From Carl A. Gardner, Thorp Spring, Texas: "Thorp Spring College is fine. To date about one hundred and ninety students have been enrolled in the high school and college. From the primary grades on through the college about two hundred and eighty students have been enrolled. This is very much the largest enrollment at this time of the year in the history of the school. The interest is good and most of the students are serious. A number of new students intend to enter soon."

From C. G. Vincent, Paden City, W. Va., November 2: "I am out on my first lecture trip. The churches, as a rule, receive me very kindly and seem interested to know of the progress of the Japan missions. I will be in these parts two or three weeks longer, then go South. In balancing my books to-day, I find that during the last two months the offerings have fallen off considerably and that there is a shortage in our work fund of seventy-nine dollars and nine cents. Let me urge our regulars to continue our support, so that all the extra money I raise on my lecture trips may go into the lot and rebuilding fund, which is so badly needed. Address me at 112 Manchester Street, Battle Creek, Mich."

From R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn., November 4: "I have just closed a thirteen-days' meeting at Sewanee, Tenn., preaching at night only, with sixteen added to the one body. Among the number baptized were three Presbyterians, three Episcopalians, one Methodist, and one from the Holiness people. The church of Christ here is only about three and one-half years old, but they have a nice meetinghouse. The brethren have had a hard struggle, but the truth has found its way into the hearts of about forty loyal members. The cause of Christ was established at this place by J. D. Northcut. He went to Sewanee, finding J. L. Long and Tom Hamilton there, who have been very loyal and have done much for the cause of Christ at that place. Tom Hamilton is an Irishman from Ireland, but he is a good, loyal, Christian gentleman. I learned to love him while I was in his home. He has a Christian wife. J. L. Long has been a member of the church of Christ for several years. He married about three years ago, his wife being a member of the Presbyterian Church until this meeting. She was converted to the truth and was baptized into Christ. Brother Long has been praying for her ever since she became his wife. He now rejoices to know he and his wife are both one in Christ. I will preach for the brethren at Sewanee on the first Lord's day in each month."

Miami, October 23.—Yesterday was a great day for the church of Christ here. Six put in their membership and two were baptized. One man, about seventy years old, who had been received into the Christian Church on his sprinkling and was made an elder, saw his error and was baptized. The church here is doing well.—H. M. Phillips.

Antioch, October 23.—The Lord's work is moving on very nicely at this place. Brother Will Rucker, of Adrian, has held two meetings here this year, each of eight days' duration. Besides, he has dropped in with us a few times on Lord's days. There has been gradual growth in interest. Brother J. B. Peden, of Buchanan, held a week's meeting here, beginning on the third Sunday in this month. Four were baptized, three reclaimed, and one from the Baptists. Brother Peden's clear and logical reasoning was very convincing. Brother George B. Hoover, of Tampa, has been doing some preaching here for the past few years. He also preached two fine sermons for us yesterday. These are noble men, and we are very thankful to the Lord for such men to work with us. Brother J. T. Bushong, of Plant City, is to preach for us on the second Lord's day in November.—P. D. Copeland.

Kentucky.

Stop, October 30.—We had our first service yesterday in the new house here. The brethren have been more than a year building; but they have a nice, comfortable house. We are in a meeting, with large crowds. We hope for much from this congregation, thinking they have a great future. This gives us fine worshiping congregations in the county, with two new houses and one in course of construction, in the three years' work. We hope the harvest has only begun. I want to commend those splendid articles of Brother Elam's. I hope every servant of God is reading them. They certainly are timely and helpful. The preaching needed most to-day is that which teaches "the whole counsel of God" on all subjects, and nothing but the "counsel of God" on any subject.—J. D. Walling.

Missouri.

Rogersville, October 30.—I have just closed a week's meeting at Braggadocio, with good interest, but no additions. There is a small band of fine brethren there. I will be at home through January, February, and March, filling appointments and lecturing, if not called into protracted-meeting work, and I am now booking 1917 work from April 1 to the end of the year. If you need me, write me.—M. S. Mason.

Yuma, October 29.—We had a splendid service at Hickory Plains to-day. Brother W. E. Morgan was unable to fill his appointment there, and the brethren came here for me. I made my arrangements to go, and preached on Saturday night and two sermons on Sunday. One noble soul baptized into the one body.—W. Claude Hall.

Waynesboro, Route 3, October 29.—On Saturday night before the third Lord's day in this month Brother Oscar Parham began a meeting three miles north of Waynesboro, at Mount Hope, and continued it over eleven days. Three were reclaimed. We have been keeping house for the Lord ever since July, with four ladies and myself. Brother Parham bids fair to do much good. He presses the truth, yet is godly in his deportment. May God's blessings ever be his.—L. P. Carroll.

Pulaski, October 30.—The following is a brief report of my summer and fall protracted-meeting work: Cherry Creek, White County, Tenn., beginning on July 16, thirteen days, seven baptisms, one from the Baptists, five restorations; Reunion, Limestone County, Ala., July 30, six days, two baptisms, one restoration; Hayes' Mill, Ala., August 6, tent meeting, twelve days, three baptisms, four restorations; Corinth, Limestone County, August 20, nine days, eight baptisms, six restorations; Bethel, Limestone County, September 3, eight days, four baptisms, two restorations; Ephesus (new church), September 17, ten days, eighteen baptisms, thirteen restorations; Big Springs, White County, Tenn., October 1, twelve days, three baptisms; Beech Grove, Putnam County, October 15, eight days, four baptisms, five restorations. In addition to the results referred to above, a number of church and family troubles were adjusted and congregations left with greater zeal for the Master's work. The Bethel congregation has recently remodeled their house of worship and put it in good condition. The Ephesus brethren have painted their house, both interior and exterior, and installed new seats and new lights. Taken as a whole, this has been one of the best years' work of my life. I have a meeting at every place I have held a meeting this year booked for 1917, if it be the Master's will. I am now at home to take up my regular work for the winter and spring. We are expecting to have Brother C. M. Pullias with us in December. Brother Bates gave us two splendid lessons yesterday.—J. T. Clark.

Recipe for Gray Hair.

To half pint of water add one ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded, gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

What is the Club?

The Gospel Advocate Piano Club is both a theory and a fact. The theory is that a piano factory can afford to sell one hundred pianos and player-pianos at a much lower price than it would be willing to make on an order for only one instrument. The fact is that the club has saved each of its members forty per cent.

The theory of the club is "co-operation." The fact is "perfect satisfaction." The theory is: "A square deal to every member." The fact is: "Every member is delighted."

If you are interested in securing a piano or player-piano of the finest quality at the lowest possible factory price, write for your copy of the club's catalogue, discount sheet, and terms. Address Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

Is It True?

BY F. P. FONNER.

Sometimes we hear some one say: "All that those Campbellites want is to get you down into the water." And, in fact, in some localities such stuff is peddled from house to house by preachers who claim to be so pure and holy that they cannot sin. Well, that seems to be pretty hard on the Campbellites, if any such people exist, and especially so when such good men persist in making such declarations. But first let us ascertain whether or not there is a religious party in existence calling themselves "Campbellites." Common courtesy demands that we call every religious party by the name which it chooses for itself, and to do otherwise would be very uncourteous and unkind. Should a lady or a gentleman do this, it must be because such a one has forgotten his or her standing in society. But are there any Campbellites in existence? This writer has searched very diligently, and has never found any one willing to be called by any such name. Persons accused of being Campbellites have been pointed out to me very often; and when I have interrogated them in regard to the matter, they have told me that such accusations are not true. Without a single dissenting voice they have told me that they are Christians, and Christians only, and that they do not follow uninspired men. They tell me that they follow Christ and are called by his name. The words of the apostle Peter are frequently on their lips and in their minds; "Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf [in this name]." (See 1 Pet. 4: 16.) As to the name of the church as a whole, these people call it by such names as are found in the New Testament. "Church of God," "churches of Christ," and "body of Christ" are some of its New Testament names. Then these people are not Campbellites, as any one can see very easily. Then why nickname them and proceed to inform the people that all they care for is to get them "down into the water?" Did you ever hear a Christian minister make such a statement? No, and you never will. These false statements are invented to prevent the spread of truth among men. Now what is the truth in regard to that people falsely called "Campbellites?" It is this, and nothing more nor less: They believe all the word of God and earnestly desire to obey all the commands as they are recorded in the New Testament. While they hold to baptism for remission as taught in the word, they also teach that baptism without faith and repentance is value-

How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism.

According to the standard medical books rheumatism is not a germ disease, but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate, and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart, and other organs. To cure rheumatism, it is, therefore, necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer with rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, gallstones, disease of the kidneys, bladder, or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any condition due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, inclose the amount, and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average, report no benefit:

THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

One of the brightest and most entertaining of all our Sunday-school publications is THE YOUNG PEOPLE, a four-page weekly, devoted especially to the interests and welfare of young people of both sexes, but which will prove a channel of cheer and blessing to older ones as well. This periodical has just been consolidated with THE BIBLE STUDY HELPER, and presents the strongest and most essential features of both in an improved form. Three pages are given to stories of an entertaining and elevating character and articles of an educational nature, by gifted and well-informed writers, strikingly illustrated by photo-engravings and line drawings; and one page is devoted to a clear and concise presentation of the Sunday-school lesson, historically and exegetically, by A. B. Lipscomb, one of the editors of the Gospel Advocate, in which are presented the thoughts of many of the world's best thinkers. The size of the page is 10 3/4 x 14 inches. Printed from clear type on good paper.

less and does not bring any one to the remission of sins. And even when all these items are in their proper places, it is only God who can pardon sin. They do not believe the erroneous doctrine that we may know that our sins are pardoned by our feelings and bodily sensations; but they do claim that we may know this when we obey the gospel of Christ, because God promises pardon upon a cheerful and hearty compliance with all the conditions of pardon. When a penitent believer is baptized "for the remission of sins," he has the full assurance of pardon in the word of God. Why not trust in God instead of trusting our own deceptive feelings? This looks very much as though some professors of religion were trusting their own feelings for salvation instead of trusting in the promises of God and earnestly striving to do his will, as these supposed Campbellites desire to do. So, then, as there are no Campbellites on earth, those persons who imagine that they are fighting them should be engaged in some better business.

Eat Less Meat If Back Hurts

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up, and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or the kidneys are not acting right, or if the bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure any one. It makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Living your school life with Christ does not mean a less enjoyable time, but the most glorious happiness all the time.—Amos R. Wells.

Honesty.

BY W. R. BAINS.

Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, said to Christians: "I have begotten you through the gospel." There were three elements in the process that made Christians of them; They heard, they believed, they obeyed the gospel. In the natural birth there are a begetting, a conceiving, and a birth. Hence, Peter says: "Being born again, not of corruptible seed [the natural birth], but by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." This produces spiritual birth, which makes a Christian. The Lord said in the Old Testament that he would give his people a name. Hence we find that he gave to them a name at Antioch, and named them "Christians" in honor of his only begotten Son. Now, then, if one should give himself any other, and yet claim to be a Christian, he is dishonoring God by dishonoring the name which he gave them. We find people who claim to be Christians going under other names. Do they not blaspheme that worthy name by which we are called? For Peter said: "There is no other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved."

Isaiah asks the question: "Will a man rob God?" This question proves that it can be done. When Christ took the piece of money and asked the people whose image was on it, they said it was Caesar's. He said to them: "Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things which are God's." That is to say, if you owe Caesar any money and he demands or calls for it, render it to him, pay in his own money. The same is true when we render the things to God which are God's. God demands of us faith; render him faith. He demands repentance; render to him repentance. He demands baptism; render to him baptism. Pay him in his own currency, for no other is legal, nor accepted, nor demanded. Every time we refuse the demand, we are to that extent robbing God. I do not think any one will deny or contradict this statement if he is honest with God; and it is probably true that one can be honest with himself and at the same time be dishonest with God. Paul commands us all to speak and teach the same things, and asked the brethren how it was that when they came together each one had a psalm or a doctrine. He also says if an angel teach any other gospel (doctrine) than the one he preached (or taught), let

TO END CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmit (double strength), and add to it $\frac{1}{2}$ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

him be accursed. Let every man who does such be a liar, but let God be true. Therefore all who teach or preach any other doctrine are robbing God of the truth (the gospel); hence, let us be honest.

Brain Blood Supply Must Be Good.

The importance of having pure blood is, perhaps, never more deeply impressed on us than when we are told by physiologists that if the brain is supplied with impure blood, nervous and bilious headache, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, impaired intellect, dimness of vision, and dullness of hearing are experienced, and in time the brain becomes disorganized and the brittle thread of life is broken.

The more we learn of the usefulness of the great blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla, the more grateful we are for this old and successful family medicine, which has accomplished so much in removing scrofula, rheumatism, and catarrh, and other blood diseases, and correcting run-down conditions of the system. If you need a blood purifier, get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hypocrisy.

An assumed reputation for piety and an outward appearance of virtue rarely prove long to be, in public estimation, accepted substitutes for the real article of heart religion. Hypocrisy is but a thin covering, through which the native disposition of an evil man strongly tends to manifest itself.—Exchange.

CHURCH NEWS

Tennessee.

Madison, November 1.—The latter part of July I assisted the brethren at Sulphur Well Academy, in Henry County, in an eight-days' meeting that was fruitless, so far as visible results were concerned, but hope some good was accomplished. There are some fine brethren there, but a leaven of digression at work which, I fear, will do much harm later. On the first Sunday in August I began with the Rock Springs congregation, in Rutherford County. This is the home congregation of our useful brother, S. H. Hall. His father and mother attended as often as health would permit. His wife and son, Philip, were there one day. This is where Brother R. H. Boll obeyed the gospel; also the home of the Haynes boys, one of whom, Brother Will Haynes, has passed on to his reward. I enjoyed this meeting very much. Five were added by primary obedience and one or two restored. The congregation is doing comparatively well, but not living up to the full measure of its possibilities. The latter part of August was spent in a tent meeting at Hermon, Ky., an absolutely destitute place. A neighboring congregation assisted in the meeting, especially Brother Daniel and his noble family, with whom I made my home. The arrival of Francis Sewell Ritchie on September 14 prevented my making my usual trip to Arkansas; so I assisted the brethren at Berea, in Williamson County, Tenn., in a few-days' meeting. Four persons were baptized there, and we hope other good was accomplished. I have labored much with these brethren, and they treat me as a brother. My next effort was with the Beech Grove Church, in Maury County. This is one of the oldest congregations in the country, and some fine talent has lived and labored there, especially the late lamented Brother William Anderson. Few men of the past or present generation did more permanent good for their country than he. Many men and boys can trace their success, both from a viewpoint of knowledge and piety, to the teachings and influence of this godly man. His widow, a true mother in Israel, and youngest son live near the old home. He is not a Christian, but our earnest prayers are that he may be ere long. One of his daughters also lives near. She has a nice husband and is raising a family of bright, sweet children, and we pray that her husband may soon become a Christian, that he may be better prepared to assist her in bringing the children up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Beech Grove has some fine brethren and sisters as well. I shall continue to visit them monthly as I have been doing near two years. I think I shall do very little, if any, farming next year, so may be able to answer some calls for spring and summer meetings. I am trying to shape my affairs to put in eight or nine months every year in evangelistic work. If Francis Sewell continues to grow, I think in twelve months he can manage the stock and farm with all case. He is six weeks old now, weighs fourteen pounds, and manages his father, mother, two older brothers, and all visiting friends, without the least spirit of resentment on the part of any, which fully convinces me that "rulers are born, not made."—Andy T. Ritchie.

Texas.

Decatur, November 1.—As a result of our fifth Sunday appointment, I baptized one. She had been a Baptist. Our work in Fort Worth is moving along nicely. I am now at Decatur to hold a ten-days' meeting. I will then return to my regular work with the South Side Church in Fort Worth. Brother S. H. Hall is now in a good meeting with the Central Church at Fort Worth.—A. O. Colley.

Paris, October 30.—Brother J. B. Nelson is soon to be with the Paris church in a series of meetings. We are now in our new building, and we are hoping for a successful meeting. I shall make a general report soon, that churches who have had fellowship with us may fully understand, and I am sure all will be pleased with results. Our new building is simply a beauty with a fine seating capacity for the amount invested.—Lee Garrett.

Mineral Wells, October 30.—I arrived home on Friday, October 20, preached at Lisbon on the following Sunday, and am in a little meeting here now. I shall preach here till next Friday, the Lord willing. I am due at Lisbon again next Lord's day. I had a letter from the brethren at Beaumont asking if I would consider the work at that place. I am also to go to Rockwall on the fourth Lord's day in November and see about the work there. May the Lord bless all the faithful.—J. C. Estes.

Wichita Falls, October 30.—We had a great day here Sunday. We had all-day services, giving the afternoon largely to singing. We invited the congregations over the county and some outside the county. The day was even more than we had anticipated. It was the first meeting of the kind ever held by this church. The encouragement we received from the visiting brethren was very helpful. This church begins a meeting Tuesday night, with Brother Tice Elkins, of Childress, assisting.—C. A. Buchanan.

Tenaha, October 30.—I was with the good brethren at Fullerton, La., yesterday. I found these brethren, though few in number, strong in the faith and willing workers. They supported and treated me well and invited me to preach for them again. Some of them were from my own dear old native State, Tennessee. Wife and I are liking our new home (Tenaha) just fine. I am to preach at Center on the first Lord's day in each month; at Tenaha, second Lord's day; at San Augustine, third Lord's day; at Choice, fourth Lord's day. I will give the fifth Sundays to mission work wherever desired. Let us all be up and doing something for the Master while it is day.—J. S. Daugherty.

Blue Grove, October 26.—I am at this writing in a meeting at this place, with a fairly good hearing. I hope for good results. My home is now at Hillsboro. I am doing local work there on the first, second, and third Sundays in each month. The work is doing well at Hillsboro. There is some discussion about Scripture study, or, as some call it, "Sunday school." But I hope to get it all healed and get all to work. House-to-house work is quite a pleasant work to me. I have done much of it as an evangelist, and it always results in good. I am not just visiting; I am teaching all, and from house to house. Since I began the work in Hillsboro I have had occasion to teach brethren, Methodists, Baptists, worldly men, infidels, and, in fact, almost all classes. May the Lord help us all to a more devoted service.—J. W. Chism.

Commerce, October 27.—On October 15 I landed back in Texas from my meeting and singing school at Cartersville, Okla., and on the same day took up the work of conducting the song service in the mission meeting at Cooper, the preaching being done by Brethren J. W. Denton and J. C. White. The weather was bad during this meeting, the people were too prejudiced to hear the truth, and the crowds were small, but the preaching was of the very best. My meeting at Cartersville was well attended until a little picture show came to town, which the people liked better than they did the gospel of Christ. I baptized two noble souls and organized a congregation of about twenty-five who promised to keep house in the Lord's appointed way. I promised to return to this place some time in the future. I am open for meetings where I may be needed.—T. P. Burt.

The Nasal Bath.

There is one form of bath but little known, and far too little practiced. It is the nasal bath.

Colds or catarrh of the head produce in the nasal passages an excess of dense secretion. This covers the linings of the air chambers of the head and results often in dull catarrhal headache.

To relieve such a headache and to treat the cold or catarrh, use a little nasal douche, obtainable of any first-class druggist for a few cents.

Fill this douche with lukewarm water, adding a pinch of common salt.

Bow the head very low and flow the water from the bill of the little duck douche, first into one nostril, then into the other.

Retain the position for some time, flowing the salt water first to one side, then to the other, and drawing it down into the forehead by closing one nostril and inhaling through the other.

When the nasal cavity has thus been thoroughly cleansed, insert Mentholatum well into both nostrils; and if there is a headache, rub the forehead and temples with it.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day, it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases, and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream through the lymph ducts, which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases, and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening, and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make any one an enthusiast on inside bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head, or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, and others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach, or constipation, are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

Doing the Extraordinary.

BY F. E. EXUM.

Among the teeming millions of earth there is an inordinate desire in the hearts of a vast majority to do something extraordinary, to accomplish something that will exalt their names and place them head and shoulders above their fellow-men; yet how comparatively few is the number who are able to distinguish themselves to any considerable degree! From a military viewpoint, for instance, when Lord Kitchener, the British war lord, was lost at sea, it was said that a pillar of the United Kingdom had been destroyed and that this was a severe blow to England, and yet there are millions of men within the British domains.

The altitudes which men aspire to reach, and the avenues through which they struggle to reach them, are indeed varied. In the morning of life, when the ways of the world and the things of the world are new to us, the field of opportunity for wonderful achievement looks ripe and ready for the harvest, and we wonder why some one has not already gathered in the fruits that are visionized before us. Many have been the young men who, because of their limited knowledge of the world, have tired of the monotony of home life and have run away from good homes and good parents to do the extraordinary and make their fortunes in some far-away fields of endeavor, only to meet with very little better success than the prodigal of old who was compelled to feed swine for a bare existence, and have been as glad as was he to return again to the old home. There have been some who became so desperate to distinguish themselves in some way that they have committed crimes to bring their names before the world.

I would not oppose any real progression or the progress toward perfection in any man, and realize that there have been many cases where it was best for boys to leave their homes very young; but such cases are almost invariably where they did not have the right kind of parents. I do not believe that young single men should be content with their present condition in life after they have an opportunity of reaching out and establishing homes for themselves. This is true progression and one of the main duties in life.

The purpose of every man's life should be to attain to success; but the weights and measures of success are many, and the ideas of men as to what constitutes true success differ widely. I would divide success into two divisions—success from a material standpoint and success from a spiritual standpoint. Success along material lines distinguishes men in the eyes of the world, while success along spiritual lines distinguishes men in the eyes of God. These two notable classes of success are rarely found together to any great degree. The fruits of the success of worldly men are temporal and will sometimes vanish away as the mist before the morning sun, while the men who are successful from a spiritual standpoint have a success that will yield everlasting fruitage. There are many men and women who are living truly successful lives that are almost entirely unnoticed by the world and apparently never do anything extraordinary. They are very ordinary-looking people who labor for their meat and bread. They do not live in large and costly mansions and drive fine automobiles, but they read the Bible, the word of God, and follow its teachings. These and other Christian graces are very ordinary things which every person can do, and which, if done in the spirit of truth and understanding, will net everlasting success.

The question is: Which do you love the most—the praises of men or the praises of God—the transitory rewards of the world or the inestimable and eternal treasures of heaven? The men who attend well to the ordinary things of life and live soberly, righteously, and godly during this life will at last attain to success incomparable.

It Is Strange.

BY JOHN T. POE.

It is very strange, and hard for me to understand, how any one claiming to be a Christian can oppose the preaching and teaching of God's word—the Bible. If we are ever saved from sin, it must be through obedience to God's word. There is no other way. The word of God alone can light up for us the road from earth to heaven. If I see a man opposing the teaching of God's word under any circumstances and by whomsoever it may be taught, I know that such a one is an emissary of the devil; for only the devil or his emissaries would oppose God's power to save sinners. It makes no difference where nor how they oppose it, they are the servants of Satan. God says for him that heareth to communicate or tell it to others. "The word is the seed" that must be sown in the heart to produce faith, without which no sinner can be saved.

The Methodists manage to get up an opposition meeting in almost every case where the unadulterated Scriptures are to be taught. I announced a meeting lately in Cherokee County, Texas, and the circuit rider of the Methodist Episcopal Church got busy and engaged three other Methodist Episcopal preachers to help him run an opposition meeting in half a mile of us. Subjects were announced—one on "Water Baptism," just as though there were more scriptural baptisms than that the Lord commanded to be done in water. Another subject was "Infant Baptism." Every one knows there is no such thing as "infant" baptism mentioned in the New Testament. The baptism Jesus commands to be done is no "infant." It is now near two thousand years old. But I suppose he meant "the baptism of infants," a thing God never commanded to be done, and a thing for which there is no authority, save the word of a Roman Catholic pope. But why do Methodists, Baptists, and Presbyterians try to keep their members from hearing the word of God preached? They do it because they fear the truth. Their own doctrine goes down before the truth. That's why the circuit rider mentioned above said to his members that he would, on his next visit, read and comment on the Methodist "Discipline." Why not "read and comment" on the New Testament? Is not the word of the Lord better than the word of men?

But the Methodists, Presbyterians, and the Baptists are not all who oppose the teaching of the Bible. There are some who make a regular business of opposing the teaching of God's word in the common schools and in colleges. And there are some who kick up a row in church about women teaching the Bible to children; and if men do it, it must not be done in classes! This, however, is generally done by those who are quite ignorant of God's word. But some preachers who claim to be loyal Bible Christians do it. And they preach and write more of such stuff than they do of the gospel. But they are the enemies of Christ. Like the Romish Church, they would take away the Bible from the people, and let them seek unto the preachers for what knowledge they get, and pay well for it when they do get it. The people stand in their own light, and help to tie themselves, hand and foot, when they listen to and encourage such teachers. One man, woman, or child has as much right to read and know the word of God as the teachers or preachers—the self-styled arbiters of the truth. The Bible is as much mine or yours as it is of the priest or preacher. God's grace has appeared unto all, teaching them that they should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world. Then give the people the Bible; teach them to read and understand it, that they may obey it and be saved. Teach it in the home, in the schools and colleges, in the highways and byways—everywhere. Read it, talk it, preach it till all shall know the Lord, and the how, the why, and the glory of the salvation that God's book, the Bible, brings to us. But let every soul of man avoid all teachers who in any way oppose the teachings of God's word. Stand by the Book. By it we must live and by it be judged.

Be Pretty! Turn Gray Hair Dark

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked, or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about fifty cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of disease.

OUTLINES OF BIBLE STUDY

REVISED AND ENLARGED

BY G. DALLAS SMITH

A BRIEF DESCRIPTION

Outlines of Bible Study (Revised and Enlarged) is a book of one hundred and twenty pages, besides five full-page maps covering all Bible lands. It is printed in large, clear type, on good, heavy paper, and is substantially bound in stiff cloth.

The book contains seventeen drill lessons for use in Bible drills, Bible readings, or any other Bible class where it is desired to cover the entire scope of the Sacred Record in a short time.

Outlines of Bible Study is not a commentary in any sense of the word. It contains but few comments. It is not "literature" in the same sense that some object to literature. It rather guides one in his study that it may be intelligent and systematic.

PRICES

Single copy, prepaid, fifty cents; one dozen copies, prepaid, $5.50; twenty-five copies, not prepaid, $10; fifty copies, not prepaid, $18.50; one hundred copies, not prepaid, $35.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:—

Frankfort, Ky.—“I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish.”—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.

A Report from Gainesboro, Tenn.

BY SILAS E. TEMPLETON.

During the past summer and the early part of this fall I engaged in five meetings, with ordinary results. The first meeting was near here, at Free State. This meeting began on August 20 and continued twelve days, with one baptism, two restorations, and, we believe, the church greatly edified. I think I never held a meeting that I enjoyed more than this one. The neighborhood is far above the average in that the people are sociable, courteous, and educated; especially are they educated in things pertaining to the great life.

From Free State I went to Brimstone, in Clay County, where I began a meeting on September 3. This meeting continued only six days, with one baptism, one restoration, and twelve discourses. The meeting closed too soon on account of other arrangements, yet we feel that much and lasting good was accomplished. The congregation at this place is not so strong as it once was. "Brimstone" is a rough section of this Upper Cumberland Valley, yet has in it some very fine people. But there are in that section of the county some "men corrupted in mind, and reprobate concerning the faith," who have greatly hindered and injured the cause of Christ; but may it not be true that these "evil men shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

From Brimstone I went to Teal's Chapel, or, as it is sometimes called, "North Springs," and began a meeting on September 10, which continued eight days. There were four baptisms, one restoration, and one from "confusion," saying: "I have obeyed the gospel, and desire to wear the name 'Christian,' 'saint,' or 'disciple,' and to be governed and controlled only by the Bible." We think much good was accomplished. The brethren surrounding Teal's Chapel have much to be thankful for. They have an excellent neighborhood in which to live, made up of refined and progressive people; and they have some as good land for farming purposes as I have ever seen. I greatly enjoyed my sojourn at this place.

From North Springs I went to Bagdad, where I began a meeting on September 24 and continued it past the first Lord's day in October, with sixteen sermons, but with no shadow of visible results. "There is a reason" for this, which is a disadvantage in location and a failure on the part of many to be as thoroughly consecrated to the Christ as they should be;

yet there are many fine Christian people there.

From Bagdad I went to Everett, Todd County, Ky., near where I was born and reared until I was a lad of seventeen or eighteen summers. I began a meeting there on Thursday, October 5, in a Freewill Baptist meeting-house. That section of the country is a positive demonstration of Paul's power to prophesy. Paul says: "The time will come when they will not endure the sound doctrine; but, having itching ears, will heap to themselves teachers after their own lusts, and will turn away their ears from the truth, and turn aside unto fables." (2 Tim. 4: 3, 4.) This was a mission meeting, and continued seven days, with eight sermons, one baptism, and two coming out of "confusion," saying: "We have obeyed the gospel and desire to be simply Christians." After closing this meeting I came to this place, where I expect to remain until the end of the coming year, the Lord willing, working with the church here and at other points in the county, excepting some meeting work that has been arranged out of the county and out of the State. Let us ever remember to be as "wise as serpents and harmless as doves;" that we should have the mind in us that was in Christ, and his mind was: "Lo, I am come to do thy will, O God;" and, "I glorified thee on the earth, having accomplished the work which thou hast given me to do." I ask an abiding interest in the prayers of each Christian who reads this.

MONEY IN PIGEONS

Make Your Back Yard Profitable

THE demand for squabs in the Northern, Eastern and Southern markets has never been supplied, because pigeon raising as a business is comparatively new. Buy a half dozen pair of select birds, fence in a small portion of your back yard and watch them go to work. Success is easy. They raise from eight to fifteen pairs of squabs a year. Your squabs and fancy birds will bring handsome returns. You will actually make money in a hitherto useless part of your back yard. Pigeon raising is not a fad or fancy. It is a profitable business. Let us start you right. Our breeders are the best, and raised from prize-winning parents. We will furnish you with the birds and teach you how to raise them, and you will reap a handsome profit with a very little outlay. Thousands are taking advantage of this same opportunity. Write to-day for our literature on pigeon raising as a money making proposition, or better still, write us to send you a few pair of Belgian Carneaux at $3.00 per pair, White Swiss Mondaines at $5.00 per pair, White Kings at $3.50 per pair, or White Maltese at $4.00 per pair. Our birds are all guaranteed. Your money back if after two months you are not satisfied with their work. Better prices on larger orders. Write to-day and get the pick of the flock.

City Physicians Explain Why They Prescribe Nuxated Iron to Make Beautiful, Healthy Women And Strong, Vigorous Men

NOW BEING USED BY OVER FIVE MILLION PEOPLE DAILY

Quickly transforms the flabby flesh, toneless tissues, and pallid cheeks of weak, anaemic men and women into a perfect glow of health and beauty—Often increases the strength of delicate, nervous, run-down folks 200 per cent in two weeks' time.

New York, N. Y.—It is conservatively estimated that over five billion people daily in this country alone are taking Nuxated Iron. Such astonishing results have been reported from its use both by doctors and laymen, that a number of well-known physicians in various parts of the country have been asked to explain why they prescribe it so extensively, and why it apparently produces so much better results than were obtained from the old forms of inorganic iron.

Extracts from some of the letters received are given below:

Dr. King, a New York physician and author says: "There can be no vigorous iron men without iron. Pallor means anaemia. Anaemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anaemic men and women is pale. The flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone; the brain fags and the memory fails and they often become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, maco, farina, degermed, nated corn meal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste-pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked is responsible for another grave iron loss.

Therefore if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt.

Dr. Saxon, a well known Boston physician who has studied widely in both this country and in prominent European Medical Institutions says: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple Nuxated Iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved, who now die every year from pneumonia, gripe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart troubles, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with a blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 20 he was in bad health; at 46 he was cured and nearly all in—now at 60, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly-looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time, simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate, or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children, is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the fray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the system, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 200 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

Dies-Killingsworth Debate.

BY J. A. HUDSON.

Brother A. D. Dies (Christian) and Elder W. D. Killingsworth (Holiness) held a debate at Brilliant, Ala., October 23-26. Killingsworth affirmed that one is saved by faith at an altar of prayer, and that sanctification is a second definite work of grace. Brother Dies affirmed that baptism is for the remission of sins, and that Christ's church was established on the first Pentecost after his resurrection. To those acquainted with Brother Dies I shall say nothing, for they know his ability; but to others I will say that the task and accomplishment are worthy the commendation of the best. Elder Killingsworth is a pleasant, congenial character, and fought nobly, or with a zeal deserving of a better cause, to sustain his propositions. The debate closed with the best of feelings evinced by both the disputants and all concerned, and, I trust, to the eternal veneration and renown for truths of the Redeemer and his and the Father's great love. There were many visitors present during the debate. I am to meet Elder Killingsworth in discussion at Shady Grove, near Fayette, Ala., on Monday after the first Sunday in December. Brother Frank Baker, of Belmont, Miss., was Brother Dies' moderator.

Stops Tobacco Habit.

Elders' Sanitarium, located at 513 Main Street, St. Joseph, Mo., has published a book showing the deadly effect of the tobacco habit, and how it can be stopped in three to five days.

As they are distributing this book free, any one wanting a copy should send his name and address at once.

It is a good and safe rule to sojourn in every place as if you meant to spend life there, never omitting an opportunity of doing a kindness, speaking a true word, or making a friend.—Ruskin.

Sunday Morn.

BY LOULA MAE ADRISSON.

O'er the land the church bells are ringing.

While God's children are hastening Onward, with loving, glad hearts singing.

To a place of worship, near or far.

We gladly welcome the week's first day—

So oft it seems long in coming,
For 'tis then our feet seem to stray
Near the very gates of heaven.

As we meet together here and there,
We should leave the world far away,
With its pleasures, its sorrows and care.

Losing ourselves in worship sincere,
O, it refreshes the weary heart,
That brief while in His service spent;

For each time, of life's burdens, a part
We may leave at the Savior's feet.

Unimpeachable—If you were to see the unequalled volume of unimpeachable testimony in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla, you would upbraid yourself for so long delaying to take this effective medicine for that blood disease from which you are suffering.

David Lipscomb on "The Blood of Christ."

This subject is fundamental. It involves the story of the greatest suffering and at the same time includes the greatest blessing vouchsafed to mankind. Of all the subjects discussed by our venerable senior editor and beloved uncle, David Lipscomb, during his long career as editor, his thought-provoking articles on "The Blood of Christ" appear to me to have been the grandest production of his heart and pen. A luminous chapter on this subject is contained in "Salvation from Sin," a book that contains the best of his articles carefully edited. I shall this week set forth some of his main arguments, together with some of my own thoughts and illustrations on the fundamental theme, in the hope that it may do good. Besides, we should like for Uncle David to know before he goes to his reward that there are those who treasure his writings, and that, while he himself cannot write, his great thoughts shall be expressed from time to time.

When the destroying angel went through Egypt, it was the blood of the lamb on the doorposts that saved the Israelites; when vengeance came upon Jericho, it was the same color that assured the safety of Rahab and her household. Making the application to our own lives, there comes a time when every man is surrounded by the greatest enemy to mankind—sin. What is that in the back door of his soul? The sins of the past. What is that in the front door of his soul? The threatenings of the future. He is in a terrible condition—so terrible that Paul describes it in language tense with hopelessness and despair: "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me out of the body of this death?" (Rom. 7: 24.) The answer to Paul's question is prefigured by the sprinkling on the doorpost, by the scarlet line in the window, by every animal sacrifice made under the old covenant. Bearing these types in mind, we examine a few forceful passages from the New Testament. Jesus Christ, in instituting the Lord's Supper, said: "For this is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many unto remission of sins." (Matt. 26: 28.) The beloved John, who leaned on Jesus' breast on that occasion, later wrote these words: "If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth; but if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus the Son cleanseth us from sin." (1 John 1: 6, 7.) Again: "And he is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the whole world." (1 John 2: 2.) Paul confirms the same vital truth when he exhorts the elders at Ephesus: "Take heed unto yourselves, and to all the flock, in which the Holy Spirit hath made you bishops, to feed the church of the Lord which he purchased with his own blood." (Acts 20: 28.)

The Blood Religion is Supreme.

The efficacy and value of the blood of Jesus Christ is the one point on which nearly all religious bodies, Catholic and Protestant, agree. At the Parliament of Religions held in Chicago in 1893, Joseph Cook, of Boston, listened to the representatives of the great religions of the world until his spirit stirred within him. Securing the floor, he said, referring to one of Shakespeare's plays: "Here is Lady Macbeth. See how she rubs her hands, crying: 'Out, damned spot! Will these hands ne'er be clean?' Then (quoting Shakespeare again): "'All the perfumes of Arabia' could not 'sweeten this little hand.' And Macbeth in similar mood says: 'This red right hand, it would the multitudinous seas incarnadine, making the green one red.' What religion can wash Lady Macbeth's right hand? That is a question I propose to the four continents and to all the isles of the sea; and unless you can answer that question, you have not come with a sufficiently serious purpose to a parliament of religions. I take Lady Macbeth on my right arm and her husband on my left. I turn to Mohammedanism: Can you wash our red right hands? I turn to Confucianism, to Buddhism, and to Brahmanism: Can you wash our red right hands? And then I tell you in simple faith that Christianity can."

The other day when I looked in at a famous trial now in progress in Nashville, a friend said: "God is willing, in my opinion, to pardon every sin, save murder. The murderer is doomed." I said to him in reply: "My friend, I never condone murder, but, at the same time, I never discount the power of the gospel." There is no need for an opinion on this question. Paul says: "Wherefore also he is able to save to the uttermost them that draw near unto God through him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them." (Heb. 7: 25.) And Paul himself is a notable example of the Savior's power.

Theories About the Blood.

But while it is generally accepted that man is freed from sin by the blood of Christ, it is painfully true that many who use this expression do not have any definite idea of the conditions on which the blood of Christ cleanses from sin. Many conflicting theories are advanced. As pointed out by David Lipscomb, some teach that "the blood was shed as an example to impress on man the love of God for him, and so draw him to God." But to make this the only object of his death is to make worse than nonsense such passages as those that speak of Jesus' dying, "the just for the unjust," and that he gave "his life a ransom for many." Others teach that Jesus took the sinner's place under the law, paid the penalty due the law, and freed man—and that is all there is to it. If this were true, the sinner owes no debt; Christ has paid it. He needs no forgiveness; he is already forgiven.

But, leaving theories aside, all the scriptures that bear on the blood question, taken connectedly and reconciled, teach that while Christ, by the shedding of his blood, opened the way for the salvation of the whole world, at the same time, the benefits of that blood can be appropriated by none, save those who obey him. Here again the author of "Salvation from Sin" gives us a fine point when he explains. It is an axiomatic truth that it takes two parties to complete a gift. One provides and offers the gift; the other accepts it. It is not a gift until it has both been offered and accepted.

Getting the Benefit of the Blood.

How may the sinner approach the blood of Christ? This is a question of eternal moment. One thing is certain: he cannot approach the material blood, for there is not a drop of it upon the earth. Paul, in his masterly discourse to the Hebrews, throws a luminous light upon this question. (Heb. 9: 18-26.) From this passage we learn that the tabernacle, with all of its appointments and vessels of service, needed to be sealed by the typical blood of animal sacrifices. Just so the church needed to be sealed and was sealed by the blood of a better sacrifice, the blood of Jesus Christ, the Lamb without spot and without blemish. We also learn that under the old covenant the people approached and were benefited and cleansed by the blood when they appropriated the tabernacle with its blood-sealed appointments. Just so, no man can come to the blood of Christ, save by coming to the laws, institutions, ordinances, and appointments that have been sealed by his blood. As, for example, we come to the blood of Christ when we obey the blood-sealed commandments that relate to faith, repentance, confession, baptism, and the Lord's Supper. What does it mean to reject or modify or change any of these blood-sealed commandments? Hear Paul's answer: "A man that hath set at naught Moses' law dieth without compassion on the word of two or three witnesses: of how much sorer punishment, think ye, shall he be judged worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace?" (Heb. 10: 28, 29.)

The Only Cement for United Brotherhood.

Thinking of the many hurtful divisions that are in the world to-day, it gives me both pride and pleasure to quote some of the best words that were ever written by the old man who has vigorously fought the battles of primitive Christianity for sixty years and who is now nearing the journey's end, speechless, but happy with the thought of divine approval: "The blood of Christ constitutes the only cement that can bind into one brotherhood, undivided and indivisible, the different families, factions, and fragments of Adam's sinning, discordant, and beligerent race." Men grow voluble and enthusiastic to-day over their various schemes for religious unity. But not until one religious body after another has learned not to despise the blood-sealed commandments of Jesus Christ—then, and not until then, will they come together. I disapprove of sprinkling babies and grown people. Why? Because I have a prejudice against sprinkling or against the people who practice it? No; because the practice is not sealed by the blood of Jesus. I disapprove of instrumental music in the worship. Why? Because I don't like music? No—a thousand times no; because instrumental music in the worship is not sealed by the blood of Jesus. That's all. But that is enough.

"What About Natchez?"

Brother W. S. Long, Jr., of Manchester, Tenn., is in dead earnest when he asks the above question. Having been on the ground, he knows the urgent need and the desperate struggle that a little handful of Christians, mostly women, have made to get started in this Southern city. He writes:

Some time ago a call came from Natchez, Miss., asking the strong to help the weak. The call is a deserving one, and we should help them. The membership there consists of only about a dozen members, most of them being women, and they are poor.

Brother R. D. Smith has agreed to go there for a meeting soon. But it is not right for us to ask him to bear the entire burden; so I am asking every congregation that is interested in a worthy mission work to give a contribution to help hold this meeting. Please make a sacrifice to help this place where the gospel is so much needed. Send your offering to Mrs. D. E. Neely, Natchez, Miss. The amount of fourteen dollars has been given to that work. This is about enough to pay the workman's traveling expenses. Let us hear from other liberal souls at once. If any brother thinks Brother Smith ought to bear all the expense of this meeting himself, let me hear from him. Maybe he will be willing to do that.

I wish to join with Brother Long in asking others to have fellowship in the Natchez meeting. The investment in the gospel is always a good investment. In multiplied blessing it will come back to you.

Be on your guard against the short days of the year. We dare not spend our years "like a tale that is told," aimlessly, uselessly, but must use every moment in perfecting the life of Christ in us, in growing in righteousness and Godlike beauty.—Evangelical Companion.

Practical Christianity.

BY J. PERRY HODGE.

If Christianity is to become the prevailing spirit in the churches and finally conquer the world for Christ, each individual Christian must make up his or her mind to the task of learning by practice such duties as the profession of Christianity requires.

Professing to be a Christian without practical demonstration of the Christian life is a great hindrance to the cause of Christ. Men and women who profess to be Christians must let their lights so shine before men, that men may see the good works of those professing to be Christians, and glorify the Father which is in heaven. (Matt. 5: 16.)

Christians are those who have been buried with Christ in baptism and have come forth from the watery grave in the likeness of the resurrection of Christ to walk in the newness of life. (Rom. 6: 4, 5.) "If ye then be risen with Christ [Col. 2: 12], seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God." (Col. 3: 1.) The failure of so many people who profess to be Christians is due to their ignorance of their true relationship with Christ. If all who profess to be Christians should realize that they are dead and that their lives are "hid with Christ in God" (Col. 3: 3), it would be easier for them to set their "affections on things above, not on things on the earth" (Col. 3: 2).

The relationship between Christ and a Christian is the same relationship that exists between a vine and the branches thereof. (John 15: 1-6.) In the same way that a branch that was not formerly a branch is grafted into a vine, a man who was not formerly in Christ is united unto Christ. The branch that was not formerly one must be cut off entirely from its old parent vine and the life thereof; so also must a man be cut off entirely from his former life in order to an entrance into Christ. This cutting away from all former life is equivalent to being dead thereto, the same as a branch is dead to its old parent vine when cut away from it. And the fact that a branch, when united to another vine, must live, if it lives at all, in the vine into which it has been engrafted, drawing its life therefrom, is true also of the man or woman who has been cut away from his or her old manner of living and united to Christ; such must live, if they live at all spiritually, in Christ. He is their life. He lives in them as the vine lives in each of its branches, and they live in him as the branches live in the vine to which they belong. This mystery of the Christ life in us is what is meant by the text: "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God."

This spiritual resurrection is of such value to us that nothing, not even death itself, can separate us from Christ (Rom. 8: 38, 39), so long as we abide in him; for this of itself is the love of God (1 John 5: 1-5); for we abide in him only so long as we keep his commandments. This being the case, he that hears the word of God and believes on Jesus Christ "hath everlasting life [the life of Christ in him], and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life" (John 5: 24); and "when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye [we] also appear with him in glory" (Col. 3: 4).

Those, therefore, who have thus passed from death unto life are told, in the words of Paul to the Colossians: "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection [passion], evil concupiscence [desire], and covetousness, which is idolatry." (Col. 3: 5.) The old life of many men and women consisted of those things (Col. 3: 7), and in order that these things be put out of the new life entered into in Christ, they must be mortified; and, in addition to this mortification of that kind of life in us, we must "put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him." (Col. 3: 8-10.)

Practical Christianity not only requires that we "put off the old man with his deeds," but that we must also "put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him: where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: but Christ is all, and in all." (Verses 10, 11.)

In order to do this, we must "put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering; forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." (Verses 12-17.)

In the same proportion that the Christ life increases in us, the former things of our lives will decrease. The Christ life in us drives out the imperfections of the old life till we grow to the full measure of the stature of Christ. Solomon says, "The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord" (Prov. 20: 27); and Jesus said: "Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house." (Matt. 5: 15.) If seven candlesticks mean seven churches (Rev. 1: 20), a candlestick must mean a church. If lighted candles are put in candlesticks in order to increase their light-giving to all that are in the house, and the candle of the Lord is the spirit of man (Prov. 20: 27), it must be that, when the Lord lighted his candles on Pentecost after his resurrection, he also put them on a candlestick. Zephaniah said that "in the day of the Lord's sacrifice," which was when he was crucified, Jerusalem would be searched with candles. (Zeph. 1: 8-12.) Candles give light only after having been lighted, and the candles by which Jerusalem was searched undoubtedly were lighted by the Lord (Ps. 18: 28) when the Holy Spirit, like cloven tongues of fire, sat upon each of them (Acts 2: 1-4). For David said the Lord lighted his candle by enlightening his darkness. (Ps. 18: 28.)

The candle when lighted is consumed or used up in the work of light-giving. So it is with the Christian who lets his or her light shine. "Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." (1 John 3: 16.) In this way our lives, or spirits, which are the Lord's candles, should be used up or consumed. Instead of suffering around, wives should submit themselves to their own husbands as is fitting in the Lord. (Col. 3: 18.) Instead of seeking forbidden pleasures and mistreating their wives, husbands should love their wives and not be bitter against them. (Col. 3: 19.) Instead of running in hurtful paths, children should obey their parents in all things, for this is well-pleasing unto the Lord. (Col. 3: 20.) Fathers should not discourage their children by provoking them to anger in matters that are not hurtful to them. (Col. 3: 21.)

Every Christian should learn the third chapter of Colossians by heart with a view of making the teachings thereof a part of his or her life. In fact, the entire letter to the Colossians is an excellent rule for Christian practice. No one can learn it too well. Let Christ, the light of the world, dwell in you till your heart is all aglow with the light thereof, and let this light, which is your light, so shine that men may see your good works, and glorify the Father which is in heaven. This will be real Christianity—a power for good in the world. "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice" (Rom. 12: 1), and thus lay down your lives for the brethren (1 John 3: 16)—be consumed or used up by the Spirit of the Lord.

"The New Testament Procedure of Baptism."

BY F. W. SMITH.

On the above subject Mr. J. E. Skinner delivered before the "Baptist Pastors' Conference," of Nashville, a dissertation which received the hearty approval of the conference and a request for its publication in several of the leading Baptist journals. This, of course, stamps his positions on the subject with the highest approval as sound Baptist teaching. On the points relative to the "form" and "subjects" of baptism the writer voices a hearty amen, and finds no ground for dissent until we reach the third note of his dissertation, which runs as follows:

Nor is there to be found anywhere a Baptist who would consider as New Testament baptism the immersion of any person in order to procure the remission of sins. This view rejects the doctrine of baptismal regeneration and contends for the baptism of believers only, and safeguards at the same time its scriptural designs—to declare our death to sin, our spiritual resurrection already passed, as well as our ultimate and complete triumph over death, in Him who died for us and rose again. That this is the New Testament design of baptism, and that this was the New Testament procedure at this point, no Baptist will deny. Hence no proof is needed in this connection.

Here, too, I can give a hearty indorsement to a part of this note. I, like the Baptists, repudiate in toto the "immersion of any person in order to procure the remission of sins," and stand ready to join Brother Skinner and the "Baptist Pastors' Conference" in combating with all my power such an unscriptural doctrine. The blood of Jesus Christ is the only procuring cause of the remission of sins; and if any one attempts to substitute anything else for that purpose, I shall be glad to join hands with the Baptist brethren in opposing it. I desire, therefore, to be put on record by Brother Skinner and the whole Baptist Church as fully indorsing their position on that phase of the question. I may add, also, that the doctrine of "baptismal regeneration" (if I properly understand what is meant by such language) is nowhere taught in the word of God, and is, therefore, to be rejected on the same ground that we reject "immersion to procure remission of sins." But, while this is true, I as fully repudiate the position of Mr. Skinner and the "Pastors' Conference" on the purpose or design of baptism as I indorse them on the other points. It is made manifest that the Baptists, as represented by Mr. Skinner, hold to several designs of baptism, expressed as follows: "To declare our death to sin, our spiritual resurrection already passed, as well as our ultimate and complete triumph over death, in Him who died for us and rose again." Now, I most positively deny that either one of these things is given in the word of God as a reason or purpose for which one should be baptized. On the point of a "spiritual resurrection," Mr. Skinner and the apostle Paul differ the width of the heavens. Mr. Skinner has "two resurrections," one of which he terms a "spiritual" resurrection, taking place before the resurrection in baptism, which latter, he says, declares the former. Hear Paul: "Having been buried with him in baptism, wherein [that is, in baptism] ye were also raised with him through faith in the working of God, who raised him from the dead." (Col. 2: 12.) This makes it clear that the spiritual union between Christ and the soul takes place in this resurrection which Paul declares is "with him"—that is, with Christ. The passage of scripture that plainly, positively, and unequivocally sets forth the purpose or design of baptism, Mr. Skinner leaves untouched. Why, let me ask, shun around Acts 2: 38? In that passage we have both baptism and remission of sins expressed; but Mr. Skinner hies away to other passages that in no way whatever even hint at the design of baptism, with which to express Baptist doctrine. I deny that baptism is anywhere said to declare the remission of sins previously obtained; and if my friend thinks otherwise, let him produce the scriptures that so teach. The purpose or design of baptism is specifically stated as follows: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 38.) I presume the reason Baptists keep away from this passage is because they have to do so much explaining to keep the people from getting the idea that baptism is for—in order to—the remission of sins. It is not conducive to the growth of the Baptist cause to quote and emphasize Acts 2: 38 without spending time to explain away the obvious import of the passage. More will appear from time to time relative to Mr. Skinner's dissertation.

Tribute to a Christian Woman.

BY E. A. E.

"As shadows, cast by cloud and sun,
Flit o'er the summer grass,
So in thy sight, Almighty One,
Earth's generations pass.

"And while the years, an endless host,
Come pressing swiftly on,
The brightest names that earth can boast
Just glisten and are gone."

And thus it is, all things earthly pass away. We sing these lines frequently, but do not so much realize their meaning as when our friends and loved ones slip away from us by death.

"Man, that is born of a woman,
Is of few days, and full of trouble.
He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down;
He fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not."

"What is your life? For ye are a vapor that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away."

"All flesh is as grass,
And all the glory thereof as the flower of grass.
The grass withereth, and the flower falleth;
But the word of the Lord abideth forever."

Thus, not only every faded leaf and withered flower and dead blade of grass tell us that our lives are for a moment and the wealth and glory of the world fail and fade; but this truth is proclaimed from almost every page of the Bible. Every day the truth that "it is appointed unto men once to die, and after this cometh judgment," is impressed upon us.

There is a sadness and loneliness caused by the passing of dear ones, a vacancy in the home, an aching void in the heart the world and all its pleasures and wealth cannot fill or remove; but there are comfort and consolation and peace, which passes all understanding. In the gospel of Christ and the hope of the home which sin and death cannot enter and where changes never come, that the world cannot take away. Let us be assured that those who have left us are Christians, then a holy calm comes, a patient waiting, a cheerful serving, a faithful continuance in our mission until we shall join them in that place where "the wicked cease from troubling" and "the weary are at rest."

Our neighbor and friend and sister in the church at Bellwood, Tenn., Mrs. John L. Bass, died on March 11, 1916. She was Laura Hawkins and was born on May 19, 1847. Had she lived until May 19 following her death, she would have been sixty-nine years of age. She was married on October 20, 1863. Four children—Albert and Harry Bass, Mrs. Callie Young and Miss Mattie Bass—and her husband survive her. In recent years three children—Mrs. Wilkerson, Charlie Bass, and Mrs. Albert Sweat—preceded her to the tomb, and two or three children were buried in infancy or young life.

There never lived in our neighborhood a kinder-hearted wife and mother and neighbor than Sister Bass. She came into the church forty or more years before her death. She was a homemaker, and sought to make it comfortable and pleasant for her husband and children. We never heard her engage in any gossip and scandal or criticism of her neighbors and others. We never heard any one speak harmfully of her. All said of her: "She is a good woman." She never took up a reproach against any one. Kind and considerate, she spoke kindly and with Christian consideration of others. Like all other human beings, sickness, bereavement, sorrow, disappointment, and trouble came into her life; but, so far as we could be the judge, she bore them all with courage and patience. She was one of the very many people we are glad to have known and from whose association we went feeling encouraged and better. Her cordial welcome, kind spirit, sincere inquiry about the welfare of others, and good wishes for everybody begot the same in us, and we left her thinking better of the world and encouraged to bear our burdens and meet our duties with greater cheerfulness and, in turn, to manifest a deeper interest in others and to cheer and comfort them. We should be glad could we fill others with cheer and good will and make the world brighter as we pass along.

The precious and exceeding great promises of God and the increasing hope of "the better land" should stimulate and encourage all to possess the "meek and quiet spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price," to escape from "the corruption that is in the world by lust," and to "become partakers of the divine nature."

We sympathize with our aged Brother Bass in his loss of a true and faithful companion, and pray that his last days may be filled with the peace and hope of the gospel. We sympathize, too, with the dutiful daughter at home, the other children and grandchildren, and pray that all may prove faithful servants of God to the end.

"Precious in the sight of Jehovah
Is the death of his saints."

Seeking Her Lord.

BY CLARA CON EPPERSON.

She went into the temples among the learned men
To find her Lord and worship him, and then
She went away grieving, for she found him not;
They, in their own self-righteousness, had almost his name forgot.

Wearily renewing her journey again,
She went into the busy marts of men,
Hoping to get a vision of his face
Somewhere in the busy market place.
But again finding not her Lord,
And hearing of him no spoken word,
Leaving the market place, she turned to go
Elsewhere, when a child's sobs, hushed and low,
Came to her ears; and forgetting her great intent
To find her Lord, to the cry of need she went.
The duty done, the succor given, in that low place
She suddenly found her Lord and beheld his shining face.

THE SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

OF

THE GOSPEL ADVOCATE

WILL BE

ADVANCED ON JANUARY 1, 1917.

It is generally understood that everything that goes into the production of a newspaper has increased in price tremendously. These increases range all the way from 50 per cent to 200 per cent. White paper has over doubled in value and is scarce at any price; wrappers for the Gospel Advocate have more than doubled in price; inks of all kinds have advanced in price out of all reason; and so it goes all along the line.

As a matter of self-preservation and protection, it is absolutely necessary that we raise the price on January 1, 1917, to $2 per annum.

We will accept renewal and new subscriptions at the present price—NOW!

We will deal just as fairly and liberally with our present subscribers as possible, and so will accept renewal subscriptions, no matter when the subscription expires, at $1.50 for one year and $3 for two years, provided these subscriptions reach us on or before January 1, 1917. New subscribers accepted NOW at $1.50 a year for one year only, in advance.

We advise, as we say, no matter when your subscription expires, that you send us your renewal for one or two years at $1.50 a year, and send it just as early as possible. We will soon be very busy entering thousands upon thousands of subscriptions between now and January 1, 1917. It is your last chance to get the Gospel Advocate at $1.50 a year.

However, we shall not ask you to bear all of this extra expense without any corresponding benefit; we shall bear at least a fair proportion. The fact that we cannot afford to longer publish the Gospel Advocate at $1.50 a year necessitated either making the paper smaller or raising the price and making it larger and better. Our space does not now adequately meet the demands made upon it, so it would be suicidal to cut down the size of the paper. We decided that you were the kind of readers that would prefer a better and a larger paper. So on January 1, 1917, or soon thereafter, the paper will be enlarged to 32 pages. Our purpose is to make the Gospel Advocate the brightest and best religious paper in all the country.

Will you please give this your immediate attention?

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

"Light Wanted."

We here publish a communication from Brother G. W. Leonard, of Winchester, Kan., bearing the above title; but while ostensibly seeking light, he takes the initiative and contends that congregational singing is not authorized by the Scriptures. He says:

In your criticism of E. L. Powell, in your issue of November 2, you say: "We learn also that singing was an item of worship in the apostolic church." Again: "If we would all walk by faith, act as they did in the days of the apostles, and do just what we find them doing in the apostolic church. . . . If we will be guided by 'it is written.'" Now, Brother McQuiddy, is it not true that your readers will construe this to mean that they practiced congregational singing in the apostolic church, and is it so "written?" Did you intend to convey to the minds of your readers the idea that, when a congregation engages in congregational singing, they are acting just as the apostolic churches did? Please give us chapter and verse. It will not suffice to refer to the "last supper," for a number of reasons: (1) This was not a popular congregation; there were no women there. (2) The church had not yet been established; the Holy Spirit had not come as a guide. (3) We learn that it was customary for the Jews to chant a hymn at their passover service. Further, Paul's statements to the Ephesians, Colossians, and Corinthians will not apply, as all this was in regard to acts to be performed individually, not collectively. Is it not a fact that one can be just as far removed from the spirit of true worship when singing without the use of an "organ" as when using one? I well remember, when I was a boy, hearing drunken fellows passing my father's house on their way home from a dance, singing "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" with all the energy of a true worshiper. Was that acceptable worship? I do not think they had an organ on the horn of their saddles. Now, I have found the daily life of the organ user to be neither better nor worse than the non-user. And Jesus said: "By their fruits ye shall know them." Now I submit this: "The arbitrary opposition of the use of musical instruments in the worship is a flagrant violation of the principles of worship as taught in both the Old and New Testaments." I think I am able to establish the scripturalness of the foregoing proposition to the entire satisfaction of any impartial reader or hearer. I would be pleased to see what you have to say in justification of your statements as above quoted.

I do not know any law, either human or divine, to prevent one's displaying his ignorance and folly when he desires to do so; and most generally, when one thinks that he is wiser and knows more than the rest of the world, he desires to do this. I certainly meant to convey the idea that congregational singing, or singing in the assembly of the saints, is authorized by the word of God. It seems to me the essence of narrowness for one to imagine that he can brush aside the clear teaching of the word of God upon this subject by his mere assertion. Would our brother decline to take the Lord's Supper simply because it was instituted before the establishment of the church or the Holy Spirit was given? For this reason, and this alone, he seems to think that Matt. 26: 30 has no bearing on this subject. The passage reads: "And when they had sung a hymn, they went out unto the mount of Olives." This shows that Christ and the apostles sang at the first institution and observance of the Lord's Supper.

We find that congregational singing was practiced by the people of God before the giving of the law of Moses. Ex. 15: 1 reads: "Then sang Moses and the children of Israel this song unto Jehovah, and spake, saying, I will sing unto Jehovah, for he hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea." Mc-Clintock and Strong, in Vol. IX., page 776, in their biblical, theological, and ecclesiastical cyclopedia, tell us: "From the apostolic age singing was always a part of divine service in which the whole body of the church joined together; and it was the decay of this practice that first brought the order of singers into the church. The Council of Laodicea (Canon 15) prohibited singing by the congregation; but this was a temporary provision, designed only to restore and revive the ancient psalmody. We find that in after ages people enjoyed their ancient privilege of singing all together." But our brother would have us accept as truth, on no other authority than his mere word, his assertion that Col. 3: 16; Eph. 5: 19; 1 Cor. 14: 15; and other scriptures refer to singing individually or privately; but his assertion is wide of the mark.

Let us see. Eph. 5: 19 reads: "Speaking one to another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord." They were to speak to each other in the singing. They must have done this when called together. The Greek for "one to another" and "your" is plural, showing that a number of persons were to make melody in their hearts. Col. 3: 16 reads: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly; in all wisdom teaching and admonishing one another with psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts unto God." This singing must be done when they were come together, in order that each might be admonished by the singing done. This is clear and distinct authority for the song service in the public assembly. That it should be called in question indicates to what extremes some people will go in trying to justify practices not required by the Scriptures. 1 Cor. 14: 15 reads: "What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also: I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also." This is the individual saying what he will do in the public assembly, and is a clear statement that he will sing when the whole church is come together. For proof of this, read 1 Cor. 14: 4, 5, 12. Also, read 1 Cor. 14: 23-26: "If therefore the whole church be assembled together and all speak with tongues, and there come in men unlearned or unbelieving, will they not say that ye are mad?"

What is it then, brethren? When ye come together, each one hath a psalm, hath a teaching, hath a revelation, hath a tongue, hath an interpretation. Let all things be done unto edifying." Thus it will be seen that they came together in the public assembly to sing psalms. Here is positive authority for singing in the church. Thus we see that the passages which our brother would brush aside by his unsupported assertions all refer to the singing of individuals in the assembly of the saints. But the Holy Spirit, by quoting, through Paul, from the Psalms in Heb. 2: 12, has forever settled this question. He says: "I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the congregation will I sing thy praise." The Authorized Version has "church" instead of "congregation," and the American Revision has "church" in the margin. So we see that David predicted that the praises of God should be sung in the church of the Lord Jesus Christ. Ps. 22: 22 reads: "I will declare thy name unto my brethren: in the midst of the assembly will I praise thee." The Authorized Version has "congregation" instead of "assembly." The Hebrew word "eda," from which we have "congregation" in Ps. 22: 22, means "an appointed meeting." Hence we have shown conclusively divine authority for Christians' coming together and singing in "an appointed meeting."

I have no disposition to argue with our brother about the goodness or wickedness of organ or nonorgan users, as I have shown clearly by the word of God authority for singing in the worship, and, as the Bible nowhere authorizes us to play an instrument in the worship, I see no necessity for arguing this question. A desire to argue such a question only shows a disposition to follow one's own inclinations to not do what God clearly and plainly authorizes to be done. Whenever any one can establish divine authority for playing musical instruments in the worship of God, then I will raise no question with him about the manner of doing it. So far as good works and deeds of sacrifice are concerned, the Roman Catholics measure up well with the Protestants; but this by no means proves that they have accepted the truth. As "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ," and as there is scripture authorizing singing in the church, I can by faith sing in the church. I cannot play by faith, as I have no scripture authorizing such an act. The Savior says: "But in vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men." (Matt. 15: 9.) Also, John says, in Rev. 22: 18, 19: "I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, if any man shall add unto them, God shall add unto him the plagues which are written in this book. And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part from the tree of life, and out of the holy city, which are written in this book."

A broad and liberal man is the one who is content to be guided by "it is written" in the worship of God. The Bible is broader than any man. The bigoted, narrow, and conceited man is the one who imagines himself wise enough to introduce things into the worship of God which have not been put there by Jehovah.

The Profane Performances of the Apostles of Naturalism.

BY W. C. GRAVES.

The above is the heading of an article that appeared in the Atlanta Journal of September 3, by Bishop Warren A. Candler, of the Methodist Church.

The Bishop starts out to show from Lev. 10: 1-3 that just as the priests injected naturalism into the service of God by offering "strange fire" before Jehovah, so the same is being practiced in the church to-day. Of course the Bishop means the Methodist Church, since he is head of that institution and ought to know more about its affairs than any other man on earth. There are other institutions of like nature; the Bishop might have had them in mind also. The true church—the church of Christ—does not practice naturalism; and if such should creep into the church, those that possess spiritualism go to work and get the naturalism out. Human organizations are run by human wisdom, divine organizations by divine wisdom, and this is what separates the church of Christ from sectarianism.

The Bishop says: "That is a fearfully instructive passage in Hebrew history in which is recorded the judgment which fell upon certain priests on account of the profanation of the altar by the use of strange fire upon it. Doubtless they would have preferred the holy fire from heaven, but they could not draw down that sacred flame without both a personal and priestly consecration of the severest character. Hence they preferred the easy way of naturalism and used common fire."

The Bishop here means Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron. (Lev. 10: 1-3.) Let me state that the Bishop got the wrong scripture for his text. The Bible says: "Happy is the man that judgeth not himself in that which he approveth." (Rom. 14: 22.) The Bishop ought not to be too hasty in condemning these priests, since he has more knowledge of God than they had, and, besides, their example for a witness. The Bishop says: "They preferred the easy way of naturalism and used common fire." Yes, Bishop, and so do you and the Methodist Church over which you are head prefer the easy way of what you are pleased to call "baptism," and so use a few drops of water to sprinkle on one's head. This fire the priests used was strange fire to God for the simple fact that they did not get it from the place that God told them. And sprinkling a little water on a person's head in the name of Christ for baptism is just as strange to God for the simple fact that God never commanded it. Doesn't the Bishop know this? Doesn't the Bishop know that the pope of Rome is the highest authority there is for sprinkling for baptism? Doesn't the Bishop know that there is just as much difference in the meaning of the Greek word for baptism and the Greek word for sprinkling as there is in the meaning of the word "heaven" and the word "hell"?

The Bishop: "Their case in principle is not different from that of many persons now. There is a prevalent disposition among both preachers and the people to take the easy way of naturalism in doing the work of the church. The requirements of the supernatural, by which they are brought face to face with God, are too exacting, and, not being willing to surrender utterly the semblance of Christian living and endeavor, they adopt naturalism, naturalistic methods, and aim at naturalistic ends, rather than rely upon spiritual forces and aim at spiritual ends."

Yes, Bishop, it's hard to get people to stick to the "word of God." Paul, over eight hundred years ago, said: "The time will come when they will not endure the sound doctrine; but, having itching ears, will heap to themselves teachers after their own lusts; and will turn away their ears from the truth, and turn aside unto fables." (2 Tim. 4: 3, 4.) The Bishop ought not to be surprised at the apostles' telling the truth.

I now note a few expressions from "the word of truth" and show how people have turned aside from them. "The word of truth" speaks of but one church—the church of Christ. (Matt. 16: 18; Rom. 16: 16; Eph. 4: 4.) Man says there are many and that it makes no difference what you call the church, and the one that the Bishop is head over is called the "Methodist Church." Bishop, from whence came that name? It is not noted in "the word of truth." "The word of truth" says baptize (immerse) penitent believers. (Acts 2: 38.) Man says sprinkle or pour a little water and it will do just as well. From whence came such? It is not in "the word of truth." "The word of truth" says baptize believers. (Mark 16: 16.) Man says baptize the infant, too. From whence came such? It is not in "the word of truth." "The word of truth" says make vocal music—sing and make melody with your heart to the Lord. (Eph. 5: 19.) Man says we 16.) Man says baptize the infant, too. From whence came such? It is not in "the word of truth," the New Testament. From whence came all these church societies, entertainments, and titles, such as "Rev.," "D.D.," etc.? They are not in "the word of truth." Who exalted the Bishop as head over what he is pleased to call "a portion of God's people?" The Bible says that Christ is the head of the church. (Eph. 1: 22.) Yes, people have forsaken "the old paths," the word of God, and gone after the doctrines and commandments of men.

The Bishop: "We hear little preaching concerning justification by faith, or the new birth, or the witness of the Spirit; but we have a vast deal of pulpit talk expended on reform schemes, social service, and other matters. Our relations with God are thus ignored and earthly relations and conditions are magnified out of all proportion to their real significance and importance. Throughout the Scriptures the idea always set forth is that the thing of supreme importance is the right relation of men to God, and that when this supremely important matter has been rightly determined all other good things follow. This is the underlying idea in our Lord's exhortation: 'Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.' The popular program, however, is that if we look after and secure these earthly things, we shall glide into the kingdom of God down an incline plane, with all the forces of gravitation conspiring to help us, and nothing opposing us in reaching the heavenly end. This program is popular because it is easy; but in the end it will be disappointing."

On the above let me add: If the Bishop should preach a sermon on "justification by faith" and be consistent with his "Discipline," he would have to preach "justification by faith only." This the Bible flatly contradicts. Read the second chapter of James. The Bishop says: "Throughout the Scriptures the idea always set forth is that the thing of supreme importance is the right relation of man to God, and that when this supremely important matter has been rightly determined all other good things follow." Yes, Bishop, and this relation to God can be had only by humble obedience to the "word of God" just as it is written. God tried to teach this lesson to the children of Israel, but they were slow to learn it, and so are people to-day. Read Dent. 28. God tried to teach this lesson to Saul, but he would not hearken. He said to Saul: "To obey is better than sacrifice." (1 Sam. 15: 22.) When people stop adding to and taking from the word of God, and bow in humble submission to him, then, and then only, can this sweet relation be had.

The Bishop: "The popular program, however, is that if we look after and secure these earthly things, we shall glide into the kingdom of God down an incline plane, with all the forces of gravitation conspiring to help us, and nothing opposing us in reaching the heavenly end. This program is popular because it is easy; but in the end it will be disappointing." And the Bishop is right. That is the reason the true church—church of Christ—is pleading with people to forsake the doctrines and commandments of men and return to the "word of God." Christ said in Matt. 7: 22, 23: "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, did we not prophesy by thy name, and by thy name cast out demons, and by thy name do many mighty works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

People can think they can glide into the kingdom of God some way of their own, but they are certainly deceived. If people get into the kingdom of God to-day, they get in just like the people got in on the day of Pentecost. (Acts 2: 36-42; 8: 34-40.) A little water sprinkled or poured on a person's head never did put one into the kingdom of God.

The Bishop: "Men enter the kingdom of heaven by a strait gate, and reach it by walking in the narrow way. When we seek some easier way by which to obtain these heavenly ends, we go astray and land ourselves in confusion and discouragements." Let me say, Amen. The Bishop seems to be waking up to the truth. Now, if he would just put this into practice, get some gospel preacher to immerse him into the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, then he, in turn, immerse all the Methodist converts, throw away all the unscriptural innovations, call the church by the name in the Bible, wear the name "Christian," cut out all the societies, and in general go back to the word of God, then all would be well.

The Bishop: "But churches and preachers need to stop and inquire what they really intend to achieve by their lives and labors. If they mean only an amelioration of earthly conditions, then no supernatural power is required to accomplish their object. But if they intend to bring a lost world back to God and renew the hearts of men in righteousness and true holiness, they should with all their hearts return to the faith and methods of holy men by whom such heavenly results have been achieved in former days. No great religious leader who achieved a revival of religion among men has ever aimed at anything short of bringing men face to face with God."

On the above let me add: Preachers are spending their lives to promulgate a "strange doctrine," and people are giving their hard-earned money to support them. Such preachers and people are not laying up for themselves a good foundation against the day to come. Yes, the Bishop is right; "If people intend to bring a lost world back to God, they must return to the faith and methods of the holy men of old." And this is what the true church, the church of Christ, is pleading with people to do—return to "apostolic Christianity." But people love their human inventions and don't want to give them up; so many just keep hugging to them, and at the same time say we must go back to the "old paths."

There are other good points in the Bishop's article; but these are sufficient to show that the Bishop realizes that something is wrong with the religious world. I am glad that the Bishop is waking up to these facts, and my prayer is that he may put in practice that which he is aware of, and do all that he can to get people to return to the word of God. Then we will all speak the same thing, be of the same mind; then will our Lord's prayer in John 17 be answered.

We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received, but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. We Must Give Account of Our Deeds.

BY E. G. S.

Paul said: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." (Gal. 6: 7.) This is a figurative expression. Paul uses it to indicate the serious responsibility we are under to submit ourselves to God and to do his will in order to be saved. God has given us his will in the New Testament in plain language so that all responsible beings can know just what to do to be saved. The passage immediately following the above goes right on to say: "For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." (Verse 8.) To sow to the flesh is to give our lives to the gratification of the flesh; while to sow to the Spirit is to give our lives to the teaching of the Holy Spirit in the whole matter of Christianity.

No alien can become a Christian without yielding himself, soul and body, to the first principles of the gospel of Christ; and he must then live as taught by the inspired apostles and written down by inspired men in the New Testament. We have enough written in that sacred volume to teach all men how to become Christians, if they will read it or hear it read or plainly presented by preachers. But one trouble about relying upon preachers is that so many preachers do not preach the plain word of the Lord just as the apostles preached it, but simply give their opinions as to what it means. The apostles, guided by the Holy Spirit, preached "Christ, and him crucified," and raised up from the dead, as the plan of salvation, and required them to believe these facts and to repent and be baptized unto the remission of sins. They never one time said anything to them about praying for religion, for the conversion of their souls by any inward, secret operation of the Spirit. Such a conversion as that was never one time preached by the apostles, so far as the New Testament records. Hence preachers that preach that way now have not one word of authority for it. If Peter had preached that way on the day of Pentecost and about three thousand had got religion, then it would be right to preach it that way now. But the trouble with the theory is that there is not one word of it in the New Testament. There is no account that any apostle ever preached that way or that a single soul was ever converted that way. How, then, is any man going to get authority from the word of God to preach that way now? And as no such teaching is found in the New Testament, it is dangerous and ruinous to teach that way. If I could find the account even of one soul that was converted that way or where one single inspired man ever preached that sort of conversion, I would take pleasure in preaching that way; but since there is no such case on record, I would be utterly afraid to preach it that way. We have no such case. Therefore it is open presumption for any man to preach it that way. It is simply adding to the word of God to so teach.

On the other hand, it is presumptuous in the sight of God now for any man to say of baptism that it is a non-essential, as thousands are doing to-day. It is challenging both the wisdom and authority of God to do so; for God positively commands baptism. Jesus positively told the apostles to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, and to baptize believers into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit. This command to baptize people is positive, and is just as binding now as it was when first commanded, and will be to the end of the world. Hence every man that cuts baptism out of the conversion of sinners lays violent hands upon the word of God, setting God at defiance, thus assuming to know more than he knows about conversion. If there is any one thing that is supremely ridiculous, this assumption surely is; for the man that does it virtually assumes that he is wiser than God is, and in so doing is paving the way to his own destruction. It is no part of man's business to sit in judgment on the word of God, to decide what is essential and what is nonessential. We had far better be studying what God says and trying to do all that he commands us.

To sow to the flesh is to give our lives to fleshly things, to set our hearts and affections on fleshly things and strive to secure things of a fleshly nature, to satisfy and gratify fleshly desires. Now this is a very easy thing for a fleshly mind to do; but it is the very thing God tells us to deny, to crucify. Every child of God needs to strive every day to deny the mere demands of a fleshly mind. A fleshly mind will never lead any one to Christ, nor help any one to crucify the flesh with its affections and lusts, as Christians are required to do. Hence, if Christians would grow and strengthen in things divine, they must wage continued warfare against fleshly minds. The word of God says: "They that are in the flesh cannot please God." (Rom. 8: 8) This passage means that those who are walking after the flesh, leading fleshly lives, cannot please him. To walk after the Spirit is to read and study what the words of the Spirit require people to do, and then obey it. The word of the Lord uses a very forcible expression when it says: "For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." (Rom. 8: 6, 7.) This shows the utter impossibility of being fleshly minded and a faithful, spiritual-minded Christian at the same time. The professed Christian that lives after the flesh has no promise of reaching heaven if he keeps that up; for in leading that sort of life he is dead spiritually. Christians must keep posted on the requirements of that life, and keep living it till death comes, in order to have the hope of heaven when they die. The promise of heaven is made only to those that hold out faithfully to the end. In the last chapter of the Bible the language is: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." (Rev. 22: 14.) This is the only course of life to which heaven is promised when life is ended; but the promise is sure to all the faithful. Surely such a promise ought to be a great stimulant to every child of God on earth to be prepared to reach such a life in the world to come.

Some Questions and Answers.

BY E. A. E.

Lancaster, Texas, September 12.—Dear Brother Elam: We want more light about Paul's purifying himself in the temple at Jerusalem. Many brethren now think it all right for Christians to enter into and participate with the various religious parties with which we are surrounded, and they cite us to the same scripture (1 Cor. 9: 20, 21), which you have given us in Paul's case, to show that it is right to do so. Is that the true meaning of that scripture? Can Christians now observe the laws and customs of the Adventists while they are with them? Can a Christian observe the laws and customs of the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, and Baptists while in their midst, that we may "gain" or save some of them? If these Jews had had before them Paul's letters that we now have, could not they have proven that he taught that "they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs?" (Acts 21: 21.) Did not Paul condemn (criticize) Peter for doing at Antioch the very thing—that is, observing the customs of the Jews—that he himself did at Jerusalem? (See Gal. 2.) Paul says Peter did what he did at Antioch, "fearing them which were of the circumcision." (Gal. 2: 12.) Is not this the real and only explanation of the conduct of James and Paul at Jerusalem?

H. CLAY RAWLINS.

In 1 Cor. 9: 20, 21, Paul explains his own conduct. He says: "Not being without law to God, but under law to Christ." He did such things as the Jews did under the law and such things as the Gentiles did without the law, which were in no way a violation of the law of Christ.

No construction put upon this passage which leads one to violate in any way the law of Christ is its true meaning.

The Scriptures must not be twisted (2 Pet. 3: 16), the word of God must neither be corrupted (2 Cor. 2: 17) nor handled deceitfully (2 Cor. 4: 2), and the gospel must not be perverted. (Gal. 1: 7.) Fearing God, trembling at his word (Isa. 66: 3, 5), afraid to disobey him, loving the truth (2 Thess. 2: 10), having a good and honest heart (Luke 8: 15), purposing and willing to do God's will (John 7: 16, 17), and praying that his will and not ours be done, we are assured that we can learn and do the truth. But these conditions of heart are necessary to our reception of the truth, to lead us out of error, and to keep us out. Our whole desire and constant endeavor must be to please God. Jesus pleased not himself (Rom. 15: 3), but always pleased God (John 8: 29). Paul did not seek "the favor of men," but of God; he did not strive to please men, but God; for if, in this sense, he had sought to please men, he would not have pleased God. (Gal. 1: 10.) He pleased "all men in all things" only in that he sought not his "own profit" or personal rights and liberties, comfort and welfare, but, waiving all these, he sought the good of others. (1 Cor. 10: 33.) If eating meat, for instance, caused one to stumble, he would "eat no flesh for evermore." (1 Cor. 8: 13.) This law of love must govern us.

Let us study the lesson in the present Quarterly for November 12 on Rom. 14 and 15: 1-3.

Christians cannot do anything among any people on earth which is a violation of the law of Christ or which will lead others to violate this law. Paul-like, they should adapt themselves to different "customs" at different times of different people, which violate no law of Christ—no principle of the gospel—or lead others to do so, but which, on the other hand, will help others to learn and obey the truth. At all times Christians must be obedient to Christ. At all times they should waive cheerfully their own personal rights and privileges and practice self-denial to gain the more.

Paul did not condemn Peter for doing that which he himself did. Compare their conduct. Peter dissembled; other Jews did, "insomuch that Barnabas was carried away with their dissimulation;" and Paul "saw that they walked not uprightly according to the gospel" (Gal. 2: 11-21.)

When I prepared the lesson referred to on Acts 21: I told all I know about Paul's conduct in going into the temple. I can do no better now than to repeat that here:

The question of requiring the Gentiles who believed to circumcise their children and to keep the law of Moses had been settled some years before (Acts 15); but the "many thousands" among the Jews who believed were (1) "zealous for the law;" (2) they circumcised their children; and (3) they "walked after the customs"—the purifications and other observances of the law, or observances which had become by practice to the Jews as sacred as law. Paul was misrepresented by Judaizing teachers. He was accused of teaching "all the Jews . . . among the Gentiles to forsake Moses" and not to circumcise their children. James and the elders, in order to convince the Jewish Christians that these charges were false, advised Paul to take the four men who had "a vow on them" and purify himself with them and "be at charges for them"—that is, pay for the necessary offerings. Paul taught the Gentiles that it was not necessary to circumcise their children and to keep the law of Moses in order to be Christians, and hence refused to circumcise Titus (Gal. 2: 1-5); but he did not teach the Jews to forsake "the customs" of the law and to abandon circumcision. On the other hand, he circumcised Timothy, whose mother was a Jewess, "because of the Jews that were in those parts." (Acts 16: 1-3.) To circumcise Timothy or any other Jew as a family mark was not wrong; but to circumcise Titus, Timothy, or any one else as an act of worship was wrong. Paul, in acting upon the advice of James and these elders, did this upon the principle of becoming a Jew to the Jews and as under the law to those under the law—not being himself "under the law" or observing it as worship to God, but "under law to Christ." (1 Cor. 9: 19-23.) In his speech before Felix, Paul refers to having purified himself in the temple as proof that he observed "the customs" and raised no tumult among the Jews. (Acts 24: 17, 18.) The Jewish Christians learned slowly that the law had been fulfilled in Christ and had been taken out of the way; and they ceased to observe it only as step by step they learned this. As they were prepared to receive it, God gradually taught them this fact, which they did not clearly see until the temple was destroyed.

Paul did not go into the temple and observe the "customs" as worship to God, but upon the principles of being a Jew to the Jews. This does not justify any one's encouraging others in any error or wrong practice in the worship of God.

Christians should be courteous and considerate of all people, should seek to help all to learn and practice the truth, should encourage all who want to know the truth, should study and learn more and more of it themselves, should associate and work in the honest callings of life with people even who do not claim to be Christians, as Jesus ate with publicans and sinners; but they should not violate any principle of the law of Christ. Really, how can Christians be otherwise than kind, gentle, tender, respectful, polite, courteous, in every way considerate of the feelings of others, dignified, and courageous, yet conscientious, firm, unswerving in regard to the truth, uncompromising in regard to right, and faithful and true to God always?

HOW TO SPEND SUNDAY.

A querist wishes something said in regard to the way the remainder of the Lord's day after the time occupied in the worship of God should be spent.

The New Testament specifies the things to be done on that day. The disciples at Troas met on the first day of the week to break bread, or to eat the Lord's Supper. (Acts 20: 7.) Much of the time of that day was spent in hearing Paul preach—rather, in being taught by him. It requires some time to prepare and to get to the place of meeting. The church then should seriously engage in all the acts of service required—singing with melody and grace in the heart the songs the New Testament specifies; praying with the spirit; teaching the word of God and exhorting; partaking of the Lord's Supper in self-examination, discerning the body and blood of Jesus; contributing cheerfully, every one as he may prosper; and if some one is present, as Paul at Troas, who can preach, receiving instruction from him. It requires some time to do all this properly. The law of the land forbids regular work on this day; hence the remainder of the day should not be spent in that way, for that would be a violation of God's law, which requires submission to the powers that be. (Rom. 13: 1-7.) The heart, having been so seriously engaged in the worship of God, cannot be turned at once to worldly pleasure and amusement, to frolic and fun. Christians should be cheerful and happy and should not disfigure their faces in order to appear religious; but they should not spend as little time as possible in the worship of God, hastening to "get through," and as much time as possible in worldly amusements and in seeking their own fleshly ease and enjoyment. There are no strict rules outside of the worship of God and work of the church laid down for the observance of this day as were made for the observance of the Jewish Sabbath. Love for Jesus, respect for the worship of God, and the desire to accomplish good should govern all Christians. But no Christian should attempt to make rules here for other Christians, where God has made none, except as stated above. Constrained by the love of Christ, Christians will act on every day of the week so as to set a good example and to influence others to obey God and honor Christ.

Man's Devices and Jehovah's Guidance.

BY M. C. K.

It was the wise man of the ancients who said: "Man's heart deviseth his way, but Jehovah directeth his steps." (Prov. 16: 9.) In this inspired and significant utterance there is revealed the fact of an ever-present and governing law in human affairs of which the average man of the world seems to have no knowledge. But it is, nevertheless, a wise and beneficent law operating everywhere and for the good of all of God's creatures, challenging the most serious thought, study, and reflection on the part of man.

Little did the author of this editorial dream when the last word of his editorial, which appeared in our issue of October 5, was taken down by the stenographer's hand, that so many weeks would intervene before he would dictate another; nor did he dream of the suffering which those weeks held in store for him. But "man's heart deviseth his way, but Jehovah directeth his steps." In resuming his accustomed work in these columns, he is grateful and rejoiced to say to Gospel Advocate readers that, while the attack was sudden and the suffering severe, yet, thanks to the Giver of all good, it was not greatly prolonged. And with equally profound gratitude he is furthermore glad to state that, while the attack found him with a vigorous body and in robust health, yet it has left him in the same if not even better condition than before, with strength fully regained and with the ability to resume and prosecute his work in the accustomed way. In fact, so marked is his improvement that he is persuaded to postpone what his friends have thought to be a much-needed rest. It seems useless to rest when one does not feel tired and when there is so much work to do on every hand.

Manifestly there are great lessons for us in the vicissitudes of life. Let us not be slow to learn them. As the storm cloud temporarily hides the sun, yet intensifies our appreciation of its light and beauty when it appears again with the clouds cleared away, so possibly our Heavenly Father, in the arrest and suspension of our accustomed operations, whether by illness and suffering or otherwise, means to deepen and intensify our gratitude for his goodness in general, as well as to intensify our appreciation of its particular manifestation in health and vigor of body. Be this as it may, it is comforting and consoling to know that, in all the affairs of life, there is a supreme and all-powerful Hand which directs and guides in the affairs of this world and overrules all things for the good of his faithful children. No wonder a genius like Shakespeare said:

"There is a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough-hew them how we will."

And no wonder that Thomas Carlyle should write:

"In the huge mass of evil as it rolls and swells, there is ever some good working toward deliverance and triumph."

And no less suggestive and impressive are the eloquent words of William Cowper:

"In all the vast and the minute, we see the unambiguous footsteps of the God who gives the luster to the insect's wing, and wheels his throne upon the rolling worlds."

Hence, in every conflict and in every struggle of life, in adversity and in prosperity, in sickness and in health, and in life and in death, the faithful child of God is assured that "the eternal God is thy dwelling place, and underneath are the everlasting arms." (Deut. 33: 27.) What a declaration! How vast its import and how sweet its sentiment! Not only is the infinite and all-wise Father ever present guiding and directing our ways, but so infinitely minute is his oversight of all his creatures that, of the sparrows, Jesus declared to the disciples: "Not one of them shall fall on the ground without your Father." (Matt. 10: 29.) Just think of it! Though there are millions of sparrows in the world and millions of other species of the feathered tribe of songsters scattered all over the earth, yet the Father's notice of each one of them is as minute, accurate, and unfailing as if it were the only bird in all the world. And to make his disciples appreciate this lesson, Jesus added: "Ye are of more value than many sparrows." As if to say, if God thus cares for the little, insignificant and comparatively worthless sparrow, how much more will he care for the being created in his own image and likeness! Then, descending to the still finer and more complex minutiae of life, he says: "The very hairs of your head are all numbered." Thus, God our Heavenly Father is everywhere, and, with the tenderest and most loving solicitude and watch care over every detail in our lives, is drawing upon his infinite resources in the beneficent effort to make all things work together for our good. Even men of science, in proportion as they come close to the God of nature, who is also the God of the Bible, feel and acknowledge the force of this fact; and hence we have the following strong language from Benjamin Franklin:

"The longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see of this truth, that God governs in the affairs of man; and if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without his notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without his aid?"

With such a doctrine, well grounded on the facts of both reason and revelation, the Christian man ought to be able to calmly face the struggles, turmoils, conflicts, and misfortunes of life with supreme contentment in the assurance that all things will work for his good.

Finally, this precious biblical truth is briefly summed up and beautifully expressed by the familiar lines of Alexander Pope:

"All nature is but art, unknown to thee;
All chance, direction which thou canst not see;
All discord, harmony not understood;
All partial evil, universal good."

And so, calmly and confidently resting in this precious faith, the author of this editorial, with profound gratitude to the numerous individuals and churches over the country who have prayed for him and otherwise shown the tenderest and most loving interest in his welfare, and with his life and strength reconsecrated to God, takes his place again with his faithful colleagues in the united effort to make the Gospel Advocate, as it has always striven to be, a faithful exponent of the principles of unswerving fidelity to the word of God.

What About Negligence?

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

In our issue of October 19 we published an article on "Withdrawing Fellowship from the Disorderly." Since the publication of that article I have received the following query for further information on the subject of disorderly walking:

Brother McQuiddy: I have just read your article on "Withdrawing Fellowship from the Disorderly." Does the word "disorderly" in 2 Thess. 3: 6 refer only to evil practice? I understand that the word "disorderly" is the opposite to the word "orderly." Then, to walk "orderly" is to walk in the commandments of God; to walk "disorderly" is to fail to walk in the commandments of God. Now, if this is true, I want to know if the church has not the same authority to "withdraw fellowship" from a member that very seldom assembles with God's people for work and worship? After the church has exhorted certain members time and again to come out on Lord's day, and they can and will not, what steps do the Scriptures authorize the church to take?

W. C. GRAVES.

Disorderly walking may refer to neglect of duty as well as the transgression of law. The disorderly walking to which reference is made in 2 Thess. 3: 6 is idleness. Some of the Thessalonians, being idle, had become busybodies in other men's matters. Paul, in 1 Thess. 4: 11, 12, admonishes: "And that ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your own hands, even as we charged you; that ye may walk becomingly toward them that are without, and may have need of nothing." It seems that the Thessalonians had paid little or no attention to this command, and because they were idle and did not attend to their own business he would have them excluded from the fellowship of the church. The tradition to which he referred was the revelation that he had given them in his first letter, and was not a matter of surmise handed around from one to the other.

The Scriptures very clearly teach us that sins of omission, as well as sins of commission, will close the pearly gates of the new Jerusalem against us. Many are prone to think that if they are not guilty of some terrible crime, but simply neglect to be active in the service of the Lord, they are not very bad, after all. I do not see, however, how any one, after reading the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew, can reach such a conclusion. The five foolish virgins were not permitted to go in and meet the bridegroom simply because they neglected to take oil in their vessels with their lamps. The wicked and slothful servant was condemned, not because he had committed some great offense, but simply because he had neglected to improve the talent which had been given unto him. "But his Lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I did not scatter; thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the bankers, and at my coming I should have received back mine own with interest." (Matt. 25: 26, 27.) Also in the judgment scene, when all the nations of the earth are gathered before the great King, we learn that men will be cast into outer darkness simply because they have neglected to feed the hungry, give the thirsty to drink, and to clothe the naked. "Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into the eternal fire which is prepared for the devil and his angels: for I was hungry, and ye did not give me to eat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not. Then shall they also answer, saying, Lord, when saw we thee hungry, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee? Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of these least, ye did it not unto me. And these shall go away into eternal punishment: but the righteous into eternal life." (Verses 41-46.) Thus it is clearly seen that God does not look with any degree of allowance upon the willful neglect of duty. But I am not able to say just how far and how long the brother should neglect to assemble to break bread upon the first day of the week before he is beyond redemption. So long as a brother looks in the right direction and manifests a purpose and desire to follow the Lord, we should be slow to do anything that is calculated to drive him farther away from his duty. If a man, however, persists in staying away from the worship; if he continually absents himself from the house of the Lord upon the first day of the week, he has already withdrawn himself from the fellowship of the church, and all that Christians would have to do would be to announce publicly that, by his conduct and his public life, he had shown that he no longer desired to be a member of the body of Christ. Such negligent Christians certainly relieve the church of the responsibility of withdrawing fellowship from them. The church, however, would do well to make such announcement. I would be slow to advise the withdrawing of fellowship from a member that meets with the church occasionally. It would be better to patiently admonish and warn that brother to cease his neglectful course. To such I would say: "Watch therefore, for ye know not the day nor the hour."

Missionary Verses.

BY RAY ROBINSON.

Shall those who bear the gospel light
To lands across the sea
Bear all the burden of the fight,
And others idle be?

Shall not we whom God has blessed full well
In basket and in store
Hold up the hands of those who tell
His word from shore to shore?

Shall we withhold His royal dues
From King of earth and heaven,
And His abundant grace abuse?
O, give as hath been given!

That hoarded gold you value dear,
A thousandfold will yield,
To give with neither stint nor fear
To reap the whitening field.

We say we sacred hold His word,
And follow it each day.
"Why is it that ye call me, Lord,
And do not what I say?"

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Compiled by A. B. Lipscomb

W. S. Long, Jr., has closed a good meeting at Largo, Fla.

G. W. Leonard, Winchester, Kan., says: "I find many very good things in the Gospel Advocate."

H. T. King, the "home preacher," is in a good meeting with the South College Street Church, this city.

From Carl A. Gardner, Thorp Spring, Texas: "You are publishing a splendid paper and, I am sure, doing good to thousands."

The new mission on Twenty-third Avenue, North, this city, conducted by the Twelfth Avenue congregation, starts off in a flourishing condition. There were over seventy pupils at the Sunday school last Sunday afternoon.

We had two good services at Russell Street, this city, on last Sunday. Brother Sewell was able to preach in the morning. A large audience was present, including visitors from several States. At the night service a fine young man made the good confession.

There is a good home awaiting a Christian woman of dependable character who is in position to take care of two motherless children in their father's home. For further information, address R. R. Owens, Route 1, Brentwood, Tenn.

In one of her books Alice Hegan Rice has this passage: "You've done what you thought was best; now you want to stop thinkin' about it. The decidin' time was the time for worryin'. Now what you want to do is to brace up your sperrits."

H. M. Phillips writes from Miami, Fla.: "The work moves along well here. A few are coming in from the North. We had about the largest crowd on Sunday, November 5, we have had yet. The Bible work on Sunday and on Wednesday night is good. If you know of members coming here, please write me."

From Don Carlos Janes, Route 10, Buechel, Ky.: "There were twenty-two persons at the Bible class at the colored mission in Louisville last Monday night. In addition to the ladies' week-day class in the Highlands, we have a children's class at the same hour, and another class for adults is to be started in a private house. We have a singing class at the church and will start a general Bible class soon."

From T. H. Matheson, Stroud, Okla., October 16: "I have purposed to be engaged in the general evangelistic work. I have arranged to be at and around my old home in West Tennessee during December, but will have some time not engaged. Any congregation desiring me for a short meeting will please write to me at once, at Davis, Okla. I begin my second meeting for this year at Homer, Okla., on December 1."

From one of our saintliest readers: "If I live until January 10, I will be eighty-two years old. I have been reading the Gospel Advocate for the past fifty years, and wish to read it the balance of my life in this beautiful world of ours."—T. D. Flippen, Bartlett, Texas.

This message is wonderfully helpful. It shows how gracefully and how gloriously a faithful Christian can grow old without "souring" on the world.

To the General Public: Certain ones have been traveling over the country claiming to be representing the Tennessee Orphans' Home at Columbia, Tenn., and soliciting funds for said institution. I take this method of informing the public that the Tennessee Orphans' Home has one financial agent, and never sends other representatives for the purpose of soliciting funds, and any such persons are impostors and use this means of securing money that will never reach the Tennessee Orphans' Home. I am sole financial agent.—W. T. Boaz, superintendent of the Tennessee Orphans' Home.

From John T. Poe, Longview, Texas: "I have just closed a glorious meeting of eight days' duration at Miller Schoolhouse, in Anderson County. Four were baptized, one restored. I never preached where the people listened more intently. We appointed a baptist for the church and put one new evangelist to work. Bill Cotton will be heard from in the field before long. He is a noble, good man. I hope to go back and gather some rich sheaves from this sowing. I am now past eighty years of age; but the Lord has been good to me in my old age, and I am still going and preaching."

From F. O. Howell, Fulton, Ky.: "Our meeting closed at Hohenwald, Tenn., on October 19, with fourteen additions. This was our second meeting there this year. Five new elders were selected to assist two old ones in bringing about a better condition of affairs in the church. The church of Christ in Hohenwald has a larger membership than all the sects combined, but no discipline has been exercised in the history of the congregation. The new board of elders will have the undivided support of the church in their undertakings for greater things for our Savior. The town, with few exceptions, has an excellent citizenship."

J. G. Allen, who has labored faithfully for many years with the Green Street congregation, this city, and who is well known to many of our readers, has decided to devote his energies entirely to evangelistic work. Having suffered the loss of his good wife and his children being grown, his circumstances are such that he can travel and preach extensively in new fields. It is part of his plan to make an early trip to Texas, where he has been frequently invited. Brother Allen is an earnest proclaimer of the truth without any frills, and we believe the message is safe in his hands. Churches desiring his services in a meeting should address him at once, at 132 Green Street, this city.

From E. C. Fuqua, Horse Cave, Ky., November 10: "On last Sunday night I closed a two-weeks' meeting with the Green's Chapel congregation, eight miles from Horse Cave. Good audiences greeted us throughout, and all seemed to derive much good from the meeting. Four were baptized and two restored. I never enjoyed a meeting more in my life. The people are kind and hospitable, and the church is fully abreast of her duty in every line of activity, so far as I could judge. Efficient elders and a congregation whose one desire is to please God make this a model congregation in every respect. I shall always remember the sweet associations at Green's Chapel. These brethren have also been fellowshipping the Colorado work since the first of the year, and they have generously fellowshipped many other needy workers and works. Indeed, they are "rich in good works," and God is blessing them therefor. May they increase in all goodness. I begin next Sunday at Gilead Church, further on up the pike. I can still be addressed at Horse Cave, care of R. L. Dunagan, Route 2, for the next two weeks."

GET RID OF HUMORS AND AVOID SICKNESS

Humors in the blood cause internal derangements that affect the whole system, as well as pimples, boils and other eruptions, and are responsible for the readiness with which many people contract disease.

For forty years Hood's Sarsaparilla has been more successful than any other medicine in expelling humors and removing their inward and outward effects. Get Hood's. No other medicine acts like it.

Stop Cheating Your Family.

You doubtless fully realize your duty to your family in making your home life attractive, entertaining, cultured, and refined; and you have promised yourself that some day you will fill that vacant spot in the parlor with a splendid piano or player-piano of the sweetest tone and highest quality, or that you will replace the old rattle-trap with a superb new instrument. But the days, the months, and possibly the years have silently crept by, and still there is no good music in your home. In the meantime, home is not what it might be, for a home without a high-grade piano or player-piano is seriously and hopelessly handicapped.

You have only one life to live here; why let procrastination steal your family's best opportunity for social, mental, and spiritual advancement? The Gospel Advocate Piano Club will solve the financial problem for you now. It was organized to overcome the very difficulties which confront you. By clubbing your order with those of ninety-nine other subscribers, you save forty per cent of the price and yet are responsible only for your own order. Convenient terms of payment are provided. You try the instrument in your own home and must be thoroughly satisfied before finally accepting it.

Write for your copy of the club's catalogue and full particulars to-day. Address Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

Heed the Warning If You Have a Cough!

The deep-seated cough that does not yield to ordinary treatment may lead to distressing pulmonary troubles. Or it may bring on a chronic bronchial affection. Many persons now incapacitated might have avoided such disastrous results by timely care and efficient medical treatment.

Among the latter Eckman's Alterative has an enviable record. It is a lime-bearing preparation which is easily assimilated in most instances. Where used in connection with nourishing food and proper living, it has given widespread relief.

Its freedom from poisonous or habit-forming drugs of any nature whatsoever renders it safe to try. And its content of calcium gives it tonic value. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

CHURCH NEWS

Alabama.

Scottsboro, November 7.—Brother John E. Dunn has been with us through three Sundays in a meeting. We had some of the most excellent lessons on the Sermon on the Mount I have ever heard in our morning services. All the teaching was splendid, and, I hope, developed spirituality in our congregation to a higher plane. Two baptisms. I was at Guntersville on October 29, with one baptism; at New Hope and Owen's Cross Roads on November 5, with three baptisms.—J. M. Gainer.

Florence, November 7.—On Monday night, October 16, Brother F. W. Smith began a meeting at Florence, which closed on Friday night, November 3. In his own inimitable manner Brother Smith declared "the whole counsel of God" in so far as time allowed. He was fearless and uncompromising in his denunciation of sin; clear, tender, forceful, and eloquent in his presentation of the claims of Jesus. The way of salvation was pointed out so clearly that one could not misunderstand, if one wanted to know. Brother Tom Williams, the efficient leader of song at the Russell Street Church, in Nashville, Tenn., led the singing for us. By his modest, unaffected, and Christian deportment Brother Williams won for himself a warm place in the hearts of this people. There were fourteen baptisms and six by relation. We are glad these brethren have labored with us, and are quite sure their good work will count for righteousness in years to come. Brother L. T. Farrar recently held a meeting at Macedonia, sixteen miles distant, in Lauderdale County. Brother Farrar preached sixteen times and baptized fourteen persons. Three were restored. The church was awakened to renewed zeal, additional officers were selected, and the enthusiasm manifested indicates their determination to "go forward." Brother Farrar was formerly the popular and efficient assistant postmaster of Florence. He is also a competent teacher, holding a life certificate. His literary training, knowledge of the Scriptures, and forceful delivery render him an effective preacher of the gospel. He should be kept busy in the work he loves so well—preaching the gospel. Write him here.—Isaac C. Hoskins.

Kentucky.

Kirkmansville, November 7.—Last Lord's-day night I closed an eight-days' meeting at Judd's Chapel. This meeting was a mission meeting held in a General Baptist meetinghouse. The church of Christ at Bluff Springs supported the meeting—and did it well, too—both by their presence and means. Two were baptized during the meeting, and all seemed to be anxious to hear the truth. We had large crowds throughout the meeting. I hope some day to see a church established in that vicinity.—C. H. Baker.

Murray, November 2.—My first meeting was in Southern Illinois. One was

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good, clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place!

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anemic-looking men, women, and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "run-downs," "brain fags," and pessimists, we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water, with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening, and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds, and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

baptized. From there I went to Cuba, where we had thirty-eight additions; thence to Gilbertville, where eight were baptized, three from the Baptists; next to Pine Dale, near Narvel, with two baptized. Concord was our next meeting. Four were baptized. My home congregation (Union Grove) then called me for a meeting. Here seven of my best friends were baptized. My last meeting was at Sharp, with two baptized.—T. G. Curd.

Louisville, November 3.—I began a series of meetings at Fountain Run on September 17 and closed on September 29. Two baptisms. I began at Gamaliel on October 1 and closed on October 11. Fine interest and much enthusiasm from start to finish. Ten baptisms. I began at Salem, in Harrison County, on October 15, closing on October 29. Four baptisms, one from the Baptists, and one from the "digressives." Brother J. Scott Greer, who preaches for this church, led the song service and rendered valuable assistance in talks and exhortations. Brother Greer is a strong, loyal young preacher whom I commend to the brotherhood. His address is Cynthia, Ky. With this effort my protracted-meeting engagements for 1916 closed. I have held eleven series of meetings during the year in Canada, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Alabama. Thirty-six have been added to the one body, and I believe much good has otherwise been accomplished. I am now permanently located with Parkland Church, this city. My home address is 443 North Twenty-sixth Street.—W. F. Neal.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine —Here is More Proof.

To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Crandon, Wis. — "When I was 16 years old I got married and at 18 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. MAYME ASBACH, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla. — "When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—Mrs. A. L. McCasland, 509 Have St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.

Roxbury, Mass. — "I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were bearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. B. M. Osgood, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region, it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid, which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you must relieve them—like you relieve your bowels—removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure, and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

A Healthy Body.

Do you suffer from constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, heartburn, or other forms of liver trouble? A healthy liver means a healthy body. When constipated, don't poison yourself by failing to take the proper treatment. Don't force your perspiration to carry off through your skin pores more than its share of the impurities of your body by failing to keep your bowels clean and healthy. Take Van Lax for your liver. It is harmless, contains no calomel or habit-forming drugs; is pleasant in taste and results. It promotes a healthy condition in your entire digestive system. Take Van Lax and keep your body healthy. Sold by all reliable dealers. In bottles, fifty cents. Van Fleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

Do not put off any good that you would do until to-morrow's sun shall rise. To-morrow you may be dead. But be that so or not, to-day will be dead. To-day's gift of time, of opportunity, of personal contact, may be gone, and all your words and wishes will not bring the treasure back again. Do not put off the doing of good. The mill can never grind with the water that is passed.—Selected.

The Annual Reunion of the Tennessee Orphans' Home.

BY W. T. BOAZ.

On October 31 many of the friends and supporters of the Tennessee Orphans' Home held their annual reunion at the Home in Columbia; also the board of directors met and went over the work of the previous year and heard the reports of the secretary and treasurer. Many speakers from different parts of the country entertained the audience with splendid speeches. Among the number were Brother Price Billingsley, of McMinnville; Brother C. E. Wooldridge, of Fayetteville; Brother Dan Gunn, of Sparta; Brother White, of Nashville; and Brother J. R. Tubb, of Sparta. Quite a number of the Home friends made speeches. Dinner was served immediately following the board meeting.

The Home has been running seven years. In the beginning of the work it had but few friends and no money, but through the untiring efforts of the few it has grown from its exceedingly small beginning to its present status. The financial report of the superintendent showed a property valuation of not less than forty-eight thousand dollars, and during these seven years in which this property has been developed the Home has cared for many children. Starting in debt over eight thousand dollars, paying all that indebtedness, buying a farm costing thirteen thousand dollars, stocking and equipping this farm, put the Home considerably behind, and it has been the hope of the present management to free the Home from all indebtedness by the close of this year. Some twelve or fifteen hundred dollars was lacking on the debt when the board met, and friends from over the country and churches represented by elders subscribed this amount. There are quite a number who have subscribed to the debt fund and have not as yet settled up in full. We are hoping to collect all promises at the earliest possible convenience. So any subscription yet unpaid should be sent in immediately, as all notes are now due; and if every subscriber will settle in full, every thing will be canceled at once. We are certainly thankful for every favor shown our work.

The work has been too heavy on the superintendent to keep the general public fully advised of all the workings of the Home, as the superintendent has not only acted in the capacity of superintendent, but has also been financial agent and general manager of a farm of two hundred and seventy-five acres, besides holding four or five meetings every year, preaching somewhere every Sunday, and holding from one to three debates a year. The work

Club Solves Piano Problem.

The greatest danger in buying a piano or player-piano is the difficulty in selecting one of real and lasting quality. There are so many cheap imitations on the market that the chances of full and permanent satisfaction are slight unless you are an expert judge and are extremely careful in your selection.

If you feel that you are not a good judge of the quality, durability, and value of an instrument, or if you have not time to make an exhaustive investigation of these matters, why not throw the responsibility on the piano club? It has already made the investigation for you and will assume the full responsibility of giving you absolute and perfect satisfaction and the largest possible value for your money. What your insurance policy is to your home, the club is to your piano or player-piano.

But the club does not stop there. It clubs your order with those of ninety-nine other subscribers, thus securing the lowest possible factory price for each club member. It provides convenient terms of payment, the strongest guarantees of quality and durability, and gives you the opportunity to try your instrument thoroughly before you buy. The club absolutely guarantees perfect satisfaction in every detail of piano buying. Write for your copy of the catalogue to-day. Address the Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

has been the work of three men; and if the public has wanted to know more of the real workings of the Home, it has not been due to a lack of a desire of the superintendent to inform them, but to a lack of time. He has to supervise the placing of all children and keep an account of all funds. But hereafter we hope to be able to make a statement at the end of each month through the papers that will set before you the work of the Home. This article will not be in the form of an appeal so much, for we feel that you are amply interested in the work to respond to its every need, provided you know its wants. Remember that while we are out of debt—or practically so, as we will be when all promises are paid—the Home has expenses, and regularity in contributing to this work insures its permanency more than anything else. We have labored to be your public servant. We are thankful to you for what you have done. We are not ashamed of the record the Home has made, but are only hoping for greater things in the future.

At present it is the superintendent's desire to build up a large poultry yard on the farm. Would like to do this within the next month or six weeks. Sisters can help us by getting each family of the congregation or community to donate one hen to a coop, and expressing the coop to the Tennessee Orphans' Home, Columbia, Tenn. We want to make the poultry business a paying proposition.

Just to-day the Home received the following letter from Elder Charles T. Alexander, of Arcadia, Fla., who was formerly pastor of the First Baptist Church at Columbia. I insert this letter so that you may see the impression the Home makes on those who may come in contact with it and have a chance to know:

W. T. Boaz, Columbia, Tenn.—Dear Brother: The Daily Herald comes to me here, and in the issue of Tuesday I note with special interest—and, I may say, with pride—the great victory that has come to the orphanage under your management. My first impulse is to write you this word of congratulation. The loyalty of friends that thus gather about the Home is not only a worthy Christian testimony from them, but it is also a well-deserved credit and honor to you as superintendent of the work.

You will permit me to repeat what I have said to you and to others in Columbia, and say that I have never seen a finer lot of orphan children than you have, and I have never seen the inmates of any orphanage better clothed, better controlled, and apparently better cared for in general. I observed them in the Home, on their playgrounds, on the street, and at Sunday school and church service, and they always reflect credit on you and the Home. I say these things with peculiar pleasure, because such work is too broad and general in character to confine its claims to any one circle of fellowship, but belongs to the kingdom at large. We have a splendid orphanage here with about one hundred children; and all the town of Arcadia, regardless of church lines, takes a special pride in its support and development. My own Sunday school and church contribute about two thousand dollars a year to its support. So should all Columbia feel and act toward the Home in its midst. Again I would congratulate you on the splendid results of your work, and express the wish for your continued prosperity in a noble service that should appeal to every man and woman and child who has a heart of sympathy for the fatherless and motherless child left alone in the world.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

Each "Pape's Diapepsin" digests 3000 grains food, ending all stomach misery in five minutes.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach remedy in the whole world and besides it is harmless. Put an end to stomach trouble forever by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

Mother-Made, Quick Acting Cough Syrup

Should be Kept Handy in Every Home—Easily Prepared and Costs Little.

Mothers, you'll never know what you are missing until you make up this inexpensive, quick-acting cough syrup and try it. Children love its pleasant taste and nothing else will loosen a cough or chest cold and heal the inflamed or swollen throat membranes with such ease and promptness. It's equally as good for grown-ups as for children.

This splendid cough syrup is made by pouring 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), into a pint bottle and filling the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for $2.50—a clear saving of $2.

The moment it touches the inflamed, cold-congested membranes that line the throat and air passages, the healing begins, the phlegm loosens, soreness leaves, cough spasms lessen and soon disappear, altogether, thus ending a cough quicker than you ever thought possible. Hoarseness and ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Excellent for bronchitis, whooping cough, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is famous the world over for its quick healing effect on the membranes.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., 233 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Sage Tea Dandy To Darken Hair

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you will get a fifty-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks are not wanted around; so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night, and you will be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite, and is not intended for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of disease.

Send us five cents for the tract, "Walking by Faith."

The Master's Vineyard

Louisiana.

Haynesville, October 30.—During the first week in October, Brother Oscar Billingsley, of Waldo, Ark., was with us in a short meeting. Two were baptized and one reclaimed. Had it been possible to continue the meeting longer, we feel sure much more good would have been accomplished, as the interest was increasing from night to night. Brother Billingsley has been with us once a month for a year or more, and by his courteous manner and his kind, yet firm, way of presenting the truth has continued to win friends to the cause. We ourselves are waking up more and more to the possibilities of the cause here and are working more faithfully and more steadily at our Father's business. We expect to make the final payment on our house of worship this year. The cause round about Haynesville and throughout North Louisiana continues to grow slowly, but steadily. At Union Grove, seven miles south of us, Brother W. H. Sandy, of Mississippi, held a meeting this summer, which resulted in eight baptisms and strengthened the brethren greatly. They expect to have Brother Billingsley with them once a month during the winter. Yesterday they had an enthusiastic all-day meeting, with all the dinner and all the hospitality of which these North Louisiana people are capable. The afternoon was made sad by the funeral of "Uncle Wash" Adkins, who has long been in the Master's service at Union Grove, and whose seven sons and daughters are faithful to the cause. Brother Ora Hartsell, of Randolph, was at Blackburn in August, with one baptism. He reports the Randolph work in good condition. The Mineral Spring congregation, three and one-half miles northeast of us, continues a faithful little band of workers, having Brother Orin Hartsell with them once a month. Shreveport is busy at work, with hustling, consecrated young Brother Baldwin and his wife as leaders, and about forty or fifty earnest helpers. They have a lot all ready and waiting for the house of worship which they are working so hard to build, and for which they have on hand some funds. Any help given them will yield much fruit, for Shreveport is an unusually good center from which to radiate the truth. Do not forget this. May we continue to have your prayers in this great work for the Father?—Flora Travis.

Belmont, November 1.—I am just home from Boston, Ala., where I was called to moderate for A. D. Dies in a debate with W. D. Killingsworth, a Nazarene Holiness preacher. Brother Dies did a fine piece of work. After the debate closed, I visited my old home, Berry, Ala., and had the pleasure of preaching for the brethren on Lord's-day night. I found Brother McDonald and his corps of teachers just as busy as bees, hard at work and doing hard work. They have made many changes in the school work and

Tobacco Habit BANISHED in 48 to 72 Hours

No craving for tobacco in any form when you begin taking Tobacco Redeemer. Don't try to quit the tobacco habit unaided. It's a losing fight against heavy odds and means a serious shock to the nervous system. Let the tobacco habit quit YOU. It will quit you, if you will just take Tobacco Redeemer, according to directions for two or three days. It is a most marvelously quick and thoroughly reliable remedy for the tobacco habit.

Not a Substitute

Tobacco Redeemer contains no habit-forming drugs of any kind. It is in no sense a substitute for tobacco. After finishing the treatment you have absolutely no desire to use tobacco again or to continue the use of the remedy. It makes not a particle of difference how long you have been using tobacco, how much you use or in what form you use it—whether you smoke cigars, cigarettes, pipe, chew plug or fine cut or use snuff, Tobacco Redeemer will positively banish every trace of desire in from 48 to 72 hours. This we absolutely guarantee in every case or money refunded.

Write today for our free booklet showing the deadly effect of tobacco upon the human system and positive proof that Tobacco Redeemer will quickly free you of the habit. Newell Pharmaceutical Company, Dept. 553 St. Louis, Mo.

Vapo-Cresolene For Whooping Cough, Spasmodic Croup, Asthma, Sore Throat, Coughs, Bronchitis, Colds, Catarrh.

Don't fail to use Cresolene for the distressing and often fatal affection for which it is recommended. It is a simple, sure, positive and drugless treatment. Vapo-Cresolene stops the paroxysms of Whooping Cough and relieves Spasmodic Croup at once. In asthma it shortens the attack and induces comfortable repose. The air carrying the antiseptic vapor inspired with every breath makes breathing easy, soothes the sore throat, and stops the cough, assuring restful nights. Cresolene relieves the bronchial complications of scarlet fever and measles and is a valuable aid in the treatment of diphtheria. Cresolene's best recommendation is its 37 years of successful use. Send postal for descriptive booklet. FOR SALE BY DRUGGISTS. THE YAPI-CRESOLENE CO., 52 Cortlandt Street, New York or Leaning-Atlas Building, Montreal, Canada.

about the school building that are very profitable. It looks now as though Berry has many good things in store for the people who wish to locate there. There is being opened up a great interest in the growing of berries and fruits of all kinds. This will be of great value to the school, as it will enable many to locate and school their children that otherwise could not. On our way, both going and coming, we spent the night in Haleyville, Ala. We put up at the preacher's hotel. Brother and Sister Walker Haley are the proprietors. You will always receive royal treatment there. O that there could be the sunshine of the religion of Christ in every home that is found in the home of Brother Haley!—Frank Baker.

Texas.

Beaumont, November 6.—I closed a good meeting last Thursday night at Mineral Wells, with one restored and two (man and wife) from the "dissidents." I edified and encouraged the little band there as much as I could for the short stay with them. I was called here to preach yesterday and last night and am now being urged to take up the work here; but I do not know yet what I will do about it. I am somewhat afraid of the location from the standpoint of my health. However, I shall consider the matter seriously.—J. C. Estes Dallas, October 31.—I am still in Texas at work. I spent Lord's day in Van Alstyne. There are many good people there, but they know nothing about the true gospel. Texas is a great mission field. I feel myself happy to be in such a large State where the gospel is needed to be preached. Preaching daily in this city makes me think of Tennessee. Dallas is my home now; but remember that when duty calls I usually go, regardless of home or anything else. Brethren, remember me in this great work. My address is 2317 Hall Street.—John Thomas Ramsey (colored).

Sister: Read My Free Offer!

I am a woman.
I know a woman's trials.
I know her need of sympathy and help.

If you, my sister, are unhappy because of ill-health, if you feel unfit for household duties, social pleasures, or daily employment, write and tell me just how you suffer, and ask for my free ten days' trial of a home treatment suited to your needs. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any man. I want to tell you how to cure yourself at home at a cost of about 12 cents a week.

If you suffer from women's peculiar ailments causing pain in the head, back, or bowels, feeling of weight and dragging down sensation, falling or displacement of pelvic organs, causing kidney and bladder weakness or constipation and piles, painful or irregular periods, catarrhal conditions and discharges, extreme nervousness, depressed spirits, melancholy, desire to cry, fear of something evil about to happen, creeping feeling along the spine, palpitation, hot flashes, weariness, sallow complexion with dark circles under the eyes, pain in the left breast or a general feeling that life is not worth living.

I INVITE YOU TO SEND TODAY FOR MY FREE TEN DAYS' TREATMENT

and learn how these ailments can be easily and surely conquered at home without the dangers and expense of an operation. When you are cured, and able to enjoy life again, you can pass the good word along to some other sufferer. My home treatment is for young or old. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain how to overcome green sickness (chlorosis), irregularities, headaches, and lassitude in young women and restore them to plumpness and health. Tell me if you are worried about your daughter. Remember it costs you nothing to give my home treatment a ten days' trial, and does not interfere with daily work. If health is worth asking for, then accept my generous offer and write for the free treatment, including my illustrated booklet, "Women's Own Medical Adviser." I will send all in plain wrappers postpaid. To save time, you can cut out this offer, mark your feelings, and return to me. Send today, as you may not see this offer again. Address,

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

A Safe Remedy for Elimination Troubles.

Many organs take part in assimilation of food, and a number are active in eliminating those portions of the food which are not taken into the blood for the upbuilding of the body. Of the eliminative organs, the liver and the kidneys are of major importance, and are most likely to be overworked and become diseased. When such is the case, various troubles of a digestive and eliminative character occur, and such troubles are so frequent and so common that it is absolutely necessary for the individual to attempt self-treatment, in many cases based upon self-diagnosis. Indeed, medical practice will in most of such cases depend upon the diagnosis of the patient. There is no risk under such circumstances and the very brightest prospects of beneficial results from the using of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy.

This preparation is made from harmless herbs, roots, etc., and has been on the market for over forty years. Its value is attested by an immense number of appreciative users who through these many years have put it to the severest tests with the most satisfactory results.

The experience of multitudes is sometimes worth more than the wisdom even of the brightest physicians. Hence, if you have liver or kidney troubles, you cannot do better than call upon your druggist for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy. Sold in fifty-cent and one-dollar bottles. A free sample will be sent you by the manufacturers if you write to Warner's Safe Remedies Company, Rochester, N. Y.

Notes from West Tennessee.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

In our religious papers I notice that a great deal is being said about preachers—worthy preachers, unworthy preachers, jealous preachers, place-seeking preachers, old preachers and young preachers. From my reading I have learned that there is enough of the kind to go around, and perhaps, then, some to spare. In a certain book I read of a preacher who said: "Yes, making it my aim so to preach the gospel, not where Christ was already named, that I might not build upon another man's foundation; but as it is written, They shall see, to whom no tidings of him came, and they who have not heard shall understand." (Rom. 15: 20, 21.) How many preachers like the one who made the above statement can be found today? I know of preachers who write to old, established congregations soliciting work—wanting to preach for them. I know of preachers who have solicited work from old congregations, while at the same time the congregation had a man employed to preach for it; but he certainly was not the Pauline kind. A preacher was solicited to go to a certain place with a view of giving him regular work. "We want you to locate with and preach for us and three other congregations near by." The preacher answered: "You have Brother — located with you. Why do you want another?" "O, Brother — gives half his time to — County." The preacher: "Why does Brother — have to give half time to another county, with so many congregations so near by?" The conversation ended. "Nuff sed." Most of the preachers, like other folks, are human beings, and, therefore, make mistakes, some fatal. Some congregations, too, make mistakes in the selection of a preacher. When an old congregation calls a boy preacher to preach for it regularly, a great mistake is made. It generally gives the boy the "big head" and the congregation dries up. Too many of the congregations want first principles preached. If a man begins to teach them their duty and points out certain practices of its members that are forbidden by the word of God, he loses his job. "I won't bear him any more." Another great mistake that the congregations are making is the lack of discipline. Not many congregations take any notice of the conduct of its members. A brother said to me not long ago concerning a certain congregation: "It has members who swear, but they get mad if you say anything to them about it. Others dance, play cards, get drunk, and do anything they want to; but if you say anything to them about

A Visit to Mars' Hill.

BY J. R. BRADLEY.

I left Mars' Hill, Ala., in 1880, immediately after the school term of that year, and had not seen the place since till last Saturday—November 4, 1916. O, how much changed is everything! Some changes, I hope, are for the better; but others, if not for the worse, are such as to make me feel so sad! Brother Larimore's residence looks somewhat the same, though very lonely. No one occupies the building now. No large, eighteen-hundred-pound bell, nor even the belfry, can be seen there now, from which at one time peals, almost as of thunder, would awaken a happy band of young preachers and other students to the duties of a newborn day. I preached (or tried) three times—Saturday night, Sunday, and Sunday night—to fair audiences in a splendid house of worship which stands on the very spot where the Bible Hall stood, in which we "boys" read, studied, and debated the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. I certainly felt, very sensibly, that schoolboy embarrassment which I used to have to suffer in making speeches and in trying to preach in the presence of Brother Larimore. I did certainly wish for him there to take my place, if he would, but glad that he was not present, if I had to try to preach. I could not help, even while in the pulpit, thinking of not only Brother Larimore, but Sister Larimore also, and her sweet and melodious voice in singing the praises of God. Precious to us all was the "Mother of Mars' Hill!"

Brother Herschel Larimore, wife, and daughter, and Brother Virgil Larimore and wife, all of Florence, were out at Mars' Hill to hear me. I did not get to see Dedie (Sister George), as she was over on the farm, some distance away. Granville and Ettie live in other countries, and Toppie (Theophilus) we will never meet again till the judgment. I think of many others of whom I would like to speak, and I would like, also, to say more about anything and everything about Mars' Hill; but my letter is growing too long. I spent Saturday night and Sunday in the pleasant home of Elder W. H. Gresham, brother-in-law of Brother Larimore. I was very royally entertained, indeed. Brother Gresham's baby child, Miss Esther, is all of his children now with him. Miss Maggie, Brother Gresham's sister, is now spending a time there. On Sunday night, after preaching, I was carried out to Florence, a distance of five miles, and spent the night at the home of Brother E. G. Prosser, of the Richardson Lumber Company. Brother W. M. Richardson (president of the

Stop! Calomel Is Quicksilver

It's Mercury! Attacks the Bones, Salivates and Makes You Sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel, when fifty cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and cannot salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury, and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick, and nauseated to-morrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead, and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue, or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you do not find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel, your money is waiting for you.

If we cannot find God in your house and mine, upon the roadside or the margin of the sea; in the bursting seed or opening flower; in the day duty or the night musing, I do not think we should discern him any more upon the grass of Eden or beneath the moonlight of Gethsemane.—J. Martineau.

MONEY IN PIGEONS

Make Your Back Yard Profitable

THE demand for squabs in the Northern, Eastern and Southern markets has never been supplied, because pigeon raising as a business is comparatively new. Buy a half dozen pair of select birds, fence in a small portion of your back yard and watch them go to work. Success is easy. They raise from eight to fifteen pairs of squabs a year. Your squabs and fancy birds will bring handsome returns. You will actually make money in a hitherto-useless part of your back yard. Pigeon raising is not a fad or fancy. It is a profitable business. Let us start you right. Our breeders are the best, and raised from prize winning parents. We will furnish you with the birds and teach you how to raise them, and you will reap a handsome profit with a very little outlay. Thousands are taking advantage of this same opportunity. Write to-day for our literature on pigeon raising as a money making proposition, or better still, write us to send you a few pair of Belgian Carneaux at $3.00 per pair, White Swiss Mondaines at $5.00 per pair, White Kings at $3.50 per pair, or White Maltese at $4.00 per pair. Our birds are all guaranteed. Your money back if after two months you are not satisfied with their work. Better prices on larger orders. Write to-day and get the pick of the flock.

Death of W. T. Goalen.

BY J. T. CLARK.

While attending the reunion of the Orphans' Home at Columbia, Tenn., on October 31, I was summoned by long-distance telephone to Elkmont, Ala., to attend the funeral of Brother W. T. Goalen, who died at that place at five o'clock that morning, of typhoid fever.

Brother Goalen was born and reared in Liverpool, England, where his father and sister are supposed to reside at present. He has a brother in the English Army. He had traveled a great deal, both by land and by sea. Early in life he became a locomotive engineer, and after coming to America served a number of years on the New York Central lines. About eight years ago his wife and only child died in the North. Soon after their death he was injured by a fall from his engine in the switch yards in Buffalo, N. Y., as a result of which he quit the road.

Brother Goalen was reared under Episcopalian influence and had been a strict adherent of the same. Several years ago he went with a friend to hear Brother Jones, of Canada, preach. As a result, he was put to studying and became convinced that there was something radically wrong with his theology. According to his own statement, he was thoroughly convinced, but it took him about three years to give up the religion of his fathers. Then he traveled three hundred miles to be baptized. Ever a careful student, he pursued his studies with a greater zeal and soon became an able proclaimer of the gospel. He had labored at points in the West, but for several years had been doing mission work in Alabama. Last July he held a meeting at Pettusville, Ala., and succeeded in establishing a congregation under most bitter denominational persecution. He was engaged in helping to get out the lumber with which to erect their house of worship when he was stricken. I had the pleasure to have Brother Goalen with me for a few days last summer in a tent meeting at Hayes Mill, Ala. He was a co-laborer whom any man might rejoice to have with him. Being thoroughly familiar with the Holy Scriptures, his faith, zeal, and courage knew no bounds, save those set by God's word.

Brother Goalen died, after a three-weeks' illness, at the home of Brother and Sister Robert Morris, whose home had been his home and who had been as father and mother, brother and sister, to him, indeed.

Brother Petzey Ezell, Brother G. M. Pullias, and the writer conducted the funeral exercises in the presence of a large crowd of sorrowing friends and brethren. Though in a foreign land

OLD ENGLISH RECIPE FOR CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES.

If you know of some one who is troubled with Catarrhal Deafness, head noises or ordinary catarrh cut out this formula and hand it to them and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. In England scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily requires a constitutional treatment.

Sprays, Inhalers and nose-douches are liable to irritate the delicate air passages and force the disease into the middle ear which frequently means total deafness, or else the disease is driven down the air passages towards the lungs which is equally as dangerous. The following formula which is used extensively in the damp English climate is a constitutional treatment and should prove especially efficacious to sufferers here who live under more favorable climatic conditions.

Secure from your Druggist 1 ounce of Parmit (Double strength). Take it in home and add to it 1 pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and hearing improve as the inflammation in the eustachian tubes is reduced. Parmit is used in this way as it acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system and has a slight tonic action that facilitates the recovery of the patient. The preparation is easy to make, costs little and is pleasant to take. Every person who has catarrh should give this treatment a trial.

and in the midst of people who were absolute strangers until just a few months ago, yet I do not think I ever saw any man more genuinely wept over than was he. To-day he rests from his labor, and the works of a godly, consecrated life follow after him.

For Weakness and Loss of Appetite.

The old standard general strengthening tonic, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic, drives out malaria and builds up the system. A true tonic and sure appetizer. For adults and children. Fifty cents.

Are You Out of Sorts.

Impatient, melancholy, pessimistic, down on the world? If so, your liver is out of shape. Healthy people look at the world through rosy glasses. Buy a bottle of Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Invigorator—price, only fifty cents—and watch your spirits pick up. It cleanses and invigorates your sluggish liver and puts you on your feet again. No arsenic and no calomel. Purely a vegetable compound.

One mistake many women make in buying coffee

You know how hard it is to get a coffee which really satisfies you. You know how seldom you can find a coffee which has the same fine taste and strength every morning! It can be done. You can do it if, when you buy coffee, you are careful not to make the mistakes so many women make. Read the experiences below—you yourself have undoubtedly had one or both of them.

Beware of loose coffee

Are you buying coffee which you get loose, coffee which hasn't been protected by a sealed package?

Are you afraid that it isn't clear? Has it lost its aroma? Are you often disappointed in its strength?

It isn't the grocer's fault. With loose coffee he can't be sure that it is the same kind he got before. You always run the risk of getting different coffee every time you buy.

And even if the coffee itself were the same, it can't be kept "loose" without losing its strength and flavor.

In packages—protected!

You can do away with every one of these disappointments by ordering the coffee which over one million other families drink.

Arbuckles' Coffee is such good coffee that way back in the sixties, when all other coffees on the market were loose and unprotected, Arbuckle Bros. protected theirs in sealed packages. This sealed package keeps the coffee's strength, and guards it from moisture and store odors. Most important of all, it makes it easy for you to be sure that you are getting the same good coffee every time you buy.

The second mistake women make

Old coffee with new names

Are you continually being offered the same old coffee under new names? Under all sorts of new blends?

Did you ever stop to think of the hundreds of coffees which come and go on the market? And that all of these have tried to turn women away from Arbuckles' Coffee?

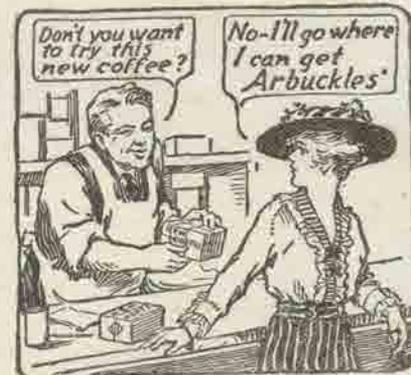

Arbuckles' is the coffee which has gone right out, always under its own name, never disguised, and held its users simply on the wonderful value it gave. You know what good value a coffee must be to do this against the competition of all the other coffees in America!

Used in a million homes

Settle, for all time, your coffee problem, by giving your family the only coffee which over a million families have proved to have the real coffee taste they want.

When you get Arbuckles' Coffee you get an entirely different coffee. No other coffee goes through the same process—in no other coffee can you get the same good flavor. The result of the care Arbuckle Brothers take in selecting it, in roasting and in packaging it, gives you an entirely different coffee from any other on the market.

Order it from your grocer today. He has it, in either the Whole Bean or the new Ground. Try it. See why it is by far the most popular coffee in America. Arbuckle Brothers, 71-79 Water St., New York.

If You Value Your Health

Read Every Word of This Remarkable Story

It is told by one who has himself experienced the regeneration in health which he encourages you to seek by the self-same means.

THE STORY OF A GREAT DISCOVERY.

The hardships of a traveling salesman's life had wrecked my health. My family physician diagnosed my case as chronic gastritis, brought on by disease of the liver and complicated by kidney trouble. I consulted specialists who confirmed his diagnosis. Months passed, I grew worse and was finally compelled to give up my work.

By chance I heard of some wonderful cures which had resulted from drinking the water of a little spring in the Mineral Belt of South Carolina, a picture of which spring appears on this page. In desperation I tried it. On the second day I thought that I could notice some improvement; at the end of the first week my appetite and digestion had returned and I was much stronger; at the end of the third week I felt that I was completely cured. That was six years ago and I still enjoy perfect health.

Knowing that it had restored my health and believing that it had saved my life, I bought the Spring.

I then determined to see whether the water would cure others as it had cured me. I shipped ten gallons absolutely free of charge to each of one thousand sufferers from chronic diseases. Only four reported no benefit from the use of the ten gallons. The other nine hundred and ninety-six reported decided benefit or complete cures. Many claimed that the water had saved their lives.

I realized that I had discovered one of the world's greatest mineral springs, and I decided to devote my life to it but how could I make the world listen; how could I make them believe my story? The precious water was running to waste while thousands were suffering. I said, I will make them believe me by showing my faith in them and in the curative power of the Spring. I will tell them that the water shall cost them nothing if it fails to benefit.

The world listened!

Some wrote for proof and I sent them the letters which I had received from their fellowmen. Others accepted my offer without question. Thousands have written me reporting relief and permanent cure of a great variety of chronic diseases.

But some of the water still ran to waste for lack of belief. I determined that every drop should be used to relieve the sufferings of humanity. To this end I requested the advertising manager of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate to come to see me. At my desk I opened my mail and showed him the letters from men and women from all parts of the country who had suffered and who had found relief. I gave him my letter files and induced him to spend several hours reading my past correspondence with those who were using the water. I showed him the chemical analysis and letters from physicians explaining the curative properties of the water.

He believed, and as a result he has written this announcement for me.

WILL YOU BELIEVE?

I do not ask your implicit faith: only enough to try the water for three weeks as I did. I estimate that I drank about ten gallons and I, therefore, offer gladly to ship you two five gallon demijohns on my guarantee that if you find that it does not benefit you I will promptly refund the price, which is only $2.00. You must promise to drink the water in accordance with the instructions which I will send you and return the empty demijohns. I make you the sole judge as to whether the water has benefited you, and as the Advertising Manager of this paper has kindly consented to guarantee my guarantee to refund your money, if you are not benefited, I hope you will feel perfectly free to accept my offer.

This offer is extended to all who suffer with any chronic disease, except cancer and consumption, but I especially recommend the water for the treatment of stomach, liver, kidney and bladder diseases and for rheumatism, gout, uric acid poisoning, gall stones, diabetes, nervous headache and general debility resulting from impure or impoverished blood. These are the diseases most frequently mentioned in the letters which I have received but my offer is open to anyone who suffers from any chronic ailment.

Yours sincerely,

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir, As you are well aware, in 1909 I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had tried on milk, soft eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered 10 gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months from date I began drinking it gained 25 lbs., was strong and perfectly well and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely nature's remedy.

Shivar Spring, Shelton, S. C.: Gentlemen—I have suffered for years with nervous indigestion and kidney troubles. Derived more benefit from the Shivar Spring Water than from months at Hot Springs, Ark., and numerous other Springs. I consider it the very best water extant.

AUGUSTUS DUPONT.

Lexington, Va., Nov. 24, 1911.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir—I suffered with intestinal indigestion and the Shivar Spring Water has cured me. I would gladly recommend it to all suffering with indigestion, kidney and liver trouble. My father had kidney trouble last fall and he thought Shivar Spring Water saved his life. Respectfully,

MRS. HARVEY DIXON.

Atlanta, Ga., July 27, 1911.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir—I ordered 10 gallons Shivar Spring Water especially for my toothache who was suffering with its stomach and bowels. This water cured her disorders entirely and she is healed again. I stopped all medicines and gave her only the water. I was also run down from the heat and fatigue, and the water has cured me also. Thanking you, Very respectfully,

MRS. W. C. McGILL.

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 11, 1912.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir—Until a few weeks ago my wife was a chronic sufferer from gall stones. She was stricken critically (I had nothing but morphine seemed to relieve her pain by rendering her unconscious. Rev. A. J. Foster pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church of Columbia, S. C., advised me to take her immediately to Shivar Spring. On consulting my physician he agreed that it would be best to do so without delay. In about three days after arriving at the Spring, she was apparently relieved and had regained her appetite. She has suffered no ill effect of the treatment since. Please publish this for the benefit of sufferers.

P. S.—I suffered for 8 years with kidney trouble and inflammation of the bladder. After using this water only a few days, I am entirely relieved and suffer no more effect of the trouble whatever.

word "pais," employed in this passage, indicates "from hisping infancy." There is all the authority one needs for the "infant class." But when Timothy is a grown man, he is still urged both to study and to teach. "Give diligence [or "study" in the Authorized Version] to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth." "Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine." The picture of the ideal congregation doing its full duty in teaching and studying and learning the word of God should be nothing less than a picture of grandparents, parents, young men, young women, small boys, small girls, and hisping infants. All the generations should be represented in Bible study and in Bible classes.

A Troubled Sister's Question.

A troubled sister writes: "Is it right to meet every Sunday and be a teacher in the Sunday school, if living at a place where there is a church that uses the organ in worship and will take the Lord's Supper only once a month, when they have preaching service? I am bothered about this, as I have always, before coming here, worshiped with the church that did not use the organ and observed the Lord's Supper. I have tried to get this church to remember Jesus by taking the Supper, but they will not. There are only about two dozen who meet, although more belong. The elders are absent most of the time. I know of no church anywhere near here that worships the right way. Please tell me what is right under these circumstances."

The fact that this church does not observe the Lord's Supper every first day of the week and has added instrumental music to its worship indicates clearly that it is not after the New Testament pattern. I could not consistently teach a Bible class under such circumstances, unless there was a strong prospect of leading them into God's plan of worship. The sister seems to have made this effort and failed. Her next effort should be to induce some of the members to meet at her house or in some other convenient place to worship God aright. It would also be a good plan to send for a gospel preacher able to correct the errors of that church or to establish one after the New Testament order.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

A Vital Rule Largely Overlooked.

BY E. C. FUQUA.

In the West many people are bothering themselves over the claims of Mormons and divine healers regarding the question of present-day miracles, especially those connected with new revelation and physical healings. They think that, as God revealed in a supernatural way new truths in Bible times, he should be expected to do so to-day and forever, as God never changes; and that, for the same reasons, we should expect miraculous healings of all our physical ills to-day. They make the specious claims that we are not "apostolic," are not conformed to the New Testament church, unless we have the benefit of these supernatural demonstrations to-day; and they make a profound impression upon people who have never given the subject a careful study, and these people are legion.

Especially is this teaching pressed with force after we preach in a community and show the people that God intended the New Testament church to be the standard institution as measuring both the faith and practice of all his disciples. These teachers above mentioned follow us frequently, taking advantage of the people and their newly created desire to be "apostolic," and begin their doctrinal confusions by contrasting (?) our late teaching with that in the New Testament church—that is, by showing that in the New Testament church there were persons who could and who did heal the sick by miracle, and the congregations variously scattered did receive new revelations from God, and, therefore, to be a New Testament church, we must have these powers to-day.

But does this follow? Indeed not, for the simple reason that these powers never were parts of the New Testament church—not even in New Testament times. Then there is a rule which all close students of the Bible and of nature have observed, which rule precludes the necessity—and, therefore, denies the existence—of these miraculous powers; for that which is not necessary in the affairs of men is never employed by man's Creator. This rule is simply this: God never miraculously reveals a truth to man, nor provides bread for man, where man is in possession of the means of obtaining these.

Now, is there within the reach of man sufficient means for daily bread? There is. Therefore, God does not miraculously rain bread from heaven; but having provided man with the means of procuring bread, he leaves man to adjust himself to the conditions.

Is there within the reach of man a means of knowing the truth, the gospel of Christ? There is. Therefore, God does not miraculously speak from heaven to men, telling them what to do and what not to do; he leaves men to adjust themselves to the conditions surrounding them—to hear and obey the truth already possessed.

Is there within man's reach means for recovering the sick and alleviating the needs of the body? There is. Therefore, those who look for such intervention as so-called "divine healing" and other miraculous cures look in vain. These things do not and will not come to men in the flesh, no matter who claims they do come.

An illustration of this principle may be seen in the matter of clearing Jewish prejudice with reference to Gentile converts to Christianity. Peter was miraculously called to Cesarea to baptize the first Gentiles, and a miraculous gift was bestowed upon the Gentiles in the presence of the "six brethren" who accompanied Peter. But when the church at Jerusalem desired to know if this thing were really from God, no revelation was given it, for the simple reason that the Jerusalem church had ample means of ascertaining whether or not such a miracle had been performed at Cesarea.

When Paul was converted, a mighty miracle was performed in the presence of witnesses, and again in sending Ananias to baptize him there was a like display; but when the general disciples, at Jerusalem and elsewhere, desired to know the genuineness of the report, no revelation was given them, no miracle was performed, because the means was within reach with which to know whether or not such a miracle had originally been performed.

In both of these cases creditable witnesses could supply whatever information was needed by the churches; hence there was no divine demonstration permitted. Such is the fact, also, with reference to all the many instances in the New Testament where information was needed concerning certain transactions. Notable among these other cases is that of the council at Jerusalem (Acts 15), where the church and elders were convened to settle the question of the full admission of the Gentiles into the benefits of Christianity. Instead of God manifesting his mind on the subject of whether the Gentiles had been accepted, by supernatural demonstration, he left the matter wholly to the testimony of Peter, Paul, and others, for the simple reason that ample means was within reach of the Jerusalem council for knowing of the miracles that he had originally performed in attestation of his acceptance of the Gentiles.

This principle carries throughout the New Testament: God performs miracles only where there is no other means of teaching. He first revealed Christ to John the Baptist by miraculously speaking from heaven; but now we learn of Christ through the testimony of John and others who knew him, and have no other means of knowing that there is a Christ. The miracles wrought in attestation of the teaching of the apostles in New Testament times were necessary to prove to men that the teaching was from God; now we receive no miraculous attestation of this truth, but are dependent upon the testimony of those who were witnesses of the original attestations.

It is not hard to see that this method, aside from being on God's part economical, keeps us in touch with the original displays of supernatural power and the original source of the gospel "once for all delivered" to men, before any possible contamination could intermix with the vital truth. That was God's intention. It is, therefore, God's intention now that we accept, not what may be offered us as "modern revelation," but what was originally taught under the miraculous approval of God. That keeps the fountain of truth pure, and the stream likewise pure by sending all to drink at the fountain source. Keep this truth in mind and you will never become confused by so-called "modern revelations."

Two Meetings.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Beginning on the second Lord's day in September, Brother T. Q. Martin, of Winchester, Ky., began a meeting with the church at Franklin, Tenn., which continued for two weeks. It was a great pleasure to me to be thus associated with a man whom I have known for quite thirty years, and whom I love as though he were my brother in the flesh. T. Q. Martin and I first met in his home town, Winchester, Ky., during a meeting I was conducting for Fairfax Street Church. A friendship sprang up between us that has grown with the years and ripened into a brotherly love whose ties are as strong as the strength of hearts to love. I saw in this man of God a spirit of humility and a love for the truth that drew me to him; and though years have come and years have gone, my impressions then made have never changed. There is none of the ego about T. Q. Martin, and I believe he would willingly die for the truth. As an evangelist, he is a power. He knows the truth and is not afraid to preach it anywhere. He knows no such word as "compromise" when it comes to handling God's word. Sin, either in high or low places, receives the same scathing rebuke, and sectarianism receives no quarter at his hands. He is not "abusive" toward either, but plain and unequivocal in combating both. He is naturally of a very sympathetic nature, but his heart was very tender when he came to us, having so recently waded through the deep waters of affliction. His sainted mother and devoted wife had both recently gone home to God, and our dear brother's heart was bleeding. But through his tears of deepest sorrow he failed not to oppose sin and error of every form. The attendance at every service was large, and, besides the fifteen souls baptized into Christ, much and lasting good was accomplished. Brother Martin won a lasting place in the hearts of the church at Franklin.

The writer began a meeting with the church at Florence, Ala., on October 16, continuing nearly three weeks. This is the home of Brother I. C. Hoskins, whom I have known for a number of years, but, unfortunately for me, never had the pleasure of being associated with to any extent. My better acquaintance and labor with this man of God will always be a bright spot in my memory. I feel that I am a better man for having been with I. C. Hoskins. He is gentle, yet firm and uncompromising with sin and error, no matter by whom taught and practiced. The presence and life of such a man in any community is a great blessing to it. The church at Florence is certainly fortunate in having such a teacher and man for its evangelist. He and his devoted wife are among the most consecrated Christians I have ever known, and the church in Florence appreciates them very much. Such work as this man and his wife are doing in that city and surrounding country will continue to bear the fruits of righteousness long after they shall have passed to their reward. Brother Hoskins is an able evangelist, as well as a successful church worker. He knows how to deal with people both in and out of the church, and in his work in Florence he has a band of noble men and women to cooperate with him. He and his good wife are blessed in having with them Sister Hoskins' mother, the widow of the lamented I. B. Grubbs. They have with them also two bright young ladies, the Misses Grubbs, nieces of Sister Hoskins. It is a pleasant and happy home. The writer feels very much in love with the church in Florence, which seemed to appreciate his efforts in preaching the gospel. There were twenty additions to the congregation, fourteen of whom were baptized during the meeting. Our young brother, Thomas A. Williams, of Nashville, led the singing during the meeting, and it was well done. He understands music, has a splendid voice, and has no cranky ideas and notions to annoy the church or preacher. Any church may consider itself fortunate to get Thomas Williams to assist in its song service. He and I are good yokefellows, and I learned to love him very much. I have known him all of his life, but did not know he was such a fine fellow until this meeting. He gained six pounds during the meeting, and you can guess who suffered on that account.

The Issue With Protestants.

BY WILLIAM RHODES.

In the effort to complete the Protestant reformations we have these issues to meet as reformers and Christian soldiers. While they did a great work for truth, for humanity, and for God, in that they made a successful rebellion against Rome, her despotism and false teaching, and restored the Bible and the personal right to own, read, and understand it and to worship as it taught without the dictation of Rome (and this was not heresy, but a divine right), yet they only partly restored divine truth. Rome in the great apostasy has rejected the Bible as "the power of God unto salvation" and as a rule of faith and practice to the saved, and for "the power of God unto salvation" substituted the direct power of the Spirit of God on the human heart, and for a rule of faith and practice substituted the wisdom and authority of the church of Rome. Protestant reformers, by making human creeds and disciplines, approved of this right to substitute human wisdom and authority for the divine, and under that claim each great reformer assumed the right to make for himself and his followers their own creed or confession of faith. This divided Protestantism into a multitude of factions and parties, thus giving us Protestant denominationalism, the great mistake being, in imitation of Rome, to assume the right to substitute human wisdom and authority for God's wisdom and authority. Thus they became "lords over God's heritage" and made a human government for the church, a divine institution, repudiating the Bible as a divine, perfect, and all-sufficient rule of faith and practice. Peter said: "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue," (2 Pet. 1: 3.) Hence they denied the truthfulness of inspiration.

This restoration effort having its origin in the first decade of the nineteenth century, and with which we are identified as Christian soldiers, differed from all preceding reformations in that it utterly denied all human rights to make creeds or confessions of faith for the government of the saints, personally or collectively, as a church, accepting Paul's statement as literally true, that the holy scriptures are able to make men "wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus," and that all scripture given by inspiration of God "is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17.)

This makes the "living oracles," God's inspiration, the perfect and only safe rule of faith and practice, as well as the divine "bond" of Christian unity and harmony. Then we accept the gospel as "the power of God unto salvation to every one who believeth" (Rom. 1: 16), and believe "the word of God" is "the sword of the Spirit" (Eph. 6: 17), and that "the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword" (Heb. 4: 12), and believe Peter's statement that we are "born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever" (1 Pet. 1: 23), and with David believe that "the law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul" (Ps. 19: 7), and that "the entrance of thy words giveth light" (Ps. 119: 130), and, hence, we believe that God put his convicting, converting, and saving power in his word, the gospel, and that, therefore, the Protestant world received the doctrine of direct power of the Spirit in conversion and sanctification from Rome, and should return it to them, where it belongs, as part of the apostasy of Rome.

Then this restoration effort has these three propositions as parts of the battle ground: (1) The converting power of divine truth; (2) the word of God as a complete and only rule of faith and practice; (3) the same word as the divine bond of Christian union.

These three sections of the issue with Protestantism imply and involve a fourth section—namely: Are the statements of that book, the Bible, absolutely reliable, the veritable word of God? Our reason for believing that this is one of the cardinal issues is the fact that in our disputes we appeal to and quote that Book, and it utterly fails to convince or satisfy them. In our debates with infidels we are compelled to get proof of the divinity of the Bible outside of its pages because they lack faith in its words. Is not Protestantism infected with the same malady, and is this not evidence that Rome did succeed in her efforts to destroy confidence in the Bible and that Protestants have only partly restored that confidence? And does this not logically and historically account for their making human creeds and disciplines, finding "non-essentials" in the Bible, substituting sprinkling for a burial in baptism, creating infant church membership without faith or obedience and establishing denominational organizations unknown to that Book? The Book is supreme authority with them where it does not antagonize their ecclesiasticism; but where it does so, it is of doubtful interpretation or nonessential. Therefore, to restore again the apostolic churches of Christ involves the fight of faith in the word of God with Protestantism as much so as with infidels. This makes our fourth issue.

Our fifth issue is in the evidence of being saved or pardoned. They deny the word of God's being full and satisfactory proof of his acceptance and affirm that feelings are the evidence and test of our acceptance with God, and no appeal to the word of God is so comforting to them. It may consist in ecstatic feelings, visions of some divine being, or any unusual manifestation. This implies full faith in the flesh and human consciousness, but a great lack of faith in God and his word, and is in bold contrast with God's authority for pardon, which is: "that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." (Acts 10: 34, 35.) If a man fears God and works righteousness and is not saved, or fails to do so and is saved, in either case the record is untrue. This demands a universal law of pardon, or salvation, which Paul calls "the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith." (Rom. 16: 26.) Complying with this law, men have the veracity of God, of whom Paul said, "It is impossible for God to lie" (Heb. 6: 18), for their salvation; but failing, they do as he said—"change the truth of God into a lie, and worship and serve the creature more than the Creator" (Rom. 1: 25). To prefer "creature" evidence instead of the Creator's is clearly worshipping "the creature more than the Creator." Both positions cannot be true. There is no middle ground. This is the fifth issue with Protestantism.

The doctrine of direct power of the Spirit in conversion is approved and taught by all Protestantism and is very popular because it saves work or anxiety to learn the law of pardon, or "What must I do to be saved?" asked by the Philippian jailer, and throws the entire responsibility on God, who they say does the converting. This is their teaching and logic: Man is lost and cannot save himself. "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." (John 6: 44.) Men are "dead in trespasses and in sins." What can dead men do to save themselves? God "is the Savior of all men, especially of those that believe." (1 Tim. 4: 10.) God needs no help to save humanity, and salvation is all of God and his grace. If men saved themselves, the glory and honor would be theirs. This is the logical basis of the Calvinistic doctrines of election and reprobation; that God did from all eternity foreknow and foreordain part of humanity, called the "elect," to be saved, and the other part to be lost, and neither part can be either increased or decreased by any human effort. Hence neither faith nor obedience are conditions of God's acceptance. This is pure fatalism, and is destructive of man's responsibility to God, eliminating all motives and encouragement to resist evil, and do that which is right, true, and divine, and sinks the nobility of true manhood and true womanhood to the common level of the lower animals. Yet this fatalistic theory is believed and taught by countless myriads, and the restoration of "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints" demands our careful attention to this delusion, which is the sixth issue with Protestants.

Another evidence of Protestant preference of the human to the divine will is the adoption of titles by men and rejection of those given by inspiration of God to his people. Human titles divide, honor men and human wisdom, and indicate weak faith in God and his word and discourage the hope of Christian union. But as Protestants use human creeds and disciplines to govern their people and keep up division, it is consistent and harmonious to use human names for human organizations; but to say the "Methodist Church of Christ" or the "Presbyterian Church of Christ" is to affirm that the Lord has a Methodist and Presbyterian Church of Christ, and, if so, twelve or fifteen of each kind. This makes the Lord sanction division; and if so, we may abandon all efforts and hope of Christian union forever. Men have these so-called "churches;" but if the Lord has any such churches, our record is very defective. It only uses the word "church" for a single worshiping assembly or for the aggregate of the servants of Christ. Then it is the "church;" and so to call these factions "churches of Christ" is to violate the command of God which says, "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God" (1 Pet. 4: 11), and to make a false impression of Christ, his church, and his word. A restoration of the apostolic churches must correct all this folly, delusion, and false teaching. This is the seventh issue with Protestants, and gives some faint conception of the magnitude of the work which this restoration effort has to do to be worthy of the exalted position to which God in his providence has called us. There is in it the interest of humanity, the salvation of lost souls, purifying "the churches of Christ," the world's only hope of Christian unity and harmony and glory of God. To be worthy of this work and position, we must do it now, or the opportunity is forever gone.

"The Conclusion of the Whole Matter."

BY W. S. LONG, JR.

Much has been said and written of late about gospel preachers and their place in the world. How they should live daily, their relation to the business and political world, how they are to earn a living, and whether they should devote their whole time to preaching—these are questions of grave importance. The Bible is clear on these questions, and by following it no controversy will arise.

In 1 Cor. 9: 9 we are told plainly that "the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel"—not live by farming or some other business, but by the gospel. The examples of the apostles teach, also, that whenever it was possible they gave themselves wholly to preaching. Paul describes Timothy as a warrior and says that he (the preacher) is not to entangle himself with the affairs of this life. He further taught that if those who were devoting their lives to the preaching of the gospel failed at times to be supported, they should turn aside to secular work to supplement their living; but whenever this was not necessary they were to devote their whole time to preaching. This Paul did, and I am sure this is the teaching of the New Testament.

Now, I am a friend to all my brethren, and I feel a deep sympathy for every godly gospel preacher and have implicit confidence in them. I do not believe there is a preacher of the church of Christ on the globe but that is perfectly willing to go to the sawmill, factory, farm, or any other business, if it is God's will for him to do so. But he knows, and we all know, that, should he do so, many precious souls would die in darkness without the gospel and many needed places would remain in the shadow of superstition. Having had twenty years' experience, I know what I am talking about. I taught school for several years; and when called upon to come and hold a meeting, I had to say: "I can't come, for I am tied down to this school." I then went to work in a store, and many long-distance calls came, saying: "We need a meeting, and you must come." Again I had to say: "I can't come; for I am working under a contract for another man, and there is no one to leave in my place."

A short time ago a letter came to me urging me to come for a meeting, and saying: "If you can't come, send us a preacher." I asked one preacher to go, and he said he was working for a printing company and could not get off. I asked another, and he said he was teaching school and could not go. I can get a place in some business house to-morrow, but the firm who hires me will expect me to give my time to the work and not be off part of the time preaching.

The Bible teaches that preaching the gospel is like a man going to the harvest field. It is not a life of idleness, but a work engaging the whole time, mind, soul, body, and heart. Preaching the gospel is "useful employment," and the man who is so engaged has the most useful employment in the wide world. He has his hands full, and does not have to do something else to be usefully employed.

There are men who follow another profession and do some preaching on Sundays, but they will agree with me that if they should give all of their time to preaching they could do much more good. I am now in the home of a brother who is a fine workman and could get a good paying position to-day; but if he does, it would debar him from many meetings; and if a call should come the next day to hold a meeting, he could not go, for his word is out to work, and the man who gave him employment expects him to be true to his contract. Is that right? Who can say it is?

One other thing should be considered. The Holy Spirit told Paul what to say when he arose to preach and what to write when he took up his pen. He could preach a perfect sermon without taking the book in hand. Not so with us. They were commanded, "Take no thought." But to the contrary: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." "Till I come, apply thyself to reading, to exhortation, to teaching. Be wholly employed in them, that your proficiency may be evident to all." ("Living Oracles.")

Now, the conclusion is: Let every Christian give to the spread of the gospel according to his ability, including all the preachers (and not one Christian out of a thousand is doing that). Then those who are preaching will not need to stop one day to do other things, but can keep telling the "word of life" every day and every night.

A Word to Preachers, Elders, and Teachers.

BY C. G. VINCENT.

It is the duty of preachers, elders, and teachers to teach and urge missions upon the conscience of the church everywhere. That it is the duty of such persons and workers to lead the churches in this great work cannot be gainsaid. This must be conceded by all. But that I may call your attention to this duty, I am going to ask you a few important questions.

Do you, as preachers, elders, and teachers, feel any responsibility toward the heathen nations? In view of the Lord's teaching, can you oppose the work? In view of the apostles' teaching and practice, can you object to it? Can you afford not to do it? Listen: "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good [preaching the gospel to the heathen is doing good], and doeth it not, to him it is sin." Do you oppose the work or do you simply neglect it? In either case, are you doing right? Can you afford to go through life and stand before God in the last day conscious of having neglected such work? Do you know that not a single scriptural reason can be offered against the work? Do you know that every "reason" which is advanced against this work may be advanced against the "home" work? Jesus commanded his disciples to "go" into all the world. You are his disciples. How far are you responsible for the salvation of souls? Is it not just as far as it is possible for you to take or to send the gospel to the lost? Is it not possible for you to send the gospel to the heathen? You, perhaps, cannot go to them, but some of your brethren are going and some have gone; are you doing your part for them? Do you realize that your responsibility in this matter is real, not imaginary? Do you know that in the sight of God and man it is not enough for you to be mere well-wishers of the foreign work and workers? In the last day, when God asks you why you did not have a part in proclaiming the gospel of his Son to the whole world, what will your answer be? O, the task is tremendous, the work great, and the responsibility intense! Will you help?

Preachers, elders, teachers, do you know the command to "go" is just as binding on you as "be baptized" is on the sinner? Do you know that the missionary spirit is the oxygen that will keep the work alive in your local church? Do you know that you are hindering the work in the local church by not teaching and urging missions upon the church? Do you know that the churches having fellowship in the foreign work are doing more at home than the non-missionary churches? Are you having trouble with the society element in your local congregation? Then teach your church the truth on the subject of world-wide missions and lead the church to do something for the loyal missionaries on the field. It is well-nigh impossible for you to silence the element in question by mere arguments, however logical your arguments may be! Do the work aright. That is argument enough. They can say nothing against your attitude toward missions. If you "say, and do not," you put a club into their hands. Do you wish to be loyal to Christ and his church? Then teach and practice what he and his primitive church taught and practiced. Do you know that the missionary spirit increases the spiritual life of the local church and helps to destroy selfishness? In the light of this truth, let not the preachers feel that their allowance will decrease, and let not the elders and others think that they cannot "pay the preacher." Remember that strong missionary spirit strengthens the church for every good work. Do you know that the antimissionary and "omissionary" churches are growing weaker all the time? Do you not understand that the chief business of the church is to "go" and "preach?" Is it not her first duty and work? The spirit of missions is the fundamental idea of the religion of Christ? Do you not know that if you oppose or neglect this work you involve yourselves in peril?

What will you do for the cause of foreign missions?

Some Facts About the Work in India.

BY W. HUME M'HENRY.

It has several times been suggested that we contribute something in particular about the work in India and how it is conducted. We have thought for some time of doing this, but other duties have prevented us from collecting data for an interesting write-up on India and the work of the Lord here. In this brief article it is my purpose to only suggest a few things that will give some insight into the work as it is and what it may be in the future.

As is probably known to most of my readers, the more than three hundred millions of people in India are practically a number of nations on account of the caste system, which for centuries has prevented any kind of union. It is a recognized fact that so many people could not be held in subjection if they were united. Like the Jews and Samaritans, they have little dealings with one another. The strong feeling of prejudice and jealousy of one caste toward another presents a strong barrier to the rapid advance of the gospel. For a person of one caste to break the bonds of superstition and come and associate with people of another caste whom he has been taught for centuries to regard as unclean takes much courage and strong conviction. In Christ we must all be "one;" and recognizing this, many will turn away from the gospel before they hear enough to bring conviction. The classes run from the highest Brahman—the priests and gods—to the lowest depressed class. It is evident from existing conditions that the work would most probably begin among some particular class. If you were asked to guess what class, which would you guess would be most ready and willing to hear the gospel? When Christ was on earth, what classes heard him "gladly?" What classes nailed him to the cross? Yes, the same is true in this country. Occasionally "some of the priests" become obedient to the truth, and it might be said that "some of the rulers" believe upon him, but it is the common people that gladly hear the word and obey the Saviour. God has always chosen the weak to confound the strong, and the foolish things to confound the "worldly-wise." The same is God's plan in idol-cursed India. The work is insignificant in its beginning and among the common people, but who says that the truth will not conquer in the end? All classes must yield before the sword of the Spirit. Victory is certain through our Lord Jesus Christ.

It is asked: "Do you have meetinghouses? How much money has been contributed to that end by the brethren? None. Among a poor class of people, it is practically out of the question for them to build houses. In a number of villages there are houses erected by the townspeople for travelers, and these are used for meetings. Otherwise the meetings are in private houses or in the shade of a tree. The Christians are encouraged to take leading parts in the meetings. As we are able the truth is being put before all classes, and we are praying the Lord of the harvest to send more laborers into the harvest. Will you volunteer?"

The Last Call.

From a letter just received from Menlo, Ga., I learn that the framing of our new building is up and the house covered, practically, and storm-sheathed. All bills are paid, but funds are about out. I am coming before our readers again, begging them to help us see that the building is put in condition for winter use. We must do this, brethren, or let the cause suffer there. I know these people. That they are worthy of your help and doing their best, I feel safe in saying. Too, if we can only get this building finished, they will take a man and use him continuously in that section. Help us to put this work on its feet now, and thus establish another radiating center in this neglected State. Things look good in Georgia, but we are suffering for lack of men to help us do the work. Donations since last report are as follows: G. W. Welch, $15; Bob Hall, 50 cents; Tom Pearson, $5; Mrs. Leath, $1; Mr. Ratliff, $1; Sam Barry, $5; Dr. Jennings, $10; Mr. Seamore, $2; Lum Neal, $25; J. W. Murphy, $5; Madie Mosley, $1; Jim Lawrence, $5; Miss Pemberton, Gadsden, Ala., $1; Mrs. Forster, $8; Alvin Neave, Texas, $2.50; church at Lyerly, $3; Mrs. Holland, $5; George Penly, $1; G. A. Justice, $4; Mrs. Bertie Smith, Texas, $2; Bill Mitchell, $1; L. J. Kingston, $2.50; Misses Wyatt, $3; Jim Hall, $1; Jace Miller, $2.50; O. D. Wyatt, $10; Mrs. Mobley, $1; G. B. Martin, $1; Mrs. O. Wyatt, $5.

All the above donations, except where State is named, are from Georgia. Brethren, help us now by sending donations to Miss Georgia Thomas, Menlo, Ga.

Our Plea.

It is no small thing to go out as a minister of the gospel of Christ, nor is it a small thing to publish a paper in the name of Christ. When I think of the many papers published and of their contradictory way of presenting God to the people, I wonder that as many people have faith in Christ as do. The reason that Christ had for praying that his disciples be one was "that the world may believe" that God sent him. It is bad to go out in the name of some human organization and teach error; it is worse to go out in the name of the church of Christ and teach error. Paul, in writing to the Jews, says: "For the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles because of you." The Jews claimed to be God's chosen people; they claimed to represent God; hence, when they failed to live as God would have them, or taught things God did not command, they misrepresented God to the people, and God's name was blasphemed because of their sins.

It is a fine thing to stand for the one church—the church that the Bible talks about; but it is a sad day when people who claim to represent the church of Christ make it a sectarian institution by taking a position that actually forces them to call some of the best people in the world children of the devil—religious bastards, not sons. I say that this is a most hurtful thing; and all the more so when done by those who claim to be the church of Christ. Recently I conducted a revival in a community where just such work had been done. Are you surprised when I tell you that the people seemed to have no use for the name "church of Christ?" They thought I was one of the "bunch." But one at a time they would drop in. This one would get his eyes opened, and he would tell his neighbor about it. The crowds and interest grew, and the New Testament idea of the church of Christ was gotten before the people.

I am glad to say to our readers that the Gospel Advocate is doing its best to let the people see and know what the church of Christ is. It is not a human organization. It is a divine institution, established by our Lord and Savior (See Matt. 16: 18); too, an institution whose keys are not put into the hands of men, but they are held by our Lord Jesus Christ (see Rev. 3: 7); an institution to which Jesus daily adds souls who gladly receive his word and obey him (see Acts 2: 47). If we are to be true to God, to correctly represent Christ to the people, we must ever live in Christ's own heart, and look at people as he looks at them, feel toward them as he does. "The firm foundation of God standeth, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his." (See 2 Tim. 2: 19.) When we meet a man who is indeed a child of God, but fail to recognize him, it is proof positive that in Christ's heart we do not live, but, rather, in some distorted idea of the teaching of Christ that blinds us to the truth. May the Lord bless every reader who is trying to live for God and the salvation of souls, to live so close to Christ, to so completely surrender to him, that he will ever see things as Christ sees them, and be able to ever let Christ and his church be correctly presented to the people in all his teaching. Too many who have accepted the Bible as their rule of faith and practice have so perverted it that the Christ of the Holy Scriptures they know not. This is exactly what Christ meant when he said to the Jews: "Ye search the scriptures, because ye think that in them ye have eternal life; and these are they which bear witness of me; and ye will not come to me, that ye may have life." (See John 5: 39, 40.) How sad, indeed, it is to get into any such condition! May the Lord bless his people everywhere in learning to know him and to ever present him to the people as he is.

Florida Heard From.

Brother Flavil Hall has just closed a fine meeting at Trenton, Fla. Final reports have not come in, but when last heard from he had baptized eighteen, reclaimed three, and led one from the errors of the Baptists. He is highly delighted with the good people at Trenton and reports the congregation in fine condition.

I am glad to say that Georgia has recently been blessed with a visit from Brother Cameron, of Largo, Fla. He conducted a short meeting at Hardie's Chapel, preached a few nights at Macon, and was with the Welcome Hill brethren for a short meeting. Full reports of his work have not come in. But Brother Carter writes that all are delighted with his work at Macon and Hardie's Chapel. Welcome Hill was established by Brother Cameron some years ago. The South has no man who has worked harder and made more sacrifices than this hero of the faith. May he come back our way again soon.

Help Your Brother.

If any little love of mine
 May make a life the sweeter,
 If any little care of mine
 May make a friend's the fleetier,
 If any lift of mine may ease
 The burden of another,
 God give me love and care and strength
 To help my toiling brother.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

$1.50 a year if paid in advance, $1.75 after six months, $2 after twelve months. To Canada and foreign countries, $2 in advance, $2.25 after six months, $2.50 after twelve months.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express, post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order. The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received, but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The Man is Always Safe Who Does God's Will.

BY E. G. S.

The Bible has many illustrations of this principle. We give an example from the book of Daniel. A decree was passed by the king of Babylon that Daniel, a godly man, should be cast into a den of lions. The Jewish people had been captured and carried to Babylon because of their sins. While captives there, Daniel, a very remarkable man among the Jews, was, by a wicked device, thrown into a den of lions to get rid of him. But Daniel was a godly man, and God closed the mouths of the lions that they could do him no harm, and he was taken out the next morning all right and unharmed by the lions. Daniel had done no harm to any one; but some wicked men desired to destroy him and get him out of their way, and fell upon an exceedingly wicked device to accomplish it. For some purpose, I know not what, there was a den of lions kept in that city. So when the wicked men that wanted to get rid of Daniel could find no fault in him of which to accuse him, they called upon the king to pass a decree that if any man should call upon God in prayer within thirty days he should be cast into the den of lions. Daniel went right on praying three times a day, as he had been accustomed to do. The enemies of Daniel soon reported him to the king, and he was cast into the lion's den; but God in his mercy closed the mouths of the lions that they did him no harm, and thus by divine providence that godly man was spared. God had further use for him, and he was spared and did what the Lord had in hand for him to do.

Daniel became one of the great prophets of the Old Testament age, foretelling, among other things, the establishment of the kingdom of Christ, declaring that it should never be destroyed, but should stand forever. In a figure he spoke of the Roman empire, and then said: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed." (Dan. 2: 44.) This prophecy was uttered some six hundred years before Christ came; but when he did come, the prophecy was fulfilled just as foretold by Daniel. On the day of Pentecost the kingdom was fully established through the preaching of the apostle Peter, with Christ as king in heaven. So the prophecy of Daniel was shown to be true in every particular.

Of all the prophets of the Old Testament, there were none greater than Daniel. He was among the last prophets of the Old Testament, but not the least by any means. His prophecies concerning Christ and his kingdom were all fulfilled to the very letter. Aside from the fact that Daniel was a great prophet, he was a godly man and would allow nothing to turn him away from the Lord, and nothing could turn the Lord away from him. He stands as a wonderful example for others to go by. If Daniel's heart had not been fixed and determined on serving the Lord, he would doubtless have been turned away; but his faith would not yield. His faith and courage could not be baffled by any such wicked schemes. He reasoned that God was able to rescue him from the plans they had laid against him. At the same time, he would rather risk God to care for him than men. He knew that God never ordained that he should worship an idol; so he determined to risk the Lord rather than allow even a king to lead him into idolatry.

This example ought to make a deep impression upon every child of God that ever reads or hears it. Christians too often neglect to read and treasure the examples of the Old Testament. Daniel was a remarkable character. He was as firm as a rock in his convictions of truth and duty. He would rather have faced death any day than to have disregarded the word of God. He proved this by allowing himself to be thrown into a den of lions rather than worship an idol. This shows how determined he was to stand by the Lord and turn his back on idolatry. But the Lord stood by him in all his trials and delivered him from all the dangers that threatened.

It is true that eternal life was not promised to the servants of God in the Jewish age. But Daniel's faith and reverence were so strong toward God that nothing could turn him from the true and living God, nor cause him in any way to disregard his word. Hence his future condition after death was certainly taken care of by the Lord, to whom he was so faithful in his earthly life. But there was enough promised to all the faithful to hold them on in the service of God through life. If a man in that age could be so faithful to God, surely, with the promise of eternal life given to us, in addition to the blessings promised in this life, we ought to be very faithful now. On the other hand, as a warning to people now, eternal punishment is threatened upon those who will not serve the Lord in this life. Why is it, then, that so many, even in Bible lands, refuse the service of God in this life? If all men would be as earnest in preparing for eternity as most men are in preparing for the future of this life, it would prove a wonderful blessing. Our characters that we form in this life are what we will carry into eternity. There are only two places of abode revealed to us in the future state. One of these will be exceedingly happy, and the other will be awfully miserable. By serving God faithfully in this life, we are promised the happy home as the dwelling place for eternity; but if we turn away from the word of God through this life, we shall be cast away from him and the heavenly home throughout eternity; for when we pass through this life away from God, we shall remain away from him throughout eternity, without any possibility of making any change after death. So the only prospect before them will be an eternal home of suffering. This is awful to even think about. But if we devote our earthly lives to the service of God, our earthly lives will be happier than they possibly could be in any other sort of life, and then be inexpressibly happy in eternity. Why, then, should not all choose the better way in this life, and thus make ready for the happy home in eternity? God has furnished us with all the light we need to prepare for that happy home. If we do not walk in that light, the fault will all be ours, and then we shall have all eternity to regret that we did not.

"Study to Be Quiet and to Do Your Own Business."

BY E. A. E.

The following suggestion was received about the first of last August. I have deferred acting upon it until now, awaiting an opportune time.

Brother Elam: Please allow me to suggest a subject for you to write on, the practice of which, if not instruction concerning which, is greatly needed in some places, even in the church. The subject is "meddling with other men's business and family affairs." Suppose it be suggested that every man in the brotherhood examine himself and look after himself, at least, a wee bit; and after properly looking after himself, if he has any time left, he can then offer his assistance to others. If all of us will obey the injunction to closely examine ourselves, much bad feeling in places will be overcome and forbearance and love will rule instead.

"A little love from day to day,
And strength enough to preach it;
A glimpse of heaven along the way,
And faith and hope to reach it," is more needed in the church than anything else. X.

In acting upon this suggestion, I must say that the clearest, strongest, best, and only right thing to be presented is the word of God. To keep all other commandments of God and to refuse to obey him in this is to be guilty of all. (James 2: 10, 11.) It is as necessary to teach and practice "the whole counsel of God" on this subject as on all others.

Disobedience to God in no other particular can produce greater wreck and ruin and more far-reaching evil consequences to homes, the church, and entire communities than in this very thing; and yet, very little regard is paid to the teaching of God on this subject in general, and none at all in places.

Reverence for the will of God and determination to obey it must be back of all effort to learn and to teach it. No bad feeling can be eradicated, no personal differences can be adjusted, and no strife can be removed until all parties respect the will of God and determine to be governed by it.

I have no idea who are the parties referred to above, and can point out only the scriptures covering such cases. All who desire to obey God will follow these scriptures. Of course, not to follow them is disobedience to God.

Were there no need of suffering long and being kind, of forbearance and mercy, forgiveness and love, the Bible would not abound in such teaching. Such teaching shows that Christians make mistakes, misunderstand and talk about one another, wound feelings, and otherwise mistreat and wrong one another, and that in all such cases there is great need of consideration, forbearance, kindness, patience, readiness to repent and apologize, and of forgiveness. All should know that one cannot wrong another in word or deed and be saved without repentance of that wrong, a desire to repair it, and forgiveness of it. Also, it should be known that to wrong another is a double sin; it is a sin against God as well as a sin against the one wronged. People cannot gossip about, scandalize, slander, cheat, defraud, and otherwise wrong others, and go right on as though they had committed no sin.

If any stumbleth not in word, the same is a perfect man, able to bridle the whole body also. (James 3: 2.)

All who desire to be full-grown or well-developed men and women in Christian character and the mind and spirit of Christ will make a constant and mighty effort to control the tongue. Of course, to do that, it is necessary first to control the thoughts and feelings. Not to impugn motives, not to be jealous and envious, and not to otherwise think wrong of others is absolutely essential to just and fair speech concerning them.

Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Jehovah, my rock, and my redeemer. (Ps. 19: 14.)

Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life. (Prov. 4: 23.)

Put on therefore, as God's elect, holy and beloved, a heart of compassion, kindness, lowliness, meekness, long-suffering; forbearing one another, and forgiving each other, if any man have a complaint against any; even as the Lord forgave you, so also do ye: and above all these things put on love, which is the bond of perfectness. And let the peace of Christ rule in your hearts, to the which also ye were called in one body; and be ye thankful. (Col. 3: 12-15.)

All this is as plain and as essential as anything the Bible contains. "Compassion," "kindness," "lowliness," "meekness," "long-suffering," "forbearing one another," "forgiving each other," "love," and "peace" need not to be explained, but practiced. When these Christian virtues and graces are cultivated and practiced, all will be well with the souls of church members. All should be as sound and as loyal in these things as in all other "points of doctrine." The Christian character, the peace of the church, and salvation depend upon these things.

Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and railing, be put away from you, with all malice: and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you. (Eph. 4: 31, 32.)

I have quoted and commented recently on Phil. 2: 1-11. I have tried to show the authority and force of the command that all "be of the same mind, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind; doing nothing through faction or through vainglory, but in lowliness of mind each counting other better than himself." Each one should not look to his own welfare and personal interests and good, but also to the same things of others. All must have the mind of suffering and sacrifice for the salvation of others which was in Christ. When these qualities of "the divine nature" are ignored or even neglected, contention, strife, envy, bitterness, backbiting, slander, and division are sure to follow.

Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: love therefore is the fulfillment of the law. (Rom. 13: 10.)

To harm a person in deed, word, or thought is to hate, not to love, that person.

Instead of emphasizing, magnifying, and spreading abroad a brother's mistakes and wrongs, love covers a multitude of sins. (1 Pet. 4: 8.) Love covers sins, not by hiding and justifying them, but as James (5: 19, 20) declares:

My brethren, if any among you do err from the truth, and one convert him; let him know, that he who converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall cover a multitude of sins.

To manifest love and not to seek to condemn others is the great need in many places. To seek to save the lost and to really love men and the church is as far above heresy hunting and seeking to condemn others as heaven is above outer darkness and eternal happiness; above weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth.

But concerning love of the brethren ye have no need that one write unto you; for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another; for indeed ye do it toward all the brethren that are in Macedonia. But we exhort you, brethren, that ye abound more and more; and that ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your hands, even as we charged you; that ye may walk becomingly toward them that are without, and may have need of nothing. (1 Thess. 4: 9-12.)

For we hear of some that walk among you disorderly, that work not at all, but are busybodies. Now them that are such we command and exhort in the Lord Jesus Christ, that with quietness they work, and eat their own bread. (2 Thess. 3: 11, 12.)

All are commanded to "study," or to make it their aim or ambition, to be quiet, to attend to their own business, and to let the business and "private affairs" of others alone.

"Tattlers," "busybodies," "meddlers in other men's matters," "going about from house to house," "working not at all" (idleness), going "up and down as a talebearer among . . . people," taking up a reproach against a brother, slanderers, and whisperers, are as much condemned by the Bible as covetous souls, extortioners, fornicators, drunkards, and thieves. (See 1 Tim. 5: 11-15; 1 Pet. 4: 15; 2 Thess. 3: 6-15; Ps. 15; Lev. 19: 16.) God commands the church to withdraw themselves from busybodies and meddlers in other men's matters. Such a thing has not been done in a generation or two; but there would be more peace and progress were the word of God carried out in this, as well as in other particulars.

For lack of wood the fire goeth out; and where there is no whisperer, contention ceaseth. (Prov. 26: 20.)

In James 3: 1-12 the Holy Spirit puts the ruin wrought by an unruly tongue in the strongest language. As so small a thing as a bridle bit turns about so large an animal as a horse; as so small a thing as a rudder turns about so large a thing as a ship; and as a small fire burns whole forests; so, so small a member as the tongue boasts great things, is "a fire," "a world of iniquity," "a restless evil," "full of deadly poison," "defiles the whole body," sets on fire the whole course of nature or entire communities, and is itself "set on fire by hell." The tongue can turn the peace and happiness of a family, the unity and love of a church, and the good will of whole communities into a hell on earth. The fountain of this is the heart. The same heart cannot send forth such evil things and good things at the same time.

Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer each one. (Col. 4: 6.)

Let no corrupt speech proceed out of your mouth, but such as is good for edifying as the need may be, that it may give grace to them that hear. (Eph. 4: 29.)

"What Do Preachers Preach About," and What Should They Preach?

BY M. C. K.

In some respects the Ladies' Home Journal is one of the most interesting periodicals now current in this country; and, notwithstanding the great variety of other matters appearing in its columns, it does not slight religion, but sometimes prints telling essays on religious subjects. Beginning with its issue for October, 1915, it has published a continuous series of articles running through every month since up to and including May, 1916, and the subjects discussed in the different issues during these months are as follows: October, "What Really is the Minister's Job?" November, "The Wife of the Minister." December, "Suppose They Did?" January, "Should a Church Advertise?" February, "How Can a Church Be Financed?" March,

"Wanted—A Church Conscience." April, "What's Wrong With Country Churches?" May, "Pulpit 'Pep'—Is This What the Church Most Needs?"

Before answering the question of the last subject, the author examined eight hundred sermons, concerning which he says:

That improvement in the preaching is greatly needed will be apparent to any one who makes a careful study of the work that is being done. I have just finished an examination of eight hundred sermons—as many as the average churchgoer hears in twenty years. What I have to say, then, on the subject of preaching is not idle opinion.

One important result of this study of sermons is that it furnishes an answer to the question: "What do preachers preach about?"

The author of the article arranges these sermons in seven groups, classifying them according to the subjects treated. They were all preached from American pulpits within the last five years, and the seven groups are designated as Biblical, Doctrinal, Ecclesiastical, Devotional, Inspirational, Ethical, and Evangelistic and Social. We omit some of the subjects as classified; but of the eight hundred sermons examined, there were found, according to the author's judgment, twenty-six that were textual and expository, three that were controversial or creedal, ten on immortality and heaven, fifteen that were denominational, two on church unity, sixty-three on church efficiency, two hundred and thirteen on spiritual self-culture, forty-three on sentiment and virtues, eighteen on novels, plays, etc., thirty-two on history, science, and biography, forty-nine on current events, one hundred and twelve on ethical subjects, two on a call to repentance, fourteen on civic purity and progress, and ten on social justice, labor, etc.; and the author makes the additional astonishing statement that, of the entire eight hundred sermons, not one was on home or foreign missions!

After a careful survey of this vast field of homiletic literature with its great variety of themes classified, one is led to ask the question, What have the preachers done with their Bibles, or, What has become of the gospel? From the evidence submitted, one would never dream that the preachers of the great majority of these eight hundred sermons had any idea that it was their business to preach the gospel. Commenting still further on what ought to be the preacher's theme, our author says:

The idea that preachers should preach about the Bible is not confined to Sunday-school boys. It is insisted upon by every authority on preaching. There is probably not a professor of homiletics in the land who does not lecture his students on the first importance of biblical preaching. There is hardly a name, eminent in the history of the pulpit, that does not stand for the exposition of the ancient Book. Yet your chance of hearing a Bible passage or text explained and its message applied in some practical fashion is very slim indeed, unless your minister happens to be one of the rare men who know and preach the Bible.

In the Bible, God has furnished an inexhaustible fund of fact and illustration with a distinct and definite message for mankind; and, so far as the divine design of preaching is concerned, that preacher who preaches something else is a failure. The author further adds:

All the sermons we examined were headed by a text. Only twenty-six of them really depended upon it. In scores of cases the text was not referred to in any way after it had been announced at the beginning of the sermon. There were a few studies of Bible characters and a few sermons in defense or laudation of the Bible; but the inference from this mass of material is that about once in sixteen times does the preacher preach the Scriptures.

Pointing out the tendency of preachers to turn from their proper message to the treatment of current events, he says:

Last Thanksgiving Day there was an epidemic of sermons on national defense and foreign relations. All over the land the preachers were setting up as statesmen. Why should it be thought probable that an amateur discussion of the government's foreign policy should make people thank the Lord? Of course the pulpit is concerned with such matters when a religious or moral principle that is clearly discernible is involved; but we are probably preaching on political affairs more than is necessary. Running the country is the President's job; preaching religion is ours.

What the church needs and what the world needs is that every pulpit in the land shall ring with the word of God. Said Paul to the young preacher, Timothy: "I charge thee in the sight of God and of Christ Jesus, who shall judge the living and the dead, and by his appearing and his kingdom, preach the word." (2 Tim. 4: 1, 2.) That is the preacher's inspired charge. "Preach the word." Let the preacher see that the theme selected is appropriate, and then, no matter what it may be, let him "preach the word" on that theme. We close in the impressive words of our author:

More than anything else the church needs better preaching, more biblical preaching, more definite preaching, more effort to state the fundamental faith with the original authority and freshness of application that are at once the fruit of painstaking labor and the evidence of spiritual growth.

The Time is Growing Short.

We are pleased to inform our readers that the Gospel Advocate is steadily growing despite the high cost of paper. Our receipts have steadily improved; but, while this is true, our expenditures have necessarily been much larger. On account of the increased cost of paper and other materials, it is absolutely necessary for us to cut out all premiums and all reductions on the price of the Gospel Advocate. People are now paying much higher prices for commercial printing than heretofore, whereas we are charging as yet the same price of $1.50 a year for the Advocate. We have held the Gospel Advocate at this price in order to favor our readers, and also in the hope that they would help us to extend the circulation of the paper.

Now is the time to renew your subscription for two years, if you wish to get the paper at the old price of $1.50 a year. The rate of $1.50 will expire promptly on January 1, 1917, and from that time our subscribers will pay $2 a year. As the time is growing so short in which you can get the paper at the old price, it is the part of wisdom to send in your subscription at once.

We have also extended to our old readers the courtesy of allowing them to send us a new subscriber for one year at $1.50. We have been very anxious to greatly increase our list in this way. We are glad to report that some progress has been made and that a number of new subscriptions have already been received. We can handle many more, however; in fact, all that our readers will send us. Do not neglect or delay sending in your subscription promptly; for, beginning on December 1, we expect our list clerks to be very busy entering renewals and new subscribers. We are anxious to get in as many renewals and new ones before the rush comes as possible.

We have guarded the interests of our old readers with jealous care, and wish to assure them that we shall make no advances that are not absolutely necessary for the best interests of the paper. We have received many words of encouragement concerning the spirit and merits of the Gospel Advocate. It is our hope still to improve the paper, and to this end we solicit the most hearty cooperation of all lovers of the truth. PUBLISHERS GOSPEL ADVOCATE.

Christianity is not man's confession to God that nothing matters, since man is what he is. It is God's shout to man that everything matters, since God sees in man what man may become.—W. H. Blake.

There Should Be No Jealousy or Envy or Hatred in This Matter.

BY PAUL C. YOUNG.

Some brethren think that other brethren, because they are strong on "foreign missions," are against "home" missions. Brethren have not gone very far on the understanding of missions at all until they realize that, from Christ's viewpoint, and, therefore, from a real Christian's viewpoint, there are no such things as "home" and "foreign" missions. The Lord never said think more of Jerusalem's need than Judea's or Samaria's or the uttermost part of the world's. If some of us have been so impressed with the needs of the "home" field, so-called, that we cannot see the needs of the "foreign" field, we are simply using our own vision. We have not Christ's vision; for he said, "into all the world." If some of us have been so wrought upon by ancient prejudice that we think that this good continent is the only legitimate field of missionary endeavor, and that any one who seeks another continent as a field is merely seeking notoriety and a "place in the sun," we need to shake ourselves loose from the shackles of our preconceived ideas and take on the ideas of Him who said, "The field is the world." (Matt. 13: 38.) It is no less than jealousy, though it may not be owned or even known by its possessors—this way of making flings at what is called "foreign missions." Of course, it may be ignorance. That we are ignorant of what the Bible says of "going into all the world" is palpably obvious. At least the fact that it has not "come home" to us is beyond dispute. But back of some of the ill-concealed thrusts at the idea of taking the gospel to the whole creation lies a sort of hatred—a hatred of the men who go and of the men who preach going, sacrificing, suffering hardships, and "leaving father and mother." Because we do not want to go, because we do not want to leave all and follow Christ to the foreign field or any field, as to that matter, we hate (we don't know we hate; of course not—the devil sees to it that we don't realize it) one who, by going, shows us our own selfishness and love of comfort. We hate him because by his going we, who could easily go, or who, of and by ourselves, could easily pay one's expenses while he is "going," seem to be put in the light of not doing our duty. For though we are in a bad light, we don't like to seem to be in a bad light. God surely knows that we ought to be spurred to a like sacrifice; but God as surely knows that many, who should be so spurred on, call those who leave all and those who preach leaving all "fools" and "enthusiasts." What we need now, and what we must have now, are fools for Christ. (1 Cor. 4: 10.) I would we were all such enthusiasts. Look to yourself if you have ever thought slightly of missions. Look to yourself if you have not thought seriously of going or giving to world-wide missions. Let no jealousy or envy or hatred becloud Christ's dictum: "The world is the field." He knew it. You would do well to learn it.

The course of life is a thousand trifles, then some crisis; nothing but green leaves under common sun and shadow, and then a storm or a rare June day; and far more than the storm or the perfect day the common sun and common shadow do to make the autumn rich. It is the "every days" that count. They must be made to tell, or the years have failed.—William C. Gannett.

The day is thine, thou Lord of all who toil, for all eternity belongeth unto thee; thou hast but loaned it unto me. Master Craftsman, who knewest on earth the sweetness of earning thy daily bread, help me to use this day worthily; until the tasks that come from thy hands are done and thou biddest me lay aside my tools, take up my pilgrim's staff, and fare forth on the journey that leadeth to thee.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

By J. C. McQuiddy

The Menace of the Boarding House.

Truth, "deep and pathetic," is found by a Lutheran writer in the story of a "frowzy child in the street," who, when asked by a "philanthropic lady," "Where is your home?" answered: "Hain't got no home." "Poor thing, what do you do?" "I board."

The writer, Mr. Walter Krumwilde, sees "the modern rooming or boarding-house system spreading its web like a spider, stretching out its arms like an octopus to catch the unwary, sleeping soul." For he holds, to quote his recent article in The American Lutheran Survey (Columbia, S. C.), "that it is no exaggeration to say the rooming-house system is one of the most pernicious forces of our youth and our family life, and, therefore, of our social and spiritual life, the church has to wrestle with to-day. Its action is all the more dangerous because it is quietly exercised under the cover of satisfying an economic need." Now the old-fashioned boarding house of a generation ago was essentially a temporary abode, and the keeper "was like a mother in charge of a large family in whose members she was personally and individually interested." The rooming house of to-day which has "supplanted this old-fashioned, homelike boarding house, and by far for the worse," is "purely a commercial venture." As Mr. Krumwilde writes of the perils that environ the luckless roomer:

"Perhaps the greatest danger to the integrity of the family and the purity of the young is found in the low moral plane tolerated in so many rooming houses. This is in part the direct result of the economic pressure creating and maintaining the system. Since the rooming-house keeper is in the business only 'to make both ends meet,' every cent counts, and it takes a really superior character not to close the eyes at immoral practices among the regular guests or to refuse the offer of several dollars for the use of a room for one night for immoral purposes.

"Again, as the housekeeper cannot keep close track of every guest because of their irregular hours, the lack of a common social room, or parlor, a common dining room, etc., a premium is put upon immorality and the way is easily opened for such practices.

"This blighting effect of the rooming house is further demonstrated by the radical changes the introduction of but a single rooming house will cause in a district."

"The twin sister of the rooming house," we read further, "is the modern boarding house which professes to cater to families."

"This may take the form of the so-called 'family boarding house,' or the 'apartment hotel.' This institution paves the way for many social evils. It destroys in one blow the very basis of a home—that is, privacy. It creates a spirit of unrest in both man and wife by relieving them of their respective duties of oversight and the care of household duties. Because of this it opens the way to an over-indulgence in social affairs. As young and old are thrown together without regard to differences in educational, social, and religious ideals, too great a familiarity grows up among the different ages, parental authority is weakened and held in contempt, while the exercise of proper parental control is reduced to a minimum because of the gossip and interference on the part of the other guests. And by the indiscriminate association of the sexes of all ages undue familiarity and immodesty pave the way for subsequent immorality."

Thus, according to Mr. Krumwilde, "the child, the youth, and the family living in either a rooming house, a boarding house, or an apartment hotel are to be pitied and prayed for;" and it is "the bounden duty" of the church "to introduce and maintain counter-irritants to these familiar foes." The writer goes on to credit his own denomination with having provided hospices for young people in the large cities; but there are not enough of them. They should be more suitably built, and some should be provided which can shelter families. Above all, we are told, the church should constantly hold up "the divine dignity and sacredness of the Christian home life." In short—

"The church by practice and precept must rejuvenate the home ideals. It must ever teach that the home is most holy in God's sight—yea, the earthly prototype of his heavenly abode—while it uses every practical medium for the care and preservation of the family's integrity in temporary shelters or institutions."

The above from the Literary Digest is food for much serious thought and reflection. I have never been able to understand how a Christian mother could take her daughters and attempt to rear them in a boarding house. It does not require much forethought for any one to know that the atmosphere of many boarding houses is not uplifting and purifying. God ordained the home for the happiness, usefulness, and purity of the human family. As the church is the "salt of the earth," so the family is the salt of the church.

Any Christian evangelist readily observes that children reared in good families are the best subjects of the gospel call. They readily remember the language of Solomon which reads: "Remember also thy Creator in the days of thy youth, before the evil days come, and the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." (See Eccles. 12: 1.) There may be exceptions, but it is nevertheless a fact that most of our best men are reared in good homes. Children need parental authority and a wise oversight. They do not know what is best for them, and need a thoughtful, godly mother and a strong and wise father to show them the dangers and steer them clear of the breakers of life.

In view of the facts of the present time, the mother who takes her girls or young boys into a boarding house thereby proclaims to the world that she is not as thoughtful and as much concerned as she should be for the welfare of her children. We might well conclude that she does not even appreciate the dangers to herself. Our characters are so delicate and need such careful nursing that we should not do anything calculated to destroy or ruin them; for when our purity is once gone, it is gone forever.

The church certainly has a great work to do in leading the way to a pure and noble life. It cannot be too vigilant in seeking to save the people from pitfalls that are ready to ensnare them. Instead of encouraging people to leave home, it should seek to build up pure ideals of home. It should help make the home what it should be, and also make it possible for people to live in their own homes without entering apartments, flats, or boarding houses.

A Good Determination.

The Literary Digest says: "Some of the immense profits made in manufacturing munitions are to be turned back to the bleeding countries. It is announced from Los Angeles that W. A. Clark, Jr., son of former Senator Clark, will return two million dollars made in war stocks to the widows and orphans of France when the war is over. "This war is terrible," Mr. Clark is reported as having said. "I want no profit on account of it."

How much better would it have been for Mr. Clark and all others to have said: We will not make any profits by furnishing war munitions to the belligerent nations! It is not the spirit of the meek and lowly Jesus to make money by the sacrifice of human lives or by taking any part in such wholesale slaughter. When for mercenary purposes we in any way aid the belligerents, we in a certain measure become particeps criminis.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

J. W. Dunn, of El Paso, Texas, reports a good start in a mission meeting at Tulare, Cal., on November 12.

Mrs. B. A. Dillard, a consecrated Christian living at Chillicothe, Texas, sends us one dollar for the Joy Fund.

J. J. Vanhoutin, of Paris, Ill., one of our helpful contributors, writes: "I greatly appreciate and enjoy reading the Gospel Advocate."

T. C. King, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., came to see us last Monday. He preached at a new mission point in Nashville on Sunday afternoon.

From J. L. Hines, Central City, Ky.: "I am in a good meeting at Sugar Grove Church, in Ohio County, Ky. Twenty-three added to date. I have preached two funerals."

A thoughtful and generous Christian sent us a new twenty-dollar bill for foreign missionary work. The name was withheld, but we are sure Jesus knows it. The money has been properly applied.

John E. Dunn closed an interesting meeting of fifteen-days' duration with the church at Scottsboro, Ala., on November 5. Two young ladies were baptized. Brother Dunn begins a meeting with the church at Oakman, Ala., on November 19.

From Paul C. Young, Brunswick, Maine, November 14: "Two confessions within the last week at Westbrook. The work moves on surely, I hope, even if slowly. There are some very earnest brethren there. I am thinking of visiting Unity next Sunday."

From T. E. Tatum, Hallsville, Texas: "At the home of the bride's parents, near Hallsville, Texas, on November 12, I solemnized the rites of matrimony between Brother T. A. Kilpatrick and Miss Jessie Fyffe. We wish for them long lives of peace and happiness."

Mr. T. J. Yarbrough and Miss Estellene Queener, two fine young people who are members of the Russell Street congregation, were married at the bride's residence, this city, at 8 P.M., Friday, November 17, A. B. Lipscomb officiating. They are spending their honeymoon in Florida.

From Joe Ratcliffe, Bardwell, Ky., November 14: "On November 12 I closed an eight-days' meeting at Pocahontas, Ark., with fifteen additions to the church—twelve by baptism and three by membership. I will return for a meeting in 1917, the Lord willing. I found a faithful band of brethren there."

The marriage of Mr. J. O. Baird, a prominent business man of Lebanon, Tenn., and Miss Harriet Morrow, the accomplished daughter of S. F. Morrow, this city, occurred at 4 P.M., yesterday, in the study of the Belmont Avenue Church, A. B. Lipscomb officiating. The Gospel Advocate extends heartiest congratulations.

From W. S. Long, Jr., Largo, Fla., November 18: "The meeting at Largo did not close, as was stated in the last number of the Gospel Advocate, but will continue till December 1. There have been seven additions to the present. Those who desire to reach me by mail may address me at Manchester, Tenn., or Largo, Fla."

We have received some copies of "The Pacific Evangelist," a magazine edited and published by Earnest C. Love, at Santa Rosa, Cal., which contains some very well-written articles on timely themes, such as "Which Church Shall I Join?" "Proofs of Christ's Resurrection," and "Dancing, the Devil's Favorite." This magazine is intended for distribution among the unsaved on the Pacific Coast. We believe it will do good wherever distributed.

Brother and Sister John E. Dunn wish to express their thanks to their brethren and friends who have written them letters of sympathy and comfort during Sister Dunn's recent illness. Sister Dunn is now at home from the hospital. Her operations were successful. She is now able to walk across her room and is daily improving. Brother and Sister Dunn will answer all letters as soon as they can.

From G. Dallas Smith, Murfreesboro, Tenn., November 18: "Our annual fall meeting began yesterday, with C. M. Pullias doing the preaching. The audience that greeted Brother Pullias at the first service taxed the capacity of our large auditorium, and another fine crowd heard him again last night. The church at Murfreesboro was never in a better working condition, and we confidently expect a great meeting."

H. I. Litton, an ex-Tennessean, writes from Boyle, Miss., Route 1, November 18: "We are trying to raise money to build us a church house. We have about one hundred and eighty dollars raised. We are few in number—only six brethren—and are poor. We ask the Christian people, through the Gospel Advocate, for some help. We need a house here very badly. My old home in Tennessee was near Centerville, in Hickman County."

From Sister Jennie Clarke, Luling, Texas: "Our national Thanksgiving Day is fast approaching, and the people of the United States have much for which to be thankful as a result of Christian, moral, patriotic, and educational development. Brethren, I should like to suggest that you please express your appreciation of that day by sending an offering to aid in the erection of a school building for the benefit of the children at Belle Haven Orphans' Home, Luling, Texas."

From H. M. McRae, Rockmart, Ga., November 10: "John Hayes, evangelist, of Cedar Hill, Texas, preached for the church of Christ at this place, beginning on the night of October 28 and continuing until November 3, at night only except on Lord's day, when he delivered three lessons. Each lesson was truly scriptural, and so illustrated, using blackboard, that all could understand the truth taught and plainly see the error others teach. This caused no small stir among those who are following men and not the Lord. This was especially true of the preachers, who heard only one lesson. We believe that we have some Bereans here who will search the Scriptures and learn that these things are true and show themselves noble by believing and obeying the gospel. The Lord willing, Brother Hayes will be with us on the fourth Lord's day in this month."

Frederick T. Keeney, of Syracuse, N. Y., offers this Thanksgiving sentiment: "Heavenly Father, we bring thee a psalm of thanksgiving. Thou hast put a new song in our hearts, and there is a new hymn of praise upon our lips. Thou hast done wonderful things for us and in us, for which we are glad. Old things have passed away, and, behold, all things have become new. We call upon our souls and all that is within us to praise thy holy name. Thou hast set us in a high place. Our hearts are enlarged. Christ has come to be the chiefest among ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely. His will is our delight; his church is like the gate of heaven to our souls; his words are sweeter than honey to our lips, and his service is joy beyond compare. Forgive us for the sins of omission, for slowness of belief, for poverty of prayer, for ignorance of thy word, for besetting sins, for neglect of duty. Help us to redeem the time, to be instant in season and out of season, if only we may hasten the harvest of souls and more speedily usher in the kingdom of our Lord. Help us to dare great things for thee and to expect great things from thee, as thou hast promised. Make us worthy of thy confidence, that we may be worthy of thy commendation when the day is done. Amen."

PURE RICH BLOOD PREVENTS DISEASE

Bad blood is responsible for more ailments than anything else. It causes catarrh, dyspepsia, rheumatism, weak, tired, languid feelings and worse troubles.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has been wonderfully successful in purifying and enriching the blood, removing serofula and other humors, and building up the whole system. Take it—give it to all the family so as to avoid illness. Get it today.

Gospel Advocate Piano Club Prevents Waste.

You will not find many men who would deliberately throw away one hundred dollars, and yet there are many who unintentionally waste that amount every year in one way or another. Careless buying is one of the most common ways of wasting money. The founders of the club had that fact in mind when they adopted the principle of cutting down the cost of pianos by cutting out the waste in marketing them. The club claims to save its members forty per cent, and asks you to give it an opportunity to prove this fact to your entire satisfaction by thoroughly testing the piano in your own home before obligating yourself to pay for it. It will cost you only a postal card to investigate; and if the testimony of club members who have already received their instruments is to be relied upon, you will undoubtedly be delighted with the saving in price, the convenient terms, and the superior quality of the instruments. By uniting our orders in a club of one hundred members, each secures the benefit of the lowest possible factory price, and yet it is responsible only for his own order.

Write for your copy of the catalogue and full particulars to-day. Address The Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

$150.00 SALARY For sixty days work distributing religious literature. No experience or investment necessary. Promotion to broader field for those who show ability. Spare time if you prefer. J. S. Zeigler Co., 200 Harrison State Building, Chicago.

IF YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

The Gospel.

BY JOHN T. POE.

"Gospel" primarily means "good news"—the good news that God loves man, sinful as he is, and is trying by every means known to divine wisdom to save him from his sins and from himself. The gospel as portrayed to us in God's word is many-sided, as we might say.

It is a gospel of courage to the weak and the vacillating sons and daughters of men. It clothes the poor, weak sinner in a robe of righteousness and invests him with the armor, the sword, and the shield of Divinity, and with the promise of God. "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee," bids him fight the good fight of faith and, with the aid of Almighty God, win a victory which has for its reward eternal life, the heirship of all things, and a crown of righteousness that shall shine as the stars. But there is yet more. There is in the gospel a knowledge to be attained which assures us our sins are pardoned and we are made one with the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. Angels are become our messengers, our servants to do our bidding; for, "are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister [serve] for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" There is also the knowledge of sins pardoned—God our Friend, Jesus our Brother, and the Holy Spirit our Comforter; the promises of the life that now is, and that also which is to come. It takes in the present life, with the best joys the soul can enjoy here, and promises the eternal life beyond, with all the joy and pleasure that divine wisdom can devise. And these things come to us through the knowledge which is in Christ Jesus, and which we receive through the gospel as knowledge, and not as a "hope so" or "maybe so;" but, knowing in whom we have believed, we know we are saved and have his promise of eternal life and a home of eternal joy beyond the skies.

There is also the gospel of patience as an attribute of the great gospel he wrought out for us through his own body and blood—a patience which he himself demonstrated in Gethsemane, in the judgment hall, and on Calvary's cross. Think of the agony in Gethsemane, when a guilty world laid its hand upon his head and transferred to him—the innocent One—its awful load of sin. He bore it all. Not one word of reproach. Not once did he lose patience and say: "Why—O, why—must I bear and suffer all this, when I am innocent?" He throws to a guilty world no reproach, no complaint, no threat. Patiently, lovingly, and willingly he bears our guilt—takes our sins and our iniquities, the whole load, and steps in our place, takes our punishment, dies our death, pays to justice the debt we owed, goes to the tomb as we must go, rises again victorious over death and Hades, and presents to the whole human family an assurance of life beyond the grave—a life that is immortal. O, the patience of his life and of his death! When in the judgment hall some one slapped his face, he wearing a blind they had tied over his eyes, he said not a word. They reviled him, and he reviled not again. They taunted him. "Tell us, thou Christ, thou Son of God, who came down from heaven—tell us, who slapped your face? If you are what you claim to be, speak out, and tell us who struck you." He could have told them; he knew then, and has not forgotten yet, who they were; yet he prayed: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." Patience! O, what patience!

Then, again, there is the gospel of godliness. Godliness—like God. O, to be like God, who, in his unselfish love, pours himself out unceasingly in love upon all his creatures, sustaining, feeding, watering, and caring for them all, from the smallest insect up to man; and beyond this world, in myriads of other worlds, doing the same thing. Godliness—doing as God does; pouring one's self out upon others, and enjoying the satisfaction and the glory of lifting up and helping the helpless; living for others that others may live also—true godliness.

But there are yet other things that come to us in the gospel. There is a gospel of "brotherly kindness" which binds us together in the church and makes us one common brotherhood—having all things common, as it were. If my brother is poor and in need, I can help him. It is our privilege to lift him up when he is down, with the assurance that Jesus credits it to us as having been done for him. For he says: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." What a joy it should be to be able to help Jesus when in distress! And this gospel of brotherly kindness will keep us from tattling about our brethren, as though we were better than they. It will enable us to see all the good there is in their lives and to forget the bad. It will make us to respect and love those who have the rule over us, who watch for the good of our souls as those who must give account. We will be careful not to say hard things about them and thus discredit the good they are able to do. We will work with them and sustain them in their arduous work. No one but an elder who has had experience in the work of an elder can ever know what

END STOMACH TROUBLE, GASES OR DYSPEPSIA

"Pape's Diapepsin" makes Sick, Sour, Gassy Stomachs surely feel fine in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach-headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes. Put an end to stomach trouble forever by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest stomach doctor in the world. It's wonderful.

he must bear often for Christ's sake—murmurings, whisperings, backbitings, innuendoes, insinuations, and false accusations, that finally make their way to him along the muddy way of tattling tongues and wring his heart with sorrow as he realizes the ingratitude of hearts that ought to praise and honor him. But the gospel of brotherly kindness will cure it all.

There is yet one more item of the gospel I must mention. It is the gospel of love—love that thinks no evil, suffers long, bears all things, does not vaunt itself as a "know-all" against those who have studied the Bible and have been in the Master's service for more years than they (the tattlers) have lived; love that covers up the faults of others and uncovers its own. O, love—dove of peace, the living joy of souls redeemed—love that flows out from God to us, and from us to all with whom we come in contact, take possession of our souls now! Make us to reverence each other and to build up what we can for God and humanity, and never to pull down, either by word, look, or deed, that which is good, that which is Godlike, and that which lasts for evermore.

And there is in the gospel, for men and women, a peace for the soul which passes all understanding, "while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen"—eternal life, a shining crown, a robe of righteousness, a scepter, and a kingdom; a home where no hunger, no sorrow, no tears, no trouble or aching hearts can ever come; and Jehovah, the Supreme Ruler of the universe, our Father—all this, by the grace of God, ours for the taking, ours in Christ, through the gospel!

Send us $2 for the "Gospel Plan of Salvation." This is a splendid book and has enjoyed a wide reading.

A REMARKABLE STATEMENT

Mrs. Sheldon Spent $1900 for Treatment Without Benefit. Finally Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Englewood, Ill. — "While going through the Change of Life I suffered with headaches, nervousness, flashes of heat, and I suffered so much I did not know what I was doing at times. I spent $1900 on doctors and not one did me any good. One day a lady called at my house and said she had been as sick as I was at one time, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her well, so I took it and now I am just as well as I ever was. I cannot understand why women don't see how much pain and suffering they would escape by taking your medicine. I cannot praise it enough for it saved my life and kept me from the Insane Hospital."—Mrs. E. SHELDON, 5657 S. Halsted St., Englewood, Ill.

Physicians undoubtedly did their best, battled with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complication exists it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

Cutting Down the Cost of Pianos.

Have you ever stopped to ask yourself the question why oranges which sell for five cents each cost only two cents by the box, or why apples sell so much cheaper by the bushel than by a nickel's worth? It is the same way with pianos. If you were to purchase one hundred pianos (eight car loads) from the factory, you would get a much lower price than if you purchased only one. That is why the Gospel Advocate Piano Club, composed of one hundred buyers who club their orders into one big order, is saving its members at least forty per cent on high-grade pianos and player pianos.

You are cordially invited to write for your copy of the club's beautifully illustrated catalogue, which fully explains the big saving in price, the convenient terms, and the guarantees of quality and permanent satisfaction. The Master's Vineyard

Tennessee.

Lafayette, November 8.—My meeting with the church at Pleasant Hill, Monroe County, Ky., began on the third Lord's day in October and continued over the fifth Lord's day. The first week we were hindered much by rain, but the second week the weather was delightful and the audiences large. Seven were baptized and we hope much good was done otherwise. This church is composed of an earnest, faithful band of good size who cooperate well with the preacher.—W. H. Carter.

Woodbury, November 8.—I have not written much lately, but have been busy. During the past year most of my work has been at mission points and with the weaker churches in Cannon County. In August and September last year I assisted in two meetings in this county and moved here in the following October. Forty-five have been baptized and twenty restored. One congregation that had not been meeting for worship for a long time is now at work, and the brethren are meeting at three new places, though at one of these places they began to meet before I visited them. Although the number of additions has not been large, I trust much good has been done, some of which we may not be able to see for quite a long time. I do not think I have ever done a harder year's work nor enjoyed one more. I am perfectly willing to leave the results in the hands of the One who does all things well. Some of the stronger churches have helped to support this work. I am truly thankful to all, and pray that our Heavenly Father may abundantly bless them. I believe the work should continue; but sometimes I think perhaps I could do more good in the Master's vineyard in general evangelistic work than I can by confining myself to the one county, and I am ready to consider whatever calls may come. I want to keep busy and to do the Heavenly Father's will.—J. H. Murrell.

Texas.

Wichita Falls, October 31.—Brother Tice Elkins, of Childress, began with us here one week ago to-night. Most of the brethren had expected only a little meeting, as the arrangements were made for the meeting to begin without much notice. But we soon saw that with little effort it could be made a "big" meeting; indeed, some effort would be required to keep it from being such. Brother Elkins has great power as a preacher, both for waking up the sleeping church members and for arousing a whole community. He has not abused anybody, but he shuns not to declare "the whole counsel of God" in a very clear and forceful way. Four have been baptized so far and one has taken membership. While many are hearing the gospel, the principal feature of the meeting is the benefit the church members are receiving. The day services have been well attended and have been very profitable. I think I can

TO END CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmit (double strength), and add to it $\frac{1}{2}$ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Big Eaters Get Kidney Trouble

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid, which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog, and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness, and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts, or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION SERVICE

Every church should use this cleanly method. Over 25,000 churches now use our system. Our noiseless, dust-proof, self-collecting trays save $\frac{1}{2}$ cost of other systems. Shallow glass used—no tipping of head. Outfits on trial. Give number communicants. THOMAS COMMUNION SERVICE CO., BOX 460, LIMA, OHIO.

Our Duty to Others.

The discharge of our daily duty will immensely affect our influence with others. People are very practical. They do not care to know only what a man thinks or professes, but also what he is and what he does. On the integrity, and diligence, and scrupulousness, and cheerfulness, and punctuality, and exactness, and completeness, and kindness with which we discharge our duties in relationship with those who come into contact with us, much of our usefulness must depend.—Thoreau.

see a respectable church building for the church of Christ in prospect. Like many other brethren have done, the few brethren who built the house here eight years ago selected a small lot on an alley and put up a very sorry house. Our house and lot at present, I suppose, is not worth much more than one thousand dollars. Of course this was a sacrifice for the few brethren who built it, but now our membership numbers about one hundred. None of us are wealthy, but it is estimated that there is twenty-seven thousand nine hundred and fifty dollars invested in homes by the members of this congregation, and this does not include what is invested in musical instruments and automobiles and general house furnishings. Now, if we had only half the interest in the Master's work that we have in ourselves, we could be paying out a fifteen-thousand dollar church building just as we are paying out our homes. This describes the condition at many other places where there are churches of Christ. This is why I speak of these things through the paper. I want the brethren everywhere to think of it in this light. Let the brethren in the large towns and the cities take notice. Of course the church of Christ can worship God acceptably in any old shack, as far as worship is concerned, when that is the best they can do. But there is a class of people who would no more come to the house we have in Wichita Falls to hear preaching than they would put their heads in the fire. This is true in many other towns of this size. In this class there are some folks who would accept the gospel, too, if they could hear it in its ancient simplicity. There is no use to deny this fact. There is a little vanity about me as there is about any man, I believe, but I advocate doing anything and all things legitimate in reaching people with the gospel. If we neglect any means God has placed at our hands, we will be held responsible. The church building is not the only place to preach the gospel, but it is one place, and a very good one when people can be influenced to go there preaching. If you do not have a house that people will go to, you just as well quit preaching there. Now, if I should move to a place where there were a few genuine Christians meeting in a cow shed and that was the best place they could have, there is where I would worship. There is where every true Christian would worship. But if I should stay there long enough to witness the growth of the congregation to a number sufficient to build a respectable place of worship, should see the greater part of the members living in comfortable homes themselves, and still they could not be influenced to build a better place to carry on the work of the Lord, I might not censure people who had been brought up in respectable homes for thinking so little of the church of Christ. I hope to be able to report a movement to build a good house in a good location in Wichita Falls soon. I have confidence in these people. Brother Elkins has clinched some nails I have been driving here for the past two years. May God bless all who have a mind to work.—C. A. Buchanan.

Recipe for Gray Hair.

To half pint of water add one ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded, gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

God's Providence.

The mantle of divine providence is thrown over the entire world. It shields not only the great oak, monarch of the forest, but also the sprig of grass, a tiny shred of the earth's carpet; and if in his infinite watch care God is so vigilant of these least things, will he be unmindful of man, whom he has made the crown and glory of his creation? If he clothes with the beauty of the lily the vegetation of the field which to-day blooms and to-morrow burns, shall he not much more clothe us who are made in his likeness?—Biblical Recorder.

Stops Tobacco Habit.

Elders' Sanitarium, located at 513 Main Street, St. Joseph, Mo., has published a book showing the deadly effect of the tobacco habit, and how it can be stopped in three to five days.

As they are distributing this book free, any one wanting a copy should send his name and address at once.

Doubtful Trust.

It is a poor kind of trust that only trusts because it is blind, and not because it has any faith in those who lead it; to go on wondering and doubting and fearing, reaching out the hand and feeling with the foot, as if those who lead have not a bit more eyesight than the blind man himself. Trust—that is worth the name of trust—just feels so safe that it does not think of asking any questions about it.

TO HEAD OFF CROUP And Make It Harmless Take Foley's Honey and Tar.

Many a mother dreads the approach of nightfall, because it threatens croup. Let her give Foley's Honey and Tar to the little ones, and she may feel secure. It quiets the rising cough, it wards off the approach of croup, it clears the throat of choking and tickling phlegm. Calomel To-day, Sick To-morrow Dose of Nasty Calomel Makes You Sick and You Lose a Day's Work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile, it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated, and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a fifty-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful; and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day, you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you; while if you take Dodson's Liver Tonic, you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition, and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant, and safe to give to children; they like it.

The East Texas Training School.

BY ISAAC E. TACKETT.

The East Texas Training School, at Troup, Texas, moves on nicely. We opened with twenty-one students and have increased to over thirty. Many others are anxious to enter as soon as we can make arrangements to take them on the industrial plan. Our opening enrollment was much better than we had counted on, for, you know, new schools often open with small enrollments. We are taking pay students also, and some that can pay only a part of expenses with money. We have a good opening for about a dozen more that can pay expenses. Our expense rate is unusually low. I would be glad to send particulars to any one interested. Troup is in the center of a great field. We expect to make it a radiating center for gospel work. There are a hundred places in the territory surrounding Troup where young men can preach. Many of these places have small churches that need help in teaching, and many places have no churches, but are fertile soil for gospel teaching. As we grow our borders will extend. We teach literary, commercial, and Bible courses.

Don't think because you have taken many remedies in vain that your case is incurable. Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured many seemingly hopeless cases of scrofula, catarrh, rheumatism, kidney complaint, dyspepsia, and general debility. Take Hood's.

Angels.

It is the teaching of the word of God and of our Lord and Savior, and it has in every age been the belief of the church, that heavenly beings are employed by God to minister to, to watch over, defend, and comfort his servants. Seen or unseen, they are about us. The soldier in the trenches, the sailor amidst the perils of the deep, the priest waging battle as a "knight of God" with human sin and misery—all have about them the ministering spirits sent forth by the God of men and angels to aid and protect his own. May we not pray as Elisha prayed: "Lord, open the young man's eyes?" And is it not conceivable that to those who are looking death in the face day by day, and to whom the unseen world is a great reality, there may be vouchsafed in answer to that prayer a consciousness of the presence of the chariots of Israel and the horsemen thereof?—Church Life.

MONEY IN PIGEONS

Make Your Back Yard Profitable

THE demand for squabs in the Northern, Eastern and Southern markets has never been supplied, because pigeon raising as a business is comparatively new. Buy a half dozen pair of select birds, fence in a small portion of your back yard, and watch them go to work. Success is easy. They raise from eight to fifteen pairs of squabs a year. Your squabs and fancy birds will bring handsome returns. You will actually make money in a hitherto useless part of your back yard. Pigeon raising is not a fad or fancy. It is a profitable business. Let us start you right. Our breeders are the best, and raised from prize winning parents. We will furnish you with the birds and teach you how to raise them, and you will reap a handsome profit with a very little outlay. Thousands are taking advantage of this same opportunity. Write to-day for our literature on pigeon raising as a money making proposition, or better still, write us to send you a few pair of Belgian Carneaux at $3.00 per pair, White Swiss Mondaines at $5.00 per pair, White Kings at $3.50 per pair, or White Maltese at $4.00 per pair. Our birds are all guaranteed. Your money back if after two months you are not satisfied with their work. Retailer prices on larger orders. Write to-day and get the pick of the flock.

CHURCH NEWS

Arkansas.

Rogers, November 14.—I preached at Centerton last Lord's day and took the confession of a bright young man, and in the evening baptized him. The church at Centerton is waking up. In fact, the three congregations in Benton County are waking up. We are going to call a man to this field and support him for all of his time. I want to thank the brethren who have been so kind to respond to the call for a preacher at this place. I would like to answer each one with a personal letter; but as time is precious and as we have already arranged with a brother to take up this work, I will just let this answer all the letters.—A. F. Warren.

Kentucky.

Monticello, November 13.—Our meeting closed at Stop, yesterday, with an "all-day service." We began with baptizing at 9 A.M., preaching at 11 A.M., baptizing at 3 P.M., and preaching at 7 P.M. It might be a good idea to change the name of this little city.—J. D. Walling.

Buechel, Route 10, November 13.—We had an increased attendance at the Highland Bible classes yesterday and a fine attendance at the preaching service, with a contribution of nearly fifty dollars. Eleven young men took part in the seven-o'clock meeting. Brother Fisher was at the colored mission in the afternoon. We now have about forty-seven meetings a month, and we are not in a protracted meeting, either.—Don Carlos Janes.

Mississippi.

The word of the Lord has been sounded out in North Mississippi this year. Many have been baptized into Christ, new congregations have been set in order, and older ones have taken an unusual interest in the work. In meetings conducted by J. P. Lowrey here this year, forty-three have been baptized. There have been other successful meetings conducted by C. S. Austin, A. G. Freed, and others. Well-established congregations in Tennessee could do a great work by supporting a preacher in Central or Southern Mississippi. I do not mean to say that North Mississippi does not need any preaching. There are many, many communities where the simple gospel of Christ has never been preached in its simplicity.—Fred Blanchard.

Ohio.

Dalzell, November 7.—I began a meeting here last Saturday night. Splendid audiences are attending. The meeting at Trimble closed with the most happy results. Five were baptized, two united with the congregation from the Methodists who had been immersed, and five accepted invitations to erring Christians. Those added to the fellowship of the congregation were very desirable. The church there has passed through fiery trials. By the introduction of the ways of di-

How to Treat a Cold.

Such pulmonary diseases as colds, croup, hoarseness, coughs, and similar troubles represent inflammation of the organs of breathing, usually accompanied by excessive secretions.

These secretions are at first quite fluid and medication can penetrate to the membranes through the fluid.

As evaporation occurs the secretions harden into thick and finally more or less solid phlegm which is practically impenetrable to medication, as of necessity such medication must be largely by inhalation.

Under these conditions the problem is to remove the obstructions and reach the inflamed membranes with the proper medication.

Mentholatum is excellent for this purpose.

Its pungent volatile oils are quite penetrating. They excite a fresh flow of secretion which loosens the hardened phlegm and admits of its being thrown off.

These oils then act upon the membranes as a delicate counter-irritant, allaying inflammation and encouraging restoration to normal health conditions.

10 CENT "CASCARETS"
FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Cure Sick Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath—Candy Cathartic.

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get relief with Cascarets. They immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and head clear for months. They work while you sleep.

Send us five cents for the tract, "Walking by Faith."

In the Treatment of Tuberculosis

remember that first aid to relief is found in abundance of fresh air—day and night—freedom from over-exertion and pure food.

Attention to these matters should do much to arrest the progress of the malady, but in many cases there is need for extra help. Where Nature has to work with a weakened body her power is limited.

Under such circumstances, try Eckman's Alterative, which has been used with large benefit by many sufferers. In numerous cases it has helped to bring about recovery. Also it has been successful in treating asthma and bronchial troubles.

And since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, its use is not attended with danger. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

Real Property.

Property in the spiritual sense is real property. Your good resolutions are a part of you even after you break them. Your right intention is as much yours as the money in your purse, even though you do not know just how to make it effective. Life is more like a bank than a motion picture. The good that is in us does draw interest, and the bad in us cannot entirely cancel the gain. There lies the true doctrine of God's forgiveness of sins. For our comfort we talk of his "blotting them out." The Bible does. The priest's absolution does. The worst man who really repents deserves that comfort. But Christ's words to the penitent woman imply more than this: "Go, and sin no more." The command means that the thing commanded was possible. All that we have in us of good is no less real than our sins. Rather, it is more real, since it may survive them.—Wallace Herbert Blake.

To Darken Hair Apply Sage Tea

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss, and Attractiveness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked, and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked, or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a fifty-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft, and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of disease.

The kind and chief design of God, in all his severest dispensations, is to melt and soften our hearts to such degrees as he finds necessary in order to the good purposes of his grace.—Francis Atterbury.

To Live Long!

A receipt given by a famous physician for long life was: "Keep the kidneys in good order! Try to eliminate thru the skin and intestines the poisons that otherwise clog the kidneys. Avoid eating meat as much as possible; avoid too much salt, alcohol, tea. Try a milk and vegetable diet. Drink plenty of water, and exercise so you sweat—the skin helps to eliminate the toxic poisons and uric acid."

For those past middle life, for those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation, as backache, scalding "water," or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, "rusty" joints, stiffness, get Anuric at the drug store. This is a wonderful eliminator of uric acid and was discovered by Dr. Pierce of Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. If your druggist does not keep it send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for trial package and you will know that it is many times more potent than lithia and that it dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

WHEN IT LOOKS DARK to any weak or ailing woman, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription comes to her help.

For "female complaints," pains, internal inflammation or ulceration, bearing-down sensations, and all chronic weaknesses and derangements, this is the proven remedy. It's the only one so sure that it can be guaranteed. "Favorite Prescription" will benefit or cure, in the case of every tired and afflicted woman.

An easily procured vegetable pill is made up of May-apple, the dried juice of the leaves of aloes, and the root of jalap, made into a tiny pellet and coated with sugar. It was first put into ready-to-use form by Dr. Pierce nearly 50 years ago. Almost every drug store in this country sells these vegetable pellets in vials for 25c—simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They have Dr. E. V. Pierce stamp.

A Christian Virtue.

Humility among Christians is a practical virtue, not a self-suppressing pose. It is not so much making ourselves small as seeing how small we are. But smallness implies contrast. If everything in the universe were small, nothing would be small in any real sense, for we should have no sense of smallness or bigness. If we find our tasks mean, it is because we have within us the promise of tasks that shall be mighty.—W. H. Blake.

IS EPILEPSY CONQUERED?

New Jersey Physician Said to Have Many Cures to His Credit.

Red Bank, N. J. (Special).—Advices from every direction fully confirm previous reports that the remarkable treatment for epilepsy being administered by the consulting physician of the Kline Laboratories of this city is achieving wonderful results. Old and stubborn cases have been greatly benefited and many patients claim to have been entirely cured.

Persons suffering from epilepsy should write at once to Kline Laboratories, Branch 16, Red Bank, N. J., for a supply of the remedy, which is being distributed gratuitously.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise—splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back—can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water, with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile, and poisonous toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening, and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste, and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast, and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make any one who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble, or rheumatism, a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

Happiness and Duty.

Happiness dwells in duty performed. It will never yield its blessed treasures to the selfish seeker, nor can it be grasped with a greedy or unwashed hand. Happiness is a mosaic, composed of the tiny stones of daily duty, love to God, love to our fellow-man. Viewed singly they seem of small value; but when they are grouped together, and combined in Christian character, they constitute that costly jewel called "happiness."

Woman's Crowning Glory

is beautiful hair—coveted by all, but possessed by few. If you have allowed your hair to become coarse, stiff, streaked with gray or void of its original luster, the trouble lies in the absence of the natural hair oil. There can be no life without food; so unless the hair is well fed with proper oil, it cannot be expected to retain its luster and beauty.

La Creole Hair Color Restorer, when applied to the scalp, will restore those ugly, grizzly hairs to their natural color and at the same time leave the hair light and fluffy.

The tremendous success of La Creole Hair Dressing has encouraged a large number of imitations. The merit of this preparation has been proven through fifty years, continuous use; and just as counterfeit money never reaches the same high plane of value as the genuine, so none of the imitations of "La Creole" Hair Dressing ever attain the peculiar value of the original. Ask for La Creole Hair Dressing and refuse to accept any substitute. For sale by all dealers. Price, one dollar. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

God's Wrath Upon Elymas, Ananias, and Diotrefes.

BY J. J. VANHOUSEN.

Once upon a time, in the far remote days of Christianity, when God, in his infinite goodness and loving-kindness, was having the gospel preached for the redemption of mankind, there was a man by the name of "Elymas," who stepped between Paul and the man to whom Paul was preaching and tried to prevent the man from being instructed by Paul. For that nefarious act the wrath of God was manifested when Paul, by the power of God, by a severe rebuke, struck the intruder with blindness. In this we have a manifestation of God's wrath against a man who will prevent an honorable preacher from instructing a man how to be saved; and if God would serve one man that way to demonstrate his wrath as a sample against such work, what will he eventually do toward two or three men who will prevent an honorable man from preaching to one or two hundred? Surely it must have been the meditation upon this that enthused T. B. McCauley to say: "Whoever hinders the expansion of Christianity in any way in the world, or tries to injure it, is guilty of high treason against God and the civilization of mankind."

Paul informed the church at Corinth that he might use his power upon some of them in proof of his apostleship; and John mildly threatened Diotrefes that he might use that power and humiliate him for refusing to receive into the congregation where he ruled those whom he knew had obeyed the gospel; and Peter did use that power upon Ananias for acting dishonest with money for the church. And did not Paul say: "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness?" (Rom. 1: 18.) These men all knew that the truth condemned their way, and they wanted things their way for what they could gain by their dishonest acts. To this day every overt unrighteous act in the church is for the self-interest of the one who does the act or for his friends! And have not all wrongs been in opposition to righteousness? The Scriptures show that some men in the church opposed the apostles, like Diotrefes; also, they show that some who were looked up to as very honorable men and women, who were not in the church, were among the leaders of the mobs who were not satisfied with the gospel. It appears that about all of the opposers to Christianity have based their opposition upon the faults and failures of men. They fail to see that true Christianity is not the faults and fail-

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

ures of men, but it is to prevent them. One of the strongest standing arguments in favor of New Testament Christianity is the warning against false teachers, arbitrary rulers in the church, men of corrupt minds, speaking perverse things and making merchandise of the gospel. Diotrefes was a fair sample. He loved to have the preëminence. He would not receive the apostles. He made fun of the apostle John for sanctioning the receiving of brethren into the congregation where he ruled. He would not permit members of his church to receive any one into the church (pastor-like). He, it appears, would not do that himself. He turned the members out who received those brethren. He put a stop to the congregation's receiving the brethren. John does not say just how this receiving was done, but his language shows that there was some formality about it, and he approved of that action. Paul called that kind of receiving "the right hands of fellowship." "And when they were come to Jerusalem, they [Paul and Barnabas] were received of the church, and of the apostles and elders." (Acts 15: 4.) Paul, speaking of this, said: "And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship." (Gal. 2: 9.) Paul and Barnabas had already been chosen to the ministry. Here was an example. The apostles gave and received the hand of fellowship. We are to follow them. As soon as we learn of the grace bestowed upon a person and that he is a true Christian, if we do not give him the right hand of fellowship, we do not follow the example given by James, Peter, John, Barnabas, and Paul. It appears like Diotrefes did not approve of the example. He would have turned the apostles out.

In the Sick Room.

In the rounds of my duties I visit many sick people. Ostensibly the purpose of the gospel preacher’s visit to the sick room is to help the sick. But sometimes I think the preacher receives the greater benefit. It occurs to me that in such places I have been drawn closer to God in humility and in conscious need of divine help than anywhere else. Again, I never feel the power of God’s word and the wonder of his promises so much as I feel it in the atmosphere of death. In visiting the Christian sick, I have been struck with the fact that in nearly every case the patient is both cheerful and submissive. Sickness and sufferings bring out the fruits of the Spirit as nothing else can do.

We read that Æneas had kept his bed eight years. This would make him an object of profound pity, but not necessarily a hopeless and despairing creature. It is true there are many discomforts incidental to long sickness. There is the terrible monotony of it, the care one is to one’s loved ones, the dropping out of the busy work and interests of life. But let us not overlook the fact that the bed-ridden brother has his blessings, too. Undistracted at least by outward affairs, the sick man has a chance to think much about God. He may come very close to Christ, the good Physician. He may realize the full blessedness of prayer. He may especially appreciate the kindness and thoughtfulness of friends. Not long since a brother who had sustained a very serious accident wrote me that “he never knew before how many friends he had nor how good they were.”

The Art of Dependence Upon God.

A German theologian defined religion as the “art of dependence upon God.” That is not all of religion, but it is surely a great part of it. And here is where sickness helps us to learn the art. So long as things run smoothly and we are enjoying fine health, we are apt to depend upon our own resources; but when sickness enters, privation is felt, or bereavement comes upon us, then we realize the frailty of ourselves and instinctively turn toward our Heavenly Father for strength and comfort.

How truly said that “man’s extremity is God’s opportunity!” God operates in the realms of the humanly impossible. To feel the sense of need, to realize the imperative need of divine interposition, to throw ourselves fully upon divine mercy—these are the things that make for intercessory prayer and displays of divine grace. A king once led forth his steel-clad soldiers to secure the submission of a people struggling for their freedom. Just before the battle he saw their ranks bowed to the ground. “See,” he cried, “they submit already.” “Yes,” said a wise counselor who knew them better, “they submit; but it is to God, not to us.” And in a few hours the king and his army were scattered. It should not require any special effort to find a scene like this in the Old Testament or in the New Testament, or in our own lives.

The Best Authenticated Event in History.

This has been rightly said of the resurrection of Christ. Dr. W. L. Watkinson shows the superiority of New Testament proofs over those advanced by men. “Certain scientists,” he writes, “are diligently seeking for facts to authenticate the belief that the dead reappear, so finding a scientific basis for the doctrine of immortality. But we who believe in Jesus are not deeply interested in these researches. One has come back from the grave, and shows himself alive by many infallible signs. Upon the Living One, who conquered death and the grave, we build, nor will we suffer shame.”

On this point George William Douglas writes: "If on grounds of historic evidence we have any security that Cæsar Augustus or Pontius Pilate lived, we have vastly more security that Jesus Christ both lived and rose again. For human history is a matter of documents and manuscripts, of monuments and institutions; and there is actually to-day more extant evidence of that kind open to scholars and antiquarians in favor of the gospel story of the life and death and resurrection of the man Christ Jesus than exists for the accredited history of any of Christ's contemporaries." To this we should add the comprehensive statement of Sydney Smith: "Every piece of scripture recognizes the resurrection, every epistle of every apostle, every author contemporary with the apostles, of the age immediately succeeding the apostles."

What It Means to Us.

It is upon the best authenticated event in history that Paul bases the certainty of the Christian's hope. In the first Corinthian letter he discusses what would be the situation if Christ had not risen from the dead. In that case his preaching is vain, their faith is vain, they are in their sins, the dead in Christ have perished, we are of all men most pitiable. "But now," shouts Paul with triumphant voice, "all these things are not true; their exact opposites are true, for Christ is risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that are asleep in death; the pledge that those who sleep and are yet to sleep will also have a resurrection life." As the first sheaf of the harvest presented to God as a thank offering was the assurance of the ingathering of the whole harvest, so the resurrection of Christ is both a pledge and a proof of the resurrection of his people. With the indisputable proofs at hand, Paul was able to write these comforting words: "We would not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them that fall asleep; that ye sorrow not, even as the rest, who have no hope." Catullus, the Roman writer, sadly affirms: "The suns die and are able to return. As for us, when once our brief light goes out, we sleep in one perpetual night." Not true of Christians. We shall ever be with the Lord. On one side of the Vatican there are heathen inscriptions from the tombs, such as this: "Farewell; farewell; forever farewell." But on the other side are Christian inscriptions from the catacombs: "In peace," "In Christ," "In hope."

It is the best authenticated fact in history, too, that can convert the bleak, dreary cemetery into a spot that one of our poets has called "The Garden of Our God." A little four-year-old was walking one day with her father through the village cemetery, when she pointed to the graves and asked: "What are those for?" "They belong to the people who have gone to heaven," was the answer her father made. "Then," she remarked after a moment's thought, "here is where they have left their clothes."

Not once or twice, but many times the lisping tongue of a child has unconsciously expressed some great eternal truth of God's word as this child did. For so Paul taught, and so I believe.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Preachers, Old and Young. No. 5.

BY W. H. CARTER.

There is not one—shall I say it? Yes, I must say it—who has the love of God shed abroad in his heart, who loves the cause of our blessed Redeemer and has a burning desire to see it prosper, and knows God's system and ways and means of enlightening the world and enlarging the borders of Zion, that does not rejoice, deep down in his soul, to know that there is an army—a great army—of young men to-day who have laid their lives, their earthly hopes, ambitions, and aspirations, upon the sacrificial altar, that they may hold up the blood-stained banner of heaven's King and direct the millions of wandering feet into the path of holiness, peace, and loving service to God. I speak of the young men who will not allow themselves to be allured by Satan to depart from "thus it is written" for the sake of the applause of men or the favor of the world; young men who, if the will of God be so, are willing to "endure hardness as good soldiers," and suffer for Christ; young men who know too well and appreciate the word of the Lord too highly to barter it off for the speculative theories of men, that they may win for the time being the favor of men. God bless and prosper and keep those who are truly noble; and may the ignoble, if such there be, soon learn that they have missed their calling. My dear young brethren, my fellow-laborers in the gospel of the Son of God, do you claim that you have been called by the gospel of the grace of God to the ministry of the word? Then hold fast the profession of your faith without wavering; "walk worthy of the vocation whereunto ye are called;" "make full proof of thy ministry;" be "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed;" "preach the word." Don't be overanxious about results; leave that with the Lord; but be exceedingly anxious about your fidelity to him.

Be watchful and careful concerning the many pitfalls and cunning connivings of Satan. When he affirms, "There is no harm in this," be sure that you "walk circumspectly." It is better to lose the praise of men and the friendship of the world than the reward of the faithful. O, there are so many allurements, so many deceptions, so many different things—different kinds of things—to draw one away. Live right close up to God's Book. Like Enoch, Noah, and the true and faithful of old, "walk with God." One of the greatest curses out of hell to-day is woman—a stylish, fashionable, up-to-date woman; one who wants to stand on an equality with man, if not ahead of him, in everything; one who has fallen from her God-appointed sphere and thinks she can reform a filthy thing by becoming as filthy as it is. You will notice that I do not mean all women. God made woman pure, upright, good, and sweet, and gave her to man to be a help to him, but not to govern and control him. I thank God that there are mothers in Israel to-day who appreciate their place in life, who obey God and are content to remain and work as God directs. Neither do I mean that there are no bad men. There are some men who are as mean as some women, and some women as good as some men; but, my young brother, it is the wicked of all classes that are to be watched. In watching them we are watching Satan, and in resisting them we are resisting the devil, for the devil works through men and women—not through men only, but through men and women. A bad woman, one who is intelligent, bright, pretty, and winning, but ignorant of God's ways and aspiring to and seeking after notoriety, is the one who does much evil because of her influence over man. For this reason the devil uses her. Choose the good and pure and loyal to God, both of men and women, for your associates and counselors.

Yes, there are so many ways in which Satan seeks an advantage that we need to be constantly on the alert. "Old wives' fables" and the "counsel of the ungodly" are to be avoided. Paul admonished a young preacher to keep himself pure, to let no man despise his youth, but to "be an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity"—purity in teaching as well as in morals; purity in practice as well as in worship. Of this class the prophet said: "One of you shall chase a thousand, and two shall put ten thousand to flight." Our strength does not lie in the wisdom of men, but in the wisdom of God. Surely we are living in a perilous time. People are pleasure loving and pleasure hunting; they are heaping to themselves teachers; they have "itching ears" for something more up to date; they delight more in speculative theories than the solid facts, the plain truth, the blessed law of the Giver of all good and the Savior of men. The church of to-day needs to be saved from those who pretend to be her friends, who, perhaps, honestly think they are, but are deceived. Who is the friend of God to-day? It is not the man who is courting favor with the world—who is the friend of the world. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

Now, to seek the praise of men, to desire that by men we shall be called "popular," is a sure start on the downward grade. Be not anxious about what men may say or think, but be exceedingly anxious about what God is thinking of you and what our dear Redeemer will say to you when he comes. Do not become worried about your position, nor entertain a fear of being crowded out. The field for faithful workers is large and there is plenty of room for you—for all of you. The field of notions and opinions and speculative theories is badly crowded just now. I have been told that "sixty" preachers have recently pitched their tent toward it. That will only leave the more room for you on higher and safer ground—ground where God, his Son, the Holy Spirit, the apostles, and the truly "loyal" stand.

By the zeal of Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, the wrath of God was turned from Israel. They had departed from God's law and had done abominable things. Even so to-day there are departures from the right way. Men of zeal for the cause of God are in great need. Elijah said: "I have been very jealous for the Lord God of hosts: for the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away." (1 Kings 19: 10.) The man who is jealous for the cause of God will endure hardness and suffer persecution.

Young man, what is your purpose? Are you planning and looking for a "soft place," a "city job," a "pastorate" on a good salary? If so, may God pity you. Is your heart set on the highways and byways? Are you longing to carry the glorious tidings to people who have not heard the plain and simple truth as it is in Jesus? May God bless you. You will succeed. With prayers ascending to the throne of grace in your behalf, and hoping and trusting that he will make of you true and faithful and mighty watchmen on the walls of Zion, I now close these letters. Love for you and for the cause of our blessed Redeemer has prompted me to write. If I have said anything that you think needs to be criticized, in kindness and love I ask you to write me. I am still living at Lafayette, Tenn.

"Bible Wines," Again.

BY E. S. JELLEY.

When I wrote my criticism of the article on Bible wines in the Gospel Advocate of March 23, I naturally expected courteous treatment, and I was not disappointed, the editor even putting himself to a disadvantage in order to secure prompt publication of my criticism, writing at a distance from his works of reference, and giving my criticism and his comments a place in the same issue.

In the comment ("Wine in the Communion Service," page 778, August 3), however, there are several (unintentional) absolute misstatements of the position I occupy, which I have no doubt will be gladly corrected. I said: "It would take a great deal of Hebrew and Greek to convince a great many disciples that God contradicted himself." In the reply it is said: "It seems that it would take several passages to convince Brother Jelley that a given conclusion is true; but we are glad to say that when there is even one passage which can 'possibly lead to that conclusion,' it settles it with us." (Italics mine.—E. S. J.) Now, as I never asked for several positive passages on that or any other subject, I will submit that the above puts me in an unfair light. It does more. It puts the writer of the comment in an unfair light also; for there are passages which can possibly lead some people to the conclusion that pouring and instrumental music are New-Covenant institutions. Still I do not suppose those passages will lead to "a revolutionary course" on the part of the author of "Instrumental Music in the Worship."

The verse referred to, which "settles it with us," is Hos. 4: 11: "Whoredom and wine [yeyin] and new wine [tirosh] take away the heart." Gesenius quotes this to show that tirosh was necessarily intoxicating, and I said he was a very prejudiced authority. "A wholly gratuitous assertion," "for which he offers no proof." Well, I offered thirty-one passages of scripture containing "tirosh;" but they are "no proof," and Brother Jelley is held up as an unreasonable critic.

I submit that the passage in question might possibly lead to the conclusion of Gesenius, but does not prove it at all, that whoredom and music halls and baseball take away the heart. So do soda fountains, as any druggist can tell you; but they are not intoxicating.

"Our brother offers no proof that the wine in question was called by the Hebrew term 'tirosh' because it was 'a valuable possession of the man; and, since we know that 'tirosh' is derived from a root meaning 'to possess,' we stand by the decision of Hebrew scholars that it was so called because of its nature, when taken in sufficient quantity, to get possession of man's brain or intellectual powers." Again I offered "no proof," although I quoted Young, the author of "The Literal Translation" Bible and Young's Analytical Concordance and dozens of other works on Hebrew and Chaldee, than whom no greater Hebrew scholar ever lived. He said "tirosh" means "what is possessed." The fact is, Hebrew verbs all have both active and passive meanings. There are seven voices—as, to possess, to be possessed, to possess largely, to cause to possess, etc. (See any Hebrew Primer or Grammar).

"Our brotherly critic says: 'Brother M. C. Kurfees says methuo means to be drunken. Donegan says it means literally to indulge to excess. [I said more. I mentioned its use in the Septuagint to mean "well watered."—E. S. J.] Very well; what if Donegan does say 'it means literally to indulge to excess?' Is that not in harmony with our contention that the word meant 'to be drunken?'" Not at all, except in the sense of past participle of 'to drink.' I might use lemonade to excess, but it would not be quite the same as getting intoxicated.

I refrain from rediscussing the original subject, for I believe that has been well handled on both sides; but I will submit that, while I gave proofs of the highest order (scriptural and linguistic) for every statement, I have been repeatedly held up as the writer of an unreasonable criticism without having offered any proof.

But see Paul crush me! "And this word [methuo], let the reader bear in mind, is the identical word used by Paul to describe the wine used in the communion service. And so no matter whether Brother Jelley would 'believe even the Corinthian Christians would have represented Christ's pure and life-giving blood by that which steals a man's brains and makes him worse than a beast' or not, Paul represented the element by a word which has that exact meaning." Of course such logic cannot be withstood, because the writer sees fit to assume that to saturate or use to excess is always the same as to inebriate or become intoxicated. Therefore his conclusion is "inevitable" and my belief or disbelief "does not matter." I only use "indiscriminate reasoning on religious matters," and my quotation of 2 Thess. 5: 22; 1 Cor. 15: 49; and Prov. 23: 31, 32, while not noticed, is, nevertheless, demolished by advice to Brother Jelley not to overeat or overdrink and the statement that "the Scriptures do not specify the one [fermented or unfermented wine] to the exclusion of the other."

"Together."

BY J. D. WALLING.

Words are the signs of ideas. When one wishes to make his thoughts known, he uses the words that will best do this. We find the word "together" often used in the Bible. "For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." (Matt. 18: 20.) Here we have the idea of association, company—"gathered together." "So that they are no more two, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." (Matt. 19: 6.) Here we have not only the thought of companionship, but oneness—"joined together." "But the Pharisees, when they heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence, gathered themselves together. . . . Now while the Pharisees were gathered together." (Matt. 22: 34, 41.) They were in company with each other, associated one with the other. "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, that killeth the prophets, and stoneth them that are sent unto her! how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!" (Matt. 23: 37.) Certainly the Savior used the word "together" to convey an idea of association; being one with the other. Paul so uses the word in Heb. 10: 25: "Not forsaking our own assembling together, as the custom of some is." That is, on stated occasions some came to associate one with the other, and some did not. "In whom each several building, fitly framed together, groweth into a holy temple in the Lord; in whom ye also are builded together for a habitation of God in the spirit." (Eph. 2: 21.) To be sure, such an association should be a sweet companionship—"together" "with him." "But speaking truth in love, may grow up in all things into him, who is the head, even Christ; from whom all the body fitly framed and knit together through that which every joint supplieth, according to the working in due measure of each several part, maketh the increase of the body unto the building up of itself in love." (Eph. 4: 15, 16.) The use of the word in these scriptures should help us to understand its meaning in others. "And you, being dead through your trespasses and the uncircumcision of your flesh, you, I say, did he make alive together with him, having forgiven us all our trespasses." (Col. 2: 13.) Made "alive together with him." But he was put to death on the cross and buried in the tomb, made alive while in the tomb, and raised up from it. "Knowing this, that our old man was crucified with him, that the body of sin might be done away, that so we should no longer be in bondage to sin." (Rom. 6: 6.) Crucified with him—together in death. "But if we died with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him." (Verse 8.) With him in his death. "We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life. For if we have become united with him in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." (Verses 4, 5.) "And raised us up with him, and made us to sit with him in the heavenly places, in Christ Jesus." (Eph. 2: 6.) "For God appointed us not unto wrath, but unto the obtaining of salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him." (1 Thess. 5: 9.) "Then we that are alive, that are left, shall together with them be caught up in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." (1 Thess. 4: 17.) But if we have only had a little water sprinkled on us for baptism, we have none of the aforementioned blessings. We have not been with him in his death, his burial, his quickening, or his resurrection. The same is also true if we should claim salvation before baptism. If one is saved before baptism, he is not "made alive together with Christ," as Paul states in Eph. 2: 5; for Christ was made alive in the tomb. To be "made alive together with him," one must be in the tomb with him. But all who obey him are with him in his crucifixion (Rom. 6: 6), his death (verse 3), his burial (verses 4, 5), his quickening (Eph. 2: 5; Col. 2: 13), his resurrection (Eph. 2: 6; Col. 2: 12); live with him (1 Thess. 5: 10); reign with him (2 Tim. 2: 12); are caught up together with him (1 Thess. 4: 17) and glorified with him (Rom. 8: 17). Sinner friend, would you enjoy all spiritual blessings? Then obey him.

"The New Rationalism."

BY JEWELL MATTHEWS.

The movement of "new rationalism" is of recent origin and development. The infidel and skeptic can no longer appeal to the world under their true colors; so they must come to us under decent covering. Hence they disguise themselves in religion. The religious world's greatest enemy at this time is the new school of rationalism. We do not fear the avowed rationalist, but we do fear the infidel who comes to us under the cover of religion. One deplorable fact is that church people in general do not realize what damaging progress this movement is making. It is only recently that a few religious journals have come out boldly against this form of infidelity. I pray God that the public may know at once what "new rationalism" really is. The religious press, the great educating factor of the masses, must be induced to fight this "religious infidelity."

It has been the writer's privilege of recently associating with some of the learned leaders of the movement in the University of Chicago. If you want to get a clear insight into this movement, go to the fountain head—one of the great universities of our country. The writer was accused by his rationalist classmates of being "orthodox," "an old-timer," "behind the times," "from the sticks." It is not popular to be orthodox in the University of Chicago. To advocate or preach faith, repentance, and baptism as a means of getting into the kingdom of God's dear Son would brand you a "back number" or "an ignorant numskull." Their cry is: "Get away from legalism." Baptism as being a means of getting into Christ is hooted and laughed at. One professor with a number of degrees attached to his name remarked one day in class: "I once had a good old aunt who was very orthodox. Every time a candidate was to be baptized, she occupied a place near the baptistery, so that she could see that the candidate was wholly immersed. If the baptist failed to immerse so much as the tip end of the candidate's nose, she made him do it over. [Laughter.] Now, I was immersed myself; but I do not care how water is applied, or whether it is applied at all or not, as my reason does not tell me that it is a means of grace." After saying this, he read a pamphlet written by one of our brethren, in which said brother gave the conditions of becoming a Christian. The learned professor said this pamphlet was a fair example of hated legalism. The pamphlet appeared to be a very comical production, as most of the class and the teacher laughed all the while it was being read. They call this making fun of the gospel of our Lord progress, development! But there is coming a day when God will laugh at the calamities of these high-browed infidels who laugh at the word of our beloved Christ.

I shall now give you the benefit of some notes which I took in the classroom of one of America's most eminent theologians. These notes show his idea of punishment.

"Guilt is drawn almost wholly from penalty. A man who is a criminal has no rights. This conception is a survival of the idea that a criminal should always be tortured. During the Middle Ages every device of punishment was devised to inflict pain upon the criminal. They thought God the same way. They thought God maintained a torturing cell or chamber. When you want to see your enemies suffer, that is a sign that you still have some of the primitive man in you. During the early part of the century people in England purchased seats in order that they might see a man burn. But the idea that God punishes has gone out of the world. The world is coming to see that God's punishments are not really punishments. We now want to cure wrongs instead of inflicting punishment. Analogy of hell is not that of a punishment, but the idea of an insane asylum." How do you like this? Sounds nice, does it not? When you send your boys and girls to one of the great universities, this is the "trash" that is given to their minds.

Doing the Work of an Evangelist.

BY JOHN E. DUNN.

"Do the work of an evangelist, fulfill thy ministry." There are three letters in the New Testament that were written by the apostle Paul to two young evangelists, telling them what to preach and how to behave themselves in "the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth." These letters are First and Second Timothy and Titus.

About the time I began publicly proclaiming the gospel of Christ, I made a careful study of these three letters. It had been impressed on my mind that these letters were designed of God for the instruction of all those who chose to do the work I was then undertaking. For twenty-five years (I am now rounding out my twenty-fifth year as an evangelist, having begun this work in June, 1892) I have been trying to heed Paul's admonition to Timothy. I consider Paul's life from his baptism until his death the model in example, and his letters to Timothy and Titus the perfect instruction that completely furnishes the evangelist unto every good work as an evangelist of the gospel of Christ.

During this quarter of a century I have made it my aim to preach the gospel in new fields, to build up the weak churches, and to teach all the churches where I have gone to sound out the word of the Lord. I do not have before me a complete record of all of my work, but I feel sure I have averaged setting in order as many as two churches a year—fifty in the twenty-five years. I have never in any instance sought employment by an old, established church. I have never wanted to be what is termed a "pastor." I have in a number of instances refused calls to do this kind of work. I have often desired to locate permanently with some church that understood and loved New Testament evangelism and, as an evangelist of the church, do the work of an evangelist. I have never been able to make such an arrangement. I believe it would be far better to be an evangelist of a church than to be what we call an "independent evangelist." This is a point at which I believe both churches and evangelists are sadly at fault.

The most satisfactory work, to my own mind, I have ever done is the five years and seven months' work I did under the auspices of the Campbell Street church of Christ, of Louisville, Ky. I have sometimes regretted that I ever gave up this work. During those years we did a great deal of good work. We had rich results, and, so far as I have ever been able to see, did a thoroughly scriptural work.

In some instances I have labored at one place, in order to get the cause firmly established, as long as four months at a time. I do not believe in stirring up a sensational interest, baptizing a large number of people, and leaving them untaught, to be devoured by ravening wolves. I have made it my aim to teach publicly and from house to house. I have in many instances converted my work into a Bible school, and day and night for a season taught Bible classes. I have found this a profitable work, especially during the winter and early spring. In a sense my work has been carefully planned, and I have worked to the plan. In another sense I have followed the overruling hand of God and have gone wherever and whenever God opened up the way. The loudest call I ever had to preach came from a man who signed his name with the suffix "a sinner." It was from a sinner to come to a town where there was no church and the gospel had not been preached.

I am in the prime of life and in good health. I feel like I shall be able to give another quarter of a century of my life to the doing of the work of an evangelist. If it be the will of God, I earnestly desire to spend a half of a century here on earth in active service in the extension of the kingdom. For twenty-five years I have preached nearly every day and night. I have traveled a great deal over the South and West. Somehow, I have never been called to preach in the North and East. Sometimes it seems that my work has been too much scattered. I may have moved too much. I believe in centralizing one's work as much as one can. In the New Testament we have the record of the worker who centralized his work. Example: The apostle James. We also have the example of the worker who spent the whole of his life in traveling from city to city and from one country to another. Example: The apostle Paul.

In this connection I wish to say to my brethren and the churches that my life is wholly given to this work, and whenever and wherever I can be of service in spreading the gospel, converting sinners, and building up churches after the New Testament order, I want to be used till God shall call me home. I have always had some difficulty in finding opportunities for work the first months of the year—say, from January to the first of May. During summer and autumn—from May till the end of the year—frequently, if I could convert myself into a dozen men, I would be kept busy. Just now I have time open for the first months of the new year, 1917. I should like to use every day of the time.

I have never been fully satisfied with my work. I can look back over the past and see many mistakes I have made. If I could go back, with the knowledge and experience I have acquired, I might do better work; but I have done the best I knew and the best I could in my human weakness. I do not rebuke myself for the past. I have no desire to undo the past. It was the best I could do. I am so glad that I am in the hands of a merciful God.

Twenty years ago a brave little blushing girl agreed to be my helpmeet in my chosen work for the Lord. Her labors, her sacrifices, and her sufferings have by far been the better half of our work of faith and labor of love. Excepting my God, all that I have been, all that I am, and all that I hope to be, that is commendable, I owe to two of the best women that ever adorned this world—my dear, good wife and my sainted mother.

I have never tried to make money. I have laid up no treasures on earth. Neither have I inherited any. Mrs. Dunn and I decided to spend our lives in seeking and saving the lost and be contented with a simple living. We desire that when we are gone our monuments shall be our lives of service in the kingdom of heaven. I believe that God has "ordained that they that preach the gospel should live of the gospel." There are plenty of brethren who are engaged in money-making to support all the worthy evangelists who give themselves wholly to the work of evangelists. At the same time, it has been my aim to be independent and self-reliant. We should preach the gospel, support or no support, and look to God to bless us and uphold us by his everlasting arm.

Brother John E. Dunn's Plans.

BY A. B. LIPSCOMB.

Brother John E. Dunn, whose address is 1406 Linden Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., is one of the best and most experienced evangelists in the brotherhood. He knows how to preach the gospel to sinners, to build up the churches and train churches for the work of the Lord. He established his home near the Bible School in order that his children might have the advantages of the school and opportunities to work for a living. Brother Dunn has about three months' time the first of the year (1917) he desires to use wherever he can accomplish the most good, either in missionary work at new places, developing weak churches, stirring up some old church to sound out the word of the Lord, holding a regular protracted meeting, or teaching Bible classes. He can spend three months at one place or at different places. Brother Dunn has been considerably worried and confused over the condition of Sister Dunn's health. She recently underwent a very serious and complicated operation at a local infirmary. The operation was successful and we have strong hopes that Sister Dunn will soon be a well woman. Brother Dunn's mind is greatly relieved and he feels encouraged to go forward in his work of faith and labor of love. "O Jehovah of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee."

Self-Justification.

It is easy to fall into the habit of attempting to effect self-justification by laying the blame on some one else. This habit is as old as human nature itself. It is a kind of spider's web which is always waiting for the fly. Those who have read the very interesting reminiscences of our quaint old friend, Samuel Pepys, doubtless recall this item in his diary: "Home, and found all well, only I am somewhat vexed at my wife's neglect in leaving her scarf, waistcoat, and night dressings in the coach to-day that brought us from Westminster; though I confess she did give them to me to look after. It might be as good as twenty-five shillings' loss."

Every man's own inner state, if closely watched, would bear to him abundant witness of a fall. Nothing else can solve the paradox of his greatness and his littleness.—Bishop Wilberforce.

Loyalty of Gospel Advocate Readers.

For many years the Gospel Advocate has at this season of the year offered premiums in order to secure new subscribers and renewals. But this year the cost of printing the paper has been so enormous that it becomes necessary for the publishers to husband their resources and to depend upon the loyalty and friendship of our readers to help us build up the subscription list. It has been our experience in the past that they have never failed us in the hour of need, but have always nobly responded to every appeal made in behalf of the paper. Then, too, we know that our readers are fully acquainted with the fact that prices on everything have advanced and will not resent the slight raise in our subscription price made necessary by stringent conditions. It is not only our purpose to raise the subscription price of the Advocate to two dollars, beginning on January 1, 1917, but, what is more important, to raise the standard of its usefulness by improving every department. It is our earnest desire to print articles that will strengthen and edify the church and extend the kingdom, and at the same time to give all the news of the churches within reach. To this end, we urge that our readers do not be backward about sending reports concerning the activities of their local congregations or anything that will be conducive to greater usefulness.

Please bear in mind that we have not raised the subscription price yet. Our readers have a month in which to take advantage of the present subscription price of $1.50. They may renew for two whole years at that price. We have also extended the courtesy of accepting from each reader a new subscriber at the present rate. You are thus enabled to send to some friend a splendid religious journal of $2 value for one whole year for $1.50. We know of no gift that will be more generally appreciated. Activity on the part of our friends will greatly help the publishers and will be of lasting benefit to your friends. It is a good policy when one has it in mind to do a good deed to do it at once, while the impulse is in the heart: for many times other matters arise and the mind becomes so engrossed with them that the good intention is forgotten until it is too late. To insure the good deed you have in mind, please let us hear from you at once.

POSTAL INFORMATION: International post-office money orders can be bought at the rate of one per cent; but for any amount, however small, the cost will be ten cents. A check on any of the banks in America is good in Japan; personal checks are as good as any. The money itself is accepted by the banks. The ordinary postage on letters is five cents; newspapers, one cent.

Looking Around and Looking Up.

I have not been so poor in many a day. I have come absolutely to the limit of all human resources. There is no way I can turn for deliverance. If I take out my purse and open it, there is not a dollar in it. If I go to the bank, I have not a dollar there. My income in Japan is now not enough to defray my own personal expenses—less than twenty-five dollars a month. There is not a friend I can approach who has it to lend; and if there were, this would only defer the stress, to increase it later on. I am even a month behind with my personal living. In looking around, in whatever direction I may turn, I can see no means of deliverance from any human source. I am expected to pay something like a hundred and thirty dollars at the end of this month to meet current expenses. To the natural eye there is, at most, not more than twenty-five dollars in sight.

My hands are as if they were tied. My strength is gone, my efforts unavailing. I am as helpless as an infant. I was going astray, feeling that much depended on me. Then it was I; now it is i. The Lord threw his lasso about me. I struggled long and hard against him. I looked around in every direction for deliverance, but he drew me all the tighter "with the cords of love" till I tripped and fell. The fall seemed hard, and I panted under it. But I finally said: "Lord, you have conquered. I give up." The struggle is over. No longer do I look around, but i look up.

I now see it, and so plain that the wonder is that I was so long in coming to it; i was not looking up, but I was looking around. Neither were others associated with me looking up, but they were depending on me. I had encouraged them to do it. Now it is only i, and i say to them: "You serve the same God that i do. He is your Father as well as mine. If he bless us, you shall share the blessing; if he chasten us, we all need it alike." "But can't you promise?" "No, not now, for it is only i, and how can i promise? Look up. Trust him."

Now since I am looking up, the Lord hath spoken to me and said: "My grace is sufficient for thee: for my power is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my weaknesses, that the power of Christ may rest upon me. Wherefore I take pleasure in weaknesses, in injuries, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses, for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong."

Concerning Missionary Gifts.

I receive many checks for the missionaries in the course of a year, and some of these have been subject to a charge at the bank for collection. I have sometimes returned such checks to be exchanged for drafts, and have sometimes paid the exchange, depositing the full amount of the check. Since November 1 the Louisville banks have new regulations concerning this matter, and it is hereby requested that those outside of Kentucky sending me funds for the missionaries remit by money order or by a draft on New York, Chicago, or St. Louis. Please do not send drafts on other cities nor cashiers' checks, as these are no better than your own personal check. If a check is sent, please add five cents for collection.

Please consider that the number of missionaries has increased and is likely to increase further. There must, therefore, be increased giving in order to take proper care of the various workers. Shifting your gift from an old worker to a new one will not meet the needs of the situation. If you will either give more personally or else enlist some one besides yourself (or do both), it will be a real help.

Moving Pictures.

Criticize the missionary if he needs it—and there is at least one who sometimes needs it; but for the Lord's sake and for those for whom he died and for the good of your own soul, don't criticize the missionary cause. You might as well criticize the church itself simply because some of its members may need it. There can be no fault found with God's church; neither can there be any fault found with the mission of God's church, which is to evangelize the world.

God's way is the best. Dr. William Boyd, of Donelson, Tenn., in sending their regular offering for every fifth Sunday, adds: "We like the plan of sending our little offerings direct to the missionary, and your prompt acknowledgment of receipt of the same." God knew best when he arranged for the churches to communicate direct with those sent forth in the matter of giving and receiving. Every letter from Donelson (and there are sure to be at least four every year) brings to mind afresh my pleasant visit to those brethren, the love which they show one toward another and toward all. If inclined to be a little discouraged, as I sometimes am, these letters and the memories they awaken refresh the soul, and I take heart and press on.

Though dry and hot, their missionary zeal is neither dried up nor melted, nor does a failure in the harvest deter them. I speak of the church at old Beech Grove, Maury County, Tenn. In forwarding their fifth-Sunday offering, here is what Brother McKee says: "It is awfully hot here now since it quit raining. We had lots of rain through June and July, but it seems like we are in for a dry spell now. The harvest was very poor this year. I think, take it all over, it was the worst we ever had. But we should not grumble, when we are so abundantly blessed with life, health, and strength. There is no doubt in my mind but that these things are for our good; and if we would just take them so, we would be better men and women and better prepared to work in the Master's vineyard."

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

$1.50 a year if paid in advance, $1.75 after six months, $2 after twelve months. To Canada and foreign countries, $2 in advance, $2.25 after six months, $2.50 after twelve months.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express, post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

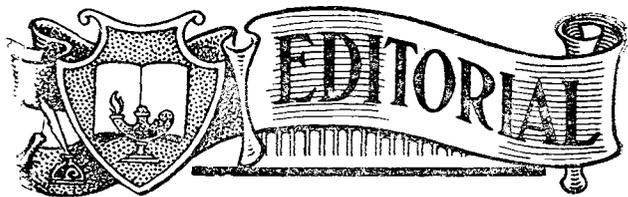

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received, but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Guarantee of Advertising.

All the advertisements in this paper are, we believe, signed by trustworthy persons. To prove our faith by works, we will make good to actual subscribers any loss sustained in trusting advertisers who prove to be deliberate swindlers. We shall not attempt to adjust trifling disputes between subscribers and honorable business men who advertise, nor pay the debts of honest bankrupts. To make this guarantee effective, in all cases say in writing advertisers, "I saw your advertisement in the Gospel Advocate;" and if anything goes wrong notify us immediately in writing.

Wine in the Communion Further Considered.

BY M. C. K.

On page 1179 of this issue of the Gospel Advocate will be found another article from Brother E. S. Jelley, of India, on wine in the communion service. We ask our readers to give it a careful examination before reading our comments in reply.

1. As to "absolute misstatements of the position" he occupies, if we made any such statements, we were certainly not conscious of it. We were careful to give his exact words; but if he was unfortunate in his own selection of words to express his position, we are glad to have such statements, whether made by him alone or repeated also in other words by the Advocate's comments, corrected in our columns.

2. When we said, "It seems that it would take several passages to convince Brother Jelley that a given conclusion is true," we based the statement on his explicit words that "of the thirty-eight references, the one he [Gesenius] quotes is the only one which could possibly lead to that conclusion"—the conclusion for which we contended. If this is not an admission that the one passage in question "could lead to that conclusion," then we do not know the meaning of language; and if what a passage says can lead to a given conclusion, then that conclusion is taught by that passage, of course. If not, why not? Yet, our brother did not accept that conclusion, although, according to his own admission, that one passage "could" lead to it. He seems not to have meant exactly what his language says.

3. Now listen to this: "There are passages which can possibly lead some people to the conclusion that pouring and instrumental music are New-Covenant institutions." If this be true, which we respectfully but distinctly deny, then anybody who is thus led "to the conclusion that pouring and instrumental music are New-Covenant institutions" is justified, of course, in so concluding and in so practicing. If not, why not? If God's word says even in one passage what leads to a given conclusion, no matter what that conclusion may be, then, of course, those who adopt that conclusion are following God, and are therefore justified in their course. If not, why not?

But we respectfully deny that there are any such passages in God's word. Other things which people see and by which they are influenced when considering God's "passages" may lead them "to the conclusion that pouring and instrumental music" are taught under the new covenant, or to any other conclusion for that matter; but when they are thus led, they are not led by God's passages, but by something else. And here, with all the frankness that we can command, we say to our beloved brother that, if he will convince us that even one passage in God's word leads to such a conclusion, then "the author of 'Instrumental Music in the Worship'" will at once adopt "a revolutionary course," and will never again oppose either pouring for baptism or instrumental music in Christian worship, but he will promptly begin the practice of both.

4. It is true that our brother "offered thirty-one passages of scripture containing tirosh;" but they are "no proof" that Gesenius "was a very prejudiced author," and this was the point that was here in dispute.

5. Our brother assumes that, because "music halls and baseball" and "soda fountains" sometimes "take away the heart" as well as the wine spoken of in Hos. 4: 11, therefore the latter is not necessarily intoxicating any more than the former. But the Hebrew word for "heart" in this passage means "understanding," and in the Revised Version it reads: "Whoredom and wine and new wine take away the understanding." The wine to which the prophet refers does "take away the understanding," which distinctly points to intoxication; but "soda fountains," etc., do not; and hence the reference in the passage is directly to the effects of the beverage on the brain.

6. Yes, our brother "quoted Young," but Young's remark that "tirosh means 'what is possessed'" has no bearing at all on the point at issue. The question is whether the beverage meant by "tirosh" is intoxicating, and to say that the term means "what is possessed" does not touch that point at all. The question would still arise, what is it that is "possessed," and "possessed" in what sense? The fact that Hebrew verbs have different voices sheds no light here, and Hebrew grammars cannot help us. The true light is to be found in the reason why those who spoke Hebrew used "tirosh" to designate the beverage in question. The facts are that they used a term to designate it which radically means to possess, and Hosea says that this beverage gains such complete possession of the human brain as to "take away the understanding." This is intoxication.

7. Our brother speaks of being "held up as the writer of an unreasonable criticism." We most assuredly did not wish nor intend to hold him up in any way except by giving exactly what he said. On the same principle, he will probably now object to being held up as teaching that "there are passages" in God's word "which can possibly lead some people to the conclusion that pouring" for baptism "and instrumental music" in the worship "are New-Covenant institutions;" but that is exactly what he says. We have strong faith in Brother Jelley's fidelity to God's word and rejoice in his noble work in far-away India, and will do him the credit to say here that we do not think he really believes what his language says at this point. Of course he believes and means that something in some way leads "some people to the conclusion that pouring and instrumental music are New-Covenant institutions," but he evidently does not believe that the Bible thus leads them.

We pray that God's blessing may continue to rest upon him and his faithful and noble work in the foreign field.

Christ, the True and Only Way.

BY E. G. S.

Many people have an idea that there are more ways than one of becoming Christians and being saved. But Christ himself said: "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14: 6.) I do not see how it could be made more specific than this passage makes it that there is but one right way. "I am the way." The expression, "the way," makes it so clear that there is but one way that all the Bible scholars of the whole world can make nothing else out of it. Very many people, however, claim that all have to get religion, if they ever have it at all, through repentance and prayer. If they could find it that way a single time in the New Testament, then they would have sufficient reason to teach it that way, and no one could say a word against it without rejecting the word of God. But as the expression, "get religion," is not in the Bible, that leaves those who teach that way without one word of authority for it. The idea of getting religion really expresses something that is not in the Bible, for God never taught it that way since time began. The whole idea, therefore, is of human origin and not divine. All, therefore, that depend upon getting religion are depending upon a human invention. If any man or woman got religion in the days of the apostles, it was entirely left out of the divine record, and no one, therefore, can know it now. On the other hand, the apostles told people plainly what to do to be saved, and thousands of them did it "the same day" or "the same hour of the night," and thus became the followers of Christ; and if all the preachers would just preach what the apostles did, who spake "as the Holy Spirit gave them utterance," the people could at once obey the gospel and be saved "the same day" or "the same hour of the night" now, just as they did in apostolic times.

But one of the great troubles is, so many things are taught that are not found in the New Testament at all that often people do not know what to do. In fact, many people ridicule the idea that they must just do the things they were told to do by the inspired apostles and call it a "book religion" and not a heart religion. Peter, in referring Christians to what they had done in becoming Christians, said: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently: being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." (1 Pet. 1: 22, 23.) This passage explains that the whole matter of becoming Christians was done by obeying the truth, the word of God. This passage forever breaks up the human opinion that conversion is an influence wrought in the hearts of people by a direct or secret operation of the Holy Spirit. This is all shown to be a mistake by this passage, which shows that the conversion of those people was through their obedience to the truth. It is enough to forever settle this question as to how those people became Christians. The apostles preached the gospel to them and told them what to do that they might be saved, and they did it and were made Christians, followers of Christ, in so doing. As the apostles did the preaching by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, it was, therefore, the teaching of the Holy Spirit that converted them and led them on in living the Christian life. The whole matter, therefore, of becoming Christians and of living the Christian life is effected by the Holy Spirit—not by an abstract, direct operation of the Spirit, but by the plain teaching of the Spirit through inspired men. The three thousand on the day of Pentecost were made Christians that way, and so were all that we read about in the New Testament. In fact, we do not read of any that were made Christians in any other way. We do not know of anything else that will make people Christians or by which they can be saved. No man can show any case in the New Testament where any one was ever made a Christian in any other way. In Jerusalem and in all the world, so far as the New Testament records, they were made Christians just that way. People first learn the truth, then obey the truth, and thus purify their souls in that obedience.

If all would read and study the Bible more and go strictly by what it says, all would go right, and all would go the same way. There is no other way by which all can be one and at the same time all be right. But so long as so many are going in different ways, teaching different and contrary doctrines, it is impossible for all to be right. It is certain that the Bible does not teach all the different and conflicting doctrines that are now being taught in the religious world under the claim that the Bible teaches it that way. But while we are satisfied that the Bible is read and followed more and by more people now than ever before, it must be admitted that very many things are now being taught as Bible doctrines that are not Bible doctrines. Yet we are sure that more of the plain teaching of the Bible is now being publicly proclaimed than ever before. But the fight for the plain truth of God's word is still on, and there was never a time that there was greater need for all to be faithful and loyal to the plain truth as written in the book of God than now. As to the time when all religious people will be faithful and loyal to God's word, we make no prediction; but I am glad to have a part in laboring to that end. If I have some conflicts and difficulties in that work, it is no more than Christ and the apostles had. I try to labor purely for the sake of truth, and not for personal victory over the enemies of truth. Let all be faithful and loyal to the truth and work for the truth, and all will be well. Truth is mighty and ought to prevail over error; and it will, if all its advocates will be faithful to it. The victory of truth over error is a wonderful victory, and one that all lovers of truth should strive to have a share in. Too many contend, apparently, more for victory than for the sake of truth. This should be carefully avoided by all who love the truth. Truth should be sought and practiced by all who appreciate and love the truth. There will be struggles between truth and error as long as error abounds; but all who really love the truth and work for it earnestly will be likely to find it. But all should be careful never to neglect truth, no matter how unpopular it may be. Truth believed and obeyed will save, but error will not.

Detroit, Mich.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Having spent ten busy days delightfully in Murray, Ky., where I preached twice every day and three times each Sunday, we—Mrs. Larimore and I—left that nice little city on Monday morning, October 30, for Nashville, our home, where we devoted two or three days to preparation for our trip to Detroit.

Having previously preached at Murray, and Brother Maurice C. Bucy having attended one of our annual meetings at Hurricane Mills, Tenn., I was glad to go to Murray, and we were sorry we had to leave that pleasant place so early; but we remained there as long as we reasonably could.

Brother Bucy seems to be the leading spirit in the church at Murray, and he is one of the two brethren who, until less than seven years ago, met alone in Murray, in a private home, to commemorate the Lord's death.

Now the church of which these two brethren are charter members numbers about one hundred and owns a good house on a good lot in a good location.

The one and only discouraging feature of the Murray situation, as we saw it, is the scarcity of young people in the church and of children in Christian families there; but the few young people in the church and children in Christian families there are charming and first-class.

Murray is the capital of Calloway County, and Calloway seems to be up to the Kentucky standard, which is no little thing to say of any county.

We are at the home of Claud F. Witty, 644 Warren Avenue, West, Detroit, Mich., which will be our address as long as we stay in this city. Brother Witty is the preacher of the church for which I am now preaching, and he and his good wife are doing all in their power to make us happy and the meeting a success. If the meeting fails, the failure may be theirs; but, if it succeeds, the success will be mine, of course.

We reached Detroit about five o'clock, Friday evening, November 3. When we neared the spacious approach to the great Michigan Central Station here, and saw scores of people running as if for dear life, I thought surely somebody had stepped on some woman's poodle, killed her husband, or committed some other terrible tragedy; but Brother Witty smiled when he saw I was excited, and assured me that that was the normal state of affairs here—everybody and everything in a rush.

When Jake Levi, mayor of Sherman, Texas, returned from a trip to Chicago in 1894, he said: "The citizens of Chicago are in such a hurry that, unless you want to transact business with them, they say 'good-by' before they say 'howdy.'" Here, if some of them say either, they certainly say it on the run.

Detroit claims more than eight hundred thousand inhabitants, and confidently expects to pass the million mark long before Wilson leaves the White House.

People and things are not exactly the same here as in the South; but we have met no nicer people anywhere than we have met here.

Many years ago a Tennessee teacher taught me that cold contracts and heat expands, and I believe he taught me the truth; for even skirts are shorter up here, in this cold climate, than they are "'way down South, in Dixie," where winter is unknown.

Billy Sunday, having held the front of the stage here eight weeks, closed his siege on Sunday night, November 5—the day our meeting began. About the beginning of the siege Billy raised fifty thousand dollars "to pay expenses." At the end of the siege he pocketed fifty thousand dollars—a freewill offering gladly given to him as an expression of gratitude—gratitude to him for the entertainment he had furnished the city, the votes he had won for prohibition, and the moral influence his denunciation of sin was supposed to have had—which shows his audience was appreciative at the beginning and also at the end of the memorable siege.

I have known a genuine gospel preacher to preach, in one city, at one time, longer than Billy Sunday preached in Detroit, telling people every day what the Bible tells us to do to be saved, and then leave that selfsame city with less than fifty thousand dollars in his pocket, notwithstanding he had not only told the people what to do to be saved, but had actually induced some of them to do it; hence had probably saved some souls.

Detroit papers are boosting Billy now because, they say, his last day's work here beat Peter's Pentecostal record; as Peter converted only three thousand that day, while Billy's last day's record here was one hundred and thirty more than that.

I'm not so sure that conclusion is correct, however; for the Bible simply says, relative to that Pentecostal number: "Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. . . . Then they that gladly received his word were baptized; and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls." (Acts 2: 38-41.) As the number "added unto them" on that important occasion is not definitely known, being "about three thousand," the exact number may have been three thousand three hundred and thirty-three. That is not a vital point of difference, however; but some of the vital points of difference are:

1. Peter told his converts to "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Billy told his converts to "join some church"—something the Bible says nothing about.

2. When Peter preached on Pentecost, "the same day there were added unto them"—unto those who constituted the church of Christ, the church we read about in the Bible—"about three thousand souls." When Billy preached here, his converts were added to nothing, but were advised to "join the church of their choice"—no mention being made of God's choice, Christ's choice, or the Spirit's choice.

3. When Peter told his converts what to do, "they that gladly received his word were baptized." When Billy told his converts what to do, they forthwith gave him fifty thousand dollars, an eight-thousand-dollar automobile, and various other costly and valuable things, and then told Billy good-by.

4. Peter's converts were all Christians—after they did what Peter told them to do. Divinity alone knows what Billy's converts will be after they do what Billy told them to do. Probably nearly every one of them will be a Campbellite or something else not mentioned in the sacred Scriptures; hence, for which there is no divine authority.

We heard one of Billy's sermons, were pleased with the sermon, pleased with the preacher, and shook hands with him as we passed out of the tabernacle; hence we probably added two to the number of his converts, we having the same "experience of grace" his other converts had.

W. A. Sunday is a marvelous man—a signal success—as his crowds and his cash collections certify.

Some Questions and Answers.

BY E. A. E.

"IF ANY MAN WILLETH TO DO HIS WILL."

In controversy with the Jews, Jesus says:

My teaching is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the teaching, whether it be of God, or whether I speak from myself. (John 7: 17.)

What does Jesus mean by this? Does he mean that if a man wills to do God's will, it will be revealed to him by some feeling of satisfaction and sense of peace that it is God's will for him to go as a missionary to Japan, Africa, or India? This seems to be the turn some good men are giving to this. The word of God must not be handled deceitfully, corrupted, perverted (see 2 Cor. 3: 17; 4: 2; Gal. 1: 7), or twisted to mean something not in it (2 Pet. 3: 16). We must not read our own theories, notions, speculations, and wisdom into it. We must not quote it, as the devil quoted it to Jesus, in order to carry a point.

We may deceive ourselves, or allow Satan to deceive us, in regard to the use we make of the word of God. Paul declares that some have no love for the truth (2 Thess. 2: 10)—the word of God, for his word is truth. (John 17: 17.) We must love the word of God—the truth—in order to receive it and be saved. We must be entirely and strictly honest with ourselves, with God, and with the word of God. (Luke 8: 15.)

The context shows that the Jews questioned Jesus' authority to teach, and his reply shows that his authority to teach came from God. He replied that if they were willing to do God's will and had sincerely and strongly purposed to do it, they would know that his teaching was from God and that he did not speak from himself. To speak from oneself means that one's teaching originated with oneself and one speaks or teaches one's own opinions, speculations, theories, and doctrines. Jesus' teaching is from God, not from himself. The Pharisees and Sadducees spoke from themselves; their teaching originated with themselves; they taught for doctrines the precepts and commandments of men; ignorant, therefore, of God's righteousness (that which God teaches is right) and going about to establish their own righteousness (that which they taught as right), they never submitted to God's righteousness (see Rom. 10: 1-3); and they compassed land and sea to make a proselyte, but made him twofold more a child of hell than themselves when they had converted him (Matt. 23: 15). If they had been willing to do God's will and purposed to do it, they would have seen that all their religious acts of washing cups and other vessels, of bathing themselves when they came from the market places, their hair splitting theories, and all the rest of their traditions, were not of God, but of men. Had they believed Moses, they would have received Jesus, because Moses testified of Jesus. (John 5: 46, 47.) Had they believed God and had they willed to do his will, they would have believed and obeyed Jesus. In rejecting that which Jesus taught, they showed they were unwilling to do God's will. They left out and even rejected the will of God in order to keep their own traditions. (Mark 7: 8, 9.) They could not do both; of necessity they had to reject one or the other. To keep their traditions, they had to reject the commandments of God; to keep the commandments of God, they had to reject their own traditions.

The same principles are true to-day—eternally true.

1. To-day all who purpose and will to do only God's will have the assurance that they can see the difference between that will and the theories, notions, peculiar views, speculations, and traditions of men.

2. To-day men are going about to establish their own theories, notions, peculiar views, wisdom and traditions, and are compassing land and sea to make proselytes. A preacher not long since, I have been informed, exhorted some brethren to employ a certain young preacher, giving as his reason that this young preacher "holds with us"—himself and some others—in certain peculiar theories. Why did he not recommend this young preacher as one who wills to do God's will; who has determined to know nothing, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified; who preaches not himself, but Christ Jesus as Lord, and himself a servant for Christ's sake; who shuns not to declare the whole counsel of God; and who preaches "the word?"

3. With such a spirit and committed to the theories of men, it is impossible to-day to know, to do, and to preach the will of God. To-day either the will of God will be rejected for the peculiar views and theories and wisdom of men, or the peculiar views and theories and wisdom of men will be rejected for the will of God. A circus rider may ride two or four horses at the same time running in the same direction, but it is utterly impossible for him to ride at the same time two horses running in opposite directions. Just so, it is utterly impossible to teach and to practice the theories and speculations and precepts of men and the will of God at the same time. The two run in opposite directions. Any theory, speculation, notion, and precept of men will necessarily lead to disobedience to God and to rejection of his will in some parts and ways. Purposing firmly and willing strongly to do only God's will, will necessarily lead clearly to the rejection of all theories, speculations, notions, precepts, and wisdom of men.

4. If a man claims that he has willed to do God's will and has determined to preach nothing but Christ crucified, then he has God's will revealed in the Bible, and Jesus assures him that he can know that will and tell the difference between it and all other teaching. And if a man claims and announces that he has willed to do God's will and determined not to speak from himself and not to preach himself, but to preach "the word," then why does he not do it? "By their fruits ye shall know them."

5. Then all who have purposed, determined, and willed to follow the things which make for peace, to endeavor to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, to eat no meat for evermore if by so doing they cause some weak brother to stumble, and in all ways to be governed by the law of love, will have no difficulty in learning what these things are and the basis of unity. All personal difficulties and church troubles can be settled, all strife ended, and all division healed when all are willing to do God's will. There can be no strife, divisions, partisan spirits, and bitterness where all are willing to do God's will. When some have willed to do God's will, and, therefore, to preach only "the word," and some have willed to preach and practice their own theories and notions, strife and division are inevitable. The blacksmith cannot weld two cold pieces of iron; he cannot weld a hot piece to a cold piece; in order to weld the two pieces, both must be at welding heat. Difficulties or personal differences between parties who do not desire and have not willed to do the will of God cannot be settled; they cannot be settled when only one desires and has willed to do right or to do God's will. Differences, difficulties, strife, and divisions always show that some parties do not purpose and will to do God's will. Doing God's will is the only basis of unity, the only way to harmony and peace, and the only way to heaven.

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven.

WHAT IS WRONG WITH THE PREACHER?

Brother Elam: What is wrong with a preacher that goes to a congregation to preach where there is a faction? The two leaders in the faction tell him to mistreat a loyal preacher publicly, and he obeys the leaders in the faction. They told this preacher they did not have anything against this loyal preacher, yet mistreated him. The mistreated preacher has condemned the faction all the time. X.

All I know are the statements of this question. I do not know where this congregation is and who these preachers are. According to this question, the leaders of this faction and the preacher influenced by them have not willed in all things to do the will of God. The preacher who would be so influenced is lacking in principle. In "all things that pertain unto life and godliness" preachers should be examples. I repeat, much of the strife and division now in many places have been produced by the vanity, pride, egotism, theories, hobbies, and vain speculations of preachers. Setting one preacher at naught is no sign of superior ability and goodness in another, but is a sign of littleness and selfishness. A preacher, when he goes into a congregation and community to hold a meeting or to preach one time, should be slow to listen to tales which are told him, because he knows nothing or little about the people or the conditions or circumstances, and may be unduly influenced against truth and justice and right. The ones who are so ready to bring news are the ones who are equally ready to carry news. Not all who are most prominent in protracted meetings and most ready to prompt the preacher are always the most zealous and the ones who bear the burdens and heat of the day. It is the work of preachers to seek peace and pursue it, to allay trouble, to settle difficulties, and to teach all against tale-bearing, speaking evil of others, and taking up a reproach against neighbors and false reports against brethren, and certainly not to engage in such wicked things themselves, or to add fuel to the flame by agitating them.

Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the sons of God.

A STRANGE COMPLAINT.

Lone Camp, Texas, November 13, 1916.—Brother Elam: In a near-by school-district election bonds were voted to be issued and sold to about two thousand dollars for the purpose of building and equipping an ordinary public free-school building, which building was needed by the school in said district. It will also be used for a church house. Brother A and Brother B live in said district. Brother A voted and worked for the bonds; Brother B voted and worked against the bonds. The bonds carried and the house is built. Brother B charges Brother A with sinning against him and demands that he make a statement to that effect and say he is sorry that he voted for the bonds. Brother B claims that Brother A has violated two of God's laws in voting for the bonds—one being found in Rom. 13: 8; the other, in 2 Cor. 6: 14. Brother A claims that he cannot see where he has sinned against Brother B or anybody else. He claims that he has only voted to build up a public school for the benefit of his children and his neighbors' children. He also claims that the patrons of the school district, with whom he is bound, under the bonds, are not unbelievers in the sense of being idol worshipers. He also says that he cannot see that he has done anything unjust or unrighteous. I think this will come before the church. Will you please give us an article on the subject?

J. H. CRABTREE.

A had the same right to vote and work for the bonds as B had to vote and work against them. If 2 Cor. 6: 14 applies in any way to A, it applies in the same to B and to every other Christian who votes at all for anything. A man is happy if he does not condemn himself in trying to condemn others. To desire to condemn others is not the spirit of Christ. The spirit of Christ is to seek to save others from sin. For the kettle to call the pot "black" is not to seek to save from sin. To become embittered because of a result of an election is certainly not Christian. Rom. 13: 8 does not necessarily forbid incurring a financial debt, but means the debt must be paid when due, and that all other obligations must be met.

To bring such a thing up in the church is most foolish and a most effectual way to divide and ruin it.

Publishers' Notes.

We still have on hand about thirty copies of "Studies in Recent Adventism," by Charles C. Sheldon. Price, 50 cents.

Send us $1 for a copy of "Larimore and His Boys." This is an attractive book.

Send us $1.50 for a record book for the secretary of the Bible school. The book is complete, simple, and convenient.

Every church should have an enrollment of its membership. We can furnish you a suitable church record for $1.50.

Have you read "Christian Treasures," in two volumes? Price, $1 each. Both volumes are almost universally commended.

Have you read "The Life and Sermons of Jesse L. Sewell?" If not, send us $1 for a copy. Read and be benefited.

THE SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE GOSPEL ADVOCATE

WILL BE

ADVANCED ON JANUARY 1, 1917.

It is generally understood that everything that goes into the production of a newspaper has increased in price tremendously. These increases range all the way from 50 per cent to 200 per cent. White paper has over doubled in value and is scarce at any price; wrappers for the Gospel Advocate have more than doubled in price; inks of all kinds have advanced in price out of all reason; and so it goes all along the line.

As a matter of self-preservation and protection, it is absolutely necessary that we raise the price on January 1, 1917, to $2 per annum.

We will accept renewal and new subscriptions at the present price—NOW!

We will deal just as fairly and liberally with our present subscribers as possible, and so will accept renewal subscriptions, no matter when the subscription expires, at $1.50 for one year and $3 for two years, provided these subscriptions reach us on or before January 1, 1917. New subscribers accepted NOW at $1.50 a year for one year only, in advance.

We advise, as we say, no matter when your subscription expires, that you send us your renewal for one or two years at $1.50 a year, and send it just as early as possible. We will soon be very busy entering thousands upon thousands of subscriptions between now and January 1, 1917. It is your last chance to get the Gospel Advocate at $1.50 a year.

However, we shall not ask you to bear all of this extra expense without any corresponding benefit; we shall bear at least a fair proportion. The fact that we cannot afford to longer publish the Gospel Advocate at $1.50 a year necessitated either making the paper smaller or raising the price and making it larger and better. Our space does not now adequately meet the demands made upon it, so it would be suicidal to cut down the size of the paper. We decided that you were the kind of readers that would prefer a better and a larger paper. So on January 1, 1917, or soon thereafter, the paper will be enlarged to 32 pages. Our purpose is to make the Gospel Advocate the brightest and best religious paper in all the country.

Will you please give this your immediate attention?

AT HOME AND ABROAD

J. C. Estes, of Dallas, Texas, reports a good day's work at Heath, Texas. There was one baptism.

W. F. Neal, of Winnipeg, Canada, is in a meeting with the Parkland Church, in Louisville, Ky.

W. J. Johns changes his address from Paragould, Ark., to Gainesville, Ark. Let correspondents take notice.

From Charles L. Talley, Montgomery, Ala.: "I think the Gospel Advocate is the greatest paper in the brotherhood."

From C. E. Holt, Knoxville, Tenn., November 27: "Our work in Knoxville is fine. Two confessions last Sunday. Audiences fine."

From W. H. Carter, Lafayette, Tenn.: "The Gospel Advocate, it seems to me, is growing better and stronger. May God bless you in your noble work."

From J. W. Ballard, Helena, Okla., November 22: "After January 1 I would be glad to receive calls for meetings from any congregation in any State till July 1, as I have nothing from January 1 to July 1. I want to be kept busy."

R. D. Smith, of Sherman, Texas, has accepted work with the church at Winchester, Tenn., and will make the change at once. We are glad to have this useful preacher closer to us and feel that he will greatly help in spreading the kingdom.

From Jewell Matthews, San Angelo, Texas, November 24: "The church here is doing well. However, there is always room for improvement. I preached to good-sized audiences at both services last Lord's day. I preached at a mission point in the afternoon."

The death of Dr. C. F. Gattis, who had been one of the leaders in the church at Winchester, Tenn., occasioned great sorrow. He was fifty-nine years of age and is survived by an aged mother, wife, daughter, and several sisters. J. D. Floyd, a lifelong friend, conducted the funeral service. The Gospel Advocate extends sympathy.

From F. O. Howell, Fulton, Ky.: "We added six new members to our fellowship last week. The cause here is in a thriving and prosperous condition. The 'digressives' have quite a large membership here, but there is no special friction between us. They attend our services well. There is no one whose service I feel would be worth more to us under the existing conditions than yours."

Dr. J. W. Grisard, one of the pioneers of the church of Christ at Winchester, Tenn., has been very ill for several weeks at his home. It is to be hoped that this valiant soldier of the cross who has done so much for the cause may soon recover and be spared many years yet. This field of usefulness has been wide, indeed, and there are many throughout the land whose prayers go up daily in his behalf.

The death of Mrs. Julia F. Priest, one of the oldest members of the Highland Church, in Louisville, Ky., was a distinct loss to the church, but a great gain for her. She was a devoted Christian, a liberal contributor to mission work, and unswerving in her loyalty to the principles of the New Testament. Her body was laid beside that of her noble husband, W. C. Priest, who died in 1909. The funeral was conducted Monday.

From C. G. Vincent, Battle Creek, Mich., November 25: "I have just completed my first lecture trip. I made sixteen hundred miles in the 'mission Ford' (a good Detroit brother bought this car and turned it over to me to use in my work) without an accident; got in touch with twenty-one congregations; made most of them friends of the Japan work; the funds collected, less travel expense, have been put to the lot and rebuilding fund. Wife much better. We will 'migrate' to the South soon."

From John A. Klingman, Lebanon, Tenn., November 17: "The work at this place is moving along nicely. This congregation is 'communicating to the necessities of the saints' by helping to bear the burdens of life in several families at home and also by heeding 'the cry of the orphans' elsewhere. A special contribution of twenty-two dollars and fifty cents was sent to the Tennessee Orphans' Home, at Columbia, this month. There are also improvements being made on the meetinghouse. Three members have recently been added. One brother was baptized by Brother Elam and one by the writer."

From W. B. Bartlett, Potter, Kan.: "The church of Christ at Potter has closed a three-weeks' meeting, conducted by E. A. Taylor, of Eureka Springs, Ark., with fifty-eight additions to the church, with one from the Catholics and several from the sectarians. Our membership is about doubled. So, while we are not many at the best, we feel greatly encouraged and have engaged Brother Taylor for full time, something we never were able to do before. The majority of the new members are grown people, many of them heads of families. We are not only helped in numbers, but financially also. Brother Taylor is a strong preacher. He was educated at the Enid (Okla.) school. His wife is also a wonderful worker among the young people." This is truly a fine and encouraging report.

We congratulate the brethren in Montgomery, Ala., on securing C. M. Stubblefield to labor among them. In response to our inquiry he sent us the following information: "Your inquiry concerning the work here received. Yes, definite arrangements have been made whereby I am to labor with the church here—the Catoma Street Church—for one year at least. My work began here on the second Sunday in November, after six years' work in Paducah, Ky. In my humble judgment, there are before the church here the most splendid opportunities, and, therefore, the most tremendous responsibilities, of any church with which I am acquainted. It has a splendid house, conveniently located, and the members are of the best people in the city. All it needs, I think, is the gospel in its simplicity and purity. If it does not do well, I feel certain that the fault will be mine. Pray for me. Express my thanks to Brother McQuiddy for introducing me to the brethren here. About one hundred members attended a reception given us last night at the home of one of the brethren." Brother Stubblefield's address is 66 Pleasant Avenue.

From Silas E. Templeton, Gainesboro, Tenn., November 23: "On the second Lord's day in this month I began a meeting at 'Old Lebanon,' near Fountain Run, Ky., which continued with two services a day, for eight days. There were two precious souls baptized into Christ. We believe, and sincerely trust, that the congregation was greatly edified. The congregation has been established for a long time—one of the oldest congregations, if not the oldest, in Monroe County. Between now and this time next year, or by September, 1917, I believe the congregation there will build a new house for worship. This is needed. Brethren, let us not forget that it is our privilege, as well as our duty, to have neat, comfortable church houses. The Lord willing, I shall preach here next Lord's day, morning and evening. We believe the congregation here is steadily, yet slowly, advancing in the direction God would have it go. There was one restoration here while I was at 'Old Lebanon.' Very soon we hope to begin our mid-week prayer meeting and two or three Bible classes during the week, besides the Bible classes on Lord's days. This is a work that the congregation here has neglected. Let us all 'remember Jesus Christ, risen from the dead,' 'every day, every hour.'"

Don't Let a Cold Get a Good Start

The way to check a cold is to fight it from the first. Even the worst maladies often are easily conquered if attacked early enough. Colds may lead to asthma, bronchial troubles and pulmonary affections. In the treatment of these one of the first needs is to build up body resistance.

Eckman's Alterative often has assisted in such upbuilding. As a treatment for the troubles named, it has been used for more than twenty years. And in many instances it has effected lasting relief.

As with any other medicine, it should be regarded only as a first aid to right care and hygienic living—and a safe one. For it contains no narcotics, opiates or habit-forming drugs of any sort. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

Joy.

BY C. PETTY.

This is a subject that is spoken of much in the Bible, and Paul calls it one of the fruits of the Spirit. It is the opposite of grief. David said: "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." (Ps. 30: 5.) Every Christian should have much joy through life, as he is the medium through which the Spirit manifests the fruit of joy; and if the Christian will study the Bible carefully and prayerfully and strive to apply it to his life, he will have much joy as the days of his pilgrimage pass away. And why shouldn't he? For the Christian has more in life to bring joy than any one else on earth. It does not matter how great his trials may be, the Lord has given him this promise: "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." (Heb. 13: 5.) And James (1: 2, 3) says: "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience." Thus we see that the purpose of the temptation is to strengthen our faith, and, therefore, should be counted joy to us. Peter says to Christians: "Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." (1 Pet. 1: 8.) It must be sweet to have a joy "unspeakable and full of glory." Though they had not seen their Lord, yet their faith was so strong it brought unspeakable joy. Again, Peter says: "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." (1 Pet. 4: 12, 13.) The Savior, after showing the relationship existing between himself and his disciples as illustrated by the vine and its branches, and also how that the keeping of his commandment, preserved this relationship, said: "These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." (John 15: 11.) And when Paul bade farewell to the elders at Miletus, he said: "The Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me. But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." (Acts 20: 23, 24.) Here the great apostle said that nothing should move him, that he might

Calomel Seldom Sold Here Now

Nasty Drug Salivates, Makes You Sick, and You Lose a Day's Work.

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs fifty cents; and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine. No biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach, or constipated bowels. It does not gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick, and nauseated. Do not lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

finish his course with joy; and sure enough he did. Hear his last words to his son Timothy: "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." (2 Tim. 4: 6-8.) Though we may have much joy in this life, we will not come to its fullness in this life. David says: "Thou wilt show me the path of life: and in thy presence is fullness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore." (Ps. 16: 11.) The reason we do not reach its fullness while here, I take it, is because of trials and disappointments that gather around us; but when we lay down toil for rest in the home of God, there will be no grief or sorrow, no death, but one continuous stream of unalloyed joy in the presence of the Lord forever.

The Nature of Man.

BY F. E. EXUM.

Man, in a sense, is the offspring of God; for God created him in his own image from the dust of the earth and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life. In the beginning man was as good and pure as God would have him be; for God pronounced his whole creation, not only good, but very good. Man is of a dual nature, having an inner (or spiritual) man and an outer (or fleshly) man. The latter was made from the dust, and after this life will return to the dust; but the spirit came from God and shall return again to him.

In the beginning man could eat of the tree of life and live forever, but because of his sin in breaking the laws of God his days on earth have been limited. The psalmist David said: "The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away." (Ps. 90: 10.) Our fleshly and spiritual inclinations are contrary the one to the other, and there is an almost constant warfare between them. This warfare will continue to rage in our bodies until one or the other conquers. If the impulses and the lusts of the flesh prevail and remain predominant, "the game of life is lost;" Satan has won the day and has succeeded, and has lured you into sharing with him his punishment, "where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." But, on the other hand, if the Spirit of Christ shall reign supreme in your heart, it will bring you to the land of endless day; to the presence of God, where there is fullness of joy; and to his right hand, where there are pleasures for evermore.

Relief After Sixteen Years.

H. H. Jackson, of Friar Point, Miss., writes: "I am glad to report that Gray's Ointment has made a permanent cure of a sore of sixteen years' standing." We have received hundreds of just such remarkable statements regarding the curative properties of Gray's Ointment. For treating boils, cuts, bruises, skin abrasions, burns, sores, etc., it has no equal. It allays pain and prevents blood poison, which is so often the result of small wounds being neglected. You would not be without it if you will give it a trial. Only 25 cents a box, at drug stores. For a free sample, write to W. F. Gray & Co., 818 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn.

Vapo-Cresolene For Whooping Cough, Spasmodic Croup, Asthma, Sore Throat, Coughs, Bronchitis, Colds, Catarrh.

Don't fail to use Cresolene for the distressing, and often fatal affections for which it is recommended. It is a simple, safe, effective and drugless treatment. Vaporized Cresolene stops the paroxysms of Whooping Cough and relieves Spasmodic Croup at once. In asthma it shortens the attack and insures comfortable repose. The air carrying the antiseptic vapor inspired with every breath, makes breathing easy, soothes the sore throat, and stops the cough, assuring restful nights. Cresolene relieves the bronchial complications of Scarlet Fever and Measles and is a valuable aid in the treatment of Diphtheria. Cresolene's best recommendation is its 37 years of successful use. "I DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE"

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 822 South 15th St.

When a remedy has lived for forty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their health to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A Woman's Appeal

to all knowing sufferers of rheumatism, whether muscular or of the joints, sciatica, lumbago, backache, pains in the kidneys or neuralgia pains, to write to her for a home treatment which has repeatedly cured all of these tortures. She feels it her duty to send it to all sufferers FREE. You cure yourself at home, as thousands will testify, no change of climate being necessary. This simple discovery banishes uric acid from the blood, loosens the stiffened joints, purifies the blood, and brightens the eyes, giving elasticity and tone to the whole system. If the above interests you, for proof address Mrs. M. Summers, Box 195, South Bend, Ind.

Self-Resignation.

Self-resignation—the having no will but God's—is hard to learn; but, in proportion as we learn it, we have a peace (whatever our outward trials may be) which cannot be explained, because it "passeth all understanding."—R. A. J. Suckling.

Convalescence after pneumonia, typhoid fever, and the grip is sometimes merely apparent, not real. To make it real and rapid, there is no other tonic so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands so testify. Take Hood's.

CHURCH NEWS

Alabama.

Oakman, November 22.—We are in the midst of what promises to be a successful meeting at Oakman. The audiences are large, the attention is good, and the singing is fine. The Lord has a good congregation at Oakman. Yesterday I had an interesting conversation with good Sister Nancy Emily (Cranford) Tubb. She is proud of being the mother of seven children, all of whom are faithful members of the church of Christ. She has sixty grandchildren, one hundred and sixty great-grandchildren, and twelve great-great-grandchildren. Every one of them has a good mind and a well-formed body. Sister Tubb says not one of her descendants has ever had any deformity of mind or body. She says they are all good-looking and, so far as she knows, all faithful Christians. Not one has ever departed from the faith. Not one of them ever drank, was in jail, or disgraced the name. Sister Tubb is eighty-nine years old, has been a widow fifty-nine years, can walk a mile to church, and is now attending our meetings day and night. Her mind is clear and her body is active. Remarkable record! She is a happy mother in Israel.—John E. Dunn.

Georgia.

Rome, November 20.—Yesterday was a great day with us. One who had been meeting at the digressive church came and put in his work with us, saying he was hungry to get back to the Lord's way. A Baptist who is sick in bed sent for me and said she wished to lay down human names and doctrines and be a Christian only. We met with her yesterday afternoon and took the Lord's Supper. She seems to be so happy now. We had good audiences at both services.—John Hayes.

Illinois.

Dongola, November 20.—My friends will please note that my address is changed from Elizabethtown, Ill., to Dongola, Ill. I have located here to labor with the congregation in Dongola; at Christian Chapel, about three miles from Dongola; at mission points in Union County; and to fill all the calls I can. If any congregation desires my services on the second, third, or fifth Sunday or for a meeting, please address me at Dongola. Both congregations here are in fine condition; and if I can only get them to realize their possibilities and responsibilities in spreading the word of truth, we can accomplish a great work. I am in the midst of a very interesting meeting here now.—A. H. Lannom.

CUT THIS OUT

OLD ENGLISH RECIPE FOR CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES.

If you know of some one who is troubled with Catarrhal Deafness, head noises or ordinary catarrh cut out this formula and hand it to them and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. In England scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily requires a constitutional treatment.

Sprays, inhalers and nose douches are liable to irritate the delicate air passages and force the disease into the middle ear which frequently means total deafness, or else the disease is driven down the air passages towards the lungs which is equally as dangerous. The following formula which is used extensively in the damp English climate is a constitutional treatment and should prove especially efficacious to sufferers here who live under more favorable climatic conditions.

Secure from your Druggist 1 ounce of Parmit (Double strength). Take this home and add to it 1 pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and hearing improve as the inflammation in the eustachian tubes is reduced. Parmit is used in this way as it acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system and has a slight tonic action that facilitates the recovery of the patient. The preparation is easy to make, costs little and is pleasant to take. Every person who has catarrh should give this treatment a trial.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Self-Poisoning.

Did you know that when you allow a slight case of constipation to continue you are poisoning yourself? The pores of your skin cannot carry off all the impurities of your body, and you should never force them to do more than their share by not keeping your bowels open. When constipated, take Van Lax for your liver. It cleanses your entire digestive system. It does not gripe or nauseate. Contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. It is pleasant in taste and results. It is the ideal treatment for constipation and auto-intoxication, or self-poisoning. Try it. Sold everywhere, in bottles, fifty cents. Manufactured by Van Fleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

Medicated Smoke Drives Out Catarrh

Catarrh is a disease of the mucous membrane. It is characterized by a discharge through the nostrils or into the throat. It usually begins with a cold in the head. Beginning in the nostrils it spreads to all the mucous membranes of the body. The nasty discharge being swallowed, it upsets the stomach and from the stomach it is taken into the blood, and poisons and deranges the whole body.

The discharge is all the time inclined to work its way from the nose back into the head—down into the throat—into the bronchial tubes and lungs. Herein is its greatest danger. Catarrh often destroys the organs of hearing and removes the sense of smell.

Try This Pleasant Herb Smoke Free (CONTAINS NO TOBACCO)

Dr. Blosser, who has devoted 42 years to the treatment of catarrh, is the originator of a combination of medical herbs, flowers and berries to be smoked in a pipe or ready prepared cigarette. This smoke vapor reaches all the air passages of the head, nose and throat. As shown in the accompanying illustration, the warm healing antiseptic vapor is carried directly to the very parts affected. This Remedy fights and kills the catarrh germs where liquids, sprays, douches, salves and medicated creams cannot possibly go. It is a most reliable remedy and is so simple and convenient that it can be used at home by any man, woman or child. It is entirely harmless, containing no tobacco or habit forming drug. No matter how severe or long standing your case may be he wants to show you what the Remedy will do for you.

Free Sample Package by Mail (FIVE DAYS' SUPPLY)

Write a post card or cut out and fill in the free sample coupon, mail it to Dr. Blosser and he will send you by mail a liberal trial package entirely free. This free package contains some of the Remedy for smoking in a pipe (new pipe included) and some of the medicated cigarettes. He will also send you an illustrated booklet explaining about catarrh and giving letters from customers who have used this Remedy. When you try the free sample you will see how the warm pleasant medicated vapor goes to every spot and gives such immediate relief.

If you suffer from catarrh, asthma, bronchial irritation, catarrhal deafness, or are subject to frequent colds, you cannot afford to neglect the use of this Remedy. Tennessee.

McMinnville, November 20.—I closed a good meeting at Orme with four additions. I am now in a fine meeting here. I preached three times yesterday to a packed house.—J. D. Northcut.

Waverly, November 20.—Brother Price Billingsley, of McMinnville, closed a ten-days' meeting here last night. The house was full to overflowing nearly every night, especially Sunday night. His sermons were full of much scripture and his criticisms were practical and intensely in earnest. Though the weather was cold and disagreeable at times, he was given much attention by the public generally and made friends of all who heard him.—J. L. Thompson.

Memphis, November 20.—Since last report I have visited Cordova, Cherokee, and Barn Creek, Ala., at each of which places we had a week's meeting. Five were baptized into the one body. We are now in a meeting with the McKellar Avenue church of Christ, in Memphis. Brother E. R. Wright is leading in song. The meeting will continue indefinitely. Fine interest is being manifested at the beginning. After this meeting I will visit my wife and six little ones, from whom I have been absent since the first of May, striving to build up the cause of Christ. Our home is Sweetwater, Texas. Brethren, pray for us.—A. D. Dies.

Glass of Salts Cleans Kidneys

If Your Back Hurts, or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In twenty-four hours they strain from it five hundred grains of acid and waste; so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water; you can't drink too much. Also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

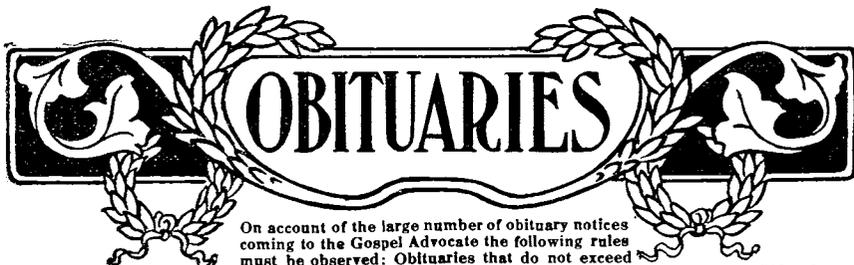

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which every one should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

One of the brightest and most entertaining of all our Sunday-school publications is THE YOUNG PEOPLE, a four-page weekly, devoted especially to the interests and welfare of young people of both sexes, but which will prove a channel of cheer and blessing to older ones as well. This periodical has just been consolidated with THE BIBLE STUDY HELPER, and presents the strongest and most essential features of both in an improved form. Three pages are given to stories of an entertaining and elevating character and articles of an educational nature, by gifted and well-informed writers, strikingly illustrated by photo-engravings and line drawings; and one page is devoted to a clear and concise presentation of the Sunday-school lesson, historically and exegetically, by A. B. Lipscomb, one of the editors of the Gospel Advocate, in which are presented the thoughts of many of the world's best thinkers. The size of the page is 10¾x14 inches. Printed from clear type on good paper.

Tanner.

John L. Tanner was born on May 15, 1844, and died on October 16, 1916. He was married to Miss Mary Jane Roddy on November 27, 1872. Five children were born to this union. C. M. Tanner, J. B. Tanner, L. D. Tanner, and Mrs. Albert Duncan survive him. His wife and one child preceded him to the grave. About the year 1886 he, with his wife, obeyed the gospel under the preaching of that great and godly man, Isaac C. Sewell. On May 30, 1916, he was married to Miss L. Jane Henry, still living. Brother Tanner was a sober, truthful, honest man in all of his dealings. He worked hard in his younger days and tried to take care of what he made. The writer conducted the funeral services at Berea, where he belonged, in the presence of a large crowd of sympathizing friends and neighbors, after which his body was laid beside his first wife in the Stovall Cemetery, there to await the resurrection morn, when "the dead in Christ shall rise first." "So shall we ever be with the Lord." Blessed thought! Let us be ready when death comes, for coming it is to one and to all.

JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

Warner.

Margaret Susanna Holder was born on October 27, 1849; was married to M. V. Warner on December 17, 1871; and died on September 9, 1916. She had been a member of the church of Christ for thirty-three years, and was considered one of the most consecrated members the congregation at Warner's Chapel has ever had. Her husband, Brother M. V. Warner, of Clemmons, N. C., is a preacher of the gospel, and a more loyal man to the teachings of the New Testament Scriptures it has never been my pleasure to meet. They were blessed with three children—two daughters and one son. The daughters survive her; the son died several years ago just as he was developing into young manhood. Sister Warner was patient, kind, and faithful in every sense of the meaning of these terms. She bore her severe afflictions with that patience and fortitude which only a Christian could do. In her death the church at Warner's Chapel has lost one of its most godly members; the community, one of its most saintly women; the home, one of the dearest mothers; and the husband, one of the most faithful companions. It can be truly said of her: "She hath done what she could." She was faithful unto death; so Christ will give her a crown of life.

W. L. REEVES.

Moseley.

Brother T. G. Moseley passed to his final home on November 4, 1916, at 3:45 P.M., after having lingered six years with the great white plague. Had he lived until December 18, 1916, he would have reached his fortieth birthday. He had been married to Mrs. Moseley eight years on August 23. I buried him with Christ in baptism several months back. He was a man who had read the Bible closely for some time and had long since become convinced that denominations were wrong and not taught in the Lord's word. It took only a short time to show him how to complete his obedience to the Savior, thereby becoming God's child. He was a man of fine ability, with a great reverence for God, very much like Cornelius of old. The church visited him often and learned to admire him greatly for his noble traits of character. He was one of the most patient beings I ever saw. He talked to me much and often of his departure. He planned his burial arrangements in every particular before death, selected the scripture to be read and the songs to be sung, and advised relative to remarks to be made. He was perfectly reconciled unto death and seemed to have not one fear. He passed into eternity without one struggle, giving us a smile with his last farewell. Thus ended the career of a remarkable character. I never found him blue or despondent, but always happy, bright, and cheerful, ever laboring to brighten the life and cheer the heart of all who came into his presence. He leaves a devoted wife, two stepchildren over whom he exercised a great influence for good, a mother, and some sisters. He set a fine example of trust in the Lord, and we saw plainly the fruit of such in suffering and death. We know no reason why his sufferings that he so patiently endured are not forever ended. His wife was a faithful companion to him unto the end. Our sympathies go out for them. May they make all necessary arrangements to meet him in the beyond. His mortal body was placed in Evergreen Cemetery, in the city of El Paso, Texas.

J. W. DUNN.

Harrison.

To write about the dead is sometimes a very unpleasant thing, for those who have been bereft of loved ones desire that the mantle of charity be spread over their wrongdoings and that their virtues and good deeds be extolled, and sometimes this becomes a very difficult task. But I am glad that such is not the case in regard to the subject of this sketch—Mrs. Nan Goodall Harrison, the eldest daughter of Brother W. C. Huffman, who passed into that rest that awaits the people of God and was gently laid beside loved ones gone before at Antioch, in Trousdale County, Tenn., on October 13, 1916, having departed this life on the day before. One daughter, Mrs. Minna May Corum, of Castalian Springs, Tenn., and one brother, R. P. Huffman, who lives at the old Huffman home, are left to mourn their loss. But, through faith in Him who is the resurrection and the life, they can look forward with the glorious hope that they will meet her again "some sweet day." Now to me there are many sweet memories that cluster around the old Huffman home and dear old Antioch Church. W. C. Huffman was one of the pioneers of his day and did much preaching in both Tennessee and Kentucky. Perhaps no one was his equal in converting people by his fireside talks. He preached in the homes of the people and along the public highway as well as in the pulpit. Not the desire to get gain, but to win precious souls to the Christ, was the impelling force that moved him on. No doubt but many will be the precious sheaves he will come rejoicingly bringing into the everlasting kingdom. It was W. C. Huffman who first opened my eyes, when I was but a boy, to see the glorious light of the gospel of Jesus the Christ; and it was old Antioch church that, when I began to preach, stood nobly by me and encouraged me with prayers and songs and means. Old Sister Lucy Ann Huffman (the devoted wife of W. C. Huffman), Sister Harrison, R. P., and Charley, were living together at the old home, and made it a most delightful home for me. Brother Charley went to place his gun in a rack over the door, when it fell and was discharged, the load passing through one of his feet, from the effects of which he died in a few days. Brother Johnnie, one of the elders at Antioch and a man who was loved by all who knew him, was the next to follow. Now Sister Harrison, a pure, godly woman, has been called to join the loved ones over on the other side, and "Dick," alone, is left of the children of the much-loved and pleasantly remembered W. C. Huffman. Though unfortunate to become badly crippled and to suffer for several weeks before her taking away, she bore her affliction without a murmur and trusted till death in Him whom her father had preached and whom she loved to the end. All who have visited the Huffman home will remember in Christian love Sister Harrison. Her daughter, Sister Minna, with those others of the family, have my deepest sympathy.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR
FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowiton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Turn Hair Dark With Sage Tea

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked, and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," for about fifty cents a bottle. It is very popular, because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of disease.

The Human Machine.

A human body is a wonderful machine under the control of the human spirit. If it were made of steel, brass, wood, or other material, it would be given careful attention. Yet it has a greater value than the most expensive machine of human manufacture; and once it is destroyed, nothing can take its place. When it is out of order, it involves not only monetary loss, but suffering.

Now, if you would take great care of an expensive machine, seeing that it is carefully oiled and kept in the pink of perfection to discharge its work perfectly, why not regard the body in the same way? If liver and kidneys are out of order, you can correct the disorder by using Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy—forty years on the market; approved by multitudes of people who have used it with satisfaction.

If you give your motor car oil to prevent friction and accident and the ruin of the car, why not furnish your liver or kidneys with the needed medicament when those organs are out of order?

Ask your druggist for Warner's Liver and Kidney Remedy, sold in fifty-cent and one-dollar bottles; or, write for free sample to Warner's Safe Remedies Company, Rochester, N. Y.

Final Report of Funds for the Church at Paris, Texas.

BY LEE GARRETT.

In addition to the amount previously reported ($849.90), the following contributions have been received by the church of Christ at Paris, Texas: Church at Savoy, Texas, by T. E. Arterberry, $10; Mrs. Charlotte, Dow, Okla., $1; church at Mount Calm, Texas, by R. N. Goodloe, $10; J. L. Rutherford, Mount Vernon, Texas, $25. Total, $895.90.

Brother D. T. Carlton received from churches visited, and paid to the church treasurer, $499.50. This gives a grand total of $1,395.40 received from churches and individuals in America.

The present amount we have invested in church property is nine thousand eight hundred dollars. This includes the building completed, all the furniture, and our church lot. The church made a loan of four thousand dollars, and will from time to time take care of this amount until it is all paid.

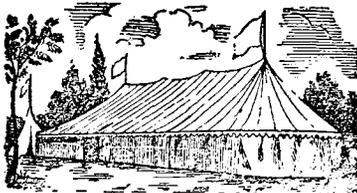

We are now housed in our new building, and have just closed a successful meeting, held by Brother J. B. Nelson, of Dallas. The work in every way seems to be moving along exceedingly well, and every indication is that much good will be accomplished in the next few years.

We again express our gratefulness to all who have contributed to our needs.

The mission which has been started in West Paris is doing well.

Can You Write a Letter Like This?

Mrs. Theo. Kuker, of Florence, S. C., writes us, under date of August 29, 1915, as follows: "I have ordered 'Renwar' for several people, and many others come to me for the name and address. As my recovery has been so wonderful, I am happy to recommend such a sure remedy. It has never failed to relieve those who used it." This is only one of such letters received by us almost every day. You, too, can be well, if you will. "Renwar" relieves rheumatism by removing the cause, uric acid, from the blood. For sale by all druggists, fifty cents per bottle; or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, if your druggist cannot supply you. Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.

This means big and little tents, and we make all kinds. A thousand satisfied users testify to their quality. Let us make you a quotation. No trouble at all.

ECZEMA Can Be Cured FREE Proof To You

J. C. Hutzell, R. F. DRUGGIST

All I want is your name and address so I can send you a free trial treatment. I want you just to try this treatment—that's all—just try it. That's my only argument.

I've been in the drug business in Fort Wayne for 20 years, nearly everyone knows me and knows about my successful treatment. Over four thousand people have, according to their own statements, been cured by this treatment since I first made this offer public.

If you have EcZema, Itch, Salt Rheum, Tetter—never mind how bad—my treatment has cured the worst cases I ever saw—give me a chance to prove my claim.

Send me your name and address and get the trial treatment I want to send you FREE. The wonders accomplished in your own case will be proof. Just address a letter or post card; say, "send me your Free Proof Treatment," and write your name and address plainly.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot-water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys, and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile, and indigestible material left over in the body, which, if not eliminated every day, become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels; the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood, causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood, and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply cannot get to feeling right, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make any one a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening, and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Drinking of Water

(BY W. LUCAS, M. D.)

The general conclusions of the latest Medical Scientists proves that drinking plenty of pure water both between meals and with one's meals is beneficial to health. It has now been proven by means of the X-rays and actual tests upon many healthy young men that the drinking of large amounts of water with meals is often beneficial. Therefore if you want to keep healthy drink plenty of pure water (not ice water), both with your meals and between meals. If you ever suffer from backache, lumbago, rheumatism, or any of the symptoms of kidney trouble—such as deep colored urine, sediment in urine, getting out of bed at night frequently and other troublesome effects, take a little Anuric before meals. These Anuric tablets can be obtained at almost any drug store.

TO RESIST THE ATTACK—of the germs of Consumption, Scrofula, Grip, Malaria, and many other diseases—means fight or die for all of us. These germs are everywhere in the air we breathe. The odds are in favor of the germs, if the liver is inactive and the blood impure.

What is needed most is an increase in the germ-fighting strength. To do this successfully you need to put on healthy flesh, rouse the liver to vigorous action, so it will throw off these germs, and purify the blood so that there will be no "weak spot," or soil for germ-growth.

We claim for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery that it does all this in a way peculiar to itself.

It cures troubles caused by torpid liver or impure blood.

"The Common Sense Medical Adviser," latest edition, in French cloth binding, will be sent free on receipt of four dimes or stamps to pay the cost of wrapping and mailing only. Address Dr. Pierce, Prost. Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

thou me?" or even "Servest thou me?" It goes closer home. It is, "Lovest thou me?" and all these other things may be where love is not. Again, he does not ask, "Lovest thou my word?" or "Lovest thou my work?" or "Lovest thou my brethren?" He asks: "Lovest thou me?" And yet again, he does not ask, "Art thou in the company of those that love me?" He will not let me shelter myself by losing myself in a crowd who all profess to love him. He brings me out into the light, to stand alone, and asks: "Lovest thou me?" What answer shall I give?—G. H. Knight.

Marks of Good Breeding.

A well-bred carriage is difficult to imitate, for in strictness it is negative, and it implies a long-continued previous training. You are not required to exhibit in your manner anything that specially betokens dignity; for, by this means, you are likely to run into formality and haughtiness; you are rather to avoid whatever is undignified and vulgar. You are never to forget yourself; are to keep a constant watch upon yourself and others; to forgive nothing that is faulty in your conduct and in that of others neither to forgive too little nor too much. Nothing must appear to touch you, nothing to agitate; you must never overhaste yourself, must ever keep yourself composed, retaining still an outward calmness, whatever storms may rage within. The noble character at certain moments may resign himself to his emotions; the well-bred, never. The latter is like a man dressed out in fair and spotless clothes; he will not lean on anything; every person will beware of rubbing on him. He distinguishes himself from others, yet he may not stand apart; for, as in all arts, so in this, the hardest must at length be done with ease; the well-bred man of rank, in spite of every separation, always seems united with the people around him; he is never to be stiff or uncomplaining; he is always to appear the first, and never to insist on so appearing.—Goethe.

Love Greater Than All.

"Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these?" A deeply affecting question this! And the shame-stricken Peter must have felt it so; for, though it gave him the opportunity of a new and very sincere declaration of love to his Lord, it could not fail to remind him—gently, yet keenly—how his former protestations had been belied. But it is worthy of note that when Jesus asked, "Lovest thou me more than these?" Peter made no reference to the "more than these" in his reply. He was done now with all boastful comparisons. He would not now even hint that he was a better disciple than the rest. Too humble now for that, he only said: "Thou knowest that I love thee." But let me take this as my Master's question to myself, and see how deep it goes, not only into my feelings, but into my life. For it is not, "Believest thou me?" or "Understandest thou me?" or "Confessest thou me?" or "Obeyest

"EDIFYING AS THE NEED MAY BE"

BY A. B. LIPSCOMB

The Waster Is a Destroyer.

The author of the book of Proverbs links two very undesirable characters, the shirker and the waster. So very much alike are they in their purposeless lives and malignant influence that the Wise Man calls them brothers. In the Revision there is another and a stronger word for "waster." Modern scholarship translates it "destroyer." The prophet Isaiah, in delineating the mighty forces to be arrayed against Zion, has Jehovah saying: "I have created the waster to destroy." Thus is shown God's estimate of the man who wastes his substance. We may easily overlook his extravagance or wink at his prodigality, but God looks upon him as a destructive agent. He is not a mere waster. He is a ruthless destroyer of his own happiness and the happiness of other people wherever his vitiating influence may touch. So far as human misery is concerned, the saddest picture in the Bible is that of a son, with a good home, an indulgent father, favorable opportunities to make a man of himself, but who made a journey into a far country and wasted his substance in riotous living. Then we see him in dire straits—home forsaken, father rejected, money gone, friends deserted, bread exhausted, clothes in tatters, living with hogs and stealing their food to keep from starving to death. It is with this graphic picture that the New Testament illustrates the Old Testament truism that the waster is a destroyer.

The Tragedy of Wasted Power.

God is God and truth is truth in one age as well as another. Surely our own generation has had frequent and abundant proof of the prodigal's folly. The gifted Emerson paid a high and beautiful tribute to youth who are ambitious and energetic in the right direction in these lines:

On prince or bride no diamond stone
Half so gracious ever shone
As the light of enterprise
Beaming from a young man's eyes.

But what shall we say of unworthy ambitions, of wasted energies and potentialities that are lost ere they are discovered? The scientists tell us that ninety-five per cent of the potential energy in coal is wasted because man has not learned to conserve it. This is bad, and especially so in view of the growing scarcity of coal. But is it not infinitely sadder to contemplate the woeful waste of the potential energy of mankind? Which of us can view the throngs of young men and women dawdling on street corners, frequenting cheap places of amusement, idling precious moments away, and not become discouraged? We think what it would mean to the world to prevent this tragedy of squandered opportunities. We bow to the earnest conviction that to prevent it is one of the gravest problems that confront the serious-minded people of to-day.

"Gather Up the Fragments."

In the great miracle of the feeding of the five thousand, Jesus taught his disciples to "gather up the fragments." Here we are reminded of his saying that "the children of this world are wiser than the children of light." For it is one of our modern miracles to see how the children of this world, as represented by great corporations, are gathering up the fragments. In the days of our great forests the mills used to cut down and saw the splendid trees with circular saws and a large per cent of the wood was converted into sawdust. But this is a thing of the past. New saws have been invented that make very little sawdust, and even that little has a marketable value. In the Chicago packing houses they formerly treated the hair and bristles and bones and blood as refuse, but now all of these are converted into selling products. Nothing is lost. A railroad official, addressing employees, said: "Remember, men, if you waste two cents' worth of oil, your road has to haul a ton of freight a mile to pay for it." The importance of saving his company's assets is a large part of the railroad man's education and discipline. A certain aspiring young fireman, who had heard this lesson against wastefulness repeatedly, was asked in an examination what he would do in the event he saw another engine approaching and a head-on collision seemed inevitable. He answered quickly enough: "I would grab a can of oil and a lump of coal and jump for my life." Seriously, no man has a right to waste his employer's time or his goods. Many people are sensitive on the point of having a clear distinction made between flagrant dishonesty and mere wastefulness. But Christ did not make this nice distinction. In the eyes of the great Teacher wastefulness is a species of theft. In the parable of the unjust steward we learn that a man is just as truly robbed by the employee who wastes money and goods as by the man who fills his pocket full of things that belong to the man he works for.

Waste Is Abuse of the Worst Sort.

Another synonym for waste is "abuse." The simplest illustration of this, perhaps, is one that relates to bodily health. Here is a man of fine physique. Like King Saul of old, he may rise head and shoulders above his brothers. He is what we call a perfect specimen of physical manhood. He has never had a touch of headache, neuralgia, or rheumatism. His skin is clear, his muscles are strong, and his appetite is faultless. But we close our eyes for a little while and look at him again. Now he is there, pale, emaciated, with no appetite and no strength. Why this great change in so short a time? It is a story of abuse, the example of a man who has wasted the substance of his health through intemperance and dissipation. In like manner there may follow the abuse of mind, the abuse of wealth, the abuse of position, the abuse of power. The apostle Paul, with his master mind, includes all of these wrecks of prodigality under one comprehensive head—the abuse of liberty. To the Christians at Corinth he wrote: "For ye, brethren, were called for freedom; only use not your freedom for an occasion to the flesh." God gives us some wonderful gifts—the endowment of health, the endowment of intellect, the endowment of wealth, the endowment of position, and there is the liberty to use them as we please. But we abuse that liberty when we fail to use these gifts and opportunities for our own spiritual advancement and to his honor and glory. We must stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ made us free. "But let us not forget that it is the liberty of self-restraint, of sobriety, of righteousness and love.

The Waste That Heaven Approves.

But there is a waste that heaven approves, a prodigality upon which Jesus pronounces a benediction. I think of Mary and her alabaster box of exceeding precious ointment. When she poured it out upon the Master's head, Judas murmured and the other disciples were moved with indignation. To them it meant waste. And such a waste—three hundred pence thrown away on the foolish luxury of a moment! They offer what seems to be a most plausible protest. "This ointment might have been sold for much and given to the poor." "It is very easy for us," says the Expositor's Bible, "who have the limelight of our Lord's words on the whole scene, to see how paltry the objection was; but even yet, with this story now published, as our Lord said it would be, all over Christendom, how many arguments are heard of the very same description! They could not see the blackness of the heart out of which the suggestion came, nor could they see the beauty of the love which shed from Mary's heart a perfume far more precious than the odor of the ointment." But Jesus could see and did see it all, for he asks: "Why trouble ye this woman? for she hath wrought a good work on me." The great lesson for all is this: When we really do a thing for Jesus, it is never wasted. We cannot be too generous in making sacrifices for him. This does not mean, as some have contended and have practiced, that men are warranted in expending lavish sums upon temples, cathedrals, altars, windows, and chancels. Such expenditure, it seems to me, is contrary to the whole spirit and example of the lowly Nazarene. But it does mean that we must pour out in generous and lavish measure the blessing of the gospel upon the heads of those whom he died to save. It means, too, that we must be constant and whole-hearted in our worship. To some people it seems to be an utter waste of time and energy to come to church every Sunday. "Just think," they suggest, "of how much you can do at home or of the benefit that might be derived from outdoor exercise." And there are thousands who in this respect practice what they preach. But, however busy or tired we may be, time given to the worship of God is time utilized to the highest and greatest advantage. There are some Christians who seem to begrudge the little time it requires every Lord's day to come and study the word with their brethren. They act as if that hour would be lost to them, whereas it can prove to be the most profitable hour in the day if you will make it so.

The Saddest Waste of All.

We look with pitying eye and heart moved with sympathy on men who are paying the penalty for having broken the law of sobriety, friendship, health, and integrity; but what shall we say of those who are wasting their substance of opportunity to make peace with God and their own souls by obeying the gospel, and who, refusing his offers of mercy, are hastening on toward eternal night? And what shall you say of yourself, if, knowing your duty and aware of your privilege to obey Christ, you refuse to use it? You must say something like Oscar Wilde wrote in his prison book, "De Profundis": "I must say to myself that I ruined myself. . . . I became the spendthrift of my own genius, and to waste an eternal youth gave me a curious joy." Such a testimony is indeed unworthy of any man's emulation. My heart reverts to another prodigal. I see him rise from out of the depths, and I hear him cry: "I have played the fool. I have wasted my father's money; I have lost a golden opportunity; I have misspent precious hours; I have brought on poverty and degradation; but even now there is bread enough and to spare. I shall go to my father's house."

ORATIONS AND ESSAYS

(These were delivered by graduates of the Nashville Bible School on last Commencement Day.)

A Tribute to David Lipscomb, Founder of the Nashville Bible School.

BY L. G. KENAMER.

Brother Lipscomb, we would call thee "prince of men," but we know thine aversion to earthly titles of distinction. We revere thee with that reverence due God's holy men. What wonders God hath wrought through thee! At a time when popularity threatened to undermine the very existence of the church—threatened to rob her of her simplicity, her loyalty, and much of her primitive truth—it was thy firmness and courage, thy piety and love for truth, that held in check the onrushing tide which has swept so many lives from the shores of safety.

Thy character is above reproach, thy heroism unquestioned, thy philanthropy far-reaching. No monument is needed to commemorate thy noble deeds, which will live in golden splendor long after thy form is entombed and thy tongue and pen are silent forever here.

To thee to-day we say farewell.

Through the providence of God, by means of physical and mental strength, thou hast reached thy fourscore years and art permitted to witness one quarter of a century's progress of this institution, the creation of thy genius. May this day of sad farewell be to thee a day of rejoicing; and we, the class of 1916, pledge thee our coöperation in maintaining the reputation of the greatest school in the land.

Freedom.

BY W. N. LUTON.

In the dim and distant ages of the long, long ago there was born within the secret chambers of the human heart a passion which the angels named "Freedom." Freedom! The word is powerful in its influence, sublime in its nature, and marvelous in its effects. 'Tis magical in that it thrills the soul of man and impels him to mighty deeds of valor. To recount the deeds of freedom is to lift the darkling drapery of time and view the contents of history's golden urn. Ease and luxury have been sacrificed to gain the priceless possession. Wealth that Cresus might have envied has been poured at the feet of Liberty. Achievements that Caesar might have coveted have been sung in the ballads of liberty-loving peoples.

When monarchs beyond the seas held their tyrannical sway, there arose a cry that leaped from continent to continent and shook the tyrant's throne. This cry unsheathed the sword of freedom, broke the fetters of slavery, and then began the reign of the universal rights of man.

In the New World, Americans, too, drank the spirit of freedom from mountains, sky, and river; and when the iron heel of oppression was set upon their cherished rights, the Continentals drew sword against the venerable monarchy of England, planted a free government upon this continent, and dedicated it to liberty forever. "Old Glory," which has been sanctified by the blood of our best and bravest, proclaims the heroism of the Revolutionary fathers. It records the achievements of Washington and the martyrdom of Lincoln.

"Our father's God, from out whose hand
The centuries fall like grains of sand,
O make thou us, through centuries long,
In peace secure, in justice strong;
Around our gift of freedom draw
The safeguards of thy righteous law."

While the struggles for constitutional liberty were in a state of fomentation there was manifested another phase of liberty which had a more vital effect upon human progress and culture. Wycliffe, the morning star of the Reformation, who lived years in advance of his age, slowly kindled the flame which reached its lustrous height in the religious upheaval of the seventeenth century. Martin Luther, all aglow with the spirit of reform, arose amid the ruins of oppression, and, with the dauntless courage of a giant, burst the shackles of free speech and awoke the slumbering host of freedom's sons.

That men should serve their fellow-beings and languish in the dungeon of oppression is grievous bondage; but there is a more grievous bondage—more grievous because it has its influence on the eternal destiny of the soul. Men become engrossed in the momentary pleasures of sin and revel in the valley of ignorance, untraversed by a single ray from the brilliant sun of God's abiding truth. Ignorance wantonly intoxicates mortals with sin, bequeathes to them the delirium of suffering, locks man in conflict and cruelty, and ruptures the bonds of brotherhood. Ignorance of the benevolence of God and of the philanthropy of his Son is the prime fountain whence all religious persecution and intolerance proceed.

O thou stricken and deceived humanity! To what pitiable depths hath thy carnal mind led thee? With what foul chains hath it bound and fettered thee? But for the miserable victim the glorious sun of truth still shines, the fragrant flowers of purity still bloom, and joy and rapture are held in store. His yearning cry for deliverance ascends to the very courts of heaven. The lowly Nazarene hastens in glad response, preaches glad tidings to the poor, heals the broken-hearted, and proclaims release to those that are bound. To the wretched captive he gives the Magna Charta of human redemption. Thanks to thee, Illustrious Emancipator! We adore thy divinity, we revere thy excellence, and we love thy freedom.

Victory.

BY J. H. M'BROOM.

Every normal child is born with a soul that has in its nature the desire for victory. It comes forth to conquer. It must, it will, conquer. Watch the innocent babe in its efforts to overcome physical weakness. Watch the little boy as he attempts to convert boyhood into manhood. See the sweet little girl as she puts away her dolls, puts on her mother's dress, and thinks herself a woman. Behold men and women in the activities of life, how they are compelled to contend with opposing forces.

The goal of physical, mental, moral, and spiritual growth lies beyond victory. To be happy, we must conquer. To be successful, we must become victors. To become citizens of Holy Zion, we must be carried to the skies on patient wings of triumph.

The soul influenced by heredity, environment, and will may pursue either of two great types of victory. One type is that in which the soul in each victory receives power that helps it to develop into a giant of sin. Think of the millions of tears that have flowed from flooded eyes; hear the doleful sounds that have come from heavy hearts; see the untimely graves that have been filled; strip the soul of its limited habitation, remove the veil of time, see the Great Day, and behold the weeping and gnashing of teeth—all as the result of having continually won this kind of victory. The other is the one to be desired, the one that brings to our souls power from on high, strengthening us from victory unto victory, transforming our characters into that of the divine Victor. Let us see the smiles that have been stamped on many faces; realize the love that has been shed abroad in the hearts of men; permit us for a moment to depart from this mortal coil, take up our abode in the future home of the soul, and hear Jesus say: "Come, sit with me upon my throne, for you gained good victory in the world once known."

To win this great Victory, each soul must put on the helmet of salvation, arm itself with the sword of the Spirit, and march forth to war with two great forces. One is an outside force, in its ever-changing form, that strives to counteract every noble deed. The other is a more dangerous foe. It dwells within our dual being and watches every aspiration of our souls.

"It is truly known by nothing else,
Save old, grumbling, selfish self.
If the soul a pure impulse impart,
It grieves old self within his heart.
If divine thoughts it should produce,
Self smiles and says, 'What is the use?'
If by the soul a noble deed is wrought,
Self calls his forces to bring it to naught."

We, who would win in this gigantic struggle, must not depend on our wisdom and power, but must put ourselves in harmony with Jehovah our God, and call upon him for power; then, as we receive this power, let us use it with all our strength, and we will climb little by little into that life that knows no defeat. Then, let us lift up our voices with thankful hearts and proclaim unto Jehovah our God: "Through thy grace we are more than conquerors." "Thanks be unto thee, O God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." "Glory to Jehovah in the highest, who always leadeth us in triumph. Amen."

Life Triumphant.

BY G. MITCHELL PULLIAS.

The simple life, the strenuous life. The simple life which ignores all care and conflict soon loses its vigor and becomes insipid. The strenuous life which does every thing with clinched fists and fierce effort soon becomes strained and violent. Somewhere between these two extremes must lie the golden mean—a life that has strength and simplicity, courage and calm, power and peace.

But how can we find this golden mean? Some truth there must be in the old figure which represents life as a battle. No conflict, no character. Without strife, a weak life. But what is the real meaning of the battle? What is the vital issue at stake? And in what spirit are we to wage the warfare? The answer is: "Overcome evil with good." In this exhortation we see the three essential points—a call to the real battle of life, a plan for the right campaign, and a promise of final victory.

Let us not be deceived by the delusion that there is no conflict; that evil does not actually exist, but is only imaginary; for evil is real—as real as darkness, as real as death. There are two things in every human heart which bear witness to the existence and reality of evil. First, our judgments of regret; secondly, our judgments of condemnation. How often we say to ourselves, "Would that this had never been done!" or, "Would that we had acted differently!" This is the consciousness of regret, and it is the silent witness of the heart to the conviction that some things are not inevitable. It is the confession that a battle has been lost which might have been won. And then out of the judgment of regret springs the deeper judgment of condemnation, and the false word, the unjust deed, the foul action, all betray a sad surrender to evil.

In the realm of moral and spiritual darkness, evil has its soldiers, its servants, its emissaries, as ardent and enthusiastic in its cause as if they were serving the noblest of masters. It wins adherents and turns them into advocates. Evil creates lobbies and controls legislation. It inspires literature and subsidizes the press. And even when its outward manifestations are repressed and its grosser forms resisted, it steals its way into men's hearts and takes away the very lifeblood of true manhood. But what is the plan? In what spirit and with what weapons are we to engage in this great conflict?

The natural feeling of the heart in the presence of evil is wrath, and the natural weapon of wrath is force. But to fight evil with force, on its own grounds, with its own weapons, is dangerous.

Wrestle with the chimney sweep, and you will be blackened; throw back the mud that is thrown at you, and you will have muddy hands; answer Shimei when he curses you, and you will but echo his profanity.

What, then, is the better plan? 'Tis found in the religion of the Prince of Peace—a religion which sheathes the sword of steel and unsheathes the sword of the Spirit; which lays aside the plated mail and shield of brass and puts on the whole armor of God. It is found exemplified in the life and teaching of the greatest exponent of Christianity, the greatest Christian warrior, who says: "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

"Climbing the Ladder of Success."

BY CLEO C. BOLES.

"In the ladder of life we are given to climb,
Each round counts only a second of time,
But the one thing to do is to make the world glad that you ran in the race."

No one need think he can obtain success by aimlessly wandering along the pathway of life. He need not expect the ravens to feed him; the cruse of oil to remain inexhausted; to possess the wisdom of Solomon; or his righteousness to exceed that of the Pharisee, unless he persevere along some chosen field of endeavor.

The watchword of success is "Will." Often a person has the will to climb, but he lacks the incentive. Will is often dry powder which needs only the match. It needs something to break the chrysalis and loosen the wings of its might. "As a man thinks, so is he," says the writer of Proverbs; and as a man thinks, so he acts; and as he acts according to his will, we might say that as is his will, so is he. One great trouble with many persons is that they are made up of all kinds of machinery with parts that are not adjusted, that are out of place; no belts on the wheels, no fire under the boiler, hence no steam to move the mechanism. On the other hand, even in the lives of the most abandoned and reckless there are moments when their good angel points out to them the heights to which they might ascend, a wish arises for something better than they have known, yet they have not the will to make the necessary exertions.

To climb the ladder requires labor and perseverance. We must remember that those who ascend must pursue the climbing not only where there are stout rounds, but where there are broken ones. They must leap and hold, to conquer the world like Caesar, to snatch the laurels from the doubtful hand of Victory while she is hesitating where to bestow them. To begin at the bottom of the ladder and climb slowly to the top seems a very discouraging process, and here it is that thousands fail. There is no royal road to success. The road reaches through troubles and discouragements. It stands in fields of earnest, patient labor. It calls for energy and determination. As those articles are most highly prized to attain which requires the greatest amount of labor, so the ladder that leads to success is high and there are broken rounds in it. What matter if a foot slip or a round break? Such things must be expected, and, being encountered, they must be overcome. Rome was not built in a day; but proofs of her magnificent temples are still to be seen. It is hard, earnest work, round by round, that reaches the top.

There is no gold or fame at the top of the ladder. Success does not consist of amassing a fortune. Some of the most unsuccessful men have accumulated great wealth. Remember, too, that "success" and "fame" are not synonymous terms. All cannot be famous as lawyers, statesmen, or divines. You may or may not accumulate a fortune. But is it true that wealth, position, and fame are rounds of the ladder? Success may or may not be accompanied by them; it is something above and beyond them. This being true, you only are to blame if you fall. It is in your power to live a life of integrity and honor. You can so live that all will honor and respect you. You can speak words of cheer to the heavy-hearted, a kind word of caution to the erring one. You can help remove some obstacle from the paths of the weak. You can incite in the minds of those around you a desire to live a pure, straightforward life. You can bid those who are almost overwhelmed by the billows and waves of sorrow to look up and see the sun shining through the dark rifts above you. All this can you do, and a grand success will be your reward.

"Then remember that heaven is not reached by a single bound,

We build the ladder by which we climb
From the lowly earth to the vaulted sky,
As we mount to its summit round by round."

Character.

BY LUCY L. JONES.

Character is what a man is. It lies deeper than what he does or says. It is so profound that the greatest Teacher declared that in order to change it one "must be born again."

You can alter your conduct as easily as you can wash your hands; but to affect your character, your very soul must be shaken.

Home affairs of one's life have great influence upon his character, for the home is the first and most important school of character. It is a true quotation that "mind makes the man," but truer still is the one that "home makes the man." It is mainly in the home that the heart is opened, the habits are formed, the intellect is awakened and character molded, either for good or for evil.

It is in childhood that the mind is most open to impression and ready to be kindled by the first spark that falls into it. Ideas are then caught quickly and live lastingly. Everything to a child is a model; of manner, of speech, of habit, and of character. The child's character, by imitation of these acts, is becoming slowly, but decidedly, formed, like snowflakes falling unperceived; each flake added to a pile produces no perceptible change.

But in the progress of years the time comes when home ceases to be an exclusive influence in the formation of character, and it is succeeded by the companionship of friends and comrades, which continues to mold the character by powerful influence. For even older persons cannot help imitating those with whom they associate. George Herbert has said: "Keep good company and you shall be of the number."

Again, if a person selects books of the best kind for his companions, he is thereby introduced into the best society and brings himself into the presence of the greatest minds that have ever lived.

Character is every day undergoing a change, for better or for worse, either being elevated or degraded; and it shows itself in conduct, guided by principles and practical wisdom. In the affairs of life it is not intellect that tells so much as character, nor brains so much as heart.

Character, when it is noble, is one of the greatest motive powers in the world, and it exhibits man at his best. It is nature in the highest form.

A great character is just. He does not condemn others, because he knows he cannot—and no one but God can—correctly weigh men's motives. He will not seek excuses for his own mistakes, for he understands that leniency toward self and severity toward others are of the same consistency.

Every man may possess a noble character; for whether he has money, property, learning, or power, he may be strong in heart and rich in spirit, honest, truthful, and dutiful, and in this way may possess the noblest of possessions; and, possessing a noble character, he may some day rule the world, but without it all his splendid gifts will be comparatively useless.

A man will never be trusted in private or public life unless he be a man of noble character. Take, for example, the "Father of His Country," a man of noted character.

In 1798, when Washington had withdrawn from public life and when it seemed probable that France would declare war against us, President Adams wrote to Washington, saying: "We must have your name. If you will permit us to use it, there will be more efficacy in it than in many an army." We cannot find the smallest part of the personal weight of Washington in the narrative of his exploits. The largest part of his power was latent. This is that which we call character.

I have read that those who listened to Lord Chatham felt that there was something finer in the man than anything which he said.

Men of character are the conscience of society. Nations, like individuals, have their character to maintain, and they are the heirs of the greatness of individuals, of which they are composed. For a nation to be great, it need not necessarily be big, though bigness is often confounded with greatness. It may be very large in point of territory and population and yet be very destitute of true greatness. When national character ceases to be upheld, a nation may be regarded next to lost.

Longfellow, in "The Poets," has the following:

"Not in the clamor of the crowded street,
Not in the shouts and plaudits of the throng,
But in ourselves are triumph and defeat."

Bayard Taylor said:

"Fame is what you have taken,
Character's what you give;
When to this truth you awaken,
Then you begin to live."

Robert Browning has said:

"Love, hope, fear, faith—these make up humanity;
These are its sign and note and character."

If we cannot attain, at a single bound, to these grandeur, at least let us do them homage.

"Is Instrumental Music in Psallo?"

On this question G. Dallas Smith writes: "John B. Cowden, of Tullahoma, Tenn., is circulating a tract on the subject, 'Instrumental Music in the Church.' In this tract the author very confidently contends that the Greek word 'psallo' necessarily implies the use of musical instruments in Christian worship. I take this method of informing the brotherhood that I have quite recently reprinted (with some revisions) my tract, 'Is Instrumental Music in Psallo?' I believe my tract answers completely Brother Cowden's and shows the utter fallacy of his contention. If you have received one of these tracts and want an answer to it, then only ten cents will bring you a copy of 'Is Instrumental Music in Psallo?' If you want them in quantities, then one hundred will be sent for five dollars—five cents apiece. Address G. Dallas Smith, Murfreesboro, Tenn."

The Proper Administrator.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Mr. J. E. Skinner, a Baptist minister of the "Missionary" branch, continues his dissertation on "The New Testament Procedure of Baptists" thus:

Let us notice also in connection with the authority of John's baptism that, although no one was ever rebaptized who had received it, so far as the record goes, yet it is quite beyond question that no one ever received authority at the hands of John, either in baptism or otherwise, to administer the ordinance. It is true the apostles received their baptism at the hands of John, and that they did baptize, but they did it by the authority of Christ, and not by the authority of John. The only account of its being put to the test is in the nineteenth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, where, in answer to the apostle's question, "Unto what were you baptized?" they said, "Unto John's baptism." Pointing out their mistake in the fourth verse, Paul said: "John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus." That is to say, no one had the right to baptize you, though baptized himself by John the Baptist, who had not turned from John to Christ, and received from him at firsthand the authority to do so. "When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus." Now, all this irregularity that necessitated the rebaptizing of these disciples at Ephesus came about by the fact that Apollos, of Alexandria, who had been converted and baptized under John's ministry, no doubt, and had never become identified with the personal ministry of Christ nor that of his churches, but was conducting his evangelistic work as an independent evangelist—without authority, either from Christ or his churches—had baptized them, knowing only the baptism of John." (See Acts 18: 24; 19: 7.) The point is clear and plain. If we wish to see it, that although John's baptism was from heaven—having the Lord's own authority—and therefore good everywhere, yet he had no authority in this particular for any one but himself, and could not commission others to do it.

Mr. Skinner had no difficulty in showing that John received his authority to baptize from heaven, but he greatly errs in his dealing with certain parties at Ephesus. He well knew that in the history of certain disciples at Ephesus (Acts 19: 1-5) a very serious difficulty lay in the way of the theory he was trying to establish—viz., that no one but an ordained "Missionary" Baptist preacher has the right or authority to administer baptism. In his efforts to get around this difficulty he assumes that these twelve disciples at Ephesus had been baptized by some one who had no right to baptize, which fact accounts for their being rebaptized. It is true that no one who submitted to John's baptism while it was in force was ever rebaptized; but the facts relative to the twelve at Ephesus show that they had submitted to John's baptism after it ceased to be a command of God, and that their rebaptism was based upon that fact, and not on the grounds of the administrator. The record in this case says not one word about the administrator of baptism, but about the baptism itself. The apostle simply asked, "Unto what then were ye baptized?" Not one word as to by whom they were baptized is in the record. The very thing Mr. Skinner needs to have as even a semblance for his contention is conspicuous by its absence from the record. In reply to their answer to Paul's question, the apostle said: "John baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people that they should believe on him that should come after him, that is, on Jesus." Beginning with the day of Pentecost after the last commission was given to the apostles (Matt. 28: 19, 20), a new baptism was inaugurated. People could no longer by divine authority be baptized "into John's baptism," but had to be baptized "into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." Christ had come, been crucified, buried, raised, and crowned king with all authority in heaven and in earth. Here, then, is a baptism essentially different from that administered by John—a thing our Baptist friends seem never to have grasped.

Mr. Skinner has a very elastic imagination. Blinded by the Baptist dogma that no one but a regularly ordained Baptist preacher can scripturally administer the ordinance of baptism, he draws the following conclusion from Paul's language: "That is to say, no one had the right to baptize you, though baptized himself by John the Baptist, who had not turned from John to Christ, and received from him at firsthand the authority to do so." The most careful microscopic investigation of Paul's language by the most profound biblical exegete that ever lived could not within a thousand years discover a shade of even a shadow of Mr. Skinner's "that is to say." Paul said no such thing, nor did one word fall from his lips from which Mr. Skinner could legitimately draw his conclusion. My friend indulges in another bold and unwarranted assumption in order to make out his case. He unqualifiedly asserts that Apollos "had never become identified with the personal ministry of Christ nor that of his churches, but was conducting his evangelistic work as an independent evangelist—without authority, either from Christ or his churches—had baptized them, 'knowing only the baptism of John.'" Now, the Scriptures are very emphatic in contradicting Mr. Skinner in the essential part of his contention at this point. The Holy Spirit, in giving an account of Apollos, says: "This man had been instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in spirit, he spoke and taught accurately the things concerning Jesus, knowing only the baptism of John." (Acts 18: 25.) Now, not one word is said by the Holy Spirit about the authority of this man to preach and baptize. The only thing wrong about the whole matter was that he was baptizing "into John's baptism" instead of "into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." Moreover, two very prominent members of the church at Ephesus took Apollos aside and "expounded unto him the way of God more accurately." The only light he needed was in the matter of baptism; and instead of Priscilla and Aquilla telling Apollos he had no authority to preach and baptize, they simply corrected the one error in his practice and with "the brethren encouraged him, and wrote to the disciples to receive him." (See Acts 18: 26, 27.) This part of Mr. Skinner's essay is concluded by the following summing up: John had no authority to commission others to baptize. Of course, no one at all familiar with the Bible would call that in question; but the statement contains a principle that sounds the death knell of my friend's doctrine. John's authority for baptizing came from heaven, and the authority for baptizing now must emanate from the same source. Inasmuch as the Baptist Church is not heaven, but made up of weak and fallible human beings, it has no authority to commission a single being to do anything in religion. If John, a prophet, had no authority to commission any one to baptize, how does it happen that a community of people not one of which is a prophet has such authority? My friend's doctrine emanates from the "kingdom of the clergy" who sit astride the necks of the laity and crack their ecclesiastical whip while the performance is going on.

BY W. H. CARTEB.

"What must one do in order to become a Christian, and how may one know that he has been pardoned?"

I shall take it that the above question (or questions) is asked for the purpose of learning the truth, and shall try to answer according to, and in harmony with, God's holy Book. While the truth, to those who see and know and understand the truth, is very plain, yet the environments and former teaching of some may so blind their eyes and darken their understanding that it is hard to get them to see and understand what truth is. For such we should have a profound sympathy, and in great patience strive to point out to them the "way of salvation." Many people, on account of incorrect teaching, have come to conclude that God's way of saving is a mysterious and unexplainable thing and, therefore, that the Bible itself is a mysterious book. Until we get our minds cleared of this we are not in shape to receive and understand the truth.

That we can know and understand the truth, we here make a few quotations from the sacred writings: "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness; because that which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God hath showed it unto them." (Rom. 1: 18, 19.) Notice here that God had "showed it unto them." "But unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath," etc. (Rom. 2: 8.) Here we note that, in order that one may know he has obeyed the truth, he must know what truth is. In John 17: 17, Jesus says: "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." Paul says: "Wherefore be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is." (Eph. 5: 17.) Again, he says: "For this cause I Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ for you Gentiles, if ye have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God which is given me to you: how that by revelation he made known unto me the mystery; (as I wrote afore in few words, whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ)," etc. (Eph. 3: 1-4.) "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8: 31, 32.) In verse 36 Jesus says: "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

It was foretold by Isaiah, one of the prophets, concerning the new covenant God had promised to make—the kingdom he had promised to set up—that he would teach them of his ways. (Isa. 2: 1-3.) Along this line Jesus said: "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day. It is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and both learned of the Father, cometh unto me." (John 6: 44, 45.) Just before Jesus ascended to heaven he charged his disciples, saying: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.)

Now, with such plain declarations as we find in the above quotations, what is there to hinder us from seeing, understanding, and grasping God's way of leading people to his Son, that they may have life? God made man upright, after his own image and for his own glory, and endowed him with the power to reason, and gave him a mind capable of being educated, and, always, in his efforts to lead men into that which was for his temporal or eternal good, he addressed himself to his intelligence, and sought by means of words addressed to his understanding to educate and thus guide him in the way of truth and holiness. The scriptures quoted above show that the age, or dispensation, in which we live is not an exception to this rule. The unconverted are to be taught, and those who hear and learn of the Father come to the Savior for pardon, and are then taught to observe all things that he has commanded. But while our dear Savior was here, there were those who closed their eyes and stopped their ears against the truth. I hope such will not be the case with you.

Brother J. D. Walling's Report.

Monticello, Ky., November 18, 1916.—Dear Brother Elam: We had our annual meeting of the churches of the county to-day, at which I submitted the inclosed report. The brethren were pleased with our year's work, and all expressed themselves as being anxious of doing more for the next year. We have just finished the new house at Stop, and had a very good meeting in it. This gives us now five worshipping congregations in the county. I think and hope I baptized another preacher in that meeting; the prospects are good to that end. This is two new houses we have built in the last two years, and we have our house here well under way. Our faith grows stronger in the promises of God. To preach the whole counsel of God, and live as one preaches, will bear the richest fruit. While the sects have combined against us, the truth is growing, as it will, in favor with the people. While I am able to see the fight against us giving way, we have only accomplished enough to encourage us to greater efforts. The two adjoining counties—Clinton and Russell—are calling for us to come over and help them. For the life of me, I cannot see how a Christian can have a greater interest in "foreign missions" than in "home missions." Why should not the bannered host be as victorious at home as over the sea?

But the realm of questions is great. What has any one to lose by being a Christian, with all the term means? It would only make him a better and happier man. He has nothing to lose and everything to gain. No man can lose anything by being honest and truthful. He is sure to gain the favor of all men. Even the dishonest will respect him. Neither can any one lose anything by consecrating himself and all that he has to the Lord. My observation has been that those who truly give themselves unto the Lord never suffer. This has not only been true with the preacher, but with all men.

I have read with great interest your recent articles in the Gospel Advocate. They have been very helpful to me. But I did not intend writing at length. I thought it right to send you our report.

I would be very glad indeed to visit Tennessee this Christmas; but our work here is so needy, I fear I cannot leave it. I feel sometimes like it would be a great relief to be able to get out for a week or so. The church at Celina, Tenn., which has been contributing to this work, has asked me to visit it, and I would be glad to do so, but do not hardly see how I can. I think it would be encouraging to me, and perhaps to it, but I just cannot see where I am to find the time.

But I have written enough, I hope your family are well. I will be glad to hear from you at any time.

Fraternally, J. D. WALLING.

Below are submitted the contributions to Brother Walling's support for a year from November, 1915, to November, 1916. He gives the names of all individuals contributing to this good work, but lack of space forbids the publication of them.

Contributions outside of field of labor: From the church at Vivian, La., $10; Antioch, Ky., $7; J. A. Robinson, Texas, $10; Mrs. E. A. Blackburn, Texas, $3; Glasgow, Ky., $1; Hartsville, Tenn., $3; Mrs. N. K. Gunn, $10; Mrs. Annie Bartlett, $2; Norma King, $2; J. T. Fields, $1; Cookeville, Tenn., $10; Celina, Tenn., $25; S. F. Morrow, $5; S. H. Proffitt, $5; Celina, Tenn., $20; Moss, Tenn., $1; Cookeville, Tenn., $10.

Contributions outside of field of labor, $125. Contributions from individuals and churches in field of labor, $538. Total, $663.

Can any missionary make a better report—more, or as much, accomplished on so small means?

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

"Broad-Minded" Religion Rebuked.

There are "broad-minded men" who show a curious inconsistency in their methods of reasoning about religion and about secular affairs. The Lutheran Church Work and Observer (Harrisburg) finds them properly detected and put to the blush by a writer in the Atlantic Monthly. These men generally boast of their "liberality and breadth of view" in matters of religion, and are fond of saying that in their judgment "one church is just as good as another." The religious paper pays its tribute to the good offices of its literary brothers, finding it "refreshing to see the broad-minded man so sharply rebuked in a journal that is valued generally for its high literary standing rather than for its religious teaching." These are the paragraphs quoted:

"Of all persons who hinder the progress of religious thought, possibly, the most effective is the man who is broad-minded without being deep-minded. It takes an exceptionally gifted man, one of unusual intellectual powers and mentality rarely disciplined, to be 'broad' without spiritual deterioration. It has been well said that one's religion is like a river. When a river breaks over its well-established and ancient banks, unless it is a stream remarkably deep, it will quickly degenerate into an odorous and malarial swamp. Obviously, the best thing to do with ordinary rivers is to keep them within their ancient bounds. An extraordinary religious soul may break over the banks and hew out new channels successfully. The ordinary man, breaking over the former restraints in an intense desire to be 'broad,' usually accomplishes nothing except his own spiritual stagnation and the annoyance of his neighbors.

"For a spiritual genius like Phillips Brooks, to take only one example, one can have nothing but admiration; for in breaking over the bounds of conventional religion he did not abandon them. He appreciated their value and sought merely to broaden the old channel. But it is with a very different feeling that one observes the genial gentleman who enlivens an after-dinner smoke with the smiling and patronizing remark to the clergyman present: 'Well, I'm broad-minded enough to know that one church is as good as another.' Of course he is broad—swamp-broad, and covered with a rich intellectual scum which prevents his knowing what arrant nonsense he is uttering. He knows that one cigar is not as good as another; that one bar is not the equal of every other bar; that Henry James and Robert Chambers are not equal as novelists; that Beethoven and Irving Berlin are not occupants of the same musical plane. He has very definite opinions as to the moral superiority of either Germany or England, and even of the comparative righteousness and usefulness of Mr. Bryan and Mr. Roosevelt. And yet there he sits, pitying his poor clergyman for being a narrow-minded ass, and saying: 'One church, one religion, one philosophy is as good as another.'

The above, clipped from the Literary Digest of October 28, is worthy of very serious consideration. The broad-minded man is the one who follows God's word. When God speaks, that is the end of all controversy with him. It is the essence of narrowness and presumption for a man to imagine that he can be broader and deeper than the word of God. As God is above man, so his word is greater and more perfect than the word of any man. Men who imagine themselves broad-minded, and yet say that one church is as good as another, show conclusively that they do not know even the fundamental principle of God's word. We are taught very plainly in holy writ that the church is the body of Christ and that the body of Christ is the church. Eph. 1: 22, 23 reads: "And he put all things in subjection under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." This shows without doubt that the church is the body of Christ. Col. 1: 18 teaches us that the body of Christ is the church of Christ: "And he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things he might have the pre-eminence."

Now, since the church of Christ is the body of Christ, and the body of Christ is the church of Christ, the church and body mean one and the same thing. If, therefore, we learn there is but one body, we will also learn that there is but one church. 1 Cor. 12: 20 reads: "But now they are many members, but one body." Thus it appears that men who have the proper respect for God's word will not contend that one church is as good as another, since Christ has only one church. Our great concern should be to be broad enough to do just what God commands us to do, in order that we all may become members of the body, or church, of Christ.

We are glad to have this support and encouragement from our literary brothers, and hope they will continue to give us more along this same line.

The Road to Failure With a Boy.

It takes some parents a long time to learn that if they wish to break their children of certain faults, telling them of those faults is the most certain road to failure. If a boy is selfish, for example, the most obvious thing for parents to do is to tell him that he is selfish, in the strong hope that if he has any desire for improvement inside of him he will make an effort to stop being selfish. What else indeed, the parents argue, can we do if this doesn't work? The fact is, of course, that it never does work; or if it does, it is because of abnormal conditions. The truth is, if a boy is selfish, which he probably is, telling him so only makes him worse. Parents never get over being astonished at this. They usually fall back on the firm conviction that they have done all they can do and that there must be something wrong with the boy when he ignores their advice, which they always flatter themselves is based on a long experience. Then they get very sad about it. The boy has not only gone back on himself, but—what grieves them more, because it affects their vanity most—he has gone back on them. By disregarding their advice he is practically disregarding them, and doing it in the most disrespectful manner. And—from their standpoint—the remedy is so simple! Here they are, willing—nay, consumed with anxiety—to give him the benefit of their superior experience; yet he coolly ducks and ignores them. What do the parents then do? Instead of calmly asking themselves just what the matter is with their own system to produce such pitiful results, they proceed to rub it into the boy. After a while he becomes so used to the idea of having it dinged into him that he is selfish that he accepts his reputation. He forms a sort of protective crust and becomes so thoroughly immune to this kind of assault that, in a sardonic, sinister way, he gets positively to enjoy it. The result is that whatever chance there was in the beginning to cure him has been hopelessly minimized. —Ladies' Home Journal.

The foregoing from the Ladies' Home Journal for December, 1916, is certainly true. However, it is so much easier to diagnose a case than it is to point out and practice the remedy. The parent who has reared a large family of boys and girls understands well the difficulties that must be overcome in order to properly train them. Bachelors and old maids much more freely give advice as to the rearing of children than do fathers and mothers who have had experience in training children. No one who has undertaken the job feels like an adept. However, one thing is sure; and that is, no parent should ever do anything in a spirit of vanity. Every one who trains boys should give them to understand that he does what he does because God requires it; that it is not done in an arbitrary way, but as a matter of conscience or duty toward God and the boy. The parent who gratifies every whim and wish of his boy is grievously sinning against him. It may be difficult to get the boy to understand this, but the parent should persist in telling him that he must learn self-denial for his own good and because God demands of all of us that we learn this most important lesson.

MISSIONARY

BY J. M. McCALEB.

POSTAL INFORMATION: International post-office money orders can be bought at the rate of one per cent; but for any amount, however small, the cost will be ten cents. A check on any of the banks in America is good in Japan; personal checks are as good as any. The money itself is accepted by the banks. The ordinary postage on letters is five cents; newspapers, one cent.

Important.

This is October 31. I am thinking of Brother Ishii in the slums of Shinjuku. I have been giving him seven dollars a month to assist him in that work among the poor. The church at Sendagaya also gives him one dollar a month. But now I haven't a cent for him. I have exhausted all my resources. What will the friends in America do about it? There are many churches any one of which could give seven dollars a month. There are even Bible classes that could do it. Do you want this work to stop, or do you want it to go on? It is for you to decide.

Looking Backward Over Twenty-five Years.

BY J. M. McCALEB.

I am not using the above heading as Mr. Bellamy used it, by transferring himself to a distant future date and looking back at the present, but in the sense of actually looking back at some of the experiences and incidents of a quarter of a century of missionary labors.

As a necessary preliminary step to my efforts in Japan, perhaps it would not be amiss to state in this connection that within a few days now (October 7), and several days before this gets to you, we—that is Dorothy and I—got married. Soon after that, I find in the records by Brother W. K. Azbill the following notice of our farewell meeting in Louisville, Ky.: "The meeting at Louisville was held in the Broadway Church. Brethren Howkins, Tatum, Kurfes, Powell, Bartholomew, and Dick gave expression to the fraternal feeling which was undoubtedly felt by all, and all the churches of the city were represented. It was a meeting long to be remembered, especially by Brother and Sister McCaleb, for whose cheer it was mainly intended, just as the Ohio meetings were meant chiefly to cheer and strengthen Misses Hostetter and Scott. At the close of the meeting Brother Galt Miller, one of the elders, and whom all Louisville loves, said to me: 'I want to invite you now to come this way with your next band, that we may have another meeting like this.' A collection was taken which was not very large, but there were many personal assurances of support; and the next day two sisters in Campbell Street Church sent us seventy dollars, and so swelled the contribution of the congregation to about three hundred dollars."

The above meeting took place in the early part of 1892, nearly twenty-five years ago. Many things have transpired since then and the viewpoint of time changes the situation greatly. I am happy to note, however, that all the original five of that happy, hopeful "band" are still living. Miss Scott is with her brother on a ranch in Southern California; Miss Hostetter is happy in her missionary home, with her husband and daughter, at Yokote, Japan; Mrs. McCaleb is in Louisville, Ky., temporarily, with the children; her husband is still pegging away in Japan; and W. K. Azbill, the leader of the "band," is doing valuable service with one of the churches in Cleveland, Ohio, and, according to latest reports, is planning to open mission work soon in the Danish West India Islands. After a quarter of a century, his missionary zeal does not seem in the least to have abated.

Brother Jelley's Report.

In July Brother McHenry and I held a Bible study, with about fifty in attendance. There were about twenty-two baptisms. My trip was about two thousand six hundred miles.

In August the work was not neglected, but was of the ordinary type—sowing seed and edifying the churches. There was a severe earthquake shock on August 28, which damaged our house considerably.

In September eleven baptisms were reported to me, and a great deal of important work was done, of which a detailed report is being printed.

Receipts for Personal Work and Support: In July, $194.82; in August, $1; in September, $100.

Receipts for Workers' Support: In July, $104.25; in August, nothing; in September, $75.25 (names of donors given in my printed report).

Receipts during September through the Gospel Advocate were as follows: From Anna Peebles, $2; J. C. Rushing, $2; Thomas Picklin, $5; C. E. Jones, $1; J. D. Ott, $20; W. P. Sutton, $2; E. M. Hudson, $2.50; I. E. Owen, $8.

A detailed report of the above three-months' work will be sent to every contributor to the work whose address is at hand. Unfortunately, I do not possess the addresses of many who assisted us to come out, nor the addresses of some who contributed through; hence I shall be grateful if they will send me their addresses, so that I can send them this and succeeding reports. My address is Dehra Dun, U. P., British India.

Moving Pictures.

Some time ago I spoke of needing a baptismal suit. A sister in Tennessee writes concerning it: "I am still hoping to send you a suit, and do hope I will not be disappointed in getting one for you."

The following glimpse at the domestic side of missionary life in India is given by Mrs. W. Hume McHenry: "Baby William is much company to me. He is a great boy. He wants to sit up nearly all the time, but cannot quite sit alone yet. When at prayers he sees us have song books, he wants one, too, and is not satisfied with a piece of paper. He often helps us sing, and seems to like Marathi better than English. I realize that health is very important. I take some special exercises every day besides my daily walks with the baby. I had been going walking mornings and evenings. But since Mr. McHenry left, I have been doing the milking; so in the morning I put the baby in his carriage outside so that he can get fresh air, but do not go for a walk."

The carpenter had faithfully promised to begin on Monday morning. I told him I would be there about half past nine and show him what I wanted done. I was there as I had promised, but the carpenter did not show up. "I saw him whetting his tools at home this morning," said the boy. I sent to see what was the matter. He came, but did not bring his tools, only a six-foot measure. For an hour or so he stood about looking at the timbers. Now and then he would measure something, but not a lick would he strike. I wondered what could be the matter and finally asked him. "Can't work to-day," he said. "This is yodiko, an unlucky day; but I'll certainly begin in the morning." "Do you really believe in unlucky days?" I asked; and he assured me he certainly did. I began to reason the case with him, telling him we also had some people in America like that, but that there was absolutely no such thing as lucky and unlucky days; that God, being a Father, made all days to be good. "It is like planting stones instead of seed," I suggested; "you get no result by observing unlucky days." He thought a while and spoke up, saying: "I'll go home and get dinner, then come back and begin, if you say so."

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

$1.50 a year if paid in advance, $1.75 after six months, $2 after twelve months. To Canada and foreign countries, $2 in advance, $2.25 after six months, $2.50 after twelve months.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express, post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you.

This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

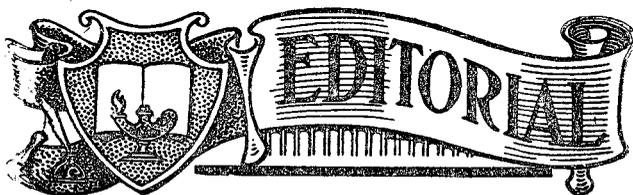

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received, but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Guarantee of Advertising.

All the advertisements in this paper are, we believe, signed by trustworthy persons. To prove our faith by works, we will make good to actual subscribers any loss sustained in trusting advertisers who prove to be deliberate swindlers. We shall not attempt to adjust trifling disputes between subscribers and honorable business men who advertise, nor pay the debts of honest bankrupts. To make this guarantee effective, in all cases say in writing advertisers, "I saw your advertisement in the Gospel Advocate," and if anything goes wrong notify us immediately in writing.

A Letter Concerning Some Articles Which Recently Appeared in the Apostolic Review.

BY E. A. E.

These articles were written by Brother A. M. Morris, and the letter is as follows:

San Antonio, Texas, 706 Delmar Street, November 10, 1916.
—Dear Brother Elam: I wish you would read A. M. Morris' articles in the Apostolic Review of October 31 and November 7, and reply to them through the Gospel Advocate.

If these Bible schools, such as the Nashville Bible School, are in keeping with New Testament principles, they should be defended; if not, they should be abandoned. I have been trying to hold up for them. But from your writings in the Gospel Advocate concerning their tendencies, I am getting to believe they should be torn up by the roots. . . . I surely do enjoy your writings, Brother Elam, in the Gospel Advocate.

A. T. HARRIS.

Open, fair, frank, sincere, honest, straightforward, thorough investigation of all subjects in order to learn and teach only truth does good. There are certain rules given in textbooks on logic for the control of all discussions, with which all schoolboys should be familiar. There is one in the Bible—namely, "All things therefore whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do ye also unto them: for this is the law and the prophets"—which all Christians are determined to follow. Following this rule will bring us all in all discussions to a better understanding of one another and closer together. Prejudice, a partisan and factious spirit, misrepresentation, a determination to carry one's point, bitterness and crimination are wrong, produce greater confusion and strife, and cause divisions. Men must not put down their conclusions and deductions as infallible. The word of God is the only infallible guide. Men must not make rules concerning the ways and places of teaching the Bible where God has made none, or in any way violate the rules God has made.

Heeding the following instruction is the way to lead brethren out of mistakes and errors:

And the Lord's servant must not strive, but be gentle toward all, apt to teach, forbearing, in meekness correcting them that oppose themselves; if peradventure God may give them repentance unto the knowledge of the truth, and they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, having been taken captive by him unto his will. (2 Tim. 2: 24-26.)

Reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and teaching. (2 Tim. 4: 2.)

These things speak and exhort and reprove with all authority. Let no man despise thee. (Tit. 2: 15.)

The "authority" is the word of God, not the conclusions and standards of men. Titus was to so act as not to be despised. Men can reprove others in such a manner and spirit as to be despised instead of beloved. Crimination, impugning of motives, bitter speech, denunciation, a factious spirit, and vainglory incur this dislike and contempt of people and drive them from the truth and the church. Christians do not desire to do this.

It is true, Titus was to reprove the Cretans "sharply;" but for what? For being "always liars, evil beasts, idle gluttons," and "that they may be sound in faith, not giving heed to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, who turn away from the truth." (Tit. 1: 12-14.) But this sharpness is to come from the word of God, which is "sharper than any two-edged sword, and piercing even to the dividing of soul and spirit, of both joints and marrow, and quick to discern the thoughts and intents of the heart." (Heb. 4: 12.)

The Gospel Advocate has pointed out incorrect declarations some young men have made in their enthusiasm for schools in which the Bible is taught. In the Apostolic Review of October 17, Brother A. T. Harris himself gives a statement from the dean of the school at Abilene which sounds denominational. As quoted by Brother Harris it is:

No denomination has ever existed long and succeeded that has not built and maintained its own institutions. This is true with reference to the church of Christ.

This is a very strange statement from one who claims to believe in the all-sufficiency of the word of God and the church of Christ. What "institutions" of "its own" does the church of Christ need, which God did not build? The church of Christ has existed for about nineteen hundred years without any human institutions. Such expressions as the above show a misconception of both the church and schools in which the Bible is taught. Every plant—religious institution—which God has not planted, Jesus says, shall be rooted up. (Matt. 15: 13.) While it is scriptural to teach the Bible in schools or anywhere else people will learn it, to make the existence of the church dependent upon schools or any human institution is contrary to the Scriptures. The church itself is "the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim. 3: 15) and is self-perpetuating. But teaching the Bible in school is not to be abandoned because some overzealous young man makes erroneous declarations or some school goes wrong. Homes are not to be abandoned because even many homes are wicked.

On the other hand, Brother Harris accuses the dean of Abilene school and Brother A. Ellmore of that which I think they have not assumed. He says Brother Ellmore "confesses that the Lord's institution has failed." He says again: "So according to the testimony of the 'divergives,' A. Ellmore, and this dean of Abilene, the church has failed in its God-appointed mission." These good men will deny, I think, bearing such testimony. Such charges as these can accomplish no good. Some Christians may fail to study the Bible and to teach it to others and some congregations may fail utterly in every way, but for that reason no one should say the church, as God's appointment, has failed. It is not right to assign to men positions which they do not claim to hold or conclusions which they do not assume. Brother Harris adds: "I resent such as an insult."

Such declarations as the above, some conclusions Brother Morris draws, and his omission of two paragraphs of my article deter me at times from attempting a discussion of important questions. I think, what is the use? Although I may not understand all the Bible teaches on a given subject, or on any subject, and may be mistaken about many things, I cannot appreciate being accused of not complying with the rules of honorable controversy, of dealing unfairly, and of insulting some one. One can be mistaken and yet be honest and act honorably. One should grant to another all he claims for himself. One should be open always to conviction and ready always to acknowledge a mistake. It is discouraging to discuss any question with one who will not allow me to state my own positions and conclusions in my own language and will not give all I say on any given point.

I read Brother Morris' articles. In the first one he gives a lengthy quotation from me. Of course, whatever I publish, whether it is worthy or not, I intend for the public; and the more papers which copy it, the better, if it is the truth. I am glad when the Apostolic Review publishes one of my articles in full, and this is all I ask of it. Then whatever comments any writer of that paper sees fit to make can be made. The article stands for itself. Brother Morris gave all I said against schools as institutions for making preachers and the wrong tendencies of some schools now existing; but he omitted the very two paragraphs in which I show it is scriptural to teach the Bible in school. Of "the four points," which he says the reader will notice in my article, he gives only one in my own language. According to his way of stating the other three and his course of reasoning, I can prove there should be no homes, or that churches should not eat the Lord's Supper. Here it is: "It is sinful to found a separate organization from the church to do any work God has committed to the church;" some "Bible schools," if not all, now existing are such organizations; therefore it is sinful to have schools in which the Bible is taught to all pupils alike. It is sinful to turn homes into places of revelry, dissipation, and wickedness; many homes, and even all, now in existence are such places; therefore it is sinful to have homes of any kind. It is sinful to turn the Lord's Supper into a carnal feast; some churches or even all now in existence do this; therefore it is sinful to observe the Lord's Supper in any manner. All see such conclusions do not follow. While efforts have been made by some to turn schools into institutions for making preachers, and even professional preachers, it does not follow that schools in which the Bible is taught to all pupils alike are such institutions, and therefore sinful.

The true position is this; It is scriptural to teach the Bible in school; it is wrong to turn any school into an institution for making preachers. It would not be wrong for heathens to study the Bible in school or in any other place in order to learn what it teaches.

I have not found the man who will deny that it is wrong to teach the Bible in school or to build schools in which it can be taught to all alike; yet I deny that it is scriptural to turn schools into organizations for making preachers. I have called upon others to point out the Bible way of making preachers and all other workers in the church.

Brother Morris assigns to Brother S. H. Hall a position which Brother Hall has not necessarily taken—namely, that "in this particular" he "is the champion of the new way." He speaks also of "the spirit that has created and maintained 'Bible schools'" as the one which now would turn some schools into institutions for making preachers, which is not "the spirit" at all that began teaching the Bible in school to all pupils alike, but which is the very opposite spirit to the one to which he ascribes all "Bible schools."

I say in my article (and this Brother Morris quotes) that "with many, teaching the Bible in school is only making preachers." Brother Morris and the Apostolic Review seem to belong to this class. Since the Bible can be taught in schools to all pupils alike, schools in which it is so taught are not necessarily institutions for making preachers, and should not be turned into such institutions, and should not be condemned necessarily as such.

Not long ago the Apostolic Review announced that it indorses the way the Bible is taught in school on Portland Avenue, Louisville, Ky. What is the difference? What is there in this school which makes teaching the Bible in it scriptural, while other schools in which the Bible is taught are unscriptural?

The paragraphs which Brother Morris left out of my article are the following:

What is it to teach the Bible in school or elsewhere? It is to teach the existence of God with all his attributes, man's responsibility and obligation to God, and that the Bible is the word of God; it is to teach piety and reverence for God, and that "the fear of God is the beginning of wisdom;" it is to teach that to fear God and keep his commandments is the whole duty of man—man's peace and happiness; it is to teach the industry, economy, honesty, integrity, uprightness, truthfulness, sincerity, useful employment, righteousness, godliness, and all the everyday right living of the Bible—entire submission to God—that he rules throughout the universe, and that everything on earth or in heaven—suns and systems of worlds, men and angels—out of harmony with his will must perish.

Righteousness exalts a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people. (Prov. 14: 34.)

Homes and schools are the best places to instill into the hearts of the young the principles of righteousness and justice, mercy and truth. Whenever schools teach their pupils to tell the truth, to be honest and upright, to be law-abiding citizens, to treat others as they would be treated, etc., they are teaching the Bible to that extent. No man can offer any reason whatever why schools should not teach pupils to honor their father and mother, to obey their parents in the Lord, to make themselves profitable by following some honorable occupation, to fear God, to respect rulers, to be peace-loving and peace-maintaining citizens and neighbors—the entire Bible with all its principles of right living at all times and in all relationships of life, the reign of the Prince of Peace in all hearts and homes and nations, and glory to God in the highest.

Where is there a Christian who will deny that it is unscriptural to teach these things in school to all pupils alike? Or, if there are no schools in which such can be taught, what Christian will say it is wrong to build schools in which they can be taught? Will Christians send to schools where atheism and infidelity are taught and the Bible is considered a book of mythology? I ask again, what is teaching the Bible? And I repeat that, with some, teaching common honesty, uprightness, integrity, rendering to all their dues, following in all things the Golden Rule, submission to the powers that be, a quiet and tranquil life, duties of parents and children, duties of husbands and wives, duties of servants and masters, kindness to the poor and ignorant and unfortunate, justice and mercy and love, sincerity and truthfulness, fair and square dealing in all things, the everydayness of right living in all ways, and the fear of God and submission to his will, is not teaching the Bible in school or anywhere else; but teaching certain doctrines and views, or certain things in the Bible in a partisan spirit, or teaching young men how to sermonize and how to meet the errors of others, is. When all learn what teaching the Bible is, and all that teaching it embraces, no Christian will oppose teaching it in school to all pupils alike.

No Issue with the Gospel Advocate.

BY J. C. M'QUIDDY.

In our issue of October 12, 1916, under the heading of "A Gross Misrepresentation," I published that we had reliable information that R. H. Pigue had represented that the Gospel Advocate had indorsed sprinkling and pouring as baptism. In that article I stated that there were in 1893 a few persons, and also the Cleveland Avenue Church, that were ready to receive into the church persons on their sprinkling or pouring, thus leaving the form of baptism with the individual. The persons mentioned, such as J. J. Haley, "Pastor" Cooley, and others, did not admit that the New Testament taught sprinkling and pouring as baptism. They taught that "baptizo" denotes a specific action and means to immerse, but they presumed to admit people into their denomination who had not been baptized, in the hope that after a closer examination of the Scriptures they would learn the way of the Lord more perfectly. The Gospel Advocate opposed, and opposes now, denominationalism in every form, and boldly and fearlessly contends that no man has a right to change the appointment of the Lord in order to build up a religious denomination. Such a course is sinful and is condemned by Jehovah.

In The Methodist, issue of November 1, 1916, R. H. Pigue calls attention to the departure from the faith of such men as J. J. Haley, B. B. Tyler, and others, to which the Gospel Advocate called attention as far back as 1893. Now the Gospel Advocate has no objection to his calling attention to the departure of these brethren from the faith once delivered unto the saints, as it is no unusual thing for persons to depart from the faith. This is true in the Methodist Church and all other denominations; as well as in the church of Christ. We know that among the twelve apostles one proved himself to be a devil. If one of the apostles would depart from the faith, we need not be surprised that men to-day do likewise. Paul tells us in Gal. 2: 4: "And that because of the false brethren brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage." Thus we see that there were false brethren and those who departed from the Christian faith even in Paul's day. Again, we read in Acts 20: 29, 30: "I know that after my departing grievous wolves shall enter in among you, not sparing the flock; and from among your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away the disciples after them."

As the Gospel Advocate condemns error wherever it is found, it boldly speaks out against all denominationalists who for the love of popularity and the praise of men are ready to give up the truth as it is in Christ Jesus in order that they may lead some to follow them. The Gospel Advocate has never denied that there are people who depart from the true Bible teaching, and has never charged R. H. Pigue or any one else with grossly misrepresenting its teaching on this point. Mr. Pigue understands very well what the only issue that the Gospel Advocate made with him was, for he says: "Mr. McQuiddy's informant was not reliable, because he either ignorantly or willfully misrepresented what R. H. Pigue did say. R. H. Pigue did not say that the Gospel Advocate indorsed sprinkling and pouring, because it has never been known to indorse that much truth." As there is no question at issue between the Gospel Advocate and R. H. Pigue, I would respectfully suggest to him that he should be more careful in the use of his language; for information continues to come to this office from different parts of the country—not only from his own circuit, but from other sections—that he did charge and make the impression that the Gospel Advocate was ready to receive into membership people who had had water sprinkled or poured upon them for Christian baptism. A person has voluntarily offered to make affidavit to that effect. Certainly R. H. Pigue should be more careful in the use of his language; and if he is not guilty of saying what these people affirm he did say, he should meet them face to face and show to the contrary. He owes this to himself, to the cause of truth, and to the Methodist Church. The Gospel Advocate is ready to furnish names of its informants to R. H. Pigue, so that he can meet them face to face and prove the charge that they have made against him, concerning his representation of the teaching of the Gospel Advocate, to be false. If he declines to do this, the Gospel Advocate insists that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should demand of him to make good his assertion. The congregations for which he is now laboring, and particularly the congregation at Friendship, Tenn., should investigate this matter and bring it to the attention of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Men who pose as teachers of the Christian religion should not be supported and upheld while making such false representations. If Mr. Pigue's accusers have misrepresented him, they should be exposed in that misrepresentation. If they have told the truth on him, then Mr. Pigue should be exposed and not supported by his church. Truth and fairness alike demand this course. Until Mr. Pigue can clear up this matter to the satisfaction of his accusers, no journal that loves truth and righteousness will waste its space in discussing any issue with him.

As R. H. Pigue frankly states that he did not charge the Gospel Advocate with indorsing sprinkling and pouring for baptism, and as a number of people say that he did do this, he owes it to himself, to the truth, and to his God to see that this misunderstanding is reconciled. In the event he fails to do this, then it certainly behooves the churches for which he labors to investigate his action; and should they fail to do so, they thereby silently indorse him in making an impression that he says he did not intend to make. As the matter is now wholly between Mr. Pigue, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and our informants, we shall wait for him to take it up with those who affirm that he represented the Gospel Advocate as indorsing sprinkling or pouring as baptism.

The Publishers' Wish.

At this season of the year gentle hints are given out as to what gift would please the most. Those who give and those who receive are doing what they can to avoid "misfits." Parents wish to gladden the hearts of children; husband intends to give wife the very thing she craves, but is too modest to ask for; wife would surprise "dear old John" with the thing he is not looking for; everybody is trying to make it the happiest possible holiday season for everybody and yet keep within the bounds of good sense and economy.

The publishers of the Gospel Advocate here and now throw out a strong hint as to what they wish from their readers. We won't be backward about it. We take you into our confidence and speak of our heart's desire. We mention plainly the very favors we expect from our readers.

(1) We wish that every reader in arrears would renew at once. There is a special reason why we express this wish. It means that the one in arrears will save money. On January 1 the price of the Gospel Advocate will be advanced to two dollars. You now have the opportunity and privilege of renewing for two years at the present price of one dollar and fifty cents. Send us three dollars and we will advance the date on your label two full years. Please understand that it will make the publishers' hearts glad to have you confer this favor upon yourself.

(2) We wish that every reader would send us a new subscriber. There is a special reason why we express this wish. You can send us the new name, accompanied by one dollar and fifty cents, now, and secure for some relative or friend or poor person or invalid a full year's subscription, whereas if you wait it will cost you two dollars to do this good deed. Please take note that just a few days remain before January 1, when this offer expires.

(3) We wish and confidently expect the loyal friendship of our readers. We feel sure that the raising of the price of the paper will make no material difference in the great volume of our readers. We do not believe that their friendship can be altered by fifty cents. They understand that our actions in raising the price was not arbitrary, but forced upon us by an unprecedented advance in printing materials.

The publishers on their part propose to greatly improve the Gospel Advocate so that it will be the best religious paper at any price. We intend to do everything possible to merit the friendship and confidence of our readers. And now, having bared our thoughts and expressed our heartfelt desire, may we not expect a quick and sympathetic response? Surely, dear reader, you will not be the one to disappoint us.

The Word of God Our Only Light on Salvation.

BY E. G. S.

No man could know anything about his standing in the sight of the Lord in time or what he will be after death were it not for the light the Bible gives on the subject. No one could tell whence he came or whither he is going but for the light of that precious old book called "the Bible." The word "Bible," as the name given to the sacred oracles, was not given by inspiration. It has been given by uninspired men, and was never intended to mean anything more than the inspired book or volume. Hence it is frequently called by way of emphasis, "the Book," meaning the greatest among books.

The Bible answers all the hard questions we really need to have answered. If it be asked, "Whence came the heavens and the earth?" the Bible answer is: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." (Gen. 1: 1.) This answer was not framed by man's wisdom; it was given by inspiration; and it is plain and easily understood by all who believe the Bible. It was revealed to the man that wrote the book of Genesis, and he put it to record, and so it comes on down to us in that grand old book. If it be asked, "Whence came man?" the plain answer is: "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." (Gen. 1: 27.) This answer is plain and true, for it was given by inspiration, and not by uninspired man. Hence the heavens and the earth and man and all that is in the earth was created by the Lord. So we are not left to guess at any of these things. And the Bible gives us a history of the human race (including the flood) for four thousand years, that we can rely upon as correct. We also learn from the Bible that sin began in the garden of Eden and that man was cast out of the garden because of sin and was doomed to get his bread in the sweat of his face by the cultivation of the soil. Unfortunately, the sins of men became so great by the time of the flood that all were destroyed, down to eight souls, by the flood. We have no distinct history of these things, except what the Bible gives; but people believe all these things because the Bible tells us so. Bible history is believed to the extent that the Bible itself is believed.

When we get down to the New Testament age, Bible history becomes more deeply interesting, because its history becomes more personally interesting to us. It introduces to us a Savior born, through whom and by whom all may be saved that will hear him and do his will. Although he is put to death by a wicked mob about the time our interest in him begins to become thrilling, he so quickly arises from the dead that our interest is only increased in him instead of being lost thereby. And when he commissions his apostles to go "into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," promising salvation to all that would embrace it, it becomes more thrillingly interesting. But when we see him arrested, tried, and condemned, and nailed to the cross, that seems to blot out our prospects in and through him as our Savior. Hope begins to seem blighted and to die out, and it begins to look like the greatest disappointment ever realized among men. In telling some of his death who had not heard of it before, they exclaimed: "But we trusted that it had been he that should have redeemed Israel." (Luke 24: 21.) They had thought that the long-promised Messiah had surely come; but when they saw him dying upon the cross, their hope was for the time blighted, and no wonder they seemed sad. But their time of sadness was brief. On the third day he came back to life again and triumphantly rose from the dead, to the inexpressible joy of his disciples. And to this day the resurrection of Jesus is a fact of most thrilling interest.

All that had been thought of him as the Son of God, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world, began now to be realized more than ever before. The fact that those who knew him had seen and talked with him after he rose from the dead was an overwhelming evidence that he was in reality just what was claimed for him—that he was in reality the Son of God. This is one among the grandest things in that grandest of all books. The idea of a life of eternal happiness after death is one of the grandest things ever provided for man; and that Jesus, by his death and the shedding of his blood, provided for this, there can be no doubt.

Truly it was a grand gift to the human race when the Bible, with all its offered blessings, was given to man. The Bible tells us of the glorious heavenly home provided for, and to be given to the human race, if they follow the teaching of that grand book. And besides the preparation for heaven, the Bible obeyed makes people better and purer and happier and more useful in this life, and thereby prepares them for a glorious and happy eternity. All this the Heavenly Father has done for man, if he will believe and obey the Bible. So if the question be asked, "Will it pay to read, study, and obey the Bible?" the answer is: "Yes, a thousandfold." But then it may be asked, "What do we lose if we disregard the Bible?" We answer, more than can be adequately expressed. We lose its elevating power in this life and all that it promises the righteous in the world to come. No man, therefore, need try to express in adequate terms all that one gains by believing and obeying the Bible in this life. It makes better husbands, better wives, better citizens, better parents, and better children, and at the same time prepares all such for a happy eternity in the future, promised to all the righteous. There is no sort of life that can be lived that pays like a faithful, Christian life. If Christianity made people miserable instead of happy, that would be a serious objection to it; but just the reverse of that is true. Some people, however, seem to think that the Christian life takes people out of happiness instead of affording happiness. There never was a greater mistake made than this. The word of God, the New Testament, when its commands are obeyed and its promises fully trusted, affords more real happiness than anything else in all the world. But the Bible rejected or neglected through life not only leaves one without hope for the future, but in the darkness of despair and the awful doom of going down to eternal ruin without a ray of hope for future relief. Surely these facts ought to be sufficient to lead all to submit to Christ in this life, and thus be prepared for the enjoyment of a happy heavenly home throughout eternity with all the righteous servants of God.

The Growth of Ecclesiasticism.

BY M. C. K.

It is one of the remarkable facts of history that, since the great apostasy in the early centuries of the Christian era, no effort at a general religious reformation has ever been inaugurated, unless the Lutheran Reformation of the sixteenth century be an exception, that did not largely, if not completely, fail to accomplish the original and leading purpose of its inauguration. This is true of the efforts at reform put forth to combat and check the influences which finally resulted in the ecclesiastical split which made the so-called Eastern and Western Churches; it is true of the English Reformation in the time of Henry VIII.; it is true of the Calvinistic reform attempted in the sixteenth century; it is true of the later efforts of Whitfield and the Wesleys in the eighteenth century; and it is preëminently true of the Restoration movement inaugurated by the Campbells and their coadjutors in the early part of the nineteenth century.

The leading cause which made failure inevitable in all these efforts—in fact, the one gigantic and most stupendous obstacle that ever stood in the way of the successful prosecution of the church's mission in the world has been the birth and growth of ecclesiasticism within its borders. From the days of Constantine the Great, in the fourth century, down to this good day, this has been the bane of the church. Not a solitary period can be named as an exception. Even in the apostolic period this evil principle began its insidious work, and Paul declared: "The mystery of lawlessness doth already work." (2 Thess. 2: 7.) And it continued to work, variously manifesting its principle of operation by the growth of hierarchy and the formation of councils and other departures from the primitive order until the historian Mosheim, speaking at a later day of the second century, could say:

These councils, of which we have not the smallest trace before the middle of this century, changed the whole face of the church and gave it a new form; for by them the ancient privileges of the people were considerably diminished, and the power and authority of the bishops greatly augmented. (Mosh., Vol. I., page 41.)

Now, in precisely the same line of development, let us look at some very recent modern history in ecclesiastical affairs. To begin with at this point, the principle of an ecclesiasticism has been slowly, but surely, at work for at least a half century in the Restoration movement inaugurated in the nineteenth century. It is useless to try to ignore or to cover up this fact. Those who cherish and hold dear the principles and objects for which that movement was called into existence have seen and felt the force of this insidious and undermining counter-principle more in recent years than it was ever felt before by the advocates of the movement. This mischievous and pernicious principle has existed heretofore only on a small scale, but it has now become bold and defiant. Witness the daring attempt which has been repeatedly made now for nearly a decade to fasten the General-Convention incubus upon the movement and the noble fight put up against that attempt by the Christian Standard during all this period. That journal misses no opportunity of late to deal a timely blow against this evil tendency; and in its issue of November 18, 1916, speaking editorially under the significant heading, "That Black Cloud," it says:

Prior to the Louisville convention the brethren of long vision pointed to a black speck in the western sky. At Louisville this speck became a cloud which drifted between the brotherhood's missionary interests and their sun of peace, and the daylight grew dull. At Toronto the prophets predicted clear weather; but at Atlanta and Los Angeles the sky was still overcast, and the western end of the cloud appeared heavier and darker than it had hitherto been. At Des Moines the heavy blackness, which had slowly and quietly gathered and banked itself in the center heavens, descended and enveloped our missionary conventions. And it is now definitely planned that this cloud shall be the entire attraction at Kansas City.

The Standard closes its fine editorial in these words:

Multitudes of our people are protesting against this insidious ecclesiasticism which is settling down upon our missionary propaganda. The situation is becoming tense, and the breaking point is not far distant.

The "black cloud" here meant is the General Convention or delegate body which some ambitious souls have determined to form, and the Standard has risen in its might to check this determination and to prevent, if possible, the consummation of such an unholy and disastrous purpose. The noble fight which the Standard has made against this mischievous movement has commanded our greatest admiration and sympathy; but we would respectfully remind our Cincinnati contemporaries that the dark and portentous cloud which it now sees spreading so rapidly over the ecclesiastical heavens made its first appearance on the horizon of the Restoration movement in the General Convention in Cincinnati in 1849. Though at that time, to use the language of Elijah's day, it was "as small as a man's hand," yet the "cloud" was there. We do not mean by this that much harm or mischief was done in that convention, for there was not. In fact, what was done then not only appeared innocent, but in large measure it was innocent. The one fateful fact about it was the commitment of its advocates to the principle of general organization in religion and placing in the hands of a general board of supervisors and managers work which God has placed in the hands of such a board in each local church. And such a general organization is not only contrary to the ecclesiastical order revealed in the New Testament, but it contains the seeds of ecclesiasticism. It is the one fatal rock on which the church in all ages has gone aground. In fact, general organization and centralization in religion not only constitute the only soil in which the plant of ecclesiasticism can grow, but it is impossible to have them without the seed which produces that plant. Possibly in this fact may be found the divine reason for the complete independence of the local church and for placing the oversight and management of all religious affairs in the hands of a local board of managers in each church. Be the reason whatever it may, the fact cannot be successfully challenged; and so indisputable and incontestible is this fact that, speaking of the first century, Mosheim says:

The churches were entirely independent, none of them being subject to any foreign jurisdiction. Nothing is more evident than the perfect equality that reigned among them; nor does there even appear in this first century the smallest trace of that association of provincial churches from which councils and metropolitans derived their origin. (Mosh., Vol. I, page 92.)

Finally, if there had been no general organization and no general board of managers for missionary work among the advocates of the Restoration movement, but each local church had been left, as God ordained it, to manage its own missionary and all other business, then the black and ominous cloud which now hangs over the movement would never have appeared; and we ask all our readers, and particularly our highly esteemed Cincinnati contemporary, to ponder these two facts: First, there is not in the New Testament a solitary instance of any general ecclesiastical organization or association of churches with a general board of supervisors and managers for missionary work or for any other purpose; and secondly, such organizations and associations outside of the New Testament have been the one fruitful source of ecclesiasticism and trouble in other forms throughout the whole history of the church. Surely in these facts there is food for solemn thought.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

Brother Freed: There is a good bit of dispute concerning the different churches. Will you give us some light on this subject? Did Christ name the church the "Christian Church," and where can we find this in the Bible; or is this church named by man, as other churches are? I understand that the church of Christ is the Christian church, but there are others who do not understand it.

J. C. BOWMAN.

The Bible nowhere speaks of the church as the "Christian Church." It is called the "church of God." (Acts 20: 28.) Paul wrote a letter to "the church of God at Corinth." (1 Cor. 1: 2.) He calls it "the house of God" and the "church of the living God." (1 Tim. 2: 15.) "The churches of Christ salute you." (Rom. 16: 16.) Sometimes it is referred to as "the church," when including all the saved. (Eph. 5: 25.) When the local assembly is meant, we have such expressions as "the church of Ephesus," "the church in Smyrna," and "the church of God which is at Corinth." Why not be content with Bible names? Let us call Bible things by Bible names.

Brother Freed: Please explain (1) John 13: 8-14, 15; (2) Col. 2: 18. What is meant by the fleshly mind? I heard a Baptist say that the fleshly mind was the part of man that sinned. He also said the flesh was the part that sinned. (3) Who organized the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and when was it organized? R. D. BAWCUM.

(1) "Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." (John 13: 8.) The primary object of the washing of feet by the Savior was to give his followers an example of humility, meekness, and love. He also uses it as signifying the spiritual cleansing which they must receive. "If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you." (Verses 14, 15.) They were not to do this as a church ordinance, but as a humble deed of service whenever needed. (1 Tim. 5: 10.) The Savior did what was usually done by a servant. He did this to teach the lesson of condescension, humility, and love. While he performed this act of condescending love, he was conscious of his divine dignity and the heavenly glory which awaited him. (2) The fleshly mind is one controlled by the lusts of the flesh. Paul says: "But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." (1 Cor. 9: 27.) "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." (Gal. 5: 24.) The one who transgresses the law, whether by commission or omission, sins. The inner man, then, must be the transgressor, as only the inner man has the fleshly man under control. If we fail to "crucify the flesh," we fail to obey God. But who is it that fails? It is the real man, the inner man. (3) The Cumberland Presbyterian Church was organized in 1810, in Dickson County, Tenn., near the town of Dickson, by three Presbyterian ministers—Samuel McAdoo, Finis Ewing, and Samuel King.

The death of Sister Nannie Barry Cecil, wife of Roy Cecil, near Gallatin, Tenn., removes a very lovable character from the scenes of earthly toil and sorrow. The funeral was conducted from the residence on Friday, December 1. Brother Elam, a lifelong friend of the family, preached the funeral sermon. The Gospel Advocate extends sympathy to the Christian mother and husband and to all the bereaved. Brother Elam will write a more extended notice.

From E. C. Fuqua: "I have just closed a meeting at Gilead Church, about fifteen miles from Horse Cave, Ky. There were two baptisms. I believe much good was done in this meeting. Excellent hearing and deep interest throughout. There are some fine people in this congregation. I begin next Sunday at Jacksonburg, Ala. Friends can address me at 1610 Russell Street, Nashville, Tenn., till I leave for Colorado."

TENNYSON'S ESTIMATE OF PRAYER.

More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of.

For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not holy hands in prayer,
Both for themselves and those they call their friends?
For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains around the feet of God.

From J. G. Malphurs, Macclenny, Fla., November 28: "W. H. Allen, of Jacksonville, closed a two-weeks' meeting here last Sunday, with four baptisms. The church here is striving to do more in the Lord's work, and Brother Allen strengthened us very much in our duties. I am preaching here two Lord's days each month while I am teaching school. We would be pleased to have any Christians to stop over with us for worship, and especially would we be glad to have the preaching brethren stop when they come to this State."

From W. J. Johnson, Amite, La.: "Our meeting here began on the second Lord's day in October and closed on the fifth Lord's day. There was one week's intermission on account of rains and of Brother Ramsey's having been called away. There were no baptisms, but the brethren were filled with new zeal for the righteousness of God by the excellent lessons given by Brother Ramsey. He is kind and gentle toward all, and in earnestness declares the whole counsel of God. A lot will soon be purchased for the purpose of building a house of worship. Pray God to bless us in this effort."

The church at Cookeville, Tenn., has secured E. A. Elam to conduct a brief meeting, beginning on Thursday, December 14. It has been planned to have other preachers present during the meeting. Many invitations have been sent out and a large attendance is expected. Among the subjects to be discussed are the following: "How a Congregation Should Do Missionary Work," E. A. Elam; "Keeping Alive Interest in a New Congregation," G. Dallas Smith; "Instrumental Music in the Worship," M. C. Kurfees; "Duties and Work of Elders and Deacons," Price Billingsley; "Importance of Studying and Teaching the Bible," H. Leo Boles; "Necessity of Attending Every Lord's-Day Meeting," F. W. Smith; "Woman's Work in the Church," A. B. Lipscomb; "Preach the Word," T. B. Larimore.

From Guy Renfro, Snowdown, Ala., December 4: "After Highland Home College was closed, J. D. Davis, one of the trustees of the college, made me a very liberal proposition, if I would move to the farm with him. Among other things, he proposed to build and furnish a church house if I would do the preaching, yet he is a good preacher himself. He built, painted, and furnished a comfortable meetinghouse without asking aid from any one, at the same time letting it be known that help from other sources would not be refused; but none was offered. We had our first service last Lord's day, with a good turnout. Brother Payne, who has been working faithfully for nearly thirty years to get the cause of Christ on a firm basis at Letohatchee, but not succeeding satisfactorily, has moved over and cast his lot with us. We are also looking forward with pleasure to the time when we can have J. M. Barnes' family with us in the church work. They are now moving their home from Montgomery to the farm not far from us."

SEVERE RHEUMATIC PAINS DISAPPEAR

Rheumatism depends on an acid in the blood, which affects the muscles and joints, producing inflammation, stiffness and pain. This acid gets into the blood through some defect in the digestive process.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the old-time blood tonic, is very successful in the treatment of rheumatism. It acts directly, with purifying effect, on the blood, and improves the digestion. Don't suffer. Get Hood's today.

Better Than Spanking.

Spanking does not cure children of bad wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 195, South Bend, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child; the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

What They All Say.

A few extracts from letters of club members will give you some idea of the many attractive features of the Gospel Advocate Piano Club and will explain why it is so popular. Here are a few samples taken from the correspondence at random:

I certainly am enjoying my piano. I couldn't have gotten any better piano in Decatur than the one I got from you if I had paid one hundred and fifty dollars more than this one cost me.—Mrs. F. B.

It is a beauty, and we are delighted with it. The tone is perfect. Your club is a grand thing.—Mrs. E. P. M.

I am perfectly delighted with it; and every one that has heard it, or has played on it, says they have never heard a finer-toned one. I can observe such a vast difference between this one and others that are in this community that have been placed by agents. Every one, even those who know nothing about music, can tell the superiority of this piano over others.—Mrs. J. R.

We like it mighty well. The tone is full and clear, and the smooth and glossy finish is certainly superb. We think it much better than we could have done here for the money.—Mr. O. F. P.

The piano has come, and it is everything I could wish it to be. The tone is so soft and mellow it sounds more like a harp. The bass notes are remarkably full and round; the case is specially beautiful. I am entirely delighted with it. I never saw a more perfect instrument.—Mrs. W. J. B.

Almost every letter received from club members contains similar expressions of appreciation. The advertising manager of the Gospel Advocate cordially invites you to write for your copy of the club booklet and catalogue, which explain the big saving in price, the convenient terms, the superior quality and durability of the instruments, the protective guarantees and other attractive features of the club. Address the Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Georgia.

The Master's Vineyard

Colorado.

Boulder, November 19.—As the brethren might be wondering what has become of the church here, I will write and say that we are still in the Master's service. On October 29 the writer closed a week's meeting at Bellvue. The visible results were two added to the Lord's fighting force at that place. This congregation has lost three of its members since May, by death—namely: Sister Peterson, mother of our beloved brother, John A. Sidney; Sister Robertson, wife of Brother Levi Robertson; and Sister Shipp. Sister Shipp it was who got Brother E. C. Fuqua and Brother Bruce McCollum to go to Bellvue and establish the cause of Christ at that place; so it was largely through her efforts that the congregation at Bellvue was made a permanent thing. The writer spoke words of encouragement and consolation to the families of all of the above departed sisters. As to our fund for the erection of a place of worship here, I will say that since my last report we have received the following: From "A Sister," Frost, Texas, $1.50; "A Brother," Texas, $25; "A Sister," Akron, Col., $5. We thank these good people for their contributions and hope to so order our lives that they may never need to say that they are ashamed that they assisted us in the work here. To any one else that cares to help us we say: Do so, and may God bless you in so doing. May God bless all his children.—James H. Bailey.

Tennessee.

Hartsville, November 23.—Brother Alexander Campbell (colored), of Nashville, began a meeting with the colored people at this place on Tuesday night, November 7, and continued it until November 16. One was baptized. We had some trouble getting a house for him to use, as this is a destitute place. After having the promise of two houses, he was turned out of both. Finally we secured a hall for him. He preached the truth in a plain and simple way, making a strong fight against false teachers and sectarianism. Many were almost persuaded to obey, and he expects to baptize some as soon as he can get back. Much and lasting good was done. We expect him back next year. We heartily recommend him to any congregation that wants to do some work among the colored people.—Thomas H. Burton.

Decherd, November 22.—I have just closed a ten-days' meeting at Elkhead, in Grundy County, preaching at night only, with eleven additions, three of them from the Methodists. This closes my protracted meetings for this season. I have had one hundred and eighty-seven additions to the church of Christ this year. I have many calls for meetings that I could not get to this year. My work has been mostly in destitute places. I received contributions to the amount of four hundred and twenty-five dollars. I have

Dry, Hoarse or Painful Coughs Quickly Ended

Home-Made Remedy that Saves You $2—Does the Work Thoroughly.

The prompt and positive action of this simple, inexpensive home-made remedy in quickly healing the inflamed or swollen membranes of the throat, chest or bronchial tubes and breaking up tight coughs, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter cough.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. You then have a full pint—a family supply—of a much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with gauliac and is known the world over for its promptness, ease and certainty in overcoming stubborn coughs and chest colds.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., 233 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins, before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which, if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising a glass of hot water, with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening, and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples, or pallid complexion; also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath; others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach, or constipation, should begin this phosphated hot-water drinking, and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies, and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

promised each Lord's day in each month through the winter months. I have many calls for monthly appointments, but cannot get to them all unless some of the congregations will use me on week days. I rejoice over my success for this year's work. Brethren, let us hold up the banner of Christianity by preaching the word. There is mission work all around our doors. Let the old congregations send the gospel to these places. The cry is: "Come over and preach for us." The new meetinghouse at Thompson's Creek, in Bedford County, is going up and will soon be ready to worship in. The new church at Dixie, in Coffee County, is being built. Let us pray for a successful year next year.—R. E. L. Taylor.

Texas.

Lometa, November 21.—I preached in Brady on Sunday. They are a fine crowd, have an excellent church, and apparently are harmonious in their work. They need and want a good minister to help them. Brother Jesse P. Sewell preached here in my absence.—Ben West.

Fort Worth, November 20.—We had a great day at South Side Church yesterday. Large crowds and six to "take fellowship" with us gave us much joy. We also held a fine service at Kellar, about fifteen miles out of Fort Worth. Three automobile loads went out with us. We found a live membership out there. There is much to encourage us in these parts now.—A. O. Colley.

Sherman, November 17.—On the first day of November I began a meeting at Mount Pleasant, which lasted ten days and resulted in the baptism of two persons and the accomplishing of much other good. I lived at Mount Pleasant the second year I was in Texas, and labored with the church there, and during that year we remodeled their meetinghouse; but I had not been with them more than once, I think, since that time, and it was a real pleasure to meet with them and to labor with them again. The church at Mount Pleasant has an excellent lot of people, and I believe there is a fine outlook for future work there. We are back in Sherman again after an absence of two and a half months; and though we enjoyed our trip, we feel good to be home again and to meet with our friends who have been so faithful to us for so long a time. In all, I have spent about four and a half months in the evangelistic field this year, having been in the field almost all the time since July 1, and have seemingly improved in health all the time, and closed feeling much better than when I started. For this I most humbly give thanks to God.—R. D. Smith.

The Williams-Clark Discussion.

BY T. M. CARNEY,

The Jones Chapel debate, held in Lake County, Tenn., is now a thing of the past. This discussion began on November 7 and continued four days. The general church questions were discussed. Brother John R. Williams, of Hornbeak, Tenn., represented the church of Christ, and J. R. Clark, of Creal Springs, Ill., represented the Missionary Baptist Church.

Mr. Clark affirmed for two days the origin, doctrine, and practice of Missionary Baptists as being scriptural, with Brother Williams following in the negative. Mr. Clark never gave scriptural authority nor authentic history to show when the Missionary Baptist Church began. Of course he used several quotations from the Bible trying to support his contentions, but to no profit. Brother Williams showed that the word "Baptist" in the sense Baptists use it is not found in the Bible, and, when correctly translated, means "immerser," "dipper," etc. Mr. Clark then tried to rattle his chain of church succession back to the days of John the Baptist, and in this he made a complete failure.

Brother Williams affirmed for two days the origin, doctrine, and practice of the church of Christ, and on this, I must state, Brother Williams was exceedingly strong. In his first speech he laid the foundations for his contention, and stayed with that position for two days, and Mr. Clark was never able to try to show that they were wrong.

Brother Williams has not had a debate before this one in eight or nine years, and really did not want to have this one. Mr. Clark has been holding meetings for the Baptists in that community where the debate was held for two years, and during these meetings he has opposed the true faith and Brother Williams until this discussion was had.

The writer moderated for Brother Williams, and Mr. Steigler (a Baptist preacher) moderated for Mr. Clark. The behavior of the audience was excellent. I never saw better attention given to speakers than these people of Lake County gave.

A true friend embraces our objects as his own. We feel another mind bent on the same end, enjoying it, enduring it, reflecting it, and delighting in our devotion to it.—William Ellery Channing.

When Louise of Prussia Went to Napoleon.

One Hundred Years Ago

Louise went to Napoleon on a delicate and humiliating mission.

A clever woman, a beautiful woman, was Louise of Prussia. Had she accomplished her mission that night, the history of Europe would be different today.

Beneath the surface of the mighty war now going on are the secret, twisted threads of intrigue and passions of a hundred years.

To understand the fearful upheaval in Europe you must know that hidden history frankly told in imperishable form in

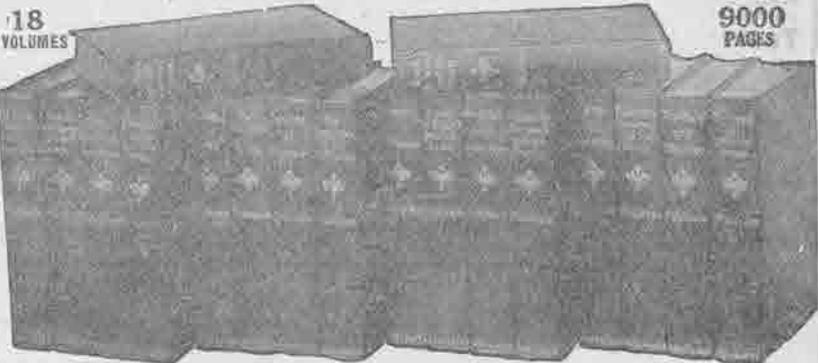

Muhlbach's Historical Romances

These wonderful volumes tell the private, personal life and character of great men and women. History is here written in story form. These volumes are beyond question the most fascinating historical romances that have ever been given to the world. They contain a history of the crises in Germany, Austria, Russia, England, Switzerland, Egypt, France, Holland and Prussia during two hundred years of startling events, told in intensely interesting and romantic form. All classes are represented in these volumes as they lived and loved, thought and acted. Thus the human interest always prevails and has given this set of books enduring popularity. These wonderful historic romances are among the books that never die. They are interesting, instructive, reliable, truthful, wholesome and good. In the volume devoted to Napoleon and Blucher practically every historic character that the life of the great emperor touched in any way is here given—all the men and women of his time. The new edition is printed from new plates, upon extra quality of paper from easy-to-read type, are attractively illustrated and bound in Art Buckram Cloth, titles stamped in gold.

The Encyclopedia Britannica says: "Muhlbach's works show a talent for lively description and narration that gives enduring popularity and a power in weaving alluring romances from those stirring times that is unsurpassed."

"Blocking the Highway."

BY O. G. VINCENT.

The above heading is taken from a cartoon which undertakes to point out that which is hindering the progress of foreign missions. This cartoon has for its background a terrible blackness representing the heathen world. In this background are these words: "Come over and help us." To the left there is a signboard with a pointing finger which reads: "To the millions of Christless heathen." There is also a "highway" on which is seen a neatly dressed woman carrying a basket on her right arm. These words are written plainly on the basket: "The bread of life." The face of the woman is turned toward the heathen world. But the "highway of holiness" is blocked by three large and ugly men. The first on the left is Mr. Ignorance. He is represented as being blind. The second is Mr. Prejudice. He has an ugly frown on his face. His nose is turned up and his hands are ready to push the woman with the "bread of life" away from him. He seems to say to the woman (the church): "O, the heathen are no good. Let them alone. Let the dead bury the dead." The third man is Mr. Indifference. He is big and fat. His hands are in his pockets and his feet are crossed. He is in a lazy and easy attitude—he is asleep; and there is a cobweb growing on his head. It seems that he said: "O, yes, I guess missions are all right, but there are so many heathen at home. And, too, it costs so much to cross the ocean. Then, times are hard, and we have to lay up for a rainy day. Perhaps the heathen will be saved, anyway. The Bible says that the gospel was preached to every nation. Why didn't they keep the gospel, anyhow?" And then he began "to slumber and sleep."

Truly the artist has given us a true likeness of the real conditions. Ignorance, prejudice, and indifference block the "highway;" they are the "lion in the way." They must be removed before the church can "go" into all the world. These hindrances may be removed by Bible study, by scriptural and inspiring sermons, by earnest prayer for the lost millions and the missionaries on the field. It takes constant and patient teaching on the subject of foreign missions. But whose duty is it to thus endeavor to remove that which "blocks the highway?"

Certainly it is the most solemn duty of all faithful preachers of the word of God. It is also the duty of all elders, deacons, and leaders to talk, preach, and urge missions upon the conscience of the church; and, I may add, every disciple of God, whether man or woman, whether a leader or not, whether great or small, should do all in his or her power to sound out the word of God in "the regions beyond." I am very happy to note that more preachers and elders are taking more interest in world-wide missions. More is being done. Our motto should be, "Greater Things for the Master's Cause." Every loyal editor should lend his pen and paper for the furtherance of the gospel in heathen lands. If all will unite in one grand effort, we can establish a work on the foreign field of which the church may be proud and which will be a living and constant monument for the glory of God and his Son. If the generation of Christians now living do not preach the gospel to the heathen now living, they will never hear the good news of salvation in Jesus Christ. Are you willing for them to pass into the great beyond without having an opportunity of hearing of the Savior of men? Now is the time for us to work, for now is the day of salvation.

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Uric Acid Poisoning!

The most eminent physicians recognize that uric acid stored up in the system is the cause of rheumatism, that this uric acid poison is present in the joints, muscles, or nerves. By experimenting and analysis at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute in Buffalo, N. Y., Dr. Pierce discovered a combination of native remedies that he called Anuric—which drives out the uric acid from the system, and in this way the pain, swelling and inflammation subside. If you are a sufferer from rheumatism, backache, pains here or there, you can obtain Anuric at any drug store and get relief from the pains and ills brought about by uric acid; or send Dr. Pierce 10c. for trial pkg. Anuric which you will find many times more potent than lithia and eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar. A short trial will convince you.

Anuric is a regular insurance and life-saver for all big meat eaters and those who deposit lime-salts in their joints.

A WOMAN'S HEAD is level and her judgment good when she puts her faith in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

There is no beauty without good health. Nobody expects to become really beautiful from the use of complexion beautifiers.

Bright eyes, clear skin, and rosy cheeks, follow the use of the "Prescription."

All women require a tonic and nerve at some period of their lives. Whether suffering from nervousness, dizziness, faintness, displacement, catarrhal inflammation, bearing-down sensations, or general debility, the "Prescription" is sure to benefit. In tablet and liquid form.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets were first put in ready-to-use form nearly 50 years ago, and will always relieve the inactive liver and biliousness. Insist on getting Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—there is none so good.

"Father, Forgive!"

Comes there not in every Christian's life a time when this cry from the cross acquires a new, more intense, personal meaning, awakening in his heart not only the inexpressible, thankful love of a forgiven soul, but stirring the responsive chord of forgiveness to others? He, too, has been called to taste of the cup which his Lord accepted in the garden of Gethsemane and drank to the dregs on the cross of Calvary. To his lips it has been pressed full of the bitterest of rejected love; and, at first, forgetful of his Lord's submissive acceptance of that very cup, he has cried out in despair, heartbroken at being so cruelly misunderstood by those whom he loved so well. Then, when the first wave of sorrow had spent itself, the power of reason returned; he dared to probe the wound, to think calmly of those who made it so deep and so painful. He knows something now (though it be but an infinitesimal part) of what his Lord suffered, when he was betrayed, denied, forsaken, by those whom he had called his friends, and from his heart rises the passionate cry to him who suffered so bitterly for us: "Lord, teach me to forgive, even as thou hast forgiven me. Teach me with thee to pray: Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."—Selected.

For Emergency Use.

Every well-regulated family should keep on hand a jar of Mentholatum. Its uses are various, because it is an antiseptic and germicide and also a delicate counter irritant; just the thing needed for scalds, burns, bruises, insect bites, and stings. Mentholatum is a combination of volatile aromatic oils with a heavier base. In the case of scalds and burns the heavy base keeps out the air, a very necessary condition. The lighter aromatic oils disinfect the surface and protect it from infection from without. The lighter oils also set up a counter irritation which seems to draw the soreness out of the injured part, reducing the inflammation and encouraging rapid recovery. For this reason it is very much used for colds, sore throat, catarrh, cold sores, and croup.

Avoid Scandal.

Be too broad-minded to encourage the sin of scandal. When a gossip begins to relate some scandal in your presence, say to him: "Come, let us go to that person and see if the story is true!" Hannah More, the English author, always followed that course, and it never failed to work.—Selected.

Hard Colds. People whose blood is pure are not nearly so likely to take hard colds as are others. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood pure, and this great medicine recovers the system after a cold as no other medicine does. Take Hood's.

Rheumatism and Indigestion.

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between indigestion and rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for dyspepsia and indigestion, relieves rheumatism and the rheumatoid diseases, such as gout, sciatica, neuralgia, and nervous headache. All of these diseases are probably related, and all are probably due in whole or in part to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection:

Dr. Crusey, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your spring water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time it will produce a permanent cure. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, and stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant, of Savannah, writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there, and still I was not benefited. I had almost despaired of living, when I began to use Shivar Spring Water and in a short time was cured."

Mr. Rhodes, of Virginia, writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for rheumatism. I know of several who were cured of rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done more good than any medicine I have ever taken for rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam, of South Carolina, writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from rheumatism, and after drinking twenty gallons of your mineral water was entirely cured of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter, of Virginia, writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

Doctor Says Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate People 200% in Ten Days

In many instances—Persons have suffered untold agony for years doctoring for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease or some other ailment when their real trouble was lack of iron in the blood.—How to tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a Specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe said: If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble, some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases, it is worse than foolishness to take stimulant medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your flagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later. No matter what anyone tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test. See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated iron for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 50 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic troubles. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

Medicated Smoke Drives Out Catarrh.

Try This Pleasant Herb Smoke.
Sent Free By Mail.

Dr. Blosser, who has devoted forty years to the treatment of Catarrh, is the originator of a certain combination of medicinal herbs, flowers and berries to be smoked in a pipe or ready prepared cigarette. The smoke-vapor reaches all the air passages of the head, nose and throat. As the disease is carried into these passages with the air you breathe, so the antiseptic, healing vapor of this Remedy is carried with the breath directly to the affected parts.

This simple, practical method applies the medicine where sprays, douches, ointments, etc., cannot possibly go. Its effect is soothing and healing, and is entirely harmless, containing no tobacco or habit forming drugs. It is pleasant to use, and not sickening to those who have never smoked. No matter how severe or longstanding your case may be, we want to show you what our Remedy will do.

To prove the beneficial, pleasant effect, The Blosser Company, 704 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga., will mail absolutely free to any sufferer, a sample that will verify their claims by actual test. This free package contains a pipe, some of the Remedy for smoking and also some of our medicinal cigarettes. If you wish to continue the treatment, it will cost only one dollar for a month's supply for the pipe, or a box containing one hundred cigarettes. We pay postage.

If you are a sufferer from Catarrh, Asthma, Catarrhal Deafness, or if subject to frequent colds, send your name and address at once by postal card or letter for the free package, and a copy of our illustrated booklet.

Coarse Hair

doesn't become you, and it is as unruely as it is unbecoming. The hair should be soft and light and should hold its original luster when it is healthy. The quickest and surest way to deprive the hair of its original luster is to leave it alone to look out for itself. Each separate hair is an individual delicate structure in itself, and every hair on your head, in order to contribute its share of beauty should be perfectly fed with the natural hair oil, which comprises its food. Starve your hair, and, like anything else, it will die. Feed your hair with nature's hair food, "La Creole." This excellent hair food, first discovered by the Creoles of Louisiana, fifty years ago and preserved by them, proved a treatment from which sprang their reputation for beautiful hair. It has since been offered the public and has served to beautify the hair of thousands of the tasteful and fastidious.

"What Is My Worker Doing?"

BY E. S. JELLEY.

Frequently the inquiry comes: "What is my worker doing?" Sometimes there is a rather angry note to the question. So I shall try and explain as best I can what each and every worker is doing.

In the first place, your worker (a new one) is extremely ignorant of the Bible, although he knows so much of the divine requirements that he has been baptized for the remission of sins. He, therefore, is put through a course of instruction—partly by mail and partly by myself or an educated brother—that lasts two years. He is not, however, idle all of this time. Even during Bible-study courses I send him out to preach occasionally; and during nine months of the year, unless he is confined by sickness, he preaches in two or three villages per week where there are churches (he has a circuit of ten village churches). Likewise he answers calls from unevangelized villages and baptizes when desired. He also, in all probability, teaches school in the village where he resides.

"But how many has he baptized in the last month?" Frankly, I do not know. A record of baptisms is kept, but not of the administrator, and generally the senior preacher present at a baptism does the baptizing without regard to who made the convert; and as, from design and otherwise, different preachers visit the same villages, and as every Christian is a worker to a certain degree, most converts would be unable to tell who converted them. Conversion is not necessarily a Methodist, instantaneous process. Your worker came not to baptize, but to preach the gospel. (See 1 Cor. 1: 17.)

Secondly, one cannot expect a constant stream of one hundred baptisms a month. One of the eight writers said that the farmer has to wait for a crop after sowing the seed. Your worker sometimes has to wait also.

Again, it occasionally happens that some brother or congregation asks for a worker and begins to send the money monthly, but I have no suitable worker handy. What do I do? Do I appoint an unsuitable man? Certainly not. What, then? Well, I do just what you would do. I keep the money and put a man to work when I find one suitable, some two or three or even six months after. You pay for a certain number of months' preaching. I employ a preacher for you for that length of time. Your money is not misappropriated.

Make your cakes better by using "Eagle Brand." It also improves your tea, coffee, chocolate and cocoa.

Brethren, under serious drawbacks and disadvantages, we try to spread the gospel in this darkened land. On the whole, we are fairly successful; but we cannot do the impossible. Kindly compare the results in India with results in your home town. Also compare our procedure with that recorded in Acts.

There is this matter also: We are sowing seed to-day, with no apparent results, which will bring forth fruit in vast masses turning to the Savior in the future, we trust. We do not ask every one to help the India work. Use your own judgment in that matter. Perhaps you had better help Japan, Mexico, China, Russia, or some other country (we certainly trust you do not forget America). But if you help the work in India, kindly be patient and pray for your workers—the missionary and your native worker. The work is being done as best we know how to do it.

Our Constant Guest.

There is a Guest who is always in our homes. The sense of his presence should make sacred the family life, for he is daily blessing us when we live as becomes his friends, and our unworthy home life makes him displeased. We ought to be glad that Christ dwells in our homes, and our ambition should be to make these homes more befitting such a heavenly guest.—Exchange.

MENTHOL CANDY COUGH DROPS

A Plea for the Perishing Millions of India.

BY W. HUME M'HENRY.

On last Lord's-day afternoon (August 27) we all went out to Mahuli to preach and hand out a few books. We preached to a few people who came near us, but only a few were to be seen. We were told that on the following day there would be a heathen gathering—a very large one. We promised to come the next day. So early next morning we went again, and found that during the night several thousand people had gathered for their devotions. Before noon the number must have increased up to tens of thousands. The brethren boldly proclaimed the word, and quite a number listened quite well. We gave away quite a number of Gospels and a supply of books on the "Evidences of the Christian Scriptures." It is hoped that the seed sown will bring forth fruit in after days if not now. To see the thousands as they bowed to stocks and stones in their ignorance as against the insignificant number of those who know the true way was almost enough to bring discouragement. But we are convinced that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation; and if boldly proclaimed, the victory is certain through the Lord Jesus Christ. But really, brethren, let us wake up and quit playing with the missionary problem. Let a few dozen turn loose of their shells and come to the rescue of the millions perishing for the bread of life, and let those who remain at home really give of their substance as the Lord has prospered them, and, to be sure, the gospel will be preached in the whole world, and the preachers at home will not have to starve, either.

Word came from Brother Jelley this morning saying that they had been treated to a series of rather severe earthquake shocks, and that their house and many others were quite badly damaged, with four deaths reported. They were all safe. Let us hope that the worst was passed.

This finds us all well. The weather is pretty, with little rain at present. Two baptisms reported this week. One worker reports that one hundred and twelve in out villages are considering and studying the Christian religion, while not a few are ready to accept Christ. I hope to make a trip out to as many of the villages as possible and strengthen the brethren in a few days.

We are thankful for all the help that has been sent by our many good brethren. But let it always be borne in mind that a continued effort must be put forth. A shifting from one field to another year after year is a means of wasting much money. Conditions being so much different in this country from what they are at home, it necessitates more time to get the work on a solid and permanent basis. The first year much of the time must be spent in teaching the worker, that he may be able to efficiently teach others. Unless each contributor continues his offerings or gets a substitute, what will be the result? Keep this in mind, and let us be systematic and continued in our efforts in spreading the gospel, just the same as we are in secular work.

There is one thing all can do—that is, earnestly pray for the safety of your workers and the success of the Lord's work everywhere. Love to all.

TO PREVENT A COUGH Growing Worse at Nightfall, Take Foley's Honey and Tar.

A cold usually tightens up toward nightfall, and an increasing cough means a night of discomfort. Bronchial coughs, hoarseness, tickling throat, a sore tight feeling over chest and in the bronchial tubes, may be eased and soothed very promptly, the wearing cough loosened and the phlegm raised without painful effort, by the aid of Foley's Honey and Tar. This standard family cough medicine is without opiates or harmful drugs. For croup it is invaluable. All dealers everywhere sell it.

We always have time enough if we will apply it well.—Goethe.

The feelings are to be disciplined, the passions are to be restrained, true and worthy motives are to be inspired; a profound religious feeling is to be instilled, and pure morality inculcated under all circumstances. All this is comprised in education.—Daniel Webster.

Meat Cause of Kidney Trouble

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back, or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive. It cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

One of the brightest and most entertaining of all our Sunday-school publications is THE YOUNG PEOPLE, a four-page weekly, devoted especially to the interests and welfare of young people of both sexes, but which will prove a channel of cheer and blessing to older ones as well. This periodical has just been consolidated with THE BIBLE STUDY HELPER, and presents the strongest and most essential features of both in an improved form. Three pages are given to stories of an entertaining and elevating character and articles of an educational nature, by gifted and well-informed writers, strikingly illustrated by photo-engravings and fine drawings; and one page is devoted to a clear and concise presentation of the Sunday-school lesson, historically and exegetically, by A. B. Lipscomb, one of the editors of the Gospel Advocate, in which are presented the thoughts of many of the world's best thinkers. The size of the page is 10 3/4 x 14 inches. Printed from clear type on good paper.

Real Charity.

There is sometimes a greater charity in seeming not to see our neighbor's trouble than in trying to relieve it. "Let me alone!" is the prayer of many a tortured heart when the curious, the officious, and the tactless force the door of its place of desolation, albeit they bring wine and oil.—Selected.

It is probable that a man never knows the deep anguish of conscious wrong until he has had the courage to face in solitude its naked hideousness.—James Sully.

Comfort in Temptation.

Temptation comes to every man, woman, and child. It came to all the saints and just men made perfect. The fiercest temptation on record is that of our Lord in the wilderness. No one is exempt from the tempter's power. The conditions of human life make temptation unavoidable. It is an ever-present factor in life. Temptation may be said to produce the battle and the bitterness of life, but it is also the road to holiness. The salutary effect of the hour of temptation has often been shown by the hour after temptation. Many who have fallen into "manifold temptations," have been led to "count it all joy." It is the trial of faith that reveals the nature of faith. Trial is the only safe test of character. A man tells me, "I am a Christian;" but I do not know it until he has been tried in the crucible of temptation, like the gold is tried in the fire. Temptation is not sin. Yielding is sin. We do well to remember this. Timid Christians, who keenly feel the presence of the Evil One, are apt to conclude that they must be very bad because of his frequent assaults upon their souls. They forget that this is the best proof that the Christian is faithful unto the Lord. Grace is stronger than sin, and the battle with Satan need not be hopeless. The grace of God is able to deliver in every hour of trial. "He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust."—Selected.

Recipe for Gray Hair.

To half pint of water add one ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded, gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

The foolish fears of what may happen,
I cast them all away
Among the clover-scented grass,
Among the new-mown hay;
Among the husking of the corn,
Where drowsy poppies nod;
Where ill thoughts die and good are born—
Out in the fields with God!
—Elizabeth Browning.

We shall not succeed in life's hard fight, even though we have every equipment for victory, unless, plus all else, we have faith in God, and refer everything to him.—J. R. Miller.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

your chances for defeating this dreaded affection depend largely on your ability to restore normal body functions.

To do this, one requirement is proper attention to diet and pure food. Also rest and fresh air, day and night.

Where the system is run down and likelihood of serious consequences thus increased, Eckman's Alternative may prove beneficial, as it has in many cases.

This is a lime treatment—but unlike any other. For here the lime content is so combined with other ingredients as to be easily assimilated by the average person.

A trial can do no harm, since Eckman's Alternative contains no poisonous or habit-forming drugs. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

Trice-Denington Debate.

BY T. B. THOMPSON.

W. H. Trice (Christian), of Memphis, Tenn., and W. T. Denington (Baptist), of Wingo, Ky., met in public debate at Oak Grove Baptist Church, three miles west of Mayfield, Ky., on November 7 and continued four days. The first two days Denington affirmed on the Spirit's influence upon the sinner in addition to its power residing in the word. The last two days Trice affirmed on the design of baptism. During this debate Denington challenged Brother Trice to meet him at Pryors, near Wingo, Ky. Brother Trice readily accepted the challenge, which resulted in four additional days' debating the next week—November 14-17. However, arrangements were made to have the first two days at the same place (Oak Grove) and the two remaining days at Pryors. Two propositions were discussed in the latter debate. Denington affirmed on the establishment of the church "before the death of Christ," and Trice affirmed on the possibility of apostasy.

It would be wholly unnecessary for me to attempt to say anything about the work of Brother Trice in these debates. He made his arguments clear and distinct, and would not permit his opponent to cover the issue. I think I have seen no one who could lay a more splendid foundation in his first speech than Brother Trice. His definition of his proposition and his statement of principles upon which the contention rests were, it seemed to me, as good as could be. Brother Trice's forte—one of them—is in asking his opponent just a few questions which serve to bring the contention to a focus and eliminate much useless discussion. To some of them Denington would say: "I'll not answer it." Brother Trice was unable during the entire eight days to get Denington to say whether salvation is conditional. The Missionary Baptist's position between the Christian and "Hardshell Baptist's positions is not a very "happy medium" when the matter is tested. It was evident at times that Trice's efforts were very annoying to Denington.

Denington is of Irish extraction, rather out of joint in an educational way, as well as in body. As Trice said of him: "Denington, you have two strong points—a strong voice and a winsome smile." I have never heard one who could hollow louder than he. Often it looked as if every pore of his face would burst out in blood. His position in the stand is often ludicrous. Had he even a rudimental education, he might be a power. He tries to

How to avoid Operations

These Three Women Tell How They Escaped the Dreadful Ordeal of Surgical Operations.

Hospitals are great and necessary institutions, but they should be the last resort for women who suffer with ills peculiar to their sex. Many letters on file in the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., prove that a great number of women after they have been recommended to submit to an operation have been made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here are three such letters. All sick women should read them.

Marinette, Wis.—"I went to the doctor and he told me I must have an operation for a female trouble, and I hated to have it done as I had been married only a short time. I would have terrible pains and my hands and feet were cold all the time. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was cured, and I feel better in every way. I give you permission to publish my name because I am so thankful that I feel well again."
—Mrs. FRED BEHNKE, Marinette, Wis.

Detroit, Mich.—"When I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was so run down with female troubles that I could not do anything, and our doctor said I would have to undergo an operation. I could hardly walk without help so when I read about the Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others I thought I would try it. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and used them according to directions. They helped me and today I am able to do all my work and I am well."
—Mrs. THOS. DWYER, 989 Milwaukee Ave., East, Detroit, Mich.

Bellevue, Pa.—"I suffered more than tongue can tell with terrible bearing down pains and inflammation. I tried several doctors and they all told me the same story, that I never could get well without an operation and I just dreaded the thought of that. I also tried a good many other medicines that were recommended to me and none of them helped me until a friend advised me to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. The first bottle helped, I kept taking it and now I don't know what it is to be sick any more and I am picking up in weight. I am 20 years old and weigh 145 pounds. It will be the greatest pleasure to me if I can have the opportunity to recommend it to any other suffering woman."
—Miss IRENE FROELICHER, 1923 Manhattan St., North Side, Bellevue, Pa.

make capital of his lack of education; and when it becomes necessary for his opponent to show up his inferior handling of the mere fundamentals of the English language, he tries to gain the sympathy of the audience by attempting to put his opponent in the attitude of "poking fun" at him—one who had had no opportunity to get an education. He seems absolutely devoid of any sensitiveness of soul in misstating his opponent, partly due, perhaps, to inability to get his opponent's argument. He shows he is acquainted only with the old squibs and quibbles of Baptist debaters, from Hall down, for he refuses to attempt to answer anything new. Let me say one thing to his credit, however; and that is, so far as I heard, he never said "Campbellite" during the whole debate. I was told that he got a little angry the last day of the first debate and said something about Trice as a "Campbellite Solomon."

Brother Ira Douthitt moderated for Brother Trice in the first debate; a

Mr. Wood, for Dennington. I moderated for Trice in the second debate; Wood, Squire Arnett, and a Mr. Taylor, for Dennington. Of our brethren who attended the debate, the preachers were: Ira Douthitt, Boone Douthitt, W. J. Butler, Stanley Jones, Jewel Cox, Garvin Curd, Charlie Taylor, Will Warren, John Taylor, F. Loran Palsley, Alonzo Williams, and the writer. Of the Baptists who attended, the preachers were: J. E. Wood, B. F. Stamps, T. E. Taylor, Kelly Taylor, J. M. Rodgers, J. M. Hooker, L. J. Covington, and Mr. Edison.

"In him we live, and move, and have our being." And the joyful people in the church of Christ are those who see God in the commonplaces; in the breaking of bread, the giving of food, and health, and clothing; in the fresh air and bright sunlight.—A. C. Dixon.

Ladies! Darken Your Gray Hair

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of sage and sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy, and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out of date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a fifty-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of disease.

A BIBLE MAKES AN IDEAL GIFT

Despite the fact that the price of paper and printing material has been increased about three hundred per cent, we are able to offer some extraordinary bargains in Bibles and Testaments for the holiday season. There is no advance in prices over last year in the leaders that we offer on this page. We only ask that for each Bible purchased you add fifteen cents for postage.

No. 4712 $5.00 Ideal, Large-Type, Self-Pronouncing Teachers' Bible for . . . $2.50

This Bible is the acme of artistic beauty. It is printed in large, clear type, and formerly sold for $5. Its new copyrighted Helps were prepared by F. N. Peloubet, the distinguished author of Select Notes on the International Sunday School Lessons. These Helps include the following:

ORIENTAL LIGHT ON THE BIBLE

A new kind of Bible Help, illuminating, by means of the most accurate pictures and descriptions, many references to Bible manners and customs and truths; revelations from the Buried Cities of the East; accurate pictures from the Palestine of to-day, unchanged for thousands of years; illustrations from the Orient, gathered in the author's study, of everything that can illustrate the Bible. Thus the Bible becomes a new book pulsating with the everyday life in the Holy Land. With indexes of texts and objects.

TREASURY OF BIBLICAL INFORMATION

The latest compendium of essential things which every reader of the Bible needs to know, such as the Chronology of the Old Testament and the New Testament, Tables of Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Calendar, Table of Easter Days, giving the dates on which Easter occurs for twenty-eight years, etc., all arranged in the most usable and attractive forms.

A NEW SERIES OF MAPS

The latest, the clearest, the most beautiful colored maps of any Bible Helps; a selection of those most used, with some special Maps, embodying the results of the most recent explorations.

A NEW PRACTICAL COMPARATIVE CONCORDANCE

With nearly fifty thousand references to the Authorized and Revised Versions of the Bible.

FOUR THOUSAND QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

rageous, and terrible to their enemies, and made a prey of them, is called a "lion's whelp." That was father Jacob's patronymic for the tribe as a whole. But Jesus, a lineal descendant of David, the great king, is individually called "the Lion that is of the tribe of Judah," because he was mighty, courageous, and revolutionary in his ministry among men. Long before his birth the prophet Malachi had said of him: "Behold, the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple; and he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver." This means that Jesus was to come where holiness was professed, and to sift the true from the false, the worldly and greedy religious sort from the devoted and the spiritual. He was not to make pretense at such a purification, but actually to accomplish the separation.

The Temple Converted Into Stock Yards.

Following the first miracle that was wrought in Cana of Galilee, Jesus and his disciples went up from Capernaum to Jerusalem to attend the passover feast. As they entered the outer court of the temple, called the "Court of the Gentiles," a strange, incongruous scene met Jesus' eyes. Instead of viewing a great crowd of worshipers, as one might reasonably expect, he saw what much resembled the stock yards on an unusually busy day. The court, with a space of about fourteen acres, was filled with a noisy assemblage. Dealers were crying their wares in loud and lusty voices; buyers were wrangling and disputing; coarse shouts of the cattle drovers added to the general uproar, while the clink of coins and the cries of animals rose above the din of the jostling crowd. If one should ask how came this strange sight to exist, the answer would be, "We did it for convenience' sake," and to the unthinking the answer might seem plausible. The law required each worshiper to bring a sacrifice to the Lord. Those who lived near Jerusalem could bring their own animals, but those who lived far away could not conveniently do this; hence it was an accommodation to them to be able to procure suitable animals after arriving at the place of the feast. At first the market was established somewhere in the city away from the temple, but afterwards, for convenience' sake, it was carried into the court of the temple. There were not only cattle dealers and pigeon sellers, but also money changers; for every Jew had to pay to the temple treasury an annual tax of half a shekel, and this tax must be paid only in Jewish coin. Hence the need of money changers for those who came from foreign countries. It was convenient enough to get their money changed outside the temple; but the grafters, to make it more convenient for the pilgrims and more profitable to themselves,

The Lion of Judah.

More than seventy times in the book of Revelation its author refers to Jesus as "the Lamb." Once in the same book Jesus is called "the Lion," or, more specifically, "the Lion that is of the tribe of Judah." From this I do not conclude that our Savior was about seventy per cent lamblike and about one per cent lionlike in his nature. I understand that all the names given to Jesus are significant, but that John's favorite appellation for him was "the Lamb," suggestive of his office as the world's greatest Sacrifice and also of the meekness and gentleness of the innocent Savior. But there was also a good reason why he was called "the Lion" of Judah. The lion is metaphorically taken in the Bible and in literature generally as the most powerful and most courageous of all beasts. The tribe of Judah and its kings, who were valliant, cou-set up their tables inside the court. As a result, the house of prayer became a "den of thieves." The poor were shamefully treated, and the worship of God was hindered and impoverished instead of being facilitated and enriched. And all of this travesty of worship took place under the pretext of "convenience in the worship."

Innovations for Convenience's Sake.

Instrumental music and other innovations have been introduced into Christian worship in modern times by many who admit that such things are not taught in the New Testament and were not used by the early church, but who make the plea of "necessary for convenience sake." It is right and proper to have things convenient in the worship, so long as no principle of worship is violated; but when the introduction of a convenient thing changes the spirit and meaning of any New Testament command, then the convenient thing becomes the unholy thing; "becomes more destructive and devilish than it is convenient; it undermines the power of religion; it divides the hearts of Christians; it turns men away from the truth. We should not forget that the Lion of Judah "made a scourge of cords," then entered into one of the most convenient places of worship that ever existed in the world, "and cast all out of the temple, both the sheep and the oxen; and he poured out the changers' money, and overthrew their tables." In brief, Jesus separated and temporarily destroyed all of those conveniences because they were not in harmony with God's words. Now I do not learn from this that Christians today, who are zealous for the purity of the worship, should, Carrie-Nationlike, take a hatchet or a crowbar and violently seek to "bust up" or "prize out" everything that does not meet with their approval; but I do learn that, taking the sword of the Spirit and the shield of faith, and having our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, we should go forth and contend earnestly against everything that is not according to the pattern.

Authority to Baptize.

BY F. W. SMITH.

One of the fundamental doctrines of the Missionary Baptist Church is that the authority to administer the ordinance of baptism is derived from the local church, and that only a local Baptist church is a New Testament church. Is not this a colossal claim? Is there scarcely less arrogance to be found in the papal claim itself? For a human institution that cannot trace its origin any further back than the sixteenth century to set up the claim of Mr. J. E. Skinner, which the writer is reviewing, is almost too ridiculous to think of. In his essay on "The New Testament Procedure of Baptism" he has this to say on the authority to baptize:

Thus it is clear that, since the commission, including the ordinance of baptism, was given to the church, and since baptism was always associated with church membership in the teaching and practice of the early disciples, the authority for its administration then, and to the end of time, was committed to the local church, "the pillar and ground of the truth."

The foregoing is, as the reader observes, a conclusion from previous reasoning. The premises from which he draws this conclusion occupy at least three and one-half columns of the Baptist and Reflector, making it entirely too long for reproduction here; but, in order to make it fair to Mr. Skinner, enough of his premise will be given to justify my criticism. Having assumed that the authority to baptize was not committed to the apostles, but to the church, a local congregation, he then undertakes to locate the church before the day of Pentecost. He says: "I use the word 'church' always with the idea of a local organization." Let us not forget his definition of the church, for it is a prime factor in this investigation. Now, with his definition of the word "church," it became his duty to point out such an organization on this earth before Christ ascended to heaven. This he attempted to do, first, by assuming from the language, "tell it unto the church" (Matt. 18: 17), that the church must have at that time been in existence. Well, we will let Mr. Skinner find it, and here is where and when he locates it:

Thus, twice before his death, he mentions the government of the affairs of his kingdom, and how it should be conducted when he was gone, and each time, without exception, he does so in direct connection with the work of this institution he calls his church. Now, with this fact in mind, with no theory of our own to support, with no concern about it except to know the truth, let us come with our Lord to the mountain in Galilee, and hear him speak to "above five hundred brethren at once" (it is generally conceded that it was to this occasion Paul referred in I Cor. 15: 6), giving his last commission as follows: "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Doesn't this sound like his teaching just referred to in Matt. 16: 18 and 18: 18, where, in effect, he says: I have authority to commission you to carry on the work of my kingdom, and I have power to make it victorious on earth and acceptable in heaven? In these passages just referred to, he is talking about the work he wants his churches to do, and is he not speaking to his church when assembled on the mountain, where he gives them the great commission and commits to them the very work he had mentioned before as being the work of his churches?

What is his definition of the word "church?" A local congregation always, so he informs us. Where is this local church? On the mountain in Galilee, he tells us, and that it was composed of "above five hundred brethren." Here on this mountain in Galilee, he says of Christ: "Hear him speak to 'above five hundred brethren at once,' giving his last commission." That commission, he affirms, is the one recorded in Matt. 28: 18-20.

Now the following objections are filed against all of this. First, there was no such thing as a "local congregation" on that mountain; for, in so far as the record goes, not one of those met with Christ on that mountain lived there, hence were not localized at that place. This fact destroys Mr. Skinner's only definition of the word "church." To meet the requirement of his definition of the church, they would have to be localized on that mountain—that is, that place would have to be their home. It is a misnomer to speak of disciples from different sections of a country assembled at a certain place for a brief period as a "local church." In the second place, the plain statement of facts are against Mr. Skinner's assumption that "above five hundred brethren" were present on the occasion when the commission of Matt. 28: 18-20 was given. Let us consult the divine record: "But the eleven disciples went into Galilee, unto the mountain where Jesus had appointed them. And when they saw him, they worshiped him; but some doubted. And Jesus came to them and spoke unto them, saying, All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Now, Mr. Skinner, where is your "local church" of above five hundred members? According to this record, there were only "eleven" disciples on that mountain with Christ, and they were his apostles. How long, Mr. Skinner, did this "church" remain on that mountain, and how often did it assemble there for worship? Really, with a commission to go into all the world, how could it be a "local" church, if a church at all? Is this the way Baptist preachers have to pervert the word of God in order to sustain their cherished dogma that no one but a Baptist preacher has the authority from God to baptize? My friend read where it was declared that Christ was seen "above five hundred brethren at once" (1 Cor. 15: 6), and he just supposed it must have been at the time he gave the last commission! He must have written without a copy of the Scriptures near him, for how else can we account for this colossal blunder? Further comment is reserved for another issue.

BY W. H. CARTER.

"What must one do in order to become a Christian, and how may one know that he has been pardoned?"

The question you ask presupposes that there is something to be done. The teaching of the Scriptures is so plain on this point that there are no religious people known to me, however far they may have digressed from divine truth, that do not teach that the sinner must do something; and one thing that should rejoice us all is, there are some things about which we are all agreed. There is really no dispute over the necessity of faith and repentance. While there may be, and is, some contention about the order in which these come, as to which comes first, yet all agree that these are essential to one's becoming a Christian.

The question of the necessity of doing something in order to come to the enjoyment of the blessings of God was brought up several times during the ministry of our Savior and his apostles, and I do not know of one single instance where it was even intimated that there is nothing to be done. On one occasion a very wealthy young man came to our Savior and asked him what good thing he could do that he might inherit eternal life. Jesus called his attention to the requirements of the law (for the law of Moses was yet in force), and the young man affirmed that he had kept all those things from his youth up, and asked what yet was required of him. He had asked to know what "good thing" he could do. So Jesus told him to sell what he had and give to the poor, and come and follow him. (Matt. 19: 16-22.) Like this young man, many in our day will ask what to do, but are not willing to do what the Lord says. They would willingly do, if the Lord would tell them to do things they want to do, but are not willing to bring their will into subjection to the will of the Christ. May I hope that such is not the case with you?

On another occasion the people asked: "What shall we do, that we might work the works of God?" Jesus said: "This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." (John 6: 28, 29.) Again, Jesus said: "My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God, and do it." (Luke 8: 21.) "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." (John 7: 17.) "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." (John 13: 17.)

At the beginning of the ministry of the apostles under the commission given by our Redeemer, just before he returned to the Father, being filled with the Spirit, and speaking as he gave them utterance, having preached the gospel of the grace of God and proclaimed for the first time the Lordship of Christ, the people, being pricked in their hearts by what they had heard, "said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?" They were guilty of an awful crime. In their ignorance they had crucified the Son of God—the Lord of glory. They are now convinced that he is indeed and in truth the Son of God, and is now exalted at the right hand of God and has been made both Lord and Christ. Hence their question: "What shall we do?" The answer, which comes by the authority of Christ, is plain and simple, easy to be understood and done: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Read Acts 2.) They that gladly received his word were baptized, and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls.

Practically this is your question with heaven's answer. Before the preaching of this sermon they were not Christians, but after they had received the word and had done what they were told they were added unto the apostles, and, of course, had become Christians. There is nothing—absolutely nothing—to keep us from knowing what they did, for this the inspired record plainly states. If they became Christians and were saved, and if you believe and do the same things, will you not become a Christian and be saved, too? (To be continued.)

Government in the Home and School.

BY A. G. FREED.

Government in the home and school is almost a "lost art" in this age. Children come into this world without any choice of their own. Neither do they choose in early life their own environments. God holds parents responsible. The divine command is: "And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." (Eph. 6: 4.) The first lessons of parental love and honor are learned early in the home. In these times it does not take long for boys and girls to think that father and mother are "back numbers," "old fogies." There is not much hope for the boy who refers to his father as "the old man" or "the governor." Neither is there for the girl who speaks of her mother as "the old woman." "Disobedient to parents" is one of the characteristics of "perilous times" in "the last days."

We are reaping what we have sown. For all this dishonor and disrespect for parents peculiar to this day there is a first cause. The press of business and greed for gain have caused many parents to neglect the moral and spiritual training of those precious ones committed to their care. When the hour for Bible study comes, they say to their children, "Go," rather than "Come." The first-day assembly has no attraction for them. The children are turned loose upon the streets for picture shows and "joy rides." Church houses are vacant on Sunday evenings. Soon parents are heard to say: "We can do nothing with our boy or girl."

Many schools do not propose to have any oversight or discipline of students in their care; but, rather, the faculty lead in the ruffianism and rowdiness under the name of "college spirit" or "athletics." Their students are taught that "might makes right." The greatest inducements many schools hold out are the pictures of their "college teams" displayed on front pages of their catalogues. A good (?) time is the incentive offered, and "just so I pass" is the rage of the student. "Do I know the subject?" seems never to enter the minds of teacher or pupil.

See the following recent clipping concerning one of our leading State schools. It is a fair sample of the spirit of all: "Students attending the — were entertained Thursday afternoon with a boat ride on the steamer Majestic by the Business Men's Club. This is an annual affair, and about six hundred students enjoyed the outing. The steamer was chartered by the entertainment committee, headed by —, and the teachers, their friends, and members of the Business Men's Club numbering about one thousand persons in all. Music, dancing, and refreshments were enjoyed." Now we have it—"music and dancing!" How is that for members of the "one body?" Among these students were Christians. Others were children of Christian parents. These parents will wonder why their children have lost all interest in the church and Bible. All the money of all the States, with all the glory and high-sounding titles of these worldly institutions, cannot atone for the immoral influence upon young hearts by this "dancing" and revelry upon the waters in a majestic (?) boat excursion at night. Nor is there glory enough in all the State schools of all the States to lead us to place a son or daughter under such environments. Neither shall I hold out any kind of inducement to have other parents to do what I would not.

Just now our papers are filled with reports of a disgraceful scene in another one of our leading State schools. Too shameful to record! A daughter dead, a father and mother brokenhearted and in disgrace—all because of the utter lack of any kind of discipline or government of students.

Many are growing sick and tired of our schools' holding out "affiliation" as an inducement to lead the youth of our country into these hotbeds of worldliness, infidelity, and immorality. I care not what kind of a class school we may have—the higher the class, the less the excuse.

But some one will say I am writing from a selfish viewpoint. While our college is modestly proud of the recognition of its grades and of its record in the care and oversight of its students, yet, were I not connected with a school, I would turn my pen loose upon present conditions until the "welkin" rang.

The greatest things on earth for good government for the eternal good of our boys and girls are proper surroundings and right examples. "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." (Solomon.)

Naaman, a Leper; Man, a Sinner.

BY JOHN T. HINDS.

Paul says: "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that through patience and through comfort of the scriptures we might have hope." (Rom. 15: 4.) We are sure, then, that the story of Naaman's cure of leprosy was not written simply to give an item of ancient history, but rather to give some practical lessons in the matter of obedience. It is for the purpose of pointing out these lessons that reference is here made to the story.

When Jesus said, "They that are whole have no need of a physician, but they that are sick," and, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners," he was comparing his own work with that of a physician. In this case sin is compared with disease, the gospel is considered the remedy, and obedience to the gospel as the way to be cured. Of all the comparisons used by the Master, perhaps none is more striking than this one. In all the list of diseases, no one better represents sin than leprosy. Hence the value of this story to the earnest student of the New Testament.

NATURE OF LEPROSY.

1. Leprosy was a disease that apparently was incurable by human skill. For this reason the most serious consequences followed the affliction. When God sent it as a punishment for disobedience, it was considered one of the strongest evidences of his disapproval. Sin, in like manner, cannot be cured by human means alone, but only through the divine means which have been provided for us. If there were a specific for leprosy, how gladly lepers would use it! How unfortunate it is that sinners will not use the specific for sin! Mankind is far more interested in cures for physical ills than in one for the fatal disease of sin.

2. The leprosy caused the afflicted one to be separated from the people. It does the same yet. God's law to Israel on the question was the following: "All the days wherein the plague is in him he shall be unclean; he is unclean: he shall dwell alone; without the camp shall his dwelling be." (Lev. 13: 46.) He was also required to rend his clothes, let his hair go loose, cover his upper lip, and cry: "Unclean, unclean!" In like manner sin separates man from God and from those who serve God. It was sin that separated man from God in the first place. Isaiah told the disobedient Israelites that it was their sins that had separated them from their God and hid his face so he would not hear them. (See Isa. 59: 1, 2.) It is true that the sinner often occupies the highest places of honor from a worldly point of view; he is not separated from the people in business and society; he does not have to wear a special garb and proclaim publicly his moral leprosy, but God knows his sin, and he is separated from God and his people in fact. Sin can often be hid when leprosy cannot; but it exists just the same, and God knows who the sinners are. Because men stand well in business and society is no evidence that they stand well before God.

3. Christ has power to heal both leprosy and sin. He did both while he was here. His remedy for sin is the gospel—a specific for the object in view, offered freely to whosoever will receive it. No sinner need be lost when God's power is at hand. If he is, he alone is to blame.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE CASE.

A number of complimentary things are said of Naaman, quite as much as could be said of the ordinary man, but the unfortunate thing was that he was a leper. It is not the good things that may be said about one which gives the trouble, but the bad. Naaman's honors were no burden, but his leprosy was. Many nice things may be said of people; but what does that amount to so long as they are sinners? It is not the good things that will close heaven's gates against them, but the sins they commit. Moreover, sin will do it in spite of the good they do.

Help often comes from unexpected sources, and it is often nearer us than we think. We should not be above learning from the humble, nor consider ourselves too weak to do something for the lost. Remember the Jewish maiden and what she did for Naaman. Relief from God comes through his servants. We should point people to those who preached with authority; sinners should gladly obey their words.

It should be remembered that Naaman was not an Israelite. Hence the Jewish law on leprosy was not applicable to him as long as he remained a Gentile. For this reason the prophet gave him special instruction. However, when a servant of God gave a man special instruction, it was necessary to obey if the blessing was to be received. The principle of blessing for obedience has never varied in God's dealings with men.

THE HEALING AND HOW ACCOMPLISHED.

1. It is well to note, in the first place, that Naaman had his own idea of how the healing was to be done. He said: "Behold, I thought, He will surely come out to me, and stand, and call on the name of Jehovah his God, and wave his hand over the place, and recover the leper." (2 Kings

5: 11.) Of course, this was Naaman's idea; but human wisdom is generally a poor judge of divine methods. Isaiah said that God's ways and thoughts are as much above our ways and thoughts as heaven is higher than earth. Paul tells us that "every thought" should be brought "into captivity to the obedience of Christ." (2 Cor. 10: 5.) It is often a fact that second thought is better than first. This case is a striking example of that fact. If he had persisted in his thought, he would certainly have lost the blessing. This he came near doing because he went away in a rage. But for the sensible advice of his servant, his trip would have been in vain.

2. Being angry and refusing the truth does not change the case. Naaman finally did what the prophet said. Only in that way was his healing possible. For sinners to get angry and refuse to obey the gospel because its conditions are not what they expected them to be is to display the same folly that Naaman did. Their refusal will not change the conditions. They must obey, not men, but God. When men have their minds made up as to how they should be saved, they usually get mad when told what God says. Often they go away in a rage and refuse to hear the preacher again. If they would only see that their rage only harms them and does not change the gospel, they, too, like Naaman, would return and obey.

3. Let us compare his idea with the prophet's command. What was Naaman's idea? He expected the prophet to come to him, wave his hand over the leprosy, pray to his God, and the leprosy would disappear. The prophet's plain, simple command was for him to "go and wash in Jordan seven times." (2 Kings 5: 10.) How simple, how easy to understand and obey! But entirely different from Naaman's plan.

Naaman's idea was exactly the same that people generally have regarding the way the sinner is saved. The idea is for them to be called to the anxious seat, for prayers to be offered to God, and the sin to be forgiven directly in answer to the prayers. But when some one tells them Jesus said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," they are usually angry and leave him in a rage. Naaman's thought was the modern religious idea of salvation directly in answer to prayer; the prophet's command was exactly the idea in what Jesus told sinners to do to be saved. The prophet and Jesus were right; Naaman was wrong, and so is the religious world on this point. Strange that people will not see this. When they turn from their ways to God's ways, they will; not before.

4. His obedience. He was told to "wash" himself in Jordan "seven times." In obedience he "dipped himself seven times." The Book also says, "according to the saying of the man of God." (Verse 14.) We know he did right, for he was healed. This puts the stamp of God's approval upon his acts. Paul says that in drawing near to God we should have "our bodies washed with pure water." (Heb. 10: 22.) Then, if the circumstance of Naaman's healing is of any value, to wash the body means to have the body dipped in pure water. Of course, no other act will harmonize with a burial and resurrection in baptism.

5. There was nothing in the element water to cure leprosy; for, if that had been true, Naaman would have gone straight to the river and asked the prophet nothing about it. So, if the virtue was in the element water to take away sin, like it removes dirt, sinners could apply it and get the result without regard to what Jesus said. But all know that is not the case. God healed Naaman after he obeyed in full; he will pardon sinners when they fully obey Jesus. No use to expect pardon any sooner.

6. According to the value of the coins then used, it is supposed that Naaman had with him above fifty thousand dollars. This he no doubt expected to pay for the cure of the leprosy. But Elisha refused to accept pay. The lesson here is this: Naaman was willing to give fifty thousand dollars for his healing, provided he was healed according to his own plan, but did not want to receive it God's way for nothing. In like manner, there are many who are willing to pay any price for salvation, if they get it on their own terms, that are not willing to be saved God's way free of charge.

We need to learn that money cannot buy pardon. No man has enough to buy remission on other terms than those laid down in the gospel.

May we all profit by the facts in Naaman's experience. They were written for that purpose.

Mary, the Mother of Our Lord.

BY CLARA COX EPPERSON.

In the tragic scenes in the passage of our Savior through this world of ours, thrown upon the moving-picture screen of life, we find Mary, the mother of our Lord, an evanescent, shadowy figure, appearing only a few times; and yet she will go down in all history as the greatest woman of the ages, simply because she was the mother of the Savior of the world.

When God to the world a Baby gave,
That he might the sinner's way to heaven pave,
He thus set the highest seal that he could
Upon the noble brow of motherhood.

Then blessed is she who this seal hath won
By the gift to the world of an own dear Son;
Other crowns of jewels and gold she may wear,
But none will seem to her God so fair.

And when at last she reaches heaven's gate,
And hears the final edict of her fate,
This seal of God's favor upon her brow
Will the best joys of heaven her soul endow.

So, after all, the greatest crown of life is laid on the brow of motherhood, and it seems to me the Lord's hand was in the obscuring of Mary, the mother, from the view, that the light from the life of Christ the Savior might remain undimmed by another's glory.

I sometimes think the very brilliant mother rarely has a brilliant son or daughter. Perhaps they may have the power of brilliancy undeveloped within them, but the mother's success and fame throws them ever in the background, so their talents are often undiscovered. How beautiful, then, the thought that the dimness of Mary's life makes that of Christ, her Son, stand out in brilliancy supreme and divine! And we Protestants do not even believe in making her as prominent a figure in salvation as the Catholics, feeling that God's plan of obscurity for her was wise and best.

We know that as a little boy she must have trained and taught him in all good ways, especially in the law and the prophets; for when she took him to the temple of the wise men, at the age of twelve, he confounded them with his wisdom. This is an example to all mothers that the children should be taught the law of salvation early in life, that the storms of unbelief and doubtings of the so-called "higher thinkers," beating on the souls in after life, may not overpower them. The devil found that Christ knew the Scriptures better than he, and was overcome and put to flight by this knowledge. Yet how few children of this rushing, heedless, commercial age are so well grounded in faith in their early years that they could even hold their own with the devil, much less put him to flight with scriptural quotations!

When we seek the greatness of the world to-day, the laurel wreathes of fame, and forget the beauty and the splendor of the royal crown of motherhood, we are losing the better part, and our children are losing the only true foundation that can make them stand in all temptations and trials.

Mary was content to be just the mother of Christ, simply that and nothing more. The aggrandizement of self because God chose her for this high office never seems to have occurred to her. In simple humility she remained in the background of the wonderful picture. Even at the wedding feast in Cana of Galilee, she did not push herself into the crowd, seeking her Son, who was performing the wonderful miracle of turning the water into wine, but remained without, only sending him word that she was there. How many of us would have been content so? I fear we modern, aggressive mothers would have pushed ourselves into the midst of the wedding guests, and with self-pride would have said, "Behold my son!" claiming the miracle in part on account of the motherhood.

Mary the mother's light shines beneath a halo of beauty at the birth of our Savior and beneath the thorny crown of sorrow at his death, and those two pictures are enough for the world. We would not have them marred by any other. They stand sublime—these two:

To-day in fancy we can see
A vision of that wondrous three
In far-off Bethlehem—
A mother holding by the hand
A tiny, sleeping baby, and An angel watching o'er them.

Alas! another scene we see,
The saddest in all history—
A Savior crucified;
While the disciple whom he loved,
And Mary with devotion proved,
Wept by his side.

As Mary was alone in her motherhood in the manger, so was she alone in her sorrow at the cross. But God meant it so, that she might stand out in the light of the ages, a lonely figure, known only for the fact of divine motherhood. And it is Mary's wonderful humility that makes her the most remarkable feminine figure in the pageant of the ages.

Nothing for herself she asked,
Nothing for herself did claim,
To be the mother of our Lord
Was her only aim.

And, after all, could anything the world might give, any jeweled crown the world might bestow or empires bow down to, any crown of laurel that the learned men of the East might have placed upon her brow, compare with the simple, royal crown of motherhood, placed on her humble head by the hand of God himself? And is there any crown to equal that of motherhood to-day? Is it not at the cradle and at the tomb that womanhood stands most sublime, regardless of all talents, all glory, all fame? Take the loving, tender mother away from these two scenes of life and the world would be indeed bereft, especially faithful motherhood in the hours of trial, at the cross and at the tomb even to the gallows, bowed in shame and humility; she is the one faithful, tender, loving figure, supreme in her loyalty, unshakable in her love, unflinching in her tenderness throughout the ages; for all time and eternity, unfaltering in all tests, stands the beautiful figure of motherhood.

Of all the sacred names of earth, there is to me no other more sacred, sweeter, dearer, than that dear name of mother.

'Tis linked with joyous memories of childhood and of youth,
And through life's perilous voyage proves an anchor strong in truth,

To soothe us and console us in our childish hurts and woes,
And sustain us when maturer years bring sorrow's bitter blows;
To guide through life's deep channel with a sympathy divine,
If we sail in joyous sunshine, or 'neath clouds our hearts repine.

She rules as queen of hearts always, in every stage of life,
And to her royal sway must bow the sweetheart, sister, wife,
So place upon her brow of age that crown beyond all others,
That's wrought with loving words and deeds to royally crown our mothers.

Let us remember Mary, the mother of our Lord, with love, appreciation, and admiration; but let us magnify all motherhood, now and always.

Trip to Dallas, Texas.

BY S. F. MORROW.

Mrs. Morrow and I were called to Dallas, Texas, on October 25, on account of the illness of our daughter, Mrs. North. I am glad to say that after a short time she began to improve rapidly, and then my mind was placed on duties at home.

I first realized that I was forced to omit the meeting with the directors of the Tennessee Orphans' Home. I state this that other directors may know the cause of my absence. I cannot understand how any one could neglect so great a duty when they consider the good that is being accomplished in training and caring for the precious little children which are left homeless and penniless. I hope and pray that the churches in every State and in different parts of the State will awaken to duty's call and place such homes where they are needed. Brethren, what does it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his own soul? One of the saddest things that confronts the church to-day is the way we all give. We say and do not. How any Christian can promise to give a certain amount to support the orphans, to build houses for worship, and to have the gospel preached at home and in foreign fields, and then fail to pay the pledge, is a profound mystery to me, when we consider it in the light of God's eternal truth. Brethren, I have great fears that but few, if any, are making the sacrifice for the advancement of the cause of our blessed Lord and Master that we should. I was glad to read in the Gospel Advocate that practically a sufficient amount had been promised to pay all the debts against the Tennessee Orphans' Home. Certainly no one will fail to come up promptly and meet his or her obligations. The Spirit, through James, says: "Pure religion and undefiled before our God and Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

I am glad to say that my stay in Dallas was made very pleasant under the circumstances. The first Lord's day I went to Pearl and Bryan Street Church, and found that the Lord's-day school was good. I had the pleasure of being in Brother Morris Gano's class, and I am certain that he is one of the best teachers I have ever known. He teaches in a way to prove to the class that he has spent time in preparing his lesson. Brother Gano is a descendant of General Gano, who baptized Gen. George Washington, the Father of Our Country. Brother White preached an excellent sermon to a large audience, and there was one reclaimed. The church and Lord's-day school are in a very prosperous condition.

I went to Garrett Avenue to hear Brother C. C. Klingman, and he preaches in all earnestness. I met several of the Bible-School boys, and was glad to find them in the faith. Upon Brother Klingman's request, I preached for them the following Lord's day.

The next place I went to was the church in Oak Cliff. Their preacher, Brother Jim Dunn, was away in a meeting, but I found a live congregation. They had a nice, new house to worship in, which was quite an improvement; for about six years ago I met with them, and they were meeting over a grocery store. I was informed that there were two or three other small congregations in Dallas and arrangements to commence the work at other new places. This shows what a great work has been accomplished in Dallas. We should all thank the Lord and pray that unity and love may continue and that great good be accomplished for the Master.

Silver Point Christian College.

BY W. L. KARNES.

I am writing this article wholly unsolicited either by the publishers of the Gospel Advocate or the manager of the school. Brother Hayden Young and I spent one day at the Silver Point Christian College recently. I wish it were so all who would be glad to see the negro race Christianized and educated could make a visit to Silver Point, Tenn., and see the work that Brother G. P. Bowser has done and is doing for the negro race in the College at that place.

The first thing that impressed me was the great sacrifice that Brother Bowser and those associated with him are making to run the school. All of them are poor. In fact, they are in a poor neighborhood from an agricultural viewpoint. But notwithstanding the poverty of those people, if you will visit them, you will be impressed with the fact that they are willing to put their "all" into this school that was established for the uplift of the negro race.

Bowser and his associates are not beggars. They do not ask the white people to support them in their idleness. All they ask is to be placed in position to help themselves. After a long, hard struggle, the school is coming to the front. The old, wooden, rickety building that was used for a number of years for a chapel and recitation room has been torn away and replaced by a nice, substantial, commodious brick building. Some of the white brethren of Nashville, I understand, furnished the material for this building, and Brother Black, of the Jackson Street congregation, in Nashville, did the work of putting it up. Brother Black himself is a poor man, but he gave, as I understand, both his time and labor in the erection of this new chapel. The chapel is about complete, but they have but little furniture for it. They have about one-half as many desks as they need. They need badly a desk or table for the rostrum and a chair or two. They also need lamps and a stove. If they had those things, their school building would be in pretty good shape.

The school is hoping to have a dormitory for the girls ere long. The same Nashville brethren that furnished brick for the chapel are hoping to be able to let them have some more brick soon to go into the dormitory mentioned above. They have a small frame house of perhaps four rooms that their girls now occupy. It is a very poor building, however. I trust they may soon have a better house in which to house their girls.

The school owns a little printing office. They have a small printing outfit. They publish a small paper called "The Christian Echo." The college also owns a small residence in which Brother Bowser lives. In connection with this house, they own eight acres of poor land.

I am told that the moral atmosphere of this little settlement is fine. A white brother who lives at Silver Point tells me that the negroes are honest, chaste, virtuous, and free from drunkenness. Those things speak well for any community. I believe a little help right at this time judiciously used would do a great good and would go a long way toward the uplift of a race of people who need our help. If any brother or sister wishes to give anything to this institution, I am sure it will be gladly and thankfully received.

Christ Our Example—Follow Him.

BY F. C. SOWELL.

If we hope to reach the heavenly home and be forever with the Lord, we must follow in the steps of Him "who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously."

No impossibilities are required of the faithful servant who walks the narrow way that leads to the goal. Jesus said: "I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father, but by me." For this reason we should heed his sayings, reverence his word, and humbly submit to his requirements.

Christ is our standard of perfection; therefore to him we look, and hope to meet the promises when our lives are perfected. We find no correction to be made in his utterances and no criticisms to be offered in his deeds. His sayings are not to be modified, nor his deeds to be improved upon. This is such a complete standard of righteousness that there will always be space for growth for them who diligently seek the Lord.

The apostle Paul earnestly and faithfully sought to know the way of the Lord; and he said: "Follow me, as I follow Christ." The apostle had so well learned the spirit of his Savior that he said to the Corinthians: "Now I Paul myself entreat you by the meekness and gentleness of Christ." This is the spirit that teachers now should manifest in giving lessons to the children in the Lord.

Our blessed Savior shows himself a perfect example of humility, with his disciples, when he uses himself as a servant in washing his disciples' feet. He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister. He came meekly and humbly to do his Father's will; and when the work was completed, he said: "I glorified thee on the earth, having accomplished the work which thou hast given me to do. And now, Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was."

The highway established by the Lord was beautified by its simplicity, yet it was freed of all dangers of degradation and ruin. Then, to walk after Jesus is to enjoy freedom from sins and to rejoice in the hope of the spirit land where the redeemed of all ages will be united in the kinship of the heavenly family. The soul that is polluted and stained with sin cannot reach the home—the house of our Father's love—without first purifying his heart by faith. "And he put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith." Faith in the Lord Jesus gives us an inspiring view "on the hills of God's glory." The best men of all ages were faithful servants of Jehovah.

Enoch walked with God, Abel was a righteous man, Noah did the very thing commanded of Jehovah, and David was a man after God's own heart.

The beloved John writes to the sons and daughters of the spiritual family after this manner: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the vainglory of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." The Father has willed that we hear his Son and follow him through time, and by trusting in his promises we will ultimately see him as he is.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

By S. H. Hall

Some Important Questions.

Just before leaving Atlanta for a visit to the Central church of Christ, Fort Worth, Texas, I received a letter from Brother Smith, in Georgia, in which he wants to know our position on the following questions: (1) The principle by which the Atlanta congregations are governed; (2) whether we baptize all immersed people who come to us from other religious bodies; (3) our position on instrumental music in the worship; (4) what we believe and practice about women's speaking in the church; (5) whether we believe in having a Sunday school, and if women can teach in it; (6) our position on "close communion;" (7) if we believe in "foreign missions." If his letter were not locked in my trunk, which I have not taken from the depot on my short stop here, I would publish it in full. But a copy of the reply is now before me, and I am giving it to our readers with the prayer that it may do others good.

Stuart, Okla., December 1, 1916.—Dear Brother Smith: Your favor of November 30 came just as I was getting ready for this trip West, hence the delay in answering. I spent five weeks at Fort Worth, Texas, and am now on my return trip to Atlanta, stopping here to visit Mrs. Hall's people and to preach a few nights. If it is the Lord's will, I will get back to Atlanta on Tuesday, the 5th inst. In answer to your questions I have the following to say:

1. If you will turn to John 8: 28, you will find the following words from our Lord and Savior: "I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things." This is the principle by which we try to be governed. We strive to speak where the Father speaks, and stay silent where he is silent. Christ did this; so do we.

2. We believe that the church of Christ includes every child of God on earth. Christ daily adds to his church all who allow themselves to become "such as should be saved." (See Acts 2: 47.) He keeps a correct record of the membership of his church in heaven. (See Heb. 12: 23.) It is not possible for any one, at any time or place, to become "such as should be saved" and not become a member of the church of Christ; for all such Christ daily adds to his church. I would be afraid to say that there are none among other religious bodies who have become "such as should be saved." I believe to the contrary. I am perfectly confident that there are souls among other religious bodies who have obeyed Christ as sincerely as I have or could. Hence, I believe that there are members of the church of Christ in other religious bodies. Too, I believe it is my duty to call them out of human organizations to the stand that the apostles and early Christians took. (See Rev. 18: 4.) Certainly we do not baptize these people again. But do not understand me to say that I believe that all among other religious bodies have been scripturally baptized. Any one who went to baptism because he or she, as the case may be, saw God and Christ in the command, and so loved God that he could not be satisfied without being baptized, got scriptural baptism. I would be glad to have you see this point. It is taught by some that unless we understand the benefits of baptism at the time we are baptized, that baptism is not valid. This is a mistake. People can obey God from the heart just because they love him, and not for the hope of reward. Thousands among the denominations have been baptized because they loved God, and not merely to get into a human organization. God accepts such. As to the condition of heart in which they were baptized, no one knows except the party that has been baptized. (See 1 Cor. 2: 11.) Hence, we must leave this with them to decide. Paul says: "The foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his." The true church of Christ has enough of the Spirit of the Father to know them, too, it matters not where we find them.

3. As to whether we oppose instrumental music in the worship or not, I will say that we believe in having in our worship just what Christ put there. The only way we know how to let it be, indeed and in truth, the church of Christ, is to let it stay just as he has fixed it. To take the liberty to put in church worship something that Christ has not put in it would cause the church to cease to be the church of Christ, in the true sense, and become one of our own make, just as the Lord's Supper ceased to be the Lord's when the church at Corinth added a meal that they had a perfect right to have in their homes. (See 1 Cor. 11: 20-34.) Do you see? Let Christ's will, not ours, be done in our worship. Of course you know whether the New Testament teaches us to have instruments or not without my saying so.

4. As to women's speaking in the church, I will say that we believe in their speaking where the Bible permits them to do so, and remaining silent where the Bible demands silence. She cannot speak as a dictator or ruler in the church. All the elders were men; just so with the apostles and evangelists. But women have a right to teach, and are so commanded. (See Titus 2: 3-5.) Paul had women helpers. (See Phil. 4: 3.) The church at Cenchrea had a woman as deaconess, and the church at Rome was instructed to assist her as such when she visited Rome. (See Rom. 16: 1, 2.) 1 Cor. 14: 34, 35 has been terribly abused in that it is made to teach that women cannot teach at all. It is easy to "wrest" the Scriptures to our own destruction. (See 2 Pet. 3: 16.) Now that you may understand more clearly what I mean, I will submit a few questions. 1 Cor. 14: 35 says: "It is shameful for a woman to speak in the church." There is a kind of speaking, therefore, that women must not participate in, in the assembly. But has she the right to sing? Certainly so. But singing is both "speaking" and "teaching." (See Eph. 5: 19; Col. 3: 13.) From this you see the "speaking" and "teaching" is a certain kind, and not to be taken in the universal sense. Too, you would think strange of me were I to say that it is wrong for a woman to learn when we assemble together; that she must stop her ears and learn nothing. But she would have this to do if the construction that some put on it is true. It says: "If they would learn anything, let them ask their own husbands at home." Does this mean that it is wrong for them to learn? Certainly it teaches that there is a certain kind of learning that they must not get in the assembly. But what kind? It is the kind that women obtain from asking questions, prying into the business affairs of the church that have been placed in the hands of the elders, the older brethren of the congregation. Here she usurps authority over man, and this God forbids. (See also 1 Tim. 2: 11-15.) Women can be under-teachers—that is, teach under the superintendency and direction of the elders.

5. As to our position on what you call the "Sunday school," I will say that we believe in teaching the Bible seven days in the week; hence we believe in Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday schools, as well as Sunday schools, or teaching the Bible on Sunday. We do not believe in an organization separate and apart from the church and denominated by some as "the Sunday school." But the elders of every local congregation should strive to develop all members into teachers just as soon as they can. When they fail in this, God's will is not done. (See Heb. 5: 12.) The women should be developed into teachers as well as the men. (See again Tit. 2: 3-5.) If it is right for the elders to do this—and certainly it is—it is also right for them to help the members to make opportunities to teach others. A most excellent way to do this is to get people to come together on Sunday, or any other day they can get them together, and teach the Bible to them. It is right to grade those who come together and appoint a teacher over each grade. Women can be used here; and when so teaching their respective classes, they are violating no scripture, but rather obeying the command to teach. Here she usurps no authority over man, but rather is under man's direction, helping him, as they did Paul, to teach the will of God to every creature. Isa. 28: 9, 10 answers the question as to who we may teach and the how. Certainly women should be used in this great work. If not, why not?

6. As to the communion, I cannot say that we believe in either close communion or open communion, in the common acceptance of the term. The only close communion we believe in, however, is in getting as close as we can to the great heart of our Lord and Savior when we eat in memory of his death. The Lord's Supper is for the Lord's people. He is the only one that has the right to say who shall eat and who shall not. If I were to say this, it would cease to be the Lord's table and become my own. I have this right over the table in my home, for it is mine. Not so with the Lord's table. I should do no more than Paul did—viz., teach that a man should examine himself, and so let him eat and drink. (See 1 Cor. 11: 28, 29.) If he eats and drinks unworthily, he drinks damnation to himself, not to the congregation in which he is seated.

7. As to "foreign and home missionaries," it might be well to say that we believe in neither home nor foreign missions. The Bible says nothing about either. By this I mean the Bible does not divide our field into home and foreign mission fields, hence we do not. The commission under which we labor says: "Go, teach all the nations;" "Go, preach the gospel to every creature." The field is the world. We cannot afford to divide it into home and foreign fields; but should do our best to see that every creature under the heavens hears the gospel, so far as we are able to take it to them. Do you see? We know nothing about a State board. The early churches had no such. Every local congregation is a missionary society in the Bible sense of the term. The elders should see that it sounds out "the" gospel. (See Phil. 4: 15, 16; 1 Thess. 1: 8.) God help us to make every local congregation a city whose light cannot be hid.

God bless you, my dear brother. I hope I have made myself clear. If I have failed, write again. Hoping to see you face to face some day, I am,

Your humble servant,

S. H. HALL.

Another Worker Ready for Japan.

Miss Lillie Cypert, now engaged in teaching in Arkansas, writes, in a letter dated September 11, as follows: "I think I have my mind thoroughly made up concerning my work, and would be glad for you to make mention of it in the paper at any time."

In our previous correspondence our sister states that she is in perfect health, a very important item for one thinking of coming as a missionary to Japan. The next question is: "What church will make her its missionary and, either of itself or in coöperation with other churches, send this new worker to the field? As she was once a student at Henderson and her name has just been given to me by Brother Hardeman, it strikes me that here is an opportunity for the Henderson church to take the lead, asking other West Tennessee churches to coöperate till a support is secured. Fifty dollars a month should be the sum aimed at. I hope soon to hear favorable news from West Tennessee in regard to this matter. West Tennessee has a goodly number of churches, and all are able to do something toward the support of a missionary. They could easily support Sister Cypert at fifty dollars a month. If the preachers of West Tennessee will make mention of this new missionary's support once a month and ask the churches where they are then preaching to make a collection, the work will be accomplished.

Karuizawa and the Cholera.

Karuizawa has as a center an old Japanese village. Scattered around this village for a radius of about one mile, nestled away here and there among the trees, are the summer cottages of the missionaries and others who go there for the hottest part of the season. The village in the center, true to the prevailing custom in Japan, consists of two rows of houses on either side of a long street. Back of each row of houses is a stream of water running the entire length of the village. These two little streams, artificially conducted from the river, constitute the water supply of the villagers. The water is used in common by the entire row of houses for all kinds of purposes—drinking, cooking, bathing, washing, and so forth.

About September 3 a man came up on the train from Takasaki and stopped in one of the homes near the head of the long street. In the night he took sick and continued to grow worse. But the family, knowing that it was cholera, did their utmost to keep it concealed, knowing that if it became known to the police the house would be quarantined, disinfected, and the family put under regulations. This would be very inconvenient. But, do their best, it could not be kept concealed. The clothes of the sick man were washed in the little stream back of the house. The water was polluted. The man in the next house below washed himself in the stream. The water was used for household purposes. He took sick almost immediately. In six days eighteen persons had taken the disease and ten of them had died.

So with moral disease. When the stream of human conduct becomes polluted, it is sure to pass on to others. My conduct does not pertain to me alone. I have a duty toward others. My life, if polluted, will curse my neighbors, however much I may try to keep it concealed. Society, to say the least, should be as anxious to eliminate moral filth and disease as that which pertains to the body.

Judge Not.

I bought an American ax and paid a high price for it. I tried to be careful with it, always bringing it in and putting it in a certain place. One day when I wanted it the ax could not be found. I asked the servants, and they knew nothing of it. There were delivery boys and others coming in every day to bring fuel and food supplies. Of course, since it could not be found, it must have been stolen. There was no other explanation to be given. That was the way the ax went, and no doubt about it.

Two or three years afterwards, when there was a general cleaning up of the premises, I noticed in a pile of rubbish about half of an old ax handle; and as it was American make, the chances were great in favor of its being a part of the handle of the long-missing ax that doubtless had been stolen. The proof, though circumstantial, was so strong that I released the perpetrator in my own mind and decided that, after all, most likely the lost treasure was buried somewhere about the premises.

About six months ago a pair of pocket scissors disappeared from my desk. They, too, were American make; and as I couldn't find them high or low, it was plain enough that they had been taken. How could it be otherwise? For the scissors couldn't have possibly walked off of their own accord, and I always kept them on the desk. Didn't I have a boy steal a hand-safe from my room once, and aren't these people always ready to pick up little things, and especially things of foreign make? Well, they were stolen, and that was all there was to it. To-day (September 23) I was shelling out a box of peanuts that had been sitting a way for quite a while, and when I had gone down a little way I fished out a pair of small scissors that looked identically like the ones I had thought were stolen. And as the thief would hardly have brought them back and put them in a box of peanuts I myself had put away, I decided that they must be the same scissors that in some mysterious way got from my table to the storeroom and into the box of peanuts.

In many cases we are apt to judge others unjustly and carry unkind thoughts in our hearts when there is no ground for it.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

$1.50 a year if paid in advance, $1.75 after six months, $2 after twelve months. To Canada and foreign countries, $2 in advance, $2.25 after six months, $2.50 after twelve months.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express, post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you.

This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received, but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

New Testament Order in Distinction from Ecclesiasticism.

BY M. C. K.

In the article last week on "The Growth of Ecclesiasticism" it was the aim to set forth the germinal principle from which ecclesiasticism grows, and without which it can never even come into existence. In the light of facts then pointed out, that principle appears in all general organization and centralization in religion. For this very reason we look with unceasing fear and suspicion upon all general religious meetings of any kind and for any purpose, or, as they are sometimes termed, mass meetings of representatives from the churches, provided such meetings are to be self-perpetuating bodies. It is one of the inevitable things that, in the course of time, all such bodies will assume and exercise authority and power in religion to the great injury and detriment of God's cause, and they invariably degenerate into what the world knows to-day as a religious denomination. This undue assumption of authority will always follow, sooner or later, when men are placed in a position and under circumstances which make it possible for them to assert and maintain it.

Turning now to the ecclesiastic order which we find in the New Testament, we not only discover that a local church is the highest form of religious organization, and hence the highest expression of religious authority, revealed in that volume, but we also find that it is organized on a basis which, under any and all circumstances, reduces to a minimum the possibility of evil resulting from the undue assumption and exercise of authority and power. And herein we find a most significant and instructive expression of divine wisdom. Man is a poor, weak, frail, and fallible being. At his very best, it is difficult for him to keep from an undue assumption of authority and power over his fellow-man whenever and wherever he has the opportunity and the means to achieve that end, and this is preëminently true when, as is so often the case, he is possessed of an unholy ambition for such authority and power. And hence, in view of this manifest weakness and frailty, God has limited the sphere of religious authority to the bounds of a local church, and has specifically named the kind of rulers and the kind of rule to be had within these bounds. In his most excellent and instructive epistle to the church at Philippi, Paul used the following significant introductory words: "Paul and Timothy, servants of Christ Jesus, to all the saints in Christ Jesus that are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons." (Phil. 1: 1.) Again, in his noted farewell address to this same official class of men in the church at Ephesus, he said: "Take heed unto yourselves, and to all the flock, in which the Holy Spirit hath made you bishops, to feed the church of the Lord which he purchased with his own blood." (Acts 20: 28.)

Now, when we think of the intricate and ponderous machinery in the way of religious organization and the extended scale on which religious authority is vested and exercised in the various ecclesiasticisms of the denominational world, these passages present a most vivid and significant contrast. They plainly show, and they show beyond all successful contradiction, that in the ecclesiastical order of the New Testament one church was placed under the supervision and guidance of a plurality of bishops, whereas in an ecclesiasticism one bishop is placed over a plurality of churches. Thus, one of these ecclesiastic systems is diametrically the opposite of the other. One of them has a plurality of bishops over one church; the other has a plurality of churches under one bishop. The former we read in the New Testament; the latter is outside; and hence the one is from God and the other is from man.

The lesson which we are trying to impress in these articles is the twofold fact that great apostasies in religion not only start from small beginnings, but they require long periods for their complete development. The proper course to pursue is to head them off at their first and smallest beginnings by refusing to adopt the principle from which they spring. Among the safe and sound maxims of the ancient Romans was the one which says, "Principiis obsta"—resist the first beginnings. If the church in all ages had observed this principle, there would be no Pope of Rome to-day, and no ecclesiasticism in all the earth. In an article like this there is not space for lengthy historical quotations, but we here state the fact that the Pope of Rome is simply an overgrown presbyter first appointed merely to preside over the deliberations of his copresbyters in a local church, but to whom later on, because of his assumed superiority and dignity over the others, was exclusively applied the term "episcopos," or "bishop;" whereas in the New Testament, as we have seen from the passages quoted, all the presbyters in a local church were regarded equally as "episcopos," or "bishops," and were so designated. When this unauthorized distinction between presbyters and bishops was made, the way was opened for a more general religious organization of the churches to be placed under the supervision of such an official; and when the principle of general organization was adopted, then the way was opened for the ultimate establishment of every ecclesiasticism in the world to-day. In the successive steps taken in the gradual development of ecclesiasticism, we see the process as it unfolds from presbyter to bishop, from bishop to archbishop or metropolitan, from metropolitan to patriarch, and from patriarch to pope. One ecclesiaticism takes one form, and another takes another form, but all of them are departures from the primitive order authorized and established by Christ and the apostles. "The unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," that blessed and heavenly condition so solemnly enjoined by Inspiration upon the churches, will never be restored and maintained until the primitive ecclesiastic order is restored.

Faith and Opinion.

BY E. G. S.

Faith is belief in what the Bible says. Opinion is a mere notion or supposition that it means something it does not specifically say. Thousands of people to-day have a very earnest opinion that at a certain time they got religion—that is, that their sins were pardoned at a certain time. But the trouble is, this is only an opinion. The expression, "get religion," is not one time found in the Bible. We have this expression: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." (James 1: 27.) This passage simply tells what religion does, but not how to get it; and there is not one passage in the whole Bible that says a word about getting religion. Hence there is not a word in the Bible to recognize any such thing. The religion of the Bible is something to be done, not something to be got. The Bible tells many good things to be done, and makes many great and precious promises to those who do them. If getting religion had been a good thing for man, the Bible would have told him how to get it; and the fact that it does not tell is evidence that it is not a good thing for man to try to do. If he does get something that he calls "religion," God will not accept it, because he did not ordain it.

God ordained all that he wanted people to do to be saved, and promised salvation to all that will do the things required. He required sinners to believe the gospel, and promised: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." But the New Testament does not anywhere say that faith and baptism are all that is required of sinners in order to be saved. God also commands "all men everywhere to repent." (Acts 17: 30.) But he nowhere says that repentance is all that is required of sinners in order to be saved. He also says in one place: "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us." (1 Pet. 3: 27.) But that does not mean that baptism alone will save people. These passages all taken together show that neither faith, repentance, nor baptism alone will save sinners, but that all these things have a part in the salvation of sinners. And yet, in spite of all these passages, there are many that will say that sinners are saved by faith only. We find in a copy of the Methodist "Discipline" this language: "Wherefore that we are justified by faith only is a most wholesome doctrine, and very full of comfort." (Page 15.) This is a very strange statement to be made in the face of the fact that in the New Testament both repentance and baptism are just as much connected with salvation as faith is. We need, therefore, to understand that faith, repentance, and baptism are all connected alike with salvation, because they are all connected with the matter of conversion by divine authority and all placed in the inspired volume called the "New Testament," and no uninspired man has any right to put faith as covering all the ground of conversion when inspired men connected repentance and baptism with it also. To make any change in the word of God by addition or subtraction or otherwise is to lay violent hands upon that word, thus really claiming that they know more about how the word of God ought to be than the inspired men who gave us the Bible, notwithstanding the fact that there is no inspiration now outside of the Bible. Such a course would be to place human wisdom against divine wisdom as it has been given to us in the Bible. It is a sad fact that in all ages since the Bible was given uninspired men have been inclined to discount that word, some in one way and some in another. To put the word "only" with faith discounts both repentance and baptism, thus really trampling the word of God under unhallowed feet. It is a fact that all the conditions of salvation were but seldom placed together in the same passage. But they are all there, and all put there by divine wisdom, and that fact ought to forever prevent man's wisdom from interfering in any way with God's divine wisdom and authority. So the word "only" has no right to be placed either with faith, repentance, or baptism. Placed with either, it knocks out the other two, and thus disarranges God's divinely arranged plan of salvation.

When the time came for God to drop out the law of Moses and to establish Christianity, a long series of wonderful miracles were performed, and of such character as to show to all future generations that the gospel plan of salvation was truly of divine origin. Therefore, from the introduction of John the Baptist till the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ there never was before, and never has been since, such a series of miracles among men and through men as were manifested during those few years. The healing of the sick, the opening of blind eyes, raising the dead, and such like had never been seen on this earth before that period, and never has been seen since that time, thus affording to all generations to the end of time evidence that the gospel plan of salvation was not a matter of human origin. It is also a matter of fact that, in all the conversions of the New Testament age, not one of those conversions was said to have been effected by the Holy Spirit entering into the hearts of men without the preaching of the gospel. If any had been converted that way, there certainly would have been some record made of that fact. But there is not one such record on hand; and the very fact that there is no such case recorded is evidence positive that there were no such conversions to record. But there were thousands of conversions made by means of preaching the gospel by inspired men, who were inspired for that work, who preached it as the Spirit gave them utterance. If a single conversion was made by the Spirit of God entering into the heart of a single individual, no man ever knew it or ever can know it. Why, then, should not all be satisfied with the conversions that were put to record as having obeyed the gospel as preached by inspired men? The beauty of it all is that these records are so plain that thousands and millions have been made Christians, and are still being made Christians, in the same way. If all who claim to be preachers of the gospel to-day would preach it as the inspired men of the New Testament did, all the people could soon learn the whole truth, that they might heed it and obey it and be saved by it, just as the many thousands learned and obeyed the truth and were saved by it in the apostolic days.

Some Questions and Answers.

BY E. A. E.

Brother Elam: In our lesson for November 19 we had this question: "Are God's children divided to-day into warring sects?" I answered: "They are not." One brother said he begged to differ with me. He thought they were badly divided, and began naming the Baptists, Methodists, and others, and made the argument that our children might not be living as we wanted them to live, and might wander off, but they were still our children. Can one be a child of God and a child of the devil at the same time? I would like to hear more from you on the subject.

Mrs. E. DEARMOND.

The comment was on Acts 28: 22. That all may understand it, let us see it in full:

These rulers had heard of "this sect . . . everywhere spoken against," and desired to hear Paul. If before this they had refused to hear the gospel through prejudice, Paul's course had overcome this, and they were now willing at least to hear. On account of evil reports and prejudice, some will not now even hear when one seeks to present only the truth. Everywhere the Jews had spoken against Christians, and now the pagans had begun to do so, preparing the way for the great persecution which soon came under Nero. As to belonging to a "sect," Paul had said before this: "But this I confess unto thee, that after the Way which they call a sect, so serve I the God of our fathers." This "Way" to-day is not divided up into clashing, jarring, and warring sects as opposite to one another sometimes as the poles and as different as day and night. Jesus says: "I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14: 6.) Christ prays that all his disciples may be one. (John 17.)

Upon these scriptures cited the question was asked: "Are God's children divided to-day into warring sects?"

To this question there can be but one answer—that is, according to the Scriptures.

Suppose for this question we substitute Paul's: "Is Christ divided?" The answer to this question is, "No." The "Way" is one, and is not divided, and never will be divided. People cannot be divided into warring, jarring, and clashing parties and sects so long as they travel this "Way." "Shall two walk together, except they have agreed?" (Amos 3: 3.) There is one body, one Spirit, one hope, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, and one God and Father. (Eph. 4: 4.) Everywhere division of the church is mentioned in the New Testament it is condemned, and the only way to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace is most clearly pointed out. Examples: All are besought "through the name of our Lord Jesus Christ" to "speak the same thing," to have no "schisms" or "divisions," and to "be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1: 10.) In order to "speak the same thing," all must speak "as it were oracles of God" (1 Pet. 4: 11); "preach the word" (2 Tim. 4: 2); determine to know nothing "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified" (1 Cor. 2: 1, 2); "hold the pattern of sound words" (2 Tim. 1: 13); and avoid all fables and untaught and speculative questions. A congregation must not be divided—the elders should not allow it to be divided—over mere scruples and opinions of men (see the lesson in the current Quarterly on Rom. 14 and 15: 1-3—November 12). Such liberties as eating meat must be waived in order to preserve harmony and peace, when the exercise of them causes the weak to stumble. The law of love must prevail.

Then, the factionist is condemned, and after the first and second admonition must be refused. (Tit. 3: 10.)

Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them that are causing the divisions and occasions of stumbling, contrary to the doctrine which ye learned: and turn away from them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Christ, but their own belly; and by their smooth and fair speech they beguile the hearts of the innocent." (Rom. 16: 17, 18.)

Who can read these and other scriptures and Jesus' prayer in John 17 and think that God's children are divided up into jarring, clashing, contending, and warring sects?

There is no sin to-day more widespread than that of strife, contention, bitterness, pride of opinion, and division over the theories, scruples, crotchets, peculiar views, speculations, and wisdom of men. There is no heavier condemnation than that pronounced against such sins.

It seems that comparatively little attention in many places, and no attention at all in some places, is paid to these three things—namely: (1) The sin of strife and bitterness, contention and division over things not in the teaching of Christ; (2) the only way "to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace;" and (3) the disposition to be made of the ones who produce such strife and cause such division.

No, one cannot be a child of God and a child of the devil at the same time. No figure or parable must be carried too far, or any farther than God intends that it should be. Since a man of his choice and upon his own responsibility can cease to be a child of the devil and become a child of God, can he not, according to his own choice and upon his own responsibility, cease to be a child of God and become a child of the devil? Or, if once a child of God, a man is always a child of God, does it not follow that, if a man is once a child of the devil, he is always a child of the devil? To whomsoever a man yields himself a servant to obey, his servant he is whom he obeys. If he obeys God, he is God's servant; if he obeys Satan, he is Satan's servant (Rom. 6: 17-22.) Just so with becoming or ceasing to be a child of God.

Hinsdale, Ill., November 19, 1916.—To the editor of the Gospel Advocate.—Dear Sir: I read in your issue of November 16, 1916, the following words on page 1138: "The Jewish Christians learned slowly that the law had been fulfilled in Christ and had been taken out of the way."

1. Now, as there are two laws distinctly taught in the Bible, the law of Ten Commandments spoken by God on the mount and written by him, and the law of Moses as written by him, which one of these laws do you mean was taken out of the way?

2. Does the word "fulfill," when applied to the Ten Commandments, as in James 2: 8, ever mean to abolish?

W. H. WILD.

1. Answering this question, I refer the querist to 2 Cor. 3; Gal. 3: 15-29; Gal. 4: 21-31; Heb. 10: 28 and Deut. 17: 2-13; Heb. 12: 18-29. God's law was Moses' law, and Moses' law was God's law. I mean that law was taken out of the way which is mentioned in the following and other passages: 2 Cor. 3; Eph. 2: 14-22; Col. 2: 14, 15; Gal. 4: 24-31; Heb. 8: 1 to 9: 28; Heb. 10: 9, 10.

2. The first meaning of "fulfill" is: "To fill up; to make full or complete." The second meaning is: "To accomplish or carry into effect, as an intention, promise, prophecy; a desire, prayer, or requirement, and the like; to complete by performing; to answer the requisition of; to bring to pass; to effectuate." According to the first meaning, Jesus fulfilled the law and the prophets; according to the second, "the royal law" is fulfilled by loving one's neighbor as oneself.

Detroit, Again.

BY T. B. LARMORE.

Henry Ford, of this city, the marvelous automobile manufacturer, is not a Christian; but it seems safe to say he is the most wonderful man in Michigan, as well as a marvelously, if not peerlessly, good man of the world—a friend of the poor, and deservedly very popular.

All of his friends and neighbors with whom I have conversed on the subject—people who know him and are interested in him, his habits, and his wonderful works—say he goes with his wife to an Easter service once a year, and that is the limit of his churchgoing. This is neither proof nor argument against Christianity, however. It simply shows that a man may practice the principles of Christianity without being a Christian. Moreover, Mr. Ford's millions are proof positive that the practice of Christian principles in business is not incompatible with financial success.

I mention these things because, before I came here, I heard so many men say, "Henry Ford is one of the elders of the Plum Street church of Christ, Detroit, Mich.," that I ceased to hesitate to repeat that truthless declaration—which I repeated with pleasure, if not with pride.

This reminds me of my ever-faithful and never-to-be-forgotten friend and brother, F. D. Srygley. When Benton McMillin was a popular and powerful member of Congress, which he was about twenty years—as long as he was willing to be—the editor of one of our periodicals proclaimed, evidently with pride: "The Honorable Benton McMillin, Speaker of the House, pro tem., is a member of the Christian Church." Brother Srygley quoted that little news item, with proper credit, on the first page of the Gospel Advocate, and added the following pithy paragraph: "Yes! and the Honorable Peter Ramsey, colored, who is working for fifty cents a day, pro tem., is a member of the Christian Church, too. The papers and preachers who are moving heaven and earth 'to reach the masses' should make a note of this."

Some of us who claim to be Christians seem to find it much more convenient even now to speak of "The Right Honorable David Lloyd-George's" being an uncompromising member of the church of Christ, as well as the greatest man in the British Empire, than to claim or acknowledge that Bridget O'Flanigan, one of Sister George's housemaids, is our sister in Christ, notwithstanding Sister Bridget may be much nearer and dearer to Divinity than Brother George or Sister George, either.

We—Mrs. Larimore and I—have been through Mr. Ford's wonderful wilderness of factories, and expect to go through it again. I say "wonderful," because it is wonderful—full of wonders. I have neither time nor space nor power to tell the story of the man and his works.

His establishment is a school. His employees are students in the school—constitute the school. The school provides five compulsory courses—one in industry and efficiency, one in thrift and economy, one in domestic relations, one in community relations, and one in industrial relations. Mr. Ford seems to be as sincerely interested in the welfare, progress, and happiness of his pupils—his employees—as any teacher I know. He seems to desire that every one of them shall enjoy all the comforts and conveniences of life he himself enjoys.

The Ford idea of education, as stated in the Ford literature, is: (1) "To improve a man's tastes and, at the same time, increase his earning power and his income;" (2) "to teach a man to use his income in a constructive manner;" (3) "to put a man into right relations with his family;" (4) "to put a man into right relations with his community;" (5) "to put a man right with his work and his employer;" (6) "to fit the foreigner to become a citizen and encourage him to do so;" (7) "to give to the man who is down and out a chance to come back."

The Ford English school, an important branch of the main school, provides courses in speaking, reading, and writing English, and in arithmetic, for the special benefit of foreigners. There is in the school a professor of table manners, also a professor of such other etiquette as is required in the ordinary stations of life. It is a school in which all find something to learn. A college man in the Ford school often finds he has a great many things to learn under the tutorship of men who have never attended college.

There are about forty thousand on the Ford pay roll now, and not less than seventy thousand on the waiting list—forty thousand employed and seventy thousand names of applicants for employment enrolled. Those employed are first put upon the six-months'-probation list, and paid the probation price during their probation. Throughout that period they are trained and tested and properly paid. The probation period is a reformation period. The probationer is taught and encouraged to abandon all bad habits, if, unfortunately, he has any, and cultivate good habits. The great teacher, himself, "they say," practices what he preaches, thus encouraging all the probationers on his list to learn to live as they ought to live.

No one who passes through the probation period creditably, so as to secure permanent employment in the great school, is subsequently paid less than five dollars a day; and all who thus pass and are employed receive, as long as they are in the service of the company, part of the profits of the business. Mr. Ford's great aim, as expressed in the advertising literature circulated by the Ford Company, is, not to make money, but to make men, the money-making being simply an incidental matter—he making money to pay the expenses of making men.

Notwithstanding Mr. Ford is not a Christian and does not attend church regularly, the Ford factories are closed and all work therein is suspended the first twenty-four hours of each week—the only time during the week they are closed, there being three sets, or "shifts," of workers employed and the work continuing day and night.

As it is, at least, possible for what I have written to cause some young brethren or others to contemplate coming to Detroit to seek matriculation in the Ford school, or factory, I deem it my duty to append the following postscript:

If you are opposed to sumptuary law, are too proud to permit a friend to prescribe a course of conduct for you, and really believe you cannot live and be happy without whisky, tobacco, beer, Coca-Cola, or any other kind of intoxicant or dope, or without being a spendthrift or living a fast life, whatsoever may be your pedigree or position in society, you are not the kind of material of which Mr. Ford hopes and tries to make men; hence I suggest that you seek your fortune elsewhere. Paternalism prevails and presides at the Ford plant.

Believing material of which men may be made is abundant, the great philanthropist is preparing to double, if not quadruple, his force and the capacity of his factories, without lowering the grade of the material to be matriculated in his school or repealing even the least of the sumptuary laws on his statute book.

Two of the stockholders in his company—the Dodge brothers, manufacturers of the Dodge automobiles—have brought suit against him, to defeat the proposed extension of the Ford factories, their ground for opposing it being, as stated by their lawyer in open court: "Mr. Ford conceived this policy of expansion for illegitimate and improper purposes, and not for the purpose of making money. His purpose is to give his employees more pay and to give the public a cheaper car. He himself has admitted he expects to so expand his business as to employ as many persons as possible and to pay them better wages. . . . He has also admitted that to make money is only incidental." A strange charge to bring against a man in this money-mad, money-loving, money-grabbing age!

Not "the seven churches of Asia," but six churches of Christ in this city are working with us in our meeting here; and, as so many young men are coming here from all over the country, many of them members of the church of Christ, I deem it my duty to mention these churches, their ministers, and the address of each of the six ministers, as follows: Cameron Avenue Church, G. A. Klingman, 124 Philadelphia Avenue, West; Fairview Church, E. G. Rockliff, 543 Lemay Street; German Church, G. A. Erisch, 557 Meldrum Avenue; Plum Street Church, W. D. Campbell, 240 Tuxedo Avenue; Vinewood Church, J. W. Shepherd, 786 Baker Street; Warren Avenue Church, Claude F. Witty, 644 Warren Avenue, West.

The cooperation of the other five churches with our work at Warren Avenue is hearty and systematic. Sunday morning and Sunday evening each congregation has services in its own house. Monday evening the Plum Street brethren are specially invited and expected to attend our services; Tuesday evening we expect the Vinewood brethren to make a special effort to be with us; Wednesday evening the Fairview congregation is expected to be especially well represented; Thursday evening we expect our German brethren, one and all, to come; and Friday evening is designated as Cameron-Avenue evening. Sometimes the German brethren sing, with a power and pathos that thrill the audience, a song in their own language.

Of course all the members of all the congregations are cordially invited to attend every service; but each congregation is expected to make special effort to attend the service on its special evening. This arrangement tends to make all the congregations one.

As J. W. Shepherd and G. A. Klingman are so well and so favorably known in the South, it will be interesting and gratifying to their many friends there, as well as elsewhere, to know that each of them is the beloved minister of a good, strong church here, is doing a great work, and has safe and satisfactory assurance that he and his shall be properly cared for. They are both young yet; but it is delightful for even us young people to see, by faith well founded, a bright, beautiful sunset awaiting us just this side of "the city of God, with its golden light."

New Subscribers.

This is the season in which we should secure many new subscribers to the Gospel Advocate. Many disciples are not taking any religious paper at all. We know that such disciples usually argue that they have the Bible to read; but observation and experience have taught us that people who read a good religious paper read the Bible far more than those who do not. A religious journal of the character of the Gospel Advocate stimulates to Bible reading and to research after religious information. No home should be without a good religious journal in it, and this is especially true of the Christian home. Parents should not undertake to train their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord without giving them an opportunity to read first-class religious literature. As the soul is of more value than the body, Christians will not allow the high cost of living to keep them from reading a good religious journal. While flour and shoes are costing our readers more than heretofore, the same articles are also costing preachers and editors of religious papers more than formerly. Those who minister to us in spiritual matters should not be neglected simply because the cost of living is very high.

No one will question the correctness of the positions already stated, yet the Gospel Advocate has not increased its price to new subscribers and the advance will not take effect until January of 1917. Every old reader has the opportunity now of sending us a new subscriber for one year at $1.50. Many are availing themselves of this opportunity and we are receiving quite a number of new subscriptions. The number, however, is much smaller than it should be. We are anxious to record at least five thousand new subscribers between now and January 1. This is no hard undertaking, but can easily be done, if our readers will only cooperate with us. Only a few days remain in which this work can be done. Many old subscribers are renewing for one or two years in order to secure the advantage of the low rate. Many others are expecting to do so in a very few days.

While our readers are taking care of themselves, would it not be wise to consider the interest of your friends and neighbors? You will never have a better time than now to send us a new subscriber. Just think about how liberal the publishers have been in continuing the $1.50 rate to you and to new subscribers! Farmers and producers are getting more for everything they sell. Irish potatoes bring fifty cents a peck; eggs, forty-five cents a dozen; butter, forty-five and fifty cents a pound; flour is selling at a very high price, and so with every article that is being sold and used. Still, in the face of all this, the Gospel Advocate is offered to you and to your friends at $1.50 a year. If you fail to avail yourselves of this opportunity and if you fail to read the Gospel Advocate, it will be simply a case of your own neglect. Please do not understand that we are intimating that our readers are selfish enough to discontinue the Gospel Advocate for the sake of fifty cents a year when they are paying more for everything else. To pursue such a course as this would indicate at least more interest in worldly affairs than in spiritual matters. We will not accuse our readers of putting the interest of the body above the interest of the soul. We are not expecting that for the sake of fifty cents you will decline to send us all the new subscribers you can.

We want you to send us new subscribers because we believe it will do your neighbors and friends good to read the Gospel Advocate. People will be benefited by reading the paper. We have in store many good things for our readers for the year 1917. It is our purpose to make many improvements, to furnish the very best reading, and to do all within our power to elevate the present high standard of the Gospel Advocate. We are appealing to our friends to help us now, because we believe that by extending the circulation of the paper they will be instrumental in advancing the kingdom of Christ in their communities. The Gospel Advocate has a helpful, ennobling, and refining influence wherever read.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

Dropping Christ Out of Christmas.

It is a very timely protest that is made to us about the substitution of the "X" for Christ in our use of the word "Christmas." Of course it must not be forgotten that the formula began with the use of the + and the letters "mas" after it. But in these modern days the cross has become the "X." Gradually our Christmas cards and banners have adopted the words "Merry Xmas" until it is rapidly becoming the exception to find the word "Christmas" used. It will not do to lose the name of "Christ" out of the name of his birthday. If we are to have Santa Claus canonized in the Sunday school at Christmas as he is, almost to the exclusion of Christ, and the motto is to proclaim Christmas with an "X," there is danger that the name of Christ will be entirely dropped out of our Christmas celebrations. As a matter of fact, this happened in one church last Christmas, where all the songs and exercises proclaimed Santa Claus, and a banner stretched across the pulpit wished the people "A Merry Xmas." Christ was not at any time praised in the entire service, and this in a church! Let us spell out the word "Christmas," and insist upon buying only those cards and using only those decorations that do so. The "X" may well be left for its indication of the unknown quantity in mathematics. It does not belong in the word "Christmas."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Our readers should know that Christmas is not the birthday of Christ. Critics now generally concede that this is not the day of his nativity; but, as the day is kept in honor of Christ's birth, the point made by the Ladies' Home Journal is well taken. We should not only spell out "Christmas," but we should have Christ in our lives for three hundred and sixty-five days in the year. The life that has not Christ in it is one of hollow mockery and is full of vanity and vexation. Christ should not be left out of our service. All that we do on Christmas Day should be done in his name and to his honor and to his glory. It is very fitting at Christmas time to remember the poor, to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and cheer the despondent. Our lives would indeed be filled with sunshine and useful to others, if we would only do good as the years come and go. There are always so many opportunities at our door to help the poor and to guide the erring in the way of life everlasting that not one of us can plead that we have not a field in which to develop and strengthen our characters. Every one has sufficient opportunity to grow strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. In all our good works, however, we should lose sight of ourselves, glory only in the cross of Christ, and do them with a sincere desire to advance the kingdom of God in the earth.

Too Much Sunday Paper.

The plump singer in one of W. S. Gilbert's operas who comes out and carols mournfully, "There is far too much of me," might well impersonate the hundred-odd-page edition of the popular daily newspaper, which is now being denounced upon both moral and economic grounds. The Catholic Citizen (Milwaukee) actually sees a real advantage in the present paper shortage in that it may bring about a curtailment of the Sunday papers, which, it says, "have pushed aside with alarming success nearly all serious reading for the Sunday." The Federal Trade Commission suggests in a letter to newspaper publishers that they can save print paper by cutting down the size of Sunday editions. Publishers consulted by the commission are said to "feel that the elimination of certain features would meet with public approval and would not decrease the revenues of the publishers." According to this statement:

"The paper saved by cutting down the size of one large Sunday edition several pages would be sufficient to keep a number of smaller papers supplied for a considerable time. Unless present supplies of paper can be increased, which does not now seem probable, such unselfish action on the part of large city papers appears to be the only means that will save many of the smaller publishers from going out of business."

Not only would the small publisher thus profit, but the newspaper reader would really be better off, in the Catholic Pittsburgh Observer's opinion. It quotes from The Catholic Citizen a jingle which sets down "with but slight exaggeration" what the Sunday newspaper reader gets for his five cents:

Sixty-nine pages of rubbish,
Twenty-two pages of rot,
Forty-six pages of scandal vile
Served to us piping hot.

Seventeen hundred pictures—
Death, disease, and despair—
Lies and fakes and fakes and lies
Stuck in 'most everywhere.

Thirty-four comic pages
Printed in reds, greens, and blues;
Thousands of items we don't care to read,
But only two columns of news.

The foregoing from the Literary Digest of November 4, 1916, is worthy of serious consideration. The editor of this page remembers a Christian preacher in Louisville, Ky., who would not allow the Sunday paper to visit his home. He read the daily paper every week day; but when the Lord's day came he did not have any use for it, and thought it best to fill his mind with other matters. His example is a good one and should be followed by others. Certainly we ought to give one day in the week to the study of the Bible and to things pertaining to the salvation of our souls. Yet many professed Christians rise late on Sunday morning, breakfast at nine o'clock, spend an hour or so reading the Sunday paper, and then cannot find time to attend worship on the first day of the week. How much better would it be not to read the Sunday paper at all! If they would only put in that time studying the Bible, and would go to church and worship God as the Holy Spirit directs, they would be greatly benefited and made much stronger spiritually. On the other hand, they gain nothing by reading the Sunday paper, in which are found accounts of cruel murders and of vicious acts that should never soil the pages of any paper. The country would be far better off, religiously and spiritually, without the Sunday paper. People need some time for reflection and serious meditation. The careful perusal of the word of God, coupled with earnest prayer, would be helpful to us all alike. As it is, people read of murder, corruption, and wickedness as portrayed in our daily papers, and are thereby demoralized and unfitted to a certain extent to meet the solemn duties and responsibilities of life.

The Adamson eight-hour law was held to be unconstitutional by Judge William C. Hook, in the United States District Court at Kansas City, Mo., November 22. The court made it plain that the decision was not based on a careful consideration of the law, but because it was desired that a final decision by the United States Supreme Court be secured, if possible, before January 1. The counsel for important railway systems of the country and Attorney-General Gregory have been in conference and have reached an agreement to actively press the case to a final decision. It is agreed by the government that during the pendency of the suit there will be no prosecutions of railroads for failure to apply the law, and the railroads agree that during the hearings no further suits will be brought, and if the law is declared constitutional all suits will be dropped. Neither party is bound by the agreement to refrain from efforts to secure additional legislation.—Christian Advocate.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

W. Halladay Trice, of Memphis, Tenn., made us a pleasant visit last Saturday. He reports the work prospering in Memphis.

J. D. Northcut, of Tracy City, Tenn., writes: "I closed a good meeting at West Riverside Church, at McMinnville, with three baptized. I am at home now for a while."

An elder in a church of Christ in Northern Alabama wishes to correspond with a good physician who is a zealous Christian and desires a permanent location. If interested, write A. B. Lipscomb, care Gospel Advocate.

From J. W. Dunn, Santa Ana, Cal., December 6: "I began a series of meetings here on December 4. Good crowds and good interest. The meeting at Tulare was very pleasant and successful. I shall resume my work in El Paso, Texas, when I close here."

Married, at the Hermitage Hotel, Nashville, Tenn., on December 6, at 10:30 A.M., Mr. Clarence Camp and Miss Bennice Daniel. This couple is from Kentucky, near Trenton. Miss Bennice is the daughter of Brother and Sister Rice Daniel, members, with their daughter, of the Pleasant Grove congregation. E. A. Elam performed the ceremony. The Gospel Advocate extends congratulations.

The daily papers have announced the approaching marriage of Miss Valla Louise Elam to Mr. Don A. McCampbell, which will take place at the home of the bride, near Lebanon, Tenn., on February 5. The bride-elect is the accomplished daughter of E. A. Elam. The wedding will occur on the anniversary of his marriage to Sister Elam, which will make the occasion both memorable and happy.

From T. H. Etheridge, Childress, Texas, December 7: "I am preaching half time at Childress, on the fourth Lord's days at Kirkland, and the rest of the time where I think I can do most good and as opportunity affords. Besides, I teach a Bible class on Tuesday nights at Quanah; Thursday nights, at Kirkland; and Wednesday and Friday nights, here. This keeps me busy, though I shall probably go on Monday nights near here for another."

Thad S. Hutson, a very useful preacher, of Covington, Ind., has published a book of verse bearing the title, "Poetic Considerations." It contains many poems of merit that will prove helpful to old and young alike. There is nothing that will be hurtful. These poems cover a variety of subjects. Brother Hutson is a gospel preacher of twenty-seven years' experience. The book is neatly bound in cloth, with title stamped in gold, and contains portrait of the author. It is printed in plain type on heavy gloss paper. The book will make a very suitable holiday present. Price, one dollar per copy, or six copies for five dollars. Send all orders to Mrs. Thad S. Hutson, Covington, Ind.

Relative to the work at Tullahoma, Tenn., S. F. Morrow writes: "According to promise, we make another appeal for the church at Tullahoma. As all will remember, some years ago the loyal brethren were locked out of their own house of worship. It is sad to think that any set of brethren would do such a thing. Let us all continually pray for them that they may return to their God. We are acquainted with the fact that the loyal brethren have gone through many hardships. The last note on their house, amounting to one thousand dollars, will fall due on December 22—next week. They say they are going to do all they can to meet it, but cannot do it all by themselves. Will not every church and individual send them a liberal contribution so as to reach them by the day said note falls due? Remembering that God loves a cheerful giver, we make this appeal, trusting that all who can will act at once. Send all contributions to J. H. Moore, Tullahoma, Tenn."

H. Leo Boles, president of the Nashville Bible School, sends us the following announcement: "A school owes a greater obligation to pupils and parents than many people realize. It should give pupils a good literary training and also moral and spiritual development. Many schools stop with the literary training. This is a mistake and should be corrected. Parents are responsible for the kind of school that they place their children in. A school has a wonderful influence on the moral, spiritual, and intellectual life of its pupils. The Nashville Bible School proposes to meet the obligations and discharge the duties that it owes both to parents and pupil. We invite the attention of all to the merits of this school. Attention is called to the second semester, which begins on January 2. This would be a good time to enter school; in fact, many pupils will enter at this time. Many new classes will be organized at this time, which will give an advantage that will be helpful. The school now has a large enrollment of enthusiastic and interested boys and girls, which will be helpful to any one who casts his lot with them. If you are interested, please write the school for a catalogue. Address H. Leo Boles, president."

"God Save Armenia."

In a recent issue of the Christian Herald there appears a graphic story of the slaughter and suffering now being visited upon Armenia and Syria on account of the great war. The editor says:

It is shown by consular reports that these remote districts have been scenes of slaughter and suffering on a scale that is appalling. Before the war the Armenian population of Turkey, Persia, and Syria was estimated at 2,000,000 souls. Of these, 750,000 have been massacred or died of wounds, disease, or exhaustion. Of the 1,200,000 survivors, a million are destitute and starving. These include not only Armenians, but Nestorians and other native Christians in Turkey, Persia, Syria, and Palestine—all Bible lands. These people represent the oldest existing form of Christianity, and it was in the effort to exterminate them for this reason, and because they would not accept an alien religion, that they have suffered so much. There is probably no country known in recorded history whose people have suffered so heavily for the Christian faith as Armenia.

The publication of this article has awakened in some quarters deeper sympathy for these suffering people. The readers of the Gospel Advocate have always been quick and responsive to such appeals. More than five hundred dollars was sent by our readers to the Belgians during 1915. The cry of Armenia is just as appealing. This country is now in the hour of its direst need. In a private letter Brother S. W. Peebles, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., makes the following suggestion:

I believe the Gospel Advocate enters many homes that would respond to an appeal in behalf of such unfortunate sufferers. May I ask you, then, to devote a special column of the Advocate to the interest of those who are dying of hunger while we are feasting in a land which is blessed with peace, happiness, and bountiful harvests? Let us now avail ourselves of the opportunity of lightening the burdens of others.

Brother Peebles backs up his suggestion with a ten-dollar check. More than likely there are churches and individual Christians who would like to have fellowship in this work. We often sing, "Rescue the perishing," but how willing are we to do it? "God save Armenia" is the cry that has been sent up to heaven and to prosperous America. Contributions for this purpose will be taken care of by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York City, or, if preferred, will be forwarded by A. B. Lipscomb, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

PURE BLOOD MAKES HEALTHY PEOPLE

Hood's Sarsaparilla removes scrofula sores, boils and other eruptions, because it drives out of the blood the humors that cause them. Eruptions cannot be successfully treated with external applications, because these cannot purify the blood.

Hood's Sarsaparilla makes rich, red blood, perfects the digestion, and builds up the whole system. Insist on having Hood's. Get it now.

What is the Club?

The Gospel Advocate Piano Club is both a theory and a fact. The theory is that a piano factory can afford to sell one hundred pianos and player-pianos at a much lower price than it would be willing to make on an order for only one instrument. The fact is that the club has saved each of its members forty per cent.

The theory of the club is "co-operation." The fact is "perfect satisfaction." The theory is: "A square deal to every member." The fact is: "Every member is delighted."

If you are interested in securing a piano or player-piano of the finest quality at the lowest possible factory price, write for your copy of the club's catalogue, discount sheet, and terms. Address Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

Lively Skirmish with the Enemy.

BY HUME M'HENRY.

If I were writing from somewhere in France, it would be natural to speak of "lively skirmishes with the enemies;" but in a far-away land like India, where we scarcely know the greatest war in history is in progress, it may look a bit suspicious to thus speak. But our enemy is not the German nor the Turk, but the triad of evil. They are here; and since our armor is made to protect only the front, we fear to turn our back and flee. But, thank God, he provides us with an armor for the front that turns all the fiery darts of the devil; and with the "sword of the Spirit" to push the offensive, we humbly ask the help and wisdom of our Leader, and wait the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. We have just finished one skirmish and are not conscious of any wounds, but feel that our sword, if not sharper, is in hands prepared for more effective service in the encounters that will ensue. In a way it seems the missionary in this field enjoys a privilege not enjoyed by the missionary at home. Here we have the "beast," the "false prophet," and the "devil." Yesterday I had a slight encounter with the "beast." He disputes the Lordship of Christ and contends for a system established upon the "foolishness of men." To-day the "devil" and the "false prophet" combined to put us to flight. The "false prophet" (Mohammed) denies the divinity of Christ, the "devil" disputes the need of a Savior. We are in for a protracted siege. His fortifications are strong and well guarded. Brother soldier in the Lord, your King needs your help in this siege. Do not try to excuse yourself. Help us not only to hold the ground captured, but to push the offensive in the enemy's territory. Strive with God in prayer for the success of the cause.

"Renwar" for Rheumatism Given "Official" Indorsement.

Out of the hundreds of letters which we have received from grateful people who wrote saying they have been cured of various forms of rheumatism by taking "Renwar," we have selected a list of strong testimonial letters from officials of railroads, banks, manufacturing concerns, wholesale houses, etc., and published these in a little booklet which we call "Official Indorsement." If you suffer from rheumatism, write us for a free copy of this booklet and read what "Renwar" has done for others. Guaranteed to give relief or money back. Sold by all druggists, fifty cents, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price. Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.

Never Neglect Colds; Treat Them Promptly

Often they lead to those pulmonary troubles which are responsible for more than one-tenth of all lives lost through illness.

Heavy colds which develop deep-seated coughs or cause inflammation of the air-passages and persist in spite of medication, weaken the system to a point where resistance easily is overcome—and asthma, bronchial and pulmonary troubles are the result. To renew normal resistance, Eckman's Alterative has been found highly beneficial in many instances. A BIBLE MAKES AN IDEAL GIFT

Despite the fact that the price of paper and printing material has been increased about three hundred per cent, we are able to offer some extraordinary bargains in Bibles and Testaments for the holiday season. There is no advance in prices over last year in the leaders that we offer on this page. We only ask that for each Bible purchased you add fifteen cents for postage.

No. 4712 $5.00 Ideal, Large-Type, Self-Pronouncing Teachers' Bible for . . . $2.50

This Bible is the acme of artistic beauty. It is printed in large, clear type, and formerly sold for $5. Its new copyrighted Helps were prepared by F. N. Peloubet, the distinguished author of Select Notes on the International Sunday School Lessons. These Helps include the following:

ORIENTAL LIGHT ON THE BIBLE

A new kind of Bible Help, illuminating, by means of the most accurate pictures and descriptions, many references to Bible manners and customs and truths; revelations from the Buried Cities of the East; accurate pictures from the Palestine of to-day, unchanged for thousands of years; illustrations from the Orient, gathered in the author's study, of everything that can illustrate the Bible. Thus the Bible becomes a new book pulsating with the everyday life in the Holy Land. With indexes of texts and objects.

TREASURY OF BIBLICAL INFORMATION

The latest compendium of essential things which every reader of the Bible needs to know, such as the Chronology of the Old Testament and the New Testament, Tables of Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Calendar, Table of Easter Days, giving the dates on which Easter occurs for twenty-eight years, etc., all arranged in the most usable and attractive forms.

A NEW SERIES OF MAPS

The latest, the clearest, the most beautiful colored maps of any Bible Helps; a selection of those most used, with some special Maps, embodying the results of the most recent explorations.

A NEW PRACTICAL COMPARATIVE CONCORDANCE

With nearly fifty thousand references to the Authorized and Revised Versions of the Bible.

FOUR THOUSAND QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible readers.

It is the most appropriate and acceptable present you could possibly make to a relative, friend, teacher, or scholar.

No. 4181 $3.00 Self-Pronouncing, Pictorial Bible for $1.50

This Bible is printed on fine white paper in clear, readable type, and contains, in addition to the Old and New Testaments, carefully selected Aids to the Study of the Bible; also a series of Questions and Answers and thirty-two Photo Views of Scenes in Bible Lands and Colored Maps; bound in French Morocco, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges. This Bible is a $3 value, but by buying in large quantities we are able to offer it for $1.50, plus fifteen cents postage. These are only two of our many Bible offers. Please remember that we have a fine assortment of all styles and prices. Catalogue sent upon request.

Name, in gold, will be engraved upon the cover of the Bible for twenty-five cents extra. Be sure and write name plainly.

Renew Your Health At Nature's Fountain

Without the Expense and Loss of Time Necessary for a Visit to the Spring

THE CRISIS

There comes a time in the life of practically every man and woman when their digestive or eliminative organs, or both, fail to respond to drugs prepared by human skill. In fact drugs seem to do them about as much harm as good for their systems—bel against all drugs. These are the cases which physicians call "stubborn" and "chronic" for the reason that they persist in spite of drug treatment. I do not refer to incurable diseases such as cancer and consumption, but to that larger class of functional disorders which we meet every day, where the organs of digestion and elimination are impaired.

For this class of cases our best physicians and our big city specialists send their wealthy patients to the mineral springs where, in the great majority of cases they are permanently restored or decidedly benefited. But what about the poor man who has not the money or the busy man or woman who cannot spare the time to spend several weeks or possibly months at a health resort? Shall circumstances deny them the restoration to health which Nature has provided? Read my answer in the coupon at the bottom of this page.

I have the utmost confidence in the Shivar Mineral Spring Water for to it I owe my Restoration to Health and probably my Life. It has made me tens of thousands of friends in all parts of America and even in foreign countries, whose faces I have never seen. Yet I count them my friends for the Shivar Spring Water has bound them to me by lasting gratitude.

I ask you to read their letters, a few samples of which I publish below for your benefit, and if you find among them any encouragement as to your own health do not hesitate to accept my offer which has no limits or conditions except those shown on the coupon. If you could read the letters that come to me daily, numbering about ten thousand a year, and the vast majority of them similar to those printed below, you would not wonder that I make this offer displaying my absolute confidence in the restorative powers of Shivar Mineral Water.

INDIGESTION

Savannah, Georgia.
I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well, and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

La Grange, Ga., Nov. 25, 1914.
I feel it my duty to suffering humanity to make public announcement of the benefits I have derived from Shivar Spring Water. I have been a sufferer for the past twenty-five years from indigestion and dyspepsia. After one week's trial of Shivar Water I commenced to improve, and after drinking it for four weeks I gained fifteen pounds. I feel better and stronger than I have in twenty-five years. I strongly recommend this Water to any one with stomach trouble of any character, and truly believe it will cure ulcer of the stomach. I am writing this voluntarily and trust it will fall in the hands of many who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with indigestion and nervous dyspepsia.

C. V. TRUITT,
President Unity Cotton Mills.

Baltimore, Md., April 30, 1914.
For many years I suffered with stomach trouble as a direct result of asthma. I consulted the very best specialist in this country, and spent quite a large sum of money in my endeavor to get relief. However, I had about come to the conclusion that my case was hopeless, but by accident I happened to get hold of one of your booklets, and decided to try Shivar Spring Water. After drinking the water for about three weeks I was entirely relieved, and since that time have suffered but little inconvenience from my trouble. I cheerfully recommend the use of your Water to any one that may be suffering from stomach trouble.

It is a great pleasure to tell you that your Water has been a great benefit. I may say a great blessing, to me. My wife says it has helped me more than anything else I ever tried. I have been, for thirty years, a sufferer from stomach trouble.

REV. E. H. ROWE,
Co-President Southern Seminary.

RHEUMATISM

Leeds, S. C.
I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent cure. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

C. A. CROSBY, M. D.,
Florence, S. C.

I suffered with indigestion and kidney trouble, and a year ago was stricken with acute articular rheumatism; was helpless for months, and since using your Spring Water I am walking without any crutch and improving daily. Indigestion much relieved. I wish I could write Shivar Spring Water in the sky so that the world could become acquainted with it.

MRS. THEO. KUKER.

BILIOUSNESS

Greenville, S. C., Feb. 26, 1914.
For over two years, following a nervous breakdown, I have suffered with a liver so torpid that ordinary remedies were absolutely powerless. Under such circumstances, I came to Shivar Spring, and began drinking the Water. Upon advice however, the first night I took a laxative; the second night a milder one. Since then I have taken none at all. The effect of the water has been remarkable—its action on my liver most marked, and my health and spirits greatly improved. I am satisfied that the laxative, followed by the Water, was the proper treatment in my case. My condition is now perfect.

S. A. DERIEUX.

RENAL AND CYSTIC

Columbia, S. C.
I suffered for eight years with kidney trouble and inflammation of the bladder to the extent that I would have to get up during the night some five or six times. After using this water only a few days, I am entirely relieved and suffer no more effect of the trouble whatever.

J. P. D.
High Point, N. C., Oct. 6, 1914.
My wife has had a bad kidney trouble for several years; She has been using the water only about three weeks and it has already made her a new woman. Her color is much improved, her appetite is all that she could wish for, her digestion seems to be perfect. We give Shivar Springs credit for it all.

T. G. S.

GALLSTONES

Greenville, S. C.
Shivar Spring Water cured my mother of gallstones, or, I might say, it snatched her from the hospital door, as the doctors had said nothing short of an operation would do her any good. After drinking the Water she was able to get out of bed, and is today stout and healthy. I hope these few lines will be of help to some one suffering as my mother did.

W. J. STRAWN,
Williamston, N. C. Oct. 3, 1914.
My doctor said I would have to be operated on for gallstones, but since I have been drinking your water I haven't had to have a doctor.

Among the Colored People

Some Good Meetings.

I began a meeting at Sugar Grove, Ky., on the third Lord's day in October, with a splendid attendance, and continued it till the fifth Lord's-day night, with two confessions and one baptism.

On the first and third Lord's-day nights in November I spoke for the church in Lebanon. Interest good.

The meeting at Silver Point was a good one, with two baptisms. I think the school there is doing a grand work. Much good preaching was done by Brethren T. B. Winston, M. Keeble, J. W. Smith, and G. P. Bowser. I spoke for them on the third Lord's-day morning, and there was a large attendance.

Brother Keeble and I are now in a meeting with our home church—the Jackson Street Church, in Nashville. There have been two baptisms to date and the interest is good.

All of the brethren and friends who have aided us have our many thanks. Brother and Sister Larimore and Brother B. F. Hart, in their last message to me, said: "You are engaged in a good work, and we are interested in it." May the Lord bless those who are giving us their aid. Now, as the holidays are coming, I hope some will be so kind as to remember us.

It is our deepest regret to learn of the continued illness of our good old brother, the senior editor of the Gospel Advocate, D. Lipscomb. The Lord knows best, but we hope he may be spared to be with us a while longer. But, sooner or later, we all must go over the river, as we are going so fast. The good Lord only knows who will be here for the next holidays.

Meeting at Millville, Ark.

I began a meeting at Millville, Ark., on November 11. This was the first time the colored people had ever heard a Christian preacher, and of course my preaching was somewhat strange to them. However, some did not miss a night. I preached eleven nights. The preaching was done in the Methodists' house of worship. The white Christians were responsible for my effort at Millville. They wrote for me to come, saying that they would support the meeting; and they did it, not only with their money, but with their presence. I believe I made some warm friends among the colored people. Some of them treated me very nicely. I certainly enjoyed my stay among them. I believe that there are ous.

I had catarrh in its worst form. I know the disgust and humiliation of constantly coughing, hawking, and spitting up vile discharges of mucus. My hearing was affected, my senses of taste and smell were impaired, my sight was poor.

I cured myself—not with medicine, salves, lotions, or sprays, but with a new and wonderful treatment. I have not a trace of catarrh now; my hearing is perfect; my senses of smell and taste are normal. I can read the finest print without glasses. I loaned my wonderful treatment to friends afflicted with catarrh, catarrhal deafness, head noises, asthma, and hay fever, and it cured them.

If you are a sufferer, I want you to borrow one of my treatments. The trial is free. Send for one to-day. Get relief—just send me your name and address—no money—and I will mail it to you on 5 days' free trial; and if you are perfectly satisfied, you are to send me the small sum I ask for it. I know you will say it is the most wonderful thing you ever tried, because it acts almost like magic, so quickly will it clear your head, nose, and throat—stop the coughing, hawking, and spitting—help overcome the terrible wheeze and spasm of asthma, prevent the distress of hay fever, stop running of the eyes, take inflammation out of the mucous membranes, relieve pressure in the inner ear, overcome head noises. You can hear better, see better, and will feel better. My treatment will help you avoid chronic bronchitis and other serious conditions caused by catarrh.

My treatment is one of the handiest, most effective and certain methods ever devised for catarrh in the head, nose, ears, and throat. Send me your name and address—no money. Learn by actual demonstration in your own case—get free proof. Convince yourself. Don't delay—send to-day.

I did not have any additions; in fact, I did not extend an invitation, as this was the first time they had ever heard the gospel of Christ preached by a member of their race. I will return to them again some time next year. All of my preaching this year has been done in destitute places, where the gospel had not been made known among the members of my race. Incontestable Proof of Time.

The fact that Gray's Ointment has been used in thousands of homes during the past ninety-six years is incontestable proof of its merit. All who have ever used Gray's Ointment will testify that it is a most effective remedy for allaying pain and healing sores, boils, carbuncles, skin abrasions, cuts, burns, bruises, etc. It is a positive protection against blood poison. N. B. Hoofman, Stewart, Miss., writes: "My father used it in his family fifty years ago. For the purpose you recommend it, it has no equal." Only 25 cents a box at drug stores. Time to Wake Up.

BY AN INTERESTED MEMBER.

An examination of the November Missionary Messenger, that good little paper sent by Brethren Vincent and McCaleb to those who contribute to the Japan work, reveals the fact that for the month nothing had been received for the Sendagaya church work and Brother McCaleb had paid out thirty dollars. He says: "Unless assistance comes in twenty days, Brother Ishii, in the slums of Shinjuku, and Brother Hosogai, who preaches at Sendagaya, and Sister Masai, the Sunday-school teacher, must suffer want."

This is, by no means as it ought to be, so far as we loyal brethren in the United States are concerned. A religious denomination said to be fewer in numbers than we are is reported to have sent out forty-two missionaries this fall. That is, perhaps, as many as we have sent in fifteen or twenty years; maybe it is more. It is not so much a matter of being able to do more than we as it is a matter of being willing. It is a reproach to us that we allow a good work to suffer for the lack of such small gifts as would be necessary to make every one of our workers well supplied with means.

The writer of these lines will endeavor to arrange for Brother Ishii's support (seven dollars in addition to what the Sendagaya church gives him) for a year. Will not others send Brother J. M. McCaleb, Tokyo, Japan, gifts immediately for the two other workers mentioned? Wait, now, a little bit, please. Are you going to do it? And if you are not, why not? Well, is that a reason that God will honor? If so, it must be a sufficient reason; but if he won't accept it, then what? Please, please, take up this matter at once. Get a church collection, or a contribution from friends, or at least your own gift, and send it off in a hurry. A check will do, if not convenient to get a New York draft.

Sister: Read My Free Offer!

I am a woman.
I know a woman's trials.
I know her need of sympathy and help.

If you, my sister, are unhappy because of ill-health, if you feel unfit for household duties, social pleasures, or daily employment, write and tell me just how you suffer, and ask for my free ten days' trial of a home treatment suited to your needs. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any man. I want to tell you how to cure yourself at home at a cost of about 12 cents a week.

If you suffer from women's peculiar ailments causing pain in the head, back, or bowels, feeling of weight and dragging down sensation, falling or displacement of pelvic organs, causing kidney and bladder weakness or constipation and piles, painful or irregular periods, catarrhal conditions and discharges, extreme nervousness, depressed spirits, melancholy, desire to cry, fear of something evil about to happen, creeping feeling along the spine, palpitation, hot flashes, weariness, sallow complexion with dark circles under the eyes, pain in the left breast or a general feeling that life is not worth living,

I INVITE YOU TO SEND TODAY FOR MY FREE TEN DAYS' TREATMENT

and learn how these ailments can be easily and surely conquered at home without the dangers and expense of an operation. When you are cured, and able to enjoy life again, you can pass the good word along to some other sufferer. My home treatment is for young or old. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain how to overcome green sickness (chlorosis), irregularities, headaches, and lassitude in young women and restore them to plumpness and health. Tell me if you are worried about your daughter. Remember it costs you nothing to give my home treatment a ten days' trial, and does not interfere with daily work. If health is worth asking for, then accept my generous offer and write for the free treatment, including my illustrated booklet, "Women's Own Medical Adviser." I will send all in plain wrappers postpaid. To save time, you can cut out this offer, mark your feelings, and return to me. Send today, as you may not see this offer again. Address, Detroit Churches of Christ Hold Union Thanksgiving Services.

BY STEWART STEVENSON.

A most inspiring service was held at the Fairview church of Christ on Thursday morning, November 30, at half past eleven o'clock. All the city churches were represented on the platform, with the exception of Plum Street, as, owing to the serious illness of Brother Campbell's son, Graham, he was unable to be present. On the platform there were also Brother Larimore, who is at present holding meetings in Detroit; Brother Vincent, lately returned from Japan; and Brother Dasaro, who contemplates commencing evangelistic work among the Italians in Detroit at an early date.

The singing was led by Brother G. A. Klingman, of Cameron Avenue, both the congregational and chorus singing being most appropriate.

The meeting was opened by the singing of that well-known hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," sung to the tune of "Coronation," followed by the hymn, "To thee my heart, eternal King, would now its thankful tribute bring."

Brother Witty then led the meeting in a prayer of thanksgiving, remembering our wonderful prosperity as a nation and our freedom from war.

Brother Rockliff, who was in the chair, reminded us that thanksgiving should permeate the life of every Christian; a thankful heart is one of God's greatest gifts.

Following the singing of "Praise Ye the Lord Forever," by the chorus, the President's proclamation was read by Brother Warren Schaffer. Then we sang together "Thy Kingdom Shall Stand Till the End."

Brother Shepherd, who followed, said that we should be thankful for God's wonderful blessings. We should be thankful every day. We should observe this day for that reason, not because the President says so. Our brother cited incidents of the Civil War, when brethren living in Franklin, Tenn., could not conscientiously observe the President's proclamation. To-day we have no such objections and are glad to meet for such a purpose.

Brother Erisch, evangelist of the German church, spoke on the first three verses of the one hundred and third Psalm. "When I am in great danger and some one helps me, I show my thankfulness by remembering the action all my life. On the other hand, if I forget, how can I say I am thankful to him?" "We have many reasons for thankfulness when we compare America with blood-stained Europe." "We can say we are thankful in our hearts only when we can put our hands in our pockets and help those less fortunate." Here entered a missionary spirit into the meeting which dominated the succeeding addresses.

Then we rose and sang hymn No. 844, "O Sound the Jubilee." At its conclusion Brother Klingman reminded us of still another thing to be thankful for, since during the last month Michigan had gone dry by a majority of sixty-five thousand.

Brother Dasaro was the next speaker. He told us he was born in Italy, the home of the pope, who is the enemy of the church. He is now glad to be able to stand free in the gospel. Our brother made a powerful appeal to us to liberate those held in ignorance by the Roman Catholic Church. He closed by citing a case of a woman who, although she attended the apostate church every Sunday, did not even know what the Bible contained or what it was.

Brother Rockliff took occasion at this time to remind us of the wonderful audience, representing, as it did, America, Italy, Germany, and Japan.

Brother Vincent told us of the ten things for which the apostle Paul was thankful. But not once did the apostle refer to prosperity; he had got above such things. Brother Vincent said he was thankful for two things: First, that there is now an open door in the East, all countries, with the exception of Thibet, now admitting Christian missionaries; secondly, that people are willing to leave home and go to remote parts of the earth to carry the gospel. Before closing he told of two very touching incidents of which he had learned in his work in Japan.

Brother Larimore, our veteran preacher, was the last speaker. After quoting the first twenty-two verses of the third chapter of Colossians, he spoke from verse 15: "And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful." "After listening to so many speakers," he said, "one might think everything had been said as to why we should be thankful. But no one could cover the ground in such a short time, no more than he could count the sands of the seashore, the stars of the firmament, or the millions of atoms which comprise the earth." Brother Larimore referred to the awful carnage in Europe, which up to the present had removed over twenty-two million men. In order to emphasize the number, he reminded us that a million consisted of one thousand thousand. America is free from such devastation, and yet there are people in America who claim they are too poor to give thanks. If such people would take an inventory of their blessings, they must be thankful. Our brother brought his address to a close by referring to the many blessings he enjoyed in Christ Jesus.

Just before the closing hymn a collection was taken up to assist the German brethren in getting established in their new meetinghouse. The offering amounted to over one hundred dollars.

The meeting was closed in prayer by Brother G. A. Klingman. But after such a wonderful thanksgiving missionary meeting the sentiment of every heart must have been: “Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits.”

Notes from West Tennessee.

BY JOHN E. WILLIAMS.

The debate with Clark is now a thing of the past and the congregation at Jones' Chapel still survives and is very much alive. Notwithstanding the abuse and glaring misrepresentations that they had to endure, they bore these things patiently and becomingly, without a frown or a murmur. But as Brother Carney will give notice of the discussion, I will say no more.

I spent Thanksgiving with the congregation at Berea. We had a nice time and good dinner for all. Some from Gardner, Mount Pella, Harmony, and Rives attended. Here again we met with that venerable and godly man, Brother George W. Smith, the father of G. Dallas, Robert D., and John T. Smith—all great preachers, doing a good work for the Lord. Brother Smith spoke very feelingly of them and their work and of the part the writer did in getting them started out. I baptized Robert D. and John T. before they were scarcely grown. Brother Smith will be seventy-seven years old next month, but appears to be good for several years yet. I hope so.

The congregation was organized by the writer on Thanksgiving Day in 1908; so it is eight years old now. They seem to be getting along very well. They hold a mission meeting each year in an effort to build up another congregation. This is as it should be. If each congregation would select some place with a determination of building a congregation and never let up till it is done, soon there would be a congregation in each community of Lake and Obion Counties. With the high prices for farm products, if the congregations do not do something now, it is because they do not want to.

The congregation at Gladly Hill is happy. They had out a note for one hundred and eight dollars, due January 22, 1917; but that note is now paid. Out of debt with a good house!

Herbs Smoked in Pipe or Cigarette Relieve Catarrh.

Write for a Free Trial Package.

Dr. Blosser, who has devoted forty years to the treatment of Catarrh, is the originator of a certain combination of medicinal herbs, flowers and berries to be smoked in a pipe or ready prepared cigarette. The smoke-vapor reaches all the air passages of the head, nose and throat. As the disease is carried into these passages with the air you breathe, so the antiseptic, healing vapor of this Remedy is carried with the breath directly to the affected parts. This simple, practical method applies the medicine where sprays, douches, ointments, etc., cannot possibly go. Its effect is soothing and healing, and is entirely harmless, containing no tobacco or habit forming drugs. It is pleasant to use, and not smoking to those who have never smoked. No matter how severe or long standing your case may be, we want to show you what our Remedy will do.

To prove the beneficial, pleasant effect, The Blosser Company, 704 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga., will mail absolutely free to any sufferer, a sample that will verify their claims by actual test. This free package contains a pipe, some of the Remedy for smoking and also some of our medicinal cigarettes. If you wish to continue the treatment, it will cost only one dollar for a month's supply for the pipe, or a box containing one hundred cigarettes. We pay postage.

If you are a sufferer from Catarrh, Asthma, Catarrhal Deafness, or if subject to frequent colds, send your name and address at once by postal card or letter for the free package, and a copy of our illustrated booklet.

Some said it would never be paid out, but it is. After all, it seems that the old tent meetings are the happiest, when trying to establish a congregation in the face of strong opposition, doing everything they can to stop the work. After the battle is won, a congregation established, and a house built, they get careless and indifferent.

I suppose my work for 1917 will be in the same field I have worked for several years, except Rehoboth. A change was thought best by some. I have preached for them several years, and some thought if they would get another preacher their religious neighbors would come out better—at least, come to hear a new man better than they did me. I hope they may, and that everything may work out for the best. Several times I have been swapped off on this plea, and still the sects would hear the new man no more than they did me. But no one man can please everybody. If he did, he certainly would not please God. So each preacher should strive with might and main to please God whether it pleases church members or not. This is one thing I try to do.

One more month and another year gone! What have we done for humanity?

City Physicians Explain Why They Prescribe Nuxated Iron To Make Beautiful, Healthy Women and Strong Vigorous Men

NOW BEING USED BY OVER FIVE MILLION PEOPLE DAILY

Quickly transforms the flabby flesh, toneless tissues, and pallid cheeks of weak, anaemic men and women into a perfect glow of health and beauty—Often increases the strength of delicate, nervous, run-down folks 200 per cent. in two weeks' time.

New York, N. Y.—It is conservatively estimated that over five million people daily in this country alone are taking Nuxated Iron. Such astonishing results have been reported from its use both by doctors and laymen, that a number of physicians in various parts of the country have been asked to explain why they prescribe it so extensively, and why it apparently produces so much better results than were obtained from the old forms of inorganic iron.

Extracts from some of the letters received are given below:

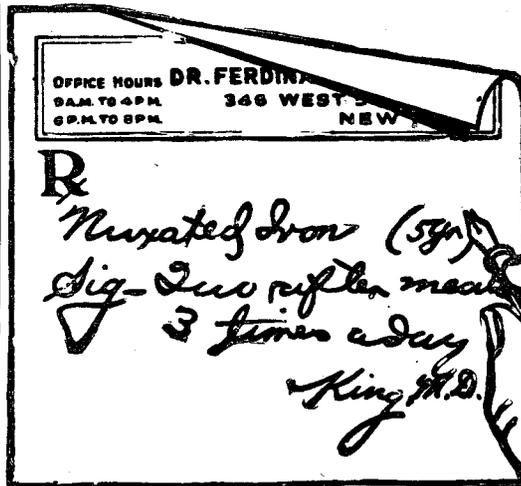

Dr. King, a New York physician and author says: "There can be no vigorous iron men without iron. Pallor means anaemia. Anaemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anaemic men and women is pale. The flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails and they often become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated corn-meal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cooking, by throwing down the waste-pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked is responsible for another grave iron loss.

Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

Dr. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely in both this country and in prominent European Medical Institutions says: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple Nuxated Iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart troubles, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with a blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly-looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: see how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete and prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the fray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. V. Von Unruh, Medical Director in Chief of the New York City Clinic said, "I have given Nuxated Iron a fair and prolonged trial. I have been more than pleased with the results and will continue its use."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said, "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it.

But in the case of Nuxated Iron, I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most wonderfully effective remedy."

Dr. James, late of the United States Public Health Service, says, "Patients in an enervated and devitalized state of health—those, for instance, convalescing from protracted fevers, those suffering from a long-standing case of anaemia, all such people in my opinion, need iron. Of late, there has been brought to my attention, Nuxated Iron. In practice I have found this an ideal restorative and up-building agent in these cases above mentioned."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is the most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

Under the Withered Leaves.

Down in the dark, damp earth, under the snow, under the withered leaves, the little seeds are sleeping. Little brown seeds! If we could look into the ground, they would seem to us dry and dead. But,

"Where man sees but withered leaves, God sees the sweet flowers growing."

If we could watch, we should see, by and by, a swelling of the little brown husks, as the spring sunshine warms the earth and the spring rain waters it. We should see tiny shoots peep out of their little prisons and grow up into the light and air. Then we could stand beside them in the sunshine and see the bundles of soft, green leaves unfold and dainty buds form, and sweet blossoms burst into beauty. Is it not wonderful, this work of God? And shall we not love Him who made all these things to give us pleasure and to make us think of him?—Selected.

The Work at Cleveland, Tenn.

BY FRED M. LITTLE.

The church at Cleveland has succeeded in getting its building in a condition to be used this winter, though unfinished.

Brother George W. Farmer held a two-weeks' meeting in November, which resulted in two baptisms and some others expressing a desire to be recognized as members of the congregation. We are sure Brother Farmer's preaching did good. We hope he can be with us again at "a more convenient season."

The writer preached on the first Sunday in this month. One sister expressed her wish to become one of us.

The Knoxville church gave us seventy-five folding chairs, which was a very much appreciated help. Thanks to the Christians of Knoxville.

I am away from Cleveland five days of each week teaching school. Mrs. Little has been real sick, but is improving now. While she was confined to her bed, wondering how we were to meet the increased expense incident to having sickness in the family, a letter containing a check for fifty dollars came from the church at Stewart's Creek, Rutherford County. Was it special providence? I doubt if providence is ever special, but of one thing I am sure: the church at Stewart's Creek has a warm place in our hearts for their timely remembrance of God's interests in Bradley County. Such manifestations of God's people assure us that we will succeed in planting the cause of Christ in this section of Tennessee.

Kidney Disorder

(BY DR. L. C. BARCOCK)

The most simple methods are usually the most effective ones when treating any disorder of the human system. The mere drinking a cup of hot water each morning, plenty of pure water all day, and a little Anuric before every meal has been found the most effective means of overcoming kidney trouble. Death would occur if the kidneys did not work day and night in separating poisons and uric acid from the blood.

The danger signals are backache, depressions, pains, heaviness, drowsiness, irritability, headache, chilliness, rheumatic twinges, swollen joints or gout.

Since it is such a simple matter to step into your favorite drug store and obtain Anuric, anyone who earnestly desires to regain health and new life will waste no time in beginning this treatment

IT'S DANGEROUS GROUND that you stand on—with a cough or a cold, and your blood impure. Out of just these conditions comes Consumption.

You must do something. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures severe, lingering Coughs, Bronchial, Throat, and Lung Affections, and every disease that can be reached through the blood. Nervous prostration and debility are conquered by it. When you're weak after an attack of grip or fever—you will build up health and strength and put on needed flesh by taking the "Discovery."

Obtain at your drug store a vial of "Pleasant Pellets," made up of the May-apple, aloë leaves and Jalap. This is the well-known pellet made up nearly fifty years ago, by Dr. Pierce, and which can be had for a quarter from almost any apothecary. Simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

Can Be Cured

FREE Proof To You

All I want is your name and address so I can send you a free trial treatment. I want you just to try this treatment—that's all—just try it. That's my only argument.

I've been in the drug business in Fort Wayne for 29 years, nearly everyone knows me and knows about my successful treatment. Over four thousand people have, according to their own statements, been cured by this treatment since I first made this offer public.

If you have Eczema, Itch, Salt Rheum, Tetter—never mind how bad—my treatment has cured the worst cases I ever saw—give me a chance to prove my claim.

Send me your name and address and get the trial treatment I want to send you FREE. The wonders accomplished in your own case will be proof. Just address a letter or post card; say, "send me your Free Proof Treatment," and write your name and address plainly.

Safeguard Yourself

against chills and fever and a possible fatality. If you are troubled with dumb or shaking chills and fever, malaria, liver trouble, or jaundice, you can do no better than to take the time-proven well-established, old-time remedy, Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator. It is well-known and reliable, harmless, but effective, and contains no calomel, arsenic, or other dangerous drugs. Let this efficient remedy safeguard you against the discomforts of chills, fevers, jaundice, etc. For sale by the best druggists everywhere. Price, fifty cents. Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

Have You a Grouch?

If you have, it is probably due to ill health, most likely from a bad liver or diseased kidneys. You cannot be a good business man or a good neighbor or do your duty to your fellow-men with a liver and kidneys out of order. They are generally reflected in a grouchy state of mind. There is depression, nervousness, a generally blue outlook upon the world. Small annoyances are magnified; consequently quarrelsome interviews, offensive correspondence and generally warlike attitudes toward your fellow-men may result. That is always bad for business and bad for social relations.

Take a bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, sold by leading druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar bottles. It will help the sun to shine into your social and business affairs by bringing about a better state of health and giving you a brighter view of things. A free sample will be sent you if you will write Warner's Safe Remedies Company, Rochester, N. Y.

CHURCH NEWS

North Carolina.

Winston-Salem, November 28.—Our work in Winston-Salem is doing nicely. One good feature is that the members work in harmony with God's will, and with each other, as a matter of course; for they could not be in harmony with God's will and not be at peace among themselves. (1 Cor. 1: 10.) We have raised about two hundred dollars to make some much-needed improvements on our church property. Most of this was raised in our own congregation. A little help was given by others who do not live in the city. Since May, 1915, our little congregation has bought a lot, built a house, held five meetings in the city, and met current obligations, and owes but two hundred dollars. This amount will be due in one year, so we feel like we are getting in position to have lots more preaching done in different parts of the city, as every city congregation should do. The several country congregations in this county are doing very well. Most of their members are poor, and so cannot pay much toward building up the cause in the regions about them. They are doing better than they did when I first came here, two years ago. I began a meeting at Warner's Chapel on November 19 and closed it on November 26. Most of the teaching I did was to the church on what to do to live godly, upright lives daily, and what each one can do in the worship on Lord's day. There were no baptisms; but I did what I believed to be my duty, and I trust some good was done. Our work in Stokes County has improved quite a little this year, but there is room for much more improvement. Corinth, the home congregation of Brother John W. Kurfees, of Germanton, contributes more to sustain the work in this field than any three of the other country congregations. This church has some most excellent members. Stokes County needs a preacher all the time. In Yadkin and Surry counties there are a number of scattered members as sheep having no shepherd. A preacher is needed in each of these counties, and I think with one year's work they could be built up so they would do a fine work themselves in the true church. Where is the young man who will come now or next spring and take hold of the work in these places? Let some young man who is consecrated to Christ write me, and I will see if we can arrange work for you. We evidently need more workers in the local congregations everywhere—those who work as they pray. When they pray that the gospel might be preached to those who have not heard it in its purity, let them work to that end—that is, send and sustain a man to go and preach it. The brethren in North Carolina are kind to me. They supply my temporal needs, and so I help others as liberally as I can. My address is 307 Green Street, Winston-Salem, N. C. However, mail sent to Clemmons will reach me. God will be with and take care of all who serve him.—W. L. Reeves.

Idabel, November 26.—I am now in an interesting meeting six miles northwest of Boswell. This is a mission place, but I hope to sow the seed of the kingdom and reap a good harvest later. This is the first time the gospel was ever preached in its purity at this place, and we are having a good interest. I am thinking of making a trip to Mississippi and Tennessee to see some of my people. If there is any congregation that would like for me to hold a meeting while there, I would be glad to hear from such.—Lee Sanders.

Get the Most Out of Your Blood.

The digestive organs absolutely need the influence of pure blood for the proper performance of their functions. Persons that sleep in small, ill-ventilated rooms complain of little or no appetite in the morning and of disagreeable dryness of the mouth and throat. Why? Because, as a result of breathing air that is impure, their blood is impure and fails to give their digestive organs the stimulus they must have for perfect work. It is necessary that we should have pure blood if we want to get all the good out of what we eat that there is in it, and to get it comfortably. Hood's Sarsaparilla is distinguished for making pure, rich, vitalized blood, perfecting the digestion and building up the whole system. Get it to-day.

Plaster your skin all over and you will stop breathing in an hour. There is only one way to remove pimples, blackheads, eruptions, and eczema with its rash and itch, and that is by the blood. In Stuart's Calcium Wafers, the wonderful calcium sulphide at meals serves to supply the blood with one of the most remarkable actions known to science. This is its activity in keeping firm the tiny fibers that compose even such minute muscles as those which control the slightest change of expression, such as the eyelids, lips, and so on. It is this substance which pervades the entire skin, keeps it healthy, and drives away impurities. Wattensaw, November 28.—I am now conducting a vocal class at this place. I closed a very interesting meeting at Lonoke last Lord's-day afternoon. For the morning service I went to Blake-more, eighteen miles in the country, and spoke to a splendid audience and promised to be with them again some-time. After the afternoon service at Lonoke, we drove ten miles to this place, preached to a good hearing at seven o'clock, and organized a singing class, which began last evening. I go from here to Nashville, Ark., to moderate in a debate. I am very busy, with all the work I can do, but have some time for January and February.—T. P. Burt.

Fountain Run, November 30.—On the second Lord's in this month Brother S. E. Templeton, of Gainesboro, Tenn., began a series of meetings with the church of Christ at old Lebanon and continued until the third Lord's-day night. Two were added to the one body by confession and baptism and the little band of disciples much edified and strengthened. Brother Templeton is a fine preacher. He came among us a stranger, but made many friends while here. He has promised to try to be with us again next year.—J. E. Jackson.

Millwood, December 6.—Acting upon the suggestion of Brother J. L. Hines, I am now visiting the churches of this part of the State with a view of locating here. I arrived in Central City on Saturday and left on Sunday for Gilstrap, where Brother Hines was in a meeting. I preached at Sugar Grove and Select, and on Thanksgiving Day I preached twice at Gilstrap. On last Lord's day I spoke twice at McHenry, and went on Monday to Wysox. Yesterday I came to Millwood, and will go to Shrewsbury to-day, then to Christian Home, and to Fairfield on the Lord's day. On Monday I shall begin a meeting at Bethlehem, near Readyville.—J. Paul Kimbrell.

Love, the Best.

There are many kinds of love, as many kinds of light. And every kind of love makes a glory in the night. There is love that stirs the heart, and love that gives it rest; But the love that leads life upward is the noblest and the best.

Ruptured? ———

Throw Away Your Truss!

For Many Years We Have Been Telling You that No Truss Will Ever Help You---We Have Told You the Harm that Trusses Are Doing. We Have Told You that the Only Truly Comfortable and Scientific Device for Holding Rupture is the Brooks Rupture Appliance—And that It Is

Sent on Trial to Prove It

If you have tried almost everything else, come to me. Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. Send attached coupon to-day, and I will send you free my illustrated book on rupture and its cure, showing my appliances and giving you prices and names of many people who have tried it and were cured. It is instant relief when all others fail. Remember, I use no salves, no harness, no ties.

I send on trial to prove what I say is true. You are the judge, and once having seen my illustrated book and read it, you will be as enthusiastic as my hundreds of patients whose letters you can also read. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day. It's well worth your time, whether you try my appliance or not.

PENNSYLVANIA MAN THANKFUL.

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir: Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years, and have always had trouble with it till I got your appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on; it just adapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in.

It would be a veritable Godsend to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it. My rupture is now all healed up, and nothing ever did it but your appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself, I will say a good word for your appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am,

Yours very sincerely,
JAMES A. BRITTON,
50 Spring Street, Bethlehem, Pa.

CONFEDERATE VETERAN CURED.

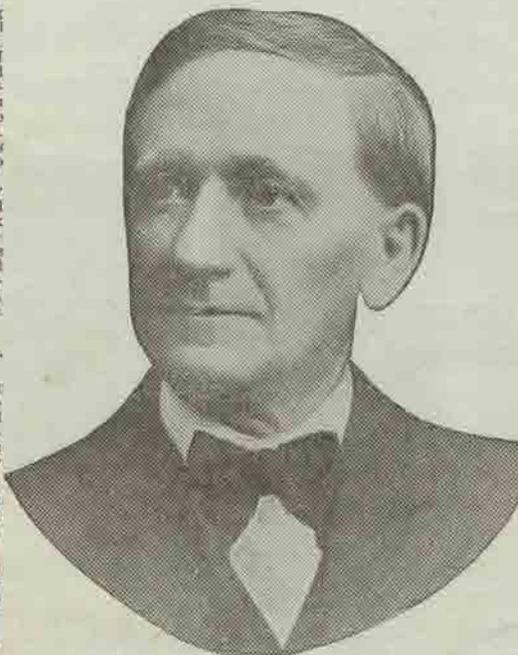

Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Dear Sir: I am glad to tell you that I am now sound and well and can plow or do any heavy work. I can say your appliance has effected a permanent cure. Before getting your appliance I was in a terrible condition, and had given up all hope of ever being any better. If it hadn't been for your appliance, I would never have been cured. I am sixty-eight years old, and served three years in Eekles' Artillery, Oglethorpe Company. I hope God will reward you for the good you are doing for suffering humanity.

Yours sincerely,
H. D. BANKS,
Commerce, Ga., R. F. D. No. 11.

OTHERS FAILED, BUT THE APPLIANCE CURED.

C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir: Your appliance did all you claim for the little boy, and more; for it cured him sound and well. We let him wear it for about a year in all, although it cured him three months after he had begun to wear it. We had tried several other remedies and got no relief, and I shall certainly recommend it to friends, for we surely owe it to you.

Yours respectfully,
WILLIAM PATTERSON,
717 South Main Street, Akron, O.

The above is C. E. Brooks, inventor of the Appliance, who cured himself and who has been curing others for over thirty years. If ruptured, write him to-day at Marshall, Mich.

CURED AT THE AGE OF SEVENTY-SIX.

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir: I began using your appliance for the cure of rupture (I had a pretty bad case), I think, in May, 1905. On November 20, 1905, I quit using it. Since that time I have not needed or used it. I am well of rupture, and rank myself among those cured by the Brooks discovery, which, considering my age—seventy-six years—I regard as remarkable. Very sincerely yours,

SAM A. ROOVER,
Jamestown, N. C.

CHILD CURED IN FOUR MONTHS.

Brooks Rupture-Appliance Company.
Gentlemen: The baby's rupture is altogether cured; thanks to your appliance, and we are so thankful to you. If we could only have known of it sooner, our little boy would not have had to suffer near as much as he did. He wore your brace a little over four months and has not worn it now for six weeks.

Yours very truly,
ANDREW EGGENBERGER,
21 Janzen Street, Dubuque, Ia.

Ten Reasons Why

YOU SHOULD SEND FOR BROOKS RUPTURE APPLIANCE

1. It is absolutely the only appliance of the kind on the market to-day, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.
2. The appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of position.
3. Being an air cushion of soft rubber, it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.
4. Unlike the ordinary so-called "pads" used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
5. It is small, soft, and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.
6. The soft, pliable bands holding the appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.
7. There is nothing about it to get foul; and when it becomes soiled, it can be washed without injuring it in the least.
8. There are no metal springs in the appliance to torture one by cutting and bruising the flesh.
9. All of the material of which the appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe appliance to wear.
10. My reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon to-day.

Remember

I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day.

shavings can set us blazing. But in the presence of gigantic outrages perpetrated on the helpless and the weak, some of us are as calm as a summer morning." Is this not a true picture of the average man's indignation? Ready enough to become indignant at a little thing that concerns his welfare, but playing neutral and saying nothing when the truth of God is assailed. Let us cultivate and express, whenever and wherever necessary, the honest indignation of our hearts.

Say not, "The days are evil—who's to blame?"
And fold the hands and acquiesce—O, shame!
Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name."

The Ever-Needed Lesson of Reverence.

Finally, we should learn from this startling episode in Jesus' ministry the much-needed lesson of reverence. It is certainly true that there does not attach to the meeting-house to-day the importance and sanctity that belonged to the Jewish temple. We all understand that Christians themselves are God's spiritual house and should sanctify their bodies in accord with this solemn truth. And yet, because the meetinghouse is our place of public worship, it should be a house where reverence is at a premium. There is a way in which we may make it a house of merchandise. "Beware of setting up your business in the temple of public worship," warns a forceful preacher. It is related that the captain of a whaling vessel went ashore one Sunday and attended a church service. The minister spoke to him after the sermon and found that no impression had been made upon his mind. "The fact is, sir," the captain acknowledged, "all the while you were preaching, I was thinking where I should likely find a whale. There is no room in my heart for anything but whales." We are not surprised that a whale should take up a good deal of room in a man's heart. But there are smaller things than whales that engross our thoughts in the hour of worship. Sometimes it is football; sometimes it is a party; sometimes it is a business engagement; sometimes it is a matter of buying or selling; sometimes it is the payment of a debt. But whatever it is or however small a thing it may seem that takes the room in our hearts away from Jesus, it is too big to be there. Let us not desecrate the courts of the Lord with thoughts about business or other cares, with thoughts that are vain and frivolous, or with thoughts that are merely indifferent. Let us, on the other hand, worship God with such sincerity and reverence that, if Jesus should suddenly appear in our midst, we would not behold the Lion of Judah come to disown us and to drive us out, but would be ready to say: "Behold, the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world."

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

An Important Question. No. 3.

BY W. H. CARTER.

"What must one do in order to become a Christian, and how may one know that he has been pardoned?"

In this letter we wish to continue the study of the Scriptures to find Heaven's answer to your question. In our last we closed with an examination of the question as presented in the second chapter of Acts of Apostles. Now I would be glad to impress upon your mind that this question was asked in all seriousness by earnest inquirers, and that the answer was given by the Holy Spirit and is entirely free from the speculative theories of men. The apostles, at this time, were the citizens of the kingdom, and they were under the guiding influence of the Holy Spirit. There was no division among them. This, then, was the one way—Heaven's way—of answering your question. But there are other examples that we wish to call attention to, and, of course, is the only authentic way to answer your attention to, that you may see that, during the apostolic ministry, they had but one answer to this question.

In the ninth chapter of Acts of Apostles we have an account of the conversion of Saul of Tarsus, the wicked persecutor of the church of God. Having succeeded in driving the disciples out of Jerusalem, he obtained authority from the chief priests to go to Damascus to persecute them there; and as he drew near the city the Lord Jesus, in a halo of glory, appeared unto him, and Saul asked: "Who art thou, Lord?" The answer came: "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest." Then Saul said: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Jesus said: "Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do."

Just here we have a lesson that, perhaps, will be helpful to us in our search for the truth. Now, you know that it has been customary, and is now with some, to call upon the Lord Jesus to come, and not only give instructions as to what to do, but to pardon, forgive, and save, and leave within the one pardoned the evidence of salvation. But here, in the case of Saul, the only instruction given is: "Go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do." The Lord would not tell Saul what to do, but sent him to some one else. Why was this? The answer is plain when we see the truth, accept it, and are willing to be governed by it. It is this: Jesus had been crowned King and had appointed the apostles as his ambassadors (2 Cor. 5: 20), and had committed into their hands, and through them to the church, the gospel of Jesus Christ, which contains and reveals Heaven's appointed plan for the redemption of fallen man. This having been completed and established, Jesus is not going to violate it, nor go contrary to it, by taking it back into his own hands, but directs Saul to go on into the city, where God will give him the answer to his question in his own appointed way.

Saul, by virtue of the glory of the light that shone round about him, was blind, and, being led by his companions, went into the city, and on Straight street he found lodging with Judas. For three days he was without sight, neither did he eat nor drink. This evidently shows that he was a very sorrowful and penitent man. While in this condition he had ample opportunity to, and no doubt did, review his former life. Vividly, no doubt, in panoramic view, those whom he had persecuted so bitterly passed before him. No wonder he prayed. But God was going to show him, beyond all possibility of doubt, that the answer given to his question, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" is from God and in perfect harmony with the gospel plan of salvation. So Saul has a vision. He saw "a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hands on him, that he might receive his sight." This the Lord told to Ananias. But knowing of the evil Saul had done, and of the authority he had to persecute Christians in Damascus, he objected. But the Lord commanded him to go, assuring him that Saul was a chosen vessel unto him. Then Ananias went, "and putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized."

The Lord had said to Saul: "It shall be told thee what thou must do." Did Ananias tell him to be baptized? Is this what he "must do?" Perhaps no human knows better than Saul himself. Are we willing to accept and believe his testimony? Trusting that you are, we will let him speak for himself. In his defense before the people from the stairway in Jerusalem, in relating his conversion, he tells what Ananias said to him. It is this: "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." (Acts 22: 16.) The Lord had promised that his question should be answered, and we have seen what the answer was. But, lest we worry you, we will ask you to read, think, and study for a week, when we will take up the question again.

BY L. D. PERKINS.

Christmas is a festival of the nativity of Christ observed by Christians yearly on December 25. The beginning of Christmas was on this wise: Augustine considered the fast of good Friday and the three festivals, Easter, Ascension, and Whitsuntide, as the only holy days which had an apostolic origin and the sanction of a general council. Christmas he deemed to be of later origin and lesser authority. When the first efforts were made to fix the day upon which Christ was born, there were, as we learn from Clement of Alexandria, advocates for May 20 and for April 20 or 21. The Oriental Christians generally were of the opinion that both the birth and baptism of Jesus took place on January 6. Julian, the first bishop of Rome, contended for December 25 as the birthday of Christ. He ruled from 337 to 352. The Eastern churches ultimately came around to this view, and the Western churches adopted from the Eastern churches the view that the baptism took place on January 6. When the festival was at length placed in December, it afforded a substitute to the various nations who had observed a festival of rejoicing that the shortest day of the year had passed, besides spanning over the great interval between Whitsuntide of one year and Good Friday of the next. The season of Christmas extends from December 25 to January 6, the date of old Christmas.

From the above bit of history it will be observed that no record was kept of the birthday of Christ, and December 25 is only guesswork at the best. In giving the account of his birth, the writer of one of the Gospels speaks of the shepherds being in the field tending their flocks, and this would lead us to disbelieve December 25 as the day, as the shepherds were generally in winter quarters in this month, and not in the fields.

After December 25 had been fixed as the day upon which Christ had been born, years had passed until centuries had gone before the custom of giving presents upon this day. St. Nicholas went in the night time to the home of a poor family and left a few things upon the doorstep, and from this has grown the wonderful expenditure upon Christmas. "St. Nicholas" is the Dutch name for "Santa Claus."

Is it wrong to observe Christmas? Let us see. "Lie not one to another; seeing that ye have put off the old man with his doings." (Col. 3: 9.) When we observe this as the day of the birth of Christ, we practice a lie, so say the least of it. And what about telling our children of good old Santa Claus' coming down the chimney, then later admit to them that we have been doing what Col. 3: 9 says for us not to do?

In writing to the church at Rome, Paul lays down a principle that will condemn us for doing anything as a religious service, in the church or out of it, for which we have no word of God. He says: "He that doubteth is condemned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith; and whatsoever is not of faith is sin." (Rom. 14: 23.) There is no word of God for the observance of a day as that of the birth of Christ; and if we do so, we do it without any faith, and we are condemned by the scripture just quoted.

In writing to the churches of Galatia, Paul said: "Ye observe days, and months, and seasons, and years." And then he adds: "I am afraid of you, lest by any means I have bestowed labor upon you in vain." (Gal. 4: 10, 11.) Why was he afraid of them? I judge that it was doing things for which they had no faith.

If I could have all the money that will be spent in California this Christmas for penny postals and the stamps for the sending, I could say to Brother Vincent: "Return to Japan, and take along fifty other men with you, and I will support them for a year in preaching the gospel in Japan." And—my!—if I could have all that will be spent in this waste (for most things that are given are worthless and the world could get along without them), I could send enough men to Japan to soon tell the story of Jesus to the entire people, and soon to the entire world.

Now, in conclusion, if you will observe this day (and I presume you will), do not tell the children that there is a mysterious Santa Claus coming down the chimney—do not do that. Do not swap presents; but if you give, give to him that needeth, and do not expect one thing in return. Do not forget to give into the treasury of the Lord the biggest gift of all. Do not forget to pay your subscription to the religious paper. And Brother Peden, one of our young preachers, who is now at Lindsay, sick—do not forget him; this gift send to L. M. Williams, 259 South F Street, Tulare, Cal., and he will turn over every penny sent to him.

Unwilling to Meet the Issue.

We believe that our readers should know that, despite reports to the contrary, those brethren who have been featuring their literalistic doctrines of the kingdom of Christ have not only been invited, but have been urged, to discuss the issues involved with such men as F. B. Srygley, C. R. Nichol, N. B. Hardeman, W. T. Boaz, W. H. Carter, and others; but friendly challenges from these brethren have not been encouraged by those holding to these peculiar views. It appears that they will not bear the light of honorable public investigation and discussion. The advocates of these views much prefer to propagate them through the use of more quiet methods.

Recently Brother J. L. Hines, a staunch young brother, located at Central City, Ky., who had run into this confusing and divisive doctrine at one place and another, upon his own initiative, challenged Brother D. H. Friend, of Horse Cave, Ky., for a public discussion. The correspondence that follows will show the result:

Millwood, Ky., December 5, 1916.—Mr. D. H. Friend, Horse Cave, Ky.—Dear Brother: I am informed upon good authority that you said that you would debate the kingdom question with any one, so hereupon I am mailing you some propositions signed by me. I suggest that we have the debate at Horse Cave, Ky., about the middle of June, 1917, also that we give one day to each proposition. Let me hear from you at once. I am, Yours for the Christ,
J. L. HINES.

Brother Hines included with his letter the following propositions:

- (1) "The Scriptures teach that Dan. 2: 35-44 and Isa. 2: 3 were fulfilled on the first Pentecost after the death of Christ." Affirmative, J. L. Hines; negative, —.
- (2) "The Scriptures teach that the church of Christ is only a phase or vestibule of the kingdom, and will be abolished at the second coming of Christ, and the house of Jacob will be restored and the tabernacle of David will be set up, and Christ will reign a literal thousand years upon David's literal throne in literal Palestine upon the earth." Affirmative, —; negative, J. L. Hines.

(3) "The Scriptures teach that Christ was resurrected to sit upon David's throne and is, therefore, there now." Affirmative, J. L. Hines; negative, —.

(4) "The Scriptures teach that at the second coming of Christ the Jews will be gathered from among the nations, accept the Christ, and rule and reign on earth with him a literal thousand years." Affirmative, —; negative, J. L. Hines.

Brother Hines received the following reply:

Horse Cave, Ky., December 6, 1916.—J. L. Hines, Millwood, Ky.—Dear Brother: Your letter, with propositions for discussion, to hand.

In the first place, the memory of your "good-authority" informant is evidently quite treacherous; and, in the last place, it would ill afford me to risk myself in the hands of an antagonist so formidable. So I remain, Fraternally yours, DUREWARD H. FRIEND.

In a private letter to the editor, Brother Hines offers the following explanation:

My "good authority" is a letter from my brother, J. H. Hines, of Hopkinsville, Ky., who said that Friend told John Orndorf, of Millwood Church, in Logan County, — he would debate the kingdom question with any one, upon which J. H. Hines said: "J. L. will meet Friend." Orndorf's reply was: "Yes, and J. L. will get a whipping, too." Then J. H. wrote to me, stating that he was writing Friend concerning the debate; also added that there would be a debate or some one would back down. Now, I just want to state that I am ready to meet Friend or any one that holds his views on the kingdom question.

The Authority to Baptize.

BY F. W. SMITH.

It will be remembered how Mr. Skinner perverted the word of God with reference to the giving of the last commission, recorded in Matt. 28: 18-20. He had "above five hundred" disciples present in order to get his church, or "organized body of Christ," receiving the commission. The record, however, shows that Mr. Skinner's figures fall short four hundred and eighty-nine. That is as near as he can come to proving his doctrine that the church was established before the day of Pentecost (Acts 2), or that authority to baptize is derived from the Missionary Baptist Church. I desire now to call attention to the fallacies and absurdities involved in the following:

But the very nature of the commission itself utterly precludes the possibility of any other than a church—a self-perpetuating institution—receiving it. The apostles, as such, could not receive it, because they could not and did not "go into all the world;" nor could they receive His promise to be with them in the work till the "end of the world;" and since their apostolic office was not to be continued to carry on the work, therefore it was committed to them, as to the other disciples, only as members of the organized body of Christ.

Just why the very nature of the commission itself utterly precludes the possibility of any other than a church—a self-perpetuating institution—receiving it, has not been made clear from anything Mr. Skinner has written. As has been proven beyond a shadow of a doubt, the facts are against our friend's position. The commission was first given to "eleven" men, who were in no sense whatever a church, and each one received the same authority to preach and baptize.

Our friend says: "The apostles, as such, could not receive it." He says this in the very face of the divine record which shows they did receive it, because there were none else present when it was given. But what does he assign as a reason for this bold assumption? This: "Because they could not and did not 'go into all the world;' nor could they receive His promise to be with them in the work till the 'end of the world.'" Paul says: "If so be that ye continue in the faith, grounded and steadfast, and not moved away from the hope of the gospel which ye heard, which was preached in all creation under heaven; whereof I Paul was made a minister." (Col. 1: 23.) How does that fit Mr. Skinner's statement? He is equally as far from the truth when he says the apostles could not receive Christ's promise to be with them in the work till the end of the world. The record shows conclusively that they did receive that promise, and it is being fulfilled every day and hour now, and will so continue so long as the world stands. The promise was not to be with the apostles simply as individuals, but with the message they delivered, not only in its "saving" power, but in its "authoritative" power as well. The apostles alone received the authority to bind and loose, and that authority has never been delegated to any other human being.

Mr. Skinner asserts that "their apostolic office was not to be continued to carry on the work." And why not, pray? When was the apostolic office abolished? True, the apostles are not on the earth in bodies of flesh; but are they not here in their teaching? Are we not to "continue in the apostles' teaching" now, as did the first converts to Christianity? (See Acts 2: 42.) Did not Christ say the apostles would sit upon twelve thrones so long as he sat in the throne of his glory? (Matt. 19: 28.) Did not the apostles alone constitute the only legislative body by divine authority? Are not all questions pertaining, not only to entrance into the church, but to the work and worship of the church, to be settled now, as well as in New Testament times, by the apostles? Is it true, indeed, that "their apostolic office was not to be continued to carry on the work?" Away with such perversions of the holy oracles in order to sustain a priestly dogma!

But see the predicament in which Mr. Skinner places himself: "Therefore it was committed to them, as to other disciples, only as members of the organized body of Christ." According to this, the authority to baptize was committed to all the members of the organized body of Christ, and I would like to know who took that authority away from all the members and vested it in a certain class called "Missionary Baptist preachers." If what Mr. Skinner here affirms is true, then somebody has been guilty of robbing "all the members of Christ's organized body" (save a few so-called "preachers") of the divine right to administer the ordinance of baptism. When, and by whom, was this great fraud perpetrated? Did it not originate about the time the distinction of the "clergy" and "laity" was born? I feel sure that the authority to baptize is vested in "all the members of Christ's body," but the commission was not first given to a church. The members of his body have the right to baptize by virtue of being members of that body. Their membership entitles them to all of the immunities and privileges of Christ's kingdom, save where certain duties are assigned to certain individuals. The right to baptize is not assigned to any special class, but in this respect all are "kings and priests" unto God.

More of Mr. Skinner's doctrine hereafter.

The Death of Dr. J. W. Grisard.

The Gospel Advocate learned with grief and sorrow of the death of Dr. J. W. Grisard, who had been for many years a noble worker for the Lord at Winchester, Tenn. We are indebted to Brother Will E. Walker for the following report:

After an illness of near two months, Dr. J. W. Grisard, one of Winchester's leading citizens and physicians, died here shortly after two o'clock on Thursday morning, December 7, aged sixty-eight, with all the members of his family, except one daughter, at his bedside. While his death was expected, yet the fateful news brought a feeling of shock and great sadness to the entire community. He had lived here nearly thirty years and had taken an active part in all things affecting the interests of our town. He had been an elder of the church of Christ all these years, and had given the church the best service of his life. A co-worker was Dr. C. F. Gattis, who went before him to the better land just two weeks and one day, the last illness of both these great soldiers of the cross being very much alike.

He is survived by his wife, four daughters, and three sons. The children are as follows: Miss Ella Grisard and Mrs. J. C. Mitchell, of Winchester; Mrs. Clyde V. Scott, of Chattanooga; Mrs. W. E. Dean, of Montgomery, Ala.; B. A. Grisard, Dr. J. P. Grisard, and W. P. Grisard, all of Winchester. One half brother, Mr. Henry Parker, of Raus, Tenn., and one sister, Mrs. Laura Parker, of Wartrace, also remain to mourn his loss, besides a great host of friends.

Funeral services were conducted from the church on Friday afternoon by Elder J. D. Floyd, of Tallahoma, a lifelong friend. Burial at the Winchester Cemetery.

The Sufficiency of God's Word.

BY S. H. PATE.

In 2 Tim. 3: 16, 17 we learn that "all scripture . . . given by inspiration of God . . . is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." It seems from this that there is nothing wanting, except what God has given to us, to enable man to obey him in every particular; yet it seems that that is something we have never been able to do—to get the human family to see and believe that God has left nothing undone that is necessary for them to know, that they may obey him with implicit confidence, that God will save them at his own right hand in the sweet by and by.

Now, according to the heading of this article, it behooves us to search God's word and see if we can find anything to sustain such an idea. I first call your attention to Luke 16: 27-31. After Abraham gave this poor lost soul to understand that no one in his condition could obtain any help, he thought of his five brethren at his father's house. "Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house: for I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment. Abraham saith unto him, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them. And he said, Nay, father Abraham; but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent. And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead." Now, brethren, this is enough, of itself, to convince any honest man of the sufficiency of God's word to save without any other influence from above or the regions of the dead. The rich man had the same idea that is now prevalent in our land: that there had to be some other influence brought to bear before they could be saved or be induced to make an effort to flee the wrath to come. Brethren, let us be on the watch, lest such an idea get into our ranks.

I now call your attention to Deut. 30: 11-14: "For this commandment which I command thee this day, it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off. It is not in heaven, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it? Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it? But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it." It does seem that Moses suspected the same evil among his brethren that is extant among us to-day; that the word of God is not sufficient of itself, but there had to be some influence from heaven or from beyond the sea in order that they might be saved by those words which were so nigh them, in their mouths and hearts. May God help us to read these sayings of Moses in Deut. 30. "And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom the Lord knew face to face." (Deut. 34: 10.)

These things all occurred in the Old Testament, under the law. Now let us turn to the New Testament and see if the same warnings are given there as in the Old Testament, not to pray for or expect any other power or agency than what has already been given to cause the word of God, when sown in an honest heart, to spring up and produce "some thirtyfold, some sixty, and some a hundred."

In Rom. 10: 6-9 we hear Paul the apostle saying to the brethren: "Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down from above:) or, Who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.) But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach."

When Paul said, "But what saith it?" he had reference to what Moses said to the children of Israel after he had reiterated all the law of God to them—that these words were not far from them, but they were very nigh them, in their mouths and hearts, "that thou mayest do it." Yes, Paul knew that Moses taught the people of his day that all that God required of them was to hear and do his commandments.

Solomon said: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." (Eccles. 12: 13.) These things, in connection with what Abraham said to the rich man concerning his five brethren, are enough to settle the sufficiency of God's word to save to the uttermost all who will hear and obey it. An Important Correction.

The following brief correspondence is self-explanatory:

Martin, Tenn., December 9.—Dear Brother Lipscomb: I have just read Brother Elam's splendid article in the Gospel Advocate of December 7. In the last paragraph of the first column of page 1211, Brother Elam says: "I have not found the man who will deny that it is wrong to teach the Bible in school or to build schools in which it can be taught to all alike." I am wondering if there is a typographical error or if Brother Elam used the wrong word by mistake. I take it that he meant to say, "I have not found the man who will say it is wrong," etc. I think surely Brother Elam did not mean to say what he is made to say in this paragraph, and I am writing to call your attention to it. Faithfully,
E. A. E.

Yes, this is an error, which I regret. Brother Smith is correct. Thanks. But I have not found the man.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

$1.50 a year if paid in advance, $1.75 after six months, $2 after twelve months. To Canada and foreign countries, $2 in advance, $2.25 after six months, $2.50 after twelve months.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express, post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you.

This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received, and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrearages, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received, but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Guarantee of Advertising.

All the advertisements in this paper are, we believe, signed by trustworthy persons. To prove our faith by works, we will make good to actual subscribers any loss sustained in trusting advertisers who prove to be deliberate swindlers. We shall not attempt to adjust trifling disputes between subscribers and honorable business men who advertise, nor pay the debts of honest bankrupts. To make this guarantee effective, in all cases say in writing advertisers, "I saw your advertisement in the Gospel Advocate," and if anything goes wrong, notify us immediately in writing.

The New Testament Order and Ecclesiasticism Contrasted as to Their Respective Powers for Evil.

BY M. C. K.

In order that our statement of the growth and evils of ecclesiasticism may be adequate to the purpose in view, we find it necessary to add another article.

The primary purpose, as shown in both the preceding articles, was to indicate the principle from which this particular departure from the primitive ecclesiastic order takes its origin; and in the second article the observation was substantially made that the only religious or ecclesiastic organization which has the New Testament seal upon it is founded on a basis which reduces the possibility of evil to a minimum. This, of course, was a concession or virtual admission that evil may result even from the divine order. We not only frankly make this admission, but wish now to call special attention to the fact that the very genius of the ecclesiastic order established by divine authority shows a divine recognition of the further fact that, owing to the weakness of humanity, it is impossible to form any kind of self-perpetuating religious body or organization of human beings without the possibility of evil resulting, in some measure, from the usurpation of undue authority and power. Hence, the very best thing that could possibly be done in the establishment of such a body was to make it of a character and establish it upon a basis that would result in the least possible evil.

Now, it will require but a little reflection to see the vast superiority of the system of independent local churches, each with its own governing board of overseers and managers, over a system which associates all local churches of a district or province into one general organization with a general board of overseers and managers, or with a centralization of authority and power in some other way, over all. The reader can here see at a glance that, in any general organization or combination of churches operating through and under the management and control of a central board or any other agent vested with authority to act for the one general body or association of churches, whatever such general board or other agent does is done jointly by all the churches operating through such an arrangement; and in all such cases of action by the central power, no matter what the act may be, whether right or wrong, all the churches in such a combination are jointly bound by such an act. They may know that the act is wrong, but they are utterly helpless and powerless to do anything to change it. They are wholly at the will and mercy of the centralized organization which is authorized to act for them; and every church in such a combination is compelled to either go with the wrong and with the others be jointly responsible for it, or else withdraw from the combination of churches, one or the other.

On the other hand, in the New Testament system, under which each local church, with its own board of supervisors and managers, acts in all matters independently for itself, see how the power for evil is curtailed. As before admitted, here, precisely as under the system of general organization, evil is not only possible, but, with ambitious and unprincipled men in authority, it sometimes results in independent local churches, precisely as the same thing is possible in any other system where human beings are in authority; but in all such cases of resultant evil under the system of local church government, the exercise of authority and power for evil is confined to the local church with no jurisdiction beyond its bounds. In the general body with a central board vested with authority to act for the body, every church which belongs to such a body is, of course, necessarily involved in, and is responsible for, whatever the central board does; whereas in the local church, with its local board vested with authority to act for no one except for its own membership, no one beyond that membership is necessarily involved in, or is responsible for, anything done by such a board. The general arrangement is like the hub and spokes of a wheel. The hub cannot move without moving all the spokes in the wheel. Or, to use an illustration used by a prominent brother in the early discussion of these matters, both the general and local systems may be represented by the pane or panes of glass in a window. If there is only one large pane to inclose the entire opening, and it becomes broken, then the entire opening is damaged; whereas, if the window is constructed with a number of smaller compartments with a smaller pane for each compartment, then when one is broken it does not necessarily injure the others.

It is easy to make the application. Any general organization of the churches with any sort of central agency vested with the position and power to act for all the churches, as the hub turns all the spokes in the wheel, leaves each church at the mercy of such a central agency to be moved or halted at its dictatorial and imperious will.

Finally, while the Gospel Advocate knows that the general organization of the churches after the manner of the modern missionary society, such as the General Christian Missionary Convention or Foreign Christian Missionary Society among the Disciples, has not yet gone to the extremes of the full-fledged delegate convention such as a part of the Disciples are now clamoring for, yet it is profoundly convinced that such an organization contains the germinal principle from which the latter, in the course of history, as facts now show, is destined to be evolved; and for this reason, as well as for reasons of expediency, we respectfully oppose all such organizations.

We shall be glad to have our brethren of the society calmly and dispassionately look at the matter from this point of view and in this solemn light.

The Oneonta Church.

BY J. C. M'QUIDDY.

On a recent trip to Alabama I visited the church of Christ at Oneonta. Oneonta is a small town on a branch of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, midway between Birmingham and Gadsden, about thirty-seven miles from Birmingham. I reached there on Friday morning, November 17, and found Brother M. A. Creel, of Hanceville, Ala., engaged in a meeting. A number of brethren, and Brother Creel in particular, insisted that I remain with them and give my presence and encouragement to the meeting. As I am not in the habit of preaching, I felt that I could do very little. However, I always desire to do what I can to encourage the churches that are not strong and need help. So I remained there and attended the meeting until Wednesday of the next week.

Brother John F. Kelton is largely responsible for building up the cause in this place. While he has been Judge of Probate in Blount County for about twelve years, he is said to his credit that he has never lost interest in the great work of saving souls. During all these years he has made sacrifices and has sought to establish firmly the cause of Christ in Oneonta. Through his leadership, earnestly supported by a few sisters, he has succeeded in building a neat frame house, which, as I understand it, is paid for. Brethren Frank Moody and John Lewis have both held protracted meetings for them.

While there are comparatively few disciples of Christ in Oneonta, those few are rich in faith and in good works. They love the cause of Christ and are ready to make sacrifices for the spread of the truth. They know the truth, love the truth, and have taken their stand for it because they are thoroughly convinced that they are right. They are not rowing with the current, but they are stemming it. Primitive Christianity is not popular at Oneonta, and, so far as I can judge, has comparatively few adherents in the State of Alabama. This is a great field for mission work. Preachers who love the truth and who are able to preach it clearly and forcefully should enter this field and use their abilities to establish churches of Christ; and when they have planted them, they should remain with them long enough to thoroughly establish them in the faith. To me it is really enjoyable to work with a church that is really zealous and is faithfully contending for the faith that was once delivered unto the saints, although the popular trend is against them. Standing for the right and contending for the true faith against those who love the praise of men more than the praise of God brings out the very best that is in us. Every true preacher under such circumstances can apply to himself and appreciate the language of the apostle Paul which reads: "And he hath said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my power is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my weaknesses, that the power of Christ may rest upon me. Wherefore I take pleasure in weaknesses, in injuries, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses, for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong." (2 Cor. 12: 9, 10.) Preachers and churches must duly appreciate their own weaknesses and realize that their strength lies in trusting the Lord and in doing just what he commands them to do. The faithful proclamation of the truth is never in vain. The continual dropping wears the stone. God's word will not return to him void. So, instead of looking to visible results and becoming discouraged, Christians under such circumstances should realize that "the kingdom of God is not eating and drinking, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit."

When one has faithfully pressed forward in the service of God, again with the apostle Paul he should say: "For I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content. I know how to be abased, and I know also how to abound: in everything and in all things have I learned the secret both to be filled and to be hungry, both to abound and to be in want. I can do all things in him that strengtheneth me." (See Phil. 4: 11-13.) As persecution in the early church scattered the disciples abroad, save the apostles, and led them to go everywhere preaching the word, so to-day opposition and persecution, if properly received, will make us strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. Only cowards and quitters quail in the face of opposition. The brave Christian presses onward and upward, "looking unto Jesus the author and perfecter of our faith." With a pure heart, we can bring good out of seeming evil.

Just here I am reminded of the lines of the song:

My soul, be on thy guard,
Ten thousand foes arise;
The hosts of sin are pressing hard,
To draw thee from the skies.

O watch, and fight, and pray,
The battle ne'er give o'er;
Renew it boldly every day,
And help divine implore.

Ne'er think the victory won,
Nor lay thine armor down;
The work of faith will not be done
Till thou obtain the crown.

Fight on, my soul, till death
Shall bring thee to thy God;
He'll take thee, at thy parting breath,
To his divine abode."

It is not necessary to have large crowds and large churches in order to enjoy the religion of our dear Savior. Christ has assured us that where two or three have met together in his name, he will be in their midst to own and to bless. I have enjoyed the worship when meeting with a small, struggling band of disciples more than with large churches. The church that boldly stands up and contends for the faith in the midst of great opposition is usually better informed and keeps more perfectly "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" than does the large and popular church. In a large church many drift with the crowd, attend simply to be entertained by the preacher without really entering into the spirit of the worship. They are ready to criticize and find fault with those who are bearing the heat and burden of the day, while they sit with folded arms and do little or nothing to advance the Redeemer's cause. Many in such churches become sectarian and wish to become like those about them, instead of striving to know the truth and to be able always to give a reason for the hope that is within them with meekness and fear. Some churches need to swarm and a new hive should go out from them and go to work earnestly for the salvation of souls. In idleness no one can make a faithful servant of the Lord Jesus Christ. Metals not in use rust; and just so, when Christians are not doing their very best in the service of the Lord, they become cold and indifferent. So let us get this lesson: Wherever we are, whether in a large or small church, if we would be faithful servants of the Lord, we must be busy in the Master's work. Even the blessed Master said when he was here: "We must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." (John 9: 4.) The issues of life are so great, heaven is so sweet, and perdition is so awful that no one should seriously think of being indifferent in the service of the Master.

While small crowds attended the meeting, there was one baptized on the second Sunday of the meeting. Brother Creel, who is a most excellent young preacher, humble and devout, continued the meeting after I left. I have not learned as to results after my departure. To this faithful, struggling band of disciples I would say, in the language of the Holy Spirit: "And now I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you the inheritance among all them that are sanctified."

Soul Saving.

BY E. A. E.

The work of saving souls is incomprehensibly greater than any in which mortals can engage.

The reward of this work is incomprehensibly greater than that of any other work.

The consequences of neglect to engage in this work are indescribably horrible.

To turn sinners from the error of their way, to save souls from death, and to hide multitudes of sins are joy and glory that can be measured only by eternity. Paul declares that those he taught and converted and built up in the Christian life will be his joy and crown of glorying at the coming of our Lord Jesus. (See 1 Thess. 2: 19; Phil. 4: 1.) Those who turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever. (Dan. 12: 3.)

Since the blood of Abel cried unto God from the ground against Cain, every man has been his brother's keeper and has been responsible for his brother's blood to the extent of his responsibility. All who see the approaching destruction of the wicked and do not sound the alarm will be held responsible for the wicked's destruction. In order to be free from the blood of others, one must do all that is possible to save others.

The mind, spirit, and mission of Christ are clearly and fully set forth in the New Testament. All that which he has done and is still doing to save the world is likewise clearly and fully set forth. He "came into the world to save sinners," "to seek and to save that which was lost," and to call sinners to repentance. He came down from heaven, not to do his own will, but the will of God, who sent him. He pleased not himself, but did always the things which pleased God. He prayed, not his will, but God's will, be done.

We are plainly taught that all Christians must have the mind of Christ, which is to deny self and to suffer for the peace and harmony of the church, the good of others, and the salvation of sinners. (Phil. 2: 1-11.) "If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." (Rom. 8: 9.) The disciples of Christ are the salt of the earth and the light of the world. They are leaven in the measures of meal. On the other hand, if we are not the salt of the earth, the light of the world, and do not permeate the community with a godly influence, we are not Christians. Christians—the church—are the pillar and ground of the truth; and if we do not practice and uphold and extend the truth in godliness, we are not Christians.

Rescuing the perishing, saving the dying, snatching them in pity from sin and the grave, is a very great work the church—Christians—has largely overlooked and is woefully neglecting. How many church members really feel responsible for their influence over others and for the salvation of others? How many are really making any effort to save others? I wish I had the power to stamp forever this most important work and woefully neglected duty on the hearts of all who claim to be Christians. In the clashing of opinions, strife, contention, pride, vanity, jealousy, envy, hatred, malice, selfishness, avarice, egotism, self-importance, place seeking, thirst for power, etc., thousands of church members seem to have lost sight of humility, lowliness, meekness, forbearance, counting others better than themselves, the edification of the church, supporting the weak, comforting the faint-hearted, exhorting one another, restoring the ones who may be overtaken in any trespass, converting one who may have erred from the faith, hiding a multitude of sins, seeking the good and salvation of others, and saving souls in general. The heart bleeds over the way the young, the weak, the faint-hearted, the erring, and the unfortunate are neglected and treated.

Many times, when an effort is made to restore one who has erred from the faith or has been overtaken in a trespass, it is done in such a driving, threatening, and holler-than-thou manner that more harm than good is done. The Bible is not clearer on anything else than on the spirit and manner in which this important work is to be done. This spirit and manner may be considered more fully in a future article. Just here let it be said that it is as necessary to obey God in this particular as in all others.

Everybody who knows anything about the Bible at all knows that the strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak and should not seek to please themselves, since Jesus pleased not himself (Rom. 15: 1-3); that even a factious man ought to be admonished at least two times before he is rejected (Tit. 2: 10, 11); that love does not rejoice over the misfortunes and sins of others, does not hunt up and take an account of all the sins of others in order to condemn them and turn them out of the church and send them to perdition; but suffers long, is kind and forbearing (1 Cor. 13: 4-8), and covers a multitude of sins by seeking to turn the sinner from his errors (1 Pet. 4: 8; James 5: 20). All know, or should know, that the spiritual, in gentleness and meekness, considering themselves, lest they, too, yield to temptation, should restore any one who has been overtaken in any trespass (Gal. 6: 1, 2); that the weak are to be supported, not threatened and abused; that the faint-hearted are to be encouraged, not severely criticized and complained at; that the unruly are to be warned, but not condemned; and that patience is to be exercised toward all (1 Thess. 5: 14). When it comes to condemning or punishing others for their sins, God must do this, or the guiltless must cast the first stone. That which Christians do even in withdrawing fellowship from those who walk disorderly is to save them, not to condemn and punish them.

As stated above, all should cultivate the mind of Jesus, be partakers of the divine nature (2 Pet. 1: 4-8), and have the spirit of Christ. Christ did not come to earth to hunt up and to make a list of the sins of each individual or of the whole world in general in order to condemn and send all to perdition, but to save the world—to induce sinners to repent and to obey God in order that he might save them. Many times Jesus declares that he did not come to condemn the world, but to save the world. The world is condemned already. To seek and to save the lost is the work of Jesus. This is the work of Christians—of every individual Christian. It is not the will of God that the most ignorant, poorest, and weakest disciple of Jesus should perish. It is God's will that Christians go gently and meekly first to erring brethren alone, then for two or three to go, and then for the whole church to try to save them. It is anything else but the will of God to find fault, to hunt up the sins of others and to scour the country to find something against them in order to prove them guilty and to condemn them; it is anything else but service to God to be busybodies and meddlers in other men's matters. This course is condemned with idolatry, covetousness, fornication, drunkenness, and other sins. It is a sure way to send men to perdition. What does Jesus mean by saying, "Judge not, that ye be not judged," and: "Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye?"

To pursue in gentleness and meekness, long-suffering and patience, forbearance and love, in the mind and spirit of Christ, the course God marks out, if that be the withdrawal finally of the whole church from the ones who walk disorderly, is the only way to please God, to be saved, to save others, and to be ratified at the great judgment. (See Matt. 18.) May God have mercy upon us all!

The wrong spirit—the spirit of vanity and pride, of egotism and self-importance, of selfishness and self-exaltation, of contention and strife, of bitterness and division, of rule and ruin, of jealousy and envy, of anger and wrath, of hatred and malice, of criticism and condemnation, of biting and devouring, of worldliness and wickedness—predominates in many places and destroys the unity and peace of many congregations. The proof of this declaration is the factions now existing in many places; and "where jealousy and faction are, there is confusion and every vile deed." (See James 3: 13-18.) Christians must, and real Christians will, give heed to all that which God says in condemnation of these evil things and Satanic practices. All Christians have the spirit of Jesus and the mind of Christ. "God is love," and the children of God are children of love.

Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is begotten of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God: for God is love. (1 John 4: 7, 8.)

Love must be manifested by treating all—all brethren, all neighbors, and all enemies—as God commands. See in 1 Cor. 13 the eight things which love does and the eight things which it does not do. Why say, "Lord, Lord," and do not the things God teaches? To seek peace and pursue it, to follow the things which make for peace, to endeavor "to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," to seek to save the lost and not to condemn them, to be of the same mind, to have the same love, and to be of one accord—these are the things for Christians to do; these are the things they will do.

A reformation must be wrought just here or wreck and ruin await many congregations.

How Many New Subscribers Have You Sent Us?

We are sure that our readers are beginning to understand by this time that we are very anxious to secure many thousand new subscribers within the next few months. There is no better time than now to send us these subscribers. We are greatly encouraged because our old subscribers are renewing so promptly. We are receiving more renewals than at any time in our history. Our list of subscribers have paid up better than ever before. Of course we have a subscriber here and there whose subscription is unpaid and in arrears, but there are so few of these that we now have time to devote to obtaining new subscribers. We want every subscriber that we have to determine right now to send us at least one new subscriber between this date and January 1, 1917. We do not believe that our subscribers, after we have been so liberal with them and have permitted them to renew for one and two years at $1.50 per year, will be unmindful of the fact that they can send us a new subscriber now for $1.50, whereas after January 1, 1917, each new subscriber will be required to pay $2 a year.

Of course it is no pleasure to the publishers of the Gospel

Advocate to be forced to advance its price. Our advance is very late in coming, however. While we have been paying exorbitant prices for paper during the last year and longer, still we have held the price of the Advocate to $1.50, and even our old subscribers are permitted to get it for two years yet at $1.50 a year. We extended this liberality and courtesy to them in the hope that, as they had been thus favored, they would make an effort to send us new subscribers. The larger our list, the less does it cost us to produce each paper. It requires just as much to set the type, to read the proof, and to lock up and make ready for one subscriber as it does for fifty thousand. We may add, also, that it requires just as much to write editorials and to prepare the copy for a paper with a small circulation as it does for a paper with a large circulation.

We are receiving a number of new subscribers, but as yet our readers have not thoroughly waked up to the importance of sending us long lists of new subscribers. Of course we are ready to do anything we can to extend the circulation of the paper. We have made sacrifices all these years in order to hold up the paper, and are still willing to do so. We have furnished the paper at just as low a price as we possibly could. So, as materials have advanced, as labor is advancing, and as everything is advancing, our readers can see at once that it is impossible for us to think of offering any premium or any reduction from our regular advertising prices. We are anxious to have all help to extend the circulation of the paper, but, with the present advanced prices on everything, we can only appeal to your love of the truth and your desire to advance every good work to help us to increase our list. We believe that many thousands would rather do this work because they have an interest in sowing the seed of the kingdom than from any selfish motive. We want your most hearty cooperation, but we want it on the right basis.

If you are willing to help us on this basis and purpose to do so, we would be glad to have a card from you to this effect. Will you not write us a card at once, enlisting as a worker to extend the circulation of the Gospel Advocate? We desire to publish a list of our workers in each community. We would like to get in connection with you so that we can furnish you lists and stationery for forwarding names to us.

We have much for which to be grateful. We are thankful that the Advocate has prospered during the year that is soon to close, and are now looking forward to making 1917 the best year in the history of the paper. May we have your most earnest cooperation?

PUBLISHERS GOSPEL ADVOCATE.

Publishers' Notes.

Bibles make splendid Christmas gifts. We have a large line. Write us for anything that you may need.

Send us $1 for a copy of "The New Testament Church." This book is composed of the editorials of F. D. Srygley.

Have you read "The Gospel Plan of Salvation?" This is the best production of Dr. T. W. Brents. Many thousand copies of this book have been sold and read. Price, $2.

We have in stock two or three copies of the "Campbell-Rice Debate" which have been rebound and put in good condition. These are the only copies that we have on hand of this great debate. We will sell at a reasonable price.

If you have not already sent us your order for your Bible Lesson Helps, you should do so at once. We are now mailing out the supplies for the first quarter of 1917. We would be glad to have your order at once. We are receiving many complimentary expressions concerning the merits of these helps. They are as full of Bible teaching as an egg is full of meat. We ask it as a special favor that you call the attention of your friends to these helps.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

By S. H. Hall

A Delightful Trip West.

The last two weeks of October and all of November were spent by the writer in Texas and Oklahoma. For five weeks it was my pleasure to be with the Central church of Christ at Fort Worth. It was a bad time to try to conduct a series of meetings, due to the fact that both city and national elections were on and the town was greatly stirred over them, especially the city election, and it was a little out of season for revival services. However, we did our best for a three-weeks' revival, and much good was done in the way of encouraging the members. Three put in their membership with this congregation during my stay, but there were no baptisms. The following preachers found time to drop in and encourage the meetings with their presence: T. W. Phillips, A. O. Colley, Horace W. Busby, C. J. Robinson, T. M. Carney, John Stratton, M. H. Moore, T. V. Smith, P. C. Key, E. G. Collins, and Brother Stewart, all of Fort Worth. Brother Carney has just recently moved to North Side to devote his whole time to the cause in that section. The brethren are to be congratulated in securing the services of such a good man. Brother Busby is doing a fine work at Glenwood and is greatly loved by the people. I conducted the funeral services of one of his best members while he was away in a meeting. Quite a number of the Glenwood members attended and added much to the work. Brother Phillips devotes his time to evangelistic work. Our readers remember the sad accident, some months ago, in which he had one of his limbs broken. He still has to use his crutches, but is doing splendid work. It was my pleasure to be in his home, and it was, indeed, a benediction to me. Brother Colley is doing a fine work with the South Side congregation. He is a great man wherever you put him. I also had the pleasure of being with Brother Stratton in his home. He is a most lovely character. Brother Smith is teaching at the Texas Christian University, and Brother Key is taking a course there. I do not remember meeting men who more favorably impressed me than these two men. Brother Moore is another one of Texas' great men. He holds a very important position as superintendent of the city schools, but is out preaching on Lord's days. Brother Robinson was with us only one night, and I did not get so well acquainted with him. He keeps busy evangelizing. Brother Stewart is doing a fine work at Arlington Heights. In addition to the brethren named above, the following dropped in on a visit: F. L. Young, of Cleburne; W. T. Kidwill, of Dallas; Foy E. Wallace, of Thorp Spring; Jesse P. Sewell, of Abilene; and the last night of the meeting, in came J. D. Tant, and the list was complete. I was delighted to see these brethren. They have all done a great work for the cause of Christ, and are still pressing onward and upward in the Christian's life.

The Central congregation has some as fine people in it as it has ever been my pleasure to meet. I could not forget them, and may the Lord ever bless them. Brethren Knox and Cambron are the elders, and they do their duty, as such, as well as any men I have ever seen. I made my home with Brother Farris at the Texas Christian University the first ten days of my stay. The balance of the time I was with Brother W. R. Johnson. I have never been made to feel more at home, when away from home, than I was made to feel with these two splendid families.

Two short visits were made to Dallas, at which times I preached at Oak Cliff and at Pearl and Bryan Streets, Brother J. S. Dunn being with the former congregation and Brother L. S. White with the latter. I found both congregations in fine condition and both men doing a great work. I was blessed with the privilege of spending a night with each of these good men. Brother C. C. Klingman lives at Dallas and was with us at Oak Cliff. This is also the home of W. T. Kidwill. He, his wife, daughter, and son-in-law were with us at Pearl and Bryan Streets. Brother Kidwill, in my judgment, has one of the happiest dispositions of any man I have met.

It was certainly a very great pleasure to meet my old schoolmate, E. S. Fitzgerald, of Weatherford, as he was passing through Fort Worth; also Brother C. R. Nichol, president of Thorp Spring Christian College, and Brother R. L. Whiteside, of Denton. Indeed, Texas is blessed with "lots" of great and good men.

Words cannot express how much I appreciate the very kind and urgent invitation from the members of the Central congregation at Fort Worth to move there and labor with them. It would be a source of no little pleasure, and great good could be done. But Georgia needs what little I can do more than Texas; and as long as I can get Mrs. Hall to stay reasonably satisfied, I feel it my duty to stay with it. However, for her sake, we will make our way to the Western field some day, if it be the Lord's will, so she can be nearer her people, separated from whom it seems impossible for her to be satisfied. I had the pleasure of being with them on my return trip and of preaching some for the brethren at Stuart, Okla. God bless them all.

I am glad to say that, on getting back to this fine city, I found the work moving gloriously onward. Graves, Garrett, and Bearden were doing their best. We have no better men. Our house was filled at West End Avenue on Sunday morning, and three confessed their wrongs and re-consecrated themselves to God's service. With our hands in Jehovah's, we are looking to 1917 to be our banner year, which will make my eleventh year in this field. God has helped us, and he will ever help us.

Menlo, Again.

Whatever is worth beginning must be finished. The building at Menlo is a sore need to the work at that place; hence our effort to build. We are disappointed in not getting this building sufficiently completed to have a series of meetings in it before this year ends. But let me insist on our readers' coming to our assistance and helping us finish it so that the faithful few there may be in it the first of the year to begin the new year's work. Make their hearts glad by sending them a donation so that they will have it for a Christmas present from you. It would be fine to have a working Christmas week. But more funds we must have if this is done. We gladly acknowledge the following donations since last report: From Bill Mitchell, $2; J. E. Kennedy, $5; Mrs. George Taylor, $4; Dr. Wood, $5; O. E. Solsby, $1; Congressman Gordon Lee, $5; Miss Lena Baker, $5; Miss Ethel Thacker, $2; John Tribble (in work), $5; J. R. Gilbert (in work), $10; T. W. Paine, $5; T. M. Smith, $2.50; Mrs. R. E. Allen, 50 cents; Mrs. G. E. Claus, $1; Mrs. A. E. Winn, $1; Dr. J. M. Smith, $1; A. J. Paine, $1; Mrs. J. A. Drake, $5; Miss Bertie Smith, $2; Charles Clemens, $3; Mrs. J. H. Hollis, $1. All of these are Georgia donations. From out of the State the following has been received: From J. Y. McQuigg, Texas, $1; Cora M. Brooks, Illinois, $5; F. B. Shepherd, Tennessee, $1; Sam F. Kenley, Texas, $2.50; Stanford Chambers, Louisiana, $1; W. M. Bradford, Tennessee, $5; Mrs. F. Rodgers, Tennessee, $1; Philip Risterholtz, Tennessee, $5; Claude Turner, Tennessee, $2.50; Fritz Myers, Tennessee, $1.

From the depth of our souls we thank these donors for their splendid help. Who else will come to our assistance? Send all donations to Miss Georgia Thomas, Menlo, Ga.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

Conducted by J. M. McCaleb

A Bit of History.

BY C. G. VINCENT.

The following story, related by John T. Hawkins in the Missionary Intelligencer, has a most wonderful lesson for many of our congregations:

Five miles northeast of Lexington, Ky., is the famous Bryan Spring, from which the heroic women carried water into the fort when they knew the thickets and canebrakes all about them were full of savage Indians hid in ambush, waiting for the opportunity to attack the fort. This incident has made Bryan Spring famous in American history. But an incident just as important in church history has since been enacted on the hill just beyond the spring from where the fort stood. Here stands the Bryan Station Baptist Church. This church was built early in the nineteenth century, and was antissionary. The celebrated Thompson Dudley preached there for many years; here his family and other prominent and wealthy Baptists had their membership. But in course of time the missionary spirit began to move among them. All are familiar with this movement among the Baptists—what contention, strife, and division it produced, till finally the whole denomination divided and the Missionary Baptists became a separate denomination.

Bryan Station Church divided about equally on the question and became two congregations—one, missionary; the other, antissionary. They agreed to divide the house and the time; the missionary element took the north side and two Sundays in the month, and the antis took the south side and two Sundays in the month. Things went on fairly well, the missionary side growing stronger and the "antis" growing weaker, till the house needed a new roof and other repairs. The "missionaries" endeavored to get their "anti" brethren to join them in repairing the house; but the "antis" were growing constantly fewer in number and would not join in the repairs. At last the missionary branch covered and repaired their side of the house; and thus it stood for years with a good tin roof on the one side, and an old, leaky, shingle roof on the other. Finally, as the "antis" had grown so few as to hardly meet at all, the missionaries, in sheer self-defense, to save the house, covered the other side of the roof and otherwise improved the house. Now the "antis" are all gone; the last member, a grandniece of the great Dudley, passed away last spring; while the missionaries have a good, active congregation. The spirit of missions and the opposite made the difference.

It is said that "history repeats itself." A good brother wrote me this statement: "There is some division in our congregation about the missionary question." He went on to say that all the members—about thirty-five—had been asked to help in the cause of foreign missions; but only seven out of the whole membership were willing to give to such work. He said that there was some bitter feeling against doing such work. I presume that no organic division will take place in this particular congregation on the question; but if it should happen and if they should make the same arrangements as the above-named Baptist church did, we may rest assured that the final outcome will be just the same. Why not? Why any Bible reader who professes to be led by its teachings can oppose, for a moment, the very work commanded by the Lord's Christ and preached and practiced by the apostles and the New Testament church, is more than the writer is able to understand. It is true that there is a general awakening among the faithful churches of Christ everywhere along missionary lines, yet there is much room for a forward movement. More evangelists and elders and leaders are teaching and training the churches on the subject; but there are many evangelists, elders, and leaders who are not "up to date," in the proper sense, on this great theme and work.

Hindrances to Gospel Work in India.

BY W. HUME M'HENRY.

In a recent news item I mentioned the conditions that exist so far as the castes are concerned, and also pointed out the fact that naturally it would be supposed that the work would have its beginning among the lower castes. It was also pointed out that on account of the poverty of the people the building of meetinghouses was practically out of the question. It might be mentioned here that for this reason it is imperative that most of the funds for the workers should come from the home land until the church becomes stronger and has in it more wealth. Of course the men are encouraged to work as they have opportunity and the idea of a "professional ministry" is condemned.

I wish now to notice another thing that has become a great "stone of stumbling, and a rock of offense," to many. The poverty of the people and the oppression of their priestly superiors has kept them in ignorance for centuries. Even now, after years and years of work done by the various sectarian missions, comparatively few are able to read and write. I believe I am safe in saying that the chief work of the missions is educational work. Remove this and there would be very little left to appeal to the people. Coming as they did to a people oppressed and ignorant and yearning for educational advantages, the "educational bait" caught hundreds of suckers. Many worldly advantages, such as free education, free clothes, assistance in purchasing land and animals to work it, with the further idea that they would to a certain degree be shielded from the power of the law—these entirely hid from view the main purpose of the work of the missionary—namely, the salvation of souls. While they have developed many with a "zeal without knowledge" of the Bible, the main object sought and obtained from the mission is of a worldly character and the idea of salvation is a secondary consideration. The minds of thousands of people have been so far poisoned in this way that it is almost impossible to reach them with the plain gospel message. The first question is: "Will you give us a master if we are baptized?" I believe that people should be educated, and the permanency of the work depends to a certain degree upon educating those who are to take active part in the work. This should be separate, as far as possible, from the evangelistic part of the work. In my opinion, the missions in this country have through their educational system built up one of the strongest barriers to the spread of the gospel that could be found anywhere. We have made very few appeals for help to carry on any work of this kind. We do a little as we are able. We go before the people with only one plea: Place your trust in your Creator and accept the only means of salvation so abundantly provided for in the Lord Jesus Christ. We try to discourage the desire for worldly advantages and exalt the supremely greater advantages which will result from obeying and living for Christ. We strive to exalt Christ and his blood-bought church instead of material things. The truth will win those who are interested in their salvation. We lean upon Him.

Brother Hanabuchi, who spent the month of August distributing tracts, selling Scripture portions, and in doing house-to-house preaching, visited about twenty houses, distributed more than a thousand tracts, and sold five copies of Mark. Some welcomed him, others stood in opposition.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

The Most Generous Cities.

Experts have made out a list of American cities showing which are to be entitled to places of honor on the list of public benefactions. This "curious computation" is noted by the Michigan Christian Advocate, which gives the list with a few words of comment as follows:

First of all is Rochester, N. Y., which is put down as "the most generous city." Then, in order, come Hartford, Conn.; Reading, Pa.; and Detroit, Mich.

The fifth in order as charitably inclined comes Pittsburgh, Pa., followed by Utica, N. Y.; Albany, N. Y.; Lowell, Mass.; Richmond, Va.; and Binghamton, N. Y.

And the hardest to extract money from are Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Minneapolis, San Francisco, and St. Louis.

That these cities, and in fact all others, do not "shell out" for charity more coin than they do is not the fault of the individuals and associations which make persistent appeals.

According to the last compilation, there are three and one-half times as many charitable organizations appealing to the generosity of the public as there were a year ago. War-relief organizations help to swell the list constantly.

But, while showing popular sympathy for charities, it may be stated that there is more money given for church support annually than for any other single purpose. Last year the United States gave eight hundred and twenty million dollars to its churches. This year the sum is expected to exceed the billion mark.

No real good is accomplished by making out such lists. Many things enter into the liberality and public benefactions of a city. The city that appears to give the most may really give the least. The poor man who gives a nickel a month receives more honor from the Lord than the millionaire who gives his thousands annually. "Let each man do according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver." (2 Cor. 9: 7.) "For if the readiness is there, it is acceptable according as a man hath, not according as he hath not." (2 Cor. 8: 12.) The best service is that which seeks to please God rather than man. "And whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him." (Col. 3: 17.)

The Christmas Ship for 1916.

Election day is over, Thanksgiving has passed, and the newspapers are reminding us daily to do our Christmas shopping early. It is high time for us to urge each and every one of our readers to prepare to help the poor on Christmas Day. If we spend the day in honor of Christ, we cannot spend it in drinking, intoxication, or needless extravagance. The Christmas ship for 1916 sailed on December 1, loaded with provisions, clothing, and supplies for the Armenians and Syrians. The navy collier Cæsar has been refitted and fitted out for carrying food supplies to the destitute Syrians and Armenians. The Reformed Episcopalian weekly furnished further information on this subject before the departure of the ship as follows:

It will leave New York on December 1, carrying a capacity cargo of foodstuffs and new clothing for Beirut, Syria, from which port relief will be distributed by American Red Cross and Red Crescent agents, aided by United States consuls and missionaries.

The American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief has just sent two hundred and eight thousand dollars through the State Department to various distribution centers, to be distributed immediately by the committee's agents direct to the most needy survivors of the Armenian deportations and the Syrian famine months. This money will purchase grain, blankets, and clothing, giving the sufferers within the Turkish empire a foretaste of the Christmas cheer which the United States navy boat will bring.

As a necessary preliminary to the sending of the Christmas ship, arrangements are being made for collections in the churches of the entire country on Thanksgiving Day, the receipts of which will be used in completing the cargo. The ship will carry 600,000 pounds of rice, 200,000 pounds of lima beans, 400,000 pounds of crushed wheat, 2,100,000 pounds of whole wheat, 500,000 pounds of sugar, 1,000 cases of condensed milk for children, 10,000 barrels of flour, 50,000 gallons of petroleum, and 25,000 gallons of cottonseed oil.

Military regulations forbid the carrying of any except new clothing. Hundreds of cases of warm underwear and sweaters and light shoes for men, women, and children, stockings for women and children, cotton and woolen socks for men, blankets and blanket shawls, gray-cotton and woolen cloth in the piece, unbleached muslin and cotton thread, needles and pins, will form a part of the cargo. Contributors to the cargo and churches which are raising money are sending their gifts to W. A. Staub, the Red-Cross representative in charge of the Christmas ship, at the Bush Terminal, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Navy officials and prominent churchmen of all denominations will join the ceremonies to be held at the Christmas ship's departure, adding to its cargo the holiday good wishes of one country to the stricken races of another.

If we have no fellowship in relieving the Syrians and Armenians, we have destitute Americans and foreigners in our own country appealing to us for assistance. "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto Jehovah, and his good deed will he pay him again." (Prov. 19: 17.)

The Typhus Scourge.

The Turk is responsible for much devastation and suffering. Those who take the sword shall not escape from the suffering and devastation that they bring on their helpless victims. The Turkish army that has been sweeping Armenia and Syria with merciless destruction is reported now to be under the dread visitation of a typhus scourge which is destroying its men at the rate of a thousand a day. Horrors are on every hand, and so many millions of men are in the fields of carnage that few are left to raise the hand or apply science and skill to the relief of the distressed. The condition of most of the East is to-day, perhaps, the most terrible condition it has experienced since history began to be written. "They that take the sword shall perish with the sword." (Matt. 26: 52.)

A Good Example.

When we learn to make sacrifices in order to relieve the distresses of others, we are making progress in the Christian life. Christmas presents many opportunities for doing good. We always have the poor with us. People are in superstition and ignorance and need the truth. The Herald and Presbyter gives us information concerning the gift of the student body of Miami University as follows:

We are glad to know of the development of unselfishness and of loving beneficence in many quarters in this time of the world's distress. For instance, the students of Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, are curbing their social activities this winter, in order to contribute the money usually spent in this way to the European prison camp fund. The first contribution was made by the senior class last week, when it gave up its semester dinner and donated the money subscribed for the occasion to this fund. Other organizations have taken steps to reduce their social expenses for the winter and give the money saved to the prison camp fund.

Such a spirit is commendable. Such action shines and should lead others to do likewise.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

We are expecting Brother Larimore to be with us at Russell Street next Sunday.

J. T. Harris, the well-known evangelist, of Florence, Ala., is spending a few days with his mother, who lives in Nashville.

The brethren who attended the meeting at Cookeville, Tenn., were greatly pleased with the result. The addresses were of a high order and were edifying to all. Brother Elam will write a more detailed report.

Married, in the study of the Russell Street Church, on Monday, December 18, at 4 P.M., Mr. C. S. Stanfield to Miss Mavourneen Maddox, both of this city. A. B. Lipscomb officiating. We extend heartiest congratulations.

From R. D. Smith, Winchester, Tenn., December 15: "I am now in my new field of labor, Winchester, Tenn., and the outlook seems good for a successful work. We have a fine body of people here, and I believe they have a mind to work. The loss of Dr. Gattis and Dr. Grisard is a great blow to the church, but the influence of their good lives will mean much to the church for years to come. Brethren, pray for us."

From L. S. White, Dallas, Texas, December 14: "The work at Pearl and Bryan Streets, this city, is in fine condition. Audiences are large and additions nearly every Sunday. I have notified the church that I will close my work in Dallas next June and go into the evangelistic field. I have often contemplated a step of this kind, and now, as my children are away from home in school, I have decided to take this step."

From A. N. Kennedy, Portales, N. M., December 12: "I have just returned home from Hereford, Texas, at which place I preached three times to small audiences. I go next Saturday to Causey, N. M., to preach. After that I will close my year's work with a mission meeting near Portales. I hope to do much good in the Master's name. There is much work to do, but laborers are few. There are many places in this country where the gospel has never been preached. Pray for me in the work."

Louis R. Patmont, the noted mission worker, preached at Russell Street on Sunday morning and at South College Street in the evening. The brethren here were very much impressed with Brother Patmont's special fitness for his chosen work among the foreign classes in our large cities. They were also pleased to learn that he had severed his connection with all human societies and is determined to follow in all things the simple New Testament plan. We bespeak for him a hearty welcome and a liberal support.

From Sister Lottie Johnson, 4019 Botanical Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.: "Our work is progressing slowly, but surely. Brother Bonner was invited to hold Sunday-night services last Lord's day in the home of people (sectarians) who are much interested. I received five dollars for the work here from the church at Enon, near Fulton, Ky., by Sister Oscar Foy, for which we are very grateful. Let everybody remember that we are very anxious to find people in this city. Please write us names and addresses. Keep our meeting place in memory—Texas and Cherokee Avenues."

The editors of the Gospel Advocate were grieved to learn of the painful accident to D. R. Dungan, the well-known author of "On the Rock." The Christian Standard has this note: "D. R. Dungan's many friends will be pained to learn that he is in a Honolulu hospital suffering with a broken hip. The accident which occasioned the fracture was a fall caused by the lurching of the Wilhelmina, on which he and his wife had passage for the Mid-Pacific Islands. Brother Dungan is so well known as preacher, teacher, and author that many will wish to drop him a line of sympathy and courage. His address is Queen's Hospital, Honolulu, Hawaii."

From H. W. Jones, Hardin, Ky., December 6: "My last 'mission' meeting, under our tent, was held at Brewers, Ky., a village near home. The meeting closed the first week in October. There were eleven discourses, with a good hearing at almost every meeting, but no one was baptized. The people here seem to be satisfied with the popular denominations and general prosperity. There are but few of our brethren in the community, and they do not meet regularly. It is discouraging to hold a meeting where so little interest in the truth is manifested, but I almost always see something to encourage me in the good work. When we have God and the truth on our side, why should we complain?"

From C. A. Buchanan, Wichita Falls, Texas, December 14: "It will be interesting to Nashville readers of the Gospel Advocate to know that Alva Lee Kelton, of that city was with us on Sunday, December 10. Upon request he occupied the eleven-o'clock hour in giving us some interesting facts concerning the history of the work in Nashville. He shows remarkable familiarity with the history and present status of every congregation in that city, and he delights to talk about the splendid Christians there. He seems to think the good people there are to blame for the fact that Nashville has more loyal churches than any other city in the world. This must be so, too; for if God had his way, independent of human agency, I am sure every city and every country would have such advantages. Brother Kelton's address was encouraging to us to continue in the great work."

Mrs. W. J. Hogan, of Speigner, Ala., writes: "I am trying in my feeble way to teach my children the Bible, and try to give them the best of literature. I am a great admirer of the Gospel Advocate. I enjoy every piece in it, and especially Brother Larimore's pieces. I enjoyed John E. Dunn's piece recently on 'Doing the Work of an Evangelist,' and thought how proud I would be if we could have a worker like him to come and live among us and help build up the cause here; but being the only member here that seems to want or realize the need of the gospel, it is hard to do anything. I have made several efforts, but, so far as human eye can see, they have been fruitless; but I have not yet given up entirely, and believe if I could get help from some of the churches from other places we could do something yet for Christ in this section. May the editors and writers of the Gospel Advocate all live to do much more good in this world."

From Ben West, Lometa, Texas: "I am to begin laboring with the church in Ennis on March 1, 1917. The church in Ennis is about ten years old. From the start it has had a healthy growth. They have about an eight-thousand-dollar church home in the heart of the city. Ennis is located in the rich farming belt of Texas, has about ten thousand population, and is connected with Dallas and Fort Worth, Corsicana, and other towns by interurbans and railroads. I am near the close of a year's work with the church in Lometa. I have enjoyed the work with these people very much, for they have stood faithfully in the new experience for them. The church has grown rapidly and workers have developed. Two missions have been established and the brethren have the Bible idea in 'sounding out the word.' They will want a minister to help them in 1917. I shall begin an eleven-weeks' work with the church in Weatherford on December 15, finishing in time to reach Ennis by March 1. The Weatherford church is one of the best in Texas."

DO YOU SUFFER FROM BACKACHE?

When your kidneys are weak and torpid they do not properly perform their functions; your back aches and you do not feel like doing much of anything. You are likely to be despondent and to borrow trouble, just as if you hadn't enough already. Don't be a victim any longer.

The old reliable medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, gives strength and tone to the kidneys and builds up the whole system. Get it today.

Club Solves Piano Problem.

The greatest danger in buying a piano or player-piano is the difficulty in selecting one of real and lasting quality. There are so many cheap imitations on the market that the chances of full and permanent satisfaction are slight unless you are an expert judge and are extremely careful in your selection.

If you feel that you are not a good judge of the quality, durability, and value of an instrument, or if you have not time to make an exhaustive investigation of these matters, why not throw the responsibility on the piano club? It has already made the investigation for you and will assume the full responsibility of giving you absolute and perfect satisfaction and the largest possible value for your money. What your insurance policy is to your home, the club is to your piano or player-piano.

But the club does not stop there. It clubs your order with those of ninety-nine other subscribers, thus securing the lowest possible factory price for each club member. It provides convenient terms of payment, the strongest guarantees of quality and durability, and gives you the opportunity to try your instrument thoroughly before you buy. The club absolutely guarantees perfect satisfaction in every detail of piano buying. Write for your copy of the catalogue to-day. Address the Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

A Cough May Lead to Tuberculosis

Distressing and dangerous complications may follow if you neglect it. Even when so serious a stage is reached, Eckman's Alternative may bring relief. For more than twenty years it has been widely used in such cases with beneficial results.

As with any medication employed in this trouble, the best results are obtained when the patient pays strict attention to diet and gets plenty of rest and fresh air.

Because of its easily assimilable content of calcium chlorid, this preparation is effective where a tonic up-builder is indicated. As a corrective of night sweats it has proved most useful. It may be tried with absolute safety, since it contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs of any sort. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

Tennessee.

Cleveland, December 8.—We enjoyed our beloved Brother Farmer's meeting very much. Although the visible results were not so great, he certainly labored faithfully and well. The obstacles are many and great, but we feel that we are steadily gaining ground. Sometimes the way seems long and dark and our struggles seem all in vain, but our Father gives us new courage and strength and we are able to pull a little farther. We realize that so many appeals for help are made that the readers become tired of seeing the word "appeal;" but we so love this work in East Tennessee that we have resolved to risk your disapprobation and make one more urgent call for help in our work at Cleveland. Brother Little has been forced out of the field and is teaching school this winter to try to support his family. This appeal is not for him, but for our new church building. It is nearing completion, but we are in debt for it, and the load is too great for the four or five on whom the burden falls. Now, with the number of members of the church here, it looks as though we ought to be able to care for ourselves; but, remember, the cause is young here and most of us are poor, and those who might do more have not learned yet that they can. So we are once more asking for the help of those who would like to have a part in this great work. We know that if the strong churches of Middle Tennessee could only realize the situation here, we would never have to ask for help, for it would be forthcoming. Praying the Lord for your prayerful consideration and for his richest blessings on you, we leave the matter in your hands. My address is 1505 Oak Street, Cleveland, Tenn.—Mrs. J. M. Carl.

Hillsboro, November 28.—It has been my custom to write you how the cause of Christ is getting along each year. In former days we seemed to estimate the good done by the number added to the church. We all rejoice at this, but are made sad to visit those places and find such congregations spiritually sick. This is true both of town and country churches. It seems that there is a cause for this. I know a congregation which is about sixty years old, which has had the best of preachers and good men to conduct a meeting each year, with good results as to numbers. It seemed that they would take the country for Christ. When the preacher started home after ten days or two weeks' hard labor, he would receive what a good hand would receive for manual labor. It seems that such congregations want a new preacher every year and as much preaching as they can get for as little money as possible. Such is not scriptural. The new converts imbibe this kind of living and thus put a low estimate on the Christian life. They join secret lodges, and are prompt in their meetings, keep their dues paid up, and are careful to be in good standing with their lodges, and lose interest in the church. An elder in the church alluded to told me I ought to be a Mason, and insisted that I could do more good. I told him that the church demanded my whole power and strength undivided. It is certain death for the church to do things in any other name than the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. I have heard that a young preacher was preaching against sisters' having aid societies and such things, while he was an Odd Fellow. Why make this objection? A good brother in McMinnville told me he never belonged to anything but the church. He thought that was enough. But he said: "My boys belong to the lodges." Such boys will never fill or come to the standard of such fathers. "A house divided against itself cannot stand." Let us try what God says: "Whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him." (Col. 3: 17.)—W. P. Sims.

Clarksville, November 30.—On the third Sunday in June, 1915, a tent meeting was begun in Clarksville, the preaching being done by Brother I. B. Bradley, of Dickson. The meeting was held largely through the instrumentality of Brother C. E. W. Dorris, who was then located at New Providence. The Hopkinsville church furnished the tent, and Brother Edmondson, of New Providence, saw to the transportation of it. The congregations at Oakland and New Providence both aided materially in the meeting, the few here doing all they could. On the first Lord's day after the meeting closed, which was about July 11, a few members met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Dawson, on Madison Street Extension, which is a little more than a mile from the business part of town, where they have continued meeting since. On one Lord's day there was present only one woman (Mrs. Blankenship) besides the Dawson family. Sister Hambo, of Providence, speaks of the church at Clarksville as the household of the Dawsons, and truly it has been like one family. Soon after its beginning one man said, "We are not doing any good, and we might as well quit," and he did quit, going to the "progressives" (I think they prefer that name here). One woman said "No," and she stood firm, as well as Brother Thornton and Brother and Sister Dawson, who generously furnished their home with all the needed comforts. In the beginning there were four families represented; Mr. and Mrs. Dawson, who came from Adairville, Ky., they having five children, two of whom are members of the church; Mr. and Mrs. Thornton, originally from Allen's Creek, Tenn., Mrs. Thornton having since passed away; Mrs. Blankenship, from Oakland, she having one daughter; and Mr. Winn, who left us. To-day there are eight families represented. Those added are Mrs. McQuirter, who has been living at Clarksville for some time; Miss Whitfield, from Oakland, and her brother; Mrs. Winn, from Oakland; Mrs. Williams, who is Brother S. F. Morrow's sister; Miss Tommie Thornton, Mr. Williams, myself and family. About a year ago we moved to Clarksville and had some trouble finding their place of meeting, but on the second Lord's day after our arrival we located and met with them. They were seated around an open fire; and when we came in, they arose and greeted us. Then we sang a few songs, one of the Dawson boys read a Bible lesson, after which we partook of the Lord's Supper. Brother Thornton waited on the table. I thought it was the most impressive service I had ever attended. I was reminded of another faithful little band at Tullahoma, which we had just left, and which no human being knows how we love. We regretted leaving them, but are glad to find Christian friends here. Several efforts have been made to secure a place to meet in town, but each time some one unfriendly to the cause would thwart that purpose. About a week ago we rented an upper room on the west end of Franklin Street, over the Daily News printing office, which we have papered and painted and expect to occupy on and after December 3; and to-day as we were taking leave of our church home we were filled with sad joy—sad to leave our pleasant home, and joyful because we felt that we could enlarge our field of usefulness by having secured comfortable quarters in town. I thought of the never-changing home of the soul. Brother S. F. Morrow has preached once for us, as has Brother Dorris also, and when we recover from our recent expenditures we hope to have preaching as often as we are able to do so. We hope that any members of the church remaining in town over Sunday will not fail to find us.—Mrs. T. K. Williams.

Texas.

Childress, December 6.—I have been busy this fall and have had a fair measure of success. I preached last Lord's day at Kirkland, preached a funeral at Childress in the afternoon, and back at Kirkland the same night. I will hold a meeting at Thornberry, twelve miles from Wichita Falls, the last half of this month, and preach at Iowa Park, Wellington, and Munday, also. We have a mission movement here in Childress, and it is moving on well, in spite of a few individuals who with lying and slander are trying to hinder it, and we will succeed; for it is right, and right will prevail. I preach for them a few nights this week. If any one is troubled with materialism, send for my new book, "The Soul of Man." C. A. Buchanan, evangelist, says of it: "I have examined Brother Tice Elkins' new book, 'The Soul of Man,' and pronounce it excellent in every respect. I consider it exhaustive in its treatment of the various phases of the subject. Its arrangement cannot be improved upon. I advise all to get it." Hardy E. Baugh, evangelist, writes: "I have read 'The Soul of Man,' written by Tice Elkins, and consider it the strongest work of its kind ever written. The chapter on 'Death' alone is worth many times the price of the book. It should have a wide circulation." Order from the author, Childress, Texas. Price, thirty cents a copy.—Tice Elkins.

In Behalf of a New Congregation.

In July, 1915, a few disciples in Ridgedale, suburb of Chattanooga, Tenn., banded themselves together to worship God as "it is written." Ridgedale is a splendid field for work, being the center of a territory of twenty square miles and a population of many thousands, the Ridgedale congregation being the only congregation in this field.

The congregation has grown from about nineteen members to a membership of forty-five. About one-fourth of this number are men, any of whom will take public part in the service. We have not been idle, but have met regularly from the beginning in a hall, for which we have been paying ten dollars per month; have held one protracted meeting, and employ a man one-fourth of his time preaching.

With help from brethren in Chattanooga and elsewhere, we have purchased a nice lot, well located, and fully protected by clause in the deed, for which we have paid the sum of eight hundred and eighty-five dollars. We have on hand a small sum for building purposes and hope to begin work as soon as possible. The Ridgedale church has given liberally to this work, and will give more; but we need help and come to you at this time and ask if you will not show your appreciation of His goodness by becoming a partner in the work that we have undertaken.

Won't you, as an individual, and your congregation, as a congregation, send us an offering for the furtherance and completion of this work? We feel sure the Lord will bless you, and we will remember you and work and pray to make your investment a profitable one.

Send all contributions to S. S. McMahan, secretary, 2107 Vine Street, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Splendid for Bad Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis

An Inexpensive Home-Made Remedy—Gives Surest, Quickest Relief.

Anyone who tries this pleasant tasting home-made cough syrup, will quickly understand why it is used in more homes in the United States and Canada than any other cough remedy. The way it takes hold of an obstinate cough, giving immediate relief, will make you regret that you never tried it before. It is a truly dependable cough remedy that should be kept handy in every home, to use at the first sign of a cough during the night or day time.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents and you have a full pint of the most effective remedy you ever used.

The quick, lasting relief you get from this excellent cough syrup will really surprise you. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., 233 Main St. Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

One of the brightest and most entertaining of all our Sunday-school publications is THE YOUNG PEOPLE, a four-page weekly, devoted especially to the interests and welfare of young people of both sexes, but which will prove a channel of cheer and blessing to older ones as well. This periodical has just been consolidated with THE BIBLE STORY HELPER, and presents the strongest and most essential features of both in an improved form. Three pages are given to stories of an entertaining and elevating character and articles of an educational nature, by gifted and well-informed writers, strikingly illustrated by photo-engravings and line drawings; and one page is devoted to a clear and concise presentation of the Sunday-school lesson, historically and exegetically, by A. B. Lipscomb, one of the editors of the Gospel Advocate, in which are presented the thoughts of many of the world's best thinkers. The size of the page is 10½x14 inches. Printed from clear type on good paper.

WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y. — "For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting worse every day. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not walk straight because of the pain in my back and I had pains in my stomach. I went to a doctor and he said I must go under an operation, but I did not go. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said 'I know nothing will help me but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which I had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health and did not have the operation." — Mrs. JOHN A. KOENIG, 502 Flushing Avenue, Astoria, N. Y.

Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing else will do; but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory, telling how operations were advised and were not performed; or, if performed, did no good, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

If you want advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

The Cause of Gray Hair.

Hair grows gray by reason of the same cause which produces dwarfed yellow stalks of corn instead of strong, dark-green, growthy stalks—lack of nutrition. Hair, like the crops of the field, must be fed, either naturally from the scalp as the stalk of corn is fed from the soil, or artificial hair food may be applied as fertilizer is applied to the soil to enrich it. Unless your hair is supplied with its natural oil—the food on which it subsists—you may expect it to cease its flourishing and lose its natural luster, color, and beauty. The hair must have food on which to live. Do not neglect it or it will lose its luster, become stiff and coarse and eventually gray. Begins now and prevent the appearance of age by using a natural hair oil, "La Creole." It will keep the hair soft, fluffy, and beautiful. Ask your dealer, and if he cannot supply you send one dollar to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn., for a trial bottle.

The National Teachers' Normal and Business College, Henderson, Tenn.

We are now in the closing of the second term of eight weeks of this session of school. The enrollment is around the two-hundred mark, from fourteen States. The best work in the history of the school, both by students and teachers, is being done. Everybody is happy. The institution does not believe in losing time, hence we have no holidays. In this the Henderson College is in a class by itself. Glad news comes from every direction of the success of "our boys and girls." One recent letter from a young brother in Oklahoma, who received his education in the Henderson school, says: "My lowest grade on the State examination in twenty-two branches was ninety-four per cent, with an average of above ninety-nine per cent. The superintendent says it is the best grade ever made in the county, and he thinks the best in the State." All the "affiliation" with "Class A" colleges in the land avails nothing, unless a student can "deliver the goods." Our students do honest, thorough, practical work. We have no record in baseball, football, ya-ya, rah-rah, zip-rip, or any other rowdyism.

The Bible classes are large and interesting. New classes in Bible geography, church history, and homiletics will be organized next term. Notwithstanding the high cost of living, we still maintain the best of accommodations at former low rates.

There remain yet three terms of eight weeks of the best part of the session. The next and third term will open on December 26, 1916. We still have a few of our latest catalogues. If you are interested, write. They are free. Faithfully, A. G. FRIED.

The St. Louis Work.

BY THOMAS J. BONNER.

It is said that the horrible war in Europe is having its good effects in destroying the distinction between royalty and peasantry. Great calamities and seeming catastrophes have their salutary effects. The work in this great city has been greatly retarded by discordant elements, but through it all we trust the Lord was leading and that the faithful will be more patient and love more sincerely.

Two months ago I prayerfully undertook the Lord's work in this strategic city, and I find a devoted band at Texas and Cherokee Streets to help me. The number is few, but we are not of those that count souls, but rather value them. There is not, to my knowledge, a discordant note in the church. With a rising horizon and needy field before them, they may be expected to forget the past and press on. We all feel a tremendous responsibility. Earnest hearts have taken the responsibility of keeping me here. They feel the burden and understand I am willing to share the economy necessary to care for this work. It has been suggested that St. Louis get a man that could draw on the brotherhood in general for his support, but other hearts did not share this feeling. "We will do what we can" shall be our motto; and if we find a task too large for us we will feel free to speak to sister churches. The church here has not indorsed any appeal to the brotherhood for help since I came here.

Brother G. A. Dunn was here some two years ago and gave some valuable suggestions or plans. As soon as we can secure a lot we mean to colonize. Our meeting place is only temporary, and only those experienced in city work can know the handicaps confronting us. St. Louis has a population of eight hundred thousand, with not a house in which to worship Jehovah in simplicity as "the fathers" did. We crave the moral support and prayerful remembrance of God's people everywhere. We would appreciate leaflets and tracts brethren feel disposed to send us for the work here. I have had the opportunity of speaking once in a "progressive" building to a "progressive" audience—a rare opportunity in St. Louis. I recently held a short meeting at Mozier, Ill., and left a fine spirit in the community and good audiences. Brethren, please send me the addresses of friends, and especially disciples, in this city. I will take pleasure in calling on them. Any encouragement helps us. My address is 4232 Botanical Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

The Tennessee Orphans' Home.

To-day (December 15) finds us all housed in on account of a snow that covers mother earth. However, we are fortunate in being close enough to school for our children not to miss; and our building being steam-heated, we are not suffering on account of cold weather. However, I find it impossible to look after our farm work and keep things going as we had expected; but, doubtless, in a few days the weather will be so we can get back to our work of preparing for general farm work, dairying, and the poultry business.

We have received quite a number of nice coops of chickens for the farm, but not the number we expect to carry; in fact, we are preparing for three hundred hens. A coop of hens from any community wishing to favor the Home will be very acceptable.

During the month of November donations came in to the amount of nearly five hundred dollars. The general running expenses were over that amount, and we had quite a number of back accounts that had to be settled up; and now, in the dead of winter, we are several hundred dollars in debt. I know you do not want us to ask you to remember our children, but simply to remind you of the fact that we are out of money. We have not even enough on hand, at this writing, to buy one day's provisions; but we are not going to complain. We believe that the children will be remembered; that our many friends will come to the rescue. However, if the present condition of our finances continues until Christmas, our children will have to go through Christmas without being remembered. But it is not Christmas so much that we are interested in; it is the general interest of the Home. We want you to know that any fellowship from any source is appreciated.

Since November 1 twelve children have gone out of the Home and ten have come in. We have bright, intelligent boys and girls to be placed in good homes. I would be glad to locate as many as fifteen or twenty within the you could not get another jar of Mentholatum, what a price you would put upon the remnant of the jar on your dresser!

That is, if you are one of the millions who have come to consider that little Mentholatum jar a very friend in need.

In the winter you fight your coughs and colds, sore throat and croup, with it. In the summer you seek relief from the smarting of sunburn or the sting of insects by rubbing with it.

All the year round you need it after shaving or to apply on cuts, burns, scalds and bruises, sores, skin abrasions, or chapped face and hands, not to mention its usefulness for headaches.

The jar of Mentholatum, neat, clean, handy, and always efficient, is now much more of a necessity than a luxury in millions of homes.

The Teaching of Hebrews on the "Falling Away."

BY V. I. STIRMAN.

I have asked space in the columns of the Gospel Advocate to offer to Brother A. G. Freed a correction, for it is not a criticism nor a rebuke. I refer to his reply to Will W. Freeland's question on page 1086 of the Advocate, wherein explanation is wanted on Heb. 6: 4-6.

First, I call the attention of the brother to the fact that the major purpose of this letter is to forestall the falling away from Christ and going back to Moses for justification. The Hebrew letter was written by the apostle in the year A.D. 64. At this date the Judaizing teachers were making great efforts to prevent their Jewish brethren from accepting Christ and obeying the gospel. This prejudice against Christ and the truth evidently induced the writing of the Hebrew letter. Notice its introduction, the difference in style from his beginning other letters to churches in general. For example: "Paul, and Sylvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians." Again: "Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ, . . . to the saints and faithful brethren in Christ, which are at Colosse." These are sufficient. Now see the change when he addresses the Hebrews. The first word is "God." The Jews knew God; to others God must be made known. "Who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets." This also the Jews knew. Then follows the statement, "Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son." Having thus introduced God's Son, and his superiority over Moses, he proceeds by saying: "Who being the brightness of his [God's] glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high." In verse 4 he proceeds: "Being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they. For unto which of the angels said he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son? And again, when he bringeth in the first begotten [Christ] into the world, he saith, And let all the angels of God worship him." By calling these facts to the mind of the Jews, he shows Christ's pre-eminence over Moses. These suffice to show why the difference in addressing the Jews.

Passing to the second chapter of this letter, he calls their attention to the facts as expressed, saying: "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard [from the Son], lest at any time we should let them slip. For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him?" Enough on this point.

We pass now to the fifth chapter, wherein he again calls the Jews' attention to the supremacy of Christ over Moses: "Though he [Christ] were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him [whether Jew or Gentile]." (Heb. 5: 8, 9.) He then carries them through the priesthood, showing that it had been changed from the family of Aaron to that of Judah." (Heb. 7: 14.)

We think this is enough to convince the unbiased mind that the Hebrew letter is specific in many of its utterances. Overlooking this, our scribes find it difficult to harmonize a few seemingly contradictory statements, which forces them to wrest the scriptures from their legitimate use and to offer hairsplitting arguments like the one about which information is sought by our esteemed brother on the words "fall" and "falling away." The Christian who absents himself from the Lord's-day meetings, carouses with bad characters, indulges in profanity and obscene jollifications—where is he? Has he fallen away or only fallen? If he has not fallen, and also has not fallen away, please tell me in plain English, what is his condition? Therefore we go to the sixth chapter and analyze a little: "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened [by the truth], and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance." (Heb. 6: 4-6.) Now we ask, why this impossibility? Because (seeing) "they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." Who crucified the Son of God? The Jews. Then they may repeat the act; but the Gentiles cannot, as they did not commit the act at first. Therefore it is a specific scripture, not applicable to others than the Jews.

The next scripture is: "For if we [Christians] sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins." (Heb. 10: 26.) If this is universally applied, it clashes with 1 John 1: 9, which reads: "If we confess our sins, he [Christ] is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." The apostle John is writing to all Christians, Jews and Gentiles; Paul is writing to Jews only. Therefore, when Paul says, "If we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth [the gospel of Christ], there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins"—because the prophesied sin offering has come already; and if you reject him, it is a willful sin; and though you will be looking for it, it will never come—there is no clash between Paul and the apostle John.

Keep in mind, please, Paul's major purpose in writing this letter as stated above. Therefore the term occurs often therein in the singular number, as in the twelfth chapter, where we find Paul teaching a besetting sin that is peculiar to everybody, when, in fact, he is speaking of this one sin that is applicable to none but Jews, and liable to beset all of them. Let us hear Paul: "Lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us." "Weight" is plural; "sin" is specific. Just so, in the sixth chapter, the sin of apostatizing is before the apostle's mind; and to prevent this, the apostle wrote those Christianized Jews. These extreme thoughts occur only in this letter.

But it comes to my mind that I should have said more about the act of sinning willfully cutting off from all sacrifice. For centuries the Jews had expected a great sacrificial offering for sin to be made. The enlightenment mentioned taught them that this sacrifice had been made by the Christ. Now, if they go back to the law of Moses, it is but natural that they still will expect this offering; and it being true that this offering had already been made, then they would be disappointed. Hence it is properly said that in going back they would lose all; there is no other universal sacrificial offering for sin.

In February, 1864, I was in a meeting in Greenville, Texas, and, contrary to my custom, I was announcing my subject in advance, as the usual custom now is. I had preached at noon and announced that in the evening discourse I would take up and harmonize those extreme scriptures mentioned here with the general trend of teaching in the New Testament. About the middle of the afternoon the lamented Tom Caskey arrived in the town. He made inquiry and soon was at my boarding house. Brother Caskey and I were special friends, but I soon felt creeping up my sleeve a wish that I had not made the appointment. Knowing him as I did, I knew, if he thought I was in error, that then and there he would say so, and I wanted no public clash with Tom Caskey, and I tried hard, though I said nothing, to find some excuse for a change in subject for the evening; but nothing could I conjecture that would be plausible and also satisfactory. After revolving the matter some time in mind, this thought occurred to me: I know that I am right, and I will just fulfill my announcement and risk the consequences. The hour for preaching came round, and a fine congregation met us. I had tendered Brother Caskey the pulpit, but he declined. So to work I went. Then I was comparatively young and full of life. In this discourse I put out all the facts and arguments I had on the question, and closed by saying: "Brother Caskey, will you talk some?" "Yes, sir," he replied, in a positive manner. Well, I thought the fight was on; but, to my astonishment, he indorsed my entire discourse, adding much to it, and closed by saying that that was "the only way these seemingly conflicting scriptures could be harmonized;" and I have never since found a reasonable ground for changing.

DISTRESSING BRONCHIAL COUGHS HANG ON and WEAKEN

Foley's Honey and Tar Stops Them

Both night and ay these wearying, racking coughs harass and weaken their victims. They hang on all winter, if not checked, and often are the forerunners of a permanently weakened condition of the bronchial tubes and lungs. Foley's Honey and Tar not only stops these distressing coughs, but soothes the inflamed air passages, raises phlegm easily and heals raw and inflamed surfaces, stops hoarseness and tickling throat. It contains no opiates. All dealers everywhere sell it.

Double Pictures and a Dream.

BY W. S. LONG, SR.

A prophet has said: "He that hath a dream, let him tell a dream." I do not place dependence in dreams. Yet we are often impressed with thoughts that pass through our minds when in slumber.

Some thoughts have been so impressed upon my mind from a dream I lately had, I feel constrained to tell the dream and give a few thoughts that it has brought to my mind, of benefit to me, hoping others may be benefited thereby. It seemed in the dream I was on a bed of affliction. There appeared before me a cord suspended from the ceiling with a picture attached. I reached and took hold, and it appeared most beautiful with pleasures of this life and of "that life in the heavenly home." While I was enjoying this most pleasant picture, its beauties and enjoyments therein presented, my hand, like the hand of Moses of old, became weary and dropped. Instantly the picture turned, and—O!—to my horror, became so dark, dreary, and despondent to my very soul. I reached for it again; it at once became bright; and while striving to hold to it with my weary, aching hand, I awoke.

This has given me thoughts of benefit to me; and if I can present them properly, they may be beneficial to others while passing through this life.

The thought is this: Lives of all persons are as a picture with two sides, and God has ever made it so. Man, by holding on to Christ, the Bible, and the great promises therein given, can ever keep the bright side of life before him; when he drops or forsakes these, the picture—O, dark! It appears that God for our good has ever made it so, as the Bible ever seems to show from the beginning. Eve was shown the bright side when all seemed lost. "Thy seed shall bruise the serpent's head." And throughout the entire old Bible nearly every character has had to look upon this picture of life, and it has appeared bright or dark as he has been able to lay hold of the promises of God, and will ever be so until we pass over the dark river of death into heaven, where no dark picture will ever appear, but one eternal bliss. Even the dark river of death will be bright if we can ever keep our hand in the hand of Jesus.

Jesus has said: "In my Father's house are many mansions. . . . I go to prepare a place for you; . . . that where I am, there ye may be also." This being the case, the wicked one, the devil, has ever striven to place before man a picture, bright from his standpoint, to allure man away from God and heaven. To Moses he would present Egypt, with its many allurements of a worldly life; yet, by faith, he chose "rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season," looking to the great riches to be enjoyed in the life beyond. So we may see this thought presented in every character presented in the Bible, both Old and New Testaments. The devil would have led away, if he could, even our Savior, "who was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin." Let us study the Bible, that we may, like him, say: "It is written." Having been tempted, he can succor those who are tempted. The Lord will make a way for our escape if we will let him. It has ever been so and will remain so. It is hard in this life to meet and overcome temptations. Yet remember, "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution;" and "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Matters in this life may look sad and dreary. But dismiss from your mind the disappointments of this life. Look at God's many blessings he is continually bestowing upon you from day to day and the happy home he has in reservation for you if you will only prove faithful—trust, love, serve, and obey him.

Lowrey-Taylor Debate.

BY W. HALLIDAY PRICE.

Beginning on Tuesday, November 21, and continuing four days, there was a religious debate at Thyatira, Miss., between J. P. Lowrey (Christian), of Senatobia, Miss., and H. B. Taylor (Baptist), of Murray, Ky. The possibility of apostasy, the establishment of the church, and the design of baptism were the issues discussed. The speakers conducted themselves in the most becoming manner and the best of feeling prevailed throughout the discussion. The crowds were large and attentive, and the good people of the community certainly took excellent care of the visitors. A Baptist minister by the name of Bacon moderated for Brother Taylor; and the writer served in that capacity for Brother Lowrey. Brother Lowrey has just finished his second year's work with the congregations in Tate County and will continue another year. Since he has been in this field numbers of persons have become obedient to the faith, new congregations have been established and old ones have been built up. It would be a great thing if other counties in Mississippi would do a similar work.

Stop Cheating Your Family.

You doubtless fully realize your duty to your family in making your home life attractive, entertaining, cultured, and refined; and you have promised yourself that some day you will fill that vacant spot in the parlor with a splendid piano or player-piano of the sweetest tone and highest quality, or that you will replace the old rattle-trap with a superb new instrument. But the days, the months, and possibly the years have silently crept by, and still there is no good music in your home. In the meantime, home is not what it might be, for a home without a high-grade piano or player-piano is seriously and hopelessly handicapped.

You have only one life to live here; why let procrastination steal your family's best opportunity for social, mental, and spiritual advancement? The Gospel Advocate Piano Club will solve the financial problem for you now. It was organized to overcome the very difficulties which confront you. By clubbing your order with those of ninety-nine other subscribers, you save forty per cent of the price and yet are responsible only for your own order. Convenient terms of payment are provided. You try the instrument in your own home and must be thoroughly satisfied before finally accepting it.

BY DR. G. N. MURPHEY.

A down-and-out whisky wreck thus rails at John Barleycorn:

"O, cursed rum! I know thee to be of Satan, for I myself have eaten at thy scanty table and slept in thy cold bed, and never yet have I seen thee bring one smile to human lip or dry one tear as it fell from human eye, but I have seen thee harden the tender heart and sharpen the tongue for biting speech. I have seen thee make even the presence of love a burden and cause the mother to wish that the babe nursing at her scant breast had never been born.

"O rum, thrice be thou accursed! I know thee to be twofold the child of hell, for I have seen thy wrecks upon all the shores of life. I have seen thee despoil a thousand happy homes and laugh in fiendish glee over thy victory. I have seen thee rob and debauch both men and women and then turn them over to the county home and potter's field. I have seen thy hand of blight touch the fairest human flowers and turn them black. John Barleycorn, you old destroyer of homes and happiness, your death would intoxicate my soul with joy, and impel me to inscribe upon thy tomb the following gratuitous epitaph:

"When Gabriel sounds the trump of doom

To start the resurrection boom,
The last to leave his dismal tomb
Will be John Barleycorn—be delayed
That all his sins may be displayed
To heaven's immortal host arrayed;
And saints will shout as down he dives,
Hell will be full when he arrives."

OUTLINES OF BIBLE STUDY

REVISED AND ENLARGED

BY G. DALLAS SMITH

A BRIEF DESCRIPTION

Outlines of Bible Study (Revised and Enlarged) is a book of one hundred and twenty pages, besides five full-page maps covering all Bible lands. It is printed in large, clear type, on good, heavy paper, and is substantially bound in stiff cloth.

The book contains seventeen drill lessons for use in Bible drills, Bible readings, or any other Bible class where it is desired to cover the entire scope of the Sacred Record in a short time.

Outlines of Bible Study is not a commentary in any sense of the word. It contains but few comments. It is not "literature" in the same sense that some object to literature. It rather guides one in his study that it may be intelligent and systematic.

What would he give for the coffee you serve?

Like a million other women, you can serve coffee that he would give most anything to have—coffee which starts the day “right” for all.

Everyone loves the rich flavor of Arbuckles' Coffee. Of all the coffees in America, today, it is by far the most popular!

One woman says: “My husband used to swallow his coffee and hurry off. Now we have Arbuckles' and you'd think it was Sunday the way he lingers over his breakfast.”

Serve it in your home—see how the little early-morning troubles disappear.

Until you try Arbuckles' you will never know what a difference good coffee can make in your home.

The most popular coffee in America

Today there are whole towns where Arbuckles' is practically the only coffee used. In one State, alone, in a year, four pounds of Arbuckles' Coffee was used for every man, woman and child in the State—four times as many pounds of coffee as the population of the State! Arbuckle Bros., New York.

"EDIFYING AS THE NEED MAY BE"

BY A. B. LIPSCOMB

Our Conception of God.

Much depends upon our conception of God. This is the most influential idea that enters the human mind. The wealth or the poverty of our character depends upon that conception. Moreover, the prosperity of the nation depends upon it. "Where there is no vision," Solomon says, "the people cast off restraint." Some would tell us that it is a vision of humanity that is most needful; others place particular emphasis upon a vision of the future. But are not humanity's past, present, and future all included in a just conception of God? It is such a vision that must save the people. A philanthropist might know a great deal about humanity's needs; a scientist might know a great deal about the universe; a seer might unravel some important events in the future; but philanthropist, scientist, and seer will all be lost if their conception of God is lacking to the extent that they do not obey him. A woman asked the famous English preacher Jowett: "What do you think of God?" "It matters little," he replied; "but what God thinks of me is very important." I do not think he should have belittled the woman's question; for upon man's conception of God depends his attitude toward God. That attitude reveals more clearly than anything else what God thinks of him. When the priest, Eli, violated his office and honored his sons above the Lord, there came this solemn message of rebuke: "Therefore Jehovah, the God of Israel, saith, I said indeed that thy house, and the house of thy father, should walk before me forever: but now Jehovah saith, Be it far from me: for them that honor me I will honor, and they that despise me shall be lightly esteemed." (1 Sam. 2: 30.) The psalmist tells us that "the face of Jehovah is against them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth;" and then, reversing man's attitude, he tells us that "Jehovah is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart, and saveth such as are of a contrite spirit." (Ps. 34: 16, 18.)

Where is God in War Times?

During all of Isaiah's ministry he is confronted with his people's mean and impoverished conception of the Almighty; and it is to this impoverishment that the prophet attributes the nation's degradation. They had a conception of their God that was fatally limited. To them God was in one place, but not in another. They thought of him as being back there in the promised land, and especially in the city of Jerusalem; but they did not consider his presence and power in the land of captivity and trouble. Christians just at the same time should beware lest they fall into the same error, being led by the mockery of those that know not God. In view of the terrible conflict across the seas, some have said with a sneer, "Where is your God?" and, "What has become of your prayers?" Rest assured that "the eyes of Jehovah are toward the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry," in times of war as well as in times of peace. "None of them that trust in him shall be desolate" at any time. The question that should concern us most at this crisis in the world's history is not, "How is God working out his plans?" but, "How are we trusting him in the face of it all?" It is the habit of some people when they come into an exceptionally shabby town or visit a spot singularly apart from civilization to speak of a "God-forsaken place." Again I say, beware! Beware lest you not only libel the place, but its Maker as well. There is no place so utterly forsaken that God cannot make his presence felt if he wills to do so. God never forsakes any place entirely if one child of his is there. The Lord was with his servant Joseph, not only in the palace, but in the prison, too; Paul and Silas did not find the dungeon a God-forsaken place. While they could not sleep, they found it a very suitable place to seek the Lord. How aptly does Alexander Maclaren remark: "The true anæsthetic is trust in God!" Arnot, the French writer, says: "It is when you look from the bottom of a well that you discern the stars in daylight; on the surface, with the glare all round, although they are there, you cannot discern them. It is thus that faith's eye cannot pierce the heavens so well from the bright surface of prosperity as from the low, low place of some great sorrow." Question: When was the desert of Gaza not a desert? Answer: When the Ethiopian treasurer drove through it reading the word of God and Philip joined him to tell the story of the cross. It was then that the desert blossomed as the rose. Another question (of missionary interest): How many destitute places, dear Christian reader, will you make to blossom as the rose during 1917?

A Remarkable Paradox Concerning God.

The children of Israel in their exile deprived their ideal in that they conceived of God as rejoicing in gifts that had been brought and offered with dirty hands. This conception became to them a great stumblingblock, and Isaiah was instructed to take it away. And here is the prophet's message on this point: "For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy: I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite." (Isa. 57: 15) In this passage the prophet would impress the thought of God's holiness, yet he manifestly avoids the other extreme of leaving the impression that God is so high above us as to be unapproachable. Here we have a remarkable paradox. Of the same being it is said, "I dwell in the high and holy place" and am "with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit." Thus we are encouraged to dwell upon God's highness and his lowness and to consider the two attributes together.

It is impossible to speak worthily or completely of the lofty character of God. We are reminded of the artist who prepared to paint a gorgeous sunset. He arranged his easel, mixed his colors, prepared his palette, and then looked. Among the hills he noted rich shadows, resplendent colors, purple flames and golden lusters. Absorbed by the vision, the painter waited until a friend made bold to ask: "When are you going to begin?" "By and by," he said. So he waited, spellbound by the splendor of the vision, until the sun was set and the dark shadows fell upon the mountain. Just so, we know not where to begin when we would tell of God's highness. We can think about it, but we cannot describe it. We can believe for a fact that "Jehovah is God over all, Amen;" that he stands above nature, above law, above necessity, and all such names by which we measure the power and influence of the worlds around us; or we can always safely fall back on Isaiah's definition and say that God is the "high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity" and "measures time." And here we might discuss the question as to which illustration conveys the greater exaltation, that of limitless space or that of measureless time; but there would not be much profit in such a discussion.

His "Lowness" Easy to Find.

When we come to consider the lowness or humbleness of God's character, we find it to be an easier task. Here we may make considerable headway, because this precious truth has been set forth in the Bible by precept, example, and illustration over and over again. We find it in the story of the creation in the first chapter of Genesis, and we follow it on through until we reach the blessed "whosoever will" of the closing chapter of Revelation. As a matter of course, the Creator took care in making man; for man was to be the capital prize of the whole collection. But what surprises us is to note the care that he used in perfecting and harmonizing the details of every created thing, even the lowest insect, like David's flea. God's respect for lowness is brought out in the formation of a snowflake or in the texture of a night moth's wing.

We find this attribute illustrated by the anxiety of our God to lift men up and by thinking of the depths of shame and poverty and sin from which he has lifted them. The story of Lazarus brings this out. His fellow-men despised him, pitied him, passed him by; none of them took him into their homes; the best the beggar might hope for was the doling out of an occasional charity. But God stooped low; he lifted the beggar up, clothed him in heavenly raiment, and let him rest in Abraham's bosom. The lesson of God's condescension shines forth in his patience toward obstinate and unfaithful man. Who can read the story of rebellious Israel and not appreciate the note of tenderness in Isaiah's words: "For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still?"

And How Do You Think of Him?

Dear reader, what is your conception of God? When you think of him, does it seem as if you contemplate the rugged beauty of some awful peak or that you are looking down into the depths of a terrific abyss? Do you think of a cloud far away in the distance, or does God loom up before you like a Gibraltar of strength that both protects and hides? Is there in your heart just a faint childhood memory of one you used to know, or is there the consciousness of one "nearer, my God, to thee?" Do you think of him as a stern, unyielding Judge sitting upon the throne in awful grandeur, or does there shine from heaven the light of a kind and beneficent presence? Answer these questions and you give us a true index to your character. If you have never obeyed the gospel, don't try, for the present at least, to grasp at the immensity of meaning represented by God's highness; but think hard and consider now how he condescended to say: "To this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and that trembleth at my word." And I remind you of a saying that is faithful and true: "God's love is not rounded out until I respond to it."

The Proper Administrator.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Mr. Skinner proceeds upon the assumption of what he calls "this general rule" relative to the authority to baptize. His "general rule," he claims, is that no one has the right to baptize another without receiving authority from the local congregation of which he is a member—that all such authority is vested in the congregation or church. Thus he has a body of people possessing authority to commission one of its members to do a thing which that member had no right to do, although a part of the body in which the authority to baptize was vested. Think of it! Here is a body with authority to commission one to do a thing which, separately and individually, they had no right to do. He proceeds thus:

To be turned aside from this general rule of "New Testament procedure" to the seeming exceptional cases of baptism, such as the eunuch of Ethiopia, is to forsake the rule for the exception, and the King's highway for the bypath. But let it be remembered that in every such instance of seeming absence of church authority (and I do not admit that any are exceptional) in the administration of the ordinance there was extraordinary divine direction for the extraordinary and unusual conditions that prevailed, and in not a single case can it be established that back of each instance there had not been given to the administrator authority from his church to administer the ordinance under such conditions. If we are to decide the latter point by inference, then is not the inference more easily justified according to the established rule and custom of the churches? For me and mine, we will stay with the churches.

Mr. Skinner evidently saw looming up like a mountain in his pathway that vast number of disciples scattered abroad from Jerusalem and who went everywhere preaching the word, without one single reference in the word of God to their having been "commissioned" by the church at Jerusalem. Hear the record: "And there arose on that day a great persecution against the church which was in Jerusalem; and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the apostles." Mark you, they were not "sent" by the apostles, but driven by the hand of persecution. Not a single word here about receiving a commission or authority to preach and baptize from anybody on this earth. Well, what did they do? "Therefore they that were scattered abroad went about preaching the word." (See Acts 8: 1-4.) What was the result of all this preaching the word? "And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number that believed turned unto the Lord." (See Acts 11: 19-21.)

Now we have Philip in the city of Samaria preaching and baptizing (Acts 8: 5-12) without a single intimation that any church had given him the authority to do it. Mr. Skinner, where is your "general rule?" Ah! He seeks it in what is said of Paul and Barnabas. Listen to him:

"And when they had spoken the word in Perga, they went down to Attalia; and thence they sailed to Antioch, from whence they had been committed to the grace of God for the work which they had fulfilled. And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, they rehearsed all things that God had done with them, and that he had opened a door of faith to the Gentiles." (Acts 14: 25-28.) Acting by the authority of this church at Antioch, from which they received commissions as missionaries, they organized other churches, committing unto them likewise the ordinances as they were practiced by the churches before them (1 Cor. 11: 1, 2), and in every instance laying emphasis upon "the custom of the churches" as authority in every phase of their work. (Verse 16.)

If there is any point in this for our friend's theory at all, it is this: Neither Paul nor Barnabas had any authority to preach and baptize before receiving it from the church at Antioch. But is this so? Is it true that being sent out as missionaries by the church at Antioch involved the right or authority to preach and baptize? If so, had not Paul and Barnabas both been guilty of sinning in preaching and baptizing before they went to Antioch? Paul was an apostle, and declared that he was "not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles." (2 Cor. 11: 5.) Again, he says: "I conferred not with flesh and blood: neither went I up to Jerusalem to them that were apostles before me," etc. (Gal. 1: 15-17.) Thus Paul gives us to understand that his authority to preach and baptize did not come from any mortal on this earth, and yet Mr. Skinner would have his readers believe that Paul's authority to preach and baptize was conferred upon him by the church at Antioch! Our friend has lived at and served churches in different places. He is now in Jackson, Tenn., and, we presume, is a member of the church he serves. Suppose that church should send him out to do mission work, would that fact within itself show that he had not been preaching and baptizing before? The case of Paul and Barnabas at Antioch was similar to this illustration. Our friend has a wonderful imagination. He thinks he sees in Paul's reference to "the traditions" and "custom" of the churches (1 Cor. 11: 2, 16) the authority to preach and baptize, as a part of the "traditions" and "custom." Such things as preaching and baptizing were not under consideration at all when Paul used those expressions. If the "traditions" to which Paul refers includes the authority to baptize, then the authority came from Paul himself, and not from a church; for he says, "I delivered them unto you." Again, if "traditions" include the authority to baptize, then the whole church at Corinth was given the authority, for Paul delivered the "traditions" to the whole church and urged them to "hold fast" to them. It seems to me that Mr. Skinner is hard pressed for material with which to make out his case. He indulges in much unwarranted assumption in his efforts to sustain his cause. The facts of history prevent my friend from going any further back with his Baptist baptism than a man who immersed himself and started a church.

My Mission in the World.

BY LYTTON ALLEY.

The most wonderful study in all the world is the economy of Jehovah. David said: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork." The psalmist declares again that "the law of the Lord is perfect." This is true concerning all of God's creation. Nothing just "happens so," as is oftentimes expressed by those skeptically inclined, but every atom of creative work in the universe was evolved from the mighty workings of the mind of the great I Am.

Now, when Jehovah had finished his creative work, he said it was good—"very good." That being true, nothing was made without a mission or a purpose. And what was true with all other things is true regarding man. Man was made with a definite and fixed purpose before him, and this mission was to glorify God in a loyal obedience to his omnipotent law.

The materialist says that man is the creature of circumstances—carried hither and yon like a chunk upon the water; and, perchance, if good be his portion, that is termed "good luck;" and, likewise, should ill befall him, that is called "bad luck." Such an idea can find lodgment only in the mind of the untaught; for no man can study the wonderful economy of Jehovah without acknowledging his immutable and perfect laws. It logically follows, then, if God made all things in the universe with a purpose to conserve, the question here intrudes itself: What is my mission? How may I know what it is? Has God left to me the directing of my course upon the earth? Am I able to direct my steps? A thousand times, no. What, then, shall I do? There must of necessity be a pattern, a model, an ideal.

The Lord has never allowed his servants to make the pattern. Noah was told how to construct the ark—the kind of material, the dimensions; in fact, God told him how many windows and doors he should make to it. Moses, when he was intrusted with the erection of the tabernacle, was given a pattern, and Jehovah told him to follow the pattern in all its many specifications. And likewise God gives the pattern—the ideal—of my mission. Where is it to be found?

May I find it in the lives and experiences of the great ones of earth; in the creations and creeds of men? Ah, no! For over all is the serpent's trail. Sin's blasting curse has found a way into the recesses of the human heart, and its evolvments are imperfect and vain.

We must go to the perfect source for the perfect model; and in the life of the Son of God, as revealed to us in the word of God, is it to be found.

Now, what was his mission to earth? Hear Jesus: "I came not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." Again: "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me and to finish his work."

"Work!" Jesus came to work. Then, if I follow this perfect Ideal, I must work. Well, what kind of work shall I do? Listen to the Master once more: "Labor not for the meat which perisheth." "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal." Our mission is to do good and shun evil; to encourage and help others as we journey through this life's domains. And how beautifully and lovingly can we do this with our vision at all times fixed on the Perfect Ideal, the True Model, the God-given Pattern—Jesus of Nazareth, the Son of God!

BY W. H. CARTER.

"What must one do in order to become a Christian, and how may one know that he has been pardoned?"

In this letter I wish to call your attention to another instance where your question was asked and the answer given. We find this in the sixteenth chapter of Acts of Apostles. Paul and Silas were in the city of Philippi, the chief city of that part of Macedonia. In a vision at Troas, a man appeared before Paul and entreated him to come over into Macedonia and help them. This Paul took to be a call from God to go into Macedonia, and he set his face in that direction. Then he came to Philippi, and on the Sabbath they went out of the city to a riverside, where some met for prayer, and preached to the women that were there. The Lord opened the heart of a woman named Lydia, that she attended unto the things which were spoken by Paul, and she was baptized, she and her household. On another day, as they went to prayer, a certain damsel followed them and cried after them, saying: "These men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto us the way of salvation." After doing this for many days, Paul commanded the unclean spirit to come out of her. She was a soothsayer, and belonged to men who were using her to get gain; and when they saw that the hope of their gain was gone, and being enraged at Paul and Silas, they had them arrested and cast into prison. The jailer was charged to keep them safely. He put them in the inner prison and made their feet fast in the stocks. Here, bleeding and suffering from their stripes, for they had been beaten, at the hour of midnight they prayed and sang praises to God, and the other prisoners heard them. At this time there came an earthquake that shook the foundation of the prison, the doors were all thrown open, and the prisoners' bands were loosed. Awaking out of his sleep, the jailer saw this, and, thinking that his prisoners had all escaped, he drew his sword and was about to take his own life, when Paul cried with a loud voice, and said: "Do thyself no harm: for we are all here." Then the jailer "called for a light, and sprang in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas, and brought them out, and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved?"

Now, is not this the same as to ask, What must I do to become a Christian? When one is saved, is he not a Christian? And when one becomes a Christian, is he not saved? But let us consider carefully the answer given this man. "What must I do to be saved?" The answer was: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." "Without faith it is impossible to please him [God]." (Heb. 11: 6.) But is the act of believing on Jesus Christ all that is required? We are sometimes told that that was all he was told to do. But is that correct? Let us see. "And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house." Why do this? Because these apostles knew that faith comes by hearing the word of God. (Rom. 10: 17.) It was necessary that the Gentiles hear the word that they might believe. (Acts 15: 7.) Notice the following questions asked by Paul: "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach, except they be sent?" (Rom. 10: 14, 15.) "They spake unto him the word of the Lord." Have you never considered what it takes to constitute "the word of the Lord," and what one believes when he believes on the Lord Jesus Christ? The whole gospel is included in "the word of the Lord," and one is required to believe the gospel in order to become a Christian. The gospel contains the good news of salvation and the terms upon which we may enjoy it.

After they had spoken the word of the Lord unto him, "he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway." In speaking the word of the Lord they had taught him to be baptized, for this is part of the word of the Lord. Jesus had said: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them," etc. (Matt. 28: 19); and, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16: 16). His question was: "What must I do to be saved?" These apostles were under obligation to tell them what the Lord had said. They could not speak the word of the Lord without doing this. He was, through faith, to look to Jesus, the Christ, for salvation; and they had no right to offer it to him only on the terms which Jesus himself had given. These terms he accepted and his commands he obeyed; and, believing in and trusting him for the promise given, he "rejoiced, believing in God with all his house." Joy always attends those who, in faith, render obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ.

In our next we shall consider these three different answers to your question, and we hope to be able to make them still plainer.

A New Home-Missionary Enterprise at Cincinnati.

BY LOUIS R. PATMONT.

It was my privilege for a number of months to visit among the churches in the South, and I was gratified to find the spiritual condition of the congregations visited good without an exception, and that the strength of the loyal people was far greater than I expected it to be. Some of the days spent among the brethren have been eventful and in one instance of great importance.

Several weeks ago I visited the brethren at Cincinnati, to which city I had come by invitation. I was asked to take up the work in that great field and, after prayerful consideration, accepted. Cincinnati is one of the great cities of our country where unlimited good can be done among foreigners who heretofore have not been reached with the gospel. More than one hundred thousand people residing in that city are of foreign birth. Large colonies of Jews, Russians, Poles, and other nationalities have been totally neglected, with the exception of a group of Roumanian Christians, most of whom left their country on account of religious oppression, who have been claimed by the Baptists. The field is virgin soil. In entering it we do not lay ourselves open to the criticism that we are trying to duplicate missions and that we are aiming to compete with others. We trust through wisely planned moves and faithful persistency to accomplish great good in the near future. May we not count on the brethren everywhere to give us their interest and support in this good work?

It has been charged time and again that the loyal churches are composed of an ultraconservative people, and for this reason are unable to do efficient missionary work; that they are so occupied with striving among themselves that they have no time for those who are dying without Christ. We must disprove this charge by demonstrating in Cincinnati, which is a strategic center, as has been demonstrated in other places, that only worth-while missionary work can be best done by the people who have the most faith in the efficiency of the gospel and follow the Book closest.

In the city of Cincinnati there are fifteen or more "progressive" churches which have made neither an effort nor "progress" in reaching the alien. No doubt this charge can be laid also at the door of many a loyal church; but ignorance of the need, rather than unwillingness to help, has been the fault. Surely God is showing us great opportunities for service. A better day in home missions is dawning. Forty millions of aliens in America are in need of the gospel and will perish unless Christ is brought to them.

We expect to make Cincinnati the main center for the work among immigrants, which we hope to carry on on a large scale. We expect to find capable young foreigners who may preach the gospel to their own people; send them South to take a Bible course, and when thoroughly equipped go back to their own people. Though the scope of our work will be wide and broad, our methods will be none other than scriptural. Others will watch us and we must make good. We can win with this sort of a spirit if we have faith enough to undertake this great thing for God.

In Minneapolis, too, the work is opening up. Brother Ira B. Henthorn, who came to that city from Louisville, Ky., last August, now is planning a "great drive" on the metropolis of the North. An opportunity to gain possession of one of the largest church buildings in the center of the city has presented itself, and it is to be hoped that the plans of the loyal brethren there will be realized.

At this writing I am visiting with Brethren McQuiddy and Lipscomb at the office of the Gospel Advocate. I am expecting to address the student body of the Nashville Bible School, to speak in a union meeting at Cookeville, and also to speak in several of the churches at Nashville. I trust that much good can be done by trying to interest these brethren in missionary work among the immigrants.

The Preacher Among Young Children.

BY JEWELL MATTHEWS.

I emphasized in a former article the profound importance of preparation for the business of preaching the gospel. This time I shall write briefly of a preacher's influence among the young people.

No man is prepared to preach the gospel effectively if he is unable to sympathize with manhood and womanhood in the making. No one should be better fitted than the preacher to influence the young. To do this, a minister must enter into the life of the young people. He can do this and still maintain his dignity, if he goes about it in the proper manner. Of course, common sense and good judgment must be used. One of the great hindering causes to influencing the young toward a higher, nobler life is the long-facedness, pious look, and dignified appearance of preachers. (Most of this is "put on"). Many young men who start out to preach think that they, in order to be preachers, must cultivate a long, ministerial whang in their voice, put on a donkey face, and assume a dignified, "I-am-better-than-thou" air. This is quite repulsive to young men and women who are accustomed to viewing matters in a common-sense way. If there is anything young people despise, it is that spirit of aloofness in a preacher. They cannot understand how it is that a minister is so hard to approach when he claims to be Christ's servant. They read of the life that Christ lived while he was on earth, and they compare the Christ life, full of humbleness, a life easily approached even by little children, with that of the preacher's life, which is full of haughtiness and breathes the very spirit of unapproachableness. We preachers must get out of the idea that we are "the only pebbles on the beach" and get down on a level with our boys and girls and do them good.

The problem of dealing with our boys and girls in this modern age is a great one. There are so many temptations for the young all along the pathway of life. It takes the combined efforts of all to keep the young, plastic minds from going astray. We preachers accuse the present generation of being frivolous and inclined to wickedness. I wonder, though, if we should not ponder seriously over the matter before bringing any stinging accusations. It might be that we are in a measure responsible for existing conditions. What have we done for the young men and women who have come in contact with us, to make them better?

The time has come when the preacher must study this problem of dealing with the young more seriously, for it is one of the most serious problems which comes to us for solution. Our preachers, generally speaking, have not taken the interest in the young which they should have taken. We must now wake up to our duties as ministers of Christ's gospel in influencing our precious boys and girls to live clean, godly lives. This will give us an influence in the world which we can get in no other way, and it will be a blessed one; for to influence boys and girls to take upon themselves the name of Jesus is the most noble of works.

Personally, I realize that I have not done as much for the young as I should have done, but I am resolved to spend more time in solving the problems of youth in the future. How many will join me in this resolution?

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

$1.50 a year if paid in advance, $1.75 after six months, $2 after twelve months. To Canada and foreign countries, $2 in advance, $2.25 after six months, $2.50 after twelve months.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express, post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you.

This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrears paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

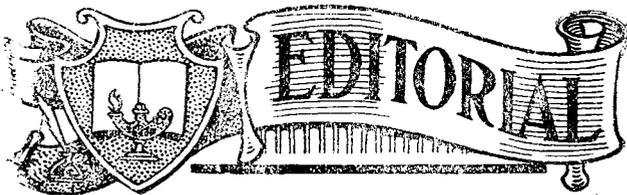

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received, but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Guarantee of Advertising.

All the advertisements in this paper are, we believe, signed by trustworthy persons. To prove our faith by works, we will make good to actual subscribers any loss sustained in trusting advertisers who prove to be deliberate swindlers. We shall not attempt to adjust trifling disputes between subscribers and honorable business men who advertise, nor pay the debts of honest bankrupts. To make this guarantee effective, in all cases say in writing advertisers, "I saw your advertisement in the Gospel Advocate;" and if anything goes wrong notify us immediately in writing.

Practical Value of the Old Testament.

BY E. G. S.

We do not mean to intimate that we can learn from the Old Testament what we are to do to be saved, but there are some things of immense value to us that we can learn from it. An inspired apostle says: "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope." (Rom. 15: 4.) The Old Testament was written, all complete, some several hundred years before the New Testament began to be written, but the leading items of the New Testament were foretold in the Old Testament. The Son of God was foretold, the kingdom that he came to establish was foretold, and much that was to be accomplished in the New Testament was foretold in the Old Testament.

The kingdom of Christ as we understand it was plainly foretold in these words: "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed." (Dan. 2: 44.) This is understood by Bible scholars generally to mean the kingdom of Christ, which was set up in New Testament days. This prophecy in Daniel was given some four or five hundred years before the beginning of the Christian era and in the existence of the Babylonian empire, the first of the four leading kingdoms or empires of the world. The Roman empire, the fourth one of the leading kingdoms or empires of the world, was on when the Christian era began, and it was this that was referred to in the expression, "in the days of these kings." There were many kings that reigned over the Roman empire during its existence; hence it was very appropriate for the prophet to say that "in the days of these kings" the God of heaven would set up a kingdom. This expression helps us to identify Christ as the Son of God and the time of the establishment of his kingdom on the earth.

When John the Baptist began his preaching, he said: "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." This something that is here called "the kingdom of heaven" is evidently the very kingdom spoken of in Daniel. It has been nearly two thousand years since this kingdom was established, and there is no prospect that it will ever come to an end, thus verifying the statement of the prophecy in Daniel, which says of the kingdom there foretold, "which shall never be destroyed." The kingdom of Christ, therefore, will never be destroyed. We may rest assured of this fact; for those that compose this kingdom and are faithful in it will not be blotted out even when time shall end, but will at the end of the world be transplanted into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

But when this kingdom came, it was also called the "church." Even in the preparatory state of the kingdom, Jesus said: "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." There is no power on earth that can blot out the kingdom of Christ. All the kingdoms of this world have been, or will yet be, destroyed, or in some way be brought to an end. But not so with the kingdom of Christ. Instead of its being destroyed by the kingdoms of this world, it will break in pieces all these kingdoms and stand forever. It does not mean that the kingdom of heaven will break the kingdoms of this world in pieces by violence, like these kingdoms destroy each other, but that it will be a better way to live than by destroying each other, as the kingdoms of the world have been accustomed to do, and will teach them better principles to live by than the destruction of each other. As a general rule, the kingdoms of this world have been built up by force and torn down by force; but the kingdom of heaven is a kingdom of peace, which was built up in peace and will be perpetuated in peace. There never was a grander day of peace than was the day of Pentecost, when about three thousand souls were converted to Christ by the gospel of peace. Instead of swords and spears and firearms, the gospel of peace and salvation was preached to the people, and they embraced it, rejoicing in hope and in the great matter of the salvation of their souls. And to this day there is joy and peace to every soul that is converted to Christ. When Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached Christ unto them, and they began to believe and obey it, the divine record says: "And there was great joy in that city." (Acts 8: 8.) This was not a joy of earthly victory, but joy over the miracles that were performed among them and over the matter of salvation as promised through the gospel of Christ. There is nothing grander among men and for men than the salvation of the soul.

The grand purpose of the gospel of Christ is to lead men out of sin and sinful lives and thus prepare them for useful and happy lives. The law of Moses was intended to make the Jews a godly and happy people in this life. When they obeyed the law, they were the happiest and most intelligent people that were in the world at that time; but when they disobeyed the law, their sins brought them into all sorts of trials and tribulations. The history of the Jewish people as given in the Old Testament will show to any man that will read it what a great blessing it is to man to do the will of God. The history of no other people in all the world can compare with that of the Jews when they lived in obedience to the will of God; but when they became disobedient, they were no better than the wicked nations around them. This shows what a wonderful blessing it is to man to do the will of God; and as the Christian religion is the grandest system of morality and true refinement the world has ever seen, so those that live as the Christian religion requires to-day are the most intelligent and upright people that the world holds. Hence, Christians should always do all they can to advance and spread its benefits to all the world as far as in them lies. One of the very best means of extending the Christian religion is for all the members to strive to govern and control their whole lives by the divine teaching of the New Testament. The Lord's people are represented as "the light of the world;" and so they are, when they follow in the footsteps of their Lord and Master. Jesus said he came down from heaven to do his Father's will; and no man that reads his history can say he did not do what he came to do. Let all Christians be faithful in doing likewise, and they will be truly the light of the world.

Reflections on the Closing Year.

BY M. C. K.

Now that we are at the close of the year 1916—a year which holds a remarkable record throughout most of the world—there is much to challenge serious reflection. First of all, as a nation we should be profoundly thankful that, in spite of the warlike conditions in different parts of the earth, the country is at peace; and, so far as actual participation in the bloody war raging in Europe is concerned, we have thus far escaped, and the prospect seems good that we may permanently avoid all embroilment in the bloody affair. No matter who or what is the cause of our escape from this appalling conflict, the fact is certainly cause for rejoicing and thanksgiving to God. Every church and every individual Christian throughout the land should devoutly thank God that not only the flag of civil and religious liberty still waves over our nation, but that the dove of national peace continues to hover over us, and that we are sufficiently blessed to be able to extend the hand of sympathy and relief to those who have been rendered homeless and destitute and made to suffer all manner of privation in consequence of the terrible fortunes of war.

Another matter calling for serious reflection is the gratifying fact that, notwithstanding the unhappy present condition of many of the nations of the earth, many doors for the reception of the gospel, both in our own land and in foreign lands, remain open and the churches can enter them if they will. The important question, and the question which solemnly presses for an answer is, will they do it? May we not ask them, in the language of Bishop Heber's immortal hymn:

Shall we, whose souls are lighted
By wisdom from on high—
Shall we, to man benighted,
The lamp of life deny?
Salvation! O salvation!
The joyful sound proclaim,
Till earth's remotest nation
Has learned Messiah's name.

What this distracted, war-cursed, and sin-cursed world needs is the revolutionizing and unifying power of God in the gospel of his beloved Son, and its numerous and various ills and wrongs will never be righted till it comes under the molding influence of that benign power. It is heaven's healing balm for all the miseries of earth, and God's method of restoring to man His lost image, which has been effaced by the ravages of sin. The churches are the divine depositories of this power, and they have the opportunity and the means of sending it into all the world. Never will they enter properly on, or fulfill, their divine mission till they are wide awake and diligently engaged in this great work. God's call is solemnly ringing in their ears, and they, and they alone, must decide the question whether they will give heed to it or ignore it. The very thought of God's calling upon his child to act, with the child's refusal to hear and obey, presents a most serious situation; and yet that is the very situation of every church that does not answer the divine call to go into all the world with the gospel of his grace.

In view of such a serious and significant situation, may we not urge upon any and all of the churches not already engaged in the work, to form the resolution now to enter into it with the opening of the new year? Such a resolution faithfully carried into effect would rebound with blessings upon the church itself, as well as assist in bringing deliverance and freedom to the millions of earth's population now captives in sin.

Speaking once more of the gigantic and bloody European struggle, the importance of heeding the call upon the churches to send the gospel to the lost is still further emphasized by the terrible consequences of the war already entailed upon millions of men, women, and children who have become its unwilling and helpless victims. The appalling facts of the situation are enough, it would seem, to arouse the most stupid mind, if capable of thought at all, to a sense of responsibility commensurate with the ability and opportunity to send relief. At the end of two years of the war, according to the report of the Copenhagen "Society for the Study of the Social Consequences of the War," there were already slain and found dead on the field of battle 4,631,500 men, with 11,245,300 wounded and 3,373,700 made invalids, making a grand total of 19,250,500 human beings either dead or maimed for life as a part of the result of this appalling and wicked butchery.

Moreover, touching the vast waste of money to carry on this needless slaughter, according to figures reported by David Starr Jordan in the Expositor for December, 1916, "the total bonded debt of Europe rises to the $60,000,000,000 mark." But this is not all. According to figures furnished by the Saturday Evening Post (Philadelphia), December 9, 1916, the following is the enormous daily expenditure on the war:

England is $25,000,000 poorer for every twenty-four hours that pass; France must check out $18,000,000; Russia, $16,000,000; Italy, $5,000,000. Little Roumania is cutting her war-expenditure teeth at the rate of $1,000,000 per day.

Crossing the frontier—for war expense is no respecter of cause or creed—and Germany is discovered, as they say in play books, spending $17,500,000 every day; Austria, Turkey, and Bulgaria, $11,000,000. Thus between sunrises that break over these warring hosts very nearly $100,000,000 has gone up in smoke, splinters, or ruin of some kind, or in the upkeep of fighting.

And even this is not all. Some men, according to the Expositor's figures, are growing rich over this bloody struggle, while millions are becoming pauperized and some of them brought to the verge of starvation for the bare necessities of life. One man in Paris has "made $10,000,000 from war contracts, his present income being $30,000 a day." The same figures show that in Germany "in the first year of the war the house of Krupp made a clear gain of $24,000,000 as against $10,000,000 in the highly profitable preceding year of getting ready for war." Another munitions establishment in Berlin has made money out of the war on such a vast scale that "the profits the managers dare not make public," because "the people are growing sensitive" over a situation that enriches some at such terrible expense to the many. Other establishments in our own country are making money, be it said to their shame, out of the awful and bloody struggle.

Finally, with the world spending these vast sums of money to ruin and destroy men, will not the churches that are not already engaged in the work be willing to spend something to redeem and save them? At the interesting period of transition from the death of the old year to the birth of the new year, when men are thinking of the rapid flight and value of time, surely their attention can be directed to this solemn and lofty theme. In the language of George D. Prentice, in "The Closing Year," "'Tis a time for memory and for tears." Surely such a time it is now, and we cannot do better than to close these reflections with the first lines of that immortal poem:

'Tis midnight's holy hour—and silence now
Is brooding like a gentle spirit o'er
The still and pulseless world. Hark! on the winds
The bell's deep tones are swelling—'tis the knell
Of the departed year. No funeral train
Is sweeping past—yet, on the stream and wood,
With melancholy light, the moonbeams rest
Like a pale, spotless shroud—the air is stirred
As by a mourner's sigh—and on yon cloud,
That floats so still and placidly through heaven,
The Spirits of the Seasons seem to stand,
Young Spring, bright Summer, Autumn's solemn form,
And Winter with his aged locks, and breathe,
In mournful cadences that come abroad
Like the far wind-harp's wild and touching wail,
A melancholy dirge o'er the dead year
Gone from the earth forever.

Reflections.

BY J. C. M'QUIDDY.

This issue brings us to the last paper for 1916. How rapidly the years pass! "What is your life? For ye are a vapor that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." (James 4: 14.)

"Like a flash of the lightning, a break of the wave, Man passeth from life to his rest in the grave."

It seems but yesterday since I came to Nashville in my early manhood and began work with the Gospel Advocate. Again, when I reflect, I think of the great changes that have occurred in my life since that time. While there have been many days of joy and happiness, there have been some days of sadness and sorrow. Loved ones have gone to the other shore. Associates, a companion, and a beloved daughter have been taken away to the paradise above. The sweet memories that cluster about their lives only serve to inspire me to seek after that which is purest and best. These memories point me to that city above, where life is deathless, sorrowless, and painless. I have come to appreciate more and more the language of the Holy Spirit, spoken through the beloved John, which says: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; for their works follow with them."

As the years come and go, we should learn well the lesson that, whether life is long or short, he lives most who best serves the Master. Christians can make no greater mistake than to spend their time in sighing over what might have been. It is a mistake to grow pessimistic over the errors of the past; instead, we should forget these mistakes and strive to rise to a purer and nobler life. Listen to Paul. He says: "Brethren, I count not myself yet to have laid hold: but one thing I do, forgetting the things which are behind, and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 3: 13, 14.)

The years do not fly too fast for us, if day by day we are rising above that which is low and sensual. As we look back over the year that is just closing, if we can realize truly that we have done something, though it be little, in advancing the cause of Christ, we have no ground for shedding bitter tears; but if, when we look back into the misty past, we are forced to confess that we have not taught one soul the way of life, that we have not opposed error with all of our ability, or that we have not cheered one desponding being, we should certainly know that we have lived to no good purpose. If we, like Paul, have gloried only in the cross of the Lord Jesus Christ, though we may not see where we have accomplished great things, though the world has not applauded our effort, and while some of our friends may have misunderstood and misrepresented our motives, we should not be pressed down, but should look up to the Lord Jesus Christ, who giveth us the victory.

A GOOD SHOWING.

The year that is closing, so far as outward appearances are concerned, is one of the best in the history of the Gospel Advocate. It affords us pleasure to inform our readers that the receipts of the Gospel Advocate for December, 1916, will be much larger than for any December in the history of the paper. The high cost of living has not influenced the readers of the Advocate to discontinue their cooperation. The paper has, perhaps, more warm supporters now than ever before. Base would be our ingratitude if we did not appreciate the efforts and cooperation of our friends in behalf of the paper. Our old subscribers are renewing rapidly and new subscribers are beginning to come in. All of this is very encouraging, and we shall not forget to be grateful for the blessings that we enjoy and for the opportunities that we have to do good. It shall be our constant aim and purpose to improve the Gospel Advocate in 1917. We realize that there is much room for improvement. We have never imagined that we had reached anything near perfection in journalism. We certainly have much for which to be thankful, however, when we consider that many good papers have been forced to suspend publication on account of the exorbitant cost of paper and materials. Other good papers have been forced to reduce both the size and quality of the paper.

It is the part of the true Christian journal to speak boldly and fearlessly against error, though that error should be advocated by its very dearest friends. God hates sin, but not the sinner. Loathing and hating sin with all the intensity of his being, he so loved the sinner that he gave his Son to die in order to redeem him. Christians should be able to oppose error in every form, wherever found, without becoming the enemies of those who advocate the error. Our aim must ever be to advance the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, since it is in obedience to the truth that all are made free from sin. (See John 8: 31, 32.)

"WHAT I HAVE WRITTEN I HAVE WRITTEN."

When Jesus was crucified, an inscription was written and put on the cross: "Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews." When the Jews read this title, they appealed to Pilate to change it so as to read that "he said, I am King of the Jews." Pilate answered: "What I have written I have written." How true is this statement of Pilate! He had made a record for cowardice that will never die. While he knew that Christ was innocent and while he found in him no fault at all, yet, in order to gain, as he hoped, the favor of the Jews, he cowardly permitted him to be led away to be crucified. Pilate should have had the courage, the bravery, and the manhood to have said to the Jews: "You shall not crucify the innocent Christ." But there are many thousands like Pilate to-day, who love the plaudits and pleasures of the world so well that they are too cowardly to come out and take their stand for truth and right. Even some are ashamed of their convictions and are so fearful that they will displease the world that they sacrifice the right rather than avow it. Shame on the man who is so cowardly! Such conduct permits the innocent Christ to be led away and be crucified afresh. The need of the hour is men who have convictions and will advocate them. If men love the truth, they will stand for it. They will stand like a rock, and not ask to shun the work of obedience, though the whole world may oppose them. With their eyes fixed on the cross, remembering that there are treasures of infinite price to be won and treasures of infinite price to be lost, they will press forward until Jesus says to them: "Well done."

If our lives have been bad in the past; if the year 1916 has been misspent, it is vain to sit down with folded hands and shed bitter tears over the past. All the tears we shed will not redeem one misspent moment, all the prayers we may offer will not rescue one soul from perdition. The only wise and scriptural thing to do is to learn to so loathe our sins that we will be guilty of them no more. Thus living, we will be useful and happy in the years yet to come, and when the hour of death comes we can say with the apostle Paul: "For I am already being offered, and the time of my departure is come. I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give to me at that day; and not to me only, but also to all them that have loved his appearing." (2 Tim. 4: 6-8.)

Fragments.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Teaching economy and emphasizing the wonders of the miracle he had just wrought, the feast being finished, the Savior said: "Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost." "And they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets full."

As this article finishes my first year's work on the Gospel Advocate, it has occurred to me that probably it may be proper and right for me to simply gather up a few fragments that may have fallen along the way and make hash of them—the fate that is to befall the remnants of so many luckless turkeys, as well as unidentified fragments of so many feasts, about the time this may be passing through the press—as the last week of the old year is slowly and sadly slipping away.

Indeed, "Hash," instead of "Fragments," might have headed this article, if I had not remembered that many men get "sick and tired" of hash, headache, and hard times between Christmas Day and New Year's Day. So, then, as you see, this is not hash—it's simply a heterogeneous conglomeration of fragments.

I shall remember 1916 as my "off" year—the year in which I was sick much, suffered much, accomplished little; but I shall also remember it as a year in which I was marvelously blessed. I spent much of my time through many weary weeks sitting before a hot grate, unable to walk, stand up, or lie down, long at a time, suffering intensely almost continuously.

When I recovered sufficiently to hobble around on crutches, sticks 'n' things, I resumed my rambling; and I've been rambling and roaming ever since, preaching wheresoever I've been and gone.

I have preached, this year, at many places in Nashville—my home—where we have, I believe, thirty-three churches of Christ, where I have preached much, and where there are always room and a welcome for me; at Cleveland, Mount Pleasant, Cathey's Creek, Hurricane Mills, Lawrenceburg, Manchester, McMinnville, and Pikeville, Tennessee; Greenville, Letohatchie, Liberty, Fort Deposit, and Highland Home, Alabama; Lafayette, Georgia; Murray, Kentucky; and Detroit, Michigan—places where any gospel preacher should be glad to preach.

At all these places and between stations, we—Mrs. Larimore and I—were treated with such loving-kindness and tender care that the world looks brighter and better and life seems sweeter and dearer to us now than before the hand of affliction fell upon us about twelve months ago. Frequently friends carried me from car or other conveyance into the house and into the pulpit, where I preached "propped up," when I could not "stand alone" and preach.

I'm nearly well now, however, and hope to preach the word to many more thousands before I go hence; but I shall probably never be able to "kneel in prayer" again. Hence I'm glad I've never said our petitions are not prayers unless we offer them "upon the bended knees of our fast-decaying bodies." I have been credibly informed, by conscientious Christians, that a brilliant young brother preached an hour and a half, not many months ago, at an out-of-doors meeting, in old Kentucky, to prove that proposition; and then, a few moments later, stood flat-footed and prayed over the loaf, then over the cup, and then, in that selfsame position, prayed a pretty little prayer to dismiss the audience. That was not I; for I'm neither young nor brilliant, and I never pray over the loaf or the cup—never. I simply give thanks, having divine authority for that, and having no authority for the other.

In my writings for the press, I have said so little about the many who have done so much for us that I'm constrained to write more; but what and of whom shall I write? "Brother" Jenkins, of Letohatchie, Ala., a prominent Methodist man and influential citizen of that community, has been clamoring for our return and claiming the privilege of entertaining us while there, ever since we left that pleasant little place. I could say much about him and still want to say more. May the Lord always abundantly bless him.

I believe I have never even mentioned, in any of my articles, either Brother T. B. Thompson, minister of the church at Murray, Ky., or his sweet wife, notwithstanding the best I could write about either of them would not be too good. And thus the list and lines grow. So I must forego the pleasure of writing much my heart suggests.

I have sometimes feared that, as I grew older, young preachers and other young people might lose interest in me, notwithstanding I have always been so sincerely and so intensely interested in them. My 1916 work has been almost entirely with young preachers, and they have been as kind and attentive to me as if I had been their own father. The treatment we received from C. E. Holt, O. P. Spiegel, C. M. Talley, and others at Montgomery, Ala., almost reconciled me to the thought of growing old.

I believe we failed to receive at least a hundred letters—certainly not less than fifty—addressed to us at Detroit. We wrote the postmaster and visited him, and still our mail failed to reach us. Other transients suffered as we did, the thieves probably thinking it safer and easier to rob us than recognized citizens of the town. A few hours after we visited the postmaster, where other transients with similar complaints were lined up to make known their grievances, the following notice appeared in the Detroit News: "Luther Shafer, twenty years old, St. Jean Avenue, was arrested Saturday night by Postoffice Inspector Elijah Frazer, charged with the theft of five hundred dollars' worth of registered mail. Shafer is employed in the mailing division of the main post office. Frazer raided his home Sunday and recovered a great deal of jewelry, including a number of wedding rings and other articles, it is alleged."

If you have written us or either of us within sixty days of this date (December 22) and have received no reply to your letter or letters, please give us credit for not having heard from you.

The cosmopolitan membership of the Vinewood Church, of which J. W. Shepherd is minister, illustrates fairly well the cosmopolitan citizenship of the city of Detroit. In that church of about three hundred members are people from Africa, Australia, Canada, England, Germany, Ireland, Russia, Scotland, Sweden, Alabama, California, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Tennessee, Texas, and Washington.

Well, 1916 is nearly gone, and I imagine I can almost see 1917 coming, smiling, through the snow, promising us many good things. Welcome, thrice welcome, New Year!

I finished 1915, began 1916, and am booked to end 1916 with the Twelfth Avenue church of Christ, Nashville, Tenn. We expect to start to Florida, for the winter, about Monday morning, January 1, 1917—not on Monday morning, but on the Dixie Flyer.

Of course we are not going to Florida to rest. Our rest time is not now. Mrs. Larimore will take care of me, and I will preach wheresoever duty may seem to demand.

We sought admittance into Southwest Texas, thinking a winter in that dry, mild climate might mean life to me; but, finding no open door there, we turn to Florida, where there is always a door wide open to receive us. We hope to do a fine work in Florida this winter—where spring smiles perpetually.

During the fifty years that have come and gone since I began trying to preach the word I have never sought the course that offered the least resistance, but have gone North in the winter, South in the summer—have gone North, South, East, West, wheresoever and whensoever duty has seemed to demand, regardless of wind or weather; but, having been sick so much this year, I must be careful; hence we expect to spend at least January, February, and March, 1917, where buds, blossoms, and birds abound evermore.

A Good Meeting at Cookeville, Tenn.

BY E. A. E.

According to request, I take pleasure in reporting the facts of this very enjoyable and very profitable meeting.

Feeling their own need and seeing the need of their friends and neighbors of a more thorough study of the Bible in general, an investigation of certain questions in particular, and encouragement in the good work of the Lord, the church of Christ in Cookeville invited different preachers and teachers to visit it at the same time and, according to their ability and experience, give this instruction and encouragement in order to stimulate all to a more zealous practice all round of "the whole counsel of God."

Let it be said, in the first place, there cannot be a more worthy purpose for a meeting, because the practice of "the whole counsel of God"—"all things that pertain unto life and godliness"—embraces all right living in all relationships of daily life, the true worship of God when the whole church is assembled together, and the furtherance of the gospel or the extension of Christ's kingdom into the regions beyond.

The church very properly concluded that, since it could invite one preacher to deliver a series of sermons or one teacher to give a course of instruction, it could invite several at the same time to do this, and to remain so long as is necessary to accomplish this work. There were several preachers and teachers present at the same time in New Testament churches. Some were permanent and some remained for a time only. We think now of Timothy with the elders and other teachers in the church at Ephesus; James with the elders and other teachers in the church at Jerusalem; and the several preachers and teachers at one time in the church at Antioch in Syria.

This meeting began at 10:30 A.M., Thursday, December 14, and continued four days, closing on the following Sunday night. There were three meetings every day—morning, afternoon, and night—consisting of songs, prayers, reading the Scriptures, teaching the word of God, exhortations and invitations to sinners to obey the truth. Of course, on Sunday morning the pure worship of God—that is, in spirit and truth—embracing the Lord's Supper, was offered up to the throne of grace.

Notwithstanding the snow and otherwise inclement weather, the meetings were well attended, the house being quite full at times.

The following is the list of the questions investigated and subjects of the sermons delivered: Thursday morning, "GOD HAS SPOKEN TO MAN, AND THE POWER OF HIS WORD," by the writer; Thursday afternoon, "THE CONDITION OF HEART NECESSARY TO THE RECEPTION OF THE TRUTH, AND FOR THIS CONDITION OF HEART EVERY ONE IS RESPONSIBLE," was discussed and emphasized; Thursday night, "NECESSITY OF ATTENDING THE LORD'S-DAY MEETING," by F. W. Smith; Friday morning, "KEEPING ALIVE INTEREST IN A NEW CONGREGATION—THE JERUSALEM CHURCH A MODEL," by J. Paul Slayden; Friday afternoon, "THE BIBLE WAY OF DEVELOPING PREACHERS" was discussed and impressed; Friday night, "THE TRUE WORSHIP OF GOD VS. VAIN WORSHIP," embracing "INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP," by M. C. Kurfees; Saturday morning, "HOW TO SAVE THE CHURCH," by Price Billingsley; Saturday afternoon, "THE DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF ELDERS," by the writer; Saturday night, "THE BIBLE THE GREATEST BOOK IN THE WORLD," by the writer; Sunday morning, "THE IMPORTANCE OF STUDYING THE BIBLE," by H. Leo Boles; Sunday afternoon, "WOMAN'S WORK IN THE CHURCH," by the writer; Sunday night, "HOW TO DO MISSIONARY WORK AND HOW TO SUPPORT THE MISSIONARY," by the writer.

All agree that one of the most convincing and invincible sermons was that by Brother Kurfees on worship and against instrumental music in the worship.

Besides the ones who spoke first on a subject, others took active parts in these investigations, making talks and asking and answering questions. Every meeting was an open one, and every one present was free and requested to add or in any way to bring out additional teaching from the word of God on any subject.

According to my ability to obtain the names, the following is the list of the preachers present: B. P. Upton, Hillham, Tenn.; F. W. Smith, Nashville, Tenn.; J. Paul Slayden, Nashville, Tenn.; M. C. Kurfees, Louisville, Ky.; T. D. Rose, Baxter, Tenn.; Price Billingsley, McMinnville, Tenn.; J. D. Walling, Monticello, Ky.; J. P. Watson, Cookeville, Tenn.; H. H. Ussery, Sparta, Tenn.; L. R. Patmont, Cincinnati, Ohio; Allen Phy, Algood, Tenn.; H. Leo Boles, Nashville, Tenn.; John T. Smith, Sparta, Tenn.; W. L. Karnes, Cookeville, Tenn.; C. H. Woodroof, Nashville, Tenn.; John Cowden, Tullahoma, Tenn.

The following is a list of preachers, so far as I could learn, who were invited and expected to take part in the investigations, but for different reasons could not attend: John E. Dunn, W. H. Carter, C. M. Pullias, A. B. Lipscomb, T. B. Larimore, G. Dallas Smith, F. B. Srygley, E. G. Sewell, H. L. Walling, John Klingman, Dan Gunn, and doubtless others whose names I did not get. Important subjects were assigned to G. Dallas Smith, A. B. Lipscomb, and T. B. Larimore. All present regretted that these good men were not present.

C. H. Woodroof led the singing in a modest, humble, and impressive way.

W. L. Karnes, who resides at Cookeville and works with the congregation there, is a worthy, good man, and is held in high esteem both by the church and the citizens of the town.

The intention of the church is to put these sermons and investigations in book form. Misses Creola Baird and Carrie Wilkes were the efficient and most obliging stenographers, whom all the speakers appreciate most sincerely.

Brother Cowden was gladly heard concerning his position in regard to missionary societies and instrumental music to the extent he felt disposed to speak.

In everything a kind and Christian spirit prevailed.

After the sermon on Sunday afternoon on woman's work in the church, the Methodist minister of Cookeville, Brother Craig, was requested to add what he thought would be profitable to say, and he did so, approving of the sermon as thoroughly scriptural in a courteous and dignified way, adding that he thought the sisters should be allowed to organize into missionary societies in order to work more efficiently. A pleasant reply was made to this and the good work went on.

L. R. Patmont was heard in regard to the number of Christians only in Russia and their work and worship after the New Testament order of things, why he came to the United States, and how he found at last those who work through the church only and worship purely without instrumental music.

Brother J. D. Walling interested and elicited the sympathy and praise of all by relating the progress of his work in Southeastern Kentucky and the crying needs of his field. I repeat here, judging by visible results, he has accomplished more in less time and on less money than any missionary known to me. The field is crying out for more workers and more financial help.

It was claimed by all who expressed themselves that more preaching and teaching were done during these four days than they had ever heard before in the same time; that the church received, therefore, more instruction and encouragement; and that, all things considered, this was the best meeting the church ever enjoyed.

As to attend any other meeting held by a church, friends, neighbors, sinners, and brethren and sisters of different places were invited to attend this one.

Every visitor was impressed with the genuine and abundant hospitality of this church and every speaker with its liberality. Everything was done well and generously and proceeded in good order. The elders, deacons, and the whole church should be congratulated on the success they made of this meeting in every way.

In order to have a good meeting at any time, a church must of necessity be both hospitable and liberal. Meetings have failed utterly from a sad lack of hospitality and liberality on the part of the church. A selfish, inhospitable, niggardly church can never in such a condition do its duty and have and enjoy a good meeting.

This Cookeville meeting closed leaving all grateful to God for his word, the simplicity and power of the gospel, and the all-sufficiency of the church to do all that which God has ordained for it to do. All visitors went home with the happiest memories of the church and desire to return; and the church expressed its desire to have another such meeting in the future.

To Our Preachers and Widows.

As has already been announced, the subscription price of the Gospel Advocate to preachers and widows will be increased to one dollar and fifty cents from now on. While we have been furnishing the paper to preachers and widows at one dollar a year, the cost to us of manufacturing the paper, at the present high cost of paper, materials, and labor, is one dollar and thirty cents per year. Providing that every preacher and every widow to whom we have been sending the paper paid us one dollar, we have lost just thirty cents on each one. The desire of the publishers of the Gospel Advocate is to favor widows and preachers by furnishing them the paper at the very lowest possible price. All will readily admit, however, that one dollar and fifty cents is as low as the paper can be furnished them under present conditions.

We take this occasion to thank all preachers who have interested themselves in behalf of the Gospel Advocate. The preachers can very greatly increase the circulation of the paper, and in increasing its circulation in their fields of labor they are calling to their aid a paper that will help them in stirring up more interest in the religion of Jesus Christ. Christians who read the paper regularly read their Bibles more and do more missionary and charitable work than do those who fail to read any religious paper.

We are anxious to have all our preachers and widows continue to read the paper, and believe that the advance will not seriously interfere with their doing so. No one who is deeply interested in the cause of truth would stop his paper simply for fifty cents a year. We appeal to all to remain with us and to make an effort to send us a large list of subscribers for 1917.

Publishers' Notes.

"The Jerusalem Tragedy" is a most interesting book. Price, $1.

Bibles make splendid Christmas gifts. We have a large line. Write us for anything that you may need.

Send us $1 for a copy of "The New Testament Church." This book is composed of the editorials of F. D. Srygley.

Send us your order for a Church Record. This record is complete. It covers all that is necessary, yet it is simple. Price, $1.50.

Send us $1 for a copy of "Larimore and His Boys." This book has had a wide reading. It is just as good today as it was when written.

"Uncle Minor's Stories" will make a handsome Christmas present for the young people. Everybody reads this book with relish. Price, $1.

Send us $1 for a copy of "Sweeney's Sermons." This is one of the best sermon books published. The arguments are strong, clear, and convincing.

Send us $1.50 for "Salvation from Sin," by D. Lipscomb. This book was compiled by J. W. Shepherd and is composed of the best editorials of Brother Lipscomb.

If you need anything in the way of maps, blackboards, or any other church supplies, write us. We will be glad to furnish you with anything you may need in this line.

Have you read "The Gospel Plan of Salvation?" This is the best production of Dr. T. W. Brents. Many thousand copies of this book have been sold and read. Price, $2.

We have in stock two or three copies of the "Campbell-Rice Debate" which have been rebound and put in good condition. These are the only copies that we have on hand of this great debate. We will sell at a reasonable price.

If you have not already sent us your order for your Bible Lesson Helps, you should do so at once. We are now mailing out the supplies for the first quarter of 1917. We would be glad to have your order at once. We are receiving many complimentary expressions concerning the merits of these helps. They are as full of Bible teaching as an egg is full of meat. We ask it as a special favor that you call the attention of your friends to these helps.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

Godlessness Responsible for Insanity.

Christian faith is optimistic. Infidelity is always pessimistic. Statistics show that suicides are more numerous among those who register themselves as of "no religion" than among those who belong to the different branches of the Christian faith. A writer says that prevailing godlessness has much to do with the increase in insanity and numerous forms of mental disease. Worry, disappointment, depression, and despair arise where man is without the support of faith. Fellowship with Jesus Christ bears a man up under discouragement. The mind of man requires faith in God to continue in a healthy condition. "Think on Christ, and the dark hours which tempt to self-destruction will not linger long. The return of faith to this age will bring an increased resistance to the destructive forces of this world."—Herald and Presbyterian.

"Christ is the light of the world." Simple, childlike trust in Christ strengthens us for life's conflicts. Christ gives light to his followers. Without the hope that Christ gives us, the world is dark indeed. Without it, our burdens would soon overwhelm us.

Eight Hundred Million for "Preparedness."

While the thoughtful observer will not conclude that this country is warlike and is anxious to rush into war, yet it is evident that the people of this nation are preparing for self-defense as never before. It is to be hoped that this preparation can be made without cultivating a spirit of militarism that will eventually lead us into war. On the subject of preparedness the Christian Advocate, of this city, says:

The various departments at Washington in making their estimates to Congress call for appropriations for the next fiscal year amounting to nearly $1,700,000,000, and it is believed that the final figures will go considerably beyond this amount. The army asks for $373,000,000 and the navy several million dollars more than the estimate for the army; hence nearly one-half the total asked of Congress is for national defense. Such appropriations would not have been considered three years ago; but it is likely that the army and navy appropriations, carrying a total of nearly $800,000,000, will pass without serious opposition.

The Man Who Stays at Home.

Much time, labor, and thought have been devoted to the man who stays at home and fails to worship God in the church. Pious people cannot understand how such people can enjoy life without worship. Worship of some kind is natural. In the midst of the conflict, strife, and turmoil of life, all need hours for serious reflection and earnest meditation. Nothing is more helpful to the tired, weary soul than close communion with God. To the Christian it is a blessed thing to lock out the world and to lock himself in with God. Yet, despite all these truths, there are many thousand people who never attend the place of worship at all. We have sought in vain to learn the exact reason why.

Some have thought that the Sunday paper was to blame; others have thought that golf took them away from the worship, and still others are arguing that the automobile leads them away from the church. But none of these reasons is satisfactory. The man who is really interested in his soul's salvation will not permit the Sunday paper, golf, the automobile, or even money or any earthly consideration to take him entirely away from the worship of God.

The greatest problem with Christians is how to reach such people. If Christians would talk and practice the religion of Jesus Christ more, there would be fewer people to stay away from the worship of God. Christians themselves should become thoroughly filled with the spirit of Christ, and should lead such godly lives that their influence will be perfectly irresistible. The man who has the religion of Jesus Christ in his heart will have it in his life. It is contradictory to talk about a man's having a good heart so long as he has a bad life. "Either make the tree good, and its fruit good; or make the tree corrupt, and its fruit corrupt: for the tree is known by its fruit. Ye offspring of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. The good man out of his good treasure bringeth forth good things: and the evil man out of his evil treasure bringeth forth evil things." (See Matt. 12: 33-35.) Our dear Lord's best interpreters are humble human souls. The influence of a really devout, consecrated Christian is irresistible. The Christian Century offers some pertinent suggestions on this subject as follows:

How to reach the man who stays at home is a more difficult problem than diagnosing his spiritual ailment. Some would organize a calling squad and compel him to come in. Some would invite him to an oyster supper. There are various devices, but only one real solution.

The church must bear a more earnest testimony for religion in the whole community. The members who have caught a glimpse of the importance of religion must learn to talk about it. We always talk about the thing we are in earnest about. There should be new ways of preaching to the community. A paid space in the newspaper for a sermon which would not be sensational enough to get printed otherwise would help. In the lives of all the Christians there should be an eloquent testimony of the power of religion to bless and sanctify life.

When the power of religion to form the noblest lives becomes more frequently exemplified, there will be but few who prefer to stay at home.

Think of the Good, Not the Evil.

When we view the many forms of sin that are active in the world and in the community round about us, we feel discouraged and bewildered. We may become so pessimistic and dwell so long upon the wickedness of the world that we may finally conclude that all is going to the bad. Instead of this, we should think of the multiplied and magnificent agencies that are at work to overcome evil and to lead the world to Christ. There are many good people who are laboring to relieve suffering humanity. There are thousands who are ready to give of their means in order to support and uphold the church of Christ. It is our duty to think of such rather than of the evil of the world. Is not this what Paul means when he says: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things?" (Phil. 4: 8.)

As we count time, the day may be far distant or it may be near when Christ will rule over all the kingdoms of the world—when all the kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdoms of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The day is coming when the kings of the earth shall acknowledge him as Lord. Whether this be far or near in comparison with the never-dying ages of eternity, the time of his coming will be short.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

A. B. Lipscomb and wife spent the holidays in Louisville, Ky.

Married, on December 23, J. C. McQuiddy officiating. Will G. Sanders and Dovie Brown. The Gospel Advocate extends congratulations.

The death of Sister R. G. Vaughn, one of our Russell Street members, is a distinct loss to the congregation, but we believe it is a great gain for her.

The Central Mission Church will worship on the first Sunday in January at the Business Men's Association's rooms, opposite the Maxwell House. W. W. Bates will preach.

Married, on December 26, by J. C. McQuiddy, L. R. Colinsworth to Miss Lou Ford Dunn. The Gospel Advocate force joins in congratulations and wishes for them a long and useful life.

J. L. Hines was married to Miss Geneva Kenton, of Mount Juliet, Tenn., at the Hermitage Hotel, this city, on Wednesday, December 20, 1916, A. B. Lipscomb officiating. They will reside at Dunlap, Tenn.

From C. G. Vincent, Battle Creek, Mich., December 18: "Our address until further notice will be 666 F Street, Louisville, Ky. We shall start for the South next Wednesday. Mrs. Vincent is pretty well. Five recently baptized in Tokyo. Prayers for the work requested."

S. P. Risener, of Bee Branch, Ark., a deserving brother, is anxious to secure good books for his library. He is especially desirous of securing religious tracts and sermon outlines that will help him in preaching the gospel. We hope several of our readers will respond to this appeal.

From J. D. Floyd, Tullahoma, Tenn., December 11: "I preached to a good audience here on the first Sunday in this month. A singular coincidence was that the first and last persons I had baptized were in the audience, there being an interval of forty-five years between the two baptisms. A little singular, was it not?"

Contributions for the Armenian and Syrian Relief Fund have been received from the following: Church at Nerren Scholhouse, near Ruleville, Tenn., $2.72; Mrs. A. V. Goodpasture, Clarksville, Tenn., $2; Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Bowles, Hopkinsville, Ky., $2; J. A. Derryberry, Match, Tenn., 50 cents. Brother Derryberry also sent $2 for foreign missions.

From C. W. Rountree, of Kenton, Tenn.: "I suppose I am the only one living who was baptized before the war at old Beech Grove, Maury County, Tenn. I was secretary for the church there for sixteen years. Brethren J. C. Alexander, A. W. Potter, J. M. Alexander, Mercer McConico, and R. C. Jamison preceded me. All gone to their long home. Remember me to Brethren David Lipscomb, E. G. Sewell, E. A. Elam, A. B. Lipscomb, and accept my love for all the good correspondents."

From Mrs. M. C. McDaniel, one of the Gospel Advocate's oldest and best friends: "I inclose one dollar for my subscription for another year. I think every year I subscribe for the Advocate it will be the last; but I am hanging on yet, and love to read the old paper as well as ever. I expect my name has been on the list as long, if not longer than many others. I took it before the war, when T. Fanning and W. Lipscomb began to publish it. I am past eighty-three now. I go in a class at Sunday school and enjoy the lessons in the Quarterlies."

From George W. Farmer, Lebanon, Tenn., December 15: "I have just returned from Urbana, Mo., where I held my last protracted meeting for 1916. I have tried to make this year the busiest year of my life, having been continuously at work since the latter part of May, just giving myself time to go from one meeting to another. I can truly say that I have preached to more people this year than in any previous year of my ministry. If we are to judge the merits of a meeting by the number of additions, some have been good and some have been poor—more poor ones than good ones. I have read with some degree of interest the articles from the various ones on the young preachers and the old preachers, the stationed preachers and the run-around preachers; yet it makes no difference to me whether he is young or old, just so he preaches the old Jerusalem gospel and lives the principles in his own life; or whether he preaches at a place one year or six weeks or one week, just so he preaches to people who need preaching. I try to keep busy all the time. I am ready now to arrange work for 1917. Who wants me? Write me at Lebanon, Tenn. A merry Christmas and a happy New year to the Gospel Advocate staff and to all of its readers. May you all live long to do all the possible good in the world."

A Letter That Breathes Encouragement.

It is very encouraging to the publishers of the Gospel Advocate to note the sympathetic attitude of their readers toward the paper at this time. This encouragement is so general and so hearty that we can almost feel it. It is especially indicated by the attitude which our readers have assumed toward the proposition of raising the price of the paper to two dollars. Before this step was taken there were a few who expressed the fear that it might mean the loss of a considerable number from our subscription list, but we have now reached the conclusion that there will be no loss sustained at all. In fact, it pleases us to write that our subscription list was never in better shape than at the present time. Not only have there been thousands of renewals, but a large number of new subscribers have been added. The month of December has been unparalleled in point of receipts. In fact, we believe it is the best month the Advocate has ever experienced.

Now that the new subscription price is about to go into effect, we face the future with renewed faith and hope. We see clearly that our readers are not going to allow a matter of fifty cents to stand between them and their loyalty to the religious paper of their choice.

To show the spirit that is being manifested, we print herewith a letter from Brother G. W. Holley, of Stony Point, La., which reveals how he and many others feel toward the Advocate:

In the late issues of the Gospel Advocate, I notice urgent appeals to subscribers to renew so as to take advantage of the low price of subscription. Now, if you are doing the good I believe you to be doing, I am perfectly willing to pay you for the paper at the advanced price, and so shall not renew, on purpose, until my subscription nearly runs out next April. I sincerely believe that you are trying to uphold primitive Christianity as revealed by the Bible, and thus believe that in paying you for the paper I am helping you to sound out the truth, I thus hope to give you more pay earlier by not taking advantage of your magnificent offer. I wish I could present the truth of God and Jesus as you can; but I know so little. I wish I could study and learn to rightly divide the Scriptures as you seem to be able to do. I know it would take me years. I am just a small teacher yet, still I have faith in my Savior and try hard to follow him. Sincere good wishes to the editors of the Gospel Advocate and all other true followers of Jesus.

POSTAL INFORMATION: International post-office money orders can be bought at the rate of one per cent; but for any amount, however small, the cost will be ten cents. A check on any of the banks in America is good in Japan; personal checks are as good as any. The money itself is accepted by the banks. The ordinary postage on letters is five cents; newspapers, one cent.

"A Great Door and Effectual is Opened."

BY C. G. VINCENT.

The ninth verse of 1 Cor. 16 reads: "For a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries." How strikingly true is this of Japan and our work there! Japan is an "open door." The government has recognized Christianity as a religion capable of elevating the nation. The spirit of persecution is not so severe as formerly. All missionaries are perfectly safe. All the important cities may be reached by railroad or steamship. The foreigners may hold property in their own names or by boards of trustees as in America. Formerly no foreigner could hold property in his own name. So in those days all mission property was held by Japanese believers. This was very unsatisfactory, for it put a temptation before the Japanese, and the real owners were kept in "hot water" all the time. Missionaries enjoy better facilities for learning the language. There are good textbooks and skillful teachers to be had at a nominal expense. Much Christian literature has been published. There are good gospel song books in Japanese and Romaji. The Bible is being circulated far and wide. The missionaries have better material from which to select and train native workers. There are fewer "loaves-and-fishes" Christians, and the missionaries are in better position to avoid imposition on the part of rascals and men of low character.

Paul's "effectual" door was at Ephesus, a foreign field to Judea. Our "effectual" foreign door is Japan, because this great nation, though small, exercises a mighty influence in the far East.

Students from Korea, Manchuria, and China come to Japan for educational purposes. If Japan can be influenced toward Christianity, she will greatly influence her sister nations. Well may we "tarry at" Japan. She is our opportunity. Of course the Japanese are not accepting the gospel by hundreds and thousands; but "one by one" the great and small are being led into the kingdom of heaven, and the "sure foundation of the Lord," is being laid. We are in a great work under a great Leader. The followers of the great Leader should realize their opportunities and lay hold upon them.

"And there are many adversaries." We would naturally look for the conjunction "but" instead of the regular connective "and" in this sentence. Paul does not seem to say: "For a great door and effectual is opened unto me, but there are many adversaries. So I think I cannot do much here; I must go elsewhere." Judging from his sentence, he was fully determined to rebuke and overcome his adversaries. In fact, "adversaries" are not always permanent hindrances to the cause of Christianity and right. Through "adversaries" the cause of truth receives publicity and advertisement it could not get in any other way. Our "adversaries" in Japan are giving us publicity and bringing Christianity before the minds of the people all the time. For instance, the Buddhists, though bitterly opposed to the spread of Christianity, are imitating the Christians in their methods of work. They build chapels after the Christian style and have their Sunday schools. They also use the terms "Lord Buddha," the "Eternal Buddha," and speak of him as the "Savior." The very fact that they imitate Christians suggests to the thinking Japanese that there is something radically wrong with Buddhism. Frequently the Buddhist scholars will attack Christianity through the daily press. But we have Christian scholars who are able to answer them with stronger arguments, and the discriminating see the difference. Then, again, the "adversaries" stimulate action and cooperation on the part of Christians. After all is said, "adversaries" are by no means permanent hindrances to the cause of truth. Jesus, the apostles, and the New Testament church had "adversaries," but Christianity triumphed in spite of them. Therefore, let us all press on and do our full part in teaching and preaching the word of God.

Moving Pictures.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

Brother Fujimori writes that the Sunday school at Sawara has increased to sixty-three. Sister Okei Fujimori, his niece, is now working there.

Brother Hiratsuka, the evangelist laboring with the Kamitomizaka Church, Koishikawa, Tokyo, writes as follows: "A few days ago a man came to see me and talked about baptism for three hours. He says it is not needed for a man's salvation. I taught him, reading several references from the Bible. He knows some of the teaching, but not about baptism."

"We go to-morrow, but the outlook is not very encouraging." "What is the matter?" "Well, there have been eight hundred cases of cholera in Osaka, and it doesn't seem very safe to go into the midst of it. But others have been there all summer, and our work must begin." Thus spoke a missionary about the return of herself and sister to their post of duty after the summer vacation. There have been, according to the latest reports, over four thousand cases of cholera in Japan.

Mr. H— renewed his fire-insurance policy, and when it came he found that, instead of numbering his house 288—2, it was only 288. The 2 after the dash denoted that there were two houses numbered 288. He sent it back for correction, suggesting that, though it was a small error, it might be best to correct it. If thus careful about worldly matters of only passing interest, how much more so in regard to things eternal! Let me so manage that when the accounts must be presented they will meet with divine approval.

A sister in Alabama read to her class where the two little boys sent, one fifty cents and the other ten cents, and they by sending it were the cause of twelve hundred having, in tracts, the gospel preached to them. She writes: "So two little girls have given me twenty cents each to send. They made their own money." I want all the readers of the Gospel Advocate to know who these two little girls are who made their own money with which to buy eight hundred tracts to distribute on December 7 at our next temple festival. They are Cathleen and Annie Russell Crum. By the time you read this and your gift gets back to me the time of the festival will be drawing nigh. We need twenty thousand tracts. They will cost ten dollars. Fifty children giving twenty cents each will make it. Let us hear from forty-eight more at once.

Cutting Down the Cost of Pianos.

Have you ever stopped to ask yourself the question why oranges which sell for five cents each cost only two cents by the box, or why apples sell so much cheaper by the bushel than by a nickel's worth? It is the same way with pianos. If you were to purchase one hundred pianos (eight car loads) from the factory, you would get a much lower price than if you purchased only one. That is why the Gospel Advocate Piano Club, composed of one hundred buyers who club their orders into one big order, is saving its members at least forty per cent on high-grade pianos and player pianos.

You are cordially invited to write for your copy of the club's beautifully illustrated catalogue, which fully explains the big saving in price, the convenient terms, and the guarantees of quality and permanent satisfaction. Whom Do You Follow?

BY EMMETT CREAMY.

I am sure that we all are aware of the fact that there are many different creeds, theories, and human ideas; and it seems that the human race is prone to take heed to such things rather than the simple word of God just as it is written. I am glad to know that I am satisfied with what is written.

I call attention to 1 Pet. 4: 16: "But if a man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God in this name." What name? "Christian." My dear reader, do you do that, or do you wear some other name? Paul, in the first Corinthian letter, condemned some of the brethren for wearing other names than the name of Christ. Some of them were saying: "I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ." Paul asked them if Christ was divided, and also if they were baptized in the name of Paul. Of course this proved to them that if they had been baptized in the name of Paul, and if Paul had been crucified for them, they had a perfect right to wear his name. Dear reader, whoever you may be, were you baptized in the name of Campbell? Was Campbell crucified for you? If so, you have a perfect right to wear his name. But since Christ was crucified for us and since we were baptized in his name, we should wear his name, and that only.

We should not add any handle to our name, for his name is sufficient for us. (1 Pet. 4: 16.) If we call ourselves "Campbellites," we do wrong, just as Paul said the Corinthians were doing wrong. Paul thanked God that he had not baptized any more of them than he had; and who can blame him for it, since they wanted to call themselves "Paulites" instead of "Christians?" We are not "Paulites" because we obey the gospel preached by Paul, neither are we "Campbellites" because we obey the gospel preached by Alexander Campbell. We love Paul because he preached righteousness; we love all who preach righteousness; and when we obey the gospel, regardless of who preaches it, we follow Jesus Christ, and not the one who preaches it.

The Master's Vineyard

Alabama.

Montgomery, December 18.—The outlook here is very promising. The members are manifesting great enthusiasm and our congregations are steadily increasing. More people, we are told, were present yesterday than have been in many years. Brother C. P. Watson, of Jacksonville, Fla., who once lived here, was present, and greatly encouraged us by the story of his sacrifice for, and success in building up, a strong congregation in that city. We hope to be able in the near future to announce our program for mission work.—C. M. Stubblefield.

Jacksonburg, December 18.—I have just closed a week's meeting at this place. There was one addition to the congregation—from the Freewill Baptists. Jacksonburg is one of the congregations established by myself some seventeen years ago, and it was a delight to once more be with these good people. These are the first friends I ever made, my first evangelistic work being in this (Lauderdale) county nearly twenty years ago. Of course they all seem like relatives in the flesh—fathers, mothers, brothers, and sisters; and in the sense of the Master's promise (Mark 10: 29, 30) such they are. But I note little development in Christian activity in the years I have been away from them. My preaching was to this end almost entirely. I also had the pleasure of preaching at Stony Point and Mount Zion, a few miles distant—two sermons at the former and one (a funeral talk) at the latter. I preach in Sheffield to-night, and from there I go to Nashville, Tenn. My address will still be 1610 Russell Street, Nashville, Tenn.—E. C. Fuqua.

Arkansas.

Bussey, December 13.—I here give a brief report of my work in this part of Arkansas for the year now closing. My work has been in a country where nothing but the doctrines of men have been preached very much. I came in here about March 20 and found a very few people of the Christian faith; but I began to preach the gospel from place to place in a part of two counties—Lafayette and Columbia. Through preaching the gospel in its purity I was able to baptize one hundred and three persons. We now have three working congregations, with good prospects for more in the near future. We want all the help from the brethren and elders we can possibly get. We need more good preachers. If any are passing through this part of the country, let them call on me, three miles southwest of Bussey.

N. P. WEST.

California.

Tulare, December 15.—Brother J. W. Dunn, of El Paso, Texas, began a meeting at this place on November 12 and continued it till November 29. It was certainly a spiritual feast for the few who gather with us from time to time. Brother Dunn is one of the most logical reasoners I have ever heard. We had secured a nice new hall which was well lighted, heated, and seated, and those who attended were made comfortable. Although there were no visible results, yet we feel sure that the good seed of the kingdom has been planted and will bring forth fruit in the future. It was the first opportunity that many of the people of Tulare had enjoyed of hearing the gospel unmixed with the doctrines and commandments of men. A few of the Christian Church people heard Brother Dunn part of the time. The Christian Church minister heard him twice, but the other preachers of the town did not hear him a single time. As Brother Trice is expected in this State by the first of the year, we want to have him with us soon in a meeting and thereby get the truth of the gospel before the people. May the good Lord abundantly bless Brother Dunn, his good wife and dear children, and give them many days on earth, that he may continue to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ.—L. Meade Williams.

Florida.

Lake City, December 10.—For about twelve years the cause of Christ has been planted in Lake City. During these years, amid much persecution by the enemies of the truth, but with earnest prayers and loving sacrifices by a few faithful ones, the work, like the billows of an angry sea, has risen and fallen. As souls have been saved and added to the blood-bought institution of God, we have rejoiced and praised the Lord, yet soon to see many of them fall away into sin (from such the church has withdrawn fellowship), while others moved away to other parts, and still others "hath forsaken me [the work], having loved this present world" (see 2 Tim. 4: 10); but, like the church at Sardis, there are "a few names" in Lake City "which have not defiled their garments," and to these the promise is that "they shall walk with me [Jesus] in white," because "they are worthy" (Rev. 3: 4). This sweet promise alone is enough to encourage the faithful few to cling to the cross and go forward in the great work of salvation; and being faithful unto death, we are assured of the "crown of life." (Rev. 2: 10.) During these years two other congregations have been established near Lake City which have endured, and are still enduring, persecutions by the world and sectarians, and even by false brethren; but, amid all these and other afflictions, they, like the congregation at Lake City, are still working and praying and rejoicing to be counted worthy to suffer for His name, remembering that "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." (2 Tim. 3: 12.) Hence we see that, in order to inherit eternal life, we must suffer persecution and thus be prepared to meet the promised Bridegroom. As the old year passes as a funeral procession, let us remember that death will also come our way and claim us as its victim, and the opportunity to prepare to meet God will forever close. This life is a state of preparation for eternity; and if we expect to spend it with God, a careful preparation is necessary. Remember, "we shall pass this way but once, and then our journey will be through." I am glad to say that a brighter prospect is before the work here. Lately several capable and zealous workers have been added to the body at Lake City, who will help also in the work in the two other congregations near by, thereby adding strength and encouragement to the work. Brother J. E. Cottrell, of Bells, Tenn., is now located in Lake City and will work with this group of churches as an evangelist, also in other places in the State, and we expect to plant the truth at some other points in our county. Brother Cottrell is a young man who has a bright future as a preacher. He is loyal to God's word and is filled with love and zeal for the great cause which we all love. We will be workers together with God.—J. O. Barnes.

Kentucky.

Reedyville, December 13.—The meeting began here on Monday night under adverse circumstances. The weather is bad, but it seems that the people here go to church regardless of weather conditions. This morning the earth was covered with "a silence deep and white." Notwithstanding all this, we hope for a successful meeting.—J. Paul Kimbrell.

Boaz, December 15.—The meeting at Stone Church, in Hardin County, Ill., closed on December 7 without any visible results, except many expressed themselves as being edified in Christian teaching. Wife and I considered it quite a treat to visit where we had spent many pleasant hours with the faithful. We pray that Christian living may so adorn their lives that many souls may be won for Christ. May God help us to realize hourly that our words and acts must be accounted for. When we do others wrong or others do us wrong, let us do all we can to heal all trouble.—D. N. Barnett.

Hazel, December 15.—I have been watching the columns of the Gospel Advocate for a report of our splendid meeting which was conducted in October by Brother A. B. Barret, of Cleburne, Texas, but have seen none. I suppose the brethren have waited one for the other. Brother Barret came to us on the third Sunday in October, almost a stranger, and remained a few days over two weeks. He preached strong sermons twice a day through the week and three times on Sunday. His efforts were not in vain, for much good was done. There were seventeen additions to the church. We certainly appreciate his labors; for all division and strife is forgotten, the Sunday school is well attended, brotherly love reigns, and, like one big family, there is perfect union. Brother Barret drew large crowds. His sermons on "The Church Fifteen by Thirty," "Man's Most Persistent Tormentor," and "Establishment of the Church," with many others, were the strongest ever heard in this community. May God bless him and return him to us sometime.—Mrs. J. Riley Miller.

Louisiana.

Haynesville, December 15.—The church here is getting along nicely. Brother O. E. Billingsley, of Waldo, Ark., will preach for us again next year. I consider him the best I ever heard at his age. He has many friends here among the denominations and gets a good hearing.—J. F. Gipson.

Missouri.

Rogersville, December 19.—I have just returned from Southern Illinois from a seven-weeks' evangelistic campaign. Interest is growing rapidly in that country. Unless I am called for protracted-meeting work, I will be busy this winter lecturing and filling appointments. I have some time unfilled for 1917.—M. S. Mason.

Scientific Treatment for Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism, it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a salt combination scientifically prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless, but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a Godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis, of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief. Too much cannot be spoken in behalf of Renwar for rheumatism." Sold by druggists; price, 50 cents; or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

Who Wants to Help in a Worthy Cause?

BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

The brethren at Cleveland, Tenn., are building a new church house. Let it be remembered that something near three years ago the work was started up at this place. When they began their meeting, they began meeting in a hall over a business house, and they met there till a Baptist church house was vacated, and then they rented this for a while, paying fifteen dollars per month rent; finally they gave up here and went to the courthouse, where they continued to meet till their new house was near enough completion that they could begin meeting in it. They are building a plain, neat, brick-veneered house, and they have not called upon the town or any outsider to give them a cent on the house; yet they are all people of very limited means, not more than half a dozen owning their homes.

Now, my dear brethren, if you could know conditions and the difficulties through which these brethren have come up, I am sure you would decide that they are worthy and deserving of some help on this house. Do you not feel like you would like to help them some?

Now let me kindly suggest to all who see this appeal that what some of you will spend for tobacco, others for chewing gum, and others for picture shows and things that you could do just as well, and really better, without—suppose you hold this back for one month and send it to these brethren to apply on their house. If you will do this, they will be able to finish this house at once and pay it out of debt, and will be able to go right on preaching the gospel at home and abroad, building up the cause in this very needy part of the State. Suppose you do this and let God be glorified in you. Send all contributions to J. M. Carl, Cleveland, Tenn.

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine—Here is More Proof.

To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Crandon, Wis. — "When I was 16 years old I got married and at 18 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—MRS. MAYME ASBACH, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla. — "When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—MRS. A. L. McCASLAND, 509 Have St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.

Roxbury, Mass.—"I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were bearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. B. M. Osgood, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Tribute to a Worthy Woman.

BY G. C. BREWER.

On November 18, 1916, the angel of death came to our town and took away one of the oldest residents of our county, a worthy member of the church of Christ, and the mother of several useful citizens.

Josephine McConnico was born on March 18, 1841, in Maury County, Tenn., where she lived all of her life. In the early years of her young womanhood she was married to Joseph Foster. To this union two children were born, one boy and one girl. The girl died in childhood. The boy still survives and is an honored citizen of Columbia, a member of the firm of the Anderson Bros. & Foster Company. After the death of Joseph Foster our sister was married to Dr. Lee, a widower with two children. Of this marriage three sons were born, all of whom are still living. Sister Lee was a kind, patient, and tender mother to both her own and her stepchildren. She was a faithful and dutiful wife to both the men to whom it fell her lot to be married. For eight years before his death Dr. Lee was a helpless paralytic. During all that time Sister Lee never left him, but constantly nursed him in patience and tenderness.

After Dr. Lee's death our sister made her home with her stepdaughter, Mrs. Parks, of Columbia, who honored her and loved her with a love as tender as any daughter ever manifested toward her mother.

Sister Lee was a member of the body of Christ, the church of the living God. She was baptized many years ago by Brother E. G. Sewell, and she lived a consecrated, Christian life till the Lord called her home.

It is sweet to think of such a life. It is an honor to have known such a woman. Faithful wife; willing mother, loving and tender with her children; contented homekeeper; modest, quiet, humble Christian woman! Could any man or woman leave a nobler record? Can any human being better fill his mission or accomplish the purpose of his creation? Some men may, because of a marriage relation, think it improper to say so, and others, because of political ambition, refuse to say so; but I do not believe there is a living man—a real, normal man—who does not in his heart honor a woman like Sister Lee more than the "modern woman," the "new woman," or even the most conservative suffragist. How can they do otherwise and be natural?

May the girls of to-day strive to imitate the virtues of such women. And may the Lord help us all to successfully live as man or woman, even as Sister Lee did.

BY F. P. FONNER.

Since last May I have received help in my work as follows: From Mrs. M. McCrum, $2; Peter Haubert, $5; Mrs. M. E. Henry, $3; Joe G. Eldred, $4; J. N. Hieronymus, $5; J. W. Miller, $2.50; Miss Mattie Purvis, $2; Miss Dussie Purvis, $2; "A Sister," New Martinsville, W. Va., $5; church of Christ at Normandy, Tenn., $3; church of Christ at Gardner, Tenn., $5; J. L. Rutherford, Mount Vernon, Texas, $5. I certainly do appreciate this help, coming, as it does, from persons who have the true cause of Christ at heart. As to the work here, it is doing very well, all things properly considered; but the odds are terribly against us. Our means are exhausted and I am needing the fellowship of the brethren at once. Can you send me at least one Lord's-day's contribution soon? If we had sufficient means, we could send Brother G. E. Hypes out into the mission fields; but we are poor. Brother Hypes was formerly a Presbyterian preacher, whom I baptized some time ago.

You Must Have Plenty of Iron in Your Blood to Be Strong, Says Doctor

Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate, Nervous, Run-down People 200 Per Cent. in Ten Days in Many Instances.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. Sauer, a physician who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fall to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong, but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by the lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the fray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. Sauer is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents is widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

This is your last opportunity to renew your subscription to the Gospel Advocate and save 50 cents. Price advanced January 1, 1917.

The Old Familiar Hymns on Columbia Records

There is no sort of music that lends itself better to home enjoyment on the Columbia Grafanola than the grand old hymns that have been sung for years in homes all over the country.

Think of your own favorite hymn, sung as you may have heard it on some special occasion—solo, duet, or quartette—and then hear it reproduced on Columbia Records. It will be the living voice—flawless, full, rich, and beautifully clear in tone and enunciation.

Why Don't You Smile?

Are you melancholy and pessimistic, wearing a disagreeable frown on your face? The trouble is with your liver. If you had an active and healthy liver, you would be cheerful and happy. The well-known, reliable remedy, Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator, makes lazy livers active and restores that smile to your face. If you have a sluggish liver, Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator will rectify the trouble, relieving you of the possible dangers of auto-intoxication or self-poisoning, which is the inevitable result of habitual constipation. For sale by druggists; price, 50 cents. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

Every Cold Should Be Considered Serious

So say the best medical authorities. Unless promptly checked, often they lead to chronic bronchial and pulmonary troubles which may prove fatal.

If your cough or cold has not responded to treatment—and remember, medicine should not be solely relied on—timely use of Eckman's Alterative may give you relief.

For more than twenty years it has been benefiting sufferers from these disorders. It is especially indicated where the system demands lime, for it contains calcium chlorid so combined as to be easily assimilated by the average person.

Safe to try—because it contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs of any sort whatsoever. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

The Gospel of Nature.

BY JOHN T. POE.

"Gospel" means "good news;" and nature tells us much that is good, if we heed it. The law of nature is divine, as well as the law of the Spirit. There is a law of nature, as there is of the Spirit. Both laws are of God, and both are perverted and corrupted and disobeyed by man. Man refuses to be governed by law and pays a penalty unless forgiven of God, who is the Author of both the natural and the spiritual. But there are no pardons provided in the natural. In the spiritual God has provided pardon on certain conditions which he names; but, so far as we know, he has provided no pardons in the natural. But man refuses to see this, especially in nature. He violates God's natural law and dies. The preacher says at the funeral: "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." But this is not true. The man ate an overgorge of rotten cabbage and green fruit, took cramp colic, and died as a consequence of his own folly in disobeying a law of his being. God had enjoined, "Be temperate in all things," and this applied to his temporal well-being; but he did not heed the command of God, and as a penalty of violated law he dies. But the Lord did not do it; it was rotten cabbage that did it. It is wrong to palm our follies off on God. Put them where they belong, and let man learn to obey God's laws, which are for man's highest good. A child may drink poison and die. But that is not the Lord's work. Some one left the poison where the child could get it, and it knew no better than to drink it. Whoever placed the poison so carelessly is guilty of the crime of manslaughter. It was not the Lord that did it. God created Adam a perfectly healthy man; Eve was made of Adam—of healthy material; and, as a consequence, their descendants lived up into the centuries, because they lived in accordance with the law of their being. Now how is it? Ninety-five per cent of the human family go to an early grave in consequence of violated law. But the civilized world is beginning to learn, and, as they learn and obey, the average of human life is getting longer. A little while ago it was thirty-three years; now it is thirty-six; and with the sanitary laws, the pure-food laws, the better cooking, less eating and better care of infants, we ought to reach an average of fifty years for human life before the close of the twentieth century. But so many come into the world handicapped by inheritance of diseased parents—weakly and nervous mothers, drunken and diseased fathers—that they can only struggle for a while, yield to the inevitable, and pass out. The time is not far distant when it will require a doctor's certificate, as well as a court license, in order to get married. Then the life average will rise rapidly.

A Woman's Appeal

To all knowing sufferers of rheumatism, whether muscular or of the joints, sciatica, lumbago, backache, pains in the kidneys or neuralgia pains, to write to her for a home treatment which has repeatedly cured all of these tortures. She feels it her duty to send it to all sufferers FREE. You cure yourself at home, as thousands will testify, no change of climate being necessary. This simple discovery banishes uric acid from the blood, loosens the stiffened joints, purifies the blood, and brightens the eyes, giving elasticity and tone to the whole system. If the above interests you, for proof address Mrs. M. Summers, Box 147, South Bend, Ind.

Sugar in the Wrong Place.

One of the most valuable foods known to civilized man is sugar; and when it is properly digested, it is of especially fine value in heating the body and producing the nervous energy necessary for human activity; but sugar has to be changed in form when it is taken into the blood. Sometimes by malnutrition it is taken into the blood as sugar, in which case the sugar is a good thing in the wrong place.

As a consequence the body is afflicted with a disease known as diabetes. Most physicians admit that they are unable to cure it; yet there are innumerable cases where individuals have recovered from diabetes, and a very large number of these cases attribute their restoration to health to the use of Warner's Safe Diabetes Remedy. It cannot hurt a well man nor a sick man; and since there are many who testify to its value in the treatment of diabetes, you cannot do better, if you are afflicted with that disease, than to give it a trial. Sold by leading druggists everywhere. A free sample will be supplied on request, addressed to the manufacturers, Warner's Safe Remedies Company, Rochester, N. Y.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

One of the brightest and most entertaining of all our Sunday-school publications is THE YOUNG PEOPLE, a four-page weekly, devoted especially to the interests and welfare of young people of both sexes, but which will prove a channel of cheer and blessing to older ones as well. This periodical has just been consolidated with THE BIBLE STUDY HELPER, and presents the strongest and most essential features of both in an improved form. Three pages are given to stories of an entertaining and elevating character and articles of an educational nature, by gifted and well-informed writers, strikingly illustrated by photo-engravings and line drawings; and one page is devoted to a clear and concise presentation of the Sunday-school lesson, historically and exegetically, by A. B. Lipscomb, one of the editors of the Gospel Advocate, in which are presented the thoughts of many of the world's best thinkers. The size of the page is 10 3/4 x 14 inches. Printed from clear type on good paper.

OBITUARIES

On account of the large number of obituary notices coming to the Gospel Advocate the following rules must be observed: Obituaries that do not exceed one hundred and fifty words are published free of charge. When they exceed this limit, one cent will be charged for every additional word. Payment must accompany notice or else it will be reduced to one hundred and fifty words. Poetry will not be printed.

Walker.

Sister Delinda Walker was born on December 25, 1847, and died on November 1, 1916. She was married to John Walker in October, 1868. They had four children born to them. She leaves a husband and three children to mourn her loss. She had been a true Christian for many years, and always was doing something for the cause of Christ. She was sick only two hours. She was arranging an orphans' box when she passed away. Let us not mourn as those that have no hope, but trust that she died in a Savior's love, and that we can meet her in the sweet by and by. X.

Overbey.

Henry Ward Overbey, little son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Overbey, Hohenwald, Tenn., was transplanted to the garden of Paradise on November 19, 1915, at the age of two years, nine months, and five days, having been born on February 14, 1913. His death followed a short illness of blood poisoning. His parents and several brothers and sisters survive him and mourn his premature death; but in all their sorrow they derive comfort from the attitude of the Savior during his earthly life and the sweet promises of his word. It is difficult to comprehend the circumstances of life and the providences of God, but we rejoice to believe that God does all things well and that "all things work together for good to them that love God." A FRIEND.

Walling.

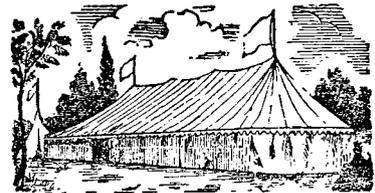

Died, at McMinnville, Tenn., on June 23, 1916, Nancy Ann Miller Walling, wife of H. L. Walling. She lived with him sixty-three years, and was always a loving and faithful wife. She was a member of the church of Christ over fifty years. She was a fine cook and kept a clean house. And when her two-story brick was new, Granville Lipscomb took dinner with her, and asked the privilege of naming her home. He named it the "preachers' home;" and as she kept all the loyal preachers for thirty years, she thought the name appropriate. But she has gone to her reward. We mourn her absence and appreciate so many, very many, letters of condolence. Her hospitality was fine. Elder P. G. Potter, of Dibrell, preached her funeral. She leaves her husband, two sons (Jesse D. and James), one daughter (Amica), and a great many grandchildren and great-grandchildren to mourn for her. H. L. WALLING.

Page.

Martha Whitworth Page was born in Davidson County, Tenn., near Nashville, on April 18, 1832, and died on November 5, 1916, being eighty-four years, six months, and eighteen days of age when her spirit left the earthly tabernacle. In the month of August, 1856, the deceased was married to W. G. H. Page, and they later took up their abode in Lebanon. Brother and Sister Page were always found at the appointed meetings of the saints as long as it was physically possible for them to attend. Their home was known as "the preachers' home" for many years. Brother Page was an elder of the church of Christ at Lebanon many years, and his last work before his departure from this life, about eleven years ago, was an attempt to visit a members who were not attending the meetings regularly. The departed had made her home with her daughter, Mrs. W. W. Hawks, since her husband's death. She was feeble, but in fairly good health until three weeks before life ended, having at that time sustained an injury by a fall. The deceased is survived by two daughters—Mrs. W. W. Hawks and Mrs. W. B. Ballard, of Nashville—eleven grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. A great number of friends from far and near, as well as relatives from Nashville and Donelson, gathered in order to pay their last tribute of respect at the funeral services, which were conducted by the writer.

Letter from India.

BY W. HUME M'HENRY.

Brother Jelley and I made a short visit to see the brethren at Devlali camp. The sub-inspector of police had been giving them some trouble and they were anxious for us to come to see them. When we arrived there, we found that all the trouble was over; for, in answer to a letter we had written the district superintendent of police, he had transferred the troublesome fellow to another village, and thus they were greatly relieved, and so were we. As my custom is, I took a supply of Gospels and tracts to distribute along the way. At Kalyan we spent a part of the night and a part of the next morning. While there at the station, I opened my sack and gave away all I could spare of my books, saving only a few for the brethren at Devlali. It is not necessary to state that I could have given away more, for that is always the case. Whenever we begin to hand out Gospels, a policeman is almost necessary to keep the crowd from trampling upon us. I know not how many we would be able to distribute if we had the funds to buy the paper to publish them or buy them already printed.

When we arrived at the camp where our brethren live, we were soon in their homes. They were greatly rejoiced to see us. Like Paul, in speaking of the Galatians, I believe that they would almost pluck out their eyes and give them to us, if we were in need of them and could use them. This is an expression of the deep gratitude which fills their hearts over being told of Jesus their Savior. Certainly they are the most hospitable people I have ever met. Before we had got well seated they began to bring tea and bread and cakes for us to eat; and if we had been able to eat all day, this would have continued all day. It is not my habit to drink tea. I do not especially like it and do not think that it is very good for a person; but, rather than make them feel bad, I drank one cup as though I thought it was real good. But soon in they came with more tea and more bread. I insisted that I was not feeling very well and would rather not eat any more, but it was all in vain. I had to eat it. So I made up my mind that I would eat this also. But before I had finished this meal they came with another real big cup of hot tea for me. This time I revolted. I refused to open my mouth for fear some good sister would pour it in; and, in fact, one, perhaps thinking that I was not feeling like sitting up, made an effort to raise my head in order to kindly assist me in drinking it. Gospel Advocate Piano Club Prevents Waste.

You will not find many men who would deliberately throw away one hundred dollars, and yet there are many who unintentionally waste that amount every year in one way or another. Careless buying is one of the most common ways of wasting money. The founders of the club had that fact in mind when they adopted the principle of cutting down the cost of pianos by cutting out the waste in marketing them. The club claims to save its members forty per cent, and asks you to give it an opportunity to prove this fact to your entire satisfaction by thoroughly testing the piano in your own home before obligating yourself to pay for it. It will cost you only a postal card to investigate; and if the testimony of club members who have already received their instruments is to be relied upon, you will undoubtedly be delighted with the saving in price, the convenient terms, and the superior quality of the instruments. By uniting our orders in a club of one hundred members, each secures the benefit of the lowest possible factory price, and yet it is responsible only for his own order.

Write for your copy of the catalogue and full particulars to-day. Address The Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

Self-Poisoning.

Did you know that when you allow a slight case of constipation to continue you are poisoning yourself? The pores of your skin cannot carry off all the impurities of your body, and you should never force them to do more than their share by not keeping your bowels open. When constipated, take Van Lax for your liver. It cleanses your entire digestive system. It does not gripe or nauseate; contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. It is pleasant in taste and results. It is the ideal treatment for constipation and auto-intoxication or self-poisoning. Try it. Sold everywhere in bottles, 50 cents. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

Send us five cents for the tract, "Walking by Faith."

few minutes a Hindu man, who knew Brother Jelley well and thought much of him, came in and demanded that I proceed at once to his house, where Brother Jelley had then gone, and eat the dinner which they had prepared for us. Again I insisted, but all in vain, to be permitted to remain where I was. So I ate again. But notwithstanding all my eating, I continued to feel better from the first, and before the day was gone I was feeling fine again. Late in the evening Brother Jelley preached a stirring sermon from Luke 15. After services, about ten gave their names as wanting to be baptized, and Brother Chavhan afterwards went to baptize them. After the sermon another big meal was in readiness, and we had to eat our part of it. While we were eating we could hear them discussing among themselves what they would prepare for us in the morning.

We were able to get a little rest that night and were up early the next morning. Our train was to leave about seven o'clock, and we knew that if we waited until they got up it would be impossible for us to get away from them in time to catch our train to Bombay; so we decided to surprise them by leaving while they slept. Brother Jelley sneaked off without his hat and left me to pack up our baggage and slip away. Only two or three knew about it. Probably the next time we go, they will set a guard to hold us.

But we had important business in Bombay. Again and again have we been impressed with the need of more reading matter to give to the hungry people. We would that we might give away a million copies of the gospel each year. With the present force, it would then take about three hundred years to reach all the people with one copy. About three-fourths of the cost of the printing in this country is in the setting of the type. Since we have men here in training all the time, we save this bill by having our men do this work; and besides, it is excellent training for them and will teach them a trade if they are ever out of work. So we invested something over one hundred and fifty dollars in a small printing outfit which will be sufficient to turn out thousands of tracts and small booklets at a very small cost—the cost of the paper. We shall be content with this limited outfit for the present, but we want a larger press as the work grows in this field, and we will have it, the Lord willing. But we will have to meet the small payments on this press, besides buying the paper for the tracts and keeping up the necessities of life. This will be somewhat of a drain upon us for some time.

In view of the fact that this is purely a work for the Lord, and one in which every Christian should be interested, and believing, too, that God must use his children to supply our needs, in Jesus' name we ask those who may chance to read this letter to send us at least a small donation toward this needy work. We will much appreciate it, and believe that many souls will have a chance of learning of Christ who would never hear us preach orally. Funds will also be received toward buying a larger press in the future.

Worth $1,000,000.

If you were about to die and heard of some remedy that would restore you to health, you would gladly give all you possess to obtain it. For only twenty-five cents you may secure a box of Gray's Ointment, which may be the means of preventing your death from blood poison. It is from little neglected sores, cuts, bruises, burns, etc., that fatal blood poisoning often starts. Gray's Ointment, if applied as soon as the affection is contracted, will allay pain and heal the wound, thus preventing any serious after effects. Successfully used in thousands of homes for nearly a century. Most druggists sell it. For free sample, write to W. F. Gray & Co., 818 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn.

Ruptured? ———

Throw Away Your Truss!

For Many Years We Have Been Telling You that No Truss Will Ever Help You---We Have Told You the Harm that Trusses Are Doing. We Have Told You that the Only Truly Comfortable and Scientific Device for Holding Rupture Is the Brooks Rupture Appliance---And that It Is

Sent on Trial to Prove It

If you have tried almost everything else, come to me. Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. Send attached coupon to-day, and I will send you free my illustrated book on rupture and its cure, showing my appliances and giving you prices and names of many people who have tried it and were cured. It is instant relief when all others fail. Remember, I use no salves, no harness, no lies.

I send on trial to prove what I say is true. You are the judge; and once having seen my illustrated book and read it, you will be as enthusiastic as my hundreds of patients whose letters you can also read. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day. It's well worth your time, whether you try my appliance or not.

PENNSYLVANIA MAN THANKFUL.

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir: Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years, and have always had trouble with it till I got your appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on; it just adapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in.

It would be a veritable Godsend to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it. My rupture is now all healed up, and nothing ever did it but your appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself, I will say a good word for your appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am,

Yours very sincerely,
JAMES A. BRITTON,
80 Spring Street, Bethlehem, Pa.

CONFEDERATE VETERAN CURED.

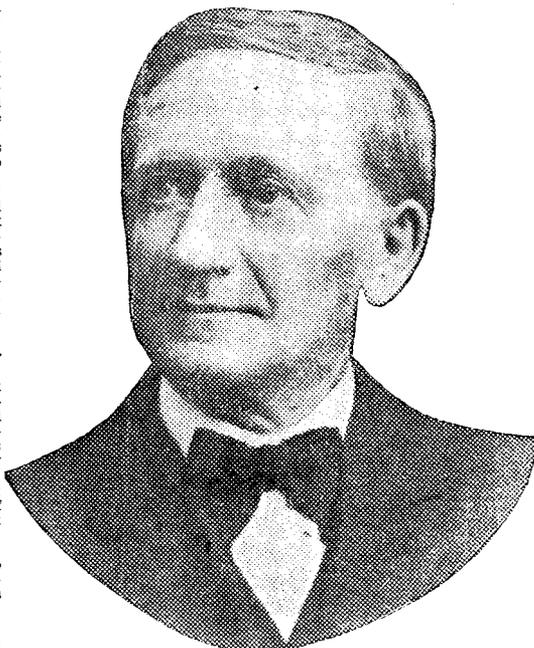

Mr. C. E. Brooks.
Dear Sir: I am glad to tell you that I am now sound and well and can plow or do any heavy work. I can say your appliance has effected a permanent cure. Before getting your appliance I was in a terrible condition, and had given up all hope of ever being any better. If it hadn't been for your appliance, I would never have been cured. I am sixty-eight years old, and served three years in Eckles' Artillery, Oglethorpe Company. I hope God will reward you for the good you are doing for suffering humanity. Yours sincerely,

H. D. BANKS,
Commerce, Ga., R. F. D. No. 11.

OTHERS FAILED, BUT THE APPLIANCE CURED.

C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir: Your appliance did all you claim for the little boy, and more; for it cured him sound and well. We let him wear it for about a year in all, although it cured him three months after he had begun to wear it. We had tried several other remedies and got no relief, and I shall certainly recommend it to friends, for we surely owe it to you.

Yours respectfully,
WILLIAM PATTERSON,
717 South Main Street, Akron, O.

The above is C. E. Brooks, inventor of the Appliance, who cured himself and who has been curing others for over thirty years. If ruptured, write him to-day at Marshall, Mich.

CURED AT THE AGE OF SEVENTY-SIX.

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir: I began using your appliance for the cure of rupture (I had a pretty bad case), I think, in May, 1905. On November 20, 1905, I quit using it. Since that time I have not needed or used it. I am well of rupture, and rank myself among those cured by the Brooks discovery, which, considering my age—seventy-six years—I regard as remarkable. Very sincerely yours,

SAM A. HOOVER,
Jamestown, N. C.

CHILD CURED IN FOUR MONTHS.

Brooks Rupture Appliance Company.
Gentlemen: The baby's rupture is altogether cured, thanks to your appliance, and we are so thankful to you. If we could only have known of it sooner, our little boy would not have had to suffer near as much as he did. He wore your brace a little over four months and has not worn it now for six weeks. Yours very truly,

ANDREW EGGENBERGER,
21 Jansen Street, Dubuque, Ia.

Ten Reasons Why

YOU SHOULD SEND FOR BROOKS RUPTURE APPLIANCE

1. It is absolutely the only appliance of the kind on the market to-day, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.
2. The appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of position.
3. Being an air cushion of soft rubber, it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.
4. Unlike the ordinary so-called "pads" used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
5. It is small, soft, and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.
6. The soft, pliable bands holding the appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.
7. There is nothing about it to get foul, and when it becomes soiled, it can be washed without injuring it in the least.
8. There are no metal springs in the appliance to torture one by cutting and bruising the flesh.
9. All of the material of which the appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe appliance to wear.
10. My reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon to-day.

Remember

I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day.
