is as good authority as expressed precept. But what we are not authorized to do by any of these avenues of authority, we may not do. He wants to know which I would meet the Indians with, the Bible or a shot-gun. What has that to do with this question? The proper thing to meet the Indians with, is the gospel of Christ. The selfishness, covetousness, love of gain, and general ungodliness practiced toward the Indians by so-called Christian governments, when they come in contact with civilized people, was all that ever necessitated the use of carnal weapons upon these poor, down-trodden creatures. But with all of the impositions they have suffered at the hands of avaricious men and governments, the gospel of God's Son preached and lived among them, is a sufficient leaven to civilize them and discipline them to Christ.

As no one will cite us to chapter and verse which authorizes Christians to participate in political governments, as factors and citizens of such governments, we expect to write one article giving our reasons for opposing such a practice, and shall draw those reasons from a fair induction of various proof-texts. There is a feature in brother H's article which demands a more elaborate treatment than I can give it now, which I will give attention to in my next. I refer to his idea of separating our citizenship from our duty as Christians.

Bro. H. begins his article by playing leap-frog right over the issue, when he says, he does not like my position on prohibition. Why did he not say, he did not like my position on Christians voting. If I believed that Christians should vote, there would be no difference between us on the question of prohibition.

A. McG.

MORE ABOUT CHRISTIANS VOTING.

Bro. E. Hansbrough:

I enclose you one number of your paper of the 15th inst., in which I have marked an article for you to read, from Mrs. Louls Wurts, and the reply to it by A. McG. The letter, I endorse every word of it; but the reply, I hardly know what to think of it. He believes it absolutely wrong for Christians to vote at all. Now, please tell me what kind of a government would we have, if all who try to be Christians, in the United States, were not to vote, and stand back and let all foreigners, anarchists, saloonists, and drunken sons, rule and govern this country? It is bad enough as it is, and far too many such get into office now. He is one of the selfish kind of Christians: he would try to save his own child from drowning, but could, nor would not, reach out his Christian hand to save his brother's child, unless he could find chapter and verse where it tells him to do so. And further, he says, he is anxious to see prohibition succeed, and yet he can't help to make it succeed. I have my doubts of his sincerity in his desires. And says, he would be proud to see whisky defeated. Yes; be proud that others would bring it about; and, yet, if, by his vote, he could dry up every drop of whisky in the world, he would not do it. "Oh consistency thou art a jewel."

I saw and heard a Mr. Hedrick, a preacher in our church, say, if he could remove such evils and sins from the world, he would not do it. And why? I did not know we had another such a man in our church, and am sorry to know of such. I wonder if A. McG. has a family? If so, were he to have a saloon on each side of him, and a house of prostitution in front and rear, would he vote to remove the evil, or would he want others to do for him what he is not willing to do for them?

I rather like your paper, and in many things you advocate, I fully endorse; but for McG. to want this temperance cause to succeed, and not willing to lend a willing hand to assist in the good work, looks to me like he is not honest in his pretensions. I can't see how a Christian can fold his hands, and set back and say, "for me, I will provide for my household, and get my child out of the grog-shop as best I can, and you can do the same."

Now, brother Hansbrough, I have two boys; one married, has two children, and the other boy is to be married in a few days. I have never had any cause to want the saloons put down on their account, for they are both sober boys; and yet I have always been a prohibition, temperance man: never was drunk in my life. No man living ever saw me get a dram from across the counter from a saloon keeper, and yet I feel that it is my Christian duty to do all the good I can in this world, and to reach out and save all the poor sinners I can, and especially the boys of my neighbors and friends. If this is not christianity I don't know what it is. And if temperance and sobriety does not belong to it, I am no Christian, and don't want to be one without it.

Bro. Crutcher leaves here this morning. He is going to live in Louisville, Ky. So we are out of a preacher for the present.

FRANK CHILTON.

Harrisonville, Mo., May 31, '87.

The above letter is from an old friend and brother, with whom I have been acquainted about forty years, and I esteem him highly as a brother in Christ, and as an honest man; but he, like many others of our brethren, has gone wild on this whisky, prohibition question, just like he and I, and a great many others, went wild on the subject of secession, about twenty-seven years ago, at which time I voted for Jeff Davis for President of the Southern Confederacy, while many of my brethren voted against Jeff Davis, and for some other wicked politician who was opposing that which I was in favor of.

Now, brother Frank, don't you believe that, if the Lord had made it my duty to vote, and the duty of my brethren to vote, that he would have given us such instructions as would have kept us from opposing each other? He would have told us whether to vote for Whigs, Democrats, Radicals, or Secessionists. Now, would he not? I vote, however, without any instructions from Him, and, of course, I did it ignorantly and in unbelief. Was honest in so doing; but I have learned the way of the Lord more perfectly, and have turned away from such foolishness, and when you learn it more perfectly you will do likewise.

You ask: "Now please tell me what kind of a government would we have if all who try to be Christians, in the United States, would not vote, etc." Now, I don't suppose that you wish me to give you a political answer to that question; for I don't dabble with politics; then I conclude it is a Scriptural answer you desire. Well, Paul says, "Foolish and unlearned (or untaught) questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strife."—I. Tim. ii: 23. Now, if you have got any better Scriptural answer to give to that question than the above, please let me know in your next.

You say you doubt brother McGary's sincerity, when he says he would like to see prohibition succeed, yet will not vote for it. Now, brother Frank, did you not pen that sentence hastily and unthoughtfully? Can you imagine what he gained by the expression of his sentiments on that subject, either in this world or the world to come, if he was not sincere? He had good reason to believe, when he wrote that article, that he would lose some subscribers, which he did, and he knew he was running against the popular current; and everything connected with his writing goes to prove to my mind that he is sincere. But you, with many others, seem to lose sight, (to some extent, at any rate,) of the true issue; which is not whether the prohibition of whisky shall prevail, but whether or not Christians have the right to vote on any subject. He denies that they have that right, and I agree with him. But he has written an article, in this issue, in answer to a letter from a brother Hall, and if you do not become satisfied from reading that, that he is sincere, then nothing I can say will satisfy you.

You say in your letter that brother Crutcher has left you and gone to Louisville, Ky., and that you are without a preacher. Well, is not the congregation at Harrisonville old enough yet to stand alone without the aid of a salaried preacher? If it is not, they have had their salaried preacher to very little purpose; they have been poorly fed.

Go with brother Crutcher to Kentucky, and meet with the brethren and sisters at Louisville, or in any wealthy part of the State, and you will find ten violators of the law of the Lord, found in I. Tim. ii: 9-11, to where you find one drunkard. Yet, there is mighty little said about it; the preachers don't ride that horse, which, for convenience, sake, we will call Fashion, like they do the whisky horse, for there is more danger of that horse pitching and throwing his rider than the whisky horse. But the preaching brethren and the elders, whose duty it is to teach the congregations, had better ride all of these wicked horses, and the higher they pitch, the more freely ought they to use the quirt and spur. You need not go to Kentucky to find these violators of God's law; but go to your own congregation next Lord's day, and you will see more violators of that law than you will of the law pertaining to drunkenness.

Now, brother Frank, you and I will go to work and get the legislatures of Missouri and Texas to pass prohibitory laws, preventing these abominable jewelers, trinket and gewgaw makers from coming into the country, and we will prevent the milliners and mantua makers from working up this costly apparel, and making up all these humps and bumps that our sisters are wearing and disfiguring their bodies, and setting such bad examples, (and they are bad), to the rising generation; and adultery and fornication are terrible and very common sins, and we would get some very stringent and adequate laws passed in reference to them, and after we get all these things put down, prohibited, then to whom would the glory, the honor, be due, God or Cæsar? You must answer, Cæsar. Then, is it the duty of Christians to spend their time, talent, means and influence in building up these human governments and human and sectarian organizations that they may be glorified, honored, and to that extent the cause of Christ pulled down?

Bro. Frank, the Lord in his word tells us of all our duties, not only to human governments, but to everything else, and the gospel makes us all that the Lord wants us to be, if we will be governed by it.

E. HANSBROUGH.

WHY CHRISTIANS SHOULD NOT VOTE.

We have been asked, if we are going to vote at the coming election, or, in other words, to voice our sentiments through the ballot-box, upon the question of prohibition or non-prohibition, for the advancement of the cause of one or the other of the two scheming political parties. We reply, that we belong, neither to a political party, nor to a government that allows us a voice to vote away our Christian liberty wherewith Christ has made us free. We belong to a government whose laws are immutable, and cannot be amended or abrogated by the voice of the people to suit the times or the occasion. "For God hath not called us unto uncleanness but unto holiness. He, therefore, that despiseth, despiseth not man, but God who hath also given unto us his Holy Spirit."—I. Thes. iv: 7-8; he despiseth the will of God, and attempts to set it aside for the purpose of entangling himself again into the political affairs of human governments. We do not propose to serve God and the devil, for it is an impossibility. Jesus, the Son of God, said: "No man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one, and love the other: or else he will hold to the one and despise the other, ye cannot serve God and mammon."

We have chosen whom we will serve, and we have no desire to turn back again to the beggarly elements of the world to serve the prince of the power of the air. We have no faith in politics; we have no confidence in the flesh, no confidence in things that will change and perish and pass away; for whatsoever is not of faith is sin. But we have confidence in the word of God, in the Son of God, and in the promise of the Holy Spirit of God. For where our treasures are there will be our heart also. Our treasures are in heaven. Our affections are set on things above, and not on things on the earth, for we are dead to sin, and our life is hid with Christ in God. We live in the world, but we are not of the world, for we are dead to sin. We live under a republican form of government, but we take no part in the affairs of it. We expect to make an honest living, in the sight of all men as long as we live, for all things work together for good to them that love God and keep his commandments. We love God and we are trying to keep his commandments, and to keep ourselves unspotted from the world. We do not expect to lay up for ourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal, but we do expect to lay up for ourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt and where thieves do not break through nor steal. We thank God for having been born and raised in a free country, free in so far as to be allowed to worship God according to His will, as revealed in His word, and free to follow any honest avocation in life for a livelihood without molestation. And we thank God for having favored us with the ability and the opportunity to hear the gospel of Christ preached in its purity, and to understand it, and to believe it and obey it from the heart. And we believe with all our heart that all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

Now, if all Christians would do the will of God, as He would have us to do, then we would not be hearers of the word only, but also doers of the word, and not like unto a man beholding his natural face in the glass: for he beholdeth himself and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was, but we would look into the perfect law of liberty, and continue therein, and being not forgetful hearers, but doers of the work, we shall be blessed in our deed; we would all practice as well as preach pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father, which is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep ourselves unspotted from the world.

Now, as I said, we do not belong to a government that allows us to vote away our Christian liberties. Before we can vote, we must relinquish all our claims to the government of God, and asseverate our interest in the church of Christ—because we know that to whom we yield ourselves servants to obey, his servants we are to whom we obey, whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness. There are but two governments in the world, and as there is nothing to vote about in the government of God—in the church of Christ—and no authority in the word of God for our voting, or otherwise officiating in human governments or institutions, we must, of necessity, rebel against this divine government, and join ourselves to some human government in the vain attempt to put down evil by voting for scheming political parties, which implies fighting to carry our point, if voting will not do it.

From whence come wars and fightings among you? Come they not hence, even of your lusts that war in your members? * * Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God. There are but two governments in the world, human and divine, and they are as opposite as the poles. We were once subjects of one of these governments, voted for it, worked for it, and fought for it. But God be thanked, we were the servants of sin, but we have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered us; being then made free from sin, we became the servants of righteousness—the servants of the living God. For when we were the servants of sin, of human governments, of human institutions, of religious organizations, of missionary societies, of Bible colleges, of Sunday-school conventions, of ministerial associations, of state meetings, and of all other introductions of the world, the flesh, and the devil, we were free from righteousness. What fruit had we then in those things whereof we are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death. But now, being made free from sin, and become servants to God, we have our fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. That's why Christians should not vote. T. H. GILLESPIE.

Dear Sisters:

By your many kind and encouraging letters I am encouraged to say a few words for my Master, although I feel my unworthiness and inability to say anything much among so many learned writers; but I am not ashamed to own my Lord, nor to defend His cause. Ashamed! who would be ashamed to confess our dear Lord and Savior? I am anxious for the time to come when every Christian will speak for Christ; let whosoever heareth say, come. Then let us set good examples before the world, and before the babes in Christ, that they may know their duty.

Dear sisters, and brothers, too, are we interested enough in the welfare of our immortal souls? Are we a stumbling-block to any of God's children? If so, let us awake to a sense of our duty, and not hinder, but help, the weak brothers and sisters—teach them the way of life. Let your light so shine that others seeing your good works, may be constrained to glorify our Father, who art in heaven; for we, (Christians), are the light of the world.

Oh, how careful then, ought we to be in our daily walk and conversation. "Be not conformed to this world." Do Christians, as a rule obey this? No; by no means. Go to church or anywhere you please, and it is hard to tell which are the disciples of Christ, and which are not, by the way they dress. I long to see the time when Christians will dress decently and in order, so poor members, (such as me), will not feel ashamed to meet at the house of worship. God is no respecter of persons: then why must poor, dying man be, because one has a little more property than another? Why, don't you know that all you have belongs to God?

Dear sisters, when you are scorned on account of poverty, don't be ashamed or discouraged, don't stay at home, but meet on the first day of the week, though you go in rags. God will be with you, for he has promised never to forsake as long as you trust in Him. Don't go to see how others are dressed, or to see who else is there; but go to honor our Lord and Master.

I was pleased to see an article from James P. McConnell in the F. F. He is a worthy brother. He baptized me five years ago. Dear brother, write again: there was one that read your letter with interest.

I would love to meet sister Sarah, and give her a warm hand-shake, and brother McGary, too. Press onward and upward, dear brothers and sisters, until you gain your reward in Heaven. Though we may never know each other in the flesh, pray that we may meet in heaven, where we shall know as we are known. I am well pleased with the F. F. Your sister in Christ, ELIZA CONNER.

GRUBBS—GLASS DEBATE.

The above debate took place at Peoria, Hill county, Texas. Bro. Grubbs began a meeting here on Friday night before the first Lord's day in June, and continued until second Lord's day night, with five additions by baptism. The debate began Monday, the 13th, at 10 a. m., and continued four days, having two sessions a day of two hours each, one in the morning and one in the evening. The interest manifested was very great, and it increased to the close of the debate and of the meeting that followed. The moderators were Elder Priddy, Baptist; Elder Basham, Presbyterian, and myself. Hedge's rules of debate were adopted and were most rigidly construed and enforced.

The first proposition discussed was as follows: "The church with which I, J. M. Glass, stand identified, known by me and my brethren as the Baptist Church, possesses the Bible characteristics of the church of Christ."

Two days were consumed on this proposition. I can only give you a synopsis of the arguments produced on either side.

Mr. Glass, in his opening speech, indulged in a little boasting as to what he intended to do, and claimed to be anxious to have the truth. He adopted the definition of church given in Pendleton's manual, page 56, which, in substance, is: "A body of baptized believers, having organization, laws, ordinances, etc.," and claimed that the spiritual features of the church were four in number, viz: 1. The character of members. 2. Organization. 3. Ordinances with their design. 4. Fundamental doctrines. I do not know what use he intended to make of these four features, for he never alluded to them again. He soon began hunting for a line of succession by which to link the Baptist church on to the Apostolic church. But like all of these succession hunters, he lost himself in the remote depths of antiquity, and he found his line to be just like the Irishman's rope. An Irishman having been engaged a long time in hauling on board a cable, the captain said to him: "Pat, it takes you a long time to reach the end of that cable." Pat replied: "Faith, an' it does, sir; an' if it please yer honor, I b'love that somebody has cut off the end of it."

Glass said that the church was set up during the personal ministry of Christ, and has stood to the present day, and will stand forever. That church and kingdom were the same institution and was a visible body; something to be located on the earth. That the church of Rome was not the church of Christ, but was the man of sin alluded to in II. Thes. II: 3. That it was corrupt and could not be converted, and hence Baptists claim no succession through it. Nor did he contend for the succession of minor sects of Baptists, but said Baptists teach Bible succession. He then proceeded to tell us what this Bible succession that Baptists teach was. Premising, however, that Alexander Campbell had tried to reform the Catholic church!! Of course he failed, as the scriptures taught the rise, progress, and final downfall of this "mother of harlots." Campbell, he said, had no right to inaugurate a new system. People were called upon to come out of Babylon, not make a new church, nor reform an old one. His line of succession, up and down, which he trotted so continually that he became thoroughly fagged before the two days expired, was the same one that T. R. Burnett is trying to manufacture. I do not know whether Glass reads the Messenger or not, but he and Burnett could console each other somewhat, as did the Irishman that dropped the tea-kettle into the river. Hastening to the captain, he said: "Captain, is anything lost when you know where it is?" "No, Pat; but why do you ask?" "Och, sir! I dropped the tay-kettle over board and its at the bottom of the river." Just so with this succession of churches, (visible bodies, organized, etc.) they are in the remote depths of antiquity—but they are not lost, oh! no; the Baptists know they are there, and so does T. R. Burnett!

Glass quoted the prophecies of Daniel II: 44; vii: 27; Matt. xvi: 18, and asserted that in fulfillment of these scriptures, Christ did in person set up his church while he was on earth—that he was a king here

—born a king, and that he gave his commission to this church. Matt. xxviii: 19-20. The point he tried to make here was, that the church of Christ has stood ever since it was organized. This is a line of succession. All churches claim a line of succession, but all churches can trace back from the time of their beginning, except the Baptist church. The other end of the line of Baptist succession is lost somewhere in the remote depths of antiquity—therefore the Bible line coming this way must be the same as the Baptist line going back that way. As his, (Glass's), whole argument was based on this assumption I will give a summary of it. He brought forward some extracts from Ray's succession; and some other historical notes in order to link on to the Anabaptists, Mennonites, Novatians, Waldenses, etc. After establishing his line of succession as he thought, he presented three Bible characteristics claimed by the Baptist church. 1. The kingdom set up by Jesus in person while on earth—referred to. Matt. xi: 12; Matt. xxiii: 13; Luke xvi: 16; John xviii: 37, and Matt. i: 2. From these he deduced the fact that Jesus was a king on earth, and that the kingdom existed "either in a preparatory or in a finished state." 2. Total depravity. He relied principally upon Job's language, "Can a clean thing come from an unclean?" in order to prove this point.—Job 14: 1-4. 3. He claimed that Baptists teach the Bible in order to salvation, viz: repentance before and in order to faith with the heart. His proof texts were Mark i: 15; Gal. v: 6; Acts xv: 9; Matt. xxi: 82; Acts xx: 21; Rom. v: 1; I, John v: 1; John iii: 16.

He said he did not rely alone upon the order of words in a sentence. That faith purified the heart, hence if the heart is pure, there's nothing to repent for. He claimed that justifying faith saved the man and was equivalent to the new birth; that Abraham was justified by faith when a sinner, and justified by works, forty years after, when a saint; a kind of a second blessing. This is about all that Glass advanced in support of his proposition.

In reply, brother Grubbs said, that if it were admitted that the church of Christ had stood from the date of its organization till now, that it would then devolve upon Glass to show that the Baptist church possessed the Bible characteristics of the church of Christ, and in this he, (Glass), had failed, unless he founded his claim to the church of Christ upon the two doctrines advanced, viz: Total depravity, and repentance before and in order to faith. But, inasmuch as Glass had gone into history, in order to trace a succession of Baptists from the present day back to the Apostles, he would read some extracts from history, as to the character, etc., of those parties through whom he claimed succession. Bro. Grubbs then read from Buck's Theological Dictionary Articles: Baptists, Anabaptists, Mennonites, Novatians, etc. Also some extracts from Moehlm as to Anabaptists and their origin. These historians testify that these ancient sects held many doctrines, and practiced many things that Baptists do not believe nor practice. Then brother Grubbs introduced Benedict's history of all religious denominations. The introduction of this book produced a commotion in the ranks of the Baptists. They said it was a spurious book; that Benedict was not a Baptist; that it was not fair to bring up such records, etc. Bro. G. told them to bring up their proof and impeach the witness, but they could not do it. The extracts alluded to show conclusively that these ancient sects practiced polygamy, (that is, some of them); that the Mennonites were universalists and it gives the origin of Baptists in England about A. D. 1624. Besides this, it gives the different sects into which Baptistism was divided at the time the book was printed, A. D. 1824. Glass never would tell what part of the Baptist family he belonged to, though often asked to do so. The reading of these historical statements so demoralized the gentleman's line of succession that he abandoned it.

Bro. G. called attention to Glass's definition of a church: an organized body of baptized believers, with laws, ordinances, etc., and called attention to the fact that Glass had not located the church at all, neither the time nor place, when and where set up. Glass's admission that the kingdom existed in either a preparatory or a finished state demonstrated that he knew the true teaching of God's word; that in the days of Jesus' personal ministry, the kingdom existed in a preparatory state, but did not begin as a government until Jesus was exalted to the right hand of the Father and sent the Holy Spirit to his Apostles as recorded in Acts second chapter.

In reply to the total depravity argument, it was asked if the passages referred to (Job xiv: 1-4) teach that a child is morally impure when born, how about our Savior? He from working up this costly apparel, and making up all these humps and bumps that our sisters are wearing and disfiguring their bodies, and setting such bad examples, (and they are bad), to the rising generation; and adultery and fornication are terrible and very common sins, and we would get some very stringent and adequate laws passed in reference to them, and after we get all these things put down, prohibited, then to whom would the glory, the honor, be due, God or Cæsar? You must answer, Cæsar. Then, is it the duty of Christians to spend their time, talent, means and influence in building up these human governments and human and sectarian organizations that they may be glorified, honored, and to that extent the cause of Christ pulled down?

Bro. Frank, the Lord in his word tells us of all our duties, not only to human governments, but to everything else, and the gospel makes us all that the Lord wants us to be, if we will be governed by it.

WHY CHRISTIANS SHOULD NOT VOTE.

We have been asked, if we are going to vote at the coming election, or, in other words, to voice our sentiments through the ballot-box, upon the question of prohibition or non-prohibition, for the advancement of the cause of one or the other of the two scheming political parties. We reply, that we belong, neither to a political party, nor to a government that allows us a voice to vote away our Christian liberty wherewith Christ has made us free. We belong to a government whose laws are immutable, and cannot be amended or abrogated by the voice of the people to suit the times or the occasion. "For God hath not called us unto uncleanness but unto holiness. He, therefore, that despiseth, despiseth not man, but God who hath also given unto us his Holy Spirit."—I. Thes. iv: 7-8; he despiseth the will of God, and attempts to set it aside for the purpose of entangling himself again into the political affairs of human governments. We do not propose to serve God and the devil, for it is an impossibility. Jesus, the Son of God, said: "No man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one, and love the other: or else he will hold to the one and despise the other, ye cannot serve God and mammon."

We have chosen whom we will serve, and we have no desire to turn back again to the beggarly elements of the world to serve the prince of the power of the air. We have no faith in politics; we have no confidence in the flesh, no confidence in things that will change and perish and pass away; for whatsoever is not of faith is sin. But we have confidence in the word of God, in the Son of God, and in the promise of the Holy Spirit of God. For where our treasures are there will be our heart also. Our

We do not expect to lay up for ourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal, but we do expect to lay up for ourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt and where thieves do not break through nor steal. We thank God for having been born and raised in a free country, free in so far as to be allowed to worship God according to His will, as revealed in His word, and free to follow any honest avocation in life for a livelihood without molestation. And we thank God for having favored us with the ability and the opportunity to hear the gospel of Christ preached in its purity, and to understand it, and to believe it and obey it from the heart. And we believe with all our heart that all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

Now, if all Christians would do the will of God, as He would have us to do, then we would not be hearers of the word only, but also doers of the word, and not like unto a man beholding his natural face in the glass: for he beholdeth himself and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was, but we would look into the perfect law of liberty, and continue therein, and being not forgetful hearers, but doers of the work, we shall be blessed in our deed; we would all practice as well as preach pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father, which is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep ourselves unspotted from the world.

Now, as I said, we do not belong to a government that allows us to vote away our Christian liberties. Before we can vote, we must relinquish all our claims to the government of God, and asseverate our interest in the church of Christ—because we know that to whom we yield ourselves servants to obey, his servants we are to whom we obey, whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness. There are but two governments in the world, and as there is nothing to vote about in the government of God—in the church of Christ—and no authority in the word of God for What fruit had we then in those things wherewith we are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death. But now, being made free from sin, and become servants to God, we have our fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. That's why Christians should not vote.

GRUBBS—GLASS DEBATE.

The above debate took place at Peoria, Hill county, Texas. Bro. Grubbs began a meeting here on Friday night before the first Lord's day in June, and continued until second Lord's day night, with five additions by baptism. The debate began Monday, the 13th, at 10 a. m., and continued four days, having two sessions a day of two hours each, one in the morning and one in the evening. The interest manifested was very great, and it increased to the close of the debate and of the meeting that followed. The moderators were Elder Priddy, Baptist; Elder Basham, Presbyterian, and myself. Hedge's rules of debate were adopted and were most rigidly construed and enforced.

The first proposition discussed was as follows: "The church with which I, J. M. Glass, stand identified, known by me and my brethren as the Baptist Church, possesses the Bible characteristics of the church of Christ."

Two days were consumed on this proposition. I can only give you a synopsis of the arguments produced on either side.

Mr. Glass, in his opening speech, indulged in a little boasting as to what he intended to do, and claimed to be anxious to have the truth. He adopted the definition of church given in Pendleton's manual, page 56, which, in substance, is: "A body of baptized believers, having organization, laws, ordinances, etc.," and claimed that the spiritual features of the church were four in number, viz: 1. The character of members. 2. Organization. 3. Ordinances with their design. 4. Fundamental doctrines. I do not know what use he intended to make of these four features, for he never alluded to them again. He soon began hunting for a line of succession by which to link the Baptist church on to the Apostolic church. But like all of these succession hunters, he lost himself in the remote depths of antiquity, and he found his line to be just like the Irishman's rope. An Irishman having been engaged a long time in hauling on board a cable, the captain said to him: "Pat, it takes you a long time to reach the end of that cable." Pat replied: "Faith, an' it does, sir; an', if it please yer honor, I b'love that somebody has cut off the ind of it."

Glass said that the church was set up during the personal ministry of Christ, and has stood to the present day, and will stand forever. That church and kingdom were the same institution and was a visible body; something to be located on the earth. That the church of Rome was not the church of Christ, but was the man of sin alluded to in II. Thes. II: 3. That it was corrupt and could not be converted, and hence Baptists claim no succession through it. Nor did he contend for the succession of minor sects of Baptists, but said Baptists teach Bible succession. He then proceeded to tell us what this Bible succession that Baptists teach was. Premising, however, that Alexander Campbell had tried to reform the Catholic church!! Of course he failed, as the scriptures taught the rise, progress, and final downfall of this "mother of harlots." Campbell, he said, had no right to inaugurate a new system. People were called upon to come out of Babylon, not make a new church, nor reform an old one. His line of succession, up and down, which he trotted so continually that he became thoroly sagged before the two days expired, was the same one that T. R. Burnett is trying to manufacture. I do not know whether Glass reads the Messenger or not, but he and Burnett could console each other somewhat, as did the Irishman that dropped the tea-kettle into the river. Hastening to the captain, he said: "Captain, is anything lost when you know where it is?" "No, Pat; but why do you ask?" "Och, sir! I dropped the tay-kettle over board and its at the bottom of the river." Just so with this succession of churches, (visible bodies, organized, etc.,) they are in the remote depths of antiquity—but they are not lost, oh! no; the Baptists know they are there, and so does T. R. Burnett!

Glass quoted the prophecies of Daniel II: 44; VII: 27; Matt. XVI: 18, and asserted that in fulfillment of these scriptures, Christ did in person set up his church while he was on earth—that he was a king here—born a king, and that he gave his commission to this church. Matt. XXVIII: 19-20. The point he tried to make here was, that the church of Christ has stood ever since it was organized. This is a line of succession. All churches claim a line of succession, but all churches can trace back from the time of their beginning, except the Baptist church. The other end of the line of Baptist succession is lost somewhere in the remote depths of antiquity—therefore the Bible line coming this way must be the same as the Baptist line going back that way. As his, (Glass's), whole argument was based on this assumption I will give a summary of it. He brought forward some extracts from Ray's succession; and some other historical notes in order to link on to the Anabaptists, Mennonites, Novatians, Waldenses, etc. After establishing his line of succession as he thought, he presented three Bible characteristics claimed by the Baptist church. 1. The kingdom set up by Jesus in person while on earth—referred to, Matt. XI: 12; Matt. XXIII: 13; Luke XVI: 16; John XVIII: 37, and Matt. I: 2. From these he deduced the fact that Jesus was a king on earth, and that the kingdom existed "either in a preparatory or in a finished state." 2. Total depravity. He relied principally upon Job's language, "Can a clean thing come from an unclean?" in order to prove this point.—Job 14: 1-4. 3. He claimed that Baptists teach the Bible in order to salvation, viz: repentance before and in order to faith with the heart. His proof texts were Mark I: 15; Gal. V: 6; Acts XV: 9; Matt. XXI: 82; Acts XX: 21; Rom. V: 1; I, John V: 1; John III: 16.

He said he did not rely alone upon the order of words in a sentence. That faith purified the heart, hence if the heart is pure, there's nothing to repent for. He claimed that justifying faith saved the man and was equivalent to the new birth; that Abraham was justified by faith when a sinner, and justified by works, forty years after, when a saint; a kind of a second blessing. This is about all that Glass advanced in support of his proposition.

In reply, brother Grubbs said, that if it were admitted that the church of Christ had stood from the date of its organization till now, that it would then devolve upon Glass to show that the Baptist church possessed the Bible characteristics of the church of Christ, and in this he, (Glass), had failed, unless he founded his claim to the church of Christ upon the two doctrines advanced, viz: Total depravity, and repentance before and in order to faith. But, inasmuch as Glass had gone into history, in order to trace a succession of Baptists from the present day back to the Apostles, he would read some extracts from history, as to the character, etc., of those parties through whom he claimed succession. Bro. Grubbs then read from Buck's Theological Dictionary Articles: Baptists, Anabaptists, Mennonites, Novatians, etc. Also some extracts from Mosheim as to Anabaptists and their origin. These historians testify that these ancient sects held many doctrines, and practiced many things that Baptists do not believe nor practice. Then brother Grubbs introduced Benedict's history of all religious denominations. The introduction of this book produced a commotion in the ranks of the Baptists. They said it was a spurious book; that Benedict was not a Baptist; that it was not fair to bring up such records, etc. Bro. G. told them to bring up their proof and impeach the witness, but they could not do it. The extracts alluded to show conclusively that these ancient sects practiced polygamy, (that is, some of them); that the Mennonites were universalists and it gives the origin of Baptists in England about A. D. 1624. Besides this, it gives the different sects into which Baptistism was divided at the time the book was printed, A. D. 1824. Glass never would tell what part of the Baptist family he belonged to, though often asked to do so. The reading of these historical statements so demoralized the gentleman's line of succession that he abandoned it.

Bro. G. called attention to Glass's definition of a church: an organized body of baptized believers, with laws, ordinances, etc., and called attention to the fact that Glass had not located the church at all, neither the time nor place, when and where set up. Glass's admission that the kingdom existed in either a preparatory or a finished state demonstrated that he knew the true teaching of God's word; that in the days of Jesus' personal ministry, the kingdom existed in a preparatory state, but did not begin as a government until Jesus was exalted to the right hand of the Father and sent the Holy Spirit to his Apostles as recorded in Acts second chapter.

In reply to the total depravity argument, it was asked if the passages referred to (Job XIV: 1-4) teach that a child is morally impure when born, how about our Savior? He was born of woman, and, according to Glass, woman, having human nature, was unclean or impure, and hence that which was born of her was unclean. An argument proving too much; hence valueless. Again, if children are born depraved, inherit depravity, then universalism is true. "For as in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive." As to the Bible order of salvation presented by Glass: repentance before faith and in order to faith; he said, that it was a well-known fact that the collocation of words in a sentence did not always indicate the true order in which the events took place. Peter, in Acts x, speaking of Jesus, says: "Him they slew and hanged on a tree." Here, according to the gentleman's logic, we have the killing before the crucifixion. Again, in II. Thea. ii: 13, we have this order: 1. Chosen of God. 2. Saved. 3. Sanctified by the Spirit. 4. Believing the truth. But Mr. Glass does not accept this order.

As he is such a stickler for the order in which things are named in a sentence, I will try him on Mark xvi: 16: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." This does not suit Baptist theology, hence the order is not right. It should read, to suit him: "He that believeth and is saved shall or may be baptized." It is well-known to Mr. Glass, and all others, that those who believe in God were called upon to repent and believe the good news of a coming Savior. Repentance having reference to moral action is produced by Godly sorrow, which in turn springs from faith in God, and in the goodness of God. Who would turn from sin unless convinced of sin? And when convinced of sin, what inducement is there to turn to God, unless he believes that God will reward him? Motives are placed before man to make him willing to act; he must believe God, believe these motives in order to his action in repentance or in obedience.

Mr. Glass says, that Abraham was justified twice by faith and once by works. I deny this, and call upon him to read us from the Scripture where Paul ever said that Abraham was justified by faith. Glass never responded to this, but continued throughout the debate to assert that Paul had said that Abraham was justified by faith, and though repeatedly asked to read it, failed to produce it.

At the close of the second day, it was evident to all that Mr. Glass had made a most signal failure in his attempts to sustain his position. Bro. Grubbs called his attention to some twelve or thirteen points of doctrine taught by Baptists which are not taught in God's word. But Glass would not take them up.

On the second proposition, Glass showed more weakness than on the former. Bro. Grubbs affirmed that, "Under the reign of Christ, baptism is a Scriptural condition of pardon." His first speech was strong, logical, Scriptural. Glass could not answer it, and hence spent his time in quibbles and in trying to get up what he called a counter argument. Bro. Grubbs said that the reign of Christ had reference to an event in a world of events, and hence could be located as to time and place. That when we shall have located the time of Christ's reign, we then inquire whether baptism is a condition of remission of sins. That he admitted faith, repentance and confession to be conditions, and, indeed, so far as his question was concerned, there might be a thousand conditions, but he had to prove that baptism was one of the conditions.

Prior to the coronation of Jesus, God ruled the world, and gave His laws through Moses, John the Baptist, and the prophets. But Jesus was crowned A. D. 33, not on earth, for he did not reign here; crowned in Heaven.—I. Cor. xv: 25. Having established the fact that Christ reigns, he next showed that the administration of His government began on earth after his humiliation and exaltation.—Acts ii: 25-28. David, by the Spirit, speaks of his death and resurrection, and of his subsequent exaltation (verses 34 and 35.) Peter declares these Scriptures fulfilled, and appeals to the reception of the Holy Spirit as evidence of the coronation of Jesus. "Therefore, being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, he hath shed forth this which you see and hear."

In confirmation of the truth that Jesus was "made both Lord and Christ," after His ascension to Heaven, the following Scriptures were cited: Eph. i: 19-23; Phil. ii: 7-11. Jesus having ascended to the right hand of His Father, gave gifts to men.—Eph. iv: 11. These Apostles, Prophets and Evangelists were given for the purpose of preaching and teaching. When did they go forth and begin their teaching to the nations in the name of Jesus? Prior to Jesus' death, teaching was confined exclusively to the Jews.—Matt. x: 5-7. They should tell no man that He was the Christ until after His resurrection.—Matt. xvii: 9, and xvi: 20. And should begin to preach in His name to all nations at Jerusalem in obedience to commission given.—Matt. xxviii: 19-20, Luke xxiv: 46-47, etc. The gospel preached prior to the death of Christ was right then, but not right now. It was not the gospel of Christ, nor was it preached in His name.—John xvi: 24-25.

FIRST ARGUMENT.—Mark xvi: 15-16: Here Jesus commands the gospel to be preached to every creature. This preaching must have a beginning, and they must begin just where Jesus commanded them. Luke xxiv: 49: "Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." This power they received through the baptism of the Holy Spirit.—Acts i: 4-8; John xiv: 16-17; John xvi: 7-14. The bestowal of the Holy Spirit upon the Apostles is another proof that the administration of Christ's government did not begin on earth until after His ascension and glorification.—John vii: 39.

Jesus lays down, in the commission quoted above, a foundation for His government, and here we find two conditions expressed upon which salvation is made to depend. Salvation is here predicated of a class, and this class is described as consisting of baptized believers. "He that believeth and is baptized," two conditions connected together and in order to salvation.

SECOND ARGUMENT.—John iii: 3-5: Here Jesus says that in order to enter the kingdom of God, "must be born of water and Spirit." All scholars of any note concede that born of water has reference to baptism. It is absolutely certain then that baptism is in order to the entering into the kingdom of God. But ALL the promises of God are in the kingdom; hence baptism is a Scriptural condition of the remission of sins, one of these promises.

THIRD ARGUMENT.—Acts ii: 36-38: It is only necessary to read this Scripture. For we have here expressed all the terms of the proposition. Certain things are commanded by the authority of Jesus, hence Jesus reigns; the things commanded are "for the remission of sins;" baptism is one of these things commanded.

Bro. Grubbs then introduced several other arguments, from the following Scriptures: Acts iii: 19; Acts xxii: 16; Acts x: 43; Rom. vi: 17-18; II. Cor. v: 17, with Gal. iii: 27; I. Peter iii: 21.

Want of space prevents my giving the entire argument based upon the above Scriptures. The reader will please turn to his Testament and read them, and he will see that each one is a direct proof of the proposition that baptism is a Scriptural condition of remission of sins.

Mr. Glass, in reply to these positions, said that God had but one plan of salvation, and that was by grace through faith without works. That salvation does not depend upon the will of man. If baptism is a condition of salvation, then it depends upon the will of the man and is a work of the flesh. No man can baptize himself, but must go to a preacher to be baptized, and thus his salvation is made to depend upon the will of another. If baptism is a condition of salvation then infants cannot be saved. Men are frequently placed where they can not be baptized, and thus deprived of salvation; and the theory makes baptism the line between the condemned and uncondemned. I deny that baptism is a condition of remission of sins because the Bible nowhere refers a man to baptism as a proof of salvation. He denied that Christ's reign on earth began at Pentecost, and said that he was born a king, and that the gospel was preached before Christ's death. Mark i: 1 was the beginning of the gospel. He denied that the scholarship of the world taught that John iii: 5 had reference to baptism. In a subsequent speech he explained this born of water as a birth of flesh or the natural birth.—In Acts x, he cited the fact of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on Cornelius as an evidence that he was a regenerated man before baptism. Wanted to know whether one is baptized into Christ literally or figuratively. Then on I. Peter iii: 21 he dwelt at large, claiming that baptism here spoken of was figurative. It was one figure (salvation of Noah) compared with another figure (the salvation of Christians), and, if it proved anything, proved that the conscience was good and man saved before baptism.

As a reason for not believing that the kingdom of Christ began on Pentecost, he quoted Acts ii: 47: "and the Lord added daily the saved to the church." The twelve and the 120 were incorporated into church without christian baptism, if the kingdom began then. If baptism is a condition of remission of sins, then it makes God have several plans of saving people, and places some in a position not to be reached by it. I never heard a more disjointed, illogical and unscriptural speech in my life. The gentleman showed his inability even to set forth clearly the doctrines of his own church, and could not meet the arguments advanced by brother Grubbs.

The remainder of the debate was taken up by Glass in attempting to establish a counter argument of justification by faith alone. In running this line, or as he classically expressed it, "trotting along the line," he claimed that the faith which works by love (Gal. v. 6) and purifies the heart (Acts xv: 19) is justifying faith, and equivalent to the new birth. Said that baptism was not for the remission of sins, but because of remission; that he had been asked by two or three persons to baptize them for remission of sins, and that he refused to do so; that he would not baptize any one for remission of sins.

That just as soon as any one believed they were saved, Jesus said: "He that believeth hath everlasting life." Romans, 4th chapter, was called in, and James, 2nd chapter, to teach the two justifications of Abraham, one by faith, and one by works. In reply to this argument brother Grubbs said: I admit that a man is justified by faith; and when justified, he is saved, his sins are remitted. But as Mr. Glass admits, and the Scriptures teach, a faith that does not work is a dead faith, and dead faith cannot save anyone.—Jas. ii: 17. Justifying faith then is a faith that works.—Gal. v: 6. But if faith works, what does it do? Does it work repentance? If the gentleman's theory of repentance before and in order to faith is correct, he has nothing to produce as a work of faith, hence his faith is a dead faith, and not the one that Paul speaks of. But faith does work, so James testifies. "Was not Abraham our father justified by works when he had offered Isaac, his son, upon the altar? Seest thou how faith wrought with his works and by works was faith made perfect?"—James II: 21-22. Here was testifying faith, a perfect faith, a working faith. So now the faith that saves must be perfect. Seest thou how faith wrought with baptism and by baptism was faith made perfect. So that when this faith is made perfect in obedience, the soul is purified (I. Peter I: 22) and the heart purified, by the faith.—Acts xv: 9.

To this argument Glass never responded. I have given about the substance of the arguments introduced. It would be difficult to report all that Glass said; he denied the Scriptures, and attempted to figure away the salvation from every passage that had baptism in it. He never noticed Acts II: 38 until his last speech, and then gave the usual Baptist interpretation, viz: baptism because of remission of sins.

The debate closed on Thursday evening, and preaching was announced for the night by the Baptists, at their house, and by brother Grubbs at the Adventist's meeting-house. The deep interest manifested by the large crowds that daily attended the debate continued unabated, and that night four made the good confession, and one reclaimed. The next day at the water, one who had been "shaken in," confessed Christ and was baptized. Friday night, brother Richardson, of Johnson county, preached a most excellent discourse on "Salvation by grace through faith." Four more confessed Christ and one reclaimed. Bros. Grubbs and Richardson having to go to other appointments, left that night, and I continued the meeting until Lord's day night. Had twelve confessions and one reclaimed after their departure, making a total of twenty-seven by baptism and four reclaimed. The brethren agreed to meet hereafter every Lord's day and carry on the good work happily begun in their midst.

One of the good results of this debate is, the unification of the brethren with regard to sect baptism. Bro. W. A. Scruggs, one of our home preachers, heretofore disposed to favor the reception of immersed sectarians upon their expressed satisfaction, is now determined to work with us for the whole truth as it is in Christ Jesus. Bro. Scruggs is a good preacher and has done much good in our county. I hope that the brethren will give him plenty of work to do, and support him while at work.

There are many other things connected with this debate and meeting of which I would like to speak, and may do so in the future. There is strong likelihood of another debate, to take place at Woodbury, sometime during the summer. If it becomes a certainty, I will let you know.

If the presentation of Mr. Glass's argument in this article seems to be very weak, you must remember I cannot make a strong thing out of a weak one. Mr. Glass is an affable gentleman, and, perhaps, did his best under the circumstances. But he labored under several very serious disadvantages. In the first place, on his affirmation, he spent most of his time and eloquence in trying to establish a myth—Baptist succession. He then failed to point out the Bible characteristics possessed by the Baptist church. If they have any, it would be a consolation to many to know what they are. To the Baptists who read this I would say, lay aside your denominational pride, turn to the gospel of Christ as taught by His Apostles, believe and obey it, and you will then have the assurance of faith that your sins are forgiven, and that you are heirs of eternal life.

J. W. JACKSON.

The following letter, or rather portion of a letter, was written by a sister in Christ, to her mother, who is a Methodist, and who, with others of her family, think they are people of extra blood. It is so replete with good common sense, and more than all, true Christian sentiment, that I send it to the paper for publication, knowing it will be interesting to many. A. McG.

I spent a day or two with sisters _____ and _____. Received a warm welcome, unrestrained, such as characterizes Christian greetings. They are living humbly, with humble surroundings, but neat and clean to perfection. They do as much or more good, considering their means, than any one I know of. The former has sent at least $25.00 to the drouth sufferers, besides paying for the FIRM FOUNDATION for ten people, and no income except from the sale of butter, eggs, etc. When I meet such people as these, and see how they love the word of God, and never weary of talking of it, I recall what Luke, I think, said of the Savior's teaching: "the common people heard him gladly."

I know my relatives all think it strange that I should seek or desire such companionship, and no one had any greater contempt for it than I once had, for there was no congeniality there. But John says: "We know we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren;" and we do love anyone that loves the word of God, and is willing to live up to its strictest teaching, however humble they may be. Paul says, I. Cor. v: 26, 27, 28, Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble (aristocrats) are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen. These humble people are despised by fashionable, worldly minded people, looked down on with supreme contempt, but they are precious in God's sight. For did not our Savior choose ignorant and unlearned fishermen for his most intimate companions? Sister _____, with all her illiteracy, can to-day take her Testament and teach any bishop or arch-bishop in the world, the way of salvation, and make them hang their heads in shame because of their false teaching, which is a verification of the "weak things confounding the mighty." James says, the high shall be abased, and the low exalted, which is the case, wherever the principles of Christianity are understood. God is no respecter of persons, and should we be? All my life, until I became a Christian, I was meeting with people, good, honest people, better at heart than I, whom I wanted to like, but there was that barrier of caste, "good blood," education, etc., that always prevented. But thank God, all of that is crowded out by the love of Jesus Christ, and all are dear to me who love the Savior, whether high or low, whether they speak and spell correctly or at all, whether they use white table-cloths and napkins or none at all, or dress in style or go barefooted.

I feel so disheartened when I think of my dear relatives, and realize how thoroughly they are imbued with all these false ideas, and fear that the gospel can never find its way into their hearts, but I pray all the time that it may, and that they may learn to value this world properly, and realize that, though their loftiest ambitions may be gratified, it will bring no true, no abiding happiness unless they turn and serve God. I fear that this bores you, but I feel that it is sinful for me to write so often, always of worldly things, and never a word on the subject which should be paramount, eternal salvation.

"I love to tell the story,
It did so much for me,
And that is just the reason
I tell it now to thee.

I love to tell the story
Because I know 'tis true,
It satisfies my longings
As nothing else can do."

I am sorry C. is a Catholic. I would far rather one of my children were an avowed unbeliever, for I would feel that I could convert them then; but it is so hard to uproot the thousands of pernicious errors planted in the heart by that Man of Sin spoken of by Paul, viz: the Roman Catholic church and its five or six hundred progeny. The diverse doctrines of the five or six hundred denominations, or sects as Paul calls them, make more infidels than a thousand Ingersolls would in a thousand years; simply because each sect claims to have found its respective teaching in the word of God; and many honest men and reasonable, reject the Bible without investigation, because they have no respect for a book or its author, which they believe to be the propagator of so many different faiths. It matters not if C. is conscientious. The Hindoo woman is conscientious when she casts her babe into the jaws of the crocodile. Paul was conscientious when he persecuted Christians to the death; but was either right? I think you will say no. I might to-day start to the town of B. from here and travel a road which I firmly and conscientiously believed to be the right road, but which is not, and I would never reach there, would I? So you see conscience is merely a creature of education, and no one's conscience is right or a safe guide, unless it accords with or is educated according to the law of God, His word. We read not a word of the Roman Catholic church, or any other, in the Bible, but the church of God, the body of Christ, of which He is head: therefore to belong to any other, is to belong to some sect unknown to Christ or His Apostles.

Now, mother, I hope you will read this kindly and think calmly of every word I have written. Do not get angry and call me conceited. On the contrary, I feel my unworthiness to be called a child of God, none more deeply than I; but my assurance that I am, comes from knowledge. I know that I have done everything that God has commanded me to do in order to become a child of His. I have believed on the Lord Jesus Christ with all my heart, repented of my sins, confessed my Savior before men, and been baptized for the remission or pardon of my past sins, all of which has made me a child of God, joint heir with Christ. We can do no less and become children of God. This is all so plain and I do wish you could forget worldly things long enough to investigate the plan of salvation. Surely if you had ever understood it, as I know I do, you would have shown it to me; for it is with a sad heart that I say, that never did my mother say one word to direct me in the way of eternal life. My morals and principles were looked after, but never once did you point me to that Savior that "bled and died for me." If one day passes without my talking to my children of this important theme, I feel that I have been derelict in my duty. Oh, that people would take the Bible and search for themselves and find the only true and living way, and pay no heed to "seducing spirits" and false teachers that abound in this world. People pay preachers to do their reading and searching for them, and when they point them to the wrong road, they go blindly into it, stumbling along, and refuse to turn from it, because the preacher said it was right.

I hope you will write me that you did not become offended at this. You seem to think that I am reflecting on my father when I talk of these things; but I do not mean to. I have the deepest, tenderest love for my father's memory, and will never forget his religious instructions, and how we used to sing together the sweet songs of Zion; but did I think he was lost, it would not affect him if he were not; and were I firmly to believe him saved, it would not change his condition were he not saved. Your nor my belief either can possibly affect him. So if you were ever to become convinced that Methodist doctrine is wrong, you should not love your husband better than your Savior, and prove it by clinging to his faith instead of your Savior. The Savior says, if any man or woman loveth father or mother, son or daughter, husband or wife more than Him, he or she is not worthy of Him. Which simply means, if we let earthly ties or relations stand in the way of our obedience to our Savior's commandments, we are not worthy to be called his disciples. Now, may the peace of God which passeth all understanding, enter your heart through the gospel, and abide with you always, in the prayer of your loving daughter. B.

Bro. McGary:

Please send the F. F. to Mrs. M. M. Barkley, Gleckler, Lavacca county, Texas, until September, also to Miss Mattie Mayes, Schulenburg, Fayette county, Texas.

Closed our meeting last night, with nine confessions and baptism. Bro. R. L. McMurrey aiding in the work. On with the F. F. In the field, J. W. STRODE.

Be cheerful, contented and light-hearted. Always remember that there are others who have troubles greater than yours. In the family circle show the sunny side of your nature. Don't go around complaining, miserable and unhappy. It is too much like the uncomfortable custom of the ancient Egyptians, who never gave a feast without a skeleton in full view, that they might not forget their mortality. Selected.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, JULY 15, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to McGary & Hansbrough, or to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to McGary & Hansbrough.

Brethren send in your clubs for the F. F. Now is the time. Send small ones and send often.

T. H. Gillespie still occupies the editorial chair, and is trying to give satisfaction during the absence of the editor.

A letter from brother McGary, at Fort McKavett, says he is much pleased with that country. It is the finest country in Texas.

Bro. J. W. Jackson has kindly furnished us a report of the Grubbs-Glass debate at Peoria, which will be found on first page.

The Zeke Jackson article is still missing, and we fear the author is not aware of the anxiety of the readers of the F. F. to see it.

If subscribers to the F. F. do not receive their paper twice a month, they will please write us word on a postal card, and let us know it.

We will send the F. F. for four months, and give the Oatman-McGary discussion, for 50 cents; or five names for two dollars—commence at any time.

We have had very pleasant visits from brother and sister J. E. Rainey, of Manor; brother J. M. McAnally, of Smithwick Mills, and brother Green Moore, of Blanco.

We had a report of brother A. J. McCarty's meetings in Polk and Walker counties, but unfortunately lost it. Would be glad if brother McCarty will rewrite it and send it to us again.

We are sorry that the Oatman-McGary discussion has so many occasions for delay in its appearance in pamphlet form, but we trust those who have subscribed for it will be kind enough to wait patiently until it is published. No more time will be taken than can be possibly helped to put it through.

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER.

We will send the F. F. to any address till the first of January, 1888, for twenty-five cents on trial, or five copies till then for one dollar. This is a splendid opportunity for the friends of the F. F. to send in the names of some of their friends in different counties, or in different states, in order to give them a chance to read and learn that there is, published by Christians, one sound paper that boldly contends for the faith once delivered to the saints, one that will not compromise with any error in any manner, shape or form.

ERRATA:—In last issue (July 1), sixth page, second column, part of a quotation from I. Cor. iii: 18-23 was left out. It should read, "or things to come, all are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's." Also, on same page, fourth column, twenty lines from the bottom, the word "prescribe" should read prescribe.

Bro. E. Hansbrough will begin a protracted meeting at Smithwick Mills, Burnett county, on Saturday night before the third Lord's day in this month (July). Will be glad for every one to attend that possibly can.

Bro. Burnett says, that he does not believe there is a scribe with this new reformation who can give an intelligent definition of the church. Well, now this is quite complimentary to the "new reformation." About the newest thing we have heard calling itself "the reformation" is that which is sometimes called "our plea," which reforms people by "shaking them well before taking." Now it would be right difficult for these "scribes" to give an "intelligent definition of the church," in harmony with their teaching. About the way they would define it, would be: Methodism-Baptistism-Presbyterianism-Greek-Catholicism-Christadelphianism-Mormonism-Episcopalianism-Dunkardism-tyon-ly-ness, well-shaken-before-taken-together, Humpty-dumpty sat on a wall, Humpty-dumpty had a great fall, All the king's horses, and all the king's men, Couldn't put Humpty-dumpty back again without establishing Baptist succession. And this seems to be Burnett's profession.

LET THE TRUTH BE KNOWN.

To strive wilfully to create a false impression is not only unchristian in spirit and very sinful in God's sight, but it is unmanly, cowardly, low and disgraceful in its whole tendency. When brother T. R. Burnett tries to create the impression on his readers, that the FIRM FOUNDATION had cut him off from its exchange list, and is afraid to let its readers see the best he can say in substantiation of the dogma of a human plea, he is not only trying to misrepresent, but is doing it wilfully. Such journalism as that, under the name, "Christian," is open mockery, and it cannot succeed with God-fearing and truth-loving people.

The FIRM FOUNDATION has not seen proper to publish all the chaffy prattle that he has delivered himself of in his headlong flights away from the issue involved in the question. But we have repeatedly proposed to him, to have a full and free discussion of this question, agreeing to publish every word he might write on the question, if he would publish our replies. But he dodges the issue, refusing to affirm in a clear proposition, what he claims that the Scriptures authorize, and what he practices as under that authority; and what we deny.

We here repeat that challenge to him, and with the fear of God before our eyes, and the love of truth in our heart, and the word of God as our standard and guide, promise to be governed by the Spirit of Christ in our replies to him. But he will not do it. He fears to come to close quarters on this question but insists that we shall divide time with him in his unrestricted romp over irrelevant grounds.

We write this that his readers may know what estimate to place upon his reckless statements about the FIRM FOUNDATION. They may now know who is afraid, and who is the time-serving braggart who must be actuated by a spirit as destitute of the love of truth as was the one that tempted Mother Eve, and introduced sin into the world.

Now we feel that brother Burnett has acted towards us in such a way that, without some confession of his faults, he is not individually worthy of the consideration the FIRM FOUNDATION proposes to give him; but, for the sake of truth, we are willing to waive this in order that his readers, many of whom are worthy Christians, may see the sandiness of the foundation of his teaching. If his readers can persuade him to accept this and affirm his teaching and practice, he may choose his opponent from among the editorial force of our paper.

"TAKEN IN HIS OWN CRAFTINESS."

Bro. Burnett has been at Rose Hill holding a meeting, and he says of it: "It was a new place where there were few disciples and the ancient gospel had not been preached." Verily, verily, this must be a benighted nook. Does brother Burnett mean to inform us that the death, burial and resurrection of Christ has never been told to these people before he went there? Does he mean that no Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Lutheran, Mormon, Christadelphian or other denominational preachers had ever preached there?—for he holds that all of these preach the gospel. If "the ancient gospel had not been preached there" before, what gospel had been preached? Will he answer this question? No; for he has caught himself in his remarks about Rose Hill, and he will follow the advice of "uncle Peter Pinder"—"remain as quiet as a little mouse" on this point. So sure as he did not mean that the death, burial and resurrection of Christ had not been preached at Rose Hill, that sure has he crossed himself again, and he stands self-convicted of such a course of conduct with God's word as renders him wholly unworthy of the confidence of his brethren, and fully as guilty before God as was Simon Magus when Peter said to him: "Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God."

The only way for brother B. to clear himself of "handling God's word deceitfully" in his pros and cons on what constitutes the gospel, before honest, thoughtful and unbiased readers, is, for him to show that none of the denominations had ever been represented at Rose Hill, and that no one had ever preached the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, at that place, till he went there.

When it suits his purpose, he teaches the gospel, and that the only way to pervert the gospel is to deny these three facts. But now he says "the ancient gospel" had not been preached at Rose Hill till he preached there, knowing full well that the death, burial and resurrection of Christ had often been told to these people. If the death, burial and resurrection of Christ constitutes the gospel, the whole gospel, so that nothing else is the gospel or a part of it, as he teaches when trying to bolster up "our plea for christian union" with immersed sectarians, then, why is it not the gospel, the "ancient gospel," in Rose Hill and everywhere else when his mind is not on picket duty and on the alert to spy out sophistries for that "plea?"

Brethren in Christ, I would not despoil the reputation of any man, if I could, through personal or vain glorious motives, but when a man pushes himself to the front as a teacher of "the truth as it is in Jesus," and in the livery of heaven, willfully and wickedly, as brother Burnett must be doing, when he calls something the gospel merely to carry a point, and then when not guarding that point, repudiates it as not being the "ancient gospel," I ask, is it not the duty of him who loves the truth and conceives it his duty to contend for that truth, to expose such men? He is caught in his own snare, where he will stick fast till he acts the part of a Christian, by "confessing his faults to his brethren," and pleads for forgiveness at the bar of the God he has thus insulted.

"The wicked stick fast in the pit
That they themselves prepared;
And in the net that they did set
Their own feet fast are snared."

None but those who are blinded by the wicked, partisan spirit will fail to see brother Burnett's wilful sinfulness in this matter; and if they do not reprove him and demand his confession of it, they are as wicked as he has proved himself to be. It matters not what they may think constitutes true gospel. Bro. Burnett has been clearly shown, that in his heart, when it is not fanned into a partisan flame by the wicked spirit of contention for a human doctrine, he does not regard that the gospel which this wicked spirit demands him to recognize when on duty for it.

Will he act the part of a Christian, or will he stiffen his neck against the truth, and as evil men always do, "wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived"? Surely perilous times are upon us; for we see so many men lovers of themselves, covetous, boasters, false accusers, etc. The Spirit spoke expressly and said, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of demons. Speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron. When a man can, with so much apparent earnestness, teach that a certain thing is gospel, and then so soon and so complacently deny it, as brother B. has, we are bound to conclude that his conscience has been touched with a hot iron.

A. MCG.

Dear Bro. McGary:

On the fifth Lord's day in May, two preachers entered the town of Blum. One of them had an appointment for Lord's day and night. Preached at 11 a. m., but when he began to announce that brother F. would preach that night, one of the elders said there would be a prohibition speech and there could be no preaching. The loaf was broken at 11 a. m. One of the preachers asked why we could not have church meeting at 3 p. m., but soon learned the reason. At 3 p. m. the bell rang out over the town. Preacher and wife sallied forth to go where the merry bell was calling. Most of the brethren and sisters were there. All had a far-away look in their eyes. One was writing. The preacher was puzzled; but alas! he was soon informed by the elder that it was a temperance meeting: but will take your petition, please. No! no! we already belong to a grand temperance institution—the church of God.

The town was gathered that night to hear the speech, except said preacher and a few others, who cared not to hear the political spouter; the other preacher having gone home. Now shame on such brethren.

This is not the case only at Blum, but in many other places the church has left her own worship to bow at another shrine. We must have our temperance societies, prohibition clubs, farmers' alliance, and hundreds of others, as unscriptural as the horse race. But we are told that the societies are a good thing; but is not the church better? Yes, the grandest and noblest institution ever organized. It has God for its author and Jesus Christ for its head; it was spoken of by prophets for thousands of years before it existed, and by the wisest men that ever lived. Ministered by the Holy Spirit and band of heavenly beings. In it we have benevolence, temperance and mutual aid portrayed in living colors. Yes, everything necessary to make us perfect in every good work. Any society gotten up to supply any one principle in the church of God, blinds the minds of the people, who cannot see the light of the Christian shining, but that of a political partisan or of a worldly institution.

Now, these brethren, by their actions, said to these preachers: although you have come with a message of salvation to this people, and the Lord may have many children in this town, to-night we will hear Caesar. We wear the badge of several societies, therefore, stand back. Yes: some say we must moralize the world through the societies, and then bring them to Christ. A more baseless figment cannot be found in the long catalogue of error advocated in our time. If a reformation does not occur along here, we never will convert the world. We are not adding as many to the Lord as we did some years ago, for this very reason. Then our talk was on Christ and salvation; but now, O! shame, where is thy blush. Look at the glorified list of morals in the laws of the kingdom of heaven, and dare to dispute the wisdom of God, and then cease to commune with worldly institutions. Progression! away with it.

In Hill and adjoining counties we have talent—a Jackson, a Richardson, a Grubbs—but few are added to the Lord. Why? Societies is one cause. Hear the Master: "Ye cannot serve two masters at once. Ye will hate one and love the other." And the great Apostle, (II. Cor. vi: 14-18): "Be NOT unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness and what communion hath light with darkness, and what concord hath Christ with Bellal? or what hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of the Lord with idols? for ye are the temple of God; as God hath said: I will dwell in them and walk in them, and I will be their God and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean things, and I will receive you, and I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." S. N. THOMAS.

Dear Bro. McGary:

To let the readers of the F. F. know that the Lord has a people in this place, I pen you these lines. I mean a people after the apostolic order. We read nothing but the FIRM FOUNDATION, the Christian Messenger, the Gospel Advocate, and the New Testament, hence apostolic. And just here, let me say, with the rest of my congregation, that we very much regret to see the only papers which advocate the primitive order of things, filled, from time to time, with wranglings over matters about which there has been no dispute among our brethren since the beginning of this restoration, to-wit: that an intelligent understanding of the gospel of Christ is necessary to salvation: authority for which, see Matt. 28: 19; Mark 16: 15; Acts 8: 1-4.

Now, if you will permit a word of comment on the above Scriptures, I will ask, first, if an understanding of the gospel is not necessary, why would it be necessary to teach the nations, or preach the gospel to every creature, or go everywhere preaching the word? (the gospel). In the second place, as a result of understanding the thing preached, (the gospel), faith is produced in the sinner's heart, (mind), as is clearly shown by abundance of testimony, not necessary here to mention. This faith leading to a reformation of life which prepares us for the association of the Lord's people, "the good confession" being made in its proper order, commits us to Christ's cause.

And baptism, the great test of our faith, (which is for the remission of sins) brings us to the enjoyment of gospel blessings. This route traveled by the sinner, will as certainly bring him into the kingdom of the Lord as the Bible is true. About this there can be no doubt. If, then, this is undisputed ground, why cannot our scribes cease to trouble the waters?

Kickers may kick until doomsday, but they will never kick a link out of this chain. Mark my words. Moreover, the "shaking process," which brings men in amongst us half taught, (or taught wrong, which is worse,) has been both the mother and the grandmother of all the troubles known to the people of God; and now the disputes among our representative men will enable the enemies of God to very truthfully say of us, "every one hath a doctrine."

Now, dear brethren, is there no way to peace? "A house divided against itself cannot stand." Better for us that we were known as different people, than for things to exist as they are. In fact they can not so exist very long.

I must close. Enclosed find money and address for the F. F. Receipt same, and oblige, your brother in hope of eternal life,

W. E. HAWKINS.

Coleman, Texas.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Please find enclosed two dollars, for which you will please send the F. F. to brother J. W. Blaylock and myself. Bro. B. has been taking the F. F. for some time, and one dollar of this is to pay for his subscription for 1887. You will please put my name on your subscription list for good, and I am sure I can find one dollar each year to pay for as good a paper as the F. F. My wife and I have been members of the one body for nearly two years, and we had looked in vain for a paper published by our brethren that "earnestly contended for the faith once delivered to the saints," until a copy of the F. F. was handed us by brother R. H. Pectol; and we were surprised not to find "Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound," or "Warner's Safe Cure," advertised in its columns, and hope we may never see such things in its columns.

We have read every issue for the past six months, and find but one objection, viz: When contending with the sects, for the true faith, through the columns of the F. F. you often address them (the sects,) as brethren. Now, there is one of two things certain, you act the hypocrite and lie to them, or else they are "heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ," if we are. (Rom. viii: 17). And I have noticed several of our brethren when meeting a Baptist or Methodist, in goodly apparel, they, (our brother), will grasp said Baptist or Methodist by the hand, and, lo and behold, I hear them call them brother so and so; when a poor brother in Christ is standing near, in vile raiment, and a nod of the head is the extent of the greeting. "My brethren have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons."—James ii: 1.

Now, I hope all who read this will stop calling the sects brother or sister, and make them think, by lying to them, that they occupy a position that they cannot attain to only through our Lord Jesus Christ. Brethren, leave them down on their proper level until they have come into the family of God by virtue of the new birth, and by obeying the "gospel of Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes."

In conclusion; I will say, long live the F. F., and may it receive a hearty support from those who love the truth as contended for through the columns of the F. F.

C. W. LITTLEFIELD.

THE DIFFERENCE.

The difference between sectarians and Christians is this, and cannot be too often repeated: Sectarians have ideas, and they search the Scriptures to sustain these ideas, even to the perversion of the word of truth. While Christians search the Scriptures to form their ideas, even to the surrender of the world and everything in it. Every one must examine himself by the word of God, and not bend the word of God to justify anything. Draw near to God, as revealed in his word, and He will draw near unto us as we obey his will. Obedience to God's will separates us from our sins, and from the world; while holding to our ideas and opinions, and twisting the word of God to sustain those ideas, separate us from God and cover us up in the vortex of foolishness. The Christians' idea of God, and of God's will, is formed from the word of God as revealed, while the sectarians' idea of God and God's will, is formed from the traditions of men, over and above that which is written. Is it possible to know more of God than He has revealed of Himself in His word? If so, whence comes this knowledge? If we have not the whole truth, we want it; it belongs to the Christians, it is theirs by inheritance; but we will not accept for the truth what is not the truth. We once had ideas before we obeyed the gospel of Christ, that we thought were incontrovertible and we tried to sustain them by the Bible, to the best of our ability, but we were converted to the word of God and were unable to sustain those opinions, hence we turned away from every idea or opinion we ever held when we obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine once delivered to the saints. T. H. G.

FORMS.

There is an idea extant that all the blessings and privileges of the kingdom of God can be received and enjoyed without obedience to the forms of religion. This popular doctrine is thus expressed: "It makes no difference about the form of religion just so we have the substance." This implies that you can receive the blessings without a form, or that you can receive these blessings through different forms.

1. As to receiving a blessing or having a substance without a form. It is taught us by the word of God that it was necessary for Christ to die in order to the salvation of man. "Thus it is written and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."—Luke xxiv: 46-47. He did not thus suffer and rise again without taking the form of man. "For as much then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same, that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil."—Heb. ii: 14. "But made himself of no reputation and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross."—Phil. ii: 7-8. In view of these scriptures, and many others, we learn that the blessings of salvation depended upon the death and resurrection of Jesus; and that in order to these, it was necessary that he take the form of man; hence the form was necessary to salvation.

God is the author of Nature. There is life in Nature; but this life is manifested in forms. There may be form without life, but can be no manifestation of life without form. Just so in the kingdom of God. Life is of God, and this life was manifested to the world in form, that is, in Jesus, and what he did. "For the life was manifested and we have seen it, and bear witness and show unto you that eternal life which was with the Father and was manifested unto us."—I. John i: 2. How could eternal life be shown in the person of Jesus without first bringing him under the power of death? He died and was buried and arose from the dead, thus manifesting to the world a state of life and immortality beyond the grave.

Now if it was necessary to have forms in order to procure and manifest salvation and eternal life to the world, is it not equally necessary to have forms whereby men may secure and enjoy these blessings? It is just as rational and logical to argue that salvation could have been procured for us without form, as to argue that man may receive and enjoy it without form. But to so argue would be to contradict the word of God, and I am forced to the conclusion that we cannot receive and enjoy the blessings of God without having some form through which they are bestowed.

2. The different denominations, in order to justify their existence as separate religious bodies and branch churches of Christ, tell us further that form, in which a blessing is bestowed, is a matter of indifference; they profess to receive and enjoy God's blessings through many different forms. These different forms through which the grace of God is bestowed upon man, constitute the creed of the church. Each party claims that its creed contains the essential and fundamental doctrines of christianity, and they seek to enforce or establish the authority of their creeds by the word of God. They forget that Jesus says, the seed of the kingdom is the word of God.—Luke viii: 11. Not some form nearly like the word of God—but the word of God, the gospel of Christ itself. Why contend then for different forms? Did Jesus give us various forms of the gospel? Let us hear some of his apostles: "Beloved when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that you should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints."—Jude iii. Now, my friends, if your form of doctrine or creed is the same as "the faith," you should contend for it; but if it differs in the least particular from "the faith" you should abandon it. In order, therefore, that you commit no error in contending for something not authorized by the Lord Jesus, you should abandon the creed formulated by men, and take the word of God—and it alone as your rule of faith and practice. If "the faith" was delivered to the saints, there must have been a time and place when and where they received it, and as it was something delivered and received, it must have been clothed in form.

Paul exhorts Timothy to "hold fast the form of sound words which thou hast heard of me in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus."—II. Tim. i: 3. Paul certainly does not refer to something different from "the faith;" for he expressly declares that "he received grace and apostleship for obedience to the faith among all nations," Rom. i: 5; and that he preached the faith which he once destroyed, Gal. i: 23; and that if man or angel preached any other gospel than that he preached, let him be accursed, Gal. i: 8-9. So then the faith—the gospel of Christ, the form of sound words, are all one and the same, and something we must earnestly contend for. Furthermore, Paul says to the Romans, vi: 17: "But God be thanked though ye were the servants of sin, yet ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you." Doctrine is teaching something taught; words are necessary to teaching; hence the doctrine taught the Romans was conveyed in sound words taught by the Holy Spirit, and they (the Romans) obeyed from the heart that form of sound words. To demonstrate further the importance of this form of doctrine, Paul tells us that these Romans were made free from sin when they obeyed from the heart: "Being then made free from sin ye became the servants of righteousness."—Rom. vi: 18. Again he says, "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."—Rom. viii: 1. It follows conclusively from these scriptures that the faith was delivered in the form of sound words; that this form of doctrine is to be preached and obeyed in order to freedom from sin; and that this form of doctrine was the law of the Spirit of life by which we are made free from sin. When and where was this law given? It was not given while the law of Moses was in force. "But before faith came we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed."—Gal. iii: 23. While under the law, the faith or the gospel was not revealed or made known. But when that law was fulfilled and taken out of the way (see Eph. ii: 14-15, et al) a place was found for the revelation of a new law; a life-giving law, and one which should be communicated to the world by the Holy Spirit.

By reference to Luke xxiv: 46-47, already quoted above, we see that it was necessary for Christ to die and rise again from the dead in order that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations. Freedom from sin, or remission, is through the law of the Spirit of life, hence this law of the Spirit of life was not revealed before the death and resurrection of Christ. Jesus also said that this preaching should begin at Jerusalem. There could be no preaching without preachers, hence we have the Apostles. "Ye have not chosen me but I have chosen you and ordained you that you should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain."—John xv: 16. "Whosoever sins ye remit they are remitted unto them, and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained."—John xx: 23. These men were selected as the parties to whom the law of the Spirit was to be revealed, and through whom the gospel should be made known to the world. In obedience then to the Lord they remained in the city of Jerusalem (Luke xxiv: 49) in order to receive power from on high, Acts i: 8. This power they received through the Holy Spirit which guided them into all truth, showed them things to come, and brought to their remembrance what Jesus had taught them.—John xvi: 7-18. As recorded in Acts ii, these Apostles received the Holy Spirit. Here then is the time, when and where the faith is revealed or made known to the saints. Paul says, "Now we have received not the Spirit of the world but the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God;

which things we also speak not in words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Spirit teacheth, comparing spiritual things with spiritual."—I Cor. ii: 11-13.

How are we to ascertain the form of those sound words delivered by these Apostles? Evidently by taking the divine record. It seems to my mind conclusive that the Apostles, guided by the Holy Spirit, could make no mistakes in the doctrine taught; that they would teach no unnecessary duties, but that they would be clear and explicit as to the means by which life and salvation might be received and enjoyed. Hence I have no hesitancy in taking the form of sound words taught by them. We find by examination that they preached:

1. That Jesus, who was crucified, was raised from the dead, exalted to God's right hand and made both Lord and Christ.—Acts ii: 36. They preached the things concerning the kingdom and the name of Jesus Christ.—Acts viii: 12. They preached remission of sins in the name of Jesus.—Acts x: 43, and vii: 38.

2. They preached that men should believe in Jesus: "Let all the house of Israel know assuredly that God hath made that same Jesus whom you crucified both Lord and Christ."—Acts ii: 36. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved and thy house."—Acts xvi: 31.

3. They preached repentance in his name.—Acts ii: 38, and iii: 19.

4. They preached the confession with the mouth of the Lord Jesus.—Acts viii: 37; Rom. x: 8-10; Phil. ii: 10-12.

5. They preached baptism in the name of the Lord Jesus for the remission of sins.—Acts ii: 38, x: 43-48 and xxii: 16.

Those who obeyed from the heart this form of doctrine were added to the Lord, and continued steadfastly in the Apostles' doctrine.

Life—spiritual life—is through the name of Jesus.—John xx: 30-31. This life is given to us through words: "Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life."—Acts v: 20. These are the sound words to which we must hold fast, and come from the life-giving Spirit to make us free from sin. Will you heed them? or will you still cling to the forms of doctrine made by men? If you want salvation you must accept it just as God is pleased to bestow it, and that is through your obedience to the faith.

CALLING ON THE NAME OF THE LORD.

The Apostle Paul, writing to the Roman brethren, says: "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."—Rom. x: 13. I ask, is it not important that we decide from the teaching of the Bible what it is to call on the name of the Lord? for the Apostle teaches in the above quotation that it is necessary to do it, in order to be saved. The prophet Joel uses the same language, speaking as he was guided by the Holy Spirit, in connection with his language describing the incidents that occurred on the day of Pentecost, Joel II: 32; and the Apostle Peter quotes language to show that connected with...

Matt. xxviii: 18-19. Persons, when taught and baptized according to the above commission, are brought into...

Father to hold us guiltless? I might quote many other passages showing conclusively that the word name...

or by whose authority are they being governed? And does submission to that authority bring them to... 1901.

AUSTIN, TEXAS,

SIR:

We herewith enclose you some printed matter concerning Mr. Burlington's great discovery, called the Secret of Health and Longevity. It is fairly sweeping this country and has effected more with the people than any thing that has been heard of. Its praise is in the mouth of thousands in Texas, yet it was never offered to the public till last September. When it once gets a start in a neighborhood, it requires no effort to get the people to try it, for they all want it.

Mr. Burlington has surely touched the secret spring of health. We want a wide-awake agent in every section where one has not been appointed. Such a man or woman can easily make from $150.00 to $200.00 per month. The secret folder revealing the treatment is sold for $3.00, and no agent is allowed to sell it for more or less. We allow 50 per cent commission to agents, and as every agent must know the treatment and use it, either himself or family, to be able to fairly and conscientiously represent it to others, we let them have it at 50 per cent discount or $1.50, provided they promise in ordering it to act as agent, and will send us some reference as to their standing in their community. Of course they must sign the pledge just as others, hence we enclose a pledge, the blanks of which must be filled out. When this pledge and $1.50 is received from you, with the promise to act as agent, we will mail you the secret folder and complete agents outfit, without further cost to you, with full instructions as to how to proceed in the work. If it will not suit you to accept the agency, then if you will be kind enough to hand this and enclosed matter to some trustworthy man or woman whom you think would take the agency, whom you could recommend, we will, for that kindness send you the folder for $2.00, if you desire it, and you will want it so soon as some of your neighbors try it. In fact no one who values health can afford to do without it, especially if he has children.

But, of course, if you should not want the agency, but should kindly hand this to some one whom you think would make a good agent and accept, for this kindness, our offer of the folder for $2.00 we would expect you to make the matter confidential and not mention it to others, as the regular price is $3.00, and it might interfere with the agents success somewhat, if it were known that you got it for less than the regular price.

Hoping to hear from you soon, we are

Yours Respectfully,

A. McGARY, Gen'l Agt.

There is an idea extant that all the blessings and privileges of the kingdom of God can be received and enjoyed without obedience to the forms of religion. This doctrine is thus made no part of religion.

cannot receive and enjoy the blessings of God without having some form through which they are bestowed.

which things we also speak not in words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Spirit teacheth, comparing spiritual things with Spiritual.—I Cor. ii: 11-13.

How are we to ascertain the form delivered by God? It seems to be that the Apostles, by the Holy Spirit, as in the doctrine would teach but that they would collect as to the form and salvation and enjoyed. Hence in taking words taught in examination

AUSTIN, TEXAS,

SIR:

We herewith enclose you some printed matter concerning Mr. Burlington's great discovery, called the Secret of Health and Longevity. It is fairly sweeping this country and has effected more with the people than any thing that has been heard of. Its praise is in the mouth of thousands in Texas, yet it was never offered to the public till last September. When it once gets a start in a neighborhood, it requires no effort to get the people to try it, for they all want it.

Mr. Burlington has surely touched the secret spring of health. We want a wide-awake agent in every section where one has not been appointed. Such a man or woman can easily make from $150.00 to $200.00 per month. The secret folder revealing the treatment is sold for $3.00, and no agent is allowed to sell it for more or less. We allow 50 per cent commission to agents, and as every agent must know the treatment and use it, either himself or family, to be able to fairly and conscientiously represent it to others, we let them have it at 50 per cent discount or $1.50, provided they promise in ordering it to act as agent, and will send us some reference as to their standing in their community. Of course they must sign the pledge just as others, hence we enclose a pledge, the blanks of which must be filled out. When this pledge and $1.50 is received from you, with the promise to act as agent, we will mail you the secret folder and complete agents outfit, without further cost to you, with full instructions as to how to proceed in the work. If it will not suit you to accept the agency, then if you will be kind enough to hand this and enclosed matter to some trustworthy man or woman whom you think would take the agency, whom you could recommend, we will, for that kindness send you the folder for $2.00, if you desire it, and you will want it so soon as some of your neighbors try it. In fact no one who values health can afford to do without it, especially if he has children.

But, of course, if you should not want the agency, but should kindly hand this to some one whom you think would make a good agent and accept, for this kindness, our offer of the folder for $2.00 we would expect you to make the matter confidential and not mention it to others, as the regular price is $3.00, and it might interfere with the agent's success somewhat, if it were known that you got it for less than the regular price.

Hoping to hear from you soon, we are riting to the name of the Lord Jesus. I Cor. i: 12.

Guided by the Holy Spirit, in connection with his language describing the incidents that occurred on the day of Pentecost, Joel II: 32; and the Apostle Peter quotes his language to show that salvation is connected with calling on the name of the Lord, Acts II: 21.

Again I ask, how do people call on the name of the Lord? Is it by praying to Him? If so, then the Savior and the prophet and the apostles contradict each other; for the Savior, speaking of prayer says: "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, or be saved; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven."—Mat. VII: 21; while the prophet and apostles say, that whosoever calls on the name of the Lord shall be saved. So we see they contradict each other, if calling on the name of the Lord means prayer.

We learn that Abraham "built an altar unto the Lord, and called on the name of the Lord."—Gen. XII: 8. It was not necessary that he should build an altar, in order to call on the name of the Lord, if prayer constitutes calling on his name; but the altar was necessary that he might offer the sacrifices required by the Lord, and in offering them, he called upon his name, or authority. The Lord, in instructing Moses, says: "An altar of earth shalt thou make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, and thy peace offerings, thy sheep, and thine oxen; in all places where I record my name (or authority) I will come unto thee and I will help thee."—Exodus XX: 24. They were required to build an altar upon which to offer the required sacrifices, and thereby call on the name, or authority, of the Lord.

The Heavenly Father, speaking to Moses, says: "Behold, I send an angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared. Beware of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions: for my name (or my authority) is in him."—Exodus XXIII: 21. Here we find the Heavenly Father placed his name or authority in an angel. The government of the United States places its name or authority in its officials, and what they do, they do in its name, or by its authority.

We will come now to the New Testament, under which we live, and see if the same principle does not obtain under the new that did under the old; but the priesthood being changed, there is of necessity a change of the law that expresses that authority, about which we are talking. The Savior, after he was crucified, buried and risen, and just before he ascended to heaven, said: "All power (or authority) is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them (the taught) into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit."—

Matt. xxviii: 18-19. Persons, when taught and baptized according to the above commission, are brought into a new relation, under the government of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, are translated out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son, and it is all done in the name (by the authority) of Jesus; and Paul says: "Because he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross, God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name."—Phill. II: 8-9. Now we notice that the name spoken of here was given after he humbled himself, and because he became obedient to the death of the cross, showing that it does not refer to the words Jesus, or Christ, or Savior, but to the authority of which he spoke when he gave the commission.

John says: "Many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book: but these are written that you might believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God, and that believing, you might have life through his name."—Jno XX: 30-31. Now notice, the life comes after we believe in him as the Christ the Son of God, and through his name, or through whatever he requires or authorizes, in order to that life, which is not much comfort to our "three fact" gospel brethren.

Again, Peter, speaking of Christ, says: "This is the stone which was set at naught of you builders, which is become the head of the corner; neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven, given among men whereby we must be saved."—Acts IV: 11-12. Now Peter was not speaking of the words Jesus, or Christ, for the word God has as much salvation in it as Jesus: but he was speaking of the authority of Christ, for no man can approach God or Christ, without submitting to the requirements, or authority of Jesus.

Again, Peter says: "To him (that is Jesus), give all the prophets witness, that through his name, whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins."—Acts X: 43. According to this quotation, all the prophets, speaking as they were guided by the Holy Spirit, testified, that whosoever believeth in Jesus should receive remission of sins through his name, and not through the name of uninspired men.

Once more: Paul, in writing to the Colossian brethren, says: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom . . . and whatsoever you do in word or deed do all in the name (by the authority) of the Lord Jesus."—Col. III: 16-17. Now, brethren, a faithful adherence to the above admonition of the Apostle would do away with all of our missionary societies, Bible colleges, instrumental music in worship, stipulated salaried pastors, church fairs, festivals, etc., and if we will not give heed to said admonition can we expect our heavenly Father to hold us guiltless? I might quote many other passages showing conclusively that the word name generally carries with it the idea of authority, but I think it unnecessary.

Peter, on the day of Pentecost, quoting from the prophet Joel, said: "And it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved."—Acts II: 21. He then preached the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, the "three facts," to a vast concourse of people, three thousand heard in the sense of believing, were pricked in their heart, (no good news yet, for good news never pricks any one's heart), they said to Peter and the rest of the brethren: "What shall we do?"—Acts II: 37. They wanted to be saved, and by calling on the name or authority of the Lord, according to their prophet, they would be saved, then, when they asked the question, they wanted to know how to call on the name of the Lord, in order to be saved. Their question was answered by the Holy Spirit: "Repent, and be baptized, every one of you in the name, (by the authority) of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."—Acts II: 38. The Savior had said, a few days before, that "repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."—Luke XXIV: 47.

Now, brethren, when these three thousand did, what the Holy Spirit told them to do, did they not do right? Did they not call on the name of the Lord? And did they not obtain salvation, remission of sins? And was that not what Ananias told Saul to do, when he said: "Arise and be baptized and wash away your sins, calling on the name of the Lord."—Acts XXII: 16. By doing that he would call on the authority of the Lord and obtain the remission of his sins, which he so much desired. It was not praying to the Lord, as brother Hodgen says, for Paul had been praying for three days, and no inspired man ever told sinners to do what they had already done, in order to be saved, which, I have no doubt, brother Hodgen has preached many times, have you not, brother Hodgen? Then why say that Saul was told to pray to the Lord when being baptized?

But now, teachers, and their name is legion, come along and befuddle the minds of the people, by telling them that they must be regenerated by some mysterious, indescribable, direct operation of the Holy Ghost on their hearts, they must repent, then believe, and as soon as they exercise saving faith, they are saved, and that by faith alone, (what a muddle), and then they must be baptized because they are saved and to get into some sectarian society, founded, not on the wisdom, but the foolishness of this world. Now, brethren, when people are led to believe and practice as above described, in whose name, or by whose authority are they being governed? And does submission to that authority bring them to salvation, the remission of sins, to the church of Christ? If so, then let us bid them Godspeed, for they are converting more by their human contrivances than the friends of Christ are by adhering to the gospel, which is God's power unto salvation. Is it not evident that to call on the name of the Lord is to do whatever he requires or authorizes in order to salvation?

E. HANSBROUGH.

REPLY TO BRO. TREAT.

In the Octographic Review of June 10th, page 4, columns one and two, is an article from brother Treat, headed "Remarks" on a question asked by D. M. Sprague, in which he says: "That baptism in order to remission of sins is a part of the doctrine of Christ, is a fact beyond dispute among the readers of the Review. But the proposition that every man has to clearly understand this fact in order to be saved, is not supported by any positive statement of Scripture."

Neither is there a positive statement of Scripture that a man must understand what is usually called the mode, (more properly, the action), of baptism. Does it follow, therefore, that it is not necessary to understand what constitutes the action of baptism, in order to acceptable obedience? Or will sprinkling or pouring a little water on the subject do just as well, provided he does not understand it? If so, then ignorance is bliss. But you may say that the action of baptism is so clearly taught that we cannot be mistaken in reference to what it is, if we will believe what the Bible says. That is true, and it is equally true in reference to the design of it. But suppose we don't believe what the Bible says about the action, and have a little water sprinkled or poured upon us, do we obey the Lord? You say, no. Well, then, suppose we don't believe what the Lord says about the design, and we are dipped because our sins are remitted, and to get into some sectarian organization, is that obeying the Lord? Do you say, yes? If so, then let us throw the Bible away; it does not mean what it says.

Bro. Treat, it is the design of baptism, connected with its necessary prerequisites, that gives it any worth. Separate that from it, and it is simply a meaningless dipping; and unless submitted to understandingly, it is to the individual submitting to it, a meaningless rite.

You say the inferential reasonings by which it is sought to establish it, (the necessity of understanding its design), were presented fifty years ago, and the pioneers considered them fully in the light of Acts 2: 38, and all that could be said on the subject. Now, brother Treat, what would you think of a Pedobaptist who would say that all that could be said about the proper jects and action of baptism had been examined into by the Wesleys, Adam Clark, and other pioneers of Pede-baptism a hundred years ago, thereby conveying the idea that it is useless to examine into the subject any further? Would you not think he might be mistaken? You say that the brethren almost unanimously agreed with Mr. Campbell's marriage illustration. Suppose they did; was Mr. Campbell led or guided by the Holy Spirit in using that illustration? If so, his application of it was all right; if not, he, like Wesley and Clark, may have been mistaken.

Bro. Treat, why do you appeal to the pioneers of this reformation as authority in the settlement of this or any other question, instead of the inspired octographic writers of the New Testament, as the name of your paper indicates you would do? I have the same right to appeal to brother Campbell in the settlement of this matter that you have, and when I do so, I find that he says, baptism submitted to without understanding its design is like a blasted nut, the hull is there, but the kernel, that which gives it worth, is lacking.

You say further: "Said illustration was a Scriptural one, since the union of a believer with Christ is represented in the New Testament as a marriage." That is true, but were there not conditions to be complied with in that marriage ceremony? And does not Paul say, that it is consummated or completed in the act of baptism, when he says: "If we have been planted (or united) in the likeness of his death, we shall be in the likeness of his resurrection?"—Rom. vi: 5. And does he not further say, speaking of the same marriage ceremony: "But God be thanked that you were servants of sin; but you have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you, being then made free from sin, you became the servants of righteousness?"—Rom. vi: 17-18. When were these Roman brethren married to Christ? When they were made free from sin. When were they made free from sin? When they obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine. Could they obey from the heart that form of doctrine without understanding it? No. Now, you further say, "Mr. Campbell's idea was that a baptized believer, who trusted in Christ, received all the legal blessings graciously promised through the ordinance, although he did not fully understand its design when he submitted thereto." The first part of that sentence is correct. Those who trust in Christ do receive the blessings connected with the ordinance; but who is it that trusts in Christ? Those that believe and obey his word, (not the word of men.) What does his word say? "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved.—Mark xvi: 16. Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name (by the authority) of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins.—Acts ii: 38. Arise and be baptized and wash away your sins, calling on the name (authority) of the Lord."—Acts xxii: 16. And he further says: "When any one heareth the word of the kingdom and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart.—Matt. 13: 19. But he that received seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word and understandeth it."—Matt. xiii: 23. Now, brother Treat, are not the above quotations from Mark and Acts a part of the word of the kingdom, and, according to the language of the Saviour in Matthew, is it not necessary to understand them in order to obedience? You say that, if it be necessary to understand the design of baptism, it would also be necessary to understand the designs of faith and repentance. Has the Lord told us what faith and repentance are for? If He has, then we ought to understand it; if He has not, then it is not necessary to understand it. You further say: "Our matured conviction is, that he is a christian who does what Christ has commanded and because he commanded it." I believe that with all my heart. Christ commands believing penitents to be baptized, (not because of) but for the remission of sins. When they understand they must be baptized because their sins are remitted and act accordingly, they obey from the heart the form of doctrine delivered them by men, and are not made free from sin; for the Saviour says: "In vain do they worship me teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."—Matt. xv: 9. They are blind leaders of the blind, and both will fall into the ditch. (14). You say, "It is not the knowledge of design, but the Spirit of faith, which sanctifies obedience." Peter says: "If any man speak let him speak as the oracles of God."—I. Pet. iv: 11. Will you please give us chapter and verse for that assertion? for if such an idea is taught by the oracles of God I am ignorant of it. If the Lord had told Abraham where to go, he would have understood Him. He obeyed as far as he understood him, and that is as far as any man obeys.

You say: "This doctrine of consequences, although wholly inferential, is not always to be despised." That is true, and I want you to look at one consequence at least resulting from your position. The prophet Daniel says: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom (or church) which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."—Dan'l. ii: 44. You and I agree, I doubt not, that the prophet was speaking of the establishment of the kingdom or church of Christ on the first Pentecost after his ascension to heaven, and that the perpetuity of that kingdom or church is plainly taught in the above prophecy. I have also shown from various quotations from the same infallible book, that it is necessary for persons to understand the design of baptism in order to become citizens or subjects of that kingdom or church.

Now, if you can show from fallible history, or otherwise, that there has been a time since the establishment of his church, that no one understood the design of baptism, then will you establish the fact, that the word of the Lord has failed. A pretty serious consequence, is it not?

Now, brother Treat, will you please answer the following questions:

Is the mode of baptism of more importance in your estimation than the design?

Is it more essential to understand the mode than the design of baptism when both are revealed in the New Testament?

If it is not necessary to understand the design of baptism, why will you spend your time, talent and means debating with sectarians on that subject? Can you not find enough to preach and talk to the people about, that is necessary for them to understand instead of debating about the mode or the design of that non-essential thing, baptism.

Why did not the three thousand on the day of Pentecost, rejoice when they heard the "three facts gospel," the death, burial and resurrection of Christ? And why did they rejoice when they heard in connection with those three facts that they must repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, unless it was because they understood the design of baptism to be for the remission of sins? Acts ii: 37-41.

Peter, in speaking of the salvation of Noah and family, says: "The like figure whereunto baptism doth also now save us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God), or, as brother McGarvey and the Emphatic Diaglott render it, the seeking of a good conscience, (which rendering, I doubt not, you endorse.) I. Pet. iii: 21.

Now, brother Treat, will you please tell us how an individual can seek a good conscience in baptism without understanding its design?

Will you please publish this article in the Octographic Review? If you do not wish to publish it all, please publish the above questions I have asked you, and answer them, and we will publish your replies in the FIRM FOUNDATION.

Your brother in Christ,
E. HANSBROUGH.

Dear Bro. McGary:

Having received several copies of the F. F. I find it as good a paper as I have ever read, and I am under many obligations to you for sending it to me. I handed those copies around to the brethren to read, and I have succeeded in getting several subscribers to your noble paper. I will send you their names and addresses, and will do all for your paper that I can. I think it is just what we need in this country. I am taking the Gospel Advocate also and think it is a good paper.

I am glad to hear from my old Texas friends and brethren, through the F. F., and am glad to know that we have some true and noble Texas brethren who are still contending for the faith once delivered to the saints: Such men as A. McGary, E. Hansbrough, E. W. Dabney, Lipscomb and W. F. Todd. What has become of brother Ed. Dabney? I have not heard from him in some time. Also brother A. C. Hill; I would be glad to hear something from both of them through the columns of the F. F., for I love them for their work's sake. I was baptized by brother Ed. Dabney in 1874, near Mahor, Travis county, in Gillespie creek. I then came to Tennessee in March, 1880, and, finding the neighborhood destitute of any of our preaching brethren, I then went to hard down work and sent for brother W. F. Todd, of East Nashville, to come and preach for us. We built an arbor in the woods, and he preached one discourse, and it rained us out of the woods. We moved to a school-house, had a large audience, but no success. I then sent for brother F. F. Dearing. He preached in a school-house and in tents for us one week, with eight additions. Among those who first accepted the truth and obeyed the gospel, I will mention, was my aged father; he was eighty years old, he came out of the water rejoicing. (He has left us now: has passed over the river to wait till the resurrection morn.) I then sent for brother B. C. Tane, and got permission to preach in the Methodist house; he preached one discourse with one addition, and then we were turned out of doors; out we went to the grove near by and preached four days with six or seven additions. We have now built us a house to worship in, and have been keeping house for the Lord ever since. Our membership is about forty-five, but only about fifteen of us meet regularly every Lord's day to carry out the Apostle's doctrine. We expect brother F. C. Sowell to commence a protracted meeting for us, if the Lord is willing, the third Lord's day in July. I will send you the results of the meeting.

Please send the F. F. to the following names and places for six months, and I will send you the money soon: A. W. Jordan, H. H. Snell, Sister S. E. Haynes, Snell, Rutherford county, Tennessee; I. H. Maxwell, Tenny Boring, Rufus Bethel, Almayville, Tennessee, and to me at Triune, Tennessee. I will send you another list soon. Send sample copies to R. S. Brown, Eagleville, Tennessee, and also to brother Tatum, Allison, Tennessee.

Yours for the truth,
H. T. SNELL,

PREACH THE WORD.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have been reading the F. F. for some time, and the more I read it the better I like it. I certainly think you are right in contending for the truth in a bold way, as it becomes the followers of Christ to speak with all boldness, the things they ought to speak, and be always ready to give a reason of the hope that is within them. Paul said to Timothy: "I charge thee therefore before God and the Lord Jesus Christ who shall judge the quick and the dead at His appearing; preach the word * * * for the time will come when men will not endure sound doctrine." Then it is very important that men teach the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Do all men do this? Let us see. Not long since, I heard a minister preach from the text: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot see the kingdom of heaven."—John 3: 5. Notwithstanding Jesus says in plain, unmistakable language: "Born of water and of the Spirit," this minister that I have mentioned, got up and went on to say: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of heaven—born of the Spirit, not of water, but of the Spirit." Did he preach the "word" as did Jesus? Oh! how can a man who claims to be a follower of Jesus, and pretends to lead souls to Christ, get up and openly dispute the words of the Savior? Is there not an awful sentence awaiting such at the judgment bar of God?

Yes: "If any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life and out of the holy city." Then, brethren, let us gird ourselves with the girdle of truth, wear the breast-plate of righteousness, the shield of faith, the helmet of salvation, the sword of the Spirit; weapons and armors not carnal, but mighty through God, to the pulling down of the strong-holds of satan. The battle is not over. Peace has not been declared. The people and the church have been imposed upon by a whole swarm of creeds, confessions, articles of faith, etc.; and these so-called orthodox denominations, in making their tests of fellowship, have divided and subdivided into numerous hostile fragments, the church of the living God, till to-day she is filled with the babble voice of controversy and strife, instead of singing the sweet Psalm of peace to the nations wrapped in the shroud of darkness and death. These innovations have always been the prolific source of sectism, which we regard as sin.

Unconditional surrender to Christ and his divine authority should be our constant motto, and until such surrender is made upon the part of the sectarian world, we should continue to throw into their camps, hot shots of divine truth. Denominationalism is still deeply rooted, and it remains the greatest obstacle in the way. Then, brethren, we must wage war against it. Let us arm ourselves for the conflict, enlist for the war and die on the field of Christian duty. Let us be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might, be bold in proclaiming the truth, the truth as it is in Jesus. This boldness in pressing the truth manifests its power in making sinners think over their ways, in making them aware of their danger, and often in leading them to the cross of Christ. When a whole church manifests this spirit, many are brought to confess the Savior.

Now, brethren, in conclusion, let us say, continue your good work. Lay up in store for yourselves a firm foundation against the time to come, that you may lay hold on eternal life. In this way only can we hope to secure Christian manhood. Never was there a time when men were more hungry for the word of God. Preach the word, be instant in season, and we may hope to reach the state of Christian manhood, where we may enjoy the full favor of God.

Now if you see fit to publish this do so; if not, cast it into the waste basket. Yours for the truth,

D. H. PETREE.

LETTER TO A YOUNG BROTHER.

My dear brother, and may I not call you my son in the gospel? I know I love you as a son, whether you are my son or not. It was with great pleasure that I received an article from you for publication in the FIRM FOUNDATION, with the sentiments of which article I was very much pleased, and was much gratified with the complimentary manner in which you spoke of the FIRM FOUNDATION. It is the only paper that I know of that contends uncompromisingly for all that the word of the Lord requires and for letting everything alone that it does not require. We contend that we are under the authority and government of the Lord Jesus Christ, the King of kings, and the Lord of lords, and that Christians are not subjects of any other authority.

The Apostle Paul says: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly. In all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in Psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord, and whatever you do in word or deed, do all in the name (by the authority) of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him."—Col. iii: 16-17. Well, why do all "in his name or by his authority?" Because he has all power or authority in heaven and earth, Matt. xxviii: 18; and because he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross, his Father gave him a name, or authority, which is above all names or authorities, Phil. ii: 8-11; and because we have submitted to his government, and become citizens of his kingdom, we are under obligations to do what we do by his authority. Well, says one, are we not to be subject to the powers that be? Yes, we are, because our king tells us to be, and the extent of our submission, and all of our duties to these governments are plainly taught; but there is a great difference between being submissive to these powers and helping to make them. A child is to be submissive to the laws of its parents, but does not help make them, unless things are mightily out of joint, which they are frequently now.

Paul also says: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."—II. Tim. iii: 16-17. Peter also says: "His divine power (which is his gospel) has given unto us all things that pertain to life and godliness."—II. Peter i: 3. Now is it true that the Scriptures furnish Christians to all good works, to all things that pertain to life and godliness? We say, yes; then, if we engage in works that we cannot find in the Scriptures, are they good works? Why, if Paul and Peter tell the truth, they are not, then, if they are not good works, are they not bad works? Most assuredly they are, for there are but two kinds; that being so, where do the missionary societies that many of our brethren engage in stand? With bad works. Bro. McGarvey who does and has worked through them for years, says, in the Apostolic Guide, there is no divine authority for them, and there is a divine plan given in the New Testament for missionary work; yet he works through the human plan. Oh, shame! shame! I do not believe such work is any more acceptable to God than was Saul's work when he saved the king Agag, the fat sheep and oxen, (I Sam'l. 15); and Paul says, these things happened unto them for examples, and they are written for our admonition, (I. Cor. x: 11); and we had better be admonished by them, or we may, as Saul lost his earthly crown, lose our heavenly. If the Lord has not told us how to raise money for missionary purposes, he does not want it raised, for he has given us a perfect system deficient in nothing.

Again, Paul and Peter being truthful, where do Christians find any authority for introducing instrumental music into the worship? No where. Some quote King David for authority; but we are not living under King David, but under King Jesus, and we are to hear him, (Matt. xvii: 5); besides, the heavenly Father, through the prophet Amos, reproved David for doing that thing.—Amos vi: 5.

Once more: Where does the Lord authorize his people to expend the means building Bible colleges which to teach young men the productions of uninspired men, if they may become preachers, as our brethren are doing all over the land? Simply nowhere.

I look upon the building of Bethany College as the greatest mistake of brother Campbell's life, as he opposed Bible colleges when first cut loose from sectarianism, as shown in the first issue of the Christian Baptist; but whether he was ever opposed to them or not the Lord opposes them, and that ought to be sufficient to make that desire to be governed by them will oppose them. The church the school of Christ, in which designs that young men, or old, that want to become preachers, shall be educated, the school in which you are now receiving lessons: the one Bible college that Christ instituted "the church, the pillar and ground of the truth."—I. Tim. iii: 15. The grandest Bible college that ever was erected, adapted to all countries and every condition of men, old or young, rich or poor, white, black, and Christ himself is president, yea, more than president, is King and law-giver, head in respects over that college, and Apostles are the professors, and the Bible, the text book, and the only book. There are no chairs endowed in that college for presidents, professors, (and that is the trouble and there never was a graduate student from that institution, it became a stipulated salary preacher, or that set down on rich church as to pastorate it over God's heritage, setting the elders aside, as most of the striplings are doing that are educated at the Bible colleges of the present day, unless they departed from the institutions of the presidents and professors, and nearly all of the students that come out of those colleges, not founded by Christ, are in favor of some, or all of the departures and innovations that are distracting and rending the church of Christ all over this and other countries.

There is just as much authority for church fairs, festivals, instrumental music in the worship, and the Romish confessional, as there is for Bible colleges, and brother McGarvey opposes all these things, except Bible colleges and missionary societies, and if he can give any scriptural reason for rejecting the four, and accepting and working in the two, he ought to do it, ought he not? But when asked to do it, he is as mute as a little mouse. But oh, may not the time come when One will ask the question, who will be answered: "Who hath required this at your hand?" How careful we ought to be.

And now, my dear, young brother, my advice to you, and all brethren who desire to become preachers of the gospel of Christ, is, to keep away from all of these human organizations, for they are not authorized by the word of the Lord, and continue in the school established by Christ.

Why the Methodists, Baptists, and all sectarians, have the same right to build Bible colleges and use their deductions from the Bible, their creeds and confessions of faith for text books, that our brethren have for building them and using the text books that they do, and I have asked those of our brethren who work in those Bible colleges to show when, where, and by whom the first one was built, and they will not answer. They know it was long after the Apostle Paul said, that the gospel had been preached to all the world, and that, therefore, they are not necessary to to the promulgation of the gospel.

E. HANSBROUGH.

MISREPRESENTATIONS.

Dear Bro. Hansbrough:

I send you a letter, in full, from some Baptists, the contents of which are the words of brothers Adkins, Bush and Aten, of Lampasas. It shows plainly that brother Adkins has told a falsehood, as it is different from what he told you and brother McGary. And I feel sad to think that I am working day and night, and that my own brethren will lie on me and try to slander the cause. Though I send a copy of the letter in full, you can criticize and publish extracts from it if you deem it best.

I was preaching near Lampasas, baptized some of the Baptists, which caused them to send for E. W. Holeman, of San Saba. I heard his teaching until I thought duty demanding me to challenge him for debate, but before they would give an answer, they sent a committee to Lampasas, which brought back the following letter, and rejected my challenge.

LETTER IN FULL:

July 2nd, 1887.

WHEREAS, E. W. Holeman, connected with the Baptist church at School Creek, was challenged by Rev. Mr. Tant, of the FIRM FOUNDATION faction party of the Campbellites, to a public discussion of the difference between the Campbellites and Baptists, and the undersigned believing that Mr. Tant was not in harmony with the main body, calling themselves Christians, in the state of Texas, and would not be endorsed by them as a representative, and suitable to defend their principles; we, therefore, submitted the following questions to Eld. J. N. Adkins, of Lampasas:

1st. Is the FIRM FOUNDATION faction of the Christian church in harmony with the general body of Christians in Texas?

2nd. Is Rev. Mr. Tant properly endorsed by the church?

He emphatically answered, "no." Continuing his statement he said: The FIRM FOUNDATION party was a small faction of not more than ten or twelve preachers representing them, the editor of the FIRM FOUNDATION at Austin heading the party; further stated Mr. Tant was an extremist—had gotten into the lobby, could not be endorsed by the church, that it would be of no benefit to the community to engage in discussion of the differences existing with such a man; advising the church to pay no attention to him; as he was out of order, but that the church had never withdrawn from them. Further, that they were making a hobby of re-baptizing candidates, and, in conclusion, added, that if Baptist baptism was not valid, neither was theirs.

Eld. Bush, state evangelist, stated same, in substance, adding, that they, the FIRM FOUNDATION, were opposed to their members taking any stock in governmental affairs, such as politics, elections, and further denying their members the right to identify themselves with any secret order.

Prof. A. P. Aten, editor of Apostolic Guide, stated the same, adding, that if he, J. D. Tant, was an evangelist, he was such on his own responsibility.

Respectfully submitted,

E. W. HOLEMAN, Preacher.
JNO. W. MOORE,
R. L. BROWN,
Baptist members.

This is the letter in full, and the encouragement I get from our own brethren, in trying to defend the truth. While I feel hurt to know we have such false brethren among us, I rejoice to know that I am counted worthy to suffer persecution for the cause of Christ.

Yours for the one way,

J. D. TANT,
Lampasas, Texas, July 4, '87.

The next morning after attending to some matters of business, we went to see our brother Dr. Adkins, not a D. D. but an M. D., for he is not identified with a people who, as a class, claim that there should be doctors of divinity, though some are looking earnestly in that direction, and such should step down and out, and go where they belong, to some of the sectarian parties.

The Doctor was very social and communicative, seemed to feel a good deal of interest in the welfare and success of the F. F. Said that he had from the time he embraced Christianity, believed the principles for which it contended were right, and that he had always opposed receiving sectarians on their unscriptural, so-called baptism; that he himself was immersed by a brother Northum who was opposed to receiving members from any of the sectarian bodies without their making the confession and being immersed, understanding that baptism is for the remission of sins. That he and brother Baird had once stood together on these subjects, and that brother Burnett, editor of the Christian Messenger, had converted brother Baird, and tried to convert him, but without success.

It is strange to me, however, that one of brother Adkin's talent and capability of setting forth and contending for what he believes, does not contend more earnestly and industriously for what he considers a part, at least, of the faith once delivered to the saints. He may have what he considers a good reason for his present course, but I hope he will consider the importance of the matter, and come out boldly in defense of what he seems so thoroughly convinced is the truth.—Firm Foundation, April 1st, 1887.

We have published the foregoing letter, and extract from the FIRM FOUNDATION of April 1st, 1887, for the purpose of showing to what extent some men will go to justify the ungodly practice of "our plea," and to be popular with sectarians. The statements set forth in the extract from the FIRM FOUNDATION do not begin to show all that Dr. J. N. Adkins said in favor of the position of said paper, and he had told me on a previous occasion that the brethren would all have to come to the same position; and [now, brethren, compare what he said to brother McGary and me with what he said to those Baptists, and what conclusion must you come to?

This trio inquisition that sat upon brother Tant's case before the great and popular Baptist body, decided that he was an extremist, but did not specify wherein he was extreme, also that he was out of order. Out of order with whom and what? the Bible? No; but with the Baptist church; and that inquisition who decided in favor of the Baptist church, an institution not recognized in the word of the Lord, and these men knew it. They did have enough respect for brother Tant, however, to tell their Baptist brethren, that he had never been withdrawn from because of his identity with the FIRM FOUNDATION faction. Then this trio have been very remiss in their duty in not having him excluded from that party who will open their arms and receive all sectarians into their loving embrace, just so they have been dipped, and then some of them will turn right around and say, they never do it and have always opposed it. Oh shame, shame.

If a worldly man accuses a fellow being of stealing, it is expected that he will give some specifications, which is right. This trio accuses brother Tant, before his enemies and the enemies of the truth, of being an extremist and out of order. Ought they not, claiming as they do to be followers of Christ, and truth tellers, to give specifications or take back their charges?

This trio further states, that "the FIRM FOUNDATION party was a small faction of not more than ten or twelve preachers representing them, the editor at Austin heading the party." Another reckless and untruthful statement, for we can safely say, that there are not less than fifty preachers in this state alone, that stand with the FIRM FOUNDATION; but if there was not one, that does not affect the truthfulness of the position it occupies.

And last but not least, this trio says, that the FIRM FOUNDATION faction makes the participating in politics, voting, and belonging to secret societies, a test of fellowship. Now will you please give some specifications? If you cannot, will you take back the charge as untruthful? E. HANSBROUGH.

THE NAME, CHRISTIAN.

There is but one church; Christ says: On this rock I will build my church.—Matt. 16:18. Not churches, and whenever the plural is used in the New Testament, it refers to congregations, which, although in different localities, walked by the same rule, and minded the same thing. I. Cor. 1:10. Now there is but one body, one Spirit, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, and one God and Father of all.—Eph. 4:4-6. This great doctrine of unity demands but one name for the one body. Isaiah says, thou shalt be called by a new name which the mouth of the Lord shall name.—Isa. 62:2. And here it was given, and the disciples were called Christians first at Antioch.—Acts 11:26. The Scriptures teach that Christ is the foundation, the husband, and Head of the church.—Eph. 1:22, Eph 5:23-32, I. Cor. 3:11. Sustaining to the church these important relations, it is his right to give a name, and his own name, too, to the church over which he is sovereign, ruler, as he is the husband and head of the church, the church must, to be his bride, wear his name AND NO OTHER.

In harmony with this teaching, we find that the followers of Christ, in the days of the Apostles and the early church, were called Christians. King Agrippa, hearing Paul's defense of the gospel, exclaimed: Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian.—Acts 26:28. Here there is evidence that the disciples of Christ were called and known by this name—whatever controversy there may be about this passage as to whether the disciples at Antioch received the name Christian, by Apostolic imposition, or assumed it themselves, or were so called by the heathen. We know that the name was used by Apostolic authority, and acknowledged and worn by those who embraced Christianity. He to whom the keys of the kingdom of Christ were given, and by whom its doors were opened both to the Jews and Gentiles, called the citizens of the kingdom after the name of the king. If any man suffer as a Christian let him not be ashamed. Again, if ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye.—I. Peter 4: 14-16. James says, speaking of the persecutors, they blaspheme that worthy name by which ye are called.—James 2: 7. Paul teaches that the whole family of God wears his name.—Eph. 3: 15. The whole family of God means all his children, and the idea is, that they all wear the same name, derived from Christ—Christians.

It was for wearing the name of Christ, as well as for practicing his religion that they endured the agonies of martyrdom. The Savior told his disciples that they should be hated by all men for his name's sake.—Matt. 10: 22. Paul means much more than is commonly supposed, when he speaks of the first Christians having named the name of Christ.—II. Tim. 2: 19. That name was ever prominent, and for it they rejoiced that they were counted worthy to suffer shame.—Acts 5: 41. In the name of Christ they found salvation. In that name they asked all their blessings and performed all their works; and to it they gave an emphasis and attached an importance of which sectarianism has lost sight. In the Apocalyptic addresses to the seven churches of Asia, two of the congregations are especially commended by the head of the church for their fidelity to his name, although dwelling where Satan's seat was, and subjected to fiery persecutions. The Christians in Pergamos held fast his name.—Rev. 2: 13. That model little church in Philadelphia refused to deny his name, and upon those faithful ones who were willing to wear his name on earth, the Savior promised to write the name of God, the name of the city of God, and his own NEW NAME in heaven.—Rev. 3: 8-12. This appeared in the moral heavens of the Apostolic age. The church of Christ; the women clothed in the resplendent light of the Sun of Righteousness with the moon beneath her feet, a crown of twelve stars upon her head, and upon her shining forehead a name written, not Babylon, but Lamb's wife. Now Paul tells Timothy, that a man is not crowned except he strive lawfully.—II. Tim. 2: 5. This then settles the question, and tells why many who strive will not be crowned, because they do not strive lawfully, hence if a man strives by human laws, he cannot be crowned. He may strive and suffer all the days of his life as a Methodist, Baptist, or Mormon, and any other human name, and not be crowned; for God never gave a law to make Methodists, as they themselves admit. He never gave a law to make Baptists or Mormons, as they admit, and so on of all of these human names. But some say, it does not matter about the name; but we can not add without being condemned.—Rev. 22: 18-19. And besides this Mr. Smith would object to his wife (Mrs. Smith) wearing the name Mrs. Jones. Why, because the law requires her to wear the name Smith if she would be heir of Smith's estate. Now she may strive under the name of Jones but she cannot get any of Smith's estate if she claimed to be Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Jones both. We would be bound to say that she was either dishonest or that she had no sense. Now what of them that claim to be Baptist Christians, and Methodist Christians, and so on. Why, the Bible teaches that such are not Christians. If any one doubts this, let him call me out on it and I will give more proof. In order to be saved, God requires a person to be a Christian and nothing else. If God cannot get all, He will not have part or too much. God gave a law to make Christians, and if a person wants to be a Christian, he must obey this law and live by it, for we are bound, if ever saved, to strive lawfully. There is no promise from God to us for our striving as a Baptist or as a Methodist or as a Presbyterian, or by striving by any other human name.

May God help us all to give up everything but God's law. Please publish this article in the F. F., and I have this to say to the friends of the F. F.: You are on God's side, and I thank God for such a people. Now Christians, take the sword of the Spirit and go out. Quench the fiery darts of the wicked one.

Yours for the one faith,
W. M. SUBLETT.

LAVACCA DOTS.

Well, we are here at Alleyton, and preaching of nights to very respectful audiences. Our home for the present is at sister Gillespie's, who knows how to make a preacher feel at home. She is full of zeal and ready for every good work.

Just closed a meeting at Morales, with three accessions to the army of the faithful, and all by confession and baptism, because the Apostles did not take them any other way than "the way," one of whom was an old lady seventy-four years old, who had been a member of the Baptist fraternity, and another sixty-nine years old, who was formerly a Methodist, the third from another department in the world.

I see in one of those papers that helped to put down the "re-baptism heresy," the following: The divine way is, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" the Baptist way is, "He that believeth and is saved shall be baptized;" and then asks: "Which is right? Well, we would say, that it does not matter with you which is right, since you take both; but those whom you style re-formers prefer the former. Are they right?"

Faith only, you know, is a wholesome doctrine and very full of comfort. Yes, and would have been still more comforting, if Jimmie, the apostle, had not knocked all the comfort out'en it. Reader, turn to I. Cor. 11: 2, James 2: 24, and read, and you will see that "faith only" is not so comforting after all. The discipline of the M. E. church South (of all Bible knowledge) so asserts, but the Bible says: that faith without works is dead, being alone. There is not very much comfort in death to some, and still less in being alone. Yes, but it does not mean death in the sixth of Romans. You say it does not; then what does it mean? Does it mean the literal grave? Certainly not, for in that sense we all have to obey him. Does it mean a burial in Spirit? By no means, for Christ was not buried so far as we know. The Spirit came down in a dove-like form and sat upon him; did it not? Then it must mean water in which he was buried; this being so, we had better be buried with him in baptism, then the language: "If ye then be risen with Christ, i. e. from the watery grave, seek those things which are above, etc. * * *"

"The ladies of the Christian church will give a supper at the 'Skating rink' to-morrow night, (Friday), 29th inst., at 8 p. m., for the benefit of the church. Admission, 50 cents: children, 25 cents."—Huntsville Item. The ladies of the "Christian" church can do as they please, since they are not subject to the law of Christ, neither indeed will be; but if the ladies of the church of Christ is doing this thing, they should quit it at once. But this way of doing was predicted. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them. Had it not been for loose teaching, doubtless, those ladies would not have engaged in any such thing. But such is the way of the digressives.

The times are quite oppressive,
And men from the old path flee:
I hear that brother Pennington is a digressive,
Where, O, where is he?
In the field at work.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I am a reader of the F. F.; I like a suggestion by I. C. Stone, in the last issue. If I understand him, he suggests that every disciple of Christ take steps to ascertain who are true, and as soon as arrangements can be made, disclaim any further fellowship with such heretics, as those spoken of by him. I am anxious to see this done. I want soon to see those that are for the truth, as it is in Jesus, disclaim fellowship with those that pervert the truth, and wilfully practice that for which there is no authority in the divine code. The Lord says, have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. Let us obey Him in this matter.

Again, He commands that we withdraw ourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly. Surely, these walk disorderly. Let us cut loose from them, that we be not partakers of their evil deeds, and that we be not held responsible for their ungodly acts. When we do this, we may be few in number, but the Lord is for us, and no one can be successfully against us.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
J. D. FERGUSON.

OBITUARY.

WM. A. CRANE, of Utopia, son of N. W. and Elizabeth Crane, died May 2, 1887, in the 29th year of his age, at San Antonio, whither he had gone to have an operation performed for stone in the bladder. He was attended in his last suffering by his brother Elijah, who brought his remains to Utopia for interment.

Bro. Crane was brought up in Burleson county, by a widowed mother, his father having died in the Confederate army in 1862. He and his brother came to this community about five years ago. Nearly three years ago he obeyed the gospel of Christ and cast his lot with the disciples of Wareville congregation. By faithfulness to his religious profession, he heightened the esteem which he had won as a worthy young man of the world.

On October 21, 1886, he was married to our amiable young sister, Fannie Burton, at the residence of her parents in Utopia, and thus became as it were, the fourth member of this quiet Christian family. His death away from home became to his young wife an extreme affliction, as it was not thought prudent for her to be with him at the operation. Though we all grieve to see his life cut off in early manhood, we mourn not as those who have no hope. "He is not lost but gone before."

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

Our little band that meets after the apostolic order of meeting, from house to house, near Eagle Springs, met last Lord's day to worship, and after we broke the loaf, brother Ament announced that we would go immediately to the Leon river and attend to baptizing some parties. At the water brother Ament made us a splendid talk on the importance of obedience from an understanding heart, and at the close five who had heretofore believed they were in the kingdom, came forward, made the good confession, and were buried with the Lord in baptism, to rise to walk the Christian life. Bro. Ament did the baptizing, and I believe there are more to follow soon. May the truth run and be glorified, is the prayer of your brother.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, AUGUST 1, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

ATTENTION, READERS.

This is to notify my brethren and friends that ere this reaches them, my home will be Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas. All correspondence to me should be addressed there. Our exchanges will please note this change and send their papers to that place. But all funds and orders for the FIRM FOUNDATION or any pamphlet published by us should be addressed and made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

A. MCGARY.

We will send the F. F. for four months, and give the Oatman-McGarry discussion, for 50 cents; or five names for two dollars—commence at any time.

We have some good articles and contributions or hand that are not suitable for this paper, and as the writers leave it to us to decide whether we will publish them or not, we hope no one will be offended if their's are not published.

We had pleasant visits from brothers F. H. Clifton, of Bee Cave, Travis county, and David Crosthwait, of Lockhart. Bro. Dave gave us some honey in payment for the F. F., and brother Clifton gave us some cash for the discussion.

Bro. Hansbrough left home Friday, July 15th, to hold a ten day's meeting at Smithwick Mills, beginning Saturday night, the 16th. From Smithwick he will go to Kimble county, to be with brother J. S. Durst in a ten day's meeting on South Llano, some miles above Junction City, beginning Saturday night before the fifth Lord's day in July. And from there he expects to go to Fredonia to be with the brethren in a meeting on Lost creek, mention of which meeting has been made in this issue.

The Junction City Clipper speaks of a dancing party at the residence of Judge Alley, in Junction City. It is said to have been an enjoyable affair to the light fantastic tippers of that town. The Judge is accommodating and popular. I like him as a man, and I believe his expressions of friendship for the writer are genuine; but he does not like the F. F. He thinks it is extreme. He believes in Christians taking a lively interest in politics, and Masonry; and believes they should open up their houses for the dance. Well, the F. F. does not coincide with these views, but combats them as things "of the flesh." Wherever you find a Christian giving dancing parties at their house, you may mark that one as an enemy to the F. F.

Parties need not expect to receive their papers regularly unless they give their names in full, correctly spelled, and also the postoffice and state and county. If any one notices an error in his address, he will confer a favor on the publishers of the F. F. to send the correction in at once on a postal card.

Some of our brethren accuse us of inconsistency, because we say, we would be glad to see prohibition carry, and yet do not join in the political movement to help in the work. If the United States should become involved in a war with Mexico, or any other foreign power, we would be sure to sympathize with the United States, but we would not take up arms to help her on to victory, because the weapons of our warfare are not carnal. If two foreign powers were to go to war, we would doubtless sympathize with one of them; but no one would think of charging us with inconsistency for sympathizing with a government that we would not unite with and fight for. Why then, charge us with inconsistency on the prohibition question? It is because this prohibition wind has blown "beams in their eyes."

A. MCG.

PROHIBITION HINDERING THE GOSPEL.

Bro. Burnett has been to Cooper holding a meeting. He was not very successful there. He says: "The reason of the failure is not so apparent. It may be the preaching was not what it should have been, or that the people's minds were occupied with other subjects at the time, and they could not attend to the word spoken. There was a show in town two nights, a prohibition meeting one night, a social party one night, and preaching at the Methodist church on Lord's day."

Yes, perhaps you told those people that the three facts constituted the gospel wholly and exclusively, and exhorted them to obey your three fact gospel. If you did, you may well say, they "could not attend to the word spoken." They could attend to the word spoken just as easily if you had told them that chinning the moon is the gospel, and then exhorted them to chin it. Why will you limit the gospel to something that cannot be obeyed and then threaten the people with the vengeance of God if they do not obey it? This is mocking them in their helplessness. Or, perhaps, you wanted to shake these people, and they did not want to join the shakers. It is surprising that brother B. has hoisted the banner, and is using every effort to rally his brethren at the polls, as servants of Caesar, while he is classing prohibition with shows, parties and Methodist preaching—but I forgot, he holds that the Methodists preach the gospel, except when they preach at Rose Hill—he has localized his gospel till it will not do for Rose Hill!

A. MCG.

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER.

We will send the F. F. to any address till the first of January, 1888, for twenty-five cents on trial, or five copies till then for one dollar. This is a splendid opportunity for the friends of the F. F. to send in the names of some of their friends in different counties, or in different states, in order to give them a chance to read and learn that there is, published by Christians, one sound paper that boldly contends for the faith once delivered to the saints, one that will not compromise with any error in any manner, shape or form.

It may be a matter of interest to some of our readers to know that the renowned revivalist, Sam P. Jones, of Georgia, is a subscriber to the F. F. We hope he may be able to see the truth, not as it is in Methodism, but as it is in Christ Jesus. Yet we cannot expect so great a man as he is, (in the estimation of the sectarian world, and perhaps, in his own opinion), to humble himself to the religion of Jesus, through obedience to the gospel of Christ, take upon himself the yoke of Christ, and follow his duty as a Christian, regardless of consequences. A man who is educated in any of the isms is thereby disqualified to learn in the school of Christ. A man's understanding of the will of God is enlarged, only in proportion as he performs his known duties as a Christian, in the little things, as well as in the big things, as far as known to him. It is what a man does and says that we are able to judge him. As we are to shun not, to declare the whole counsel of God, so are we to shun not to do the whole will of God, as declared unto us in the counsel of God. Thus we learn to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord.

CAMP-MEETING.

At the request of brother Whitmill Holland, of Mason, we take pleasure in announcing a meeting to begin on Friday night before the second Lord's day in August, at the shingled arbor on Lost creek, near Fredonia, Mason county, Texas.

Bros. J. W. Jackson, W. P. Richardson and A. McGary will be there, and, very likely, brothers J. S. Durst, J. F. Grubbs and E. Hansbrough will be with them, besides their own local force, to-wit: Bro. Balze, Larremore, Cobb and Cavness, and as many others as can possibly attend. With such a force of gospel preachers, we anticipate a fine meeting; far more useful, lovable, and godly than the state meetings, and mass meetings of this state and others. We know that an able presentation of the word of truth will be made there in its purity, its simplicity, and in its proper division, and that no compromise of the truth will be made with any error, and we hope that many precious souls, which now sleep in ignorance, may be awakened unto righteousness, and gathered into the body of Christ by obedience to the gospel of God. We pray that the blessings of God may be upon them, not only in this meeting, but all through life.

BAPTISTS IN THE KINGDOM.

In the discussion between the editor of the Messenger and myself, I had hoped to see him manifest a Christian spirit, and support his proposition with something like scriptural arguments. That he has not done this, his readers can testify, if they will. In his last article (Messenger, June 29,) he evades the issue entirely and indulges in a half column of personal abuse. I have in my possession the writings of T. R. Burnett, charging upon the Baptists just what my article does. When I make the charge that they do not believe in Jesus Christ the Son of God because they deny His word, it is a slander, but when T. R. Burnett makes the same charge it is—only a lively discussion.

I shall decline henceforth to have any discussion with T. R. Burnett in his own paper. Of course, I expect him, as usual, to boast of having gained a great victory, and again trumpet forth to the world that he has completely crushed out that "new heresy," and effectually disposed of its heretical editors. We care nothing for such vain boasting. We invite the readers of the Messenger to examine our paper, FIRM FOUNDATION, read it, compare its teachings with the word of the Lord and when you find us deviating from the line of Truth therein marked out, write to us, and you shall have space in our columns for the discussion of all practical questions relative to our faith and practice.

J. W. JACKSON.

The above is a copy of an article written to the Messenger and mailed same day as this. If any brother wishes to discuss this rebaptism question—both sides of it—either orally or through the columns of our paper, we cordially invite him to do so.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I desire to make a brief report of meetings recently held and the results: In April, I held a meeting ten miles west of Huntsville, Walker county, which resulted in fourteen accessions to the "one body." Six of this number came from the Baptists.

Held a very interesting and successful meeting in Polk county, twenty miles south of Livingston, which resulted in fifteen additions to the church. Fourteen of this number came out from the Baptist church; one of this number was a Baptist preacher. His name is John Moye; he is a young man about twenty-four years of age, had preached three years in the Baptist church. Bro. Moye bids fair to make a good gospel preacher. Bro. D. A. Leak, of Tyler county, was with us two or three days, and did some good preaching. Bro. Leak is sound on all questions except the baptismal question. He loves to preach "our plea" and "shake" the Baptists out of the Baptist church and convert them to "our plea." We tried to teach him the "way of the Lord more perfectly," but he would not let us. However, I have some hope that brother Leak may yet see the inconsistency of the "shaking process," and turn from it, and earnestly contend for the one way bound on earth and in heaven.

Preached one week at Cold Springs, San Jacinto county. No additions, but left very fine impressions; think much good will result in days to come. Cold Springs is an old sectarian fort. Methodism and Baptistism has been established there for forty years, consequently the people know very little of the true way. The Baptist cause is dead there now, and its glory has departed, and I pray that the banner of the cross may yet wave over all opposition and sectarianism, and primitive christianity be established in its stead.

This brings us back to Madison county, where we have been preaching day and night. Our first meeting was held three and a half miles south of the town of Madisonville. The result was, four were baptized into Christ; three of this number came from the Baptist ranks. We are now in a meeting at Willow Hole prairie, twelve miles west of Madisonville. Bro. B. P. Sweeney is with us. We have baptized five up to date. We are having an up hill pull here; the church is cold, and the brethren generally are indifferent. However, we hope to enlist the brethren in the work of the Lord, and persuade more sinners to become Christians.

Bro. Sweeney has just closed a good meeting in Grimes county, which resulted in three additions to the "one body." Bro. S. is a preacher indeed after the Apostolic order, and a true friend of the FIRM FOUNDATION. He not only endorses it, but works for it wherever he goes. I wish we had more such preachers as brother Sweeney. I do not say this to flatter him, far from it, but because it is true. I have enjoyed a rich feast since brother S. has been with us. We have discussed freely the many things concerning the kingdom, and how we may best drive out from the church of God, all innovators and false teachers who are perverting the right way of the Lord. Enough for the present. Yours in the faith, A. J. McCARTY.

P. S.—We are resting to-day, (Friday). Bro. Sweeney has laid off his gospel coat and his clerical dignity, and is up to his elbows in the wash tub, helping his dear and faithful wife, sister S., who is not very well. The writer has not got that far along yet, but there is no telling how soon he may have it to do. Bro. Sweeney says there are more ways of keeping preachers busy besides preaching and killing bedbugs, and I heartily concur with him, for I have been sorely tried. More anon. A. J. M. Madisonville, Texas.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I am reading and well pleased with the F. F. I write to ask you to keep on digging until you cut the tap-root of not only what you have so faithfully begun, but of every plant not planted by our heavenly Father. Masons, Odd Fellows, Farmers' Alliance, Knights of Labor, prohibition, anti-prohibition, Baptists, Methodists, Catholics, Campbellites, etc., were not planted by the Father. They are all of their own father, the devil, and we can't serve in any of them. It is dishonor to God to be caught at work for any of them; we cannot serve two masters.

That shaking in process is another plant out of place. We must quit the practice altogether. We are baptized into the church and are then entitled to fellowship without the usual shake; and why are Christians required to carry a letter from one congregation to another? If we have no authority, we will quit the practice. I want to hear from you through the F. F., if it is consistent to do so. Your brother in Christ, J. M. B. Robinson, Texas.

"Except ye be converted and become as little children, you shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 18: 3. A little child is not capable of thinking rationally for itself. His parents have to think for it and educate it in the way it should go. So it is with the children of God: Their Father in heaven is their teacher, teaching them through the word. Those who claim to be his children must come to him to hear his word, in order to be taught, not presuming to discern right from wrong by their own reasoning faculties or human philosophies; then, wheresoever His word leads, go. Brethren will agree this to be correct. Then why not apply this in every instance, and especially when difficult problems gender contrary opinions? At the present time, the problem of voting and prohibition fills the mind of many a child of God; and the questions, voting or not voting, prohibition or anti-prohibition, is brought before us, and in our own reasoning, we can find good and weighty reasons for both sides.

How shall we decide this difficulty? Vote or not vote? Prohibition or not? Let us then, as the children of the Most High, go prayerfully to the word of our Father, and learn of Him. If he says vote, let us vote; if He says prohibition, let it be prohibition; but let us be careful not to read His word through the colored spectacles of our imagination.

Brethren, this is a trying time! Now we can and must show if our faith rests firmly on the foundation of our Father's teaching, or if we accept our own or other men's opinions to stand upon. Brethren, let your moderation be known to all men. J. B. Double Horn, Texas.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I received one of your papers from my brother, Christy Mathews, and read it. I think it is a good paper, and I believe it will do a great deal of good by enlightening the people in the way of truth and holiness. I see it is not afraid to defend the cause of our Master. It stands firm against sectarianism, and it contends earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints; and I would to God that all divisions were done away with, and that we all could see the same way, and that all would be of one mind and of one heart. But it seems as if their eyes are blinded, and that they cannot understand with their hearts, and that they will not be converted that the Lord might heal them.

I have for a long time been living a consistent soldier of the cross, and I have tried various ways to enlighten sinners, and to turn them from the error of their way into the marvelous light of the gospel of Christ. In some instances I have prevailed, and I would to God that I could do more for my Master, but I am getting old, and my mind is not good enough to enable me to tell what I know and what I would like to tell. Please excuse bad writing, and oblige, your faithful sister in the one hope, MRS. REBECCA BROOKOVER. Unlontown, W. Va.

Dear Brother McGary:

Seeing that you have requested the brethren to make short reports of their meetings through the F. F., and thinking that a few words from these parts might be interesting to some of your many readers, I write you these few lines. There are several things that I would like to say, but will only state, that the cause of Christ is progressing very well in this county, (Lavacca.)

Bro. J. W. Strode and the writer began a meeting near Schulenburg on Saturday night before the second Lord's day in June, and continued ten days, with nine added; all by confession and baptism. At this place, there is a noble band of workers, and they know how to make a preacher feel at home. They believe, too, that the preacher who preaches the gospel should live of the gospel. With such men as Morrow, Kirk and Smith in the lead, they can but succeed. May the blessings of our heavenly Father attend them.

Saturday night before the fourth Lord's day in June, we began a meeting with the church at Green Grove, and continued ten days, with twelve additions. One lady was refused the privilege of being baptized. It is a dangerous thing for man to stand between any one and their God. Here, also, we have a working little band of disciples, but alas! there is quite a number here who fall to live up to the profession that they have professed; having not added to their faith courage, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity; the lack of which makes them barren and unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.—(II. Peter first chapter.) But there are a few who are ready and willing to do all they can to extend the Master's kingdom.

Fight on, brethren, God will give you victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

From here, brothers Strode and F. M. McMurrey will go to Cheap-side to hold a meeting. Will report at the close.

Bro. McGary, do not stop my paper. If my time is out, please let me know, and I will renew at once.

Your brother in the one hope, R. L. McMURREY. Antioch, Texas.

Bro. McGary:

Some thoughts occur to my mind that I would like to pen for your consideration; and, if you think these lines worthy of space in your valuable paper, you can publish the same; but, if you think they are worthless, cast them into the waste basket.

If those who are opposed to the position of the F. F. would prove their practice to be consistent, by the word God, for receiving those that come from the sects on their sect baptism, then I would suggest, that each gospel preacher start around on the shaking mission, and be diligent until they get them all well shaken in; for if said teaching can be proven, it necessarily follows that it is not an intelligent understanding of the gospel obeyed from the heart that frees people from sin and brings them into the kingdom of God's dear Son. We feel that, if the doctrine could be proven for receiving them on their sect baptism, they will delay no time in proving the same, or abandon their practice; for we claim, a thus saith the Lord, for all we teach.

I remain your brother in the one hope of eternal life, A. M. SMITH. Darby, Texas.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have never yet reported the result of any meeting I have held, but write briefly now to say, that a few days since, I baptized an old brother about seventy-four years of age, who had been baptized by a Baptist preacher about thirty-five years ago, and was shaken into (what he thought was) the church of Christ very many years since. The old brother is a subscriber to the F. F., and has been reading it with much care, and from the F. F. has learned the way of God more perfectly, and requested me to baptize him. Not rebaptize him, for he asserted that he had never been scripturally baptized. I expect to commence holding a protracted meeting soon, and may report to the F. F. from time to time as the Lord adds to the church. J. L. BOLLING. Lovelady, Texas.

An old author says: "When canons were brought into use as negotiators, the canons of the church were set aside." The Christian world was first governed by Mitre and now by Nitre; first by St. Peter and now by Saltpetre.—[Selected.]

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR.

Dear Bro. Hansbrough:

I fear you think I have been careless about writing. I did intend to drop you a card every other day; but when I tell you of my ups and downs, I know you will excuse me—the last twenty-five miles of our trip was truly up and down, jumply, bumpy; but this was not the worst.

We travelled twenty miles the first day, and camped for the night four miles east of Dripping Springs. We struck camp just as the sun was gilding the western horizon with his cheerful farewell to the 25th of May. My wife selected for a camping place a beautiful green valley, which was about a quarter of a mile south of the road—you know "distance lends enchantment to the view." But, as this trip is her's, I wound around down the hillside to where she pointed. When the horses were staked and the tent stretched, and the children were rolling and tumbling over the green grass, there was much joy in that camp—for it is truly a pleasure to see the little ones enjoying the trip in this carefree and gleeful way after their long confinement at school. Dear little things! They should be encouraged in innocent amusement, for soon the merry sunshine of childhood will have passed away, and the dark, dreary clouds, surcharged with the sad realities of the vanities and vexations of this life will take its place; this "vapor which appeareth for a little time, then vanisheth away," will be brought face to face to them.

As life is made up of pleasure and pain, and the latter is often pressing close in the wake of the former, we experienced both at that camping place. During the night my wife was taken violently ill, and by morning was completely prostrated, but as there was no water near us for man or beast, we were forced to move somewhere. So I went to work packing up and harnessing the horses, with a heavy heart. I was seriously regretting that we had left home. But while I was trying to collect my wits to decide upon a proper course, I saw two young boys approaching our camp. When they came up they asked, "Is this Mr. McGary?" When I replied, they said: "We are Mr. Cavett's boys, and papa sent us to meet you and carry you to our house." You may well imagine my unbounded satisfaction at this. Bro. Cavett lives in Dripping Springs, and an hour's drive brought us to his hospitable home, where we spent that day (Thursday), and night. My wife received every attention at the hands of this kind family, and was soon better, and by morning was able to resume travel. We left this dear brother and sister reluctantly, for it is a great pleasure to be with those who esteem the kingdom of God as they do. Bro. Cavett has been a reader of the Christian Standard for years; but he is the soundest Standard reader I ever met. This is not so surprising, though, when one knows his wife and that she has been a reader of the F. F. for more than a year. I do not desire to repay this brother and sister with flattery for their kind treatment of us; but I cannot say less of sister Cavett than, that she is one of the most earnest Christians I have ever met. She believes in returning to the religion of the Book in theory and practice—consecrating our lives to the service of God, from the first to the last step as prescribed in the precepts and examples of the Apostles. Bro. Cavett has a nice little farm home in Dripping Springs, right near the Baptist Academy, that he would sell. Any Baptist, or any one else who may desire to live in Dripping Springs would do well to take a look at his place. He wants to join a few Christian families in a small colony in Kimble or Menard county.

Five days from brother Cavett's brought us to where we are at this writing, on the bank of the Johnson Fork of the Llano, where we now sit writing this, within a few feet of the beautiful, rippling water, as it speeds by over its rocky course. It reminds us of Tennyson's impressive words about "The Brook:"

Let p I slide, I gleam, I glance
Among my skimming swallows;
I make the netted sunbeams dance
Among the sandy shallows:
And chatter, chatter as I flow
To join the brimming river:
For iron may come, and men may go,
But I go on forever.

We reached here the 1st inst. and may remain ten days. Bro. Durst is settling, now improving a place, near where we are camped. The F. F. has many true friends in this county—and why should they not be friends to it? When a man or woman is an enemy to the F. F., you may safely set it down, that he or she loves man's institutions better than God's plan of redemption—that they have been "removed from him that called them unto the grace of Christ unto another gospel." In ten minutes time, the first evening we camped here, I caught more fish than we could all eat; and ever since, we have had all we could use. Sister Durst came walking up to our camp a few minutes ago with a five pound catfish. Bro. Durst will preach a few miles down the river next Lord's day, and we expect to go down.

I must close for this time. All join in love to you all. Sister Durst says, you must come up this summer. These brethren would like to hear you preach some. Bro. Schrier, who lives near here, spent the day with us yesterday. He has just received a letter from sister Reagan, of Del Rio, and she praised your preaching there very much. Publish this and it will save me writing several private letters till I can catch up with my correspondence.

Your brother in Christ,

A. MCGARY

DEATH.

Paul declares: "The wages of sin is death."—Rom. 6: 23. Of a certain class it is said: "You were dead in trespasses and sins."—Eph. 2: 1. And again: "We are dead to sin."—Rom. 6: 2.

Being dead in sin, and dead to sin, are two things; they are opposite to each other, so that a person cannot be dead in and to sin at the same time. Sinners are dead in sin, while Christians are dead to sin.

Again Jesus said of a certain individual: "Lazarus is dead."—John 11: 14. This he spoke concerning the death of the body of Lazarus.

In Revelations 21: 8, we read of the second death. This is the death of the soul or spirit of man; and because the wicked being cast into the lake which burns with fire and brimstone, is called death; some have come to the conclusion that they will be forever unconscious.

In April number of Zion's Watch Tower, page 5, appears the following: "The wages of sin is death everlasting—not life in torment everlasting." I will here submit a proposition or two:

1. Death means a separation in every sense of the term.

2. Man is both dead and alive at the same time.

Prop. 1. God is the source of life; when, therefore, a thing is separated from God, it need not necessarily cease to exist, but it ceases to live in one sense of the term—it dies.

God said to Adam, concerning the eating of the fruit: "The day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." But Adam lived, probably 900 years after having eaten the forbidden fruit. In what sense did he die the day he ate of the fruit?

He was a sinless man before eating; but by the act of eating he was separated from a sinless into a sinful state; hence he died in the sense of being dead in sin.

Christians are said to be dead to sin. How are they dead? Paul says: "He that is dead is freed (separated) from sin." In this sense then, death is a separation.

When the spirit is separated from the body, the body is dead. James says, "the body without the spirit is dead." This natural or physical death, then, is a separation of the spirit from the body. Man's physical connection with God through the laws of nature are broken up, and, therefore, the physical part of man dies.

But it is said in Revelation, that being cast into the lake of fire is the second death. Where is the separation here? Turn to Matt. 25 and there read the sentence: "Depart from me ye cursed into everlasting fire." Can you see why this is called death? Because, like all other deaths, it is a separation—a separation from God.

Prop. 2. Man is both dead and alive at the same time.

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life; and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life."—John 5: 24. Here we have, according to Christ, a living man passing from death unto life. So he that possesses human life may at the same time be dead in some sense.

Again, Christ said unto a certain individual: "Let the dead bury their dead, and follow me."—Matt. 8: 22. How can a dead man bury a dead man, unless he is dead in one sense and alive in another? Is it not clear from this that one may possess human life and at the same time be as dead to God as a man void of human life is dead to the world? Paul commanded his brethren to reckon themselves to be dead to sin but alive to God, (Rom. 6: 11). Here the same individuals are said to be both dead and alive at the same time.

John says: "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death." Here is a person living who has passed from death spiritual to life spiritual, while possessing, before and since, human life. Then it is an established fact that man is both dead and alive at the same time—dead in one sense and alive in another.

We, therefore, legitimately come to the conclusion that, as life and death are necessarily contrasted with each other as indicative of contrary states, we can have as many varieties of death as there are varieties of life. Have we physical, intellectual and spiritual or moral life? Then can we have physical, intellectual and spiritual or moral death. Have we temporal and eternal life? So can we have temporal and eternal death.

But physical, intellectual and spiritual denote the nature of life and death; while temporal and eternal denote, not the nature, but the continuance of it. Hence, "eternal" prefixed to life or death, intimates, not the nature of either, but their mere continuance.

But with some it seems mere existence is life; and such persons are want to speak, not of eternal existence, but of eternal life in misery!! Eternal life is not merely eternal existence, but eternal existence enjoyed.

When the Savior says to his faithful disciples, that in this world they shall receive a hundred fold more than they lose, and in the world to come eternal life; can any one be so simple as to imagine that he means simple eternal existence? What an anti-climax they put into the mouth of the Savior on such a view of Mark 10: 29-30: "There is no one who hath left house or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake and the gospel's but shall receive an hundred fold more in this world; and in the world to come something greater—eternal life—more eternal existence!!"

Can any one think the Messiah guilty of such deception under the pretense of holding out something greater in the world to come, and in fact holding out something greatly less, if it be true that eternal life simply means eternal existence? But it means far more than that. It means eternal union and communion with God, who hath life in himself, in whose presence there is fulness of joy, and at whose right hand are pleasures forevermore.

Having shown that eternal life is not mere eternal existence, follows not that the second death in connection with eternal life cannot possibly intimate second non-existence? Indeed, is not the very definition abused? The first death is non-existence; the second death second non-existence!

Eternal life is an eternal existence in happiness, while eternal death is eternal existence in misery. Remember then, kind reader, that the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. Accept Christ and live. No longer serve man who is going about like a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour.

Console not yourself with the thought that, if you live in sin when you die a physical death, you will ever afterwards be unconscious; for it will be eternal punishment for you. If you obey not the gospel of Christ.

Editors Firm Foundation:

I was noticing T. H. G.'s remarks on Mr. S. C. Royal's letter, and he exhorts the readers to "earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." Now, will you, or T. H. G., be so kind as to show from the Scriptures who those saints are and what it was delivered to them? I am sure, if this can be done, that a flood of light will be thrown upon what we are to believe. By this we can find out what Paul means in Heb. xi:1: "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, etc." I ask for information. Yours desiring to know the truth.

S. R. ETHRIDGE.
Lubbock, Texas.

I will attempt to reply to S. R. Ethridge's request, as he asks for information, and not for disputation. I am aware that most of our readers will understand and appreciate the explanation, though there may be some who will misunderstand me and will misrepresent my statements.

Now answer: Those saints are those called of God; those who were called out of darkness by the word of the gospel of Christ, the Son of God. Those who have heard the gospel of Christ preached in its purity, understood it, believed it, and obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered to them. "And Saul, (Paul) was consenting unto his (Stephen's) death. And at that time there was a great persecution against the church, (now notice, against the church) which was at Jerusalem, and they were scattered abroad. * * * * As for Saul, he made havoc of the church, entering into every house, and hailing men and women, committed them to prison."—Acts 8:1-3. "Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, (Paul,) how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem. And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind ALL that call on thy name."—Acts 9:13-14. I prove from these scriptures that there was persecution against the church, which was at Jerusalem, and they (the members) were scattered abroad; and that Paul made havoc of the church, and Ananias said he had heard how much evil this man Paul hath done to thy saints. Then if Paul made havoc of the church, hailing men and women, who were members of the church, committing them to prison, and had authority to bind all that call upon the name of the Lord, or, as Ananias, said, hath done much evil to thy saints, then the saints are those who are members of the church of God—the body of Christ. So much for that. Then again, it was the gospel of Christ, the word of truth, that was delivered to them. "But the righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise * * * The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach. That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. 10:6-10. "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. But I say, Have they not heard? Yes, verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world." Rom. 10:17-18. The faith delivered unto the saints includes facts to be believed, commands to be obeyed and promises to be received. Jesus is the author and finisher of our faith. "And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him," (obey his gospel), Heb. 5:9. Paul, in Rom. 1:16, says: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." "For God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints."—1 Cor. 14:33. If confusion exists in our works, or in our words, or in our thoughts, it is there by the traditions of men or the doctrines of devils, or by our own evil imaginations.

Now I think I have proven by the Scriptures that the faith delivered unto the saints, and for which they were earnestly to contend, was the gospel of Christ, the word of God, the word of truth, the word of faith which we preach, and that the saints are all godly members of the church of Christ.

CHURCH REPORTS.

Just returned home from a twelve days absence, leaving home on Thursday, May 26th, for a preaching tour, traveling as far south as Okalona, Clark county, this state, a distance of about 75 miles; preaching at Black Springs, Montgomery county, Caddo Gap, Amity, and in the neighborhood of Clear Springs, Clark county. I found a small congregation of disciples at Caddo Gap also at Amity, who meet once a month, for preaching, not at all, for the purpose of commemorating the risen Lord in his institution which he instituted the night of his betrayal. We found some kind brethren at both places, still they are not in an organized condition; but we understand brother Secrest, their evangelist, intends to soon organize them into working congregations at each of these places, (Gap and Amity). The brethren have built them a $300 house in which to worship. At Amity, especially, prejudice against the truth is very high, and although a town of about three hundred inhabitants, there are three organizations, if you should please to call them such, M. E. C., M. E. C. S., and Baptists; and there are also a sufficient number of disciples to organize, which will soon be done, as we understand.

At Amity we met brother A. Jones, who lives at this place, and, of course, we made his house our home while there, from Saturday until Monday morning, then one night on my return.

Bro. Secrest, the district evangelist, preaches for them, also brother A. Jones preaches for them when an opportunity presents itself. He is one of those who has shaken numbers in from the sectarians. I would ask, if Paul ever shook any one into the body of Christ from the sectarians? My time is spent in preaching the word—the ancient gospel.

Glad to see brother Allison's articles on the law, in the F. F., for they are good, as we may always expect such from his pen.

The brethren near Okalona, Clark county, are making arrangements for a camp meeting. They have purchased forty acres of land, including Clear Springs, for that purpose.

Success to the F. F. Your brother in the one hope,

J. W. BRATCHER.

LETTER FROM BRO. STONE.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:
While I am at home this hot, dry weather, I will try to write something for the readers of the FIRM FOUNDATION. Life is too short, and time too precious for us to idle much of it away. There are too many who seem to be careless and indifferent with regard to everything but money-making and worldly pleasures. Worldly-mindedness has already pervaded the church to such an extent that the distinctive marks of Christianity are almost obliterated. Many persons who claim to be Christians, and whose names may be found on some church-book, exhibit no signs of spirituality. They appear as vain, as covetous and as worldly-minded as their neighbors, who make no profession of Christianity at all.

While this practice prevails among us to such an alarming extent, we will never succeed as we should, in building up the kingdom of Christ in the world. In this age, the difference between professing Christianity, and practicing it, is altogether too great. We hear a great deal said about practical Christianity; but the great trouble is, that those who make the greatest noise about it, are, unfortunately, the individuals who know the least about it. Practical Christianity consists not in the doing of good deeds by all classes of people as many seem to think. Here is a great mistake. And even many who, themselves claim to be Christians, have fallen into it. The truth is, that it requires a Christian to practice Christianity. A man may feed the hungry, clothe the naked, visit the sick and do many good works; but if he be not a Christian, it is not Christianity. It is only morality. The taking, or rather the mistaking of morality for Christianity, has been the means by which some have found so many good Christians among the various sects or parties claiming to be religious. Because they appear pious and benevolent, they are taken for Christians: and it is said, why, they are as pious as we. Piety is reverence for the Deity,—respect—much respect, etc. Now there are very many who have respect for God who are by no means Christians. Many men who are not Christians have too much reverence for God to blaspheme his name, or to do many other acts which would show disrespect for Him. Christianity consists in following Christ. If an individual follows not Him, he is not a Christian; but to follow Christ, one must first come to the way in which Christ walked: he must take His yoke first. In taking of the yoke of Christ, we should be very careful not to make a mistake and take the yoke of some man: as Luther, or Wesley, or Calvin, or some one else. There is a vast difference between these yokes. Christ's yoke is easy: man's yoke is burdensome. Christ's yoke is exactly adapted to our wants. It fits, and therefore is easy; but man's yoke has no adaptation, no fitness. Some are slow to learn these important truths from some cause. It may be that they neither have considered the matter, nor tried it, therefore, think man's yoke the easiest.

Let us consider this matter a while. Christ's yoke relieves us of our pride and vanity. Under it we are not harassed with so many cares and burdens. We are under no great strain to keep pace with the world. We need not spend so much for show, nor for unnecessary gratifications. We have not so much trouble and labor for the gratification of foolish desires and indulged appetites. If we wear Christ's yoke, we are not troubled with an evil conscience, nor a miserable dread of the future. A fearful looking for of fiery indignation which shall devour the adversaries. The one gives peace and security, and the other doubt and uncertainty.

I wish that I could impress the people with the thought that Christianity is a system of faith and works combined. The faith without the works is dead being alone.—James 2: 17. And that works without faith is in the same condition, because, "without faith it is impossible to please God."—Heb. xi: 6. Now Paul says: "There is one faith."—Eph. iv: 5. If then there is but one faith, all, in order to be Christians, must have that one faith. Having the one faith, all must go forward in practical Christianity. Each can add to his faith courage, knowledge, etc. But if one have not faith the less courage he has the better. Behold what courage Sam Jones, D. L. Moody and Harrison have. They have neither faith nor knowledge, and no man can tell the injury they have done to mankind by their courage in false teaching. They may have induced some to be more moral; but never one to be a Christian. They preach another gospel which is not another, but a perversion of the gospel, and thus have led thousands astray. They have not taught the gospel steps to salvation; and if they have led any to salvation, then false steps are as good as the true. To be Christ's, we must have his Spirit. To get his Spirit, we must receive his words; for he says, my words are Spirit and life.—John vi: 63. We must walk in the light as he is in the light.—I. John i: 6.

I do not believe in a blind, ignorant, bewildered Christianity. Christ has given us light, and shall we not use it? Shall we teach the people that they need not understand the doctrine of Christ? Why did Christ give a revelation, if we need not understand it? I cannot imagine what ever produced such a thought in any sane man's mind. That which is taught is always understood, otherwise it is not taught. Christ said, go and teach. If nobody understood them, then they are not taught. To teach implies an understanding, therefore, whatever is not understood, is not taught.

Here I will close for the present and let all men who wish, examine the foregoing, and object if they choose. May God bless you all. Farewell. I. C. STONE.

RISES TO EXPLAIN.

The nicknaming qualities and the habit of misstating facts by putting words into the mouth of an opponent, has become the leading characteristic of the Christian News- essenger. Whether this is a revolutionary action which bears witness to a sectarian ancestry, or whether it is one of many successive variations which predict the hasty evolution of the C. M. into ripe sectarianism, is a problem to be left to the future; or, perhaps, some star of the northeast is making its transit from the Methodist subdivision in Babylon into the nebulous fields of Baptist confusion.

I am informed that I must post up, and learn the use of figures—that this Babylon is not a literal country, but that it is a state of captivity to human error. Captive, is a relative term, associated with the idea that gives rise to the following inquiry: Where were these captives taken from and who captured them? The Baptist church captured them, and they were taken from the world, and now the C. M. is trying to capture them again. Before the Baptist church captured them, they were in error, and after it captured them, they were in error, or in a state of error, and the C. M. denies that they are shook in. So they come in like the fish hook came in the boy's pants: Just come so.

Will the C. M. accept the following translation, Acts xviii: 10. For I am with thee and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee, for I have much Baptists in this city.—"The much people in this city," whom the Lord calls my people, were not Baptists, and I presume it was necessary for them to obey the gospel although they were his people. So the Baptists who are in the city of Babylon, some of whom are the Lord's people in the same sense that these Corinthians were, ought to obey the gospel. Those Corinthians who would not obey the gospel in a spiritual point of view, stayed where they were. So those Baptist who will not obey the gospel; let them stay where they are.

W. P. RICHARDSON.

Dear Bro. McGary:

I trust that you will again permit me, through the F. F., to say a few words for the benefit of your many readers, and for the brotherhood at large. In the first place, I desire to ask a few questions:

Did Paul or any one of the Apostles ever organize or authorize the organization of any missionary society, or hold a festival, in the place of worship at Jerusalem, Ephesus, or anywhere else, for the purpose of raising money for the building of churches or paying the preachers? If so, when and where?

Now, brethren, I have failed to find any such example in God's word. The case as stated and referred to by brother Stone, taken from the Christian Standard, has at last filled my prediction—two years ago. I stated that the brotherhood was fast falling in ranks with the sects in the organization of such institutions as above named. Brethren, let me beseech you to investigate the teachings of Christ and the Apostles thoroughly before you go off into this great evil of apostasy.

Bro. Stone desires to hear from the brethren as to whether they will endorse the action of the brethren of Indiana in the report made by B. I. Radford. I, for one, denounce all such, and shall forever, unless I am shown example of such in God's word. I am glad that you have made the call; so brethren speak out. I hope, brother Stone, you will, through the F. F., nip all such in the bud, and that you will forever contend for the faith once delivered unto the saints.

Bro. McG, when is a person born of the Spirit? We have a brother who preaches that in obedience of baptism we are only born of water, and in the resurrection there this spiritual birth takes place. This is not my exegesis or way of preaching it. I hope you will make your explanation quite lengthy. Send me a few sample copies of the F. F.

Your brother in the faith,

J. W. BRATCHER.

Dallas, Ark.

A man is born of the Spirit when he is "born again:" for when the Lord told Nicodemus that a man must be born again to enter into the kingdom of God, and Nicodemus had so far failed to grasp the Lord's idea as to suppose a man had to re-enter his mother's womb in order to be born again, the Lord corrected him by saying: "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." This shows us that in order to see the kingdom of God we have to be "born again," and in order to be born again we have to be born of "water and the Spirit."

The first, or natural birth is a birth of the flesh; the second, or metaphoric birth, is a birth of Spirit. The first is the product of the seed of man—the seed of flesh—while the latter is the product of the good and incorruptible seed of the kingdom of God—the word of God, which is Spirit and life. John says: Christ came "unto his own, and they that were his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he the right to become children of God, even to them that believe on his name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. The Book tells us that God is Spirit. Whoever, then, is born of God, is born of the Spirit; and whoever is born of the Spirit is born of God." This settles that Christadelphian dogma which seems to have won no little following among Christians.

But in our discussion with Dr. Oatman, the Christadelphian leader in Texas, this question is discussed at length. My proposition in that discussion is, that when a man is baptized by the authority of Christ he is then and there born of water and the Spirit. The pamphlet can be had for twenty-five cents by addressing the FIRM FOUNDATION. It is a pamphlet of between eighty and ninety pages.

If Paul ever had anything to do with any other missionary society than the church, or ever had any such festivals as you describe, the Holy Spirit did not want the world to know it, for it did not have it put to record.
A. McG.

WHO IS THE TRUE DISCIPLE?

I insist, from the word of the living God, that the New Testament describes the true disciple, his character, relation to God, to man, and describes the circle of his duty as a disciple in the worship, in the body, and out of it. No theme affords a disciple more pleasure and real benefit, if rightly taught, than an intelligent appreciation of himself and his relative duty to the one given gospel, and only one given. When he is properly taught the law of life, it makes him responsible, and leaves him no way of escape from its penalty.

Every creed is but a castro mould for the overthrow of the apostolic plan given by the head of the one body. Every creed is designed, in effect, to draw away men and women from the one plan. The cry from the streets and highway of Babylon is heard, "come the way." Take the New Testament survey of all the so-called Christian people; put the gospel measuring reed to them from creed to creed and what do you have? Well, upon the true disciple of the kingdom depends the real salvation of the world; take him out of the way and what do you have? Will a counterfeit religion save the world? Look over the world, reader, water who is contending for just what the gospel is contending for, and take my word, this is the only people who it is safe for you to cast your lot with for life's practice. The gospel is designed to make me better in the life that now is and that to come. If it does not accomplish this for men, it is simply because he has not applied the remedy of gospel balm to his malady. Take a sectarian fresh from the slime pits of Babylon, all covered with the gore of the beast, having his hands and his forehead all scared with his marks, the place that man under the gospel standard, measure him up and down with the gospel line, and the make him an elder of some baptist congregation, and what the result of his teaching and example in that body? What kind fruit will that tree bear?

I would like for the FIRM FOUNDATION to write up who the true gospel disciple is, and make the lines very distinct. By this method the lines will begin to widen between counterfeit disciples and true ones. The lines must be drawn sooner or later, but the sooner the better. Thrust in your gospel scythe and gather the ripe fruit, the vintage is now ready. Let not be builders in Babylon, but the kingdom of God, upon the Lord, one faith, one baptism, exclude all spurious religions and in the recruiting camps of Babylon,

RE-BAPTISM.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have recently written several communications for publication to a number of our editors, but one of which has been published, and about half of that was suppressed, I suppose because I endorse the teaching which is being advocated by the F. F. Many of our editors are very much like many of those who pretend to pray at the present day: "Lord, thy will be done according to my will." Our editors are willing that all shall be heard through the columns of their respective journals, unless we happen to run counter to their peculiar manner of thinking and teaching; but do this, and the communication either finds its way to the waste basket, or is pruned down to harmonize with the peculiar notions of the editors. I have thought proper to express my humble views through some of our journals, but desired to be heard through some other than the F. F., but it seems that I can only be heard through that medium.

Many questions, or subjects are agitating those who compose the church of Christ. The organ in worship, the re-baptism, and missionary machine, and other questions, occupy much space in our religious journals, and we are much divided upon each of these questions. I desire, in this communication, to refer to what is styled the re-baptism subject, and here permit me to say, I would oppose re-baptism, if such a thing was being practiced by any of those with whom I am proud to stand identified; for I hold that when a penitent never has confessed Christ before men, and has been baptized for the remission of sins, (in order to remission), he has been baptized in to Jesus Christ, and thereby put on Christ, and that is an end to baptism; and I would always oppose re-baptizing such an one.

And now the question arises, has any one who has not been thus baptized obeyed the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ? And be it remembered that Paul hath declared, (II. Thes. ix; 8-9,) that they who obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power. And now I propose to examine the Scriptures and settle this vexed question from the plain teachings of that inspired volume.

Our Savior, (Mark 16:16,) instructed the disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, but bid them stay in the city of Jerusalem until they be endued with power from on high; they obeyed this injunction, and were thus endued, and all who are conversant with the Scriptures remember that our Savior said: (Luke 24:46,) that repentance and remission of sins should begin to be preached in his name at Jerusalem; and now will any dare assert that Peter did not preach the gospel on the memorable day of Pentecost? All must admit that, on that eventful day, he proclaimed the terms of pardon to the alien sinner. Then we need only to consult Acts 2:38, to determine what are the conditions precedent to the pardon of sins. The Spirit of God, in answer to the momentous question propounded by those Jews whom Peter had convinced that Jesus was the Christ, was, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Then it will be remembered that the great Apostle to the Gentiles said, (Rom. 10:17), that "faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God;" then, if Paul be correct, faith cannot be obtained in any other way, or by any other means, than by hearing the word of God, and Paul demonstrated just how faith comes when he said to the Corinthians, (I. Cor. 4:15), in Jesus Christ I have begotten you through the gospel; then if the Scriptures demonstrate anything, they settle the question as to how we are to obtain faith.

And now I desire to propound a question to those who are so violently opposing what they are pleased to style re-baptism. Will you dare assert that the Baptist preachers preach the gospel, and proclaim the terms of pardon to the alien sinner, as announced by the Spirit of God by the mouth of Peter on Pentecost, and repeated by Paul and the other Apostles, from time to time in their teaching? But how dare you not concede this fact in regard to Baptist teaching? for you know they practice the mourners bench system, and urge the sinner to repair to the anxious seat, and when he is there, they instruct and urge him to pray for pardon of his sins, which you know that all the official expounders, commentators and preachers on this mundane sphere to-day, cannot find in all the sixty-six books composing the divine library, a single instance where God ever promised to pardon the sins of an alien sinner in answer to prayer, nor did God ever command an alien sinner to pray for pardon of sins. And, brethren, you know full well that Baptist preachers do not baptize for the remission of sins, but that they require the candidate for baptism to state that he believes that God for Christ's sake has pardoned his sins, before they will proceed to baptize him. And you further know, brethren, that you, in all your literature, ignore and ridicule Baptist teaching and practice, and yet, strange to say, you announce to the world by your acts, which speak louder than words, that Baptist teaching, (although you say they teach error), makes or produces genuine Scriptural Christians.

I suggest that, in order to be consistent, you cease to antagonize Baptist teaching, or that you abandon the shaking process. Brethren, are you vain enough to suppose that the fact, that you shake the hand of a Baptist, who has never been baptized for remission of sins, nor obeyed the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, improves his spiritual condition? You know it does not, and you know that is all you do for them. The time for laying on of hands, and the time of miracles are past.

I have said in this communication that I would oppose re-baptism, and I surely would; but I assert that, he who has been taught by Baptist preachers, that he must get religion before he can be baptized, and is then baptized because his sins are pardoned, has never been baptized nor obeyed the gospel; and that when he thereafter obeys the gospel and is baptized, he is then, for the first time, Scripturally baptized; he then has for the first time obeyed the gospel, and there is no re-baptism in his case.

I know that many brethren whom I love dearly favor the shaking in process, but permit me to here say, that God never devised but one scheme of redemption, and the sequel may prove, and eternity reveal the fact, that none but those who have been baptized for the remission of sins, have obeyed the gospel. Brethren, we had better teach dying men and women to be baptized for (in order to), remission of sins in obedience to the mandate of the Holy Spirit on the great Pentecost, and thereby make it as sure as they can. This is the infallible plan.

Bro. McGary has, in days ago, indulged in too much sarcasm, but I rejoice to observe that he has toned down much, and the result is, the F. F. is daily growing in favor with the people. I know whereof I speak

INNOVATIONS.

Editor Firm Foundation:

Through the kindness of an unknown friend, I have been receiving your valuable paper for several weeks, and now, in love for the truth which it advocates, and as a special reply to brother Stone's request, I send you a short article, which you can publish, if you deem it worthy.

In the F. F., of June 15, we find a letter from brother Stone, in which he appeals to the brotherhood against the innovations of the present day, and urges us to come out on this subject.

We are aware that these are perilous times, and that, to express a desire to return to the "ancient order of things," is not the popular thing to do. "But, if God be for us, who can be against us?" We have the promise that, "Where two or three meet together in my name there am I, in the midst of them." A promise that is not found for a crowd, or multitude. We have, living here with us, an aged aunt, who was immersed into Christ over fifty years ago, and with John Steele, Newton Mulky, Wm. D. Jourdan, and Isaac T. Reenan, for teachers, she has not yet fallen out by the way, and given heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils. My husband and myself were immersed thirteen years ago. We were instructed by Isaac T. Reenan, and other faithful followers of Christ, to take the word of God as our rule of faith and practice, and to speak as the oracles of God, and now, because we will not listen to the commandments of men, and join in with Sunday-schools, children's day, church fairs, festivals, and such like, we are denounced, derided—nay, almost ostracized from polite society. It is a sad state show, nor for unnecessary gratifications. We have not so much trouble and labor for the gratification of foolish desires and indulged appetites. If we wear Christ's yoke, we are not troubled with an evil conscience, nor a miserable dread of the future. A fearful looking for of fiery indignation which shall devour the adversaries. The one gives peace and security, and the other doubt and uncertainty.

I wish that I could impress the people with the thought that Christianity is a system of faith and works combined. The faith without the works is dead being alone.—James 2: 17. And that works without faith is in the same condition, because, "without faith it is impossible to please God."—Heb. xi: 6. Now Paul says: "There is one faith."—Eph. iv: 5. RE-BAPTISM.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I have recently written several communications for publication to a number of our editors, but one of which has been published, and about half of that was suppressed, I suppose because I endorse the teaching which is being advocated by the F. F. Many of our editors are very much like many of those who pretend to pray at the present day: "Lord, thy will be done according to my will." Our editors are willing that all shall be heard through the columns of their respective journals, unless we happen to run counter to their peculiar manner of thinking and teaching; but do this, and the communication either finds its way to the waste basket, or is pruned down to harmonize with the peculiar notions of the editors. I have thought proper to express my humble views through some of our journals, but desired to be heard through some other than the F. F., but it seems that I can only be heard through that medium.

Many questions, or subjects are agitating those who compose the church of Christ. The organ in worship, the re-baptism, and missionary machine, and other questions, occupy much space in our religious journals, and we are much divided upon each of these questions. I desire, in this communication, to refer to what is styled the re-baptism subject, and here permit me to say, I would oppose re-baptism, if such a thing was being practiced by any of those with whom I am proud to stand identified; for I hold that when a penitent believer has confessed Christ before men, and has been baptized for the remission of sins, (in order to remission), he has been baptized into Jesus Christ, and thereby put on Christ, and that is an end to baptism; and I would always oppose re-baptizing such an one.

And now the question arises, has any one who has not been thus baptized obeyed the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ? And be it remembered that Paul hath declared, (II. Thes. ix; 8-9,) that they who obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power. And now I propose to examine the Scriptures and settle this vexed question from the plain teachings of that inspired volume.

Our Savior, (Mark 16:16,) instructed the disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, but bid them stay in the city of Jerusalem until they be endued with power from on high; they obeyed this injunction, and were thus endued, and all who are conversant with the Scriptures remember that our Savior said: (Luke 24:46,) that repentance and remission of sins should begin to be preached in his name at Jerusalem; and now will any dare assert that Peter did not preach the gospel on the memorable day of Pentecost? All must admit that, on that eventful day, he proclaimed the terms of pardon to the alien sinner. Then we need only to consult Acts 2:38, to determine what are the conditions precedent to the pardon of sins. The Spirit of God, in answer to the momentous question propounded by those Jews whom Peter had convinced that Jesus was the Christ, was, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Then it will be remembered that the great Apostle to the Gentiles said, (Rom. 10:17), that "faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God;" then, if Paul be correct, faith cannot be obtained in any other way, or by any other means, than by hearing the word of God, and Paul demonstrated just how faith comes when he said to the Corinthians, (I. Cor. 4:15), in Jesus Christ I have begotten you through the gospel; then if the Scriptures demonstrate anything, they settle the question as to how we are to obtain faith.

And now I desire to propound a question to those who are so violently opposing what they are pleased to style re-baptism. Will you dare assert that the Baptist preachers preach the gospel, and proclaim the terms of pardon to the alien sinner, as announced by the Spirit of God by the mouth of Peter on Pentecost, and repeated by Paul and the other Apostles, from time to time in their teaching? But how dare you not concede this fact in regard to Baptist teaching? for you know they practice the mourners bench system, and urge the sinner to repair to the anxious seat, and when he is there, they instruct and urge him to pray for pardon of his sins, which you know that all the official expounders, commentators and preachers on this mundane sphere to-day, cannot find in all the sixty-six books composing the the divine library, a single instance where God ever promised to pardon the sins of an alien sinner in answer to prayer, nor did God ever command an alien sinner to pray for pardon of sins. And, brethren, you know full well that Baptist preachers do not baptize for the remission of sins, but that they require the candidate for baptism to state that he believes that God for Christ's sake has pardoned his sins, before they will proceed to baptize him. And you further know, brethren, that you, in all your literature, ignore and ridicule Baptist teaching and practice, and yet, strange to say, you announce to the world by your acts, which speak louder than words, that Baptist teaching, (although you say they teach error), makes or produces genuine Scriptural Christians.

I suggest that, in order to be consistent, you cease to antagonize Baptist teaching, or that you abandon the shaking process. Brethren, are you vain enough to suppose that the fact, that you shake the hand of a Baptist, who has never been baptized for remission of sins, nor obeyed the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, improves his spiritual condition? You know it does not, and you know that is all you do for them. The time for laying on of hands, and the time of miracles are past.

I have said in this communication that I would oppose re-baptism, and I surely would; but I assert that, he who has been taught by Baptist preachers, that he must get religion before he can be baptized, and is then baptized because his sins are pardoned, has never been baptized nor obeyed the gospel; and that when he thereafter obeys the gospel and is baptized, he is then, for the first time, Scripturally baptized; he then has for the first time obeyed the gospel, and there is no re-baptism in his case.

I know that many brethren whom I love dearly favor the shaking in process, but permit me to here say, that God never devised but one scheme of redemption, and the sequel may prove, and eternally reveal the fact, that none but those who have been baptized for the remission of sins, have obeyed the gospel. Brethren, we had better teach dying men and women to be baptized for, (in order to), remission of sins in obedience to the mandate of the Holy Spirit on the great Pentecost, and thereby make it as sure as they can. This is the infallible plan.

Bro. McGary has, in days ago, indulged in too much sarcasm, but I rejoice to observe that he has toned down much, and the result is, the F. F. is daily growing in favor with the people. I know whereof I speak

INNOVATIONS.

Editor Firm Foundation:

Through the kindness of an unknown friend, I have been receiving your valuable paper for several weeks, and now, in love for the truth which it advocates, and as a special reply to brother Stone's request, I send you a short article, which you can publish, if you deem it worthy.

In the F. F., of June 15, we find a letter from brother Stone, in which he appeals to the brotherhood against the innovations of the present day, and urges us to come out on this subject.

We are aware that these are perilous times, and that, to express a desire to return to the "ancient order of things," is not the popular thing to do. "But, if God be for us, who can be against us?" We have the promise that, "Where two or three meet together in my name, there am I, in the midst of them." A promise that is not found for a crowd, or multitude. We have, living here with us, an aged aunt, who was immersed into Christ over fifty years ago, and with John Steele, Newton Mulky, Wm. D. Jourdan, and Isaac T. Reenan, for teachers, she has not yet fallen out by the way, and given heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils. My husband and myself were immersed thirteen years ago. We were instructed by Isaac T. Reenan, and other faithful followers of Christ, to take the word of God as our rule of faith and practice, and to speak as the oracles of God; and now, because we will not listen to the commandments of men, and join in with Sunday-schools, children's day, church fairs, festivals, and such like, we are denounced, derided—nay, almost ostracized from polite society. It is a sad state of affairs to know that these society people are so ignorant of the word of God. True, they take a "Golden text" from the Bible, and then, as an old woman once said, "they preach from the text." [Yes, a long ways from it.—ED.]

We have with us a regular preacher who is a good man, though a progressive. He is a great favorite with the denominations. A few days ago, in conversation with my husband, on the subject of modern innovations, the subject of Moses' going up to receive the law, was discussed, and my husband said: "You know, brother T—, that when Moses returned from the Mount, after forty days' absence, that he found the people worshipping a molten calf?" Whereupon brother T. said: "W-e-l-l, I don't think the Bible states that he was absent forty days; I think it says two days, or may be three: really, I don't know." On another occasion he said he didn't know whether or not the New Testament writers recorded Timothy as ever having performed a miracle. And this brother is a college graduate, and keeps, as he says, a world of authors at his back.

Because we claim, as David did, that "the law of the Lord is perfect, etc.," without the modern auxiliaries, they call us old fogies; and we are often asked: "Why, don't you know this is a fast-age? This is the the Nineteenth century." At all this we do not falter, for it only makes the Bible clearer and more easily understood; for Paul declares that, in the last days, perilous times shall come, and men shall be boasters, heady, highminded, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men.

We often hear our own brethren say: "Oh! the Sunday-school is the greatest institution on earth. We interest the children with lesson leaves, children's day, music, ect., and they easily give their little hearts to Christ." Saying, lo here is Christ, or there, showing great signs and wonders, inasmuch that if it were possible, they would deceive the very elect. But Jesus says, "If they say unto you, behold he is in the desert, go not forth; behold he is in the secret chambers, believe it not." Again he says: "He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber."

Now we understand that Jesus Christ is the door, the way, the truth, and the life. As the Bible is silent concerning Sunday-schools, we understand that the Church is the sheepfold, and that through the church is the way to eternal life. I recently asked a sister, why her children did not attend church meeting with her? She said: "O, they didn't want to come." Then again, a short while afterwards, she said: "I am going to send my children to Sunday-school, (sectarian at that), every Sunday."

The Bible says that "Eli's sons were vile and he restrained them not," It also tells their awful doom, for which Eli was responsible. Paul admonishes parents to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; and Solomon said: "Train up a child in the way it should go, and, when it gets old, it will not depart from it." No difference whether our children want to do so and so or not. We should set a good example, and compel them to obey. I well remember the time when I would much rather have staid at home and made mud cakes, than to go with my faithful mother to church; but I went, and there formed habits, and received instructions, that, though grievous at the time, have proved to be "Durable riches and righteousness, whose fruit is better than gold."—Prov. 8: 18-19. Dear dead mother. How can I express what I owe to her memory for bringing me up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

False teaching has been the ruin of God's people ever since satan entered Eden. And, according to God's word, the blood of those people will be on the heads of those who taught them falsely. We read in Kings where all the people, both small and great, went into the house of the Lord, and the king read in their hearing from the law of the Lord. Now, we go out to church, and it is a rare thing to see a little child. "It is not fashionable to take babies to church." Mothers do not wish to disturb the preacher, consequently, she will absent herself from the Lord's table and His house; then, after a while, will send that child to a Sunday-school to be taught by some one else.

Now my dear sisters, of the FIRM FOUNDATION, how many of you will come out and say: "The law of the Lord is perfect, we will not add to that holy word, where the Bible speaks we speak, where it is silent we are silent."?

Sunday-schools are fashionable follies through which all these innovations come. In them, they teach for doctrine the commandments of men, which is but a fashion of the present day, and must perish with the using. But as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord in his own appointed way, which is so plain that "the wayfaring men, though fools, need not err therein." Training up our own children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, they will then rise up and call us blessed, and finally, when we are called hence, we will hear that welcome greeting: "Come ye blessed of my Father, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

Sincerely your sister in Christ.

WHAT IS TRUTH?

When the Jews determined to crucify Jesus, they took Him and bound Him, charging Him with trying to induce the people to rebel against the Roman authorities. And when He stood in the judgment hall before Pilot, Pilot said: "Art thou the king of the Jews?" Jesus said: "My kingdom is not of this world." Pilot, not being satisfied with this answer, said: "Art thou a king, then?" Jesus said: "Thou saith that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice." Pilot said unto Jesus: "What is truth?" To this, Jesus gave no answer; yet, when we read, (Isalah 5: 3-7), "He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so opened he not his mouth;" we can see the propriety of Jesus' remaining silent. When Jesus declared that, every one that is of the truth heareth his voice, He says, in substance, the truth is to be heard and obeyed. Turning back one chapter, we hear Jesus praying to the Father, saying: "Sanctify them (the twelve) through the truth."

Thy word is truth, (John 17: 16-17); and again, in verse 20, Jesus said: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." Here we see, first, the words of God are truth, and, second, that the words of the Apostles are the things we are to believe. Neither here nor elsewhere, has Jesus intimated that any of the words of the Apostles was not to be believed; was not a part of the gospel of Christ. Hence to come within range of Jesus' prayer, is to believe what the Apostles have said; for Jesus said: "I have given them the words which thou gavest me, and they have received them." Here we see that what the Apostles have said, are the words of God.

Brethren, shall we believe God's word? Who dare say that we can be sanctified other than through the truth? Paul said: "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men who hold the truth in unrighteousness." Here we see that we must accept the truth in righteousness. Are we thus accepting the truth? Let us examine ourselves. Again, in John 8: 31-32, Jesus said to those Jews who believed on him: "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Here we see believing Jews were to know the truth. This being before the Holy Spirit had revealed the truth, they could not, therefore, know the way by which they were to be made free, and were not yet free. But when the truth was revealed on the day of Pentecost, these Jews heard, and, in this way, they knew the truth, and now, three thousand are made free. How was this done? 1st. By revealing the truth. 2nd. By understanding the truth. 3rd. By obeying the truth. We have shown that the word of God is truth; and that the Apostles were guided in all truth, speaking the word of God, as guided by the Holy Spirit.

I now ask, are not the words of God, as spoken by the Apostles, the gospel? Paul says, in Eph. 1: 13, "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation." Here Paul declares that the word of truth is the gospel, and that they were made free after hearing, which, certainly shows that the Ephesians were not made free in ignorance, but by understanding and obeying. Again, in Rom. 10: 16, Paul says: "But they have not all obeyed the gospel." Here we see, as in Eph. 1: 13, that the gospel is to be obeyed. As facts cannot be obeyed, the gospel must consist of more than facts, or it could not be obeyed.

As the word of God contains the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, and commands and promises, is it not reasonable to conclude that the gospel is composed of facts to be believed, commands to be obeyed and promises to be received? Now, we can understand 1st Cor. 15: 1-1, "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also you have received, and wherein you stand, and by which also you are saved, if you keep in memory what I have preached unto you, unless you have believed in vain. For I delivered unto you, first of all, that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins, according to the scriptures, and He was crucified, and that He rose the third day, according to the scriptures." Here Paul is teaching facts, no commands as yet. Will those who contend that the death, burial and resurrection is the gospel, please tell how the Corinthians obeyed the death, burial and resurrection, and then harmonize this with Rom. 6: 17, where Paul declares, that they had obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine which was delivered them?

Can it be, that the form of a thing is the thing itself? In 1st Cor. 15: 1-4, Paul is laying the foundation; he said, first of all, I declared unto you, etc. Is the first of anything all? Let's see: In building a house, the first thing to be done is laying the foundation; second, building on the foundation. Have we built the house when we have only laid the foundation? Paul said: "I have laid the foundation: other foundation can no man lay than that is laid." Brethren, what was this foundation that Paul laid in Corinth? Can it be that this foundation, and the building which was placed on this foundation, was the same? Paul's preaching certainly agrees with Peter's sermon at Pentecost. Peter first laid the foundation; second, built on this foundation. Had Peter stopped when he told the Jews of the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus, would any of them have been pardoned? Not one of the three thousand obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine delivered them until Peter told them what to do.

LETTER FROM BRO. STONE.

Bro. McGary & Hansbrough:

I still feel inclined to encourage the true friends of our common Lord through your most excellent paper, the FIRM FOUNDATION. Truly we have a warfare. Almost thirty years ago, I enlisted as a soldier under Jesus Christ. I enlisted during the war. I then understood that the contest was between Christianity and sectism; between truth and falsehood; between the gospel of Christ and heresy. I very soon was engaged in the thickest of the fight with my sectarian neighbors. I buckled on the whole armor, drew the sword of the Spirit, and found not much difficulty in putting their hosts to flight. One or two punctures with that glittering sword, would send them off howling. With the effects of that sword, I was delighted. I liked the exercise, and was wielding it gloriously; but alas! when I began to think the victory well nigh won, I looked along our glorious line, and behold, the traitors were many. They appeared to still be in our lines; but they were saying to their fellows: "Don't strike that man, he is a good friend to the king. It is true, he does not claim to belong to us; but then he has secretly taken the oath of allegiance to our king. He is our friend." Ask them: "Who are all these arrayed against us, reviling us, and calling us by ugly names," and their reply, will be something like the following: "Well, these are all in a kind of secret alliance with the king. They all serve him in one way or another." The truth is, that all those were claiming to be servants of our king; but were, in fact, servants of men. They had formulated their modes of service, and were teaching for doctrine the commandments of men. Of such, Jesus says: "In vain do they worship me."—Matt xv: 9. Their allegiance was only pretence.

I saw all this, and raised my voice against it; and my pen, too. But when I had written one or two articles, showing the disloyalty of the sects, I was shut out of the paper in which my articles appeared; which was a "Reliable" paper. Finally, the FIRM FOUNDATION appeared, which gave me another opportunity of firing on the citadel of sectism, and I at once opened fire; but no avowed sectarian returned the fire. But lo! one W. H. Krutslinger, and one John L. Garner, opened fire on me, (openly, however.) Then came one D. M. Sprague; then one Mr. A., claiming to be gathering fragments. He bush-whacked me. And then, one notorious Kansas man, who declared that his conversion was a genuine Baptist conversion, (which I believe), and his immersion a Baptist immersion, (which I am not inclined to dispute.) Then there was a certain man who climbed a Theological tree and fell out, threw a club at my head, but, fortunately missed his aim; since then, he advises moderation and forbearance. Finally, last, but not least, W. B. F. Treat, from an eminence which I will call, the Plains of Abraham, fired a mortar at my fortifications, and, if it had not been that I was entrenched behind the truth, doubtless, he would have seriously crippled me, provided he had cut his fuse long enough. His fuse was rather short, and his shell fell just outside my fortification. I immediately returned the fire, and, about that time, one Dr. Hughey fired a swivel at Treat from Fort Hughey, (a Methodist fort out west), whereupon brother Treat brought his artillery to bear on Ft. Hughey, and, for the time, I am relieved from the fury of brother Treat. Bro. Sommer fired at me with something, the report of which reminded me of a Carbine about half charged. So you see, my friends, that peace has not been declared yet.

Here, I desire to lay before your readers, some of the things written by brother Sommer in reply to me. I do so for the benefit of those who do not read the Octographic Review. The first I shall notice is, where he says: "Christ gave two ordinances—baptism and the Lord's supper. The former tests the loyalty of the alien sinner; the latter, the loyalty of the saint." Here I would ask brother Sommer: How much does baptism test the loyalty of the alien sinner? Are there not hundreds of persons baptized who are not loyal to Christ? If it be a test of loyalty, then it should follow, that all who are baptized are loyal to the Lord; but that does not follow, and, therefore, it is not the test of such loyalty. Neither is the communion the test of loyalty to the saint; because thousands partake who are not saints. This is not the test given by the Lord, nor by any apostle that I know anything of. Christ said: "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Ye shall know them by their fruits."—Matt. vii: 16. And James says: "Show me your faith without your works, and I will show you my faith by my works."—James ii: 18. Not by one single act, but by works, in the plural.

I would suggest to brother Sommer, that there is much more loyalty to Christ shown in submitting to baptism for the design for which Christ said; that is, for the remission of sins, than there is in simply being immersed without any special design.

He says again: "The former was to be obeyed from the heart; concerning the latter, it is said, 'let a man examine himself.'" What does he understand, "from the heart," means? I say it means understandingly, for a purpose. "Of the latter it is said, 'let a man examine himself.'" To whom, brother Sommer, is the taking of the supper a test of loyalty? To the person himself, or to others? If we are to judge of his loyalty by his taking, then to us there is one test, and to himself there is a different test; for he has to examine himself. His partaking is not even a test to himself, how can it be to others? Will the brother rise and explain?

Again, he says: "Our business is to preach the truth as we find it, and then leave fitness for both ordinances to be determined at the point of each individual's conscience." That leaves each individual to exercise his own conscience. I understand that to mean, that if a man's conscience says to him, "be sprinkled," that is the point of his conscience, and we have no right to search into his conscience. We must not probe that matter.

Again: "He is to examine himself and so eat." If he has been sprinkled, and his conscience is satisfied, we must let him eat, although we know he is not in Christ—is entirely outside. Do you not see to what lengths these sectarian apologists are going? Will they ever stop this side of Babylon? We must bid an unregenerate alien godspeed by worshiping with him. What is the difference between the shakers and the progressionists? Not as much as there is between Tweedledum and Tweedledee.

Hear him again: "To go beyond this, is to adopt the denominational method which virtually says, 'let each one examine each other,' or, 'let a committee be appointed to examine you.'" To go beyond what? Why, letting every one's conscience be his own guide. You must not ask any questions. You must let every man have his own opinion with regard to his fitness in all matters. I remember that Paul said, "Unto what were you then baptized?" and they said, "unto John's baptism." Here, I suppose, brother Sommer would have asked them something about the conscience, surely. But Paul re-baptized them.

But he says: "While baptism is clearly for the remission of sins, yet it is as clearly for the adoption of sons, for the privilege of prayer, for admission to the Lord's table, for the assurance of having Christ for our intercessor, and all else that comes after baptism, and yet I am certain that brother Stone never baptized, even one in all his life, who had all these important matters before his, or her mind at baptism." Did brother Sommer read in the Bible that baptism is for all these? If he did not, then it is not as clear as the other.

Peter said: "Repent and be baptized for the remission of sins." Did he ever say, be baptized in order to pray? Did he ever say, be baptized in order to have Christ for your intercessor? Never, no, never. After we are in Christ, we are to add to our faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, etc. All these to be added after our baptism, and I think brother Sommer knows this when he thinks of it; but in his great anxiety to save the sects, he forgets much.

Then he says: "Finally, I make this proposition which I am prepared to prove: Those baptized by the denominations manifest more courage and loyalty to Christ, in so doing, than those whom we baptize. If brother Stone will deny this, I will demonstrate it in a single article, and close the controversy." I wrote to him that I understood it to be the privilege of him who denies, to close the controversy; and that if he would affirm, I would deny, in a single article, and close the controversy. But if he would not do that, to quit boasting. I have not heard from him yet; and I don't expect to.

The thermometer stood here yesterday at 106 degrees, and distressingly dry.

May the good Lord bless you all. Farewell.

Catlin, Ind., July 18, '87.

Dear Brother McGary:

I left home Saturday before the first Lord's day in July, for my appointment at Mt. Ida, the county site of Montgomery county, making my journey, a distance of thirty miles, through in one day. On arriving, I found the town in a stir; arrangements having been made for a national celebration on the fourth of July. Thinking, perhaps, we would defeat the devil in, at least, part of his arrangements, we had services on Saturday, just in front of the stand. (We could see the platform which had been erected for dancing purposes.) On Lord's day and at night, we preached to a large audience. It was supposed, that on Lord's day night, there were present about three hundred persons. Left, as we learned, a fine impression, hence a success. While there is not a saloon in Mt. Ida, yet they dance.

Preached the second Lord's day to rather a small audience. One lady came forward and made the good confession, and on Lord's day evening we buried her with her Lord in baptism. This church is not divided upon baptism, societies, etc., but as in one, in union, baptism for the remission of sins. There are several copies of the F. F. read in this congregation. My protracted meeting at this place will embrace the second Lord's day in September.

Bro. McGary, if a congregation should say: "we will give you a certain stipulated amount for your services one year," would you be justifiable in making the contract? Love to the F. F.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, AUGUST 15, 1887.

ALL correspondence pertaining to the FIRM FOUNDATION should be addressed to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Box 36. All checks or money orders should be made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

ATTENTION, READERS.

This is to notify my brethren and friends that ere this reaches them, my home will be Fort McKavett, Menard county, Texas. All correspondence to me should be addressed there. Our exchanges will please note this change and send their papers to that place. But all funds and orders for the FIRM FOUNDATION or any pamphlet published by us should be addressed and made payable to the FIRM FOUNDATION, Austin, Texas.

A. MCGARY.

We will send the F. F. for four months, and give the Oatman-McGary discussion, for 50 cents; or five names for two dollars—commence at any time.

Please notice brother McGary's change in address. Send all individual letters to him at McKavett, but send all letters pertaining to the F. F. to this office, box 36.

If you see this copy of the F. F. (or any other copy of it), and like it, and wish to give it a trial, act as your own agent, (if there is no agent for it near you,) and send for it on our trial offer from now till January 1, 1888, for twenty-five cents.

The two articles of brother Stone in this issue show so plainly the weakness of the position of those who try to uphold falsehood, that any ten year old child can see the difference between the principles of the gospel of Christ and the opinions of such men as Hodgen, Sommer, Burnett, Trent, and all that class of opinionists. The truth is mighty and will prevail. It is only a question of time.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We are going to call upon you in all kindness, to send in your dues, if you owe anything, by the first of October. You are aware that hard times fall doubly severe upon us, when we tell you that a great many have not settled with us; and you know that we do not advertise as other papers do, hence it requires close collection to carry on the F. F. and keep it out of debt; and we hope no one will become sensitive on the subject, and have this as an excuse to stop his subscription. We want to give you the best paper in the world for the least cash. So, brethren, send us your arrears and renewals in advance and thus aid us in our work. While it is a small amount to each of you, the aggregate is immense to us.

Brethren, if you like the F. F., send us the names of some of your friends for sample copies.

When we last heard from brother Hansbrough, he had been to Smithwick Mill, had turned the meeting over to brother James, and was on his way to Menard county. He reports that the country is all excitement over politics, prohibition, and barbecues. No interest seem to be taken in the word of the Lord by any except a few old fogies who have been bought with the precious blood of the Son of God, whose citizenship is in heaven.

Just in receipt of a long letter from an old friend of ours, brother Ed Howland, of Flatonia, Texas, earnestly desiring some good gospel preacher to go and conduct a week's meeting in Columbus for the brethren at Prairie View, Colorado county, some time in August or September. He says their expenses will be paid there and back, and more besides. Who will heed this call to go and preach? Write to brother Ed for further particulars.

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER.

We will send the F. F. to any address till the first of January, 1888, for twenty-five cents on trial, or five copies till then for one dollar. This is a splendid opportunity for the friends of the F. F. to send in the names of some of their friends in different counties, or in different states, in order to give them a chance to read and learn that there is, published by Christians, one sound paper that boldly contends for the faith once delivered to the saints, one that will not compromise with any error in any manner, shape or form.

Mr. A. McGary:

I have seen a copy of your valuable paper, entitled the FIRM FOUNDATION. I did not know that there was such a paper by that name until then. I must say, that it is the best paper I have ever read; it is fearless and not afraid to advocate the Christian faith; not afraid to talk to the sects, especially to the Baptists, who have the hardest heads of all. The people stand in need of a paper like this.

The sects cannot think of anything worse, when they hear the truth preached, than to say, it is Campbellism. We have no right to be ashamed of our departed evangelist, Alexander Campbell, who has passed over the river of death, but who leaves behind him a monument greater than one of marble or granite—a monument in the hearts of the people who love the gospel of Christ. Campbell's good works, in these dear little mountains of West Virginia, will last forever.

Send me your valuable paper one year, and I will pay the subscription in a month or so.

I remain yours in hope of eternal life.

Those whose time for the F. F. has expired, or will expire shortly, will please send in their renewals as early as possible. If you do not know how your account stands, write us word, stating how much you have paid.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

In answer to brother I. C. Stone's request in the F. F., of June 15th, I will here state to him, and all others, who may chance to see this, that the brethren of this county, and, more especially, of Two Mile Creek church, of which I am an elder, do not hold to any human institution; therefore, we wholly denounce such departures from God's word as brother Stone calls our attention to, viz: missionary societies, ministerial associations, symbols in the house of the Lord, (Catholic like), Sunday-schools, with their celebrations and innovations, and, last, but not least, that Presbytery, there to assemble to lord it over God's heritage, with which the so-called Bible college hath its part of the work: and all departures from God's word.

Now, brethren, know this: they that commit such things are not of us who love his appearing; if they were, they would have continued with us in his doctrine; but they have gone out from us, (in that they have not kept God's holy word sacred,) that they might be made manifest, that they are not of us. They are of the world; therefore, speak they of the world, and the world heareth them.—I. John 4: 5. We know him, if we keep his commandments.—I. John 2: 3. But there were false prophets among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies.—II. Peter 2: 1.

Here they are, in our day, with their damnable departures from the doctrine of Christ, and many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom, the way of truth shall be evil spoken of, and through covetousness shall they with fained words make merchandise of you; whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not.—II. Peter 2: 2-3. They covet our silver and gold, this is why they preach their popular hand shaking, and unintelligent baptism doctrine, in order to please men, to get the number; knowing, the greater the number of this kind, the greater their profit; better for them not to have known the way of righteousness than after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them; but it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, the dog is turned to his own vomit again, and the sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the mire.—II. Peter 2: 21-22.

We must withdraw fellowship from all who will not take God's word as a sufficient equipment for life and salvation, separate from all humanisms.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

I have been asked how I would preach on Christian Union, if I endorse the principles of the F. F. I will give a brief outline of how I do so. I would take the prayer of my Savior in John 17. In verse 8, he says: "I have given unto them (his disciples) the words which thou gavest me." In verses 20 and 21, he says: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

We notice first, the union for which our Savior prayed, is a union of the children of God. Second, that he prayed also for those who believe on him through the words he gave his Apostles. All, then, who believe on him through their words, are introduced into a state of oneness. This class are exhorted to remain one. We first become one, and then are taught to continue one. How then do we become one? There is One Body. There is a way into this body. Jesus says: "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me."—John 14: 6. In connection with this examine Matt. 22: 14; Acts 15: 17; II Peter 2: 2, 15; 21; Heb. 9: 8, and you will see that Jesus, the Holy Spirit, evil spirits, the Pharisees, the Apostles and disciples, all speak of the way, and never of the ways.

But we do find the plural form. We read of the pernicious ways, and of the ways of death. One of these ways was referred to by Jesus in John 10: 1, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber."

There is but one way into the One Body. We get into this One Body by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. We have seen that Jesus gave his Apostles the words he received from his Father, and that he prayed for those who would believe on him through their words. Hence, the Apostle Paul taught the brethren at Rome: "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." By faith in the word of the Lord we are moved to repent.—Acts 2: 38. By faith in the word of the Lord, we confess with the mouth the Lord Jesus Christ.—Rom. 10: 10. By faith in the Lord Jesus Christ we are baptized.—Mark 16: 16. All who thus come to the Savior are introduced into the One Body, and hence into a state of oneness according to the prayer of our Savior, "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word, that they all may be one." To those thus brought into this state of oneness, Paul wrote: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that you be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."—I. Cor. 1: 10. So they we must first become one, by being introduced into the family of God by the teaching of the law of the Spirit of life. We are then Christians, children of God, joint heirs with Christ, and must maintain this unity of interest by being perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment.

In my early preaching life, I used to preach the necessity of the union of all religionists. Many brethren continue this practice. Such a union is no where taught by Jesus Christ nor his Apostles. Persons who have not become members of the Body of Christ by believing on Christ through the word of the Apostles, are not subjects of Christ, and to them the subject of Christian Union does not apply. Christian Union is a Union of Christians. To Christians Paul wrote: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that you be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment."

Now are Christians to speak the same things, and to be joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment? The last sentence of the second chapter of 1st Cor. teaches us that, "we have the mind of Christ." How? We have the words of the Apostles spoken by inspiration. Christ said: "I have given them the words which thou gavest me." Therefore, all Christians possess the mind of Christ. We can then speak the same things, and speak them authoritatively.

So long as we do this we will be perfectly joined together in the same mind and judgment. So long as we do this, there will be no divisions among us. It is when we cease to give heed to the words of Christ that division crops out. If material is received into the building not squared and tempered by the word of God, the result will be division. If faith on the part of the material received was after repentance, and was a direct saving power, it was not the faith that comes by the hearing of the word of God. If the repentance on the part of the material received was a repentance that preceded faith, and in order to faith, it was not the repentance that comes by hearing the word of the Lord. If the confession of the material received was, that Jesus had pardoned their sins, it was not the confession that comes by hearing the word of the Lord. If the baptism on the part of the material received was because of the remission of sins, and a door into some denomination called a church, it was not the One Baptism that comes by hearing the word of the Lord. There can be no such thing as Christian union with this class of persons, for they are not Christians. Honest persons they may be, but they are not Christians.

The reception of such persons into the building is one of the leading causes of the many divisions now in the Body. Our Alliance brethren will not receive a person into their order who does not possess the necessary qualifications, and then only by their law of induction. So with the Masons, Odd Fellows, etc. Do you not think the law of Christ is as binding as the laws of these human institutions?

There is One Father, One Lord, One Spirit, (and it instructs through words and not independent of them) One Faith, (that comes by hearing the word of God, and is not a direct impartation), One Baptism, (and it is for the remission of sins, and not because of), and One Body, which is the Body of Christ, the Church of God, the House of God, which is the Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth. These things must be accepted, believed and obeyed.

In order to union, Christians must have obeyed the form of doctrine delivered, must teach the same, and practice what they teach. How can two walk together unless they are agreed? Paul, to the Corinthians, (2: 5-7), taught that we walk by faith. He taught the brethren at Rome, that faith comes by hearing the word of God. He taught the Galatians: "As many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them, etc.—Gal. 6: 16. He taught the Christians at Ephesus that, "We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."—Eph. 2: 20. He taught the Christians at Philippi: "Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so as ye have us for an ensample."—Phil. 3: 17. He taught the brethren at Rome: "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause division and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them."—Rom. 16: 17.

Now, brethren, are we united? Where is the trouble in reference to the material brought into the building. Is it introduced by those who contend that every step should be taken as Jesus commands, and for the purpose commanded? You know it is not. Where is the trouble in the Body of Christ? Is it introduced by those who contend for precept, example, and a necessary inference? You know it is not. Why not give heed to the Apostle: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment?"

"Ye have the mind of Christ." If we possess the mind of Christ, we will not be divided over the things before mentioned. Neither will the organ question divide us if we are governed by the will of the Lord. The missionary question is settled in this way. So with every other question over which brethren are wrangling.

Let us, brethren, work for the union of Christians, remembering that: "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds, casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."—II. Cor. 10: 4-6. J. S. D.

ARE WE LIKE THE SECTS?

Dear Bro. McGary:

If you can find space in the FIRM FOUNDATION for this communication I would be pleased. I am isolated here; cut off from all Christian influences save one, and through that one, the F. F. has been kindly sent to myself, and brother in Christ, by his mother, sister N. J. Basson, of Bald Prairie, Texas.

Now, brother McGary, I am no scholar, philosopher, or teacher, but I believe in "one Lord, one faith, and one baptism," as taught in the New Testament and in the FIRM FOUNDATION, and it makes my heart feel sick and faint when I see the strife among the brethren. Why is this? Is it because they cannot understand God's word? No, not that; for the Scriptures say: It is so plain that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein.

Now the subject of baptism, which is agitating the minds of the so-called disciples of Christ, is one of the plainest commandments in all the Bible. And the following questions naturally arise in my mind, and I find no way out of the dilemma into which they place us. If we acknowledge that all (the sects) are right, then the great work in the reformation of the latter days has been in vain. I will ask these questions, and every member of the church of Christ can answer at once in the negative: Are we like the sects? No! by every one. Do we hold the same articles of faith? No! Are they right? No! Then why, my brethren, I ask you why, in the name of reason, and of your profession of faith, do you, by your actions, say they are right?

"Oh," you say, "we don't." Let us investigate this further and see: In the first place, they have the mourner's bench, where, undergoing a series of howls and tears, of a few hugs, and a long string of prayers for the Holy Ghost to come down and pardon their sins, (when the Holy Ghost has performed it's mission eighteen hundred years ago,) they at last confess—what? That Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God? No. They confess that God has worked a special miracle for Christ's sake, and has pardoned their sins. Now we know that this is not true. Yet some Christians claim that that candidate is a fit subject for baptism. Oh no, you don't; do you? Well, let us see: That candidate was baptized into what? Into Christ? No; into some sectarian church. They could not be baptized into Christ, for they claim that they were Christians before they were baptized, and we know we cannot baptize a Christian into Christ; it would be foolishness to try. Were they Christians before they were baptized? Most emphatically no. For Paul says: "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Christ, were baptized into his death?" Then, if they were not Christians before, were they afterwards? No, certainly not; for they were not baptized for the remission of sins, but because God had for Christ's sake pardoned their sins. We find by this that they are not Christians, but have uttered a falsehood; and the Bible teaches us that a liar cannot enter the kingdom of heaven.

Then again, some will say, "they were in earnest and are all right. It is not the way they get into the kingdom, it is the way they do afterward. Strive to enter into the strait gate." Now, if I were to judge, I would say, the greater error is the way they enter; for many are moral, sober, and zealous workers, in the wrong cause, and it is what they do after they get into the church, (so-called by them), that they have a good chance for heaven. It is not what they do, my brethren, after their profession, it is their profession. If they confess Christ and are baptized into Christ for the remission of sins, having repented of their sins, they will be in Christ, and not in one of the sectarian churches.

Now let us all go to work for Christ, laying aside all malice, envy, strife, jealousy, and bickerings, with an eye single, not as men pleasers, with eye-service, but as true Christians, march "onward and upward," with our arms glistening beneath the rays of God's glorious and approving smile. On to Canaan, on to glory, on to God, is the sincere prayer of your brother in Christ. T. C. GOLDMAN.

REPLY TO J. C. STONE BY "ONE
I. N. HODGEN."

Well, brother Stone, will you permit this "awkward" fellow to talk to you a little more about who is safe and who is not? We will try to be short.

1. You reply to my inquiry, "Is it essential to understand what faith is in order to believe?" by asking the question: "Can a person believe a proposition without knowing what the proposition is?" To this I answer, positively, yes. The great proposition of the gospel is, that "Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God." You believe this, but do you know or fully comprehend all it contains? No, sir; you do not, nor does any living man know all it contains. Hence, faith is in degree proportional to the understanding of the proposition with its evidences to be believed.

2. I asked, "must one know what repentance is, in order to repent?" You reply, "If one does not know what repentance is, will he ever know whether he has repented or not?" Now, my brother, do you say he cannot do a thing without knowing what that thing is? Did you know what your repentance was, when you repented? I will venture the assertion, that, at least, fifty per cent. of the brotherhood, if asked, will say it is sorrow for sin, and still they all repented aright—as proof of it, they mended their lives. "A tree is known by its fruit."

3. You say, "That is just the condition of the sectarian, and I suppose that I. N. Hodgen, (that awkward fellow,) would fain reduce us to the same condition." Well, if I know my heart, it is that all will learn and grow in the grace of God and not go beyond in our zeal.

4. You say, "If persons do not know what repentance is, it is because they have not been taught; but while such men as brother Hodgen teaches the people that they need not know these things, we may expect ignorance to prevail." How did you learn that I teach people that they need not know what faith and repentance and baptism are? This is not a true statement. You teach that they must absolutely know what faith and repentance and confession and baptism are. I affirm that you cannot show that God requires such absoluteness. Who knows all that "Jesus, the Son of God," means? Indeed, it is not a matter of knowledge, but faith; "we walk by faith."

5. I asked, "How many thousands believe with all the heart in Jesus, that never asked themselves what faith is, and how obtained?" But you say, "this is not respectable nonsense, and could he believe the testimony without knowing what the testimony is?" Here you change the point I made from faith to testimony. Now where is the nonsense? But to this, I answer yes—how many thousands believe and know scarcely anything of the testimony? Many children believe more because father and mother believe, than because of the testimony of the Scriptures.

6. When I asked, if we could not do things without understanding what they are, and illustrated by saying, "we see and hear and fall down." You say, you "do not understand what I mean." I mean this: as we can do these things, so can we believe without being able to explain how or why. The little three year old baby believes what its mama tells it, but can it explain how? and if it falls to do just as its mama orders, and she is so loving as to excuse its efforts on the ground of ignorance, so I believe will our heavenly Father. Jesus teaches that, "if we, being evil, give good things to our children, how much more will our heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to those that ask Him," (whether he fully understands how to ask or what he asks for.) He requires no such absoluteness as you and those with you teach, that all the conditions of salvation must be understood absolutely with the promises in connection with them for the parties obeying to be accepted.

I am glad to see that you make some exceptions to absolute obedience, as in the case of the deaf mute and the man I baptized, forgetting to take his confession. Yet, if a man thinks he is pardoned before baptism, and is baptized without making the confession, it is all wrong and can't be acceptable. Here is a great inconsistency. Not the fault of the man baptized without the confession, when forgotten by the baptizer; but, if the man has not been properly instructed and does not make it at all, it is his fault, and he fails to obtain pardon. Do you see the inconsistency? We can't wonder that some say we make a Savior of baptism.

If some persons are baptized as a door into church or kingdom, and this is right, if the Baptist churches are a part of the kingdom of Christ, which I believe is true, and believe they thus fulfill all righteousness, because the Lord commands it, but not specially for remission of sins; this is "sect baptism," not worth a cent. And notwithstanding they live as godly lives as any that know a little more of the gospel, yet it all amounts to nothing, they are lost, lost forever, if they are not baptized for the remission of sins.

This sounds as much of "sectism" to me, as the people that teach that little infants go to hell because they are not sprinkled by a priest.

7. You deny the correctness of my answer to your proposition, "that no one can confide in the promises not knowing whether they are baptized or not." I don't say they have a just right to confide, yet they do trust in all of them as much as we do. You ask, "What promises do they confide in?" Justification by faith, conversion, pardon, etc.

8. I have not taught any such idea, that the Lord should set aside any of his ordinances to accommodate any one. Neither do I teach that any person can be saved who makes no honest, hearty efforts to do His will. But immaterial, how they strive and what they do, unless they understood all the conditions of pardon, they have no right to hope for any good, and will be eventually lost. Now, sir, contrast this unmerciful teaching with that of the Savior: "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do." Now if Jesus could thus forgive those that were murdering him, cannot, and will he not, forgive the innocent, honest ones, who are striving with their whole hearts to obey him? I believe he will. It is matter of faith with me. Bro. A. Campbell said: "I believe there are Christians among the sects." And as a further proof of it, do you not hear God say, by John in Revelations, "Come out of her my people, that you may not partake of her sins," etc. Therefore, God has a people in Babylon, among the "sects."

9. To prove that your statement is true, that I questioned, "that some had given up the good confession," you say: "Now, when you take the confession of a falsehood, (that God, for Christ's sake, has forgiven my sins), for the good confession, have you not given it up?" I have never heard of any of our preachers taking any such confession. When you say, "they need not understand the design of baptism, but may be baptized for some other design, have you not given it up?" I nor any other preacher of "our plea," has ever said, "they need not understand the design of baptism or may be baptized for some other purpose" that I have ever heard of. No, sir; this is not correct. We have no authority to give such permission.

Again, you say we misrepresent you when we say you "have extreme views. Is God's word extreme?" No, sir; the word nowhere teaches, that no one is or can be pardoned unless they understand all contained in the conditions of pardon. I understand you, and those with you, to so teach. Here is the issue, if you can prove that by the word, we will give it up and acknowledge our charge wrong.

Earnestly for the truth only.

I. N. HODGEN.

Woodland, Cal.

Bros. McGary & Hansbrough:

I wrote a short article for your excellent paper yesterday. To-day I have before me a tedious manuscript from brother I. Newton Hodgen in reply to what I wrote sometime ago. At that time I wrote briefly, in reply to an article of his upon this same subject. You all know, that of late, I have had to write a great deal on this baptismal question. And, in the article written yesterday, you will see the reason, I am getting tired of having to defend the truth so long, and that too, against men who ought to, if they do not, know better, I cannot imagine why men who claim to be intelligent Christians, are so determined to uphold sectism, and cling so tenaciously to the doctrine that all the various heresies are parts of the church of Christ. I am satisfied that I shall never convince brother Hodgen, nor Stephens, Sprague, nor any such men. They never started out to be convinced. They set out to defend sectism; and, I here declare, that not one of them has ever offered one single valid argument. And worse than that, when I clearly point out a matter, they seem not to see it.

I shall now take up the article before me and examine it candidly, and, if I fail to cause brother Hodgen to understand me, it will be, either because he cannot, or that he does not wish to. He says that he asked me if it is essential to understand what faith is in order to believe. I say that such a question as that is not pertinent to the question in discussion. My argument is, that the individual who complies with the conditions of salvation must know the design of each of those conditions. Now when Jesus says: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature: He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; and he that believeth not shall be damned." And when they went and preached the gospel to the people, where would have been the pertinency, or even the common sense, in their saying to the apostles, what is faith? The faith was to believe the statements of the apostles. Phillip said: "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest." Believe what? Why, what Phillip had preached concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus the Christ, as he had preached at Samaria.

My reply to brother Hodgen before was exactly in order. I said: How can a man believe a proposition if he does not know what the proposition is? When the people heard the gospel, they knew whether they believed it or not; so they do now. We now go to the people and preach the gospel. In preaching that, we must preach the means of salvation. Is not faith one of the means or conditions? Certainly. Then we must preach faith. If we preach faith as did the apostles, must the people understand what we preach? If they need not then we need not preach it. If we need not preach it, then Jesus need never have said a word about it. In fact, God need never have given any revelation to man, if man need not understand it. And beside, to reveal is to make known. What is known, is understood. There may be circumstances connected with things that we know that we do not understand; but those circumstances not understood, are not known. There may be such circumstances connected with baptism or any other ordinance of Christ which we do not understand; but if so, it is because those circumstances have not been revealed, or made known. What has been made known we do understand, and that is all we claim that God requires.
