Again, the gospel of Christ, as interpreted by James, (2: 24,) says, "Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only;" while we see that the gospel of Methodism says, "Wherefore, that we are justified by faith only, is a most wholesome doctrine, and very full of comfort." Discipline, page 16, article 9. Thus showing the peculiar doctrine of Methodism upon "justification" in contrast with the peculiar doctrine of Christ as interpreted by one of his own chosen apostles upon the same subject. (Of course you, my friend, know that I speak of the restriction of the word "only" in this connection that makes the contrast between the two gospels.) Again, so far as the action of baptism is positively and certainly affirmed by an apostle of the gospel of Christ, as Paul affirms, "We are buried with him (Christ) in baptism." Rom. 6: 4. The revised version says "We were buried, etc.," making either way it is, or was, a burial; and while it is indefinite as to the exact number, it definitely points to the "so many of us as were baptized into Christ;" it is that "many," and leaves out not a single one that had been, or will be, baptized into Christ. Those baptized into some other person or institution, may not have been buried in baptism. We know that there are institutions in this age that people are not buried by baptism "into Christ," and it may have been so then. But Paul affirms that as many as were baptized "into" Christ, were buried, etc. See Col. 2: 12.

But why pursue the contrast further between these two gospels? Since you, my friend, nor a single preacher, nor even one of those "over you" has ever, or will, affirm that "Methodism" is the institution Jesus said that the gates of hell should never prevail against. Now there is no need but for this, (viz.,) That a great many people fail to see and realize the difference between belonging to the church of Christ and the churches of men. As all churches of men have their peculiar introductory rights and ordinances, so has the church of Christ its peculiar ordinances, and these must not be confounded, for we may be sadly disappointed in our hopes in that day that is to try the power of all institutions. Which church shall we give up? Which Master ought we to serve? is the question for us all. May you decide that God may bless you, is the sincere desire of—

A DISCIPLE.

We always think it a pity for one's religion to be so spiritual and sublimated that a thrill of holy horror should pass through the mind at the sound of a collection. When the Jew felt best and most thankful, he would give a portion of his possessions to the Lord, and the gift would become retroactive and help his piety, and all this was at a period of the world's history called the "shadowy dispensation."

THE REVIEW OF BRO. JONES' REJOINER
CONTINUED.

For the want of time and space, I did not say all in my last that it seems to me should be said in reply to Bro. Jones' defence. Several matters left over then will be considered now. He says:

"Paul says, 'How can they preach except they be sent?' Any position which violates this text or usurps the right and duty of the church to send out evangelists and to be represented by them, is not, and cannot be true."

If the interpretation which Bro. Jones puts upon this passage, "How can they preach except they be sent?" is correct, then it is certain that every man who works through any missionary society than the church, violently and outrageously sins against the Lord Jesus Christ; for according to our dear brother, this teaches that the evangelist cannot preach except he be sent, and that he must be sent by the church. "Any position," says he, "which usurps the right and duty of the church to send out evangelists and to be represented by them, is not, and cannot be true." Is the Kentucky Christian Missionary Society a church? Bro. Jones asks me to show "that the work done by the societies usurps the functions of the church and makes void the commandment of God," and then in the same article he puts an interpretation upon a statement of Paul which makes it the duty of the church to send out evangelists, and a usurpation for any other body to do the work. I ask again, Is the Kentucky Christian Missionary Society a church? Are the general convention and the foreign convention churches? If Bro. Jones has not cut off his own head it is because he handles his weapon poorly for he has made a bold stroke with the sword of the Spirit in that direction.

But it is not true that the churches are to send out the preachers; neither this passage, nor any other, teaches it; nor in apostolic times did any church ever send out a preacher to preach. Churches may send out men for the purpose, and they did sometimes do it in the first age of the church, but never did they send out a man to preach. Why not? Simply because Jesus Christ is the great sender forth of preachers. He started the work by saying, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." * * * And lo, I am with you always even to the end of world." In this first place he gave the gospel to the apostles; they were to tell it: they were to commit it to others, who likewise were to hand it down to the faithful men that they might be able to tell others also. to the end of the world; and Jesus promises to be with these ministers guiding them and supporting them to the end of the ages. The servant of the Lord does not need to wait for any church society to send him; every such servant, male and female, should tell the story as he has opportunity, being instant in season, out of season; telling it to men and women and little children: publishing it in the highways, in the streets, and at the firesides; praying always, to God for wisdom, and guidance, and support. Such a one will be guided day by day where he can do the most good, he will be amply supported, and he will grow in might and in the favor of God. If it is best for him to devote all of his time to preaching and teaching, he will be so led; but it is best that he should engage in secular work, in farming, or merchandising, and in any other legitimate calling, he will be so directed. He who in loving, prayerful obedience submits himself to the will of the Lord, doing faithfully, hour by hour, the duty that rises before him, will surely be guided the best way. This rule never fails. If every Christian had followed the rule, such a thing as a missionary society would never have been heard of, but doubtless, long since the kingdoms of the world would have become the kingdom of God's dear Son. Remember how the work was done in the beginning and how it prospered. The apostles were sent forth by the Lord in person; the members of the Jerusalem church, when dispersed, all went about preaching without waiting to be sent by any church; and so the work was done. They were sent by the Lord, not by churches, much less by human societies.

Bro. Jones says, "Personally only those preached who were sent by the church and who possessed the requisite qualifications." I deny that: is anywhere taught in the New Testament that the church ever did, or that they should, send out preachers to preach, and I call upon Bro. Jones for the passage, or passages that he relies upon for the proof of his doctrine. Let him observe, however, that there is a clearly defined distinction between teaching and preaching. Any one who is competent to become a disciple is competent to preach, for to preach is simply to tell the story of the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus the Son of God, and of our chance to be saved by believing upon and obeying him. Any disciple can do this; but to teach, to instruct the church thoroughly in the way of righteousness is another matter, and one which requires a much higher order of talent and proficiency in expounding the Scriptures. It is not astonishing that when the Jerusalem church was dispersed they all preached as they went, old and young, learned and unlearned, male and female; but it is not for a moment to be supposed that all of those thousands were fit to be teachers in churches of the Lord.

Now if my position is correct that Jesus is the sender of preachers, and that he does make a definite contract with them, and that they need to look only to him for guidance and support, if it is true that according to the New Testament the congregation never sends the preacher, then all of Bro. Jones' talk about a contract between preacher and congregation is idle and worthless, being based upon a supposed state of affairs that never did exist by God's will. Says Bro. Jones, "Common sense, the desire for peace, the protection of rights, suggest the propriety of having a definite agreement." It is a significant fact that the common sense of the apostles, their desire for peace and for the protection of their rights never did move them to make such contracts, or to intimate to their assistants and co-workers that they should do so. They had the promise of Christ that all things should work together for their good while they were true to him, that if they would seek his kingdom and his righteousness all their needs should be supplied, and this was deemed abundantly sufficient; their common sense approved of their accepting most trustfully his promises, and they were perfectly satisfied to leave their peace and the protection of their rights in the hands of the loving Son of God. They knew that in the nature of things some of the disciples would prove to be stingy and mean, that some would be as true as steel and as generous as the days were long, but they believed that it would not matter to them while the promise of Christ rested upon them; in some way or another he would provide; he would never forsake them; in spite of false brethren, wicked men, and artful demons, yea, in spite of Satan himself, all things would work for their good always, if only they would love and serve and trust the Master.

THE MINUTES OF THE KENTUCKY CONVENTION.

By the kindness of Bro. J. B. Jones, I have been supplied with the minutes of the Christian Missionary Convention of the State of Kentucky. He complained that I did not have before me all of the facts when I criticised his report, and he desires these minutes to be noticed. Well, the minutes do not help his case much. Year before last the treasurer reported (I wrote from the summary given in the minutes of the General Convention) $13,082.42; in the minutes of this year's work, the treasurer, Bro. Cowden, reports $4,997.39, a very great falling off indeed.

The State board had eighty evangelists employed, it claims, some for all and some for a part of the time. To one of these evangelists they paid nothing; he was sustained, in as far as he was sustained at all, by the churches of Scott county; yet they report him as one of the evangelists in the employ of the board, and report his work as work done by the society. If I were to report W. H. Ford's work as mine, if I were to report that he is my evangelist, in my employ, if I were to report his additions as the result of my work, it seems to me that I would render myself liable to be excluded from the fellowship of the church. The State board does this very thing; it reports him as an evangelist in its employ, and gives his work in its statistical tables when, if I understand the matter right, it had no more to do in sustaining and directing him than had the Czar of Russia. Among the evangelist which the board claims, I find the names of D. S. Austin, Henry Mavity and J. W. Caldwell, but upon turning to the treasurer's report I do not find that he paid them anything; so I suppose they were employed by the board (?) just as Bro. Ford was. I wonder why they did not employ all the other preachers in the State in the same way (it costs nothing) and thus make a big report? I observe however that $25.00 were paid to the Lewis county board, and I learn from another place that two of these evangelists worked in Lewis county; it may be that the State board, by virtue of paying this $25. to the county, claimed the right to report all the work done there as its work, and all the evangelists who labored there as its evangelists. If it does act upon that principle, (and it appears that it sometimes does,) it occurs to me that any man might, by following the same rule, make a splendid report; that is, he could send a few dollars to each of a number of evangelists, and then report all that they do as his work. But doubtless such a course in a man would be regarded as being (to put it as mildly as possible) somewhat crooked; why then is it such a laudable thing in a board? What right has the State board to report as its own the work of the churches of Scott county? What right has it to take to itself honors that properly belong to churches of the Lord?

Now, a question for Bro. Jones. Only one of these eight evangelists was employed for all his time by the board, that is Bro. Munnell; some of the others, perhaps all of them, were sustained partly by laboring for churches; now I want to know if the society reported only its proportional part of the work of these men, or did it rob the churches of their just dues by reporting all the additions, etc.? I remember Bro. W. I. Fowle once told me that the churches at Chaplin and Jeffersonton would each give him some time to spend in evangelizing in destitute sections, and continue his salary while he was thus engaged, and that he expected to give this work to the State Board; he had been requested to do this, I think, by the State evangelist. These two churches had all his time engaged; they gave him permission to go out, and sustained him in

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

An exchange announces that the "Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society of the first Presbyterian Church will serve a missionary tea at the chapel." We had supposed that dining off missionaries was a thing of the past, but it seems that we were misinformed.

Portland, Oregon, now ranks fifth among the commercial cities of this country, and among the cities which she outranks is Philadelphia. The Philadelphia Call says that the commercial decadence of Philadelphia is due to the fact that it oppresses and drives out corporations.

A very queer accident, which might, if it had proved serious, been construed into a suicide, happened last Sunday at Tusekgee, Ala. Mr. Bearney DuBose, while ringing the church bell, was caught around the neck and jerked up seven feet, very near choking the life out of him before he could extricate himself.

S. V. White, deacon and trustee of Plymouth Church, bought and sold a million and a half dollars worth of securities on Friday and in the evening went to Nyack and administered a kindly but vigorous spanking to his pastor, Mr. Beecher. Then he went to bed feeling that he had done a good day's work, and slept soundly.

The grave of Dr. Josiah Gilbert Holland, at Springfield, Mass., has been covered with fresh flowers all summer and this fall by his admirers throughout the State. The first flowers laid there were arbutus, and the wind flowers and violets; and now the mound is covered with gentians and heliotropes, and the late bloom of the honeysuckle, with sprays of golden rod and golden clusters of asters.

From a recent report of the United States Cremation society it appears that there is a growing sentiment for cremation which is finding support in quarters where it was little expected—among religious people. The idea of disposing of the dead by incineration is becoming more popular every day. The excavation for a crematory at Fresh Pond, Long Island, one station out from the Thirty-fourth st. ferry, is half finished, and the contracts are signed for the mason work and the carpenter work. The building will be finished by January the first. There are four bodies now in cemetery vaults awaiting incineration.

The Union Ferry Company plying its boats between New York and Brooklyn for many years at enormous profits to its share-holders asks the city for a reduction of its assessment—$140,000 a year—on the plea that it is losing money. The travel over the bridge, opened May 1881 has interfered somewhat with the profits, but it will take many bridges to satisfy the demand of travel between the two great cities. All income above 10 per cent. goes to New York hospitals by law. One cent fare is charged foot passengers which brings in revenue hardly sufficient for repairs on the mighty structure which cost in round number $14,000,000.

The Presidential election took place on Tuesday, November 4. Since that time the people over the United States have been in a state of constant ferment, owing to the uncertainty of the result. The vote in the State of New York decides the election. This has been so close that the vote of the entire State must be carefully estimated before it can be known which is elected. All of the Southern States, Indiana, Connecticut, and New Jersey, vote the Democratic ticket. New York is confidently claimed by the Democrats, and conceded by most of the Republicans. Some claim it as Republican. With New York, Cleveland will have 219 electoral votes, and Blaine 182. New York has 36 votes. Gen. Bate is elected Governor of Tennessee, but by a greatly reduced majority. The Democratic majority in Congress is reduced by the recent election, but is still twenty-five or thirty. St. John and Butler cut a small figure in the election, but the votes of either in New York would change the entire result.

FOREIGN.

The London Humane society has petitioned the King of Spain to prohibit bull-fighting in that country.

The Governor-General of Canada, the Marquis of Lansdowne and Lady Lansdowne will make their first visit to Halifax this week, spending several days there, and going thence to St. John by way of Annapolis.

There has been a decline of $20 a ton in the price of tin in London, the principal market of the world, within a week. The price is now $77 lower than at this time last year. In this country the consumption is far below the average of 800 tons a month, which we use in ordinary times.

A movement is afoot in England to set up a memorial of Arch Bishop Laud in the church of the parish in which he was born 200 years ago. It is also proposed to honor the memory of Sir William Herschel by an addition to the church of Bath of which the illustrious astronomer was once organist.

Fuller accounts by mail confirm the telegraphic reports of late that the King of Spain is in seriously failing health. His physicians and intimate friends ill conceal their sad conviction that he will not much longer be able to direct the affairs of state, and, indeed, that his remaining span of life is very short.

At first blush it would seem that universal suffrage and direct association in representation were the legitimate demands of every people; but the lamentable experiences in America, broad and liberal as she is, has caused brave thinkers to doubt most seriously the propriety, practicability, or beneficence of universal suffrage.

The proposed Slaughter of the Innocents has been forbidden in Paris—that is to say, the great baby show will not be allowed to take place. Such exhibitions help the spread of disease, and are highly objectionable on that account, at all times; but just now, with the germs of cholera all over France, babies placed on show in Paris certainly could not expect to get off with anything less than cholera infantum.

The celebrated franchise bill, introduced by Mr. Gladstone in the House of Commons, some time since, was very conservative in tone, but its slightest phases were so thoroughly antagonistic to the long-established habits of conservative England, and so nearly affected the House of Lords, as to produce a storm of opposition that bade fair to shake old England to the centre. To avoid trouble a compromise has been effected which will gain many points for the people and still preserve intact the ancient order of things.

As an instance of the wonderful utility of the telephone, the following is given: "The applications for admission to Mr. Ruskin's new lectures at Oxford on the 'Pleasures of England' have been so numerous that it has been proposed to hold overflow meetings in other rooms, where the Professor's discourses may be transmitted by telephone and there interpreted by receivers. In the ordinary lectures of the day the reverse of this telephonic connection could well be applied. Connection might be made between a dozen or so lectures and one hall containing an audience of respectable size, and the people could turn on the wire and listen to this or that distinguished speaker at their opinion."

England has been obliged to yield to the demands of her colonies. For a long time the Government were firm in declaring that Queensland should not annex New-Guinea; but since then the drift of affairs has been so decidedly toward federation in Australasia (which means an independent Republic there some day) that the Foreign Office has finally consented to the occupation of the southern shore of the coveted land, and to establish stations on the adjacent islands. This will quiet the dissatisfaction in the Australian colonies for a time; but having obtained an inch from the mother country now they will not hesitate to try to get an ell when they want it. Presently all New-Guinea will be absorbed. It is a singular spectacle—a Liberal Government which is vehemently opposed to extending the Empire has actually annexed more territory than the last Conservative Government did, although that was especially what Lord Beaconsfield was after.

Beware of judging hastily. It is better to suspend an opinion than to retract an assertion.

the work; the State society had nothing to do with it, except to take to itself the glory that belonged to God's churches? But why does it want to do such things? Because it does so little it is ashamed to make a report of that which is strictly its own work. I believe there are no greater humbugs among religious people than missionary societies. I do believe it would ruin the character of any man for truthfulness, uprightness and honesty, to do as they do.

Leaving out the four men to whom the treasurer's report shows nothing was paid, and summing up the balance of the work, we find that the board's work amounts to this—to the employment of two evangelists for all the time, and one for a third of the time; of baptisms, there were 72 as the result of this work: counting the four men to whom we have just alluded, their work amounts to this—to the employment of three men for all of the time, and one for half the time; their entire report shows 112 added by baptism. Every congregation that has in it fifty grown men ought to do more than that, and many of them would do more, were the preachers to devote the time and attention to running the Lord's plan, to operating the Lord's societies, that they now devote to these human affairs. I oppose these human societies because I want work done, and am sure that not one-tenth part as much is done as would be were we to turn away from these broken reeds, and lean upon the strong arm of God; let us work by the word of God, the divine way. It was done for a hundred years, under the guidance of inspired men, and it can be done again.

In conclusion, and by way of illustrating some other marvels in connection with these societies, I call attention to some points that I get from the report of the Foreign Society. W. T. Moore is one of their missionaries; he is in London preaching for a church of 477 members, that meets in a house called the West London Tabernacle; the society pays him $1,500.00 per year; the work is too much for him, it seems, so he has an assistant, A. J. L. Gliddon, to whom the society paid $700 this last year. Now in this country, when a congregation has a big meeting house like that, (for their house is nearly as large as the Central Church, Cincinnati,) and a membership of 477, we do not consider it a missionary point. I don't know how much the "pastors" get from the church besides what the society pays.

Bro. J. M. Van Horn preaches at Chester; has a membership of 318; was paid $1,720.00 by the society.

Bro. M. D. Todd preaches at Liverpool; has a congregation of 80 members; was paid by the society $2,000.00.

Bro. H. S. Earl preaches at Southampton; has a membership of 164; was paid by the society $1,220.

The official report intimates that nearly as much will be needed at these points next year. Verily, missions in England are queer things; and it must be nice to be a missionary there.

WATCH YOUR WORDS.

Keep a watch on your words, my darling,
For words are wonderful things;
They are sweet, like the bees' fresh honey—
Like the bees, they have terrible stings;
They can bless like the warm, glad sunshine,
And brighten a lonely life;
They can cut, in the strife of anger,
Like an open, two-edged knife.

Let them pass through your lips unchallenged
If their errand is true and kind—
If they come to support the weary,
To comfort and help the blind;
If a bitter, revengeful spirit
Prompt the words, let them be unsaid;
They may flash through a brain like lightning,
Or fall on a heart like lead.

Keep them back, if they're cold and cruel,
Under bar and lock and seal;
The wounds they make, my darling,
Are always slow to heal.
May peace guard your lips, and ever,
From the time of your early youth,
May the words that you daily utter
Be the words of beautiful truth.

A BOY SHOULD HAVE A TRADE.

What about the boy who does not take up with a trade or profession? Look around you and the question is speedily answered. He must cast his hook into any sort of a pond and take such fish as may be easily caught. He is a sort of a tramp. He may work in the brick-yard today, and in the harvest-field to-morrow. He does the drudgery, and gets the pay of the drudge. His wages are so small that he finds it impossible to lay up a dollar, and a fortnight of idleness will see him dead broke. The other evening I saw a man dragging himself wearily along and carrying a pick on his shoulder. "Tired John?" "More so than any horse in Detroit." "What do you work at?" "I'm a digger. Sometimes I work for gas companies, but oftener for plumbers." "Good wages?" "So good that my family never has enough to eat, let alone buying decent clothes. If it wasn't for my wife and children I'd wish for that street car to run over me." "Why didn't you learn a trade?" "Because nobody had interest enough to argue with me. I might have had a good trade and earned good wages, but here I am, working harder for $8 or $9 a week than any man does to earn $18." And now, my boy, if men tell you that the trades are crowded, and that so many carpenters, and blacksmiths, and painters, and shoe-makers and other trades, keep wages down, pay no attention to such talk. Compare the wages of common and skilled workmen. Take the trade which you seem fitted for. Begin with a determination to learn it thoroughly, and to become the best workman in the shop. Don't be satisfied to skin along from one week to another without being discharged, but make your services so valuable by being such a thorough workman that your employer cannot afford to let you go.

THE BIBLE FROM GOD.

If the Bible be a revelation from God, if it be God's only specific revelation of himself to man, it is certainly an important matter to man, that he recognizes that revelation, and that he avails himself of its disclosures. So far, every man who admits the existence of a personal God is ready to agree with the most devout lover of the Bible. But when the question comes up, How can it be known that the Bible is a revelation from God? the difference of opinion between the doubter and the believer shows itself at its greatest. The doubter says, Prove to me that the Bible is God's revelation, and I will study it; otherwise I shall let it alone. He who is familiar with the Bible, and who is convinced that it is God's revelation, says: The best evidence of its origin and of its authority, as from God, is to be found in its own pages. Seek your proofs there, and you shall not seek them in vain. Now, which of these two positions is the more reasonable? Who is better competent to prove that he is the author of a message to one whom he loves, than the author of that message? Where is a more natural place for the furnishing of such evidence, than in the text of the message itself? Suppose a man brings you a sealed letter, with the assurance that it is written, by dictation, by the best friend you have in the world; by a friend whose every word to you ought to be a matter of your greatest concern; what would be your natural course with regard to it? Would you say to him who brought the letter?—Prove to me that this is a letter from my friend, and I will open and read it; not otherwise. Would that be sensible? If the bearer should say to you, I am confident that your best friend did write it; but the clearest evidence of that fact is to be found in the letter itself; look there and you will be convinced; would not that be sensible? This illustration is not an unfair one as applicable to the Bible. The evidence that the Bible is a revelation from God is in the book itself. It could not fairly be elsewhere, so obviously as there. The profoundest scholars and the purest men of the ages who have examined that book for evidences of its authority as from God, have been convinced beyond all doubt on this point. And those men who know most concerning all other sacred books of the ages, and concerning all other books of human composition merely, are surest that this Book is as truly distinct from them all, and is as truly far above them all, in its revealings and in its spirit and teachings, as the very sun in the heavens is different from, and is superior to, the electric lights that glare and flicker in our city streets. The Bible itself, studied in its text, and compared with all else that the world has to offer as bringing to us direct messages from God, furnishes ample and irrefragable evidence that only the Author of our own being could have been the Author of that Book of books, with all that it shows us of ourselves, and with all that it discloses concerning our needs, our duties, and our destiny. He who refuses to examine the message in order to satisfy himself of the authorship of that message, has the privilege of doing so—and he must accept the consequences of so doing.—Sunday-School Times.

HEALTH OF WOMEN.

Some one whose attention has been particularly directed to the subject, speaking of the health of American women, says that, among housekeepers, those who have but one servant are, as a rule, in the enjoyment of a good share of bodily vigor, while those who keep two servants, and in consequence do little or no stirring work in the household, are ailing a great deal of their time. It is still worse with those who keep three servants. Miserable health is the rule, and not the exception, in these cases.

The reason is plain. Idleness, self-indulgence, and lack of daily vigorous exercise bring their sure consequences—disease. Good health cannot be found under such conditions. Men are healthier than women; not because, to use the words of Mrs. Livermore in her admirable lecture on "What to do with our Girls," the Creator made man physically perfect, and woman in a loose, slovenly, and defective manner, but because men keep healthy through daily physical effort, while women grow weak, puny, nervous, and sick for lack of the exercise they need.

The false idea, born of weakness and pride, that women are respectable in the degree that they are idle and useless, is hurting modern society more than anything else. It is sapping the foundations, not only of physical, but also of moral health. Body and mind are enervated and vitiated.

Among our women reformers, many are pressing home this matter upon the minds and hearts of the people. It cannot be dwelt upon too earnestly nor too often.

LETTER TO UNCLE MINOR.

DEAR UNCLE MINOR: After thinking a long time of writing to you, I now take the privilege of saying a few words in the way of encouragement. I think your letters are so very interesting. I love to read them. You told us of your good boys, sweet little grand-children and your good wife. I wonder if all the men think such about their wives and children? I hope they do. Mamma is a reader and a dear lover of the Advocate. I think your pieces are as charming to her as to us children. I am a boy of twelve years, have two brothers; one fourteen years, the other six years old. We have a very good Sunday-school; I like to go very much. We have no regular preaching. I think we all would be delighted to have you come and preach for us, as you seem to be a travelling preacher. Hoping you will favor us with your kind letters often, will close.—[Stevie Willis, Manchester, Tenn.]

DRUNKENNESS.

Drunkenness of all kinds, is opposed to temperance, or self-control.

There are several kinds of drunkenness. The first, in the opinion of the majority, is alcoholic. This is the great question with many, while other kinds, and other evils, are ignored. This has been a hobby for half a century, to the neglect of other matters of equal, or more importance to society, the church, and the individuals concerned. Let no one suppose that I oppose temperance. Far from it. To oppose temperance would be to favor every excuse. But I am no hobbyist, and regard with no favor hobbyism of any kind or sort. And, hence, alcoholic drunkenness is only one kind of drunkenness, among many.

Men and women may be, and are, inebriated who never drink any form of alcohol. "No idolater, or railer; nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, shall inherit the kingdom of God." 1 Cor. 5: 11; 6: 10. Israel, at one time, are spoken of as "drunk, but not with wine." Isa. 29: 9. Some are drunk with blood, others with passion; and "the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of the fornication" of the mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth.

The harlot woman herself, is drunk with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. All the nations are drunk, and largely led by drunken politicians. Christendom itself is intoxicated with pride, vanity and foolishness. England, notwithstanding her glory, allows her citizens to make and to ship, under the protection of her flag, idols to the heathen. Missionaries, Bibles, and idols, are sent out in the same ship, under the same flag; and the idols which cost about 37½ cents, are sold for $3 and $4 a piece!

Men are drunk with prejudice! They are intoxicated with their isms, and vainly hope for the conversion of the world to their peculiar doxies! I wish, if possible, to wake up our people, not only in Carolina, but elsewhere; for it is indisputable that many of us, like the foolish virgins, "slumber and sleep." We need to be awakened—aroused, and to start anew on the pathway of true primitive Christianity. We are drifting sea-ward, if not hell-ward; and need some fearless Luther to sound the alarm! May the Lord help us, and help us right early.—Living Age.

THE UNDERGROUND RAILWAY.

The last completed section of the Metropolitan Underground Railway, London, from the Mansion House to the Tower, a distance of about three quarters of a mile, has been executed within the last twenty months, and runs "beneath residences, warehouses, and roadways, and in all the difficult labors of underpinning, propping, and building, there has not been a single accident." Enormous warehouses, containing iron safes and strong boxes, have been tunnelled under without disturbing their contents, and the statue of King William, which, with its pedestal, weighs 179 tons, has been underpinned and rests on the arch of the tunnel. Large trees have been undermined and underpinned without removal or injury. The result is that there is a substantial roadway on which the heaviest trains can run at high speed, and passengers can go from point to point in London without creeping along at twelve miles an hour on a structure which sheds bolts and nuts and rivet-heads down on the heads of passers-by, and requires constant repairs, while the gas and smoke and noise offend the innocent dwellers alongside the line of travel.

A man was being pursued by the sheriff for debt, and there was a certain quarter in the city which, if he reached, he would be safe. He ran so fast that he got into the place where he would be safe; but when the sheriff came up he said! "I see you are safe; but let me congratulate you on running so well. Let me shake hands with you," and he stood on one side of the line and reached over. The poor fellow came up, reached out his hand, and that instant the sheriff pulled him over the line, and said, "Now I have you." That's the way the world treats Christians. It calls to the Christian and rubs him down and draws him over the line, and before he knows where he is he is swept out into the current.

A Prominent Farmer Writes.

ROBERT STATION, Jones county, Ga., June 20th, 1884.—By the recommendation of Rev. O. C. Davis, I used Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir for indigestion, debility and nervous prostration, having been a great sufferer for years and tried all known remedies for these diseases, all of which failed. Five bottles of Lemon Elixir made a new man of me, and restored my strength and energy so that I can attend to my farm with all ease and comfort. Refer any one to me.

WILLIAM B. EMERSON.

Such advance has been made in the manufacture of Upright Pianos of late years that one cannot think he has one of the best unless it has been very recently made. And now comes another improvement just introduced in the Mason & Hamlin pianos which commends itself to intelligent mechanics as perhaps the most important of all. A new arrangement for fastening the strings holds them rigidly at each end, securing more exact and perfect vibration, and materially aiding in the attainment of most pure, refined, musical tones, which are certainly the great desideratum in pianos. The piano is thus not improved in its qualities when new, but acquires much greater durability, the liability of the strings to slip or change in their tension, as is the inevitable danger, when the strings are merely held by pins set in the old way, almost wholly avoided.—Boston Journal.

Advice to Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms—as general debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night-sweats and cough—prompt measures for relief should be taken. Consumption is scrofulous disease of the lungs:—therefore use the great anti-scrofula, or blood-purifier and strength-restorer, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to God liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections, it has no equal. Sold by druggists the world over. For Dr. Pierce's pamphlet on Consumption, send two stamps to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Samaritan Nervine cured our daughter's long epilepsy." Rev. P. P. Shirley, Chicago, Ill.

Have you Nasal Catarrh?

Use DR. JAMES' three preparations of EAST INDIA HEMP; they will prevent the Catarrh entering the Bronchial tubes or lungs, thereby warding off Consumption, and keep the disease located until positively cured. Put yourself fully under the influence of these remedies, and as sure as the sun shines upon you a complete cure will be made in that loathsome disease.

N. B.—This remedy speaks for itself. A single bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. And will break up a fresh cold in twenty-four hours.

Ask your druggist for DR. JAMES' CANNABIS INDICA, and if they fail you, send to us direct. Price $2.50 per bottle, or three for $6.50. Pills and Ointment, $1.25 each. Address CRADDOCK & CO., 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Mars Hill College.

With pleasure we lay before our readers the following extracts from the Fifteenth Annual Announcement of Mars Hill College, an institution perpetually wielding a wonderful and wide-spread influence for truth, refinement and righteousness.—EDITORS.

POSITIONS PROCURED FOR OUR PUPILS.

We make a specialty of preparing pupils for

(1.) PREACHING; (2.) TEACHING; (3.) PREACHING and TEACHING.

Many educated here—among whom are successful lawyers, physicians, merchants, salesmen, mechanics, farmers, editors, authors, teachers and preachers—have so demeaned themselves, that the humility, fidelity, integrity, accuracy and ability of "Mars Hill students" have become proverbial. There is, consequently, such a demand for the services of our pupils, that we deem it perfectly safe to promise to procure pleasant, profitable and honorable positions for all who qualify themselves here for usefulness. Indeed, for several years we have been able to fill comparatively few of the positions tendered.

HEALTHFULNESS!

Mars Hill as a Health Resort.

Our school was founded in 1870. All the "doctor bills," for services rendered our pupils, from then till now, do not, we think, amount to twenty-five dollars—probably not to one dollar a year. Those who have come here pale and puny, from malarial districts, have, without an exception, we believe, returned to their homes enjoying health.

What "Watering Place," or "Health Resort," then, can justly claim more, as a health-preserver and health-restorer, than Mars Hill? Address,

T. B. LARIMORE, President.

SELF-MASTERY.

By thine own soul's law learn to live,
And if men thwart thee take no heed,
And if men hate thee have no care;
Sing thou thy song, and do thy deed,
Hope thou thy hope, and pray thy prayer,
And claim no crown they will not give,
Nor bays they grudge thee for thy hair.

Keep thou thy soul-sworn steadfast oath,
And to thy heart be true thy heart;
What thy soul teaches learn to know,
And play out thine appointed part;
And thou shalt reap as thou shalt sow,
Nor helped nor hindered in thy growth,
To thy full stature thou shalt grow.

Fix on the future's goal thy face,
And let thy feet be lured to stray
Nowhither, but be swift to run,
And nowhere tarry by the way,
Until at last the end is won,
And thou mayst look back from thy place
And see thy long day's journey done.
—Pakenham Peatly, in the Spectator.

THIRTEENTH OF ACTS—No. 2.

When Barnabas and Paul were sent forth from Antioch by the Spirit on their work of preaching the gospel, they went to the Island of Cyprus and preached the word at Salamis, and thence on through the island till they came to Paphos. Here a noted circumstance occurred that was well worthy of mention. Sergius Paulus, a deputy of the country, a prudent man, called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired to hear the word of God. But a blasphemer, Bar-Jesus was there with the deputy and tried to turn his ears away from the truth, and thus hinder him from obeying the word of God. This incident shows most forcibly the connection that miracles or direct power had with conversion in the days when miracles were wrought. Many short sighted people, who have never studied the word of God, think that many people in the days of the apostles were converted by miraculous power. This is a great mistake, and one that has done a world of mischief, and is still deceiving thousands. No mortal of earth was ever converted by any sort of miraculous power brought to bear upon him. No man was ever made a better man by direct power of the Spirit working upon him. No instance of such a thing can be shown. Nearly all the men upon whom the direct power of the spirit ever came were already good men when the spirit came upon them as for example the apostles. But if they were not good men already the direct power of the Spirit did not make them good, as in the case of Balaam. He was a wicked man when the direct power of the Spirit came upon him, and he remained wicked and lived and died a wicked man. Those direct powers were for other purposes, and not to make sinners better, not to convert them. The general purpose of miracles in the New Testament was to confirm the truth as spoken by the parties working the miracles. When Christ worked miracles, it was to establish his claim to be the Son of God. When the apostles worked miracles it was to confirm the truth of the gospel which they preached so that the people might believe and be saved. Satan knew the power there is in the word of God to save those that believe and obey it, and therefore set to work to turn the ears of people away from it. In these days he has succeeded in making many people believe that the word of God is powerless to convert and save, that it is a dead letter, and that though a man should obey all its demands, he would not thereby be saved. But when Paul was preaching the word to Sergius Paulus, and he a prudent man, and about to believe Satan went to work through this false prophet to turn him away from the truth of the gospel as proclaimed by Paul, and possibly would have succeeded, but for the miraculous power brought to bear upon him through the apostle Paul. Satan's great effort from the beginning of time has been to destroy man's confidence in God's word, and when he succeeds in this, he has him.

The only possible safety for man is to take the word of God as given to us by the Spirit and follow its divine directions. Any sort of trickery that will turn people away from the word of God, no matter how or by what means accomplished is from Satan and will bring about man's ruin as certainly as done.

Thousands to day are kept from obeying the word of God and being saved by it, by being made to believe that to obey that word is insufficient to bring them into the church of God and save them. If such would only open the word of God and read for themselves they might readily be relieved from all that trouble. When Paul saw the efforts of this false Prophet to turn his hearer away from hearing the word of the Lord and thus prevent his being saved, he turned and said to him, O! full of all subtilty and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord? And now behold the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. And immediately there fell on him a mist and a darkness, and he went about seeking some one to lead him by the hand. And the deputy when he saw what was done, believed being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord. By this performance of miraculous power Sergious Paulus saw that Paul was possessed of power beyond human, and this gave him confidence in the truth of what Paul spoke, and he believed. And we are certainly entitled to understand that when he said he believed this word includes obedience to the word, to the gospel also, and that he at once became a Christian when convinced of the truth of the Gospel. The obstacle that hindered him for a time was taken out of the way when Bar-Jesus was made blind, and he believed and obeyed the gospel. But in this conversion there was not a particle of direct power brought to bear upon the man converted. The word was confirmed before his eyes, he saw, heard, and believed. There was direct power exerted upon Bar-Jesus and that very great power. But we have not a word of evidence that he was ever converted, or that he ever became a better man. The one on whom no direct power was wrought believed and obeyed the truth and was saved, while the man upon whom the direct power came remained a wicked unbeliever so far as the word of God records. And this order of things held good throughout the entire New Testament age. No man ever became a better man but by hearing and doing the will of God as expressed in his word. Man became a sinner by disobeying the word of God and can never become a servant of God but by obedience. By disobedience he went off from God, and only by obedience can he be brought back again. No man can be a good man out of harmony with God's will, and no man can be a bad man in harmony with his will. This is the principle upon which the gospel proposes to make men better, that is, by obedience to its requirements.

When men believe the gospel, and fall in love with it their hearts become better. When they repent of their sins their lives are made better, and when they confess the Saviour and are baptized, they enter into a purer, higher, and better relationship, and thus become new creatures, and are better in every possible particular; better in heart, better in life, better in state or relationship. But no man's heart can be made better while he refuses to repent. Neither can any man's state or relationship be made any better while he refuses to be baptized into Christ. Enough of the history of Sergius Paulus is given to indicate plainly enough that he did all of these and thus became a child of God, and a joint heir with Christ; and so will every other one that will do as he did. If those who are looking for direct power from above to convert them, would read and study this case of conversion they certainly would be greatly benefitted regarding the matter of conversion and salvation and might at once become obedient and loving children of God.

After this incident the name of Saul was changed to Paul. Some suppose that it was changed to Paul after Sergius Paulus the prominent man whom he had converted. Be this as it may, from this time forward he is called Paul and when he and Barnabas are mentioned together it is Paul and Barnabas instead of Barnabas and Saul as at first.

From Paphos they went to Antioch in Pisidia where Paul preached a noted discourse giving a brief account of God's dealing with the Jewish people from the time he brought them out from Egyptian Bondage, to the appearance of John the baptist and of Christ whom they crucified, but who was raised from the dead, thus preaching in most expressive terms the gospel of Christ. The gospel, being purely a matter of historical facts is so plain that it needs to be but once told to be understood. These facts, the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ were plainly presented by Paul as the plan by which all that believe can be purified from from all things, from which they could not by the law. Paul plainly said to them that through this man, through Christ is preached the remission of sins. The result of this sermon is expressed as follows: "Now when the congregation was broken up, many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas, who speaking to them, persuaded them to continue in the grace of God." These persons believed the gospel, and doubtless obeyed it, but we are not informed as to the number. The next Sabbath almost the whole city came together to hear the word of God. This stirred up the Jews, and they strongly opposed the preaching of Paul, who said to them, it was necessary that the gospel should first be preached to you. But said he, Seeing ye put it from you and judge yourselves unworthy of eternal life, lo we turn to the Gentiles. Of this they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord, "and as many as were ordained to eternal life, believed." As many as were ordained to eternal life. This has no reference to an ordination or fixed decree of the Almighty from before the world was, that certain people should certainly believe and be saved, while others were left out of that decree and therefore could not believe. There is nothing like that taught in the Bible. The ordaining in such cases as this is done by the people. The Lord has prepared the plan, and offered it to the people, and now it is a matter of choice with them, whether they believe it and are saved by it, or reject it and are condemned by it. The idea is about this: as many as were disposed or inclined for eternal life, believed. This agrees with the words of Jesus in the commission, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned. So some of these Gentiles were disposed, inclined to believe, and did believe, while others were not so inclined, and did not believe. The original Greek word used, rendered ordained, allows this meaning. And no Greek scholar, without the idea already in his head that God has ordained a certain part of the human race to be saved, and a certain part to be lost, and that this was done before the foundation of our world, would ever get it from this passage.

In this case the ordaining was done by the people themselves, not by the Lord from all eternity. They ordained, inclined themselves to believe, and they did believe, and were saved through their obedience to the gospel, like all others. And immediately after this it is said, and the word of the Lord was published throughout all that region. The efforts made to prevent the preaching of the gospel only caused it to be spread abroad the more, so that in such cases the wrath of man is made to praise the Lord. But when persecution on the part of Jews grew so strong that they expelled Paul and Barnabas out of their coasts, they shook off the dust of their feet as a testimony against them and departed to Iconium. But the disciples, those that believed and obeyed the gospel there, it is said, "were filled with joy and the Holy Ghost." The preachers had to leave the disciples that had embraced the gospel at that place, but they were filled with the Holy Spirit. This doubtless includes such inspiration or spiritual gifts as were necessary for their edification and instruction in the Christian life. These miraculous endowments were common in that age, but ceased so soon as the word of the Lord was fully given. Thus the kingdom of God was rapidly growing. And it is now as it was then, some of the people are inclined for eternal life, while others oppose the truth with all the power they have. And this will probably be so to the end of time.

STRANGE REASONING.

The Journal and Messenger, in paying Dr. P. H. Mell some very high compliments, referring to some of his doctrinal views, says:

"In an address recently delivered before the Georgia Association, he took occasion to indicate some of these, and among them this: It is an error to say of one that he was 'baptized into the church,' or 'into the fellowship of the church.' There is no scriptural authority for any such phrase, and a scriptural baptism into the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; it is a baptism into Christ, on a profession of faith in Christ; and church membership is not the scriptural result of baptism, but is effected by the vote of the church. It should be said, however, that when a church votes in advance that A. B. shall become a member of the same 'on being baptized,' then the baptism becomes the medium through which the church membership is effected, and thus becomes a door into the church."

The first paragraph in this extract raises an objection to "baptized into the church," but insists that a man is baptized "into Christ." Suppose a man professes a faith he does not possess—is deceived or is deceitful—will his baptism be "into Christ?" The commission simply puts it, that we are to baptize into the name. We can understand how a man may be baptized into the name of Christ, and henceforth bear the name Christian. But we do not understand that a man can really be baptized into Christ. Clark, ("Brief Notes," recently issued by the American Baptist Publication Society,) says: "In, literally into the name! into a professed allegiance and subjection to, and fellowship with, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, the one living and true God." How a man can profess "allegiance and subjection," and yet be out of the church, we do not see. In view of these difficulties, is it not a little risky to build a theory upon an interpretation, which theory would involve the actual baptism of some into Christ, who are not in Christ, either before or after their baptism?

But Dr. Mell asserts this position, as a support to his other declaration, that membership is "effected by the vote of the church." He declares that there is "no scriptural authority" for the phrase, "baptized into the church." Will he now give us some scriptural authority for a phrase, "voted into the church?" We would like to see scriptural precept or example for voting members into a church.

We would not be understood as opposing a vote, to ascertain the mind of the church, as to whether an applicant is a fit subject of church membership. But when a man says one is not baptized in, but voted in, then we raise the question on him.

Dr. Mell, however, in the last clause, says, that where the church votes to receive a member "on being baptized," that then baptism "becomes a door into the church." Well, that meets the action of nearly all our churches. They nearly all take the vote that way. But is not Dr. Mell's teaching, that, by a vote of the church, baptism, as a "medium," becomes a door into the church, a little startling? If baptism is not the Scriptural door into the church, it becomes a door, by virtue of a vote, for which we have neither precept or example! Just think of a vote creating a door into Christ's Church!

After all, is it not true that the vote is the simple means of finding out whether the church thinks A. B. is a proper person to come in at her door, baptism?—Baptist Reflector.

If the baptists will only continue to question and criticise all the unscriptural practices of each other, they will learn the truth. There is no more scripture for voting a man into the church, than for baptizing men into the Baptist church. There is no scriptural way to put men into the Baptist church. But can a man be in Christ, and not in Christ's church? His church is his body. It may take a vote to put them into a Baptist church, but no human beings can ever vote a man into, or out of, the church of Christ. The same act that puts a man into Christ, puts him into Christ's church.

Our Baptist friends come at the truth slowly and a little at a time, but still it is a point gained for them, to see that a man is baptized into Christ. Let this truth find a lodgement in the heart, and other truths must follow. In Christ are all blessings; out of him is condemnation.

The Reflector seems not to know the Scriptures that speak of a baptism into Christ. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." Gal. 3: 27. "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Christ, were baptized into his death." We enter into Christ, put him on, in the act of baptism. Of course a baptism without faith is no scriptural baptism.

The Christian Evangelist denies that its stock is low as reported by Bro. Allen, and asks for any that can be bought below par. It may turn out that Bro. Allen is as badly posted in the affairs of other papers, as he has shown himself to be in reference to those of his own.

UNWISE.

Our successful politicians in this country profess to be very anxious to convince the negroes that they have no ill-will toward them, or evil designs upon their liberties. Thousands of dollars have been spent in a vain and foolish pageant and display which will disgust thousands of sober minded, thoughtful men with the party, and will not benefit a living soul, unless it be the party that is defeated, (it may help them to power speedily again, if that be a benefit.) But had one dollar out of ten that have been worse than wasted, corrupting and demoralizing those using it, been used in making the poor of the negroes and whites more comfortable for the winter as a thank offering for success, it would have been a thousand fold more effective in curing disaffection and overcoming the fear and enmity of both black and white, and would have given moral strength and permanence to the success gained. But politicians don't act thus. Christian politicians in politics do just like all other politicians. They spend their money in foolish parade and display and dissipation that injure all who participate, and then how poor when the Lord calls for a part of his own, for his kingdom and the help of his poor. The Christians in the land voted according to their political, not their moral and religious convictions in the late election. Blaine and Cleveland, with all their immoralities, public and private, got the Christian as well as the sinner votes. St. John and temperance made a poor show.

We mentioned that three men of talent and ability, who are, or have been, members of the church, have been elected to Congress from the three adjoining districts here in Middle Tennessee. While they are all nice, clever men, their talent, time, and means, have been given to their personal advancement, and the gaining of worldly honor for themselves. The churches of Christ, of which they are members, are languishing and needing help. If all the members were to act as do these, the church would soon cease to exist.

We heard a wicked man say of one of them, he would not swear himself, but he was remarkably fond of telling anecdotes, or narrating incidents, in which some one else used very ugly "cuss" words; and he could not see the difference between a man swearing himself, and adopting the profanity of some one else. We are as blind as he.

We see the Standard and Evangelist have raised their club rates, which proves they had placed them lower than they could live at. The Baptist Watchman, Boston, with less matter than the Standard, fifty years old, with circulation of seventeen thousand, charges $2.50 in advance, or $3.00 after three months. The New York Observer, Presbyterian, circulation twenty-seven thousand five hundred, with no more matter than the Standard, charges $3.15 in advance, $3.65 after three months, or $4.15 after six months. None of these papers get rich we presume, but they present a paper that from its matter and make up, commands the respect of the world. The Methodist papers are usually some cheaper than these because supported by the denomination, but none of them are so cheap as the papers published by disciples. Low priced papers are not as a rule the cheapest.

By the by, with St. John's marriage and divorce, these public men make a humiliating exhibit of the sanctity of the marriage relation. With such examples, how can the Government enforce laws against polygamy in Utah?

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

EDITORS OF THE ADVOCATE: The last number of the ADVOCATE, of October 29, is to hand, and in my answer to a private letter, the printer made me say, "We can believe the divine and all the religious lives in the world, but cannot believe the God of all truth, so says orthodoxy." I wrote, "We can believe the devil and all religious lies in the world," on page 700.

I see from the ADVOCATE and other papers, that the Mormons have been in Tennessee and Kentucky operating. I will here relate for the benefit of your junior readers, things that occurred in this place between the writer and a Mormon preacher, while they were living in Nauvoo, Illinois. One of their big preachers came to this place and preached, and dwelt on their favorite subject, "these signs shall follow the believers." (Mark 16: 16-17,) and applied the whole subject to the Mormons. When he had finished his harangue, I said, I understand, sir, you can work miracles, is it true or not true? He said it was true, that they could work miracles. I said to him, I was overjoyed to find a man that could work a miracle, for I had desired all my life to see a miracle, and had never seen one, and I was so glad to see a man that could work a miracle. He asked he what sort of a miracle I wanted to see; I said, I am so anxious to see one that I have no choice, I will leave it to you to work any sort of one you may choose to work. He said to me, I am afraid you have not faith. I said to him, If you mean by faith, that I am not fool enough to believe you can work a miracle, I confess I have not faith; I do not believe you can work a miracle any more than I can, it is all humbug and deception. I quoted to him their acts and doings before the Legislature of Missouri. He did not read the Scriptures, sing nor pray before he began to speak. Before he came here, I had an appointment to speak the night after he spoke. I read and applied the 16th of Mark just as he did the night before. I read it, "Our Savior, after he arose from the dead, appeared to Joe Smith and the Mormons, and he said to Joe Smith and the Mormons, Go into all the world and preach Mormonism, and he that believes Mormonism and is immersed, shall be saved; and he that does not believe in Mormonism shall be damned," and these signs shall follow the Mormons, et cetera. By the time I had finished reading his version of the commission, the audience laughed out aloud, and the men who sat near him said he bit off the head of a hickory cane while I was rubbing and currying him down. He made no reply to what I said. He nor any of his gang ever troubled us again, nor were we as a people ever coupled with the Mormons after that exposure of their fraud. Before that, when our foes would speak of us, they would begin and end by saying, Even down to the Campbellites and Mormons. I showed that they and the Mormons were nearer alike than we and the Mormons. They both needed and had new revelations; we were satisfied with the revelations in the Bible. Our Savior delivered the commission to the twelve apostles in the first century of the Christian era; Mormonism belongs to the nineteenth century. There is a great difference in the ages of the two things, as well as in the teachings and effects of the two systems.

When God commands one thing to be done for an end, he thereby forbids any and every other thing to be done for the same. When he ordained the gospel for the salvation of men in the New Testament, he forbid Mormonism, Mohammedanism, Popery, and all sectarian, and all innovations on the gospel and its ordinances. When he sent his Son into this world to be our Savior, he thereby forbid and condemned all false Messiahs and imposters, ancient and modern. When he appointed Christ to be the head of the one body, he forbid all the popes from being heads of the one body; and all the founders of all the sects from being heads of the sects, and from being law-givers to them. There is only one law-giver to Christians, who is Jesus the Christ. (James.) When God ordained the model and mother church in Jerusalem with her plurality of presbyters, he forbid all sects with their imported "pastors." All the apostolic churches were formed in the first century of the Christian era. All politico-religious societies of the sixteenth century are sects, not churches. When, where and how do sects become churches? When God ordained the one immersion by the example of his Son in Matt. 3, Mark 1, Luke 3, John 1: 3, and Ephe. 4: 5, he thereby forbid rantism.

Christians are made the same way in the nineteenth century that they were in the first century. If God has changed his plan of making Christians since the first century, he has not informed us of it. All sects assume that they are Christians and then proceed to apply to themselves what the apostles said to the apostolic churches. A man must first become a Christian before he can perform the duties of a Christian. A man must first become a husband before he can perform the duties of a husband. And so of a father; and so of a Mason; and so of an American citizen. It is as impossible for a man to perform the duties of a Christian before he is a Christian, as for a bird to fly without wings. The founder of modern perfection was not a Christian. A man who says he is a Lutheran, thereby says he is not a Christian; and so of all other sectarian names. A Methodist is not a Presbyterian, and a Baptist is not an Episcopalian. I said to a Baptist preacher, not long since, that since we began to preach, the green flies all left the Baptists' horses and have come upon our horses; you Baptists don't have any debates with the pædo-rantists now as you formerly did about the "subjects and modes" of baptism. He laughed at it, but did not deny it. What a shame that so vile an imposture as Mormonism should be palmed upon the American people for the gospel of Christ. It is not strange that they should have the greatest success among the ignorant and superstitious Europeans, who have been steeped in Romanism for centuries. The German proverb says all mischief begins in the name of God.

JACOB CREATH.

Palmyra, Mo., November 5, 1884.

LET US USE WORDS THAT EXPRESS OUR MEANING.

BROS. LIPSCOMB & SEWELL: I propose to make a few suggestions to your readers, especially to those who baptize or immerse people according to the formula as given by Matthew. I have observed a great want of uniformity in one word: while some use the word baptize, others use the word immerse. It does seem to me that we, as a people claiming to use Bible words to express Bible thoughts, ought to be consistent with our profession and uniform in the use of a word about which there has been so much contention between ourselves and our opponents, and on our part we are, and always have been, a perfect unit as to the meaning of the word baptizo, which is the word used by Christ and his apostles. I see no good reason why our brethren should use a mongrel word, part Greek and part English, but being neither; a word which has no definite meaning. It being a word invented by King James' translators, which was intended in its inception and introduction into the English language to be used in reference to immerse, sprinkle and pour; and on this merely anglicised word with our English lexicons as authority we would have to yield to pædobaptists. But we take our stand on the original word, and bring the thought into English by the word immerse. We believe and teach that the word is immerse in English, and we do immerse; and upon such a sacred and solemn occasion, why not say immerse, just the thing we do? It was trifling with God's word in substituting the word baptize, and it is playing to the same hand to use the word baptize in the formula of immersion. I hope our brethren will consider this matter.

There is another word given to us by the same authority that of the same translators,—the word church. It means everything and nothing in particular. Greek scholars tell us that the Greek word ecclesia means congregation or assembly of people without regard to the nature or purpose of such. Then the assembly (ecclesia) of God, or of Christ, defines the authority and head of the assembly, and if that word was properly translated, it would rid the world of much confusion of thought in regard to the nature of that institution of God, called the church. People could then see the absurdity of the thought of being a member of a congregation when absent from it. How many poor deluded souls pass

Lord's day in a lonely condition, or perhaps in an assembly of the devil, serving him, and at the same time think they are in the church of Christ at Mt. Olivet. If we had a translation of the word, such deluded creatures would see the absurdity of their claim of being in the congregation of God and the congregation of the devil at the same time. Oh, Lord, how long yet have we to serve in Babylon, when will the mists be cleared away, is there no Cyrus and Nehemiah to clear the way for a return to Jerusalem? I fear we are become so acclimated to that country and to Ashdod that many are content with speaking a mongrel tongue of two nations. May the Lord help us and bless us in doing HIS WILL.

WEST TENNESSEE NOTES.

—The church at Finly has an organ.

The church at Gadsden have a hundred members and have no prayer meeting.

The annual meeting of the West Tennessee Co operation was held at Humboldt last week.

There are thirty disciples at Humboldt; they meet weekly, and have a Sunday-school with an average attendance of thirty-five.

Br. J. A. Carter is esteemed very highly by the church at Humboldt, and should be sustained in the good work that he has begun there.

The church at New Hope, Hardeman County, has one hundred and seventy-five members, and Antioch in the same county has forty-two.

The next co-operation meeting will be held with the church at Newburn, beginning on Wednesday before the fourth Lord's day in May, 1885.

J. B. Innman, the popular principal of the school at Henderson, is slowly recovering from injuries received in the wreck on the M. & O. R. recently.

Bro. F. D. Srygley was at Humboldt and contributed much to the interest of the meeting. We hope that he will be spared for many years of usefulness.

Bro. W. H. Windes, of Saulsbury, teaches school during the week, and preaches on Lord's day as occasion permits. He is a good preacher and a useful man.

The church at Jackson has sustained another loss in the removal of Bro. J. R. Hawkins and family to Dyersburg. He carries with him the best wishes of all who know him.

J. H. Roulhac estimates the number of disciples in West Tennessee at 6,000, and that they pay eighty cents per capita for preaching and the support of the cause of the Master this year.

J. C. Creel, of Henderson, Ky., held a ten days meeting at Jackson, beginning on October 12, resulting in three additions to the church. Bro. Creel had the most favorable hearing of any disciple that ever preached in that city.

The church at Newburn have a comfortable brick house for worship; meet the first day of every week "to eat the Lord's supper." Have a good Sunday-school and live pleasantly with their neighbors; they number about forty.

We have some elders in these parts that will not attend a business meeting of the church, to consult about the financial and other interests of the church, because they have no "thus saith the Lord" for so doing. The cause of Satan is safe in their hands.

It was said at the meeting at Humboldt, that not more than one-third of the disciples in West Tennessee pay anything towards the expense of the church or to spread the gospel. The teachers should read the parable of the talents to those unfaithful servants.

OCCASIONAL.

No. 150,000.—This is the number actually reached this week by the Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Company in the regular numbering of their world-renowned cabinet organs. Having commenced business in 1854, the average number of organs produced per annum has been 5,000, which is 100 per week for the entire 1,500 weeks of their business career. The Mason & Hamlin organs have been sent to every civilized country, and their sale never was greater than at the present time, averaging from 10,000 to 15,000 organs per annum.

TEXAS WORK AND WORKERS.

This Department is conducted by JOHN T. POE, Longview, Texas, to whom all correspondence intended for these columns should be addressed.

Bro. Poe complained at others for not giving their expense money to the State meeting, to some evangelist. I pointed out Bro. Poe's inconsistency and gave him some good solid advice which he has taken pains to keep from his readers and gives us the above. 1. Who made you a watchman? Are you more so than all Christians? If not, is it right for all Christians to attend the State meeting? 2. As Bro. Poe did not raise his voice at the meeting against anything done, we take it for granted that all that was done was right and that we have the gracious permission of the "watchman" to continue. Thank you. 3. If "people pay in at the State meeting so as to have it reported," is this not as good as to pay nothing and give as an excuse poverty, and still find money to visit this terrible thing?—C. McPherson, in Old-Path Guide.

1. Yes, "more so than all Christians." I was made a watchman by the church of Christ worshipping at Huntsville, Texas. What I mean by watchman, my brother, is, that being appointed to preach the gospel. I was also instructed to "contend earnestly for the faith delivered to the saints"—to "maintain the form of sound words," and to "watch in all things." These, you will understand, Bro. McPherson, are instructions to an evangelist, and designed specially for him.

2. You know better than any one else why Bro. Poe did not raise his voice against some things at the meeting. You know that just when Bro. Poe would have spoken, your chairman, Bro. H., left his seat, took the floor, and in a lengthy speech, consuming what time we had left, he pitched into all who opposed State meetings, etc., until the brethren fearing the results of other speeches in answer, moved to adjourn, etc. Don't you know all this? I got no chance to speak at the proper time. Hence did not raise my voice.

3. I did not plead poverty as an excuse for not giving, or paying other evangelists to go and preach. I simply did not give, because I had nothing to give, and being in that condition, the Lord does not require it, and so I needed no excuse. He knows. But did you think I offered it as an excuse to that august body—the State meeting? No sir, excuse me on that.

But it seems you do take unkindly to being watched, Bro. McPherson. Never mind, my brother, it may save you from being a second-rate Baptist perhaps, and make a Christian man of you. I have decided not to attend any more State meetings. I feel that I can not do so and be guiltless. It will soon assume an ecclesiastical form that will deter many good brethren from participating in it. I heard one old brother say, at the meeting in Bryan, that he had a great mind to introduce a resolution to dissolve the present State meeting forever, and then go to work and organize another, admitting none who were opposed to State meeting. This was said by one, who, it was said, killed and buried the State meeting forever at one of its sessions a few years ago. To this it will come at last, and then one wing of the church goes into sectarianism, under the guidance of the clergy in their State meetings. We warn the brethren everywhere, as they value Christian liberty, and the purity of the gospel, to steer clear of this trick of the clergy to get full and complete control of the church. In the new regime the elders will be made subservient to the clergy—the preacher will boss everything.

The idea of many young preachers being under the rule of elders, is something they cannot stand. It might do very well to have elders over the backwoods home-made preachers, but it won't do for these young clergymen. Oh! no. He was educated for a boss preacher, and boss he must. Another thing, all this State meeting class will finally put all rule into the hands of the preacher, and he will, to save study and work otherwise, adopt the organ to draw an audience; while he discourses on pretty things—soft things. I am not drawing fancy sketches, but simply reasoning from cause to effect. We warn the brethren to be on their guard. Many are drawn into these State meetings, not because they like them, or expect them to do good, but because they have axes to grind. One wants a good pastorate, another a good paying evangelistic field; another wants to secure aid to build a church house; another to win patronage to his school; and another has a book to sell, and so it goes. Selfish ends and motives cover up many things to us, that tend to the destruction of the church. We are willing the church should suffer, if we can carry our own selfish ends. This ought not so to be. We should lay ourselves away entirely, and make Christ and his cause first in everything. When we do this, we will not be found congregating ourselves together in a State meeting, and with great swelling words, and speeches saying what we should do, and will do, and cajoling others into making pledges, which they can never redeem, while others with less pretensions, and for less pay, are out in the field working on the Lord's plan, and doing what we are "fixing to do." If the conversion of the world depended upon State meetings, it would be several thousand years yet before the world would be converted. If it were not for the Lord's workmen, those who with saddlebags on their arm, go and preach, pay or no pay, the world would soon know this reformation only as a piece of history. All honor to the pioneer brigade—the saddlebags preachers, who are preaching the word, with all long suffering and patience, while the State meeting is talking about how to do the work. While they meet and talk it over, some poor, half educated man—some one with a big heart and the love of God burning within him, has gone and done the work. We would not fear to put one of the Lord's poor preachers against the whole State meeting corps for a year, and expect larger results from him, without money, without prestige, or anything, and the power to tell it. He would accomplish more than they all.

Programme of the preacher's meeting, Add-Ran College, December 30, 1884, to January 3, 1885.

The congregation of disciples at Thorp Springs cordially invite the attendance of all the brethren and sisters who have any interest in such meeting. Those who intend coming will please send card to A. Clark, stating at which place on railroad they wish to be met. Hacks will be sent to Cleburne and Weatherford on the 29th, and will leave there for Add-Ran on the morning of the 30th, Thursday. It is necessary for us to know what number will be at either place, and how many to provide homes for. Come, brethren, let us take sweet counsel together.

C. M. WILMETH,
J. W. JACKSON,
A. CLARK, Committee.

DEAR. BRO. POE: I have just closed a meeting at Hico; that place the Herald represented as so badly smitten with Campbellism. The result of a weeks gospel preaching is that four persons were induced to confess the Savior. I would say to my brother of the Herald, that I think I gave "Campbellism" its death blow; showing the people that they had no right to be Campbellites unless Campbell was crucified for them, and they were baptized in his name. So, now as the monster is out of the way, if our brother will come back to Hico, and "speak unto them the word of the Lord," many doubtless will believe. I will also say for his consolation, that some of those whom he left "mourning" (I never knew the apostles to leave persons mourning) have found comfort in the promises of Jesus. I can't see why they did not find comfort while he was here unless he failed to give them the promises. No doubt he said "seek and ye shall find," but did he ever tell them how to seek? Why will ministers give the people these indefinite promises when they might as easily give them the definite promise of Jesus: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved?"—[C. W. Sewell, Jr., Mooresville, Texas.

Don't you know, Bro. Sewell, that if a Baptist should tell the people what to do to be saved, just as they did in the apostolic age, that his brethren would call him a Campbellite, and turn him out of the church? There is not one of them that dares to tell sinners what to do, as was done in the primitive age. I challenge them to do it. How would it sound to hear a Baptist preacher say to mourning penitents, "Arise, and be baptized and wash away thy sins?" Or to believers asking what to do, "Repent and be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus, for the remission of sins?" Why, sir, he would not dare to do it, and yet this is precisely what they were told to do by inspired apostles; and the word of an inspired apostle is worth more than a thousand votes of Baptist churches to the contrary. No sir, let him go to Hico or anywhere else and preach the word of the Lord, and out of the Baptist church he goes. He dare not do it.

The brethren will confer a great favor by trying to extend the circulation of the ADVOCATE just now. Brethren in Texas, let us each try our best for subscribers one month now. Who will send me the largest list of names between now and January 1st? Sisters, take a copy and call upon your neighbors, show it to them, and try to get them to subscribe. We want agents for the paper in every county in Texas; liberal commission paid. Write us at Longview, Texas.

Methodist—Sammy—who was to go to Bellvue to give the people three days work to prove that Phillip and the Eunuch did not "go down into" the water at all, and that "baptism aint nothin' nohow," got sick (?) and did not get there. That kind of a task would make any man sick, if he had any conscience or respect for God's word.

We heard an old-fashioned Hard-shell sermon last Lord's day. The preacher said he was ignorant, and was not ashamed of it. He said he never made a note for a sermon, nor tried to write one in his life. We thought if he had done a little of that kind of work, he would not have had so much nonsense to lay on the Lord.

Bro. Riall is doing a good work in Jack county. We know that in Jacksboro he has some excellent co-workers. Sister Mizell is a host by herself. Then there are many other good workers beside.

Did you ever read this in the Bible? "Neglect not the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is." If you have, what does it mean?

"Nebuchadnezzar, My Servant,"

Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, was a heathen. He knew not the Lord, to love and to serve Him. Not a single thing did he ever do from a regard to the living God. And yet God repeatedly speaks of him as His "servant." God made use of him for the accomplishment of His purposes. Without his knowing it, he served the Lord. Whilst prosecuting his own selfish designs, he was ignorantly performing the will of God.

And so it is as regards all rulers, and all men, whatever may be their rank or condition. As says the Psalmist: "All are thy servants." When Moses and Aaron went unto Pharaoh, and said unto him, "Thus saith the Lord, Let my people go that they may hold a feast unto me in the wilderness," and Pharaoh said, "Who is the Lord, that I should obey His voice to let Israel go? I know not the Lord, neither will I let Israel go,"—he was resolutely set against doing the will of God. And yet he was made to serve his deep designs. The Lord said of him: "In very deed for this cause have I raised thee up, for to show in thee my power, and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth."

So it was in the case of the brethren of Joseph. In selling him unto the Ishmaelites they thought evil unto him, but God meant it unto good, to bring to pass to save much people alive. And so, too, was it in the case of the crucifixion of the Lord of glory. In putting Him to death they were undesignedly accomplishing to the purpose of God, as the disciples thus testified on the occasion of the release of Peter and John: "Of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom Thou has anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, for to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done." And even Satan, the great instigator of evil, serves God. All his wickedness is overruled for good. Dr. Cheever has truly said that "one of his greatest mistakes was his shutting up John Bunyan in Bedford jail." There Bunyan probably accomplished far more for the glory of God, than he ever could or would have done had he been left at liberty.

Willingly or unwillingly, designedly or undesignedly, all are serving God. The wrath of man, and of devils, so far as it is allowed to go, is made to praise God, and the remainder of wrath is restrained. "He doeth according to His will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of earth; and none can stay His hand, or say unto Him, "What doest Thou?"

Love in the Household.

Whatever else betide, whatever losses may come, or separations intervene, let nothing prevent the perfect confidence and mutual love that should exist between the heads of the household. Let each one feel, believe, and know that storms may rage without, but cannot come between them; that other friends may be dear and cherished, but no friend can separate them; that fortune may fail to smile, but can not shake the impregnable fortress of their love. In order to preserve this state of affection, there must be entire confidence in each other; nothing must come between them. They cannot always feel and think alike; this as impossible as it is unnecessary, and it is better so. The indulgence they ask for themselves they can readily accord, and should delight to do so. Instead of considering what they have given, they should remember what they have received; instead of making comparisons and estimates as to gifts and services rendered, have hearts full of gratitude for the evidences of affection that gold can not buy. We can not compel love. It is a tender plant that requires the most gentle nurture.

"A word, a look, has crushed to earth
Full many a budding flower;
Which, had a smile but owned its birth,
Would bless life's latest hour."

A household without love would belike the earth without the sun; a desert, for want of a living spring to waken it into beauty; a night without day, a heaven without stars. Cherish love in the household as you would cherish its life; it is its life and glory, and the wealth of the Indies cannot atone for its loss. With it our homes are the nearest approach to heaven our earth affords. A household united in the service of God is the picture of heaven.—Domes- tic Journal.

At the beginning of October the Chinese celebrate the festival of the moon. The most they do on that day is to give and eat "moon cakes." These are a kind of pie, with crust made of flour, sugar and rice, and filled with a mixture of watermelon seeds, almonds, walnuts, and a Chinese spicy seed called "gee ma," the whole made into a thick paste with quince jelly. These seeds and nuts, they say, represent the four seasons of the year. The Chinese in this country import most of their moon-cakes from Havana, where there is a large colony of Chinamen.

A young Chimpanzee recently brought from Liberia lives in Central Park, New York. He has a little house, furnished with a bed, table and chairs, a looking-glass and washbowl. He sits at the table and dines with his keeper. He will be four-and-a-half feet high when full grown. He looks as if he had tried to be a boy, but found it too discouraging, and in the meantime had forgotten how to be a success as a monkey.

If instead of a gem, or even a flower, we would cast the gift of a lovely thought into the heart of a friend, that would be giving as the angels must give.—Geo. MacDonald.

CURRENT TOPICS.

The American, of this city, has an item that a number of citizens of Memphis, not in the habit of touching ardent spirits, determined deliberately, and did drink till drunk, on the assurance of Cleveland's election. This, we presume, was not confined to Memphis. We heard a gentleman of this city say he had not touched a drop of spirits in a number of months; but when assured of Cleveland's election, he intended to get drunk. We protested it was strange a man should so degrade himself because he had secured his wishes. These are extreme, but not isolated or exceptional cases. More drunk men have been upon the streets of Nashville since the election, than in a whole year previous, we think. There has been a tendency to that course with the great mass of our people; three demonstrations over the election, all attended with more or less dissipation, revelry, and loosening of the feelings of self-restraint. One citizen here killed outright.

Christian men lead in this revelry and dissipation. Saturday night has been chosen for two of these demonstrations. The night's revelry left the participants in ill condition for the worship of God in his sanctuary the next day. We are not surprised to learn Bro. Cave could find no one to start a hymn, or help in the service, nor that the seats of many prominent members were vacant, and of those who were present, many were inclined to slumber.

It is a strange conception of Christian duty that permits Christians to engage in such revelings. Many a man is helped on to ruin by participating in such letting loose of self-restraint.

While we have no political feeling in the matter, and while we are always glad to see our friends gratified, I suggest that the very fact that a little success so completely turns their heads, is an evidence that they are not prepared to enjoy or maintain success. That such wild demonstrations as we see from week to week, all over the South, is an indication, not only to the people of the North, but to the sober and thoughtful people of the South, that it is not well to trust those who are so easily carried into wild excitement, and cannot control themselves, with the control of the affairs of others.

The questions involved in this election, outside of personal character,—and of this there could only be a choice of evils,—are matters merely of sentiment, not of practical good or evil to any. A morning or two after the election, a market gardener, with joy in his countenance, said, "We have a new President." I asked him, "Have potatoes risen any in price?" "No." "Do you think they will?" "Well, no; I don't know that they will." "What good will it do you or me, then?" Next a president of a bank spoke of it. I asked, "Will you lend money at lower rates to-day?" "No; we can't do that." "Well, will Mr. Cleveland's election bring it about in the future?" He did not know that it would. I could not see the promised good, except it gratified our prejudices, and may help a new set of hungry office-seekers into place.

We mention these things to impress the idea that there is an indefinite (undefined) looking for good in these political changes, that have no foundation, in fact. No more wheat, or corn, or potatoes, or cotton, will grow per acre, or without a certain amount of labor, with Cleveland for President, than with Blaine. Nor will the prices be better. The material good that comes out of the success of one party or another, will not compensate for the losses sustained, and the amounts spent, and the demoralization to business and morality, that result from these election excitements.

Frequently success is a curse; defeat, a blessing. I think there is a general recognition that defeat in the war of the rebellion was a blessing to the South. Its increase and promise in wealth are greater than of the successful North. The fact that the southern people have been debarred from office greatly for twenty years, has been a blessing to them. It has caused leading minds to devote themselves to the development of the resources of their country, that else had been given to politics. So far as the success of this election attracts the attention of the people away from steady industry, and causes them to look for office, or leads them to hope for a living otherwise than through steady and earnest industry and economy, it will be an unmitigated curse.

A strange development is, that many who rejoice most heartily over the political triumph of the South, are those who labor to keep the southern people in intellectual, moral, and religious subserviency to the people of the North. We like to see every people independent in habit of thought, in the development of moral and religious action. Every community has its own phases of character, modes of thought and action, its own individuality. No one that becomes a mere copyist of another, or who simply borrows the modes of development and action from others, will do much in the world. Many who vociferate themselves hoarse over a partial and temporary success in getting a chance for a few demoralizing offices, or a little political triumph over the people of the North, are willing to be led implicitly and tamely in habits of thought, in modes of intellectual development, and in religious and moral life, by these. In these, the essential and foundation features of true individual and national independence and force, they are more than content, they seem anxious to make the people of the South mere copyists of others. We especially object to this, because the habits of thought at the North have tended toward rationalism and infidelity. We prefer a strong faith in God to popular skepticism. If our people will only learn a little mental and moral independence, to do their own thinking and develop religious convictions and a religious life of their own, under the guidance of the word of God, some good may come out of the much demoralization connected with the excitements of the election.

ITEMS AND PERSONALS.

Bro. Jesse Sewell's address is now Lebanon instead of Viola, as it has been.

We trust every reader now will try to send us one more with his own name, and $3.00. This is $1.50 each—low enough, surely.

J. L. Bryant will begin a meeting at Hebron, near this city on the Murfreesboro pike, Saturday night before the fifth Lord's day in November.

Bro. Cave closed his meeting at Franklin, with eight additions, and a good interest. He was called away by the sickness of his family. His children have diphtheria.

Bro. W. H. Dixon started out to get one hundred subscribers for the ADVOCATE, and has sent us in sixty-four, with the money. Who else will start out to do as well?

"A Methodist lady has, during the present year, added the names of sixty new subscribers to the Richmond Christian Advocate."

Cannot we find Christian women and men who will do as much for the GOSPEL ADVOCATE? Why is it those devoted to error are more willing to work for it, than those who believe the truth?

The publisher of "Golden Thoughts on Mother, Home and Heaven—Introduction by Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D.—announce the 100th thousand of that work, and assures agents that have been selling it through bankrupt General Agents, they can be supplied direct from the publisher, E. B. Treat, New York.

Dr. L. C. Chisholm and wife leave this week for Alabama and Florida, where they will spend the winter. Bro. Chisholm is authorized to take subscriptions for the GOSPEL ADVOCATE. Hope he and sister Chisholm may have a pleasant sojourn in the "Land of Flowers," and be successful not only for the ADVOCATE, but in his profession also.

ERRATA.—In last number of ADVOCATE two typographical errors occurred in Bro. Harding's articles that materially changed the sense; one in first column, Bro. Harding wrote, "Churches may send out men for other purposes, and they did sometimes do it in the first age of the church, but never did they send out a man to preach." Other was changed into the which changed the sense of the sentence. In his second article he is made to say, "The State board had eighty evangelists employed." He wrote "eight."

Bro. Harding passed through the city on his way home, via. Hopkinsville to see his son who is there. He has postponed the proposed meeting in Pulaski until next spring. He has an agreement for a debate with a Presbyterian preacher early in December in Canada. This would give him only two or three weeks in Pulaski, and he does not wish to begin a meeting there with a probability of being compelled to leave it before the fruit is gathered. He promises to make it his earliest point in the spring. We suggested to him to spend the next year in Tennessee. He seemed not altogether averse.

We had hoped to be able to announce five thousand subscribers to the ADVOCATE by the close of the year. We believe we would have done it, but for the diversion caused by the election excitement. If our friends will vigorously aid us for the remaining six weeks, we will yet be able to do it. We lack only a few hundred. Remember that for three dollars we will send to one old and one new subscriber for a year. Get some one to divide the price with you, or get some one to pay one dollar, or put in the extra dollar yourself and send it to some family scarce of reading matter, and if they are out of the church, nine chances to one you will win a family to Christ and save souls. Remember it is much more certain to do good in a family scarce of reading matter. I am certain in no way can the same amount of money be made to do more good for the cause of God, than in this.

SMITHVILLE.

It was our pleasure to be in a week's meeting at this place, beginning Saturday night before the first Lord's day in October. Twenty one made the confession and were baptized. Some of these came from the Methodist church and one from the Baptist. This is one of the best congregations we have visited this year. The house of worship is neat, and neatly kept. Some do not give the attention they should to their houses of worship. People should be ashamed to meet in a barn-like and dilapidated house, where, by a little means and work, which they are able to give, they could have a neat one. Our much beloved brother, J. M. Kidwill lives here, and a good prosperous congregation is largely the fruit of his labor. He moved here when the number of disciples was quite small. For many years we may say he has preached for this congregation, and his hearers now are eager to hear him, and esteem him highly in love for his work's sake. It is his to see around him, some little of the much fruit of a godly life and earnest presentation of the truth. How much more desirable is this than to be a place hunter or a salary seeker! "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you," is a part of Bro. Kidwill's faith. He was not at home during this meeting.

We met here Bro. Wily Carnes, a relative of the late Pres. Carnes. Bro. Wily has been preaching for some time and helped much in the meeting by prayers, exhortations and songs. He is a good worker in a meeting. Our good friends, Bro. H. L. and sister Walling and their daughter, sister Webb, of McMinnville, and Bro. Potter made our meeting more pleasant by their appearance.

BETHLEHEM, WHITE COUNTY.

We went from Smithville to this congregation to begin a meeting the second Lord's day in October. We held a meeting here one year ago, and were glad to meet old friends and acquaintances again. Several of the members here were our schoolmates at Burritt College, and Bro. Oliver Young, with whom we stopped, is one of the leading trustees. Bethlehem is another good congregation. It is one of the churches that sends Bro. Wesley Kidwill out as an evangelist. Bro. Wesley was with us in the meeting and is a faithful laborer. He has done much toward spreading the gospel in destitute places this year, but for some reason has said nothing of it through the papers. If he objects to our telling it we will take it all back. Eight obeyed the gospel during the meeting, and one came from the Baptists.

SPARTA.

Ten o'clock third Lord's day in same month found us at the church house, in Sparta. Our meeting continued nine days, resulting in five additions by obedience to the gospel. This we think was one of the best meetings we have been in during the year. There was much trouble among the members which it is hoped is now a thing of the past. Some who had forsaken the assembling of themselves together promised to do better, and some who had talked too much promised to talk less, and others confessed other faults. We had a general cleaning up and confessing one to another, and praying one for another. Besides this three were reclaimed.

Bro. J. K. Walling, whose home is near here, and Bro. Wesley Kidwill were with us here. Bro. Walling is doing much preaching in destitute places and should have the sympathy and help of established congregations. Bro. Landy Waters, brother and sister Thurman, and old Bro. Walling of McMinnville, visited the meeting. Bros. Bowles and Swift, preaching brethren of White County were also present. Bro. Bowles is a grandson of Raccoon John Smith. We met enough preachers, if properly sustained and put out to preaching to sound the gospel trumpet along every hill and through every valley and in every nook and corner of White County. There are enough congregations in White County to keep these brethren at work. Here too we met old schoolmates and friends, and sister Hill, daughter of Bro. Carnes, who taught with him at Spencer. It was a pleasure to talk of old times, and pleasant association. But sad it was to think and realize how many in so short a time had crossed the river of death. We meet and part to meet no more. The lamented teacher and beloved Bro. Carnes no longer gathers us together to instruct, persuade, warn and entreat us and pray that we all live right, but we trust that we may so live, as to meet him beyond the dark sea. He frequently said when his work here was done, he wanted to live in the hearts of his pupils. Can he, from his resting place in Abraham's bosom look down upon earth, he realizes this is true. All who ever listened with any degree of interest to his fatherly instruction hold him precious in their memories. He rests from his labors and eternity alone can measure his work which follows. "Let me die the death of the righteous and let my last end be like his."

SMITHVILLE—AGAIN.

On our return home we stopped over night here. Had the pleasure of meeting the congregation in prayer meeting. This is one of the fruits of the late meeting. Also the young male members have a prayer meeting managed by Bro. Wily Carnes. We expected to journey on homeward next morning, but as no one knows what shall be on the morrow, neither did we. It was raining and our horse was sick so we "lay over." We agreed to preach again, and two more were persuaded to obey. The same hour of night they were baptized. This time we met Bro. Kidwill. He and his pleasant family gave us a happy home with them and we spent much time in telling preacher experience.

Thirty-seven in all were added besides three reclaimed which have been counted once and perhaps twice or more.

E. A. ELAM.

Lebanon, Tenn.

DEAR BRO. SEWELL: Since I was buried with my Lord in baptism, to which you were a witness, I have enlisted as an earnest soldier of the cross in preaching the gospel of Christ, which "is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." I have thrown aside all "Theological Lectures," and am determined to know nothing among the people save Christ and Him crucified. I realize the solemn fact that a large majority of the people are thirsting—actually dying for the bread of life; then let us go and present it to them in the form of the pure gospel plan of salvation. I find that the world is becoming aroused to its danger, and is falling in love with the plan as embodied in the great commission, "Go preach the gospel to every creature, etc." In our quiet little town there lived a man "well stricken in years" who had spent his life "dwelling in the tents of wickedness." He at last became concerned about his soul's eternal interest, and so strongly believing in what the Savior said, "Except a man is born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God," he sent for me and we baptized him about dark, then he went on his way rejoicing in the full assurance of having, so far, discharged his duty and being entitled to all the blessings of the promise, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." I filled an appointment for Bro. W. N. McCain at Jackson's Grove, west of Harrison's Station. Found a small, but earnest and appreciative brotherhood. Bro. McCain has done a great deal of good there, and is a very popular preacher. God grant that he may live to do much more valliant service for the Master's cause.

J. L. SMART.

Thyatira, Miss., November 7, 1884.

This Bro. Smart is the brother we mentioned in our report of the meeting at Thyatira, Miss., in the summer, as coming in from the Methodist church. We are glad to see him thus taking hold of the truth in a practical way, and we hope he will make an earnest and faithful defender of the whole truth as revealed in the word of God. Truth, and the whole truth, is all that will benefit us in the religion of Christ.

NOTES FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

W. B. Wright, Coopertown, Tenn., November 8, writes: "The meeting at Sycamore Mills, mentioned in the last issue of the ADVOCATE, closed on Friday night of last week, with fourteen accessions. The interest was as fine as we ever saw. Five were baptized the last night of the meeting. Twenty-seven persons covenanted together to keep house for the Lord at that place. There is a fine opening there for them to do great good, if they will only be faithful to the Master."

E. B. Cayce, Franklin, Tenn., November 3, writes: "At the close of Bro. Shelton's sermon, yesterday, two young ladies made the good confession, and were immersed in Harpeth River. The ladies are sisters."

W. H. Carter, Lafayette, Tenn., November 10, writes: "A public discussion between A. Alsup, Jr., of the church of God, and Thos. Eastes, of the Baptist church, will begin at Philadelphia, Wilson County, Tenn., on the 25th of November to continue four days. Two propositions: Establishing the kingdom, and design of baptism."

J. H. Halbrook, New River, Ala., November 5, writes: "I have just returned from Tennessee, visiting Hickman county, the home of my youth. Had the pleasure of baptizing fifteen persons into Christ, in old Beaverdam, the creek I was raised upon. Four made the good confession the first discourse after my return, and were baptized last Lord's day."

H. L. Walling, McMinnville, Tenn., November 10, writes: "At the instance of Bro. E. G. Sewell, who held a successful meeting in September at Hebron, near Irving college, I preached there the second Lord's day in this month to a good congregation. One confession and baptism, and a good interest. The Lord's call is to work. Why are some content without it?"

T. C. Little, Fayetteville, Tenn., November 1, writes: "Now that the hot weather and the season for 'pretracted meetings' with country churches is about over, let the evangelists turn their attention to the towns and destitute places instead of going into winter quarters. Have agreed to speak for the church at Salem the second Sunday in November, the Lord willing."

H. F. Williams, Cyruston, Tenn., November 6, writes: "Our church house and academy building at Gum Spring were burned to ashes, yesterday, about twelve o'clock. The fire caught between the ceiling and roof from a stove-pipe that ran through the building. Brethren were doing very well, and the school was doing exceedingly well. Will try to re-build, but will be hard on the brethren and community."

T. C. Little, Fayetteville, Tenn., November 6, writes: "Returned home from a trip to Oakland, Alabama, Tuesday. No additions. Bro. Shepherd is conducting a meeting at Meridianville, Ala., with a prospect for good. The brethren in that section are laboring earnestly for the cause. The church house at Gum Spring, Lincoln county, was destroyed by fire, yesterday. There was a school being taught in the house. It caught fire from the stove-pipe, so I hear. This is a severe blow to the congregation there, but not necessarily fatal."

B. C. Young, Cobb, Tenn., November 4, writes: "I commenced preaching at a school-house some six miles east of Murfreesboro, the second Lord's day in September, and continued till Friday night. Two made the confession, but only one came to be baptized. The other is said to have been prevented by her parents. Commenced at Bradyville the next Lord's day night, and continued until the fourth Lord's day. Ten obeyed the gospel, and two were reclaimed. The next meeting I held was on Paint Rock River, in Jackson county, Alabama. I commenced preaching on Saturday before the second Lord's day in October. I preached there, and at other points up the river, twenty-four discourses. There were five added. That is a very inviting field for missionary work."

V. W. Dorris, Guthrie, Ky., November 11, writes: "I commenced a meeting at Daysville, Todd county, on Thursday night before the first Lord's day in November, which resulted in twenty-three additions to the congregation; sixteen by confession and baptism, two restorations, one from the Baptists and four took membership. The meeting was short, but it was exceedingly pleasant. It is a feast to the soul of every lover of Christ and his cause to attend a meeting like this,—where the brethren come to the front and say by their actions that they are for Christ and the success of his kingdom. The membership is very strong at Daysville, considering the disadvantages under which they have labored for several years. I agreed to preach for them once a month for a year."

Obituaries.

Jimmie Pate was born April 17, 1864, died April 13, 1884. His father predeceased him in March, 1868, and his mother in 1882. Jimmie was a good and obedient child to his mother. He joined the Christian church in 1880, and lived up to his duty as far as I know. He was resigned to death so far as I have learned. He had neither father, mother, brother, or sister to watch his dying pillow. Good-bye, dear cousin, until the resurrection morn.

MARTHA FUGATE.

With sadness I have to announce the death of my wife, Florence D. Long, daughter of R. R. and S. A. Wood, born January 7th, 1860, was married September 10, 1876; obeyed the gospel in September, 1881, under the preaching of Bro. A. G. Womack, and departed this life October 15, 1884; and in her death our little congregation lost one of its truest and best members. She was a regular attendant at our Lord's day meeting. She died as she lived, in full hope of the glory of God. I hope to have the prayers of the brethren in this my saddest hours of trouble.

L. H. LONG.

Oow Lake, Arkansas.

On the 24th of September, 1884, death entered our little cabin home and claimed for its victim our dear little son, Oscar Elihu King. The brightest hopes and promises for the future lie buried with him. He was born November 1st, 1876. But death did not stop here; on the 18th of October, 1884, it re-visited and took my husband from me, leaving me alone with four little children. Both father and son died of the dreaded disease flux and fever. The father could not be comforted, but said he would be glad for the time to come when he would meet Elihu in heaven. Tears unbidden will start and trickle down my cheeks as I sit in my lonely home and think of their suffering. But I have hope that one day I may see them again. He was a member of the Christian church at Salem, near Lexington, Ala.; joined under the preaching of Bro. James Bradley some five or six years ago, but had been a member of the Missionary Baptist ever since he was quite young. He was born November 20, 1850, being nearly thirty-four years of age. We both thought we could never give our little son up. But, oh, what a different thing it is to kiss for the last time the cold, icy brow of your dear companion, and say farewell to earth's best friend.

M. A. KING.

"There is a reaper whose name is death,
And with his sickle keen,
He reaps the bearded grain at a breath,
And the flowers that grow between."

This time he cut down two sweet flowers in a single week—dear little Wallace and Jennie, children of brother Ben and sister Maria Barry. Diphtheria, in all its dread malignity, seized their tender forms, and although medical skill was exerted, watchful vigils kept, prayers ascended to the loving Father to spare them, He, in the love and wisdom which we cannot fathom, took them away. But we will know some day, and till then, we rest assured that a gentle Father's arms will shelter and shield them from every sorrow and pain.

"And we shall shortly know that lengthened breath,
Is not the sweetest gift God sends his friend;
But, sometimes, by the sable pall of death,
Is bid the dearest boon his love can send."

Bereaved father, mother, little sister and brother, and all the dear ones who miss the fragrance of their sweet lives, take the loving sympathy of one who knew and loved them; who, also, grieves that no more will she be associated with the gentle spirit of dear Wallace, or see again the sweet, rosy face of dear little Jennie. May we all, when bereavements come, strive to say, "God knows best;" we will, I know, when the "mists have cleared" from the everlasting hills.

L. B. H.

Death has removed from our presence, but not from our hearts, Sister Susan F. Moore. Sister Moore was born August 15, 1837; was married November 13, 1856; was "born again" November, 1867; spent the remnant of her days in the service of the Lord; and finished her work September 26, 1884. Intellectual, accomplished, earnest, devout, prayerful, enthusiastic and sympathetic, she wielded a wonderful influence for truth and righteousness. About three months before death extinguished the light of her expressive eyes on the tear-bedewed shores of time, that, upon her enraptured vision might burst the glad, glittering, glorious realities of God's eternal home, her husband, Yeatman Moore, her mother, and the wife of her son, Dr. Hooks Moore, all enlisted in the army of the Lord. While the writer of these lines did all the "public" preaching during that meeting—the last meeting our dear departed sister ever attended on earth,—he then believed, and still believes, that Sister Moore did the preaching that touched the hearts and saved the souls of her loved ones. Since her death, he has immersed another of her converts, and hopes to immerse, ere long, another—a noble, generous soul with whom she often earnestly pleaded; for whom she offered many a fervent prayer, and shed many a precious tear. Truly, she "being dead, yet speaketh." Eminently useful, truly noble and sublimely good while she lived, loved and labored in this world, the lonely hearts of loved ones left to linger a little longer here are consoled by the blessed thought, that she is to be perfectly happy forever in "that land that is better and brighter than this"—that DEATHLESS land.

Death's triumphant agent, Consumption, has cut short the life of another of our beloved sisters—Sister Mattie Nunnally Lucas, wife of Mr. Isaac F. Lucas, of Waverly, Tenn. In August, 1879, she became a member of the church of Christ, being baptized by Bro. T. B. Larimore; October 13, 1881, she was married to Mr. Lucas by Bro. R. P. Meeks; August 12, 1884, her spirit left the tenement of suffering, her age then being twenty-five years, seven months and twenty days. After funeral services, conducted by Bro. Larimore, her remains were deposited in the family cemetery at the residence of her grandfather, Lawson H. Nunnally, Esq., at Vernon, Hickman County, Tenn., where her childhood and girlhood days were spent. Her zeal, as a "follower of the Lamb," had become almost proverbial. She was a bright light in the kingdom of God's dear Son. Neither did she become eclipsed, by permitting the world to come between her and the "Sun of Righteousness," but continued to let her light shine brilliantly and more brilliantly until it rested on eternity's shore. As the sun of her existence was setting, its radiant beams seemed to grow brighter and extend farther, penetrating the hearts of those she loved dearest, there shedding a halo of light that should never grow dark. Surely there is a reality in the religion of Christ! She has gone to meet her little Mary, the precious, beautiful little "bud of life" that was not permitted to remain here until blighted by the frosts of time, but at the expiration of one year was lovingly removed and transplanted in that garden of eternal beauty and delight. To her bereaved relatives, especially to her sorrow-stricken companion, to whom she was an angel of mercy, we would say, Your Mattie and your little Mary you cannot recall; but to you is extended the honored privilege of meeting them beyond the "Jasper Sea." Then profit by her noble example, be not encumbered by the shackles of sin, but live as dear sister Mattie did—"prepared to die." She was a devoted friend of the Advocate, hence we announce her death through its columns.

WHAT IS BAPTISM, AND WAS IT IN WATER?

The baptism of the Holy Spirit was from on high, and administered by the Savior himself. Luke 24: 49; "And behold I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." Acts 1: 4-5: "And being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me; for John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence." Acts 2: 2-4: "And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it set upon each of them. They were all filled with the Holy Ghost," etc. These Scriptures show beyond contradiction, that the baptism of the Holy Ghost was and is not the baptism that our Savior spoke of in his commission. Matt. 28: 19-20: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen." Thus it is seen at once that the Lord enjoined as a duty upon his disciples to first teach and then baptize the people, and this baptism was in water. Mark 1: 5: "And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river Jordan, confessing their sins." Acts 8: 38: "And he commanded the chariot to stand still; and they went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch, and he baptized him." Matt. 3: 11: "I indeed baptize you with water."

Here we have the word with water, which has caused much difference of opinion; because many believe that the word with water must always mean an application of the water to the person; but we find from Acts 1: 5, that they used with the Holy Ghost, and we find from Acts 2: 2, "it filled all the house where they were sitting." This was an overwhelming of the Holy Ghost, for they were completely surrounded with it. So we believe that in order to be baptized with, or in water, we must, in like manner, be surrounded by water, as those were by the Holy Spirit.

Also my wife dyed an overcoat for me with walnut dye, not by applying the dye to the coat, but by burying the coat in the dye; yet it was dyed with walnut dye. John 3: 5: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." Can a man be born of a few drops of water, or a bowl or a pitcher of water? John 3: 23: "And John also was baptized in Enon near Salem because there was much water there." Why mention the fact that there was much water there, if it was not to show us that it requires much water to baptize? It does not seem reasonable that the writer would have told us that he (John) baptized at that place, when he knew that one barrel of water would have sprinkled many thousand. Again I ask, why are we told that the baptism took place in water if it is not true? or, in other words, are we asked by those who may differ with us to believe that the apostles, with all their intelligence, went from the houses to the rivers and places where there was much water to get a handful of water to sprinkle, or a cupful to pour on the head of a man? If so why is it that those who believe this do not practice it? They will admit that the inspired men of God took all persons whom they baptized out to the water in its native place, but don't know how it was done, notwithstanding we are told. Romans 6: 4: "Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the father," even so we also should, rising from the grave of water which is a type of the grave of Christ, commence new life. A man with all of his efforts, is a sinner until he has been buried by baptism. John 3: 5: Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, 'except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.' Col. 2: 12: "We were buried with him in baptism." Eph. 5: 26: "That he might sanctify and cleanse it (the church) with the washing of water by the word." Heb. 10: 22: "Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." Acts 22: 16: "And now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins." Acts 10: 47: "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Spirit as well as we?" See the manner of washing. 2 Kings 5: 14: "Then went he down and dipped himself seven times," etc.

Any person who can show, scripturally, the above positions are wrong, is requested to do so, after which will come my argument to sustain them.

W. F. ANDERSON.

Our true knowledge is to know our own ignorance. Our true strength is to know our own weakness. Our true dignity is to confess that we have no dignity, and are nobody and nothing in ourselves, and to cast ourselves down before the dignity of God, under the shadow of whose wings, and in the smile of whose countenance, alone, is any created being safe. Let us cling to our Father in heaven, as a child, walking in the night, clings to his father's hand.—Charles Kingsley.

Christ gives peace by healing the diseases of the soul. Instead of the wretched device of attempting to satisfy restless and unholy cravings, He expels them and brings in the new sources of joy. The world's false peace begins in delusion, goes on in sin, and ends in perdition. Christ's peace begins in pardoning grace, goes on in quiet trust, and ends in glory.—T. L. Cuyler.

Prayerful meditation upon religious truth does for the Christian spirit what the quiet, continued imbibing of the sunlight does for fruit in maturing and mellowing it.

THE MEETING AT MURFREESBORO CONCLUDED.

After continuing for thirty-six days, the meeting at Murfreesboro, Tennessee closed on last Sunday night. Twenty persons were baptized, one was received from the Baptists, and one was restored who had fallen from the pathway of duty. The meeting was a most delightful one to me. The interest on the part of the membership was unabated at the close, and the audiences were good from first to last; on the last evening we had one of the largest audiences of the meeting. It is marvelous what a power there is, in the word of God to interest the people!

The politicians think they do well when they draw out a large crowd to hear some of their most noted speakers; but what political speaker could draw good audiences night after night for thirty-six days? The preacher can do it easily, because of the absorbing interest which God's truth, when plainly presented, arouses in men. Bro. Ellmore once expressed his experience of the advantage of long meetings thus; he said the second week was generally better than the first, the third better than the second, and the fourth often better than the third. So can I testify; and in some cases I have found the fifth better than the fourth. When a meeting has thus been continued for a long time, without any excitement except that which is produced by the truth, the good results are much more permanent; for such cases the power which moves the people is not the personal magnetic influence of the preacher; it is the truth, the power of God unto salvation. We should remember also that the truth is the only weapon that God has given us with which to overcome wrong; we are to use the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God. The efficacy of this weapon is wonderful; the truth is irresistible when one patiently listens and honestly considers; the only escape from its power is to turn away and avoid it. The preacher therefore does his whole duty when he preaches the truth, and practices what he he preaches; when he teaches the Bible, and lets the light of it shine out through his life.

There are several lessons that I want to draw from the Murfreesboro meeting for the benefit of our readers.

A number of the young members have been accustomed to dance and to think there is no harm in the practice. I soon found that this practice was much talked about by outsiders and by members of other churches and that it was a source of discouragement to the membership. I learned also about some personal difficulties, and individual weaknesses that were great drawbacks to the success of the cause; but I found also that all the parties concerned, were attending the meetings and giving most excellent attention. When I became acquainted with the young ladies who had been dancing I found them to be most excellent and amiable girls who seemed desirous of doing right; they did not believe dancing was wrong. In the course of the meeting a number of preachers visited us who were more or less acquainted with the condition of the church, and, of course, these matters were talked about. "What is best for the church?" "What can be done that will most advance its interests?" were the all important questions discussed. Quite a difference of opinion existed as to what course should be pursued, but there seemed to be a pretty general feeling that something more should be done than was being done. I was having fine audiences, the best that had been secured for many years, and was preaching the truth as plainly and forcibly as I knew how; we were having three meetings each day, two for preaching and one for practice in singing; the members generally were beginning to read the Bible as they had not been doing for some time; I was exhorting them as earnestly as I knew how, and was repeating the exhortation daily, to engage fervently in daily secret prayer, to live a life of prayer; and we had good reason to believe from the deep interest they took in the meeting that they were heeding the exhortation; still there was a feeling that something else ought to be done. It is so hard for us to wait for the truth to do the work. We want to hasten matters, to compel people to do right, to extort promises from them that they will do better. The confession of wrong-doing that is obtained in this way is not worth the breath required to make it; the addition to the church that is secured in this way is a curse instead of a blessing, nor does he benefit himself in coming into the congregation.

There is but one way revealed in which a man can be made free from sin, namely, by the power of the truth. "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free," says Jesus. People must WANT to do right before they will become faithful servants of the Lord; hence the evangelist should expend his strength in getting the people to want to obey Jesus with a real, earnest, loving desire; it is a very easy thing to learn what to do, and what not to do, when one desires above everything to please Jesus.

Let the evangelist therefore preach and teach the truth, publicly and from house to house, in season and out of season, in all prayerfulness striving to practice what he preaches; let him not fail to ask for wisdom that he may be guided in his words and in his deeds. This simple rule should be observed: it is not wise to talk to a stranger about his sins, as a rule; if you want to reform a man first gain his confidence and affection if possible, and then he will listen to you; it is perfect folly to hope to reform a man whom you dislike; some one else may help him, but you cannot. I tried to act according to these rules at Murfreesboro and one night the ladies who had been dancing (except one) came to me after we had dismissed and said they had resolved to dance no more; I turned to the one exception and asked her if she was not ready to give up the dance. She replied, "I do not see that it is wrong in itself, but I suppose I should give it up for the sake of standing on the union ground;" and I understood that she too determined to quit the practice. I left church that night with my heart full of happiness; one very troublesome and annoying question was disposed of. "But will they hold out?" some one inquires. Time will tell; but of one thing I am sure, viz., that the young members of that congregation are sure to make faithful members if the older ones set them a proper example, and give them the encouragement that they should. I shall watch the progress of the church with the very greatest interest. Bro. A. M. Growden, of New Zealand, will serve them as evangelist for some time. They need his help; and I believe he is admirably fitted to be of much use to the congregation. The church has arrived at a critical period in its history, and its welfare depends very largely how the older members do. The younger ones will come out all right, if they have a proper example.

NOTES FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Arthur M. Growden, Murfreesboro, Tenn., writes: "The meeting held by Bro. Jas. A. Harding closed last Sunday night; it was a most successful meeting from beginning to end. Prejudice runs rather high at Murfreesboro; notwithstanding this, however, Bro. Harding had large audiences, and a most attentive hearing. This is accounted for by the fact that he relies simply upon the gospel as the power of God unto salvation; has no tricks or eccentricities to attract attention; no funnyisms or vulgar jokes, in which, sad to say, some preachers indulge; he is singularly free from the popular sensational oratory so common with some revivalists; he is dignified, yet easily approached by all, and has a great influence for good in the social circle. He is uncompromising in the presentation of truth, yet courteous to those who differ in doctrine. His style is original; his sermons replete with instruction; his power of description and knowledge of human nature is quite uncommon. The meeting continued for five weeks, yet the interest was unabated; twenty-two were added to the church, though this was only a part of the good done; those who were cold and indifferent were stirred up to new life; those who had forgotten secret prayer and the systematic and regular study of the word, were constrained to commence again that they may thus become wise unto salvation. There is a deep religious feeling pervading the entire congregation—a feeling which will work out a great result in the future. The brethren are profoundly thankful that Bro. Harding visited them, and are loud in their praises for his methods of presenting the claims of Jesus, for his entire consecration to the work, and for his untiring zeal and energy for their eternal welfare; he is truly a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. His farewell sermon on "Christian Union" will long be remembered here; his closing words were tender and touching in the extreme. He leaves Murfreesboro with our prayers and good wishes; we trust that he may be spared to visit us a year hence, but if not, may we all remain steadfast to the end that we may all meet in the "city of God," where farewells will never again be spoken."

J. H. Daniel, Caddo Mills, Hunt county, Texas, October 25, writes: "For the first six months of this year, on account of sickness in my family, I did but little preaching. The second Lord's day in July I went to Elm Grove, in Rockwall county, (the place I preached my first discourse, the third Lord's day in February, 1881,) and set in order a congregation of seventeen members. The brethren selected Bros. Thomas Stewart, G. C. Vernon, and J. M. Porter, for elders. Also Bros. S. C. Walker and A. C. Walker, for deacons. They then agreed to keep house for the Lord, and have been doing so ever since. I went back to this place, and commenced a meeting on Saturday before the second Lord's day in August, and continued over third Lord's day. Seventeen additions—twelve by confession and baptism, one from the Baptists, one reclaimed, and three by commendation. From this place I went to McMinn's School-house, in Collin county, and commenced a meeting, and was joined by Bro. T. C. Reedy, who did most of the preaching after he came. The result was five added to the Lord—one by commendation, and four from the Baptists. I then went back to Elm Grove, and filled my regular appointment, (second Lord's day in September,) when two confessed their faith in the blessed Savior, and were baptized. I then joined Bro. J. C. Lee in a meeting at String Town, (this county,) where we had three additions by confession and baptism. One of these had formerly been a Methodist. The second Lord's day in this month, in company with Bro. J. B. Faulkner, of Collin county, I again visited Elm Grove, and continued until Thursday night. Had three additions—one immersed Methodist, and two from the world. Have held other meetings, which I will report hereafter. To the Lord be all the praise."

J. W. Shepherd, Huntsville, Ala., November 3, writes: "I commenced a meeting at Meridianville, last night. Had a good attendance. We held our meetings in a dwelling-house. There are two church houses in town, but their doors were closed against us. So we will have a meeting at Meridianville anyhow."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The mother of President Garfield is dangerously ill.

President-elect Cleveland will be 48 years old March 8.

The last Democratic President, Buchanan, was a bachelor, and it looks as if the next Democratic President will be a bachelor.

Gen George B. McClellan is still only a middle aged, almost youthful man, without a gray hair in his handsome military mustache.

Lewis Redmond, the once notorious "King Moonshiner of South Carolina Mountains," is living a quiet industrious life at Sunny Dale, in Pickens County.

A quarry of fine lithographic stone has been discovered near Columbia, Tenn., and has proven a success on trial by the Strobbridge Lithographic Company, of Cincinnati. This stone is worth from thirty to sixty cents a pound.

Henry George, the Apostle of Labor, is again on a tour of lecturing to the working classes of the British Isles. His book, "Progress and Poverty," is very readable and plausible, and of such merits as to have merited a reply from the Duke of Argyll.

When Gen. Beauregard and Gen. Grant met in New York a few days ago they did not discuss the civil war or its sanguinary struggles; their topic was Grant's lameness, which he said he did not expect to ever get rid of, and Beauregard's rheumatism, which he ascribed to the changeable Northern climate.

A party of one hundred Mormon converts left Chattanooga, this week, for Colorado and Utah, in charge of elders. They are from East Tennessee, North Georgia, and Southwest Virginia, a poor, ignorant, depraved class of people. This is the semi-annual exodus, which is smaller than usual, on account of a failure in their crops; being, in consequence, unable to buy tickets. In the party were three negroes, two men and a woman. These are said to be the first converts to Mormonism from that race.

A negro is reported to have committed suicide at Columbia, Tenn., from fear of being put back into slavery. It is a sad commentary on the intelligence of the negro race, to find many who believe so senseless a political canard. The triumphant party have now in the nature of things a fine opportunity to bring about an era of good feeling and kindly confidence between the two races in the South. Temperate speech and humane action will tend to disabuse the negroes of all ideas of ill-will on the part of the whites.

The popular majority for Cleveland and Hendricks is estimated to be 60,000. Tilden and Hendricks had a popular majority of 250,000; Garfield and Arthur, about 120,000. At this writing the vote of New York is still uncounted, and it is not officially decided as to who is to be our next President, though it is generally conceded that the Democrats have carried the day. It is a delicate oscillation between two great political parties when the difference narrows down to a few hundred votes in a total of 1,100,000, in the State.

Col. E. W. Cole, of this city, who made such a success of his railroad enterprise and thereby acquired immense wealth—who has often proven his faith in the future of this city and country by investing his money in home manufacture and real estate, comes forward and purchases a fine farm near this city, on which is a large mansion and donates it to this county as a home for the outcast boys and girls. The aims are to reclaim those whose associations are bad, and who are deprived of all the benign influences of friends and home, by birth or untoward circumstances, and offer them in this home the opportunities of a reformation from evil ways. All will be taught the means of self-support in some kind of industry, and a good English education afforded, enough to make them intelligent citizens. The whole will be under a Board of Trust, and engineered by so public spirited men as Judge Jno. C. Ferris, will prove a success. It has long been a question of vital importance to dispose properly of the "wretched ones" of our land, whose tender years entitled them to mere consideration than the prison cell, only to come forth after their term has been served more hardened and deeper steeped in crime. Col. Cole donates this institution to the memory of his son Randal, who met with an untimely death by an unfortunate railroad accident, some months ago. It is a great pity more of our wealthy men do not devote their surplus wealth toward ameliorating the miseries of the unfortunate ones of the earth. Free water, or public baths, established by the munificence of our rich men in overcrowded cities would be a blessing to the poor who too often are the victims of bad air and their own filthiness.

Hon. George W. Jones, of Fayetteville, Tenn., for eighteen years a member of Congress from the Fifth District, is lying very dangerously ill. He is honored by the State of Tennessee, and over the whole country, on account of his sterling integrity, high character, and pure public life. He so jealously guarded the appropriations while in Congress, that Mr. Greeley gave him the envied soubriquet of "the watch-dog of the Treasury." Like his warm friend and associate, Andrew Johnson, Mr. Jones rose from humble surroundings to high stations of trust and honor. A later dispatch announces the death of the venerable statesman.

Among the casualties attending the jollification in honor of the election of the Democratic Ticket, we note that an old six-pounder cannon exploded in Shelbyville, Tenn., and a fragment weighing eight and one-half pounds crushed through a window, and struck an old negro sitting by a stove, he died in two hours. The charge was a heavy one, and had been rammed in with clay and rags. This makes the third victim from this old rotten piece of ordnance. In 1847 two men were killed by a premature discharge when celebrating the return of the volunteers from the Mexican War. The cannon was drawn from United States stores in 1815, and should have been condemned as "scrap iron" long ago.

A strong demand exists for a registration law in this State, and many others, to prevent the fraud in elections. Registration of voters is not a law in this State. There is a poll tax, but it is not coupled with the suffrage, for or against. In Arkansas, Texas and West Virginia registration is prohibited altogether, as a bar to suffrage. In New Jersey and New York it is required in cities having more than 10,000 inhabitants. In California, Connecticut, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin it is required by law. The constitution requires it in North and South Carolina, Pennsylvania, Nevada, Maryland, Florida and Colorado. Only in Tennessee, Delaware, Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio, is no registration required. In Kansas it is forced in cities only, and this is also a constitution provision in Missouri. There is in California a special provision against the Chinese. In Connecticut and Massachusetts no man who cannot read is allowed to vote. In Georgia non-taxpayers are excluded. Fraudulent votes and bribes exclude in Indiana. Rebels, whatever they may be are disbarred in Kansas, paupers in New Jersey, New Hampshire, Texas and Maine. In Florida, South Carolina, Virginia and Michigan duellists are disfranchised, and in the first of these better on an election. In Missouri, Nebraska, Oregon, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia the United States army is disfranchised. In Pennsylvania non-taxpayers and political bribers are mentioned; the same is true of New York. In Rhode Island there is a property qualification of $134. Bribers are put aside in Vermont. From this it will be seen that, in a strict construction of things, few of us are qualified to vote, and that in Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Connecticut their property and education qualifications would exclude the great bulk of the negro race if adopted throughout the Southern States.

FOREIGN.

The cholera has increased in virulence in Paris. Desolation in the slums and purlieus of the city is terrible. The English and American quarters are in a fine sanitary condition, and so far have escaped the plague. Germany is taking extraordinary precautions to prevent the disease from entering her borders. This fact is proven beyond cavil, that the poorly-fed and filthy are the first to succumb to this fell destroyer. Cleanliness is akin to godliness. Let us take warning in this country, and meet the enemy on our shores.

The French are still fighting in China, with mean success. Their situation around Tonquin is becoming very perilous. Their outposts being subject to frequent attacks, and provisions very scarce. To add to the horrors, the health of the troops is very bad.

A report from Khartoum, Egypt, says that the British General "Chinese Gordon has been killed. His situation has been perilous for some time. A shrewd newspaper artist who was captured by the Mahdi prior to the recent defeat of Hicks Pasha, is now holding a position of doctor in the rebel camp. A post of honor.

A later cablegram to the press of this country announces the passage of the Franchise bill in the House of Commons, by a large majority. Considerable opposition came from conservative ranks. It passed House of Lords on first reading. Expectancy is great, for no one can tell what further course it will have there.

In the House of Commons Hartington, Secretary of State for War, moved the appropriation of £1,000,000 for the Nile expedition. He explained that the object of the expedition was to accomplish the relief of Gordon, but said Lord Wolseley was not precluded by the terms of his instructions from establishing a settled government over Khartoum and the surrounding districts.

This is but a line with similar movements, completed or in process, under every important Government in Europe. Austria has temporarily restored the dignity of the upper house in her dependency of Hungary; the greatest event in the history of modern English politics is at this moment hinging upon the political contraction of the House of Lords, if not its entire abolition. Already the impression among intelligent men everywhere is that its power is as surely doomed as anything that ever happened. Its existence has always been so independent of the people that it has become offensive to the spirit of these times.

The recent general elections in Germany conclusively show that Socialistic doctrines have taken firm root, and have obtained an extraordinary following in the large cities. The Socialists have gained in Berlin alone during the past year, 38,000 votes, and returns from other heavy centers of population show that the followers of the red flag are gaining strength. Nine Socialists have been elected to the Reichstag, and in twenty-nine districts the Socialists will contest the seats of other candidates. Bismark will find in the sudden growth of this revolutionary party a dangerous problem. The general discontent of the working classes is at the bottom of all this, and it will take wise statesmanship to check the movement.

The proposed abolition of life Senatorships from the French Senate is another illustration of the straits to which the democratic tendency of the day is pushing the monarchical teachings of the Old World. The French Senate was created by the constitution of the year 8, promulgated Dec. 24, 1799, to watch over the administration of the laws. The number of Senators was raised gradually from 60 to 137. The Senate was replaced by the Chambers of Peers in 1814, re-established by Napoleon III., Jan. 14, 1852 and abolished Sep. 5, 1870. The re-establishment was proposed in 1873. In 1875 a Senate of 300 was finally organized, 235 of whom were to be elected by the county, and 75 by the National Assembly for life.

H. F. Williams, Cyruston, Tenn., November 7, writes: "We are all sad at Cyruston. Our church house and school-house were burned to the ground last Monday, at twelve o'clock. Caught from the stovepipe. Yesterday we made up $450. It will be raised to $900, I think, and the new house will be forthcoming.

The most important part of any business is to know what ought to be done.

GOLDEN-ROD.

Midsummer music in the grass—
The cricket and the grasshopper;
White daisies and red clover pass;
The caterpillar trails her fur
After the languid butterfly;
But green and Spring-like is the sod
Where Autumn's earliest lamps I spy—
The tapers of the golden-rod.

This flower is fuller of the sun
Than any our pale North can show.
It has the heart of August won,
And scatters wide the warmth and glow
Kindled at Summer's mid-noon blaze,
Where gentians of September bloom
Along October's leaf-strewn ways,
And through November's paths of gloom.

As lavish of its golden light
As sunshine's self, this blossom is;
Its starry chandeliers burn bright
All day; and have you noted this—
A perfect sun in every flower?
Ten thousand thousand fairy suns,
Raying from new disks hour by hour,
As up the stalk the life-flash runs?

"A worthless plant—a flaunting weed!
Abundant splendors are too cheap."
Neighbor, not so! unless, indeed,
You would from heaven the sunsets sweep,
And count as mean the common day;
Meseems the world has not so much
Superfluous beauty that we may Blight anything with scornful touch.

Herald of Autumn's reign, it sets
Gay bonfires blazing round the fields;
Rich Autumn pays in gold his debts
For tenancy that Summer yields.
Beauty's slow harvest now comes in;
New promise with fulfillment won;
The heart's vast hope does but begin,
Filled with ripe seeds of sweetness gone.

Because its myriad glimmering plumes
Like a great army's stir and wave;
Because its gold in billows blooms,
The poor man's barren walks to lave;
Because its sun-shaped blossoms show
How souls receive the light of God,
And unto earth give back that glow—
I thank Him for the golden-rod.

—Lucy Larcom, in "Wild Roses of Cape Ann."

ABOUT "FEELINGS."

We are rarely conscious how far our "feelings" control our actions, and we are inclined to have small patience or sympathy with them in others. But there is nothing so potential over human conduct, as what we call, for lack of a better word, feelings, and the man who would persuade his fellows must take them into account. When fortune or education makes a gulf between men, the basis for "feelings" on the less fortunate side is enlarged, while the Christian courtesy on the other needs to be increased in proportion. Now it is a curious fact that almost every one dreads to enter a strange church. One has a secret, lurking suspicion that he is not welcome, and that he is in more than one sense a stray sheep. And this dread has a foundation outside of one's imagination in the exclusiveness manifested, perhaps thoughtlessly, by a certain class of persons in the church, who have not learned the duty or the art of welcoming strangers to God's house. I never felt this dread myself until the past five years, and it was caused by the following incident. While visiting a certain city, I went with two friends to a very beautiful church to listen to a Friday afternoon lecture. A placard in the vestibule announced that the seats were free on week-days, and invited the people to seat themselves. Modestly we did as we were bidden. But in a few moments a stout dame in velvet and diamonds, with her daughters, stood at the pew door. "This is my seat," she said, peremptorily. We sat still from amazement a second, when she added, "I guess you'll have to move."

Of course we moved; but behold, a few moments later, she discovered that she had made a mistake, and that we were now in her seat. The church had filled up rapidly, and she must either remain where she was, or crowd in with us. She chose the latter alternative, and until the sermon, kept up, with her daughters, a grumbling criticism on strangers who would attend the Lenten services, and crowd pewholders out of their seats. It happened that one of my friends had been baptized in the church, and was one of its communicants during a long term of years. A removal to a suburban village had severed ties very dear to her; and this reception so wounded her, that, at intervals during the service, the tears would roll down her cheeks. We were all church-members, and were well dressed; one of us was in costly garments. How three women, without any church ties, and in shabby clothes, might have felt at such treatment, it is unpleasant to imagine.

It is true that the stranger rarely meets such a rebuff as this, but that it could happen to three ladies is suggestive. It is possible that our Protestant worship does not cultivate the amenities. There is very little for the congregation to do. It is not often that we can join in the singing, and so we join in worship by looking solemn, and shrink from a genial look or smile as if it were an indecorum. As a child, it was a great source of wonder to me why, when people read the Bible, they assumed a peculiar tone of voice, and when they entered God's house they looked so forlorn, and I have not gotten over the wonder yet. There is a great deal of grumbling in these later days about the failures of the pulpit; but I venture to say that St. Paul would have hard work to fill a modern meeting-house, if at the head of each pew sat a dignified head of a family, clad in his Sunday best, and looking as impassive and oblivious of his surroundings as the Sphinx, or as a man in a whole seat in a suburban railway train, when ladies are in the aisle. Imagine the effect, it, on entering a strange church, one of the members, coming in, should invite you to his pew. Recall the times you have worshipped among strangers, and you will find that you love best to think of the places where a look or a smile greeted you. Be as independent as we will, we are, after all, dependent upon, and sensitive to, human good-will and kindness, and the less fortunate we are, the more we need it. The most persuasive force in winning men and women into the meeting-house, which should be in the truest sense a sanctuary, and God's house, is not music or eloquence, but that love which is learned of Christ, which holds one's neighbor, no matter what his estate, as dear as itself, and in its fine courtesy will take account of feelings which, it should always be remembered, may be indices of the pain and deprivation of a man's life. If any church has empty pews, if any Sunday-school is small, before the pastor is dismissed, or the Sunday-school superintendent is asked to resign, let the members try St. Paul's advice, and be kindly affectioned one toward another, and mindful to entertain strangers. Feelings may not be very gracious or large powers; but they are the springs of living, and human love can sway them, even toward Christ.—Sunday-School Times.

MENTAL WORD CULTURE.

St. Nicholas says that at last, by a change of rule and method, the good old game of word-making can be played without printed cards or letters, by the summer moonlight or winter fireside. The memory will be greatly strengthened by this new and fascinating amusement, which will also cultivate correct spelling and bring to notice many curious words. Any number of players may join. The first in line mentions any word of two or three letters, and the one who sits next makes another word of it by adding one or more letters. The third player does the same in his turn, and so on, until a word is made to which no one can add; and this completed word belongs to the player who finished it. This player then starts another, which goes on in the same way until finished, and the player who first secures five words wins the game, which is subject to the following rules:

No proper names can be used.

No word can be changed unless at least one letter is added, and the new word is of different meaning from the one before it.

No plural or change of tense can be used to make a word.

Before starting a new word, the player must call out in order the words he has already secured, which can be taken away at this time by any player who can add to any of them, or combine any of them into other words by adding one or more letters.

If any player discovers an error of spelling in any word given out, he can claim it for his own by giving the correct spelling.

Any player may call on another for the definition of any of his words, and if the spelling be not correct for the word of that meaning, he can claim it, although correctly spelled for another meaning.

No unreasonable delay is permitted, as the player next in turn can play if he has waited three minutes, which he can compute by counting slowly the numbers to one hundred and eighty.

Here are a few specimen words and changes: Am, ram, ream, cream, scream. At, cat, cater, decanter. He, hem, helm, helmet.

WHERE SHAWLS ARE MADE.

The valley of Cashmere, whose manufactures are of world-wide popularity, lies at the northern boundary of India. It is a valley only in the sense in which the word is used in the regions of lofty mountains, as Yo Semite, high up among the Sierras. The Asian valley, enclosed by a belt of the Himalayas, is about 5,500 feet above the sea, of somewhat oval form, about ninety miles from northwest to southeast, and having a breadth varying from ten to thirty-five miles. The locality possesses many characteristics of that of the City of Mexico and its environs, plateaued in the Cordilleras. Tradition says that the former, like the latter, once consisted of an upland lake. At present, in either territory, numerous small lakes present themselves, which are liable to overflow and cause inundation in the season of melting snow or periodical rainfalls. In both floating gardens are resorted to, whose rise and fall with the water secures their products of melons and vegetables from destruction by flood.

Cashmere presents a diversity of scenery and climate that makes it one of the most interesting and attractive portions of the earth; it is rich in flowers and fruit, and is all that delights the man of science and the lover of nature. Several of its encircling mountain peaks have an attitude of from twelve to fifteen thousand feet, their summits exhibiting eternal snows in contrast with the verdure and bloom of the smiling vale. Northward stands the majestic "Naked Mountain"—native name Nanga Parbat, from its being too precipitous to support snow. This summit is 26,629 feet above the sea level, by which it ranks fourth among the mountains of our globe. The Jhelum River, which drains the valley has its origin there in a lakelet; thence it detours from lake to lake like a busy messenger, finally making its egress through the mountain wall by the only pass which is practicable during winter, when snows obstruct the higher gateways between the secluded valley and the plains of Punjab. The cleft is more than 7,000 feet in depth, with nearly perpendicular sides, and so narrow at the foot as not to admit a wheeled vehicle beside the river, the travel through the pass being necessarily on foot. Serinagur, or Cashmere, the capital, is situated centrally in the valley, on both sides of the river, and contains 40,000 inhabitants. Islamabad, a seat of shawl and cloth manufacture, is on the river above. Baramula, a small town, is lodged just within the passage by which the Jhelum breaks through the Himalaya range.

The population is chiefly Mahometan Hindu. The men and women are of fine appearance physically. Bee-keeping, the preparation of ottar of roses, manufacture of leather and shawls, are prevailing industries,—the latter it is which gives the valley its renown. The number of looms is 16,000, their annual product 30,000 druschales—the native word we have corrupted into shawls. The shawl goat, whose long, silky hair furnishes the material, inhabits the high table-lands of Thibet and Tartary, whence its fleece is brought to Cashmere, and there bleached, spun, dyed and woven. The looms are rudely constructed, and occupy a place in small shops or in the humble homes. Merchants employ the weavers at a pay-rate of from three to twelve cents a day. The figures are not wrought by use of a shuttle, but by wooden needles, one for each color. This skilled handwork is done after a pattern or design, from the wrong side, the face of the goods being downward and unseen until completed. A fine shawl, that in market brings from $500 upward, has probably taxed the patient industry of two, three or four pairs of hands during an entire year. On account of the slow progress of the work, it is customary to divide it among different hands, and join together the finished pieces.

The history of Cashmere, did our space permit, is worthy a record. Within the past two-thirds of a century—that is, since in 1819 it fell under the power of the Sikhs—it has experienced the successive tribulations of war, a desolating earthquake, a pestilence, and a famine occasioned by the failure of the rice crop. Upon the British conquest of the Sikh Kingdom, Cashmere was ceded as a separate State to the conqueror of an adjoining section of Thibet, Gholab Singh.—L. S. G., in Watchman.

The chief advantage secured in the new upright piano-fortes which the Mason & Hamlin Company are now introducing, is undoubtedly, in their quality of tone, which is, of course, the fundamental excellence in any piano. By their new arrangement, the strings are accurately and securely held; being subject to little or no variation from changes of temperature, humidity of the atmosphere, etc. More perfect and accurate vibrations of the strings are thus secured, which are essential to tones entirely musical, and free from mere noise. The greater durability and freedom from liability of the Mason & Hamlin piano to get out of tune come from the same cause. This improvement in these pianos is added to the best modes of construction heretofore employed.—Boston Traveller.

ORCHESTRAL PIANO-ORGAN.

A NEW INSTRUMENT.

SWEET AND POWERFUL.

SIX OCTAVES.—Size: Height 4 feet 8 inches; Length, 4 feet 8 inches; Depth, 2 feet 3 inches.

THE OASE is a beautiful design of an upright Piano, exactly like illustration, manufactured of solid Cherry, highly polished to resemble Rosewood. THE MUSIC is produced upon TWELVE Octaves of Reeds, (aided by a double Right and Left Coupler), so constructed, tuned, and voiced as to imitate as nearly as possible a stringed instrument, operated by a full six octave compass of Keys. This instrument excels all others in elasticity of touch, and the most rapid music can be played to perfection. It responds at once to the touch, combining an easy action with quickness of articulation. The tone is smooth, full and rich, not harsh nor ear-piercing. It is the best accompaniment for VOCAL Music, being subordinate to the voice, instead of covering it up, and the tone is pure and flexible. The instrument can be played with perfect ease by ladies, as the pedals (a new invention for which application for patent has been made) are operated without exertion, in a perfectly natural position. Additional pedals adjustable for children are sent with every instrument. Knowing this Piano-Organ will please the public, we are determined to introduce it at once and make the following offer:

If you will remit $95.00 within one month from the date of this paper, by Draft, Post Office Money Order, or by Express prepaid, we will ship you this instrument, with adjustable stool and book, IMMEDIATELY ON RECEIPT OF ORDER. Test trial given and money returned if instrument is not just as represented and perfectly satisfactory. The regular price of this instrument, as compared with other manufacturers, could not be less than $145. Visit the factory and select, or order by mail and mention this paper. STOOL, BOOK AND MUSIC, INCLUDED, ONLY $95.00

Mars Hill College.

With pleasure we lay before our readers the following extracts from the Fifteenth Annual Announcement of Mars Hill College, an institution perpetually wielding a wonderful and wide-spread influence for truth, refinement and righteousness.—EDITORS.

POSITIONS PROCURED FOR OUR PUPILS.

We make a specialty of preparing pupils for

(1.) PREACHING; (2.) TEACHING; (3.) PREACHING and TEACHING.

Many educated here—among whom are successful lawyers, physicians, merchants, salesmen;
mechanics, farmers, editors, authors, teachers and preachers—have so demeaned themselves, that the humility, fidelity, integrity, accuracy and ability of "Mars Hill students" have become proverbial. There is, consequently, such a demand for the services of our pupils, that we deem it perfectly safe to promise to procure pleasant, profitable and honorable positions for all who qualify themselves here for usefulness. Indeed, for several years we have been able to fill comparatively few of the positions tendered.

HEALTHFULNESS!

Mars Hill as a Health Resort.

Our school was founded in 1870. All the "doctor bills," for services rendered our pupils, from then till now, do not, we think, amount to twenty-five dollars—probably not to one dollar a year. Those who have come here pale and puny, from malarial districts, have, without an exception, we believe, returned to their homes enjoying health.

What "Watering Place," or "Health Resort," then, can justly claim more, as a health-preserver and health-restorer, than Mars Hill? Address,

T. B. LARIMORE, President.

HAVE YOU EVER THOUGHT?

Did you ever well consider,
As you journey on life's way,
Of the vast results dependent
On the things you do and say?
Have you ever learned the magic Treasured in one little word,
Fittingly spoken, wisely chosen,
How it into being stirred?

And a soul almost desponding,
New, fresh inspiration caught,
Grasped anew life's heavy burden,
By your bright example taught?
How a cold and icy nature,
Like a northern wintry blast,
Brings a blight where might be blossom;
Heaven's own blue is overcast?

Possibilities of greatness:
May be crushed by ruthless hand;
Every aspiration withered,
Ere it ventures to expand;
And the grandeur of a life-time
May be smothered in its bloom,
For the lack of proper culture,
And a genial, sunny home.

Then, don't call these trifling matters,
These small, every-day affairs;
Words will eat as doth a canker,
Life at least has many cares;
All our actions, words, and manners,
With great results are rife,
For in each a soul is hindered
Or advanced in higher life. —Boston Budget.

FOURTEENTH CHAPTER OF ACTS.

This chapter opens with Paul and Barnabas at Iconium, where they so spake in the synagogue, "that a great multitude, both of the Jews and also of Greeks believed." When the word says they believed, we are not to understand that believing was all that they did, and that therefore they were saved by faith only. Faith only never saved any one, and never will. Obedience must always be coupled with faith to make it availing. We read of some cases of faith only in the New Testament. One of these is in twelfth of John, where it is said many of the chief rulers "believed on him, but because of the Pharisees did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue. For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God." That these rulers believed, no one can doubt. But that they were saved, no one can believe. And yet if faith only would save any one, then they were saved, for they did believe. Faith alone is the simple act of the mind, in accepting the truth of a proposition, without one single step taken to embrace the proposition believed. Those chief rulers believed the truth of the claim of Jesus, that he was the Son of God. But they stubbornly refused to take one single step towards embracing that truth and accepting him as the Son of God, or becoming his disciples. They refused to fall in love with him, for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God. In refusing to fall in love with Jesus, they refused one of the very foundation principles of all acceptable service to God. Without love, all things else are vain, for without love for the Savior no one will deny himself, take up his cross and follow him.

Faith only, is faith without love, without which no one can be saved. Paul says, "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be anathema maranatha. Anathema maranatha means let him be accursed when the Lord comes, showing that without love no one can be saved. The gospel was founded in God's love to man, and this love of God must be accepted in man's love to God and the Savior, or it will not be accepted at all. Love to God and the Savior therefore must exist before faith can be perfected far enough to save any one's soul. And not only can no one be saved that will not love God, but there are many other difficulties in the way of being saved by faith only. No one can be saved without repentance, and faith only leaves that out, because a faith including repentance would not be faith only. Therefore the declaration that a great multitude at Iconium believed, means a belief so far perfected as to embrace all those things that are necessary to make a Christian, the last of which is baptism. Why any one should take such passages as this as evidence of justification by faith only, is more than we can see. If faith was all they had, they were not saved, and never could be while in that condition. If the expression means that this multitude was saved, pardoned, then there can be no mistake that they did more than merely believe.

But faith is a necessity to open the way for other things. If a man never believes, he will never love the Savior, will never repent, will never be baptized, will never do any thing the Lord commands, and hence the decree of the Savior is, "he that believeth not shall be damned." But with faith in the truth of the gospel to start on, there is a chance for every thing else required to be done. When any one believes that Christ died for our sins, and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, this faith opens the way to love Jesus who has done so much, has made such a sacrifice that poor perishing sinners might be saved. And falling in love with the Savior and his goodness and mercy, and realizing that this suffering on his part was all on account of sin, of sin on the part of man, opens the way for repentance; such a repentance as will lead at once to a reformation of life, such as to turn the sinner from a life of rebellion against God to a life of service to him. Such love and repentance begin at once to manifest themselves. They delight to confess the name of the Savior, and to be baptized into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit. These done, the man is a Christian, his past sins are all forgiven, he is in the kingdom of God, the church of the living God. And since faith lies at the foundation of all these things, must lead in the doing of all that is done in becoming a child of God, it is often put for the whole. But when used in this sense it always includes the whole, every thing done in embracing the gospel and becoming a child of God. We therefore doubt not that when it is said this great multitude believed, it means they were saved, not by faith only, but a faith made perfect by the doing of all those things that make a Christian.

And here is the trouble: those that have the idea of salvation by faith only already in their minds, and find a passage like this, jump at once to the conclusion that as nothing but faith, belief, is mentioned, nothing else therefore is necessary. It is astonishing how far notions already formed and in the mind when we read, hinder us from a proper understanding of the truth. When Naaman, the assyrian leper, had got his mind made up as to how the prophet would heal him, he was then unprepared to receive any thing else. When the prophet told him to wash seven times in the river Jordan, promising that this done he should be healed, it only made him angry, and he turned and went away in a rage. And it was only by the sensible and practical advice of his servants that he finally gave up what he thought ought to be done, and became willing to accept the word of God and be healed. Had it not been for what was already in his mind, he would have been ready at the start to receive the word of the Lord. So it is with the people now, regarding the doctrine of justification by faith only. They are taught this doctrine from their childhood. It is in almost every creed or confession of faith, in almost every sermon delivered by the denominations, in the religious papers under their control, and is one of the leading features of every revival meeting carried on by the denominations, either singly or in combination. Almost the whole civilized world is raised up from childhood under the influence of this doctrine of justification by faith only.

No wonder then that people fail to understand such passages as the above correctly. And there is another fact in this passage that is worthy of consideration, and this is in the expression that Paul and Barnabas so spake, that a great multitude believed. The believing resulted from the speaking: that is, their faith in this instance, as in all others, came by hearing the word of God. And as people are led into faith, into believing the gospel, which is God's power to save souls by the word of God, is it not quite as reasonable that they can be led into repentance, into baptism, into the church of God by the word? Surely it is. Faith is certainly as vitally important in man's salvation as any thing he is to do in order to be saved; and as this is exercised by men upon hearing the word of God. Where then is the necessity for any outside power, such as the direct or abstract work of the Holy Spirit so much talked of among the denominations? There is none in the world. Those that refuse to believe the word, the gospel, will be condemned. Those that refuse to repent in obedience to God's command will perish. Those also that refuse to confess the Savior before men will be denied before the Father in Heaven. Hence the plain word of God, confirmed as it is by miracles is all that is needed to convert and save sinners.

And the Lord granted signs and wonders to be done by the apostles at Iconium, so that the people were left without excuse. They had all that God grants to any one, or ever did, to give them faith. They had the word of God, confirmed by miracles. We have the same now, since we have the record of miracles wrought then, which are written that we might believe, and that believing we might have life through his name. No people ever had advantage of us in these matters. The nineteenth century affords blessings in these matters never surpassed in any age of the world's history. What a blessing it would be if all would accept this light, and walk in it. The whole world might soon be converted if they would. But here, as elsewhere, when the truth began to prosper, opposition and persecution began. Arrangements were making at Iconium to use violence upon Paul and Barnabas, and they chanced to find it out, and left, going to Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and regions round about, and there again preached the same glorious gospel of Christ. Thus the efforts of those who sought to stop the preaching of the word, only tended to spread the gospel more rapidly, and more extensively. So soon as those preachers were driven from one place they went forthwith to some other, and before the wicked opposers could again organize their forces, cities and whole sections in other places would hear the word of the Lord. Thus the Lord continually overruled the opposition of wicked men to the more rapid and extensive spread of the gospel of the Son of God. And even now the word of God, the gospel in its purity has nothing to fear at the hands of opposition, if only the professed friends of truth will be faithful to it in their lives, and in their life work.

Ingersolls and Tyndalls and such like may rage, and set themselves against the truth and the word of Christ as much as they please, but these grand old truths of the gospel will roll on, and on, and triumph in the hearts and lives of millions more of our race, in spite of all their hate, and their terrible efforts to put it down. And as the truth prospers opposition becomes more desperate. Paul healed a cripple at Lystra, who never had walked. This made such an impression upon those idolatrous people that they began to call them Gods, and prepared to do sacrifice to them, and Paul had hard work to restrain them from it. Under these circumstances, the gospel must have had wonderful effect upon those that heard it. But the opposers at Iconium and Antioch heard what was going on at Lystra, and went there, and so inflamed and stirred the people, that they stoned Paul, and drew him out of the city, supposing him to be dead. But through the power of God, as the disciples stood round about him, he rose up among them, restored to life and strength again. What a joyful moment this must have been to those young disciples, at a moment when they thought their great teacher was taken from them. Paul and Barnabas then went to Derbe, and remained there for a time, preaching the word to them. And when they accomplished their mission at that place, they returned to Lystra, to Iconium, and to Antioch (in Pisidia,) confirming the souls of the disciples. This confirming the souls of the disciples was not an ordinance of confirmation, as practiced by Catholics and Episcopalians of modern times, but was a work of teaching, strengthening, and edifying those who had already obeyed the gospel; for it immediately adds in the same sentence, "and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God." This shows what was the character of the confirmation or strengthening which they gave to these disciples. And this is another example showing the importance of teaching disciples as they come into the church, how they must live in order to reach heaven. This is one part of the work that is too much neglected in these days. A grand work is done to get people into the church, but too little is done after they come in to teach them their duties as the children of God, in order to secure the inheritance. Paul and Barnabas, much as they had been persecuted at these places, ventured back for the sake of strengthening their brethren, and helping them on in the work of the Lord, and in their journey toward heaven.

It is a wonderful thing to bring people into the church, to enlist them in the great work of their soul's salvation, to number them among the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. But grand as this work is, it is no more so than the work of edifying, strengthening saints, to help them on in their struggles for a better world. All preachers should feel, and realize that when they so teach the plain practical word of God to Christians as to edify and strengthen them, they are doing as grand a work as can be done by them on this earth. It seems to be hard for many preachers to realize that anything is worth doing except to bring people into the church, and they therefore spend all their time in doing this work, with scarcely a thought of anything else. But Paul and Barnabas, though they had already taught these churches a long time while among them, now go back and re-visit them, that they may further instruct and strengthen them. And there ought to be more of this work done now. And during this re-visit to these churches, for their continued instruction and edification, they ordained, (appointed) elders in every church. This appointment was not to make elders, but to appoint those already elders, older ones, to work, to teach in these churches. And as the word of God, the New Testament, by which all Christians are now to be governed, was not then complete, we doubt not that these elders had received spiritual gifts, were supernaturally endowed, to enable them, in the absence of the written word, to teach and lead and edify the congregation in which, and for which they were appointed. And upon the same principle we understand that elders, older members who are competent, should be appointed now, to teach the word of God, to take the oversight of the churches, and see that the word of God is understood and obeyed as far as possible. But this appointment is no induction into office, is not in any sense constituting a class or order of men differing in point of official authority from others in the congregation, but to place them as helpers, teachers, workers, overseers in the church of God, to see that all the members do their duty as well as possible, as required in the word of God, and to see that all have something to do. The skill of elders is never more thoroughly tried in any department of their work than in seeing that all the members, and especially the younger ones, have something to do, some work to perform in the service of the Lord, so as to develop their talents. And yet this important work is woefully neglected by elders. Long speeches made by elders every Lord's day will never edify Christians. Working up an interest in Bible classes, teaching the word to the young, and thus studying and teaching the word of God on the first day of the week will do more to develop the talent of the members, than all the speech-making that can ever be done. Let elders everywhere stir themselves in this work, and they will soon see what an improvement will be made.

DID THEY SIN?

Bro. McGary writes about us (he never meets an argument) several pages in his paper. But in response to our query, as to whether A. Campbell, T. Fanning and others of the pioneers in the effort to return to apostolic ways, sinned in being baptized in obedience to Christ, before they knew it was for the remission of sins, he spends much time in telling it was I, and not Bro. Fanning, that did not understand that baptism was for the remission of sins. It makes not the least difference so far as the principle is concerned, whether it was I or Bro. Fanning, or both of us. (These personalities only divert from the question. I only wanted an example in the person of one against whom there was no prejudice.) But if I did not understand it then, I do not now. Were I to-day asked, as I was, what I wished to be baptized for? I should give precisely the same answer that I did forty years ago. He asks as an offset to the question, Did the twelve at Ephesus sin in being baptized to John's baptism, before they knew of the baptism of Christ?

The cases are not at all similar. These Jews were not baptized in obedience to a command of God, for there was no command of God in force to submit to John's baptism when they were baptized. On the other hand, when A. Campbell,

T. Fanning and D. Lipscomb, if he wishes to have it so, were baptized, there was a command to the believing penitent to be baptized in the name of Christ. These persons submitted to this baptism with all the prescribed qualifications, and they did it in the name of Christ. Some of them, it matters not whether one or all, did it before they saw all the promises connected with the obedience. The question is, did that failure to see all the promises, or to realize the exact point in the path of obedience, at which each promised blessing would be received, so vitiate the obedience as to render the act intended by them as obedience to God, a sin in his sight? That is the only question in this case. The man that so decides, whether he is aware of it or not, decides that no acceptable baptism has ever been performed. No human being has ever been baptized realizing all the blessings flowing from the entrance into Christ in baptism. If A. Campbell and T. Fanning did not sin in being baptized in that condition, they would have sinned to repeat it.

Notwithstanding, there is no similarity in the two cases, we answer the question, It was just the same sin to be baptized to John's baptism after his baptism had ceased, as it was to perform any Jewish service after that service had been done away. Just the same sin as to offer sacrifices or incense, after the law requiring these had been taken out of the way; just as much sin as to do any act as service to God, that God does not require. It was not an unpardonable sin—not a grievous sin, it was a sin of ignorance, without evil intent; it had been done in ignorant unbelief, thinking they were doing God's service. But they needed to turn from this service to the true obedience to God. They did this and were saved. Had they refused to turn from this baptism they would not have been saved. Now was A. Campbell's baptism so vitiated by his failure to see that it was for the remission of sins, as to render it so void in the sight of God, that his failure to turn from it and be baptized for the remission of sins caused his rejection by God? There is the naked issue that Bro. McGary, like all other sectarians, will never meet.

We gave Bro. McGary space in the ADVOCATE to discuss this question. He occupied several pages, mostly of a rambling nature. The last two of them but repetitions of the former. We suggested this repetition was useless. He quit. Is now publishing a paper that misrepresents me and his brethren generally, persists in saying I defended Baptist baptism, which he knows is not true. I never wrote an article nor referred to the subject, that I did not carefully draw the distinction between a baptism in obedience to the command of Christ, and one for the purpose of satisfying the requirements of Baptists. We think a baptism to satisfy the theories or requirements of Baptists exactly of equal merit with those submitted to, to satisfy Bro. McGary's theories and requirements. Both are sinful; need to be repented of and a baptism in obedience to the Lord Jesus Christ accepted in their stead. Notwithstanding we believe a baptism submitted to in order to conform to either theory sinful in the sight of God, we believe people can be baptized by Bro. McGary in obedience to the Lord Jesus Christ, and not to comply with his theory or requirements. So we believe of persons baptized by Baptists.

Were we to meet with one baptized by Bro. McGary, who informed us that he was baptized to obey the Lord Jesus Christ and not to conform to his theories, we should accept him on his statement just as we do similar cases from the Baptists or other sects. We believe Bro. McGary just as much a sectarian in his position as is D. B. Ray. His sectarianism has precisely the same effect upon him as upon others. It makes him misrepresent the teachings that he opposes, defame them and the characters of others holding theories, just as other types of sectarians do. With this we dismiss him from further notice until we are satisfied he has become more fair and just in his statements.

NOTES FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

A brother writes from Tullahoma, Tenn., Nov. 19: "A young lady having attended services at a church near Estill's Springs, on her return was talking of seeing a couple of young ladies baptized by sprinkling, when Willie Moore, a seven-year-old boy, who sitting by, very quietly replied: 'Whew! they ha'n't read the Bible enough.'"

J. O. Dillard, Gallatin, Tenn., November 17, writes to the editors of the ADVOCATE: "The congregation here has instructed me to write and ask you to insert in the GOSPEL ADVOCATE, a notice to the preaching brethren, that the church at this place would like to correspond with some of them with a view of securing the services of some one of them to labor with us next year."

J. M. Kidwill, Smithville, Tenn., Nov. 18, writes: "I held a meeting, embracing the second Lord's day in this month, at Bean's Creek, Coffee County. There were five additions; two from the Baptists, three from the world. There was once a very good congregation at Bean's Creek, but the brethren ceased to meet and the cause languished. They promise to meet regularly, and I think the prospects good for a strong congregation at that place."

L. E. Buffington, Shubuta, Miss., writes: "I will tell you again of our condition, and it may be you can see some way to help us. We are here only few in number; we have no preacher; we meet every Lord's day to read, and sing, and pray, and to break bread; we have Sunday-school regularly. We are poor, and none of the preaching brethren ever find the way down here. We hired one to come and hold a meeting with us last year, and if we were able, we would have some one to locate here, and preach for us and the surrounding country. If you know of any brother wanting work, here is the place, but we cannot promise him a large salary. We hope the day is not far distant when the Lord will bless us with a good preacher. Has Bro. J. L. Sewell's sermons gone to press? If so, what can they be had at, and where can I get them?" (They are not published.)

Robert Kirby, Hilham, Overton county, Tenn., November 8, writes: "On Saturday before the first Lord's day in this month, I commenced a meeting at Flat Creek church, in Overton county, Tenn., which lasted seven days. The result was, ten added to the church by confession and baptism, and one reclaimed. This meeting was held in the neighborhood of Bro. W. H. Fleming. He helped me in the meeting much by prayer and exhortation. Bro. Fielding Rose also assisted in prayer. This church has some of the best material in it. We hope that God will bless those young converts, and may they grow up as lively stones in the church. May God bless the entire church, is my prayer. We start Monday for home, then to Adair county, Kentucky. I have had one hundred and five additions this year. Though I cannot boast of what I have done, I can say, I am an unprofitable servant. May the good Lord bless the labors of our preaching brethren, is my prayer."

J. Harding, Bonham, Texas, November 13, writes: "I closed my meeting at Dallas on the fourth Lord's day night in October, and came to Bonham, and began a meeting on Wednesday night following. Have been here two weeks. The most unfavorable time I ever tried to hold a meeting; it has been shows, theatres, politics, election, and the old boy has had the big crowd all the time. I have been crippled. Have had to go on crutches, and stand with one knee on a stool and preach, and sit down and preach, and so I have put in two weeks to-night with the church here. For nearly six weeks I have been unable to go, only on crutches. I will rest till Lord's day night, at which time I begin a meeting at Sherman. Bonham is a pleasant place, in a fine country, of about three thousand inhabitants, and is quite an enterprising place. We have a splendid house of worship, very large and comfortable, will seat six or seven hundred, and well furnished. I have met here one of the grandest men I ever met anywhere, Bro. Charles Carlton, a man of fine sense, a grand preacher, and a man of God. He has a fine school, Carlton College. We have a large membership here; outnumber any other church in the city. A great number of the members here are just good livers, no rich ones among them, and Bro. Carlton has built up this church by the blessing of God and a grand school. The membership is over four hundred. I have made my home with Dr. Saunders and family, and a grand man he is, too, and a man who belongs to the old body. The brethren here have been very kind and good to me, and have given me all the temporal aid they could. The church is not as zealous as it ought to be, but is, perhaps, more so than many of our Texas congregations. Bro. Burnett lives here, and a shrewd man he is. He is a team as an editor; he edits the Messenger. He also belongs to the "old foggy" side of the house. He, with Bro. Henderson, a preacher who lives here, has been with me in the meeting, with a host of old friends. I have met here Bro. Odeneal, a preacher and a jeweler from Giles county, Tenn. He was with us two days in the meeting. Here I met Col. J. M. Shaver, formerly of Castalian Springs, an old Sumner county, Tenn., brother, and his good wife, Sister Shaver, and his two daughters. They are all zealous members. I stayed with them some. Indeed, it was like old times. Upon the whole, the meeting at Bonham has been a very pleasant one. Thirty-one have been added to the congregation; five of them were Baptists, some were Methodists, eleven were baptized, and some reclaimed, besides a number have "fessed up." May the Lord prosper them, and may they read the word of God and make it the man of their counsel, and at last be saved in heaven, is the prayer of your humble servant."

Robert Kirby, Marrowbone, Ky., October 28, writes: "My work as county evangelist in Cumberland County, Ky., ended on the first Lord's day in this month, (October). I concluded I would make a short preaching tour down in the good old county of Monroe, my former home, and see my friends, relatives, and brethren in Christ. I reached Hickory Grove, my old home congregation, Tuesday night. I was made happy to find them getting along well, meeting on every Lord's day, to break the loaf. On Wednesday morning we went to Freewill, preached one discourse at night. From here we went to Mt. Gilead, four miles east of Tompkinsville, and preached three times. Sorry to inform you we found the church not doing well. From here we went to Pleasant Hill, four miles southeast of Mt. Gilead, and began meeting on Saturday, and continued until the following Wednesday night. Found the church in good working order. Had nine additions. While on this short preaching tour, I met many of my good brethren and sisters. I went to Rock Spring Church, in Clay County, Tenn., on Saturday before the third Lord's day, and continued until the following Wednesday night. Twelve were added, and others almost persuaded. This is one of the oldest congregations in the country. Notwithstanding she has her winters and summers, her chills and fevers, she still lives and outnumbers almost any congregation in this country. Like many of our old congregations, she has her wood, hay, stubble, but she possesses much of the gold, silver, and precious stones. Brethren, let us all labor for the advancement of the good cause, not only in number, but in purity. God will soon remove us from the field of labor and raise up others to take our places, and may we transmit the cause to them in its purity. Though dead, we shall thus speak, and God grant that we shall give no uncertain sound. Then may we, from our blissful home above, watch the advancement of the cause we love, till it shall cover the whole earth as "the waters cover the face of the great deep."

P. F. Owensby, Hilham, Overton County, Tenn., November 13, writes: "I drop you a few lines this morning, informing you that we are in the midst of a good meeting. Bro. Alsop was to have been with us on last Lord's day, but failed to come; the cause we cannot tell. But Bro. Kirby, from Kentucky, preached on Flat Creek the week before, and he came and conducted the meeting from Saturday until Tuesday night, in connection with Bro. Swift from White county. The immediate result is, to Tuesday night, ten baptized and three reclaimed. Bro. Kirby left for home, but Bro. Swift is continuing the meeting. I will say to you that I have thought I would not publish any of my labors in your valuable paper, for the fact that I have known some publications made that were not true, as I thought, to have praise of men. I have been disgusted at that. Since August first I have visited several churches, and have confined myself to what I call drill lessons. The result has been, as I think, the churches much encouraged, and about sixty additions to the church. I confine myself mostly to practical lessons in the churches. I want you brethren to say through the ADVOCATE for the brethren at Hilham, that we want a good teacher for our academy, we wish to establish a first class academy here. We have a new house finished, 60x30 feet. We want a teacher, a good man of good morals, (a Christian,) and industrious, moving man, one that will work and build up a school. We would prefer a man of experience and of a family that would come and live with us. We can make for one who is a scholar and will do his duty, a good school. We want and will accept nothing but the right sort of a man. Any one wishing to address us may address P. F. Owensby, Hilham, Overton County, Tennessee."

Obituaries.

I would say to the brethren and relatives scattered abroad, that affliction and death have laid their hands heavily on my family during the past year. First, my oldest son, William J. Moore, was taken, about twelve months ago, with consumption, and lingered till June 9, when his spirit took its flight to that place of repose, prepared by our heavenly Father. He was born, December 17, 1860; confessed the Savior and was baptized at Philadelphia, Maury county, by Bro. T. H. Mills, in 1879, and lived a Christian life to the close. Second, Tennie E. Moore, our only daughter, was taken sick, April 1. She lay until June 15, when she departed for the other shore, leaving us in sorrow to mourn her departure. Tennie was born, May 3, 1870. Thus was cut down in the bloom of youth, our darling daughter, leaving myself and her afflicted mother to weep and mourn that she should be taken from us just as she had become a stay and comfort to us. Dear father in Heaven, assist us to bear these trials as becometh thy children. Third, on the morning of October 30, passed away my father, James Moore, after being confined to his bed five weeks. He was born, March 31, 1797, and died, October 30, 1884. Though a strong believer, he never obeyed the gospel till late in life. I think in the year 1868, he was baptized by Bro. E. G. Sewell, at Campbell's Station, Maury county, Tenn., from which time on he lived in strict accord with the word of God, which he took delight in studying. Dear brethren, pray for us.

Culleoka, Tennessee.

S. J. MOORE.

Richard McCain, son of Bro. William D. McCain, departed this life on November 11, 1884, at his father's residence, near Whitleyville, Jackson county, Tennessee. Richard was a dutiful boy, and obedient to his parents, and with the encouragement and assistance he was receiving from his parents, promised to attain an enviable position among the educated, cultivated and refined. I can safely say he was one of the most pleasant and agreeable boys I ever knew. The writer has had the pleasure of visiting Bro. McCain's family frequently, and during the many visits formed a strong attachment for Richard. None knew him but to love him. Not only will he be missed at home by his father and mother, but the entire community will realize that they have sustained a loss, in the death of such a noble boy. Richard leaves a father, a kind and devoted mother, to mourn over his loss. Weep not, brother add sister McCain, as those that have no hope of eternal life hereafter. Let your sad affliction be turned to a blessing, for we are told "all things work together for good to them that love God." Think of Jesus, who was perfected through trials and sufferings, and be not discouraged. But remember the language of the poet:

"Have we trials and temptations,
Is there trouble anywhere;
We should never be discouraged—
Take it to the Lord in prayer."

Whitleyville, Tennessee.

HENRY REHORN, JR.

The angel of death has visited the home of Bro. Ross Alexander, and taken from them little Enola, and wafted her spirit to the unknown realms above. She was a bright and engaging child, about three and a half years of age, the first-born of her parents, their joy and pride. Her death makes a great vacancy in their little family circle, and leaves an ache in their hearts that only time, the great healer, can soothe. Little Enola lived but a short while with earthly friends. But how sweet and consoling to our bereaved hearts to realize that Jesus said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." She was a tender, sweet, and affectionate child; she was loved by all who knew her. Her sweet voice is greatly missed by her papa, mama, and friends. She was sick only a short while, and fell asleep in the arms of Jesus, October 21, 1884, there to sweetly slumber until the dawning of the last lovely morn. Oh! what a consolation it should be to the dear parents of little Enola, to think that though her little voice can no more be heard in their home, she is now on the sunny shore of sweet deliverance with the dear Savior, and with her baby fingers sweeps her golden lyre, while she watches across the chilly stream waiting for papa and mama. Yes, in the sweet by-and-by, we will meet little Enola, if we hold out to the end. We extend our warmest sympathy to the bereaved parents.

TEXAS WORK AND WORKERS.

THE DEBATE AT HALLVILLE.

We attended the debate only a little, but enough to see that Bro. McPherson had not an opponent worthy of his steel. Though some think his opponent did as well as he could under the pressure of a weak cause. On the first proposition, McClelland not only affirmed the existence of the church before the first Pentecost after the resurrection, but that the church was set up at the time Christ preached the sermon on the Mount. Well this effectually knocks John the Baptist out, and further, as Bro. McPherson showed, it prevents Christ doing what he said he would do—eleven chapters after, to wit: "I will build my church." Then the disciples ask him just before he leaves the world, "Lord, will you at this time restore the kingdom or church to Israel?" Here were men in the church for years, and they did not know it existed. McClelland failed at every point.

We did not hear them on the second proposition, but brethren capable of judging, say McClelland was utterly demolished. We heard McClelland's first speech on the third proposition, and every argument he advanced was directly against him. He argued that when Christ converted a sinner by the gospel, through the word, it was a direct operation of the Spirit. He quoted many Scriptures to show how conversions were made, and in every case, claimed that although they were saved "by the gospel," and "through the gospel," or "by the word," it was a direct operation of the Spirit. We never heard just such stuff before. No wonder Baptists make no progress towards Jerusalem, when fed on such milk. We hope if Bro. McPherson ever tries to debate again, he will see that his opponent is a man who can interest him and others.

Elder Goode, of the Baptist church, preached on Lord's day, and I at night. We were both cramped somewhat by not being allowed to trample on the ground to be debated. We had one confession at night. This, in the midst of the debate, speaks well for Bro. McPherson as a debater. He is much stronger in debate than we expected, and the cause will not suffer in debate with Bro. McPherson at the helm, if he always does as well on other propositions as he has on these. The brethren at Hallville are all highly pleased with him. Many brethren attended from a distance. We noticed Bro. and sister A. Livesey, W. C. Holloway, Walter and James Comys, of Peatown. Also James Murphy, same; Sister Wright, of Huntsville; and Sister Hutchins, of Longview. The Baptists there will not want another debate soon, we think.

THE DYING THIEF.

Why will people sing "The dying thief, rejoiced to see, that fountain in his day," etc.? He did no such thing. He never saw it, nor did he rejoice at it. And again, we noticed at the debate at Hallville, when this was sung, that many of our own brethren would throw back their heads and sing, "And there may I, though vile as he, (the thief) wash all my sins away," etc. Now they certainly did not believe what they were telling the Lord in this song; did you, brethren? Do you believe you are as vile as that thief, and do you believe your sins are washed away just as the sins of that thief were? Do you believe his sins were washed away at all? No you don't. Then why on earth do you sing such outlandish stuff? Brethren, come out of Babylon.

DEAR BRO. POE: Enclosed, please find P. O. Order for two dollars in payment of my subscription to GOSPEL ADVOCATE. I am well pleased with the paper; like its high tone and independence.—[James Darrow, Bowie, Texas.

This is a fair sample of many letters we receive now.

The following got mislaid until now, but will be good reading yet.—Ed.

DEAR BRO. POE: On the first Lord's day in June, I organized (that's what it is called) a congregation at Aqua Nigre Springs, Atascosa Co., with ten members. On Lord's day night two men, heads of families, came forward and made the good confession, and next day were buried with their Lord in baptism. I went back the first Lord's day in this month, remained a week, preached at nights to quite large audiences which increased at every appointment. Result, seven additions; six by confession and baptism, one from the Baptists. I have been this year preaching in destitute places. This, perhaps, accounts for the omission of my name, by Bro. A. Bush, when but recently he gave a list of the brethren who were preaching in this part of Texas. I have been the humble instrument in the hands of our heavenly Father, in bringing into the kingdom of Christ many that I have not reported. I will try to be more punctual, as the faithful are rejoiced to learn of the success of the truth.—[C. H. Appling, Fairview, Wilson Co., Texas, July 15, 1884.

What does it take to constitute one a member of the church?

1. Faith in Jesus Christ of Nazareth, as the Son of God.

2. A true and genuine repentance.

3. A confession with the mouth what you believe in the heart.

4. With the above, to be baptized into the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit.

Please bear in mind, the first cannot be had except by reading or hearing read the word of God: it is the only testimony man has to prove that fact; it cannot be had by prayer, nor crying, nor seeking in any other direction than in or by the word.

The second cannot be had without the first; impossible. It must be Godly sorrow, which works or leads one to repentance unto life.

The third cannot be made truthfully without the first. In time past, it has cost men and women the loss of all their worldly possession, and often their lives too.

And the fourth is meaningless—null and void of any good without the three preceding; hence cannot baptize a baby, nor one non compos mentis.

When the four conditions above are done, one then is "born again," now a child of God; made a citizen of the kingdom of God, past sins are all "blotted out," "remitted," "forgiven." The spirit of adoption is given, and earnest in the heart that if faithful through life the redemption possession will be sure. W. S. D.

DEAR BRO. POE: If a man moves West and settles near a congregation, says he is a member, worships with them for some time—a year or so—shows no letter if he has one, becomes disorderly, what should be done with him?

Answer, talk to him; if he will not reform, withdraw from him.

Here comes a question; he did not take membership with them, and you have no right. Yes, a congregation has the right to withdraw from such that which he enjoyed with them. The giving of the hand does not make one a member of the church, he was a member before. One is amenable to the congregation where he worships, and none other.

A preacher who lords it over God's heritage, which causes some to withdraw themselves, and refuses to return until he and those with him undo their wrong, have no right to complain of their brethren, they should rescind that which caused the division, and then ask their brethren to return. Jesus says, "Blessed are the pure in heart." The only evidence one can give is a godly walk and conversation before men.

If our walk and conversation is not such as the Master requires, and men talk about us, we should not complain, but begin at once to reform. "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue."

Let us be careful how we condemn others in that which we do ourselves. Condemn the wrong, but exercise charity towards the wrong doer; "charity covers a multitude of sins." Pray often and pray much. W. S. D.

We learn the church at West Mountain is doing well, and moving right along.

One confession at Longview last Lord's day. Two by right hand of fellowship.

Bro. Alton Linsey wants to know if "harnt" is a proper abbreviation of "haint." We won't tell him.

We have the agency for Caskey's book, one of the best books of the season. If you have liver complaint, send and get it, and Caskey will make you laugh off your disease. Price $1.50.

It is noticeable that organ men, and organ churches, all plead for State meetings. As soon as brethren become initiated fully in State meetings they want an organ. Why is this thus?

Can't you send us a few new subscribers? Wont the good sisters help to circulate the old ADVOCATE until we put it into every house? We pay agents a good commission. Write us for terms.

Bro. Shakum says, "We know some brethren who got so mad about politics they would not attend church next Lord's day after the election but they were on hand at a circus in town the week following."

Don't forget to send $1.50 to Bro. Ezzell at Greenville, Texas, and get one of the most logical books on the Gospel Plan of Salvation that you ever read. Title: The Great Legacy. Price $1.50. Address S. R. Ezzell, Greenville, Texas.

The Messenger misses us occasionally; what is the matter, Bro. B.? By the way, if any of the brethren want another good paper, we suggest they take the Messenger, it stands next to the ADVOCATE, and has the true ring about it. It is solid.

Many of our contributors fail recently to see their articles in print. It is because our manuscript packages were stolen or lost en route to Nashville. We now send per express, and will not lose any more. Many names have been sent us too, which may never have reached the office in Nashville on same account. If your paper is not coming as ordered, please inform me at once by postal.

R. W. Officer is pushing the Indian Mission. Brethren, help him. He is a self-sacrificing brother, working for the upbuilding and exaltation of a race long lost in ignorance of the gospel, but who manifest a willingness to learn. Sound out the word. "Go preach" yourself, or send some one; the Lord requires it of you. Send money to the elders of the church—E. L. Dahoney, or R. W. Officer, Paris, Texas. Now don't forget it. The church at Paris has charge of this Mission. It is church work, not State meetin.

The Apostle Paul asked the Corinthian brethren "Did they not know that their bodies were the temple of God, that God dwelt in them by the Spirit?" It seemed that they had forgotten that, and were using their bodies for a bad purpose. The same can be said to-day of many professed Christians. They seem to believe that they can worship God in Spirit, without the body; hence they eat, drink, and dance, go to the theatres, horse races, and many such places, where Christians should be ashamed to be seen; eat to excess, and drink to become even gentlemanly, talkative, not remembering that their bodies are God's, and they have no right to defile it. That indeed is a strange idea that one can do as he or she pleases with the body, so they keep the spirits pure; but if such could for a moment reflect, it is impossible to thus separate one's self. The body is only an outward temple for the inward man; and wherever the inward man directs to go, the outward man carries him. Let us not deceive ourselves; such are not wise. The Apostle goes on to say: "For you are bought with a price." Our bodies and your spirits are bought with a price, and that price paid for them was the precious blood of the Son of God. Therefore we are to glorify God in our bodies and in our spirits, for they are the Lord's. Now, if we have sold to God ourselves, soul and body, and have received our earnest, why should we refuse to comply with the rest of our contract, "To live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world." In view of the glorious promise of an inheritance given beyond the cold grave, let each and all read more of the word of the Lord, and pray more, meditate more of heaven. This world with its joys are transient, but the world to come, with its pleasures, is eternal. Hence we should glorify God in our body and our spirit, for we are the Lord's.

Goliad, Texas. W. S. D.

I am sorry to see so many brethren taking such lively interest in politics, each for his favorite, or party. My brother, has the Lord given you any directions who, or for which party, you should go for? How much bad blood and party feelings are engendered, perhaps never to be gotten over, never again to feel like sitting together at the Lord's table, in the Lord's house? My brethren, were not called to do this, but to work for Jesus and vote for him, first, last, and all the time. He, and he alone, is my sovereign. Oh! shame be unto us who dabble in political matters. Keep thyself pure. Goliad, Texas, W. S. D.

Co-Operation Meeting.

At the consultation meeting held in San Antonio, last November, the undersigned were appointed a committee to arrange the time and place of the next co-operation meeting for Southwest Texas. We therefore announce that the next co-operation meeting will be held at San Marcos, commencing Wednesday, the third day of December, 1884. It is hoped that the churches of Southwest Texas will be generally represented.

Now, Then, All Together!

As the election is over, and the country is resuming work, let us renew our efforts to spread Messiah's kingdom. Though the Christian Sower Tract Fund is entirely distinct from the Tract Committee of the General Missionary Convention, it is in full sympathy with it. Each convention of mission workers should appoint a committee to push the tract work. There is need of many, and room for all. The fittest will survive, and this is sufficient. We need a permanent fund, with an income sufficient to give away books, as the Swedenborgians and Unitarians are doing. They are ahead of us in this direction.

The Christian Sower Tract Fund has eight kinds of our best pamphlet tracts, and seven kinds of card tracts, to sell and give away. They have done effective work wherever used. Do not be satisfied with one trial, but send for more.

The Fund is much in need of money with which to supply destitute fields. Many are the calls for help. Send a contribution at once. Gifts to the work and profits from the sale of tracts will be used to give tracts to destitute fields. Address, J. W. Higbee, Mexico, Mo.

Church News.

I now write to inform my brethren about my whereabouts. I am in receipt of two letters desiring to know where Waterloo is, and how to get there. Waterloo is on the Tennessee River, twenty-five miles below Florence, Ala., and thirty miles above Savannah, Tennessee, and has about 200 inhabitants. I am a great deal better off in the way of ministerial aid than I thought when I first wrote. Notwithstanding, we still invite and urge the brethren in the ministry to come; there is work for all. I met with a cousin of mine, P. J. Vandiver, at the Poplar Spring Church, the State Line Ferry, on the Tennessee River, this county. He preached three discourses. Four were baptized, and three from the Baptists, myself being one. He could not give me a correct statement of all his labors, but said he had met with great success and considerable ingathering. Prejudice is dying away. I handed out all the ADVOCATES I had, and have several promises to subscribe my next visit. I have promised to visit Bro. Vandiver, (he lives 20 miles from me,) and put in one month in the Master's cause, after which I hope to have something to report worth hearing. JOHN N. VANDIVER.

LEANING ON BROKEN REEDS.

We have just been reading the life of Wickliffe, as published in a volume of 144 pages, paper cover, by Funk & Wagnalls, 10 and 12 Dey street, New York. Price 25cts. Wickliffe was born about 1324; died December 31st, 1384. This is the five hundredth anniversary of his death. He was educated at Oxford, and became master in one of the schools of that University. He was a member of parliament at one time. Became a man of influence with the government, and the especial friend of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and son of King Edward, and at one time an aspirant to the throne of England. While but little is known of the life of Wickliffe, some of his acts and the general influence of his life and labors left such an impress upon his country and age, as well as succeeding ages, that they excite an anxiety to know more of his life and trials.

To understand the work of Wickliffe, we must understand something of the intellectual, moral, and religious condition of the age and people among which he lived.

It was about the darkest hours of christendom. The people were ignorant. The political rulers were subservient to the behests of the priests, and they looked upon the Pope as their guide and instructor. Books were exceedingly rare—all were transcribed by hand—and costly, while the people were poor.

Up to the time of Wickliffe, the knowledge of the Scripture was meagre. While in all ages since the establishment of the church of God, there have been bodies of Christians and individuals who disputed the authority of the Romish church, it was the by law established religion of all Western Europe.

The dominant church, up to the period of the Reformation, was singularly averse to the translation of the Scriptures into the languages of the common people. Since the Reformation it has yielded in translating the Scriptures and circulating them among the people only as a public demand has forced the church. The councils and doctors of the church declared "it would be casting the gospel pearl abroad to be trodden under foot of swine to give the gospel to the people in their own language." There had been a few translations of parts of the Bible into the language of the common people of Germany in the eighth and ninth centuries. In the eleventh and twelfth centuries translations of Psalms, Job, Kings, and Ecclesiastes of the Apocrypha, were made into French.

But as heterodox opinions began to manifest themselves, in order to secure the orthodox faith interpretations contrary to the faith of the church, in 1229 the Council of Toulouse issued a decree prohibiting the laity from possessing the Scriptures—a precaution which Hallam tells us was frequently repeated on subsequent occasions."

In England they had only the Lord's prayer and the gospel by John translated into the popular tongue.

In 1408 a convocation of the clergy of England at St. Paul's Cathedral, issued a decree "which forbade the interpretation of any text of Scripture into English or any other language by way of a book, Bible or treatise."

Clearly the purpose of the church, which never changes, was to keep the people as ignorant of the Bible as was in their power. The civil rulers lent the whole power of the government to enforce these decrees of the clergy.

Wickliffe started out rather as a political reformer. England was in war with France. The Pope was favorable to France as the more faithful nation of the two, to the church. The clergy had acquired control of large possessions, and were in receipt of immense revenues exacted from the people for religious services. This immense sum drawn from England through the clergy was used against England in the long and wasting war in which she was engaged.

This stirred the indignation of the King and the national spirit of the people. Wickliffe espoused the cause of the nation against the clergy, and denied from a Bible standpoint the right of the clergy to hold secular offices or to enjoy large salaries. This was the starting point of Wickliffe; it gave him influence with the national party and the government. It also gave him weight and position in the University of Oxford. He was promoted at Oxford, became popular and his influence seemed to be greatly increased.

But these seemingly favorable influences were the broken reeds on which he leaned. He progressed from the political questions to the purely religious—demanded the right of the people to know for themselves the word of God. He denied the change of the bread and the wine into the real flesh and blood of the Son of God. He denied the temporal power of the Pope or any power save as it is exercised in accordance with the will of God. Hence he attributes all power to God and his will, and no human being has authority in religion, save as exercised in accordance with this will.

When he came to these strictly religious questions, the friends on whom he relied failed him. Neither John of Gaunt, nor the University of Oxford, could afford to risk their popularity and worldly interest in a stand for the truth of God, pure and simple. They both forsook him and turned against him. The political interests of John and the interest of the University could not be risked in a doubtful struggle for pure religious truth.

Their turning against him did more to injure his cause than their favor had ever benefitted him. Their turning against him was the cause of the failure for the time of his cause. This is a typical case. When in the advocacy or defence of truth we rely upon institutions or persons of worldly influence and interests to advance that cause, they always injure it. Their worldly interests will not permit them to risk them upon the uncertain conflict of pure scriptural truth. The Bible is full of examples of this. Isaiah 30: 1. "Woe to the rebellious people that take counsel but not of me, and that cover with a covering, but not of my spirit; that they may add sin to sin; that walk to go down into Egypt and have not asked at my mouth, to strengthen themselves in the strength of Pharaoh, and to trust in the shadow of Egypt. Therefore shall the strength of Pharaoh be your confusion." Or, as Paul puts it, God hath chosen the weak and foolish things of the world to bring to naught the mighty and the wise.

This is true to-day, we are relying upon our great men who have great worldly interests and honor at stake. They cannot afford to risk them for the sake of the truth. We rely upon institutions with many worldly interests to maintain and disseminate pure gospel truth. They must succeed—they cannot risk success for the sake of pure truth. They cannot risk incurring the opposition of great and influential men by herding with those who are unpopular for the truth's sake. All such institutions are faithful to the truth only so far as fidelity to the truth is compatible with their worldly success.

Wickliffe's only permanent success arose in a wholly different direction and from influences entirely diverse. He gained the sympathy of the masses, he taught the poor the word of God, and sent a class known as "the poor priests" to travel and preach; at first they were ordained clergy, but afterward laymen were sent forth. "The itinerants made their appeals to 'Goddiss Worde' and 'Goddiss Lawe.'" The law of God was not only their text but their theme. To this as a test everything was subjected. * * * They had no pardons to dispense, no spiritual authority to assert. "The men were in dead earnest; and they spoke as they felt. Clothed in long garments of coarse cloth they wandered from village to village, from town to town, and from county to county without stop or rest, preaching, teaching, exhorting, warning wherever they could find hearers—sometimes in church or chapel, when such stood open for prayer and devotion; sometimes in the church yard, when the church was closed; sometimes in the public street or market places."

But the crowning work of Wickliffe's life—the one that has lived to bless mankind in all succeeding ages and in all English speaking countries and indorsed by its influence all Western Europe—was his translation of the Bible in the simple plain language of the common people. He not only defended their right to know it. He gave it to them in the language of the simplest and most unlearned. Wickliffe's translation has been the example and model of all later translations. But when he gave it, it was only in manuscript. It was costly when the people were poor and money dear.

The church forbade its circulation. But "many suffered imprisonment and even death for using the Bible in their mother tongue. It was the custom for little companies to assemble at night for Bible readings. Copies were borrowed from hand to hand, and thus made serviceable for a wide circle. Portions were committed to memory, and afterwards recited to relatives and friends. One Alice Collins is mentioned as an expert in this matter. She could recite the ten commandments and the epistles of Peter and James. "Poor people gathered their pennies and formed copartnerships for the purchase of the sacred volume. Those who could afford it, gave five marks (about $200) for the coveted manuscript, and others for a few leaves of St. Peter and St. Paul would give a load of hay."

The good that remained of Wickliffe's labors abide through the work done among the simple hearted common people, and those not tempted by worldly considerations to corrupt that truth; those having no associations whose interests demand its sacrifice. This short history is suggestive of many thoughts and helps to us. But what are our privileges compared with theirs? What are our responsibilities in view of these great privileges?

Wickliffe himself escaped death by persecution, but after his death his works were condemned; his own bones were disinterred, burned, and cast into the river Swift, to satisfy the religious fury of his enemies.

BRO. ALLEN AND THE GUIDE.

Few men have so aroused my admiration and esteem as Bro. F. G. Allen. Clear and vigorous as a writer, devoted to the truth, and situated where he could work most effectually in pressing back the tide of worldly innovation that is flowing in upon us, I looked to him with more hope than almost any other man. But of late in watching his course I have been filled with the greatest astonishment; my love for him remains, but my confidence in him as a great leader in God's hosts has been sadly shattered. Consider the following: Sometime ago, in a controversy with A. I. Hobbs, which grew out of the introduction of the organ into the worship of the Central Church, Louisville, Bro. Hobbs was led to ask if Bro. Allen regarded the congregation which used the organ as he did one which practiced infant baptism. To this Bro. Allen replied that he had as little use (or as little fellowship,) for the church that would introduce an organ into the worship and thereby drive out good brethren who were conscientiously opposed to the instrument, as he had for the church that would practice infant baptism. Brave words, bravely spoken! I do not give a verbatim report of this matter, as it has been months since I read the articles, but I know that I do not misrepresent Bro. Allen. The Central Church for which Bro. Hobbs preaches, and which he was then defending, did this very thing. It introduced an organ and thereby drove out good members.

If Bro. Allen has not changed he has as little fellowship for that church as he has for any Methodist church in the city. Bro. Hobbs is its principal teacher, and is perhaps more responsible for its course than any other man in it. He approves what it did and defends its action. He is as guilty of schism as any other man in the church, and, according to Bro. Allen's judgment, the others are as guilty as paedobaptists. It seems therefore to me that Bro. Allen, if he were consistent, would have as little fellowship for Bro. Hobbs as for any Methodist preacher in Louisville. Since the Guide has passed into the hands of the new management—that is, since Bro. Errett became its chief owner—I find long articles every week on the editorial pages signed H. This H is, there is no doubt, A. I. Hobbs. H appears to do about as much writing for the paper as Bro. Allen, and it seems to me is equally with him an editor of that paper, though, perhaps, for prudential reasons, his name is not enrolled as one of the editors. H (if this letter stands for Bro. Hobbs, which I doubt not) is one of the broadest of the broad-gauged, one of the most progressive of the progressives. H is engaged to write for the editorial pages of the Guide; it is not to be supposed that this was done without Bro. Allen's knowledge and approval, seeing that he has from its origin been editor-in-chief of the paper.

Our readers will remember that Bro. Allen could not work with David Lipscomb as a fellow-editor, seeing that one would favor the missionary societies while the other would oppose them; but he has no trouble in co-operating with H. I wonder if Bro. Allen has gone over on the organ question?

He ridiculed the idea of Bro. Lipscomb and himself working together as editor of the same paper, for one week the paper would favor the societies, and in the next issue perhaps it would oppose. Surely he is very inconsistent or he has gone over on the organ question. "But," some one may inquire, "what reason have you for supposing that H has been engaged to write regularly or the editorial pages of the Guide?" The very best reason in the world. He does write regularly for the editorial pages of the Guide. He did not do so before the late change. Of course he has been engaged to do it.

Bro. Allen cannot co-operate with the Advocate; we agree in principle, he says, but we differ in the application of that principle to the missionary society question: but he can co-operate with Russell Errett, whose wife is a devoted member of the Catholic church, and whose chief paper, the Standard favored that Island Park ordination that so horrified Bro. Allen: he can co-operate with Bro. Hobbs who favors the use of the organ in the worship, and who is a member of a church that drove out a number of good members by introducing this instrument in opposition to their tearful entreaties. Surely Bro. Allen has greatly changed.

I observe that the Guide is now published from Louisville and Covington. It is traveling rapidly toward the Standard's office. I have seen it stated that it is now printed in Cincinnati; when I called at the old stand in Louisville several days ago, 310 West Main Street, I did not find it. Where is the Guide office in Louisville? Is it in the Pastor's study of the Central Church?

Perhaps Bro. Allen can give us some satisfaction about these matters. If he can, I hope he will.

If F. G. Allen were to die, who can doubt but that the Guide would be swallowed by the Standard, or worse still, be edited by A. I. Hobbs? Worse still, not because Bro. Hobbs has progressed further from the primitive way than the editors of the Standard, for I do not suppose he has, but because two such papers would be worse than one.

J. A. HARDING.

I start, if the Lord wills, to-morrow to Toronto for a series of meetings. Expect to be in that city till December 13th; and from that date till Christmas I expect to be at Meaford, Ontario, Canada, in a debate with a Mr. Wilkinson of the Methodist church. We are to have a discussion of six days duration. My address on the 13th of December is 61 King Street, East Toronto, Canada.

J. A. HARDING.

ITEMS AND PERSONALS.

Bro. Harding says he is in Kentucky so little, and his department has so little of Kentucky news in it, he prefers to drop the heading heretofore used, and write over his own signature, and in his own personal character. Next week we will place his name in as Associate Editor.

One of the oldest laborers in the gospel in Texas, who used to be a friend of the Advocate, but thought it too strenuous in opposition to plans, so was estranged from it, now writes, "Many who have heretofore not patronized the Advocate, will now do it." While we are not in the habit of boasting, and some in Texas went off from the Advocate, it all the time has had a regular subscription in Texas larger than any of the papers of disciples published outside of the State. Without canvassing or drumming, or much effort, it has maintained a regular circulation in the State little less than a thousand. The papers in the State doubtless have more than this, and as long as they maintain the truth free from innovation upon heaven's order, we hope their circulation may be doubled, but without detriment to their interests, we ask the friends of truth to press the claims of the Advocate. We would like during the coming year to double the circulation in Texas. It can and will be done if its friends will be a little earnest. A hundred subscribers between this and the end of the year from Texas will place over one thousand subscribers on our list for the year, and will secure to us a total list of five thousand—shall we not have them?

CHURCH OF CHRIST.

From the "Home Land of Sunshine and Flowers," a pamphlet of 74 pages, giving a description of the Soil, Climate, Productions, and educational and church facilities of Los Angeles and Southern California; sold at 50 cents a copy, we take the following in reference to the cause of Christ in Los Angeles, by Bro. B. F. Coulter, formerly of Clarksville, Tenn.:

The disciples of Christ, designated usually as the Christian Church, organized as a congregation in this city, February 28, 1875, with twenty-eight members. At that time they were permitted to worship in the Court House, which they occupied for over three years. Few in numbers, poor in purse, they were under the necessity of moving four or five times, meeting in different halls, till the erection of their present church building, which they occupied for the first time, second Lord's Day in December, 1881. Their house, located on Temple Street, near Fort, and opposite the High School Building, is central and commodious. They now number over one hundred and sixty members, and growing steadily, have a good Sunday school, and altogether the prospects for a large growth are very encouraging. They purpose soon, the Lord willing, to establish a mission church.

DEAR BRO. HARDING: I like your card on the work of the Holy Spirit well. For a long time I have had in my note book one almost identical. "To whom does the Holy Spirit come?" you say. Would not, To whom is the Holy Spirit given, be preferable? Why do you distinguish between "obedient" and "baptized?" Did the Holy Spirit, in any sense, dwell in the hearts of the saints before the glorification of the Christ? I mean apart from inspiration. Excuse my card; I cannot do better just now.—[B. W. Lauderdale, Bailey, Tenn., November 4, 1884.

In speaking on the Spirit's work, I usually read as the basis for the discourse from John 16, and hence the inquiry, "To whom does the Holy Spirit come?" Verses 7 and 8 in this chapter justify this form of expression; from John 7: 39, we learn that it would be equally correct to inquire, To whom is the Holy Spirit given? It does not seem to me that one of these forms is preferable to the other.

From this last passage (John 7: 39) it appears that the Spirit was never given to any one before the glorification of Jesus, as he has since then been given to the saints. Men received miracle-working powers from the Spirit in those days, and the Spirit of God was represented as resting upon them, as being in them; they were sometimes represented as being filled with the Spirit. Such wicked men as Balaam and Caiaphas sometimes received this miracle-working power. They had powers from the Spirit, but evidently they did not have the Spirit himself dwelling in them, helping their infirmities and making intercessions for them, as Christians have now. After Jesus ascended to heaven and was coronated as Lord and Christ, he sent the divine person, the Holy Spirit, to the earth to abide in his people, to be with them forever, to comfort them, to help their infirmities and to pray for them. Men had received gifts from the Spirit before; but they had to be washed in the blood of Jesus and made clean before they were fit temples for the Holy Spirit; nor could the Spirit be given until Jesus had entered into the Most Holy Place (Heaven), and as High Priest had made the offering for the people. The offering was received by the Father; Jesus was made King of kings and Lord of lords, and then the Spirit was sent. He has been upon the earth ever since, and will be to the end.

"Why do you distinguish between the obedient and the baptized?" inquires Bro. Lauderdale. We are commanded to believe, to repent, to confess; when a man has done these things he is obedient thus far, though he has not been baptized. To believe on Jesus, the Scriptures represent as "the work of God." J. A. HARDING.

ALL THE COUNSEL OF GOD.

ACTS 20: 17-38.

We read Paul's farewell speech to the elders of the church at Ephesus with moistened eyes. For depth of pathos it seems to us unrivaled even in the realms of Scripture narratives save by the fervent appeals and loving warnings of Jesus of Nazareth, with his pierced hands, bleeding side, broken heart and earnest prayers, commingled with dying groans. "There is love in every sentence, and a tear in every tone." No wonder at its conclusion the fountain of these elders' hearts were broken up and they "wept sore and fell on his neck and kissed him." He reviews his own life and labor in Ephesus and the surrounding territory. He labored there for the space of three years. "Ye know from the first day that I came into Asia after what manner I have been with you at all seasons, serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears and temptations which befell me by the lying in wait of the Jews." He "showed them publicly, and taught them from house to house, testifying both to the Jews and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ." He "testified the gospel of the grace of God." He went there weeping, "bearing precious seed," and in the eternal harvest of souls when the ransomed saints from Asia shall ascend on high in the cloud with the Savior, he "will come again rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him," rejoicing more fully and forever that no earthly affliction moved him, or counted he his life dear unto himself. He could say with a clear conscience that he was "pure from the blood of all men," for he had so diligently labored, and so forcibly "preached the kingdom of God," that "many who believed came forward and confessed and showed their deeds. Many of them also who used curious arts brought their books together and burned them before all; and they counted the price of them and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver"—probably about seven thousand and five hundred dollars.

He gave such a blow to idolatry that Demetrius and his craftsmen greatly feared the loss of their trade and the downfall of their goddess and her temple. "So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed." He solemnly warns these elders to "take heed unto themselves, and unto all the flock over which the Holy Spirit had made them overseers, to feed the church of God which he hath purchased with his own blood." He foretells their coming trouble, that "grievous wolves shall enter in not sparing the flock," and of themselves "shall men arise speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them," and warns them to watch. He commends them to "God and to the word of his grace which is able to build them up and give them an inheritance among all them that are sanctified." He worked with his own hands, ministering unto his necessities and to those with him, coveting no man's silver and gold, and teaching them how that so laboring they ought to support the weak, "remembering the words of the Lord Jesus how that he said, it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Mark some of this great preacher's expressions as he tells of declaring all the counsel of God. "Testifying repentance toward God and faith toward Jesus Christ," "to testify the gospel of the grace of God," "preaching the kingdom of God," "take heed to yourselves and the flock," "feed the church of God," "therefore watch," "how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak." Notice the manner and tenderness in which he did all this. "Serving the Lord with all humility of mind and with many tears and temptations," "how I kept back nothing that was profitable, but have showed and taught publicly, and from house to house," "by the space of three years I ceased not to warn you night and day with tears," "Brethren, I commend you to God," "I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel. Ye yourselves know that these hands (probably holding up his hands) have ministered to my necessities and those with me." Last of all "he kneeled down and prayed with them all." We repeat, no wonder stout hearted men used to the cares and hardships of life wept, "sorrowing most of all for the words which he spoke, that they should see his face no more."

Oh! how great the work, and how important the duty to present the whole counsel of God.

God, Christ, the gospel, the Spirit, the love of humanity and the salvation of souls must so fill the heart that one will go forth, coveting no man's silver, or gold, or apparel, counting not life dear unto himself in the midst of death, warning every one night and day with tears, and, knowing the terror of the Lord, persuade men to flee the wrath to come. How carefully should he study, and how slow should he be to make the declaration, he has preached all God's counsel.

To one thing especially belonging to "all the counsel of God" should attention be called. Not that it is more important, but more neglected perhaps than other things. Paul said he had kept back nothing that was profitable, and had showed all things, how that so laboring they ought to support the weak. The support of the weak, the matter of contribution, Christian giving, is a part of the counsel of God. He has commanded that it be done. Feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, taking care of widows and orphans, helping the poor, spreading the gospel, all are in the counsel of God. The poor will always be here. Deut. 15: 7-11; Matt. 26: 11. To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction is a part of the pure and undefiled religion of God. James 1: 27. This is not simply a gift, a formal call of ten minutes length in kid gloves to the elbow, latest style bonnet and rustling new silk. The poor should be influenced, taught, trained. They have bodies, minds, spirits. Many need lessons in neatness, perhaps cleanliness, self dependence, self-help and economy. People cannot be Christians in extravagance and laziness. Neatness and cleanliness are essential to health and salvation. A pure body cleanly attired is essential to a pure heart. These are spiritual lessons as much so as faith, trust, etc. A formal call, simply to say we called on the poor, is not sufficient to teach these lessons, not sufficient to teach anything. Enter more into their life. Gain their confidence by a righteous life and labor of love. Be kind and affectionate, realize that we are all one in Christ, and "whether one member suffers all the members suffer with it," that all are brethren of Jesus, and in the great day he will say, "In as much as you have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, you have done it unto me."

We would lack some of the grandest Christian principles and sweetest pleasures, were there no poor—Christ's poor. God has always made provision for the poor. See Lev. 19: 9-15; Exo. 23: 11; Lev. 25, entire chapter; Deut. 15: 1-15; Matt. 25: 34-46; Luke 14: 12-14; Rom. 12: 15-16; 1 Cor. 12: 25-27; 2 Cor. 9: 6-15; 1 Tim. 5: 3-10; James 2: 1-9. A part of the work of Jesus, poorer than the poorest, was to heal the broken hearted and preach the gospel to the poor. Luke 4: 18-19. It was he who said, "it is more blessed to give than to receive." He sympathizes with humanity. Many a poor Christian trembles, sighs, groans under the burden of life, when we are immersed in life's pleasures and deaf to such sounds of sorrow. But Christ's ear is ever open; not a sigh escapes him, not a tear falls unseen. When we are enjoying the blessings of comfortable homes—good clothing, warm rooms, cheerful sparkling fires, tables richly laden with nutritious food, nice, soft beds—to say nothing of libraries, pictures and luxuries—do our hearts ever go out after the poor saints through whose houses the cold winds whistle, through whose tattered and thin garments they chill the body, in whose grate the fire has burned low, whose cupboard is empty, and whose children cry for bread? Our lives may be happy now, joyous, smooth and unruffled by care, the burden light. Not so with all. Many are weak and weary, forms bent under the load of life, brows furrowed with care, hearts full of sadness and sorrow. Do we weep with those who weep? "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." "Jesus wept." In him the sorrowing sisters found a brother and deep sympathizer. He condescends, he helps, he blesses. If his disciples suffer, he suffers. He is their shield and refuge, their advocate, priest and king.

Is it too much that Christ, who was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might be made rich, demand of us to labor with our hands that we may have to give to him that needeth? With all of this before us, and twice and thrice as many more passages which have not been mentioned, can we say we have not shunned to declare all the counsel of God, when we have never mentioned the subject of contribution? Paul went once and again to Jerusalem to carry alms to his nation. Acts 11: 27-30, Acts 24: 17. As he gave instructions to the churches of Galatia, so he instructed the Corinthians. 1 Cor. 16: 1-2. "Let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things." Gal. 6: 6. Should we continue a meeting for one, two, and sometimes three weeks, and close by saying we have kept back nothing that was profitable and are pure from the blood of all men, when we have left this matter untouched altogether? Should a man preach a year to a congregation, and never teach them on this subject? Should a congregation be ashamed and afraid for the preacher to mention their duty in giving? Many, it is feared, are. Let us not be ashamed or afraid of duty; but from behind the fortification of God's word let us present the whole truth as best we can, serving God in humility of mind, ceasing not to warn night and day with tears. Let us not be ashamed nor afraid to have our duty presented to us, remembering that God loves a cheerful giver, and whatsoever a man sows that shall he also reap. E. A. ELAM.

NOTES FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Henry Rehorn, Jr., Whitleyville, Jackson County, Tenn., November 4, writes: "Bro. D. L. Carnes, of Gainsboro, held meetings four days, commencing on second Lord's in last June. Six souls who had lived a long time in rebellion, disobedience, and sin were converted to Christ. May they ever strive to live obedient children by adding to their faith all Christian graces."

J. T. Eanes, Lynnville, Ky., October 31, writes: "Bro. Roulhac closed a meeting of sixteen discourses, October 27. I never had the pleasure of listening to plainer sermons. Bro. Denton was present and assisted in singing, exhortation and baptism. Immediate result was, twelve were added from the world. There were two that took membership with us at our regular prayer meeting, October 30."

C. S. Wheeler, Vernon, Lamar County, Ala., November 4, writes: "I began a meeting Saturday night before the third Lord's day in October, at Mount Pleasant church, and continued until Thursday night following. Result, three additions. I also began one at Kennady Station, on Saturday night before the fourth Lord's day, and it continued until Tuesday night. Result, four additions. We have no congregation at this place; prospects are good for building up. I am now in a meeting at Union Church. One addition up to date, and meeting going on."

F. P. Tankersley, LaCrosse, Ark., November 10, writes: The Lord's people are still at work in Arkansas. The brethren near Melburn have erected a house of worship, and are now ready to go to work anew. They have been doing but little good, as their house was destroyed about twelve months ago, by a very destructive storm passing through these parts of the country. I preached for the people at Franklin, this State, the fourth Lord's day in September. Bros. W. Flippin and W. Jenkin had just closed a meeting embracing the third Lord's day in September, with about twenty two additions to the church. Seven beautiful young ladies at one time marched down into the water and were buried with the Lord in baptism. This meeting created much interest. I preached at Sandy Flat the first Lord's day in November. Six were added to the band worshipping the Lord at that place—four by commendation, and two by confession and baptism. My stay will be short here, then I will return to Verona, Tenn., via. Mars Hill, Ala.

There are many dead people in the world, who are not yet buried. There are thousands who have been dead many years and do not know it. When a man's heart is cold and indifferent about religion; when his hands are never employed in doing God's work; when his heart is never familiar with his ways; when his tongue is seldom used in prayer and praise; when his ears are deaf to the voice of Christ in the gospel; when his eyes are blind to the beauty of heaven; when his mind is full of the world, and has no time for spiritual things—then that man is dead.

QUERIES.

BRO. SEWELL: I have read your comment on the tenth chapter of Acts, and note what you have said in reference to the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and as some who read your article may want to know what we (or the Bible) teach in reference to the operation of the Holy Spirit, I would be glad you would answer the following questions through the ADVOCATE: (1) Does the Holy Spirit enter the heart to make a believer? (2) Does the Holy Spirit enter the heart to produce repentance? (3) Does it enter the heart to produce obedience? (4) Does the Holy Spirit enter the heart to prepare us for baptism, or because we have been baptized? (5) Does the Holy Spirit enter the heart to make us children of God, or because we are already children?—[S. F. Pennebaker.

1. Certainly not, for Paul to Ephesians says: "That we should be to the praise of his glory who first trusted in Christ. In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation; in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise." Eph. 1: 12-13. This passage shows that it was after these Ephesians believed that they received the Holy Spirit. And not only that it was after they believed that they received the Spirit, but shows that they were in Christ when they received it; "in whom," that is, in Christ. The word of God teaches that we enter into Christ by baptism, that we are baptized into Christ. And none are ready to be baptized into him till they have believed and repented. Hence it is perfectly and positively certain that the Holy Spirit does not enter into the hearts of sinners to make them believers. And besides the word of God teaches that "faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Faith comes by hearing the word of God, and since it comes by hearing God's word, it is again certain that it does not come by the Spirit entering into the heart to produce it. Again, Peter, in fifteenth chapter of Acts, says, "Ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe." The Gentiles were to hear the word of the gospel, and believe, hence not made believers by the Spirit entering the heart. Again, John said of the miracles of Christ: "These are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye might have life through his name." John 20. The word of God, the gospel, through which faith comes, is written down, as also the miracles that Christ performed, as evidences of the truths and facts of the gospel, so that the people may read these, or hear them proclaimed, and believe, and be saved. This whole teaching that sinners must receive the Spirit of God into their hearts to make them believers, is contrary to the word of God, and virtually sets that word aside, and thus destroys confidence in the very channel, and the only channel, through which God has ordained that faith shall come. Thus the word of God is made of none effect by the doctrines and traditions of men. People should be careful whom they follow, God or men. When they follow God, they are right, and in that case will certainly be saved. If they follow men, they walk in darkness, and imperil their eternal interests.

2. No. God "commandeth all men, everywhere, to repent." Paul. Sinners therefore are to be lead into repentance by the word of God, and not by the Spirit entering into their hearts to produce it. Repentance and remission of sins were to be preached among all nations. How then was repentance preached? Answer, by telling the people that God commands them to repent, not by telling them that God will send his Spirit into their hearts to produce it. This latter is the invention of men. But the former is the word of God. Again the Holy Spirit said to the three thousand, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." This passage plainly expresses that sinners must repent before they have any promise of the Holy Spirit. It would be folly, would be utter rashness for any one in the face of this passage to claim that the Spirit of God is sent into the heart of the sinner to produce repentance, when it plainly shows that the sinner must repent before the Spirit is promised, and that too in order to its reception. Christ pronounced many and terrible woes upon the people, "because they repented not." Because they repented not. These woes were pronounced, not because the Spirit did not enter into them to give them repentance, but because they did not, would not repent. Again Jesus said, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." Except ye repent, not except the Spirit enters your hearts to give you repentance. The word of God commands the sinner to repent, and dooms him if he does not. The doctrine that the Spirit must enter the heart of the sinner to work repentance nullifies the word of God, and causes the sinner to rest his soul upon the word and promise of men, and not upon the word and promise of God. Men that teach sinners to expect this, virtually steal away the word out of their hearts, lest they should repent and be saved.

3. No. Peter says: "And we are witnesses of these things, and so also is the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him." Acts 5: 32. This passage needs no comment, nor any additional ones. It forever settles the question that God gives his Spirit not to sinners to enable them to obey him, but on the other hand that he gives it to those who have become obedient.

4. The passage we quoted from second of Acts regarding repentance applies equally in this case, and shows as plainly as can be that the Spirit of God is not promised till men are baptized. "Be baptized, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost," is the part of the passage that applies especially in this case, and settles the question beyond a peradventure. We have shown in a preceding article that when Cornelius and his house received the Spirit before baptism, it was the miraculous power of the Spirit, just such as came upon the apostles on the day of Pentecost, and that it had nothing to do with their conversion in any way, but that it was to bear witness to both Jews and Gentiles that the Gentiles as well as the Jews were to be partakers in the blessings of the gospel of Christ, and that this once accomplished, the thing was never repeated. This case of Cornelius therefore has no bearing in this case, and cannot be applied to it. So the proposition stands sustained by the passage in second of Acts, that people have no promise of the Spirit of God till baptized. There is no one passage in the New Testament that has been more thoroughly perverted and misapplied than this one regarding Cornelius. And when taken as it is, shows clearly that the miraculous outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon those Gentiles had no more to do with their baptism, to prepare them for it, than the very same sort of outpouring had upon the apostles on the day of Pentecost, who had already been the disciples of Christ for about three years and a half. There is not a syllable anywhere to indicate that the Holy Spirit ever was given to an alien to prepare him for baptism. God only promises the Spirit to people when baptized into Christ, not to prepare them for this.

5. Paul says, "And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying Abba Father." Gal. 4: 6. This passage settles this question clearly, and beyond all dispute. There is not a greater delusion taught in the nineteenth century than that the Spirit of God is sent into the heart of the alien sinner, to aid in any sense in his conversion. There is nothing of the kind taught in the word of God. This doctrine is defrauding thousands out of their souls, by hindering them from an obedience to the gospel, without which none can be saved. Paul says of those that obey not the gospel, "who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." 2 Thes. 1: 9. Let all read or hear, and obey the word of God, the gospel of Christ, and then have the promise of the Spirit to dwell in them, and that by it their mortal bodies may be quickened. E. G. S.

BROS. LIPSCOMB & SEWELL: Will you explain first verse of ninth chapter of Acts, and ninth verse of twenty-second of Acts; hearing the voice in one verse, they heard not the voice in the other; also, what does the word filth have reference to in first Peter, third chapter and twenty-first verse.—[E. T. Payne, Difficult, Smith County, Tenn.

1. The word hear sometimes means to understand. So when in one of these passages it says they heard not the voice, understand it to mean they understood not the voice, and all is plain. The voices spoke in the Hebrew tongue, which very few then understood. Paul understood what was said to him in this language, but those with him did not. They heard the sound, but did not understand the meaning of what was said.

2. The verse in Peter is where he says, "Not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, etc." The expression "filth of the flesh" was to explain to the Jewish Christians to whom Peter was writing, that baptism was not to have its effects upon the flesh, as did many Jewish washings. He had just said, "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us," and fearing that his Jewish brethren might think that baptism, like the old Jewish washings was to cleanse the flesh—puts in the parenthesis, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer [seeking] of a good conscience toward God) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ." It has no reference to sin. Sin is never called the filth of the flesh. Hence the passage does not mean as some suppose that baptism is not for the remission of sins, but it is only an explanation that he thought necessary to throw in to his Jewish brethren, lest they should think it a mere fleshy ordinance. To say that the expression means that baptism has nothing to do with the remission of sins, would be to make Peter contradict himself in what he had just said, regarding baptism now saving us. For while he does not mean that baptism alone saves us, he does as certainly mean that baptism is connected with our salvation now as that water was connected with the salvation of Noah and his family. E. G. S.

MARRIED—At 4 o'clock on the evening of the 13th inst., at the Christian church in Tullahoma, by M. N. Moore, in the presence of a very large audience, Mr. J. M. Barbee, of Rock Island, to Miss M. E. Knox, of Tullahoma. The parties took the North bound train immediately for a short tour. They carry with them the very best wishes of a host of warm friends in their new and happy relation of life.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

John Logan, Jr., son of the Senator Logan, has handed in his resignation as cadet to West Point, which has been accepted.

Snow from two to ten inches deep fell the early part of the week on the line of the Erie Railway. The canal will close business December first.

Col. Fred Grant, son of the "silent man on horse-back," who was lately bankrupted together with his famous father, was an applicant for the Quartermaster's position in the army.

The most important events this winter at the Capital will be the counting of the electoral vote for President and Vice-President, and the celebration of the completion of the Washington Monument by both Houses of Congress.

The Capitol building at Washington has recently been scrubbed, washed, pumiced, and garnished, from basement to the tholus, so that the dingy, dust-stained walls and columns look bright and new as the first day they were completed.

Mrs. Harriet Elizabeth Stowe, who is older than her brother, Henry Ward Beecher, is a well-preserved woman able to leave her Hartford home and enjoy her winter residence on her orange plantation in Florida. Mrs. Stowe won her fame by her novel "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

"Uneasy lies the head that wears the crown." There are about one hundred and twenty-five thousand offices, large and small, in the gift of the Administration. Over fifty-two thousand of them are post-offices, mostly below the grade of Presidential appointment, which range from $1,000 salary upward.

A meeting of the Sanitary authorities has been called for December 10, in Washington City, to take under further advisement the subject of the "Prevention of Epidemic Cholera in America." It is an established fact that cholera has never, in years gone by, entered Paris, but that it came to this country soon after.

During the month of October 36,441 immigrants arrived in this country, and 7,977 citizens of the United States returned from abroad. For the ten months which ended with October, 1884, the total number of immigrants coming to this country was 414,324, against 501,037 during the same period of last year. If the ratio of increase by immigration and nature continues for the next quarter of a century as it has for the last, and this country has no war, what will our population be? Will American doctrine leaven the mass?

At last the close count in New York State is completed, and a feeling of rest follows. It is an honor to our people to submit so patiently under such trying ordeals. Rioting, blood-shed, and general demoralization would have ensued after so close an election in almost any other land. One can hardly imagine any ill results from a change of administration in national affairs, since a Republican Senate can check any excesses on the part of the Chief Executive; yet no sensible person is looking for extreme measures in any direction. Certificates have been issued to the Democratic electors in New York, their plurality ranging from 1,077 to 1,149.

The slate makers are already busy with the new President's Cabinet, and have allotted the Law and Post Office Departments to the Southern States. Senator A. H. Garland, of Arkansas, is spoken of prominently for the position of Attorney-General, and Mr. Reagan, of Texas, who was Post-Master under Confederacy, for the Post Office portfolio. But if the papers have reported Mr. Cleveland correctly, he is a man of his own head, and will disappoint many Democrats by his action in the Civil Service. The idea that "to the victors belong the spoils," is eminently of American birth, and if the new President determines to retain competent officials of the present dominant party, there will be many disgruntled place-seekers, who will strive to intimidate the President by their howl of mad rage. So far, the fortunate Cleveland has wisely ordered all applications and petitions to be burned without being read by him.

Ex-Senator Roscoe Conkling, so long the leader of the Republican party, looms up from his retirement as a probable successor to Senator Latham in New York. A scheme is on foot for the stalwart Republicans and Democrats in the New York Legislature to fuse, and elect Mr. Conkling in view of the fact that he rendered great services to the Democracy in defeating Mr. Blaine in Oneida county, New York. The two gentlemen are bitter enemies, dating their animosity from the formation of the Cabinet of the late lamented Garfield. Burke says that politics is the science of circumstance, and yet it would seem right strange to see this bitter Republican become transmogrified into a joyous Democrat.

George Mobra, a Brooklyn machinist, returned this week from Aspinwall, broken down in health by the Chagres fever. He has been at work on the Panama Canal, and reports the mortality among the laborers as really frightful. Unless the victims have money or influence their bodies are dumped into a ditch and covered with quicklime. There is a saying that for every yard of earth turned up on the Canal there is a death in the hospitals. Skilled workmen earn $5.50 per day, and laborers $3.00 to $4.00. M. DeLesseps remarked, when urging upon the French Government to undertake this work, that it would cost treasures of men and money, but would pay. In case of its ultimate success, large vessels can pay a toll of $3,000, and yet save money and time by going through the Canal instead of doubling dangerous Cape Horn, as now.

Mr. Blaine seems to take his defeat philosophically, saying that he made a good race, and that he has duties to engage him that are more congenial and profitable than guiding the "Ship of State." He is engaged on the second volume of his book, "Twenty Years in Congress," the sale of which, so far, has been unprecedented. It is estimated that the royalty he will receive from his publishers will reach the enormous sum of $780,000. The book is very readable and instructive, consisting, mainly, in personal descriptions of the great men with whom the author has been associated for the past twenty years. Mr. Blaine is a brilliant writer, and adopting Carlyle's thought, that the biography of men is the best history of a nation, he has made a happy literary and financial hit.

A dispatch from New York, of November 17, says: The Evangelical Alliance of the United States met to-night, the first time since the international conference at Copenhagen. Rev. Dr. Phillip Schaff, fraternal delegate of the American Alliance to the conference, made his report. He spoke of the cordial reception tendered the American delegation by members of the foreign alliances, and said the satisfactory character of the conference had produced much good. He thought one of the greatest drawbacks to the success of the Christian church to-day was its denominational distinctions. Rev. Prof. R. T. Wiender, of Augustana Theological Seminary of Illinois, delivered an address upon "The Religious Condition of Sweden." He said the people of that country were, as a whole, moral and upright in character, and earnest seekers after the truth. When they adopted the forms of the Reformed Church, Church and State became inseparable. Every citizen is by law a member of this church whether he believes in the creed or not. In no country is the education of the young watched with more zealous care. Previous to 1858, no other denomination could obtain foothold among the Swedes. Certain laws were then repealed, and now Baptists, Methodists, and others flourish.

FOREIGN.

The Rt. Hon. George J. Shaw Lefevre has been appointed to succeed the late Henry Fawcett as Postmaster-General. Mr. Fawcett was a blind man, yet despite his physical infirmity he made a success of his life, and left the present efficient postal system of England as an enduring monument to his genius and indomitable energy.

England never lets slip an opportunity to extend her domain and influence. Australian advices state in accordance with the instructions of the British government, given some time ago, had proceeded in New Guinea, and on the 9th of November with great ceremony proclaimed British protectorate on that part of that island. The protectorate covers the southern coast, eastward to the 141st meridian east longitude, and includes the islands adjacent to Southern New Guinea.

Matthew Arnold, the celebrated writer, has resigned his position as Commissioner of Education in London, and will begin a lengthened tour of lectures in the United States about Christmas. Mr. Arnold is a scholarly man, and a master of the English language, and will doubtless give entertaining talks on the various current questions in the social, educational, and political world.

Advices from the Central and South American States announce that a periodic revolution is in progress with its lists of atrocities. Men, women and children are being butchered mercilessly by the rioters; houses and the accumulations of years devoted ruthlessly to the flames. We of more temperate clime can scarcely realize the horrors of the crimes committed by these hot-blooded people of the tropics.

The Panama Canal is being dug as fast as men and money can put forces to work. Launches, tugs, dredges, excavators, material and men continue to arrive in quantities and numbers. Work continues with activity, new contracts daily being given out, and during the coming dry season 50,000 men will be employed along the 47 miles of work. The Panama railroad is in excellent working condition at present.

France is now afflicted with a large body of unemployed workmen who seem disposed to cause trouble. While municipal laborers were filling up moats around the fortifications, about a thousand unemployed artisans entered the works and demanded employment, accompanying their demand with menacing threats against the authorities. The commissary of police addressed the men, urging them to retire. They refused, and the commissary was compelled to summon the police and eject them. The artisans returned when the cuirassiers were summoned, and the crowd was dispersed. Several arrests were made. A renewal of the trouble is feared.

THE CAUSE IN COLLIN COUNTY, TEXAS.

I have been agreeably surprised at the intelligence, refinement and hospitality of the people in Texas; and especially by the readiness with which they receive the gospel. I have been laboring for the church in McKinney, the county seat, since the first of this year. This church numbered one hundred and fifty members a year ago. During this year, thus far, thirty-eight have been added by confession and baptism, several have been reclaimed, and others received by letter, making now nearly two hundred. It is estimated that there are at least fifteen hundred disciples in the county, twelve churches and twelve preachers; though most of these have to make their living chiefly by farming, they keep the cause up in their respective communities, and in some neighborhoods it is steadily advancing. During the summer and fall over three hundred have been brought into the churches within the county, and all was done by the preachers resident in the county, except, I believe, the assistance of two preachers in two meetings. Besides doing her home work mainly, this county assists in State work. We are not fully agreed about "plans," but still we work together; not spending any of our time or destroying our mutual charity by disputing about plans, or ways and means. Our churches and preachers are harmonious, and if some apple of discord should not be thrown in among us, we see no reason why this county should not in a few years compare well with any county in this or any other State not containing a large city. C. W. SEWELL, SR.

THANKS.

All connected with the Orphan Home, return to the sisters of Lebanon their thanks for a handsome wool counterpane, two pairs of blankets, pillows and pillow cases,—a donation most acceptable, as cold weather may be soon expected. C. F.

BE THANKFUL TO HIM.

If God hath kept thee, then 'tis well,
Be thankful to him for his care,—
For round thee is sin's present hell,
And countless foes within thee dwell.
If he hath saved thee from one woe,
If he hath saved thee from one foe,
Oh, praise him, praise him evermore!
He can and will thy soul restore
To perfect peace! He hath in store
Such grace and love, that thou shalt rise,
A victor over time. His loving eyes
Shall guide thee till this life shall end,
And thou art face to face with thy true friend.

RECOGNITION IN HEAVEN.

The subject, though by no means new, had become of new interest to many of those who attended the weekly prayer-meeting, and the pastor, to whom it was particularly dear, appointed it as the subject of a free conversation at the meeting of the following week. When the time came there was a good attendance of the more thoughtful and intelligent people of the place, and the interest was deepened by the fact that many came from a close searching of the word of God, so as to be able to impart to others what they had found there, and also to learn from others what might be new light to them. After the exercises of praise and prayer, the pastor, who presided, announced the topic, "Shall we know our friends in heaven?" and invited a free and informal discussion.

Without losing a moment Elder C. remarked, "I have no hesitancy in saying that our knowledge in the heavenly state will be still more comprehensive than it is in this earthly condition. From childhood to manhood there is a growth of knowledge, and we have no right to conclude that it will be interrupted, or in any direction limited in the life to come. Paul himself held this view when he wrote, 'Now we see in a mirror darkly; but then face to face; now I know in part, but then shall I know fully even as also I have been known fully.'"

"There is no doubt," said Mrs. E., "but that we shall know our Saviour in heaven; for the beloved John assures us, 'Behold, now are we the sons of God and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.'"

"Yes," said Mr. Y., "and even the face of God the Father will be seen by the heavenly inhabitants, though some have held the contrary opinion; for it is written: 'And there shall be no more curse; but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it * * * and they shall see his face.'"

"I never thought that there was any doubt in regard to the recognition of God our Father and of Christ our Savior, but in reference to our knowing one another in heaven," said Mrs. F., "for my own part I think God's word is not silent on the subject. Lazarus and Abraham knew each other after death, and both recognized the rich man lying in torments. They showed their intimate knowledge of earthly creatures, and much more, should we judge, would be their acquaintance with the heavenly inhabitants. Besides, Moses and Elijah, who had lived in different ages of the world, were associated together in communion with Christ on the mount of transfiguration."

"I have often wondered in regard to the probability of an universal knowledge of all the redeemed in glory," said Elder M. "Is it not possible that in the great multitude which no man can number, we may know each individual even more thoroughly than we know our most intimate personal friend here? Will there be some new mode of revealing this knowledge to us? Easy, immediate, perhaps entirely different from anything within our present experience, as of meetings, introductions, etc."

"I have thought of the same," said Mr. D., "and I have arrived at the conclusion that there will be a new development of our intuitions: our perceptions will be quickened, our innate knowledge will be vastly increased. Something like that we now call instinct, which enables the lower creatures to know their friends without a sound or sign being given, only higher, stronger, entirely spiritual, may enable us to 'know even as also we are known.' This may be called 'instinct with spirit.'"

"You think," said the pastor, "that a knowledge like that which Christ possessed in his manhood, only, of course, under limitation, will be ours? It is said that 'Jesus knew their thoughts,' that 'he knew all men, and needed not that any should testify of man; for he knew what was in man,' that he recognized Nathaniel at first sight without an introduction, and that he called Zaccheus down from the sycamore tree, though he had probably never seen him in the flesh nor heard his name before. Somehow in this way 'the spirits of the just made perfect' will know one another, impressed and prompted with an animating power working from within the soul."

"That is all very well," said Miss S., who was in deep mourning for the recent loss of her mother, "but I want to know whether I may hope to recognize my dear mother in glory, just as I knew her here on earth?"

"I cannot think that you would wish to know her thus. And therefore you ask more than you really desire," said the pastor. "The last time you saw that dear face it was cold in death. A few hours previously you saw her in intense pain. Then, too, she was quite old, feeble, and wan even before her last sickness. You remember what she looked like twenty years ago. Then she was well, younger and more beautiful. To see her young as then would please you better. Supposing that in the translation to heaven she became more youthful, more beautiful, and perfect in all her character, would it not please you better still, provided that in her you saw the identity, the loving mother?"

"Yes, that I think is so," said Mrs. E. "My brother, who has been in heaven for twenty years, must have passed onward through many transformations, even from glory to glory, yet I expect to know him, the same brother William, the very moment I see him there."

"Then is it possible," said Mrs. B., "that I shall clasp to my heart the angel darling whom we laid away in the cold grave. Though she has been glorified, she will be the dear child of my tenderest love!"

"And yet," said the pastor, "we must not forget that when we meet above, our relationship will not be one of flesh, for Paul assures us that 'Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God.' We shall be like Christ in our kindred. 'Who is my mother and are my brethren?' said he. 'Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.' Paul favors this when he says: 'Henceforth know I no man after the flesh.' It may not then be father and mother, husband and wife, parent and child, in heaven; for Christ assures us that in the resurrection they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as angels of God. And yet one may hope that there will be a relationship among the redeemed, dearer and closer than has ever been known on earth. The same mystical union which binds the 'ransomed of the Lord' to Christ will bind them also one to another; 'when He shall appear we shall be like him,' and if we are like Him we shall love our fellow-saints because we love Him."

"Then what's the use," said Mrs. B., "in talking and singing so affectionately of the friends over there, if we are not to recognize in them our friends of earth?"

"Much use," said the pastor. "You will be capable of knowing and loving your child in heaven far more intensely than you ever could on earth; but you will not stop there. All other children and all other saints will be loved with the same love. The highest knowledge and affection will be directed toward the divine persons and the next towards those whom we may have brought to a knowledge of salvation. They will be our true children. For as Christ saw the travail of his soul and was satisfied, so we shall see and know and love in heaven those for whom we have labored and prayed and suffered on earth."

"Let us make sure in the first place that we get to heaven," remarked elder M.

"Yes, Yes," said the pastor, "heaven will be good enough for any of us. Therefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure, * * * for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."

WALKS AND TALKS WITH THE CHILDREN.

BY UNCLE MINOR.

The sweet spring-time, with its blooming flowers, and golden waving grain of harvest, has passed away, and now comes brown autumn and bleak winter—a suitable time to ramble in the wild wood in search of nuts, or sit quietly around a blazing fire and listen to words of love and wisdom from those who have passed childhood's hour before us.

Let us take a walk. Do you see that great spreading oak out in the field by itself? It has great spreading branches, with a beautiful, rounded top; it looks as though it had been trimmed. Look again, near the woods, and you see another oak with its branches all on one side, and its body bent. Why this difference? One is in the open field where the light is evenly distributed all around it, and hence it grew into a perfect tree; while the other had most of the light on one side, and while its branches were young and tender it grew towards the light. So if you would grow up to be beautiful and good, you must see that the light of God's love—his precious word—is not hidden by the underbrush of sin. Look again, at that beautiful tree. Its roots strike deep into the ground, its trunk is straight and strong, its branches are many and wide. The birds build their nests in its boughs, the cattle repose beneath its shade, under it have gathered many a lad and lassie. The old men point this tree out to their children, but they remember not its growth. Generations one after another pass away, and this same monarch of the forest remains, defying the storms of perhaps two hundred winters. Yet this large tree was once a little acorn, the same that you now pick up among the grass beneath it. All its trunk, its branches, its leaves, were in that acorn; but it grew and spread and unfolded itself by degrees; it received nourishment from the soil, dew, and rain, and thereby grew to be a large and beautiful tree. Rain and soil could not make an oak without first an acorn; neither could an acorn make anything but an oak.

So the mind of a child is like an acorn—its powers are folded up. The memory, the judgment, the feeling of right and wrong, are all in the mind of the child, but not expanded; yet, by cultivation of that mind, it is developed and made strong, so that great things can be accomplished by it. It was a long time before this oak grew to be a tree. When it was young, a little child could have pulped it up, but now it is strong and withstands the storms; then it could have been bent and twisted, now it is strong and beautiful. The child may make a foolish, wicked man, yet he will be a man, his soul not that of a beast that perishes. Then, dear children, cultivate that precious mind of yours, feed it with truth, the light of God's love; it comes from God, it is made in his image. The oak will last for centuries, but the mind forever.

Gov. Alexander H. Stevens, of Georgia, had never a child or wife. He had a half-brother, Linton, whom he loved, and for whose schooling he paid. From boyhood up he lived much on a farm, and had a great fondness for animals. It was when he was a famous lawyer that he wrote his brother (he used to write almost daily) of the illness and death of his pet dog:

"He sleeps at my feet in the day, and at night before I go up-stairs to bed. During the night he repeats his visit several times. Poor fellow, he is blind! He barks incessantly if I leave him. He keeps close after me, and follows the sound of my feet. I usually carry a cane, and let that drag along behind, for him to hear it more distinctly than he can my tread. I feel more pleasure in thus exercising Rio, and witnessing the pleasure that it affords him, than I ever did in the enjoyment of all the honors of this world has ever seen fit to bestow upon me. * * * It is all over with poor Rio. His strength failed just at my room door, then he fell and died, without any struggle. He lay in the library all night. Next day he was put into a box, or coffin, and buried in the garden. Over his grave I shed a tear, as I did over him frequently as I saw nature failing him."

The heart of the wise teacheth his mouth, and addeth learning to his lips.

A Prominent Farmer Writes.

ROBERT STATION, Jones county, Ga., June 20th, 1881.—By the recommendation of Rev. O. C. Davis, I used Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir for indigestion, debility and nervous prostration, having been a great sufferer for years and tried all known remedies for these diseases, all of which failed. Five bottles of Lemon Elixir made a new man of me, and restored my strength and energy so that I can attend to my farm with all ease and comfort. Refer any one to me.

WILLIAM B. EMERSON.

A CARD.

From a number of St. Louis' prominent citizens as to the merits of Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir, the following named gentlemen pronounce it the only pleasant, thoroughly reliable and economical remedy they have ever used for the diseases for which it is recommended.

Formerly the square piano was generally used, notwithstanding it was cumbersome and inconvenient, as compared with the more elegant upright piano. Undoubtedly this was because the former was best as a musical instrument. Improvements in the Upright Piano have latterly given it the preference. One recently made by the Mason & Hamlin Company is likely to give the upright piano still more acceptance. By an ingenious arrangement, they fasten the strings of the Piano directly to the iron plate, dispensing with any intervention of wood. The result is more perfect vibration of the strings, producing more pure, refined, musical tones, and much greater durability, including freedom from liability to get so easily out of tune.—Boston Journal.

LATEST IMPROVEMENTS.

Memo Knee Swell; also Maestro Percussion Patent Combination Swell.

To which is added the AEROSTATIC EXPRESSION INDICATOR, or REGULATOR, which shows at a glance the amount of pressure upon the Bellows; like a compass to the ship is this new improvement to the organ.

The great popularity of "The Beethoven Organ" makes its sale exceed by many thousands that of any other style made by us. As shown in the picture, it is a beautiful piece of furniture, and an ornament to any parlor. It is made of selected material, Heavy Black Walnut Case, with Raised Panels, highly polished, Scroll and Carved Work used freely in the ornamentation, thus making it a model instrument.

The great variety of Patents owned by the Beatty Organ and Piano Co., and used in this instrument, together with the immense variety and beautiful, but simple combination of Stops, and the great care given to its construction in both the Musical and Mechanical effects, make it combine more excellencies than instruments that are sold through dealers for several hundred dollars.

A MOMENT'S CONSIDERATION

will show you the certainty of securing a superior instrument by ordering from us. Dealers can trust to their own shrewdness and the ignorance of the purchaser to conceal defects in the instruments they sell. We cannot know who will test ours, and must send instruments of a quality so superior that their merits are apparent; therefore you take no risk, so order direct from this advertisement, and REMEMBER the Organ will be shipped immediately on receipt of the money and order. If you find on fair trial the instrument is not equal to guarantee, it may be returned at our expense, and the purchase money will be promptly refunded. Address,

W. P. HADWEN, Manager, Daniel F. Beatty Organ & Piano Co., WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY, U. S. A.

Mars Hill College.

With pleasure we lay before our readers the following extracts from the Fifteenth Annual Announcement of Mars Hill College, an institution perpetually wielding a wonderful and wide-spread influence for truth, refinement and righteousness.—EDITORS.

POSITIONS PROCURED FOR OUR PUPILS.

We make a specialty of preparing pupils for

(1.) PREACHING; (2.) TEACHING; (3.) PREACHING and TEACHING.

Many educated here—among whom are successful lawyers, physicians, merchants, salesmen, mechanics, farmers, editors, authors, teachers and preachers—have so demeaned themselves, that the humility, fidelity, integrity, accuracy and ability of "Mars Hill students" have become proverbial. There is, consequently, such a demand for the services of our pupils, that we deem it perfectly safe to promise to procure pleasant, profitable and honorable positions for all who qualify themselves here for usefulness. Indeed, for several years we have been able to fill comparatively few of the positions tendered.

HEALTHFULNESS!

Mars Hill as a Health Resort.

Our school was founded in 1876. All the "doctor bills," for services rendered our pupils, from then till now, do not, we think, amount to twenty-five dollars—probably not to one dollar a year. Those who have come here pale and puny, from malarial districts, have, without an exception, we believe, returned to their homes enjoying health.

What "Watering Place," or "Health Resort," then, can justly claim more, as a health-preserver and health-restorer, than Mars Hill? Address,

T. B. LARIMORE, President.

FLORENCE, ALABAMA.

GOOD ADVICE.

If you your lips
Would keep from slips,
Five things observe with care:
Of whom you speak,
To whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where.
If you your ears
Would save from jeer
These things keep meekly hid:
Myself and I,
And mine, and him,

FIFTEENTH CHAPTER OF ACTS.

When Paul and Barnabas had returned from their tour upon which they had been sent by the Holy Spirit, they rehearsed to the brethren at Antioch the work the Lord had accomplished through them among the Gentiles. They then abode a long time again with the church at Antioch. And during their stay there this time, the question regarding the circumcision of the Gentile Christians was raised by the Jewish believers, who contended that they must also be circumcised, or they could not be saved. And after considerable contention it was decided that Paul, Barnabas and others should go up to Jerusalem to the apostles and have the matter decided by them. So they went, and the apostles and elders came together to consider the matter. There was much trouble for a long time after the establishment of the church of God, regarding the Jewish law. The Jewish Christians were the cause of this. They contended that the law was still in force, and that its precepts, and especially circumcision, should be observed. The apostles and elders at Jerusalem, guided by the Holy Spirit, decided that no such thing should be required of the Gentiles. And Paul, writing to the Galatians, teaches that if any one be circumcised, he is thereby placed under obligation to observe the whole law, and in that case is fallen from grace, deprived of the blessings of the gospel of Christ.

Circumcision was incorporated into the law of Moses, and became a part of that law, and never existed independent of the law, after the law was established. For the law was given to the same people to whom circumcision was given; that is, to the posterity of Abraham, to whom it was first given. And as this rite was incorporated into the law given to those people, and became a part of that law, when the law died, circumcision died with it, and was never an ordinance of God any more. There was just as much propriety in demanding the Gentiles to offer animal sacrifice, and to require them to go up to Jerusalem three times a year to their annual feasts, and to offer blood on Jewish altars. The law and all its ceremonies were abolished when Jesus died upon the cross, and never since then are they binding upon any human being, either Jew or Gentile. Nothing like these could be connected with the church of God without damaging it, without corrupting it. The church of God was established for the elevation, purification and salvation of man, and is perfect. The law of the Lord as connected with the church, and by the direction of which every thing shall be done pertaining to the Lord's service, is a "perfect law of liberty." Nothing can be added to or diminished from this perfect law without injuring, corrupting it, and thereby thwarting the grand end for which it was established. Circumcision was once an ordinance of God, and of such importance that no one could neglect it without certain destruction, being cut off from his people. But when God abolished it, to again introduce and require it, was simply to establish human authority in the church, and to pervert the right ways of the Lord. And since it was an utter perversion of the church, which is God's only arrangement for the purification and salvation of men, to re-establish circumcision, which once was an ordinance of God, how much more so now, to introduce things entirely human, things that God never did ordain since time began. Yet men are constantly doing this very thing. The mourning bench system of getting religion has not one word more authority for it in the word of God than the rite of circumcision, or animal sacrifice.

These latter were at one time ordinances of God, but the mourning bench or prayer system of getting religion never was, in any age, nor in any dispensation of this world's history. Let any advocate of it show where God ever ordained it if he can, and he will place the world under many obligations. This modern system of human invention, the prayer system of conversion not only introduces a purely human invention into the church of God, but at the same time that this goes in, an humble obedience to the word of the Lord, the gospel of Christ, such as was yielded by the thousands that became Christians in the days of the apostles, goes out. Induce people depending upon the prayer system of conversion to repent and be baptized as the thousands did in the days of the apostles if you can. No sir; something else that they are depending on for salvation, and that they think a great deal more of than they do the plain word of the Lord through the apostles has taken the place of that word, that they will not yield or give up. They and its advocates would rather give up the Bible itself than to give that up.

People do not realize what they are doing when they thrust such things between the sinner and the word of God. The same is true regarding many outside organizations that are often connected with the church of God, and in which Christians are called upon to work. If these outside organizations require, or propose to do some of the things required by the Lord to be done in the church, by his people, then these things ought to be done by Christians in the name, by the authority of the Lord, and not by human wisdom, in the name of a human institution. This principle carried out will keep Christians from entering masonic fraternities and paying out their money for benevolent or charitable purposes through these organizations instead of doing them through the church of God, and in the name of the Lord. Paul says to Christians, "And whatsoever ye do, in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." To do things in the name of the Lord, is to do them by his authority, by his word, according to the direction of the word of God. But to do these same things through the masonic order, is to do them in the name of masonry, and by human wisdom, by human directions, and the whole thing becomes human, and the reward will have to be human, for the Lord promises none in such cases. In things very similar to these the Lord said to the Jews, "In vain do ye worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." Worship or service done by human wisdom, by human authority is vain service, no matter by whom done, nor by what name. It is very true that these organizations require many things to be done that the Lord requires his people to do in the church, as his people, and in his name, and by his authority. But when placed in human organizations, and done by them as such, they are wholly human, not divine. If one Christian has a right to be a mason, and to pay his money through that church, so has another, and so have all. And suppose that all do, then what will become of the church of God?

Then comes the Young Men's Christian Association, with its claims, asking all the young men of the church to become members of it, and to work through it, and in its name. This institution as such, is as thoroughly human as Masonry, Odd-fellowship, or any other organization of the sort. And whatever is done in and by this association, is by human wisdom, by human authority, and not by the Lord. But we are told, they propose to do the things the Lord requires to be done. If this claim be true, then the claim itself proves the association to be at least a non-essential, because all the Lord requires to be done, he requires to be done by his servants through his word, and as subjects of his kingdom. Does the Young Men's Christian Association propose to relieve the afflicted? The word of God requires the church, his kingdom, his people as such, and in his name to do that. Do they propose to encourage prayer? The Lord requires that of his own people as such. Do they propose to sound out the word of God? The Lord requires the church, his people to do that in his name. And if Christians do all in these matters that the word of God requires, and do them in the name of the Lord, they will have neither time nor means to be placed in a human organization. But instead of sounding out the word of God in its fullness and purity as did the apostles, they prevent such from being done. It is known by all who understand their teaching that the doctrine of justification by faith only, is one of their leading items of doctrine. It is one of the most prominent features in the whole concern. And in so far as they make this feature prominent, just that far they hinder the proclamation of the whole counsel of God.

They will not encourage any man to preach for them that will preach faith, repentance, and baptism in their scriptural connection, for the remission of sins. Let any man try it, and he will soon see. The writer of this was invited by them several years ago to preach for them one Lord's day afternoon at their room in this city. He was told, when invited, that no restraint should be thrown around him, but that he could freely preach what he believed. Knowing the general tendency among them to preach justification by faith only, or to avoid the subject of conversion, because people differ on it, we determined to preach a sermon on that line, which we did, taking as a foundation the language of Paul where he says to God, "who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son." We endeavored to show, in the spirit of kindness, and by the word of God, how sinners are translated into the kingdom of God. We were listened to with marked attention by those present. But we have never been invited to preach for them again, nor have we known of any one else being invited that did preach these things to them. The truth is, that although some of our brethren are among them, the leaders do not want these things preached, and do not invite men they think will preach them. These things are very unpopular in this organization. Therefore, they do not encourage the proclamation of all the word of God. But if they did, this should be done by the church, the kingdom of God as such, and Christians cannot honor God otherwise, and we cannot see how Christians can go into them, and thereby help build them up, and at the same time neglect, ignore, and weaken the church of God. If Christians will do all in the church, and in the name of the Lord, that he requires, they will have neither time, talent, nor money to spare in a human organization. All these are due to the Lord, and to be done in the church, and as the Lord directs. The Lord's people should do everything in their power to build up, to extend the church, and make it what the Lord intended it to be, and then there could be no apology for members of the church to go off into human institutions, to run on side tracks instead of remaining on the main line. And the special point we wish to make in this is, if nothing under the law of Moses could be blended with the Church of God without corrupting and destroying God's appointments, how can human institutions be added now, without the same result? We do not believe they can be, and for this reason, we are sure that the Lord's people should keep out of them, and do the Lord's work in his own name, that he may thus be honored by them, and the kingdom of God advanced in the earth, and the number of the saved increased.

There are some in the religious world also that take the decision rendered by the apostles and elders at Jerusalem, as recorded in this chapter, as evidence of the divine right of creed-making, and that therefore uninspired men have the right to make creeds now. If this is an example of creed-making, then everything the apostles ever said or did, can be claimed in the same way. They preface their decision in this case by saying, "it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, etc." Showing that this decision was made, like all their preaching and writing, by the dictation of the Spirit of God. Everything that the church of God needs to know or do, has been given by the Holy Spirit in the word of truth, and no room left for creed-making, and any attempt to do such a thing is rebellion against God, and a rejection of his word as insufficient for man's guidance. This is contrary to the plain expressions of the word of God, which declare it to be sufficient. But this article is long enough.

INVENTIONS AND DEVICES OF MEN IN RELIGION.

Men are slow to learn that the great end of existence, is not to invent ways of serving the Lord, but to humbly and trustingly do his will, and be content in that service.

Inventions and devices are frequently mentioned in the Bible, but when connected with ways or means of serving God, always with condemnation. Psalms 33: 10: "He maketh the devices of the people of none effect. The counsel of the Lord standeth forever, the thoughts of his heart to all generations." Here the counsel, (the things counselled or directed by God) the thoughts of God's heart, are placed in contrast with the devices of man. God maketh the devices of the people of none effect, but the thing counselled by God standeth forever. Proverbs 19: 21 teaches precisely the same thing. "There are many devices in a man's heart, nevertheless, the counsel of the Lord, that shall stand." Man's heart is full of devices for doing God's service and securing his own good. These shall all come to naught, but the Lord's counsel, that shall stand, be steadfast and reliable forever.

David, Psalms 99: 8: "Thou answeredst them, O Lord, our God; thou wast a God that forgavest them, though thou tookest vengeance of their inventions." He tells them they had made inventions of their own, and sinned in using them. When they turned and called on him he forgavest them, but took vengeance on their inventions,—that is, he could not tolerate them, but destroyed these inventions. It carries with it, too, that these inventions were used to punish those who used them. This corresponds with the idea of Paul, that those who add wood, hay, and stubble to the institutions of God, will suffer loss in the destruction of their labor, but themselves if penitent may be saved yet so as by fire. He adds, "Ye are the temple of God, if any man defile the temple of God, (by bringing these human inventions into it) him shall God destroy."

Psalms 106: 29: "They provoked him to anger with their inventions, and the plague broke upon them." For men to invent new ways where God has ordained, or to add to his appointments, is to assume that God's provisions are imperfect, and that men can improve and perfect them. This always provokes God. This is presumption on the part of men, and the sin of presumption is the greatest of sins before God. 39th verse he says, "Thus were they defiled with their own works, and went a whoring with their own inventions, therefore was the wrath of God kindled against his people, insomuch that he abhorred his inheritance." This is the invariable and constant effect of all human devices and human inventions in religion. They lead his children away from fidelity to God, away from his favor, and involve them in spiritual adultery with the institutions and kingdoms of the world, insomuch that Divine wrath is kindled against those that go astray, and God is made to abhor his inheritance.

"Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven. Many will say to me, in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name have done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you, depart from me ye that work iniquity." Many call upon him as Lord, Lord, persuade themselves they are doing wonderful things in his name, but because they are working through their own devices and inventions, and are not satisfied with the counsel of God, they kindle the wrath of God against themselves, and cause him to abhor them, and at the last day will receive the awful sentence, "Depart from me ye that work iniquity, I never knew you." "To this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite Spirit and trembleth at my word." Isaiah 6: 2. How fearful ought we to be lest in our self-sufficiency we add to the appointments of God and challenge his wrath. We become elated with our learning, but "knowledge puffeth up," makes vain and self-sufficient. It is only that charity that springs from a deep reverence for God and his divine authority that edifieth or buildeth up. Man cannot be too cautious in reference to adding to or changing the appointments of God. He cannot be too extreme in walking in God's institutions just as he gave them, and trembling lest he presumptuously rely on his own wisdom and add to heaven's institutions.

The wise preachers said, Ecclesiastes 7: 29: "Lo, this only have I found out, God made man upright, but he hath sought out many inventions." The besetting sin of man, of humanity in all ages and countries has been and is now to seek out inventions of his own instead of walking "in the counsel of God." We find this was the besetment in Eden of the Jews; God's appointments were too simple, too inefficient—were not wise to call out and combine human wisdom, means and activity; it was the trouble of the church in the earlier centuries; it produced and corrupted Romanism. It was the fatal point of stumbling of the Greek church, of the Episcopal, the Presbyterian, the Methodist, the Baptist churches. They have substituted wiser, more efficient ways of making Christians, of church government, of doing Christian work than were God's appointments. The disciples are men of like passions and infirmities as other men. The same temptations beset them. They may guard against the temptation at the point at which we have seen others err, and yet at other points be betrayed into the same error. We cannot be too cautious. *We must learn as God taught the wise man, "I know that whatsoever God doeth, it shall be forever. Nothing can be put to it, nor anything taken from it, and God doeth it that men should fear before him." Ecclesiastes 3: 14. Hence, "Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing whether it be good or whether it be evil." And in that judgment, "Every plant that my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up," (Matt. 15) and every one that hath been sown in that kingdom by an enemy's hand shall be bound together to be burned up. Matt. 13: 30.

Bro. W. A. Belding, of New York, is in our State to strive to arouse an interest in behalf of the religious education of the negroes. He has given money and time to the establishment of Christian Institute, in Mississippi. His labor and self-sacrifice prove his sincerity in the cause. It is a shame and a disgrace to the Christian profession as well, as common sense of the Southern people, that persons should have to come from the North to excite in them such an interest. Every consideration of self interest, from a material, social, and even political standpoint, as well as the Spirit of Christ, should prompt the people of the South, and especially the Christians of our Southern country, to have been foremost in this work. But they have not been. It is well for us to acknowledge our sins and short comings in these matters, and accept kindly, the efforts of those who are interested. We trust the brethren will receive Bro. Belding kindly, and will aid him in his work. It is of a double nature. He would be glad of all the material and moral aid in help to the Southern Institute, and he is looking out young men, to educate them for teaching the gospel of Christ to their own people. We have long known Bro. Belding, by character as one of the best and most earnest teachers of the truth.

Bro. Poe's article reached us too late for this number.

"ANTIOCH CHURCH AND THE TRUTH."

In the GOSPEL ADVOCATE of October 8, Bro. J. A. Harding writes a whole page in defence of "Antioch church and the truth," in which he makes several false statements about me, which, if not corrected, are calculated to injure me as a minister of the gospel. Therefore I think it due to my reputation as an humble servant of God, who expects to spend his life in the ministry of the word, to correct the false charges made by Bro. Harding.

In my report of my meeting at Antioch, I stated nothing but facts; yet Bro. Harding says my statements are inaccurate. I held a meeting at Antioch, which resulted in eleven excluded, three restored, charges against fifty for disorderly conduct. Five of the fifty confessed, and were forgiven by the church. Antioch is one of Bro. Harding's congregations that has been doing without a preacher. Now, does Bro. Harding deny the truthfulness of the above statements? If he does, I can prove by a multitude of witnesses that every word is true. Does he say the impression, that if a church does without a preacher, "she will, as a natural consequence, have a great many disorderly members," false? Well, I may be wrong; for, as Bro. Harding says, a great many churches that have "hired pastors" have a great many disorderly members. So, if the fault be not in the preacher, it must be in the elders; and a church without a preacher, and elders incompetent to edify, and with scarcely any influence over their walk, must be in a fearful condition!

What I said about the incompetency of the elders in my second article, may be wrong, but it was not my fault; and if what I said be false, it is because I was misinformed by a great many of the Antioch brethren. I heard a goodly number of the members of Antioch say that their elders were incompetent, and the cause of such serious troubles was in the elders. They also informed me that Bro. J. A. Harding had advised all of the elders to resign. Now, if they were competent, Bro. Harding, why did you advise them to resign?

Antioch has three elders. One of them has been charged with a serious crime, too delicate to publish to the world. And another of the elders has but little influence over the majority of the members; for he knows himself that a great many of the Antioch members do not like him, and some of them do not even speak to him, and worst of all, he does not speak to some of the members. What a competent elder! The other elder hardly ever breaks the loaf, and he gave me his reasons for not breaking bread with the brethren, which was because the church was too corrupt, and had too many disorderly members in it; and he has used his influence in persuading a large majority of the Antioch members not to eat with disorderly members.

Now, Bro. Harding, the above statements are true, and you can deny them if you choose; but, if necessary, I can prove all I have said, by two or three witnesses; and "in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established." Hence, in my second article I am correct in saying, "If you will visit Antioch now, you will see the effect of the 'no-preacher doctrine' upon a church with incompetent elders." I heard several of the members say they needed a preacher, and without one they could never do much good as a church, for the elders were not competent to teach, as a church like Antioch ought to be taught. I heard one of the elders say that they could have much larger congregations, if they had a preacher, and, no doubt, could do more good. He also said he spoke to an elder about making up money to pay Bro. P. Azbill to preach, but he said, "Let those who employed him pay him." So when I was there the church was divided about a preacher, but Bro. Harding has been there since, and it may be that he has united them; for I think he has to visit them once or twice every year, (although it is the best church he ever saw, considering the circumstances, etc.) to keep them together.

I am confident that I have expressed the sentiments of a great many of the Antioch brethren in stating that the reason Antioch was so much divided, and kept on her book so many disorderly members, was because they had had no regular preaching, and because the elders had either failed to do their duty, or were not competent to do it. At least, it was their sentiments when I was there, and I heard them say so much about it that I did not hesitate to state it as a fact. But Bro. Harding may have convinced them in his "defence of the truth, and Antioch church."

But Bro. Harding said I visited other churches in a far worse condition than Antioch, and said nothing about their troubles. Well, if I did, I knew nothing of it at the time; for if they had any serious troubles, they kept them to themselves, and did not talk about them from the beginning to the end of the meeting, as the Antioch members did. So I could not state things that I knew nothing of.

I visited one church where a member who led the singing owned a distillery, but I did not approve of it, and preached several sermons against the making, selling, and drinking strong drink. The brother who owns a distillery promised me faithfully he would quit; and I advised the brethren to use their influence to get him to quit, and if he could not be persuaded to stop it, to withdraw from him.

Bro. Harding says a brother informed him that I favored selling apples to a distiller, and removed the doubts of some who had scruples about it. I emphatically deny the charge, Bro. Harding. Your informer is mistaken. This is election day, and I voted for St. John; and then you say I favor whisky making! No; never, never, while the poisonous fountain continues to flow, will I favor it. But I said, in the presence of your informer, that I would not sell apples or anything else to a distiller, not even nails and shingles, or bread and meat for his hands, or do anything to aid a man in making brandy or whisky; and I also said it was no more harm to sell apples to a distiller than it was to sell him anything else that would aid him in making strong drink. Can any one infer from the above statements that I favor the selling of apples to a distiller? You just as well infer that Christ favors adultery because he said, "He that is without sin, let him cast the first stone," as to infer that I favor selling apples to a distiller because I said it was no more harm to sell apples than anything else to a distiller. No, Bro. Harding, I am not in favor of it. I look upon the making, selling, drinking, and aiding in any way the making of strong drink, as a sin, and no man who loves the church of Christ will engage in a calling so sinful and degrading.

Bro. Harding thinks the reason I made the report about my meeting at Antioch, was because they had no preacher, and because they paid me so little for my labors. But he is mistaken again. It was not the smallness of the pay that I spoke so indignantly of, but the deception used by one of the elders in paying me. On Thursday night before I closed on Friday night, they took up a collection for me, and one of the elders put ten dollars in the hat. Several who were sitting near by saw him put the money in, and next day I heard some of the brethren disputing about the amount given by this elder. So to settle the dispute, I showed them the ten-dollar bill that was put in the hat the previous night. On Friday night I closed my meeting, and the brethren took up another collection, and this same elder who gave ten dollars the night before, gave another dollar. I went home with him, and on the way I said, "Bro. —, you gave more than all the others put together," and he remarked, "I don't know how much they gave." I said, "They gave nine dollars, and you gave eleven." And as he said nothing more about it, I thought, of course, he gave it. So I said in a brother's presence, that Bro. — gave more than all the church, but I was informed that a sister gave the ten dollars to this elder to give to me. And now, I presume, because I spoke of the deception used by this elder, that Bro. Harding's informer has informed him, as he did about the apples, that I spoke indignantly of the smallness of the pay.

Antioch gave me ten dollars for three weeks' labor, but that is a large amount for Antioch to give, as every other preacher acquainted there, except Bro. Harding, can testify. For those churches that are not in the habit of paying a preacher to preach regularly, do not generally pay one who preaches irregularly. At least I have found it true that a man who will not work at home, will not do much abroad. And so it is with those churches that do not have preaching at home. They are not missionary churches, by any means.

Bro. Harding says Antioch did not invite me, and therefore was under no obligation to pay me anything. But I was invited by more than one member, (the number that invited him the first time); and whether the members invited me or not they came to hear me preach nearly every night for three weeks; and if a person takes a paper out of the office, he is under obligations to pay for it, whether he likes it or not. But Bro. Harding is mistaken again. I was invited to come to Antioch, and was persuaded to remain after I came. I held a meeting at Red Hill, and several of the members who formerly belonged to Antioch spoke to me about going to Antioch to hold a meeting. But I would not agree to go till one of the Red Hill members visited some of the leading members of Antioch to see them about having a meeting, and I was informed by this member who visited them that the church was in favor of my coming and holding a series of meetings. So if I went without being invited, I was not aware of it, and while there did not find out that the church was not in favor of my coming. I confess that when I began to rebuke the members that had always been praised, that two of Bro. Harding's best members gave me one or two strong hints to close the meeting. One of them said he knew I could do no good, so far as converting sinners was concerned; and another one said I could not teach them anything, for they knew their duty, as it had been preached to them time and again. But when I spoke of closing the meeting two of the elders persuaded me to stay longer, and to preach during the day as well night. And then when I closed the meeting, one of the most prominent men in the church, the leading elder, and the one who said they could not be taught, said I ought to stay till Lord's day, by all means, but I had a previous engagement, and could not stay.

While at Antioch, I visited twenty-five or thirty families, and was never treated better by any people. Every person's house was my home, and I was furnished a horse to ride any time I wanted one. A great many of the brethren complimented my preaching, and said, although it cut, nevertheless it was true, and just the kind of preaching the church needed. Most all of my sermons were practicable. I left well pleased with the citizens of Antioch neighborhood, for their hospitality and kindness while there, and I thought they were well pleased with me; at least, they made that impression upon me, and if they were not, they certainly deceived me. I did not intend to offend Antioch church or Bro. J. A. Harding, in reporting to the world the result of my meeting, or stating what I thought to be the chief causes of such a result. I did it with good intentions, and if I was wrong in attributing the causes to the "no-preacher doctrine," and the incompetency of the elders, it was not my fault, for I was so informed by a large number of the Antioch members, and some whom I thought competent judges.

Antioch has some earnest, devoted members, who are trying to keep the church alive; but she has some, and not a few, as Bro. Harding can testify, who are doing nothing for the cause of Christ.

If I have offended Bro. Harding, or his church, I ask their pardon; and if I visited anybody while there who did not want my company, I ask, yea, a thousand times, I humbly ask for pardon.

I can say from the depth of my heart that I have no ill feeling towards Antioch church or their preacher, and it is with pain that I have written what I have; but after seeing so many false charges against me—charges calculated to injure me as a minister of the gospel—I thought it due my reputation, and above all things else my character, which my mother, who now sleeps in Christ, taught me to ever hold as sacred, (which I ever expect to do,) to write and correct, at least, those erroneous charges that assailed my character.

Happy that the all-wise God may throw his strong arms of protection around Antioch church and her worthy minister, and guide them safely to a home beyond this vale of tears, I subscribe myself, Christianly, R. W. STANCILL.

Leonard Daugherty, Elizabethtown, Ky., writes "I expected to be at Mars Hill College, all of the fifteenth session, but was prevented; will return first of January, and remain till June."

NOTES FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Avery Harlin, LaFayette, Tenn., November 24, writes: "Bro. E. M. Berry began preaching at this place on the second Lord's day of November, and continued nine days and nights, except Friday. Nine made the confession, and eight of them were immersed. Three of the nine were from the Baptist church. Two were reclaimed during the meeting. The audiences were large for this place, and as attentive as they could well be. We think the meeting was truly refreshing to nearly all the brethren at this place. It did their souls good to see their neighbors, their neighbors' children, and their own children, coming into God's church. We doubt not that some have already said, 'But will they hold out?' Time will answer that, but of one thing we feel sure, viz., the young members of our congregation will make faithful members, if the older ones will only do their duty in setting the example and giving the encouragement they should. The younger ones need a proper example. If any of our congregations think they need Bro. Berry's services in protracted meetings, they can address him at Eighty-Eight, Barren county, Kentucky. We believe him to be admirably fitted to be of great service to any congregation."

S. A. Hastin, Bardwell, Ballard County, Ky., November 18, writes: "I arrived safe in Marshall County off my West Tennessee trip; was kept out of meeting for some time, owing to sickness in my sister's family. I commenced a meeting in connection with Pro. Holssapple, on the line of Trigg and Lyon Counties, (where I preached in July.) Continued for only five or six days, resulting in twelve confessions, three of the persons ranging in age from 68 to 72 years of age. I then came back in Marshall to my old home church, to be at a meeting that was to be carried on by Bros. McCoy and Ray. That meeting lasted only seven or eight days, closing on Friday night before the fourth Lord's day in October, and resulted in fourteen additions. In company with young Bro. Joe Ratcliffe, I went to Woodville, McCracken County, Ky., and held a meeting continuing over two Lord's days, resulting in four additions from the Baptists. We then went to Ashland church to commence a meeting, and found we had to circulate our meeting after we got there. We found the church in a bad condition, Bro. E. C. L. Denton was with us at the commencement, and delivered two very able discourses. We continued the meeting till yesterday morning, (two weeks.) Twenty-one additions; three from the Baptists. I will hold one more meeting here, then go to my family, and remove to Tennessee, and take charge of some churches."

L. R. Sewell, Lebanon, Tenn., November 20, writes: "I left home on Saturday before the third Lord's day in October, for Viola, Warren county, Tenn., where I began a meeting on Lord's day night, having preached at Antioch in the morning. My throat, which was very sore when I left home, continued to grow worse until Tuesday night, when I had to close until Thursday night. I preached Thursday night and Friday night, with much difficulty. Notwithstanding the interruption, we closed with fine interest. One made the good confession, and was baptized. We have no congregation at Viola. I was sent there by the church at Antioch. From there I went to Jasper, Marion county, and began a meeting on the fourth Lord's day in October, which continued at intervals until Friday night. It began to rain on Monday, and continued until Thursday. I had more political excitement to contend against at Jasper, than any place I have been this year. But, notwithstanding all this, we had a good meeting. The church much encouraged, and three added; two from the Methodists, and one from the world. During this meeting I had a little clash with a Primitive Baptist preacher, but it was too insignificant to offer for publication. On the first Lord's day in November, I began a meeting at Spencer, Van Buren county, and continued until the next (second) Lord's day night, and closed with eight additions, all by baptism. This was my first visit to Burritt College, and to say I was pleased with the school, its workings and work, does not express the thought. I was delighted with both. The teachers are all earnest Christians, and do their work as such. Consequently brethren and sisters who have children to educate, will act wisely to examine into the merits of this school before sending elsewhere. I would call the especial attention of young men who desire to enter the ministry, or study the Bible, to the Bible Department of this school. Bro. Hayes, who has charge of this department, is well qualified and thoroughly prepared for the work. I found upon inquiry that ninety per cent. of all who enter the school embrace the religion of Christ before they leave. I insist that such a power for good as this in our midst, ought to be supported by the brotherhood better than it is. Bro. Wm. Young, one of the students, did the baptizing, and did it well. I am now in a meeting at Philadelphia, Wilson county, which is expected to continue until next Monday night, and give place to the Alsop-Estes debate on Tuesday morning. My father is assisting me in the meeting. There have been three baptisms up to the present time. Interest good."

DEAR BRO. LIPSCOMB: I have had a query, which has given me some trouble to find the consistency of, if any there be. The trouble with me is, how can the Spirit accompany the word in the conversion of the alien, and the alien not receive it? We are taught that the world cannot receive the Spirit. John 14: 17. Still we see that some of our teachers, when attempting to refute the doctrine of the direct and independent operation of the Spirit upon the head of the alien, hold that the Spirit does not operate independent of the word, but accompanies it in conversion. The information that I desire is this, How can the Spirit accompany the word in conversion, and the sinner not receive it, provided he receives the word? It really seems to a mind of the caliber of mine, that showed the theory of the Spirit's accompanying the word to be true, then the theory that the world or alien cannot receive it, is false. But we had best heed Paul's admonition, (Rom. 3: 4) and hold the truth as given by the Master. John 14: 17. The word was given to, and the Spirit used the minds and tongues of men in the use of the sword-word; minds to contain and tongues to speak the will of God concerning the human family, in order that they hear and believe the message that the king had sent to them from the court above, and I am inclined to think that it would trouble the wisest to show that the Spirit ever accompanied the word in a single conversion recorded in the Bible. If the Spirit is forced to accompany the word, then Peter was wrong when he said, "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." Peter 23: 25. Now if the theory that the Spirit accompanies word be so; would not it have been better to have said, by the Spirit and word; but seeing the facts as Peter states them, we can see the beauty of Paul's declaration of the gospel, being the power of God unto salvation, and also the necessity of preaching it. There is another expression that the Spirit worked through the truth "word," we think, synonymous with the first. Peter says we obey the truth through the Spirit. This changes the subject. 1 Peter 1: 22. The whole thing occurs to my mind to be this: The world having received the word from, or through the Spirit, by the mouth of the apostles, believe and obey it, and are thus made free from sin past, and then become recipients of the Spirit. 1 Cor. 3: 16. Now, the position that seems to be the true one. The Spirit now holds the same relation to the word, that this government would to the sword of her soldiery, in the event she would equip her soldiery with swords and send them to the battle. The government would furnish the sword, and would not only accompany them save with authority. So the Spirit brought the word with heaven's authority, or through the Spirit we received the word. If I am in error, please do me the kindness to show me the truth with Bible learning.

S. I. S. CAWTHORN.

"Many of the heads shaken at the old Bible are empty," says one of the Bishops of the Irish Episcopal Church. He was quite as sharp in his definition of an "Agnostic," a title which some men of note are rather proud to wear. He says its most exact synonym is "Ignoramus."

There are two things to which we never grow accustomed—the ravages of time and the injustice of our fellow-men.—Falleysand.

THE RE-BAPTISM QUESTION.

The editors of The Firm Foundation have exhumed the remains of a dead contest which flourished in some localities from A. D. 1825, to A. D. 1845, and has since last named date received but little attention. Its discussion doubtless will be as harmless now as in the past, but it has in it potencies for evil which its advocates now have not dreamed of.

If the Firm Foundation adherents decline to receive into the church those who come to us from the Baptist church who thought their sins were remitted before baptism, unless they will be baptized for remission of sins, then logically they will be compelled to refuse to fellowship at least fifty thousand of our best members who came to us from the Baptists, and who tell us plainly that they at time of baptism believed they had remission, but are now satisfied that their sins "were not pardoned until they were baptized and then enjoyed the answer of a good conscience." Then logically they will be compelled to regard the church with which they are now connected as a heresy, and after a scriptural admonition reject the eight hundred thousand members of the church of Christ in America because they have secured and retained fifty thousand members who decline to be baptized.

It is not believed that the editors of the Firm Foundation meditate a withdrawal from the church with which they are supposed to be connected, nor the organization of a faction, but merely to call attention to our efforts to restore the ancient gospel in its inherent beauty and excellency. One item of our plea for the ancient order of things has been ignored to some extent in our city churches, and it is well to call attention to the fact that baptism and remission of sins are scripturally connected; and in this our Firm Foundation brethren are doing good.

In A. D. 1828, some of our most distinguished brethren had appended a prefix to the formula of baptism so as to show the world that they baptized for remission of sins. The formula and its prefix used generally from A. D. 1825, to A. D. 1840, by our brethren, was as follows: "For the remission of your sins, by the blood of Christ, I immerse you into the names of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit. Amen." There was an additional prefix to the formula of baptism used by Walter Scott and many others, but which fell into disuse, or rather ceased to be used about A. D. 1831. It was as follows: "For the remission of your sins, by the blood of Christ, and for the gift of the Holy Spirit, I baptize you into the name, etc." But see the March number of Evangelist, 1832; also the volume of the Evangelist for 1844.

Under the conditions surrounding the editors of the Firm Foundation, they will do well to discuss the question thoroughly; and as the Advocate and the Old-Path Guide seem to have but little inclination for the discussion, perhaps Bro. Cox or Melish can be induced to investigate the questions,—

1. Does a penitent believer who seeks a good conscience in baptism, but thinks his sins are already forgiven, receive remission of sins in baptism?

2. Is it necessary to understand the design of an ordinance to enjoy the blessings designed to be conferred upon those who comply with it?

LET US SHUT THE BOOK.

The book of the year 1884. The Christian Sower Tract Fund will issue its third annual report by the close of the year. To present the most favorable account of its business, it must pay its debts and collect what is owing it. If you have received a gift of tracts, you are not expected to pay a cent for them; but if you have agreed to act as an agent, and have failed, or if you have bought tracts on credit, and have not paid for them, you are expected to comply with your promise, or show why you cannot, that your account may be closed. The Trustee is anxious to begin the New Year with its debts all paid, and with a full supply of tracts on hand. He greatly desires to do more next-year than he has ever done. This work should attract the attention of all good men. Some day you will be surprised at your indifference.

The Prayer of Kepler.

Both Kepler and Newton were profoundly devout. Kepler has left us a touching testimony of his sentiments in a prayer placed by him at the end of some of his works. Here is a translation of that prayer:

"Before quitting this table upon which I have made all my researches, it only remains for me to raise my eyes and my hands towards heaven, and address with devotion my humble prayer to the Author of all illumination. 'O Thou who, by the glorious light which Thou hast shed over all nature, raisest our desires up to the sacred light of Thy grace, in order that we may be one day transported unto the eternal light of Thy glory, I give thee thanks, my Lord and my Creator, for all the joys that I have experienced in the ecstasies into which I have been thrown by the contemplation of the work of Thy hands! Now I have completed this book, which contains the fruit of my labors, and I have used in composing it the whole of the intelligence that Thou hast given me. I have set forth before men the grandeur of Thy works. I have explained these mysteries as well as my finite mind has permitted me to embrace the infinite extent of them. I have made all efforts to arrive at truth by the ways of philosophy; and if it has occurred to me a dispicable worm, conceived and brought up in sin, to say anything unworthy of Thee, make me know it, in order that I may remove it. Have I allowed myself to cherish any self-complacent presumption in the presence of the admirable beauties of Thy works? Have I proposed to myself my own renown among men by raising this monument, which ought to have been consecrated entirely to thy glory? Oh! if it has been so, receive me in Thy clemency and mercy, and grant me this favor, that the work I have just finished may ever be powerless to do evil, and that it may contribute to Thy glory and to the good of souls!"

I shall refrain from adding the least comment on this utterance of humble and devout adoration.—Leisure Hour.

Effective Family Religion.

Family religion requires the highest mutual confidence. The reading of the Bible, prayer in the morning or evening, attendance at Church, cannot constitute family religion. The spirit of the parents must be devout; the children must know that both father and mother depend upon God for direction, and look to him for comfort. The accidental discovery of a parent at prayer makes a deeper impression upon a child's mind than a month of routine services. The spirit in which religious subjects are referred to is more than the things that are said. The undertone is more important than the overtone. Not gloom, nor tasks, nor morbid consciousness, but simple, unaffected confidence in God and truth a personal trust in Christ, and a love for each other which is the result of the love of all for Christ, and a sincere spirit of good-will to all at home, and of kindness in thought and expression to all who enter the home or are mentioned there—these make the family religion, and make its Bible reading, prayer and church as natural as its social life. No child ever goes from such a family to become an unbeliever or a scoffer. But from the pharisaic, the stiff, the dead the intolerant, whose religion is a yoke of forms without heart, few of the youth become religious.—N. Y. Christian Advocate

Light in Dark Places.

We are seldom placed in circumstances in which the question of duty appears to be doubtful, when one course does not present itself manifestly conformable to some of the great principles of Christianity. While, for example, a man in peculiar circumstances may be in doubt whether it would not be proper for him to travel on the Sabbath-day according to the commandment. Now, the path of duty, under such circumstances, is as if proclaimed by a voice from heaven. It is, to take the course in which we are sure God will not be displeased with us. If circumstances ever can occur in which of two courses one must be taken, and after all possible light has been sought, each appears equally doubtful, then each is equally lawful. God does not require us to see without light, nor to prefer one object to another, when our intelligence cannot possibly discern a reason for such preference. Either course may then be pursued with the most peaceful assurance of the continued enjoyment of the presence and favor of God.

Speak for your Lord and Master. You tell me you are nervous. Never mind your nervousness. Try once. If you break down a half-dozen times, try again; you shall find your talents increase. It is wonderful how these break downs do more than our keeping on. Just deliver your soul of what is in it. Get your heart red-hot, and then, like some volcano that is heaving in its inner bowels, let the hot lava of your speech run streaming down. You need not care for the graces of oratory, nor for the refinement of eloquence, but speak what you do know, show them your Saviour's wounds, bid his sorrow speak to them, and it shall be marvelous how your stammering tongue shall be all the better instrument because it does stammer for that God "hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, things which are not, to bring to yea, and naught things that are."—Spurgeon.

The death of Christ was, to us, a very important event. It made our salvation possible; and it now depends on us to make it sure.

BRO. STANCILL'S ARTICLE.

In another part of the paper is an article from Bro. R. W. Stancill, which we publish in justice to him. I have not at any time supposed that Bro. Stancill would deliberately and wilfully do an injustice to the church at Antioch, but being violently prejudiced against the "No-preacher doctrine," as he calls it, he has looked at every defect of that church through the magnifying power of his own fancy, has failed to see, or at least to mention its virtues, has been easily led astray by rumors that he ought not to have considered and having thus formed in his mind a horrid picture that he calls Antioch Church, he attributes all of its deformities to the fact that for eight years it has done without a regularly employed preacher—a hired pastor.

Had Bro. Stancill been content with caricaturing the church, I should not have noticed his report; but when he, from his want of information about the matter, and from his prejudice, attributed all of these evils to its not hiring a preacher to take the oversight of it—a thing that no church ever did in the days of the apostles—I was indignant; for I knew well that its virtues (and they are not a few) have been developed since it gave up the hired pastor, whereas its sins and weaknesses it had before while under pastoral care. That this may appear to the reader I copy an article from the Apostolic Times, written by one of the deacons of the church, Bro. R. M. Quinn. Bro. Quinn was the whiskey-seller of the village when I first visited the community, but for years he has been one of Antioch's most faithful members, a devout, prayerful, God-fearing man—a man of excellent judgment and discretion whose word is as good as his bond. He writes to the Times as follows:

BRO. STANCILL'S UNJUST REPORT.

Bro. Cozine: Bro. R. W. Stancill has made a report of his meeting at Antioch, Estill County, Ky., that is not true to the facts. Bro. Stancill was mistaken. I write this that the readers of the Times may not be misled concerning the working of the Scriptural way of conducting the church at this place. Bro. Stancill came here and found the church in the midst of a serious trouble which very much interfered with its harmonious working. He at once attributed all its difficulties to the "no-preacher doctrine." He says: "If Bro. James A. or Bro. Joe Harding will visit Antioch now, either one of them will see the effect of the no-preacher doctrine with a church of incompetent elders." In speaking about our short comings he says: "whether it is because they have failed to employ a preacher, or whether it is because the elders of the church have failed to do their duty, I will leave the reader of this paper to judge." How can they judge without facts from which to judge. As a member of the church, and as one who knows about its workings, I desire to give the facts, that your readers may judge indeed.

The church has been existing twenty-six years; for about eighteen it depended upon employing a preacher to visit it once a month; but for the last eight years it has not hired a preacher, but has depended upon its own talent, and frequent protracted meetings. Now that the readers of the Times may rightly judge about the effect of the "no-preacher" doctrine, I want to compare the workings of the church while under the care of a preacher, with its workings while doing without a regular preacher. Under the preacher the church met but one Sunday in each month, and not then, if it was known the preacher would not be present. Frequently it "was not prepared" to commune even on this one Sunday. The elders never thought of conducting the services, or of reading, or praying, or exhorting in the public meetings. The singing was miserable and our meeting house was but little better than a barn. But little was done in the way of discipline; and, on account of some bad cases that came up, a number of the best members drew off and went to other places; the remnant being unable or unwilling to employ a preacher for the next year, failed to do so, and the congregation ceased to meet. About this time Bro. J. A. Harding came and held us a very successful meeting which resulted in the addition of one hundred and ten to the membership. He encouraged us to try to meet without a preacher and we have done so for eight years. Now for the contrast: We have an excellent, comfortable meeting-house; our singing is best in the county, as Bro. Stancill can testify; we have met not only every Lord's day, but we have conducted a Sunday-school; the elders conduct the services well, reading, praying, exhorting and officiating at the Lord's table; quite a number of the young men take part in the reading and praying, and some of them also speak. During these eight years we have had more additions than any other church in the county, and have withdrawn from more; both of these, I believe indicate life; there has been more Bible reading and memorizing by the church within the last eight years by many hundred fold than in all the eighteen years before.

It would be hard for me to believe that the troubles that beset us come from the "no-preacher" doctrine. The other churches of the county, except one, depend upon "regular preaching," and meet but once a month, and are much like this church was when it did that way. It is but right to remark that our disorderly members are neither more numerous nor worse than theirs. We think that Bro. Stancill's publication of us to the world was uncalled for, unkind and unjust.

R. M. QUINN, Deacon.

What Bro. Quinn says in this article is the truth as every one knows who is acquainted with the history of the congregation. If I wanted to show the advantage of the Pastor-system, and the disadvantages of the scriptural way, Antioch is about the last church in the world that I would go to for illustration.

But now there are several matters in Bro. Stancill's article I want to notice; this is one of them: "Antioch has three elders; one of them has been charged with a serious crime too delicate to publish to the world." Bro. Stancill never did a more unjust thing in his life than he did in penning that sentence. True, rumors were circulated concerning this elder, that were very injurious to his character; the officers of the church looked into the matter, and decided that the charge contained in this rumor was unsustained; there was but one witness in the case and that one made contradictory statements, giving one version of the matter at one time and another at another. A charge is not to be received against an elder except at the mouth of two or three witnesses. To this charge, I suppose, Bro. Stancill refers. He did wrong in bringing this matter into print after it had been dismissed as unworthy of consideration by the church. This elder, however, did wrong in another matter; he came before the church and acknowledged his wrong, and prayed for the forgiveness of God and of the brethren. He was forgiven by the Father no doubt. If Bro. Stancill referred to this it is evident that he did wrong. Why does he want to parade the sins and weaknesses of this church, and the evil rumors about its members to the world? Before he wrote this last article he had seen Bro. Quinn's article, and had learned that the Anti-pastor-system is not responsible for them.

Bro. Stancill denies that he advised the taking of apples to the distilleries, and I am perfectly ready to receive his denial; but it is certain that he made the impression upon others that he favored it. The following testimony will satisfy all of that fact. Dr. L. H. Wilson says, "Bro. Stancill made the impression upon my mind that he did not think it wrong for Christians to take apples to distilleries for making brandy." Bro. William Warford said he asked Bro. Stancill if he thought it was wrong to take apples to the still-house, and he replied, it is not. Bro. Warford's father said that Bro. Stancill remarked "if we do not take apples to the still-house others will." These are all members of the church. I obtained my information from Dr. Wilson, whom I know well; I do not believe there is another man who would be less likely to injure another by words unadvisedly spoken than he. But Bro. Stancill says he thinks that it is just as wrong to sell anything else to a distiller as apples; that it is just as innocent to sell him apples as corn, wood, flour, cloth, and I can very readily believe that in so talking he has made impressions that are not correct.

Now concerning the money which was given him and about which he thinks he was deceived. A sister gave to Bro. Finney, one of the elders, ten dollars to be used for the church. She says herself that she did not intend it particularly for Bro. Stancill, but she gave it to this elder to be used for the good of the cause. This brother saw fit to drop that money without ostentation into the hat when a collection was taken up for Bro. Stancill. Bro. Stancill thinks he was deceived, and has been growling about it ever since, because all the facts concerning that ten dollars were not given to him. He is a most singular man! In his report of his receipts published in the Times he says a sister from Shelby County gave him ten dollars; she did not give him a cent; she gave the money to Bro. Finney to be used for the church. The church gave him the entire amount.

Bro. Stancill in his haste and listening to idle talkers and malicious circulators of suspicions, has been led into many blunders, and has done injustice to a church and has badly treated several of its members. He owes it to them and to God to visit them and make a public acknowledgment of his wrongs.

This is the end of the matter so far as the publication of it is concerned in the ADVOCATE.

J. A. HARDING.

We promised that if Texas would send us one hundred subscribers before the end of the year, we would close the present volume with five thousand subscribers. This was on the presumption that Tennessee and other sections would do as well. We are not sure but that our Texas brethren have been sending in more subscribers in proportion to the number we have there, than any other section. We hope they will do still better, and that others will do as well as they. We ask our friends to give us an extra lift now.

IN TIME.

It is our custom to notify every subscriber at the time of expiration of his subscription, save those who close with the year. This number is so large we cannot do it. Besides, we take it for granted that those whose subscription closes with the year, are aware of it; it is easy to keep this in memory. But we find some get hurt because their names are cut off at the close of the year. We know several who have become so offended at this, that they have refused to renew their subscriptions. Please, brethren, keep it in mind that no paper ever wished to lose a subscriber, or to offend a reader. The ADVOCATE is no exception to this rule. Please interpret all our actions in the light of this. Some readers are hurt if we do not stop it; some, if we do. Sometimes we have adopted the rule of continuing it to old subscribers that we are reasonably sure wish it continued. This gives offence sometimes to others at the same office, of whom we are not certain. Then this involves the necessity of one of the editors going over the list and marking which should be continued. They are already harder-worked for the pay than any persons in the community. Now, we don't wish to hurt a soul's feelings, we don't wish to lose a single subscriber, but we are very anxious to please each one so well that he will send one new subscriber, with his own. How shall we do it? If any one will inform us, and it involves no sacrifice of divine truth or Christian honor, we will gladly do it. But to avoid the loss of a number on your part, or the striking of a name off of our list, on ours, renew as soon as possible. Let us have every name in by first of January. If you have not the money now, notify us that you wish to continue, by postal, and send the money in as soon as possible. Don't forget the additional subscriber. One new subscriber, with one old one, for three dollars. Don't delay until after your time expires.

NOT ALWAYS AS THEY SEEM.

We frequently misinterpret events. We think apparent prosperity and resentfulness to remonstrance indicate success. It frequently is the indication of the speedy downfall and ruin of those who appear to be exalted. Amaziah returned from the slaughter of the Edomites, brought a number of their gods, and set them up as gods for the children of Israel, a prophet went to him and remonstrated that these were not gods, they could not deliver their own worshipers from thy hand, why shouldst thou worship them? Amaziah retorted, Who made you of the King's counsel? forbear, why shouldst thou be smitten? The prophet did forbear, but said, "I know that God hath determined to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel." 2 Chron. 25: 16. So men run after human devices, (God never did approve a device of men in or for his service.) They are warned that human devices have always brought separation from God and spiritual ruin. They repulse those who thus warn them as bigoted, dictatorial censorious, and pride themselves in their way.

No matter how popular they may seem, the true child of faith always knows that God has decreed the destruction of those who thus "reject the counsel from God." "When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish; it is that they shall be destroyed forever." Psalms 92: 7. God permits those who refuse his counsel to triumph and prosper for a time to test our hearts and see whether we love temporal success and popularity better than we love self-denying service to God.

God intends all hearts shall be tested. If the wrong never prospered, if the evil never triumphed, no man could know really whether he loved God's ways with self-denial, better than he loved man's ways with worldly honor and popular praise. God will try all hearts, will test all souls. Only those who through self-denial, forsake the wisdom of the world for the wisdom of God, will be owned by him. D. L.

SOME OLD BOOKS.

I have been looking over some old books, written between five and six hundred years before the birth of the Savior. I wished to learn from themselves, the hopes and fears, the joys and sorrows, of the men of olden times. I was desirous to know how they were disposed to the gods they worshipped—whether they looked to them as their friends or enemies, whether they approached confiding in their love and protection, or if they feared their enmity and evil influence. I wished to know, too, how they regarded the future—if it were veiled in utter darkness, or if rays of light were trembling through the gloom.

I was struck by a remark of one of their most distinguished men. "Evil never dies; the gods take care of that. If aught there be, fraudulent and vile, 'tis safe. The good and just perish, unpitied by them. When the gods do ill, why should we worship them?" Much is said of Pluto, god of the infernal regions, but all is involved in mystery—no light shines along the way. One says, "We know nothing of our future life, discover nothing of the realms below; but in perplexing fable all is wrapped." One of their purest, best women dies, and just before passing away, she exclaims, "Some one drags me to the gates that close upon the dead. Oh! what a dreary, dreary path, wretched, most wretched, must I tread to the dark house of Pluto, where the sun never shines. How stern he frowns beneath his shaggy brows! I see the two-oared boat, and he that wafts the dead, grasps in his hand his pole, and calls me: Why dost thou delay? Haste, thou lingerest. Farewell, my children, oh! my children, may you, more happy, see the golden light of day."

Jupiter has taken his seat on the throne of the universe, with but little love to man. Indeed, he wished to destroy the race, and create another, such as he thought humanity should be. In the councils of heaven he met opposition. Man was still permitted to exist, although not grateful to the Ruler of heaven and earth. The hatred of Jupiter to man was not felt by all the gods. The son of one of them was their firm friend, and made constant efforts to soften the unhappiness of their lot. That they believed in, and trusted him, gives the idea that they felt the need of a helper—a Savior who could aid and pity them in their sorrows. This friend incurred the anger of Jupiter, and was chained to a rock, on a wild mountain, there to suffer great torture for ages. While enduring the punishment, he says, "For favors shown to man, I bear this weight of woe. Hid in a cain, I privately conveyed to him the fount of fire, of every art productive. For this offence, I bear these chains, fixed to this savage rock. For mercy to mankind, I am deemed unworthy of mercy." He further specifies what he did for man, the pity he felt for his helplessness. "I formed his mind, and through the clouds of ignorance, diffused the beams of knowledge. The lightsome wall of masonry, the rafted roof, he knew not; but the race, like ants, still buried, delved deep in earth, and scooped their sunless caves. Unmarked by them, these seasons changed. At random all their works, till I instructed them. I taught the rising and the setting of the stars—the rich train of marshalled numbers. The patient steer, joint laborer with man, I taught to bear the yoke; the harnessed steed, to whirl the rapid car; the tall bark bounding o'er the rolling waves, I taught its course, and winged the flying sail. When fell disease preyed on the human frame, relief was none, nor healing drug, nor cool, refreshing draught. Man pined without redress. I taught to mix the balmy medicine; to chase each fell disease, and soften pain. All secret treasures, deep buried in the earth, brass, iron, silver, gold, their use to man, I taught. To impress these things upon their hearts, I sent Memory, the active mother of all wisdom, and hope to animate and cheer. Of the sufferings I endure, I was not unadvised. In man's cause, I drew them on my head. For my good deeds, the tyrant of the skies repays me with this dread punishment. A time will come, I shall escape these chains. Necessity is far greater than art, (the art of chaining the speaker to the rock,) Who is the Ruler of Necessity? was asked. The triple fates and unforgetting furies, was the answer."

There was no kind, all-powerful being; no great Father, to whom man and inferior gods could look with certainty of protection and pity. One addressing Jupiter, remarks, "Thou art a god, but little known in justice and in mercy." Juno, the wife of Jupiter, from jealous spite, excited a distinguished man to frenzy, in which he killed his wife and children. It is remarked, "She has driven from his firm base, the noblest man—hath crushed the innocent, whose deeds were glorious and benevolent to Greece. To such a goddess who would pay his vows?"

The worshipers of Minerva often felt her malice. She remarks after causing great distress, "Oh but to laugh an enemy to scorn, is mirth most grateful." One punished by Pences, says, "The mischief loving goddess has plotted this. She has undone me." Diana, whom all "Asia and the world worshiped" seems to have called forth more the love and reverence of her worshipers. "Revered Diana," she is often called. Innumerable were the gods worshiped by the Greeks." In Athens, it was easier to find a god than a man. Thirty thousand are enumerated as worshiped by the Greeks, but so desirous were the Athenians to adore all the deities of heaven and earth, that they erected an altar to an unknown god, and ignorantly worshiped him. The religion of Greece made man the play-thing of the fates of destiny, and then punished him as if he had been a free agent. "Man must err when so the gods appoint. There is no reversing the decrees of fate. Thou canst no more than is ordained."

The sadness pervading the writings of the gifted, in these old times, is very touching. There was no hope of future happiness, and the sorrows and sufferings of life filled their heart with anguish not to be soothed. In the writings of the poets there is a clear perception of right and wrong—of virtue and vice, but they fail from the imperfect knowledge of moral obligation, perceptible in every system of paganism. Where revelation has not gone, there is no true knowledge of the true God, and no appeal to a supreme Ruler, whose will is the rule of right and wrong. There are only glimmering notions of a future life or future judgment. A settled darkness rests upon the religious horizon.

The follies and crimes of the gods worshiped by the Greeks, staggered their philosophers and wise men, on the very threshold of inquiry. They found little comfort in attempting to penetrate the mysteries surrounding them. They knew nothing of the redemption of man through the death of the Savior—nothing of the love of one pure, holy God to the children of men, in whose favor is life, and at whose right hand is pleasure forever more. There was no light along the path to a better world where the sorrows come not, and all distress is over. The nations of the world—the Greeks, especially, could not look to a future world, and people it with the beings of loveliness, their fancy delighted in, but they scattered them broadcast over their own sunny land. Every object was alive with action and feeling. Their rural and sylvan deities sported on the hill sides or lingered in the forest shades. The groves were animated by etherial power. Beautiful beings presided over every gushing stream and murmuring rivulet. Fancy gave a mystic origin to her cities, lakes and rivers, and throwing her veil over all, gave birth to innumerable traditions and the richest flowers of poetry. Still the notes of the harp were touched with sadness, plaintive and lingering. All was uncertain. They felt that, "in prosperous hour, a shadow passing light throws to the ground joy's baseless fabric. Life though ill, excels whate'er of good there is in death. "Who would wish to die?" Although these people often blamed their gods, "The gods regard not me, nor I the gods," still they clung to their system of worship, and each deity had his or her votaries who performed certain rites and made certain offerings. ## Obituaries.

Departed this life, at the residence of W. H. Downey, in Lewis county, Tenn., on November 14, 1884, Mary M. Killpatrick. She was the daughter of Robert L. and Gennett Brown; was born April 29, 1833; married to W. J. Killpatrick, in October, 1873. His obituary was published in the Advocate about eight years ago. Sister Killpatrick obeyed the gospel in the summer of 1854, and lived an exemplary Christian life until her death. Aunt Mary, as she was familiarly called, was a great favorite in the neighborhood. But God, in his wisdom, has taken her away from the trials of this life, and we have the consoling hope that she is gone to receive that crown of unfading brightness, that will wreath her brow in the chamber presence of Almighty God, where, if we live faithful, we can join her amid the angelic host that shout the praises of Christ, the blessed Redeemer.

Friend after friend departs—

Who hath not lost a friend?

There is no union here of hearts,

That finds not here an end.

Were this frail world our final rest,

Living or dying, none were blest.

WILL A MAN ROB GOD?

The Book plainly condemns all sin. It has therefore much to say against robbers and robbery. In it we read of robbers of threshing-floors, houses, treasures, etc.; robbers of the poor, robbers of orphans, robbers of fathers and mothers and robbers who rob one another. Paul was in perils of robbers. Ninevah was called a bloody city full of lies and robbery. Jesus connects the word robber with thief. Barabbas was a robber and was released to the wicked rabble while the pure and perfect Savior was crucified between two thieves.

God's condemnation against robbers is pronounced and a fearful doom awaits them. See a few passages. "Rob not the poor because he is poor, neither oppress the afflicted in the gate; for the Lord will plead their cause and spoil the soul of those that spoil them." Prov. 22: 22-23. "And I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress (defraud) the hireling in his wages, the widow and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the Lord of hosts." Mal. 3: 5. "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasures together for the last days. Behold, the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them who have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter. Ye have condemned and killed the just, and he doth not resist you." James 5: 1-6. Robbers with thieves, liars, adulterers and all ungodly people "shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death." Rev. 21: 8. Every righteous man rejoices in the fact, that there is a righteous ruler of the universe, who holds in his omnipotent hand the balances of justice and will mete out in due time, according to the rectitude of his holy laws, a just recompense of reward to him who oppresses the poor, robs widows and orphans, keeps back the wages of hirelings, or in any way cheats and defrauds his neighbor.

These things are mentioned that we may more fully realize the fearful situation of him who robs God. There is no respect of persons with God and he uses no smooth terms to cover a man's sins. With him, one who steals is a thief; one who lies is a liar; one who cheats, defrauds, oppresses the poor, widows and orphans, is a robber. He also says people rob him. He uses the word which best conveys his idea. Were it not robbery in his sight he would use a different word. Now if we say he is just in condemning all other robbers, do we not also say the Judge of all the earth does right in cursing with a curse all who rob him?

Lest some of us have robbed God, and are still robbing him in ignorance and unbelief, we ask, what is it to rob God? Let him answer, "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation." Mal. 3: 8-9. God demanded of the Israelites tithes, tenth part, of all they possessed. With many other sins they kept back the tithes and offerings. This God calls robbing him. He justly claimed and rightly demanded these tithes and offerings, and keeping them back was using for their gratification and pleasure what truly belonged to another, which is robbery. God blessed Israel with a delightful land, flowing with milk and honey. He promised, "If ye walk in my statutes and keep my commandments, and do them, then I will give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the land shall yield their fruit. And your threshings shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time, and ye shall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land safely." Lev. 26: 3-5. Was it too much, under such a beautiful promise as this, to call for tithes and offerings to be used, in turn, under God's directions, even for the government and lasting good of the nation? It was robbery to keep them back. Many other promises of good did God make to the Jews. On the other hand, if they would not obey him, he threatened them with pestilences, palmerworms, cleanness of teeth and lack of bread in all their cities, the sword of their enemies, drouths until the very earth should be hard like iron and the burning heavens like brass, captivity in a foreign land and final dispersion as a hiss and by-word among all nations—all of which came upon them. For the special sin of keeping back tithes and offerings, he says, "I have cursed you with a curse."

Paul says, "Whatsoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning," (Rom. 15: 4) and "these things were our examples to the intent that we should not lust after evil things as they also lusted. All these things happened unto them for ensamples, and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come. 1 Cor. 10: 6-11. Do people rob God now? Why write for our benefit that the Israelites robbed him and show us in what way they did it, if there is no danger now of committing the same sin? Yes, God is robbed to-day. Jesus and the apostles give much positive and specific instruction on the subject and manner of giving. God is just as good now to his people as formerly. He is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. He still sends rain and sunshine, seed-time and harvest. Under his guidance trees still yield their fruit, and "the threshing-time reaches unto the vintage, and the vintage unto the sowing time." "He giveth to all life and breath and all things." "In him we live and move and have our being." "Every good and perfect gift cometh from above." "He is the Savior of all men, specially of those that believe." His promise is still yea and amen. "I will dwell with them and walk with them, and I will be their God and they shall be my people." He still prospers people, for Paul says, give as God has prospered. He still ministers seed to the sower, multiplies the seed sown, and ministers bread for food. "But this I say, he that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give, not grudgingly, or of necessity, for God loves a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace (not a mysterious something, but blessings, temporal blessings,) abound toward you; that ye, always having all-sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work: as it is written, he hath dispersed abroad, he hath given to the poor, his righteousness remaineth forever. Now he that ministereth seed to the sower, both minister bread for your food and multiply your seed sown and increase the fruits of your righteousness, being enriched in everything to all bountifulness, which causes through us thanksgiving to God." 2 Cor. 9: 6-11. This passage not only shows God's blessings upon his children, but his special blessings upon those who properly and bountifully give of this prosperity to his cause, enabling them to even give more.

Thus he shows that a man will not starve an account of his liberality. We ask now, as we did concerning Israel, is it too much for God to say to us now, "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God has prospered him?" 1 Cor. 16: 1-2. Who are to give? Every one. There is no exception. Paul so instructed other churches. "As I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye." He says to the Corinthians he desires not that they should be burdened and others eased in this matter of giving. 2 Cor. 8: 13. In helping the poor saints of Judea the disciples of Antioch, "every man according to his ability determined to send relief." Acts 11: 29. How much should one give? "As God has prospered him." According to his ability." Thus some can give much, others not so much, and some but little; yet all can give. God accepts it not according to the amount. "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath and not according to that he hath not." 2 Cor. 8: 12. It is argued by those who have studied the subject most and understand it best, that one should give at least a tenth of what he makes. The Jew under the shadow of good things to come gave his tithes and the Christian under the full blaze of gospel light should equal the Jew. If so, he would give even more than a tenth. When give? "Upon the first day of the week." This is regular and systematic. God, who controls the universe and makes laws for the regulations of all creation, can give sufficient instruction for the collection and management of the finances of a congregation. If every congregation and each member would follow God's simple but systematic directions there would be money in the treasury for gospel purposes and hundreds contributed where there are now but few. Many a congregation, that should give from three to four hundred dollars a year, give about fifty or one hundred and rest satisfied in the bosom of an easy conscience. Many individuals, who should give even hundreds a year, think they are liberal in giving ten or twenty dollars.

We have only mentioned a few of the numerous passages in the New Testament on this subject, but let us sum up. All disciples—every one—according to ability, as God prospers, at least, as much as a Jew, for the support of the poor and spread of the gospel, should give. The Jew robbed God in keeping back tithes and offerings. How many now therefore rob God by not giving fully and freely according to his directions? In nearly every congregation a few members give all that is given. Those who do not help in this matter as they are able, are, by the God of heaven, said to rob him. Many, it is feared, have thus robbed God, and are still doing so. Many congregations, we think, are not more prosperous spiritually, because of this sin. They have Lord's day meeting, i. e., some of their members do. Sometimes they have preaching when more turn out. Some are zealous about some things. But the contribution is seriously neglected, sometimes not attended to, and when it is, only a few contribute. Not much, or nothing, is done by them toward feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, entertaining strangers, educating the orphans, helping widows and sounding out the truth. Some houses of worship, given congregations by their ancestors, have not had a new nail driven in them, or a paint brush on them for a quarter of a century, and some have gone to ruin. There are some congregations that have more than an average attendance on Lord's day and the general deportment of their members is not below the ordinary standard, yet do not succeed and are troubled to know the cause. Frequently it is this sin of robbing God. Can we do as we please about this matter? Go by our inclinations and selfishness instead of the word of God? Have not all, rich and poor, a part and an interest in this duty and in the saying of Jesus, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Let us examine ourselves by the book and see if we are guilty. It is sin and all sin renders him who commits it and lives in it unfit for heaven. God will curse with a curse the one who robs him.

A Safeguard.

The fatal rapidity with which slight Colds and Coughs frequently develop into the gravest maladies of the throat and lungs, is a consideration which should impel every prudent person to keep at hand, as a household remedy, a bottle of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

Nothing else gives such immediate relief and works so sure a cure in all affections of this class. That eminent physician, Prof. F. Sweetzer, of the Maine Medical School, Brunswick, Me., says:—

"Medical science has produced no other any-dye expectorant so good as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is invaluable for diseases of the throat and lungs."

The same opinion is expressed by the well-known Dr. L. J. Addison, of Chicago, Ill., who says:—

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral

Is not a new claimant for popular confidence, but a medicine which is to-day saving the lives of the third generation who have come into being since it was first offered to the public.

There is not a household in which this invaluable remedy has once been introduced where its use has ever been abandoned, and there is not a person who has ever given it a proper trial for any throat or lung disease susceptible of cure, who has not been made well by it.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has, in numberless instances, cured obstinate cases of chronic Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and even acute Pneumonia, and has saved many patients in the earlier stages of Pulmonary Consumption. It is a medicine that only requires to be taken in small doses, is pleasant to the taste, and is needed in every house where there are children, as there is nothing so good as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL for treatment of Croup and Whooping Cough.

These are all plain facts, which can be verified by anybody, and should be remembered by everybody.

CRITICAL SUNDRIES.

WHEN WAS FEET-WASHING INSTITUTED?

In my first article showing the continued obligation of disciples to wash one another's feet, I wrote that the service was instituted by the Savior "on the last evening before his crucifixion." As the correctness of this statement seems to be doubted, I will submit to the readers of the Advocate some of the reasons that point plainly to that conclusion. Questions of fact, chronological or otherwise, should be scripturally and accurately settled, therefore to the law and testimony in the case:

1. The supper in connection with which the service was instituted was the one at which the disciples anxiously questioned Jesus concerning the betrayer, and at which he was pointed out. "He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me." John 13: 18. Notice, reader, this was spoken by the Savior immediately after he had washed the disciple's feet. And the disciples "looked one upon another, doubting of whom he spake." Verse 22. Now these things, by all the other evangelists, are inseparably connected with the passover supper, the last that Jesus partook of with his disciples on earth. Read all the parallel passages in Matt. 26: 23-29 inclusive; Mark 14: 12-25; Luke 22: 21-23, and see, without a doubt, that the institution of foot-washing and these sayings of Jesus were co-etaneous events.

2. From the supper at which the disciple's feet were washed, Judas went out immediately, and it was night. See John 13: 30. But all the other writers substantially say the very same thing; (see Matt. 26: 47; Mark 14: 43; Luke 22: 47;) all showing plainly that Judas, who was at first with them at the supper, at length is absent for awhile on his traitorous mission, and then returns heading a military band for the apprehension of the Son of God. Hence the supper of John 13: 2, in connection with which the disciple's feet were washed, was the paschal supper described by all the other evangelists.

3. The supper of John 13: 2, was on the night of Peter's thrice denial, before the cock's crowing that he knew the Savior; (see 38th verse;) yet all the evangelists immediately connect that suggestive event with the last passover supper, (Matt. 26: 34; Mark 14: 30; Luke 22: 34,) which are exactly parallel with John 13: 38. Look a little further: "When the morning had come—the morning following the night on which all these things occurred—all the chief priests and elders of the people took counsel against Jesus to put him to death." Matt. 27: 1; Mark 15: 1. This tragic event was accomplished at the ninth hour, beginning at the sixth. Now from the sixth hour (noon, or 12 o'clock) there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour—3 o'clock, p. m. Matt. 27: 45-46. And about the ninth hour, or three o'clock in the morning, Jesus having cried with a loud voice to our heavenly Father, the only helper of human weakness, and having tasted the last and bitterest dreg in the cup of suffering, gave up his spirit to God, and himself an offering without spot, for the sin of the world. The evening, then, of the supper at which he washed the disciple's feet was the last evening before the one of his suffering, and hence I wrote correctly.

My statement in number 2, that it was at the end of the supper, was a liberal quotation of the King James' text, which I corrected in number 3, substituting revised text, "during the supper." Absolute accuracy in point of chronology probably demands that we say at the beginning of the passover, for John says, "Before the feast, that is, before the passover had been eaten." This understanding is required by the original of "supper being ended"—deipnou genomenou, (deipnou genomenou.) The law adopted by critics is that when this participle is connected with a noun denoting a definite period of time it signifies that the period indicated by the noun is only begun, not ended. A number of passages can be cited in which it would be absurd to render "genomenou" "being ended" as the authorized version has done in its connection with deipnou, a supper. See Matt. 28: 1; Acts 16: 35: "When it was day the magistrates sent the sergeants, saying, Let these men (Paul and Silas whom they had scourged and imprisoned) go." "When it was day," not when the day had ended. So supper, or supper-time, having come, not "being ended." Jesus knowing that his hour to suffer and to depart out of this world had come, girded himself with a towel and washed his disciple's feet.

After resuming his seat at the table, (verse 12,) and binding his example upon them, he assures them that the betrayer is dipping in the dish—"eating bread with him," and having given him sop, says to him, "That thou doest, do quickly." That is, whatever you are determined to do, Judas, do quickly. No man at the table understood these words to Judas, although in the fuller revelation given to us, their meaning is obvious. They thought that in a previous interview Jesus had told him to buy "those things that they had need of for the feast, or that he should give something to the poor." Verse 29. Notice, the reference is to a historic and conjectural fact in the distant past touching the great feast to which they had all gathered:—"Jesus said, or had said." That is, they supposed that Jesus at some past time had given Judas some instruction concerning things necessary for the great passover festival. But "Jesus knowing from the beginning who it was that should betray him," only meant as we have intimated that the betrayer's time to act, and his own hour to suffer, had come. This verse, therefore, instead of being evidence that they were at a local meal in Bethany, as Bro. Abernathy strangely conjectured, shows conclusively that they were in Jerusalem at the great national supper to which all the tribes of Israel annually went up! For the law of the Lord and the ways of Zion we must go to Jerusalem, not to Bethany! Henceforth whoever may indulge in mere assertion against the array of facts here submitted touching the origin and obligation of the service considered, shall have the field without competition. If we know our Lord's commands, happy are we if we do them! But if we are contentious and obey not the truth, "indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish," shall be visited upon us.

Bro. L. C. Wells' article in Advocate of September 24, is a very strong leader in the direction of the "true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, not man." He enters a part of the vineyard almost wholly uncultivated, yet the Macedonian cry has been long and loud. The proclaimers of "one baptism" can be counted by thousands, but how many defenders of the equally essential truth, "one body," "one church," can be found? One faith has been sounded in the ears of every audience that has heard our distinctive plea, yet how few religious communities have heard and understood the "wide-spreading" freedom of "one flock," with one shepherd caring for them all!

Alas! the local and sectarian inclosures devised by man, through the corruption of ignorance and party spirit, have veiled the hearts of the people so that they can not see Jerusalem from above, the free mother of us all. The figment of a local faith would not be more absurd than that of "local church membership," yet the latter in many communities claiming to be Christianized is the shibboleth of fellowship, the only transport at the fords of Jordan! More than a year ago we began a treatise on the main ground occupied by the writer named, but the environments of poverty around a large family have prevented its completion. Let those who know the truth take counsel together and continue to agitate the issues involved till an unanswerable plea for the "one body" shall be placed before the people. To do this work will require talent, time and money. The light work of fugitive communications, which too often appear in our religious weeklies, may be done frequently without compensation, but not the painstaking and heavy criticism evolving truth to which the foes may be "They of a man's own household." Such work of no greater length than the article of Bro. Wells', which is not even a tithe of the matter essential to the full development of the questions treated, cannot often be done gratis by a writer with a family in ordinary poverty. Properly warning, then, all personal interests, it should be the aim of every believer to seek to do the largest and best work that can be done for the unity and completeness of all, that the whole church may be "without spot or wrinkle." Why is it that the disciples will sacrifice liberally to get aliens into a church, and do so little for the perfection and salvation of those within? Is not a blind life within the kingdom as dangerous as the condition of alienation without? By the apostle Peter the former is declared to be worse than the latter; (2 Peter 1: 9, and 2: 20;) yet for two weeks' preaching whereof the pivot on which all interest turns is translation or initiation into the kingdom—a very imperfect imitation of Philip to the Ethiopian officer, who knew only Moses and the prophets,—to a people already familiar with the fulfillment of prophecy, they will cheerfully give fifty or sixty dollars, and rob God of the "tithes" that are required in his house! enabling the evangelist to write a large work done in receiving members by "primitive obedience," "by relation," "by letter," "by discovery," and by—, turning the church upside down.

Have they forgotten Paul's two whole years at Rome; both "preaching the kingdom of God and teaching those things that concern the Lord Jesus Christ?" and the wise master builder at Corinth, for the space of three years warning every one and teaching every one both publicly and from house to house, do we imitate him? Alas! a new King has risen that knows not Joseph. The conquest on which he is determined is Proselytism of which the prolific nursery is the "local church" versus the kingdom of God! Let us call a halt to dissipation with talent and money. We are not our own, nor is our money, and we may not dissipate with impunity. We cannot afford enormous outlays for the mere alphabet of faith, while its perfection and power in the believer are either entirely unknown or treated as secondary and subordinate in importance. The greater contains the lesser, but not the less the greater, therefore seek first, and make the greater sacrifice for, the greater, the "kingdom of God and his righteousness," making every one perfect in the sight of God, "and declaring the mystery of our fellowship in 'one body'—one church—and our partnership in the one hope in Christ by the gospel." Thus, by the separate and holy life of faith, the "salt and light" of the world, and not by special and controversial pleading, God's purpose is to multiply believers, who are such as "see the kingdom," and grow up in him a "holy temple in the Lord."

For the first two copies of the Firm Foundation, a militant monthly issuing from Austin, Texas, my thanks are due the editor, Bro. McGary. If we were able we would like to continue its visits, although its exaction of a perfect knowledge of the "form of doctrine" in all its variable import before "obedience to the faith," is, in our judgment, a centrifugal tendency only to be deprecated. Christ crucified, the only foundation laid in Zion, has compassion on our comparatively different and insufficient degrees of knowledge.

JASPER ARMSTRONG.

NOTES FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

J. A. Harding writes: "My program is changed. Am now in a meeting in Detroit. My address till further notice is 144 Howard Street, Detroit, Mich."

H. J. Spivy, Good Springs, Giles County, Tenn., November 24, writes: "For the information of brethren and friends, I wish to say through the Gospel Advocate, that my address is Good Springs, Giles County, Tenn. There is quite an interesting congregation of disciples at this place. Have a good Lord's day school, all in good working order."

T. C. Little, Fayetteville, Tenn., November 22, writes: "J. C. McQuiddy and wife spent a day or so in Fayetteville this week. Bro. McQuiddy was working for the Guide, and met with success. Sister McQuiddy was welcomed by her many friends, who were glad to see the frolicksome school girl of yore had ripened into a dignified and cultured lady."

W. B. Wright, Coopertown, Tenn., November 22, writes: "We commenced a meeting with my home church the first Lord's day in this month, but was taken very sick Sunday night, and have not been able to preach any more up to this writing. Bro. F. H. Davis carried on the meeting with large audiences and good attention, until Thursday night, and closed with two additions; one from the Baptists, and one from the world."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Cholera ravages in Paris and France seem to have somewhat abated in the last few days.

In Wise County, Virginia, 150 deaths have occurred from a disease which the physicians call typhoid dysentery.

Gen. Frank Cheatham's friends are urging his claims for the Post-mastership at Nashville, which pays $4,000 per annum.

John McCullough, the most popular American tragedian, is still unable to appear on the stage, on account of mental weakness. His flight is pitiable in the extreme.

The negroes in Georgia return property to the value of $8,021,525. Of this sum $2,262,185 is invested in 756,703 acres of land, $1,921,801 in city property, and $242,222 in plantation and mechanical tools.

A son of Mr. R. T. Wilson, formerly of East Tennessee, has just married a daughter of one of the wealthy Astor brothers, in New York. Southerners have resolved to convert the northerners by marrying them.

A strong feeling exists among all classes to have a constitutional amendment, whereby the people may vote directly for President and Vice-President. In this way the popular majority will count for something. Under the present system of voting for electors, the will of the masses has not always been respected.

Ohio alone remains now as an October State, and it is to be hoped a law will soon be passed moving it to the regular November election period. West Virginia at the late October election voted on a constitutional amendment submitted changing the time of the general State election to the same day of the Presidential election. Gov. Jackson has just issued a proclamation declaring the amendment carried.

John Bush, a negro, who killed Miss Annie Vattreter, near Lexington, Ky., several years ago, is perhaps, the most thoroughly tried man in the United States, being placed on trial by jury four times, four times by the Court of Appeals, once by United States Circuit Court, once by United States Supreme Court; yet he paid the extreme penalty last Friday by being hanged in the jail yard at Lexington.

Judge Barber, of Cleveland, Ohio, this week annulled the sensational marriage between the daughter of a wealthy citizen of Waterford, W. Va., and John Ash, the negro coachman of the young lady's father, on the ground that undue influence had been exerted over the lady. Under the laws of Ohio intermarriage between the races is not forbidden. The man had been a servant in the family for twelve years.

The Plenary Council of the Catholic Church, now sitting at Baltimore, refuses to attempt to liquidate the $4,000,000 debt of the creditors of Archbishop Purcell, claiming that it is a local matter. Mr. Purcell (it will be remembered) was the learned prelate who presented the claims of his church in debate with Alexander Campbell. His Diocese has been struggling for years under a heavy load of indebtedness.

The Legislature of Illinois is so closely divided between Democrats and Republicans that the majority of either side hangs on the decision of the United States Court in the case of the Sixth (Chicago) State District, where a republican was first claimed to have been elected, and afterwards a Democrat. The police returns elect the Republican. The County Court refuses to produce the ballot-box. On one man's vote a United States Senatorship depends. Too close to make Senator John Logan feel happy.

The three notorious Younger boys are now serving a life sentence in the penitentiary at Stillwater, Minn. Mrs. Dr. Twyman, an aunt of the boys, recently visited, and relates that Cole, the oldest, is superintendent of a gang of mechanics, and preaches to the convicts; Jim, the next, is an invalid, and studying medicine; Bob, the youngest, is book-keeper for the Warden, having risen to that position by faithfulness. These men were second only to the James boys in daring deeds of crime.

Congressman J. Randolph Tucker, Democrat from Tenth Virginia District, has recently been appointed guardian of the President Garfield's minor children, by special request of Mrs. Garfield, who alluded to the kindly relations existing between her husband and Mr. Tucker.

Prominent representatives of the race in Louisiana say that the negro need have no fear from Cleveland's election. Gov. Pinchback says he was sorry Blaine was defeated on personal grounds, but that a better feeling will prevail on account of Cleveland's election, than would result from ten thousand Civil Rights Bill. The New York Sun editorially says: "Before the close of Mr. Cleveland's term of office the South will doubtless be split into several parts, and the blacks will separate with the different factions, as each of the latter will contend lustily for the despised colored vote. This process of breaking up cannot be confined to sectional limits. It will cross over the Mason and Dixon's line, and infect the politics of the North, where disaffection has struck into the vitals of both Democrats and Republican. Parties may not be constructed, but they are likely to be recognized, and a new departure is by no means impossible."

The contract convict labor system was abolished last winter by the Legislature of Ohio, and great fears were entertained by interested parties that ill result would follow; but from the recent report submitted to Gov. Hoadly, it appears that all such fears were groundless. Leasing out convicts bears the impress of time, yet that does not make it honored. Under the immediate control of the State authorities there has been a vast improvement. The receipts for the past year were $239,934.99; expenses, $229,807.04; balance, $10,127.95. The stripes have been abolished, also the old lock-step, and the men are in three grades, according to behavior. Reform is apparent on all sides. The Warden is required by law to place to the credit of each man ten per cent of his earnings, first grade men to rate at eighty cents per day; second grade, sixty cents; third grade, forty cents. $9,000 are now to the credit of the convicts. This binds them near to their families to whom they can return when their term expires. No discipline has been abrogated, and all must comply with the rules to gain the benefits.

FOREIGN.

Gladstone will not seek a re-election to the New Parliament, but will accept a peerage after the final passage of the Franchise Bill.

Affairs in Paris are critical. The Socialists have held the streets for several days, despite the efforts of police to scatter them. At meetings of the workingmen the massacre and robbery of the rich is advocated.

Gen. Gordon is still alive, and has captured a Krupp gun from the rebels. The Mahdi's followers are deserting to Gordon. Advice from Dongola state that Gen. Wolsely is advancing rapidly, and will soon reach Gordon, unless his expedition is checked by the small-pox, which is raging both among the English and Egyptians.

In the Coleridge-Adams case the jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff, which the Judge overruled, whereupon Cullin, Liberal, in the House of Commons, called attention to the extraordinary rulings of Judge Manisty, making the high functions of a jurymen "a mock, a delusion, and a snare."

Lord Chief-Justice Coleridge, of England, is now in an unenviable light before the world in a libel suit brought by F. M. Adams, a young barrister, against Bernard Coleridge, son of the Justice, on account of a letter written by the latter, endeavoring thereby to break an engagement between the barrister and his sister, Miss Mary Mildred Coleridge. Lord Coleridge objected to the young man on account of his poverty, and has treated his daughter harshly. But she seems to have read Cicero's opinion, and prefers "a man without money, rather than money without a man."

Henry M. Stanley, the great explorer, spoke in a clear and cogent style at the Berlin Congo River Conference, presenting the claims of the United States. By this conference fifteen of the principal governments of the world have agreed to open this vast region to free trade and mutually protect one another in their mutual competitions. All parties bind themselves to endeavor to suppress slavery, and to promote all institutions which tend to the civilization of the natives. It is really beautiful to see these Christian nations agreeing to feast so lovingly together on this African game.

NOTES FROM ORR CORRESPONDENTS.

F. B. Srygley, Lebanon, Tenn., November 22, writes: "On the first Lord's day night in November, I had an appointment at a school-house near Plunkett's Creek, Baptist church; but when I got there I found the church opened, and the Baptist brethren insisted on my preaching in their house, and we thankfully accepted it. I preached of nights till Friday night, making six discourses. We had fine crowds and good attention, but no additions. I invited any one at any time during the meeting to correct me, either publicly or privately, on anything which I might present contrary to the teaching of the word, but there was no correction made. On Thursday night before preaching, the preacher of the neighborhood asked me to say to the people that he would begin there Saturday night and reply to some things which I had said, and would then preach some sermons on the Baptist doctrine. I insisted that he should say what he wanted to say in reply to what I had said, while I was present, so that I might be benefitted, but he refused. I asked him then to wait till Monday night, and I would fill what appointments I had out, and would return and hear him; but he said he could not postpone the matter. As matters then stood, I had to leave him, or disappoint my next meeting; so I chose the former, and left him in his glory. I have wondered since what he had been preaching there lately that made it so necessary to preach some sermons on the Baptist doctrine. I state here, as I told him, that I never, during that meeting, mentioned the Baptist church, because it is not mentioned in the Bible. I tried to preach just what was in the Bible. I told him, furthermore, if he would find the Baptist church in the Bible, with the law of induction, and one promise made to it, I would become a member of it, and help him hold it up. Our brethren have never preached in that neighborhood, save, perhaps, a few discourses soon after the war. There are a great many willing to hear the truth."

Robert Kirby, Bucksville, Cumberland county, Ky., November 20, writes: "On Saturday night before the third Lord's day in November, I began a meeting at Republican, Adair county, Ky., which lasted three days. The result was, two added to the church by confession and baptism. This congregation has been organized about forty years. It has dwindled down until it has but few members. But they that are there, are good, lively members. The church was much revived. I wish to say to the brethren and sisters at Livingston, if they wish me to hold them a meeting, commencing on Saturday before the fourth Lord's day in December, they can address me at Bucksville, Cumberland county, Ky., as I expect my time will be filled up after that date."

OWEN'S STATION SCHOOL.

The spring term of our school opens January 12, 1885. We are prepared to accommodate with every comfort of home ten or twelve girls. The school is emphatically a home school, and every pupil soon feels that she is at home. The advantages for pursuing the different branches of a useful and ornamental education are of the best order. Miss Jennie Scobey, late of Haynes' Institute, Murfreesboro, an accomplished and successful teacher of modern languages and ornamental branches, has become a member of the corps of teachers. Nothing is lacking toward giving the best facilities. The quiet location, healthful situation, and excellent moral and religious surroundings especially commend the school to those desiring to educate their daughter in something more than vain display. Rates very low.—[W. Lipscomb, Brentwood, Tenn.]

Boast not thyself of to-morrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth.

THE STORY OF A WEEK.

Little battles thou has won,
Little masteries achieved,
Little wants with care relieved,
Little words in love expressed,
Little wrongs at once confessed,
Little favors kindly done,
Little tolls thou didst not shun,
Little graces meekly worn,
Little slights with patience borne—
These shall crown thy pillowed head,
Holy light upon thee shed.

THE AMERICAN HOLLY.

Among the evergreen trees there are few which make a more beautiful appearance than the holly; its dark green leaves and its symmetrical form make it a beautiful and conspicuous object anywhere; but when mingled with other trees, whether evergreen or deciduous, it is so unlike any other tree, especially in the winter, that it is both a marked and a beautiful tree. While no collection should be considered complete without it, it is very rarely found, even in extensive ornamental grounds. One would suppose that the beautiful dark berries which adorn it for a period so long, would alone be sufficient to secure its presence in the smallest ornamental grounds.

The fact that this tree is more difficult to transplant than a deciduous tree has probably prevented many from introducing it into their grounds; in fact, the idea is quite prevalent that it is a tree that cannot be transplanted successfully. This is a mistake. Though not as likely to live as many other trees, it can be transplanted with nearly as good success as any other evergreens, especially if removed when small. Like other evergreen trees, it will not bear transplanting if the roots are exposed to the sun; and, to be reasonably sure of success in transplanting, a ball of earth should be taken up with the roots; in this way we have always succeeded.

One drawback for this tree is, it is a slow grower after being transplanted, requiring some years to grow to full size; but there is a bright side even here, because it makes a very beautiful shrub before it becomes a tree.

A strong rocky soil is best for this tree, and it seems to grow best in shelter of other trees, although it is perfectly hardy, but it is usually found growing among other trees, and it looks much more beautiful when brought in contrast with them. As a Christmas tree, it is eagerly sought for, and is being destroyed rapidly for this purpose, wherever found growing naturally within reasonable distances from the cities. Unless some effort is made to cultivate the holly, it will be but a few years before it will cease to grow in the vicinity of all large cities.

This tree is also sought for because of its beautiful close-grained wood, and is used in the manufacture of many small toys, and for a variety of ornamental work, especially such as are improved by ornamental painting.—Mass. Ploughman.

EACH A PRIME MINISTER.

When Cardinal Dubois, the Prime Minister of France, summoned the most famous surgeon of his day to his palace, to perform on that prelate's person a serious surgical operation, he said: "You must not expect to treat me in the same rough manner you do the miserable wretches in the hospital." "My lord, every one of those miserable wretches, as your eminence is pleased to term them, is a prime minister in my eyes." His mission was to heal, and the suffering of his humblest patient made the person of the sufferer sacred in his sight. Humanity, in his eyes, was exalted above the accidents of poverty or rank, and when its voice appealed to him for help he answered as promptly the prayer of the pauper as the command of the king. That surgeon comprehended the dignity and responsibility of his vocation.

It was man's misery that brought the Savior from the skies. He came not to build up an earthly kingdom, but to seek and save the lost. His ear was never closed against the cry of sorrow. He was seldom the guest of the rich; but the sufferer was drawn to him by the resistless power of sympathy and love. Beggars cried out from the wayside, and he opened their eyes, or bid them take up their beds and walk; the leper knelt at his feet, and, while others recoiled with horror, his words were full of pity as he said, "Be thou clean." A trembling woman laid her fingers on the hem of his garment, and Divine mercy thrilled to the touch of faith, and she was healed that moment of her plague. It is not the voice of eloquence, nor the invitation of wealth, nor the influence of position, that now attracts Christ to the hearts and homes of men; but the prayer of penitence will ever move his heart, and the cry of the humblest saint have power with the Son of God.

The servant should be like his Lord. The impelling power with every preacher should be love for the souls of men. His mission, like that of his Master, is to heal and save. The most wretched sinner should be a "prime minister" in his sight, for each one is the heir of immortality, and one day may wear a crown that will outshine the richest diadem that ever rested on the brow of royalty. To gain their pardon, the Savior shed his blood; to seal their deliverance from sin, the Holy Spirit sheds its influence over every penitent heart; and to guard their footsteps along the dangerous paths of life, angels are commissioned directly from the throne of God. Man's outward condition is but the accident of life; his soul makes up his true inheritance, and its salvation will be the chief concern of every man of God. It may be a little child that a mother brings to the altar, but Christ has said, "Suffer the little ones to come." It may be the heathen in his blindness who holds out his hands for help; but his cry is as welcome to the Saviour as was that of Blind Bartimeus. It may be the felon, looking up to heaven through his prison-bars; but Christ answered the prayer of the dying thief. The man who leads that little child to the Savior, who points the fettered convict to the cross, who brings the most miserable tramp to the mercy-seat, or lifts from the humblest heart its load of pain, has performed a work that the archangels would delight to share.

All must be saved alike. The surgeon must probe as deeply the wounds of the Prime Minister as those of the "miserable wretches in the hospital." His knife must be as keen and his hand as firm when he cuts off the ulcerous limbs of the Cardinal as when he employs their skill on the persons of plebeians and beggars.—Texas Advocate.

STOLEN BY A MONKEY.

Early one fine morning in the year 1600 there was a great stir and bustle going on in a quiet old English country-house in one of the lonelier parts of Lincolnshire. Doors were banging, windows opening and shutting, hurrying feet trampling along the passages, men and women running to and fro, shouting and screaming. The whole house seemed to be in an uproar.

Any stranger who had happened to pass that way would probably have been not a little puzzled to make out what all this disturbance was about; and he would have wondered still more to see the servants throwing down featherbeds, pillows, cushions, and what not, all around the outside of the house. But he would soon have noticed that all eyes were turned upward to the roof, and one glance in that direction would have told him the whole story at once.

In and out of the projecting cornices and carved spouts and peaked gable-ends of the quaint old mansion was flitting, with wonderful agility, a huge, dark figure, (which looked like a short, broad-shouldered man, with a very big head,) carrying something white under one of its long arms. When it stood still for a moment this strange shape was seen to be a large black monkey, and the white bundle that it carried was nothing else than the baby of the house!

"O my Nolly! my poor little Nolly!" wailed the terrified mother, looking upward, with clasped hands.

"Fear nothing, madam," said a grave old serving-man, who was standing beside her. "'Tis the way of these creatures to be wondrous careful of children, as I myself, with mine own eyes, have seen many a time and oft in the lands where they dwell. Do but see how carefully he handles young master!"

"Thee go oop, Will, and drive the beast down," said a stout farm-lad to his companion. "Thee can climb wi' onny man in the parish. If I were half as lisson (supple) as thee, I'd do't myself."

"Let be, Giles," struck in the old servant. "Ye will do naught that way but scare the creature, and then he may like as not let the child fall. There is nothing to be done but just to let him be."

The strangest part of the affair was, that while every one else was so terrified at the baby's danger, the baby itself seemed rather to enjoy it than otherwise. Instead of struggling and screaming, it could be seen laughing gleefully and clapping its tiny hands; and Giles might well mutter, with a shake of his big head, "They both loike the game so, there be no tellin' when they'll ha' done!"

But the child's father, a grave-looking man, with a firm mouth, and keen, dark eye, stepped forward suddenly, as if a new thought had struck him, and said a few words to one of the servants, while keeping his eye fixed upon the monkey, which had seated itself between two of the chimneys, and was rocking the baby in its huge arms like a nurse. The servant ran into the house and returned with a bag of fine sugar, which he emptied upon the grass just below the monkey's perch.

Instantly the beast began to grimace and chatter excitedly, and then down he came, (every one holding his breath and keeping quite still as he did so,) and laying the child gently on the grass, ran straight to the sugar. The moment his back was turned, Will sprang nimbly forward, and, catching up the baby, carried it to its mother, amid a cheer from the lookers-on that made the air ring.

Who was this boy? How did his after life change the destiny of England?—Youth's Companion.

SOMETHING WORTH HAVING.

She was a poor old Scotchwoman living in the wilds of Canada. Few, indeed, were her worldly possessions, scant her list of creature-comforts; but one blessing had fallen to her lot—one gift the kind All-Father had granted her, and, like a ray of perpetual light and glory, it filled her whole existence with radiance; this was a spirit of sweet contentment, which she carried with her throughout her long earthly pilgrimage. A rosy Scotch lassie was wont to tell of various tea drinkings with this good dame, and the lessons learned thereat; but what impressed her most was a peculiar blessing which Mrs. McGowan pronounced over her simple meal, which boasted often nothing save the time-honored "parritch," or, at its best estate, a "sip o' tea" and a bannock, or a few slices of bread spread very scantily indeed with butter. This singular grace made such an impression upon our own young mind that we transcribe it for the benefit of others:

"Some ha'e meat, but canna eat;
Some can eat, but ha'e no meat.
But we ha'e meat, an' we can eat.
The Lord be thankit."

Is not that unique? How often has this quaint blessing arisen like a rebuking spirit, as it were, when we have been tempted to complain of the food set before us, or of the plan in life "marked out" for us against our will. How often have we repeated it to others afflicted with a like discontent. Ah! if the same sweet patience which beautified this lowly life could but enter every heart! And shall we not learn faithfully and conscientiously to perform every duty, to bear in quiet submission every burden, the loving All-Father may see fit to lay upon our shoulders; then, with a calm trust in His watchful care, we, too, may be blessed with a spirit of contentment which will manifest itself in our daily lives to such an extent that all who come in contact with us will feel their beneficent influences.

How many persons have been helped and strengthened by this one good Scotchwoman, whose quaint piety left on all who knew her an impress for good. Let us remember, then, the old dame's grace, and let it be a reminder of the goodness of our Father, from whose hand alone all material as well as all spiritual blessings must come. So shall our hearts be filled with peace, and our lives with good works. So shall we have a spirit of sweet contentment—something worth having, is it not, dear friends?—Ruth.

Love never exhausts itself by giving. The more we love others and seek to do them good, the more power and good we have to give them. The more we love, the larger our hearts become.

A Prominent Farmer Writes.

ROBERT STATION, Jones county, Ga., June 20th, 1891.—By the recommendation of Rev. C. C. Davis, I used Dr. Mosley's Lemon Elixir for indigestion, debility and nervous prostration, having been a great sufferer for years and tried all known remedies for these diseases, all of which failed. Five bottles of Lemon Elixir made a new man of me, and restored my strength and energy so that I can attend to my farm with all ease and comfort. Refer any one to me.

WILLIAM B. EMERSON.

A CARD.

From a number of St. Louis' prominent citizens as to the merits of Dr. Mosley's Lemon Elixir, the following named gentlemen pronounce it the only pleasant, thoroughly reliable and economical remedy they have ever used for the diseases for which it is recommended.

Judge John P. Hughes, 102 N. Fourth St.

Greatest Discovery Since 1492.

For coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, laryngitis, and consumption in its early stages, nothing equals Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." It is also a great blood-purifier and strength-restorer or tonic, and for liver complaint and costive conditions of the bowels it has no equal. Sold by druggists.

"May God bless you," said Rev. W. Martin, of Mechanicstown, Md. "Samaritan Nervine cured my fits." $1.50 at druggists.

Mason & Hamlin commenced a melodeon makers in 1854. They soon introduced the improved instrument known as the organ, or American organ, as it is termed in Europe. The new instrument proved so superior that it soon took the place of everything else in the country, being adapted and manufactured by all who had previously made melodeons, and many others who were induced to commence the business by the rapidly growing demand. Now about 80,000 American organs are made and sold yearly. Those by the Mason & Hamlin Company have always stood at the head, being acknowledged as the best. The same makers are now producing upright Pianofortes, which, they believe, are destined to rank as high as their organs have done.—Boston Traveller.

ORCHESTRAL PIANO-ORGAN.

A NEW INSTRUMENT. SWEET AND POWERFUL.

SIX OCTAVES.—Size: Height 4 feet 5 inches; Length, 4 feet 5 inches; Depth, 2 feet 3 inches.

THE CASE is a beautiful design of an upright Piano, exactly like illustration, manufactured of solid Cherry, highly polished to resemble Rosewood. THE MUSIC is produced upon TWELVE Octaves of Reeds, (aided by a double Right and Left Coupler), so constructed, tuned, and voiced as to imitate as nearly as possible a stringed instrument, operated by a full six Octave compass of Keys. This instrument excels all others in elasticity of touch, and the most rapid music can be played to perfection. It responds at once to the touch, combining an easy action with quickness of articulation. The tone is smooth, full, and rich, not harsh nor ear-piercing. It is the best accompaniment for VOCAL Music, being subordinate to the voice, instead of covering it up, and the tone is pure and flexible. The instrument can be played with perfect ease by ladies, as the pedals (a new invention for which application for patent has been made) are operated without exertion, in a perfectly natural position. Additional pedals adjustable for children are sent with every instrument. Knowing this Piano-Organ will please the public, we are determined to introduce it at once and make the following offer:

If you will remit $95.00 within one month from the date of this paper, by Draft, Post Office Money Order, or by Express prepaid, we will ship you this instrument, with adjustable stool and book, IMMEDIATELY ON RECEIPT OF ORDER. Test trial given and money returned if instrument is not just as represented and perfectly satisfactory. The regular price of this instrument, as compared with other manufacturers, could not be less than $145. Visit the factory and select, or order by mail and mention this paper. STOOL, BOOK AND MUSIC, INCLUDED, ONLY $95.00

We recommend this instrument because we know its merits, but we keep in stock and SHIP PROMPTLY on receipt of order, all our different styles of Organs for the Parlor, the Chapel, the Church or the Sabbath School. Pianos for $220 and upwards. Send for Illustrated Catalogue. Visitors are always welcome at our mammoth factory. Address or Call upon, Daniel F. Beatty Organ & Piano Co., Washington, New Jersey, U. ## Mars Hill College.

With pleasure we lay before our readers the following extracts from the Fifteenth Annual Announcement of Mars Hill College, an institution perpetually wielding a wonderful and wide-spread influence for truth, refinement and righteousness.—EDITORS.

POSITIONS PROCURED FOR OUR PUPILS.

We make a specialty of preparing pupils for

(1.) PREACHING; (2.) TEACHING; (3.) PREACHING and TEACHING.

Many educated here—among whom are successful lawyers, physicians, merchants, salesmen, mechanics, farmers, editors, authors, teachers and preachers—have so demeaned themselves, that the humility, fidelity, integrity, accuracy and ability of "Mars Hill students" have become proverbial. There is, consequently, such a demand for the services of our pupils, that we deem it perfectly safe to promise to procure pleasant, profitable and honorable positions for all who qualify themselves here for usefulness. Indeed, for several years we have been able to fill comparatively few of the positions tendered.

HEALTHFULNESS!

Mars Hill as a Health Resort.

Our school was founded in 1870. All the "doctor bills," for services rendered our pupils, from then till now, do not, we think, amount to twenty-five dollars—probably not to one dollar a year. Those who have come here pale and puny, from malarial districts, have, without an exception, we believe, returned to their homes enjoying health.

What "Watering Place," or "Health Resort," then, can justly claim more, as a health-preserver and health-restorer, than Mars Hill? Address,

T. B. LARIMORE, President.

To live by the day is the soul's truest peace,
To live by the day will blessing increase:
A man may be happy and useful alway,
If he cast care on Christ and live by the day.

Enough for each day is the evil it brings,
The morrow's big burdens but add to its strings;
For fancy increases the ill that we see,
But living by faith gives sweet liberty.

The past is with God, the future is his—
The present is yours, by faith make it bliss;
For he is most useful and happy alway
Who liveth by faith, and lives by the day.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BROS. LIPSCOMB & SEWELL: We have had a temperance lecturer here for about ten days, who used to be a Christian preacher, but now his whole time is given to this temperance work. He has a pledge which he requires all to sign who become helpers in the work, at the same time to put on a piece of red ribbon as evidence of this fact. His pledge embraces three propositions. First, that you will cease to use all intoxicating drinks yourself; second, that you will discountenance their use as beverages on the part of others; third, that you will favor prohibition in all proper ways. This about covers the ground, while it may not be the exact language. Now, I want to ask, if you think it is right for Christians to sign this pledge, and thereby connect themselves with an organization separate and distinct from the church? On yesterday (Lord's day) our preacher of the Christian church consented to go and preach at M. E. Church, having what they termed "a union service," this being the church where these temperance lectures are being held. By this movement the brethren were deprived of the communion service, as the emblems were not taken to the M. E. Church. So far, I have not joined this movement; and as I am being severely criticised for failing to do so, I want to know if I am doing right by withholding my influence.—[Samuel A. Wootton, Wellsville, Mo.]

The Church of God, through the word of God, is the grand arrangement God has made for the amelioration, the elevation, purification and redemption of sinful men. This plan is full, is complete in all its parts. There is no deficiency left for man to fill out by his wisdom. No man is allowed to add to, or diminish from the word of God by his wisdom, at the peril of his soul. See last chapter of Revelation. Again Paul says: "And whatsoever ye do, in word, or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." Col. To do things in the name of the Lord Jesus, is to do them by his authority, and to do them by his authority, is to do them by his word. There is no authority of Jesus beyond his word, outside of his word. Everything outside of the word of God, is by man's wisdom. Temperance organizations as such, are by the wisdom of man. God never established them. God requires all that temperance organizations require of his people, in his church, his kingdom, and it is the duty of every child of God to be temperate, and to labor for, and encourage temperance in all around him. But this he should do as a Christian, as a member of the church of God, in the name of the Lord, by the Lord's word, that the Lord and his cause may have the honor.

If the people of the world, who will not be Christians, have caught enough of the Spirit of the Christian religion to get up temperance organizations, and thus try to force temperance by human law, let them do it, and accomplish all they can in making men sober. But let Christians do their work for the accomplishment of this end through the church, and the word of the Lord. When Christians enter into human organizations as a means of doing something that God has required them to do as children, and by his word, through the church, the kingdom of God, they place the wisdom of men above the wisdom of God, and lay aside the wisdom of God, and attempt to do the Lord's work by man's wisdom. Thus as Christ said to the Jews, Christians now who do these things make void the word and authority of God by the traditions, by the wisdom of men. All such is dishonoring to God and his church. Preachers that turn aside from preaching the gospel of Christ, the word of God, as the only means God has ordained for the elevation of man, to human organizations make a wonderful condescension. When men are reached by the word of God, they are reached in heart, in principle, and are lifted above drunkenness, and every other mean thing, from principle. But if by human wisdom you tie up a man by force, so he cannot help himself, you make the man's heart no better, you make him no nearer a lover and servant of God than he was before. But when you make a man a Christian, you make him better in heart, in principle, in his whole life. This is the work for the church, for Christians to engage in. But again we say, if people of the world, who will not be Christians, wish to enter into human organizations to try to force other worldly and wicked people to be sober, let them do it. But for the Lord's sake let the Lord's people work by his wisdom, through his kingdom, and by his Holy word.

If men are to be made better by human organizations, there will be an immense number of them, before they can complete the work. They will need one to make men honest, one to make them truthful, one to keep them from profane swearing, and so ad infinitum. But when you make a man a Christian, lead him into the service of God, you at once make him sober, honest, truthful, turn him from swearing, and make him everything that is useful, pure and good. Let Christians therefore be faithful and loyal to their Heavenly King, and work by his word, and his kingdom, and they will thereby save themselves and others.

E. G. S.

BROS. LIPSCOMB & SEWELL: The Primitive Baptists here teach that a sinner receives pardon and becomes a new creature, before baptism by water; and in support of their doctrine quote Romans 6: 3-4, from which it does seem that a baptism precedes the burial. The trouble with me is over the tense of the verb—the "were" in the third verse, and the "are" in the fourth verse. Please explain, and oblige many readers of the ADVOCATE.—[T. F. Samuels, Tyro, Miss.]

The word "are," in fourth verse, should be "were," and then all the trouble would vanish. The Greek word rendered are buried is in past tense, and should be so rendered in English. In the revised version, and, in fact, in nearly all modern versions, it is so rendered. A correct reading of this one word as to tense kills every dodge that has ever been made on this passage. The efforts of the whole denominational world is to get rid of the force of this passage. The sprinklers want to make it appear that it is Spiritual baptism, to get rid of the idea of immersion, while the baptists want to make it Spiritual baptism to get rid of the idea that water baptism puts people into Christ. If sprinklers admit this to be water baptism, then it establishes immersion in spite of all they can do. But when Baptists admit it to be water baptism, then it ruins their theory of getting into Christ and obtaining pardon before baptism. It would be virtually giving up the whole ground of sprinkling and pouring for Pædobaptists to grant this passage to mean water baptism, while both the Pædoes and Baptists would have to give up the whole idea of getting religion, obtaining pardon outside of Christ, and before baptism. For if people obtain pardon before baptism, since this passage shows clearly that it is by baptism that people enter into Christ, they must obtain it outside of Christ. But other plain passages show that it is in Christ, not out of him, that we obtain pardon, as when Christ says in tenth of John, "I am the door: by me, if any enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture." No man by this has the promise of being saved till he shall enter in by the door, which is Christ. The passage in sixth of Romans shows that we are baptized into Christ, thus enter into him, and are then, and not till then in him, and have in full the above promise of Christ. Paul says of Christ, "In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins." First of Eph. and first of Col. Hence out of Christ no pardon. In Christ there is pardon. We enter into Christ by baptism. Therefore, all who claim pardon before baptism, claim it out of Christ. To yield therefore that the baptism mentioned in sixth of Romans is water baptism completely yields both the above theories, that is, affusion and getting religion. To give these up would take the life and soul of denominationalism. No wonder that they fight hard over it. But they will ultimately have to give it up. The late Revisers of the New Testament were nearly all Pædoes; but their version of the above passage breaks the backbone of sprinkling and pouring. These revisers were on the side of getting religion, pardon, entering into Christ, before baptism. But they kill that, not only by their rendering of this passage, but by their rendering the closing part of Matthew, putting it thus: "Baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." This is water baptism, without a doubt, for men were to perform it, and no man ever baptized another in the Spirit. And this is the same baptism as that in sixth of Romans. Surely these theories will die after while. E. G. S.

When in humility we take God's appointments and humbly walk in them, we do all that can be done for God and man. We thus do more than man can do alone, for God in this is with, and works with, in and through man. When man leaves off a part of God's provisions, God refuses to work with him. When he adds to these appointments, God does not work with him. It is only when man works out his own salvation through obeying God, with fear and trembling, that God works in him to will and do of his own good pleasure." The fear and trembling with which he works, is a fear lest he fail to know all of God's ways, a trembling lest he add to them his own devices. "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it; except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh in vain."

J. B. JONES AND THE CONVENTION MINUTES.

In another place in this issue is an article from Bro. J. B. Jones headed, "Judge Not, Applied to the Kentucky Convention Minutes." In this article he claims that I did last year's work injustice in comparing it with that of the year before; for he claims that much was reported in the minutes of the year before that he did not think necessary to include in his report as financial agent. He says:

"Truth requires that there be a confession that the comparison between $13,082.42 and the $4,997.39 is 'unjust to the writer, unjust to the Board and unjust to Bro. Harding.'"

In all this Bro. Jones strangely misunderstands me. I have not at any time thought or said that less real work was done last year than year before last; on the contrary I have expressly declared that I supposed as much was done last year as in the former year. The following quotations from the first article written by me in this controversy clearly show this:

"Bro. J. B. Jones, the financial agent of the K. C. M. C., is a most excellent man, and is highly esteemed for his ability as a minister of the word, but he is a failure as a writer of financial reports for the convention; he confines himself too closely to the business in hand, and is too neglectful of what R. Moffett sarcastically calls 'padding.' As proof of the truth of this assertion, and by way of illustration of it, attention is called to this fact, viz., that while the society has perhaps done as much during this last year as at any former period, Bro. Jones has succeeded in reporting only $3,948.76 received and distributed by the board; whereas former secretaries by a judicious use of 'padding' have been enabled to report from three to four times as much as this."

From this it is evident that I did no injustice to the board, or to Bro. Jones; I did not intimate that less was being done than formerly. I said in another place in the same article,—

"Let no one suppose that more work was really done, or that more money was really raised, for, I presume, such was not the case; the report was more scientific; that, I presume, is the true hypothesis upon which to account for the great falling off in the report of the present financial agent. Of his own report Bro. Jones said: 'It appears that it has cost $1,553.75 to collect $3,948.77 and to get pledged $2,030.85 annually for five years. If the work is considered for one year and measured by these results only, it does not justify the outlay.'"

Now the point that I made and that I claim is a good one, a point that he has not touched in his replies, is this; that though as much was done last year as at any former time perhaps, Bro. Jones himself testifies, "if the work is considered for one year and measured by these results only, it does not justify the outlay." He hopes, however, that much will be received from the pledges; but his hopes are utterly without foundation as the experience of the last ten years clearly demonstrate. The agents have been taking five year pledges during all this time (that is, since Bro. Briney's agency) and it has cost about as much to get money after it is pledged as it formerly did without any pledging. No more is raised now than before the five year plan was adopted.

But still the question arises how does it happen that former agents reported more than Bro. Jones? He replies that sums raised in the field by evangelists for home use, etc., were included in the reports. With the view of bringing out some facts about these sums I asked Bro. Jones a question which he declined to answer, viz., Does the missionary society report all the work done by the evangelists in their employ, or does it report only its proportional part? As a rule the society gives the evangelist only a partial support, churches that are able and willing furnish the rest: now what the people need to know is this, does the society report all work done by this evangelist in raising money, making converts, etc., thus robbing the churches of God of the honor and glory due them, or does it report only its part of his work. Bro. Jones declines to answer the question, and meekly suggests to me that I should "judge not." Well there is one thing that I do judge, and doubtless the judgment is just, if Bro. Jones and I were to give $400 each to the support of an evangelist, and I were to report all the work done by him without giving Bro. Jones proper credit for his part, thus obtaining greater glory for myself, I would be guilty of very mean stealing. There is not a man on the board of the Kentucky Missionary Convention who would as an individual do such a thing; but that the board repeatedly does it there is no room to doubt. In the case of Bro. Fowle, referred to in a former article, the churches did the work and the society reported it. If Bro. Jones will tell me how much the society (from its own treasury) gave to its eight evangelists last year, and how much the churches gave to these same evangelists, if he will report all they did then in making converts, building up churches, etc., we will publish his report, giving to each the honor due, and then we will see how the societies will come out. Bro. Jones says, "It is human to err, it is almost divine to acknowledge that we are in the wrong." Many would be thankful if there were divinity enough in the State board and its evangelists to make full reports and thereby give to the church the honor due them.

With regard to the Foreign Society I simply stated facts drawn from their own reports. W. T. Moore preached last year for a church of nearly five hundred members, in a meeting-house larger than any owned by the disciples in America, excepting three or four, and the American Foreign Missionary Society paid for preaching in that church last year $2,200.00. The society is constantly appealing to the churches all over the land, churches with memberships varying from 50 to 300 or 400 to give to this church of nearly 500 members. And they call this missionary work!!!

How does it happen that a church of one hundred members in this country is regarded as self-sustaining, but in England one of five hundred is a missionary station? They seem to require first class talent to preach to them; their notions are exalted enough about the kind of house they need; it is passing strange that it is necessary for an American society to send that church $2,200.00 per annum to pay its preachers!!!

And now a word to the readers of this article. If you have money to give for preaching the gospel, would it be better to give it to this society, to send to this great church, to help pay its pastor his large salary; or to give it to some faithful worker that you know, who is equally as good as this missionary, (?) and equally as diligent, but who receives nothing like as much for his work?

The missionary work ought to be done; and it can be done as it was eighteen hundred years ago.

J. A. HARDING.

AN ANSWER TO BRO. BRINEY'S CALL

The following extract is from J. B. Briney of the Apostolic Times.

In the "Kentucky Department of the GOSPEL ADVOCATE Bro. J. A. Harding, the editor, makes the following statement: "We have been fortunate in the time for our meeting at Murfreesboro, and they say our audiences are the largest that have been secured for many years. A free use of printer's ink in getting out cards with announcement of subject etc., has helped us in securing this end."

Now our good Bro. Harding is one of those who never do anything in religion for which they cannot point out a "thus saith the Lord." He is kindly asked to show a "thus saith the Lord" for his printer's ink plan of getting the gospel to the people of Murfreesboro. He is called upon to tell his readers which one of the apostles ever resorted to the plan of "getting out cards with announcement of subject, etc.," as a means of securing the largest audiences that had been secured for many years. If no apostle ever did this Bro. Harding has evidently fallen upon a "human plan" of preaching the gospel! He has departed from the "Lord's plan" in this matter, and has adopted a "plan of his own." True this departure may be innocent enough in itself, but Bro. Lipscomb says that one innocent departure may demand many hurtful ones; and since Bro. H. has begun to depart, we may soon see him floundering in the troubled sea of "latitudinarianism and semi-scepticism."

Yes, I did use printer's ink in getting out an audience at Murfreesboro, and it is true that none of the apostles ever did such a thing; they had no such ink; they drew assemblies to listen to them by making announcements in other ways: in using printer's ink I did not supplant or make void any commandment of God. Can Bro. Briney say the same concerning his practices? He knows well enough that in the Bible, God directs the elders to take oversight of the church, to feed the flock, to watch for souls as those that must give an account; but according to the way commonly approved to-day, "the pastor" (generally not an elder) does all of this work that is done at all. The modern pastor has supplanted God's eldership, making it of no effect. Bro. Briney favors the modern way and practices it. I would rather have a mill-stone hanged about my neck, and be cast into the sea, than thus to set aside the ordinance of God by a custom of mine.

The apostles assembled multitudes to hear them; they gave no instruction as to how they did it: we are commanded to preach and we are at liberty to use any means to assemble audiences that does not conflict with any of God's instructions or appointments. Had the heavenly Father given definite instructions concerning the way of assembling the people we would have been limited to that way. He has given the most definite and particular instructions concerning the oversight and edification of the churches; a plurality of elders are to be overseers, leaders and teachers in every congregation. In the first century an evangelist would labor with a church till an eldership was developed in it; he would then appoint them to this work, and leave the church under their care, and go to other fields. It is not so now; the pastorate has supplanted God's eldership.

I oppose a thing not simply because it is new, but only when it interferes with the Lord's way. When God directs a thing to be done, but gives no instructions or limitations as to how it shall be done, we are to exercise our best judgment and discretion in obeying the command.

Here is the only place in religion for exponents that I know of.

MARRIED.—At the Christian Church, Fayetteville, Tenn., on November 28, 1884, I united in marriage Bro. W. D. Medearis and Sister Lucie Allen. The groom is one of Fayetteville's most substantial and successful business men. The bride one of Shelbyville's pure and accomplished daughters. May they always appreciate their relationship to each other, the church, and the heavenly Father, while acting their part in life. —[T. C. Little, Fayetteville, Tenn.]

ST. JOHN AND CHRISTIAN VOTERS.

EDITORS OF GOSPEL ADVOCATE: Now that the election is over, and the people of the country have regained their nervous composure and settled down to their sober senses, it may be profitable to recur to some of the inconsistencies and anomalies which it has developed, for the purpose of pointing a moral, if not adorning a tale. So far as the result of the election is concerned—that is, the success of the Democratic ticket, we have no disposition to speak; for, as suggested by the ADVOCATE of last week, there is no one who will be affected in the least by it, except the army of tenacious office holders who will be turned out to make room for the horde of hungry office hunters who will be turned in. Politicians have been prating for months about the danger to Republican institutions of the success of this party or that; but the citizen who has been duped by such disgusting palaver, certainly neglected his early opportunities for acquiring even a modicum of common intelligence.

There is a phase of the election, however, that is fraught with genuine interest, and upon which the Christian sentiment of the country may take ample time to ponder. If we surmise correctly, it will have grievous occasion to ponder upon it. We mean the attitude of Christians and moral people generally in reference to the candidacy of Mr. St. John, of the Temperance party. We assume, for the purpose of this article, that it is right for Christians to vote and to participate in the political struggles that elevate men to office. We assume, likewise, that a vast majority, or, in fact, nearly all of the Christian men of the country did vote.

The important question then is, For whom did they vote, and in favor of what principles did they exert their influence? To express it in a vulgarism, there's the rub. Parties are worthless, except as they are the embodiment of principles—mere inanities, except as they are vivified by influences that tend either to the elevation or degradation of mankind. We suppose there is not a Christian or a moralist in the country who does not unceasingly pray that the principles of temperance may prevail; who does not implore God to stay the frightful ravages of the whisky fiend, or who does not exhaust himself, on all public occasions, upon the urgent necessity of driving from the land the grog-shop's infernal traffic of death.

That is all very well so far as it goes; but nobody is imbecile enough to suppose that prayers and exhortations are, of themselves, going to accomplish that glorious fruition—that they will smash the decanter or dam up the fiery stream that emanates from the distillery. No! The gods help those who help themselves. Now, Mr. St. John represented the identical principles that Christians have prayed might prevail. Did they vote for him? If not, why not? They voted for somebody—either Blaine, Cleveland, Butler or St. John. There is no question at all that St. John, so far as personal qualifications are concerned, was the most worthy of the office of President, of all the candidates. Blaine had his official crookedness, Cleveland his moral obliquities, and Butler his military atrocities; but no charge was ever made and sustained against the candidate of the Temperance party. And yet, regardless of his superior personal qualifications and fitness for the office, regardless of the fact that he represented the principles and influences that Christians steadily pray for, they refused to vote for him, and exerted all the power of the ballot, and all the influence of their personal example, in favor of the candidates and the parties who have either openly or tacitly opposed those principles. The principles upon which Blaine, Cleveland and Butler made their canvass, and upon which Cleveland was elected, are political merely, affecting only the material interests of the people; while those of St. John go to the very rudiments of society, reach to every hearth-stone and appeal to every altar. An elegant consistency it is therefore on the part of the devout and sincere (?) Christian, while praying for the latter, to vote for the former. Philip sober in prayer and Philip drunk in action is an anomaly indeed. The rallying cry of politicians has sometimes been, "vote like you shot." Might not Christians find an equally stirring slogan in, "vote like you pray?"

But, we are told that there was no possibility of Mr. St. John's election; and therefore the wisest thing to do was to vote for that one of the other candidates representing the least evil. What a wretched sophistry! Is mere success all there is in a matter of this kind? Ill fits such an argument in the mouth of a Christian.

The cause of Jesus Christ itself, for that matter, has never yet succeeded in the sense indicated; and yet it is constantly and gradually succeeding just as would Mr. St. John's cause, if Christians would stand manfully up to their duty, instead of slinking off under every miserable subterfuge that will appease their conscience for adhering to their old political prejudices. If this argument had obtained in all ages of the world, civilization would still have been in its cradle in the East. What would have become of the Reformation, had every body in Luther's time concluded that he had "no chance of election"? The blight of slavery, too, would never have been eliminated from the Republic, had all those who prayed for its extinction regarded the agitation of the question by William Lloyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips in the same pusillanimous spirit as Christians now regard the agitation of the liquor question by Mr. St. John. All great revolutions have small beginnings. The reformer is never "elected" at the very start; nor would he ever be, if every one who believed in the justice of his cause were to wait until it had become large, strong, and popular before casting his influence in its favor.

Great results in history, that change the face of the political and moral cosmos, are attained after the process by which coral islands are formed in the ocean. Once a beginning made, each little coral deposits the tribute of its own self, until, gradually growing higher and expanding in circumference, it finally assumes proportions sufficient to change the current of an ocean. Just so in human affairs. With a single idea or principle for a nucleus, by gradual and constant accretions around it, stupendous revolutions are brought about, wrongs righted, abuses extinguished, evils rectified and society renovated. Who knows, therefore, but that the process has begun, by which the Alcohol King, with his crown of hissing snakes, and throne of human skulls, and all his satraps of poverty, wretchedness and woe, shall be banished from the country and driven into that dismal exile to which he himself has sent so many thousand souls. Have the friends of humanity, in view of the progress already made, not grounds for hope? In 1876, a Temperance candidate would have been regarded as an implacable crank; in 1880, Neal Dow had a small but respectable following; while in 1884, both the Republican and Democratic National Conventions were compelled to lift their hats in respectful deference to the Temperance sentiment; and, though neither had the courage to turn its back upon the saloon and its face toward the hearth-stone, it stood as the breakwater amid the political currents of the campaign; and, had the people, especially Christians, voted their honest convictions instead of their bitter partizan prejudices, the cause of Temperance would to-day be the cause of the United States. A sad but striking commentary, is that reflection, upon the vaunted zeal of the philanthropist and the sincerity of the Christian. A vivid exemplification, indeed, of the truth that human nature is one of the impenetrable mysteries of this world.

Some time last spring a great convention met in the city of Nashville. Some of the best men of the State were present, among whom were Judges Cantrell and McConnell, the able editor of the American, and the fiery-tongued orator, Emerson Etheridge. The Temperance sentiment of the State was wrought up to a high pitch of expectancy; for, indeed, from the manner in which that convention talked and prayed and sung psalms and exhorted one another on the necessity for immediate and thorough Temperance reform, every body was led to suppose that the cause of God and humanity would have a "walk-over," at least in Tennessee. There never was so much faith, no, not in Israel. Ministers of the gospel said Amen, and good people everywhere rejoiced in glad acclaim that a Moses had been found and a way had been at length prepared out of the dark wilderness of drunkenness, poverty and crime.

But, nay verily. The enthusiasm, like the bubbles of play-children, dissipated itself in the air. Those prayers lacked wings to soar, or perhaps their wings were cropped by the two great political conventions that hadn't met then. There's the rub again. These gentlemen, who had poured out their souls in lamentations over the evils of intemperance, and, with a fervor that was sublime, consecrated "their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor" to the cause which Mr. St. John represented, threw all their influence in the recent campaign against him. The editor of the American even used it as an argument to defeat Blaine that he, perchance, at some remote period in his past life, had expressed the conviction that there was something besides water in the Temperance cause. Alas! for the vagaries of politics, the treachery of human nature and the insincerity of religion! For ways that are dark and for tricks that are vain, the heathen Chinese is not more peculiar than the rest of the world.

But, the purpose of this article, as remarked in the outset, is to point a moral for Christians and moralists, who took such an active part in the election. The writer is not a member of any church at all; but he has a profound respect for the Christian religion, (the genuine article,) and he earnestly desires to see the cause of Temperance and morals prevail, and in that spirit exerted what little influence he could command, in the recent campaign, against that party that openly and defiantly enlisted itself in the support of the whisky interest, and which Christian voters helped to make successful at the ballot box. We confess, however, to very scant admiration for the oleaginous Chadbands and Pecksniffs of the pulpit and pew who pray one way and vote another; who, when the cause of their God and their fellowman is put to a practical test before the world and needs the warm hearts and stalwart arms of its friends everywhere to push its conquest, will, like Hessians, slink off under the standard of the enemy for the mere chance of a glittering success. Success! And is that the word that shall turn dross into gold? In thy name, O Lord, we have accomplished many wonderful successes! The system of ethics which we have studied—and it does not profess to be a system other than for sinners either—taught us that a principle could not be compromised for mere success; that, if we knew we were in a righteous cause, we should go ahead, turn neither to the right nor to the left, and trust the result to Him who never forsakes the righteous. This is a progressive age though; and we suppose, if we want to keep up with the procession, we will have to throw away our old system and get us one more in consonance with the spirit of the times. What a nice attitude will these consistent brethren occupy, when they hereafter talk to the young men of the country about the evils of intemperance. The question, Did you vote for St. John? will hang around their necks like a mill-stone. Like the bloody ghost of Banquo, it will never down at scoffing, but will shake its long gaunt finger in the face of blatant hypocrites and canting sycophants, until their knees shall tremble and their faces blanch with fear. It will abide with them even as the Old Man of the Sea clung to the back of the unfortunate Sinbad; and who knows but that, in future years, amid the wreck of homes, the wails of widows and orphans, the crash of splendid fortunes and brilliant promises—ah, amid the frightful din of Alcohol's reign, they may hear a still small voice whispering in their shrinking ears, "Did you vote for St. John?"

I trust no apology is necessary for intruding, to such an extent, upon a religious paper by a man of the world. Should any be needed, however, the character of the subject, I know, will suffice. I am not one of those who maintain that Christians are justified in besmearing themselves with the dirt and filth of politics; but I do insist that, if they are determined to vote, they should give the benefit of that vote to the cause that represents the best interests of mankind. They did not do this, as everybody knows, in the recent election; but yielded to their partizan predilections just as men of the world did, and in a great many cases, more so. Hence this article, with great respect, I am—

OBJECTIONS TO OUR PLEA NOTICED.

It is a fact known to all, that we are opposed in our work of trying to save men, by all religionists in the world. This opposition comes from several causes.

1. The simplicity and truthfulness of what we preach is so easily seen, and understood by the masses, that where it is preached without opposition, it sweeps away all religious parties and builds up only the church of Jesus Christ. In so doing, it, of course, pulls down the sects, and destroys their several parties, by proselyting their members. This is now so well known among the sects, that as soon as we make our appearance in any neighborhood, they at once begin to malign and slander us, in the endeavor, if possible, to keep any one from hearing; well knowing that if the people hear they will believe.

2. Ignorance is another cause of opposition to us. Any one, no matter how much prejudiced against us, who will hear us, and with the Bible in hand, watch our teaching, will soon be convinced we teach the truth; and will lay down their prejudice and join in with us. That is, taking it for granted such person believes the Bible. In opposing us, many unkind and false statements are made of us and our teaching. For instance, we have heard it asserted that we teach a religion which has no heart in it, no Holy Spirit, no divinity of Christ, and many other such gross misrepresentations. We propose to notice some of these objections, and show that they are wholly groundless and utterly false.

First then of the heart. Do the sects know what a scriptural heart is? In other words, what do the Scriptures mean when they speak of the heart? That we may be the better able to learn what is here meant, we will quote a few Scriptures which will throw light just where we want it.

Matt. 9: 4: "Wherefore, think ye evil in your hearts." Here we see the heart is the seat of thought. In the heart men think.

Matt. 13: 15: "For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed, lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their hearts, etc." Here we learn that the heart is the seat of understanding. Mark 2: 8: "Why reason ye these things in your heart?" Here the heart is the seat of reason. In Luke 1: 51 the heart is the seat of the imagination. Rom. 10: 9-10: The heart is the seat of belief.

It is here stated that the heart thinks, understands, reasons, is wise, or foolish, and is the seat of the judgment, etc. Now what part of man thinks, reasons, judges, and is wise or foolish? His mind of course. Then when the Bible speaks of the heart it means the mind. Now, to say we have no heart in our religion, is the same as to say we have no mind in it. This is not true, as every one who has ever attacked our brethren in debate will certify, they have generally gone away thinking we had all our mind in the work. But let us see. We baptize no one until they confess with the mouth, that they believe with all the heart that Jesus is the Christ. To believe with all the heart, is as much as any one can do. And again, to make this confession in the presence of an audience, to go then against every opposition that can be offered, and be baptized, requires great firmness and strong resolution. No one will do it unless his heart is thoroughly convinced that salvation can be obtained in no other way. Men may join other religious bodies, or churches, from selfish or foolish motives, but so great is the opposition and hatred of others for the church of Christ, that none dare enter so long as they can find any supposed refuge anywhere else. Then, of course, the heart—yes, the whole heart must be in it. When a man, in the face of all the popular religions of the day, (and their name is legion) dares to accept the word of God alone, as his rule of faith and action; when he must, as he often does, leave friends, associates, and all that is dear behind him, it takes all his heart in the work to carry it through. There is more heart in taking God at his word, and doing just what he commands, than there is in a thousand human schemes called churches.

No Spirit. We are the only people who do believe in the existence of a divine Spirit in religion. True, others have some kind of spirit which they call divine, but it can not be true. Divinity can not, does not create confusion. The Spirit of God never yet sent a single person to the lunatic asylum, while the spirit of other religions often does. Their spirit manifests itself by running the recipient of it crazy. He becomes wild under its influence, and does many foolish things. Their spirit moves them through impressions and feelings, while the Spirit of God is a teaching Spirit. "Let him that hath ears hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." "Now the Spirit speaks expressly." The Spirit of God leads and directs by speaking to men, thus reaching the heart, the mind, of man. The Spirit of God is not the author of confusion. Who has not noticed the wild confusion of a sectarian revival, when some would sing, others shout, some laugh, some pray, and others exhort, until you could hear nothing but a babel of sound? God's Spirit is peaceable, gentle, and moves upon the hearts of men by teaching sound, logical, reasonable, and intelligent truths, which form the motive power for religious action. No, the sects have not the Spirit of God. We are the only people on earth who do have it.

As to the divinity of Christ, we never baptize any one who will not first confess his faith in the divinity of Christ. Hence, this lies as the foundation stone of all our religious belief. But enough, we may have more to say on this at another time.

EAST TEXAS METHODIST CONFERENCE.

The East Texas M. E. Church, South has just closed its annual conference at Longview, Bishop McTyere presiding. Quite a lot of preachers were present. They report 100,000 members in Texas. This, of course, includes babies and all—those who joined and those born into the church. Five men took deacon's orders. They were authorized to preach the word of God in the church of God, but we shall not be surprised to hear of them preaching the discipline more, and in the M. E. Church.

WHAT SHALL I DO TO BE SAVED?

Do just what the Lord tells you to do. He knows what would be pleasing to him, and if he tells us what to do to be saved, we may rest assured it is the proper thing to be done. Don't listen to men who have the interest of party more at heart than your salvation, but hear God, and obey him. Has he told men what to do to be saved? He has. Would you read it for yourself in God's word? Turn first to the great commission, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Mark 16: 15-16. Go next to Pentecost, Acts 2. Hear poor sinners, who are pierced in their hearts, crying to the inspired apostles, "Men and brethren, what must we do?" The answer given by inspiration is in Acts 2: 38, "Repent and be baptized for the remission of sins." Go do it at once. It is the Lord who speaks. Don't stop to ask if any of these things are essential. If the Lord commands, we must obey. Faith, repentance and baptism are required in order to salvation. Faith is what? Read John 20: 30-31. Faith in Christ. Repentance is what? Your full, hearty consent to do right, and to turn from all iniquity. What is baptism? The immersion of a penitent believer into the name of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. This is easy, and the Lord intended it should be easy. Men's ways are hard, but the Lord's way is easy. Will you obey and be saved? If so, when? Oh! when?

THE PRAYER OF THE SAVIOR.

In the seventeenth chapter of John the Savior's prayer is recorded. After praying for the apostles he then prays for all that should believe on him through their words, "That they may all be one." And I verily believe that that prayer is being answered now, but that is a progressive work, it has been progressing very rapidly for the last half century and is gloriously on the increase. But some may ask, how is it brought about? I answer, by the gospel. Hence you see that we are to be humble instruments in the hands of the Father in answering the prayer of his Son. We believe also that God overrules the opposing powers to this end also. Look at the glorious effect of the present conflict between infidelity and Christianity. Though there may be more infidels to-day than ever before, yet on the other hand there are more people united on the Bible than ever before: the people are taking sides one way or the other, and now the question to be settled in the minds of the people is, Will we have the whole Bible, or none of it? And when they decide this question the union is complete. Then away will go denominationalism; there will be the disciples of Christ on the one hand and infidelity on the other. May the Lord help us all to labor to do our part in this great work.
Mansfield, Texas. H. H. WHITLOCK.

DEAR BRO. POE: Last night Bro. Joe Harding closed a meeting of two weeks continuance with the church of Christ at Bonham. The result of the meeting in additions to the congregation was thirty-one. Although Bro. Harding had so many obstacles to contend against in conducting this meeting, yet, under the blessing of God, it was a grand success. In the first place, he was suffering all the time from a sprained ankle received at Dallas, and was unable to do his usual amount of preaching from house to house; in the second place it was during the Presidential and State elections, and consequently it was a difficult matter to get the attention of the people. Yet, by his zeal, deep earnestness, and clear presentation of the truth, he was enabled to secure good audiences, and to win a goodly number of souls to Christ. But the success of the meeting is not to be estimated by the number of accessions, but by the strengthening encouragement, and instruction of the members in the duties and responsibilities of the Christian warfare. By his faithful teaching, earnest admonitions, and unsparing reproof, the brethren and sisters were made to realize more deeply than ever before their obligation to live more devoted to the service of God and to the advancement of Christ's kingdom on earth. Many were induced to renew their covenant, and to promise, with the help of God, to live more in harmony with the commands of Christ to his followers. Bro. Harding has done a work for the church of Christ at Bonham, that, we think, cannot be over estimated; a work that will tell through time and eternity. It is true that he has peculiarities, but these are entirely lost sight of in his faithful preaching of the gospel, and instruction in righteousness. He has greatly endeared himself to the brethren and sisters at Bonham, and wherever he may labor, their prayers will be offered up for him.—[F. J. Abernathy, Bonham, Texas, November 13, 1884.]

BROS. LIPSCOMB & SEWELL: Suffer the aged evangelist to say a few things in reference to what was, what is, and what will probably be. And first let me say, I was licensed to preach in the M. E. Church, in June, 1836. Reading the Scriptures brought me out of that, and the second Lord's day in June, 1842, I was immersed in Hickman County, Kentucky, by Elder Jesse Shelton, of Graves County, and the same evening I preached Jesus; and from that day I have been engaged as an evangelist in the church of God.

From time to time, A. D. 1844, I travelled through Illinois, and into the Territory of Wisconsin, planting several congregations for Christ in Illinois, one in Wisconsin—the first one in that Territory—also the third in Iowa.

In 1847, I travelled over the State of Missouri, laboring with Allen Wright, T. N. Gaines, T. M. Allen, and Joel H. Haden.

At this time we were all of one mind, and one soul. We had no college-made preachers, though many received their classical education in the college; but were prepared for the ministry, and, were sent out as evangelists by the church—God's appointed school to educate preachers. Then we had no school-boy pastors, but the pastors of God's appointment, and the word of God prevailed, and believers were added to the Lord.

Now we have the school-boy pastors, and God's appointed take a back seat. Now we have organs to call the crowd together, and to gratify the flesh. Now we have human societies, that big men can get big pay, and when a heathen man is converted, "Lo! we have done it," cry the societies, and God is robbed of his glory. Now God is worshiped by machinery, and the rich have a refined and polished gospel preached unto them, and the great have the uppermost seats.

As to what may be. The church of God divided? Never, never. A large minority, and for all I know, a majority, may slough off; but they will go out from us because they are not of us. The tried and the true with whom I once worshiped have crossed the river, leaving our ranks thinned down to a few. But I rejoice that C. Kendrick, Jacob Creath, D. Lipscomb, E. G. Sewell, J. A. Harding, J. T. Poe, still live, among others that have not denied the old paths. God bless J. A. Harding, and he will, for he serves the Lord in spirit and truth. Brethren, debate not about words that profit not; but contend for the faith, the practice of the saints in old times. Oh, teach the great lesson—the all things taught by Christ, urge prayer, family prayer, secret prayer, prayer in the congregation. Cultivate the talent of all the flock, hunt especially young men that may become preachers of the Word.

Now, may grace, mercy and peace, be multiplied unto you, and your army of readers, through the knowledge of God and our Savior Jesus Christ, amen. ALFRED PADON.
Center, Shelby County, Texas.

There is a great difference between living to work and working to live. We all live, and most of us work; but there the general resemblance ends. Some work only that they may live, and stop work just as soon as necessity permits them to do so. This is the principle on which the professional tramp goes; and on which a good many go who are not professional tramps. But they who do the best work in the world do not work to live, but live to work; they fully endorse the maxim of Goethe, "a useless life is a premature death," and they value their lives only as an opportunity for doing service in some righteous or beneficial cause. Would you like to know to which of the two classes you belong? Think whether your joy in each new acquirement in your life is joy over a new opportunity for selfish ease, or gladness for a new capability of doing further and more effective service.—S. S. Times.

A writer in the London Presbyterian makes some comments on several Welsh ministers of half a century ago. Of Rev. John Evans, New Inn, he says preaching was as natural to him as breathing. On a busy harvest time his wife asked him to go to the field to see how the reapers were going on. He willingly went, and when he was near them he said, "The blessing of the Lord be upon you." And they said, "And upon you, master." "Well," said he, "you make me think of Boaz and Ruth and the reapers." And he told them the history as in the Book of Ruth. In half an hour Mrs. Evans went out of the house to see how they were going on. She saw the reapers sitting on the sheaves around him, and he stood with his arms outstretched as if he were in his pulpit.

It is said to live well we must pray well. All true. The reverse is true also, that to pray well we must live well. When life is correct; when the walk is thoroughly conscientious and upright; when the speech savoreth of the things that profit and elevate, then it is not difficult to pray. Unbecoming conduct makes a sluggish heart, and words untruthfully spoken are a weight upon the pinions of the soul. No preparation for a prayer-meeting is so good as work done for the Master.—Sel.

When Dr. Grant of the Nestorian Mission, received discouraging intimations to the effect it might perhaps be best for him to return to America, or plant a mission elsewhere, he answered: "I cannot leave this field till I have reasons which I can give at the judgment-seat, where I expect soon to stand." This high standard should be applied by all in every field and form of duty. If this were so, should we not be more faithful, prayerful, patient and cheerful?—Cor. Watchman.

ARKANSAS LETTER.

EDITORS OF THE ADVOCATE: The writer has occasionally read your valuable paper with interest, and has been a subscriber for the Christian Standard; also for the Religious Herald and the Baptist paper of Raleigh, N. C. Those papers I consider the index of the religious character of the States they represent. In my long life of eighty-four years, I have heard Lorenzo Dow, A. Campbell, Bascom, Maffit, A. C. Howell, Baxter, Graves, Doggett, Kavanaugh and many other able divines of the several churches, all professing to preach the gospel of Christ in its purity. I have heard the Catholics and the Jews. I have read with interest the Campbell and Rice debate, sermons of Talmage and Beecher, with little confidence in the latter, only as an instructor. The Rev. Spurgeon has crossed the waters to me. The same for Moody and Sankey. I have read Wesley and Whitfield, who freed the negroes, and have proselyted thousands, and have penetrated the heathen lands. After all this reading for instruction, I examine the Scriptures and find myself in religious belief, the same of my parents who believed Christ only established one true church, and now there are over five hundred claiming to be this one church of Christ. With all the reverence I have for A. Campbell, I have doubted if he was right in separating from the Baptists. Yet he was of service to their church, he being the first with his father and six others, who immersed without giving in an inexperience. The change of heart, regeneration, if there be such. For myself, I can only claim a hope in Christ, if I serve him. But it is hard to be a Christian according to the Scriptures, and if the GOSPEL ADVOCATE can convince me that A. Campbell's, or the Christian church, is the only one and true church, I will be one of your subscribers and followers. You have in the Rev. Jones, of Alma, an evangelist doing much pulpit duty in Crawford County, Ark. The New Testament is his text, and free of the abuses of other churches; less than any other minister claiming to be the only church of Christ. For it is common in our pulpits of our several denominations to abuse each other not less than the Republicans abuse the Democrats. God is the author of peace, but some churches of confusion.

WM. D. HOLLOWELL.

Alma, Ark., November 10, 1884.

We publish the above with the following comments. Our friend has read and heard his long array of authors and preachers for a wrong purpose. A man ought to read but one book to learn the will of God—the way of life, that is the Bible. Other books, writings may be read and preachers heard to interest in the Bible, to impress its thoughts, encourage to obedience of its precepts, and to direct attention to its varied teachings. A light thrown on different objects, makes impressions according to the character of the object on which it is thrown. So truth on different minds makes different impressions, not contrary, not diverse impressions, but the mind according to its character and condition receives impressions. The good of reading or hearing others is to compare these different points and phases of impression and see the Scriptures from as many different standpoints as possible. We only get the full import of the Scripture teaching when we view it from all standpoints.

But to learn what the Bible teaches, what the way of life is, nothing save the Bible itself ought to be read. Anyone reading the Bible, if he takes in all its lessons, will be satisfied that no denomination is, or can be the true church of God. The church of God is not a denomination. The church of Christ on earth is composed of the churches of Christ scattered abroad, each complete and perfect in itself so far as organism, worship and work are concerned, and entirely independent of every other organism only so far as subjection to a common head, and obedience to a common Divine law, may make them co-workers for the attainment of a common end, and fidelity to a common Master may give them true brotherly sympathy and love one for another. A common bond of organic union between churches unites them into a denomination. And that denominational organism, human in its origin and operation, comes between the individual Christian and the church, and God. Removes them from direct contact with the Father, separates man from his maker, and in so doing destroys man's sense of responsibility to God.

It is useless for man to seek the church of God in any denomination. If churches were pure and formed themselves into a denomination, an organized combination for any purpose, it would destroy their purity, their fidelity to God, through introducing an element of human authority in religion. This human authority divides the allegiance between God and man. But God refuses a divided allegiance. "In vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." Then every church or every Christian that consciously recognizes human authority in religion, is guilty of treason to the Almighty ruler of the universe. Whenever man adopts human expedients in lieu of any divine appointment, or overrules, depreciates or neglects divine agencies and appointments through the use of human devices or inventions, he substitutes human authority for divine, he is guilty of treason against God.

After a careful study of the Scriptures and of church history of the first few centuries, I am constrained to believe that the man of sin, working in the days of the apostles and waiting the departure of the last of the inspired men, who hindered its growth, for its full development, was nothing more nor less than the formation of an organic union between the churches of Christ Jesus. They soon grew through the successive stages of co-operation, diocesan and State organizations until it culminated in the papacy. A fountain never rises above its source. The tree is only the development of the elements contained within the seeds. The papacy is no worse in the sight of God than the fundamental principle from which it grew. That principle was, is, the right of man to legislate in the realm of the church organization, faith, action, worship or work. Then all denominationalism is of the evil one and is a stage of development in the growth of the man of sin.

I am just as far from saying a denomination formed of the churches growing out of the movement of the Campbells is the church of Christ, as I am from saying that the denomination or any one of the denominations composed of the Baptist churches, or of the Presbyterian, or of the Methodist churches, or of the Romish churches, is the church of Christ. They are, one and all, developments of the man of sin, working under the varied circumstances under which these respective bodies have been developed.

The chief thought that A. Campbell developed, that is of value to the world is this, that no human authority is to be tolerated in religion. That the object of all divine revelation is to cause man to give up all human authority, all human inventions, and all humanly devised organizations and practices in religion, and to make man willing to accept the word of God as the only rule of faith and work in religion, and to induce him to be willing, with child-like trust in the Father, to be led by him. If man is led by God, he never goes where God has not led, has not pointed out the way, he walks in God's ways and never goes beyond the directions of the Father. If A. Campbell in any word or act of his, contravened this principle he enunciated, to the extent he did this, he undid the only good he accomplished. Can any man be a follower of God, and nothing more, and remain in any denomination in christendom? I doubt it. Can our friend do just what the Bible teaches and remain in the Baptist church? Can he refuse to recognize all human authority in religion, refuse to recognize the authority of human creeds, interpretations, dogmas in religion, and refuse to work through human organizations, and to recognize unauthorized practices in religion, and yet remain in the Baptist church? We do not think it is possible. Is it possible for him to all the commands of God, just as God commanded them, and still remain in the Baptist church, or the Presbyterian, or Methodist church?

Our friend says he thinks A. Campbell did wrong in leaving the Baptist church. He certainly knows little of the history of his relation to the Baptist church, to make such a comment. He was driven from the Baptist church for denying all human authority in religion; for refusing to substitute human statements of faith for God's own revealed will; for refusing to walk in man's inventions, instead of God's appointments; for refusing to substitute human dreams, imaginations, experiences, and fleshly excitements, for faith in the word, and a firm reliance upon the promises of God. If any church will tolerate the teaching and practice of the pure word of God, and will enforce nothing else than this on its members, any individual is a heretic to leave or divide it. But to fail to maintain this fidelity to God, and to repudiate all authority save the authority of the living God, is to commit treason to God. Then the Baptists presented the alternative of treason to God, or the leaving of their church to A. Campbell and those who, with him, believed divine authority alone should be respected in religion. The Baptists to-day still present this alternative. It is true they have modified some of their teachings, and brought them into nearer conformity to the word of God. Still no man can remain a Baptist to-day and be faithful to God with an undivided fealty, doing all his will, refusing to add anything to the order of God.

The Baptist church is a denomination. All of its denominational developments are of human origin. Human authority is recognized. It sets up human authority in lieu of the authority of God. It does this in the name it bears; in its human creed utterances; in its mourning bench practices; in its substitution of human experiences, human dreams, human visions, fleshly excitements, for the teachings of the Spirit of God. The man that relies upon his fleshly feelings and excitements as an evidence of acceptance with God, instead of upon the clear promises of the Spirit, based upon obedience to the directions given by the Spirit of God, and sealed by the blood of the Son of God, and recorded in the Scriptures of divine truth, practically rejects the guidance of the Spirit. They work through human organizations instead of divine appointments, and in various ways still substitute this human authority for the authority and will of God. In various ways they clearly repudiate divine authority and act upon the authority of men, and they require all who are in fellowship with them to recognize this human authority, and act through these human appointments. We do not see how a man can be loyal to God and remain in a Baptist church.

There is a tendency to this same substitution of human devices and human authority among those who started out with the Campbells to restore the divine authority as the only rule in religion. Fidelity to God, loyalty to his authority, requires a refusal to walk in these. The point, then, is for a man to take the word of God, resolutely walk in it, refusing all affiliation with human institutions in the realm of religion, and whoever does this is a child of God. No one else is, or can be. God never approved peace out of obedience to him. The Savior came to send a sword until peace in Christ Jesus has been conquered. We doubt if all those enumerated by our friend, claim to preach the Scriptures in their purity. Many think it lawful to somewhat change the order of God. D. L.

"Talking about preachers' salaries, we believe that if a godly, earnest man, who has a true call to the ministry, gives his whole soul to his work, his temporal necessities will be met. Probably no men of our day have done more than Spurgeon, Moody and George Muller. No one ever heard of them discussing the question whether they were paid enough."

This is from the Christian Evangelist, who recently took the Christian Quarterly to task for uttering similar sentiments. We are satisfied that if this principle was acted on, it would free the church of Christ of that class of preachers who preach only as a means of making money. We are satisfied it would remove the temptation to innovation, and greatly free the church of the class of preachers who seek to inaugurate new organizations for supporting preachers, because they lack faith in God's appointments for their support.

We believe it would secure a devoted, faithful ministry devoted to the salvation of souls. Like priest, like people. It would secure more devotion and zeal among the followers of Christ, and would secure a better support for all devoted and earnest teachers of his holy religion. The greater amount of the opposition to the ADVOCATE has arisen from a fancy that somehow or other, the ADVOCATE is opposed to the support of those who give their life and labor to the service of God. No greater mistake was ever made. We feel sure that God's order is the best that has ever been proposed for the support of his servants, hence we urge that we all come back to heaven's order as the consummation of all good to man. The nearer the faithful servant of God comes to the ways approved of God, the better off he is for time and for eternity.

T. C. Little, Fayetteville, Tenn., writes: "Bro. J. W. Shepherd, of Huntsville, Ala., is visiting the brethren at Fayetteville, Tenn. Has preached several discourses while here. He is an earnest, faithful soldier, and is content with such things as the father has given, to advance his kingdom. We welcome all such brethren."

"JUDGE NOT" APPLIED TO KENTUCKY CONVENTION MINUTES.

No judgment is perfect, unless there is present a perfect standard, a complete induction of facts, and an unbiased mind. When these three elements are present we may be bold, and possibly strong, in self-assertion. But such is the frailty of most mortals, that in judging their fellows they are bound to be modest. A man may assume that he has an absolutely faultless standard; he may substitute the perfect law of liberty for a matter of expediency; he may blot out the line between the revealed and the unrevealed; he may assume to have all the facts; he may presume to have a mind above the reach of bias; but after all, there may be a lingering doubt somewhere in the universe that there is at least the fragment of a remote possibility that he is mistaken. It is human to err; it is almost divine to acknowledge that we are in the wrong.

Be it known, therefore, that the $13,082.42, of year before last, represents the collections made by the Financial Agent, received by W. F. Cowden, Treasurer, added to the money raised and expended in the field by the various evangelists. Is it right, is it just, to take this aggregate and to compare it with the sum reported by the Treasurer, W. F. Cowden, to-wit, $4,997.39, and then from a comparison of the funds received directly and indirectly by the State Board, year before last, with those coming this year through the Treasurer, only conclude that there is "a very great falling off, indeed?" This may be apostolic; but when farmers compare crops they would not think it honest to compare a pint cup with a quart cup—a part with the whole.

Had Bro. Harding's unprejudiced mind permitted him to gather up all the facts, he would have escaped this blunder. What are all the facts?

Bro. W. F. Cowden received and disbursed.....	$4,997.39
Evangelists in field raised for home use.....	5,969.80
Evangelists in field raised cash.....	848.98
Add debt of Stanford Church, raised by Board.....	1,018.00

This makes a total.....$12,874.15

Now, it is just to compare this aggregate, $11,574.15, of the report in question, with the $13,082.42, of year before last. This comparison shows that there is not, as Bro. Harding concluded, a falling off of more than $8,000.00, but simply a falling off of $508.27. Bro. Harding has made a mistake in his conclusion of only about $7,500.00. But this is a small matter with the man who holds that definite agreements exist only between Jesus and the preacher, and that between the preacher and the congregation definite agreements are unnecessary, if not sinful.

It is just to state that I am neither logically nor morally bound to defend or explain the reports of all the evangelists supported by the State Board. They are of age, and can speak for themselves. I may grant that the reports are not every whit right, and still it stands that Bro. Harding has violated the laws of thought and the text which heads this article.

If Bro. Harding will apply to the examination of their reports, the principles that he employs in examining the Bible, he will, to some extent, purify his conclusions. When the letter to the Ephesians says that Christ "came and preached peace to you that were afar off," Bro. Harding teaches that he did this not personally, but on the principle that "what one does through another he does himself." That an effort has been made to unduly exalt and magnify the work, may be admitted. It may even be granted that facts and figures have been twisted into the reports that had no legitimate right there. Still truth requires that there be a confession that the comparison between the $13,082.42, and the $4,997.39, is unjust to the writer, unjust to the Board, and unjust to Bro. Harding. He may run all the evangelists and their reports through the threshing machine of a critical analysis; he may separate the chaff from the wheat; still Jesus says, judge not from appearance, but judge righteously. It is not exactly fair logically, nor is it a special mark of Christian charity, to conclude that societies are "humbugs", and to "believe that it would ruin the character of any man for truthfulness, uprightness, and honesty, to do as they do." It is possible to sin in making reports. The tendency is to magnify the things of our own, and to depreciate the things of others. Bias which in one produces false conclusions, may in another color facts and figures. Prayer and a supreme love for truth may save us from errors. An assumed loyalty to an assumed apostolicity may save us; but, if so, it will do more for us than it has for some. We do not ask every man who casts out demons in the name of Christ to follow us. We only ask that the demons of ignorance and sin be exorcised. God be thanked whenever, by whomsoever, or howsoever, the gospel is preached. Heaven save us from the spirit of false judgment. I do not know all the facts pertaining to the Foreign Missionary Society. I do know that ninety-five cents of every dollar given to that work is expended directly on the field of labor. I do not know the expenses of my brethren there. I cannot tell how much they need. I shall not assume or insinuate that they are hirelings, and proceed without a full knowledge of the facts to their conviction. Moore, Earl, VanHorn, Todd, Shishmanian, Kevorkian, Azbill, and others who have left home and kindred, are our brethren, and they are at least presumptively honest and truthful. No if, no prospective perfection, no future condition of the churches, shall rob me of the duty of the hour. What the church may be, what the churches ought to be, presents one side; what they are, presents another. Paul took the church as it was; he met the present emergency. So must we. Bro. Harding can go on his way preaching Jesus, I rejoice. The societies will still live, and after every storm there will be a purer atmosphere, more zest, more zeal, and, we trust, more love to God and man. J. B. JONES.

TARRANT COUNTY CO-OPERATION MEETING.

It began on November 9, at eleven o'clock, A. M. Preaching by Bro. A. L. Johnson.

Evening—Bro. T. E. Thorpe was made Chairman, being an elder of the congregation at New Hope, and Bro. R. T. Joyce, Secretary. The Chairman, on motion, appointed Bro. A. L. Johnson, Milton Moore, and W. Missic, a committee on programme for business. Remainder of the day was taken up with discussing the subjects of evangelizing and missionary work, by brethren Bush, Johnson, Harris, Thorpe, and others.

November 8, 9:30 A. M.—After the meeting was opened with prayer, the committee reported the following through its Chairman, Bro. A. L. Johnson: (1) Shall we go on with the work already begun? (2) How can we excite greater interest in our county work? (3) How shall we induce Christians to give their means to support the weak and send the gospel to the destitute? (4) Report of Bro. A. L. Johnson, evangelist. (5) How many evangelists shall we try to support next year?

In the discussion of these propositions it was the unanimous voice of the meeting: (1) That the work should not cease, but go on with renewed energy. (2) We can excite interest in others only by showing greater zeal ourselves, and by having such meetings as will stir up the brethren to love and good works.

To this end Bro. A. J. Bush, of Thorp Springs, urged that we have more frequent meetings; as many as four in a year, with a view to the brethren of the county getting acquainted with each other, and having the work of our Master more deeply impressed upon our minds.

(3) To induce the brethren and sisters to give freely of their means. It was urged that a close canvass be made of each congregation by a deacon or some competent person, to place the subject properly before the minds of every Christian in the county, and that the evangelist urge it upon the minds of all scattered brethren and sisters to give aid to the work. (4) Bro. Johnson's report was received and heartily approved by the meeting. (5) While we desire and expect to keep Bro. A. L. Johnson in the work next year, it was decided that we would endeavor to raise the means to put another competent man in the county work.

A resolution was passed in these words:

Resolved, That we heartily approve of Bro. A. L. Johnson's work in 1884, and will earnestly support him for 1885.

It was furthermore understood, and the expressed wish of the meeting, that the elders of the Fort Worth congregation still continue the work of employing and putting the evangelists in the field.

J. E. THORPE, Chairman,
R. T. JOYCE, Secretary.

THE ANSWER OF JACOB CREATH, IN PART, TO ISAAC M. WILKINSON.

EDITORS OF THE ADVOCATE: I have learned by a letter received from Isaac M. Wilkinson, of Pelham, Grundy County, Tenn., dated November 10, 1884, that he is the author of the private letter I answered in October through the ADVOCATE. He apologizes for the way he wrote, which led me to suppose that he was not a friend to you and our people, and says I was mistaken in saying so, and confesses he was wrong in withholding his name, and says that some years ago he corresponded with you and Bro. Poe, and others, and he thought you had grown weary of publishing his writings, and that he thought I differed from you and our brethren in my teaching, and that he and I agreed in our teaching, etc.

He professes still to want to know the truth. He still misapplies Ephesians 2: 1: "You hath he quickened." This phrase is in italics in the common version of the Bible, which proves that it is not in the Greek text. It is an ellipsis, supplied from the fifth verse of the second chapter, instead of being supplied from the last verse of the first chapter, which reads in the family Testament of A. Campbell, by G. Campbell, P. Doddridge and J. McKnight, which is his body the fullness of him who fills all in all: "Even you who were dead in trespasses and sins, in which you formerly walked, according to the course of the world." The apostle refers to the fourth chapter of this epistle when he says Christ after his ascension gave gifts to men; to some he gave apostles; to some, prophets; and to some, evangelists; and to some, pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry, for the edification of the body of Christ. Ephesians 4: 1-14. These were all miraculous and supernatural gifts received by Christ from the Father to be bestowed upon the infant church till she was grown and able to take care of herself by the ministry of the gospel; they were given for a limited time, until, when they ceased, they are all in the same grammatical condition and coupled by the conjunction "and." If we have evangelists now, we have apostles and prophets too; or, according to Papists and Mormons, we have their successors; and our people have almost as many sorts of Evangelists as these Monks and Friars in the Dark Ages,—all of themselves sent like the Monks.

These miraculous gifts and those specified in the 12th chapter of 1 Corinthians are merged into the one gift, the "pastor of the church," a creature unknown to the Scriptures, and also the plurality of old men which I fear Bro. Butler will not succeed in restoring soon. Some of these "pastors" have already got what the C. Baptist calls four wives, (churches) and instead of reading the apostles' letters as did the apostles' churches, and celebrating the supper as did the apostolic churches, (Acts 20: 7,) we meet to hear what the C. Baptist calls "everlasting sermonizing."

This is the first step to the destruction of the presbyteries of the apostolic churches. I do not know one church that has presbyters and no "pastor." They have mere nominals, called presbyters, which serve the purpose of the "pastor," as cardinals do the Pope, which is the same principle.

If I were to answer all the things introduced in Bro. Wilkinson's letter, I might write a book, instead of an essay. The words to quicken primarily means to make alive, to vivify. (Webster.) If you wish to know how the Ephesians were made alive, read the nineteenth chapter of Acts, and the first chapter of Ephesians. They heard the gospel of their salvation; they believed it, and were immersed with one immersion, a water immersion, (Eph. 4: 5,) and obtained redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins. (Eph. 1: 7.) "God made choice among us that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the gospel and believe." Acts 15: 17. The word of God is the good seed that falls into good and honest hearts, and brings forth thirty, sixty, and an hundred fold. Luke 8. There are no good and honest hearts now; they are all totally depraved. There is a principle of vitality, of vegetative life, in the word of God, as in all good vegetable seed. This seed germinates, grows first the blade, then the stalk, then the full ears on the stalk.

I think our brother believes in two immersions; with all sects; one he calls a water baptism, the other a spiritual baptism. One and one make two, according to my arithmetic. But there is only one immersion, according to Paul's arithmetic. Eph. 4: 5. If there is now such an immersion as a spiritual immersion, there is no such a thing as a water immersion. If a man gets his stomach full of fried beefsteaks and hot biscuits and coffee, and begins to rub his hands and stamp with his feet, and call for the baptism of the Holy Ghost and fire, that does not constitute the immersion in fire and the Holy Spirit. The world cannot receive the Holy Spirit. John 14: 17. At the end of the seven letters to the seven Asiatic churches, Christ says, He that has ears, let him hear what the Spirit says to the church. Will some man who believes in the "operation of the Spirit before faith" and without words, tell us what the Spirit said to him, without words? I am under no obligation to publish my essay on the spirits in prison, nor to give my reasons for declining to do it. I stand behind Peter. I believe with him that Christ preached to the spirits in prison. If any man strike me, he shall strike Peter first. Peter is between me and those who deny it? Who will deny that Christ preached to the spirits in prison, and give the proof that he did not—that Peter was mistaken? Paul says that God cannot lie. Titus 1: 2; Hebrews 6. He has sworn by two immutable things in which it is impossible for him to lie. 1 John 5: 10, says, "He that believeth not God, hath made him a liar." Do not the sects believe as little in the remission of sins by faith and immersion, in Acts 2: 38, as they do that Christ preached to the spirits in prison? (1 Peter 3: 19.) I hope no man will trouble me further on this subject. Palmyra, Mo. JACOB CREATH.

A LETTER TO THE LOVERS OF SECTARIAN DIVISION—No. 2.

"I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

The unity of the Spirit in the above quotation is not to be kept in the bonds of peace, but the bond of peace. There is one, and only one, bond of peace for the church, and that is the Bible—the only revelation from God to man. Nothing but the Bible can bring us together in the unity of the Spirit. The creeds and confessions of faith formulated by uninspired theological Doctors of Divinity can never bring us into the unity of the Spirit. Creeds, as adopted by the sects, are the cause of so much sectarian division. The sects do not rely upon the word of God, and will not take it as their only rule of faith and practice; for if they did, they certainly would not repudiate the word of God as the mere word or a dead letter. They ignore the testimony that God has given us concerning his Son, or the divine authority of the Bible, and substitute in its stead human wisdom, human creeds, and human opinions as an infallible guide to happiness and eternal life hereafter. It is sinful for men to be divided into factions and sectarian parties upon the law or the word of God; for the Psalmist has said, the law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul. The testimony of the Lord is sure making wise the simple.

We find by reading John 5: 19, that the Father and Son are one in action. "The works that Jesus seeth the Father do, these he doeth also." So it ought to be with those who claim to be professed followers of Christ, and stand fast in one spirit, striving together for the faith of the gospel. Phil. 2: 2. But this is not done by the different denominations, for they have no faith in the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation. Their faith is predicated upon their creeds, independent of the word of God. They do not strive together for the faith of the gospel. They are not willing to act and work together, united upon the Bible. The faith which is propagated by one party is stoutly repudiated and opposed by the other party; yet they all claim to be orthodox, and orthodoxy with them is a sweet morsel. Primitive Christians were one in name. In their relation to Jesus, the great law-giver, they were called disciples; in their relation to each other, brethren; and the disciples were called Christians at Antioch, as followers of Christ.

But in the present divided state of the religious world, we have Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian and many other denominations. The very names which men of different denominations have assumed, are names of distinction to show division, and Paul says mark them which cause division. Well did the Savior say a house divided against itself cannot stand. Men who claim to be filled with the Holy Ghost and baptized into the one body under the narrowness of sectarian views, stint themselves by saying this is my branch of the church; this is my doctrine, my preacher. I shall not go to your branch of the church, your preacher fights and exposes our doctrine to ridicule and fun. Again, primitive Christians were admonished to be of one mind. See 1 Peter. Not so with the sects; they have many minds, many doctrines, many opinions, many branches of the church. One party says lo here, the other says lo here, my church is the one to join. Oh may the time quickly come when all party names and every thing of a sectarian nature will be done away with.

Brethren, let us labor for primitive apostolic Christianity; contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, and persuade men to unite upon the Bible, the word of God, which is able to build us up, and to give us an inheritance among those that are sanctified.

IN TEMPTATION.

Christ was tempted in all points like as we are yet without sin. Hence he knows how to succor those who are tempted. He brings to the work the highest of all preparation—that of personal experience. Let us look to his example. How strongly was he tempted to anger! Who was ever misrepresented, scorned and persecuted as Jesus was? And yet when he was reviled he reviled not again, when he suffered he threatened not.

Here is an example in the hour of temptation. Reader, perhaps you have been wronged, insulted, provoked, justly, as you may think, provoked to anger. Look to Jesus. Act as you would act if he were standing by your side, holding out to you one hand in which you see the mark of the nail, and covering with his other hand a broader scar on his side. Were he thus standing by your side, could you cherish those painful feelings which agitate your bosom and drive the Holy Spirit from you? He is by your side. Look with the eye of faith and you will see him with his look of upbraiding tenderness and proffered aid.

Observe Christ's method of meeting temptation. When the tempter made his suggestions, Jesus met them by an appeal to Scripture—"it is written." He had a passage of Holy Writ to set over against the temptation. Let Christ's followers be so familiar with the Word of God, that they may meet every proposal of the tempter with a passage of Scripture suited to the case. The example of Christ and the authority of the Word of God must be strong enough to enable the converted soul to resist temptation.—New York Observer.

Obituaries.

It becomes my sorrowful duty to write you of the death of my nephew, Robert Ellis, son of brother J. P. and E. S. Baker. He was born September 22nd, 1869; died November 21st, 1884, of spinal meningitis; he was sick only four days with the most intense suffering that I ever witnessed. The death of this interesting and promising youth occurred under circumstances peculiarly affecting to his tender and affectionate parents, and cast a gloom over the entire community. Numbers of men women and children assembled at the grave to mingle their tears and offer their sympathy to the afflicted family. May the Lord help us all to do our duty that we may be prepared for death, is my prayer. E. G. BAKER, Duck River, Tenn.

I would announce through the ADVOCATE the death of my little granddaughter, Alpha Ophelia Spivy, only child of my son Thomas A. Spivy. The subject of this sketch was four years, five months and five days old at her death. The mother died in Arkansas, leaving the little one motherless at ten months old. She soon became afflicted and lost her sight from paralysis, and remained blind to her death. Her father returned from Arkansas in August after the death of his wife in April. My family had the care of the sweet babe while she lived. Blind, motherless and afflicted, of course she was the idol of the family. O, how we miss her! yet we can but say the will of the Lord be done. H. J. SPIVY.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla is a medicine that, during nearly 40 years, in all parts of the world, has proved its efficacy as the best blood alterative known to medical science.

SARSAPARILLA (extracted from the genuine Houduras Sarsaparilla) is its base, and its powers are enhanced by the extracts of Yellow Dock and Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other potent ingredients.

IS your blood vitiated by derangements of the digestive and assimilatory functions? Is it tainted by Scrofula? or does it contain the poison of Mercury or Contagious Disease?

THE leading physicians of the United States, who know the composition of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, say that nothing else so good for the purification of the blood is within the range of pharmacy.

ONLY by the use of this remedy is it possible for a person who has corrupted blood to attain sound health and prevent transmission of the destructive taint to posterity.

THOROUGHLY effective renovation of the system must include not only the removal of corruption from the blood, but its enrichment and the strengthening of the vital organs.

RELIABLE witnesses, all over the world, testify that this work is better accomplished by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA than by any other remedy.

BLOOD that is corrupted through disease is made pure, and blood weakened through diminution of the red corpuscles is made strong, by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.

PURIFYING the blood and building up the system require time in serious cases, but benefit will be derived from the use of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA more speedily than from anything else.

NOTES FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Bro. D. M. Breaker of Madisonville, Ky., writes: "On the fifth Lord's day in last month I ordained C. W. Crabtree and R. P. Tilford elders of the congregation lately organized at Maniton. Also W. T. Martin and J. T. Wicks, deacons. It is a small congregation, but composed of fine material. On the second Lord's day in this month I shall close my work in this section of country. I have accepted work in Ballard County, and shall go there about the first of next year, after spending a couple of weeks in Chattanooga.

F. B. Srygley, Lebanon, Tenn., writes: "I sent an appointment for the second Lord's day in November, to the Methodist church near Riddleton, where I held a good meeting in September; but they decided not to allow us the use of their house longer, so the appointment was made for a school in another neighborhood. I preached Saturday night and gave way for the Methodists, Sunday at eleven o'clock, communion at three o'clock, and preached again at night. On Monday a delegation was sent to Riddleton to get the school-house if possible. One of the trustees said if the teachers had no objections, we could get it. The teacher had none, and the appointment was made. At the close of the first sermon, I was informed that the trustees had reconsidered the matter, and we could preach no more there. We moved to a very small school-house, about two miles away, and planted our gun again. One young man made the good confession and was baptized into Christ. What few members we had were called together, and a subscription paper started, which will, I hope, result in a house of worship. You see I report one a week yet, but if you count the week in the Baptist church a failure, this one must be divided."

Bro. J. Harding, writing from Sherman, gives a narrative of his labor in Texas. He mentions that at the meeting in Dallas, the Commerce Street Church dismissed its meetings during his stay, and many of the members worked heartily in the meeting. The meetings at other points, and his lameness, having to sit and preach, or stand with one knee on the chair, rendered it the hardest work of his life, were as heretofore reported in the ADVOCATE. He says:

"I began here on Saturday night after I closed at Bonham on Wednesday. My congregations here have been growing from the beginning. There have been nine added to the congregation up to this time. One of them is a Methodist preacher, a man well informed, and a good man, one that fears God with all his house. His name is Waite. The church here will put him right to work. He is a good talker, and will be a useful man. Bro. Dimmitt is the preacher here, a man of marked ability, an eloquent man, and well known in Kentucky and Texas. The church here is very strong, numerically speaking. I have not found a zealous church, as yet, in Texas. They think they are, but this is the trouble; there is not enough zeal among the brethren out West here. This church is about the size of that at Bonham, four hundred strong, and they are doing good, but not near the good that it could do if they had more zeal. They are very kind to me. I cannot tell just when I will close meeting here, but will continue some days yet. Will go from here to Paris. Will preach there a week before I go to Louisville. Bro. R. W. Officer, of Paris, was down and spent a day or so with me. A grand man he is! God bless him. I don't know of a better brother anywhere. Bro. Dulin, formerly of Kentucky, has been with us from the beginning. He goes out on Sunday and preaches, as his work is in churches around Sherman. I may be able to do something for the ADVOCATE here; it is hard to get the brethren to take it out here. I wish I could, for I know it would do them good to read it. I will try. I met Bro. Caskey at Bonham. He says he is doing all he can to make subtraction. This is needed everywhere. Many that are connected with the church are drawbacks, and keep others out. [It is better to try to convert and save them, than to cut them off.—Eds.] I have a young man with me, Wm. H. Myers, who has been studying for the ministry; was a Methodist. He was baptized at Waco during my meeting there, and has been with me since. He is a zealous young man, and will make a gospel preacher. He will go from house to house and preach now, and exhort, and will soon be able to preach on the street or anywhere, and I believe will be a very useful man. He is a great friend of the ADVOCATE, likes it very much, and will work for it or for the Messenger. My prayer to God daily is that the brotherhood in Christ will work for a speedy return to the ancient order of things; but I fear that many are catering to the flesh, instead of following the Spirit. There is a grand field in Texas for faithful ministers, wherever I have been. Now, the brethren in Kentucky that are looking for me to return, and want meeting, will not have to wait much longer. I will, by the blessing of God, be back to that old State soon. Pray for me, brethren, that I may battle for the right, and when my work is ended, that I may pass over the river and rest under the shade."

J., Middle, Tenn., November 28, writes: "There are many churches, as well as individuals, that do not contribute of their means to promote good works, because the amount they are able to give seems too small to be effective; yet if they knew, that in giving, they would be joined by others, thus insuring a sum sufficient to do good and substantial work, we are persuaded many congregations and individuals who now do nothing, would, at regular and stated periods, make contributions for Christian work, such as church building, missionary work, orphan asylums, etc. With this idea in view, we desire to call the attention of the churches to an institution worthy of their hearty, liberal and continued support. We mean the Fanning Orphan School, the aims and object of which are familiar to all readers of the ADVOCATE. Orphan schools and kindred institutions do more to build up the cause of Christ than an equal amount of money invested in any other way. In such institutions are the strongholds of the Roman Catholic church. Are we, as a people, not behind the Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists and other denominations in such work? In the Fanning school we have a fine nucleus, and by united (we came near writing effort) action we can build up an institution that will do good for all time; will honor Christ and strengthen every congregation that contributes. Our congregation, a poor country one, has determined to try and pay $100 every first of January till we have $1,000 invested in the institution; this will entitle us to keep one orphan at school all the time; if we send no orphan, it will support one from some where else. Churches, act in this matter and let your contributions be reported in the ADVOCATE, not to sound a trumpet as the hypocrites do, but to encourage others to do likewise. There are at least one hundred congregations in Tennessee able to give $100 per annum, and be all the stronger for giving. What congregation will be first to strengthen us by contributing to this institution?"

S. W. Womack, Memphis, Tenn., November 25, writes: "This paper will explain to the brethren and friends in the upper counties, why I have not visited them this fall. I have been engaged with the church here about five months. The work in this part of the State is very encouraging. We need a few more good workers. As I am only here until the church can secure the service of some good man, then I will return back to the upper or middle part of the State, to labor again with the brethren of Wilson, DeKalb, Putman, Smith, and other counties. I recommended Bro. T. R. Bayless and may rather to visit the brethren in these counties, but I have not heard from them as to what they have done. This church holds its own, and is making great and lasting impression. Three added recently. The brethren and sisters are very much encouraged. This church is doing a great work. It also faithfully and earnestly contends that an educated ministry should be had among the colored churches of Christ. I therefore make an appeal to the white churches throughout this State and others, to look at our condition; and as you have much of this world's goods, will you not help us? This church has allowed me to attend the Lemoine College, since I have been in their midst, this school is under the management of the Congregational church, supported by the A. M. Missionary Society. It has on enrollment 250 pupils, and is doing good work for that church. I regret very much that I cannot make this city my home, in order to attend this school; but Nashville is supplied with fine schools. Now I gather up courage enough to ask the brethren, sisters and friends of the many Christian congregations, throughout this State, to aid me in the work by giving a small donation, and place it in the hands of Bros. Lipscomb & Sewell, who will be the first to aid me in a work of this kind. Brethren, this may make you blush. My duty is to ask, and if I do not receive it will not make me any the worse off; but I assure you, aid of this kind I would highly appreciate, and I would be very grateful to you."

F. C. Sowell, Columbia, Tenn., writes: "Water Valley is near the dividing line of Maury and Hickman Counties, on Deiper's Creek. Since we have begun work there we have had many things with which to contend. The first time I met there was the time of the dedication of the union (?) house. On that occasion the Baptists, Methodists, Cumberland Presbyterian, and the Old School Presbyterian preachers represented their respective denominations, and I endeavored not to represent some human organization, but advocated the cause of our beloved Redeemer. Since that time I have preached thirty-two discourses, and because the word of truth was rightly divided, some of the people have reported some hard things about me, saying "I got mad, personated all denominations, preached Christ to the hell of everlasting torment, and that I was an infidel." I paid but little attention to such outlandish sayings, but went ahead with as much zeal as possible and preached Jesus; and the result was, four were added, much prejudice buried, and others almost ready to quit the things of the world and become Christians. During one meeting at Water Valley I asked the people to use their paper and pencils and take note of what they heard, so they might be able to review those things when they got to their homes. We were glad to see some manifesting their appreciation of the invitation by their works. I am sure the truth that has been preached at Water Valley will result in much good. I can't conveniently be with the little band of brethren there any more this year, but they expect to meet anyway, and carry on the work themselves. May the Lord ever be with them in their good works."

W. H. Duke, New Goshen, Ala., November 30, writes: "I have seen no report of the labors of our brethren from this community. On Friday night before the fifth Lord's day in August, Bros. A. J. Avery and Gardner Wheeler commenced a meeting at a school house in this community; closed Lord's day night. A lady from the Baptists made the good confession and was baptized into Christ. From here they went eight miles away and began a meeting; the result is we organized a congregation of thirteen members, all new ones but four, appointed deacons and elders. As faithful a little band of disciples as I have ever seen. They assemble themselves together every first day of the week in each others houses to break the loaf. We have to work under great difficulties and persecutions. This is the most prejudiced community I have ever lived in. But no wonder; the gospel as preached by the disciples was never heard in this community until last spring. I sent for Bro. A. J. Avery to come and preach at my house, had a very large audience; a short time after, Bro. Gardner Wheeler came and preached to good crowds all the time. They misrepresent us, but, notwithstanding all this, the cause is growing. It certainly has put many to reading their Bibles. Bros. Avery and Wheeler are workmen that need not to be ashamed; they are plain and uncompromising with error. This little congregation is going to build them a house of worship at once, to be known as Wheeler's Chapel. We are poor in this world's goods, but, I hope, rich in faith. We have preaching once and twice per month. The writer made his fourth attempt to preach last night. I think much good can be done in this country for our Master, although we have lots of people here saved by faith alone, some saved before the foundation of the world. But the cause of Christ is slowly but surely moving on to victory. The brethren at New Bethel, Cleburne county, have their house built again and paid for. It was burned last spring a year ago. It is an old congregation. We are going to build us a good log house within ourselves, the Lord willing."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

This season's cotton crop is the cleanest ever gathered on account of the dry weather.

Senator Joe Brown, an outspoken protectionist, has recently been re-elected to the Senate from Georgia, only two votes being cast against him.

Mrs. Belva Lockwood has started on a long lecturing tour. The fair lady evidently was "casting an anchor to the windward" during the late canvass.

Senator John A. Logan is a poor man, having lost $150,000 in the panic of 1873. He is a lawyer by profession, but has been out of practice for many years.

The report of the Treasurer of the United States shows a net expenditure for the present fiscal year of $244,126,244.00, being a decrease from the amount of 1883 of $21,281,893. Receipts were about $75,000,000 less than last year. Of the surplus collected $104,393,625 is to be applied to the reduction of the public debt.

Immigration to the Western Slope is very great at present, 6,000 people settling there every month. Most of the immigrants have means, and more than the average amount of intelligence. Southern California seems to have the preference, but Oregon and Washington Territory come in for a fair share. The salubrious climate is evidently the attraction.

A huge Christmas tree is to be erected in the Exposition at New Orleans. The tree will be fifty feet high, and lighted by many electric lamps, and loaded down with gifts for the children. It is a capital idea, and by-the-by it is a great pity that this good old custom, so much in vogue among the home-loving Germans, should be fading from our child-life.

In the Brand-Leman case, in Chicago, Mr. Brand withdraws his application to the courts for a mandamus to compel the Election Board to issue him a certificate, frauds having been discovered in the returns from the sixteenth district. This leaves a Republican majority in the Illinois Legislature, which will doubtless return John A. Logan to the United States Senate.

The ship Great Eastern sailed from Liverpool, November 30, with a cargo of goods for the New Orleans Exposition. After discharging her cargo this immense vessel will be fitted up as a hotel, so that any who desire to pay the price can enjoy the novelty of living in a floating hotel, and going back and forth to the shore for business or pleasure. The ship is 630 feet long.

The State Board of Health has sent a circular to all the District Boards and Mayors of the cities and towns of Tennessee, urging upon them the absolute necessity of thorough sanitation. Each individual family should see to it that cleanliness exists everywhere on their premises. Without providential interference cholera will visit this country next summer. Forewarned ought to be forearmed.

Dr. A. G. Haygood, who last year refused the honor of bishopric in the Methodist church, has resigned the presidency of Emory College, Ga., and will hereafter devote his whole time to the management of the Jno. F. Slater Fund. It will be remembered that Mr. Slater, a wealthy Connecticut manufacturer, died some two years ago, and left about $2,000,000 to the education of the negroes in the South, and Dr. Haygood has full charge of the disbursement of that fund.

The most celebrated case in the annals of Tennessee criminal practice, for many years, has just been concluded. Our readers will remember that last spring we gave an account of the accusation brought against Ransom Morrow, his son William, and his son-in-law, Dr. Bellamy, in the ninth civil district of Montgomery county, for the murder of several negroes. The jury brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree, for William Morrow, and made old man Ransom Morrow and Dr. Bellamy accessories before the fact. This verdict, owing to the wealth and general good-standing of the parties heretofore, causes much excitement. If the facts justify the conclusions, such a verdict brings the hope and the promise that all ideas of justice are not dead among our people.

Four of the newly-elected Congressmen from Tennessee are affiliated with the Christian church, viz., A. H. Pettibone, of the First District who is a Republican; Benton McMillan, of the Fourth District, Democrat; Jas. D. Richardson, of the Fifth District, Democrat; Andrew J. Caldwell, of the Sixth, Democrat. Mr. McMillan has been in the House four years and always goes regularly to church while in Washington. Wonder if the others will follow his example?

In the recent State election Gov. Bate received 132,201 votes; Judge Reid, 125,276; Buchanan, Greenback Candidate, 636; making Gov. Bate's majority 6,280. The highest Cleveland Elector R. L. Taylor, got 133,273, while Judge H. H. Harrison got 124,090 votes, being the highest on the Republican ticket. The Democratic Railroad Commissioners were defeated by several thousand votes. Butler got 947 votes, and St. John 1,151. Mrs. Lockwood coming out fifth best in the race with 0.

The Electoral College of Tennessee met in the State Capitol on Wednesday, and cast the vote of the State for Grover Cleveland and Thos. A. Hendricks, for President and Vice-President. Col. Robt. I. Chester, of Union City, was unanimously chosen to carry the vote to Washington. Col. Chester voted the first time for president Monroe; yet, despite his great age, he possesses unusual activity of mind and body. He told the Electoral College that he could say to Cleveland what none of them could: "Mr. President, I wish no office."

Another alleged Baronet has come to grief at Toledo, Ohio. Charles Neiveille has just been convicted of bigamy. In the trial it was proven he had married three ladies under the guise of an English Baronet. He has at last met his deserts, and hardly any sympathy can be expressed for the deluded women, for they sought the notoriety of a marriage with a titled person, when in so doing they were violating the spirit of the Constitution of the United States. So long as women are silly, they will become the dupes of designing scoundrels.

In the Nashville city schools, running through eleven grades, are 112 teachers, 7,013 children, and 13 buildings. Supt. Sam Y. Caldwell has just handed in his fourteenth annual report to the Board of Education, showing a most favorable condition in the schools. This most efficient, painstaking, and liberal educator has been in very poor health for more than a year, and his many friends in the South will be glad to know that he is much improved, and the hope is felt that many years of usefulness remain to his care. The schools last year cost $87,557.42.

Capt. David L. Payne, better known as "Oklohoma" Payne, died suddenly at his hotel in Wellington, Kansas. Capt. Payne won his fame by attempting to make actual settlements in the Indian Territory, despite the stringent laws bearing on the case. He was ejected forcibly last year by United States troops, yet was preparing for another invasion into the coveted country. Under the laws no white man is permitted to settle in the Territory unless he marries a squaw. So great is the infatuation for a residence there, that many have availed themselves of this privilege, and become property-holders there.

Mrs. Ann T. Hunter, familiarly known as "Mother Hunter," died in Mobile a few days since, at the age of eighty one. She was the daughter of Hon. Henry Toulmin, Judge of the Mississippi Territory, and became famous during the late war for her constant and effective work in Southern hospitals. Since the conflict she devoted her means and energies to the amelioration of the condition of the defenceless orphans of those who fell during the bloody struggle. Her life was full of good deeds, and the benisons of those she helped in their need followed her through life.

Ex-speaker Randall went to Atlanta last week and met with a most enthusiastic reception, a procession of torches two miles in length greeting the distinguished Pennsylvanian. Mr. Randall is specially dear to the southern people on account of the bold stand he took in their behalf during the dark days of reconstruction. He won special admiration during the last congress as a determined advocate of the abolition of internal revenue, and in company with other Democrats voted against the "Morrison Bill," which favored a horizontal reduction of tariff 20 per cent. He was prominently mentioned for the presidency during the late Chicago Convention, and now the press of the country are calling for his appointment to the Treasury. He is from a strong Republican district, but so great is his personal popularity, that he meets with no opposition in his repeated canvasses for Congress. He is a cool, clear-headed man, and incorruptible, trusted alike by friends and foes.

Mr. John Felix Demoville, of the well-known drug house, Berry, Demoville & Co., died last week, of blood-poisoning, after an illness of two months.

The Supreme Court of Tennessee meets in Nashville this week, and has about one thousand cases to try during the four months' session.

Letters from private individuals to Vanity Fair says that the situation of affairs in India is peculiarly dangerous; that the natives were never so bitterly excited against the English. As an evidence of the growing sentiment of independence in English colonies, the following speaks for itself: "The Government has prepared a bill to be presented at the next session of Parliament to enable the Australian provinces to establish a federal council which will be authorized to deal with the subjects of common interest to the different colonies apart from the questions involved in colonial institutions.

At a meeting of the Geographical Society in Copenhagen, Denmark, there were several papers and documents with DeLong's signature attached, which, with the other relics of the Jeannette, were found in Greenland in July, 1884. Several wraps, buttons and clothes were exhibited which were also found in the same place. The President of the society explained that the report that a corpse was also discovered was unfounded.

Herr Bebel a rabid socialist, made an attack in the German Reichstag, Friday, on the military administration of the Government, causing great stir in diplomatic circles. Bebel demanded a reduction of the term of military service and the suppression for a year of the voluntariat. He traced the cause of the budget deficit to the growing expense for armaments, together with the fact that the country was deprived of productive labor by men being forced to serve in the army. He asserted that fourteen times more suicides occurred in the army than among the civil population. The Socialist papers publish official statistics to show that this is true.

THE RAG CARPET.

"Do something? Yes, let's do something, to be sure, but what shall it be?"

Half a dozen girls had met together, led by an idea much more earnestly felt than expressed, that there is a great deal of good being done in this world of ours by those whose hearts are moved by love of the Master to sympathy for his poor whom he has left always with us, but that there is plenty still to be done. And that they themselves would be very glad to have a hand in the doing if they only knew how to get it in.

"It must be real doing, you see. Not this thing of just giving a little of the money our fathers give us and putting it together and then buying something for somebody."

"No, something to do with our own hands."

"Something we'll have to stay in the house and settle down to, when we'd a great deal rather be off on a frolic somewhere—"

"As we'll be sure to when the first novelty's wore off."

"Well, what shall it be? We must make up our minds to-day so we can make a good beginning next week."

"Fancy work?"

"And then have a fair to sell it? That's the way to make the most money."

"And to have most fun," ventured one of the younger ones.

"No," said a very decided voice. "Fairs are getting out of favor among right up-and-down good people who do what they can for some one else's sake, not just to have a good time. They're getting tired of trying to cheat folks into giving, for that's just what it is—a sham all 'round."

Jane Orr's opinions were usually received with respect, so no more was said about fairs.

"Then we'll have to sell our fancy work among our friends?"

"I'm tired to death of fancy work," broke out another voice. "I'm sick of plaques and panels and palettes and horseshoes. Everybody does fancy work and then runs 'round tormenting friends to buy it, when they've got more trash already than they know what to do with. Let's get down to something solid and sensible, I say. Let's make a rag carpet."

"Well, that's sensible enough, I'm sure. And what shall we do with it when it's done?"

"Give it to somebody that needs it. There are plenty such, you know."

All agreed that it would be a good thing, and a reasonable time during the week which passed before the next meeting was spent in rummaging ragbags and soliciting cast-off clothes which might be too far gone for any other use.

"What a splendid heap!" said Rachel Dent, as they surveyed their gathered treasures. "Everybody I asked was delighted with our plan. One or two said they had been begged till they were tired for crazy quilts and such like, and said it was quite refreshing to hear of only rags being wanted. Now, girls, you mustn't quarrel for the bright pieces to sew."

They cut and cut, and sewed and sewed. The quiet humdrum work was found conducive to quiet, earnest talk—then reading was proposed and the little band of workers was astonished at finding how much ground could be covered in the way of travel, essay and poetry in only one afternoon a week.

The balls grew fast during the long summer afternoons. At each place of meeting they sent a goodly number up into the garret, and as months went on could see no end of their work in prospect, for contributions of material poured in upon them.

At length a bargain was made with a weaver who agreed to take sewed rags in payment for the weaving and warp. This was encouraging, for it would make the carpet in very truth their own work. The busy fingers sewed away more industriously than ever, with no thought of stopping at the time when an express wagon went around from house to house and collected the balls.

"Let's have a stripe in the middle with a piece of all our dresses in it," was proposed, and Rachel and Jane went down to give particular directions with regard to that stripe. They came back in a fever of excitement.

"What do you think? That man's house is full and running over with carpet balls! He says there's enough for fifty yards of carpeting and more—besides paying him for the weaving. Isn't it time for us to stop?"

"Why should we? Look at all the stuff we have on hand."

Fifty yards of rag carpeting were cut off, leaving a good piece still in the weaver's loom, added to from time to time as the balls grew.

Then there was much discussion as to the final disposal of their work. They could find ready sale for it, but all felt that the money they might receive would never represent the hours of patient labor made sweet by loving thoughts worked in with each homely stitch.

Through long, self-denying effort on the part of the mothers of these girls and others in the growing town a home for aged women had just opened its hospitable doors to a few way-worn travellers whose path through life had been rough, and who were now thankful to find a quiet abiding place in which to await the Lord's call. When finished and furnished it was thrown open for the visits of those who were interested in the gray-haired occupants.

The rooms had been fitted up by ladies of the different churches of the place and each had seemed to vie with the other in efforts to render them attractive and comfortable to their inmates, although everything was very plain. Our girls came with others to look about.

"They look as cosy as possible, don't they?" exclaimed Rachel. "I'd almost like to be an old woman myself, if I could come here."

"But it seems to me," said one of her friends, "that these bare painted hallways look rather comfortless. They are neat enough to look at, but the days are getting frosty, and I'm sure these floors must be cold to their poor old feet when they go to their meals or when they gather by this sunny window for a good gossip, as I know I should want to it I were one of them."

It was a suggestive idea. Rachel pulled the speaker's sleeve and nudged one or two of the others, and nothing more was said until the rag-sewers met in secret conclave. Then it was unanimously agreed that no better use of the carpet could be found than in making the way softer and warmer for the trembling feet which were drawing so near their everlasting rest.

So on Thanksgiving morning with the first streak of day a bevy of girls invaded the "Home," and unrolled the rag-carpet, and before breakfast time its bright stripes lay along the cold passages.

"See, the stripe made of our dresses comes close by the window," said Jane. "I'm coming here some day to tell them all which belongs to which, and then the dear old souls can remember us by them—if they care to."

We may be sure that plenty of kindly thought went out towards those who had spent hours of their young lives in loving labor for the aged.

Of the carpeting left, many a breadth went into a row of tenements through whose old floors the wind blew and the frost made itself felt. And they were always hearing of new places where feet, old and young, needed to be kept warm.

"I tell you what," said Rachel, one day, "it looks as if rags may come and balls may go and that carpet go on forever, for people won't let us stop. I don't know that we can do better than to keep right on, do you?"

They did, and for all I know that carpet is going on yet.—New York Observer.

LETTER TO UNCLE MINOR.

DEAR UNCLE MINOR: My name is Kitty, and my uncle Archer calls me kitten, and says I am about old enough to be a cat; but I am not going to be a cat, for I would have to catch mice, and I don't think I could do that very well. I am staying with my grandma Elam. I hunt the eggs and sweep the yard. My uncle Edwin is a preacher, and preaches in Lebanon now; I don't get to see him very often. My aunt Minnie used to write letters for the Advocate when she was a little girl like me. I go to Sunday-school, and my lesson is the seventh chapter of Mark. My grandma makes me read it to her every night. Uncle Archer is teaching school; his school will close in three weeks. My school is out already; my aunt Louie was my teacher. I am going to ask my little cousins a question. Who stood up in the sycamore tree, and what for?—[Kitty S. Edwards, Posterville, Tenn.]

CONCERNING PAPER.

Paper is now used in Germany instead of wood in the manufacture of lead pencils.

A contemporary speaking upon this "Age of Paper," says "that it will not surprise us to learn of a steamship to cross the ocean being built of this article. It certainly could be done."

Hand-made envelopes cost originally 5 cents each. The envelope-making machine now turns them out so that a thousand are sold for 70 cents.

An English company has bought 50,000 acres of Yucca palm lands in Soledad canon, and will gather the Yucca palm for export to England to be used for paper pulp. This fiber seems to have been overlooked by our enterprising paper manufacturers.

The number of envelopes made in the United States every day is estimated by envelope manufacturers to be about 8,000,000, of which about 7,000,000 are made by ten manufacturers. In Great Britain and Ireland the number of envelopes manufactured in a year is said to be over 700,000,000; in the United States they amount to about 2,500,000,000. If hand labor were compelled to do the work now done by machines in simply making envelopes, taking no account of the printing done by some of them, it would take 275,000 workmen. According to the census, United States envelope manufacturers employed in 1880 1,204 persons.

Paper watch wheels and water filters.—Amongst the latest uses to which paper, or rather paper pulp, is put is the manufacture, under compression, of the most delicate of watch wheels, which are said to be unaffected by change of temperature. At the Health Exhibition, paper water filters are shown connected directly with the main. The water passes through a disc of thick paper made of pure vegetable pulp, with which is incorporated a certain proportion of animal charcoal deprived of phosphates. As fifteen gallons of water will pass through a twelve-inch filter in the course of an hour no reservoir is required.

In the Sierra Nevada, California, there is a wealth of paper material that will supply the far West for a long time. The forest of fir trees growing on these rugged mountains are now being rapidly converted into pulp for paper. Near Alta, in Placer county, Cal., a big pulp mill has been started. The wood is brought from surrounding mountains, reaching the mill in four-foot lengths. The larger trees are split into sections of convenient size for handling. At the mill, water is the motive power. The wood, after being carefully freed from knots, is ground to a pulp by a large emery wheel. Another and superior quality of pulp is made from the quaking aspen, a kind of poplar found in the vicinity. The process of manufacture is the same, the product being somewhat whiter and of a closer grain. This is the only pulp mill at present running in California. All the pulp manufactured is used by the Stockton Paper Mills.

A more economical method of producing paper pulp is claimed to be realized in the use of a new and ingenious machine, by which the wood is shaved off so finely that it is ready to go at once into the boiler. The machine takes a log twelve inches in length, which it revolves at a speed of one thousand revolutions per minute, and a sharp cutter shaves off a shaving so thin that it would take 750 of them to make an inch, a nicety of execution which may be judged of by the fact that two hundred sheets of ordinary paper are required to make an inch. The knife has a sliding motion, and gradually moves forward as the block decreases in diameter, and, in order that it shall not become dull and the fiber consequently be of uneven thickness, there is an ingenious arrangement of whetstones constantly at work on the knife.—Gathered from "Southern Trade Gazette."

I feel convinced that every man has given him of God much more than he has any idea of, and that he can help on the world's work more than he knows of. What we want is the single eye that we may see what our work is, the humility to accept it, however lowly, the faith to do it for God, the perseverance to go on till death.—Norman McLeod.

A Prominent Farmer Writes.

ROBERT STATION, Jones County, Ga., June 20th, 1881.—By the recommendation of Rev. C. Davis, I used Dr. Mosley's Lemon Elixir for indigestion, debility and nervous prostration, having been a great sufferer for years and tried all known remedies for these diseases, all of which failed. Five bottles of Lemon Elixir made a new man of me, and restored my strength and energy so that I can attend to my farm with all ease and comfort. Refer any one to me.

WILLIAM B. EMERSON.

A CARD.

From a number of St. Louis' prominent citizens as to the merits of Dr. Mosley's Lemon Elixir, the following named gentlemen pronounce it the only pleasant, thoroughly reliable and economical remedy they have ever used for the diseases for which it is recommended.

Judge John P. Hughes, 102 N. Fourth St.

Hon. J. I. Martin, office opposite Four Courts.

It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney disease, fever, chills, impurities of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration by regulating the liver, stomach, bowels, kidney and blood.

Fifty cents for one half pint bottle, one dollar for pint and half bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for by all wholesale druggists, Memphis, Tenn.

Advice to Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms—as general debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night sweats and cough, prompt measures of relief should be taken. Consumption is scrofulous disease of the lungs; therefore use the great anti-scrofulous or blood-purifier and strength-restorer, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to Cod liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections it has no equal. Sold by druggists. For Dr. Pierce's treatise on consumption send two stamps. World's Dispensary Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

"My wife's 3 years nervous affliction," says Rev. J. A. Edie, of Beaver, Pa., "was cured with Samaritan Nerve." $1.50 at druggists.

Both the Mason & Hamlin organs and pianos excel chiefly in that which is the chief excellence in any musical instrument, quality of tone. Other things, though important, or much less so than this. An instrument with unmusical tones cannot be a good musical instrument. Yet all are not good judges of such a matter. An inferior quality of tone will often please the uncivilized ear best, at first; though time and use will reveal the superiority of a real good tone. Hence in selecting an organ it is safer to choose one from a maker whose reputation is thoroughly established, and whose productions are acknowledged to have superlative excellence, especially is this chief thing.—Boston Journal.

Everybody who sends as directed gets a present worth from 20 cents to $500.

The proprietor of the ILLINOIS AGRICULTURIST being desirous of having the already well known and popular paper more widely circulated and introduced into houses where it is not already known, has determined to throw off all profit this year, and in addition use a portion of his capital for the sole purpose of increasing the circulation to 100,000 copies. After deciding to more extensively advertise than ever before the following plan has been adopted by us:

If any one desires two receipts they will be sent for $1, and their subscription will be entered up six months. This offer is good only till January 1, 1885.

500 GOLD WATCHES FREE!

In making up the above list of $30,000 in Presents, we decided to reserve $5,000 to be divided equally among the first 500 subscribers received. If you send 50 cents you will be entitled to one receipt good for one present, and if your letter is among the first 500 received you will be entitled to this beautiful watch. We will print in full in the February issue of the ILLINOIS AGRICULTURIST the names and addresses of the winners of the 500 Gold Watches. This offer is bona fide and will be carried out to the letter. Send now, don't wait. THE ILLINOIS AGRICULTURIST is so well established, having already 20,000 Subscribers, and is backed by ample capital, so that everyone of our subscribers may be sure of getting what we promise. Indeed, we have not only afforded otherwise with a paper that has already secured 20,000 subscribers on its merit. Undoubtedly some who read this new departure will think an offer to give away $50,000 in presents is most unreasonable and unprofitable; but let us say to all such persons that it costs anywhere from $25.00 to $150.00 to secure a large circulation to a paper. We know of a publisher that spent $50,000 in one week in giving away free copies and advertising his paper, and the money was well spent, for it secured for him an established circulation that paid good interest on the investment. Publishing nowadays must either be done on an extensive scale or not at all. It costs just as much for matter, and just as much for illustrations, electrotypes, editorial services, rent and for setting up the type for a paper of 100 circulation as it does for a paper with 500,000 circulation. On small editions, each one of the above items swells the cost of a single paper alarmingly, but on very large editions, the expense is spread over so many papers that it is almost entirely lost; thus you can see that large profits can be made only by doing a large business. This is precisely what we propose doing with the ILLINOIS AGRICULTURIST.

We will send a printed list of the Awards Free, and all Presents will be forwarded to Holders of Receipts as they may direct. Our Old Patrons and Subscribers, whom we number by the thousands, should at once go to work and help us to increase our list, by this grand and generous offer. Only 50 Cents Secures the ILLINOIS AGRICULTURIST three months, and one receipt good for one present. One number of the paper is worth double the subscription price. As to reliability we refer those who do not know us to any Bank or Mercantile Agency. REMEMBER these are Presents to our Subscribers given to them absolutely Free. 2-cent Postage Stamp taken. Money in sums of $1 or less may be sent in an ordinary letter at our risk; larger sums should be sent by Registered Letter or Postal Note, and addressed ILLINOIS AGRICULTURIST, 162 LaSalle Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

Harper's Magazine.

ILLUSTRATED.

With the new volume, beginning in December, HARPER'S MAGAZINE will conclude its thirty-fifth year. The oldest periodical of its type, it is yet, in each new volume, a new magazine, not simply because it presents fresh subjects and new pictures, but also, and chiefly, because it steadily advances in the method itself of magazine-making. In a word, the Magazine becomes more and more the faithful mirror of current life and movement. Leading features in the attractive programme for 1885 are: new serial novels by Constance Fenimore Woolson and W. D. Howells; a new novel entitled, "At the Red Glove," descriptive illustrated papers by F. D. Millet, R. Swain Gifford, E. A. Abbey, H. Gibson, and others; Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," illustrated by Abbey; important papers on Art, Science, etc.

With pleasure we lay before our readers the following extracts from the Fifteenth Annual Announcement of Mars Hill College, an institution perpetually wielding a wonderful and wide-spread influence for truth, refinement and righteousness.—EDITORS.

POSITIONS PROCURED FOR OUR PUPILS.

We make a specialty of preparing pupils for

(1.) PREACHING; (2.) TEACHING; (3.) PREACHING and TEACHING.

Many educated here—among whom are successful lawyers, physicians, merchants, salesmen, mechanics, farmers, editors, authors, teachers and preachers—have so demeaned themselves, that the humility, fidelity, integrity, accuracy and ability of "Mars Hill students" have become proverbial. There is, consequently, such a demand for the services of our pupils, that we deem it perfectly safe to promise to procure pleasant, profitable and honorable positions for all who qualify themselves here for usefulness. Indeed, for several years we have been able to fill comparatively few of the positions tendered.

HEALTHFULNESS!

Mars Hill as a Health Resort.

Our school was founded in 1870. All the "doctor bills," for services rendered our pupils, from then till now, do not we think, amount to twenty-five dollars—probably not to one dollar a year. Those who have come here pale and puny, from malarial districts, have, without an exception, we believe, returned to their homes enjoying health.

What "Watering Place," or "Health Resort," then, can justly claim more, as a health-preserver and health-restorer, than Mars Hill? Address,

T. B. LARIMORE, President.

FLORENCE, ALABAMA.

PATIENCE AND GENTLENESS.

Yes, Father, yes, it shall be granted me,
O'er all my foes to gain the victory.
Not strong in pride, will I their fault reprove,
But win by love.

Humble, like Christ,—still ready to upbear
The poor and weak, the bruised reed to spare,
With tender hand to raise up those that fall,
Forgiving all.

Ever in haste to put mistrust to flight,
To bind shall be my work, not disunite:
To calm with soothing touch the festering smart
Of the sick heart.

So shall I dwell in holy peace divine,
Sparing men's frailties, they shall pity mine.
So shall I too, upheld, O Lord, through thee;
Forgiven be.

SIXTEENTH CHAPTER OF ACTS.

CONVERSION OF LYDIA AND HER HOUSEHOLD.

"And on the Sabbath we went out of the city by riverside, where prayer was wont to be made; and we sat down, and spake unto the woman which resorted thither. And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshiped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul. And when she was baptized, and her household, she sought us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house and abide there. And she constrained us." Acts 6: 13-15.

This is very short, and yet when taken with other passages on the same subject, a very satisfactory account of the conversion of this household. As the case is given so briefly, it will require a careful examination of the words used, in order to understand it fully. It is plainly declared of Lydia, "whose heart the Lord opened." The truth of this declaration no one that believes the word of God can doubt. The Lord opened her heart, and so he opens all hearts that are opened at all. This we may regard as a fixed and certain truth, that the Lord opens the hearts of all who are saved. And the only question we need ask is, how does the Lord open the hearts of people. He did this work then, and he does now; but how? In order to understand this, we must settle the meaning of at least two words in the passage. These are the words, heart, and opened.

First, the word heart, what does it mean? A few plain passages from the word of the Lord will settle the question. Jesus said to the scribes, when they accused him of blasphemy, "Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts?" Mat. 23: 18.

4. The point we make from this passage is, at the heart is that power in man with which he thinks. These people thought in their hearts. And this is the power with which all people think, whether they think good or evil. In another passage we hear Jesus say, "What reason is in your hearts?" People therefore reason in their hearts, think in their hearts. Now with what faculty do men reason, and think? the only answer is, with the mind, with the understanding. Hence in these passages the word heart means the mind, the thinking, reasoning power that God has placed in man. Again, Philip said to the Eunuch, "if thou believest with all thy heart, thou mayest." And Paul said to the Romans,

"If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." People believe with the heart, in their hearts. What power or faculty is it in men with which they understand and believe the facts of the gospel? the only answer is, with the mind, the understanding. In these passages again the word heart means the mind. Not some passion or emotion of the mind, but the mind itself. Many unfortunately only think of the word heart, as a mere emotion, or passion. But these passages show it means the mind itself. Once more. Jesus said, "For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them." Matt. 13: 15. We present this passage to show that in the matter of conversion, the word heart in Scripture means the mind, the understanding. Those Jews of whom the Savior spoke, were not saved. And not saved because they were not converted, and not converted because they did not understand with, in, their hearts. People understand with the mind, not with some passion or emotion, but with the mind itself. In order, therefore to conversion, people must understand the gospel with the heart, the mind, before they can be saved. Hence, when the word of the Lord says of Lydia that her heart was opened, it means her mind, her understanding.

Next, what does the word opened mean? The Greek word used here, has within its meaning, to "open the sense, to explain," that is, to enlighten, to instruct. The meaning therefore is, whose heart, whose mind the Lord enlightened, instructed. This solution or explanation of these words is certainly a very plain, tangible idea of that part of the passage. But the next question is, how did the Lord instruct, enlighten her? Many think he did it by sending the Holy Spirit directly into her heart, to do the work, and that the same work is done the same way now. This conclusion might do, if any cases could be found in which the Lord ever opened any one's heart, ever enlightened or instructed any one that way. But where is the passage? No such passage can be found, no such ever has been found, nor ever will be. Let any man who believes in abstract spiritual influence in conversion find such a one, and we will give it publicity. But we know well there is not one such in all the oracles of God. But it may be asked, how then does the Lord instruct, enlighten people in the religion of Jesus? Let the Savior himself answer, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in (into) the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." Go teach; teach how? "Go into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." The Lord therefore teaches, enlightens men by having the gospel preached, proclaimed, taught to them. There is no exception to this rule. No mortal of earth was ever enlightened in any other way.

Jesus said, Go into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. This takes in all the world, and includes all time. And these apos-ties thus sent out were endowed by the Holy Spirit of God, to preach to all people in all languages. The teaching therefore was done by the Spirit of God, through the apostles; that is, the Holy Spirit taught, enlightened the people by teaching the gospel, the way of salvation to them in their own language wherein they were born, presenting the whole matter to them in words through the apostles. And in all Acts of apostles not one soul was enlightened in any other way. But you ask, was the gospel preached to Lydia and her household in words, and was her heart opened, enlightened thus? Let us examine. Paul was there. How came he there, and what could he do when there? He was sent there by three distinct miracles. Read the first part of this sixteenth chapter, and you will see that the Holy Spirit first forbade Paul to preach the word in Asia. Then next, it would not suffer him to go into Bithynia. He then came to Troas, and there the third manifestation came. There appeared a man of Macedonia and prayed, besought him, saying come over into Macedonia and help us. And says Luke, immediately, when he had seen the vision, we "endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them."

Thus the Lord, by three miraculous manifestations of the Holy Spirit, sent a preacher, Paul to Philippi, to preach the gospel to them. Thus the Holy Spirit, instead of entering directly into Lydia's heart to convert her, went clear across the sea after a preacher and directed him to where the woman was. How strange all this was, if, as so many claim, the Spirit goes secretly and directly into the hearts of people to enlighten and convert them. Lydia did not learn one thing about salvation till Paul got there. The Spirit had imparted no light to her, although it had been at work in her behalf, long enough to take Paul across the sea to where she was. And why was Paul taken over there? To preach the gospel unto them. But was he competent? Read his commission as given in twenty-sixth of Acts and see. The Lord said to him, "I have appeared unto thee for this purpose: to make thee a minister and a witness, both of the things thou hast seen, and of the things in the which I will appear unto thee; delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness unto light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins and an inheritance among them that are sanctified by faith that is in me." In this commission it will be plainly seen that Paul was sent out to do precisely the sort of work that was done for Lydia. But how could Paul open the eyes of People? How could he turn them from darkness to light? The answer is, by teaching the gospel to them; by preaching to them the whole plan of salvation; by telling them what the Lord had done for them, and what he had required them to do, in order to be saved.

But next, how could he turn them from the power of Satan unto God, that they might be saved, pardoned? By inducing them to obey the gospel, which is God's power to save. Jesus said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." This is the Lord's plan for enlightening and saving men. And as Paul was called to do this work, and was specially sent across the sea to Lydia, to preach the gospel to her, we need be at no loss to understand how the Lord opened her heart.

When God calls and sends out an agent to do a certain work, and that agent does as the Lord directs, the work thus done is the Lord's work, just the same as if the Lord had done the work in his own person. All this was true in the above case. Of all the cases of conversion on record, there is not a stronger one against the idea of the direct or abstract work of the Holy Spirit in conversion than this case of Lydia. The whole idea of direct or abstract influence of the Holy Spirit in conversion is a mere human speculation, and the most hurtful thing to the word of the Lord ever invented. But we must go a step or two further in Lydia's case.

When Paul came to where Lydia was, he spoke to her and her household. The speaking, preaching the gospel, was the first thing. The next thing was, Lydia heard. And thirdly, her heart was opened. In other words, Paul preached the gospel to her as the Lord's agent, she heard and was enlightened by it. Hence the Lord opened her heart just as he has opened, and now opens the hearts of all others, so far as they are opened at all. But further, she attended unto the things spoken of Paul. What were these things? One of them was baptism, for she was immediately baptized. But was this all? certainly not, for no one is ready to be baptized till some other things have been done.

First, no one can be scripturally baptized without an earnest faith in the gospel. Without faith condemnation is certain, no matter what else may be done. The same may be said of repentance. No man who refuses to repent can be saved. And as these things both precede baptism, and Paul being directed in all his work by the Holy Spirit, would of course see to it that both faith and repentance existed before he baptized any one. Hence Lydia's conversion was just like all others. First, she heard the gospel. Secondly, she believed it. Thirdly, she repented, and fourthly, was baptized, and was thus saved through an humble obedience to the gospel, precisely like the three thousand on the day of Pentecost. There is not a plainer case of conversion to be found than that of Lydia and her household. One thing in the history of this case is a little strange, if the denominational world be correct in its claim that baptism is a nonessential. All say faith is a necessity, and that repentance must be, but that baptism is not necessary. And yet the divine historian in recording this case says not one word about faith, not a word about repentance, the very things every body says are necessary, but puts in baptism, the thing that every body says is not necessary. Will some of those who say baptism is not necessary rise and explain this? A satisfactory explanation of this from their standpoint would surely be very interesting reading matter.

Regarding the idea of infants being baptized in this case, every one that will think a moment on the subject knows that a household can, and often does exist, without an infant. And as a household can, and thousands of them do exist all over the land without infants, the mention of a household being baptized is no evidence in the world of infant baptism, unless the infants are mentioned. And as none are mentioned in this instance, there is not the shadow of evidence that there were any infants in Lydia's household. But the last verse of the chapter tells the character of persons composing Lydia's household. When Paul and Silas were about to leave Philippi, they went into the house of Lydia,

"And when they had seen the brethren, they comforted them and departed." Those composing her household were brethren, that could be comforted by the words of the apostles, and not infants. The word of God as he gave it is plain enough if men would only cease to add to, or to diminish from it, and cease to tell what they think instead of telling just what the Lord's word says. If all who pretend to be teachers of religion would just give the word of the Lord to the people, instead of what they think it means all would understand it alike. E. G. S.

"HOW SHALL THEY PREACH EXCEPT THEY BE SENT?"

Rightly interpreted, this text determines the issue between Bro. Harding and the writer. We differ as to who is the sender. He says Jesus is the sender. We claim that the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all, is the sender. There is no issue unless explicitly or implicitly it is held that Jesus, exclusive of the church, is the sender, or the church, exclusive of Jesus, is the sender. The church has no existence, except as joined to Christ, its head. But Bro. Harding, in the face of this fact, holds that "Jesus Christ is the great sender forth of preachers," and that the church in the first age "never did send out a man to preach." A bold assumption, and Bro. Harding makes the writer cut off his own head. If men take what opponents assume to be truth; if societies are assumed to be in direct antagonism to the church, and destructive of its functions, then off goes our head. But prove that such is the fact. Reason calls for proof. It needs no assumption to show whose head Bro. Harding has cut off. He makes Jesus alone the sender; Jesus in antithesis to the church, and thus cuts "the head off" of the church. This is apostolicity with a vengeance. God put the evangelist in the church; Bro. Harding puts him out. Paul said, to "God be glory in the church;" Bro. Harding says, to him be glory out of, or apart from, the church. Barnabas and Paul, set apart by the church at Antioch under the direction of the Holy Spirit, went forth from this church as its apostles, its preachers, to convert the world. When they had made the first missionary tour, they returned to Antioch and reported to the church. Why do this? Will Bro. Harding tell? Possibly his distinction between teach and preach will solve the problem. It took, holds Bro. Harding, a superior order of talent to teach the converted; but any man, however inferior his gifts, could preach to the world! Hence these men of inferior talents did not know any better than to think they were amenable to the church, and ought to report to it as the sender. If Bro. Harding had been there, his theory would have forced him to report directly to Jesus as the sender, exclusive of the church. Why not embrace the theory of direct inspiration? This is your logic, the sender is Jesus only; the Bible says the church, with its head, sends. You make the head, exclusive of the body, the sender; hence your desperate effort to reduce the words preach and teach to confused chaos, and your desire to hold the part, and not the whole church, morally, scripturally, and pecuniarily, bound to sustain the evangelist. You know that in one sense all men can preach by living and conversation; you know that in a broader and truer sense all men cannot preach. Why use preach in an ambiguous sense? All men cannot preach as evangelists. If all were Timothies, and gave themselves wholly to the work of the ministry, the church would be all evangelist—all mouth, eye, or ear, or foot.

There was an abnormal enlargement of mouth in the beginning, when the scattered disciples went everywhere preaching; but you know that Timothy was to choose faithful men as his successors as evangelists. The whole church was the pillar and support of the truth. Hence we repeat that in the sense under consideration, "Personally only those preached who were sent by the church, and who possessed the requisite qualifications." This is sound to the core. When the evangelist preaches, the church, or Jesus through the church, preaches; when he suffers, the church suffers.

Bro. Harding's experience only confirms the principle here involved. Hopkinsville, Forest Grove, and all the churches of which he has been a member, since he began to preach, have implicitly sanctioned, if they have not sustained, his work. The elders may let him put twenty tons of logical dynamite under the State Board, and not call him to account; they may let him undermine missions at Constantinople, Japan, India, Paris, London, Southport, Southampton, and Jamaica, and blow all these assumed engines of ruin to destruction, and never call him to account. But if he sprinkles a baby, or teaches that baptism is not for remission, he will soon find out who is his sender.

He knows that he is amenable to his congregation where his membership belongs, and that as far as in it lies, it is bound to sustain him. He exculpates himself, but leaves his church to masticate that if that lies in between what the church is and what it ought to be. Again, come back to first principles. Read what was written about work as the measure of right on the part of the preacher to receive, and of obligation on the part of the church—the sender—to give a just reward. Stipulated pay does not constitute one man a hireling; and the absence of definite agreement with an advertised difference as to method based on what is abnormal, make another person the embodiment of trust. If definite agreement and provision for the future forfeits trust, what becomes of Christians dealing one with another? "Let everything be done decently and in order." This permits agreements. True, it is not compulsory. It is a question of common sense which the Bible recognizes as possible and useful in all ages. We do not measure soundness by the acceptance of any unrevealed plan. We favor spiritual enlargement. Chinese shoes are out of order. Peace-preaching feet are not to be trimmed and cut down to suit any last that an assumed loyalty may dictate, or an assumed contravention of divine authority may suggest.

We do not propose to out-reform the reformers or out-restore the restorers. The spiritual heavens are not about to fall. Nor do we think the societies the pillar and support of the truth. They are mere tools; instruments liable to abuse. They no more usurp the functions of the church than the glove destroys the hand, or the shoe the foot, or the spectacles the eyes. True, like all those human inventions, they imply a certain imperfection. But did not Paul the apostle himself set us the example in this almost blasphemous implication or inference? If, if, the eldership, if the deaconship, if the membership of the churches in Galatia, Macedonia and Corinth were absolutely perfect, when want preyed upon the poor saints in Jerusalem, then why did Paul send men to work up, collect and convey funds to the helpless? Imperfection somewhere created the necessity for the work of Titus, Paul's partner and fellow worker and "the messengers of the churches"—the sent of the churches—2 Cor. 10: 23. If there were any anti-agency men, any anti-middle men, no doubt they made it hot for Titus. But still the facts are there. Will they be evaded? God put them there and all the pro-chaos forces on earth cannot shake them. It was apostolic to have as maffy as three men in the church at Corinth collecting funds for the poor in body; must it, therefore, be wrong to collect and expend funds to relieve the poor in soul? This reminds us that it was right to swear by the temple, but wrong to swear by the gold of the temple. Would Paul teach a principle that we dare not follow? Let us be Pauline throughout, or at least be imitators of him as he was of Christ Jesus. Paul took the churches as they were, and not as they might be when absolute perfection removed the necessity for extraneous help. No great IF was turned into a battering ram to break to pieces the good work of brethren. He did not plant his logical batteries upon an IF, a remotely possible perfection, and then shell his brethren in the Lord as if they were a camp of infidels bent on the destruction of the gospel. J. B. JONES.

One sure way of making the community in which we live, or the church which we attend, or the building in which we do our daily work, a better place than it is, is for us to start with correcting our own faults. Every reformation which amounts to anything begins with the individual; and no one of us will ever find a more suitable individual to be begin with than—himself.

WHO SENDS THE PREACHER?

A REPLY TO J. B. JONES.

In another place in this issue appears an article from J. B. Jones headed, "How shall they preach except they be sent?" Bro. Jones understands this passage to teach the preacher cannot preach except he be sent by the church; and therefore he is in favor of missionary societies for sending out preachers. Bro. Jones is evidently somewhat mixed." Who sent the seventy? Who sent the twelve? Who sent the prophets in the olden time? Who sent Timothy, Titus, Luke, Silas? Who sent the members of the Jerusalem church upon its dispersion? Who sent Aquila and Priscilla when they went to Apollos? In not a single case did a church do it. The Great Commission is the only authority that any man has for preaching. Jesus himself gave it, and in giving it promised, "I am with you to the end of the world." There is not a single case in which a church sent out an evangelist to preach to sinners. There is not a single case in which a church authorized a man to preach, and for the very best of reasons; Christ authorized every Christian to preach as he has opportunity and ability. Nor need one be concerned as to whether he will become a regular evangelist or not; all that he needs to do is to perform faithfully the duty before him now; in so doing he will make the very best provision for the future; God will open his way; "I will guide thee with my own eye;" "the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord;" Jesus says "I will be with you," and according to Deuteronomy 2: 7, that means you shall lack nothing.

Let Bro. Jones produce a single case in which the congregation sent the preacher to preach to sinners, and he will show my position incorrect, and he will at the time blow up his own missionary societies most effectually. Institutions that have a money basis of membership, baby members, life members, life directors, a life director who is not a member of the church at all, are not churches of Christ either in whole or in part.

But, argues Bro. Jones, Christ is the head of a great body, and the church is the body, therefore the church should send out the preacher. Let us see. Do the feet use the hands? Does the mouth direct the fingers? Does the ear obey the foot? No, no, all obey the head. Christ is the head and each Christian is a member of the body. Christ directs them all through his holy word, and helps them all by his blessed Spirit. Take another figure: Christ is a master and every Christian a servant; do the servants send one another? does not the master direct them all? Christ is a king and every Christian a subject; Christ is a teacher and every Christian a pupil. I don't see what comfort Bro. Jones gets from these figures.

"Let us be Pauline throughout, or at least let us be imitators of him as he was of Christ Jesus," says Bro. Jones. Most heartily do I say amen to that. How did Paul follow Christ in sending out preachers? He never did direct a church to select, employ, and send out a preacher. Never! He found faithful young men and took them with him; he committed to them what Christ had given to him—the truth; he directed them to give the good deposit—the truth—to other true men that they may also hand it down to unborn generations. He was a member of no society except the church; he never made a contract for his support in his life; he was never directed in his labors by any church; was never sent out by any church. I know Bro. Jones says he and Barnabas were sent out by the church at Antioch; but I know equally well that the Bible does not say any such thing; it is expressly said that they were sent forth by the Holy Spirit, and there is not the slightest intimation that the church had anything to do with it. True, upon their return "they rehearsed all that God had done with them," but that by no means implies that the church sent them. I report, as a rule, my labors to the readers of the ADVOCATE, but it does not follow that they send me. Bro. Dale once made a trip to the centennial and upon the Wednesday evening after his return gave some account of his trip to the church at Eminence; it does not follow that they sent and supported him upon the trip. When Paul arrived at Jerusalem "he declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his ministry;" he had not been sent forth by them: when Peter and John were released (Acts 4: 23) they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them."

It was a custom among them to report to one another their trials, persecutions, labors and successes.

When I return home from protracted evangelistic tours I am often asked to give some account to the church of my labors and of the prosperity of the cause in the regions in which I have labored. If Bro. Jones does not know the difference between preaching and teaching, between laboring in word, and in doctrine, it would be well for him to study again the alphabet of Christianity.

To preach is to tell; the gospel is the good news which comes to us through the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Every Christian knows it, and if he can talk at all he can tell it; some are able to tell it in such a way as to attract and interest great audiences; these should not fail to exercise their powers as opportunities are afforded; they should be instant in season, out of season. It requires much more knowledge and skill to teach the all things commanded. Before the New Testament was written only inspired men could do it, men "full of the Holy Ghost and faith."

"The Bible says the church with its head sends," says Bro. Jones. He is mistaken, the Bible says no such thing. If it did that would settle the question, and smash up the societies, and the individual plan of evangelism as well. "You know that Timothy was to choose faithful men as his successors as evangelists," says Bro. Jones. I do wonder what position he will finally drift into. At one time he says that the church should send the preacher, then he favors the missionary societies, and now he stumbles in the right direction by intimating that the evangelist is to commit the good story to faithful men that they may tell others.

Bro. Jones thinks that because the Forest Grove congregation would withdraw its fellowship from me if I were to walk disorderly, it therefore sends me out to preach. If I were to sprinkle a baby or to teach that baptism is not for the remission I would soon find out who sends me, he thinks. If my brother were to swindle in his trading the congregation would, upon learning of it, hold him to account. Does it follow therefore that the church sends him out to sell dry-goods? Bro. Jones talks a good deal about logic, assumptions, etc.!!!

Says Bro. Jones, "We do not measure soundness by the acceptance of any unrevealed plan. We favor spiritual enlargement. Chinese shoes are out of order."

Just so; we do not want any unrevealed plan; we want to go by that which is revealed; and that is the decided advantage that I have over Bro. Jones. The plan on which I work is confessed on all hands to be scriptural; that on which he works all agree is not to be found in the Bible. Is his way a better way than mine? Then the unrevealed is better than the revealed—the human better than the divine. Is this so? Let us see. Some weeks ago Bro. Briney examined the report of additions in the Standard and in the Advocate. He found more than half as many published in the Advocate. The Standard has about 30,000 subscribers, we have about 5,000; theirs is the favorite paper with the societies and with the preachers who favor the human plan; according to their circulation they ought to report six times as many additions as we do, whereas they do not twice as many. The Advocate reports far more additions than any paper published by the disciples in proportion to its circulation, and to the number of preachers who support it.

The Michigan Christian missionary Association in its annual report for 1884 gives the statistics of the churches of Christ in Michigan. I glance over this report and find that by far the best church in Michigan is the Plum Street Church, Detroit. It began to exist as a body separate from the other church in this city about fifteen years ago. It now has a larger membership than any other church in the State (i. e. of the disciples); it has a greater number of pupils in its Sunday-school than any other church in the State; it expended more money for home use than any other church in the State; it has a greater number of leaders and teachers than any other church in the State; and this the table of statistics shows; only one other church in the State expended as much for missions as this one, though its mission fund is not given in the table. It expended nearly twice as much money for home use any other church in the State, and it has more than twice as many Sunday-school pupils. This church is the "anti-pastor," "anti-missionary society" church of the State. It never had a hired pastor since it began to exist, and it believes in expending its own money without the aid of any human society. I never knew a church in my life which from principle refused to hire a preacher to take charge of it, and which from principle refused to expend its means through these societies, that was not far more prosperous than any of the churches about it that differ from it in these things. Contrast this church with the "mission church" (?) in England presided over by the "Rev. W. T. Moore, M. A. (for so he advertises himself). That church has nearly five hundred members, has a large meeting-house, has an organ and a select choir to lead the singing, but is nevertheless so feeble that it needs more than two thousand dollars per year from the Foreign Society to keep it running. Bro. Jones is amazed that I am disgusted with the tomfooleries of these societies. I am sure I don't see why he should be.

It seems to me that our brother makes nothing whatever by his reference to the messengers who collected the funds for the poor saints; for that case clearly shows that when such a work was to be done it was done in those days in the most satisfactory way without any missionary societies. Pray tell me how it can help justify himself in the use of the societies to show that the apostles did without the societies, such work as he is now striving to do through them. He shows that the apostles accomplished the work without these institutions; it seems clear to me that we ought to follow them. Says Bro. Jones, "Paul took the churches as they were and not as they might be, when absolute perfection removed the necessity for extraneous help."

Just so; and with these churches just as they were he found no use for the societies. Some of us are fully persuaded that we need them no more than he did.

MY TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Three years ago, I one day laid down my knitting and folded my hands and said to myself (I didn't often, you know, have any one else to say things to):

"Susannah Pratt Ryder, you've no need to fear coming to want in your old age." (Pratt was my mother's maiden name, and I was named for her.) For I had just received a certificate of deposit for two thousand dollars in the Life and Trust Bank. So now I had the interest on that, and the little house I lived in, with its acre of ground, which, planted on shares by my neighbor, Jerry Dobson, gave me my vegetables all summer and my potatoes in winter.

I had worked hard for that money, nursing, sewing, and knitting, year in and year out. I had quit nursing since the time I gave Mrs. Lawyer Prime's baby saffron tea for catnip, on account of my eyesight getting bad. Sewing had to stop for the same reason, but I hope to keep up the knitting till the time comes for folding my hands and closing my eyes, for it's something to be at, and doesn't interfere with thinking of bygone times or saying over a hymn or a text or Scripture, and brings me enough for my annual subscription to the Foreign Missionary Society, and a bit for any worthy object which may come along.

So, you see, I settled down as comfortable and assured as if I'd entirely forgotten what a poor business it is to place your trust in earthly riches. Before I half knew it, you'd be astonished to think how my mind got to dwelling on that two thousand dollars.

And sure enough, if any one had little call to depend on things it was me. Time was when I'd no need to be looking out for a provision for my old age. For, ah me! there was nowhere a tenderer heart or a stronger or more industrious pair of hands than Isaac Ryder had when we came to begin life together in this little house, and soon began laying our plans for building on to it. There is a pretty view from it of woods and river and meadow, and just beyond the village on a low slope is the graveyard. I didn't think much then either way of the view we had of it, but now—I can't since my sight failed just make out the two short graves and one long one there, but I know exactly where they lie.

We never made the house any larger, for the little ones who came to it only stayed a short time. Then after Isaac lay for years in consumption the farm had to be sold—all but the house and the acre of ground. I was glad to go to work—it was my only help in forgetting the dreadful loneliness and in keeping down the cry, "If I could only have kept the little ones!" But it was a comfort, too, to think how Isaac would find them waiting for him in heaven, for he was always great for liking to have his own folks about him. Not to say I didn't feel that way myself, but men somehow can't stand things as women can, you know. And as years went on, I got used to the loneliness, and settled down for a quiet old age with my two thousand dollars and my knitting, for I keep that up, bless you! yes, indeed, old eyes don't need to stop that. I got so used to doing it nights when sick folks didn't sleep, and the light was poor, that now, when I'm doing the ribbing, narrowing, or turning the heel, or toeing off, I'm very apt to shut my eyes.

Well, you may imagine it gave me something of a turn when Isaac's nephew, Joshua John Ryder, came and asked me to lend him that money to put into a big business he had a chance of getting into. Isaac had always set great store by Joshua John, and I felt as if he'd want me to do it, and so I did. And though I had an uneasy feeling about it all the time, it did come very much as if some one had dashed a basin of cold water into my face when I was reading the Gospel Recorder one Sunday morning and came across a piece that said the whole business had failed. I could hardly take it in at first, the words looked so cold and hard; it seemed as if they might have said how it came about, or been regretful or something.

Well, I set up a new stocking the next day, and I knit and knit and knit, and thought and thought and thought. And the more I knit and the more I thought, the more I couldn't see how I was to be spared ending my days in the poorhouse. You see, I couldn't do anything but knit, and though an old woman don't need for much, I knew I couldn't quite get along on nothing at all but vegetables all summer and potatoes all winter. I began counting up what I could do without, and at last I laid down my knitting and walked down to the store and bought half a pound of thirty-five cent tea. I'd always been particular about my tea—never could abide cheap stuff, tasting of nothing but yarbs—but knew I'd have to begin now. When I got back I began wondering if they had tea at all at the poorhouse, and I kept thinking and thinking again till I just gave up and burst out crying.

After a while I heard a knock, and before I had time to say "Come in," in came neighbor Duffey's wife. I was rather glad to see her, for she is a good-hearted soul, though she does like to speak her mind.

"Well," she said, softer'n I'd ever heard her speak before, "what's the matter now?"

I told her how I'd been feeling, and she said she'd felt just so herself, and all the neighbors were that worked up over Joshua John for risking my dependence, they didn't know just how to express things.

I told her I didn't want anybody to feel hard, for it wasn't likely it was his fault at all. Then she straightened herself up in such a way that I knew she was getting at what was really on her mind.

"But I must say, neighbor, how I've been blessing my stars al day to think I've never come out and joined the church, for all the minister's been a-laborin' with me for years to get me in. For—I don't mean no harm—but you can't help seein' what kind of a poor business this thing of trusting in the Lord really is."

Then I straightened up, and says I, "Rebecca Jane Duffey, how you talk!"

"Talk!" says she; "well, haven't I heard you, time and again, talk about how the Lord was a-goin' to take care of you in your old-age? And now here's all you've been a-workin' for and a-dependin' on swep' away at one cut."

I says, "but the Lord's going to take care of me yet."

And then she says: "Then what be you a-cryin' for, and a-feelin' like there was nothin' but want before you? And they're all the same, these Christians. When old Deacon Blout's son died, he says, 'The staff of my old age is gone!' when he's been nigh on to forty year a-calling the Lord his staff. And when Mrs. Case's husband went to bad and the mortgage on the farm was foreclosed, she said, 'There's nothin' left for me now.' Now, what I want to know is, do the Lord's promises to provide for his people mean anything, or do they not?"

I felt as if I was struck dumb; and before I could say a word, off she went, leaving me ready to hide my face in shame and confusion. I saw it was just as she had said. Here was I, all my days been professing to trust in the Lord's care of me, feeling in a way and acting in a way to lead the poor soul to think there was nothing in Christian profession—honestly obliged to class myself with them that bring reproach on religion.

I opened my Bible and read a bit at a time I could see, between whiles taking a look out toward the two little graves and the one large one over on the hillside in the sunshine.

It had never come before me so plain till neighbor Duffey put it to me. Did I believe the promises or did I not? And if I did, why was I so cast down about all this? And as I thought how little time I had to wait, and how short even the longest life is to wait when you come to put it beside the glory that is never to end, and how little matter 'tis if the place is just not what you'd like it to be where you're waiting to go to our Father's house, that wretched two thousand dollars seemed to grow smaller and smaller and poorer and poorer, and before the sunset had faded away from the little graveyard it seemed to have almost faded out of my mind; and the only burthen I had on it, as I lay down, was now I had, perhaps, laid a stumbling-block before that poor soul Rebecca Jane Duffey.

I was starting to go and see her in the morning, when who should-come in but Joshua John. He looked down in the mouth enough, poor man, and I couldn't find it in my heart to feel a bit hard at him, as he seemed to be afraid I might. It's no use telling all he said, except one thing that quite upset me. He wanted I should go and stay with his folks for quite a while. He'd thought it all out how it was the only way he could help make up things to me. I was to let the little house and the acre of ground for one year. It took my breath away to think of it! But it was quite a ways to his house and wouldn't be worth while to be at the expense of going for less time. I looked out at the graveyard, but couldn't see even the white marble specks then for the dimness in my eyes. And it came over me that it didn't do them any good for me to stay to look out at them; but how could I leave them and the little house!

But then it came to me that this might be the very way the Lord was taking to help me, and how could I say No? I said Yes, and it went on so quick I hadn't time to think, which I was glad of. A tenant stood ready to take the little house, and all the neighbors came and helped, for Joshua John wanted I should go right home with him, and he couldn't wait long. So the next day the house that I'd never thought to leave till I was carried out and laid beside the others, whisked out of my sight as Sam Duffey's spring-wagon, that was taking us to the station six miles off, drove round the hill. Rebecca Jane was the last to speak to me, and I could hardly understand her for the catches in her throat.

"Don't you lay it up again, me one word I said, neighbor," says she. "I didn't mean a bit of it, 'cept to make you think of somethin' besides your losin' your money. I know the Lord's a-contrivin' for you and—I'm a-goin' to join the church myself next Sunday."

I was so astonished and so glad that I clear forgot to keep watch for a little chink between the hills where I might have got one more look at the little graveyard. P'raps 'twas natural enough that all the way I should have a kind of a bitter feeling that I was driven out of my own home in my old age. But when I got to Joshua John's I soon felt ashamed of such a thought, for they gave me such a welcome as did my old heart good. Harriet was afraid the children would disturb me, but they all took to me so, I seemed to warm to them right at once. Their pretty faces and blue eyes and curling hair (they favored the Ryders mostly—the Ryders are all light complected) brought back long-gone days to me.

I had expected, you know, to feel strange and homesick and out of place, just longing to get back to the old place and the old ways, but somehow I wasn't. It seemed sociable-like to take my knitting and sit where I could chat with Harriet as she stepped about her work. She's a great hand to get through work lively and be ready to sit down, too. And soon the children got to calling out, "Where's gram'ther?" when they came in, for I told them to call me so. And when they'd wish me good-night, the touch of their soft little hands and lips would make me sometimes shut my eyes and try to forget all these thirty years.

So the year flew by very fast, and not a word had been said but I was to go back to the little house. Joshua John and Harriet talked as if, of course, I'd want to, and, of course, it wasn't for me to say I wanted to stay of my own invitation. But you'd be surprised to know how I dreaded going back, and I remembered how lonesome the wind used to sigh about the chimney, and how forlorn it was to sit down to meals all by myself. And Sunday evening, when I was telling the children a story, my voice went down when I said:

"You must remember what I say when I'm gone."

And the youngest little fellow, he put his arms around my neck, and says he:

"I's a'n't let ee do 'way, nebber."

And they all began to cry till I just gave up. And Harriet, she put the children out of the room, and then she says, a-crying all the time:

"We haven't said anything about your staying on, me and Joshua John haven't, because we thought it would seem like we wanted you to stay because 'twould be the easiest way for him to make things right with you. But—I don't know whether we'll do without you."

I stood right up on my feet, and says I:

"Harriet Ryder, I'm an old woman, and shan't trouble any one so very long; but the Lord's brought me to a good place, and, if I a'n't in your way, I don't want any other home but yours till I go to Isaac and the little ones." The tenant of the little-house was glad to get it for a term of years. I've made my will, leaving it to Joshua John's children.

If I hadn't lost my two thousand dollars I should never have had such a home among my own kindred in my old age.—Christian Weekly.

Church News.

I preached yesterday at Thompson's Station. A worthy young man, who, for some years past, had been a member of the Baptist church, united with us. He is well educated, and will, I think, be a great help to the brethren at the Station. He is a teacher and has a good school, three miles from the Station, at Cayce's Springs. Bro. Lipscomb, I am sure that you are right on the question of re-baptism; and as the gentleman was satisfied as to his baptism, we received him by giving him the hand of fellowship.—[E. B. Cayce.

"I will give you a report of some of my preaching in this Nation this year, although I don't often write for the papers, as I am not much of a scholar. I have been preaching in this Nation two years; have preached once a month near Rocky Point. I began in May, held a meeting in July, and also one in August; in the latter one I was aided by Bro. Chance, from Wise County, Texas. The immediate result, eleven by confession and baptism, and several reclaimed, and one from the Baptists. I began preaching in the Grove last May, and now we have a good house of worship almost complete. The brethren and sisters meet every Lord's day to break the loaf. Brethren, pray for us, that we many continue to sow the good seed of the kingdom."—[J. C. Lynn, Pickens County, Chicasaw Nation.

A meeting at Teils' Chapel, Jackson county, Tenn., commenced on Saturday before the second Lord's day in October, and continued one week. It resulted in eight additions to the church of God; seven by confession, and one from the Cumberland Presbyterians. May they be guided into all truth by the word of God, that will build them up and give them an inheritance among those that are sanctified. May they ever adorn the doctrine of Christ by living in obedience to his divine will. Bro. W. H. Carter and Bro. E. G. Rogers, of Lafayette, Tenn., did the preaching. We never heard a better series of sermons on the scheme of redemption. Bro. Carter and Bro. Rogers work well together in the pulpit. Bro. Carter also delivered a series of sermons on church organization, advocating that officers in the church should be ordained by fasting, prayer, and laying on of hands. This doctrine we cannot endorse. Our brother quoted 1 Tim. 5: 22: "Lay hands suddenly on no man." Now, Bro. Carter, it seems strange to me that you would rely upon this passage of Scripture to support your theory. Will not Bro. Carter let the readers of the GOSPEL ADVOCATE hear from him in reply to Bro. E. G. Sewell? Now, come and show us your authority, if you have any, and you will oblige many of your brethren in this community.—[Henry Rehorn, Jr.

I commenced a meeting the 22nd of November which lasted five days, and five added to the Lord; one from the Baptists, one reclaimed and three by confession and baptism. This meeting was held at Marietta, five miles of Summer Shade, in Monroe County, Ky. The brethren and sisters were very much revived, a bad difficulty in the church was settled, and had a good meeting. We see that it is no trouble to settle difficulties when parties are disposed to do right. I wish to say to the brethren through the GOSPEL ADVOCATE, that I do not know whether I will preach for four churches or evangelize. I have had a call to evangelize Adair County, Ky., but have not accepted it as yet.—[Robert Kirby, Peytonsburg, Cumberland County, Ky.

I commenced a meeting at Ward's Chapel on Saturday before the second Lord's day in November, and continued until the next Thursday. The result was twenty added to the disciples, and the setting apart of J. B. Brantley as an evangelist. The church there numbers sixty all brought in in less than twelve months, and are in harmony and good working order. Bro. Brantley is a good zealous worker in the cause, and well posted. From there to Spearsville on Friday. Preached on Saturday and Lord's day, also Monday; result, six additions, and arrangements made to set the church in order and preaching once a month next year. This is the place where I held a discussion with a Baptist preacher in September. Fruit is being gathered from the seed sown then. From there to my home near Washington, Ark., on the fourth Lord's day. Preached at Holly Grove, five or six miles east of Washington. On Monday I baptized two. These have been among the happiest meetings of my life. The last two baptized were my only son and his wife. All my children are now in the fold of Christ. Praise to our God.—[J. B. Davis.

The Bright Side.

Nature will always take the color of the spectacles we wear. They who choose to wear yellow ones are likely to die of the jaundice; they who prefer rose-color make life a gladness and a blessing, and generally walk on the sunny side of the way. A poor widow, not having bed-clothes to shelter her boy from the snow which blew through the cracks of her hovel, used to cover him with boards. "Mother," said the boy, "what do poor folks do this cold weather who have no boards to put upon their children?" There are people who are never contented with their lot. Clouds and darkness are over their heads, whether in rain or shine.

Bad temper is oftener the result of unhappy circumstances than of an unhappy organization; it frequently, however, has a physical cause, and a peevish child often needs dieting more than correcting.

Intellectually the difficulties of unbelief are as great as those of belief, while morally the argument is wholly on the side of belief.—Dr. Arnold.

It is always easy to point out a path to others, but not always so easy to walk in it ourselves.

QUERIES.

Six congregations meet in co-operation and agree to employ a young preacher to evangelize one year; are to pay him $300.00. They appoint a committee to notify him of their action; the committee notifies him and he goes to work and does the preaching, but at the end of the year he only gets about half the amount. Now the query, is each one of the congregations equally responsible for the whole amount until paid, or not? We want light on this subject. The preacher has waited patiently for his money for a year or more, and has called for it time after time, but not one effort is made to collect it for him. He is poor and needy, and has nothing but his labor upon which to live, while many of those who employed him are wealthy. Would it be right for him to cease asking for his money and do without it?—[Lee Jackson, Thyatira, Miss.]

We have so often protested to the brethren that these loose co-operations, as they are called, are so near nothing, and are so utterly unreliable, that a man who would trust one ought to be disappointed. If a brother expects to be supported by one or more churches, it is much better that each church act for itself. The nearer the laborer and he who supports him get together the better for both. All these intervening associations between them weaken the sense of responsibility to each other. No church employed him. The co-operation did it. But the co-operation is nothing. Therefore he has been employed by nothing. Nothing supports him and he suffers the penalty of dealing with a nonentity. Hence these co-operations all fail or speedily grow into ecclesiasticisms. Hence we have insisted at all times that if one congregation cannot do a work needed, send a messenger to another and another and ask assistance until enough are enlisted to accomplish the work. Then let each congregation see to the appropriation of its own means. This is the way the apostles did. I do not think we can improve upon their wisdom. This much in behalf of divine law.

As a matter of justice and right, and of human law, founded, too, on justice, every church and every individual who participated in the meeting, if they made a promise to pay so much, is bound for the whole. We doubt not each could in law be held responsible for the whole. They by their acts form a co-partnership and employ the preacher. They trust each other as partners, and what one fails to perform each of the others is bound as an employer to make good. No principle of law and justice is better established than this. If the co-operation or individuals in it, say here are these church or individual subscriptions, amounting to so much, we will give you these and if you are willing to risk them we will employ you, then he could not hold these individuals or churches bound further than they had bound themselves on subscription. But we submit, brethren, the whole thing is violative of divine order, is loose, and this way of doing things breeds dishonesty in the members, distrust and discouragement in the teacher, is a disgrace to the Christian religion and will always bring reproach and shame upon churches and individuals so acting.

If the above is a fair statement of the case, every brother and church that formed the company, that promised to see the preacher paid, is bound for the whole. To employ a preacher to do a certain amount of work at wages, and fail to pay the wages, is as dishonest as it is to employ a negro to work in the cotton field all the year, then refuse to pay him for it. And he who does that is as dishonest as the negro who, under cover of midnight darkness, steals the chickens or corn or meat from his neighbor, with less cause and excuse. Such things among Christians are a crying shame and disgrace, and the man in any way guilty of such dishonesty with a preacher or anyone else, should be dealt with by the congregation. But it is best to avoid all temptations and occasions for such things by doing as the inspired men did. The brethren ought not to wait for him to ask for the promised help. D. L.

Please explain Romans 4: 15, "Where no law is there is no transgression." 1 John 3: 4, "Sin is the transgression of the law. Romans 2: 12, "As many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law." Now how can a man sin without law, when sin is the transgression of law? Again Rev. 20: 12, John says, "I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works." Now Christ said the "words that I have spoken shall judge you in the last day." Taking these Scriptures together, by what law will the heathen be judged or condemned?—[S. F. Halbrook, Lyles, Tenn., December 2, 1884.]

First, then a man can transgress a law without knowing that law. "And if a soul sin, and commit any of these things which are forbidden to be done by the commandments of the Lord; though he wist (knew) it not, yet is he guilty, and shall bear his iniquity; and he shall bring a ram without blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, for a trespass offering, unto the priest, and the priest shall make an atonement for him concerning his ignorance wherein he erred and wist (knew) it not, and it shall be forgiven him. It is a trespass offering, he hath certainly trespassed against the Lord." Lev. 5: 17. "That servant that knew his Lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew it not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes." Luke 12: 48. Here is the clear enunciation of the truth in both the Old and New Testaments, that the law of God may be broken by those ignorant of it. When that law is broken, penalties flow from the breaking of the law, whether he who breaks it is aware of it or not. Many examples of this are found in both the Old and New Testaments. The whole Jewish nation in the days of Ezra present an example of this. So does Paul, who sinned ignorantly in unbelief. These, to my mind, clearly indicate that God has not made mere arbitrary enactments and tests for man—there are tests—but the commands of God are fixed and unchangeable principles growing out of God's own being. He has in the Scriptures declared these laws that man might be warned not to violate them; but the violation of them brings the penalties as much as violation of the material laws brings the penalty regardless of whether we are cognizant of those laws or not. The fire burns the ignorant and innocent child as well as the man having knowledge that fire burns. To sin knowingly, is to violate two laws—commit two sins; one of them, presumptuous in its character, involves a deeper ruin.

Then God's law will govern in the moral and spiritual world whether we know the law or not. To violate that law, will bring the penalty whether we know it or not. To be "without law" was simply to be without the knowledge of the law. "Where there is no law," means there is no sin where God has no law. But we sin or transgress the law without knowing the law. Hence those without the law, sin in ignorance of the law. Live in violation of it without knowing it. Those who do this, sin without law, (without knowing the law,) these shall be condemned "without law," "without knowing the law," and those who without knowing the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, become a law unto themselves and are saved by doing the things contained in the law. Note well, all who ignorant of the law sin against the law, perish. Only those who not having the law, yet do the things contained in the law, become a law unto themselves, and so are saved by doing the law. No passage of Scripture was ever more perverted than this one. It teaches that even the heathen, not having the law, must yet do the things contained in the law in order to be saved.

The law clearly is the revealed law of God; indeed he has no other for judging and saving man. But some may think this unjust. Who art thou, oh man, that judgest God? and then the parable of the potter and the clay applies. But in the first chapter to the Romans, Paul clearly explains why the heathen were without law—"because when they knew God, they honored him not as God." "They changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, etc." "Changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshiped and served the creature more than the Creator." "As they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, etc." Clearly the heathen were ignorant of God because they did not desire to know and worship him. It is clear, too, that as God is no respecter of persons, and he sent his word to some of the heathen, who were willing to serve him, he sent and now sends it to all who are willing to receive and honor him.

I cannot believe that God gave his Son to die to save man, and ever let a single soul die and be lost for lack of a knowledge of that gospel. But it saves no responsible person who is ignorant of it. God does not cast his pearls before swine; then the fact that God has not sent his gospel to a people is evidence clear to me, that no one of that people would receive it, if presented. There is no doubt but that the Scriptures, both Old and New, regard all those who sit in darkness, as lost; and God has but one law by which all will be judged. That law Moses nor Christ made or enacted, they only made it known that through it man might be saved. D. L.

Bro. Briney reviewed our article, "The Only Path of Safety," and asks us to publish it, and propounds a number of questions to us. We would very gladly publish his article and answer his questions, but we did not retain his articles on "Worship," without which we cannot be as specific as would be necessary in the matter. We wrote to Times office for the papers, but have neither received them nor any response to our request. We have written to Bro. Briney for them. So soon as we can get these we will gladly comply with Bro. Briney's request.

QUERIES.

BROS. LIPSCOMB & SEWELL: I desire to submit a question to you on church discipline, and ask you to tell us the Scripture teaching on the subject. One of our members, who is a young man and a physician, has been guilty of being intoxicated and using profane language. This was reported to the elders, (of which the writer is one,) and in the meantime the young brother had removed to a place about twenty miles away, where he has located in the practice of his profession. The writer called on the young brother at one time, when he was here, and made known to him the charges preferred against him. The brother frankly confessed the truth of the charges, and expressed sorrow, and directed me to say to the church that he was sorry he had done so, and that he would try to do better in the future, but argued that the word of God did not make it imperative upon him to go before the church to make the acknowledgment. He further stated that there was a congregation near where he had located, that he wished to worship with, and requested me to ask the congregation at Lafayette to accept his acknowledgment, and grant him a letter of commendation, that he might unite with the congregation near him. All of this proceeding was reported to the church, and the brethren here refused to accept his acknowledgments, and refused to give him a letter of commendation, unless he came in person and make said acknowledgments before the church when assembled. The brethren, or a majority of them, insist that that is the only scriptural mode of procedure in this case. Others insist that the acknowledgments presented to the church by proxy should be sufficient, and that the letter should be granted. We all wish to do right in the matter, and will stand corrected, if in error. Now, anything you will say in an advising manner, would be gladly received through the GOSPEL ADVOCATE. I will say, in addition, that the congregation meets regularly every Lord's day to break the loaf, etc., and have done so for more than twelve years, and have kept up a good Sunday-school all this time also.—[M. N. A., Lafayette, Tenn.]

Suppose the brother was in California, instead of twenty miles away, would the brethren think it necessary that he should come before the church to make the acknowledgment or remain unforgiven? The Bible requires that we should confess our faults one to another, and pray one for another, that our sins may be forgiven, and no brother ought to be unwilling to confess his sins before the church, or anywhere else. But we do not know of any Scriptures that require the sinner to come in person before the church to make confession of the wrong, before the church can forgive. We think sometimes there are sins that it is best to confess to the elders, and not before children and others. It is not always best that children should know all the sins that even members of the church commit. This not because the man should not publicly confess, not to shield him, but to protect the young. I mention this merely to indicate that I think there is no inexorable rule demanding that a sin should be necessarily confessed before the whole congregation. I again state that so far as the sinner is concerned, he ought not, through false pride, draw back from any kind of public confession. But the congregation certainly may exercise a discretion as to what degree of publicity is given, and a full and free confession to the elders, reported to the congregation, when it is not convenient for the person to attend in person, ought to be accepted. We know no Scripture requiring any other course. We hope Bro. Cawthorn will take this as a response to his further queries. We think no sinner ought to be ashamed to confess and turn from his sins; but the Scriptures do not require that the individual shall always do it in the presence of a promiscuous assembly, nor demand absolutely the presence in the assembly, to render that confession valid. D. L.

BRO. E. G. SEWELL: Please explain the following Scripture: the twelfth chapter of 2 Cor., including the second, third, fourth and fifth verses. Who does Paul have reference to?—[T. W. Head, Rising Star, Eastland Co., Texas.]

We cannot tell with certainty who it was that Paul saw caught up, whether it was Paul himself, or some other man. Though it is generally thought that Paul himself was the man that was thus caught up, and that when he says of such a one will I glory, he is not speaking of himself as a man in the flesh, but that he was speaking of the spiritual man that was so highly favored of the Lord as to be permitted to enjoy such a vision—that he rejoiced that he possessed, through the religion of Jesus a divine, spiritual nature, being a character that could be thus favored and exalted by the Lord, and that of this new, spiritual man, this godly character that should enjoy eternal life he would boast, but not of his fleshly being. But the main point with Paul was to let the Corinthians know that he had such a vision fourteen years before that time, and that they should regard what he said to them as one divinely inspired and sent of the Lord. And it was to prevent him from being too much exalted on account of this wonderful vision, that the thorn in the flesh was given him to buffet him, which thorn the Lord refused to remove, though he thrice besought him to do so. E. G. S.

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE.

We allude to the tendency to substitute something which we regard as very excellent for something else which is of divine ordination. We believe it is not only our privilege as Christians, but our duty as well, to use many expedients and adopt many methods of doing good which are not specifically commanded, provided only these expedients or methods do not contravene any divine arrangement. We are not even permitted to substitute one divine commandment for another, much less to substitute some device of our own for what God has ordained.

A good sentiment from the Christian-Evangelist, that we have been trying to impress upon it for a good while. The Christian-Evangelist thinks human societies excellent, and so substitutes them for the individual and church devotion and activity which God ordained for the spread and upbuilding of his kingdom.

ITEMS AND PERSONALS.

"Count that day lost in which thou hast done no good deed."—King Alfred.

Bro. W. H. Craig has changed his residence from Ennis, Texas, to Italy, Ellis county, Texas, where correspondents may in the future address him.

On the night of December 3, at the residence of Elder W. F. Todd, in Edgefield, Mr. — Jordan and Miss Benella Todd were made one. They make their future home in Rutherford county.

Sister Charlton sends a card asking help for the brethren to build a house at Wingo Station, Ky. We know Sister Charlton as a good, earnest sister, and would be glad for the brethren to get help.

On the night of December 1, Dr. S. F. Chisholm, at the residence of Capt. J. M. Barnes, was united in marriage with Miss Alice Buck. They left at once for West Point, Miss., where they make their future home.

Brother and sister McQuiddy made our office a call, a few days since. It was the first time we had met with her. The call was a pleasant and enjoyable one. It was in our mind to tell Sister McQuiddy, as she travelled around with Bro. McQuiddy, it would be fair for her to present the claims of the ADVOCATE, while he solicited for the Guide.

Married, at the residence of the bride's father, in Davidson county, Tenn., by E. G. Sewell, A. Marion Hamilton and Augusta D. Owen, daughter of John and Judith Owen. May long life and usefulness attend the happy pair.

Recently our aged brother, C. Kendrick, now of Downey, Cal., lost his wife. At her request her six sons bore the body to the grave. Soon one of the sons, just grown, died, and the family was again called upon to sorrow for the dead.

Bro. K. M. Vanzandt, of Forth Worth, after spending a couple of weeks with friends and relatives in Tennessee, returned to his home, last week. The wife and baby of Bro. W. Lipscomb, Jr., accompanied him to meet her husband, who has located in Tarrant county.

The Christian-Evangelist, commenting approvingly on our article in reference to publication of papers, says that their club rates did not pay expenses, but they were forced to do it to meet competition of other papers, which is just as we said. The "other papers" was the Standard.

Bro. G. W. Campbell, of Lynnville, passed through the city with his two little girls, on his way to California, last week, in quest of health. We are sorry to see him in such feeble health, and commend him most heartily to the sympathy and fellowship of Christians wherever he may go. He is a true, worthy man.

The house for the North Nashville church has been completed except the plastering. The house and lot cost about $1,500. We trust, with a place for meeting, the brethren in North Nashville will do well. In South Nashville a lot has been bought and paid for, and several hundred dollars raised to build. They hope to build early in the spring.

Married, at the Christian church in Hartsville, Wednesday, December 10, by Elder J. M. Kidwill, Mr. G. D. Alexander, of Dixon's Springs, to Miss Bettie F. Crenshaw, of the vicinity of Hartsville. On Thursday, December 11, at the residence of the mother of the bride, near Watertown, Mr. George Harris, of Bellwood, to Miss Minnie Waters, by Elder J. M. Kidwill. Both brides are devoted, earnest Christians. The husbands are worthy men of excellent, moral and social standing, and start out in life with the congratulations and best wishes of a host of friends.

Bro. W. A. Belding has been with us the past week. He is an earnest Christian man, and is trying to work up an interest in the Christian education of the negro population of the South, especially in the Southern Christian Institute, between Jackson and Vicksburg, Miss. This Institute is in the centre of the largest negro population of the South; has been in successful operation, and self-supporting, for two years past. The Institute owns eight hundred acres of good land, which the pupils cultivate. They are in need of a good school building, and for this purpose Bro. Belding is soliciting funds. Our people all approve the work, but had spent so much money in showing how foolish sensible men can be over the election, that will benefit no one, they have little money for God and humanity.

MARRIED.—At the residence of the father of the bride, W. W. McCrary, in Madison county, Ala., on December 3, I tied the "nuptial knot" for Dr. J. P. Watts and Miss Willie McCrary. The happy couple are faithful members of the church at Oakland, and will exert an influence for Christianity. The handsome bride has rare domestic, literary and musical attainments, crowned with pure womanly modesty. The groom is a man of sterling worth, and stands high in his profession for one of his age. He can now say with the poet:

"And I as rich in having such a jewel
As twenty seas, if their sands were pearl,
The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold."

May their happiness increase and continue to increase, until they can say, "It there is an elysian on earth, it is this! it is this!"—[T. C. L.]

LETTER FROM AUSTRALIA.

DEAR BRO. LIPSCOMB: Your ably edited paper is an ever-welcome visitor. Its money value is so far above that of the Pioneer, my little monthly, that I feel like writing you a special letter to thank you for your kindness in sending it along in exchange.

In return I send you this letter, and if you find anything in it worth gleaning out for your readers, you are welcome. At all events, it will give you some idea of the cause we plead, and its progress in Australia.

The Australasian colonies have a population slightly exceeding three millions, and are therefore about as strong as the American colonies were when they proclaimed their independence. Our area is rather above that of the States, and humanly speaking, if the Lord tarries his coming, our population in 1984 should be fully as large as yours is at present.

The number of Disciples in the colonies is about 7,300, distributed as follows: Victoria, 3,500; South Australia, 1,500; New South Wales, 500; Queensland, 200; Tasmania, 400; New Zealand, 1,200. These figures are, if anything, below the mark. Probably, including scattered Disciples, there are fully 8,000 in good standing. There are about 130 churches, and some 26 evangelists. The cause is steadily advancing. At her last annual meeting Victoria reported net increase of over 500, and probably the net increase every year now approaches 1,000 for all the colonies.

As in America, so here we have a party of "Progress," and a conservative party in the church. Judging, however, from American papers, I believe our most advanced progressionists would be considered very conservative in the States. None of the churches, that I am aware of, use the organ in worship, though in perhaps a very few cases it has been introduced in the Sunday-schools. We have no conventions of the nature of your missionary societies; but in three of the colonies, annual meetings, called "conferences," are held for purely evangelistic purposes. Each conference has a committee, with president, secretary, and treasurer, to gather funds and employ evangelists. Their work is in no sense legislative. About twenty of the evangelists are employed by as many individual churches, and confine their labor almost exclusively to these churches; they are not, however, called "pastors," though often they virtually are so.

Bro. Harding (in whose writings I take much interest) will rejoice to know that in Australia the brethren do not take support from the world. There are exceptions, but in the great majority of churches money would be refused if offered by an unimmersed person. The very arguments he uses have long been pleaded here, and are, by nearly all the brethren, considered conclusive. If Bro. Harding ever feels like coming to Australia, he will find us all one with him on that point. On the question of a stated salary, he, perhaps, would not find many sympathizers. All the preachers, I think, get a stated amount per annum.

All over the colonies, the meeting on the Lord's day morning is especially for Christians, not for those out of Christ. "The disciples come together to break bread," not to hear a sermon. The Lord's supper is made the most prominent feature, and is observed in the middle of the meeting, not at its close. Elders, or, in the absence of elders, brethren temporarily appointed to do their work, take it in turn to preside, and addresses are given by some of the "lay" brethren; often two or three speak, sometimes only one, according to time. In some churches the plan system is adopted, and the list of speakers arranged beforehand; in others no plan is arranged. This is one of the points in dispute between "progressive" and "conservative" brethren, the former being strong opponents of the "open platform."

None but immersed persons are permitted to break bread. I notice that in America the practice is different. We think that as it was certain unimmersed persons did not break the loaf in New Testament times, faithfulness to apostolic teaching requires us to withhold the loaf from them now. Australian disciples reason thus: In the great commission faith and baptism come before "teaching them to observe all things," and we should not countenance any departure from the Savior's teaching, either by placing baptism before faith, or the Lord's supper before baptism.

So strong is this feeling that in South Australia, where one or two churches have knowingly permitted the unimmersed to break bread, several churches have refused to co-operate with them in the preaching of the gospel. The action of these conservative churches is approved by a large number throughout the colonies. The hymns are announced and prayer offered by different members in "open platform" churches, but in others the presiding brother either does this himself, or calls upon brethren by name.

All the churches meet every Lord's day to remember Christ. I notice some of the American churches meet once or twice a month. Such a state of things is, thank God, so far, unknown here; when a church is organized, it is always with the distinct understanding that it will meet weekly, and whether an evangelist is present or not, this is always done; as no "sermon" is required, it is not looked for. Several of the churches do not meet (owing to lack of speaking ability) for the proclamation of the gospel, except when a speaking brother is with them. A great number of the churches are small, many having under twenty members, but the most of them are in a fairly, healthy condition and increasing, if slowly, still surely.

The protracted meeting, which is quite an institution with you, does not thrive so well here, and is not systematically practiced; most of the churches grow gradually, and churches are not very rapidly organized. I am inclined to think, however, that the work, if slower, is more substantial than with you; churches rarely die out, and although a strict discipline is observed, a very large proportion of the converts made are retained.

We are not an influential people. I believe you in the States have many wealthy members, we have very few; it is our fortune or misfortune to have most influence with the poor.

The cause in this colony (Queensland) is young; the first church was planted two years ago by Bro. Cheek, a zealous evangelist, who shortly after died. I came over some little time after to take his place, being supported by the Victorian conference. We now have nine small churches with two hundred members. With one exception the churches are in a healthy state. One other evangelist is at work here.

In the shape of recent news, I may mention that a Bro. Myers, or Meyers from Kentucky, has just arrived in Wellington, New Zealand, to labor with the church there, and that Bro. J. J. Haley, another Kentuckian, has decided to leave Victoria at end of present year to labor in San Francisco. Bro. Haley has been in the colonies for many years, and is highly esteemed as an able preacher and writer. He is well known throughout Australasia as the editor of the Watchman; general regret is expressed at his resolution to return to America. Other American preachers out here are A. B. Maston, in Hobart, Tasmania, who has received an invitation to take Bro. Haley's place in Victoria; Bro. E. T. Bennett, in Collingwood, Victoria; and L. J. Gore, in Adelaide, S. A., where he has been preaching for the last sixteen years. The other preachers are either English or Colonials.

There are two monthlies (the A. C. Watchman and A. C. Witness) published in Melbourne, Victoria, (the latter is the conservative paper,) and both have a good circulation. The Faithful Witness is published in South Australia, and though conducted by two of our brethren, is not a distinctively disciple paper. The Christian Pioneer, I edit. It has now a circulation approaching 3,000, and I have some thought of making it a weekly, but rather fear the expense. At present we have no weekly in the Colonies.

The climate of these Colonies varies much from the very cold of New Zealand to the tropical of North Australia. The wages of laboring men average from ten to twelve dollars a week, and of mechanics from twelve to eighteen. Settlement is progressing rapidly. These Colonies will, in some part or other, grow almost anything that can be grown elsewhere.

As to the sects, the Episcopalians take the lead in number, wealth and influence. Romanists, Presbyterians and Methodists are also numerous; one branch of the Methodists (Wesleyan) has over 60,000 members. The Baptists form rather a strong body, but I don't recollect the number. Baptists here are nearly all open communionists and are steadily growing. "Freethought" is not very popular. Open infidelity has not many advocates. The chief obstacle to our progress is the indifference to religious matters, which seems rather growing.

But I have written enough for the present. If this is useful to you, I will occasionally send a few Australian jottings.

D. A. EWERS.

[We will be thankful to Bro. Ewers to write as often as he finds time.—Eds.]

STRANGE, WHAT IS THE CAUSE?

A good preacher said to me he had found coldness and want of zeal in many places in Kentucky. I said, As far as I have gone, I have been well received, heartily welcomed by many good brethren and sisters; some places in need of reviving. What is the cause of the things you complain of? He said a good preacher said in the organ controversy, some had too strenuously opposed the organ. I said, Pushing in the organ, and also many other things not named or hinted in the Bible, is the cause. Doing things not commanded of God. Doing such in Christ's name cannot please God, nor prosper only apparently. Overdoing even good and true things, will always bring a relapse and coldness. When Constantine used an uncommanded effort to spread Christianity, the success seemed great for a time; but the bad effects of his efforts are seen and felt yet. When our protracted meetings are so conducted as to please men, and they are brought in by anecdotes and sympathetic style and stories, the meeting over, and coldness follows. But when people are deeply convicted of sin, and humbled at the cross of Christ, they are not so apt to fall away. Too much haste and misguided zeal in pushing any—even a good cause, will end in a retrograde movement. Many of my good brethren have honestly erred here.

Fifty years ago our movement was steady and more sure than to-day. God sent us good, faithful, self-sacrificing preachers. But brethren so anxious to move faster, following the sects, must endow colleges and make preachers. Over zeal made many honestly say: we must do more. We must have State, district and county meetings and preachers to correspond. So in came many things not commanded or hinted in God's word. And to call for Bible authority, was, and is, an insult. And we who do so, are called old fogies. In the last years, Kentucky has been overdone in these unscriptural movements. So, naturally, a relapse, church members dance, go to theatres, circuses, horse races, etc. So piety, the very true bottom of all true worship of God, is very low. Sunday-schools have, in some cases, been exalted above the church, and light songs and singing has taken the place of pious, devotional songs. I heard a zealous brother say Sunday-school teaching will do temperance work, reform Washington City, unite Christians and convert the world. He left out our Stone and Campbell, and extended a warm hand to all sects but Catholics. He also extolled the young men, but a kind lick at some of the old. It was said when I was young, "Young folks think old folks are fools; but old ones know young ones are." One of our learned preachers said, "Cincinnati is the worst city in the United States; Cincinnati has been the arena of conventions, organs, women preaching, etc." Poor, weak, human nature.

SOCIAL LIFE.

Social life is a response to character. The selfish man is convinced of the selfishness of his neighbors, while the generous man sees only their kindness. The cold heart thinks that humanity is barren of affection, while the loving spirit finds it overflowing all around him. Deceit is ever distrustful, while sincerity extends the cordial grasp of confidence. The passionate meet with violence and the rude with rudeness, while the gentle and courteous rejoice in the gentleness and courtesy extended to them. Each quality has a magnetic attraction by which it draws out its like in others, the bad eliciting what is bad, the good and pure drawing out and developing goodness and purity.

Christ, and Christ only, has revealed that he who has erred may be restored, and made pure and clean and whole again.—Robertson.

A Safeguard.

The fatal rapidity with which slight Colds and Coughs frequently develop into the gravest maladies of the throat and lungs, is a consideration which should impel every prudent person to keep at hand, as a household remedy, a bottle of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

Nothing else gives such immediate relief and works so sure a cure in all affections of this class. That eminent physician, Prof. F. Sweetzer, of the Maine Medical School, Brunswick, Me., says:—

"Medical science has produced no other any-dye expectorant so good as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is invaluable for diseases of the throat and lungs."

The same opinion is expressed by the well-known Dr. L. J. Addison, of Chicago, Ill., who says:—

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral

Is not a new claimant for popular confidence, but a medicine which is to-day saving the lives of the third generation who have come into being since it was first offered to the public.

There is not a household in which this invaluable remedy has once been introduced where its use has ever been abandoned, and there is not a person who has ever given it a proper trial for any throat or lung disease susceptible of cure, who has not been made well by it.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has, in numberless instances, cured obstinate cases of chronic Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and even acute Pneumonia, and has saved many patients in the earlier stages of Pulmonary Consumption. It is a medicine that only requires to be taken in small doses, is pleasant to the taste, and is needed in every house where there are children, as there is nothing so good as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL for treatment of Croup and Whooping Cough.

These are all plain facts, which can be verified by anybody, and should be remembered by everybody.

LABOR IN MISSISSIPPI.

BROS. LIPSCOMB & SEWELL Please allow me space to give the labors of Bro. J. B. Billingsley who resides in our community, but will soon bid us farewell, as he intends soon to move to Itawamba county, this State.

Bro. Billingsley has been preaching some four or five years with more or less success, but we will commence with last summer's labor. First Lord's day in August, assisted the brethren at Roaring Hollow, Prentiss county, in a meeting, with three additions. Preached three discourses, including fourth Lord's day in August, at Piney Grove, Alcorn county; had three additions. Only a few scattered brethren there. Preached first Lord's day in September at Poplar Springs, Prentiss county; one addition. He was called home on Sunday to the bedside of his invalid wife. Poplar Springs is a destitute place. Assisted Bro. J. E. M. Billingsley in a meeting at what is known as Lacy's school-house, Prentiss county. Preached six sermons; had four additions; much good accomplished at that place. The people seem to be greatly interested; large audiences and good attention. Only a few brethren at this place, but they are zealous workers in the vineyard of the Lord. Assisted the brethren of Gum Creek church, Itawamba county, in a meeting including third Lord's day in September. Preached eight discourses, had six additions: five baptized, one from the Methodists. This is an old church built up by the labors of Bros. Ussery, Hackworth, Butler, Taylor and others, before the late war; went down during the war. Old Bro. Nathaniel King has been preaching there for sixteen years, but they would never meet without the King; hence, slow progress. Bro. King has passed over the dread river, now at rest "in the sweet fields of Eden." The prospect for a glorious future for Gum Creek church is quite flattering; a great interest manifested besides considerable "ingathering" since Bro. Billingsley began preaching there. He will move to that section soon. On the fourth Lord's day of September he began a protracted meeting at our home church, Pleasant Grove, with the help of Bro. J. E. M. Billingsley. They preached about twelve or fifteen sermons, resulting in the addition of ten members to the body of Christ, (Three since the meeting.) It was a meeting to be long cherished in memory.

Bro. Billingsley has been doing much good for the cause considering the great disadvantages under which he labors. Having lost a leg in the late war, he was compelled to resort to the shoemakers bench; but not content to drive pegs alone, he has risen to quite a high station. Yet, sadly do I state it, through the neglect of the brethren and the protracted illness of his wife, he is compelled at intervals to resume his trade. Bro. Billingsley is a man that bids fair to do a great work. He is earnest, zealous and uncompromising when the truth is at stake. We have become greatly attached to him; has lived in our midst for several years, and it sorely grieves us to give him up. Yet we hope he may continue to successfully wield the sword of the Spirit to the dethroning of the powers of Satan to the upbuilding of Christ's cause and kingdom in the world. W. F. ROBINSON.

CONVENTION OF DANCING MASTERS.

Recently a convention of dancing masters was held in the city of New York. Some time was spent in earnest and solemn deliberation. They felt deeply the grave responsibility resting upon them. The whims and wishes of the amusement-seeking portion of the country must be gratified. They look to the dancing masters for new figures and movements that will add to the pleasures of the dance. The members of the convention all agreed that unless some changes from the style of dances introduced three years ago, were made, this national amusement would lose its hold upon pleasure seekers. The objection urged to the former style was a want of "contact;" that there was but little pleasure derived in "waltzing at arm's length;" that there must be the "embrace" to add zest and animation to the dance. But then here lay the difficulty in the way of the convention. How could they arrange new figures which would give the pleasure of "contact" and "embrace," and avoid the "downright hugging that is indulged in at public balls." In the report

I read of the convention, a conclusion had not been reached; but it had been settled that, in order to meet the wants of the dancers, the figures must be arranged so that the gentleman, at least, would have one arm around the lady's waist—that this arm's length arrangement would not do at all.

In view of these facts, would it not be well for those church members who can "see no harm in dancing," who always meet the efforts of elders and teachers to keep the church clear of this evil with the objection, "It is no worse" than something else, to enquire into the tendency of this popular amusement? Is that which derives all its pleasure from the "contact" and "embrace" to be encouraged as a pastime by Christian men and women? J. D. FLOYD.

MARS HILL COLLEGE.

BROS. LIPSCOMB & SEWELL: Some time has elapsed since you had anything from "our" school. I am glad to inform you that it is prospering. Larger now than ever before at this season of the year, and greater efforts are being made for purity than for increase in the number. Pupils are progressing rapidly, but to do otherwise, here, would be to slight the many advantages offered pupils. We expect next term to be the best ever taught at this place, and second to none. The principal, Bro. Larimore, has quite a number of nice rooms prepared for boarders, and everything else to make you feel at home and learn rapidly. Any one desiring to send to or attend a good school, can find this the place. Pupils are taught to be Christians which cannot be valued. Those desiring to prepare for preaching "the gospel" can find this to be the very place. Now, how many are willing to give "our" school a trial? How many are willing to send some one, who is willing, but not able to attend, to "our" Bible class? How many congregations are willing to send one or more? Brethren, now is the time to begin a work that will go on and on when you are gone. Don't wait till next year, you may not be alive; but if you are, you can find other good works to do. There is no danger of us doing too much, but there is danger of us not doing enough. Let us work while it is day; "the night cometh when no man can work." School opens January 5, 1885.

Come one, come all!
Into "our" Bible hall!

A CALL FOR HELP.

Wingo, Graves County, Ky., is a town of about 500 inhabitants. There are Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist churches at this place. The people have just erected a good school building that is an ornament to any town. The town is building up very rapidly. The brethren of the Christian church are making an effort to build a house. There are only a few of them in and around the place, and these few are very poor; and in order to do the work they must have assistance from charitably disposed brethren at other places. Most of the lumber is bought and on the ground, and the work is in progress. A small amount from all will help us most wonderfully, and will be the means of advancing God's cause where it is badly needed. Brethren, we do not only ask but we beg you to respond to our appeal. Wingo is strictly a missionary point.

"CHRISTMAS GIFT"

In making your gifts during Christmas time, do not forget the Christian Sower Tract Fund. Its mission is to do good. It is a matter of surprise that so many have never heard of it. Its third annual report will be out soon. If you intend to send a contribution, be sure and do so at once. Many calls for tracts from persons unable to buy are being sent in. If you cannot send a contribution, ask your congregation for a collection. It will be faithfully used in this good work. Send me the names, postoffices and churches of all of the denominational preachers around you, including ten cents for each, and I will send to each valuable tracts. Thus you may do great good. They must know what we teach. If you wish to buy tracts, apply to me. All the profits will be used to give away tracts.

NOTES FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

J. A. Harding, 144 Howard St., Detroit, Mich., writes: "We have received four confessions here and the interest is good."

J. D. Floyd, Flat Creek, Tenn., December 8, writes: "I filled my last appointment for the year at Fosterville yesterday. Five were added to the congregation by letter. Looking back over the year's work, we see much to encourage. The congregation is hopeful for the future."

John Bell Gibson, Jefferson City, Mo., December 8, writes: "I have recently held a two weeks' meeting with the church at Ghent, Ky. There were three additions. The church at Ghent is one of the best churches known to me. Good men and women—pillars in the church—rallied around me and made my stay among them exceedingly pleasant. Bro. Wagner is the efficient preacher. He is greatly loved by his congregation for which he has labored faithfully and successfully two years. Seldom have I seen such harmony and confidence between a church and its preacher. Bro. Wagner is talking of coming West, and we commend him to every church that needs his services."

Robert Kirby, Burksville, Cumberland Co., Ky., December 6, writes: "Including fifth Lord's day in this (November) month, I began a meeting at Ashburn's Creek, which lasted six days, and the result was eleven added to the church; one reclaimed, two from the Methodists and eight by confession and baptism. The church at this place had trouble on hand; we got the difficulty settled and the church was much revived. It was taught that the church should employ them a preacher and meet once a month and leave off the weekly meeting. I would ask the preacher if this was the order of the New Testament? If it is, I would like for him to give me the chapter and verse where the apostle taught it."

E. L. L., Cold Spring, Panola, Miss., December 8, writes: "Bro. J. A. Carter, of Lauderdale Co., Tenn., began a meeting in this neighborhood on Saturday before the fifth Lord's day in last month, and closed Wednesday following. Two were added to the church by baptism; one an old lady about seventy-five years of age. She had been a member of the M. E. Church about forty years. She is firm in the faith. May she live long, and may her last days be her happiest. Bro. Carter is an able minister, and while he preached the gospel in its simplicity his discourses were forcible. The people seemed to be favorably impressed. We hope that if any of our brethren can make it convenient to call and preach for us when passing through Panola county, they will do so. We are very anxious to have preaching at this place. Cold Springs is situated eleven miles northeast from Batesville, seven miles southeast from Sardis on the road leading to Oxford."

J. D. Floyd, writes: "At my last regular appointment at Salem, Franklin county, I remained over until Thursday and preached in the school-house at Huntland. The hearing was good, and the interest fine until the close. I am satisfied much good could be done there by laying siege after Bro. J. A. Harding's plan. While there it was my privilege, as well as pleasure, to attend the re-union of the Moore family. It consists of seven members; two sisters and five brothers. Mrs. Sarah Millican, Bay Springs, Mississippi; H. R. Moore, Huntland, Tenn.; John J. Moore, Iuka, Miss.; Robt. J. Moore, Elma, Miss.; Mrs. Rebecca Patrick, Dallas, Texas; Hugh B. Moore, Marietta, Miss.; and Jas. K. Moore, Huntland, Tenn. These all met at the old home in Prentiss County, Miss., in 1882, for the first time in twenty-five years, and agreed then to have a yearly re-union as long as they remained an unbroken family. They met last year in Dallas, Texas. It did ones soul good to see the brotherly and sisterly love manifested one for the other. The four older brothers are worthy members of the Christian church. May they yet have many happy re-unions; and may they all so live that when separated here they may meet where partings are no more."

A Christian should not plead spirituality for being a sloven. If he be a shoe-cleaner, he should be the best in the parish.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Eighty counties in Georgia stand in the Prohibition column.

The Fall River (Mass.) manufacturers are sending agents to Mexico to sell their print goods.

Oil has been struck at the depth of 900 feet, near Cullom's Springs, in Choctaw county, Ala.

Senator Wade Hampton has been re-elected by the South Carolina Legislature, only five votes being cast against him, and these were negroes.

At a meeting of citizens in Chicago, it was decided to offer a reward of $5,000 for the detection of the perpetrators of the fraud in the late election in the second precinct.

William H. Vanderbilt has entered suit against Gen. Grant to recover $150,000 loaned him a short time before the failure of Grant & Ward. The General has confessed judgment for $155,407.

The first church in Newbury, Mass., which was established nearly two hundred and fifty years ago, has just installed its twelfth pastor, making an average service of twenty years each for them.

It is a current report that an effort is being made to place John McCullough, the tragedian, in an asylum, so that his mind may receive proper medical treatment. His wife is instigating the action.

Over production has caused a general reduction in the output of nearly all the mills in the North. Many men are thrown out of employment who refuse to accept the proposed reduction in wages, ranging from 5 to 25 per cent.

Cornelison, who brutally beat Judge Reid at Mt. Sterling, Ky., from a difficulty growing out of the rivalries between the two missionary societies, has been sentenced to three years imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Large numbers of negroes pass through Nashville every few days, en route for Arkansas. Most of them hail from the Carolinas, and they say that there is a strong desire on the part of the negroes of those States to migrate to the West.

The President, in his message, and Secretary Hugh McCullough have recommended the repeal of the internal revenue tax on tobacco. Large manufacturers who enjoy a monopoly are opposed to the proposed repeal, but the farmers are in favor.

There are 2,000 acres planted in tomatoes in the vicinity of Ellenton and Palmetto, on the north side of Manatee River, in Florida. The tomatoes are now ripening, and are now being shipped North via Tampa and South Florida Railroad.

The South evidently does not appreciate her wealth of timber by the way she permits the wholesale slaughter of her forests, and the day will come when she will sigh for her magnificent woods which is now being so ruthlessly destroyed. We are penny wise and pound foolish.

The centenary celebration of the Methodist church met this week in Baltimore, with a large representation of the dignitaries of the church. One hundred years ago Methodism in this country had its birth in Baltimore. The Methodist Protestant church will not participate.

Nashville has bargained for sixteen additional arc electric lights, making thirty-five, at a cost of sixty-four cents each per night. A few powerful lights placed on the many hills of the city would go a good ways toward illuminating the dark alleys, and thereby aid in the prevention of crime.

Nashville spent $30,000 for school buildings for the negroes, and is proposing to spend more. They pay not 5 per cent of the school-tax, yet receive over 25 per cent. Such facts ought to convince the world that the South is manfully struggling to deal for the best with this large class of non-producers.

Capt. C. A. Turrell is at present engaged in constructing four jetties just below Nashville Island, in Cumberland river, near this city. The aim of the Government is to aid the passage of steamers through the shoals by turning the water into a narrower channel, and thereby making it deeper. The jetties will lessen the force of the current.

The following kindly words from a southern paper about President Arthur, mark an era of better feeling: "A more decorous President, or one more mindful of official proprieties, the Republic has never had. When he leaves the White House he will have the pleasant consciousness that he has, by unassuming conduct and fidelity to duty, converted distrust into confidence, and won the esteem of a people who, in the early days of his administration, regarded him with suspicion and perhaps dislike. It was the accident of a crime that made him President; but his record, as a pure and conscientious Chief Magistrate, is all his own."

A movement was recently started in Chicago to secure an endowment for the Hughes Library at Rugby, Tenn. The project originated in remembrance of the generous donations of Thomas Hughes, of England, to the Chicago Library after the fire of 1871. A committee appointed from the Public Library to consider the question held a meeting a few days ago and decided to raise and contribute $10,000. Nearly half of this amount is to be used to equip the library and pay its indebtedness. The balance is to be set apart as a permanent endowment, the interest to be used to meet current expenses. Suitable plans have been adopted for raising the money, and the Hughes Library promises to be an honor to its founder and the largest in that part of the country.

Memphis Avalanche: "Louisiana sugar planters are very blue over the Spanish treaty, which admits Cuban sugars. It is said that many of them will abandon sugar and engage in rice planting. This treaty has yet to be considered. We are far from sure that Louisiana is not more interested in Spanish-American trade and the incomparable blessings of commerce than in the sugar industry, if the two are incompatible; and American planters cannot compete with the Spaniard and crude slave labor. But the Spanish treaty, with its proviso of a standard limiting the introduction of Spanish sugars, seems to be framed to create for the East such refining monopoly as the Hawaiian treaty has created on the Pacific coast. If this is true, it should be investigated, exposed and severely reprobated."

George J. Gould, the elder son of Jay Gould, is 23, says an authority, and neither a dude nor a snob. He promises to ably succeed his father in the numerous enterprises in which the latter is interested. With the object of giving him a practical training, Mr. Gould has had his son to accompany him on his two months tour over his Western railways every year, and has also had him appointed a director in many of the companies. It was with this end in view that he purchased a New York newspaper, that George might also become acquainted with newspaper management. The Grand Opera-house, New York, was still another toy for the youth's instruction. No doubt time and time again his attention is called to the superior advantages he enjoys over his father, who at the age of 16 was peddling rat traps, but by the time he was 20 had become of importance enough in the world to have a town named after him—Gouldsborouh, Pa. Mr. Gould has three other sons besides George, and two daughters.

Let our readers take their maps and study the situation of the proposed Nicaraguan Canal, which aims to be under the exclusive control of the United States. It is estimated that a vessel leaving New York could by actual time have the advantage of seventeen days over a British vessel in reaching the Pacific Ocean. Lake Nicaragua is 120 feet above the sea level, and is fresh water, which would enable the vessels to wash out their boilers and get a supply of fresh water. A vessel of 6,000 tons burthen could afford to pay $3,000 toll, and yet make money. The highest excavation above the lake is forty feet. The question is a grand one for our politicians to handle. The route proposed is up the St. Juan River, from the Caribbean Gulf to the lake, across the lake forty miles to a given point, thence seventeen miles of canal to the ocean. Of course the St. Juan would have to be widened and deepened. It is estimated to cost $100,000,000. The climate is mild and healthy, which cannot be said of the Panama route. It is by far the most important question in our foreign policy.

The following estimates have been submitted to the House Committee on Appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886: Pensions, $60,000,000; Military Academy, $393,344; fortifications, $7,303,000; consular and diplomatic expense, $1,023,176; navy, $30,654,00; Postoffice Department, $56,099,164; Indian Bureau, $7,328,049; army, $26,110,498; legislative, executive and judicial expenses, $22,366,500; Agricultural Department, $6,991,110; sundry civil expenses, $32,326,402; District of Columbia, $1,740,073; improvement of rivers and harbors, $8,177,400. Total, $254,820,707. The estimates for the present fiscal year were $213,269,659 and the appropriations $177,776,450. The increase in the estimates of the next fiscal year, over those of the present year, is $43,462,054, and over the appropriations of the present year, $82,816,077.

Congress met on Monday, December 8, in forty-eighth session, with no special business before it. Mr. Morrison thinks that no tariff revision will be attempted this winter, but that the treaty with Mexico will probably call for some discussion of the subject. It is a strange fact that no extradition laws exist between this country and Mexico. So that a fugitive from justice can be only returned at the pleasure of the Mexican Government. This anomalous condition of affairs exists only with Mexico and Australia, all other countries having extradition treaties with the United States.—Senator Dawes introduced a bill providing for the granting of citizenship to any Indian who lives in a civilized community, and holds no allegiance to any tribe. Indians are prohibited from the right of suffrage, by law, and the passage of this bill will confer rights upon many scattered Indians in Tennessee, Georgia, and North Carolina.—President Arthur sends a very interesting farewell message to Congress. He recommends the suppression of polygamy in Utah by a strong process of law. The attention of the supreme legislative body is also called pertinently to the strong demand that exists in commercial circles for a just bankrupt law. The cholera question also merits his attention. He suggests that Gen. Grant be given a pension for life commensurate with his distinguished past services.

FOREIGN.

Smallpox is an epidemic in many parts of Canada, and seems to be on the increase. It is specially fatal among the half-breeds in the north-western districts.

Emperor William, whose age is eighty-seven, is the oldest of the sovereigns, and Alfonso of Spain, who was twenty-six years old on his last birthday, the youngest. Queen Victoria is sixty-four, the Empress Augusta seventy-two, the Queen of Denmark sixty-six, the Empress of Brazil sixty-one, and the ex-Empress Eugenie fifty-seven. The youngest Queens in Europe are the wife of the King of Spain, who is twenty-five, and the wife of the King of Servia, who is one year younger.

The British Parliament gets together and makes a law, and there's the end of it. There is no veto to stumble over. The recent tilt between the upper and the lower House has demonstrated to on-lookers that the real veto power lay in the House of Lords, and that to break this down or to modify it has been the efforts of such men as Gladstone, Bright and Labouchere. Supreme in its legislation, the history of the British Parliament is, to a large extent, the history of the growth of political freedom in England. It wields not only the whole legislative power, but the executive power as well. The veto power, though still nominally lodged in the Crown, has not been exerted since 1707, and probably will never be used again.

TEXAS WORK AND WORKERS.

DEAR BRO. POE: It is not often that I read anything from the editors of the ADVOCATE that I can venture to criticize. But I noticed in GOSPEL ADVOCATE of August 27, Bro. D. Lipscomb's comment on a brother's objection to a good bachelor brother being made deacon, and he seemed to think that the objection was not legitimate. I think it was. See 1 Tim. 3: 8-14. And Bro. E. G. Sewell in his comment on tenth chapter of Acts says, "There are only two cases mentioned in the Bible of baptism in the Holy Spirit, those on the day of Pentecost. Acts 2: 1-4; Acts 10: 44-46." I think that I find a third case. Acts 19: 1-8. Like causes produce like effects; we see that the effects are produced in this case that were in the other two, and consequently I consider that they too were baptized in the Holy Spirit. And in his comments on twelfth chapter of Acts, he says, "And Herod, arrayed in his royal apparel, delivered an oration to them, and the people said it was the voice of God, and not of a man." My testaments both give it "the voice of a god," (not using a capital G.) And in Bro. Harding's department, a short time since, I noticed a communication from Bro. J. W. Shepherd, after giving a few items of how he had been treated, or father mistreated, by D. D. Warlick, he said to them, "You have shown to us that you have the Spirit of Christ." I think that he showed just the reverse. Christians should say what they mean, and mean what they say. Well, I reckon I'll have to let you off this time, but you had better be careful in the future. I must give our good old Bro. Jacob Creath a passing notice; you know that he is a strong advocate for "speaking where the Bible speaks, and of being silent where the Bible is silent," (and I love him for it.) Then after using those phrases, says, "Christian church," where do you find it, Bro. Creath?—[E. L. L., Pleasant Retreat, November 9, 1884.]

Our heavenly home is not to be obtained by purchase, nor by meritorious works; 'tis given as an inheritance to those who love God and keep his commandments. "An inheritance," yes, not to every one who calls upon the Lord, not to be given to strangers nor aliens, but to children. The sons and daughters of God, and then too, to the faithful and loving ones. No lazy idlers will receive any inheritance; 'tis surely a place, a beautiful, a delightful place, as much so as old Canaan; how the children should long for it, and strive earnestly to reach it; not to become impatient and complain and murmur as the children of Israel did in the wilderness and lost it, but as Joshua and Caleb, because of faithfulness; if not worth much sacrifice on our part, it is not worth having. A few more days of toil and suffering and we pass over the river; farewell to all behind. W. S. D.

DEAR BRO. POE: I will give you a short account of two meetings that I have held recently in neighborhoods where there was much opposition by infidelity and its auxiliary, (sectarianism.) On Saturday night before the first Lord's day in October, I commenced a meeting at a school-house near the village of Oak Grove, Tarrant county, Texas, and continued over two Lord's days, preaching only at night during the week. Immediate result, six baptized, two by relation and much prejudice removed. Also on the fourth Lord's day in October, I commenced a series of meetings at what is called the little school-house near brother Jason Little's, in this county. This meeting continued until Thursday night following. Result, two by confession and baptism, and a good impression made on the neighborhood in favor of the ancient gospel. I find that the best way to make a good impression on the people, is to call on them at their houses and talk with them, and invite them to come out and hear us, and correct us if we preach any errors. I think if the brethren would try this plan they would find that it works well, at least I have found it so.—[H. H. Whitlock, Mansfield, Texas.]

DEAR BRO. POE: I am anxious to get all the brethren of Texas interested in the effort we are making to provide for the orphans of the State. Now as most all will be making presents on Christmas day, I ask that all, both in the church and Sunday-school, send up a "liberal Christmas gift" to the Orphan Home and School of Texas. Do not treat this with indifference, but begin, please, to provide a liberal gift to this noble enterprise. God will bless you for so doing. Send to A. J. Bush, Thorp Springs, Texas. We urge this upon every one in Texas whose heart beats in sympathy for the little destitute ones. How many will respond? Give at least one dollar.—A. J. Bush, Grapevine, Texas, November 12, 1884.

DEAR BRO. POE: I spent last week in Gainesville, preaching at night. Two submitted their case to the Lord Jesus, were baptized and took membership with the church there. The church at Gainesville is doing very well. Bro. Jackson, of Tennessee, is there, preaches for them occasionally. Bro. Alex Odeneal has made arrangements to remove from Denton, Texas, to this place. We greet him with joy. I will not get off among the brethren after money for our Indian Mission work before first of December. If I am not mistaken, sister Harrison, of Sherman, Texas, told me yesterday the sisters at Sherman had raised over $100 for mission work in Texas. Will the brethren and friends who have promised to our Indian Mission work, send it to Elder W. H. Sluder, Paris, Texas. Bro. Jas. H. Black, sheriff of Lamar county, was called to the door and shot dead Sunday night last by an unknown party. The citizens have raised about $2,000 reward for the murderer, and still the reward is going up.—[R. W. Officer, Paris, Texas, November 18, 1884.]

"Love works no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law." Paul.

Love is, or should be, the ruling power in every Christian heart. The Father seeks to rule by it, and all of his sons' and daughters to work by it and live by it; hence we have only in the New Testament the will of our heavenly Father expressed. To sons' and daughters who obey from the motive of love, there is no need of "thou shalt not," "thou shalt do thus and so." Many persons seem to be very much troubled because God has not spoken thus in the New Testament. For instance, Thou shalt not play on an organ in the assembly of the saints; thou shalt not dance nor go to a dancing party; thou shalt not sprinkle water upon one for baptism, and so on. If we love God, our heavenly Father and the Lord Jesus our redeemer, is it necessary to thus speak? certainly not. Jesus loved the Father, and he said, "I came to do the will of my Father." So, brethren, 'tis with all who love God. "Thy will, O God," swells up from every loving heart, and thus it is the fulfilling of the law. "Love one another as I have loved you;" Jesus. How much heart burning and sorrow we would save if this simple command was lived up to. A hasty, ill-tempered word has caused many a tear to flow and heart to bleed; has estranged, and perhaps forever, loving ones. O how careful should Christians be, seeing the evil therefrom; but, remember, print it in thy heart: "Love works no evil to his neighbor;" "Love ye one another;" "Tis the fulfilling of the law." W. S. D.

Obituaries.

Died October 31st, at her home near Thompson's Station, Maggie Enola Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Alexander, after a short illness of membranous croup, aged about four years. Enola was naturally bright and intelligent; lovable in character and disposition, and as she was the only child, was much loved and petted. She was the delight of her father and the comfort of her mother. She was too delicate a flower to bloom in this cold world, so God took her to himself. He transplanted her into the heavenly garden where she shall eternally bloom—a fadeless, spotless flower, in her purity and innocence he took her, and now she is a bright, beautiful angel. Take comfort, bereaved father and mother, dear little Enola has not gone from you forever, only a few years of separation and you may meet again never to part. There is now a tie to draw you nearer to heaven; think not of the dear child as being in the cold cheerless earth, but as an angel in heaven watching you always. Remember the Master said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." Luke 23: 16. And you feel that the sunshine of your home has passed away and all is darkness. Look to him and he will give you strength to bear the burden. Live better, if possible; live nobler, that you may meet your darling child in heaven to sing eternally the praises of him "who giveth and taketh away." Blessed be his holy name. Tender hands and loving hearts gently laid the casket away in the old family cemetery near Beech Grove church, Maury county. Funeral services at the grave by Rev. Mr. Lowery and the writer. E. B. CAYCE.

Died, October 14, 1884, Naomi Tucker, at the age of sixty-six years, eleven months and twenty-four days. The deceased had been a member of the Christian church for many years, and died in the faith. During her illness she manifested great fortitude, patience and wonderful resignation. Like the dear Savior, she was acquainted with grief and sorrow—"born to trouble as the sparks fly upwards." Her opportunities for spiritual growth were very limited,—had to struggle hard to live, and consequently did not have much time for reading and meditation. She trusted in God, and the Scripture was fulfilled which saith: "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." The deceased leaves behind a large family of children and grand-children to mourn her loss. Bereaved family, your loss is mother's gain. She lived in Christ, died in Christ, sleeps in Christ, and will be raised in Christ at the last day, and will enter into the rest that remains for the people of God. Now may goodness and mercy follow you all the days of your life, is my prayer.

J. W. JOHNSON.

Our much esteemed and beloved sister Cordelia E. Burton, wife of James Burton, and daughter of Isaac and Samantha Pritchard, departed this life September 6, 1884. Sister Burton was born May 22, 1854. The deceased became a member of the Christian church in August, 1874, and lived a consistent Christian till the day of her death. Her amity, sociability and hospitality will long be remembered. For several years she was so afflicted that she could not meet with the people of the Lord upon the first day of the week. Her delight was in the gospel. She loved the Savior; loved to hear the gospel preached; loved to meet with the people of God. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." The lonely and afflicted husband has my sympathy; the bereaved family and relatives my prayers; the two little girls, the tenderest feelings of my soul. Dear children, mother has been taken from you. It was hard to give her up; hard to live on earth without mother. The spot where her remains are deposited is the dearest spot on earth to you. Give yourself to him who gave mother to you. The Lord keep you and preserve you unto his heavenly kingdom.

Clarksburg, December 8th.

J. W. JOHNSON.

On the 9th of November, 1884, in this city, our loved sister, Mrs. S. E. Mayfield, was called away from this world of trouble to that of peace and rest. When the summons came she was fully ready. Very quietly and very peacefully she "crossed over the dark river" cheered and lighted by the Christians' hope of immortality—eternal life!

On the morning's early dawning,
When the stars were growing dim;
When the veil of sunlight coming,
Shut their paling faces in.
Then the spirit, freed unfettered,
Clothed in robes of heavenly love,
For that brighter land above.

She was born in Henry County, Virginia, in the year 1806, and had therefore just completed her seventy-eighth year, which terminated with a long life of unselfish devotion to every Christian duty, and to the welfare and happiness of those whose lot had been cast with hers. Her father, Samuel C. Morris, emigrated to Tennessee in 1825, and settled with his family in Rutherford county, where, just in the morning of her young womanhood, the subject of this sketch was happily united in marriage with Dr. Albert G. Henderson, of Murfreesboro. A few joyous years all too quickly past and she became a widow, subsequently she was married to Col. F. S. Mayfield, of Rutherford county, and with whom she moved to Texas in 1853, and whom she survived only a few months. She was truly a noble Christian woman. From childhood up she diligently studied the Scripture, seeking earnestly to know the truth, and was ever faithful to her convictions. In 1838 she obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Bro. R. B. Hall, and uniting with the Christian people, became a member of the church at Cripple Creek, Austin, Texas.

A Prominent Farmer Writes.

ROBERT STATION, Jones county, Ga., June 20th, 1891.—By the recommendation of Rev. C. C. Davis, I used Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir for indigestion, debility and nervous prostration, having been a great sufferer for years and tried all known remedies for these diseases, all of which failed. Five bottles of Lemon Elixir made a new man of me, and restored my strength and energy so that I can attend to my farm with all ease and comfort. Refer any one to me.
WILLIAM B. EMBERTON.

A CARD.

From a number of St. Louis' prominent citizens as to the merits of Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, the following named gentlemen pronounce it the only pleasant, thoroughly reliable and economical remedy they have ever used for the diseases for which it is recommended.

The principal excellence which the Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Company claim for their New Upright Piano is that they are characterized by peculiarly pure, refined musical tone. Their new method of construction gets rid almost entirely of that mere noise (sound without musical pitch), which has heretofore been inseparable from the tone of this instrument. To the musically cultivated ear of the Mason & Hamlin pianos certainly justify this claim. An incidental advantage which many will value almost as highly, however, is their greater durability. Any mechanic who examines one can see the reason for this in the fact that they use only accurate and perfect secure metallic fastenings for their strings instead of merely winding them around pins stuck in wood.—Boston Journal.

Read How You Can Get This Elegant Gold Watch For 50c.

500 GOLD WATCHES FREE!

In making up the above list of $30,000 in Presents, we decided to reserve $3,000 to be divided equally among the first 500 subscribers received. If you send 50 cents you will be entitled to one of the 500 Gold Watches, and if you send 50 cents you will be entitled to one of the 500 Gold Watches. We will print in full in the February issue of the ILLINOIS AGRICULTURIST the names and addresses of the winners of the 500 Gold Watches. This offer is bona fide and will be carried out to the letter. Send now, don't wait. The ILLINOIS AGRICULTURIST is so well established, having already 20,000 subscribers, and is backed by a large capital, so that everyone of our subscribers may be sure of getting what we promise. Indeed we could not afford otherwise with a paper that has already secured 20,000 subscribers on its merit. Undoubtedly some who read this new departure will think an offer to give away $3,000 in presents is most unreasonable and unprofitable, but let us say to all such persons that it costs anywhere from $25,000 to $150,000 to secure a large circulation to a paper. We know of a publisher that spent $50,000 in one week in giving away free copies and advertising his paper, and the money was well spent, for it secured for him an established circulation that paid good interest on the investment. Publishing nowadays must either be done on an extensive scale or not at all. It costs just as much for matter, and just as much for illustrations, electrotypes, editorial services, rent and for setting up the type for a paper of 100 circulation as it does for a paper with 40,000 circulation. On small editions, each one of the above items swells the cost of a single paper alarmingly, but on very large editions, the expense is spread over so many papers that it is almost entirely lost; thus you can see that large profits can be made only by doing a large business. This is precisely what we are proposing doing with the ILLINOIS AGRICULTURIST.

We will send a printed list of the Awards Free, and all Presents will be forwarded to Holders of Receipts as they come to work and help us to increase our list, by this grand and generous offer.

Only 50 Cents Secures the ILLINOIS AGRICULTURIST for three months, and one-cent good for one present. One number of the paper is worth double the subscription price. As to reliability we refer those who do not know us to any Bank or Mercantile Agency.

REMEMBER these are Presents to our Subscribers given to them absolutely Free. (2-Cent Postage Stamps taken. Money in sums of $1 or less may be sent in an ordinary letter at our risk; larger sums should be sent by Registered Letter or Postal Note, and addressed

Announcement of Mars Hill College, an institution perpetually wielding a wonderful and wide-spread influence for truth, refinement and righteousness.—EDITORS.

POSITIONS PROCURED FOR OUR PUPILS.

We make a specialty of preparing pupils for

(1.) PREACHING; (2.) TEACHING; (3.) PREACHING and TEACHING.

Many educated here—among whom are successful lawyers, physicians, merchants, salesmen;
mechanics, farmers, editors, authors, teachers and preachers—have so demeaned themselves, that the humility, fidelity, integrity, accuracy and ability of "Mars Hill students" have become proverbial. There is, consequently, such a demand for the services of our pupils, that we deem it perfectly safe to promise to procure pleasant, profitable and honorable positions for all who qualify themselves here for usefulness. Indeed, for several years we have been able to fill comparatively few of the positions tendered.

HEALTHFULNESS!

Mars Hill as a Health Resort.

Our school was founded in 1870. All the "doctor bills," for services rendered our pupils, from then till now, do not, we think, amount to twenty-five dollars—probably not to one dollar a year. Those who have come here pale and puny, from malarial districts, have, without an exception, we believe, returned to their homes enjoying health.

What "Watering Place," or "Health Resort," then, can justly claim more, as a health-preserver and health-restorer, than Mars Hill? Address,

T. B. LARIMORE, President.

FLORENCE, ALABAMA.

SIXTEENTH CHAPTER OF ACTS—No. 2.

CONVERSION OF THE JAILER AND HIS HOUSE.

"And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them. And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed. And the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison doors open, he drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing the prisoners had been fled. But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm; for we are all here. Then he called for a light, and spring in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas, and brought them out, and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house. And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway. And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house." Acts 16: 25-34.

This is a very beautiful and plain account of the conversion of the Jailer and his house, when illustrated by other passages in which the steps to be taken in conversion are more fully given. If no other passages were given on the subject of conversion than this, no one could understand it from what is said here. But by connecting this case with the commission of Christ to the apostles, and with the second chapter of Acts, no one needs fail to understand it.

After giving the commission as given in Matthew, Mark, and Luke, and then a full and specific account of the conversion of the three thousand on the day of Pentecost, there was no need that any other cases should be so fully given. For from the commission, it is certain that all are to be converted alike. Whatever is to be done by one alien sinner in order to become a Christian, must be done by all. Wherefore when we learn what one had to do, we learn what all must do to gain the same end. There are no two or three, or half dozen ways for an alien to become a child of God. There is just one way for all, and all who wish to be Christians must submit to that one way. There are three important steps that every alien sinner must take in becoming a Christian, and no one can be rejected and the end obtained. These are mentioned in the three records of the commission to the apostles, as alluded to above. In Matthew, teaching and baptism are mentioned, and enjoined upon the apostles. In Mark, faith, belief of the gospel, and baptism are made conditions of salvation. In Luke, repentance and remission of sins are commanded to be preached among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. In these records of the divine commission, teaching, preaching the gospel comes first. Then faith next in order; then repentance, baptism next, and lastly salvation or remission of sins. This is the order in which heaven has placed these steps, or conditions of pardon, as is clearly shown in second of Acts, in which chapter these three conditions are mentioned in the very order we have named.

Peter, upon presenting the gospel required the people to believe it. He said, "Let all the house of Israel know assuredly that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye have crucified both Lord and Christ." To know assuredly is to believe with all the heart. When they did this, and asked what to do, he commanded them to repent and be baptized, promising remission of sins and reception of the Holy Spirit. Hence, the only question now is, did the Jailer and his house do these things, and does the history as given indicate that much? This is what we are now to look after. The jailer said, What must I do to be saved? The first item given as mentioned was, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved. Believe. But how could they? Answer: Paul says faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. Since faith comes by hearing the word of God, they could not believe till the facts to be believed, the gospel, were presented. Hence the very next verse says, "And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house." Thus they preached to him the word of the Lord, by which, through hearing of which, he was to believe.

And from the first part of this chapter we learn that Paul understood from the visions that he saw, that he was sent over to Macedonia to preach the gospel to them. As therefore he was sent to preach the gospel to them, he certainly preached what he was sent to preach. And so soon as presented, the jailer believed it. And as repentance also comes before baptism, and as the jailer was baptized that very night, it is certain, therefore, that the jailer also repented.

With all these facts before us, the jailer's conversion is just as plain as that of the three thousand, and involves precisely the same things. Those, therefore, that would have him saved by faith only, would have him saved without either repentance or baptism.

But no sinner can be saved without repentance, for Jesus says, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." Paul, knowing these things, could not promise pardon to a heathen, without repentance. And besides, Paul himself tells us that God commands all men everywhere to repent. Acts 17. He then, as an inspired apostle, would not go to Philippi and promise salvation contrary to God's command. It is therefore certain that Paul preached repentance, and that the jailer repented. This being true, it is certain the jailer was not saved by faith only. If Paul promised him salvation by faith only, he promised what he himself knew was contrary to the command of God. And to charge Paul with such a thing, is to charge the Holy Spirit with contradicting the command of God. This amounts to blasphemy.

And besides, it is positively certain that the jailer was baptized. And it is equally certain that baptism is connected with salvation, remission of sins. For Jesus said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," putting salvation after baptism, not before it. This fact also would forever kill the idea of salvation by faith only. But it may be asked, "Does not the Bible speak of justification by faith only?" Yes, one time, and only once. But it may be said, If it speaks of it one time, is not that enough to settle the question? We answer, Yes, again. But then what does the word of God say about justification by faith only in that one passage? It says: "We see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only." James 2: 24. This says, and not by faith only. Since this is the only passage in the word of God that speaks of justification by faith only, and since this one says, and not by faith only, this is enough to end this controversy with all who respect the word of God.

The plan of salvation cannot be presented in its fullness, without presenting everything upon which salvation is in any wise conditioned. Repentance and baptism are both placed as conditions, both by the Son of God, and by the Holy Spirit. Those, therefore, who preach salvation by faith only, not only contradict Jesus and the Holy Spirit, and set their words at naught, but they set up a human plan of salvation, and put their own wisdom against the wisdom of God, and thus openly declare to the world that they know better how men ought to be saved than God. This is insulting to God, and blasphemous in man. But if they say that repentance is included in justifying faith, then justification is not by faith only, and they use the wrong word, and thereby mislead and deceive the people. Why then, in reason's name, not take things as God gave them, instead of making void the commands of God by the traditions of men? Let those who do these things answer.

But it is certain that the jailer heard the gospel, believed it, repented, and was baptized, and this determines the how of his conversion, and we leave that part of it here.

But it is said by many that he was baptized in the house, and therefore not immersed. Even if we were to grant that he was baptized in the house, it by no means follows that he was not immersed. Thousands have been immersed in houses, and thousands more will be, and this argument, if true, would weigh nothing against immersion. But then it is not true. He was not baptized in the house. But, says one, how do you know he was not baptized in the house? I know it by the plain reading of the word of God. When the preaching was going on, they were in his house; but when the baptizing was over, they were out of his house; for the divine record says immediately after the baptizing, and when they had brought them into his house, etc. Since they were in his house when the preaching was going on, and since they could no more enter his house without going out of it, and as it is certain they did again enter it immediately when the baptizing was over, it is therefore positively certain that they were out of his house when the baptizing was done. This removes all that trouble out of the way, and that, too, by the word of the Lord. And this effort that so many make in order to place difficulties in the way of immersion, only shows how many people are dissatisfied with the Lord's appointment, immersion, burial in baptism, and to what extent they will go to get rid of it. It shows a very strong and stubborn species of rebellion against God and his divine wisdom. The Lord's word must rule in everything, if man would be saved.

It is very evident that Paul had the jailer and his house baptized as he was himself. And he tells us in the sixth of Romans, that when he was baptized into Christ, he was buried with him, buried with Christ in baptism, and there can be no doubt but that the jailer and his house were buried also.

Just one more point. The old worn-out argument keeps coming up, that as the jailer's house, household, was baptized, there must have been infants in the number. It seems almost a work of supererogation to notice this at all, it is so weak. The last verse giving the history of the case, says of the jailer, he "rejoiced, believing in God, with all his house." Since he rejoiced, and believed with his house, they, of necessity, rejoiced and believed with him, and this infants could not do. Therefore there were no infants baptized in this case.

Thus a careful examination of what is said in the word of the Lord, shows this to be a very plain case of conversion, and that it was just like all other cases on record in Acts of Apostles. The word of God must be so understood and presented as to make all passages on the same subject harmonize with each other, and whenever rightly understood this will be the case. But when any passage is wrongly presented, that will always bring it into conflict with others. Truth is always in harmony with truth. E. G. S.

EASTES AND ALSUP DEBATE.

"The kingdom of Christ was set up in the days of John the Baptist," Eastes affirms.

"There are some things about which we do not disagree: (1) That Christ has a kingdom on this earth; (2) that it is a visible kingdom; (3) that it is a spiritual kingdom; (4) that baptism is the initiatory rite into the kingdom.

But there are some questions about which we do disagree: (1) What the kingdom of Christ is; (2) by whom set up; (3) time when it was set up.

The questions, of necessity, will have to be discussed in regular order before there can probably be an agreement as to the time of setting up the kingdom.

As my business here to-day is not to show my superiority, if I possess any, over my opponent as a debater, but to teach the Scriptures as I understand them, and to hear from his understanding of the Scriptures, and by just and fair criticism to arrive at the truth. Hence, I am not to take advantages of slips and failings of my friend, but to manifest the spirit of Christ, for it will not profit me, or anyone else, for me, by any means, to carry a point and gain a victory. I want no victory unless a correct interpretation of the Holy Scriptures gives it me. Hence my aim will be to speak from the words of the Scriptures as I understand them, and then draw my conclusions from them; also to carefully define my terms so that I may be understood by all.

I am here, then, to affirm that the kingdom of Christ was set up in the days of John the Baptist. The position I regard as impregnable, therefore, fearlessly affirm it. As the vast majority of the controversies grow out of the neglect to define terms, one party attaching one meaning to his words, while another attaches quite another, the premises not being agreed upon, the conclusions, both reasoning correctly, will forever be different; hence the necessity of this character of faithfully defining the terms we use, and then in all arguments, pro or con, stick close and never lose sight of the definitions. The term kingdom, means a government, this is the simplest idea; that the term is frequently used figuratively is freely granted, but that it is so used when the kingdom of Christ is spoken of I think no one will contend.

A government implies three things—the governed, the Governor and the laws by which the subjects are governed.

Jesus himself is the Governor and the baptized believers are the subjects, and the rules of conduct laid down in the New Testament are the laws of the government.

The character of the kingdom is that of an absolute monarchy, where the king is the law-maker, and his will is law. This we might expect from the prophecy of Daniel 2: 24, where he describes it as the fifth universal empire. This we find to be a fact when we find the kingdom.

Then again in Isaiah 9: 6, where it is said, "the government shall be upon his shoulder."

This much brings us to answer the second inquiry, by whom was the kingdom set up?

The answer: By Christ himself, and not by John the Baptist, nor the twelve apostles. Daniel 2: 44 says, "In the days of these kings," referring doubtless to the Roman kings, the kings of the fourth universal empire, "shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom." Jesus is the God of heaven; he was manifested in the flesh and lived among the children of men, and while here set up his kingdom. Now to find the kingdom, and then we will have the proof that Christ set up his own, and that neither John the Baptist nor the apostles set it up. If we are correct in our definition of kingdom, then we have Jesus Christ the Governor. "And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, art not the least among the princes of Judah; for out of thee shall come a governor that shall rule my people of Israel." Matt. 2: 6. "There was a man sent from God whose name was John." John 1: 6. Mark says, "Behold I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare the way before thee. The voice of one crying in the wilderness, 'Prepare ye the way of the Lord and make his way straight.'" Mark 1: 2-3. "And he shall go before them in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and disobedient to the wisdom of the just; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord." Luke 1: 7. "And thou, child, shall be called the prophet of the highest, for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways, to give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins, through the tender mercy of our God, whereby the day-spring from on high hath visited us, to give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet in the way of peace." Luke 1: 76-79. These passages teach that the commission that John had was to prepare a people made ready for the Lord.

John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins. Matt. 1: 3.

John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus. Acts 19: 4.

This tells us what John did or how he prepared the people: (1) He taught them to repent; (2) to believe on Christ Jesus; (3) to bring fruits meet for repentance; (4) he baptized them; (5) he instructed how to live.

But here are two laws of the kingdom; preaching and baptism. And here is a people prepared for the Lord. What was he to do to set up a kingdom? This then is what the people are prepared for, and also how they were prepared by a commissioned officer of the kingdom.

Out of this material prepared, Christ organized his church, or kingdom; not that the church and kingdom are the same institutions, but when there was but one church it was the same in extent with the kingdom. The churches are executive bodies in the kingdom. The first recorded church meeting is in Matt. 5: 1, and there follows an explanation of the constitutional or basal law. We have this from Luke: "And it came to pass in those days, that he went up into a mountain to pray; and he continued there all night in prayer to God. And when it was day, he called his disciples and chose from them twelve, whom he also called apostles, and came down with them and stood on a level place, and a great multitude of his disciples, and those converted by the preaching of the king himself, (baptized believers) and he lifted up his eyes on his disciples and said, Blessed are ye poor; for yours is the kingdom of God." Luke 6: 12-20. Then followed a synopsis of the discourses by Matthew.

Matthew says, "And he called unto him his twelve disciples, and gave them power over unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of diseases and all manner of sickness. These twelve he sent forth and charged them, saying, Go not in the ways of the Gentiles, and enter not into any city of the Samaritans; but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Matt. 10: 1-6. Luke says: "And he sent them forth to preach the kingdom of God, and heal the sick." Luke 9: 2-6. "And they departed, and they went throughout the villages, preaching the gospel and healing everywhere. Here was a church meeting called by the head at which meeting he chose twelve, whom he surnamed apostles, whom he afterwards sent forth to preach the gospel. These twelve continued with him and were especially instructed by him during his personal stay on earth. Now after these things, the Lord appointed other seventy also, who were to say to the people, 'The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.'" Luke 10: 9.

Now we see the disciples assembled, the constitution delivered by the king, and officers appointed and sent forth, and as a commission to this assembly, "ye are the light of the world." Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father who is in heaven."

As I understand it, gospel light, or knowledge, was to shine out from them both by precept and example. If there is any essential feature of a church of Christ wanting I am unable to find it. I conclude, therefore, that here is the kingdom of Christ.

But the proposition for discussion is: That the kingdom of heaven was set up in the days of John the Baptist.

"Among them that are born of woman there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist, yet he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he. And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force." Matt. 11: 11-12. The former of these verses as King James's translators have left it, does not teach the truth, also it is very difficult to the English reader, but a correct translation, as I conceive, may prove conclusively that both John and Christ were in the kingdom.

The word translated "least" is in the comparative degree in the Greek, and correctly translated as an adjective would be less, but that would in no way obviate the difficulty. But translating adverbially and making it modify the verb, clears up the difficulty. He (Christ) that is the later in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he. This agrees with John's testimony: "He that cometh after me is mightier than I." Matt. 3: 11.

"He that hath the bride is the bridegroom, who standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly, because of the bridegroom's voice; this my joy therefore is fulfilled. He must increase but I must decrease. He that cometh from above is above all." John 3: 29-31. The law and the prophets were until John: from that time the gospel of the kingdom of heaven is preached and all men press into it. Here is a kingdom preached, here is a kingdom violently opposed, and this kingdom not set up. Why, surely, men of violence, destroying or wasting this kingdom and it having no existence until years after, is morally impossible. We conclude therefore, the Savior was right in his teaching, and the kingdom was actually set up in the days of John the Baptist. With this conclusion agrees the injunction of the Savior, when he exhorts "seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." Matt. 6: 23. "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 5: 20.

"Verily, verily, I say unto you except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." John 3: 3. "Verily, verily, I say unto you except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God." John 3: 5. "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 18: 3-4.

These quotations point out to us two things; the importance of membership in the kingdom, and the conditions of membership.

The disciples inquire why he spake to the people in parables. He answers, and says unto them: "Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given." Matt. 13: 11. "But blessed are your eyes, for they see, and your ears, for they hear." Matt. 13: 16.

These were the born again; they see or understand the kingdom. They also, in addition to being born again, had entered the kingdom by baptism. "My kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews. But now is my kingdom not from hence." John 18: 36. Speaking to them of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." Acts 1: 3. "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven, etc." Matt. 16: 19.

ALSUP'S REPLY.

It is admitted by my opponent: (1) That the church and the kingdom are co-extensive; (2) that the kingdom was not set up before John's day; (3) that John did not set it up, but that Jesus Christ did it in the days of John.

His first proof offered in support of this is Matt. 3: 2, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand."

If the words at hand mean actually present, as he affirms, then the kingdom was set up before John preached, which is contrary to his admission; otherwise John did not speak truly.

There is no evidence that Jesus was with John in the wilderness of Judea, nor that he commenced his public ministry until John was cast into prison. See Matt. 4: 12; Mark 1: 14, "Now after that John was cast into prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." The days of John's ministry ceased when he was cast into prison. Jesus did not begin his until after John was cast into prison; therefore,

Jesus did not set up the kingdom in the days of John.

But my opponent refers to John 3: 23-24, to show that Jesus did begin his public ministry before John's imprisonment. In reply to this we say that Jesus' disciples were with him in Judea, but Jesus had not selected them when he went into Galilee, as shown in the preceding Scriptures, but selected them afterward, for which see Mark 1: 14-20. Here we find him selecting Simon and Andrew, James and John, etc.

As further proof that Jesus did not begin his ministry till after John's ceased, see Acts 10: 37, "Began after the baptism which John preached." Also Acts 19: 1-4.

Thus we see that Jesus did not set up the kingdom in the days of John. He next refers to Dan. 2: 44-45, where the "God of heaven" is represented as setting up a kingdom under the figure of a "little stone cut out of the mountain without hands." From the birth of John to the death of Jesus, there was no institution set up without hands. The Holy Spirit is the organizer, both in the material and spiritual universe. The Holy Spirit did, on the day of Pentecost, out of material prepared by John and Jesus, organize the kingdom, or church of Jesus Christ, without hands or human instrumentality. See Acts 2: 2-5; also Acts 2: 38-47.

His next proof-text is John 3: 39: "He that hath the bride is the bridegroom."

In reply to this I refer to Rom. 7: 1-4. This Scripture refers to the Jewish nation as the bride, and to God as the husband. Jer. 3: 14. Now, before Israel can be married to another, she must be released from the law of her husband. This law was the law of Moses, which was not taken out of the way until it was nailed to the cross of Christ. Col. 2: 4. Therefore, see Rom. 7: 4, "Wherefore, my brethren, ye are become dead to the law (released from it) that ye should be married to another, even to Christ." Conclusion, they could not have become Christ's bride until after his death.

He now refers to Matt. 11: 11-12; Luke 16: 15. In reference to this we say: (1) The entire ministry of John was under the law of Moses; (2) these Scriptures refer to what took place, not in, but after the days of John; (3) that violent men strove to force, that is, set up the kingdom by violence, or force.

See John vi: 15, where they tried to take Jesus by force, and make him king. The word "violence" is not here used in the sense of persecution, as claimed by my friend; and here I will say that all the persecution of that day was waged against Christ personally, or against his teaching, but not against his disciples. Hence, if they (the disciples) at that time composed the church, it did not suffer persecution.

The next proof-text of my opponent is Luke 7: 28: "For I say unto you among those that are born of women, there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist; but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he."

He says the term "least" is in the comparative degree, and he renders it adverbially. "He that is later in the kingdom." Christ was later in the kingdom than John, and he is greater than John. Now, if this be true, it destroys his affirmation; for if Christ established or set up his kingdom, he was of course in it at the time, and if so, could not have come into the kingdom after John. I also deny his right to render this word adverbially, for it is an adjective, and should be rendered, "He that is least," or, "He that is very small," in the kingdom, is greater than John. The least in the kingdom is greater in privilege than the one who simply prepares the material for it.

As additional testimony that the kingdom was not set up in the days of John, see Matt. 5: 20: Jesus said to his disciples, "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven." Also Matt. 8: 3: "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." These passages, as well as Matt. 6: 10-33, show clearly that if the kingdom had been set up, the disciples were not in it, and this was after John was cast into prison. That it was not set up either in the days of John, or during the personal ministry of Jesus, see Mark 9: 1; Mark 15: 43; Matt. 16: 18; Luke 22: 18; Luke 19: 11.

1. Christ was not crowned king, and consequently had no kingdom until after he died and triumphed over the grave. Heb. 2: 9. When he ascended to heaven he was crowned king, and did receive a kingdom, and began his reign. See Daniel 7: 13; Heb. 2: 9; Acts 2: 34-36; 1 Cor. 15: 25.

2. Christ became head of the church after he ascended to heaven. Eph. 1: 19-22; Col. 1: 16-13. Consequently if the church was set up before that time, it was a body without a head.

3. Christ became Lord both of the dead and the living, after he arose from the dead. Rom. 14: 9. "For to this end Christ both died and revived." To what end? "That he might be Lord both of the dead and living."

4. "If the church, or kingdom, was set up before the death of Christ, it was an institution without the price of redemption or the means of remission. See Acts 20: 28; 1 Pet. 1: 18. These Scriptures show that we are purchased and redeemed by the blood of Christ.

Hebrews 9: 22, "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission." And 1 John 1: 7, "The blood of Christ, his Son, cleanseth from all sin."

5. If the church, or kingdom, was set up before the ascension and glorification of Christ, it was a body without a spirit, and therefore a dead body. John 7: 29, "The Spirit was not yet given, for Christ was not yet glorified."

6. Jesus could not possess the kingdom while on earth, from the fact that he was in the flesh. See Heb. 5: 7, "Who in the days of his flesh." 1 Peter 3: 18, "Was put to death in the flesh." "Now, flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven." 1 Cor. 15: 50.

We become heirs while in the flesh, but we will not come into possession of the inheritance with him until our bodies are changed and fashioned like to his glorious body. Phil. 3: 21.

7. As corroborative testimony, see Orchard's History, page 14; Jones' Church History, page 43; J. Newton Brown's Encyclopædia, pages 129, 721; Neander, Vol. 1, pages 300-324; Schaff, pages 95-96.

These renowned historians all state unreservedly and unqualifiedly, that the kingdom of Christ was set up on the day of Pentecost.

WHAT DOES THE WEDDING GARMENT REPRESENT?

We have been asked to write something in answer to this question. The passage occurs in the parable of the marriage of the king's son:

"And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a wedding garment. And he saith unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither, not having on a wedding garment? And he was speechless. Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." Matt. 22: 11-13.

The wedding garment, as mentioned here, is intended to represent the character that a Christian must possess, in order to be admitted to the marriage supper of the Lamb. The king represents God, our heavenly father, while the son, for whom the marriage was given, represents Christ, the Son of God. The binding and casting out of the man who had not on a wedding garment, represents the final casting out of such as refuse to form the character God requires to be formed in this life, in order to an entrance into heaven. The parable is given upon the principle that the king, when the guests were invited, prescribed the kind of garment that should be worn at the marriage of his son. And this fact explains the severe treatment the man received who did not secure the kind of garment required, and also explains why the man was speechless.

This case represents a very extensive trait in the characters, the dispositions of men. This man desired to be present and enjoy the marriage feast, but was not willing to secure and wear the garment the king prescribed. He thought something else, that suited his notions better, would do just as well. He was anxious to be present, and enjoy the privileges of the marriage feast, but thought he knew quite as well what sort of a garment to wear as the king did, and therefore put on a garment of his own devising. In doing thus he despised the wisdom of the king who had prescribed what sort of garment should be worn, and set the authority of the king at naught, and thus virtually dethroned the king, and set up for himself. He knew when he appeared at the marriage that he did not have on the garment the king required, that he had not done what the king commanded. Hence when the king came in and accosted him, he was speechless, had no excuse in the world. He knew he had acted upon his own wisdom, instead of obeying the king, and there was no room for apologies or excuses. And for the very reason that he had rejected the king's commandment, had arrayed himself against the king, he was bound and cast out, and thus entirely deprived of the privileges of the marriage.

So it is with a great many people regarding the service of God; the doing of the things God has required to be done in order to reach heaven, to be present at the great and final union between Christ and his bride, the church. Everybody wants to go to heaven, and enjoy eternal life, but only a few are willing to put on the wedding garment, to form the character that God requires. In the nineteenth chapter of Revelation we read: "Let us rejoice and be glad, and give honor to him; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her it was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints." In this marriage Christ is the bridegroom, while Christians, the Lord's people, constitute the bride. The raiment they are to wear is the righteousness of saints. The righteousness of saints is the right doing of saints, the doing of the will of God. God portrays in full in his word what sort of character people must form in order to enjoy the above marriage. But many are not willing to do these things, to form this character. Some do not like some of the things required in order to become Christians. Many object at the very outset to the self-denial the Savior requires, others do not like repentance, while many more do not like baptism. Then there are very many that do not like the regular assembling on the first day of the week. Others do not like to visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions, while very many are not willing to keep themselves unspotted from the world. As individuals, we have to make ourselves ready by putting on the garment, by doing the Lord's will. Those, therefore, who refuse to do this, will fail to enter in to the marriage; but on the other hand, will be bound hand and foot, and cast into outer darkness. None will be admitted but those who have on the raiment the Lord commands. No matter how much people may desire to go to heaven, they will fail, unless they do the Lord's will. This much is plainly taught in the parable regarding the wedding garment. E. G. S.

S. S. COMMENTARY.

An Eclectic Commentary on the International Sunday-school Lessons for 1885. By J. W. Monser. This book gives all the lessons for next year, and gives very plain, and in the main, we think, correct comments upon them. The book is neatly bound in cloth, containing over 400 pages, just issued by John Burns, St. Louis, Mo. Price, by mail, one dollar per copy. We think the book well worth the money to Sunday-school teachers. Send one dollar to above publisher and secure a copy, and if you will study the book, you will derive information far exceeding the cost.

TEXAS WORK AND WORKERS.

ALMOST GONE.

Another year will soon have gone to record. Of the actions of our life, not one can be changed. Every act, whether good or bad, has gone to record, and remains forever our act. We cannot shift the responsibility, nor change now a single act performed. We may profit by the experience of the past, and improve our future life; but we cannot change the past. God may forgive our wrong actions, and still that does not undo the act. If our lives have been full of good, it will be pleasant to think, that nothing can hide the good we have done, from him who will not fail to reward. In taking a retrospect of the past year, we find much to deplore, and little to commend, or to make us feel we have done well. There have been some joys, and many tears—some sunshine, and much shadow. Death has been busy with his scythe this year, and utterly regardless of our wishes, and our feelings, has cut down our fairest flowers. He entered my home, and took the sweetest lamb of all my flock. But thanks be unto God, he cannot keep it. He has laid our jewels in the grave, but an angel—yea, a legion of angels cannot keep them there. The spring time will come, and our flowers will bloom for us again in eternal beauty. We wait in hope 'till the resurrection morn, then the grave must give us back our treasures. This hope we have in the Christian religion, and we would not exchange it for worlds.

So far as our labor is concerned, we have done but little of what we hoped to do this year. Our preaching too much scattered, and editorials prepared in too much haste. Sometimes we have been too personal, and have hurt the feelings of some. We regret this, and shall try to improve on the experience of the past. We intend, if we live, to labor on next year—to make our articles more beneficent to the alien, and edifying to the young saint—to try, in a word, to teach, and by teaching to benefit our readers.

To all who have in any way aided us in the Texas Department this year, we tender sincere thanks. For short, pithy articles we are always grateful, and we are glad that many have sent reports of gospel success. To all who have kindly sent us subscribers, and thus aided in extending the usefulness of the paper, we feel especially grateful, and express the hope that we shall be able to make the paper so good next year, that they may redouble their efforts. The editors offer no premiums, but intend the paper must stand or fall on its merits. Wishing all our readers a merry Christmas and a happy New Year, we close with the hope, that next year's work shall far exceed this in good works, and in the attainment of a better life.

FALSE PROPHETS.

The Lord said of his people of old, "The prophets prophesy falsely, and my people love to have it so." That part of history repeats itself to-day. The prophets of this age do the same. They prophesy falsely, they teach false doctrine. They teach the wisdom of men for the wisdom of God—rather the falsehood of men for the truth of God, and the people, those who claim to be God's people, love to have it so. The true gospel of Christ has grown too stale. It no longer draws the masses, because they love sin and do not like to be rebuked in it. And because, perhaps, it is no longer popular to preach the plain old gospel. Oh! for brave men who will dare to tell the Lord's message to a dying world; men who care not what men may say, but who have the fear of God before them, and who will not dare to displease him. Let Paul proclaim the truth so plainly that even a king on his throne shall tremble under its power. Let Peter preach Christ and him crucified, in the very face of the same mob that kills his Master, until in anguish of heart they cry out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" This kind of preaching will awaken men. It will bring sincere repentance. And then let the elders have the nerve to reprove, rebuke, and teach with all long-suffering and patience. And then we may look for a forward move towards Jerusalem all along the line.

"On Lord's day evening Bro. Bean, a visiting brother, preached, and very many came up and gave their hand as a token that they desired prayers for their salvation."—J. A. Kimball, in Texas Baptist Herald.

So you've got a different way of saving men from what the apostles had, have you? And J. A. K., as old as he is, expects the Lord to set aside his own method of salvation (the gospel) and save them without the gospel, just because he (J. A. K.) prays for it to be so, does he? Now, I suppose the Lord has provided the very best way possible to save sinners, and prayer is not the way. Paul says it is by the gospel. Then why don't Baptists preach the gospel, and let that save men? It was sufficient to save three thousand the first day it was preached, and the first time it was heard. It saved five thousand the next day, and no prayers or mourners bench known at all. Suppose Peter had had to put those thousands through the mourners bench process, and the "Christian (?) experience" process, and the voting process, when do you think he would have got five thousand into the church? Will Bro. Link copy this and let his brethren see it? It may lead some of them to think, and then to get out of this babylon where they now linger. Help me, Bro. Link, to get your brethren to investigate the truth. It is time they saw the light.

I preached at Jacksonville on fifth Lord's day in November. Had a good hearing, and think the prospects good for building up the cause there. Bro. N. C. Gragard is the only brother living in the place, and there are four sisters. Other brethren who live at a distance promised to meet with these until we can build up there. I expect to visit them again in January. Although I was not promised anything over expenses of the trip, the brethren supported me well in the work. They did not send me away empty. Jacksonville is an important place, and we are determined to help Bro. Gragard and those faithful sisters who labor with him, to build up the cause there.

The Methodist Conference, held here in November, ordained five men to preach. The bishop charged them to preach the word, and armed each with a Methodist discipline. Thus armed and equipped they have gone forth to the field of duty assigned them by the bishop. Is this different from the Romish church, save in name?

The old American Christian Review comes to me regularly. Still sound and solid. It is yet the firm advocate of the old fashioned gospel, and a foe to all innovations. It is cheering to know that we have some papers, which neither the love of money nor popularity with the world can buy.

DOES FAITH SAVE?

Faith alone does not save. Although the common idea now taught and believed is, that faith alone is all that is necessary to salvation, we still affirm that faith alone saves no one. The simple belief of anything can do us no good, only as it moves us to better action, and better thought. Then really it is not the faith, but the doing—the action born of faith, which lifts up, purifies, ennobles, and saves us.

DEAR BRO. POE: I am here in the midst of a grand meeting, and the number added is thirty to date. Had a fine meeting at Bonham, thirty-one added; one preacher and his wife, from the M. E. Church, joined. His name is Russel Waite, a grand and good man. Some of my friends have been writing to me to know what John T. Poe had against me that he gave me such a cut. I think you ought to try that again, I don't think you treat me right, however that is with you. I have been looking to hear from you through the ADVOCATE.—[J. Harding, Sherman, Texas.

I have nothing special against you, Bro. Harding. I do not like your manner of preaching the gospel, but if we could take away your eccentricities you would no longer be "weeping Joe." We heard Bro. Harding for two days, and can say that he preaches the gospel, sound and straight, and without compromise, when he pretends to preach it. But he mixes so much sensationalism, in anecdote and quaint remark, that we beg leave to protest. The gospel does not need this kind of bolstering. And if men will not hear the story of the cross, and obey the Lamb which was slain thereon, they will not believe anything man can devise. Besides, it is a fact we ought to have learned long since, that men brought into the church by any means save those the Lord had provided, do not stay long. You may, like Maj. Penn, frighten men and women half to death, and persuade them to fly into the church to escape hell, but just as soon as the fright has subsided, which it will do sooner or later, the party goes back to his old life again. Or you may by some eccentricity of your own, cause men and women to imagine they are "joining" the church, when really they are only joining you; then as soon as you leave, or they loose interest in you, they turn back again. Our idea of presenting the gospel, is that it should be placed upon its own merits. This is enough to save all who are worth saving.

Bro. McPherson has been up to Cincinnati to headquarters. Didn't you feel afraid to go so far alone, Bro. Mc? Did you find Cincinnati as large a place as Waxahachie?

Bro. Goodloe, the financial agent of State meeting, is out trying to collect money to send out some more preachers to collect some more money and so on, ad infinitum.

One brewery in St. Louis ships annually 5,000 car loads of lager beer, and yet the people complain of hard times. Many professing Christians help to do this.

We do not expect to be at the Preacher's Institute at Add-Ran.

Remember that when no one else sees you, God's eye is still upon you.

One addition to the congregation at Longview, first Lord's day in December.

A table has been made at the penitentiary at Huntsville, consisting of one hundred and ten different kinds of wood, and all grown in Walker county, Texas.

J. R. Graves gives us an article on saving faith. He tells us of many things which are not saving faith, and finally concludes by saying that "saving faith is a full, free, and willing submission to God." This is only the result of saving faith. It is only those who believe that can thus submit. So Mr. Graves has put the effect for the cause.

Somebody send us a report of the State Meeting work up to present. Half a year is gone since last it met, and we have heard nothing from it; while the saddlebags preachers are pushing their way into the dark corners of the earth, and are preaching the word in the good old way ordained of God, making thousands of converts to the good cause.

Now is the time to get a copy of the "Great Legacy," published by S. R. Ezzell, at Greenville, Hunt county, Texas. Price $1.50. By buying this book you get one of the soundest, most logical books on the gospel plan of salvation, that you ever saw, and you help Bro. Ezzell to preach. Brethren, buy the book, you will not regret it.

Another number one book is Bro. L. W. Scott's "Hand Book on Christian Evidences." If you have an infidel in your community, send and get this book, and settle him at once. Get it of Bro. Scott, or of John Burns, 717 Olive street, St. Louis, Mo. Price $1.50.

Report from Bro. Riall.

I have immersed fifteen into the body. Received five from the sectarians into fellowship with the one body. Have gotten together about thirty-two members, who have formed themselves into an organization, and agree to meet each Lord's day and keep house for the Lord. Also there are about thirty members in the vicinity of Union Point, who agree to come together at my next appointment at that place. This is a good point for an organization. We have some faithful brethren in this community, who can, and no doubt will, exert a salutary influence. I have preached at several points where the people have never heard what we plead as the primitive gospel, and of course they are very prejudiced; but I don't find them any more so than those who claim to desire Christian union. I mean our brethren. Of course you will object to the phrase, "our brethren," and call it proscriptive, and so do I, but it is not any more so than the actions of a great many of those of us who claim only Bible names. I find "our brethren," in a great many instances, as full of prejudice as the denominations. Of course they call it "being firm in the faith," "contending earnestly for the faith," but sometimes I think I can recognize, instead of firmness, stubbornness—instead of contending for the faith, prejudice. What say you? What is the remedy?

OTIS RIALL.

DEAR BRO. POB: Please receive $2.00 for GOSPEL ADVOCATE, for Mrs. M. A. Pride, Paris, Texas. Bro. W. H. Sluder received five dollars from a sister in Missouri, for Indian Mission. She did not give her name. May the Lord reward her in the resurrection. Bro. J. Harding is holding a successful meeting in Sherman. We look for him here soon. The Lord bless him in his work.

Follow God Fully.

If we love the Lord with all our heart, and with all our soul, and with all our mind, there will be no room for the worship of pleasure or wealth or any worldly or wicked interest. "If I become a Christian and join the church, shall I have to give up dancing?" said a young lady, who was very fond of amusement, to her pastor. "Never mind about the dancing," was the answer, "let me explain the way of salvation to you now." Some weeks after she had joined the church, she asked her pastor, "Why did you not tell me I could not dance if I became a Christian?" "Because," said he, smiling, "I knew when you loved Jesus you would not want to dance." Two ladies, both nominal Christians, were discussing the theatre. One firmly spoke against the amusement, the other could see no possible harm in going to an occasionally unexceptional play. The argument went on for some time, when the lady who discountenanced the theatre said, "I stand just here. It is either a worldly amusement or a Christian amusement. I cannot call it a Christian amusement, and my religion satisfies me." "That is the way it ought to be with all of us," was the frank answer, and the argument was ended. If we are fully Christ's the pleasures of the world are but empty husks.—A. C. M., in Illustrator.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS—No. 2.

EDITORS OF THE ADVOCATE: In my former number I omitted to name one or two items respecting the teaching of the Mormon who taught in this place. He asked me if I had read the book of Mormon. I said I had read a part of it. How far did you read? I said I read to the place where Joe Smith dug up the plates and put them in a chest, and put on a pair of golden spectacles, and put a rock between him and the book, and read the book through the rock. I told him when I got to this place my faith failed me, and I laid the book down. I believed the whole affair was a big lie; that God had promised to send people a strong delusion that they might believe a lie, that they might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness. 1 Thess. 3: 9-12.

The Mohametan, the Catholic, and the Mormon succession to the apostles are about equal. They stand upon operations, assertions, traditions, and nothings, like the earth standing upon the back of the terrapin, and the terrapin standing upon nothing. Grant them their premises, and these conclusions follow. All false religions are counterfeits; not one of them has been cast into the mould of the gospel, (Rom. 6: 1-17,) form or mould of doctrine. They are like dead men; they may have all the parts of a man, but they have no life in them, no beauty in them, no action like living men. All religions are false, except the religions of the Bible alone. God never sent but two law-givers to the world, Moses and our Savior. The law came by Moses; grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. John 1: 17. The religion of Jesus Christ is in the New Testament Scriptures; the religion of anti-Christ is outside of the New Testament.

I will here relate an occurrence that took place between my deceased uncle, Jacob Creath, Sr., and one of our preachers, shortly after our expulsion from the Elkhorn Association, in 1830, which illustrates this position.

At that time we had three preachers named Smith in Kentucky. John Smith, of Mount Sterling; Thomas Smith, of Lexington; and Ephraim A. Smith, of Danville. My uncle met Thomas Smith at South Elkhorn meeting-house, six miles from Lexington, who was a pleasant and smooth man in his conversations and in his preaching, who began to congratulate him that he had got clear of his sins by being expelled from the Association, and was rejoicing over him. When he had done rejoicing, my uncle said to him, "Now, Bro. Smith, I do not think that you have such great cause to rejoice over me; I brought my isms up to the meat block, and laid them down upon it, and took the New Testament and chopped off their heads; and now I ask you to do the same with the isms you are charged with, Unitarianism, Arianism, and then you and I will be even, and we can unite upon the New Testament." This was done in Lexington, in January, 1832, when the friends of the Christian Messenger and the Christian Baptist became one people, and they have been one people ever since.

Now, if all other religionists will do the same thing, chop off your isms with the New Testament, then we shall all be the same length religiously, and have the same rule of faith and practice. Let us do all the things commanded in the New Testament, and after we have done them all, if there is any defect, or omission, or imperfection in our rule, then it will be time enough to supply these defects; for all additions that have been to the New Testament since John said Amen, are based upon the supposed defects of the New Testament, which does well enough as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough to suit the sect that improves upon it.

For the sake of illustration, I will take the word convention, which does not occur, either in its literal or sectarian sense, in the New Testament, and which is now so popular among our people. If they are so necessary to spread the gospel, why did not the apostles use them to spread the gospel, while traveling through the world to spread the gospel? The gospel was spread through the Roman Empire by the year 70, and there was no semblance of a clerical cobal till the latter half of the second century. So that they could have had nothing to do in spreading the gospel. All the sophisms that have been offered for our convention, have been offered for the Popish, Jesuitical, and all the sectarian conventions. They, one and all, proceed on the Jesuitical maxim, "For the greater glory of God." All that God does is for his glory. The Jesuits go one step higher than God; they go the comparative degree, God stops at the positive degree, and our people follow the Jesuits, for the greater glory of God.

The government of Christ's kingdom is not democratic, but monarchical. He is king; his laws are in the New Testament; they are to be administered, not made. The epistles of the New Testament are all directed to congregations, not to the kingdom of the clergy or anti-Christ, (Phil. 1: 1,) to the saints with the bishops and deacons. This sacred order is now ruined. With papists and protestants, our people, too, it should read to suit our new order of things, to the "pastors" or to the preachers, and to the churches. Christ left his churches standing separate and distinct; now they are tied together by conventions and missionary societies. What he left untied, they have tied. These separate and individual churches are seen in all the New Testament, and in the last three chapters of the last news we have had from heaven—the last three chapters of Revelations.

The teaching of the Christian Baptist is that one church is the highest authority for doing anything religious. The power of a single congregation is derived, not original—delegated, not transferable. Its power is then necessarily dependent upon him from whom it is derived, and therefore restricted to the objects which he commands them to accomplish, and within those bounds which he prescribes. Unless, then, there is in the charter of a single church to transfer its power to some other body, it cannot do it. I see no authority given to a church of Christ to transfer its power or authority to any other church or body of men on earth.

I call upon all the persons who deny these statements, to show the contrary, or cease to send delegates to these anti-Christian conventions. The New Testament is a stranger to conventions, associations, synods, general councils, and all other assemblies, except one church meeting on Lord's day to read the apostolic letters and break bread, instead of having what the Christian Baptist calls "everlasting sermonizing;" and what he calls one husband to four wives, or churches putting imported "pastors" over the presbyters of the churches, instead of choosing them out of the churches where their membership is, has nearly ruined our restoration. When I was a boy, all the officers of the government were the servants of the people. Now the tables are turned, and the rulers are masters, and the people are servants, and they have eaten the bitter fruits of their own doings for the last twenty years, and are now doing it. The churches had better claim their rights before such sentinels as the Review, Advocate and Index are called hence, and the last of the "old guards" are gone from the watch-tower. Support these sentinels now, by your prayers and money, is the advice of your fellow servant,

JACOB CREATH.

BOYS AND MONEY.

Speaking of boys, and teaching them to value money, we know a man whose two boys had a pony, and, of course, wanted a cart, and asked for the money to buy it, not doubting that their father, following his usual custom, would give them all the money they asked. He had long been studying over the matter, having seen that his boys were spending money with no idea as to its value. He thought this a good chance to teach them a lesson, both as to how slowly money actually accumulates, and how valuable it is after it is earned. So he told them: "Find out how much a cart and harness will cost. Go to the factory and shop and tell what you want and learn what it will cost. Then I will see about it." The boys, not knowing how long was the road before them, went joyfully on the errand. They found that cart and harness would cost eighty-two dollars, and came back in high glee for the money, with visions of a flashing cart and a prancing pony dashing along the highway under their guidance dancing in their minds. The father asked: "Do you want the cart very much?" and the reply was: "We would rather have it than anything we have had in our lives, and, please, papa, hurry it up." The father said: "Well, we'll buy this cart a new way, and so that you will know how good a thing it is and how much it costs when you get it. You shall each have a dollar a week until you have bought the cart. It will not take you a year to get it, if you do not spend too much money." The little fellows started out bravely, not realizing how long it would take. But it was not long before they found it was a slow matter. Temptations came to spend a part of the sacred cart fund, and they were told to spend any or all of it, only that spending part of it would put the cart off that much longer. This consideration would always tell, and a good many foolish expenditures were cut off, such as ten cents' worth of candy when five would do as well, or a thirty-cent ball when a fifteen-cent one would do, and two dollars' worth of valentines when fifteen cents' worth would answer. It was not three weeks till the older one said: "We must earn some money of our own to add to this, or we'll be too big for the cart by the time we get it." So two valuable lessons had been taught and enforced in this way, and the little chaps, realizing "how slowly money grows," and how industry helps to hurry it up, took to hunting up work to do, so as to hurry up the cart. Friends of the family, knowing of the matter, and sympathizing with the boys, as good hearts always do, wanted to help out the fund. But this was forbidden. The parental idea of the lesson of the value and the slow growth of money would not allow it. The cart had to be earned, and finally, and inside of six months, by the endowment fund of two dollars a week, and the earnings of the boys themselves, it was earned. If it had been made of gold it could hardly have been of more value to the boys or to the father. The practical lesson had been learned, and ever since these boys have known for themselves "how slowly money grows," and how doubly sweet is anything bought with money you have earned yourself. No boy knows how big a dollar is until he has earned a whole dollar himself.—Iowa Star Register.

THE LOST RIVER OF IDAHO.

One of the most singular features in the scenery of the Territory of Idaho is the occurrence of dark, rocky chasms, into which creeks and large streams suddenly disappear and are never more seen.

The fissures are old lava channels produced by the outside of the mass cooling and forming a tube, which, when the fiery stream was exhausted, has been left empty, while the roof of the lava duct, having at some point fallen in, presents there the opening into which the river plunges and is lost.

At one place along the Snake one of these rivers appears gushing from a cleft high up in basaltic walls, where it leaps a cataract in the torrent below. Where this stream has its origin, or at what point it is swallowed up, is absolutely unknown, although it is believed that its sources are a long way in the North country.

There is no refuge from God except in God.

ITEMS AND PERSONALS.

Married, at the residence of E. G. Sewell, East Nashville, December 16, 1884, Bro. E. T. Grigg, of Leeville, Tenn., and sister Mary Fritsch, of Nashville.

L. R. Sewell is permanently located at Donelson, Tenn., and having changed locations during the year, and having to drop off some of his former engagements, part of his time is unemployed, and will receive correspondence at the above place, from any brethren that wish to confer with him on that matter. As he is already well known as an excellent teacher of the Bible, we need say nothing more.

Last week three advertisements of a character that we are not willing should appear in the Advocate, found their way into it. One headed, "100,000 Holiday Presents," signed Illinois Agriculturist. This is only a low and clumsy style of gambling. Another is, "A Golden Box of Goods," the third, "A Prize." All of them are such as no honest man ought to think of touching. They promise something for nothing. They all are vicious in their tendencies. A person who is willing to deal with such concerns, deserves to have his fingers burnt and to lose his money, but we do not wish to be instrumental in leading any into it. Our advertising agent has usually sent us none that are corrupting to the morals of the reader. This has led to a lack of caution on our part, so these went in without our knowledge. But we will try to be more cautious in the future.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Cleveland's majorities in the Southern States were 105,174 less than Hancock's.

Mr. Blaine has withdrawn his libel suit against the Indianapolis Sentinel, on the ground that he could not get justice in Indiana.

The Democratic majority in Texas on Congressional ticket was 192,000. The largest Republican majority was in Pennsylvania, 88,000 for Mr. Blaine.

The President was not at the opening of the World's Exposition in New Orleans, but started the machinery from Washington by electric communication.

Texas has about 6,617,524 cattle, according to Assessors' returns, valued at over $81,000,000.00. The increase in number this year has been over 500,000, worth $3,500,000.

Lieutenant Greely says that of his nineteen men who perished all but one were smokers, and that one was last to die. The seven survivors were non-smoking men.

A bloody fight between moonshiners and revenue raiders occurred Wednesday night, in the mountains of Hall county, Ga., at a place called Black Camp, in which several men were killed. Intense excitement prevails.

A statement was read in the Centenary Conference at Baltimore that the Methodist population in the United States was 14,058,190 souls; the Catholic year book gives 6,623,176. These statements should be taken cum grano salis.

The New York Tribune: "Ex-Governor 'Dick' Bishop, of Ohio, denying some recent stories about himself, declares that he has not lost money in politics, having spent in the political field only $5,000 in all. He failed in business last year, but has since succeeded in making himself financially comfortable.

Thirty cents a dozen for making shirts, or starvation, is now the alternative which a large number of the poorer classes in New York have to face. In such cases the problem whether life is worth living would suggest its own ready solution. The times are hard, and nowhere harder than in the centres of population, whither have drifted so large a contingent of the unemployed.

The late Reuben R. Springer, the Cincinnati millionaire, left $550,000 to various charitable and educational societies of Cincinnati. He remembered his relations to the fourth degree, the property was valued at $3,000,000.

Tom Owens, the notorious negro thug, who was indicted by the grand jury of this county last spring, as accessory to the murder of Friedman, in this city, was reported as dead in the West; but now reports say he is frequently in Nashville, and living in Bell's Bend, a short distance from the city.

The Democrats in Columbus, Ohio, will celebrate the 8th of January with great rejoicing and a magnificent banquet. This once memorable day has long been neglected, being mainly kept green by the Democrats of the northern States. Tennessee, the home of the hero of New Orleans, has forgotten the glory.

Gen. Grant requested the withdrawal of his name from the bill introduced in the Senate on the President's recommendation to place him on the pension list. This action on his part will doubtless permit him to be placed on the list of retired army officers. The pay of his rank will be about $8,000 per annum.

Hon. Samuel J. Randall, accompanied by his wife, will be in Nashville, December 30-31, at the special invitation of the citizens of this city, who hold the distinguished statesman in very high esteem. Whether the visit has political significance or not, is not apparent, but the outspoken defender of justice to all will meet with a hearty reception at the hands of this hospitable people. No man in the Democratic party to-day is so deserving of recognition by the South as Mr. Randall.

A fearful loss of life occurred at the burning of St. John's Home, a Catholic orphan school, in Brooklyn. Thirteen dead bodies were recovered from the ruins, all blackened and charred beyond recognition. One hundred and twenty-three are further reported missing. It is horrible to contemplate the woe and desolation that such disasters bring. The authorities ought to take extraordinary efforts to find the causes of the fire, and take better precautions for the future. All such institutions should have a faithful night watchman.

The Nashville Ladies' Relief Association will give a Christmas dinner and suitable gifts to five hundred poor children on Christmas day. This organization does much toward the betterment of the condition of the deserving poor during the inclement weather of winter. One of the truest signs of the advancement and influence of Christianity in the present day, is the fact that our people submit to taxation uncomplainingly for the benefit of the unfortunate ones. Alms houses, orphan schools, reform schools, and relief associations attest the truth of the efficacy of the Spirit widows and orphans' Friend.

The Senate by a strict party vote passed the bill admitting to the union of states all that part of Dakota Territory lying south of the 46th parallel of north latitude; 34 Republicans voting, aye, 28 Democrats voting, nay. The bill now goes to the House, and as the House is Democratic, it remains to be seen what action will be taken. In case the House agrees to pass the bill, the President will announce the result, when the people of that section will hold a convention and adopt a Constitution not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States. The proceedings of which convention will be announced to the President by the Territorial Governor, and a proclamation issued announcing the admission of the new State. The northern part of Dakota will still be a territory, known as Lincoln.

On the Republican River, in Nebraska, are large droves of wild horses, which bother the ranchmen very much by enticing their domestic horses when the latter are turned loose, and as a consequence action has been taken to destroy these pests by forming shooting parties to hunt them, as it is impossible, almost, to capture the swift-footed creatures alive. Large numbers of these little animals have been roaming the plains of Colorado, Wyoming, and Western Nebraska, for many years, and as they breed very rapidly they have become a nuisance to the cattlemen. It is a great pity they have to be shot, as when captured they soon become very docile and their toughness makes them very serviceable. They weigh from 500 to 1,100 pounds, and are usually a sorrel or brown, white or gray rarely being the color.

The Republican Railroad Commissioners will qualify, but state that they will not attempt to get the salary. The three defeated Democrats have entered a suit in chancery before Judge Merritt, of this district, praying for an order to make Comptroller Pickard pay over to them the salary which was stopped by the injunction granted the Railroads last March by the Federal Judge, Judge Merritt's decision is waited for impatiently by the public, as there was a provision in the text of the bill introduced in the last Legislature creating the commission, which clearly set forth that the salary was not to be paid in case the law was declared constitutional, or the commission enjoined.

The commanders in the Chinese army have ordered to suspend hostilities.

The natives have very little hope that the English expedition in Egypt will prove successful.

A great meeting of Orangemen will be held at Belfast, Ireland, January 5, on the occasion of the Wycliffe Quincentenary, which will be celebrated throughout the north of Ireland.

The German Reichstag refused to yield to the demand of Count Bismarck to furnish him with money for additional secretaries. At last a Parliament has been found with nerve enough to resist the fierce man of "Iron Will."

Count Tolstoi, Minister of the Interior of Russia, has ordered the expulsion of all Jews residing in Odessa, Kieff, and other large cities, unless they possess government pass-ports of residence. This will bankrupt many prosperous firms.

A despatch from Odessa says that Turkish atrocities continue in Macedonia. Two hundred Christians were butchered during the past few weeks, and three villages burned. Kidnapping is very common and the people are afraid to leave their houses. Some Philip or Alexander is needed for the protection of these degenerate sons of the once proud Greeks.

Labouchere, in speaking of the Franchise bill, says this: The truth of the matter is this, the sovereign, every Conservative, Whig and moderate Liberal, every newspaper editor who fears Democracy, and every club fetcher and carrier, have been frightened by the advance of democracy, and have banded themselves together to find an issue from a position in which the dispute between the people and the privileged classes must have been fought to the bitter end.

CURIOUS MARRIAGE VOWS.

One of these standing pillars of stone ("The Stone of Stenness," in the Orkney Islands) seems to have a romantic history. Through the upper part a round hole was cut, to which it is presumed the sacrificial victim was tied; but in later times it was put to other uses. Hither many a pair of lovesick swains resorted, and by joining hands through this magic ring plighted their troths forever—a pledge of love which was to them as sacred as a marriage vow. The Scottish Society of Antiquarians gives the following explanation of the ceremony: "When the parties had agreed to marry they repaired to the Temple of the Moon, where the woman, in presence of the man, fell down upon her knees and prayed to the God of Woden (for such was the name of the god whom they addressed on this occasion) that he would enable her to perform all the promises and obligations she had made, and was to make, to the young man present, after which they both went to the Temple of the Sun, where the man prayed in like manner before the woman. They then went to the stone of Odin, and, the man being on one side and the woman on the other, they took hold of each other's right hand through the hole in it and there swore to be constant and faithful to each other." Oradians paid great respect to this stone of Odin, and when visiting it were in the habit of depositing some present in the shape of bread and cheese or a rag. It was believed that if a young child was passed through this hole it would never shake with palsy in old age.—Glasgow Herald.

Obituaries.

Sister Sarah Dale departed this life November 5, 1884, at her home in Livingston, Tenn. She was born March 7, 1847; obeyed the gospel in November, 1872, under the preaching of Bro. Hoover. A more devoted Christian than she was is hard to find; a kind wife and loving mother; all who knew her loved her. She leaves a husband and six children—three boys and three little girls, with many friends and relatives to mourn her loss. But we "sorrow not as those who have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." Let us strive more and more to conform our entire lives to our Father's will, then in the "sweet by-and-by" we can meet the dear ones who have gone before.

WILLIAM H. FLEMING.

Mary Ann Vandiver, second daughter of Elder P. J. Vandiver, was born March 1st, 1869; confessed her Savior and was baptized first Lord's day in August, 1883; and was married to Mr. Emerson Martin December 25, 1883; departed this life November 8, 1884. It is with a sad heart that I give the dates and history of cousin Mary's short life. I stayed on Thursday night before her death with the family; left them Friday morning all well and hearty. Bro. P. J. Vandiver was to meet me on White's Creek Saturday morning en route to old Town to his regular appointment. He did not come, and I went alone. I told his congregation that something unusual had kept him away, and I did not learn the cause till I had returned home. Bro. Vandiver has eleven children, and this is the first death in his family. It is a weeping time, for cousin Mary was an affectionate daughter, a loving wife and a devoted child of God. I would say to her brothers and sisters, that she is gone to return to us no more. But we may, through great grace, meet her in that beautiful land where all is love. Could we but see her smiling face we should not wish her back again, but say dear sister, with God remain.

Died in the Lord, November the 25th, 1884, Bro. E. B. Barnes, at his home near Allensville, Todd County, Ky. He was born in Adair County, Ky., March 10, 1821. Moved to Todd county about the year 1848, and was married to Fannie Watkins in 1852. In the year 1858 he confessed the Savior, and was buried with him in baptism by Bro. William Rogers. From that time up to the close of his life he was an earnest and faithful servant of the Lord, and a very useful member of the church at Allensville. For a good while before his death, he was one of the elders of that congregation, and his advice and instructions were regarded with great confidence by the members, and he was greatly loved and respected by the church. And not only was he respected by the members of the church, but he had a good report of those without. All that knew him held him in high esteem. He was a practical farmer, and his example and advice in that department were valuable to the whole community. He was a kind and affectionate husband and father, and by his bereaved wife and children he will be sadly missed, as well as by the church and the whole community. He took deep interest in the management of the affairs of the congregation, and in this department his place will be hard to fill. We deeply sympathize with sister Barnes and the children in this their great loss. We know they feel deeply this sad bereavement. But he leaves to them the blessed hope that all is well with him now. And if they will all faithfully serve the Lord he served, they may meet him where sorrow and death are felt and feared no more.

E. G. S.

By request of those who loved her most have we to record the death of our dear old Grand-mother Castleman, formerly Lucinda Starkey, who, on the evening of August 22, 1884, as quietly and calmly as one would go to sleep, stole away from earth and all its sufferings to be forever with the Lord. She was born March 5, 1820; was married March 13, 1835. Some four years ago, under the preaching of Bro. Smithson, she made the good confession, was buried with her Savior in baptism, and arose to walk in newness of life, cheered by the bright and glorious hope of his resurrection. There seemed to be no division or doubt in her mind from the day of her obedience, but said her hope was based on God's word, and not on her feelings. Faithful in every department of duty—in the domestic circle she bore well her part, and was one of those women whose education included a good knowledge of the household and all that pertained thereto. The comfort of her home was proverbial, not by stinginess and hard living, but by honest industry and prudent economy. To weed in her garden was her chief delight. But oh, we will see her there no more. It seems hard to realize that she is gone, that we will walk no more side by side with her. Oh may we so live that that delightful, deathless land may be our eternal home. She, during her sickness, had the very best medical attention, and the most tender of nurses, who, with noiseless tread and tireless watching, waited the issue. She leaves an aged husband, five children, a number of grandchildren and many relatives to mourn her departure. Three of her children, I am sorry to say, are with no scriptural ground of hope to ever live with her again. May God in his tender mercies bless them, and grant them space yet for repentance and the acceptance of the truth.

ALICE.

Donelson, Tenn.

At his home in Hampton, Ga., November 29th, 1884, surrounded by his loving and affectionate family, Bro. T. G. Barnett passed from earth to the realities of the Christian home in glory, in anticipation of which, he lived so long and faithfully. Bro. Barnett was born in Green County, Ga., in 1813. With his mother, when he was but ten years old, he moved to this (Henry) county, where he has since lived. In 1834 he was married to Miss Sarah Adams, who was all that a faithful wife could be, and now lingers on the shore of time and mourns the loss of her ever faithful husband. In 1838 he was elected Justice of the Peace, and was only interrupted when in 1851 he was called by the people to the Georgia legislature, which position he filled with honor and credit to himself and constituents. For quite a time he was the Mayor of Hampton; he was also postmaster of the same place for several years. In 1844 he became a member of the Protestant Methodist church, where he lived a consistent and exemplary life till the year 1877, when he joined the church of Christ, under the preaching of Dr. A. G. Thomas, and was baptized by Dr. N. T. Barnett, his own son. Since he became a member of the church of Christ, he seemed to take a special delight in showing to the world that there was a reality in the religion he professed. It is with feelings of sadness, words can never express, that I pen this notice. When a few years since I moved to Hampton, to preach for the church there, we lived next door neighbors to this good man; he and his good wife opened their arms to me and my child-wife, and made us realize that in them we had a father and mother. In all his business relations, he was strictly upright and honest; no one ever thought of him taking an unfair advantage. He was always actuated by the principle, that it is more blessed to give than to receive. His religious life was a beautiful example of sobriety, righteousness and godliness, which is the highest position attainable by man on earth. To the weeping, sorrowing and mourning family, I say, weep not for him as those who have no hope. But renew your vows, redouble your diligence to leave behind you, the unmistakable evidence he has, that you have gone to meet him where parting comes no more. May you all meet him, and beneath the approving smiles of heaven sing around the great white Throne.

BAXTER GOLIGHTLY.

Acworth, Ga., December 7, 1884.

On the 8th of October, 1884, at 5 o'clock in the morning, Elder Seth Sparkman breathed his last. His parents moved from North Carolina to Nashville in the winter of 1796. There being no house vacant, they were permitted to take shelter in an out-house that had been used for a stable, until other arrangements could be made. In this stable, on the 15th of January, 1797, Seth was born. In the course of a few years his father accepted a grant of some lands lying on the waters of Leiper's Fork, in Williamson County, Tenn., as pay for his services in the capacity of overseer while at Nashville. Upon this farm the Sparkman family were raised; and upon a portion of the same, the subject of this notice raised a family of seven children. On the 9th of July, 1822, he was united in marriage to Rebecca Latta, with whom he lived happily for nearly sixty-one years; she having preceded him a little over a year—April 20, 1883. On the first Lord's day in March, 1831, he, with his wife, was baptized by Bro. Andrew Craig, near Leiper's Fork meeting house, "for the remission of sins." Bro. Sparkman was a man of unusual energy—always putting forth every effort to accomplish his undertakings. He lived a very active life—continuing to attend to his business up to within a few weeks of his death. Notwithstanding the vast amount of business he had to look after, he always found time for the reading of useful books, especially the Bible. There were few better posted in the general teachings of the Scriptures than he. His education was greatly neglected in youth, still by close application, studying mostly at night, he attained to fair eminence as an English scholar, and became well informed in general sciences. He had accumulated a select library of the most useful books, to which he continued to add year by year. His desire to learn more and more of the Lord's will, led him to purchase every book he could find upon the subject, and being blessed with good sight, (which enabled to read good print without glasses all the time,) he studied them in turn. All who knew him were convinced that his mental energy and zeal were not a whit behind his physical. The work of the Master was always first. No earthly business was of too great importance for him to lay it aside to work in the Lord's vineyard. It seems that the true rule was exemplified in his life: "Live as if you expected to remain here, and be ready to go to-morrow." He was, seemingly, as much interested in his business up to the time of his sickness as ever before. His children had, during the past few years of his life, insisted that he should retire from his business, close up his temporal affairs and spend the remainder of his days in quietude; but his answer was: "Wear out, not rust out." It is only necessary to know the arrangements he had quietly made, to see, that while busily engaged at other matters, he realized that his time was short—that it was his duty to do what he could while here, and to have things ready to leave. He had earnestly requested that his burial equipages, coffin, etc., be made at home of the materials he had collected—that there should be no unnecessary expense or show. He was regarded a great counsellor, and his advice and teaching were generally safe. He did a great work during his stay on earth, and the Lord blessed him with a good old age. His work, during the last years of his life, was mainly toward building up the various congregations in his reach—stirring up the brethren upon various practical duties, especially the contribution. He, perhaps, had no superior in the much needed work of encouraging young men to preach the word, both by words of encouragement and by supplying their wants. He was ever ready to go with them, talk with them, inspire confidence in those who needed it; at the same time he was not unmindful of their faults—kindly correcting little mistakes and checking those who might "seem" to grow too rapidly. The seed-sowing that has been, and is being done by those started out through his instrumentality, eternity will reveal. The influence he exerted over those with whom he came in contact was great. Few, even of those in his employ, remained long without obeying the gospel. In his conversation with them, he always had a word to say for the Master. No one could be long in his company and not learn something in regard to his position in matters of religion. In conversation, even in business matters, he usually found places to put in thoughts from the Bible. He had a double slab erected for himself and wife, with the full engraving except the date of his death. This is the inscription, "We have combatted a good combat; we have finished our course; we have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for us a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge will give us at that day." "They truly rest from their labors and their works do follow them." While we feel that we have sustained a great loss, we sorrow not as those who have no hope; for we believe that mother and father Sparkman sleep in Jesus, and that God will bring them with him. That we may all imitate their virtues and follow their examples for good while we are permitted to sojourn here, and finally be prepared to meet them in that blissful home, "where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are forever at rest," is our sincere prayer.

CLOSE OF 1884.

This number closes the volume for the year 1884, making fifty-two numbers. The first number for 1885 will be issued January 7; and we hope the brethren will be diligent in sending in their lists, so we may know how many papers to issue at the start, and so the readers may not miss a single number of the ADVOCATE. It will be better for all concerned that we have the names in by the first of the year. We ask all the friends of the ADVOCATE to bestir themselves a little just now, and see how large a list they can get up for next year. Everytime you put the ADVOCATE into the hands of new readers, you enlarge your own, and our field for doing good. We are very anxious to greatly enlarge the circulation of the ADVOCATE again next year. We have had a very encouraging increase this year, and much desire that the increase shall be still greater next year. We wish, if possible, to make next year the most extensively useful of any year of our lives, and with the aid of our brethren we are sure this will be so. There will be no issue the last week of this year, the 31st of December, as this number fills the volume, and we need a little time to get ready for the work of next year. EDITORS.

ROBUST HEALTH

Is not always enjoyed by those who seem to possess it. The taint of corrupted blood may be secretly undermining the constitution. In time, the poison will certainly show its effects, and with all the more virulence the longer it has been allowed to permeate the system. Each pimple, sty, boil, skin disorder and sense of unnatural lassitude, or languor, is one of Nature's warnings of the consequences of neglect.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only remedy that can be relied upon, in all cases, to eradicate the taint of hereditary disease and the special corruptions of the blood. It is the only alternative that is sufficiently powerful to thoroughly cleanse the system of Scrofulous and Mercurial impurities and the pollution of Contagious Diseases. It also neutralizes the poisons left by Diphtheria and Scarlet Fever, and enables rapid recuperation from the enfeeblement and debility caused by these diseases.

Myriads of Cures

Achieved by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, in the past forty years, are attested, and there is no blood disease, at all possible of cure, that will not yield to it. Whatever the ailments of this class, and wherever found, from the scurvy of the Arctic circle to the "veldt-sores" of South Africa, this remedy has afforded health to the sufferers by whom it was employed. Druggists everywhere can cite numerous cases, within their personal knowledge, of remarkable cures wrought by it, where all other treatment had been unavailing. People will do well to

Trust Nothing Else

than AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Numerous crude mixtures are offered to the public as "blood purifiers," which only allure the patient with the pretense of many cheap doses, and with which it is folly to experiment while disease is steadily becoming more deep-seated and difficult of cure. Some of these mixtures do much lasting harm. Bear in mind that the only medicine that can radically purify the vitiated blood is

It is not easy to believe that children are less obedient and affectionate now than they used to be, but we see this statement made frequently. Most mothers must doubt its truth. Children are on better terms with their parent, they are really acquainted with each other, which was rarely the case in the days when the father ruled the whole household with a patriarch's selfishness and power. Edward Everett Hale, in his article on "Half Time in Schools," suggests that in the present order of things there is danger of children thinking themselves of too great importance. While this may be true in individual cases, to the hopeful mind there seems to be little danger that the boys in many homes, even those of great wealth, can feel for any length of time "they are the only creatures of God that have nothing to do for the world they live in." It certainly does seem to be nearer the ideal condition when a son finds his father to be his best friend, and a daughter goes to a mother with all those affairs which is nearest her heart. It is not a rare to see this, and that life is less artificial and has more human interest than in had in the youth of, say, Hester Prynne, cannot be doubted by one who thinks it without prejudice or passion.

It is better to need relief than to want a heart to give it.

LOVING WORDS.

Loving words will cost but little,
Journeying up the hill of life;
But they make the weak and weary
Stronger, braver for the strife.
Do you count them only trifles?
What to earth are sun and rain?
Never was a kind word wasted,
Never one was said in vain.

When the cares of life are many,
And its burdens heavy grow
For the ones who walk beside you,
If you love them tell them so.
What you count of little value
Has an almost magic power,
And beneath their cheering sunshine
Hearts will blossom like a flower.

So, as up life's hill we journey,
Let us scatter, all the way,
Kindly words, to be as sunshine
In the dark and cloudy day.
Grudge no loving word, my brother,
As along through life you go,
To the ones who journey with you;
If you love them, tell them so.

—Golden Days.

MRS. TOLIVER AS A PROSELYTIST.

In Mr. Richard Malcolm Johnston's "Old Mark Langston," an amusing study of Southern life and character before the Civil War, occurs the following account of how the excellent Mrs. Toliver found her efforts of no avail to convert her dear old friend, "Sister Catlin," from the Methodist to the Baptist persuasion. The two good old ladies were notable housekeepers, near neighbors, and devoted friends, agreeing on every point except denominational opinions. It was directly after one of these spiritual wrestles that Mrs. Toliver "came in, disappointment plainly written on her face, almost jerked off her sun-bonnet," and addressed her young boarder, Miss Rebecca Woodbridge, as follows:

"Well, well . . . Miss Arbecca, the predigice, the predigice! for it ain't nothin' but predigice; for expectin' that she are as sensible and good a person o' the female sections as they is in this town, or this whole country, and . . . I believe in my soul she be the religiousest."

"Can't bring her round yet, eh? Mrs. Toliver."
"No! I had her onst this evenin' whar she couldn't squeal, nor even, chirrup, so to speak, and I'd of clinched the nail on her; but somehow, to save my life, I couldn't lay my hand at the minute on the passage o' Scriptor I wanted, and I was a sarchin for it when she up, she did, and she scooted, a-sayin' she had to make wafers for Polly; and which I don't know, Miss Arbecca, whether you know it or not, but these Methodist women . . . them women has to learn how to do good cookin', because their preachers, so they tell me, has appetites. Appetites is the word. But that aint neither here nor thar. To-day I see, or I could but consate I see, for somehow the words and the ideas come to me freer and easier than common—and I were a-pinin' of her down and I see the iron were hot, or at least ways warm, and I wanted to strike before it got cold ag'in and I found the passage o' Scriptor and I car'd it over to her.

"Well, you mind, Miss Arbecca, me and Sister Catlin—because me and her calls one another 'sister,' althowh we're as fur apart as the ragin' 'mountain' seas—we was a talking of infant baptism.

"And while we was a-talkin' there, in the back peazzer, my old Dominicker hen—and she may not be such a layer, Miss Arbecca, as some; that is, such a monstrous, powerful layer; but (I'll say it open and above board) she's the best setter and hatcher and raiser in this whole yard o' chickens. Well, now you jes' listen to me, if you please. That hen, right in the midst of me and Sister Catlin, a-talkin' on that very pint, she comes up, she do, to the chicken-trough, a-fetchin' of her chickens to git water.

"Sister Catlin were a-lookin' at them, hen and chickens, while I were a-explainin' o' the doctrin, as I knowed the blessed 'postles laid it down and 'pinted it to be followed. For that's one o' her ways, Miss Arbecca; and which, ef she'd listen to me, I'd convince her in no time.

"I was jes' a cappin' o' the climack, when she ups, she does, and she say: 'What a fine hen, Sister Toliver, and what a fine passel o' chickens, to be shore!' Well, Madam, Miss Arbecca Woodige, the words wan't scerely outer her mouth before one o' them chickens—he were a little rooster—he leaped, he did, too fur over the edge o' the trough, or he were jes' natchelly too smart, and lo, and behold, he hop off—enyhow he got right smack into the water! Well, now, young woman, ef ever you see a mad hen, then was the time; for, you know, or ef you don't, you mout know, that hen with young chickens is like some women, and don't seem they can be satisfied without a-fussin' other with their young uns or about 'em: and old Lady Dominicker are that kind in particklar. But this time I see she were in the right.

"She sot on to that little rooster, and she pecked him here, and she pecked him thar, and he hollered and he hoped and he hopped and he hollered, until he hoped out agin', and she yit give him a wipe on the back of his head arter he wor out.

"Sister Catlin and me," she continued, still laughing heartily at the recollection, "we both, well, we jes' had to laugh—her so mad and him so pitiful. But now," again becoming serious, even stern, "I don't think a idea ever struck me so suddenly as the idea of all that a-happenin' right thar while we was on the pint o' the baptism o' children—and they a not knowin' no more o' its wallue nor what it's for than that same little rooster; and I say to her: 'Thar,' says I, 'Sister Catlin, you see that the very hens and chickens is agin' it.'

"Bless your soul and body, madam, she wouldn't give up that much, and she declared the case wa'n't in point. And then I thought on the passage o' Scriptor whar it says about 'the beholdin' o' the ar; but to save my life I couldn't cote it quite at the minute, nor light on the book and chapter and veerse whar to find it; and before I could light on it she ris, she did, and she scooted; but law! the iron had got cold, and you jist as well of beat with your fist, let alone a hammer.

"It only go to show what prejudice 'll do with even good people; and if that 'oman were jest' only a Baptis' she be a saint."

BLESSED FAMILY HOME.

Says Dr. James Hamilton, "I love to think that heaven is our family home." His father and two sisters had died in the faith, and the remaining members of his family were decided followers of Christ. Not long after he wrote the sentence quoted above, he was called to the family home. The family will undoubtedly form an undivided family in heaven, if the union has not already taken place.

What is true of the family of the reader? Can he say "I love to think of heaven as our family home?" Are parents and children, brothers and sisters united in love to Christ as well as in love to one another? Have the departed members of the family gone to be present with the Lord, and await the coming of those who were near to them on earth?

The family was designed to be a nursery for heaven. God says to every parent to whom a child is born, "Take this child and train it for me." The parent cannot convert the child, but his influence may be more powerful than any other created being. He has the promise of divine aid. How many children would grow up impenitent if their parents were devoted Christians, and labored wisely and prayed to the end that their children might attain to the like precious faith?

Christian parents, have you so walked before your children that they have full confidence in your professions of seeking first the kingdom of God and his righteousness? Are they convinced that you desire their conversion and holiness more than anything else? You have conversed freely with them in regard to their temporal interests and prospects. Have you as freely conversed with them in regard to their spiritual interests and prospects? Have you prayed for them as constantly and as fervently as the interests at stake require? Have you contemplated the possibility of an eternal separation between you and those who are dearer to you than your own soul? New York Observer.

It is an interesting fact that the Chinese plant their wheat with a drill and that they have done so centuries, perhaps, before wheat-drills were invented and used in the West. The wheat is also drilled in with fertilizers.

A HARD WAY TO EARN A DOLLAR.

"Your tongues will all wear out some day," said Uncle Dick. The children laughed uneasily. Teeny felt of the tip of his to see if it were still in good running order.

"I don't believe that any more than anything, do you, Molly?" he whispered.

"It's only just some of Uncle Dick's nonsense, I guess," said Molly, looking at hers in the glass. "Anyway, not till we're real old, and then we can get false ones. They have 'em nowadays; there's false teeth and false hair and false noses, and false everthing."

"Oh, well, pooh, then!" said Teeny. "I'm not going to try and save 'em any!" So they began talking again.

Uncle Dick couldn't bear the talking so well as mamma.

"What was the minister's text yesterday, Molly?" he asked.

"I don't fink," said Molly. "It isn't any matter. I didn't see any diffunce to it."

"Lamartine!" said Uncle Dick, sternly. (Teeny's name was Lamartine.)

"What, ma'am?" said Teeny, meekly.

"Can you tell me anything whatever about the Sunday-school lesson, yesterday?"

Teeny felt badly, but he couldn't tell a lie.

"Not last Sunday's," he said, honestly. "But I can tell you all about winding up engines!" he added joyfully.

"No, thank you," said Uncle Dick, "I'll make a bargain with you. If you won't speak a word for an hour, I will give you a dollar apiece."

"Oh, we will!" cried the children.

"You spoke!" said Uncle Dick.

"Oh, we won't!" cried the children.

"Oh, you did!" said Uncle Dick. "Now you can begin again."

"We won't speak a word. Oh dear, there we spoke again! Try us this once."

"Very well," said Uncle Dick.

"So they went and got their slates.

"Let's when we want to say anything just write it down," scribbled Molly. "They say we talk so awful much! I don't believe it will make a slatefull.

They kept still and held their dear little babbling tongues for fifty-five minutes.

Then Teeny's pencil dropped.

"It's broken into three halves!" cried Teeny.

"No matter," said Molly, kindly. "It will last all the longer."

"Well done!" laughed Uncle Dick. "You shall have the dollar, if you did speak. It was a pretty hard way to earn a dollar."—Youth's Companion.

THE EAGLE'S NEST AT MISSOURI FALLS.

It is well known that many birds of prey are remarkably stationary in their nesting habits. Lewis and Clark, in the report of their extraordinary journey across our Continent, describing the great falls of the Missouri under the date, June 13, 1805, say: "Just below these falls is a little island well covered with timber. Here, in a cotton-wood tree, an eagle had fixed its nest, and seemed the undisputed mistress of the spot, to contest whose dominion neither man nor beast would venture across the gulf which surrounds it, and which is further secured by the mist arising from the falls. This solitary bird could not escape the observation of the Indians, who made the eagle's nest a part of their description of the falls, which now proves to be correct in almost every particular, except that they did not do justice to their height."

Gen. W. F. Reynolds, in the Yellowstone expedition traversing the same region, passed this July 12 1860, more than half a century later. He told me that as he journeyed he read Lewis and Clark's account, and was much impressed by its vividness and accuracy. Just before reaching these falls he called the attention of his companions to this mention of the eagle, and in a moment was especially pleased at observing the eagle's nest described in the diary of 1805 still in the cotton-wood tree on the island, and on the tree by its side was perched a bald eagle of unusual size. In his report General Reynolds says: "This affords a striking illustration of the habits of this American bird, and from its known longevity it may have been the identical eagle that Captain Lewis made historical more than half a century ago."—New York Observer.

Square Pianos were formerly much more generally used than Upright pianos, though the latter were undoubtedly the more elegant and convenient as furniture. This was because the square was decidedly the best as a musical instrument. The improvements latterly made in up-rights have changed this, and the square may now fairly claim to be the best as a musical instrument as well as more desirable as furniture. specially is this true of the improved Upright Piano now offered by the Mason & Hamlin Company. Their pure musical tones are a delight to every appreciative ear, and in durability they present great advantages. This is the result of adding to all valuable improvements heretofore made, one which is more important than any, being a new method of fastening the strings, by which they are more securely held, making the vibrations more perfect, and the instrument less liable to bad effects of atmospheric changes.—Boston Traveller.

Mars Hill College.

With pleasure we lay before our readers the following extracts from the Fifteenth Annual Announcement of Mars Hill College, an institution perpetually wielding a wonderful and wide-spread influence for truth, refinement and righteousness.—EDITORS.

POSITIONS PROCURED FOR OUR PUPILS.

We make a specialty of preparing pupils for

(1.) PREACHING; (2.) TEACHING; (3.) PREACHING and TEACHING.

Many educated here—among whom are successful lawyers, physicians, merchants, salesmen, mechanics, farmers, editors, authors, teachers and preachers—have so demeaned themselves, that the humility, fidelity, integrity, accuracy and ability of "Mars Hill students" have become proverbial. There is, consequently, such a demand for the services of our pupils, that we deem it perfectly safe to promise to procure pleasant, profitable and honorable positions for all who qualify themselves here for usefulness. Indeed, for several years we have been able to fill comparatively few of the positions tendered.

HEALTHFULNESS!

Mars Hill as a Health Resort.

Our school was founded in 1870. All the "doctor bills," for services rendered our pupils, from then till now, do not, we think, amount to twenty-five dollars—probably not to one dollar a year. Those who have come here pale and puny, from malarial districts, have, without an exception, we believe, returned to their homes enjoying health.

What "Watering Place," or "Health Resort," then, can justly claim more, as a health-preserver and health-restorer, than Mars Hill? Address,

T. B. LARIMORE, President.
