AFTER FIFTY YEARS.

BY DAVID LIPSCOMB.

Fifty years ago we started out to maintain the principle of loyalty to God through the Gospel Advocate. We have tried to be faithful to it, in insisting upon walking in God's appointments, in seeking entrance into Christ, in opposition to the various denominations around us. To maintain this principle and insist on doing what God required as the only way of honoring him and saving our souls is to be true to God, is to stand with Jesus, whose meat it was to do the will of Him that sent him. The denominations have fiercely assailed us for the position. I have not for a moment doubted that in doing this they have persecuted us for Christ's sake; that in standing firm and loyal to Christ we have been persecuted for Christ's sake. While we labor and pray for the deliverance of the misguided from their wrong way, we can rejoice when we realize we suffer persecution for Christ's sake. The same condition of affairs has presented itself in the churches claiming to be governed solely by the law of God in the worship and work of the church. They have as plainly changed the order of God in its spirit, its worship, and its work as others have changed that order in the conditions of entrance into Christ. Loyalty to God and his law left open but one course—to be faithful to the order God has given in his word. To change here seems to me as much disloyalty to God as to change the terms of admission into Christ. To stand by his order is to stand with Christ; to depart from and oppose his order is to oppose and fight against him. And to oppose and malign those who stand for his order is to persecute Christ; to bear opposition and be faithful to Christ is to bear persecution for Christ. In this "rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven," says the Master.

We have, for half a century, stood as loyally to the Master in these things as we could. Our success in inducing others to stand with us in this matter has not been what we had hoped and desired; but if our course were to go over again, we would abate nothing of our fidelity in this course. We have long ago passed the threescore and ten years allotted to man on earth remaining. If we knew how, we would emphasize and deepen the impression we have made along this line. About this, so long as we believe the Bible is from God, we can have no doubt; and as we approach the end, the more we study the word of God, the more anxious we are to meet him, knowing we have opposed all innovations and changes upon his order at every point along the line of duty drawn by him. A closer walk with God is one of loyalty and fidelity to his laws and zeal and devotion in his appointments, and for this I daily pray and strive; and in this walk failure is success. In any other, the highest success is miserable failure. Shall this year be one of success or failure before God?

How God Counts Time.

BY JAMES E. SCOBEX.

I am requested to write something on the subject stated above.

Now, in approaching the subject, I am somewhat at a loss to understand what is meant in this case by "count." It is a word which can be used in several senses. It can be used to number, as to count the days and years of one's life, count the stars. "Who can count the dust of Jacob?" (Num. 23: 10.) It is sometimes used in the sense of ascribe or impute. Abraham believed God, and it was counted to him for righteousness. (Gen. 15: 6.) Again, it is used in the sense of think, judge, consider; as, "I count them mine enemies." (Ps. 13: 22.) Paul said: "Neither count I my life dear unto myself." (Acts 20: 24.) "I count all things but loss." (Phil. 3: 8.)

God numbers, and sometimes gives the totals. "The very hairs of your head are all numbered." (Matt. 10: 30.) Indeed, there is no sense in which man counts or can count, but what God does to perfection. There are things that man cannot number. "And, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number." (Rev. 7: 9.) But God knows the number.

God counts—regards—all men as sinners; many, as his enemies and enemies of the cross. "For God hath concluded [judged] them all in unbelief." (Rom. 11: 32.) But God regards—counts—time because it has to do with man, or, rather, man has to do with it.

That which has an ending must also have had a beginning. Days and weeks and months and years, which man encountered in the beginning of his life on the earth and which still continue, will cease to be. Time, a measured space of duration, will not continue indefinitely. "And I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven; . . . and he set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the earth. . . . And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth lifted up his hand to heaven, and swore by him that liveth forever and ever, . . . that there should be time no longer." (Rev. 10: 1-6.) The end of time is coming.

It is impossible for the infinite mind to comprehend the idea of eternity, that which had no beginning and will never have an ending. The Eternal God, who always was and is and always will be, who made all worlds, and whose mighty power manifests itself in all boundless space, has, in his mercy and goodness, vouchsafed to man life and time, and the blessings of time, that man may prepare himself for the honors and glories of eternity, which God has purposed for man to enter.

So far as duration is concerned, a thousand years with God is as only a day. Indeed, the idea of time does not affect God, as he lives in the ever present. He is the Author of all life and the Giver of time. He calls upon man to observe the time he has appointed for him to work.

"Life is the time to serve the Lord,
The time to insure the great reward."

And thus it is God counts time. To accomplish his great purpose in creating and fashioning this earth for the home of man, God instituted time as a necessary factor. "God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also." (Gen. 1: 16.) And, from that time to this, these great lights—the sun and the moon—have been to man "for signs, and for seasons, and for days, and years." (Gen. 1: 14.) The earth makes a revolution around the sun while it revolves on its own axis slightly more than three hundred and sixty-five times. Since man was created, the earth, flying at the rate of eighteen miles per second, has made, according to the best chronology, about five thousand nine hundred and twenty journeys around the sun.

So the history of man, with all his doings on the earth, has been written in these years. How much longer the present conditions of the earth and the life of man is to be continued is in the power of no man to tell. Many false prophets have risen in the past, who set a limit to time and a day for the coming of the Lord; and we still have prophets who are making wise (?) predictions along the same lines. It is not for man "to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power." (Acts 1: 7.) It is the duty of man, as he rides on the tide of time, under the favor of God, to make full preparation to enter successfully upon the great ocean of eternity. "Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh." (Matt. 25: 13.) God knows. "See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time" (Eph. 5: 15, 16), in which God would have man work out his eternal salvation with fear and trembling.

If We Could Live Last Year Over Again.

BY C. W. SEWELL.

(Written especially for the "Review and Forward" Number.)

Paul says: "But this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 3: 13, 14.)

But I do not think there is any conflict between our subject heading and this text. The things that Paul would forget were the things he had forsaken for Christ (verses 4-6)—such things as would have been gain to him from a worldly viewpoint, and which he "counted loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord;" whereas my subject, as I understand it, is to profit in the future by the mistakes of the past—to bring before us our lives for the past year with what of success and of failure we may have made, and so meditate thereon that we may improve on our successes and correct our mistakes.

As we thus review the past, let us consider each act and each thought in the light of God's word. Now that we have time for sober thought, with the temptation gone, the heat and passion of the hour allayed, does it appear that we acted altogether in harmony with the spirit of Christ? If not, then let us throw out such safeguards as will enable us to do better in the future.

Men are full of mistakes; the irrational animals make none. Yet the lower animals make no improvement, while men are capable of unlimited development. The sparrow that built its first nest in the trees of the garden of Eden knew as well how to lay the straws across and weave the feathers in as do those of the twentieth century; but man, taking advantage of his mistakes, is capable of continued improvement. Especially is this true of the Christian and the divine life. By a careful review of the past and a diligent study of God's word, the soul mounts higher and higher on the scale of Christian perfection.

If we are living conscientiously before God, our ground for improvement lies mainly in our increased knowledge of God's word and a resolute determination to improve on our every mistake. Perhaps we did the best we could last year; but our increased knowledge of the truth not only gives capacity for better work, but brings greater responsibilities. To meet this requires renewed effort.

But whether we be satisfied or dissatisfied with last year's work, let us follow Paul's example: "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind"—the things of last year. If there were mistakes or failures, use them for perfecting the future work; if there was success, rejoice, thank God, and use it as a stepping-stone to the accomplishment of more and greater things, while "reaching forth unto those things which are before." Let us ever "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

The Great War's Effect Upon the Church.

BY JOHN STRAITON.

The present war in Europe is perhaps the greatest in the world's history. The number of men engaged and the extent of territory involved has never before been exceeded. Not Europe alone, but Asia, Africa, Australia, and America are concerned in it. The events of to-day shake the whole earth and make previous history turn pale. As yet we are too close to it to realize its tremendous magnitude and appalling slaughter and epoch-making influence. Such a war cannot be without its influence on the church. Can we measure or state it?

I. The effect on the soldiers. Less than a year and a half ago the regiments left England singing a light music-hall ditty—"It's a Long Way to Tipperary." But when the hour of trial came and men were brought face to face with death and the eternal realities, they found such chaff could not sustain their souls. To-day they are singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Such a change is a testimony to the power of religion and the church.

II. The effect on the general public. In normal times the bulk of humanity live a selfish life—making money and getting on in the world their chief, if not their only, aim. To-day there is scarcely a church or even a family which has not been moved to deeds of love and mercy. The feeding of the Belgians, the medical work in Serbia, the caring for the widows and orphans, and the "Red Cross," with all their armies, if told in detail, would fill all of this special number. Such a manifestation of the spirit of Christ cannot be without its effect. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

III. The effect on Christendom. The word "church" is sometimes used to cover all the professed or nominal followers of Jesus. In that sense the principal nations engaged in the present conflict are called "Christian nations." From that viewpoint a prominent writer has described this war as "the failure of Christianity and the bankruptcy of the churches." With the exception of Japan and Turkey, all the nations engaged in this war are Christian, and Christians of every kind—Roman Catholic, Greek Orthodox, Episcopalian, Protestants of every name, and even those who plead for a return to the faith and order of the New Testament. Need we be surprised if atheists, agnostics, and unbelievers of every kind, not to speak of Mohammedans, Buddhists, and others we call "heathens," should point to the war as the final proof of the failure of Christianity?

It must be admitted that a divided Christianity, or denominationalism, has failed. For how, otherwise, could Christian brother war with Christian? The truth is that the warring nations are still dominated by old pagan ideas, and their Christianity is but a veneer. There is a general agreement that under a true Christian régime the appeal to arms as a method of settling disputes would be unthinkable. Whence come wars and fighting among you? They are from the devil, and no specious plea, no conscience salve of use and won't, should blind us to the fact.

IV. The effect on the church of Christ. Some there are who find a difficulty in the vicarious sacrifice of Christ. To-day tens of thousands are giving their lives on the battlefield to save others. What an illustration and enforcement of Christ's atoning death!

The present war has raised for many a faithful disciple the old question, "Can a Christian be a soldier?" We cannot go into all the arguments pro and con, but we are reminded of the fact that the primitive church during the first two centuries took for granted that her members could have no part in the military system. The well-known formula, "I am a Christian, and, therefore, I cannot fight," expressed their simple and universal faith. "Men of Warre are not allowed by the Gospel; the Gospel knoweth peace and not warre."

The present conflict is a testing of our faith in God. Shall the gospel succeed or fail? The success of the kingdom means that men "shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Do we believe that? Or are our hearts dismayed by the present awful storm and filled with unbelief and doubt that the Lord's promise will not be fulfilled?

V. The effect on the brethren in Britain. So far as I can judge from the distance, the churches have not lost, but gained, in spirituality. Some brethren are opposed to all war; others think the present war a just one; and so many of our best young men are in the trenches, and some have given their lives for their country.

Their contributions to the Lord's work do not seem to have decreased. Indeed, their published contributions to foreign missions during the first year of war show an increase of almost two thousand dollars. This increase in giving in their poverty and distress is a rebuke to us who would reduce our gifts to home and foreign work because times are bad and taxes high.

VI. Its effect on me.

When the whole world resounds with rude alarms
Of warring arms,
When God's good earth from border unto border
Shows man's disorder,
Let me not waste my dower of mortal might
By grieving over wrongs I cannot right.

This is my task—
Amid discordant strife to keep a clean, sweet center in my life;
And though the human orchestra may be Playing all out of key,
To tune my heart to symphonies above,
And sound the note of love—
This is my task.

To the Toilers in the Kingdom of Christ.

(Written especially for the "Review and Forward" Number.)

Suffer a word from an old comrade and soldier on the firing line. I know some of you personally; others, by their good works in the good cause of our dear Redeemer. I rejoice to be accounted as one of the workers with you in the vineyard of the Lord. I know that they who will live godly in this present life shall suffer persecution. I have had it, and so have you; but none of us have yet been called on to give up our lives for the cause. We may have gone hungry and cold at times, but this will make the reward sweeter in heaven; for the Master knows all we endure for his cause, and he will not fail to reward us for it "in the sweet by and by." Some of us are growing old in the service—the limbs are growing feeble, sight failing, ears deaf, face wrinkled, and disease afflicts. But these are only signs that the Heavenly Father is about to pull down the old tabernacle and move us over into the new and the undying. He has taught us that this is not our home, but that we are to have a home with him, eternal in the heavens; for there we shall reap the promised reward for all we have sacrificed and all we have done and suffered for his sake on earth. Jesus knows it all.

Over there is no pain, no tears, no heartaches, no sickness. The gospel will have cured it all when God shall pull down the old body and give us the new, spiritual, glorified body in heaven. Not a soul that scorns us now but would be glad to associate with us when God shall reward his own, when we shall at last exchange the cross for a shining crown.

How many will volunteer to work this week for the Gospel Advocate?

Pretty is as Pretty Does.

BY JAMES A. ALLEN.

What you have been or what you say you are going to be is nothing. The question is, What are you now? What a man does is what he is. Deeds are fruits of thoughts. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

The effulgence, the glowing oratory employed by some men in telling what they can do or what they are going to do would make the aurora borealis look as pale as Swiss cheese; but if what they are doing or what they have already done was put on the point of a cambric needle, it would not punch the pith out of a horsehair.

Do, do, do! The world wants to know what a man can do. It doesn't care whether he was born in a cabin or a castle, on Fifth Avenue or in Possum Hollow. Not if a man is tall and handsome; not if he was born to the purple and feeds from the traditional "silver spoon;" but he, him, himself—the thing is, What can he do? And is he busy doing it? Not if a girl is sweet and pretty and attired in crepe de Chine; not if she is the most popular debutante of the season and can boast of the most proposals; but the question is, What is she? What can she do? And is she of any account to the world? Can she cook, sweep, make her own clothes, manage a home? Or is she still a baby, helpless, dependent upon a maid? Good clothes too often hide the nakedness of a man who can't pay for them, who has to beat his way because he can't pay his way. It is a law of nature, because it is a law of God, that everything has to be paid for. Set it down for a certainty that somebody pays. The automobiles, the expensive idleness, the high living of young scions of great wealth are made possible by the industry, the close economy, the frugality of some old father or grandfather, who, though dead, still foots the bill. Somebody has to produce every bite of the food that is eaten by the millions of mouths that eat every day; and it is notorious that one of the reasons why prices soar so high is that there are too many eaters to too few producers. Too many follow remunerative, though not productive, occupations; occupy positions that skimp it from the labors of others; while they themselves do not create a thing in return, do not produce so much as a nail or a pin, or add a single atom to the productive wealth of the world.

David Lipscomb, one of the most noted educators in Tennessee, and founder of the Bible School, once took the position that a girl who had studied art, music, painting, expression, etc., but who could not cook, sew, sweep, be "a keeper at home," was not as well educated as the one who could do the more useful things. My father, while foreman of a large machine shop, did a great deal of repairing for a sawmill owner who could barely write his name. But he was a good manager, understood his business, was industrious and prosperous; and while I may be wrong, I have always had a lingering suspicion that, though he could hardly sign his checks, he had a better education than the college graduate who could juggle a little gibberish of Greek and Latin, but who couldn't make a living.

When people die, it is "their works," and not their handsome looks, their social prestige, or their wad of "long green," that shall "follow them."

When the great Alexander, accompanied by his aid-de-camp, Hephæstion, who was a taller and handsomer man than he, entered into the presence of the queens of Persia to assure them of his protection after the defeat of Darius in the battle of Issus, they and their attendants, without waiting for the two men to be introduced, immediately began to make great obeisance to the aid-de-camp, because he looked like they thought Alexander would look. But the moment the conversation began and they felt the magnetic presence of the man upon whose nod hung the destiny of nations, they saw that Hephæstion couldn't act, do, like Alexander. And if the mighty genius who once ruled the world, and wept because the earth was too small a theater for his actions, felt the least resentment because the ladies thought Hephæstion was the best-looking, he forgot to show it.

Go over the list of great men, past and present, and note how that, from a standpoint of popular opinion, those who have succeeded the most, an unthinking public would never have picked as stars. Sometimes a man, physically head and shoulders above his fellows, ravishingly handsome and good-looking, makes a miserable failure, so colossal that it becomes comical, while a little, dried-up, dwarf-looking runt comes out of the shuffle with the palm. Those who judge after appearances, rather than by what a man can do, would have scorned the duck-legs of Washington, the drooling and twitching of Sam Johnson, or the pot-belly of little Napoleon, who would have given a boat load of gold to have been six inches taller. But when it came to doing—ah, Napoleon could make things hum! When he got in action, he began to make history—a thousand historians began to write. His old slick hat, that a tramp would hardly have kicked out of the road, and his faded gray coat were in strange contrast to the rich and resplendent garb of the generals around him; but his mere presence with an army was considered by allied Europe as being equal to a reinforcement of one hundred thousand men. What a compliment to a man! And from his enemies, who certainly were not prone to exaggerate it! He thoroughly understood his business, thought over it, studied over it, pored over it, and fought his battles over on paper, with different colored pins to represent the enemy, before he undertook them on the field. Skepticism bowed to the prodigies of his performance; romance, the creations of fancy, took on an air of reality; what the world dreamed of as impossible, with daring audacity, incredible rapidity, he promptly accomplished it. "How impossible?" said he. "That word is not French." Filled with the most fervent enthusiasm, and yet guided by the highest reasoning and reflective powers, by cool, mathematical calculation, the degree of industry and application that he brought to bear on his campaigns, and in the cabinet, will always stand as a demonstration of what astonishing results will come from the proper effort. Not that his career of what the world calls "glory" was free from fault, or even crime, but that he dared to measure the enormous task confronting him with the eye of genius and to throw every energy of his soul into its mighty accomplishment.

In speaking of the accomplishments of these worldly men—Alexander and Napoleon—we refer only to their talents and industry. It is a pity that they wasted their lives in laboring for that which cannot last, in striving for a goal of no permanent good. Neither talent nor toil, apart or united, is a proper subject of censure or praise. Credit can attach only to things that are matters of choice. A man deserves no more praise for being born with five talents than he does for being born with a white skin. The use to which he devotes his talents is the thing. That is a matter of choice. The devil is smart enough, and he is industrious, too. But who would think of praising his shrewdness or commending his industry and toil? Unless consecrated to some high end, neither genius nor labor is worthy of admiration, and works no good to the world, only as God overrules the wickedness of men to accomplish good. The watchman may watch ever so diligently; but unless the Lord guards the city, he watches in vain.

I am convinced that there should be no failures in any legitimate line of the world's work. God founded the world in wisdom, and gave the laws to govern the workings of every department. In any sphere an observance of the laws that control it can't fail of success, of reaching the desired end. But for a man to trifle with, set aside, ignore, or neglect the rules that govern the sphere in which he undertakes to work, and yet expect to succeed, would be about as reasonable as for a farmer to expect to reap a crop of corn without planting a grain of seed. It would be a monstrosity for things to come that way. The man who daily, diligently adheres to the rules won't fail, can't fail. Success is as certain as the law that governs it.

The Great Teacher said: "By their fruits ye shall know them. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but the corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Therefore by their fruits ye shall know them." Reader, look, examine; what fruit grows on your tree? That's the test. Sad 'twill be should the reapers find nothing but leaves.

It is much easier to preach than it is to practice. All of us, with a Bible in front of our face, can easily tell the way to go to heaven. But are we going to go there? What the Bible teaches sinners to do to be saved, to become Christians, is plain, tangible, so simple that "the wayfaring men, yea fools, shall not err therein." But how many of them are doing it? And what the Bible teaches Christians, members of the church, to do to be crowned in the end, to reach immortality and heaven, is easily evident to all. None can plead an inability to understand. But how many of them are doing it?

Said Solomon the Wise: "Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man." The commandments of God are plainly laid down in his word. "He may run that readeth it." And the man who puts the most energy, fidelity, and zeal into keeping them is the man who does the most to honor God, to bless his country and race, and to obtain a blissful station in a higher and eternal world.

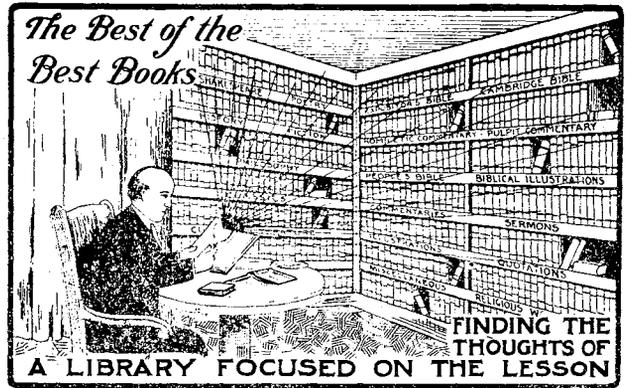

Greetings to the Senior Editors.

BY JOHN T. POE.

More than half a century has passed since first I began to write for the Gospel Advocate. It seems almost akin to me. It has always been my friend, and has helped me greatly in my search after truth. I cannot tell it good-by. I do not want to. I am getting old, but I still need its help in the search for knowledge. I began reading it and writing for it when Tolbert Fanning and David Lipscomb were the editors. It has always been true to the cause of the Master, when a proper meaning, and the meaning intended by the editors, was given to what its editors wrote. Almost anything one writes may be garbled and scrapped in a way to make the writer say what he never intended to say and really did not say. Such a trouble arose over the question of baptism for the remission of sins. The editors teach that and believe that, though the critics tried to make it appear that other things written proved they did not, when, if taken in all its connections, it was a thing said right. In the main its course has been correct. The three dozen loyal congregations now worshipping in Nashville, numbering from seventy-five or one hundred members up to eight hundred and nine hundred each, are largely due to the influence of the Gospel Advocate. I venture to say that no other paper in America has any such fruits to its credit. It is wonderful. There is no city in the United States that can equal it by half. I have preached in Nashville, have held meetings there on three or four occasions, and had a chance to note things as they are. Its former editors are now old, but with these reflections the sun of their lives must go down in a halo of glory. And what must be their joy when there comes trooping up in eternity the thousands they have helped on to higher, nobler life and usefulness in this life? As the wicked may heap up wrath against the day of wrath, so these have heaped up joy upon joy.

Go on with the old Gospel Advocate; let its influence for good never weaken not wane till time shall be no more. The

The Bible Study Helper

New Magazine

EDITED BY
A. B. LIPSCOMB

In response to many urgent requests, we announce the inauguration of the BIBLE STUDY HELPER, a new monthly publication, which will be devoted exclusively to the subject of Bible study, both in the church and home. This publication will supply a long-felt need. It will be abreast with modern scholarship and at the same time in accord with the teachings of God's word. Among the many helpful features will be: "Incentives to Bible Study," "Timely Practical Illustrations," "Quotable Prose and Poetry," "Suggestions for Teachers," "The Boys' Column," "The Girls' Column," "Reports from Teachers," "Letters from the Children," "Thought-Provoking Questions."

The editor has access to the foremost of the commentaries and Bible-study periodicals, and will embody the fruit of his reading and study in the HELPER in his comments upon the International Lessons. All teachers and Bible students should have this publication. Send your order now that you may have every copy from the start.

Single copy, one year, sixty cents; in clubs of five or more, to one address, fifty cents.

gospel is still the same; let the aim and object of the paper be to preach the same old gospel. It is adapted to every age and conditions of man. It was arranged by divine wisdom and is just as powerful to save to-day as it was when inspired apostles first proclaimed it to dying sinners. Make it as strong as divine wisdom wrote it, but tell it in love and meekness, and it will go on converting the world.

A flower unknown; a book unread;
A tree with fruit unharvested;
A path untrod; a house whose rooms
Lack yet the heart's divine perfumes;
A landscape whose border lies
In silent shade, 'neath silent skies;
A wondrous fountain yet unsealed;
A casket with its gifts concealed.
This is the year that for you waits
Beyond to-morrow's mystic gates.

Is the World Growing Better?

A Round-Table Discussion

F. W. Smith, of Nashville, Tenn., Says—

What a question! How shall we reach a conclusion, and what shall the answer be? That the world is growing better in some ways must be admitted, but to say that it is growing better in every way would be, in my judgment, saying too much. The magnitude of the question demands that we approach a solution with becoming modesty and caution. We usually judge the whole by a part, which in many things may be a safe rule; but when it comes to judging the wide world of mankind by the few moving within the circle of our narrow and limited vision, the rule cannot apply. In this particular we cannot base our conclusions upon a sample, but must take mankind in the aggregate. But in this we cannot speak from personal knowledge, but are dependent upon the most reliable sources of information for our judgment. In this marvelous age of wonderful inventions and developments, when the public doings of nations and individuals fly as if on the wings of the wind from ocean to ocean and from continent to continent, the rural resident who is an intelligent reader of the public prints can form a pretty clear idea of the moral, religious, and intellectual status of the world.

Let us not forget that there are two classes of students relative to this matter—viz., the pessimist and the optimist. The pessimist sees only the dark side of every picture. If he were to gaze through the mighty telescope upon the mighty sun, he would see only the black spots on the face of that great luminary which floods the worlds with his glorious light. Just so with reference to nations and individuals. He focuses the vision upon the "dark spots" in the lives and characters of both, and is blind to the noble virtues which sparkle like brilliant gems or the stars which glitter through the darkness of the night. Not so with the optimist. While not unmindful of the fact that every picture has its shadows, he does not allow his vision to become narrowed to these, but with the full sweep of that charity and justice which seeks to find the good even in the midst of the bad, he beholds the light and magnifies the good. The optimist, therefore, can see more moral reforms in existence to-day for the betterment of mankind than ever before in the history of the world. He sees revolutions one after another, all tending toward a higher level. He sees that King Alcohol is being dethroned throughout the civilized world, and that the nations are destined to be freed from the clutches of the greatest tyrant that ever wielded a scepter. Even in the midst of the demoralizing influences of war, the army canteen is outlawed. Generals have learned that men cannot shoot straight with eyes aflame with liquor. Labor reforms have sprung up nearly everywhere until the voice of labor demanding just recompense is being heard and respected throughout the land. The misers who have coined millions out of the sweat and blood of helpless women and children overworked in their shops and factories have been checked by the labor-reform laws of the land. Civic righteousness is the keynote of the song of the nations out of which social reforms multiply. The public conscience has become aroused as never before against what is termed the "white-slave traffic" and the "social evil." Benevolent institutions were never more busy dispensing charity to the unfortunate and needy. When a great calamity befalls any section of the world, the cry for help instantaneously strikes a responsive chord throughout the civilized world and the helping hand is extended. More doors are opened for the heralds of the cross than ever before, and more money is being expended for religious purposes. Institutions for the civil and domestic concerns of life are constantly advancing to higher levels. Let not the "pessimist" point to the carnage of shot and shell now devastating the European nations as a refutation of the optimistic view. Even with the roar of cannon and smoke of battle we find women like angels of mercy fitting here and there attending the wounded and dying. Women who have laid aside the robes of ease and luxury and donned the caps and aprons of the "Red Cross" are exposing their lives in ministering to the suffering. Laps in which poodle dogs were fondled and nursed are now resting places for the heads of dying soldiers. On this, note the words of W. T. Ellis:

Are not the pessimists afflicted with that sort of blindness which St. Peter describes as ability to see only that which is near? They cannot discern beyond the obvious. They hear the great guns roaring, but are deaf to the bells of peace that are sounding their summons in the hearts of men all the world around. They see the heaped-up corpses of the slain, but have no eyes for the mountains of mercy which have arisen upon earth since this war began. Who knows but that this greatest of all human conflicts may be written down on the enduring pages of history as the war of the pitiful heart?

Never before were so many deeds of mercy and brotherhood being done. At no other hour since first the Christmas music stole softly on the Bethlehem night has there been such a vital sense of love for mankind among the children of men. World brotherhood is nearer realization to-day than ever before. The swift shuttle of recent history has woven new, strong strands of love and good will between nations which, two Christmases ago, were remote and alien.

To deny that the world is growing better in some ways is to deny what our very eyes can see, our ears can hear, and our hearts can feel. In fact, it would be to say that Christianity is a failure, and to repudiate the words of the prophet who said: "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of Jehovah as the waters cover the sea." (Hab. 2: 14.) But one may ask: "Do you indorse all of the institutions and agencies at work for the betterment of mankind?" By no means. I only indorse the good they do, and point to that as proof that the world is growing better. All the good in the world springs from truth. Christianity in even its most corrupt form does good, and all the good done by human institutions is but the result of contact with Christianity, whose principles they have imbibed. There is but one institution on this earth through which and in which man can glorify God and be saved at last, and that is the blood-bought church of Jesus Christ. While this is true, we should rejoice at the moral and social reforms brought about by human institutions because of their contact with Christianity.

E. N. Glenn, of Colton, Cal., Says—

We are living in such a progressive age and the world is traveling at such a rapid rate that it is almost impossible to behold it long enough to make an accurate calculation as to whether it is growing better or worse. If one should ask the question, "Is the world growing wiser?" the answer without very much reflection would undoubtedly be, "Yes." When we consider the achievements of man in the realm of discovery and invention, we greatly wonder how our forefathers "got along" one and two hundred years ago.

To-night I asked a young person: "Is the world growing better or worse?" The reply came quickly: "It is growing worse." I asked why. "During the first centuries of Christianity," he said, "the Christians often sacrificed their lives for the gospel's sake, and would meet to worship God before day, in caves, etc.; and now you can hardly get the people to come to church." I also asked the same question to an aged man, ninety-four years old. His reply was equally prompt, but was opposite to the first answer. "Yes-sir-ree," was his emphatic answer. "When I was a boy," he said, "we had but little schooling, and I didn't know what a Sunday school was. And we raised flax and wool, which were carded, spun, and made into what few clothes we got. To-day look at the boys and girls! Just as soon as they are big enough to read, they start to school and remain in school till they graduate, and they wear good clothes all the time. In my boyhood days, when we would have a log-rolling or house-raising, maybe fifteen or twenty men would get dog drunk and fight like dogs, and maybe one or two of them would get killed; but nothing was thought of it for those days. I tell you times are better and the people are better." The world is a mighty big place to think about and to talk about and to write about; and we can see just only a small speck of it, and there is so much of it we never even hear about.

But let us go back in history to the very beginning. God created the earth, with the heavens, and all things therein. Man was the crowning work of creation. He was created in the image of God. Everything was given him, it seems, that would make him happy and contented. The story goes that in sixteen hundred years his posterity was so vile and corrupt that "the imagination of his heart was evil continually." There was only one righteous family of eight souls that was worthy of salvation. Noah and his three sons and wives then began to repopulate the earth. Three hundred and fifty years later God selected Abraham from among his kindred, who were idolaters. (Josh. 24: 2.) This indicates the degenerate state of man at that date. Some two hundred years more and Abraham's seed began their sojourn in the land of Egypt—seventy-five in number. After a cruel bondage for four hundred years, they came forth some two and a half million strong. God began to school and develop them for a peculiar nation of people, but they were unworthy and murmured and rebelled continually. It seems that all other nations had "gone aside" from worshipping God. In a few more hundred years God's chosen people were corrupt from the "crown of their head to the sole of their feet." After a short captivity they returned to the land of Canaan, about fifty thousand in number. Four or five hundred years more and Christ came to the world; but when he came unto his own, they "received him not," but crucified him. Thus we have a pen picture of how wicked the world became in four thousand years.

Christianity started with a small number, but had a steady growth. In about thirty years it had been pushed out into all the known world, and it looked for a time as though it would conquer "all the world for Christ." But soon persecution arose. Christianity was tried "as by fire." The "Dark Ages" were without the illumination of God's word and people. But in a little while we see them revive. Christianity again flourishes. But the world is now so big and so many hindering causes to retard the progress of converting it, the leaven of righteousness does not spread very rapidly.

Statistics inform us that there are to-day nearly three billion people on the earth. Only a small per cent of this number is righteous. This includes those who even profess Christianity. Every nation is at present engaged in the bloodiest war known to history, the United States excepted. But even she is taking large measures in "preparedness." Congress is asking for three hundred million dollars to equip militarism, and no one can estimate the cost of maintaining it. But is even this a sure exponent of peace? And the United States is considered a "Christian nation." We are made to wonder if the world is really growing better. We take a glance backward and see the people in the days of Noah eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day Noah entered into the ark. They knew not until the flood came and took them all away. And Jesus said: "So shall also the coming of the Son of man be." We see that it was necessary for God to destroy them on account of their great wickedness. It may be that wickedness will wax worse and worse until it will also be necessary for God to take action in destroying the world that now is—making a new heaven and a new earth. These things do not indicate that the world is growing better.

M. S. Mason, of Rogersville, Mo., Says—

The treatment of this topic, as suggested in its appellation, is as broad as the earth and requires a view of the subject in all of the world's phases, relative and absolute. We shall examine it from three standpoints—viz., absolute phases, relative phases, and the relation maintained toward Christianity, or the ultimate end of all these.

The absolute phases are material, mental, moral, and religious.

The first we shall consider is the material. We all agree that the world, materially, in the absolute sense, is growing better. We are wealthier; transportation is easier; more land is being put into cultivation; the resources are being brought to the surface and into a state of utility, and the forces of nature are everywhere being made more and more to serve humanity.

Mentally, or intellectually, we are growing better. Good schoolhouses throw open their doors in every community; skilled minds have made courses of study adapted to the educational need of the general school constituency, and furnished the best methods of presentation; and no doubt within twenty-five years a high school will be as easy of access to our country children as the common school is to-day, and free literature containing the best thoughts of the age will drift into our homes as free as the breezes.

Morally we are growing better. We may have some of the meanest characters we have ever had to-day, but we have some of the grandest, too. The passing of the saloon, the investigation of economic evils, the infusing of the moral element into our school curriculums, all show a move on a higher plane. With all the immorality we may see in any community, we know the public conscience is quickened to a state of repulsion against all. And with this leavening power constantly at work, we must be developing as the time goes by a people who appreciate the fact that morality means life and immorality means death.

But religiously, are we growing better? Not so much, I would say, in the absolute sense.

And this brings us to the discussion of the relative phases. Has all our mental development carried with it an appreciation of our material resources so as to use the world as not abusing it? I fear not. Are we not wasting our material resources in fruitless exploitation? Has intellectual growth served to give us the means of looking into the perfect law of liberty, or are we trying to find our way to God through "new thought?" I am impressed that we are drifting away from God in the latter way. Has our moral improvement made us more appreciative of the highest moral law in all the world—the Bible—or are we content with morality without regarding "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus?" Too much, I fear, we are trusting to the all-sufficiency of "good morals and gentle manners." Then, in a relative sense, the present manifest tendency toward improvement is not so encouraging. But particularly to religion, viewed in the absolute present sense, I should say, measuring it by a New Testament standard, it is growing worse. With church federation, legislative conventions, "broad-gauge" ideals, union revivals, and a general disposition toward the satisfaction of the world, with little regard for God's word, I am led to speak adversely on this view of the situation.

But relatively it is different in prospect. Material resources make it convenient to carry the gospel message; good roads facilitate churchgoing among the people; the more wealth, the more goes into the cause; and a full soul and an absolutely empty stomach cannot go well together.

Our intellectual growth must some time turn sensible minds upon the beauty of the gospel; and when men are no longer satisfied with their own way, this strength will contribute to gaining a knowledge of the eternal purpose of God.

Developments in morality must eventually get back to its source, God the Father, and see that the ultimate end of all goodness is the realization of that highest sphere in all our existence—the spiritual life.

So I would say, when we consider all the development which the world is undergoing in its promise, we may hope for better things, and that in the future we may see that these improvements, absolute and relative, were finally to be devoted to the building of His cause. From that view the world is growing better; for ultimately all that is good must honor God.

J. H. Whisnant, of Atkins, Ark., Says—

This is a monstrous question, because it covers a "world" of territory and "ages" of time. It is a deep question, for it causes us to delve into the long ago, with nothing but a brief history and tradition to depend upon. But had we lived all the way through, who of us could have been so well acquainted with all the world all the time as to be sure we knew just when it was at its best? Nearly every mother thinks hers the prettiest and sweetest babe in the world; nearly every housewife feels that she has more burdens than anybody else in the world; nearly every community of Christians feel that they must endure more persecutions and combat with more prejudice than any other community in the world. So the question, "Is the world growing better?" would generally be answered by each individual according as the world—that part of it in which he lives—has served him.

As I take it, the question in hand pertains to the people and conditions as brought about by the people. Were we to begin our comparison with man in his Edenic state, where we find both him and his conditions "good" and "very good," and say that the world is better now than then, we would prove ourselves to be unbelievers. The comparison, then, surely should begin at a later date.

If we begin with the transgression in Eden, we think it safe to say that no greater per cent of the world's population would now yield to temptation. If we compare with the world in Noah's day as to wickedness, we could not beat it much. If we compare with the world at the coming of Christ, we will surely see improvement, for he found but few who would be governed by the will of the Lord. Now, though few comparatively, they are numbered by thousands.

The Christian era has presented a history somewhat varied. When persecution prevailed, the world grew worse; when Christianity prevailed, the world grew better.

There are more countries opening their doors to the gospel of Christ than ever; and while a few years ago, in our own free country, it was necessary for the true gospel preacher to resort to deserted buildings, barns, etc., to teach the people the primitive way, the calls can hardly be responded to now by the great army of faithful workers. Nor is the general treatment such as then.

We admit that there is much wickedness in the world, and will be even till the coming of the Son of man. The bloody war that is now raging across the great deep is surely wrong, yet out of such wrongs conditions are sometimes made better. We think they are being made better now.

The condition of the world depends greatly upon the condition of the church. The church condition is improving in that she is demanding correct living as well as correct believing. This generally practiced for a long enough time will restore lost confidence, increase church attendance, enlarge the borders of Zion, and cause many souls to be saved that would otherwise have been lost.

T. E. Milholland, of Madill, Okla., Says—

Brother Lipscomb, the question is too deep for me. I cannot take its heights nor sound its depths. Is the "world" growing better?

When my mind goes back to the "beginning," as stated in the great Book, the first vision is that of supernal beauty and loveliness. When the veil of history is first raised to mortal eyes, we are held enrapt with the splendors of an infant world! Fresh from the hands of the Creator, it was not only good, but "very good." Not a brier nor thorn had grown to tear the hand of man. No storm-tempest nor howling cyclone had swept over the bosom of the earth to strike terror to the hearts of men and drive them from their homes. No sin, therefore no death! But sin entered, and death by sin. Now the vision changes, and the heart grows sick as we stand there—in the beginning—and look down the ages, and watch the gradual unfolding of six thousand years, and think, "Is the world growing better?" Of the first world it was said: "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart." (Gen. 6: 5, 6.) It appears that the world grew worse. Hence, God said: "I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth."

The next world (or age) we note is that of the Hebrews, or Jews. They started good, chosen and sanctified to Jehovah. But they grew worse. Dissatisfied with the divine arrangement, they rejected God as their King and chose a man to rule over them. King after king arose and fell—a few good, but most of them bad. Ahab was bad, but it is said of Omri that he "wrought evil in the eyes of the Lord, and did worse than all before him." (1 Kings 16: 25.) Hence it appears that the Jew world grew worse till Isaiah was made to cry: "Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth; for the Lord hath spoken, I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me. The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider. Ah sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil doers, children that are corrupters: they have forsaken the Lord, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger, they are gone away backward. Why should ye be stricken any more? ye will revolt more and more: the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint. From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment." (Isa. 1: 2-6.) Later the prophet said: "And ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen: for the Lord God shall slay thee, and call his servants by another name." (Isa. 65: 15.) So that world ended.

And now what about this world, our world, the "last days," the Christian age? "Is the (this) world growing better?" I am going to fix it so somebody else will want to say something. Well, our world started good; but the Master said: "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." (Matt. 24: 12.) But Paul said: "Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound." (Rom. 5: 20.) Hence, while "this world" is filled with sorrow, sighing, suffering, and sin, we have the remedy. Christ "now once in the end of the world hath . . . appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." (Heb. 9: 26.) This is the "better promise" upon which the new covenant is founded. God loved the world—the whole world! Hence, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." The gospel makes folks better. The folks make the world. Therefore the world is made better by the gospel. As a nation we are what we are by reason of the effect of the great influence of the Christ life. While the kingdom began as a mustard seed, a fountain, a little stone cut out without hands, it "grew larger and wider and deeper. The little stone rolled till it filled the whole earth. Surely this means the "world is growing better." Beginning at Pentecost, the stream of living water (the gospel unmixed with human creeds) went forth, as Ezekiel would say, first ankle-deep, further along knee-deep, then to the loins, and finally it became a river. Zechariah (1: 1) saw the fountain. David saw the river. (Ps. 46: 4.) These scriptures suggest the world growing better. "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." (Isa. 11: 9.) Some good brethren talk and act as though they thought the earth was America and the United States was the whole world. The question is, Is the world growing better? If you say "No," who is to blame? God loved the world. Christ died for the whole world. We are commissioned to preach to every creature. If you say "Yes," I ask, What and who is making it better? Will the world be better by your having lived in it? Think, brother. If we are good, we can have good children, good families. If we have good children, we can have good schools and churches. If we have good schools and churches, we can have a good citizenship. If we have a good citizenship, we can have a good world. If we are growing better, our children are growing better; and if our children are growing better, our churches and schools are growing better; and if our churches and schools are growing better, our citizenship is growing better; and if our citizenship is growing better, the world is growing better. If not, who is to blame?

G. W. Riggs, of Los Angeles, Cal., Says—

That is a big question and a hard one. A big one because it includes the whole world; a hard one because it involves so many viewpoints and requires so much information to answer it—much more, I am afraid, than I possess.

It is almost universally admitted that Christianity has wrought a most helpful and beneficent effect upon the world; that whatever spiritual and moral advancement the world has made is due to the power and influence of the gospel. It must, therefore, be admitted that to the extent Christianity spreads the world is made better.

The spirit of the age—the love of money, pleasure, luxury, and ease—tends to moral and spiritual decay; and the wealth and material progress of the age seem to intensify that spirit; while some think they can see in the great war of Europe, with its attendant evils, a collapse of civilization and the doom of Christendom. But in other ages there have been periods of decline and gloom; but these were always followed by a reformation which brought about a better day. Who knows but that God is preparing the world for another great reformation? When the people are brought to see the futility of human law and government to correct the evils of the world, they may turn to the Lord as never before. But be that as it may, and notwithstanding the present decline, I can see many reasons why we should press forward in the spread of true Christianity.

1. God still lives, and the Lord reigns and must reign till he has put all enemies under his feet. We have received a kingdom that cannot be shaken, and it is destined to fill the whole earth. We should, therefore, move forward without fear.

2. The gospel is still the power of God unto salvation. The gospel age will not close till Christ comes again; and as no one knows when that is, we should be diligent in preaching it even unto the end.

3. As a matter of encouragement, there is no abatement of the missionary spirit, but rather an awakening along that line. It is said that "the Bible is in more homes and in more hands to-day than any other book in the world. More Bibles are sold than any other book, and more now than in any other age." There are probably more true gospel preachers and more true churches of Christ now than ever before; and these churches will compare favorably with those we read about in the New Testament. The denominations, by perverting the gospel and the spirit of worldliness, are evidently weakening and losing power. It is said that China, India, and Japan are more open and ready to receive the gospel message than ever before. The church of Christ is the hope of the world. Let us not, therefore, become discouraged, but with renewed zeal and energy press the cause of our Lord and Master.

C. F. Witty, of Detroit, Mich., Says—

To one who has given the subject but little attention this would seem to be a very hard question to answer; but to a careful student of world conditions, I think it will be an easy matter to reach the conclusion that the world is rapidly growing better. It is true that we cannot see many signs of improvement if we view the ghastly battlefields of Europe or even take notice of some things in our own land. However, this question is not, "Is some certain part of the world growing better?" but, "Is the world growing better?"—that is, the entire world, composed of about one billion, six hundred million people. In order to understand this matter, we will have to ascertain what caused the world to be in the sad condition we now find it. You answer at once that it is the work of Satan, and so it is; but how can even Satan so completely control the thoughts and actions of such a vast multitude of people? I answer, only through certain organized systems that he succeeded in developing and fastening on the human family when it was much smaller and less experienced than it is to-day. I refer to the systems of idolatry, Mohammedanism, and a corrupted form of Christianity. Take from Satan these three mighty engines of power, and he would be as helpless as a child compared with his present strength. So, if we want to know if the world is growing better, we have but to determine whether idolatry, Mohammedanism, and a corrupted form of Christianity are losing their influence over the vast millions of earth.

Let us see. India, China, and Japan are the great strongholds of idolatry, and every student of missions knows that an open Bible and civilization will soon make short work of converting these nations to Christianity. And let me pause here to lift my hat to our own missionaries that are playing such an important part in this great work, also to those individuals and churches that are supporting them.

The religion of the Turk is also doomed, but from a different source. The devotees of this faith have, by their unspeakable crimes and inhuman acts, filled the cup of wrath full to overflowing, and the handwriting is already on the wall. The Turk must go, and with him will go the doctrine of the false prophet of Mecca.

There remains but one other principal weapon with which Satan can retard the improvement of the human family, and that is a corrupted form of Christianity. While it is true that much corruption is found in the Protestant world, it is also true that the source of this and all other corruption is to be found in the church of Rome; and when the monstrous system of Romanism is overthrown, we have good reason to expect the fruits of Romanism, as they appear in the Protestant world, will also disappear. But you ask: "Is the Roman Catholic Church losing its power?" I answer that there is no doubt of it. Glance through the pages of history and compare the Rome of to-day with the Rome of a few centuries ago, and you will easily see that the power of the pope has been broken. He can no longer dictate to kings and rulers at will and expect them to obey him. Nor, indeed, can he much longer control the masses. Soon we expect to hear the cry sound out: "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." And this cry will be answered by millions of honest-hearted Catholics in all parts of the earth.

Now, certainly when the millions of earth turn from idols to serve the living God, and other millions turn from the corrupt church of Rome to be Christians only, and the terrible doctrine of Mohammed will be taught no more, it can truly be said that the world has greatly improved.

Let us all earnestly work and pray that the work may make great progress.

E. V. Wood, of Trenton, Tenn., Says—

Immediately after receiving the invitation to write a short article on this subject I decided it would be a hard task to perform. I know so little about this big world in which I live that I can say but little that would be interesting or profitable to read.

Is the world growing better? Educationally and intellectually speaking? Surely it is safe to say it is, and has been for many years. Great and many inventions and discoveries have been made which have proved, and are proving, a great blessing to the human family, when properly made use of; but when wrongfully applied, they prove to be harmful and hurtful. When the intellects of men become brighter and sharper, they can more readily discern facts and truths wherever they be. The fact that men's minds can be drilled and schooled until they can acquire a keen and ready perceptivity of earth and earthly things sometimes brings a curse instead of a blessing to the world. This should not, and need not, be the case.

What is it that really makes the world grow better? Is the world really growing better? If yes, why and how is it really growing better? If not, why not? Who can pass safe and righteous judgment upon such a great question? In proportion to the spirit of peace, unselfishness, and brotherly love manifested by the people of the world, does the world grow better? When a man is willing to forget what he has done and is doing for the world, and sees and remembers what that part of the world with whom he has come in contact has done and is doing for him; when he is willing to ignore what the world owes him and think of what he owes the world, then will that part of the world in which he lives grow better by his having lived in it, and vice versa; or, on the other hand, will the world be cursed by the life of any man failing to exercise himself in the splendid way just mentioned above?

But is the world growing better? And what is it that really makes the world grow better? Men and women may study and learn how to behave themselves as they move in the circle of "high society" and command the esteem and high regard of all of that class with whom they play their part, holding up before their part of the world the principles of morality and social philanthropy, and subscribe their lives to these alone—then would you say that makes the world grow better in the true and genuine sense?

Now what is the true answer to the question, "Is the world growing better?" When the rich young ruler came to the Prince of Peace and said, "Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" Jesus said: "Why callest thou me good? There is none good but one, that is, God." If Christ would not, how could you or I be called "good?" So, then, in the true and high and holy and lasting sense, if the world is growing better, it must be growing in godlikeness, or godliness.

The gospel of the Son of God is God's purifying and ennobling and elevating and saving influence now in this world. The more it is preached, the more it is heard, the more it is believed, the more it is obeyed, the better the world becomes. When the nations of the earth were at peace with each other, and all enjoying a splendid commercial intercourse with each other, the surface-gazing man would have said, perhaps, "The world is growing better;" but now, since the great nations of earth are in a death grapple, and thousands—yea, millions—of the stalwart sons of men are dead and dying upon the battlefields, and all because of a few leaders of men failing to submit themselves unto the righteousness of God, what would they say? If the saving power of God could only reach the hearts of less than twelve men of the Old World, millions of fathers and sons would soon return to their anxious mothers, their sorrowing and trembling wives and hungry little ones, and all would be well again.

Now, is the Western Hemisphere of the world growing better? O, this surely is a goodly land—"the land of the brave and the home of the free." The other part of the world looks at this and calls it good, and "it is good to be here;" but, really and truly, in the high and holy and lasting sense, is it good or growing better? Partyisms seem to be sinking into insignificance and greater principles safeguarding our home land are engaging the attention of our leaders to-day; and we lift our hearts in prayer and thanksgiving and our voices ring out together in songs of praise to Him "from whom all blessings flow." But in that everlasting sense, will this do? Is it enough? Is the world growing better in that it is becoming more like Him whom the Savior said was good? It is in proportion to its obedience to his will, which is the gospel of Christ. The man who associates with good men and walks in the light of truth himself can see and more readily detect the evil that is in the world than he who looks lightly upon evil.

Now, in conclusion, it looks like the gospel of Christ is being preached more in this part of the world and more people are having opportunity to learn the truth than a few years ago. The simple gospel of Christ is being preached in fields where it was not a few years gone, and, of course, more people are obeying it, for greater effort is being put forth now than in former days. This great and noble work is enjoined upon men and women, and through them God works and wields his power to draw others unto himself, thereby making them all better together, and the sunbeams of the light and love of God are reflected and refracted by the lives of his busy agents and flung out into the dark realms of sin, and men of high and low estate are made better directly and indirectly by them. May the Lord, help us all to spend our forces in this great labor of love until it is over here, and all will be well for evermore.

H. E. Winkler, of Nashville, Tenn., Says—

The thought of having to write on such a wonderful theme, to be read by thousands of the discerning public, and be relied upon as correct in every particular, is almost enough to cause an unlearned person to wish he had no place before the world as a writer.

Is the world growing better? "No," says one. What is your reason for taking the negative? "Why, the greatest war that has ever been waged among mortals is now engaging many nations in Europe, and the punishment that is inflicted is inhuman." But I arrest your attention with this question: Does the fact that the greatest of all carnal wars that have ever been waged among the crowned heads is now on go to prove that the world is not growing better, since Europe is only a part of the world? Is not the sentiment in the South more humane than before the Civil War? All nations—Turkey may be excepted—are made better by wars. As gold is refined to free it from dross, so wars serve as a refinement to defend the morals that should characterize the nations. I verily believe that peace will prevail in Europe when this present war is ended.

Who can tell but that the European war will be the means of bringing the word of God and a knowledge thereof into each of their homes? For when strife has been eliminated from among them God's messengers will have free access to them, and the troubles of war will have prepared their minds for the reception of the peace-bringing message—the word of God. Where the Bible has not gone, the people are in darkness and crimes are committed excessively as a daily avocation. But where it has been received, schoolhouses have been built, places of worship have been erected, the cells of prisons have been emptied, and the recipients of God's love and grace have had that wonderful consolation, satisfaction, and happiness that would cause one to yearn for a place at the Father's right hand.

We can see in our own country that a move for betterment is on. For instance, the effort to eliminate strong drink is to deliver the rising generation from the use thereof in order to the betterment of the land. The tendency to abolish capital punishment by civil governments, not to encourage lawlessness, but rather because the principle of mercy is being inculcated in the hearts of the people by the continual progress of Christian civilization, indicates that the world is growing better.

The subject indicates a growth, and growth is a product of cultivation. Since the reformation began to work, religious development has made rapid progress. Cultivation implies the tearing down of hindering causes and lending every aid and assistance possible to betterment. The gospel has made such a wonderful impression on the minds of many that they are putting forth every means possible to promulgate its truths and bring the glad tidings to others, that the millennium of Christ—when his word shall have power over the influence of evil for a long period of time, represented by a thousand years—may soon be working for the betterment of all humanity. Let it be remembered that each must do his and her part in bringing about this condition. Others partake of the environments that we as God's messengers place around them.

From experience and observation along this line, I am persuaded that the world is on an upward trend continually. When the stars fail to twinkle their light upon the deeds of man; when the moon declines its smiling upon his doings and the sun sinks back into the dark vaults of heaven, forbidding—as it did when the Redeemer was crucified—to look upon his works, then will I concede that the world is not growing better. Until then I shall take the affirmative.

If Jesus Should Come in 1916.

BY F. L. YOUNG.

The very thought that it is possible for him to come so soon should make every one awake from the sleep of indifference and put on the armor of light.

Concerning his first and second coming there are some facts undenied and undeniable by those who respect the living oracles. In fulfillment of prophecy he came once, accomplished his mission, went back home, took his seat on the right hand of the Majesty on high, where he is to remain until the restoration of all things spoken by the prophets. Then he is coming again, and will be as real as he was when he went away. The angels told the apostles that he would come in like manner as he went away. (Acts 1: 11.)

For fear that the church would go to sleep and thus forget his coming again, inspired men, moved by the Holy Spirit, left on record for our instruction more than fifty plain prophecies telling of his coming again. These are so many gentle reminders from our Father telling us to wake up and be ready for his coming. No one knows when the coming will be. He himself told his disciples that this secret was with the Father. (Matt. 24: 36.)

Though ancient Israel had prophetic signs pointing to his first coming, yet, through their prejudice, ignorance, and false education, they fulfilled the scriptures in putting him to death. They failed to read their prophecies aright. The Holy Spirit has given us also some signs of his second coming. Will we be as oblivious of the fulfillment of these as the Jews were of those? May we learn a lesson from them and thus be prepared for his coming.

While sitting on Mount Olivet, four of his disciples came "Around the Lord's Table." A New Publication. Free to You.

In response to numerous requests from all parts of the country, we have converted the recent special "Lord's Supper" Number of the Gospel Advocate into a handsome booklet suitable for preservation and ready reference. This publication presents every phase of its important subject. Special articles were written by our editors and contributors in reverent and painstaking style. Brother Elam presents in concise form the "whole counsel of God" relative to the Lord's Supper, Brother Sewell stresses its importance, Brother Kurfees discusses its design, and Brother McQuiddy states the historical side. Brother Larimore's article on the necessary preparation for this sacred feast is worth more than the price of a year's subscription. The efforts of the other contributors are highly satisfactory. More than twenty writers had a part in the making of this volume.

"Around the Lord's Table" will prove invaluable to any and all Christians who desire to observe the Lord's Supper aright. To those who preside it supplies a long-felt want. For invalids and shut-ins it makes an ideal gift. If you have a friend among the denominations who needs the scriptural teaching on this subject, you should by all means place this volume in his hands.

We will send one copy of "Around the Lord's Table," free of cost, to any person sending us one new subscriber at $1.50; or, if you send your renewal, add twenty-five cents. Send to-day, as the edition is limited. Address all orders to the Gospel Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.

privately and asked him three questions. One was: "What shall be the sign of thy coming?" (Matt. 24: 3.) He mentions many worldly events before his coming and concludes with the parable of the budding fig tree. As the one gives notice of summer, the others tell of his coming. The Thesalonians were disturbed by the rumor of his immediate appearing. The apostle admonishes them not to be disturbed, for he will not come until the development of the great apostasy. (2 Thess. 2.) We are told that in the last days mockers and scoffers will come even ridiculing the idea of a second coming. (2 Pet. 3: 4.) From these scriptures it seems that the early Christians believed as firmly in his second coming as they did in his divinity.

Just before Jesus went home he asked this question: "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth? If he were to come in 1916, what would he find? No doubt he would find that the "Golden Rule" had not kept pace with our boasted civilization, and that the angelic message, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men," is not bearing much fruit just now. If he were to come to our country just now, the most deplorable spiritual condition would be a Christless morality. Men gather the fruit—practice many Christian virtues—but treat with indifference the tree—the Christ and his authority. How to remedy this condition is a problem for the church. This year, if the church will adorn the doctrine of Christ—lift him up before the world—she will stop the mouths of gainsayers and be prepared for his coming. This is the only way to show to the world that we believe he is coming again to establish "new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." How many of us, with John, can say: "Come, Lord Jesus?" O, to be ready!

The Christian Pilgrim.

BY T. Q. MARTIN.

Whatever may be said of the measure of knowledge concerning a future life possessed by the righteous ones of Old Testament times, they regarded themselves as pilgrims and this life as a pilgrimage.

In answer to Pharaoh's question, "How old art thou?" Jacob said: "The days of the years of my pilgrimage are a hundred and thirty years: few and evil have been the days of the years of my life, and they have not attained unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage." (Gen. 47: 9.) David said, near the close of his earthly labors: "For we are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as all our fathers were." (1 Chron. 29: 15.) The author of Hebrews says of these ancient worthies: "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them and greeted them from afar, and having confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." (Heb. 11: 13.)

If these heroes of ancient days without the light of the glorious resurrection felt themselves to be travelers to a better country, how much more should the Christian pilgrim realize that this world, cursed by sin, is not his abiding place and that he is daily moving on toward the sunset gate, about which shall shine the halo of God's approving smile or over which will hang the storm cloud of destruction! The former would be glorious; the latter, awful. But the pilgrim need have no fear of the end, if only he will pay attention to the signboards along the way.

The Christian pilgrim should implicitly trust his Guide while he makes this journey. He should early impress upon his mind and heart the fact that "the way of man is not in himself; it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps," and that "there is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." These truths constantly borne in mind will cause him to be careful while daily pursuing his journey. He should keep the eyes of faith fixed upon his Guide, who says: "I am the way, and the truth, and the life." He should never lose sight of his written directions. These he will find in the Book of books. There are so many ways that lead from the pilgrim's highway, many of these deflecting just a little at first, but leading gradually farther and farther into the wilderness of perplexity and uncertainty, that he must constantly consult the Guidebook.

As he journeys on in the straight and narrow path, he will find the way often rough and the hills very steep; he will, therefore, need strength for the journey. This he may have for the asking. There is One who, though unseen, travels with him and who possesses strength inexhaustible, and who will willingly impart this strength to the worn and tired pilgrim, provided the pilgrim desires such companionship.

The Christian pilgrim will have great need of patience as he walks the narrow way, for he will meet many who are going in the opposite direction. These will annoy him in many ways, impeding his progress, unless he is ever watchful. Then he will need to be patient toward those who are traveling in the same way with him. He needs often to stop by the wayside and, resting under the branches of God's protecting love, pray: "O merciful Guide, so direct my steps in this journey that I may not turn any soul by any word, act, or look of mine from the great highway of holiness. Help me to know that the soul of my brother is worth ten thousand times more than my own little selfish whims, and help me to give up all that is mine rather than cause one fellow-pilgrim to stumble. Gentle Guide, when the road is rough and steep, hold thou my hand. When I am alarmed by the dangers that beset my path, whisper, 'I am with thee;' and, blessed Leader, when the road is smooth and the sunshine of prosperity beams upon my way, forbid that I turn aside to chase the phantoms of earthly pleasure, but, keeping close to thee, help me to run, and not grow weary; and to 'walk,' and not to faint."

And now, brethren, eliminating the figurative, just a word or two. God has blessed us as individuals, as a nation, as families, and as congregations in the past year. We have made mistakes—yea, our failures have been many—but we have come to the end of 1915, crowned with God's rich blessings. And let us profit by the mistakes of the past year, take up the duties of the present year, and, with brighter smiles, more cheerful heart, and a more sincere love for God and man, strive to do more to make life worth while than ever before.

Looking Backward.

BY J. O. BLAINE.

Saturday, December 4, 1915, was a bright, happy day at my home. I scarcely had time to realize that I had reached the eightieth milestone in my pilgrimage along life's checkered pathway before scores of my friends and neighbors had come with congratulations, good wishes, and expressions of love. But my heart was too full to make them understand the depth of my gratitude for such a manifestation of their confidence and esteem.

For long years some of us had been closely associated as friends and neighbors and brethren in the divine life. I had held many of them in my arms and talked to them in the classics of babyland. I had seen many of them changed from childhood to beautiful, winsome womanhood. I had seen the orange blossoms where time's snowflakes are beginning to fall. I had looked into some of their beautiful eyes through the mists of the bridal veil. I had been with them in the sunshine and in the shadows which had been appointed to their lot. I had seen many of them go down into the baptismal waters and arise from the liquid grave to walk in the new life. I had stood by them as they had stood by me in my sorrow when we laid our loved ones down to sleep until they shall be awakened by the trumpet call of the angel at the resurrection of the just.

All these tender associations have spun ties around my heart which can never be undone while I tabernacle in the flesh. And now that I have arrived at the foot of the hill with the evening shadows falling thick and fast around me, my heart knows no tenderer wish than to pass the remainder of my days in their midst.

Many long years ago I heeded the divine admonition, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth," and I have never regretted, for one moment, the step then taken. I gave my young life to God at the tender age of sixteen, and I have always been thankful for the decision of that hour when I confessed my faith in the world's Redeemer and enlisted as a soldier under the blood-red banner of the cross. I need not say that I have stumbled often; I need not say that my sins of omission and commission have been many; I need not say that my mistakes have been as the sands of the seashore; but I must say that the mercy of God has never failed me. Through all the years of my life it has covered me as with a garment. Because I am now an old man, without family ties, a withered leaf on the tree of life, perhaps some have thought my fate sad and lonely; but, taken all in all, it has been one of blessedness and peace.

For sixty-odd years I have been the child of a King, and the happiness that has blessed my life has come from my Father's hand. I have never made a sacrifice which he has not changed to a gift of love. If I have scattered seeds of kindness, they have blossomed as flowers of immortal beauty. I have never failed to gather a rich harvest of blessings for even a cup of cold water given in the name of the Master. It was a boyish thought with me that ministering angels hovered over the man whose hands are wet with the tears of an orphan's gratitude, and the dream of youth has never departed from my heart. Good words, pure thoughts, and a clean life are gold that will survive the crucible of death. It matters not where the righteous may lay him down to die, though humble his bed and stony his pillow, there will arise above his head, from the valley vision, a ladder in lines of fire to heaven, on whose every round are the footprints of angels.

On the far-away coast of Texas there are numerous summer resorts. At one of these, I am told, a little boat leaves the pier every day for another place farther down the coast. It is customary for people to gather at each place to await the departure and arrival of the boat. It comes in sight of those who await it just as it slips from the view of those who watch its departure. Some day, perhaps before another birthday shall come to me, I must depart on a boat that will never come back again. It may be that some who helped to make my eighty-first birthday so bright and beautiful may be near me when I go away. If so, let them not forget the words of the Master: "In my Father's house are many mansions. . . . I go to prepare a place for you. . . . I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

A New Year's Opportunity.

BY S. H. HALL.

So far as the writer knows, there is no opportunity that the ushering in of the new year affords that could not be seen and grasped at any other season of the year. Of course, I understand that it is made a time for making new resolutions; a time of retrospection—looking back over the past year with its triumphs and failures; and at a time of prospect—looking into the future with the hope and determination to do better. But this is only a habit—only a custom—and could be done just as well at any other season. Hence, I know of no opportunity that can be called "a New Year's opportunity" in the sense that it belongs to the ushering in of the new year and cannot be found in every season of the year.

It is certainly well to make new resolutions, backed by strong determination to carry them into execution—and make them, too, at the beginning of every year. Why not? But we too often make these resolutions for the year as a whole, instead of distributing them to apply to each of the three hundred and sixty-five days in the incoming year. The opportunity of prayerfully examining ourselves whether we are in the faith, of our trying to profit by our past experiences to the end that fewer mistakes be made and more laudable deeds be done, is not a thing to be despised or lightly esteemed at any season of the year. But these resolutions that we are wont to make at the beginning of the new year do not abound in the fruitfulness that should be desired.

A better plan, therefore, I would suggest for the execution of our "New Year's resolutions," and I would call it the "day plan." And I would change the heading of this article to read, "A New Day's Opportunity." The idea of making "New Year's resolutions"—turning over a new leaf, as it is sometimes called—is that we may make the new year better than the old by making fewer mistakes and actually doing more for the cause of Christ. Now, if this is good for the year—and it certainly is—why would it not be good for each new day? If making new resolutions and strengthening our determination has a tendency to make each year better, why would it not when applied to the day? Well, it will, as we all know; for the principle that governs one governs the other; hence they stand or fall together. But the day plan is the better plan, for it is the plan the Lord has given us to make not just one year, but every year of our pilgrimage here, a grand success. (See Matt. 6: 34.)

So, in conclusion, knowing not how others may feel about this matter, I would suggest that we take the new year one day at a time, and thank God at the dawning of every morning for the gift of this new day, and be certain to pray earnestly for his help in enabling us to make it the best day of our journey here. Look at 1916 as a ladder with three hundred and sixty-six rungs in it. Make each day an upward step, thus letting the end of the year find you at the top, three hundred and sixty-six steps nearer God and home. But how sad to think that, in spite of the dazzling wisdom of our pursuing the course suggested above, some will be found at the foot of this ladder when 1916 shall have ended! Lord, help us to make this year a year of greater things for the cause Christ died to establish.

Jesus Christ Forever the Same.

BY J. T. HINDS.

It is important, in the midst of the difficulties and disappointments incident to living the Christian life, that we be strengthened by the consideration of ultimate success. This success can be attained only through persistent labor and sacrifice. The thirteenth chapter of Hebrews, in which the heading to this article is found, is especially designed to stimulate us to make every effort the cause of truth may demand.

As a means of gaining the final reward, the apostle exhorts us to brotherly love, hospitality, sympathy, purity, contentment, and reliance upon divine care. He encourages us to this course of life by the following considerations:

1. The example of worthy Christians. He says: "Remember them that had the rule over you, men that spoke unto you the word of God; and considering the issue of their life, imitate their faith." In Heb. 6: 11, 12 he says: "And we desire that each one of you may show the same diligence unto the fullness of hope even to the end: that ye be not sluggish, but imitators of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises." What Christians have done may be done again. We can succeed through faith and patience.

2. By the better and easier requirements of the new covenant. The apostolic language is: "We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat that serve the tabernacle. The Jewish altar with its exacting sacrifices was of the most sacred significance to the Israelites. They were required to make these sacrifices "year by year." This, too, they did in spite of labor, expense, and inconvenience. Shall we not, with better covenant and easier services, "offer up a sacrifice of praise to God continually?" Shall we not "do good" and "communicate," remembering that "with such sacrifices God is well pleased?"

3. By the fact that "we have no abiding city" here. Whatever worldly success we may gain will be of no avail at the judgment; only things which are not seen are eternal. This world will be destroyed, the elements melt with fervent heat. "Seeing that these things are thus all to be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy living and godliness?" (2 Pet. 3: 11.) If we must give up our earthly home, shall we not prepare for a better? Shall we lose all?

4. The most important consideration is that we have a constant source of divine help. This, the apostle assures us, will be unfailing; and that, whatever men may do to us, we can confidently rely upon the Lord as our helper, for he is the "same yesterday and to-day, yea and forever." While this expression proves the everlasting existence of Jesus, the apostles perhaps intended to refer more particularly to the immutability of his grace and love as continued and ever-available sources of help in the divine life. Of Jesus as a being, the apostle John says that "in the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." He also says this "Word became flesh, and dwelt among us." Whether or not we can ever explain or understand the exact relationship of the Father and Son in the beginning, we must accept the existence of the Son in some form as a fact or reject the record. The sacrifices of the patriarchal and Jewish dispensations had their value in view of the fact that they foreshadowed another and perfect sacrifice. Christ's blood spoke "better things than that of Abel," and the Israelites drank of him as the "spiritual rock that followed them." There is no question of Christ being the central figure of the new covenant. That he will be at the judgment and with the faithful throughout eternity are certainties beyond dispute. While men will die, Jesus "ever liveth;" while friends may fail us when we need them most, Jesus said: "I will in no wise fail thee, neither will I in any wise forsake thee." Since he ever liveth, we can ever depend upon him, for he is able to save those that draw near unto God through him.

Jesus' being the same in the past, present, and future does not mean that the same commands and methods of worship have existed in every age. God, too, is unchangeable in nature, yet his laws have changed as each dispensation of his mercy required. The same is equally true of Christ. He has been and will be a constant source of blessing. But in the new covenant he stands as the mediator between God and man. In this age his priesthood is "unchangeable," his laws remain the same. In this fact we have the assurance that God is no respecter of persons. This guarantees to all salvation upon precisely the same terms, and grace enough to reach every soul who will come to God through him. In our struggle to win the crown of life, may we be encouraged by the fact that, while men may be faithless, "he abideth faithful; for he cannot deny himself."

The Divergent Paths.

BY W. L. REEVES.

It is with considerable reluctance that I venture to prepare a short article for the many intelligent readers of the Gospel Advocate. This reluctance is due to my feeling incompetent for the task; yet I am glad to respond as best I can to the Advocate's request that, "as a personal favor and for the good of the cause," I prepare an article on the subject which Brother Lipscomb has assigned me—"The Divergent Paths."

Divergent paths are paths that recede from each other. Such paths lead those who follow them farther and farther apart. Thus at a glance we all see that such paths should not be traveled by those of us who advocate Christian unity, for in doing so we contravene the fundamental teachings of the Son of God which are clearly set forth in many pointed passages of scripture.

First of all, it seems a good thing for me to show the one path in which we all should walk, all could walk, all must walk, if we would be led by this one path to life eternal. David said: "Thou wilt show me the path of life." (Ps. 16: 11.) A path is a way. Christ said: "Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way [path], which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." (Matt. 7: 14.) This one narrow path is the path of faith in Jesus Christ. Faith is limited to the word of God; therefore this path of faith is the path marked out in the word of God. Proof: "But without faith it is impossible to please him." (Heb. 11: 6.) "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." (Rom. 10: 17.) From these two passages it is evident that we cannot please God by doing things not found taught in his word. "For we walk by faith, not by sight." (2 Cor. 5: 7.) Again, we read: "For whatsoever is not of faith is sin." (Rom. 14: 23.) Seeing that the one path which leads unto eternal life is the one marked out by the word of God, we can more readily determine which paths "diverge" from it.

right way. God's word points out the right path. The scriptures "thoroughly furnish the man of God unto all good works." (2 Tim. 3: 16.) It then is a logical conclusion that all paths in religion which are not taught in God's word are "divergent paths" and should not be traveled any distance whatever.

Men diverge from the right path by hearing that which they should not hear. "If any man have ears to hear, let him hear. And he said unto them, Take heed what ye hear." (Mark 4: 23, 24.) We all know that man is a creature of education, consequently should not give ear unto things which are diametrically opposed to the word of God. Man diverges from the path of faith when he begins "giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." (1 Tim. 4: 1.)

In all cases where men start away in diverging paths, they do so as a result of first letting the devil steal the word of faith away, then they are ready to hear false doctrine and be comforted thereby. The word of God is in the way of the creeds of men; so it must be removed before men can be induced to accept such creeds.

It is strange, yet true, that things which make a great show of worldly wisdom in worship draw people away into diverging paths more readily than any other thing which purports to be of a religious nature. Christ forbids our following in such paths, too. He had Paul to write the following clear, comprehensive statement against such things: "Why, as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances, (touch not; taste not; handle not; which all are to perish with the using;) after the commandments and doctrines of men? Which things have indeed a show of wisdom in will worship, and humility, and neglecting of the body; not in any honor to the satisfying of the flesh." (Col. 2: 20-23.) Christ said: "But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." (Matt. 15: 9.) "Wherefore rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith; not giving heed to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, that turn from the truth." (Tit. 1: 13, 14.)

There is one church. (1 Cor. 12: 20; Col. 1: 18.) The doctrines of men teach that there are many churches, so in this diverge from the true path. The one true church is called the "church of God," the "church of Christ." (Acts 20: 28; Rom. 16: 16.) The doctrines of men lead people away from this Bible truth and, instead, teach that other names will do, and that there is nothing in a name. Paul says "the whole family in heaven and earth is named" for Christ (Eph. 3: 15), and that "there is none other name . . . whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4: 12.) Men say we are saved by faith only, and that obedience is not necessary in order to salvation, but they contend that man obeys Christ because he is already saved. Because of this false contention, they deny that baptism is for (unto) the remission of sins, when the Bible clearly teaches that it is. "Repent. and be baptized . . . for [unto] the remission of sins." (Acts 2: 38.) Christ had told Peter to preach that "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." (Mark 16: 16.) Christ "became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (Heb. 5: 9.) James (2: 24) says: "Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only."

These passages, with many others, forever blot out the "divergent path" which leads men to think they are saved at faith without obedience to the commandment to be baptized for the remission of sins.

Salvation is in Christ. The Bible nowhere says we are to believe into Christ, but it does teach that we are baptized into Christ. Men diverge from this path which leads into Christ and claim that we can get into Christ without baptism. "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" (Rom. 6: 3.) Again, read: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 27.) If these passages do not mean that we are baptized into Christ, how can you say it so that it will mean what it does say, if it does not mean what it says?

The New Testament clearly teaches that men are saved on condition that they obey the commandments of Christ. (Rev. 22: 14.) All who teach otherwise are leading people in divergent paths, and so Christ warns us that "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." (Matt. 15: 14.)

Man is a changeable being. He is often modified by his environments, by books, or by associates. It is difficult for him to "set his affections on things above" and hold them there. It is his custom to interpret the value of principles and systems as he sees them lived in human life.

Man, unlike the vegetable and animal world, has a mental and moral mission to fill. It is not enough for him merely to exist; he has a work to do. Life's problems must be solved and her duties must be done. Being endowed with a superior mind and a moral and sensitive nature, man is responsible for what he thinks and does.

The human soul seems to be susceptible of either success or failure. Success lies in the field of continued effort and largely depends upon a well-defined plan of life. No one can hope to achieve great things who does not arrange great plans. A man's ideals determine his life and its work. The great mass of humankind has no real purpose in living and no real hope beyond the grave. Life comes and goes, and they drift with the tide. The great difference in men does not lie in brain power, but in plan and effort.

The young man who selects his life's work early and plans well what he means to do has his success half gained. Mother, father, or, perhaps, some common friend gave him an inspiration for "higher ground." The spoken "word" carries with it a world of power. It may contain the "balm of Gilead" or the "poison of an Indian's arrow." A simple remark may inspire the young to the greatest and the best, or may blight a life's career. Not many years ago a Texas boy was found dead in his bed; a bottle was sitting on a stand near him, and a note which read as follows: "No one cares for me. Life is dark and cloudy. The world has no need for me, and I do not care to live." Had some one spoken kindly and tenderly to him; had some one sat by his side and told him, "I love you, and you can make a great and good man;" had some one lifted the clouds from his sky and shown him the sun and stars, he would probably be living and happy to-day.

A teacher once found a small boy to be extremely difficult to control. He would rebel, fight, play truant, and violate every principle of law and order. After punishment and other methods had failed, the teacher took the boy into his confidence and resolved to try more conciliatory means. At noon one day the teacher and student took a stroll in the woods. They sat down upon a log and had a friendly talk. The man put his arms around the boy and said: "You have been a very bad boy. I have had to whip you several times, and yet you grow worse each day. I can see no reason for it. There is no profit in a bad life, and nothing to be gained by rebellion and lawlessness. I see in you but one chance in life: You have many faults, yet you are truthful. You have not told me a lie this year. A boy who can tell the truth and will not lie can make a man. I love your little soul, and will do all I can to help you climb to the top of life's mountain and make the greatest man possible." By the time the teacher had ended his remarks, he observed that the child was crying. Amid the boy's sobs, he said: "You are the first human being that ever told me he loved me. My father and mother have always censured me and rebuked me when I did wrong, but never praised me for doing well. You are the first man that ever appealed to me and seemed to seek my good."

The conversation continued, and the teacher did his best to stimulate the child's better nature to the heights of purity and greatness. He sought to fan to a blaze the little spark that he found in his heart. He pictured all the advantages of a good life; how that society would receive and love him; how that his country would honor and praise him; how his own heart would approve his conduct and rejoice with joy unspeakable; and how God and heaven would at last receive him. When the teacher concluded, the boy said: "I see greater visions now, and have a clearer view of life. I can, and I will, be a man. If there is one man who loves me and will help me, I owe it to him to try. From this day I shall seek to live a better life." The teacher has not seen the boy in many years, but fully believes that somewhere in the world that little boy—so worthless at one time—has grown to be a great and useful man.

When a man is downcast, disheartened, and discouraged, life's burdens press heaviest and her stars shine dimmest. The one who can remove these burdens, clear away the clouds from the sky, make smooth his path in life, and give him a "fresh start" is his greatest benefactor.

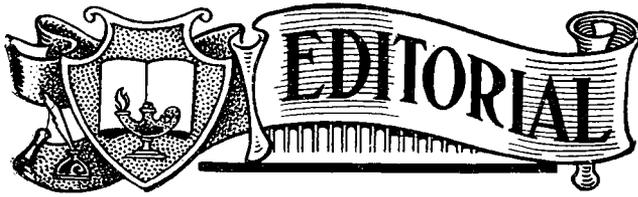

I once saw an old cow in a mudhole. She was old and poor, but my sympathy extended to her. Some others who happened to be with me assisted me, and we helped her from the ditch. She was unable to speak, but I thought I could see proof in her actions that she was thankful for what we did. Is not a human being worth more than an animal? Shall we not lift man from life's pits and give him a new start?

The new start gives stronger determination and greater ambition. If we form no new resolutions, create no new ideals, and adopt no new plans, we get in the "ruts" and lose the spice of life. It is not so bad to make mistakes, if you will correct them and "start again." Plan some important work, and never rest till you do it.

The old year has passed and the new one has come. Last year's work is now recorded and cannot be changed, improved, or emended. With the new year, our aims should rise. Let us climb to higher ground, adopt greater plans, and live purer lives. The best way to live is to help others live. The more you invest in humanity, the greater will you love the world. Jesus says: "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Man's heart will beat truest to the thing in which his life is invested. There will be no greater pleasure in eternity than to know that you have lifted some fallen soul to higher aims and given him a new ideal for which to live. It is not possible for all men to accumulate gold, land, or houses; all men cannot become greater teachers, lawyers, or doctors; but few men can ever be President of this republic; yet all men can be Christians, and can help their fellows in life's struggles. When a man grows tired as he climbs the mountains of life and sits down to rest on the way, he finds it difficult to start again. His fellow-traveler, who is stronger and more resolute, as he passes the tired man, can do him a great service if he will only halt and say: "Come, let us climb to the top of the hill." Such a suggestion will fill the tired man's heart with courage and will enable him to take a new start.

Can You Do It?

"That is beautiful!" exclaimed the heathen, when the missionary had finished telling what the Christian life meant. "Can you do it?" Over many a set of New Year's resolutions the same exclamation would fit and the same question might be asked.—Sunday School Times.

Brother Larimore Comes With Us.

Living in the present, we should not waste our lives in vain regrets over the past; but as it was with Paul, so should it be with us: "Forgetting the things which are behind, and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

The publishers of the Gospel Advocate are not satisfied to stand still. While receiving many assurances that the paper is steadily improving, still its managers are conscious of its imperfections and are laboring to bring the paper as near perfection as human productions can attain. To this end they are endeavoring to associate with them in the work the purest, ablest, and most efficient men to be found among the disciples of Christ.

We feel that our readers, the public, and we ourselves are to be congratulated in the addition of the name of T. B. Larimore to our editorial staff. He is so well and favorably known, not only to our readers, but throughout our whole country, that to introduce him to our readers is unnecessary. The talented and lamented McGarvey said years ago of him that he was the most popular preacher and evangelist in the South. He is wiser and better to-day than ever before. Over a quarter of a century ago, F. D. Srygley said of Chapter I. of "Larimore and His Boys:" "T. B. Larimore is now in his forty-sixth year, and for more than twenty years he has labored extensively and successfully in the Southern States as a general evangelist. He has probably baptized more people than any other man of any age, living or dead. He is personally more churches of disciples in the South than any other man of any age living or dead. He is personally more widely known than any other preacher among the disciples in the South, and probably more universally popular with all churches and the world as a man and preacher than any one else wherever he is known. He is a representative Christian in the broadest sense. People differ in opinion as to his gifts of oratory, profundity of thought, thoroughness of scholarship, breadth of intellect, and orthodoxy of faith; but all who know him believe implicitly in his depth of piety, honesty of purpose, sincerity of convictions, and godliness of life. Everybody calls him 'Brother Larimore'—not in a restricted or denominational sense, but in a feeling of broad and catholic brotherhood in Christ without regard to denominational limitations or the dogmas of church creeds."

Brother Larimore is noted for his chaste use of the English language and is thoroughly conversant with the Bible. These points combine to make him a writer of marked ability. We are truly glad and feel that it is peculiarly fitting to have him associated with us, that he may give the world the benefit of his best, ripest, and most mature thoughts.

Considering "The Things Which Are Behind" and "The Things Which Are Before."

BY M. C. K.

It is clearly taught in the word of God that, in some sense, we are to forget and turn away from the things of the past, and yet that, in another sense, we are to remember and consider them.

Speaking to the Philippian Christians, Paul says: "One thing I do, forgetting the things which are behind, and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 3: 13, 14.) Here is a distinct declaration that, "forgetting the things which are behind," the apostle would stretch "forward to the things which are before." But we have also this inspired admonition: "Remember the days of old, consider the years of many generations; ask thy father, and he will show thee; thine elders, and they will tell thee." (Deut. 32: 7.)

Thus we are called upon apparently to proceed in two opposite directions at the same time, but it is only apparent. There is no contradiction between the two ideas or requirements, but they are in perfect harmony with each other. There is, indeed, a sense in which we must forget the past and press forward to the future; and there is another sense in which we should think of the past, and by means of its varied experiences, its fortunes and misfortunes, its alternate successes and failures, strive to improve the record of the future. The Philippian passage receives additional light from the language of Jesus, "No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God" (Luke 9: 62), where the context shows that the "looking back" is that which entangles one with this life's affairs, and thus retards and hinders progress. In this sense we must forget the past and not allow it to interfere with present duties nor with future prospects.

On the other hand, remembering the mercies and blessings of God in "the days of old" and considering their successes and failures as stepping-stones to a more determined and resolute effort to achieve a still greater triumph over evil in the future is not only wholesome and helpful to spiritual growth, but it is abundantly recognized in the word of God. And this is the general purpose and spirit of this "Review and Forward" Number of the Gospel Advocate. We wish to contemplate simultaneously the record of the past and that which lies before in the hope that we may thus be enabled to face the latter with new resolutions, new courage, stronger faith, and a brighter hope. The combination of such a retrospect and such a prospect is essential to the well-rounded Christian life.

It is remarkable how great men in different ages are similarly impressed with some great truth, and their contemplation of the past and of the future is an impressive illustration. Neither in this instance is the similarity of impression confined to the devotees of Christianity, as shown by the well-known observation of Aristotle, "There is a charm both in our recollections of the past and in our hopes of the future," and in the equally impressive lines of Ovid:

We praise times past, while we times present use;
Yet due the worship which to each we give.

And our own beloved Longfellow falls into the same train of reflection in order to impress the value of present time and its proper use:

Trust no future, howe'er pleasant!
Let the dead Past bury its dead!
Act, act in the living present!
Heart within, and God o'erhead!

Adopting Paul's own method of classification, let us now briefly consider:

1. "The things which are behind." Many subjects might here occupy our attention, but we shall confine our remarks to a few. While in the mission field, both at home and abroad, there is nothing of which we may loudly boast, yet there is much for which to be grateful. Notwithstanding the far-reaching and blighting effects of the great European war which have been world-wide, yet there has been growth in the evangelistic spirit and some enlargement of the work in different fields of operation. The spirit of war even in countries where it is not being actually waged is antagonistic to general piety and religious growth, and hence the churches have not made rapid progress in these lines during the past year. It is to be hoped that in the not distant future there will be a healthy reaction and possibly a greater growth than ever as the indirect result of the great internecine strife. Noting the different classes of events which mark the history of our times, the past year contains its quota of natural deaths, of suicides, of accidents, of business failures, and of various misfortunes and calamities; but, to quote again from the impressive words of Longfellow, we need not be discouraged by these: "Nor deem the irrevocable past as wholly wasted, wholly vain, if, rising on its wrecks, at last to something noble we attain."

2. "The things which are before." Here, like Abraham of old, we go forward "not knowing whither" we go, and yet there is no room for doubt. While to us the future is a sealed book, yet we may face it with the same high courage and determination which moved the Hebrew patriarch in his pious journeys. Reviewing their records of the past year, the churches should cast up their accounts, carefully noting where improvement can be made, and thus, planning for larger things with constant growth in grace and knowledge, they should resolve by the grace of God to make the year 1916 an advance upon all its predecessors. In public worship, in the constant reading and study of God's word, in prayer, in private devotion, and in all the graces and amenities which adorn the domestic circle, there is room for improvement, and thus the way is open and the prospect bright for stronger churches and happier homes.

Hence, finally, both the past and the future are at our disposal in moments of pious contemplation, and it is a most important and fortunate attainment to be properly poised between them, to which sentiment these beautiful and impressive lines give ample expression:

We will not deplore them, the days that are past. . . .
Yet now that their shadows are on us no more,
Let us welcome the prospect that brightens before!

O let us no longer, then, vainly lament
Over scenes that are faded, and days that are spent.
But, by faith unforsaken, unawed by mischance,
On hope's waving banner still fixed be our glance;
And should fortune prove cruel and false to the last,
Let us look to the future and not to the past.

"Review and Forward."

BY E. A. E.

(Written especially for the "Review and Forward" Number.)

What can I write on this subject so as to accomplish the greatest good?

REVIEW.

Review of what? The first and most important review, and the one, perhaps, the least pleasing, is self-examination—looking into one's own heart and one's own life. In this are a broken heart, a contrite spirit (Ps. 34: 18), repentance, a Christian life, and salvation.

Let me quote a few of the many passages of scripture on this important work, because all who love God desire to know and do his will in regard to self-examination, a pure heart, a good conscience, and a holy life.

Stand in awe, and sin not: commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be still. (Ps. 4: 4.)

I call to remembrance my song in the night: I commune with mine own heart; and my spirit maketh diligent search. (Ps. 77: 6.)

Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Jehovah, my rock, and my redeemer. (Ps. 19: 14.)

No one can control his tongue and life who does not learn first to control his thoughts.

Remember not the sins of my youth, nor my transgressions: according to thy loving-kindness remember thou me. (Ps. 25: 7.)

He hath not dealt with us after our sins, nor rewarded us after our iniquities. (Ps. 103: 10.)

We cannot realize our condition before God, offer these prayers with the psalmist, and have any proper conception of the forbearance, mercy, and forgiveness of the Heavenly Father, without honest and searching self-examination; and without it we can never subdue our appetites, curb our lusts, bring our bodies into captivity to the gospel of Christ, and become partakers of the divine nature.

O keep my soul, and deliver me: let me not be put to shame, for I take refuge in thee. Let integrity and uprightness preserve me. For I wait for thee. (Ps. 25: 20, 21.)

Without self-examination Paul could not say that he had "lived before God in all good conscience" (Acts 23: 1); that he had exercised himself "to have a conscience void of offense toward God and man" (Acts 24: 16); that his conscience bore witness with him in the Holy Spirit that he experienced great sorrow and pain over the lost condition of the Jews (Rom. 9: 1-5); and that he had wronged no man, had corrupted no man, and had taken advantage of no man (2 Cor. 7: 2). Without it Timothy could not keep himself pure. (1 Tim. 5: 22.)

The end of the charge is love out of a pure heart and a good conscience and faith unfeigned. (1 Tim. 1: 5.)

How many realize that this is the end of the charge, the goal to be reached, the position to be attained?

Try your own selves, whether ye are in the faith; prove your own selves. (2 Cor. 13: 5.)

This does not mean that we are to examine ourselves whether we are holding to and contending for the right theory in a partisan and, maybe, bitter spirit—far from that, but whether we are holding unfeigned faith and a good conscience. (1 Tim. 1: 18, 19.)

The minds and consciences of some are defiled (Tit. 1: 15), the consciences of some are seared as with a hot iron (1 Tim. 4: 2), and the consciences of some are dead.

Without self-examination we cannot know that we trust in God and believe with all the heart in Jesus; that we have ever turned in godly sorrow from all sins—secret and hidden sins as well as known and public ones; that we have obeyed God from the heart in baptism, have ever eaten the Lord's Supper in an acceptable manner, or are now the children of God.

The Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God. (Rom. 8: 16.)

Of all people who should be the first to examine themselves, to keep good consciences, pure hearts, and holy lives, teachers and preachers should.

"Where, then, is the glorying? It is excluded. By what manner of law? of works? Nay," but by the law of self-examination. "'Tis a time for memory and for tears" when we review our own imperfect lives, look our failures honestly in the face, conscientiously acknowledge our own mistakes, and sincerely and fully confess our own sins. When we do this, there will be left in us no gushing spirit of boasting and glorying and no disposition to rush out with torch and flame, blast of trumpets and hurrah over what we expect to accomplish in the future. Jesus teaches us to say in the end, when we have done all we can do, that we have been unprofitable servants, have done nothing but our duty, and, hence, nothing to boast of.

TOO MUCH BOASTING AND BOOSTING.

With his abundant labors, sacrifices and persecutions, miraculous endowments, and heavenly visions, Paul asked the Corinthians to bear with him "in a little foolishness" while he mentioned these things. He spoke of them only to save the Corinthians from false teachers and destruction. Paul manifested no vanity and pride, never advertised himself or boosted his work. While he spoke the truth concerning his fellow-laborers, he never boosted them. Let us note with what plainness and simplicity and in what matter-of-fact way Luke reports meetings with thousands of additions. He never even adds: "And to the Lord be all the praise." There are no "glorious days," "glorious meetings," "valuable" and "precious" and "noble" additions with him. One soul saved—of the red man or yellow man, black man or white man—is as "precious" and "glorious" with God as another, and as "precious" and "glorious" saved by one man as by another. A day spent in God's service in the field, the shop, the store, the home, in the humble discharge of duty, is as glorious with God as one spent in his public service. This "gloriousness" comes from the vanity of man, and not from the love of God. The work of a poor Christian man in his shop or field, making an honest living in the fear of God for his family and something also to give to the needy, and teaching his children to do the same, is far more glorious in the sight of God than the spread-eagle oratory of some pulpiteer as he airs his eloquence before his Sunday audiences. Yet the assembly of the saints on the first day of the week to worship God in spirit and truth, to teach and edify the church, and to preach the gospel at any time is as glorious as any work of God on any other day.

The pride and vanity, egotism and self-exaltation of men, in contrast with the humility and meekness of Jesus, are most grievous. It is especially distressing to the true followers of the lowly Nazarene to see the manifestations of such in some who profess to be teachers in Israel and to have the mind of Christ and the Spirit of God. Attention is called to the manifestation of these passions, not in criticism, but in sorrow.

A good and faithful man and humble and efficient preacher spoke to me recently of the strife and contention in many places and rather asked the cause of them. I replied that the same old question, which frequently arose among the apostles, of who is the greatest in the kingdom, produces very much of the trouble. Some congregations are torn apart by some now who want to rule or by some preacher who is determined to have his way. In Christ's day people loved religious titles, liked the salutations in public places, and sought the chief seats at feasts and in the synagogues, and they love and seek the same now. Envy and jealousy at times and in places play no small part in the troubles. Many teachers and preachers now have not enough of the humility and meekness and spirit of Christ to drive all these out of the heart. Of course, they do not acknowledge or even realize that these dark and dangerous passions are ruling them, and they "lay it to" religion, to "the good of the cause," their love (!) of the truth and loyalty (!) to Christ. Some young men are professing, and their friends are claiming for them, a deeper and clearer insight into the meaning of certain parts of the Bible than McGarvey, Lipscomb, or the Sewells ever had. It seems that a majority of young preachers now, upon leaving school, are ambitious to do something new under the sun—something no one else has ever done—to get into the lamplight, to make for themselves a name. The gospel of Christ, the church, the Christian life, heaven and perdition are just the same as they were in the days of the apostles. To learn and teach more and more of the gospel, to build up the church more and more in the daily duties of life and true service of God, and to set a godly example in honesty and uprightness, piety at home and all humble obedience to God, are works that all children of God encourage and delight to see done. But this is too tame, too commonplace, and too old for some.

Some young preachers are offering new standards of unity and peace. Of these God has set the standard. Let us strive to come up to it.

Here I repeat that which I have written before, and I repeat it with as much emphasis as possible: that much of the strife and contention and many of the divisions among the churches have been produced by preachers—by their vanity, pride, self-seeking, love of preëminence, desire to be the greatest, or some unholy passion and unchristlike spirit. But this has always been the case. Miriam and Aaron caused trouble in Israel by the same passions. (Num. 12.) By the same passions Korah, Dathan, and Abiram and two hundred and fifty others did the same. (Num. 16.) The strife and divisions in the churches in Paul's day were caused by false teachers with their smooth and fair speech and show of piety.

FORWARD.

Forward to what? We turn again to Paul. Read once more Phil. 3. He was determined on a forward movement. He stretched forward and pressed on toward that which he desired by every means to attain. Reviewing his past life and attainments, he counted all as refuse that he might gain this one thing. I repeat, too, as I have written before, this "one thing" with Paul was not to make a great scholar, a great orator, a great preacher, a great expositor of the Scriptures or theologian, a great "evangelist," a great debater or to have a great number of debates, to have a great school, but simply and only to be a Christian that he might at last be saved in heaven. He did not take it for granted that he was already good enough, either, and it was henceforth his business to teach others to be good. With all his natural ability, learning, and miraculous endowments, he had to buffet his body, keep his passions under, and live a meek and humble life in order to be saved. His preaching and other work in the church grew out of his being a Christian as fruit grows out of the seed.

Do we not wish with all our hearts that all preachers, teachers, and all others would make this same "one thing" the forward movement of their lives?

We are solemnly taught not to think of ourselves more highly than we ought to think, and each to count other better than himself. Then let the first and greatest forward movement of every one in 1916 be to strive to be more humble, more meek, purer, more forbearing, more patient, and in every way more Christlike.

The Lost Day.

And so it turns from us and goes

Away in sad disdain;

Though we would give our lives for it,

It never comes again.

How to Make the Most of Life.

BY A. B. L.

There is an old proverb that teaches, "The road to hell is paved with good intentions." This proverb often serves as a potent warning to the lukewarm and the almost persuaded. But if applied to discount the value of a good intention, it becomes a vicious, rather than a helpful, proverb. Let us not forget that the road away from hell has that sort of asphalt. A person never loses anything by making a good resolution. One thing is certain: we shall not accomplish anything this year if we expect to accomplish nothing. If a man walks along the road, he sees many things he didn't expect to see when he started out, but he sees them because he started. Whoever launches forth on God's promises may not get where he thought he would, but he will get somewhere. A traveler in China found a bridge with steep sides that had once crossed a canal. The canal had become filled up, yet every day hundreds of Chinese toiled up the bridge and down on the other side when they might have walked dry-shod before it. There is no reason why Christian people should be afraid of a fresh start.

The great thought should be the thought of our usefulness; the great question, how to make the most of life. Some people make a great deal of life; others, very little. To some it is intensely interesting; to others it is vapid and boring. Some are tired of life before they begun to live. It seems that they were born tired. But indifference to the meaning and opportunities of life is never characteristic of noble and manly natures. Such characters do not fall into the pit of satiety. To them life has inexhaustible charms. To them it is not only varied, but rich and full. Each day dawns with new expectations and closes with fresh hopes for to-morrow. These living characters are the ones who keep the rest of us alive. Whenever we meet them they strengthen our faith and make us participants of their own enthusiasm. They dissipate our cares as the sunshine penetrates the clouds. The apostle Paul was a living factor in the progress of the church. How rich and full was his experience! How much he made out of his years! As Dr. Clarke said: "He stands like the Nilometer in Egypt to tell how high the river of Thought and Love and Will may rise." Though he had never seen Jesus except in a vision, yet he seems to have understood the Savior better than those who had been with him; though he did not write a Gospel, yet he seems to have comprehended the gospel more truly than those who wrote them. In service he labored more abundant; he passed through more trials than any of the other apostles; he planted more churches; he took more journeys; he wrote more letters. His days and weeks were full of work. At the same time they were full of thought and of deep reflection. If one ask how it was that Paul made so much of life, admitting the point of his inspiration, we might truly say it was the enthusiasm of his love for the Master. Here, then, we find the first rule for making the most of life. It is: Forget yourself in some interest out of yourself. Paul spent but few of his precious moments thinking of himself. His great thought was of his message: "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." If we look for a general rule, we hear him say: "This one thing I do." If we look for an ideal, we hear him say: "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." If we look for the human object, it is found in the words, "My heart's desire and my supplication to God is for them, that they may be saved," and again in some such tender message addressed to the Gentiles. "We only live," writes a profound philosopher, "when we love."

We cannot all be inspired apostles or great philosophers. But the motive or the principle which made their lives rich and full we can have in ours. The lesson they teach is to be interested in something good; to have an object, an aim, a purpose, outside of ourselves. People outside of the church of Christ sometimes have trouble in choosing the object. I once read how a wealthy woman from the West was coming to New York with three palace cars full of cats. These animals were fed on the daintiest food and slept in berths of plush. What a pity, we think, when there are thousands of waifs in this country of ours who would like to exchange places with these aristocratic pets! But this woman doubtless had a good intention. She felt that she must become interested in something, that she must place her affections and devote her energies upon some worthy object. What more worthy, she thought, than a poor, persecuted, downtrodden cat, the emblem of rancorous music and the target of worn-out boots?

The Christian is not so misled. He who reads the word of God to find out the purpose of his life and the objects of his love will not make any such mistake. The Scriptures become to him an infallible guide. Here he reads the always timely admonition: "As we have opportunity, let us work that which is good toward all men, and especially toward them that are of the household of the faith." He recalls the promise of the Master: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me." The definition of James is constantly ringing in his ears: "Pure religion and undefiled before our God and Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world." The man who drinks in the meaning of these three passages may make other mistakes, but he will hardly go wrong on the subject of charity. Here his purpose will be truest, his object the worthiest, and his reason the best in the world.

In searching the word of God for the second rule that shall help us to make the most of life during 1916, I am struck with the force and splendor of a passage from the book of Ecclesiastes: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Most of us do many things mechanically, satisfied if we do as well as others or no worse than the majority. This is often true of our worship. There is a great deal of religious effort that is like the practice of "marking time" among soldiers. They lift up one foot and then put it down in the same place; then they lift up the other and put it down in the same place. They are making motion, but they are not moving. In just the same way we may be going through the motions of a Christian life, but not showing real progress. We may be saying our prayers, but we are not praying. We may be going to church, but not to heaven. We may be doing something, but not with the spirit of earnestness. Our hand may be busy, but not working as powerfully as it should. How fine is the New Testament picture of Paul as the runner bent on winning the Christian race! How fixed the forward look, how eager the forward poise in the great apostle's effort when looking unto Christ and striving for heavenly honors! How inspiring is the Savior's ministry in this respect! When he preached a sermon, it was complete. When he taught a lesson, that lesson was perfect. When the multitudes came to him, bringing the sick, the lame, the palsied, and the blind, he healed them all. In whatever thing his hand found to do, that blessed hand revealed its might.

The Bible teaches that we are to worship God after the same manner—not in a half-hearted way; not with part of our mind worrying about the past or the future, but with all of our mind intent upon the duties of the present hour. If we preach the gospel, let us preach it with all our might, keeping in mind the truth so explicitly stated by the apostle Paul that the gospel alone is the "power of God unto salvation." If we contend, let us "contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." If we give, let us give "good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over." Let us believe in that which is highest and do with all our might that which is nearest.

"The primal duties shine aloft like stars;
The charities which soothe and bless and save
Are scattered at the foot of man like flowers."

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Compiled by A. B. Lipscomb

J. D. Luna has moved to Elora, Tenn.

The brethren at Capulet, Fla., have paid for their meeting-house.

Brother Larimore's editorial connection is our New Year's gift to our readers.

It rejoices us to report that Brother Sewell's condition is greatly improved.

Brother McQuiddy is taking care of the queries during Brother Sewell's illness.

E. S. Jelley, Jr., our energetic missionary to India, reports twenty-five baptisms in one month.

J. M. Gainer changes his address from Dallas, Texas, to Scottsboro, Ala. He will move on January 10.

John E. Dunn is doing mission work in the city of Miami, Fla. He will be there for four months in an effort to get the church on a permanent basis.

Brother Srygley will personally bear the best wishes of the Gospel Advocate to hundreds of our readers during the next two months, after which we will announce his next itinerary.

Another volunteer: "I am ready to book meetings for the summer of 1916. Those desiring my services should address me at 2630 Montgomery Street, Louisville, Ky." (C. K. Mathews.)

From Lester Wesson, at Florence, Ala.: "I wish to compliment all the contributors to the 'Home and Father and Mother' Number of the Gospel Advocate. I think it beats them all. Every success to the Advocate."

J. S. Westbrook, the officiating preacher, reports two weddings as follows: "Married, on December 23, at Lebanon Church, Mr. Dervit Coursey to Miss Audie Bell; on December 26, at Link, Tenn., Mr. F. P. Jones, Jr., to Miss Lois L. Burrus."

Before starting out on his present trip, Brother Srygley had a pleasant and profitable trip to Gallatin, Tenn., where he secured a score of new subscribers and renewals. He was greatly assisted by W. P. Freeman, a staunch friend of this paper.

David Lipscomb, one of our senior editors, made us happy by coming to see us the last day in the year 1915. It certainly recalled some stirring scenes to see him sitting in the office as of yore. This was his first visit in many months.

From W. W. Freeman, at Louisville, Ky.: "The last special number of the Gospel Advocate was superfine. Those for the coming year will be anxiously awaited by many."

Brother Freeman has been doing some very creditable work as a missionary propagandist.

J. D. Floyd sends us the following correction: "In my article in the Gospel Advocate of December 23 I stated that when I came into the church in 1866 there was a church of Christ in only five of the thirty-nine counties in Middle Tennessee, whereas I intended to say that there was a church in only five of the county seats."

Thomas E. Milholland, of Madill, Okla., sends greetings: "I wish the editors of the Gospel Advocate a happy, prosperous New Year. May God bless you all in every good work; and may peace and faith and a full assurance of the everlasting home be and abide with the venerable old soldiers, David Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell, as they pass on before us."

From O. M. Reynolds, at Memphis, Texas: "The work of the Lord in this field is progressing nicely. One was baptized at Lelia Lake last week. I preached the first time in our new house here yesterday and baptized a young woman in the new baptistery. I begin a song drill here to-night and a meeting on January 1, 1916. The Gospel Advocate is great."

From Bynum Black: "I closed an interesting meeting for Union Church, at Granby, Mo., and came by home (Ward Springs, Okla.), found all well, and then came to Duncan, Ariz., to discuss with Utah Mormons. There are tens of thousands of Mormons in New Mexico, Arizona, and Utah, and throughout the Rocky Mountain region. We are having an interesting time."

From N. W. Proffitt, at Paris, Texas: "I began a meeting at Telephone on the second Lord's day in December and continued it eight days. There were no visible results. Quite a number seemed to be more interested in a prize drawing at Bonham than in the meeting. I regret to see this. But still there is a faithful few at Telephone who have not bowed the knee to mammon."

In a private note comes the sad intelligence that V. I. Stirman, of Ennis, Texas, is dangerously ill. Brother Stirman is about the same age of our two senior editors, and has proved himself a staunch friend of the Gospel Advocate for many years. He has been preaching the gospel for half a century. We hope for his recovery; but if God wills that he should go, we feel sure that this faithful soldier of the cross is ready to meet his Savior.

From E. Gaston Collins, at Huntland, Tenn.: "On the second Sunday in December I filled my regular appointment at Old Salem in the forenoon and preached at Huntland at night. On the third Lord's day I was at Caney Hollow in the forenoon and at Lexie in the afternoon. On the fourth Lord's day I was at Hatchett's Schoolhouse in the morning. With the ushering in of the new year, let all the people of God take new courage and make a new resolve to press on to victory."

Paul says: "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works." Right in line with this injunction, Price Billingsley, of McMinnville, Tenn., writes: "I want to do more this incoming year in provoking our Warren County churches to send assistance to our noble workers in the gospel in far-away countries. Those workers certainly need the assistance, but not more sorely than do these home congregations themselves need the help they will receive in unselfishly helping others."

My good friend, Phil Laib, of Louisville, Ky., gladdens my heart with the following: "The new year's birth is a feast of mystery and promise. It is a port waiting to welcome all the barques that the old year left at sea. To you, friend whom I love, I am hoping that it may bring galleons freighted with the richest gifts of life; that bright sails may rise on the horizon before your eyes, and that the days may come with all the fruition of heart's desire and prosperity. May the young year make real to you the things of which you have dreamed when your ship should come in. May this year's paths lead you through sun-kissed vineyards of delight, and may the clustered grapes fill to overflowing your cup of happiness."

S. Houston Proffitt, of Sale Creek, Tenn., makes the suggestion that the address of each contributor to the special numbers be given. In accord with this good suggestion, we herewith give all addresses that do not appear in connection with the articles: James E. Scobey, Waverly Place, Nashville, Tenn.; C. W. Sewell, Corpus Christi, Texas; John Straiton, 1030 South Lake Street, Fort Worth, Texas; John T. Poe, Longview, Texas; James A. Allen, Life and Casualty Building, Nashville, Tenn.; H. L. Young, Cleburne, Texas; T. Q. Martin, Winchester, Ky.; J. O. Blaine, Portland, Tenn.; S. H. Hall, 275 Oak Street, Atlanta, Ga.; J. T. Hinds, Fayetteville, Ark.; W. L. Reeves, Clemmons, N. C.; W. F. Ledlow, Lockney, Texas; Charlie Taylor, Hickory Grove, Ky.; L. D. Perkins, Riverside, Cal.

Many friends from over the country have sent cards of greeting and best wishes to the editor of this page. One of the most appreciated was in the shape of an artistic calendar from Mrs. Clara Cox Epperson, president of the Tennessee Press and Authors' Club. The sentiments in the calendar were written by Mrs. Epperson herself. We reproduce an exquisite verse bearing the caption: "Our Jewel Years:"

If we could take our jewels, the past years,
And wash them clean with penitential tears,
And string them flawless on life's golden chain,
We'd face the future years with joy again.
But since those jewels have forever gone,
We can—alas!—but with regrets atone,
And with renewed resolves, softened by tears,
Carve purer jewels from the coming years.

To the Churches of Christ in Tennessee.

I am anxious to have the name and post-office address of every member of the church in the State. Will not some member of each congregation collect as complete a list as possible of the membership of his or her home congregation and send it to me? Be sure and send correct address. If you are unable to send a complete list of the membership, send what you can.

W. T. BOAZ,
Superintendent of the Tennessee Orphans' Home.

GET RID OF HUMORS AND AVOID SICKNESS

Humors in the blood cause internal derangements that affect the whole system, as well as pimples, boils and other eruptions, and are responsible for the readiness with which many people contract disease.

For forty years Hood's Sarsaparilla has been more successful than any other medicine in expelling humors and removing their inward and outward effects. Get Hood's. No other medicine acts like it.

Among the Colored People

Still in Texas.

BY JOHN T. RAMSEY.

To-night (December 18) finds me at my home in Dallas, Texas. It has been some time since I have been before you all; and as the year is almost gone, I thought to make a statement of part of my year's work, as time and space will not permit a full report.

At this time I have been quite busy, as usual, in preaching the pure gospel of the Christ to my people. I have been just as busy as I used to be in Tennessee and Kentucky. I did not have time to write much; I had to work, and work hard. There are but few loyal brethren out in this part of Texas; so you can see that the fight is on out West. I have preached all the time since I have been in Texas. I am still working in Dixon and Dallas. My last meeting with the Dixon church was as good as last year's meeting. I preached one hundred and three sermons, and forty-six were added to the cause of the Christ. Eighteen were added to the Dallas church. Most of my work was in destitute places. But all that know me and of my work know that I preach daily, except when I am going from place to place.

I rejoice when the day comes for my Gospel Advocate. I am never too busy to read it. It keeps up with all my brethren and their work. May the Christ ever bless you all in this great work.

Brethren, I hope you all will remember me in this great work. This is a great mission field within itself, and I could do a great work out here if I was able, but I am not like I used to be. I have spent so much; and since I came out West, I have but little aid. All know that when I was able I did my part in everything. This has been a hard year almost everywhere, but we could do more if we would lay down self and just see Christ.

I want to thank all that have had fellowship with me in this work, and kindly ask that all who read the Advocate and wish me well will now take fellowship in this great work. Please send all aid to 2317 Hall Street, Dallas, Texas, to the writer, and the same will be stated through the Advocate. I shall be glad to read a line from any of my old friends and brethren. Texas is a hard field in which to work among my people, and the white brethren in this city seem to care very little for the colored people. Not one cent has been given to me from the Dallas brethren for this work, and this is a shame. Brother A. B. Lipscomb stated through the Advocate last year that I should have a hearty support in this work. Now, brethren, will you all fall into line and help this work among my people? Five or ten dollars monthly would be a great help in this hard struggle. Will some good brother or sister or church help me to raise this amount each month? This is a small sum for so many strong churches of Christ. Who will lead out in this work first? I ask the prayers of all that I may be faithful.

Be Pretty! Turn Gray Hair Dark.

Try grandma's old recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked, or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp, and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about fifty cents.

Don't stay gray. Try it. No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick, and glossy.

Burns-Dobbs Discussion.

BY H. H. M'NEES.

On December 14 a Mr. Burns (Primitive Baptist), of Florence, Ala., and O. C. Dobbs (Christian), of Berry, Ala., engaged in a four-days' debate at Friendship, near Steens, Miss. The discussion was carried on in a nice manner. Every one seemed to love others better than self. We think Brother Dobbs defended the truth well. He is able to meet any ordinary sectarian in debate. The truth is safe in his hands.

Our business is not to see what lies dimly at a distance, but to do what lies clearly at hand.—Carlyle.

IF YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Lime Medication In Tuberculosis

In the New York Medical Record of December 5, 1914, Dr. John North, of Toledo, says: "I have come to the conclusion that one of the most prominent causes (of tuberculosis) is 'lime starvation.' * In all cases of incipient tuberculosis there is a deficiency of calcium. Many do not eat food containing enough lime. * In such cases we must resort to lime medication."

Eckman's Alternative should be given a fair trial in such cases, because one of its chief ingredients is calcium (lime), in such combination with other remedial agents as to be easily assimilated by the average person.

Where its use is combined with proper diet, fresh air and hygienic living conditions, we believe it will prove beneficial in any case of tuberculosis.

It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, so is safe to try. Price $1 and $2 per bottle. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct from the Laboratory. We would like to send you a booklet containing information of value and references.

The Master's Vineyard

Arkansas.

Atkins, December 22.—On the second Lord's day in this month and Saturday night before, I was with the Middleton church. Last Lord's day I spent with the church at home. Generally speaking, the work is moving along fairly well in this part. I know of no congregations that have gone into winter quarters. I have been working hard between times getting out the first issue of the "Message of Peace," a monthly, which we hope will be a factor for good in connection with the Christian Literature Depository for the spreading of the truth.

J. H. WHISNANT.

Colorado.

Olathe, December 20.—After a tedious move from Denver, my little family arrived in Olathe at the beginning of the Olathe debate (December 10). We sold all our earthly possessions in Denver to pay for the food we ate and other necessities of life, realizing a hundred dollars therefor; and after we paid almost everything, we left Denver with two dollars we kept back for incidental expenses en route. Through a noble brother in Denver, well known to the brotherhood, we obtained the necessary railroad fare for some ten days, reaching Olathe with twenty-five cents as the entirety of our earthly possessions. Here we camped with a good brother during the debate, until we found a "shack" in which to move. This same brother advanced forty dollars toward buying some cheap, secondhand house furniture from a Mormon woman whose husband had just died, and moved it for us into the "shack" we had rented. He hauled it ten miles. That put us to house-keeping again, for which we shall ever be profoundly thankful. So we are now living in Olathe, Col. Friends will please note the address. This is a great field for gospel work. Only a few poor brethren, discouragingly scattered, are to be found in and around Olathe; but a fertile field lies before us, into which we have entered with renewed zeal and determination to sow the seed unsparingly. A good beginning has already been made in one two-weeks' meeting and a ten-days' debate. Other meetings and debates constantly occurring. We are trying to faithfully do our part in this common work.

E. C. FUQUA.

Olathe, December 23.—The debate between Brother E. C. Fuqua, of the church of Christ, and Elder Higdon, of the Mormon Church, closed on December 19. Elder Higdon affirmed the inspiration of Joe Smith and the divinity of the "Book of Mormon" for five nights; but if Elder Higdon presented one proof of either during the five nights, we failed to hear it. During the last five nights Brother Fuqua affirmed the usual church proposition, in which he set forth the New Testament church with great clearness, also showing the contrast between it and the Mormon Church. Not one argument which he presented was successfully refuted by Elder Higdon. I have heard and read many debates, but this one was the most complete victory for the truth of any I have ever heard. Brother Fuqua is a natural debater with much experience, and is an expert on Mormonism, and can meet the sophistry of any Mormon elder. Brother Fuqua has moved to Olathe, on the Western Slope, a distance of about three hundred miles west of Denver. We are informed that Brother Evans, of Denver, and Brother Bailey, of Boulder, will look after the work on the Eastern Slope, while Brother Fuqua engages in mission work on the Western Slope that has long been neglected. Every inch of the ground will be contested, as most all sectarian bodies—such as Mormons, Adventists, Christian Scientists, Methodists, Baptists, etc.—are well represented here. But Brother Fuqua is well qualified for the work, and we do not fear the consequences, if we can only get a support for Brother Fuqua and family while thus engaged. This is a new country and the people are generally poor. There is only one small congregation in the valley, but there are several places where there are a few scattering members where we hope to build up congregations. To accomplish this work, Brother Fuqua must have some financial assistance other than what he can get from this field. The brethren here will try to supply the family with fruits, vegetables, and such things as we have; but that will not pay house rent, for clothing, railroad fare, and meet obligations already incurred. So, in conclusion, we want to exhort those of more favored circumstances, and especially those of the South that know Brother Fuqua's devotion and zeal for the cause, to remember him in their fellowship.

J. I. FOSTER.

Georgia.

Hazlehurst, December 25.—I made an appeal last summer for a preacher to come and help us here. Brother J. G. Malphurs, of Dasher, came and preached three sermons, with one addition. In August, Brother W. C. Graves, of East Point, came and held us a short meeting, which resulted in one more addition. We now have four members, about sixty miles from the nearest congregation and in the midst of all sorts of sectarianism. We have some interest aroused. Brother John Hayes, of Cedar Hill, Texas, on his way into Florida, has agreed to come by and hold us a meeting. As a great many of the brethren know his work now is mostly in destitute fields, I am asking that all who intend to do some missionary work during the coming year send him a contribution. He will Satara, December 18.—At the close of the Jeur Bible study most of the workers went into the Nizam's Dominions to open up work for Brother McHenry's assistant, Y. K. James. Two were baptized. A whole community sought baptism, but were prevented by the Mohammedan authorities. Brother Bapuji has just sent word of seven baptisms at Devlali. Brother McHenry has gone to the Nizam's Dominions with Brethren Chavhan and James. E. S. JELLEY, JR.

Satara, November 12.—A sermon one hundred thousand people! We thank God that some have heard our appeal, and thus our press is now running at top speed trying to get one hundred thousand tracts ready for the big heathen festival next month. We will do our best. "Whom shall we hear?" Our workers have just come home from a tour in the Nizam Dominions. Two were baptized and others wanted to be, but were forbidden by some petty official. I will leave soon to investigate. The people must hear God and obey him, if they so desire. I trust we will have no trouble. All well. Pray for us.

Smyrna, December 27.—I here give the names of the contributors to our church fund here at Old Jefferson: Brother Martin Cutchin, Rock Spring, $10; Lavergne, $11.26; Fanning Orphans School, $10; Brother T. J. Ridley, Meade's Chapel, $3; J. W. Wheeler, 60 cents; Mrs. Frankie Carter, $1; Mrs. Hall, 50 cents; Smith's Spring, $5; Wartrace congregation, one box of "Christian Hymns"; Miss Maggie Dickerson, Smyrna, $10; Brother S. W. Peebles, $10; Mrs. S. W. Peebles, 50 cents; Brother D. M. Peebles, $2.50; Brother Edwin Hoover, $2.50; Mrs. John Cunningham and son, Paul, $5 on lights bought from them; Brother Will Ross, Smyrna, several days' work; Brethren John and Walter Mullin, of the Florence congregation, one day's work each; one check, $5, from some one at Petersburg. We are very thankful to all for their fellowship in this work. While the house is not yet complete, it is so we can meet in it. We met yesterday for the first time. Brother E. L. Cambron was with us and preached two fine sermons, morning and night. He will again be with us on the third Sunday in January and preach for us. Brother Martin Cutchin led the song service. I wish the editors and all the Gospel Advocate readers a bright, prosperous New Year. Mrs. JAMES SWAIN.

Cleveland, December 25.—The last meeting of the year 1915 for me was held near Copper Hill. I preached ten days in private homes, meetinghouses, and schoolhouses. There are several persons in what is known as "Ducktown Basin" who claim to be members of the "one body," but they are scat-

Cured His RUPTURE.

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed, and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation if you write to me—Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 612B Marcellus Avenue, Manassquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured; you may save a life, or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Cure Sick Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath—Candy Cathartic.

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get relief with Cascarets. They immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and head clear for months. They work while you sleep.

The Song Book That Pleases.

Some hymn books are passable; others give entire satisfaction. "New Gospel Song Book," edited by Brethren G. H. P. Showalter and Austin Taylor, is a selection of gospel songs especially prepared for use in the churches of Christ, and it pleases wherever it is used. Read the following from a well-known editor and preacher:

Paducah, Ky., 915 South Fourth Street, December 6, 1915.—Dear Brethren: We recently ordered and are using one hundred and twenty-five copies "New Gospel Song Book;" in fact, all the near-by churches are using it. We have used many different books, but have never had the equal of "New Gospel Song Book." I shall in the future, as in the past, do all I can to assist in its circulation.

Faithfully and fraternally,
C. M. STUBBLEFIELD.

Another well-known brother from Louisville, Ky., who recently ordered a supply, writes that this book is giving splendid satisfaction. We have just filled a nice order for a large church in Canada. A few days ago a church in the State of Washington called for one hundred and fifty copies. Every day the book is being shipped in considerable quantities over the various States. We earnestly ask congregations of the churches of Christ to carefully examine this book before adopting a song book.

Prices, prepaid: Limp, copy, 35 cents; dozen, $4; hundred, $30. Full cloth, copy, 50 cents; dozen, $5.50; hundred, $40. If it is desired that the book contain rudiments, send five cents per copy extra.

tered so badly that it seems to be hard for them to "come together in one place" for worship. A few meet in Brother Johnson's home and have meeting occasionally. If a preacher could take a tent into this country and could stay there several weeks, he, no doubt, could do a great deal of good. Copper Hill is the copper-mining part of our State, and, like all other places where such industries are depended upon for support, a majority of the people think very little of the "hereafter." Some, however, are religiously inclined and would, no doubt, accept the truth. If some of the churches would send a man over into Polk County and support him for six months, they would be acting as the New Testament directs. Many congregations will likely be content to just hold a protracted meeting next summer. That is entirely too little to do, if we ever get the gospel to those who know it not. I shall be in school work in Meigs County for the next few months. Our evangelistic efforts are suspended, not because the work is all done, but because Christians and congregations will not do their duty in supporting this kind of work. Every day could be advantageously spent in the interest of Christianity in this section. We shall try to renew our work next May. I find at the end of twenty months' work that there are enough Christians in this part of Tennessee who are willing to do what might be reasonably expected of them—to give a preacher of the gospel just about half a support. That leaves us to do what our hands may find to do in order to further provide for our necessities. The results of our labors for 1915 are sixty-three baptisms, two new meetinghouses contemplated, and a general sowing of the seed.

FRED M. LITTLE.

Texas.

Denison, December 28.—The work for 1915 at the Armstrong Avenue Church, in Denison, closed with two splendid sermons by Brother Drennon. There were four additions—two by taking membership and two by confession and baptism—making four baptized and three by membership for December. We are looking forward to 1916 very much encouraged and with bright prospects. W. D. CAMERON.

Houston, December 27.—I preached my closing sermon here last night. Two were added. One hundred and one this year. At the close of the services I officiated at the marriage of Brother J. S. Wheeler, of Hempstead, with Miss Jimmie Lee Harris, of Navasota. Brother Wheeler is a minister and former student at the Odessa (Mo.) and Bowling Green (Ky.) colleges. Miss Harris has taught in the Houston schools for three years and is loved by all here. BEN WEST.

Hallsville, December 30.—I came down from Magnolia, Ark., last week for a few days' visit at home. I preached a little sermon last Lord's day to a fine audience at our home church. I have preached a great deal here during the last ten years. The attendance last Lord's day was one of the largest that I have ever preached to here, except during a protracted Eat Less Meat If Back Hurts.

Take a glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys; they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up, and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure any one; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Stop Cheating Your Family.

You doubtless fully realize your duty to your family in making your home life attractive, entertaining, cultured, and refined; and you have promised yourself that some day you will fill that vacant spot in the parlor with a splendid piano or player-piano of the sweetest tone and highest quality, or that you will replace the old rattle-trap with a superb new instrument. But the days, the months, and possibly the years have silently crept by, and still there is no good music in your home. In the meantime, home is not what it might be, for a home without a high-grade piano or player-piano is seriously and hopelessly handicapped.

You have only one life to live here; why let procrastination steal your family's best opportunity for social, mental, and spiritual advancement? The Gospel Advocate Piano Club will solve the financial problem for you now. It was organized to overcome the very difficulties which confront you. By clubbing your order with those of ninety-nine other subscribers, you save forty per cent of the price own order. Convenient terms of payment are provided. You try the instrument in your own home and must be thoroughly satisfied before finally accepting it.

Write for your copy of the club's catalogue and full particulars to-day. Address Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

meeting. I rejoice to see such interest here. My family will remain here while I "do the work of an evangelist" at Magnolia. T. E. TATUM.

Purely Vegetable--Not Narcotic

Has been used for over seventy years by millions of mothers for their children while teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic and is highly successful in relieving infantile diarrhoea. Be sure to ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" and take no other. Twenty-five cents.

Brother Wilkinson's Activities.

BY U. G. WILKINSON.

As the year is closing, I will give a brief report of some of my work for 1915.

I have held eight debates and about as many meetings, and preached and lectured extensively besides; in fact, I have been continually busy in the Lord's work. What success I have met with, visible and invisible, I will leave to be determined by Him who knoweth all things. For often what the world counts success is failure, and what the world calls "failure" is the utmost success. "For the Lord seeth not as man seeth." So when the Lord was crucified, the world called it "failure;" but God, who sees the end from the beginning, knew it was the greatest victory--the victory over death and all the powers of evil, so that he could say: "I am the first and the last: I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." (Rev. 1: 17, 18.)

I have written and published the book, "Why I Am Not a Socialist," the first edition of which is exhausted; and I am now bringing out the second edition, with some valuable additions. It will be the same price. One copy, twenty-five cents; five copies, one dollar; twelve copies, two dollars. Brother, send an order at once. You need the book and I need the money. It is the best exposé of socialism for the price in print. It is intensely interesting, convincing, and unanswerable. Although the first edition has been sold, no socialist has ever yet at tempted to answer it. Address U. G. Wilkinson, Comanche, Okla.

I have written several articles for the papers, though for the past few months I have left the space that might have been occupied by me for others to fill, perhaps better.

I have assisted in editing the Agnostic, an anti-Infidel, antisocialist, paper, fifty cents a year, which has the highest commendations of both preachers and statesmen for its work, among them Hon. Joseph W. Bailey.

My compensation has been very light, but, like a good financier, I have managed to live practically within my means. However, I need a little more to meet some small obligations and pay for the printing of the second edition of my book; but we will manage some way.

In some of my meetings I scarcely received expenses; only two of them paid me anything like a fair compensation. About the same is true of the debates. But I have done what I could, and I leave the rest with God. I enter the year 1916 with hope and courage, determined, if I live through it, to do all I can for the Lord, as in the past; and if I die, to die on the field of battle with my face to His foes, rejoicing in hope of the eternal reward--"a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." (2 Tim. 4: 8.)

I am ready for meetings, lectures, and debates anywhere I am called or such work is needed. So far as I know, my work has given satisfaction to all concerned and resulted in many turning to the Lord. The fight is on. Let us not rest on our arms, but keep in the war zone and fight the good fight. May the Lord bless all the faithful.

Invigorating to the Pale and Sickly.

The old, standard, general strengthening tonic, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic, drives out malaria, enriches the blood, and builds up the system. A true tonic. For adults and children. Fifty cents.

Notes from India.

BY W. HUME M'HENRY.

If you could have looked down into the bed of a rushing mountain torrent in Northern India on Tuesday morning, September 21, you would have beheld a beautiful baptizing scene. The stream was not a bit gentle, and the bed was filled with huge boulders which added to its swiftness. The banks on each side were high and steep. The morning was threatening, with just an occasional flash from the sun. Brother Umrao Singh's good wife and daughter were to be buried in baptism. We found only the rushing stream, and found it very shallow. We must construct a baptistery. Brother Jelley began to remove the stones from the bottom of the stream and to scrape away the sand. Brother Umrao Singh and I began to roll large stones into the stream to check the current and assist in making it deeper. At last the task was completed, and, having had a short service, they were buried with their Lord in baptism. There may have been a few spectators from the heights above, but one thing we feel sure of—that the holy angels in heaven, rejoicing, looked down upon this scene and rejoiced with us. Scarcely had we finished the baptizing when the water was lowered to such a depth that it would have been impossible to baptize in. This was caused probably by the shutting of a flood-gate at some point up the stream.

For a long while Brother Jelley has wanted to open up a work in this part of India, but until now the opportunity had not come. This worker is none other than Brother Umrao Singh, who about two years ago became disgusted with the follies of the Methodist Church and was brought to a knowledge of the truth by Brother Jelley and was baptized, together with two of his daughters. At that time he was holding a government position at a good salary. Before that time he had worked for several years in the Methodist mission. The dozens of certificates which he holds from his former employers show that in every position he has given the best of satisfaction. Some time before we went there he had voluntarily resigned his good-paying government position because, as a Christian, he could not conscientiously tell the lies which he had to do in order to convict the offenders of the law. He was urged to take another work of a similar character in another place at a higher salary, but declined. At the time we went to him, he had not accepted another work. He expressed his desire to enter the Lord's work as a volunteer worker, choosing rather to suffer persecution as a servant of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin as a servant of the government. But to give him-

Calomel Makes You Sick, Ugh.

"Dodson's Liver Tone" better than calomel and cannot salivate.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury—quick-silver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated, and all knocked out, and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel, just remember that your druggist sells for fifty cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and cannot salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children, because it is perfectly harmless and does not gripe.

self to the work as he should, he must have something to support himself and a family of seven. He will probably be able to partly support himself, for he is somewhat of a veterinarian and eye specialist. Yes, we believe that God called us there. Don't you? We are hoping and praying that this may be the beginning of a great work in this part of the country.

on your hair. It is too strongly alkaline and will do a great deal of damage. The hair should be of a soft and silken texture. Each individual hair is of delicate construction and requires scientific, careful treatment. If your hair is harsh, dry, coarse, and scanty, then you are not giving it proper treatment. The hair needs food just as the rest of your body; and in order to keep your scalp nourished and your hair plentiful and beautiful, you should supply it with the proper food and treatment. The Creoles, of Louisiana, possessed a formula for keeping the hair beautiful, and for many years kept the secret to themselves; but now you may enjoy their discovery by using "La Creole" Hair Color Restorer, the same recipe which the Creoles used. It darkens hair in the natural way and keeps the scalp in healthy condition. For sale by all reliable dealers. Price, $1. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

FIRM FOUNDATION An eight-page weekly religious paper devoted to the restoration of primitive Christianity. Excels in church news; an able corps of writers; extensively circulated. Subscription price, $1 a year, payable in advance. Special rates for clubs. We believe that every loyal Christian should have the Firm Foundation visit his home.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF,
HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

The Old Mexico Mission.

BY W. A. SCHULTZ.

It will be recalled by the readers of the Gospel Advocate that I was forced to leave Mexico a little over two years ago on account of the revolution there. Since then I have been busy very nearly every day in preaching. I feel devoutly thankful for the good that I have accomplished, having baptized two hundred sixteen persons upon a profession of their faith in Christ in these two years. I am sorry that I have been able to respond to less than half of the calls I have had for meetings. Now that peace seems to be assured in Mexico, I have resolved to return and take up my work there. A great many Americans remained there all the while, others have returned, and others will soon go back. There will soon be many thousands of Americans in that country. I have never preached to a more appreciative people than they. They are there cut loose from their old environments and have largely left their old prejudices behind and are willing to give a candid hearing to the simple gospel. By going to work there at once, we will be the first in the field. Every pioneer preacher in a new country knows that that means much. We are usually the last to enter a place, and, hence, have the combined organized hosts of sectarianism to fight. Let us be the first there. Before the war broke out, we were doing fairly well in Mexico. Several small congregations had been built up and others would soon have been established had peace continued. We now have in Mexico, it seems to me, one of the greatest opportunities to do good.

Now, brethren, I am in need of help to get to Mexico, and I shall be in need of help for some time after I get there. The people who return to their devastated homes will be unable for some time to assist much in a financial way in having the gospel preached to their neighbors. I am also in need of a competent, adaptable, godly man to assist me in that work. There are many friends of the Lord Jesus who have been acquainted with me and my manner of life that I am persuaded will take pleasure in having fellowship with me in this great work. I am no stranger to the brethren of Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas.

Brethren, I want to start to Mexico by February 10. Until that time you may remit to me at Sterling City, Texas. I shall also need hundreds of tracts to distribute in my work. The Gospel Advocate publishes some most excellent tracts, suitable for my purpose. Those that may not know me personally may send a remittance to the Gospel Advocate Publishing Company, Nashville, Tenn., to go into a fund to supply me with books and tracts. All remittances will be duly acknowledged. I shall keep the readers of the Gospel Advocate informed from time to time of the progress of the work.

Club Solves Piano Problem.

The greatest danger in buying a piano or player-piano is the difficulty in selecting one of real and lasting quality. There are so many cheap imitations on the market that the chances of full and permanent satisfaction are slight unless you are an expert judge and are extremely careful in your selection.

If you feel that you are not a good judge of the quality, durability, and value of an instrument, or if you have not time to make an exhaustive investigation of these matters, why not throw the responsibility on the Gospel Advocate Piano Club? It has already made the investigation for you and will assume the full responsibility of giving you absolute and perfect satisfaction and the largest possible value for your money. What your insurance policy is to your home, the club is to your piano or player-piano.

But the club does not stop there. It clubs your order with those of ninety-nine other subscribers, thus securing the lowest possible factory price for each club member. It provides convenient terms of payment, the strongest guarantees of quality and durability, and gives you the opportunity to try your instrument thoroughly before you buy. The club absolutely guarantees perfect satisfaction in every detail of piano buying. Write for your copy of the catalogue to-day. THE POCKET TESTAMENT LEAGUE is a world-wide organization of those who agree to honestly endeavor to read a portion of a chapter of the Bible daily, and to carry a Testament or Bible about with them. There are no fees of any kind and the aim of the League is to strengthen Christians and to win the unsaved to Christ by spreading God's Word. Members are therefore encouraged to give Testaments away to those who are willing to join the League and fulfill the conditions of reading a portion of a chapter each day.

Any person becomes a member of this League by securing a Testament and agreeing to the conditions set forth in the Membership certificate which accompanies each Testament.

RENWAR KILLS RHEUMATISM

The Model Church.

BY CHARLIE TAYLOR.

Some time ago I held a splendid meeting at Creal Springs, Ill., which resulted in eleven coming from the "digressives" and one baptism, and twenty-eight banded themselves together to worship God as the Book directs. They met on the first Lord's day after the meeting at Brother White's house; and after they had had the Bible lesson and the Lord's Supper and were almost ready to invoke God's benedictions to rest upon them as they departed from that place, Brother Springer, an aged soldier of the cross, arose and said: "You have not sung my song yet." At this moment the audience became as still as death, and Brother Springer began to sing the old, familiar hymn, "The Model Church." The entire audience was melted to tears as the old man, with trembling voice, sang this old hymn. This was the first time for many a day that he had been permitted to worship God as the Book directs. The introduction of instrumental music and all kinds of societies has driven many aged men and women from the house of God, heartbroken, as this man, Brother Springer, as a man true to the Book, could not worship with the people at Creal Springs because they had forsaken the right way in going beyond the teachings of Christ. "Who-soever goeth onward and abideth not in the teaching of Christ, hath not God: he that abideth in the teaching, the same hath both the Father and the Son." (2 John 9.) "But," says one, "is the introduction of instrumental music into the worship and the organization of societies to do missionary work and raise money for the church going beyond the teachings of Christ?" I am sure that it is. Go with me to the mountain in Galilee, where Jesus had appointed to meet his disciples, and here, in the presence of his chosen, he gives the world-wide commission: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) In this is found the law of induction and the law governing us as citizens of the kingdom. Again, in John 16: 13, he says: "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come." In John 17: 8 we have this language: "For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have

Cut This Out— It Is Worth Money

Cut out this advertisement, inclose five cents to Foley & Co., 2835 Sheffield Avenue, Chicago, Ill., writing your name and address clearly. You will receive in return a trial package containing:

1. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, the standard family remedy for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, tightness and soreness in chest, grippe, and bronchial coughs.

2. Foley Kidney Pills, for overworked and disordered kidneys and bladder ailments, pain in sides and back due to kidney trouble, sore muscles, stiff joints, backache, and rheumatism.

3. Foley Cathartic Tablets, a wholesome and thoroughly cleansing cathartic, especially comforting to stout persons and a purgative needed by everybody with sluggish bowels and torpid liver.

You can try these three family remedies for only five cents.

Better Than Spanking.

Spanking does not cure children of bed wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 195, South Bend, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child; the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me." In Luke's account of the commission the Savior says to his disciples: "Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." (Luke 24: 49.) The disciples go to the city as directed by the Savior, and on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of the Christ the Holy Spirit came according to the promise of the Father, and they spoke "as the Spirit gave them utterance." (Acts 2: 4.) It follows, therefore, that the words spoken were the words of the Spirit, and it was the teaching of Christ, because the Spirit was to teach them "all things . . . whatsoever I have said unto you." (John 14: 26.) Now, where, after the Spirit came as the Comforter and the establishment of the church, did it ever guide the apostles into the use of instrumental music in the worship and the organization of missionary societies to do missionary work, or a "ladies' aid," or the giving of suppers and all kind of entertainments to raise money for the church? Echo answers, "Where?" Since the Spirit never gave such instruction to the church, it follows that it is not the teaching of Christ. Therefore the congregation that is resorting to these untaught means does not have the teaching of Christ, and does not have the promise of God being with them. (2 John 9.) Where, then, is the model church? I answer, the one that is going by the divine pattern, as did the New Testament church, taking the Spirit's teaching as a rule of faith and practice in all things, thus honoring the name of Him that died that we might live. God hasten the day when men and women shall be willing to heed the exhortation: "Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." (Jer. 6: 16.)

Now, in conclusion, let us heed the admonition of Paul to the church at Rome: "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple." (Rom. 16: 17, 18.)

A Call for Help.

Dear Brethren in Christ: I appeal to you in behalf of a small band of loyal disciples of Christ (about twenty) at Searcy, Ark. This is the county seat of White County. I am the first one of our brethren that ever preached here, so far as I know, and I have planted the truth here. We have an option on a nice little house about twenty-four by thirty-six feet, well built, on a lot one hundred by two hundred and thirty feet, nicely located. The brethren have been renting and worshiping in it for one year. Now the old gentleman that owns it has offered it to us for three hundred dollars cash, and has given the brethren sixty days in which to raise the money. Brother F. C. Taylor made a call through the papers over a year ago, but received only twenty-five cents to apply on the house. Now, brethren, it seems to me that this is a good opportunity to help plant the cause of Christ here; so do not treat this call lightly. A small amount from each of you will secure the house. I know it will be appreciated by the church here. "What thou doest, do quickly." Send all contributions to Brother F. C. Taylor, Searcy, Ark., who will receipt each of you through the papers. The restrictive clause will be in the deed.

F. C. Taylor and C. F. Cupples are our elders; J. E. Taylor and W. T. Taylor are our deacons.

SUDDEN DEATH

Caused by disease of the kidneys.

The close connection which exists between the heart and the kidneys is well known nowadays. As soon as kidneys are diseased, arterial tension is increased and the heart functions are attacked. When the kidneys no longer pour forth waste, uræmic poisoning occurs and the person dies, and the cause is often given as heart disease or disease of the brain or lungs.

It is a good insurance against such a risk to send ten cents for a large trial package of "Anuric"—the latest discovery of Dr. Pierce; also send a sample of your water. This will be examined without charge by expert chemists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. When you suffer from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant, tired, worn-out feeling, it is time to write Dr. Pierce, describe your symptoms, and get his medical opinion without charge and absolutely free. This "Anuric" of Dr. Pierce's is thirty-seven times more active than lithia, for it dissolves uric acid in the system as hot water does sugar.

Simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Dr. Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the ever-famous friend to ailing women.

Worry, Despondency.

Kidney disease is suspected by medical men when patients complain of backache or suffer with irregular urination; disturbed, too frequent, scanty, or painful passage. The general symptoms are rheumatic pains or neuralgia, headaches, dizzy spells, irritability, despondency, weakness, and general misery. Worry is a frequent cause and sometimes a symptom of kidney disease. Thousands have testified to immediate relief from these symptoms after using Dr. Pierce's Anuric Kidney Tablets.

RHEUMATISM CONQUERED

I say that I can conquer rheumatism with a simple home treatment, without electrical treatment, stringent diet, weakening baths, or in fact any other of the usual treatments recommended for the cure of rheumatism.

Don't shut your eyes and say "impossible," but put me to the test.

You may have tried everything you ever heard of and have spent your money right and left. I say "well and good," let me prove my claims without expense to you.

Let me send you without charge a trial treatment of DELANO'S RHEUMATIC CONQUEROR. I am willing to take the chance and surely the test will tell.

So send me your name and the test treatment will be sent you at once. When I send you this, I will write you more fully, and will show you that my treatment is not only for banishing rheumatism, but should also cleanse the system of Uric Acid and give great benefit in kidney trouble and help the general health.

This special offer will not be held open indefinitely. It will be necessary for you to make your application quickly. As soon as this discovery becomes better known I shall cease sending free treatments and shall then charge a price for this discovery which will be in proportion to its great value. So take advantage of this offer before it is too late. Remember, the test costs you absolutely nothing. F. H. Delano, 541 F. Delano Bldg Syracuse, N. Y.

The Book of Ruth.

BY L. D. PERKINS.

This book is generally known as the "novel of the Bible." It is a simple story of a man named "Elimelech," who lived at Bethlehem-judah, the birthplace of Christ. On account of a famine which had visited that part of the world, he, with his wife, Naomi, and two sons, Mahlon and Chilion, went to the country of Moab, where there was plenty. The death angel makes his visit and takes Elimelech, and leaves Naomi a widow, and heart-broken. Nevertheless, she has left two noble sons to comfort and cheer her life, and they take each of them a wife of the country of Moab, and this gives her two daughters to take the place of the husband gone. All went well, so far as the divine record gives it, until ten years had passed, and the angel of death comes again, and takes with him Mahlon and Chilion, and leaves Naomi, not only heartbroken, but her husband gone, her two sons, and in a strange land and with an idolatrous people. Hearing that there was plenty in the land of Judah, she decides to return. But it seems that she felt in some way that it would not be right to take the two daughters-in-law with her; for even though they both wanted to go, she advised them to return to their mothers, and her persuasion was such that Orpah decided to return. But Ruth insisted that she should go with her, and did so; and she became the wife of Boaz, to whom was born Obed; and to Obed, Jesse; and to Jesse, David; and Christ being the Son of David by lineage, it appears that Christ was part Gentile, as Ruth was a Gentile. Josephus says, in making mention of Ruth: "I was therefore obliged to relate this history of Ruth, because I had a mind to demonstrate the power of God, who, without difficulty, can raise those that are of ordinary parentage to dignity and splendor, to which he advanced David though he were born of such mean parents."

There are three practical thoughts in this book to which I wish to direct your attention.

The first thought is in reference to the faithful life of Naomi and its effect. This life in faith and confidence and trust in the God of Israel was such that it had the power to draw a life to God. This is in keeping with what Jesus said to his disciples: "Ye are the light of the world. A city set on a hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a lamp, and put it under a bushel, but on the stand; and it shineth unto all that are in the house. Even so let your light shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven." (Matt. 5: 14-16.) The

Rev. A. B. Mowers Advocates Nerve Remedy.

Nervous indigestion is one of the commonest of the many forms of nervous trouble. It is very hard to treat usually, but those who have used Dr. Miles' Nervine all report that it was not long before their trouble vanished entirely.

Every ailment must have a cause, and the cause is what should be removed. When the cause lies in the nervous system, Dr. Miles' Nervine cannot be too strongly advocated. It is backed by thirty years of successful use.

The Rev. A. B. Mowers, of York, Pa., is an ardent advocate of this remedy, since it completely relieved him. He made the following statement for publication: "Nearly ten years ago I was troubled with nervous indigestion in its worst form. I had sick headaches nearly every day, with a dizzy, dull feeling. I was extremely nervous, confused, and suffered much with constipation. I was informed of Dr. Miles' Nervine and Liver Pills, and determined to give them a trial. I used them as directed and received much relief. I continued the Nervine until I had used several bottles. I now enjoy good health, relish my meals, and can eat any kind of food without fear. I take pleasure in recommending Dr. Miles' Remedies to the public."

Dr. Miles' Nervine or Liver Pills can be purchased at any drug store, and the purchase price will be cheerfully refunded by the druggist if, after using the remedies, you are not satisfied with the results obtained.

life Naomi had lived in faithfulness to God caused Ruth to cleave unto her. And this is what Christ would have us do. For magnanimity of sentiment and propriety of wording, we may search the pages of history, both inspired and uninspired and we will not find anything to excel the extemporaneous response of Ruth to Naomi: "Treat me not to leave thee, and to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: Jehovah do so to me, and more also, if aught but death part thee and me." (Ruth 1: 16, 17.) This is worth committing to memory; and may our determination to cling to our Christ and our God be of the same sentiment. If we live as Christ directs, we will have a drawing power and others will be constrained to glorify God.

The second thought is the decision of Ruth to accept that which was right and to reject the error that existed. Perhaps it was not so easy as we might think for her. She must leave father, mother, brothers, sisters, neighbors, friends, home, and country to take the step she was about to take. Just here we are reminded of what Jesus said: "Think not that I came to send peace on the earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I came to set a man at variance against his father, and a daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; and a man's foes shall be they of his own household. He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me." (Matt. 10: 34, 35.) Again: "If any man cometh unto me, and hateth not his own father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple." (Luke 14: 26.) This looks like strong language; but when we consider the case of Ruth in the light of this scripture, it is what she had to do, and what she did do. This is applicable to the children of God and to those who have not become his children by adoption. The Christian is continually meeting sin and iniquity, and he must reject it; and the man of the world should reject the sin of the world and accept Christ as his Savior. Ruth left her people and a wicked nation and went with the people of God, which is the one manly thing to do.

The third thought is found in the following statement of Boaz to Ruth: "Jehovah recompense thy work, and a full reward be given thee of Jehovah, the God of Israel, under whose wings thou art come to take refuge." (Ruth

2: 12.) This is a rich promise to those who take refuge under the wings of Jehovah and who have confidence in the word of God. David said: "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." Again: "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." (Ps. 84: 11.) Jesus said: "Why are ye anxious concerning raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. But if God doth so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you?" (Matt. 6: 28-30.) If these scriptures were not placed in the word of God to insure the faithful child of God that God will be with him and bless him, I cannot understand why they were put there. It is worth while to take refuge under the wings of Jehovah.

In conclusion, let us live right, and we will draw others to Christ and to God. To do this, it will be necessary to separate ourselves from sin; and if we do this, God will give us a blessing, not only in this world, but in the world to come. May every one who reads this so live that he or she may have a home in heaven.

Recipe for Gray Hair.

To one-half pint of water add one ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up, or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

"EDIFYING AS THE NEED MAY BE"

BY A. B. LIPSCOMB

An Open Letter to Brother R. H. Boll.

Under the above caption, Brother John E. Dunn has sent to us for publication the following letter:

Nashville, Tenn., 1406 Linden Avenue, December 28, 1915.
 —Dear Brethren Boll and Colleagues: Inasmuch as there is a great deal of confusion and agitation among us over your teaching on premillennialism, the second coming of Christ, Christ coming back to the earth in a body of flesh and bones without blood, the reestablishment of the literal kingdom of Israel in the land of Palestine with Jerusalem as the capital, Christ reigning from the literal throne of David, the church a phase of the kingdom, etc., I suggest that you brethren give us your teaching on these subjects fully, in your own language, and your proof. Of course you are to present the teaching according to your own choice, but give it to us fully, freely, and frankly. The following charges are being made promiscuously: That you brethren have not been treated fairly; that you brethren are using ingenious methods in propagating your new teaching; that you are not willing to come out in the open with your doctrine; etc. In the past we have been accustomed to discuss all subjects and questions, orally and through the religious press, that have arisen among us. Brethren, give us your teaching which is now agitating the brotherhood, and others can review it as we have been accustomed to do on all other subjects. If it is new truth which the word of God teaches and which you have discovered, we all want it; if it is error, let it be exposed.

The best way to set at rest this whole matter is to sift your teaching from Alpha to Omega. Truth has nothing to fear. Error should be exposed for the good of all. Scores of brethren—yea, most likely hundreds and thousands—want to see your new teaching sifted thoroughly. When it is thoroughly discussed, everybody should be satisfied. Truth will shine as the sun; let error be consigned to oblivion.

Yours for the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, in fairness and frankness toward all.

JOHN E. DUNN.

FRIENDLY OVERTURES TO AVOID DISSENSION.

It gives us pleasure to print Brother Dunn's letter, and we note with satisfaction and approval the kind spirit it breathes. The course of the Gospel Advocate from the beginning of this agitation has been both courteous and firm. Despite the fact that the rumor of "mistreatment" has been industriously circulated, the fact remains that our whole correspondence with Brother Boll in the matter has been couched in terms of gentle entreaty. When it first became plain to us that the peculiar doctrines exploited by Brother Boll and his colleagues were causing dissension and threatening division in some quarters, our first effort was to induce him, through the medium of friendly correspondence, to cease propagating them. We hoped to settle the matter without printing one word of protest. As proof of this, we herewith reproduce some pertinent extracts from a letter I wrote to Brother Boll, under date of April 6, 1915:

I believe, dear brother, that you have reached a crucial point in your career as a teacher and preacher of wide influence. A great deal depends upon your action now. Your message to the troubled brethren concerning these doctrines bodes much for good or evil, and I am anxious for you to show yourself the strong, true character that I have always believed you to be. It appears practically certain to me that if you continue to feature these doctrines in your writings and teachings as in the past, it will likely lead to a point of cleavage from those who are your warmest friends. If, on the other hand, you would have the wisdom and grace and humility to make a public statement, that, while the doctrines you have advanced are both important and attractive to you, and, furthermore, are convictions, yet, because you find they are not readily accepted by many of the brethren, and are likely to create confusion and misunderstanding, and, because they are not essential to salvation, on this account you will not press them further, it would greatly relieve the tension felt in some quarters and show to all that you love the salvation of souls above everything else in the world. At the same time, you would not be giving up a single conviction or taking back anything you had said. I have no doubt but what such an action would please God and meet with the hearty approval of all right-thinking people.

There are a great many other lessons outside of these doctrines that you have presented from time to time with freshness, originality, and force, and you can do it again. There are many other lessons that you have not yet presented that need to be taught. Please do not dismiss this suggestion as unworthy because at first glance it looks like the easy thing to do. Before you reach a decision you will likely find that it is the hardest way. To accept it means for you to be willing to lose a certain amount of prestige, adulation, and following; but what are these things compared with the "unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace?" Please understand, too, dear brother, that this suggestion does not come from one of the older brethren, but from one near your own age, whose mind, as said before, is open and receptive to any doctrine that can be clearly taught from the Bible, provided it is practical.

I have written this without consultation with any of the other brethren and send it to you because I love you, and am breathing a prayer that it may do good. Without consultation, I know that Uncle David and Brother Sewell, whom we both revere, would coincide with this advice in the matter. I should be pleased to hear from you at your earliest convenience.

A PETULANT REPLY AND ANOTHER OVERTURE.

This letter written in brotherly love did not have the desired effect. It was like "sweetness wasted on the desert air." Instead of turning Brother Boll from the error of his course, it evoked a rather petulant reply, from which, to show his spirit at the time, we clip the following paragraph: "Now, in view of the situation, I think it best that you give the position I hold on the Gospel Advocate staff to another. You may publish that missionary matter I sent in yesterday; and all the rest of the copy you have on hand, throw away." Plainly, our brother was peeved at the thought of having to cease his teachings along speculative lines.

Having failed in our effort to settle the matter quietly, our next move was to induce Brother Boll to present his views on prophecy in the columns of the Gospel Advocate in order that they might be discussed freely and thoroughly and sifted "from Alpha to Omega." We believe, with Brother Dunn, that "truth has nothing to fear" and that "error should be exposed for the good of all." With this end in view, we indited him another letter, from which we quote as follows:

Yours of April 8 to hand. I reply immediately because there is one suggestion in your letter that must not be considered, let alone talked about and written about—that is, that you give up your position on the Gospel Advocate staff. You must get that out of your head, and never by any means let it come into your heart.

Whatever you may believe of the other brethren involved in this controversy, you must admit that the management of the Advocate has never attempted to "draw a line" upon your writings, and has never said to you: "Thus far, shall you believe and teach the word of God, and no farther." On the other hand, we have gladly printed every article and have given it due prominence. However we may differ on the doctrines mentioned, we want you to stay with us and help us continually in the work of the Lord. Brother McQuiddy, who originally secured your services for the Advocate, shares this same sentiment, and, if anything, is even more emphatic in his insistence upon it.

I do not concur in the opinion that the acceptance of the suggestion I made would be tantamount to surrendering any principle or any part of God's word; but since you think it would and are determined to teach the doctrines mentioned, let me say that the columns of the Gospel Advocate are just as free and open to you as before for the presentation of those things that you consider vitally important, with the condition that has all along been understood, that every editor's article is subject to challenge and discussion in a fair and courteous way.

There is no doubt but what the doctrines you are now presenting will be thus challenged, and, of course, you are the proper man to defend them. It is not the part of a good soldier to retire even in the most orderly manner while under fire, unless he feels that his cause is weak and his defeat is inevitable.

Your doctrines are now under fire, my brother, and you must stand up to them or tacitly admit they are not worth fighting for. How could anything be fairer than this?

You would doubtless welcome the opportunity to cross swords with a Methodist or Baptist upon this question you consider vitally important in a denominational paper. Why not feel just as kindly toward your brethren in the Lord? The whole thing narrows itself down to the question as to whether the doctrines you have presented are upheld by the Book.

There is one thing that you do not apparently understand, and that is, the brethren who have criticized you are at heart your friends. They really believe that you are treading on dangerous ground, and, far from trying to lose your work and influence, they are doing their best, as they think, to save them both. However illogical they may appear to you, the primary fact of their friendship should not be overlooked.

A DISCUSSION-BEGUN, BUT NOT FINISHED.

We challenge the publisher of the Christian Leader and all others who have been crying "mistreatment of Brother Boll" to write a more brotherly and courteous letter than the above or to show that the letter was not needed. Having thus been tendered the use of our columns without restriction to present the teachings that had been called in question, he began a written discussion with Brother F. W. Smith. In his first article Brother Boll said that after the question of a Christian's right to study and teach the unfulfilled prophecies and the book of Revelation had been determined, he would then discuss with Brother Smith the "church age" and "special positions and conclusions which had been called in question." Brother Smith fully satisfied Brother Boll that a Christian had a right to study every word in God's book from beginning to end, and had the liberty to teach and preach so much of it as had been revealed. Thus disputants were in hearty agreement on that point. Hence this left Brother Boll with two alternatives, either to discuss with Brother Smith according to promise the positions called in question or abandon the discussion. He chose the latter alternative, as our readers well know. When Brother Boll gave up this fine opportunity to expose what he claimed was Brother Smith's misrepresentation of his teaching and began to call for a new discussion, the publishers of the Gospel Advocate suggested F. B. Srygley as his opponent for an oral discussion to take place, preferably, at Portland Avenue, Louisville, Ky., which is Brother Boll's home congregation. Brother Srygley was more than willing to meet him. He has recently notified Brother Boll that he was waiting for an answer.

We have printed this correspondence in detail to make it plain to everybody that, so far from denying Brother Boll a hearing, we have urged him in a most brotherly manner to make his peculiar and divisive teachings known to the public, and that he has evaded the issue. This correspondence is on file and is open to any one who is interested. We have nothing to hide or conceal. We have been both fair and courteous to Brother Boll, and have kept our consciences void of offense toward God and man. If, as indicated by Brother Dunn's open letter, the light has not been let in from Brother Boll's side of the question, his sympathizers must blame him, not the Gospel Advocate.

NO TIME OR PLACE TO STRADDLE.

One other very important point before we close our remarks on this unhappy situation. Instead of criticizing the publishers and Brother Smith for the firm stand they have taken, let it be understood that every Christian in the land is just as much obligated to challenge and expose these speculative doctrines as we are. It is no time to sit still when, as pointed out on another page in this issue, Brother Boll was heard to say in a private conversation that "the kingdom of Christ has not been established, and that when it was established in the near future there would be new conditions of entrance into it, and that on account of changed conditions it was reasonable to expect new revelations from God." It is not enough to merely state that you do not believe the views that are being propagated by Brother Boll and his colleagues, but you should loyally and earnestly contend for the truth as it is in Christ.

All preachers who join with Brother Boll in believing such propositions and who propose to propagate their views should speak out and let their position be known to the public. While the news would be disappointing, we could but admire their fair and manly course. It would certainly be better than to pursue the "gum-shoe" methods of teaching one's doctrines covertly and, as one brother expressed it, "waiting until the churches are ripe for the message." The church he serves should know right now where the preacher it supports stands on "the kingdom" question as delineated by Blackstone and Boll. And so far as I can see, there is no place to straddle. It is not, as some contend, a personal difference between Brother Boll and the Gospel Advocate; it is purely and simply a question of loyalty to the truth of God's word.

Who Makes it a Test of Fellowship?

BY F. W. SMITH.

It will be remembered that Brother J. L. Hutson, in his criticism of Brother E. G. Sewell, used the following language relative to making the use of instrumental music a "test of fellowship:"

When it is made a test of Christian fellowship; when it is made a standard or measure by which we determine the volume of the Christian character, and undertake to so apply it in our dealings with our fellow-man; when it is made a substitute for the cross of the crucified Christ, then it becomes very important, and therefore demands notice.

Yes, "when it is made a test of fellowship." But my beloved brother would throw the odium of making it a test of fellowship on those who oppose such music in the worship of God. The question is: Is that fair? Is it the truth? We will assign our brother a little work to do—viz., refute the following logical and eminently scriptural argument by Brother J. B. Briney (Apostolic Times, September 8, 1870, page 1) against the position of J. L. Hutson:

WHO MAKES THE TEST?

A great deal is being said lately about making tests of fellowship. Some of the things said have suggested to my mind the question that heads this article. All of our brethren who favor the use of the organ, and some of those opposed to it, say that this must not be made a test of fellowship. Did these brethren ever seriously ask themselves this question: Who is it that makes the organ a test of fellowship? Let us suppose a case. A company of men and women, tired of sectarianism, agree to throw away all human creeds and confessions of faith, and adopt the simple worship of the New Testament. Their motto is: "Where the New Testament Scriptures speak, we speak; where these Scriptures are silent, we are silent." Time moves on and they are happy. But in process of time ideas of expediency and progress come in, and some of the brethren think it expedient to have an organ in the worship; others, not viewing the question as simply one of expediency, oppose the introduction of the new element as a matter, with them, of conscience. By count, however, it is discovered that the majority are in favor of the organ. The minority protest. They say: "Brethren, this is not in harmony with our original motto. The New Testament Scriptures know nothing of the organ—they are silent here. Our consciences will not allow us to worship with the new element." The others say: "We have the majority. This is a question of expediency, and in all such questions the majority rule." The minority reply: "You can give neither precept nor example for the use of the instrument. We desire to live in fellowship with the congregation in which we have seen so many happy days, but we cannot do it if you bring in the new item of worship. We regard it as unauthorized and corrupting; as calculated to carnalize the worship." "But," say the majority, "we have determined to use the instrument, and you can either accept that or withdraw from the congregation." Here, now, is a new test of fellowship. Who has made it? Certainly the majority, as it seems to me. They say to the brethren: "You cannot have the fellowship of the congregation unless you accept the organ. We think more of our unauthorized instrument than we do of either your consciences or your fellowship."

A man goes to a congregation in whose worship an organ is used to apply for membership. "I desire," says he, "the fellowship of your congregation, but you have one element in your worship that I find no authority for in the New Testament. I am tired of sectarianism; and if you did not use the organ, I would identify myself with you." They reply, in substance, as follows: "We would like to have you with us, but then we are not disposed to give up our instrument, and if you cannot subscribe to that, you cannot have the fellowship of our congregation." Here, now, is a test of fellowship unknown to the New Testament. Who makes it? When the Baptists were chopping the heads of their brethren off because they would not subscribe to the Philadelphia Confession, who was it that made the test? He that answers this question will answer the other.

A congregation think it expedient to draw up a creed consisting of a few articles of faith. A minority protest against it. The majority, however, persist till the minority begin to talk about withdrawing from the congregation, when they are gravely told that this creed question is a mere matter of expediency and must not be made a test of fellowship. But who makes the test? Every one will say that they who introduce the creed make the test. A man goes to this congregation and applies for membership. "I can indorse you," says he, "in every respect except the creed." He is told, however, that unless he will subscribe to the creed, he cannot have the fellowship of the congregation. Who makes the test? If it be said that the minority or the applicant for membership makes the test, then there is nothing under the heavens that may not be introduced by the will of the majority under the plea that it must not be made a test of fellowship. My conclusion is, that whenever a new element of worship or church government is introduced and becomes a test of fellowship, it is so made by those who introduce it.

J. B. B.

Now, if Brother Hutson finds his task too difficult for his unaided genius, he might summon Brother Briney himself to his relief. But it is exceedingly doubtful if that intellectual giant—who, when on the right side of a question, has few equals—could scripturally refute his own arguments. In fact, we are absolutely certain that he cannot. In those days (1870) our now venerable Brother Briney was sticking close to the old Book in opposing anything and everything not authorized therein. But times have changed, if the old Book does remain the same, and Brother Briney thinks it wicked to oppose the organ! He must not blame us for our opposition, for he assisted in pounding the truth into us younger preachers, which we cannot get rid of. Such men as Brother Briney converted the writer from the practice of instrumental music in the worship, and I owe him a debt of gratitude which I will endeavor to pay by holding on to the truth he taught me on this subject.

Preachers Should Be Well-Balanced Men.

BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

No class of people wield a greater influence in the way of shaping thought, feeling, and course of conduct in church members than do the preachers. This is but natural, and it is right; and while it is both natural and right, how important it is that preachers should be well-balanced men on everything pertaining to the interest of the church!

"Like priest, like people," is a very true maxim, and because of the truth, force, and beauty in this principle the apostle instructs the Philippian brethren as follows: "Brethren, be ye imitators together of me, and mark them that so walk even as ye have us for an ensample [pattern]. For many walk, of whom I told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ; whose end is perdition, whose god is the belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things." (Phil. 3: 17-19.) Then we have the instruction of the apostle to Timothy on the same principle: "Howbeit for this cause I obtained mercy, that in me as chief might Jesus Christ show forth all his long-suffering, for an ensample [pattern] of them that should thereafter believe on him unto eternal life." (1 Tim. 1: 16.)

Now let us hear him on what Timothy, a young preacher, should be: "Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an ensample [example] to them that believe, in word, in manner of life, in love, in faith, in purity." (1 Tim. 4: 12.) Then as to what Titus should be, the assistant of Paul in his apostolic mission: "In all things showing thyself an ensample [pattern] of good works; in thy doctrine showing uncorruptness, gravity, sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of us." (Tit. 2: 7, 8.) Thus we see if the preacher is to fill a useful place, he is to be capable of wielding an influence over the people, and his usefulness will be commensurate with his influence. If his influence is good, he is useful; and the better his influence, the more useful he becomes. If his influence is bad, he is of no use—yea, he is in the way, a drawback, a hindering cause. If he cannot influence people to the bettering of conditions, he should not be a preacher; he can fill some other place better, perhaps.

If the preacher is well balanced, his influence is to balance properly the people among whom he labors; if he is not well balanced, his influence is to unbalance those where he labors. People who are not properly balanced on things pertaining to the temporal and eternal interests of the people have lost their usefulness; for, instead of giving to the world that which it really needs, they act like the leech, sucking from the world what it really needs.

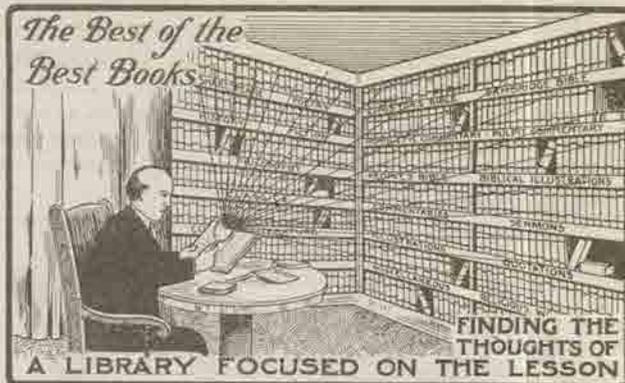

More than one time in life have we found the effects of an ill-balanced preacher. These effects are manifest among the churches and people generally. If the preacher is what we hear termed a "crank," his influence is to make "cranks" of the people where he labors. If you already have cranky members in your congregation, call in a cranky preacher and they will become more cranky; and not only so, but they will give the same disease to others. If your preacher is an extremist on things, the members will become extreme.

I heard of a brother once upon a time who opposed very vehemently the idea of receiving people from the sectarian churches on their baptism, the class system of teaching the Scriptures, and looked upon the lesson helps as a gross innovation, yet in the meantime he indulged too freely in the use of intoxicating spirits. I would call a man of that kind very much out of balance. Again, I have known of a dear brother who was really a good man, a fine Bible scholar, and a wonderfully strong preacher, yet he took up some cranky notions, one of which was to build no church houses. In these things he became unbalanced and lost his influence as a result.

Again, when you find a preacher who is of low moral character, indicated by a loose and irreverent course of conduct, telling smutty yarns, stooping to low things, loose in business transactions, you may expect him to infuse the same spirit into the whole church to a greater or less degree. Such is very hurtful to the cause of Christianity. I have been greatly surprised and even shocked to the extent of blush and shame to see the brethren take up and encourage some preachers when their lives are so incompatible with what the life of a Christian should be, and so much out of harmony with what Paul's instructions are to Timothy and Titus in the foregoing. If a preacher preaches purity of life, chastity of conversation, circumspectness of conduct, he should practice what he preaches.

People have a right to expect and demand of a school-teacher those qualifications and traits of character that would necessarily constitute him a fit pattern by which their children's school life should be molded. If the pattern is marred, then it will, of necessity, give bad shape to that which is cast into it. If this principle is true with the school life, it is certainly true in the divine life.

The congregations of the church of the living God certainly have a right to expect and to demand of those (the preachers) who minister to them in spiritual things a well-balanced character, that they may teach both by precept and example, and at the same time let the teaching be of

New Magazine

EDITED BY

In response to many urgent requests, we announce the inauguration of the BIBLE STUDY HELPER, a new monthly publication, which will be devoted exclusively to the subject of Bible study, both in the church and home. This publication will supply a long-felt need. It will be abreast with modern scholarship and at the same time in accord with the teachings of God's word. Among the many helpful features will be: "Incentives to Bible Study," "Timely Practical Illustrations," "Quotable Prose and Poetry," "Suggestions for Teachers," "The Boys' Column," "The Girls' Column," "Reports from Teachers," "Letters from the Children," "Thought-Provoking Questions."

The editor has access to the foremost of the commentaries and Bible-study periodicals, and will embody the fruit of his reading and study in the HELPER in his comments upon the International Lessons. All teachers and Bible students should have this publication. Send your order now that you may have every copy from the start.

Single copy, one year, sixty cents; in clubs of five or more, to one address, fifty cents.

such a character as will edify to a well-balanced church life. How often do we find congregations and individual members out of balance, the work and worship of the church hindered, marred, made ridiculous, and the cause brought into disrepute, through unbalanced preachers!

May we all study, work, and pray to find our balance in the following: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things. The things which ye both learned and received and heard and saw in me, these things do: and the God of peace shall be with you." (Phil. 4: 8, 9.)

"Let not unskilled hands
Attempt to play the harp
Forever in its strings."

There can be no living unless there is life; there can be no life without birth; there can be no birth into the divine life without the processes of the Spirit of life.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

A Series of Lessons.

I am pleased to say that with this issue the series of lessons that I have been giving to the new converts in Atlanta begin their appearance on this page. Much good has been accomplished with them, and we are earnestly praying that more may be accomplished. A number of new classes will soon be organized, and they will be furnished with copies of the Gospel Advocate from which to get these lessons as they appear. The sister' classes that meet from house to house during the week will be met, as a rule, this year by sisters who have developed into teachers. We want every member to become a teacher of God's blessed truth. This is Jehovah's desire. We should remember Paul's words: "For when by reason of the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need again that some one teach you." (Heb. 5: 12.) How does God look at you on this question, my brother, my sister? How long have you been in the church? Has it not been long enough for you to have become able to teach others? Let us all grow more and more into efficiency as teachers of his word. And the fact that he wants you to become teachers shows that a time and place to teach must be provided. Sisters in the same neighborhood certainly can accomplish more good in getting together for an hour's Bible study once a week, and more often if they like, getting their neighbors to meet with them, than they can in having their sewing clubs, and certainly more than they can in meeting for social games.

These lessons, beginning with "The Importance of Studying the Bible," will cover every question pertaining to the church of Christ and the life that we should live in this church. After the series shall have appeared on this page, they will be put in permanent form, if it is the Lord's will.

The Importance of Studing the Bible.

Let us suppose that the Bible is a book that contains a secret, which secret, when discovered, guarantees to the reader one thousand dollars in gold, and that this secret can be found by one carefully reading the book through. If this were true, could it be said of you that you have never read the book through? Would I or any one else have to beg you to read it? This is for you to answer.

But the blessed Bible, dear student, does not contain a secret as to how we can obtain one thousand dollars in gold, but it contains a greater secret—viz., it shows us how to obtain the "pearl of great price;" it reveals Christ, the sinner's loving Friend, to us; it drives the cloud from over the tomb and enables us to see beyond the grave the home of the soul, the city walled in with jasper, streets paved with gold, and the gates of pearl opening wide to receive the faithful home. Then let us press it to our hearts and in our laps let it open, and from its pages let us drink freely from that fountain that flows from the throne of God. Well did Benjamin Beddome say:

May this blest volume ever lie
Close to my heart and near my eye,
Till life's last hour my thoughts engage,
And be my chosen heritage.

Study carefully the following seven reasons why we should study the Bible:

1. It was written for our learning and we are commanded to study it. Open your Bibles now and note the following: (1) In Rom. 15: 4 it declares that "whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that through patience and through comfort of the scriptures we might have hope." (2) In Isa. 34: 16 we are commanded: "Seek ye out of the book of Jehovah, and read." (3) Paul, in 1 Tim. 4: 13, says: "Give heed to reading." (4) Paul also says in Eph. 5: 17: "Be ye not foolish, but understand what the will of the Lord is." (5) And in 2 Tim. 2: 15 he says: "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth." (6) In 1 Thess. 5: 21 we are commanded to "prove all things; hold fast that which is good." (7) In Col. 3: 16 we are commanded: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly."

Do not forget that the Bible was written for our learning, not Jehovah's. There are truths that he saw we needed to know, hence revealed them, making the importance of studying the Bible to be seen in the fact that he gave it to us.

2. The importance of studying the Bible is seen in the fact that we are made free by knowing the truth. (See John 8: 31, 32.)

3. The importance of studying it is seen, too, in the fact that ignorance condemns us. (See Eph. 4: 18; Hos. 4: 6.)

4. Man, on account of his ignorance of God's word, is led quite frequently to rebel against God, believing, while thus rebelling, that he is serving God. Read John 16: 2 and Rom. 10: 1-3 on this point. The people who put Christ to death thought they were doing the best thing that could be done for their children and their descendants. (See Acts 3: 17) Their lack of knowledge of Jehovah's revealed will to them got them into trouble. Read Matt. 15: 9, 15, and you will see that people were actually worshiping the true and living God; but the worship was vain, because they were being led by the doctrines and commandments of men. If you have not studied for yourself, how do you know but that you, too, are living in rebellion to God, thinking that you are doing God's service?

5. False teachers are abroad in the land; we are commanded to try them. But this cannot be done unless we ourselves "understand what the will of the Lord is." (1 John 4: 1; Eph. 4: 14; Matt. 15: 9, 14.)

6. It is not in man to direct his steps; hence he needs light—needs a guide. This light is to be found only in God's holy word. (Jer. 10: 23; Prov. 14: 12; Ps. 73: 24; 119: 105, 130; 2 Cor. 4: 3, 4.)

7. The word of God is our soul food, and it is not possible for us to appropriate this food without reading and meditation. (See Matt. 4: 4; 1 Pet. 2: 2.) Be certain to commit to memory Ps. 1: 1-3. Finally, do not forget that it is Jehovah's word that will judge us in the end. (See John 12: 48; Rev. 20: 12.)

The New Year and I.

Good morning, Glad New Year! You are here, and so am I. God is your Master; he is also mine. You cannot tell me what you'll bring to me; therefore I will patiently wait. If you bring me limitations, I shall spell them love. If you place hindrances before me, I shall make them helps. If you introduce me to disappointments, I shall remove the small "d" and put in its place a capital "H." Let me remind you, New Year, that we are under the same great Master, only there is this supreme difference: you are a child of time, and I am an heir to immortality; and when you are no more, I shall be but another milestone nearer my inheritance.

No! I have no resolves, except to be like him; no purposes unless undertaken on his plan; no fears but he can change to faith; no anticipations if he is not their inspiration; no pain but he may turn to pleasure; no sorrow but he can bring it out into song; no hope but he will usher it at last into heaven. Therefore I meet you gladly, joyously, New Year, knowing that he joins our hands, and, whatever betide, all will be well.—A. C. V. Skinner.

Freedom of Judgment and Speech.

We make the following letter of Brother D. H. Neil the occasion for saying some things which should be emphasized:

Allensville, Ky., December 15, 1915.—Editors Gospel Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Sirs: I expect you are worn out with reading letters of complaint and commendation on your trouble with Brother Boll, but, after reading your editorial in the issue of December 9, I cannot refrain from writing you.

I read with a great deal of pleasure the announcement of the satisfactory settlement of differences between yourselves and Brother Boll. I have read your last announcement with more regret. I had never suspected that the Advocate would try to deceive its readers on anything. I used to feel that when reading the Advocate I was reading the next thing to the Bible, but am sorry to say that I have learned better. The statement published by Brother Boll could not be misunderstood. You published it as the basis upon which Brother Boll agreed to resume his work upon the Advocate. Now you say his statement is not true, but give what you say is the agreement, which in no sense corresponds to his statement as first published by you.

If the Advocate would keep back the whole truth on this, how am I to know when I am getting the whole truth on any subject? You published on the front page some time past an article in regard to the whole truth, and I thought it fine, as it was in accord with the teaching of the Bible; but when the occasion seems to justify, you keep back a part of the truth, which suits some, but does not seem to suit others; therefore you publish the remaining facts, which in no respect correspond to Brother Boll's statement.

I fail to see how you could say that "it gives us pleasure to announce that all differences have been amicably settled without the sacrifice of anything on the part of any," when Brother Boll's position laid out in his statement was the same position that he had always contended for, and such position did not in any way agree with what you say the agreement was.

From a letter written by one of your staff I can readily see why your paper takes the position it does—namely, that after some of your staff have made a study of any subject, there is no use of any one else making further study, as they could get at no new insight on the subject. This is but the position taken by all of the sectarians. On such a position I am barred from any and all free thought which does not accord fully with your staff.

I believe the statement published by you, signed by Brother Boll, is in accord with the teaching of the Bible, and the man who would be bound otherwise is not fit to write or preach the gospel to a dying world. I feel that the first step for most of us is to get right with God. There is one thing that can always stand alone without man's help—the truth. It never did an injustice to any man or set of men. Let's always have the truth without fear or favor.

Yours for the truth.

For over fifty years, through sunshine and shadow, in the midst of approval and opposition, the Gospel Advocate has pleaded for the right of each individual to study the Scriptures for himself and to formulate his own faith without dictation from any one. It has always opposed, and does now vigorously oppose, the assumption that any man or set of men has the right to dictate the faith of any other man. Every man is responsible for himself to God.

Its managing editors have repeatedly assured Brother Boll of this fact both in conversation and in letters. He was assured of this and urged to act on his own judgment in our last recent conference. We have never asked him or any other man to sacrifice his conscience in order to stand with us. We have declared to him that we could have no respect for the man who was not true to his faith. But after he assured us that he did not regard the peculiar views he was teaching as fundamentals of salvation, we labored to show him that he should cease such teaching, since it was disturbing the peace of a number of churches. He agreed with us that "in reference to certain questions over which there had been some disturbance lately" it would be best to cease teaching them. He, therefore, "as free toward men and as restricted and responsible toward God as all the other editors are," verbally agreed to refrain from such teaching, and that without any sacrifice of conscience. All editors are restricted by the word of God. He plainly told us that his judgment concurred with ours that it was best to refrain from such teaching. He asked to be permitted to adopt the judgment as his own and to omit the verbal agreement from the published statement. To this we consented, as we believed him sincere in making the agreement and that he would be true to it. Hence we allowed him to publish the following statement:

STATEMENT FROM BROTHER BOLL.

Relative to my teachings on unfulfilled prophecy, I have arrived at an amicable understanding with my former associates on the Gospel Advocate and resume my work with the paper with all personal differences eliminated and with feelings of the most cordial friendship toward all.

I resume my work on the Advocate free under God to teach and write as in the sight of God I believe I ought to write; as free toward men and as restricted and responsible toward God as all the other editors are, and as all other Christians are and should be. Such judgment as I shall use in reference to certain questions over which there has been some disturbance lately is not dictated to me by any man, but is a matter of conscience between me and the Lord Jesus Christ, in the love of the truth and of the brethren.

R. H. BOLL.

Construed in the light of the "amicable understanding" "relative to his teachings on unfulfilled prophecy," there is nothing in this statement that every faithful Christian does not most heartily indorse. Since his teachings on unfulfilled prophecy had created "some disturbance," he had "arrived at an amicable understanding with his former associates on the Gospel Advocate" that he would refrain from such teaching. Instead of any contradiction in the "amicable understanding" and the statement, they agree with each other as the key fits the lock. The statement of R. H. Boll is a senseless jargon of words only as interpreted in the light of the agreement. And yet Brother Boll says in a letter to Brother McQuiddy: "Either we made a verbal agreement contradicting the written statement, in which case all of us appear in a bad light, or else the written statement was the true one, and the talk about the verbal agreement an afterthought designed to meet some exigency." It takes a wiser than Solomon to see how a verbal agreement must necessarily contradict a statement that simply gives the fact of an "amicable understanding" without giving what the "amicable understanding" is! This talk of a contradiction is a puerile afterthought. Let it be understood that Brother Boll's statement is in no sense a statement of the terms of the agreement upon which he resumed his work on the Advocate, but merely an announcement that an agreement had been reached. Until Brother Boll made the verbal agreement to refrain from such teaching, we did not seriously consider the statement as published. When he did make the agreement, however, we depended on his living up to it.

We published Brother Boll's statement and kept his name on our editorial staff until he denied the verbal agreement and removed it immediately on the reception of his denial. It is not proper to call the statement an agreement. A sensible body of men would not seriously put themselves in the silly attitude of according to an individual the inalienable right that belongs to every man. Without any agreement with his fellow-men, every man is free under God to write as he thinks he should write.

When the "amicable understanding" was arrived at, we trusted Brother Boll to hold it sacred, until he denied it, and consented for him to make a statement that corroborates the agreement so far as it goes and in no way conflicts with it.

We perceive that our critic has been with Brother Boll, in consequence of which he has accepted without investigation Brother Boll's one-sided statement and misrepresentation of the facts. In one sentence he pleads for freedom of speech and action, and in another he charges the Gospel Advocate with practicing deception because it grants Brother Boll the privilege of omitting the terms of an amicable understanding! We have made many verbal agreements with our editors that we did not publish. In fact, we know not of one we did publish, and yet we practiced no deception. Brother Neil is palpably inconsistent in condemning us for not publishing the whole truth while denying us the right to decide on what should be published.

This brings us to our rights, duties, and responsibilities as publishers. We cheerfully accord to every man the right to think, believe, and act for himself. Yea, it is his duty to do so. In matters of faith there should be unity, and opinions should never be taught and pressed to the division of churches. All should "preach the word." As publishers and editors, we must pass on the scripturalness or fitness of the contributions that are published in our papers. If we associate those with us who teach opinions that destroy the peace of churches and uphold them in so doing, we will be guilty before God. In order to be true to God, to our fellow-men, and to ourselves, we have simply exercised our God-given right in removing Brother Boll's name from our editorial staff, inasmuch as he elected to continue to teach opinions that gender strife. Since we heard Brother Boll say that the kingdom of Christ had not been established, and that when it was established in the future there would be new conditions of entrance into it, and that on account of changed conditions it was reasonable to expect new revelations from God, we have felt that we would not and could not give our influence to build up such views.

Brother Neil is mistaken in thinking we have had many complaints. Just a few of Brother Boll's most intimate friends and partisans have found fault, while the great body of Christ has approved. The church of God will move on to triumph and victory long after the doctrine that Christ came to establish his kingdom, but failed; that the kingdom will be established by physical force, and that force a rod of iron, during the millennial age; and that Christ shall rule in a material body on the earth, with Judaism as the center of his kingdom, the temple rebuilt, and the bloody sacrifices restored, is forgotten. The Holy Spirit teaches that Judaism was abolished, never to be restored, when it led us to Christ.

The church, firm in the conviction that Jesus spoke the truth when he said, "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth," and that the gospel is God's power unto salvation, is still preaching the word which has resulted in the conversion of millions of souls in our country alone and still joyously singing:

"I love thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode,
The church our blest Redeemer saved,
With his own precious blood.

"Jesus, thou Friend divine,
Our Savior and our King,
Thy hand from every snare and foe
Shall great deliverance bring."

The Gospel Advocate has no quarrel with any man, neither does it assume the sole honor of teaching and defending the truth. It is only a humble instrument in the hands of Jehovah. As, Elisha prayed the Lord to open the eyes of his servant that he might behold his heavenly defenders, so we shall pray that the eyes of Brother Neil may be opened so that he may see the innumerable host of true, strong, and valiant defenders who stand unalterably pledged to preaching the gospel which is God's power for the salvation of the world. It is not simply our work, but equally the work of every Christian in so far as he is able, to contend earnestly for the faith once for all delivered to the saints. "The angel of Jehovah encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them." (Ps. 34: 7.)

PUBLISHERS GOSPEL ADVOCATE.

Unsound Teachers—Ecclesiastical Anarchy Further Considered.

BY M. C. K.

The case of the Louisville churches presented in our last article on this theme, as illustrations of upholding unsound teachers, is not only vital and fundamental in a general way, but the principle which it represents affects the entire New Testament order. For this reason we continue the investigation.

Not since the great apostasy under Constantine the Great has there been a more disastrous and destructive encroachment upon the divine order, whether doctrinal or ecclesiastical, than that represented by the action of the two churches criticized in that article; and because the serious offense committed was of this nature and magnitude in principle, we give it further attention on our editorial pages. Indeed, the offense involved in each case is sufficiently serious and far-reaching in principle to be worthy of the attention of every religious journal and of every pulpit throughout the land.

That the reader may see the correctness of this position and that our indictment of the offending churches is grounded on the unquestionable truth of the Bible, we now invite attention to a more detailed consideration of the facts in the case. We shall see that, if such action on the part of churches is to be accepted as a model for the imitation of other churches, then the New Testament from its first to its last word is a worthless volume and we may very properly repudiate it in toto at once.

1. On the matter of doctrine. We are not concerned in this discussion with any doctrine which does not affect the faith in Christ or the revealed will of God in the Bible. And the particular doctrine upheld by one of the churches which we criticized, and which we respectfully but pointedly condemned, is nothing less than the open and avowed denial of the virgin birth of Jesus. We have already pointed out that this doctrine is the chief corner stone and the very foundation of Christianity. We now add that, if Jesus was the son of Joseph as all other men are sons of their fathers, and hence was not miraculously begotten by the Holy Spirit and born of the Virgin Mary as the only begotten Son of God, then Matthew and Luke and Acts were written by deliberate and willful falsifiers and their testimonies are unworthy of the faith of men. Moreover, these books and their writers are so related to, and interwoven with, all the rest of the books and writers of the New Testament that, if they are thus unreliable, then the whole volume becomes a tissue of unmitigated falsehood and deception and deserves to be thrown to the moles and the bats. Yet a church calls a man to preach for it who has openly published to the world and avowed this destructive doctrine, and, of course, to that extent, gives countenance and influence to the destructive doctrine in question. What if such a man does preach nice sermons? What if he be as eloquent as Demosthenes or Cicero? And what if he even "speak with the tongues of men and of angels" (1 Cor. 13: 1), and is graceful and cultured and polished in manner? How can all of that atone for a doctrine which eviscerates Christianity and robs it of God and of all truth? Yet that is precisely what churches do when they uphold, as religious teachers, men of that type.

To appreciate the enormity and magnitude of such an offense, just think of a church—a church professing to teach and uphold the doctrine of the New Testament—having a man to preach for it who denies the virgin birth of Jesus and thus heralds to the world a doctrine that gives the lie to the New Testament! To complete the picture, we need only add that, if all the churches should follow this example, Christianity and the New Testament would be gone.

2. On the matter of polity. The autonomy and independence of the local churches are clearly taught in the New Testament. In fact, no proposition is more clearly established in that volume. Hence, any legitimate action taken by a local church is as clearly stamped with divine authority as is any other doctrine or any command in the New Testament. Why not? And, of course, to set aside and repudiate such action is to set aside and repudiate the authority of God. If not, why not? Let us look at this principle in connection with certain inspired commands to the churches.

(1) Churches are commanded to withdraw "from every brother that walketh disorderly;" and when a church obeys this command and withdraws from a disorderly brother, it is as clearly the duty of every other church to respect and abide by the action of withdrawal as it was for the other church to take that action at all. Again we ask, if not, why not? Of course the same divine authority that demands an action by one church demands respect for that action from every other church.

(2) Again, churches, as we have seen in these articles, are commanded to "mark" and "turn away from" religious teachers sometimes, and one of the times is when they needlessly cause division in the body of Christ. Now, when a church obeys this command, as was done in the case of one of the three churches recently presented in these columns, every other church, of course, is under the solemn obligation to respect and abide by that action; and when such action is ignored and set aside by another church, as was done in the case referred to, the authority of God is as completely ignored and set aside as it would be in ignoring and setting aside baptism or the Lord's Supper. The church which disregards and sets aside such action in such a case not only encourages the division in question, but sows the seeds of general disorder and opens the way for ecclesiastical anarchy.

We have still other facts and considerations to be presented in a later article.

A Shot from the Bushes.

BY A. B. L.

Under the caption, "My Wish for 1916," the publisher of the Christian Leader had the following article in his issue of December 28:

[The following is taken from a private letter of a well-known evangelist in Texas. There is so much in it that is good that we pass it on to our readers.]

I pray for some great power to come among the so-called "loyal" disciples of Christ that will at least check, if not stop, the obvious tendency on the part of some managers and editors of religious journals or periodicals to so magnify their office as to form and foster various factions, and dictate what contributors, preachers, and laymen must believe in order to be "indorsed" or "recognized" by them, the self-appointed repositories of all truth and the defenders of the faith, infallibly (?) interpreted by them.

For, as I see it, whether we admit it willingly or close our eyes to it blindly, the fact is, our editors have more power, our journals more influence, than any other one force or factor among us. They (our papers) are becoming our final and highest court of appeal, our creed makers, faction builders, general assembly, etc., and practically all that other religious bodies use as means of church-government. We claim to be scriptural—that is, congregational—in polity. We are, theoretically; practically, it is congregational polity plus "What does the Gospel Advocate or Firm Foundation say?" And now it is clear to me that the Gospel Advocate practically says to Boll: "As long as you subscribe to our interpretations (for they are, as you surely must know, always correct), you may have the honor of being a 'copy supplier'; but as soon as you think too loud and dare to express something we have not discovered or taught, we part company; for if you do that, don't you see, you'll be supplanting us, and we would no longer be what we must be to make our business a financial success, the first and final authority. Now, be a good boy and swallow only our creed; drink only the water that we've been giving 'the churches' for, lo, these many years, and, behold, from within you shall flow rivers of blessing to others which you can't possibly touch unless 'we,' the infallible, indorse and protect you."

One may be pardoned for wondering how Christianity managed to exist at all before the churches were blessed (?) with weekly (weakly) control and oversight of the modern popes in editorial garb.

With me it isn't so much what Boll teaches. I may not agree with him in everything, either; but if the churches must look to the Gospel Advocate, or any other paper, for recognition, protection from heresy and heretics, and must subscribe to the unwritten creeds or verbal hobbles of "the scribes," isn't it high time for us, as people eager to be scriptural, to raise the question: "Shall the churches control their publications or the publications control the churches?"

What is the difference in principle between churches and preachers being controlled by the Gospel Advocate and churches and preachers being controlled by the Foreign Christian Missionary Society? Ever since the Gospel Advocate assumed so much authority in the William J. Bishop Mission, I have seen their tendency to take it for granted that they were the elders or Sanhedrin in Israel, and have, therefore, seldom sent in any copy to any paper, because I don't know what my attitude should be toward them. I can't consistently help build up what I truly believe to be the most prolific source of strife, contention, and hobbyism among us, and yet I'd like to reach the brotherhood with certain messages, especially on missions, which I feel prepared to give.

I very seldom read the Gospel Advocate now, except to keep abreast of the times and get the news re Boll, etc. I can't endure the —, and the — isn't fit for kindling.

Now the Leader is different, for I believe you see your opportunity to contribute toward placing religious journalism where it properly belongs, or else you wouldn't be publishing Fred Sommer's articles. You seem to have no hobbies to ride, and are publishing the paper to help people be better; to prepare them for heaven, rather than to stir up in them all the hostility and animosity "Old Nick" has so liberally helped most of us to; and I want to see Boll on that Leader if you can possibly place him.

Excuse my frankness. I didn't intend to write so much when I started, but my cup was full, and now that it has run over I feel much better.

How the publisher of the Christian Leader could discover anything that was edifying in the above article is beyond our ken. He prefaces the "wish" with the statement that "there is so much in it that is good that we pass it on to our readers," but we rather think the "good thing" in it to Brother Rowe is the paragraph toward the close where the author of this scurrilous screed pins a medal on the publisher of the Leader in representing his paper as the only one in the brotherhood worthy of his notice. Had Brother Rowe simply reproduced this compliment, we would have nothing to say and would certainly have evinced no signs of journalistic jealousy, since all papers receive a certain meed of praise from their readers; but when he allows his "well-known evangelist" to cast an unwarranted aspersion upon the self-sacrificing efforts of honest men, we are compelled to give it at least a passing notice.

So far as the Gospel Advocate is concerned, if the head of the unknown writer depended upon it, he could not substantiate his charge of popery so flippantly brought against us. We are not, of course, intimately acquainted with the policy and affairs of our esteemed contemporary, the Firm Foundation, but we venture the assertion that "it will be a cold day in August" before its publisher allows a "wish" like this to creep into his columns with no name signed to it.

The unknown writer charges the Gospel Advocate with mistreating Brother Boll, and gives as his apology for reading our paper that it is necessary to "keep abreast of the times and get the news regarding Boll." He evidently missed entirely or else read very carelessly our issue of December 3, in which appears Brother Boll's own statement as follows: "The impression, therefore, that the Advocate management mistreated me is groundless." We remind our critic in the shadows that Brother Boll's own statement "practically says" he has misstated the facts.

He also makes reference to the Gospel Advocate's relation toward the late Brother Bishop's mission. Our chief and only activity in this matter was in securing support for this brother while in Japan and during his illness. It is a fact that this paper, through its columns and through the personal efforts of one of its editors, raised more money than all other agencies combined for this very deserving work, and, so far from assuming any undue authority, made no request at any time except that all contributions received be promptly acknowledged. We are willing to leave the justice of that request to our readers. Again, if our critic in the dark really believes that the Gospel Advocate has pursued an unscriptural course toward Brother Bishop, let him present his charge to the Nashville churches who supported this mission. We will cheerfully abide by their judgment in this matter.

The man who shoots from the bushes is not the kind of character who is likely to disclose his name. Not infrequently he is a man whom you have befriended, and I should not be surprised to learn some day that the author of this "wish" had been helped in more ways than one by the very papers he covertly maligns. He bemoans the fact that he cannot consistently "reach the brotherhood with certain messages, especially on missions;" but let me say, without hesitation, that unless he repents, it would be best for his message to stay where his identity is—undisclosed.

Really, Brother Rowe does not treat himself right in publishing this private letter. Some of his readers and some of ours will be apt to think that "birds of a feather flock together." They will hardly distinguish a difference between the motive of the man who writes such a letter and the motive of the man who allows it to be printed in his paper with a remark of approval. Brother Rowe has recently allowed some flagrant misrepresentations of the Gospel Advocate to appear in his columns, and has even gone to the extent of allowing Brother Boll to preface his own article. When our editors asked the privilege of a hearing, he denied it on one pretext and another. Yet he gives ample space to the above beautiful (?) "wish." If such tactics portray the heights of clean religious journalism, we are well content to plod along at an appreciable distance from the heights.

We write this without any ill feeling toward the Leader. We say again, Brother Rowe did not treat himself right in publishing this attack from his "well-known evangelist." It should have been consigned to the garbage pile. Such stuff is too malodorous even for the lowly wastebasket.

SELF-EXAMINATION.

Continuing from last week, let more be said on self-examination.

Robert Burns wishes that we could see ourselves as others see us. This, indeed, would be a great help and free us from many a blunder. Oliver Wendell Holmes is one point ahead of Burns. He says there are three persons in one: John, for instance, as he sees himself, John as others see him, and John as God sees him. We see ourselves from our own viewpoint, others see us from their viewpoint, but God sees us in the true light. Our greatest concern must be about how we appear in God's sight. We should say with Hagar: "Thou God seest me." Many times while in school I heard our president quote this in order to impress his pupils with it.

Realizing that God knows all our thoughts, hears all our words, and sees all our deeds, we will become purer, humbler, meeker, and will be governed more by godly fear; we will more and more endeavor to do all we do in word and deed in the name of the Lord Jesus—that is, if we want hearts right before God.

Paul makes a clear and encouraging point on self-examination when he says to his critics at Corinth that with him it was "a small thing" that he should be judged ("examined"—margin) by them, or by man's judgment; that he knew nothing against himself, yet for that reason he was not justified, because he who judges all is God, and one stands or falls according to God's judgment. Let all read 1 Cor. 4: 1-5 in the Revised Version until they both see and feel the force of this truth, and the further statement that the Lord "will both bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and make manifest the counsels of the heart," and that "then shall each man have his praise from God." The judgment of men cannot fix one's character or settle one's destiny. Neither the condemnation nor praise of men moved Paul, because both the judgment and praise of men are human and partial and partisan, and by such no one can be justified. The judgment and praise of God are the only judgment and praise which count. Even when Paul examined himself and found nothing against himself, he realized that he was not for that reason justified, because God is the judge, and God knows all persons far better than they know themselves.

If we would see ourselves as God sees us, we must study his word more, and receive it, as it is indeed the word of God, and not the word of man. This means the word of God must be received in faith and into good and honest hearts—hearts which will deal with it honestly and truly and be developed by it. Then, as seed in the ground, it will work effectually in all. (See 1 Thess. 2: 13.) We must study and practice the word of God until we drink in the very spirit of Christ's humility, lowliness, meekness, forbearance, forgiveness, gentleness, quietness, gravity, genuine goodness, and implicit submission to God, and reflect "as in a mirror the glory of the Lord," and "are transformed into the same image from glory to glory, even as from the Lord the Spirit." (2 Cor. 3: 18.) The transformation of our impure hearts and imperfect characters into the image of our Lord's heart and character "from glory to glory" is the "glory" all must seek. If we would see ourselves as God sees us, we must exercise the courage to bring ourselves up squarely before the mirror of God—his word—with all our deformities of character and view ourselves there. This is the way to "bring to light the hidden things of darkness" in our lives and to make "manifest the counsels" of our hearts. Stand still! Do not draw back! You are frightened at your own spiritual deformity and horrible appearance, but this is your only salvation from yourself and your sins.

Or the word of God is the dissecting knife of the inner man.

For the word of God is living, and active, and sharper than any two-edged sword, and piercing even to the dividing of soul and spirit, of both joints and marrow, and quick to discern the thoughts and intents of the heart. And there is no creature that is not manifest in his sight; but all things are naked and laid open before the eyes of him with whom we have to do. (Heb. 4: 12, 13.)

This passage is frequently quoted to show that the word of God is living and active, is powerful; but is not so frequently quoted to show that it dissects the inner man, lays bare to us the thoughts and intents of our own hearts, and enables us to see ourselves as God sees us. It is strange that we so easily miss the meaning and application of some passage of scripture.

Thy word have I laid up in my heart, that I might not sin against thee. (Ps. 119: 11.)

The first thing to be done in studying the word of God is to apply it to our own hearts and lives. Sins in ourselves are as horrible and condemning as in others. We should hate sin and preach against sin in ourselves as much so as in others. We should forsake sin in ourselves before we ask others to repent. The word of God is to develop our inner man into the image of Christ as we practice it and teach it to others.

There is more writing for the papers, more preaching, and more teaching otherwise than there is development of Christian character. Christian character should keep apace with the writing and teaching. More practice of Christianity and less writing and teaching about it is in order until the practice overtakes our teaching.

GRIEVING THE HOLY SPIRIT.

Let no corrupt speech proceed out of your mouth, but such as is good for edifying as the need may be, that it may give grace to them that hear. And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, in whom ye were sealed unto the day of redemption. (Eph. 4: 29, 30.)

Children sometimes grieve their parents, but, learning that they have done so, cease the conduct which causes the grief. Just so by our conduct we may grieve the Holy Spirit. This we should never do. Acting contrary to the above passage or any part of God's will grieves the Holy Spirit. For every idle word we speak we must give account in the judgment. This, then, with other passages, shows that God sees and knows all we do, or the Holy Spirit could not be grieved over our conduct.

If we could but be impressed with our standing before God and desire to be pleasing always to him, we would be saved from many sins of thoughts and words and deeds and our influence would be mighty for good.

There is almost an immeasurable difference between the way the Laodiceans appeared in their own eyes and the way they appeared in God's eyes. In their own eyes they were rich and had need of nothing, but in God's eye they were wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked. (Rev. 3: 14-22.) Are not many to-day who think of themselves more highly than they ought to think, and who are wise and righteous in their own eyes, in the eyes of God wretched and miserable, poor and blind, naked and undone? None of us who see ourselves as God sees us could be vain and proud, self-conceited and self-exalted, or congratulate ourselves, as did the self-deceived but lukewarm Laodiceans, on our present attainments.

God would not so often and in so many different ways and in so much love and forbearance seek to impress us with the duty and beauty of counting others better than ourselves were there not great danger of our considering ourselves better than others. We may make a show of our humility, do our aims and righteousness before men to be seen of them, and make vain prayers to be heard of men.

KEEPING OUR OWN HEARTS.

Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life. (Prov. 4: 23.)

The heart is the source of all thoughts and words and deeds—of the very issues of life. How could the Pharisees, being evil, speak good things? And how could they, being under the rule of Satan, attribute pure motives to Jesus? Hence, to them he says that "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." (See Matt. 12: 22, 37.) Again, he says that "the things which proceed out of the mouth come forth out of the heart; and they defile the man. For out of the heart come forth evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, railings: these are the things which defile the man." (Matt. 15: 18, 19.) Such thoughts come from the heart to-day and produce such deeds, and men are yet defiled thereby.

After telling his apostles how grievous the sin and how fearful the punishment of causing even the poorest and weakest child of God to do wrong, Jesus says to them: "Take heed to yourselves." Paul says to elders: "Take heed unto yourselves." (James 5: 16) says:

Confess therefore your sins one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed.

And John (1 John 1: 9) says:

If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

But how can we confess our sins without diligent self-examination, or if, like the Laodiceans, we in self-conceit think we have no sins and are in need of nothing?

While under the preaching of many there have been numbers of additions, new churches have been established and old ones edified, and much "fellowship in furtherance of the gospel" has been manifested, yet the most necessary thing is self-examination, and the most important of all reviews is that of our own lives.

Jesus shows in many ways the importance of constantly seeking our own salvation; he declares that we should cut off the hand or foot or pluck out the eye which causes us to sin and be lost, and that, when the test comes, we must give up and forsake all relatives and all possessions and even life itself in order to be saved. Nothing must come between us and our living the Christian life. We must not yet count ourselves as saved in heaven. We may have been preachers forty years, or in the church fifty years; yet God must be obeyed still, and we must press forward "toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (To be continued.)

The Millennium.

I wish some one would tell us just what they mean by the millennium. I have been hearing of it and reading of it all my life, and I do not know now what is meant by it. I have searched the New Testament all through, and find nothing of it, and I long since concluded that the millennium, as discussed so much by man, is an imagination of men, invented by the scrap doctors. I am sure there is nothing in the Scriptures to justify the state of things men fix up and call the millennium. Yet, men pitch out and write and talk about it as though it were plainly taught in the New Testament, and as if they knew all about it. Now, if the Scriptures teach it, as men talk and write it, I have not found it.—John T. Poe, in Christian Leader.

This short paragraph, written by an old student of the Bible and man of thoughtfulness and faith, should impress some of our younger preachers with several things. One is that Brother Poe says he has been hearing of this millenium theory all his life; hence it is no new thing under the sun, which some young men by their profound study and deep research have just learned from the word of God. Another is that the present theory, as all others have done, will die out after a while.

The great trouble is that the hearts of many in some places are being filled with these speculations and led by them away from the daily service of God in the common affairs and relationships of life. The plain, simple faith of the gospel and the everyday and happy, prosperous and peaceful duties of life and, therefore, of Christianity are the things people need and are hungering for. It is destructive of the peace of the churches and sinful to draw the hearts of the people from these blessed duties to vain theories and speculations.

Ordaining Preachers.

Brother Sewell: A young Baptist asked me why we do not ordain our preachers. I want you to help me on this question.

JEROME MYERS.

There was a time when our brethren did ordain, and they thought they were following the word of God in so doing; but after a more careful study of the word of God, they have been going a little slow on it. When I was young, our brethren generally thought that by ordination some sort of authority was imparted, so that when men were ordained they had authority to do things they did not have till they were ordained. For example, when I was a young man and began preaching, it was thought that a preacher that had never been ordained had no authority to baptize any one or to administer the Lord's Supper. What they meant by ordination then was that the elders or preachers who had themselves been thus ordained should come together on an appointed day, and should come fasting, and that in connection with solemn prayer, and, while kneeling, the elders and preachers present should lay their hands upon the person or persons to be ordained, and by this sort of solemn ceremony those that were thought fit and competent were ordained to be elders, deacons, or duly authorized preachers; and they were by this solemn ceremony authorized to serve in whatever capacity they were expected to serve, whether as deacons, elders, or preachers. When I began preaching, and before I had been ordained, it was understood that I had no authority to baptize any one till I should be ordained. When people made confession under my preaching then, we had to call on a preaching brother that lived several miles away to come and do the baptizing for me. It was understood then that I had no authority to baptize any one till thus ordained myself. But when I had been thus ordained, then it was considered all right for me to baptize any that were ready to be baptized I mention these facts to show what was meant by ordination in those days. But when it comes to the matter of Bible authority for such ordination and that any sort of official authority is imparted by such ordination, I really do not know where to find it. Hands were frequently laid on in the miraculous age of the church by inspired men to impart miraculous powers; but if hands were ever laid on to induct men into some sort of an office, I do not know where the Bible records it. And this is the reason why the brethren in many sections have left out the matter of official ordination as it was once done. But it is still generally practiced in the denominational world. But since the days of miracles no divine power or authority has been imparted by the laying on of hands.

Jesus declares that unbelief is the great condemning sin of the world, and there is no appeal from his judgment.—The Young People.

Thoughts on the Kingdom.

Brother Sewell: Please explain Matt. 11: 12; also Luke 16: 16. What is meant by taking the kingdom "by force" and men pressing into it? When was it to be, on Pentecost or after that day, when every one that was baptized was said to have entered into it?

W. B. BROWN.

The passage in Matthew is: "And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force." The one in Luke says: "The law and the prophets were until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it." Both were telling what Jesus said. It is likely that Jesus said these things more than once, but at different times expressed it in language a little different. But there is no conflict in the way Matthew and Luke express it. It is a matter of fact that the record called "the law and the prophets" was the only record the people had from God to teach them the will of God. We to-day call that part of the Bible "the Old Testament." But from the days of John the Baptist on, a new system of teaching was given, which is called "the New Testament." The very beginning of the New Testament was the announcement that "the kingdom of heaven is at hand." At first the Jewish people did not understand the nature of the kingdom thus foretold, but took it to be an earthly kingdom like the kingdoms that already existed among men, and they evidently wanted to just lay hold of it and help to make it that sort of a kingdom. But this would have been an utter perversion of what God intends his kingdom to be. The Jews at one time even plotted to take Jesus by force and make him a king. (See John 6: 15.) These are some of the ignorant and rash ideas many of the Jewish people had regarding the kingdom of heaven when the kingdom was first proclaimed as "at hand." It is also a fact that when John the Baptist began his preaching that the kingdom of heaven was at hand, vast numbers of the Jewish people went out and were baptized of him in Jordan. It is also a fact that when the masses of the Jewish people saw that he did not at once establish his kingdom as they at first thought, they turned against him and put him to death, thinking to put a final end to him and his kingdom. But they failed in their rash effort. From the time that John began his preaching and to say that "the kingdom of heaven is at hand," the preparatory state of the kingdom was present, and continued to be present in that state till the day of Pentecost. On that day it was fully established, and about three thousand souls entered into it on that day. From that day it was never spoken of as "at hand," but as actually present, and will be here till time shall end.

"Studies in Recent Adventism."

We have on hand a few copies of the scholarly book on the above subject, written by Henry C. Sheldon. It is an especially timely review and analysis of the assumptions, claims, and teachings of Adventism. The name of the author guarantees the character of the book—its lucidity, its scholarly style, its weight of authority. It will be an invaluable antidote to the materialism, Russellism, and premillennialism of to-day, and a strong weapon for students and preachers who must meet and answer this false teaching.

In view of the recent agitation concerning David's throne and the claim that the kingdom of Christ has not been established, but will be established in the near future in the city of Jerusalem, this book should receive a careful reading and wide circulation. We will send the book, post-paid, for fifty cents. Write quick, as the supply is limited.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Compiled by A. B. Lipscomb

F. W. Smith is "abroad," having begun an interesting meeting last Sunday at Woodsfield, Ohio.

Thomas J. Wagner, of McMinnville, Tenn., writes: "Your paper is splendid, and especially the special numbers."

R. C. White, of Nashville, will begin a meeting at Bunnell, Fla., on January 29. Christians visiting in Florida are cordially invited.

John W. Beasley preached at Jones Avenue church of Christ last Sunday. One confessed faith in Christ and was baptized at Foster Street Church the same day.

John A. Klingman, who labored faithfully in Cincinnati, Ohio, for several years, has moved with his family to Lebanon, Tenn. He reports a good start in his new field.

Ben West changes his address from Houston to Lometa, Texas. His last message reads: "I find a good and excellent church here. This is a beautiful country and town."

Mrs. H. W. Kirk, at Fountain Creek, Tenn., writes: "I think the Gospel Advocate grows better with each number. The special numbers are just grand. I enjoyed the 'Home and Father and Mother' Number so much, especially Brother Larimore's piece. It was the crown jewel of them all."

The 1916 "List of Preachers" is ready for distribution. It was compiled by J. W. Shepherd, coditor of the Christian Leader, and A. W. Young, the well-known evangelist, of Gainesville, Texas. In order to secure a copy, send ten cents to F. L. Rowe, Publisher, 422 Elm Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

E. S. Jelley, Jr., writes from India: "I wish to congratulate you upon the 'Lord's Supper' Number. On the whole, I believe it the best of the special numbers to date. I hope the special-number idea will be kept up and that they will begin to come twice a month instead of once. I enjoyed Brother Larimore's article on the Supper most of all."

From W. D. Bills, at San Antonio, Texas: "The South Heights congregation, this city, has made gradual progress and is stronger to-day than it has ever been before. Our membership increased about one-third during 1915. We enter the new year with the best of prospects, with no internal trouble to mar the peace of the congregation. My address is 1124 South Hackberry Street."

From G. M. Rance, at Fayette City, Pa.: "I congratulate you on the special numbers of the Gospel Advocate during 1915. I shall send in my renewal soon. I hope to send at least one other, too. The work here is in a better condition than for several years. A 'digressive' said our singing was better than theirs, where they have the instruments. We use 'New Christian Hymns.'"

From S. R. Cassius, the colored preacher, at Meridian, Okla.: "God bless, keep, and prosper you this year! I am shut in to-day—not because I am sick, but because I am too poor to go where I am needed most and have no desire to go to them that already know the way. Surely among the readers of the Gospel Advocate, Christian Leader, Firm Foundation, and the Gospel Way, I ought to be made able to get a tent and enter the field that is open before me. Forgive me if I prove a nuisance. My whole desire is to 'go.'"

From Charles P. Abbott, at Durant, Okla.: "My father, W. P. Abbott, of Coyersville and Puryear, Tenn., took the Gospel Advocate up to the time of his death in 1896, and either my mother or my sister, Mrs. Emma Littleton, of Puryear, has been taking it since. I think your paper has always been a power for good, and I am glad to see it live. Christ means more to the world to-day than ever before, and those who present his plea to fallen man deserve the greatest honor this world is able to bestow. I wish you a happy New Year."

From Willis H. Allen, at Jacksonville, Fla.: "I preached to attentive audiences here last Lord's day, morning and night. This marked the beginning of my work with the faithful in Jacksonville. The work is hard, but enjoyable; and with the Lord's strength and help, we hope to accomplish much in the Master's name. We shall be glad to have visiting brethren stop with us. Take Lackawanna car and get off at Grape Street. Correspondents will please note change of address from Valdosta, Ga., to 1651 Rosselle Street, Jacksonville, Fla."

From C. A. Buchanan, at Wichita Falls, Texas: "I am beginning my second year's work under the direction of the church here. The church has a wider acquaintance in the city than it had a year ago, and the members are in perfect harmony and all have a mind to work. These conditions combine to make our opportunities greater than they have ever been before. The past year's work has been the best the church has ever done. We are determined to make this year still better. J. B. Nelson and Austin Taylor will assist us in a month's meeting in June."

From D. L. Halle, at Atlanta, Texas: "In regard to some inquiries as to whether or not I expect to make a trip to Tennessee any time during this year, I will say that my time is all promised till October 1; but if I could get as many as two or three meetings in that State for next fall, I would be glad to make the trip. Those who want me should write me now and allow me time to hear from others before answering, so I could give an answer. I am better adapted to (and I rather prefer) work in the country or small towns. Up until now my work has all been in Oklahoma, Missouri, Arkansas, and Texas. Andy T. Ritchie is the only Tennessee preacher I am personally acquainted with."

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

I spent the first Sunday in January at Hohenwald, Tenn., preaching morning and night. The congregation at Hohenwald seems to be in good behavior and is working away as formerly. Some one said that our congregation was as large as, or larger than, all the other congregations of the town put together. Nearly all the business men of Hohenwald are our members. The main hotel, the bank, nearly all the dry goods merchants, and about all the grocerymen are with us. If it is not a good town, our congregation, perhaps, is more to blame for it than any one else, as the town is nearly run by the congregation. There has been a lot of faithful work done in and around Hohenwald in the days that are past. Brother Land, a faithful preacher of the gospel, spent a long and useful life in and around Hohenwald. The Halbrooks, Joseph and Steve, were reared not far from there. All three of them were good and strong men. All these men have passed to their reward, but the effects of their lives are still seen in the community. There are many good brethren and sisters in Hohenwald, and it is always a pleasure to be with them.

From Hohenwald, on Tuesday, January 4, I went down to Riverside, Tenn., where we have another good congregation of Christians. This is the home of Brother Horace Mann, who has worked hard to build up this congregation, and in doing so has developed into a first-class preacher of the gospel. While he is almost too modest to claim that he is a preacher at all, still the brethren say he is a preacher; and they must be right about it, for he preaches somewhere nearly every Sunday. Brother Mann could hardly be anything but a faithful Christian and have the mother he had. I knew both his father and mother at old Salem, in Franklin County.

I spent Wednesday night at Centerville, but it rained so hard we did not have many out at the meeting. The next day I visited around among the members and met a goodly number of them. They seem to be at peace and are working away. Brother Willie Morton, who preaches for them one Sunday in the month, is held in high esteem by all the members. I spent the night with Brother Derryberry, a druggist of the town. It is a pleasure to be in such a fine, Christian home.

Thursday night I was at Lyles, and preached to a good audience for such an unfavorable night. Brother George Lovell told me the congregation at Lyles was in good condition. Their weekly meetings are well attended and they take a great interest in their Bible study on the Lord's day.

Friday night I was at Dickson. This is the home of Brother I. B. Bradley. They have a nice meetinghouse and a large congregation at Dickson. Some one has evidently done good work there. I knew the congregation when it was not nearly so strong as it is now. The Gospel Advocate has a large list of subscribers at Dickson, and every one whose time was out seemed glad to get the chance to renew. If all the congregations were as loyal to the Advocate as the Dickson congregation is, it would flourish as it never has. No one turned me down, but they all seemed glad to see me. Brother Bradley was of great help to me. He is a friend to the Advocate, and so are all the brethren in Dickson.

I am now (January 9) in Waverly, but I will tell of my visit here in my next notes.

He Saw Cain.

BY E. B. NEAL.

Who saw Cain? Apostle David W. Patten, of the Latter-Day Saints' (or Mormon) Church.

When and where did he see Cain? In the spring of 1836, near Paris, in the State of Tennessee.

But to the story. Apostle Patten preached at Paris. He was making his way to the home of Levi Taylor, step-father of Abraham O. Smoot. Riding in the evening, just where his road lay through a dense growth of brush, called in Tennessee a "barren," he suddenly became aware that a person on foot by his side was keeping pace with the mule on which he rode. The following letter tells the story:

President J. F. Smith, Salt Lake City.—Dear Brother: In relation to the subject of the visit of Cain to Brother David W. Patten in the State of Tennessee, about which you wrote me, I will say that, according to the best of my recollection, it was the month of September, 1835.

It was in the evening, just twilight, when Brother Patten rode up to my father's house, alighted from his mule, and came into the house. The family immediately observed that his countenance was quite changed. My mother, having first noticed his changed appearance, said: "Brother Patten, are you sick?" He replied that he was not, but had just met with a very remarkable personage who had represented himself as being Cain, who murdered his brother, Abel. He went on to tell the circumstances as near as I can recall in the following language:

"As I was riding along the road on my mule, I suddenly noticed a very strange personage walking beside me. He walked along beside me for about two miles. His head was about even with my shoulders as I sat in my saddle. He wore no clothing, but was covered with hair. His skin was very dark. I asked him where he dwelt, and he replied that he had no home; that he was a wanderer in the earth and traveled to and fro. He said he was a very miserable creature; that he had earnestly sought death during his sojourn upon the earth, but that he could not die; and that his mission was to destroy the souls of men. About the time he expressed himself thus, I rebuked him in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and by virtue of the holy priesthood, and commanded him to go hence, and he immediately departed out of my sight. When he left me, I found myself near your house."

There was much conversation about the circumstances between Brother Patten and my family which I do not recall, but the above is in substance his statement to us at the time. The date is to the best of my recollection, and I think it is correct, but it may possibly have been in the spring of 1836; but I feel quite positive that the former date is right.

Hoping the above will be satisfactory to you and answer your purpose, I am, with the kindest regards, as ever, Your friend and brother,

A. O. SMOOT.

What an opportunity Patten had for solving the old problem, "Where did Cain get his wife?" with first-hand authority! Cain knew, if anybody did. Of course Prophet Joseph knew, and had, no doubt, informed Cain. He might have asked Cain why he stayed in Tennessee rather than in Missouri. There's an answer to that. I have more about Apostle (?) Patten and about Cain. I will close this article with the remark that this is a sample of the sop Mormons are fed on that the public generally does not learn about.

if you will cleanse the air passages with a douche, or spray, of warm salt water and then apply Mentholatum (as an antiseptic and delicate counter irritant).

Its volatile aromatic qualities destroy the germs and encourage restoration of the membranes. It brings easy breathing and relieves attendant headache.

Mentholatum is harmless, cleanly, and soothing. Its constituents are prescribed for this purpose by leading physicians everywhere.

It is also excellent for catarrh, croup, chapped skin, burns, and other forms of inflammation.

Ends Dry, Hoarse or Painful Coughs Quickly

A Simple, Home-Made Remedy, Inexpensive but Unequaled

The prompt and positive results given by this pleasant tasting, home-made cough syrup has caused it to be used in more homes than any other remedy. It gives almost instant relief and will usually overcome the average cough in 24 hours.

Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any drug store, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This makes a full pint—a family supply—of the most effective cough remedy at a cost of only 5¢ cents or less. You couldn't buy as much ready-made cough medicine for $2.50. Easily prepared and never spoils. Full directions with Pinex.

The promptness, certainty and ease with which this Pinex Syrup overcomes a bad cough, chest or throat cold is truly remarkable. It quickly loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes a painful cough in a hurry. With a persistent loose cough it stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the annoying hacking.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol and is famous the world over for its splendid effect in bronchitis, whooping cough, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

To avoid disappointment in making this, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., 233 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

INCREASED WEIGHT
22 POUNDS, SAYS
SERGEANT CAMPBELL

REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE OF KENTUCKY GUARDSMAN; PUTS ON FLESH AT RAPID RATE

"I got the trial package of Sargol, and was very much pleased with it," states Quartermaster Sergeant Campbell, of the First Kentucky Infantry, who sends us the photo, above. He reports that by the time he was on the fourth package his weight had increased twenty-two pounds and that he felt like another fellow.

"When I began to take Sargol," writes R. T. Sivells, "I only weighed one hundred and thirty-nine pounds. Now my weight has increased to one hundred and fifty-one pounds. Everybody says that I am getting so fat."

"I never felt better in my life since I have been taking Sargol. The first two weeks I gained ten pounds, and I am gaining every day. Sargol makes me eat and sleep, and I don't get up with a tired feeling any more," writes J. C. Weaver; and N. D. Sanderson adds: "When I started Sargol, I weighed one hundred and forty-seven pounds, and now I weigh one hundred and sixty pounds. Everybody is telling me how fat I have got in the last month."

Would you, too, like to quickly put from ten to thirty pounds of good, solid, "stay-there" flesh, fat, and muscular tissue between your skin and bones?

Don't say it can't be done. Try it. Let us send you free a 50-cent package of Sargol and prove what it can do for you.

More than half a million thin men and women have gladly made this test, and that Sargol does succeed, does make thin folks fat, even where all else has failed, is best proven by the tremendous business we have done. No drastic diet, flesh creams, massages, oils, or emulsions, but a simple, harmless home treatment. Cut out the coupon and send for this free package to-day, enclosing only 10 cents in silver to help pay postage, packing, etc.

Library Fund Must Be Raised For Abilene Christian College.

Under present regulations, junior colleges, to be classed as standard and to receive credit for their work in higher institutions, must have libraries of at least two thousand volumes bearing directly on the subjects taught. This means that Abilene Christian College must within a given time raise and expend at least two thousand dollars on her library, or cease to be classed as standard and to receive credit for her work.

Shall the first of our schools to obtain this recognition lose it because of the lack of this small fund? Surely not. We must not. We will not.

Not one who reads this would find it impossible to send a dollar on this fund. Won't you? Send in at once before you forget. Let it be one of your New Year gifts. Let us join hands and make Abilene Christian College a present of this absolute necessity. Of course some will not send their dollar. Others will have to make up for this by sending more. So you may honor yourself by sending five or ten or any number of dollars you can. We feel sure that the friends of Christian education will quickly take care of this demand on us.

We publish a live little college paper—the Optimist. The subscription price is fifty cents a year. This year we are going to give every cent of the subscription money to the library fund.

Each month we are going to publish in the Optimist the names of those who subscribe for the Optimist and send fifty cents or more as the honor roll. Every cent of this subscription money and of these donations will go to the library fund.

If you have good books on history, English, German, Latin, Greek, mathematics, chemistry, physics, economics, psychology, logic, ethics, the Bible, or education, you are willing to part with, send these. Get on the honor roll.

Send your subscriptions and gifts to Miss Wilna Zellner, secretary of the Library Committee.

Signed: H. E. Speck, Miss Wagstaff, Miss Walker, Miss Phillips, Miss Adams, Miss Philpott, Cland Sikes, Ed Whitmore, Howard Noles, Oliver Dobbs, Oran Hall, Alice Ezell, Lora Branch, Lorna Draper, Ova Harp, Annie Lou Estes, and Wilna Zellner, Library Committee.

We earnestly urge our brethren and sisters everywhere to respond promptly and as liberally as possible to this appeal of our Library Committee. Our school is in the best condition it has ever been in, and we feel sure you from Suffering.

Mrs. Mary A. Deas, Taunton, Mass., in her eighty-seventh year, says: "I thought I was beyond the reach of medicine, but Foley Kidney Pills have proven most beneficial in my case."

Mr. Sam A. Hoover, High Point, N. C., writes: "My kidney trouble was worse at night, and I had to get up from five to seven times. Now I do not have to get up at night, and consider myself in a truly normal condition, which I attribute to Foley Kidney Pills, as I have taken nothing else."

Mrs. M. A. Bridges, Robinson, Mass., says: "I suffered from kidney ailments for two years. I commenced taking Foley Kidney Pills ten months ago, and, though I am sixty-one years of age, I feel like a sixteen-year-old girl."

Foley Kidney Pills are tonic, strengthening, and upbuilding, and restore normal action to the kidneys and to a disordered and painful bladder. They act quickly and contain no dangerous or harmful drugs.

Among the Colored People

Another Year's Work Begun.

On the second and third Lord's days in December I preached to the little band at Flower's Chapel, Ky. The weather was rainy and bad and the attendance small. This is a weak point with a few members; but if they will be faithful, much good will be done. On the fourth Lord's day, morning and night, I spoke at the Jackson Street Church, in Nashville. This closed our work for 1915, and by the help of the Lord we have entered into another year's labor. The first Lord's day in January was a great day with us at Jackson Street. Brother G. P. Bowser spoke for us.

S. W. WOMACK.

Making Things New.

BY S. R. CASSIUS.

They tell us that "hell is paved with good intentions," and I fear that its walls are papered with good resolutions; and if we could gaze up at its ceiling, we would find it frescoed with standing committees. But in spite of all these handicaps, my intentions are such that I must tell them to the brethren.

Now listen! Thirty-five years ago God, through Christ, chose me to be a minister to my people—not a minister that wants to be a "pastor," but a minister that just cannot be satisfied unless he is among those that do not claim to know God in the pardon of sin. For this reason I am always poor and in need. Do you know, I don't think much of a preacher that never has to guess about where his car fare or money to buy food is to come from. It is so different from what the apostles had to contend with in their effort to carry the gospel to every creature and from the experience of the prophets. Some of them were stoned, some were sawn asunder, tempted, and slain in various ways. Instead of fine raiment, they wandered about clothed in the skins of sheep and goats; they were destitute, afflicted, and even tormented; but, saith the Scriptures, "the world was not worthy of them." They had to wander in the deserts and on mountains, and even had to live in caves and dens, but, praise the Lord, "the world was not worthy of them." Like Enoch, they had the testimony, that they pleased God. Those men, who suffered in order that we through their suffering might have access to God through faith, have set us an example, that we might through suffering show others the way of eternal life.

I believe the preacher's place is always out in new fields; that when he has preached the gospel in one place, he should move on to a new place. If he converts men and women to Christ, he should choose out from among them a "shepherd," or "pastor," whose duty it should be to feed and care for them until they become strong in the Lord. But the preacher, or evangelist, or whatever you might call him—his duty is to "go," and, as he goes, to "preach." It should be none of his business whether there are any "visible results" or not. His whole duty is to preach the word and to baptize those that believe his preaching.

My whole desire to-day is that I may this year make a new, high record for Christ and his church. But, brethren, my hands, my feet, and my will are tied for the want of the wherewith to go. It is with you. Shall I go, or shall I stand still and let my people continue to accept cunningly devised fables and believe the doctrine of devils, which is surely leading the entire race away from Jesus?

Let this be the beginning of years with us. Let us say, with the angel that talked with John: "Behold, I make all things new." "Here am I; send me." out of sorts and restless, you may know the stomach and liver are out of shape and a tonic is needed. Unless the organs are kept healthy, you provoke sickness and possible further complications. The best general tonic to tone up the system and keep the stomach and liver in healthy working order is Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Invigorator. Especially good for babies and growing children. Tasteless and pleasant. They take it eagerly. For sale everywhere. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

When the Baby Is Fretful,

10 CENT "CASCARETS"
IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

The Song Book That Pleases.

Some hymn books are passable; others give entire satisfaction. "New Gospel Song Book," edited by Brethren G. H. P. Showalter and Austin Taylor, is a selection of gospel songs especially prepared for use in the churches of Christ, and it pleases wherever it is used. Read the following from a well-known editor and preacher:

Paducah, Ky., 915 South Fourth Street, December 6, 1915.—Dear Brethren: We recently ordered and are using one hundred and twenty-five copies "New Gospel Song Book;" in fact, all the near-by churches are using it. We have used many different books, but have never had the equal of "New Gospel Song Book." I shall in the future, as in the past, do all I can to assist in its circulation.

Faithfully and fraternally,
C. M. STURBLEFIELD.

Another well-known brother from Louisville, Ky., who recently ordered a supply, writes that this book is giving splendid satisfaction. We have just filled a nice order for a large church in Canada. A few days ago a church in the State of Washington called for one hundred and fifty copies. Every day the book is being shipped in considerable quantities over the various States. We earnestly ask congregations of the churches of Christ to carefully examine this book before adopting a song book.

Prices, prepaid: Limp, copy, 35 cents; dozen, $4; hundred, $30. Full cloth, copy, 50 cents; dozen, $5.50; hundred, $40. If it is desired that the book contain rudiments, send five cents per copy extra.

Special Offer for Introduction.—One hundred copies in full-cloth binding for introduction, $25; one hundred copies in limp binding for introduction, $22. Transportation charges prepaid in each case by us.

The Master's Vineyard

Arkansas.

Buckner, January 4.—Brother Billingsley has just closed a very successful debate with L. S. Ballard at Beech Creek, near Waldo. Although Brother Billingsley is a young man and this was his first debate with the Baptists, yet, armed with the mighty truth of God, he was more than equal to the occasion. Considering the bad weather, the debate was well attended, and I believe it will result in much good later on. I fear that it will be some time before we get another debate there.

Boulder, January 2.—Perhaps it may not be amiss to again let the brotherhood hear from this part of God's vineyard, as we have not given up the fight yet, although we have had to part with Brother C. L. Huffman and family, which consisted of five adult and faithful members of the one body, they having had to move to a lower altitude for the benefit of Brother Courtland Huffman's health. But listen! While we were mourning the loss of those good, faithful, and true brethren, our hearts were made to rejoice by the moving into Boulder of the family of Brother Spencer, from Bedford, Iowa, who have proven themselves to be splendid, loyal brethren. Brother Spencer and son are both splendid singers, and both have gone to work in earnest with us, which we greatly appreciate, and we hope and pray for greater activity in the congregation here during the coming summer than has ever been before. On the second Lord's day in December the writer preached twice for the Bellvue congregation, the visible results being two added to the one body. The Lord willing, I will begin a protracted meeting there the latter part of this month, as the brethren there are very anxious to do something for Christ. While at Bellvue we located two families of brethren at Fort Collins, who promised to begin keeping house for the Lord by meeting in their own homes on Lord's day. They are Brother O. H. Brown and family and Brother Warren Harvey and family. We hope and pray that by the faithfulness of these brethren others may be led to accept salvation upon the terms specified in God's word. Brethren everywhere, pray for more good, consecrated workers for the Colorado field; and while you pray, if there is any other way you are able to assist us, either financially or otherwise, let me ask you in the name of Jesus, who died for you, to do so; for "the harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few."

Tarpon Springs, January 3.—Brother J. M. Norwood has just located at Tarpon Springs. He expects to establish a church here. Though the brethren are few in number (only about twenty) and poor in this world's goods, yet most of them seem rich in the faith, and I trust they will succeed.
A. M. JONES.

Lake City, January 6.—I shall leave home and loved ones next Saturday for a series of meetings to continue indefinitely. I expect to be away four or five weeks doing the work of an evangelist, and continuing in that line when and where the Lord directs. Pray for me and the work.

Atlanta, January 3.—The new year had a glorious beginning yesterday with the Atlanta work. Brother Ritchie has taken charge of the Golden Hill work, and the interest is growing weekly. Brother Graves preached at East Point in the forenoon. A brother from whom we had to withdraw confessed his wrongs and was restored to fellowship. He spoke in the afternoon at Ingleside to a splendid audience. Dr. Pain spoke at South Pryor Street, and reports a most interesting service. Brother Bearden preached at West End Avenue at night. The writer spoke there in the forenoon. There were two confessions and baptisms and one from the Baptists. He spoke in the afternoon to a splendid audience at the Chestnut Street Mission. To-day I began my fifth month's tubercular treatment for tuberculosis. I am now on my eighth pint of Solguatone, a tonic with creosote as its principal ingredient. The doctors tell me that they will dismiss me at the end of this month, if no new developments are seen. I weigh one hundred and ninety pounds, eat well, sleep well, and am working as hard as I can. I am so thankful for the way God has blessed me. I am beginning my tenth year's work in this city, and everything indicates that it will be the best. I ask the brethren to continue their prayers for me.

Coal City, January 3.—Brother O. D. Maple has delivered his historical and scriptural lectures for the church of Christ here. Brother Maple is true to the Book and the primitive cause; he hews to the line and sticks to the Book. We especially mention his lectures on the Reformation and the Restoration as masterpieces and just what our brethren everywhere should hear. From what we know of Brother Maple and from his sermons and lectures, we regard him as true to the Book. We wish the churches would keep him busy proclaiming the truth. Write him at Vincennes, Ind., or 422 Elm Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

ducted by the church of Christ in Terre Haute resulted in much good for the cause of Christ. Three were baptized and three restored, with the promise of several new members that were located during the meeting by seeing the outline of the sermons in the daily papers, then visited the meeting, and discovered that it was the church they were looking for, and expressed themselves as being numbered with the congregation, and all the members expressed themselves as greatly strengthened; and while they are using a rented building at present, they contemplate, in the near future, buying or building near where they now worship. This congregation has a very bright future. They are all in perfect unity and harmony. There appears to be nothing that would prevent their prospering in the good work. They are fortunate in having two splendid preachers in the congregation—Brethren Slough and Perkins. They will assist the brethren in the advancement of the cause in Terre Haute, each one preaching regularly. In addition to their services, Brother Carl Mann will preach part of the time; and they hope to have Brother D. O. Squire, of Linton, to visit them.

Bowling Green, January 3.—I began work at this place the first of the year. We had good audiences on Lord's day, and one young man made the confession and was baptized at the service at night. In the afternoon I preached at Woodburn to an attentive audience. We are hoping to see the cause of our Lord move forward here this year. I am living near the Potter Orphan Home and School, and that institution is getting along well under the faithful management of Brother J. H. Hines. Arrangements are being made as rapidly as possible to take others into the Home. It is a blessing to be in the Home and see the interest taken in the study of the word of the Lord. May the Lord bless all in this and like homes and cause his people to do more and more of such work in his name.

Sedalla, January 3.—I am now ready to do mission work in Central Missouri. Any brother of the church of Christ may write me here, and, if possible, I will come. All that will keep me from responding to worthy calls in mission work is that I cannot raise the railroad fare. I am fixed now so I can live at least a few months without work, and I would like to devote that time to preaching the word of God to people in mission fields who have not heard the real truth.

A Foe to Tuberculosis

The Journal of the American Medical Association (August 9, 1914), reviewing an article on "The Influence of Calcium Salts on Constitution and Health," said: "They (the authors) report numbers of concrete instances in which patients gained in vitality and energy after taking calcium."

Doctors agree that in tuberculosis lowered vitality and lost energy must be overcome.

One of the constituents of Eckman's Alterative is calcium (lime), in such combination with other valuable ingredients as to be easily assimilated by the average person. To this, in part, is due its success in the treatment of tuberculosis—a disease which even some ethical practitioners have acknowledged to their patients. We make no wholesale claims for it but since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, a trial is safe. Price $1 and $2 per bottle. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct from the Laboratory. We would like to send you a booklet containing information of value and references.

Notes from India.

BY W. HUME M'HENRY.

In America, in many places, you no doubt find it difficult to give away a religious tract or book. This may be the reason why our dear brethren are slow in sending funds for this part of the work in India. If you could have been with us as we made our recent trip to Naini Tal and seen the eagerness with which the people cried for books, I feel sure that your purse strings would loosen and that you would joyfully give to this fund. Just imagine this scene—people, old and young, clamoring: "Sir, give me a holy book." But after a short time our only answer was: "Friend, they are all gone." O, how we wished that we had had a train load of them to give away! One boy, almost grown, came to us as we were leaving the station, and said: "I gave away the books you gave me. Please give me some more of them." He gave us his name and asked us to send him some so that he might give them to the people. The man who takes care of the station made the same request. This is a golden opportunity for us to reach several millions of people with the gospel; and printing is so cheap. Did you know that five dollars will purchase one thousand copies of either of the Gospels or Acts? Did you know that with our press we can print nearly twenty thousand copies of a good tract for only five dollars? Shall such small amounts keep us from giving them the gospel in their own tongue? Please send me an offering for this fund. Do not forget, also, that we want five dollars per month for native workers' support. We will also appreciate an offering to help pay for our press. Remember!

When we reached the station at Satara road as we were leaving on our recent trip for Naini Tal, we found that there was not available a comfortable European compartment for third-class passengers. The guard placed us in the second-class compartment. As our custom is, we began to hand out tracts and books to the people along the way. The guard, noticing this, came and asked if I had some in English. I had a few copies of our tract, "We Have Forgotten God." He inquired of us who we were and about the church we represented. I gave him such information as I could during the time he had to spend in talking with us. He said: "I could have put you in a car with some other rough people; but I could see the mark of the Lamb upon you and knew that you were God's people; so I wanted to make your journey as comfortable as possible." This we appreciated very much. After reading the tract, he came back to our window and told me

Sage Tea Dandy to Darken Hair.

It's grandma's recipe to bring back color and luster to hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you will get a fifty-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous sage-tea recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly, and thin, have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around: so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Gospel Advocate Piano Club Prevents Waste.

You will not find many men who would deliberately throw away one hundred dollars, and yet there are many who unintentionally waste that amount every year in one way or another. Careless buying is one of the most common ways of wasting money. The founders of the club had that fact in mind when they adopted the principle of cutting down the cost of pianos by cutting out the waste in marketing them. The club claims to save its members forty per cent, and asks you to give it an opportunity to prove this fact to your entire satisfaction by thoroughly testing the piano in your own home before obligating yourself to pay for it. It will cost you only a postal card to investigate; and if the testimony of club members who have already received their instruments is to be relied upon, you will undoubtedly be delighted with the saving in price, the convenient terms, and the superior quality of the instruments. By uniting our orders in a club of one hundred members, each secures the benefit of the lowest possible factory price and yet is responsible only for his own order.

Write for your copy of the catalogue and full particulars to-day. Address The Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

This means big and little tents, and we make all kinds. A thousand satisfied users testify to their quality. Let us make you a quotation. No trouble at all.

that this was just what he himself believed. He said that he had a number of friends along the line and that he would give away the copies which I gave him and would write for others when these were all given away. He also said that he and his wife and others of the guards called themselves "Christians" and spoke of themselves as members of the church of Christ, yet I was the first person that he had ever met that was a member of the church of Christ. He asked me to visit him whenever I had time. This I will do if the Lord wills, for it seems to be an opportunity to open up work among the English-speaking people of this country, especially among the English-speaking natives.

On Abusing the Scriptures.

BY GUY RENFRO.

The Bible, used and applied aright, is an unerring guiding star, leading one to think noble and pure thoughts, to direct his life in such a way as to develop a character of the greatest usefulness, and finally to make one an heir of an eternal home brightened by the never-fading glory of God. But the word of God can be woefully abused to support one's theory; and because the Scriptures are recognized as authority by the majority of people, it is no uncommon thing to see examples of such abuse in both the religious and political realms.

Our President recently gave us a notable example of a case of this kind. When he changed his mind about the necessity of extra preparedness for war, he gave Ezek 33: 2-8 to justify his policy before the people. Then Mr. Roosevelt comes out and claims first honor for finding this passage, saying that he had already used it in a speech and also in a magazine article. As the passage is so significant to the minds of some, I give it here: "Son of man, speak to the children of thy people, and say unto them, When I bring the sword upon a land, and the people of the land take a man from among them, and set him for their watchman; if, when he seeth the sword come upon the land, he blow the trumpet, and warn the people; then whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning, if the sword come, and take him away, his blood shall be upon his own head. He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning; his blood shall be upon him; whereas if he had taken warning, he would have delivered his soul. But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned, and the sword come, and take any person from among them; he is taken away in his iniquity, but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand."

Who would have thought of that passage applying to the present conditions in our nation, except a man who already had his mind fixed, and was looking for something to justify him?

I want it understood that I am not trying to make an impression either for or against preparedness, but simply want to show how easy it is to desecrate the Scriptures to support our theories. Any person who uses passages from the Bible to support his doctrine without taking into consideration the "whole counsel of God" on the subject is, to my mind, abusing the Scriptures. So if one of my brethren, even one in whom I have great confidence, comes to me with some new or peculiar doctrine, claiming scriptural support, I am slow to take it up, realizing that there is danger, unless the "whole counsel of God" demands such a course. There seems to be no limit to divisions in the religious world, all claiming scriptural authority for their existence; but any one must know that the word of God, rightly used, could not justify them.

Danger from Little Wounds.

A little cut or wound that looks trivial frequently develops into a serious and possibly fatal case of blood poisoning. Do not take any risk. Apply a little Gray's Ointment; it speedily heals the wound and leaves you safe and sound. Gray's Ointment is the time-tested cure for sores, boils, carbuncles, cuts, bruises, burns, and all skin abrasions and eruptions. It was discovered in 1820; for nearly a century an indispensable household remedy the country over. Keep a box in the house. It heals the little troubles and prevents the big ones. Only 25 cents a box, at druggists; and it will save you many an ache and possibly a life. Get a free sample by writing to W. F. Gray & Co., 818 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn.

Many Failures Are Due to Headaches.

A headache saps your energy and ambition; it kills your vigor and vitality.

Many have become not only nervous wrecks, but business and domestic failures, owing to the constant drain on their nervous systems by headaches.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills have for the past quarter of a century proved to be the popular relief for headaches and other forms of pain. They bring the desired relief surely and quickly. They contain no habit-forming drugs and have no bad after effects. People who have used them are only too glad to testify to their merits, so that others may also be free from pain.

The Rev. J. A. Riley, of Trout, La., has the following to say: "For over ten years I have used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills whenever I was in need of a remedy for pain, to allay fever or induce a natural sleep. I also find that they quiet the nerves. I have used them freely in my family to the exclusion of all other remedies, and have always found them to do their work to perfection, and never in a single instance have they had any bad after effects. I heartily recommend them as a safe, pleasant, and effective remedy."

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are sold by all druggists at twenty-five cents for twenty-five doses. Your money will be returned if they are not found perfectly satisfactory.

Cutting Down the Cost of Pianos.

Have you ever stopped to ask yourself the question why oranges which sell for five cents each cost only two cents by the box, or why apples sell so much cheaper by the bushel than by a nickel's worth? It is the same way with pianos. If you were to purchase one hundred pianos (eight car loads) from the factory, you would get a much lower price than if you purchased only one. That is why the Gospel Advocate Piano Club, composed of one hundred buyers who club their orders into one big order, is saving its members at least forty per cent on high-grade pianos and player pianos.

You are cordially invited to write for your copy of the club's beautifully illustrated catalogue, which fully explains the big saving in price, the convenient terms, and the guarantees of quality and permanent satisfaction. THE WORLD'S BEST MUSIC.

SELECT LIST OF NEW STANDARD SHEET-MUSIC PUBLICATIONS—IN CONSTANT DEMAND—SONGS THAT LIVE FOREVER.

The Most Charming Musical Hits of the Century, by Claude Weber, the Famous Composer and Natural Song Writer of World-Wide Reputation.

The following ten publications (elegant sheet music in colors and half-tone) are regular fifty-cent issues which are offered to the retail trade for twenty-five cents per copy, or five copies for one dollar. They are considered the cream of songs, and are above the average of popular music. The enormous demand for our music by all classes of people compels us to affirm the fact that it outsells all other musical publications, which fact is also declared by our agents or representatives, who report that "It is the kind of music that sells."

"Sweet Caroline," "America Our Home," "Ross Lee," "Bride of My Heart," "Cottage by the Lake," "Ella Harvard Has No Peer," "Sweet Madeline," "Take Me Back to Dixie," "Belle of Broadway," "My Alabama Belle," are also exceedingly charming pieces which music lovers admire.

The above selections are the BEST and most desirable music on the market. "Alabama Belle" is the latest issue, is exceedingly brilliant, catchy, and melodious throughout, as is also "Belle of Broadway" and "Sweet Caroline."

The foregoing list are regular fifty-cent publications. Single copies are offered for twenty-five cents, or five copies for $1.00. Attractive proposition for representatives.

How many will volunteer to work for the Gospel Advocate?

FROM THE FIELD

Tennessee.

Livingston, Route 1, January 1.—Brother J. P. Watson recently held a meeting at Holly Spring. Three confessed the Saylor and were baptized. The meeting was hindered much by bad weather. I preached at Flat Creek on the first Sunday in December, in the morning, and at Walnut Grove in the afternoon. On the second Sunday I preached at Holly Spring, and on the third Sunday I preached at Hilham. All of these places seem to be pressing forward in the good work.

WILLIE HUNTER.

Texas.

Fort Worth, January 3.—Our work here in Fort Worth is beginning the new year in fine shape. I preached to two large crowds at the Glenwood congregation yesterday. One confession. During the year 1915 one hundred and four were added to the congregation. The freewill offerings were more than fifteen hundred dollars.

HORACE W. BERRY.

Denison, January 3.—Two were baptized Wednesday night, two more Sunday night. Audiences fine, interest good, prospect encouraging. May the Lord help us to do greater things for him this year than ever before. He has wonderfully blessed us, and will bless us if we will keep busy in his vineyard. I trust that brethren will spend less time and space this year about "words to no profit" and more to the use of edifying. I am resolved to do more work for the Master.

T. E. MILHOLLAND.

Fort Worth, January 4.—I desire to tip my hat to the Gospel Advocate and wish it a most happy and prosperous New Year. The grip sent me in home from my work up in Kansas in December. Brother W. M. Davis (of the Central Church, of this place) is now in a meeting in Topeka, Kan. (a meeting I aimed to have held), and I am taking his place here while he is away. Brother Davis is a great man and a strong preacher. The brethren in Texas should be, and are, proud of him. At the regular monthly business meeting of Central Church last Sunday evening, the church was reported as being out of debt and happy over the work accomplished in the year 1915. After this month I will be ready for work wherever I may be needed and wanted. I am anxious to be a very busy man in my Master's vineyard all the while. My address is 1500 North Ballinger Street.

T. W. PHILLIPS.

Mount Pleasant, January 2.—I here give a brief report of my work during the year just passed. I made an average of preaching twice on each Lord's day for fifty Lord's days. I held six protracted meetings and one debate. My debate was with A. L. Eaves, the Baptist champion for this part of the State. I consider him very good material for the boys to practice on. I baptized a goodly number and helped several to restore themselves. My support fell short of what it should have been. There is great need of

Possibly you have imagined that you could never get your own consent to write a testimonial letter; but if you have ever experienced the excruciating pains of rheumatism, you can at least appreciate the feelings of those who have been relieved of this terrible disease by drinking the Mineral Water from the justly celebrated Shivar Spring at Shelton, S. C. This water overcomes many diseases, including indigestion, gout, uric-acid poison, and liver and kidney diseases; but no patrons of the Spring are more enthusiastic in their praise of the water than those who have been relieved of their rheumatism. Hundreds of letters like the following have been received by the management:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your spring water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted usefully in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time it will produce a permanent cure. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, and stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant, of Savannah, writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there, and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living, when I began to use Shivar Spring Water and in a short time was cured."

Mr. Rhodes, of Virginia, writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for rheumatism. I know of several who were cured of rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done more good than any medicine I have ever taken for rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam, of South Carolina, writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from rheumatism, and after drinking twenty gallons of your mineral water was entirely cured of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter, of Virginia, writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

If you suffer with rheumatism or with any chronic disease, accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to the Shivar Spring, Box 21, R. Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen: I accept your guarantee offer and inclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons (two five-gallon demijohns) of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give the water a fair trial, in accordance with instructions which you will send; and if I derive no benefit, you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return promptly.

gospel preachers in this district; but it will take grace and grit, as the work is nearly all mission work. There are about eight counties here in the north-east corner of Texas that have about two or three preachers in them, and these preachers are too poor to do the work for nothing—I mean too poor to put in all their time for the support they would get out of it locally. There are two or three good-sized towns where Bible Christianity is practically unknown. I am poor and

In debt and have a large family to support, but I am going to do what I can to reach these lost people. If our people had more system about their work, I could go into this work with the assurance that we would not suffer. I think the heathen (people without the gospel) in our immediate vicinity are just as precious to God as those across the seas. As to who and what I am, I refer to Brother T. R. Burnett, of Dallas; and if any are interested enough to write me, I can give them the names of some of the best men in Texas who will stand by me. I was for years one of the field editors of the Eye-Opener and of the Faithful Witness. Now I want to take up this work as a missionary, or evangelist, depending upon those of the brotherhood far and near, who love the cause of Christ and the souls of men better than this world, for a support. My whole heart is in this work. I am not making a call for help, but merely stating conditions and facts, and I know that all who are true to Christ will feel that they should help. One reason that digression is making such headway is because we who love the truth are so afraid of being called "digressive" that we will let people be lost before we will try to send them the gospel. Why not put a man in this field, as well as all other destitute fields, and furnish him with a full supply of tracts, leaflets, etc., setting forth the truth, to be distributed free, so that many could get the truth? Adventists and Mormons do this with their error; then why not give the truth the same chance to be heard? Brethren, I am in earnest; what say you? Later I will send proper commendations. Pray for me.

ED S DUNCAN.

Keeps Our Bodies Warm.

Pure, rich, red blood is a necessity in the production of animal heat. It keeps our bodies warm. We all know very well that when the arteries that carry it to a limb are bound or tied, the temperature of the limb is immediately lowered.

There is a suggestion in this that, at this time of year especially, we should take Hood's Sarsaparilla if our blood is impure, impoverished, or pale. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood good in quality and quantity. It has an unequalled record for radically and permanently removing blood diseases, scrofula, rheumatism, and catarrh, and giving strength and tone to the whole system. It is a scientific combination of roots, barks, herbs, and other medicinal substances that have long been used by successful physicians. Get it to-day.

WHAT IS URIC ACID?

The Cause of Backache, Rheumatism, Gravel, and Sudden Death.

Ever since the discovery of uric acid in the blood by Scheele, in 1775, and the bad effect it had upon the body, scientists and physicians have striven to rid the tissues and the blood of this poison. Because of its overabundance in the system, it causes backache, pains here and there, rheumatism, gout, gravel, neuralgia, and sciatica. It was Dr. Pierce who discovered a new agent, called "Anuric," which will throw out and completely eradicate this uric acid from the system. "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more potent than Uthia, and consequently you need no longer fear muscular or articular rheumatism or gout, or many other diseases which are dependent on an accumulation of uric acid within the body. Send to Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., for a pamphlet on "Anuric," and send ten cents for a large trial package of "Anuric" Tablets.

If you feel that tired, worn-out feeling, backache, neuralgia, or if your sleep is disturbed by too frequent urination, go to your best store and ask for Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets.

Dr. Pierce's reputation is back of this medicine, and you know that his "Pleasant Pellets" for the liver and his "Favorite Prescription" for the ills of women have had a splendid reputation for the past fifty years.

OUTLINES OF BIBLE STUDY

REVISED AND ENLARGED

BY G. DALLAS SMITH

FOR USE IN

BIBLE DRILLS, BIBLE READINGS, BIBLE CLASSES, PRAYER MEETINGS, AND HOME STUDY

A BRIEF DESCRIPTION

Outlines of Bible Study (Revised and Enlarged) is a book of one hundred and twenty pages, besides five full-page maps covering all Bible lands. It is printed in large, clear type, on good, heavy paper, and is substantially bound in stiff cloth.

The book contains seventeen drill lessons for use in Bible drills, Bible readings, or any other Bible class where it is desired to cover the entire scope of the Sacred Record in a short time.

Outlines of Bible Study is not a commentary in any sense of the word. It contains but few comments. It is not "literature" in the same sense that some object to literature. It rather guides one in his study that it may be intelligent and systematic.

PRICES

Single copy, prepaid, fifty cents; one dozen copies, prepaid, $5.50; twenty-five copies, not prepaid, $10; fifty copies, not prepaid, $18.50; one hundred copies, not prepaid, $35.

RHEUMATISM CONQUERED

I say that I can conquer rheumatism with a simple home treatment, without electrical treatment, stringent diet, weakening baths, or in fact any other of the usual treatments recommended for the cure of rheumatism.

Don't shut your eyes and say "impossible," but put me to the test.

You may have tried everything you ever heard of and have spent your money right and left. I say "well and good," let me prove my claims without expense to you.

Let me send you without charge a trial treatment of DELANO'S RHEUMATIC CONQUEROR. I am willing to take the chance and surely the test will tell.

So send me your name and the test treatment will be sent you at once. When I send you this, I will write you more fully, and will show you that my treatment is not only for banishing rheumatism, but should also cleanse the system of Uric Acid and give great benefit in kidney trouble and help the general health.

This special offer will not be held open indefinitely. It will be necessary for you to make your application quickly. As soon as this discovery becomes better known I shall cease sending free treatments and shall then charge a price for this discovery which will be in proportion to its great value. So take advantage of this offer before it is too late. Remember, the test costs you absolutely nothing. F. H. Delano, 541 F, Delano Bldg Syracuse, N. Y.

The Work in Anniston, Ala.

BY RUSSELL S. KING.

In my last report I told of the purchasing of the building in which we worship, paying for it forty dollars per month and the interest on each note. Since then we have put in new electric lights, a baptistry, and a pulpit. All these repairs and the purchase of twenty-five chairs cost us about one hundred and forty dollars. Sunday, January 2, was a great day with us. Our Sunday school was well attended and the crowd at each preaching service was greater than at any time during the meeting. At the morning service a young man came forward and was baptized in the afternoon. This is our second addition since last report. We are confidently expecting two others next Lord's day. No one outside of our congregation has contributed to our support yet, but we hope some will do so and thereby help us hold another meeting soon. Will not some congregations send us five dollars monthly until our debt is paid? I am doing the preaching for the congregation now, and have refused to accept a penny from the work before the church debt is raised.

We shall be very glad to have any preaching brother visit us when passing near, and any brother or sister in Anniston on Sundays or Wednesday nights will find a royal welcome at Fifteenth and Cobb Streets.

The Dog in the Manger.

BY H. W. JONES.

A dog was lying in the manger and would neither eat the hay himself nor allow the ox to eat it. He would growl and bark and bite at the ox when the ox would eat the provender.

Moral: Our religious neighbors among the denominations should not growl and bark at us for wearing the God-given names in the Bible when they will not take them as their only names, etc., but persist in calling themselves other names than those found in God's holy word. While we claim to be Christians only, members of the church of God, the church of Christ (which is the only church we read about in the New Testament), they discourteously dub us as "Campbellites," "water dogs," members of the "Campbellite Church," etc., and persist in calling themselves "Methodists," "Baptists, Presbyterians," etc. Why? They say: "If we call you people 'Christians,' etc., it leaves the impression that we are not Christians and members of the church of God or church of Christ." So they will neither eat the hay themselves nor allow us to do so without growling, barking, and biting at us continually. And why, I cannot see, as we claim no

Salts Fine For Kidneys.

We eat too much meat, which clogs kidneys, then the back hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness, and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean; and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink, which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

monopoly on the God-given names in the Bible, but rather invite them to unite with us on the Bible as our only creed and accept and wear the God-given names, etc., as the only appellations to be known by; but they will not. (See Luke 11: 52.)

is closely connected with your nerves—so close, in fact, that anything which affects your nerves must necessarily affect your heart, and vice versa.

If you are troubled with palpitation, dizziness, shortness of breath, swelling of ankles, pain on either side of the chest, or weak and irregular pulse, symptoms of a nervous breakdown, the best way to remedy the trouble is by giving your heart and nerves the proper tonic. Renovine for the heart and nerves is the best tonic for soothing and restoring a shattered nervous system. For sale by all reliable dealers, fifty cents and one dollar. Manufactured by the Van Fleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

BY JOHN T. POE.

If a man lack knowledge, let him give his time to reading, to study, and to meditation. "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not." We may find knowledge by association with men and books; but God is the fountain of all wisdom, for in him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and goodness and all that goes to make one wise and noble and good. And in Jesus are hid now all these uplifting treasures that elevate, ennoble, and purify humanity. So that we can truthfully say that "every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights. There is no other source, and he who would be wise or truly noble and good must draw his supply from God alone.

Knowledge is not wisdom. Many men have great knowledge, but little or no wisdom. But I speak not of the wisdom of this world, which is only foolishness in the sight of God, but of that wisdom which cometh from God, that wisdom which enables us to look at things as they really are—the shortness of life here, the certainty of death—and, on the brink of eternity, to realize the worth of flying moments here and the value of a soul saved in the eternal world. In this we recognize that true, divine wisdom which cometh from God. Man's wisdom is but foolishness in the sight of God. In his own wisdom, man builds for himself on earth; in God's wisdom, he pours himself out upon others that he may lift up and save—that he may ennoble and purify his race. In God's wisdom, he denies himself all good here that he may be glorified and have all good in eternity. Man's wisdom cannot see the grave, except as he seeks all good here and looks not beyond this life. Man's wisdom looks at it for others. For him there is no death, no grave, but for others there is a certainty of both; and if he himself must die, it comes to him as the greatest surprise of his life. And as a last resort, in his worldly wisdom, he tries to take advantage of some sort of bankrupt law and go in for another life, anyhow. But human wisdom cannot thus settle accounts with God. God's wisdom provides a means of cancellation of all our misdeeds here and a birthright to eternal life, in Christ; but men, in their own wisdom, refuse it and walk after their own ways and are lost. God created man for his own use, for a great and noble purpose. Man assumes to be his own Master, to guide his own way, and is lost. He gets much of this world, leaves it behind at death, and loses all he might have had in store

Sister: Read My Free Offer!

I am a woman.
I know a woman's trials.
I know her need of sympathy and help.

If you, my sister, are unhappy because of ill-health, if you feel unfit for household duties, social pleasures, or daily employment, write and tell me just how you suffer, and ask for my free ten days' trial of a home treatment suited to your needs. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any man. I want to tell you how to cure yourself at home at a cost of about 12 cents a week. If you suffer from women's peculiar ailments causing pain in the head, back, or bowels, feeling of weight and dragging down sensation, falling or displacement of pelvic organs, causing kidney and bladder weakness or constipation and piles, painful or irregular periods, catarrhal conditions and discharges, extreme nervousness, depressed spirits, melancholy, desire to cry, fear of something evil about to happen, creeping feeling along the spine, palpitation, hot flashes, weariness, sallow complexion with dark circles under the eyes, pain in the left breast or a general feeling that life is not worth living.

I INVITE YOU TO SEND TODAY FOR MY FREE TEN DAYS' TREATMENT

and learn how these ailments can be easily and surely conquered at home without the dangers and expense of an operation. When you are cured, and able to enjoy life again, you can pass the good word along to some other sufferer. My home treatment is for young or old. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain how to overcome green sickness (chlorosis), irregularities, headaches, and lassitude in young women and restore them to plumpness and health. Tell me if you are worried about your daughter. Remember it costs you nothing to give my home treatment a ten days' trial, and does not interfere with daily work. If health is worth asking for, then accept my generous offer and write for the free treatment, including my illustrated booklet, "Women's Own Medical Adviser." I will send all in plain wrappers postpaid. To save time, you can cut out this offer, mark your feelings, and return to me. Send today, as you may not see this offer again. Address, MRS. M. Brother Hines Expresses Gratitude.

During the personal ministry of our Savior he told a certain man to go unto his friends and tell them of the great things the Lord had done for him and how he had mercy on him. I feel that it would be very ungrateful, indeed, on my part, not to tell our many friends who are interested in this great work of caring for poor, homeless children how great things God has done for us and how he has had mercy on us.

Among the many things which we have received from God is health. It gives me pleasure to inform our friends that we have had no sickness, except one case of tonsillitis, for two years. He has blessed us with a good home, plenty of food and clothing. To sum it all up, he has supplied every need of ours according to his riches in glory in Christ Jesus.

Our prayer has ever been: "Lord, enlarge our border." I am glad to state that the Lord has answered the prayers of his children and has provided a way for twenty or twenty-five more children. To him be the praise, glory, and honor. J. H. HINES, Superintendent Potter Orphans' Home.

Learn to Play Piano or Organ in One Evening!

You Can Learn to Play Piano or Organ in One Evening at Home By NEW METHOD. Sent Absolutely FREE on a Seven-Day Trial to Prove It. We Will Teach You to Play the Piano or Organ, and Will Not Ask You One Cent Until You Can Play. FREE

In this hurrying, busy twentieth century, people cannot afford to take several hours a day for several years in learning to play. They demand something easier, a shorter, simpler way—and this "Easy Form" Music Method is the result. Any person of ordinary intelligence can now sit right down and play, without any lessons, practice or special training. Just read the simple directions, turn to the selection you most fancy in the big volume of music, and PLAY IT!

Any Child Can Play at Once

The "Easy Form" way is simplicity itself. No puzzling marks to study on, no mystic symbols and Chinese-looking characters to confuse you. With this new method you don't have to know one note from another, yet in a single evening you can play your favorite music with all the fingers of both hands, and play it well. It's so simple that it might justly be called

Shorthand in Music

No more spending of years in study and practice. Why? Because music has now been simplified so that anybody who can read printed letters—C-D-E-F-G-A-B-C—can read the new "Easy Form" music at a glance, and the key-board guide which is placed behind the keys shows you where to put the fingers of both hands on the right keys every time. No chance for failure; anyone can learn quickly. Young children and old people learn to play in a few hours and amaze and delight their friends.

You don't have to take anybody's word for "Easy Form," either. We think the best way to prove it is to let you, yourself, be the judge. You can't doubt its value when you have learned to play by this method in a single evening. Therefore, we have decided to show our faith in "Easy Form" by sending the complete system—full instructions—100 pieces of standard music (all the favorites) and key-board guide—upon receipt of the coupon, without asking for a cent of money.

What Do You Think of That! Never Played Before and Now Just Hear Her!

Thousands of Delighted Patrons

We have thousands of letters like the ones printed below, telling how quickly and easily people who didn't know one note from another learned to play by the "Easy Form" Music Method. It is so simple that there is no chance for mistake or failure—and the trial is absolutely FREE.

Much Easier Than Expected

I found your "Easy Form" just as you said. I think it is great and much easier than I thought. I do not doubt a firm when they will send their goods before they get their money. E. B. BARNES, E. F. D. 2, San Marcos, Tex.

"Easy Form" in District School

I like the book and system very much. My little granddaughter, age 10 years old, plays for our district school. From the same book. MRS. M. E. WADE, B. 2, Box 46, Bolcourt, Kan.

Learned 100 Pieces in One Week

I have had "Easy Form" one week and can play any piece in the book, correctly. I am very much pleased with it. ELEANOR EVERETT, Box 612, LaGrange, N. C.

Better Than Seven Years of Lessons

I have had "Easy Form" four weeks and was out of town one week. I practice about fifteen minutes daily, and can play several pieces as good as my sister-in-law, who has taken lessons seven years. MRS. ARTHUR I. VAN KLEEK, 1830 4th Ave. N., Mason City, Iowa.

75 Years Old—Learned in Three Hours

If I could not use the "Easy Form" method I would be ashamed to say so. It is very simple and easy to understand. I learned it in three hours. I am 75 years old, and never tried to play on the piano or organ, and did not know where middle C was until I got your easy method. Yes, anyone can learn to play by it. REV. G. D. KING, Pastor, Christian Church, Porterville, Cal.

Send No Money

We don't want your money until you have given "Easy Form" a trial and concluded that you want to buy it. Keep the system for seven days, test it, see how easily it is to play. Then if you can hear to part with it, return it in seven days and owe us nothing. If you want to keep it (as you will) it will only be necessary to send us $1.50 at once. The balance may be paid in small monthly payments until the total price of $6.50 is paid. Remember, you are the judge. If you don't want to buy the "Easy Form" system after using it for seven days, you will not be at even a penny's expense. But don't delay. Send the coupon now—today—while this remarkable offer remains open.

"EDIFYING AS THE NEED MAY BE"

BY A. B. LIPSCOMB

The Value of An Intimate Glimpse.

Balzac and De Maupassant are accounted to be unusually forceful and original writers because, instead of writing down the regular annals of the French court as preserved by its historians, they tell the inner secrets of the court as revealed by chambermaids, ladies in waiting, butlers, and other attaches. It is often the hardest task in historical research to get such an intimate glimpse. We know the outer life of societies, of families, of dynasties; we see them in their external form and symmetry; we behold them in their company dress and in their public appearances; but till we get to know and realize their common everyday life, how they ate, drank, and slept, we fail to grasp the most important side of their existence. That is why the sixth chapter of Acts is so important. It gives us a useful glimpse into the inner life of the primitive church. This church is often spoken of as if its social and spiritual fabric were wholly unlike our own; as if sin and infirmity were entirely absent and perfect holiness prevailed. But this chapter disillusionizes that thought. When the disciples were increasing by the thousands and the hearts of the apostles were all aglow with the success of their labors, "there arose a murmuring of the Grecian Jews against the Hebrews." This shows us that the presence of supernatural gifts, the power of working miracles and speaking with other tongues, did not raise the spiritual level of some of the believers above that we find in the church of the present day.

The Happiest Days.

The cause of the appointment of the seven helpers is shown in these words: "Now in these days, when the number of the disciples was multiplying, there arose a murmuring of the Grecian Jews against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration." The appointment sprang out of the multiplying, and the multiplying begat a murmuring among the disciples. Let us learn from this that increase of numbers does not always mean increase of happiness, increase of devotion, increase of spiritual life, but has often brought increase of trouble and discontent. A very rich man said not long ago that he would give a million dollars just to be able to drink a glass of milk with the same zest and enjoyment he felt when he was yet a poor boy. He is clothed in fine linen now and rides in a limousine, but the happiest days in his long, eventful career were the days when he used to "wade in the branch and stub his toe and get stung by bumblebees." The same is true of the life of a congregation. Our neighbors over at Belmont Avenue are happy in the possession of a brand-new, substantial, up-to-date house of worship, but the most of them will tell you that they are not quite so happy as when they met every Lord's day in the little shanty just behind the new structure. It might be a good idea to let the little shanty stand for years to come to keep them humble and poor in spirit and to serve as a constant reminder of the happiest days. Some of our members at Russell Street can remember when this congregation was a handful and met in a small rented room, and I have no doubt but what the memory of those days of struggle and sacrifice will always be among the most pleasant of their lives.

Somehow God has made all things double one against another; and when he bestows such notable increase as he granted to the apostolic church, he adds thereto some counterbalancing disadvantage to keep his people poor in spirit. Undiluted joy, unmitigated success, is not to be the portion of God's people while tabernacled here below. There is always the bitter with the sweet. Peloubet says: "There are two ways of multiplying a church. One is to multiply the numbers on the principle that ten times one is ten; the other way is to multiply the quality of the members so that each one counts for more. Ten times a thread makes a small cord, but ten times a rope woven of a thousand such strands is a vastly greater power."

The New Testament Deacon.

Our word "deacon" comes from a Greek word which means "to serve." In the opening verse of the letter to the Philippians, Paul salutes the deacons of the church in connection with the bishops. Their qualifications are stated in the third chapter of First Timothy. The office of the deacon has been permanently retained by most of the modern churches, but with different functions in different denominations. The Methodist Church has deaconesses. In the Roman Catholic Church the deacon is an assistant to the bishop; in the Episcopal Church he assists in the administration of the communion and is a teacher of the Scriptures; in the Congregational Church the deacons are nominally the dispensers of the charities of the church, really the pastor's spiritual advisers; in the Presbyterian Church the deacons have entire charge of the money affairs of the church. I like the New Testament idea better than any of these. It does not prescribe or limit the duties of the deacon. It makes him a servant, or minister, and it does not matter whom or what he serves, just so it is honorable and good. The fact is, no one is given an official designation in the New Testament. "Apostle" is not an official title. It simply means "one sent;" and it might be applied to any one sent, regardless of the mission. The same is true of elders, bishops, and deacons. These names designated the work they did or the qualities they possessed. The New Testament glorifies the work to be done, rather than the title. The seven men mentioned in this chapter were appointed especially to look after the needs of the neglected Grecian widows, but their duties were by no means confined to this particular service of serving tables. Two of them, Stephen and Philip, developed into most useful preachers mentioned in the book of Acts. Stephen headed the roll of the martyrs.

The Standard of Qualifications.

The standard of qualifications required of the seven is very significant and timely. They must be seven men "of good report, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom." The modern method is to fill the official board with men who have money and influence. Is there a banker in town? Put him on the official board. Is there a capitalist who is an occasional visitor to the church services? Make him a member of the board of stewards. Is there a business man who is noted for his keen executive ability? Secure him by all means. It makes no difference as to piety; business is first, and the church needs their money and influence. There is no doubt but what a real Christian who is a good business man, capitalist, or banker makes a good elder or a good deacon. God expects a man to use the qualities which have made his business success in promoting the success of the church. System and spirituality are not opposites. The efficient organization of the church itself as one body is an important factor. But let us never forget that the apostolic order is piety, then wisdom. The church was to furnish the money; these men were to distribute it.

"I Serve" is the Grandest Slogan.

The fact that these men were chosen to serve tables teaches us that the commonest duties of life demand the highest qualities, and they can be fulfilled perfectly when the soul is at its best. Some gardeners, it is said, can grow orchids better than wall flowers; and society abounds in social climbers who court "great places" and things, despising the homelier posts and callings. But I must remember that when princes like Stephen and Philip are made stewards of carnal things, appointed to wait on tables, that even the most homely duty is sovereign and the utmost salutfulness and wisdom are necessary for the ordinary routine of life. I must never belittle the work of a servant, because I find that the apostles preferred that appellation over all others; and when one of them would exact his Lord in the presence of the cruel men who put him to death, he tells them: "The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Servant Jesus." When it comes to pleasing God, the two greatest words in the English language are the words "I serve." An ancient prince had them engraved upon his crest. Write them not upon your crest, but write them upon the tablets of your heart; and write, too, the simple couplet:

"The heart can only live in loving,
And by serving love will grow."

The Blessed Pushers.

The joy that comes from service is unique. It is a joy that cannot be realized in any other way. You cannot buy it and you cannot borrow it. You do not receive it by having others serve you; you yourself must serve to get it. A little orphan girl who was almost sightless and who "belonged to the State," as she quaintly expressed her dependence, was placed in a suburban home where they were willing to receive her. It happened one summer evening that she was on the sidewalk with a group of children who were new acquaintances. They had a little wagon in which they were riding by turns and were generously ready to give their handicapped little guest even more than her share of rides; but she would have none of it. "I want to push," she said; "I like to get tired." She couldn't pull, but she could push, and she insisted upon doing it. "I like to get tired," she insisted, with a radiant face.

A remark like that should make the onlooker thoughtful. We who so often complain of our weariness forget the blessedness of having a part in all the activities that bring it. Perhaps I could not express my wish for the deacons of the churches anywhere in a simpler or more forceful way than just to say: "I wish that they may all become efficient pushers, and that all the members of the congregation may push with them," looking unto Jesus the author and perfecter of our faith, who for the glory that was set before him endured the cross, despising shame, and hath sat down at the right hand of the throne of God."

The World-Wide Design.

Everything about the gospel seems to be world-wide in its design. Christ announced a world-wide enlightenment: "I am the light of the world." As such, he has thrown light upon all the complex problems of human life—on life, death, character, duty, and destiny. He claimed a world-wide field of activity: "The world is the field." In his parable of the leaven he gives us to understand that the truth of the kingdom will ultimately permeate the entire race. When Christ broke the bands of death and came forth from the tomb with the keys of death and the grave swung to his girdle, he issued his marching orders to the church, announcing a world-wide evangelization: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." When the disciples came to inquire as to the time for restoring the kingdom, Christ replied: "It is not for you to know times or seasons, which the Father hath set within his own authority. But ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you; and ye shall be my witnesses . . . unto the uttermost part of the earth." It was not the work of the disciples to be sitting up in Jerusalem reigning, but to go out and bear this revolutionizing and elevating truth of Christ to all the world.

"Let Him That Stole Steal No More."

BY F. W. SMITH.

The leading editorial in the Earnest Worker (the Presbyterian teachers' monthly) for December, 1915, has the following to say on the above topic:

It has frequently been said that when a man possesses himself of one million dollars of other people's money, he is a high financier; but when he breaks into a house and takes a pair of pants or lifts a pig out of his neighbor's pigpen, he is a low-down thief. It is too common for mankind thus to permit bigness to cover badness. The success of a thing is all that men inquire into; its squareness and fairness they do not consider.

It must not be thought, however, that men who have made large fortunes by questionable means are the only sinners against the eighth commandment. Our readers may remember what happened in New York City when an upright commissioner of weights and measures began to discharge his office—how he gathered wagonloads of scant measures and a junk shop full of false scales in a short campaign among the retail dealers. And if the countrymen should say that dishonesty is confined to the cities, glance at the farm papers and that idea will be quickly dissipated.

In a recent number of a prominent farm journal we find described a sharp practice in the business of selling hay, known as "trimming" a car—which consists in putting worthless hay in the ends, and bright, sound hay at the doors. The car is shipped with bill of lading and sight draft attached and the privilege of examination before buying. The doors are opened and everything looks fine, and not until the last buyer unloads the whole car is the fraud detected. In the same paper there is an allusion also to matters which need looking after in the fruit business. There is something said about a system of "facing" and "talling" a barrel of fruit—which secures highly colored, uniform apples at the ends, but does not show the worm-eaten culls in the center. And apple barrels are not the only agricultural packages which are not always what they seem. Sometimes reports float across the waters from Liverpool and Manchester which show that all is not cotton which goes inside of a cotton bale.

What shall we say to these things? That all men are rogues and liars? No; but that dishonesty in either open or more roundabout form is all too common, and runs like an evil disease through the commercial life of our time. Few men can resist the temptation to make money by stretching, evading, or positively breaking the command, "Thou shalt not steal!"

One of the most flagrant instances of dishonesty which has ever come to our notice, and which is found where you would least look for it, is what has been called, for want of a better name, "college stealing." Of course, it is not meant by this title that any band of robbers has ever actually gone off with college property, removed the buildings, or feloniously made away with the educational equipment of any learned institution. But what we mean is this: When an educational institution has been founded for the purpose of training men to defend and propagate certain definite religious doctrines, and those who gave the money to found it put into its charter the obligation to support these doctrines, and then by adroit management men who hold religious views directly opposite get possession of the institution and use it to propagate views subversive of those for the defense of which it was founded—this is "college stealing."

If we are correctly informed, the histories of Harvard, Yale, the University of Chicago, Vanderbilt University, and now Princeton, all furnish cases in point. Here, for example, is the history of a Baptist institution:

"Many years ago a Baptist minister named 'Harvard,' whose abode was then not far from where we now reside, gave time and gave money from a scanty store to establish a school for the education of young men, especially for their preparation for the Christian ministry. The school was established and has grown. Is it doing the work he had in view? Would a Baptist Christian, believing in our Lord Jesus Christ, and in the word of God, to which he gave his attestation, select an advocate of the religious views there held as a teacher of the doctrines we profess?" (Bible Champion.)

The case of Vanderbilt is still more recent and furnishes an illustration which is a sore subject with our Methodist brethren; and, unless all signs fail, Princeton is traveling the same road under the leadership of Dr. Hibben.

It is believed that a systematic and carefully worked out campaign is being pushed throughout this whole country by the advocates of liberal views (both in doctrine and ethics) to capture every center of educational influence for themselves. Their method in obtaining control of a college or a seminary has been thus described:

"They finance the campaign against the church by filching from church funds. They never build a church; they steal one already built. They never found or endow a school; by hook or by crook they get in the faculty or on the board of trustees. The rest is easy. Finesse adds a comrade; then there are two of a kind. More finesse, and a majority is in hand. The school is modernized. The hidebound creed of the founders is displaced by 'the assured results of the world's best scholarship.' Our readers can name the schools, once orthodox, now the fortresses of infidelity. All schools of all denominations are threatened."

Are our own educational institutions, our church colleges and seminaries, safe from the danger which these methods indicate? This much may certainly be said by way of prophecy—and the prophecy is based, as just seen, on past history: Just as soon as our colleges and seminaries get strong enough and rich enough to be worth stealing, an effort will be made to steal them; and unless they are anchored to the church by direct control of church courts—such as we believe is the case with most of our Southern Presbyterian institutions—what has been done before will be done again, and we will have our institutions captured and used to destroy the faith which once they defended and propagated.

This is certainly a very strong arraignment of some things which need to be emphasized through the columns of every truth-loving paper and from every pulpit in the land. The common standard of success is found in dollars and cents. No matter over what route a man travels in pursuit of wealth, he is respected and honored if he succeeds in raking together an abundance of filthy lucre. Intrinsic worth and the maintenance of correct principles in the affairs and concerns of life are completely overshadowed by the ill-gotten gain of the trickster who filches others out of their sweat and blood. We should not be surprised at, nor should there be any marvel over, the cold-blooded scramble of the ungodly and wicked after the things of time; but to witness this spirit masquerading in the garb of education and religion is cause for wonder. We wonder how men can become so destitute of the principles of honor as to steal in the name of religion and rob under the pretense of "higher" and "broader" education. Any education that does not have for its very bedrock honesty and uprightness is not worth the name, and any religion that does not inculcate honesty and uprightness of dealings in all things is a travesty upon the Bible. Men engage in the meanest and lowest political scheming and plotting to get possession of property bought by others for the purpose of diverting it from the ends and aims of its original owners. As is shown by the editorial here quoted, there are college and university buildings which are being used to propagate doctrines and theories wholly at variance with the intention and wishes of those whose money erected them. Men who meant to leave their money as a blessing in the propagation of a faith that implicitly accepts the Bible as the word of God would now, if living, see that money used to disseminate infidelity pure and simple. Nearly all the big colleges and universities of the world are honeycombed with infidelity, and it is extremely dangerous to send either boys or girls to them. What a pity that those who founded them did not have the "restrictive" clause in the deeds to such property! But is the misappropriation of college and university buildings any worse than the misappropriation of church buildings? The principle is precisely the same; and if it be right to protect one by the civil law, why would it not be right to so protect the other? There are numberless church buildings to-day that are being used to propagate doctrines radically at variance with the doctrines which those who built said houses intended to be taught within their walls. Political trickery and deceptive scheming were resorted to in gaining possession of these houses, and yet, when in view of past experience men insert the "restrictive" clause in deeds to such property, some pretend to lift up their hands in holy horror! Shame on them.

Studying and Interpreting Prophecy.

BY R. N. MOODY.

I have just read "Jesus is Coming," by W. E. Blackstone, and "Lessons on the Kingdom," by Charles Neal, besides some articles in the papers along the same line, which has suggested the subject heading this article to my mind.

The right to study and interpret the prophecies is defended as though some one was denying students of the Bible that right. Of course it is right to study the prophecies and to learn all we can from them.

The burden of the Old Testament prophets was to teach Judah and Israel to keep God's law and to emphasize the importance of faithfulness to him. They also foretold future events which contained promises of blessings to the faithful, and assurance of punishment and destruction to the wicked and disobedient. The one served to encourage and stimulate them to keep the law of Moses; the other, to warn and deter them from departing from the path of righteousness. Though they were clothed in the enigmatical language of prophecy, they were sufficient to show them that there was a better day awaiting the obedient and that a day of wrath was in store for the disobedient, and doubtless did much as a helping hand to the "schoolmaster" in bringing them to Christ.

The same may be said of the New Testament prophecies. Take, for example, the wonderful book of Revelation. All the way through it the importance of keeping God's word is emphasized. After a graphic description of the new Jerusalem, the throne of God, the river of life, and the tree of life, it is said: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." As to the wicked, it is said: "But for the fearful, and unbelieving, and abominable, and murderers, and fornicators, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, their part shall be in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death." Whether we ever, in this life, fully understand what the literal fulfillment of these things is to be, they are sufficient to show that there is a glorious reward awaiting God's faithful children, and that a terrible doom will be the fate of the wicked. So, if we will faithfully do all of God's bidding, an eternal home will be ours, and in due time we will understand the great mysteries that he has seen fit to conceal with figurative prophetic language.

It is, at least, implied that we ought to study the prophets so as to be able to interpret them. To be sure, if one has studied the prophets so as to be able to interpret them, and is sure that he can do it correctly and that he can demonstrate to others that his interpretation is right, beyond all doubt, he ought by all means give the public the benefit of his knowledge. But how can we know that our interpretations are correct?

The question is raised as to whether prophecies should be interpreted literally or spiritually. It is apparent to any one that a prophecy should be interpreted just as it is to be fulfilled. If it is to be fulfilled literally, the interpreter should so interpret, giving the exact details of the fulfillment; if it is to be fulfilled spiritually, he should so interpret. How can he, without knowing the mind of God, do this?

Mr. Blackstone, in his argument in favor of a literal interpretation of the prophecies, cites a number of Old Testament prophecies that, he says, were literally fulfilled at the coming of Jesus Christ, and from this argues that the prophecies of his second coming will be literally fulfilled and should be so interpreted. The point we would raise here is that, granting that those prophecies were literally fulfilled, who could have known beforehand, without being inspired, just what the literal fulfillment would be?

He cites Isa. 7: 14, which reads thus: "Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign: Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." This prophecy has been fulfilled as near literally as any I can call to mind; but could an uninspired Jew, who knew that the word of God abounded in similes, metaphors, and figures of speech, have foretold just how it would be fulfilled? Could he have foreseen the visit of the angel Gabriel to Nazareth, his appearance to Mary, the annunciation, the espousal to Joseph, the trip to Bethlehem, the birth of Jesus, and his being laid in a manger? If he had foretold all of this in interpreting that prophecy, how would the people then living have known but what it was a mere guess? It is plain to us now that the birth of Jesus fulfilled that prophecy; but would we be sure of it had not an inspired man said: "Now all this is come to pass, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the Lord through the prophet?" (Matt. 1: 22.)

Another prophecy cited is Micah 5: 2, which foretells the birth of Jesus in Bethlehem; and when Herod inquired of the chief priests and scribes where Christ should be born (Matt. 2: 4-6), they readily produced this prophecy as showing that he should be born in Bethlehem. Perhaps no prophecy was better understood before being fulfilled or was more literally fulfilled than this one; yet, through their misunderstanding and consequent misinterpretation of it and other prophecies, they were led to reject the very person of whom the prophet spoke. It seems that the birth of Jesus in Bethlehem had entirely passed out of the minds of the people by the time he appeared before them in his public career, so little had it impressed their minds. Another citation is Jer. 31: 15, which reads: "Thus saith Jehovah: A voice is heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping, Rachel weeping for her children; she refuseth to be comforted for her children, because they are not." The fulfillment of this prophecy was a real occurrence, but it did not fulfill it literally, or "according to the natural import of words." Instead of its being in "Ramah," it was in Bethlehem; and instead of "Rachel," one woman, weeping, many mothers, evidently, wept. Could any Jew, be he ever so well informed, without inspiration, see, hundreds of years beforehand, that Herod would order all the male children under two years old in Bethlehem killed and thus fulfill this prophecy? The language of this prophecy is figurative, and no one would know of its fulfillment had not Matthew said: "Then was fulfilled that which was spoken through Jeremiah the prophet." (Matt. 2: 17.)

Another prophecy referred to is Hos. 11: 1, which is as follows: "When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called my son out of Egypt." We know now that this prophecy was fulfilled when Joseph and Mary were called out of Egypt after their flight from Herod, but we would not know it had not Matthew, by inspiration, said: "That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the Lord through the prophet, saying, Out of Egypt did I call my son." The language of this prophecy is in the past tense, and no Jew who was acquainted with the history of the Israelites from their bondage in Egypt to the time of Hosea would have ever thought of its referring to anything but their delivery from bondage unless guided by inspiration.

In proof of the resurrection of Jesus, Peter quotes Ps. 16: 8-11: "I beheld the Lord always before my face; for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved; therefore my heart was glad, and my tongue rejoiced; moreover my flesh also shall dwell in hope: because thou wilt not leave my soul unto Hades, neither wilt thou give thy Holy One to see corruption. Thou madest known unto me the ways of life; thou shalt make me full of gladness with thy countenance." (Acts 2: 25-28.) Here David speaks, as it were, of himself, and no one knew, nor would not yet know, what he meant, had not Peter, guided by the Holy Spirit, said: "Brethren, I may say unto you freely of the patriarch David, that . . . he foreseeing this spake of the resurrection of the Christ, that neither was he left unto Hades, nor did his flesh see corruption." (Acts 2: 29-31.)

Many other examples of prophecy could be cited, but these are sufficient to show the futility of uninspired men's efforts to interpret unfulfilled prophecy.

Let us study the word of God that we may know and "do all the words of this law," and leave "the secret things" to Him to whom they belong, and in his own good time, and as soon as it will be good for us to know, the things contained in the mysteries of his word will be revealed.

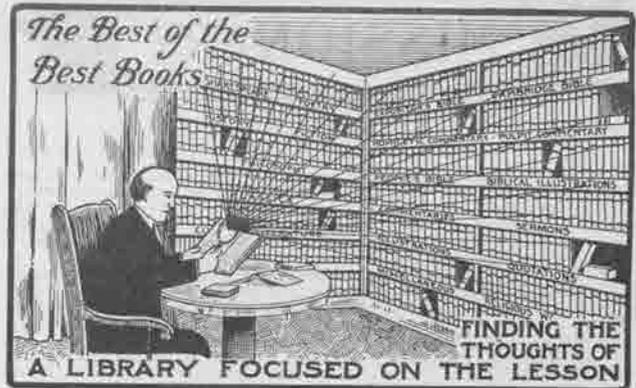

Our Wish for 1916.

BY J. D. WALLING.

Jabez' prayer was that "thou wouldest bless me indeed, and enlarge my border, and that thy hand might be with me, and that thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it be not to my sorrow! And God granted him that which he requested." (1 Chron. 4: 10.)

We are in the midst of five counties in Kentucky, and no other preacher to help us. Our labor has been confined to one county. The other counties need the gospel and are calling for it. Before one should pray for his border to be enlarged, he should have so worked his bounds that it can spare him. Wayne County is not yet in that condition. While we have much to encourage us to greater efforts, we have yet much to do. We hope for this year to be a time of reaping. The seed has been sown in many places and is bearing fruit, but we are hoping for a great harvest. We need and want a helper for at least three or four months of this year—say, from July to November. We are not able to support him, and I cannot invite him without a hope for his support. With his help, we will be able to move into another and very needy field by another year. Now what I want is enough churches or brethren who will agree to support this extra work. Brethren, here is the work. It is badly needed. We can reclaim this field if we have the interest of Jabez. In two of these counties we have not been able to hear of a single congregation. In two others we know of three—one in one county and two in another. In Wayne County we now have four, with four others in strong prospect, which we hope to complete this year. Somerset is in one of these five counties, with a population of over five thousand, and not a congregation in it. Russell is ripe for the gospel and can be taken easily, but no one at work in it. I have letters from young brethren wanting to come and help in the work, but I cannot invite them to come till I have some assurance of their support.

Now, brethren, you know my wishes for 1916. Can I have this helper? I will say that he must be a man that will "endure hardness, as a good soldier," must preach the word and be courageous. Will not enough churches become interested in this field of labor to support this helper? If so, will you please write me? Please do so at once, so that I can arrange the year's work. I want you to know that I am only asking support for this helper. We could very easily use two or more if we were able to sustain them. So do not be afraid that we will receive too much. We will use it all in this way or return it. Our American people surely are worth an effort to save. Shall we not make the effort? Please write me your wishes. Address me at Monticello, Ky.

The Bible Study Helper

New Magazine

EDITED BY

A. B. LIPSCOMB

In response to many urgent requests, we announce the inauguration of the BIBLE STUDY HELPER, a new monthly publication, which will be devoted exclusively to the subject of Bible study, both in the church and home. This publication will supply a long-felt need. It will be abreast with modern scholarship and at the same time in accord with the teachings of God's word. Among the many helpful features will be: "Incentives to Bible Study," "Timely Practical Illustrations," "Quotable Prose and Poetry," "Suggestions for Teachers," "The Boys' Column," "The Girls' Column," "Reports from Teachers," "Letters from the Children," "Thought-Provoking Questions."

The editor has access to the foremost of the commentaries and Bible-study periodicals, and will embody the fruit of his reading and study in the HELPER in his comments upon the International Lessons. All teachers and Bible students should have this publication. Send your order now that you may have every copy from the start.

Single copy, one year, sixty cents; in clubs of five or more, to one address, fifty cents.

Brethren Organize New Undertaking Firm.

A new undertaking firm has been formed under the name of Davis, Rains & Co., and has opened parlors at 121 Seventh Avenue, North, between Commerce Street and Broadway. The house was the former home of the Centennial Club, and has been fitted in the most modern way for its present uses. The equipment will be thoroughly modern.

The members of the firm are Gus Davis, formerly with Combs & Davis; Blake E. Rains, formerly with Claude P. Street; John B. Shacklett, formerly with the N., C. & St. L. Railway; and Murray M. Johnson, for years practical embalmer with Dorris, Karsch & Co., but later with Gerard & Gerard in Bowling Green, Ky. The members are each widely known, enjoy the esteem of their acquaintances, and success is believed to be assured. All are members of the church.

"It is high time to quit slacking and work fervently, as Jesus bids, to evangelize every existing people."

The above contains every letter of the alphabet.

MISSIONARY

BY J. M. McCALEB.

POSTAL INFORMATION: International post-office money orders can be bought at the rate of one per cent; but for any amount, however small, the cost will be ten cents. A check on any of the banks in America is good in Japan; personal checks are as good as any. The money itself is accepted by the banks. The ordinary postage on letters is five cents; newspapers, one cent.

ADDRESSES OF MISSIONARIES: Otoshige Fujimori, Takahagi, Kurimotomura, Katorigori, Shimosa, Chiba, Japan; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McCaleb, Zoshigaya, Tokyo, Japan; Mrs. William J. Bishop, 904 West Jefferson Street, Station A, Dallas, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Vincent, 73 Myogadani, Koishikawa, Tokyo, Japan; Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Jelley, Jr., Satara District, Satara, British India (funds may be sent to Don Carlos Janes, 2225 Dearing Court, Louisville, Ky.); Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Armstrong-Hopkins, Berhampore, Ganjam District, India; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McHenry, Satara District, Satara, British India; Mr. and Mrs. John Sherriff, Bulawayo, Rhodesia, South Africa.

An Indication.

For more than a year I have been going once a week to teach a Bible class of Chinese young men of the Young Men's Christian Association. It may be proper for me to restate that I am in no way connected with the Young Men's Christian Association, except I go and teach this Bible class the same as I would do in a Methodist Church if I had the opportunity. I do not in any way try to avoid controverted points, but do my best to present a full gospel message. The following letter from Mr. Chang, recently from Shanghai, China, and dated October 30, may be of interest:

Dear Mr. McCaleb: If I could find out the way to your home, I would certainly come to see you personally on a question which is vitally important to the association. We appreciate very much your former service rendered to this association, and I am writing to ask if you could be kind enough to continue your service again this time. We plan to conduct some Bible classes in this building from next week, and we need leaders badly. Cannot you come to lead one class once a week? I shall be ready to help in interpretation if you can simply consent to come. I need not say how important and invaluable your assistance will be, for nothing is more important and invaluable than to let those Chinese young men know something about Jesus Christ and his wonderful way of salvation. You know when these young men go back to their respective places they become the tiptop men in the community; and how manifold the result will be if they could be Christians themselves! And how big the obstacle will be if they should be heathen leaders of the community.

Kindly let me know which night of the week you can spare. Wednesday nights will suit us nicely. All of our meetings begin at 7 P.M. Will this be convenient for you? We know you are very busy every day with your own work, and we know we are asking a great favor. We ask it simply trusting in your generosity and readiness to sacrifice.

Awaiting your favorable reply and thanking you in advance.

Yours very sincerely,
H. S. CHANG,
Secretary Waseda Association.

Report on Mission Funds.

The last previous general report included funds handled between May 16 and August 31, 1915. This report covers September.

For Free Literature: Balance on hand, 66 cents; received, $1.76; on hand now, $2.42.

For C. G. Vincent: Received, $24.33. All forwarded.

For J. M. McCaleb: Nothing received.

For John T. Glenn: Received, $30.39 (travel money). On hand.

Optional: Balance, $10; received, $5; on hand, $15.

India Travel Fund: Received, $250. Deposited on interest awaiting the going of a worker to join Brethren Jelley and McHenry.

For E. S. Jelley: Balance, $100; received, $94.02; sent him, $129.60; on hand, $64.42. (Part of these receipts was for printing fund.)

For native helper of Brethren Jelley and McHenry: Balance, $139.45; received, $22.05; sent, $79.45; on hand, $82.05.

Summary: Balances, September 1, $250.11; received in the month, $427.55; disbursed, $233.38; on hand, October 1, 1915, $444.28.

I have made three general reports since October 1, 1914. The Lord permitting, I shall hereafter report in detail every month or two and make one or two general reports in the year. All funds are handled as directed, the full amounts being applied to the specified funds. Persons residing outside of Kentucky and border States will please remit by money order or draft on New York, Chicago, or St. Louis, to avoid cost of collection of checks at the bank.

Report for October, 1915.

Horse Cave, Ky., $25; Portland Avenue, Louisville, Ky., $10; Perryville, Ark., $1; Spencer, Tenn. (two offerings), $12.12; O. E. Shields, $5; L. A. McKeel, $1; J. R. Phillips, $5. Total, $59.12. Income in Japan, $21.87. Whole amount, $80.99.

Japanese evangelist: Lubbock, Texas (for two months), $20. Need fifteen dollars a month. Who will supply the other five dollars?

Literature fund: Nothing received. Need five dollars a month to print the Joyful Message (Fukuin). Who will supply this and in this way reach a thousand Japanese every month with the very best literature? I am already fifteen dollars behind for this paper.

Misses Okel and Oharu: Mary Walker's Sunday-school class, $3.50; Miss Mae Anderson, $12. Total, $15.50. Monthly expenses, $10. In hand, $21.83.

Sendagaya Church: Broadway church of Christ, Los Angeles, Cal. (two months), $20. Monthly expenses, $19.

Brother Ishii in the slums of Shinjuku: Nothing received. Monthly expenses, $7.

Brother Vincent: Laura Cooke, Pilot Point, Texas (1st), $5; O. E. Shields, Louisville, Ky., $11.25.

Miss Yoshié: Nothing received. Sisters of the church at Charleston, Miss., and the Nashville Bible School Church send regularly five dollars a month. Need twenty dollars a month.

New chapel at Zoshigaya: First church of Christ, Bryan, Ohio, $50; a missionary couple in Japan (for the seats), $12.50. Still need one hundred and fifty dollars to pay off the debt on the house and thirty dollars more for the seats. In order to meet the last payment on the house, I borrowed one hundred and fifty dollars for a short period. I am paying six per cent interest. I wish to pay this off immediately. I was only able to send my family twenty-five dollars in October, the least amount I have sent them any month yet during six years. I have associated with me seven Japanese workers—three men and four women. Brother Ishii receives hardly half a support; Brother Hosogal, who labors with us at Sendagaya, receives only five dollars a month as a gift; Brother Sato, who preaches at Zoshigaya on Sunday nights and is a very valuable assistant among our young men, receives only two dollars and fifty cents; Miss Oharu receives only enough to pay her tuition in vocal training; the other three Sunday-school workers are the only ones that receive full pay from me. Four, then, are working partly at their own charges. There could hardly be a more economical arrangement unless we declined to give them anything at all.

How to Study the Bible—Lesson II.

1. Remember that the Bible is divided into two main divisions—viz., the Old Testament, subdivided into thirty-nine books, beginning with Genesis and closing with Malachi, and the New Testament, subdivided into twenty-seven books, beginning with Matthew and closing with Revelation, making sixty-six books in all. It was written by about thirty-six different writers during a period of about sixteen centuries. The Old Testament was written in Hebrew and the New Testament in Greek; hence we have what is called the translations of the Bible, by which we mean simply taking the thought expressed in the Hebrew and Greek words and expressing these thoughts in English words, or words of our own tongue. For this we should be thankful; for were it not for these translations, only those who know the Hebrew and Greek languages could read the Bible.

2. The Two Covenants. Much confusion comes from our not recognizing what the Bible teaches about the two covenants, and where the first ended and where the second begins. In 2 Tim. 2: 15, Paul says: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." The Revised Version translates this sentence this way: "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth." "Rightly dividing the word of truth" and "handling aright the word of truth" mean the same thing. No man "rightly divides" or "handles aright" the word of truth who fails to recognize the difference in the two covenants, when the first ended and the second began. In reference to this, please to note the following facts:

(1) One of the reasons for Christ's coming into the world was to remove the first covenant in order that the second might be established. "Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second. By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all." (Heb. 10: 9, 10.) In Heb. 8: 7, Paul says: "For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." Read all of the eighth chapter of Hebrews. And in connection with this reading, read also Jer. 31: 31-34. It was prophesied, therefore, that the time would come when a new covenant would be established.

(2) Christ did not remove the first covenant until he died on the cross. "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross." (Col. 2: 14.) Hence, in Heb. 9: 15-17 Christ is declared to be the "mediator of the new testament," and it is there declared that this testament of which he is mediator could not go into effect until after his death. Hence, Christ was born under the first covenant, lived and died under it. For this reason he was circumcised when he was eight days old. (See Luke 2: 21.) His mother offered for her purification a "pair of turtledoves and two young pigeons." (See Luke 2: 22-24; Lev. 12: 1-8.) This is one reason why we know Christ's parents were poor; for a lamb, a year old, was to be offered in such cases, unless the parents were too poor to furnish it. In such cases, a "pair of turtledoves and two young pigeons" would suffice. Christ kept the passover feast (Luke 22: 14, 15) and he observed the Sabbath day. Even when he cleansed a man of his leprosy, he instructed him to go and offer what was commanded according to the law. (See Mark 1: 40-43.) Not a "jot nor tittle" could pass from the law till it was fulfilled. (See Matt. 5: 17, 18.) It was not fulfilled till he died on the cross. While dying he declared: "It is finished." (See John 19: 28-30.) We do not circumcise our male children when they are eight days old; it would be a sin to do it as a religious act. (See Gal. 5: 2.) Neither do we teach our mothers to offer the lamb or turtledoves and pigeons for their purification when children are born unto them; it would be a sin to so teach. Nor do we teach people to observe the Sabbath and the passover. All of this Jesus did during his personal ministry. But the old covenant then existed, and to be loyal to his Father he had to observe it. But this covenant he ended when he died on the cross.

(3) Now let us read a few more scriptures on this subject. In Heb. 7: 12 we have these words: "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law." The law had to be changed; we are now under the new law, not the old. Then go to 2 Cor. 3: 6-13. There you learn that the apostles were made "able ministers of the new testament." Too, you find Paul declaring that the old was "done away," was "abolished." Read also carefully Gal. 4: 21-31. Note there that Paul says: "Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear, the law?" That is, if they will really hear the old law, they will cease to live by it, for it taught that it was to end when the new was established. Hence those who now try to live by the old are in rebellion to both the old and the new testaments. Then turn to Gal. 3: 23-25. Here the law is called a "schoolmaster" by which people were governed until Christ came and established the "law of faith." But it declares that "we are no longer under a schoolmaster."

In conclusion, I submit a few helpful suggestions with exemplifications. In studying the Bible, observe the following rule: Be careful to notice (1) who is speaking and (2) what the speaker is talking about, and (3) do not fail to note under what dispensation the speaker is talking, whether it is under the old or new. To exemplify and illustrate this rule, I suggest that you read Matt. 28: 16-20; Mark 16: 15, 16; Luke 24: 44-53. Now answer the questions numbered (1), (2), and (3) above. Then turn to Acts 2: 22-41 and read and answer the same questions. Who speaks in verse 37? Who speaks in verses 38 and 39? Note that aliens here want to know what to do, and an inspired apostle tells them what to do. Now turn to 2 Pet. 1: 1-11 and read carefully and answer the questions suggested above. Here you note that Peter is the inspired speaker, and that he is telling God's children how to make their calling and election sure—how to keep from falling. Read 1 Pet. 1: 22, 23; 2: 2; and 4: 12-16, and you see more clearly that Christians are the ones he is addressing. (4) The first gospel sermon under the new covenant was not preached until the "day of Pentecost" in the city of Jerusalem, as you find recorded in the second chapter of Acts. It is easy to see this. The new covenant could not go into effect until after Christ's death and the removal of the first. (Read again Heb. 9: 15-17; 10: 9.) But the apostles were not permitted to begin their preaching after his resurrection until the Holy Spirit came to guide them. (Read again Luke 24: 46-49.) The question has been raised: If Christ ended the old covenant when he died on the cross and the new covenant did not begin until the day of Pentecost, under what law were the people governed during the fifty days intervening between these two events? Under the old covenant; of course. When an old law is repealed, there is always a day set for the repealing act to go into effect and for the new law that is made to take its place to become operative or effective. Pentecost—the first one after Christ's ascension—was the time and Jerusalem the place appointed by Jehovah for this to take place, as we will see more abundantly in other lessons that will follow.

Unsound Teachers—More on Ecclesiastical Anarchy.

BY M. C. K.

In connection with the cases of ecclesiastic disorder already presented in this series, we have one to present this week which caps the climax as an outrage upon New Testament church polity and as an open and shameful violation of every principle of decency and good order in the conduct of church affairs. If in this attempt to magnify the divine order in church government we accomplish nothing more than to awaken the churches to a sense of shame at the outrage committed in the instances presented, our labor will not be in vain. In fact, were it not for the inroads already made in the churches in some quarters by the propagation of human opinions and unprofitable speculations coupled with a spirit of apathy and indifference on the part of the churches, such instances of the violation of New Testament order as we are presenting in these articles would never have occurred.

As a proper background and setting for the case now to be presented, we recur briefly to that prime and leading fact in New Testament ecclesiastic polity—the independence of the local churches and the solemn and imperative obligation resting upon every church on earth to respect and abide by any legitimate action of another church. So important and sacred is the principle here involved that a divine safeguard in the way of letters of personal commendation and intercommunication between churches is thrown around each church as a protection against the possible reception of impostors into its membership. Of course, where members are otherwise known, such letters, as Paul explains to the Corinthians (2 Cor. 3: 1-3), are unnecessary, their purpose being already thus served; but in all cases where members, removing from one church to another, are otherwise unknown, New Testament order requires that they be introduced by letter that the church receiving them may know what it is doing and whom it is receiving. The "need" of such letters under such circumstances is clearly indicated in the passage just cited.

Asking the reader to keep these facts in mind, we now, withholding names and places, present a bona fide case furnished by a thoroughly reliable brother who is a preacher of the gospel of wide reputation with a thorough knowledge of the New Testament and who knows when the vital principle now under discussion is violated. We cannot do better than present the case in his own language. Referring to the conduct of a brother who had been called on to return thanks at the Lord's table and who abused the solemn occasion to vent a personal grudge, he says: "The party grossly trampled upon every principle of Christianity by railing at and reviling an elder of the church who was presiding at the Lord's table, while said party was pretending to return thanks for the wine. The official board notified him to appear and answer to the charge of conduct unbecoming in a Christian; and when he received the notice, he went to a neighboring congregation and, without a letter, transferred his membership to this congregation."

Now, to put the case mildly, does not that cap the climax of irreverence and wickedness? That the reader may see that our contention here is no mere fancy or idle dream, let us look somewhat closely into this case. Let us get an accurate picture of the case before our eyes. A church is assembled for the solemn and impressive worship of God. The time has arrived for participation in the sacred feast in solemn commemoration of the Savior's death, and a brother is called upon, in conformity to the example of Jesus, to render thanks for the cup; but instead of doing so, he substitutes the sacred occasion to the base and nefarious end of venting a personal grudge! Was there ever a more atrocious deed at such a time? "Pretending to return thanks for the wine," but really "railing at and reviling an elder of the church who was presiding at the Lord's table!" That would indeed have been a very inefficient "official board" if it had not "notified him to appear and answer to the charge of conduct unbecoming in a Christian;" but—lo!—when he received the notice, he went to a neighboring congregation and, without a letter, transferred his membership to this congregation!"

If the church receiving him knew his character, it thereby became guilty itself of willfully indorsing and upholding the heinous offense of which the renegade member was guilty; if it did not know his character, it should, of course, have stayed action until it ascertained the facts, and by failing to do so, it still, in ignorance of the real situation, became guilty of upholding the offense in the case; and so in either case, the receiving church, in this instance, became guilty before God. It should have first ascertained the facts in the case, and, as they would have proven to be in this instance, it should have promptly and positively refused to receive him. Such a course would not only have been best for the offending member, but it would have shown respect for the New Testament order by protecting another church in its legitimate action.

Now, if the action of this church in thus ignoring and setting aside the legitimate course of another church in dealing, as the Scriptures require, with a disorderly member, and the action of the Louisville church in ignoring and setting aside the legitimate course of another church in refusing, as the Scriptures also require, to uphold a teacher who needlessly causes division in the body of Christ, should be accepted as examples for the churches to follow, what would be the result among the churches at large? One word alone is sufficient to answer this question, and that one word is marchy. The very reprehensible and flagrant action of the Louisville church and the equally reprehensible and flagrant action of the church presented in this article, to whatever extent they may be accepted and followed as examples, inevitably open the way for the reign of lawlessness and general disorder among the churches.

We here pause for the present. Let the reader ponder these things seriously and let the churches everywhere wake up to the duty of the hour.

"Review and Forward."

BY E. A. E.

COMMENDATORY.

The different articles on the question, "Is the World Growing Better?" were all thoughtful and helpful. But for my own article, I would say all the articles of the same issue of the paper were likewise interesting and encouraging. The one by our venerable and beloved brother, J. O. Blaine, telling of service and love, was beautiful as well as helpful, and before I had finished reading I had to wipe my eyes. But its helpfulness and beauty are reflections of the life which preceded it. The most logical, eloquent, and beautiful articles and sermons are not written and preached in words, but in deeds. A man's life is his own funeral sermon. The poet says something of making "life, death, and the vast hereafter one grand, sweet song." By his helpfulness to the afflicted, the poor, and especially to orphans, Brother Blaine has made his life this song. As completely as any one we know, he has lived for others. And the most timely article on the front page by our senior editor and lifelong defender of truth and right cannot be surpassed for faithfulness to God and loyalty to his word. "When will we see Brother Lipscomb's like again! So long as I may live I shall miss his wise counsel and clear and sound teaching.

THE GREATEST QUESTION TO ME.

While the question, "Is the world growing better?" is of very great importance, there is one still more important, the settlement of which will help to settle the one about the world. This question is, Am I growing better?

Let me settle first this question before I sit on the cases of others in particular or the world in general. This every one in the light of the Bible must do. What if the world, upon the whole, is growing better, and I am no better? Let us obey Christ: "Take heed unto yourselves." Am I more studious of the Bible; more prayerful; more dutiful; more forbearing; more long-suffering; more merciful; more forgiving; more charitable in every way and more generous with my means; less selfish; less egotistic; less worldly and ambitious of place and prominence; gentler, kinder; meeker; humbler; more zealous; more conscientious; purer in heart; more practical and faithful in all relationships in life—as citizen, neighbor, friend, brother, son, husband, father, employer, employee; more godly; and more Christlike than I was last year at this time or ten years ago? What progress have I made? Have I any better control of my temper and tongue, pen and passions? Have I on the whole armor of God, that I may be able to stand against all the wiles of Satan? Am I firmer in the faith and more determined to contend for it as it was once for all delivered unto the saints? Am I more fixed in purpose to worship God "as it is written?"

Really, am I growing better?

How can I grow better? By practicing that which I preach to others that they may grow better. I am commanded to "grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ;" to give diligence to make my own calling and election sure; to so live that I "may be found in peace, without spot and blameless" in Christ's sight; to study that I may "be approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth;" and on and on and on, until I myself have escaped from the corruption that is in the world by just, have the spirit of Christ and the mind of Jesus, have become a partaker of the divine nature, "have fought the good fight," "have finished the course," "have kept the faith," and am ready to receive "the crown of righteousness," which the Lord will give to all who "have loved his appearing."

If I would devote more time to the study of the word of God in order to practice it, to my own uprightness and integrity, to rendering to all their dues, to owing no man anything except love, to taking thought for things honorable in the sight of all men as well as in God's sight, to my daily duties at home and obligations away from home, to my own personal piety and godliness, I would have less time for fault-finding, theorizing, hairsplitting, and ungodly contentions. The Pharisees had more theories and show than any sect, yet there were no greater sinners in the world and none more condemned by the Savior. Sometimes a man's theories, hobbies, and bitter contentions attract the attention of people from his dishonesty, rascality, and deformities of character.

THE OUTLOOK.

As has been stated, while there is multiplied wickedness in the world of every form and name, the greatest war the world has ever known is raging, and religious sects and divisions are increasing, there are more true gospel preachers and more faithful and zealous congregations than at any time since the Dark Ages. More Bibles are printed and translated into the various languages of earth and more missionaries are sent out than ever before. Many congregations are living in peace, building themselves up in love, prospering spiritually, and proving themselves zealous in extending the kingdom of Christ. In all this all God's children heartily rejoice. But in some places the outlook is gloomy.

1. In not a few places there are strife, contentions, bitterness, and division over things not in the gospel and, therefore, not essential to salvation. In other places, so far as those who are not engaged in the strife can see, the divisions are over men—over the question of who is the greatest. Not long ago I was told that a brother said he and those holding with him intended to follow a certain preacher to the judgment. Concerning another preacher, I was told by an intelligent Christian that, while not knowing whether the preacher's teaching was correct or not, this Christian was for him. All these feelings come from prejudice and a partisan spirit and are both divisive and sinful. The unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace must be placed above our preferences for men. Paul would not have the church at Corinth to divide over preachers—himself, Apollos, and Peter. Our implicit obedience to God and our standing before God must be our first consideration. We must seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness.

2. The church in New Orleans presents a sad and shameful spectacle. As much as ten thousand dollars or more has been contributed by churches and individuals in different States to build up the cause of our blessed Lord there, and behold the picture! Besides this amount, it is stated that as much as fourteen thousand dollars of the money of one man in New Orleans has gone in the same way. As much, then, as twenty-four thousand dollars has been thus used, besides the other costs of property, and the church now divided! It makes no difference just now what or who divided it, it presents a miserable use of so much money and great discouragement to all who are disposed to respond to other appeals.

The churches and individuals that contribute to any cause have a right to know, and ought to know, the use to which their money is put. They ought to be made to rejoice over the good their money has done.

The contributors have a just right to know the facts in this New Orleans church. It should be investigated and the ones who have done wrong should repent.

3. Too many brethren seem to feel but little or no sense of duty and obligation to follow Paul's example in handling the money of others. Paul declares that he took thought for things honorable in the sight of all men. He means he did that which honest men of the world consider just and honorable and handled money in such a way that no one could impugn his motives or suspect any misuse of it. He did not misuse it, and he knew that God knew he did not, but he wanted men to know he did not. He took thought, or complied with the honest ways and means used by all honest men to let men know this. Men in the church who are honest, preachers who are honest, want all who have placed money in their hands to be used for the cause of Christ to know just how it has been used, and that it has been used for the purpose for which it was contributed.

4. A good and wise man, a preacher of good conscience and more than ordinary ability, told me not long since that in a certain large section of country where there are numerous churches the man who endeavors to preach the simple and powerful gospel as it is in Christ for the salvation of souls is not considered by the majority of churches as a strong and great preacher. But the preachers who have some notions and theories of their own and are fighting in a partisan spirit and denunciation the theories and notions and hobbies of others are considered the strong and great preachers. These things seem to be the standard of strength and greatness, whether all agree with the preachers or not. These things of necessity drive spirituality and devoutness and the true worship of God and practical and pure Christian living out of the church where they prevail.

5. Reports are in circulation that some preachers are dishonest, or have no regard for truth, and that others are impure in morals. I have heard of five preachers being guilty of the same sin, which I shall not mention here. These preachers are not of the same State, but are more or less prominent. I do not pretend to say myself that they are all guilty. I do say this shows a very bad state of affairs if they are guilty or are not guilty. If they are not guilty, the circulation of these evil reports is very sinful and strongly condemned by the Lord. The circulation of these reports shows a bad and sinful spirit in the ones who originated them and the ones who circulate them. This is fearful indeed. If they are guilty, they should be dealt with according to the Bible and in the spirit of Christ and brought to repentance or withdrawn from. It is very wicked indeed to help to circulate evil reports on people, and especially in order to interfere with the good they are doing. It is hypocrisy of the deepest dye to pretend to be teachers of purity and virtue, righteousness and godliness, while living in impurity, unrighteousness, and ungodliness.

These things in places and certain "teachers in Israel" are enough to make us say with Isaiah: "The whole head is sick, and the whole heart is faint."

The most important review is self-examination, and the most important forward movement is that of every individual to a better life.

Who is wise and understanding among you? let him show by his good life his works in meekness and wisdom. But if ye have bitter jealousy and faction in your heart, glory not and lie not against the truth. This wisdom is not a wisdom that cometh down from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. For where jealousy and faction are, there is confusion and every vile deed. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without variance, without hypocrisy. And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace for them that make peace. (James 3: 13-18.)

QUERY DEPARTMENT

Brother Sewell: Please answer through the Gospel Advocate the questions asked herein. In 1 Cor. 14: 34-36, also 1 Tim. 2: 11, 12, Paul places some restrictions on women speaking and teaching in the public assembly. To what extent does this restriction apply? May she read in a Bible class? May she ask and answer questions relative to such lesson? May she teach a class in the Bible? Would she usurp authority over the man when called upon by the elder to lead the public prayer, if she did so? We have had confusion and division here over this woman question. Please answer and help us to correct all mistakes that may have been made in the matter.

T. J. DUNN.

The prohibition of women teaching or speaking in public, as I understand it, is in worshipping assemblies, where the church is assembled in one body to worship. In all such assemblies the women are required to keep silent. But in the Sunday school, where they divide up into classes according to age and advancement in Bible knowledge, then these classes are in a measure private, each class to itself, and not all together at all. I do not understand that the prohibition holds in that case. It was evidently in the matter of public worship of the church that the prohibition was made on the woman. Therefore, in the classes, each one to itself, each class private and apart from the other classes, I do not understand that the prohibition holds. I think in such cases women may speak out and ask or answer questions as occasion may require, in the classes, and may teach classes if they have opportunity.

Brother Sewell: I would like for you to give a full explanation of the parable in Luke 19: 12-27—a certain nobleman that went into a far country. We would like to ask, if this nobleman was typical of Christ, where was the far country to which Christ went to receive for himself the kingdom and return? Please give a full explanation of the whole parable, as there was quite a difference in the views of the brethren at our Lord's-day Bible study.

GEORGE W. BROWN.

The nobleman evidently represents Christ himself. When he ascended to heaven, he was made King and is still reigning as King over his earthly kingdom, and over which he will still reign till all things are subdued unto him. The divine record says: "For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet." (1 Cor. 15: 25.) So Christ is reigning and will still reign till all his enemies are put under him. Then, in verse 28 we have: "And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all." As to how long it will be till all these things are accomplished, I do not know and will not try to guess at it. All that the word of God says on these things is true and will be fulfilled as declared, and it is our business to believe it, but it is a waste of time to begin to guess and speculate as to the time. If those who are speculating on these things would drop their speculations and preach the word as written, they would then be useful servants of God instead of vain speculators. The record says he will come again, but does not say when.

Brother McQuiddy: Please write a short article on 1 Pet. 3: 15: "But sanctify in your hearts Christ as Lord: being ready always to give answer to every man that asketh you a reason concerning the hope that is in you, yet with meekness and fear."

"Sanctify" literally means to make holy, but it is impossible that God should thus be sanctified. The word also means to set apart, and doubtless signifies here that we should separate God from anything earthly—that is, from any common use or purpose—so that he may be looked to for sacred uses or purposes. We are to entertain just notions of God—of his nature, power, goodness, truth, and justice. We should not conceive of him as being fleshly and as being actuated by such passions as men. Ascribe to him no human passions, for this would desecrate him, and not sanctify him. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto Jehovah, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith Jehovah. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." (Isa. 55: 7-9.) It is high time that we should no longer know God after the flesh; for even if we have known Jesus Christ after the flesh, we are to know him so no more. Hence the Spirit says: "Wherefore we henceforth know no man after the flesh: even though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now we know him so no more." (2 Cor. 5: 16.) Most creeds and religious systems are incapable of rational explanation because founded on some misconception of the divine nature. Regarding Jehovah as holy and separate from all imperfection, we thus sanctify the Lord God in our hearts and are ever ready to give a reason for our hope of a resurrection from the dead and eternal life at God's right hand.

Brother Sewell: Please answer the following question: What is it for one person to cast a stumblingblock in the way of another? Or, to be more plainly understood, what must one person do to become guilty of casting a stumblingblock in the way of another?
X.

To cast a stumblingblock literally would be to place something in the pathway of another that he would not likely see, but over which he would be likely to stumble or fall. But in common use it means to place something before another that would lead him into some sort of trouble without seeing at the time the nature of the trouble he is likely to get into by taking hold of it; to lead one to believe that a certain thing would be of great benefit, when it works his downfall when he undertakes to carry it out. Many people get their downfall in just such ways. Sometimes these stumblingblocks consist in erroneous teaching given under the claim of Bible truth, when they are only the opinions of men and have no power in them to save any one. When people accept such errors and trust in them instead of taking the plain word of God, they are simply stumbling and falling over impediments placed by some one in their pathway. These errors may be placed before people by those who themselves are entirely ignorant of the fallacy of them, but those that receive them stumble and fall all the same. Stumblingblocks may also be placed before people from evil design, with the evil intent of procuring their downfall. Temptations may in various ways and through various channels be placed before people that may easily cause their downfall. Hence all who desire to make their way safely to the glory home should be exceedingly careful in their religious service not to accept and follow anything but the plain word of God and to do nothing as service to God except what they can read in the sacred volume. There are, indeed, many ways in which people may be caused to stumble and fall and lose their souls at last. Hence all should watch and pray continually that they may not from any cause stumble and fall and lose their souls. Also, all Christians should be careful never to do or teach or say anything that could in any wise cause any child of God to stumble and fall. The word of God is wonderfully strong on this line. Jesus said it would be better that a millstone were hanged about a man's neck and that he be drowned in the depth of the sea than to cause another to stumble and fall. This is one point that should be especially guarded by all who desire that they may themselves be saved.

Brother Sewell: Before our Heavenly Father calls for you to "come up higher," I would like to see an article from your pen on "Redemption," and what it means from a Bible standpoint. I believe many besides myself would appreciate it and be made to realize more than ever what it means to be redeemed.
SAM L. CARVER.

The word "redeem" means, in a general sense, to buy back again. Sometimes a man who owns a home lives extravagantly, goes in debt and fails to pay, and the creditor sues him and takes his home or some piece of property which he esteems very highly as payment of the debt. But after a while he changes his course in life, saves up money, and buys back the property that was sold from him. This is called "redemption" of his property.

The redemption of people is partly that way. Man was made upright and free from sin. The whole race of man is free from sin at birth, just as the first man, Adam, was free from sin when created. But as time moved on, Adam went into sin and was rejected from the garden of Eden. So also all children as they grow up go into sin, and must of necessity be redeemed from sinful lives before they can be prepared to stand in the presence of God. Hence, Jesus was sent into the world that he might die for sinners, might shed his own blood for the remission of sins. In this way, therefore, the gospel plan of salvation is a plan of redemption, that sinners may be redeemed from sin and from sinful lives, and thus become God's children here on earth and be made ready to dwell with God in eternity. Hence, Paul says: "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." (Tit. 2: 11-14.) This passage shows precisely what this plan of redemption will do for man, if he will apply it to himself as the word of God directs. But redemption is peculiar in some respects. It makes man responsible for the application of this plan of salvation to himself, and thus to receive it into himself; to enjoy its great benefits. It is just as God gives us our daily bread. He does not give our daily bread into our hands ready prepared for us; but he gives us all the means of securing this bread, and we have to go to work and raise or secure this bread or starve, after all that God has done. So it is in regard to the redemption of our souls. God has prepared the plan of redemption for man and has revealed it to him, telling him just how to apply it in order to the redemption of his soul. Again, Paul says: "Neither by the blood of goats and calves; but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us." (Heb. 9: 12.) So Jesus not only provided redemption from sin and sinful lives here, but has arranged for eternal redemption for all the faithful in the heavenly home. The conditions upon which this heavenly and eternal home may be reached by the people of this world are all plain and fully adapted to their capacities. Hence, if the people in Bible lands fail to reach that heavenly home, it will be their own fault. The Bible is intended to lead people to that beautiful home, and will, if they will follow its divine guidance. So this plan of redemption is so complete that there cannot be a failure in it, if men will faithfully observe its divine directions. The words "redeem" and "redemption" are used abundantly and plainly in the Jewish Scriptures, the Old Testa-

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Compiled by A. B. Lipscomb

Do something worth while for Jesus' sake.

It is hovering around the zero mark at home.

Get a grip on the grippe or it will get one on you.

The next special number will appear on March 2.

"Put a value on yourself and never mark it down."

Blessed is the man who has not formed the excuse habit.

W. J. Johns gives Paragould, Ark., as his new address.

Srygley's "Itinerary Notes" sparkle with good news. Don't fail to read them.

William P. Walker reports one baptism at Highland Avenue, this city, last Sunday.

Hog-killin' weather "at last! Cheer up! If you have no hogs to kill, there are the germs.

Tate Ring writes that the white brethren at Erin, Tenn., will do a special work among the colored people.

Price Billingsley came to see us Saturday. He is looking unusually well. He was en route to Columbia, where he preached Sunday.

W. T. Hines, a good evangelist, who lives at Morganfield, Ky., is arranging his schedule for the year and has some open time. Write him early.

We had thirty-three new scholars in our Bible classes at Russell Street, this city, Sunday. Prospects are bright for the growth of the congregation.

The editor of the Christian Herald is entirely right. He says: "Revenge is a poor investment. It pays small dividends and calls for big assessments."

John T. Smithson has moved from Berry, Ala., to Hopkinsville, Ky. He is an energetic worker, well content to preach a plain "Thus saith the Lord."

Brother Larimore is just as fashionable as the rest of us. He has la grippe; and, of course, "Sister Emma" is one with the preacher in this experience, too.

New subscriptions to the Bible Study Helper, our new monthly magazine devoted exclusively to Bible study, are coming in every mail. Don't fail to get yours.

Brother Sewell is still improving. It is our prayer that he may be able to meet and worship with us at an early date. He is deeply appreciative of the kind solicitation of hundreds of friends.

From E. V. Wood, at Trenton, Tenn.: "I am in Memphis on my way to Roswell, N. M., for a month's stay. Very best wishes for you and yours and the Gospel Advocate force to be enjoyed during 1916."

Ben West is tickled with the prospects at Lometa, Texas, his new field of labor. "The strongest membership and the best meetinghouse in town" is the way he puts it. Let us hope their piety is commensurate with the other assets.

Barring mishap, Sister Sarah Andrews, the new missionary to Japan, has reached her post by this time. Brother Bradley will have a full report of her voyage and prospects in our next issue. Don't fail to read it, and in the meantime get your offering ready.

From J. Paul Kimbrell, at Plant City, Fla.: "I arrived in Florida on Tuesday night (January 11) and will do evangelistic work here. I do not know just where my work will be, but the brethren are making arrangements. Plant City has about four thousand inhabitants, is two hundred and five miles south of Jacksonville and twenty-two miles north of Tampa. I will write more when I learn more to write."

To-morrow, Friday, January 21, will be the eighty-fifth birthday of David Lipscomb, Sr., one of our senior editors. While not physically able to write much, his mental faculties are alert and his counsel, backed by years of prayerful study and waiting upon God, is more valuable than ever before. Serene and happy in the consciousness of having fought the good fight of faith, he awaits the Master's call to higher ground; but for our sakes we pray that it may not come this year. Rejoice with us in the preservation of his life and in the fact that Brother Sewell, his faithful co-laborer, is improving in health every day.

Itinerary Notes.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

I reached Waverly on Saturday evening, January 8, and preached for the church there on Sunday and Sunday night. The church at Waverly is not a large one, but they are at peace among themselves and are doing a good work. They have the largest number of children in attendance at their Lord's-day meeting of any congregation in the town. Dr. Porch, who was for many years one of the pillars of the church at Bakerville, now lives in Waverly. He is growing old now, but he grows old gracefully. It is such a pity to see an old man become sour against the world and his brethren as he gets old. Brother Porch is sweet and kind toward all his neighbors, and especially toward his brethren in the Lord. He delights to tell of the work of Brother E. G. Sewell at Bakerville in the long ago. There is a faithful band of Christians at Waverly. I was denied the pleasure of a visit to Bakerville on account of the bad roads and the probability that Duck River might get too full to cross.

On account of missing my visit to Bakerville, I reached Paris on Tuesday, January 11, a day in advance of my appointment, and so I ran down to Henry and spent the night. They announced my coming in the school; and though they had but short notice, they got together a good audience and we had preaching. They certainly know how to sing at Henry and to make a preacher feel good. Brethren Denton and Austin have a fine school there. It is not a Bible school, but they teach the Bible every day to all the pupils who wish to recite the lessons. I had to leave Henry early the next morning, so did not have the opportunity of visiting the school. A good school where the Bible is taught every day by faithful men is certainly a great blessing to any community. A number of the young men who attend the school preach on Sundays in the community around Henry. The cause of truth will be firmly established here and in the entire community in a few years.

I was with the little band at the courthouse in Paris on Wednesday night. They are as full of faith and zeal as ever. This is the place where I held a meeting in the courthouse nearly two years ago. They began meeting regularly in the courthouse then and have kept it up ever since. The opposition would have discouraged a less loyal band, but it has only served to make these more determined and faithful. They had another good meeting last year, with several baptized; and while a few of the faithful have moved away, some others have moved into Paris, and they about hold their own in numbers. Several who, perhaps, feel that they ought to be with them have not the courage to stand by their convictions. But none of these things can move an honest man or woman. The truth will be represented in Paris as long as the courthouse crowd endures, and some of them will endure to the end.

My next stop was at Paducah. This is the home of Brother C. M. Stubblefield, a preacher of no mean ability. He is always on the go, and carries a bright smile and a ray of sunshine with him everywhere. I confess it is easy for me to believe that it frequently does more good to laugh than it does to cry. Why should a Christian be unhappy? It has been said that if you laugh, the world laughs with you; that if you weep, you weep alone. It is also true that if you snore, you sleep alone. It is very convenient to say sometimes: "Now, brother, it doesn't bother me to room with you—only, I don't sleep quietly. I can't help it, but I am very bolsterous in my sleep." When one is thus warned and is looking for trouble, he becomes nervous, and he will detect danger at the very first appearance of evil. Why one should set the whistle when he sleeps is more than I can tell. It would be a great burden to him to carry on such a racket throughout his wakeful hours. The church at Paducah is full of zeal and good works and they will succeed. Since the congregation was established here, a number who met with them here have begun meeting at Loneoak, a suburb of Paducah. This is right. The more meeting places we have, the more people are reached with the gospel and the more workers are developed. The Gospel Advocate has many warm friends in these parts.

To The Churches of Christ in Tennessee.

I am anxious to have the name and post-office address of every member of the church in the State. Will not some member of each congregation collect as complete a list as possible of the membership of his or her home congregation and send it to me? Be sure and send correct address. If you are unable to send a complete list of the membership, send what you can.

Superintendent of the Tennessee Orphans' Home.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

Neutral.

Some men are so neutral that they will not contribute a cent to either side of anything or occupy either side of any question, but sit bolt upright a-straddle of the fence on all issues.—Burnett's Budget.

Some men will sit on the fence and decline to defend the doctrine they have been teaching all their lives when it is attacked. This is neutrality or cowardice gone to seed. Every Christian should have the courage of his convictions.

Burnett's Budget.

We rejoice with the Budget in its success. Its editor declares: "The Budget has been printed fifteen years, without missing an issue, and has not borrowed a dollar, nor made a debt of a dollar, and has not dunned its subscribers a single time. How is that for a record?" We would be glad to have the Budget tell us if it thinks it is a mistake to send a statement to subscribers who are in arrears. Is it not as proper to send a statement of the amount due on a paper as it is for an amount due on groceries? Clearly the editor does not think it wrong to send the subscriber a statement, for he says in the same issue of the Budget in which the above appears: "If you see a cross mark after your name, it indicates that your time is out or you are in arrears. Send some cash." The Budget may not call this dunning, but it is a very effective way of getting the cash.

Some Things Settled.

A man's belief is not worth much unless he can crystallize it in definite statements—though they need not be many or long or conform to any school's "say so." The eagerness with which large congregations are listening to ministers declaring themselves on the great themes of religion—God, Christ, Bible, sin, salvation, immortality—shows that the multitudes yearn, not for a nebulous hypothesis or a beautiful guess, but for solid, definite convictions, plainly stated. Surely we who have for years tested for ourselves the religion of Christ and seen its workings in the world ought to be able to say modestly, but firmly: "Christianity is no longer a question to be reopened every morning; I believe in it with all my heart."—Congregationalist.

Christians should have convictions and should openly avow them. Men who are afraid of their shadows or of public sentiment when the truth is assailed are not the men who lead the cause of Christ to victory. Abraham, Moses, Joshua, Peter, James, and Paul all stood for something.

Christians Should Prepare Bible Lessons.

An evangelical publishing house has no right to employ an unbeliever to furnish its Sunday-school lessons or other helps. Even if he does agree to be careful and not say anything hostile to the faith of the church, he is not fit for the work. If he is honest, his unbelief will crop out.—Herald and Presbyterian.

Teachers should be in hearty accord with their own teaching. They should not expect others to believe what they do not believe themselves. An honest man will impress his convictions upon others. "For as he thinketh within himself, so is he." No man can be too careful and prayerful of his teaching. The weak are liable to be led astray. It is a fearful thing for one to use his abilities in misguiding others. The position of a teacher is fraught with fearful responsibilities. "Whoso shall cause one of these little ones that believe on me to stumble, it is profitable for him that a great millstone should be hanged about his neck, and that he should be sunk in the depth of the sea." (Matt. 18: 6.)

The War in Europe.

We commence another year with the terrible carnage of war unabated. Fresh horrors are reported each day. It is as though the very fiends of the infernal regions were delighting themselves with the infliction of diabolical atrocities in the murder of young men by the millions. It seems that there is no likelihood of a cessation of the war except through the depletion of life, the exhaustion of property, or the mutual annihilation of the nations. We must not permit ourselves to grow cold-hearted and stolid. These are our fellow-men who are suffering and perishing. Let us continue to pray that in some way justice may be accomplished, that strife may cease, and that God may be glorified.—Herald and Presbyterian.

Christians should neither write nor do anything that will give encouragement to war. "Avenge not yourselves, beloved, but give place unto the wrath of God: for it is written, Vengeance belongeth unto me; I will recompense, saith the Lord. But if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him to drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." (Rom. 12: 19-21.) While people have ridiculed the peace party led by Henry Ford, yet, after all, the man who prays for peace is as much the subject of ridicule as the one who works for it. If it is right to pray for peace, it is right to work for it. Instead of seeking to lay up treasures on the earth, it would be well for the whole Christian world to labor to bring about peace.

Another Lesson on the Kingdom.

After thoroughly exposing some of the sophistries of premillennialism, Brother Ira C. Moore closes an article on the above subject as follows:

If this is the best support that can be given to the theory that the kingdom of Christ is to be set up at his second coming, and that he is coming then, divested of his glory as he will have to be, to personally reign on earth for a thousand years—if this is the best support such a theory can have, then please excuse me from believing it. I am "open to conviction," but not on such unreasonable testimony and evidence as this.

In this Brother Moore is preaching the second coming of Christ, yet he is denying that the kingdom must wait the second coming of Christ before it is inaugurated on the earth. We have never heard of any one calling Brother Moore an Adventist. Yet Brother H. L. Olmstead says: "Another brother began to tell the brethren that Jesus is coming, and they called him an 'Advent.'" Brother Olmstead, to have been within the bounds of accuracy, should have said: Another brother began to tell that the kingdom would not be established until Christ comes again to reign in person upon a material throne for a thousand years, and that during the millennial age Christ will rule with a rod of iron, and they called him an Advent. He should also represent the brother as telling that the Jews are to be the heart and center of the kingdom restored, that the temple is to be rebuilt and the bloody sacrifices restored, and that on account of changed conditions it is reasonable to expect new revelations giving new conditions of entrance into the kingdom. If the brethren were to call such a brother an "Adventist," they would speak the truth. Will Brother Olmstead tell his readers just what he believes will transpire when Christ comes again before the kingdom is established or restored to Israel? Also, will he tell what will happen when it is restored and how long will he reign before Satan is loosed for a little season?

OLD-TIME REMEDY MAKES PURE BLOOD

Purify your blood by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has been and still is the people's medicine because of its reliable character and its wonderful success in the treatment of the common diseases and ailments—scrofula, catarrh, rheumatism, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, general debility.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has been tested forty years. Get it today.

Lime-Loss in Tuberculosis

In the Journal of the American Medical Association (January 17, 1913), was the following: "It has been many times stated that in tuberculosis or in the pre-tuberculosis stage an increased amount of calcium (lime) is lost both in the urine and feces. In fact, a demineralization has been thought to be a forerunner of the development of tuberculosis."

If tuberculosis is due to lime loss, the success of Eckman's Alternative in its treatment may be due, in part, to its content of a lime salt so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be easily assimilated.

Always we have urged consumptives to attend strictly to matters of food, but often some effective remedial agent is needed. In many cases of apparent recovery Eckman's Alternative seems to have supplied this need. It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, so is safe to try. Price $1 and $2 per bottle. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct from the Laboratory. We would like to send you a booklet containing information of value and references.

Abilene Christian College Notes.

BY J. F. SEWELL.

We have had one week of school since Christmas, and it has been decidedly the best after-Christmas opening Abilene Christian College has ever had. We have not lost an old student over the holidays and we have a fine body of new ones.

Brother G. W. Harvey, who has been here for ten years, stated in the church service yesterday morning that everything is in better condition in the school and church than at any time since he came; that there is perfect harmony among all connected with the work and that a better feeling prevails.

I am sure this is correct as to conditions during the past four years. Our enrollment is larger and better than before. Perfect harmony prevails, and I have never seen a finer spirit of cooperation and loyalty. We have room for only one more boy and a few more girls in our own buildings, and we have as many more outside as in our own buildings. We are expecting still others. Abilene Christian College is growing in size, equipment, and strength.

Every member of our board of trustees and faculty is grateful and happy, and we daily pray God to help us to be faithful to, and efficient in, our trust.

Missionary Needs.

BY DON CARLOS JAMES.

Our mission work in distant fields has grown to considerable proportions and there is a prospect of still more increase. There are more needs, and the brethren should know what they are.

For Brother McCaleb's Japanese evangelist, five dollars a month more is needed. Will some church that is not already full of obligations take this up?

For publishing the Fukuin, a paper for Japanese readers, five dollars a month is needed; also to cover a three-months' deficit, fifteen dollars.

For Misses Oharu and Okei, who are preparing themselves to be useful workers, about twelve dollars.

For the Sendagaya Church, twenty-six dollars a month. Cannot some preacher among us enlist one, two, or more churches to care for this amount?

Balance on the new church house in Zoshigaya at last report, two hundred dollars.

Any of the above can be forwarded to Brother McCaleb or to any of the persons who remit for him.

Brother Vincent needs funds to enable him to secure a building site for the Koishikawa Church. This has been needed a long time.

Take Salts at first sign of bladder irritation or backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out. They weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog, and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness, and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts, or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Recipe for Gray Hair.

To one-half pint of water add one ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up, or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

Announcement of the Boaz-Locklear Debate.

BY G. C. BREWER.

What promises to be a battle royal will take place at New Decatur, Ala., beginning on the night of January 31, 1916, and continuing for six nights, unless one side is sooner repulsed. The forces engaged in this contest will be commanded on the one side by Brother W. T. Boaz, of Columbia, Tenn., and on the other side by Mr. J. A. Locklear, of East Gadsden, Ala. For three nights Brother Boaz will fight behind the breastwork of truth: The church of Christ, of which he, W. T. Boaz, is a member, is scriptural in origin, doctrine, and practice. Mr. Locklear will besiege this fortification of ages in three night attacks. Then Mr. Locklear will retreat to his own territory and defend a like claim for his own church, which is, as I understand, the Ordinance Branch of the Holiness Church, Capital, Anderson, Ind.; munition factory, Gospel Trumpet. They have one or two impregnable forts—as, Lord's Supper, immersion, and holy living. They depend, however, upon miraculous conversion, direct operation of the Holy Spirit, second-blessing sanctification, divine healing, foot washing, etc. Brother Boaz will rout his opponent from these positions with the siege guns of truth and the howitzers of heaven. Having always believed in preparedness, he is thoroughly equipped and ready for the fray. He has been called the "Napoleon of Polemics," and he has seen many an Austerlitz or Lodi, and we predict that this will not be a Waterloo.

The Work at Eldorado Springs, Mo.

BY IRA L. PLANK.

The following is a statement of the contributions for the church at Eldorado Springs since September 1: From the church at Monmouth, Kan., $5.78; church at Basil, Kan., $16.60; Mrs. George M. Scott, Prosser, Wash., $5; Zoe D. Spears, Johnstown, Mo., $1; Myrtle W. Wilson, Johnstown, Mo., 50 cents; church of Christ at Cedar Vale, Kan., $10; Pleasant Valley Church, Lone Jack, Mo., $15; church at Bona, Mo., $5.75; Park Smith, Reno, Kan., $5; Mrs. Park Smith, Reno, Kan., $1; Alvah Salee, Reno, Kan., $1; Charley Litchfield, Reno, Kan., $1; church of Christ at Stafford, Kan., $7.80; church of Christ at Cunningham, Kan., $5; First church of Christ, Bryan, Ohio, $40; Mrs. Cheek, Texas, $5; church of Christ at Eldorado Springs, $30. Total sent in to pay on the church building since September 1, $161.58. We wish to express our sincere thanks to the good brethren who have helped us.

The following is a statement of the present standing of the church: Original cost of building, $1,182; total amount paid, $393.58; amount yet to pay on building, $788.42.

Besides the building fund, the congregation has raised and paid out for insurance, installing of lights, interest, and fuel, $115.69. Of this amount, $34.50 was donated by the business men of the city.

The contributions of the church since September 1 have been about eighty dollars, which has been used in holding meetings and in mission work. There have been five additions to the congregation since September 1.

These brethren are doing a great work. Let us help them all we can. Any one desiring to move to Eldorado Springs will find a happy and prosperous church with which to work.

Information may be had by writing T. B. Dry, Eldorado Springs, Mo.

Gray Hairs

mean that your hair is not receiving proper attention, and yet a gray hair will do more to make you look old than anything else. Rid yourself of an aged appearance by giving the hair correct treatment and proper food. There can be no life without food; and unless you give your hair the proper attention, you cannot expect it to retain its luster and beauty. Use "La Creole," the best of all hair dressings, and see your gray hairs disappear. This dressing was discovered by the Creoles, of Louisiana, many years ago, who were famous for their beautiful hair. Since then it has worked wonders, banishing gray hairs and restoring the hair to its original luster. As a hair dressing it has no equal, keeping the scalp in a clean, healthy condition. It has stood the test for over fifty years. Do not use strong alkaline soaps, as they do more damage than good. Use "La Creole" hair dressing, the natural preservative. For sale by all dealers. Price, $1. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

How many will volunteer this week to work for the Gospel Advocate?

Stop! Calomel is Quicksilver.

It's mercury! Attacks the Bones, salivates and makes you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel, when fifty cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and cannot salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury, and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick, and nauseated to-morrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead, and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue, or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you do not find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel, your money is waiting for you.

One Hundred Dollars for One Cent.

It will cost you a one-cent postal card to write for your copy of the handsomely illustrated catalogue of the Gospel Advocate Piano Club, which will explain to your thorough satisfaction how the Club of One Hundred Piano Buyers saves each member one hundred dollars or more on the price of high-grade pianos and player-pianos. You cannot afford to buy a piano until you have investigated the club, for you cannot afford to throw away the money-saving opportunity it offers you.

As an individual buyer, purchasing at random, you are weak; but as a member of the club, you have the strength of an army of one hundred buyers, and, therefore, secure the lowest possible factory price. The club makes the payments easy, ships your piano at once, freight prepaid, subject to your approval after one-month's trial. Perfect satisfaction is absolutely guaranteed to every member. Address the Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

The Work in Jacksonville, Fla.

BY CHARLES P. WATSON.

On the last Sunday in April, 1911, Brother R. E. Wright commenced a tent meeting in Jacksonville. The congregation at Largo loaned the tent and a Presbyterian friend loaned a lot on which to place the tent. This was probably the first time in the history of this city when any man stood before a public assembly to proclaim God's eternal truth without addition or subtraction—absolutely free from the doctrines and commandments of men. For five weeks he preached every night and on Lord's days and formed a little congregation of earnest Christians, determined to stand by God's word and "contend earnestly for the faith," amid strong opposition and, in some cases, bitter persecution. By far the larger part of the little band have proved faithful. The few falling to study God's word sufficiently and neglecting to assemble regularly have returned to that from which they came or are drifting along, making very little progress in the Christian life.

Arrangements were made for keeping the tent, and for one year we met in a tent, through sunshine, rain, and storm, sometimes with a preacher and sometimes without, but never failing to meet for the Lord's-day worship. By and by a lot was bought and a house for worship built. A large part of this time Brother Wright was with us, working earnestly day and night to plant the cause firmly in this city and making his home with C. P. Watson, with whom he worked as a true yokefellow, teaching and preaching, and appealing to and receiving help for the cause from other cities and States. The brethren responded cheerfully and helped us nobly in our weakness. The Campbell Street Church, at Louisville, Ky., has been especially generous in its assistance, making liberal financial gifts and sending Brother M. C. Kurfess, one of God's noble men, to hold two meetings for us, thus adding new material and building us up in the faith.

In the fall of 1912 Brother Wright moved his family to Jacksonville and lived among us, spending most of his time and energy for the spread of the truth in Jacksonville, occasionally holding a meeting in some other part of the State, and returning to Tennessee each summer for several meetings and to visit his parents.

Thus the church here has grown from a little band of seven, meeting in a private home on the night of each Lord's day (or, going a little further back, to the time when two sisters met in the edge of the city alone), to a congregation of about forty souls, almost owning its house, supporting one man and his family the larger part of

To Darken Hair Apply Sage Tea.

Look young. Bring back it's natural color, gloss, and thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked, and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray, or dry, scraggly, and thin. Mixing the sage tea and sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about fifty cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft, and luxuriant.

You Are Invited.

Yes, cordially invited to write for your copy of the handsomely illustrated catalogue of the Gospel Advocate Piano Club. It will explain to your thorough satisfaction how the Club of One Hundred Buyers has secured the maximum factory discount (forty per cent) on high-grade pianos and player-pianos. All you have to do is to place your own order through the club at a saving of two-fifths the price, and on easy terms if desired. The instrument is shipped at once, freight prepaid, subject to your approval after one month's free trial in your home. You will be delighted; but in order to make you feel perfectly safe, the club offers to pay the return freight if you are not pleased with the piano. Write for your copy of the catalogue to-day. Address the Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

the time, having a Bible school of three fairly strong classes meeting every Lord's-day morning and a Bible class meeting on Thursday nights, caring for its own poor, and extending its care, help, and teaching to others, thus growing in strength and influence.

But we have neither worked nor grown as we should. Many good works have been neglected. And though for nearly five years we have never failed to meet on the Lord's day for Bible study and worship, yet we are far from being able to say, "Every member is present at every service." This is the goal toward which Brother Wright has earnestly labored, teaching faithfully God's word and giving kindly advice and encouragement wherever he could. He has been rewarded by the increasing strength and widening influence of the church and the love of the people among whom he labored.

Brother Wright returned to Wartrace, Tenn., a few weeks ago. We regret to let him go, but hope that Tennessee will gain much by his return. While in Jacksonville it could well be said of him, as of young David of old, that "he behaved himself wisely in all his ways; and the Lord was with him." Brother Wright's friend and classmate, Brother Willis H. Allen, has just come among us to help carry the work forward, and we hope soon "to esteem him very highly in love for his work's sake."

Christmas at Bible Haven Orphans' Home, Luling, Texas.

BY JENNIE CLARKE.

For the first time in the history of the Home the children were given two trees. Besides our own tree given on Christmas Eve, furnished with gifts from the churches of Christ in Texas and other States, on Christmas morning a municipal tree was given exclusively for the children of Belle Haven by the business men and other citizens of Luling and near-by towns and communities. Many of the gifts were staple articles, such as flour, sugar, and other groceries. We are glad that our Home merits the respect and aid of this town and county. If it did not have friends at home, it would not deserve friends abroad. I think almost every firm in Luling, banks included, donated to the municipal tree. The children rendered an interesting program, consisting of recitations and songs, which delighted the audience.

It is all over for another year. The trees, once made so beautiful by the divine Artist without the embellishment of art, have been robbed of their glittering decorations and conveyed to the trash pile. How sad to think that a scene of such rare beauty must prove so transient! And the thought is also expressed that we, too, like those beautiful trees, are dying; that earthly pleasures are transient, and that we are soon to go where Christmas trees and orphans are unknown. Another lesson was impressed—that an appeal in behalf of dependent orphans always touches a responsive chord in the hearts of the people.

Brother W. W. Stone, of Flatonia, preached two excellent sermons on the first Lord's day and night. We appreciated his visit.

Now, as Christmas pleasures are over, we must direct our minds and hearts to more practical things. We must interest the children in the growing of garden truck, raising poultry, the replanting of fruit trees and grapevines, and beautifying the grounds by replanting roses and shrubbery. If brethren can donate seeds or poultry or anything in the line mentioned, their aid will be appreciated, as we desire to save every dollar possible with the view of starting the long-talked-of "schoolhouse on the hill" by May, if not earlier. We desire to make the year 1916, with the help of God's people, children, and friends, one long to be remembered by erecting a building that will stand as a monument to the liberality of the churches of Christ and their unselfish interest in the education of orphan children.

We wish God's people and all the friends of Belle Haven a happy and prosperous year.

Cured His RUPTURE.

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed, and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation if you write to me—Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 612B Marcellus Avenue, Mansquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured; you may save a life, or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Jackson.

John D. Jackson was born in Osage County, Mo., on June 27, 1849; came to Wise County, Texas, in April, 1876; was married to Fannie Nickell, daughter of Isaac and Isabel Nickell, on January 14, 1877; was baptized in 1881 and lived a faithful Christian; and died on April 21, 1915. He reared a family of four children, a daughter and three sons, all married—Mrs. Laura L. Furlow, Elmer E. Wilmer, W. and Alba A. The children are all faithful Christians, and were all at the bedside when their father passed away. Funeral services were conducted by Brother G. W. Farmer.

MRS. JOHN D. JACKSON.

Searls.

Mrs. M. C. Searls, of Denison, Texas, died very suddenly on December 28, 1915. She had been a member of the church of Christ for fifty years. She leaves two sons—D. C. Teurman, of Elk City, Okla., and William Teurman, of Cordell, Okla.; a niece; and her husband, who lived with her for nine years. The goodly number of people and the floral offerings were evidence of the high esteem in which she was held by all her friends. She was seventy-three years old. This dear old sister was the grandmother of one of our very splendid young preachers—Clarence Teurman, of Georgia.

THOMAS E. MILHOLLAND.

Vaughn.

Mattie E. Lee was born in Quality, Ky., on May 13, 1882. She came to Texas in 1892, and was married to Ben F. Vaughn, at Oenaville, Texas, on December 3, 1902. To this union two children were born—Holden and Joe Bray. Holden died at the age of two years. Sister Vaughn obeyed the gospel in 1907. She died at Tolbert, Texas, on December 20, 1915. The writer tried to say words of comfort to the bereaved ones. Another Christian has been called home, and friends and loved ones are left mourning on this side of the dark river. To the heartbroken husband and motherless boy I would say: Weep, but not as those that have no hope; and earnestly strive to live so as to meet her on the eternal shores of Eden.

W. P. SKAGGS.

Morrow.

Thaxton Morrow died at Mobile, Ala., on November 10, after a short illness and an operation for appendicitis. He was born in Maury County, Tenn. She obeyed the gospel in 1854 born into Christ's family in April, 1814. He was a truthful, faithful, and humble Christian, and never neglected the Lord's Supper. We regret very much the loss of our brother on our pilgrim way. There is a grand difference in a pilgrim traveling to eternity and one to his temporary home. The former leaves his fellow-traveler and soon reaches his destination, while the latter only falls behind. But we will press on till our call to go home, and surely our young brother will be there to greet us in that perfect home. Brother Watson, of Mobile, conducted the funeral services. C. H. WEAVER.

Bivins.

On December 13, 1915, at our home, while on a visit, Aunt Mary A. Bivins departed this life, aged seventy-four years and twenty-four days. Her maiden name was "Sanders." She was born in Tennessee and came to Illinois in the sixties. She married Lewis Bivins, and four children blessed them, two dying in young manhood and womanhood. Hugh and Roscoe are living near Metropolis, Ill. Early in life she became a member of the one body and lived and died true to the cause. She was sick about ten days. Among the last things of her last day she said: "I am coming; my head is bending low." Truly, according to God's word, her head bent low, and she will pass through the pearly gates to that sweet haven of rest prepared for the saints. She was of a jolly nature and was loved by all. Everybody called her "Aunt T." Her remains were laid to rest in Hazel graveyard, near Dixon Springs, Ill.

JAMES H. LUNN.

Clark.

Brother Simp Clark was born in Jackson County, Tenn., on March 6, 1846, and died on October 11, 1915. He obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother A. Alsop in 1880. He was the son of Alex. Clark. He married Rebecca Shoulders on January 24, 1869, and to this union seven children were born. "Uncle Simp," as we all called him, was a lover of home, and was rarely ever seen away, except at church. His place at home and at church is so lonely to all of us. Uncle Simp was so good, so kind and true, always in a jovial mood, and was the first to meet you and extend to you such a warm, cordial welcome to his home. He was so thoughtful of those around him who needed a helping hand and fostering care. Yes, Uncle Simp lived a quiet, peaceful, happy, Christian life, and was loved by all who knew him. His wife, five children, brothers and sisters, and a host of sorrowing friends mourn his death.

Hobbs.

Brother John C. Hobbs was born on August 15, 1853. He was married to Miss E. J. McMurray on December 24, 1874. Six children were born to this union, all of whom are living except one. Brother Hobbs, after losing his first wife, was married to Mrs. Tiny Pigg, on February 19, 1914. On August 3, 1915, Brother Hobbs died, leaving his children, wife, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. He had been a member of the church of Christ forty or forty-five years. He and his first wife obeyed the gospel at the same time at an early age. He was very active in church work, never missing any of the services and contributing liberally of his means to support the gospel. His home was the home of preachers who labored for the church at Culleoka. He will be missed by the congregation there and by the community at large. He was a true Christian, a good citizen, a splendid business man, a loving father, a devoted and affectionate husband and companion.
 W. T. BOAZ.

Gibson.

Martha A. Gibson was born in January, 1839, and died at her home near Hanner's Gap, in Lincoln County, Tenn. She obeyed the gospel in 1854, and was a member of the church sixty-one years. She was a daughter of James B. Tally, one of the charter members of the old Cane Creek congregation. She was married on January 28, 1858, to James L. Gibson. She was left a widow early in life. She did not think because she was a widow that the world owed her a living. She depended on her own efforts. Not only that; she helped others. Sister Gibson was a strong character. Surrounded as she was religiously, had she been a weak character, she would have been swallowed up by the denominations. But she maintained the faith to the end, and taught her children the faith. She possessed two elements that made her great. One was firmness, the other was modesty—two traits not often combined. It is hard to estimate a life like this one. I praise the Lord that she gave this noble example to the world. Sister Gibson died of pneumonia. She was sick but a short while. After the funeral services by Dr. E. A. Davidson and the writer, her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Petersburg. I cherish the memory of this noble and true woman.

Northcutt.

As the last fading hours of 1915 drew their weary length to a close, Mrs. Mary A. Northcutt died at her home in Spencer, surrounded by her family and friends. She was born in Walton County, Ga., on April 17, 1856, and married P. K. Northcutt on August 8, 1881, who survives her and who must climb the remainder of the hill of life alone. She is also survived by one son, H. E. Northcutt, postmaster at Spencer, and one daughter, Mrs.

OUTLINES OF BIBLE STUDY

REVISED AND ENLARGED

BY G. DALLAS SMITH

FOR USE IN

BIBLE DRILLS, BIBLE READINGS, BIBLE CLASSES, PRAYER MEETINGS, AND HOME STUDY

A BRIEF DESCRIPTION

Outlines of Bible Study (Revised and Enlarged) is a book of one hundred and twenty pages, besides five full-page maps covering all Bible lands. It is printed in large, clear type, on good, heavy paper, and is substantially bound in stiff cloth.

The book contains seventeen drill lessons for use in Bible drills, Bible readings, or any other Bible class where it is desired to cover the entire scope of the Sacred Record in a short time.

Outlines of Bible Study is not a commentary in any sense of the word. It contains but few comments. It is not "literature" in the same sense that some object to literature. It rather guides one in his study that it may be intelligent and systematic.

the mountain. When the college building burned in 1906, her home, familiarly called "The Mansion," was freely offered and used for recitation rooms. Her life was filled with consecrated service to God and suffering humanity. "She hath wrought a good work." She hath done what she could." For thirty-five years she was a devout and active member of the church of Christ. Her home was ever the resting place for the ministers, and many of them will remember with pleasure their most welcome stay in her home. Freely she gave to the cause of Christ, which she loved; and now she has gone home to glory, where she will live at peace forever with Jesus and the white-robed angels and gather beautiful flowers and fruit from the everlasting Tree of Life. The funeral services were conducted by Brother J. D. Gunn, of Sparta, Tenn.

Wilson.

With the passing of the old year passes not away in the memory of hundreds who knew and loved her the splendid and noble Christian example and the countless beautiful deeds of love and sacrifice that filled the cheerful life of Mrs. Elizabeth Wilson, Mrs. Wilson, wife of Berry F. Wilson, affectionately known as "Uncle Berry," finished her labors of this life on July 25, 1915, at the old homestead, a half mile from historic old Blood River Church, in Henry County, Tenn., where she and her husband had spent the last half century of their lives together. Her husband preceded her to the grave some five or six years. Throughout the long years in the history of this home and that of the church near it, it proved a place of attractive interest to a very large circle of relatives, neighbors, and friends—the "preacher's home" and a favorite place of welcome to both young and old. For many, many years, perhaps a half century, the Blood River congregation has held its annual protracted meetings, beginning on the fourth Sunday in July each year. Mrs. Wilson had been ill for more than a year, and it was on the beginning day of the meeting—the fourth Lord's day—that she passed to her final rest and reward. The funeral services were conducted by Brother W. E. Morgan, in the presence of hundreds to whom the annual meeting, in the absence of Mrs. Wilson from her place in the congregation, seemed incomplete. Mrs. Wilson, who in her younger life was Elizabeth Fisher, was a daughter of Reuben Fisher, of one of Henry County's pioneer families. She was born on October 12, 1836, and thus was of the age of seventy-eight years, nine months, and thirteen days on the date of her death. Early in life she was married to Mr. Wilson, and to the union ten children were born. Five survive her. They are: N. J. Wilson and Tommie Wilson, of Buchanan, Tenn.; George Wilson, of Hazel, Ky.; and Mrs. Nellie McClure and Mrs. Ella Nix, of Buchanan. Two died while quite young. Others preceding her to the grave were: Dora, who was Mrs. Allen Salmon; Emma, wife of J. T. Burton, of New Providence, Ky.; and Elmus Wilson, who died in early manhood, in the autumn of 1900. Mrs. Wilson obeyed the gospel at about nineteen years of age, and practically her entire life is interwoven with the life and work of the Blood River con-

Experience is the Best Teacher of All.

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating." One is far more apt to believe a man who tells what he has done than a man who tells what he could do. So it is with medicine. The real proof of the merits of Dr. Miles' Restorative Remedies lies in the fact that they have been used beneficially for over a quarter of a century, and thousands have actually testified to benefits they have received.

We know that Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills will relieve all aches and pains, because thousands have found this to be proven by actual experience.

The Rev. W. D. Barger, of Hagerstown, Md., has stated: "Voluntarily and unsolicited, I wish to bear witness to the high character of Dr. Miles' Restorative Remedies. To me personally they have been a great blessing, especially the Nervine, the Anti-Pain Pills, and the Liver Pills. In cases of headaches or pain of any kind they act like a charm. I have given many of them to the suffering, and the results have always proven gratifying."

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills have no unpleasant after effect. They are not constipating; they do not contain any of the dangerous habit-forming drugs. We do not claim that they remove the cause of the pain, but we do claim that they bring quick relief in a harmless manner.

They are sold by all druggists at twenty-five cents a box, containing twenty-five doses. If not satisfactory, your money will be cheerfully returned.

The Social Evil.

BY MURRELL PITTS.

While so much is being said and written on the subject of caring for the fallen girls, I would like to give expression to a few thoughts that I believe should be of vital interest to every Christian man or woman in our land and country.

The social evil has existed thus far because society has tolerated it as a necessary evil. But let us remember that God does not tolerate any evil or sin as necessary. We often hear the expression that "every boy must sow his wild oats." But strange we never hear the expression that a girl must sow her wild oats. And in the event she does, she is shunned by decent society; while the man who sowed his wild oats is invited and taken into decent homes to mix and mingle with pure, decent girls, and countenanced as a gentleman. But some will say: "How are we to eliminate this condition that has existed so long?" First, teach our young ladies to require of the men they marry as much as men require of them—that is, a virtuous, decent life—and quit saying: "O, well, he is a man; he can do as he pleases and still be respected." If the young ladies will do this, it will be but a short time until all men will begin to see the necessity of being a gentleman rather than the necessity of sowing wild oats.

True religion is inseparable from purity. Its devotion to its God is seen in its compassion for the man or woman who needs the helping hand. It cannot be deaf to the agonizing cry of her who has missed her way and stands on the brink of despair ready to plunge into its awful depths, nor the wail of her fatherless babe. Neither will it be clear of her blood by saying, "That is not my calling." While a few of God's chosen ones battle with the dark waves of public opinion and rescue a few who are sinking, where hundreds could have been reached if all Christians had been willing to help pour in the oil and wine and bind up the wounds that sin had made, to help care for those who have been brought to the inn with the shackles they acquired in sinful luxury and uncurbed appetites and needless adornment, it should be a pleasure to those sacrificing in order to save money to reach out the helping hand to those who need it. Then the press would have a clearer vision of their duty to give a clarion call for help in behalf of the oppressed, that they may go free, and sound an alarm that the responsibility lies on the church in these last days to take the gospel to every creature, even in the slums, that they may seek and find those diamonds in the rough, that Jesus may be glorified in the manifestation of this glorious power in their

BACKACHE, PAIN IN SIDE, RHEUMATISM.

Dear Mr. Editor: For a long time I suffered from backache, pain in left side, frequent urination (bothered me at all times during the day and night), and the uric acid in my blood caused me to suffer from rheumatism along with a constant tired, worn-out feeling. I heard of the new discovery of Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., called "Anuric," and, obtaining these tablets, I at once began their use. After giving "Anuric" a good trial, I believe it to be the best kidney remedy on the market to-day. I have tried other kidney medicines, but these "Anuric Tablets" of Dr. Pierce's are the only ones, in my opinion, that will cure kidney and bladder troubles.

[Signed] HENRY A. LOVE.

NOTE.—Experiments at Dr. Pierce's Hospital for several years proved that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in expelling poisons from the body. For those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation, as backache, scalding urine and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, it is simply wonderful how surely "Anuric" acts. The best results are always obtained in cases of acute rheumatism in the joints, in gravel and gout, and invariably the pains and stiffness which so frequently and persistently accompany the disease rapidly disappear. Send ten cents for a large trial package or go to your nearest drug store and simply ask for a fifty-cent package of "Anuric" manufactured by Dr. Pierce. If you suspect kidney or bladder trouble, send him a sample of your water and describe symptoms. Dr. Pierce's chemist will examine it, then Dr. Pierce will report to you without fee or any charge whatever.

salvation. Where there is no vision, the people perish.

So let us all make this amendment to our New Year's resolution, that we will put our stamp of disapproval on this social evil, and that, as far as is possible, we will do all we can to take care of and redeem those who have fallen and to close the door of the underworld so no others may enter.

An Easy New Year's Resolution That Will Make Good.

Resolve to take better care of your health the coming year; it is money in your pocket. Resolve to get rid of that la grippe cough; it is wearing your strength and weakening your system. RHEUMATISM CONQUERED

I say that I can conquer rheumatism with a simple home treatment, without electrical treatment, stringent diet, weakening baths, or in fact any other of the usual treatments recommended for the cure of rheumatism.

Don't shut your eyes and say "impossible," but put me to the test.

You may have tried everything you ever heard of and have spent your money right and left. I say "well and good," let me prove my claims without expense to you.

Let me send you without charge a trial treatment of DELANO'S RHEUMATIC CONQUEROR. I am willing to take the chance and surely the test will tell.

So send me your name and the test treatment will be sent you at once. When I send you this, I will write you more fully, and will show you that my treatment is not only for banishing rheumatism, but should also cleanse the system of Eric Acid and give great benefit in kidney trouble and help the general health.

This special offer will not be held open indefinitely. It will be necessary for you to make your application quickly. As soon as this discovery becomes better known I shall cease sending free treatments and shall then charge a price for this discovery which will be in proportion to its great value. So take advantage of this offer before it is too late. Remember the test costs you absolutely nothing. F. H. Delano, 541 E. Delano Bldg Syracuse, N. Y.

The Master's Vineyard

Louisiana.

New Orleans, January 11.—We had encouraging meetings at Iota on Saturday and Sunday. We are hopeful for an enlarged work there during 1916. I go to Nutbank, Miss., next Saturday to begin the first meeting ever held there. We hope to continue over the fifth Sunday. This is a mission point with only four disciples. Pray for the success of the work.

A. K. RAMSEY.

Tennessee.

Cornersville, January 9.—On December 24 I went to Hohenwald, Tenn., and preached there that evening at seven o'clock and again at eleven o'clock on Christmas Day. At Hohenwald I spent a very pleasant, though short, stay. We had a good audience at each service, and I met very pleasantly many friends whom I had not seen for several years. At three o'clock Saturday (being Christmas Day) I left for West Tennessee to spend a few days with my sick father, and, of course, a glad welcome awaited me there. I was there five days and preached ten sermons, which resulted in one baptism and, I trust, much good toward encouraging the small congregation at that place. Brother Pittman, of the Nashville Bible School, came to me on Thursday, and I had to leave, so he conducted the meeting until Sunday night, January 2, I suppose; as to what further results, I have not heard. I know, however, that much good was accomplished, for God has said that his word shall not return unto him void; and as Brother "Sam" always preaches the word, hence good will follow. I came back to Nashville on Friday night, December 31, spent Saturday and Sunday in Nashville, and preached three times on Sunday—twice at Reid Avenue and once at Watkins Hall. I do not write this to boast about what I have been doing, but that all may know that I have found a most enjoyable way to spend all holidays hereafter. We have long thought that we could not have a successful meeting during Christmas week. That is a mistake; we can. I did. One soul was led to Christ, and Jesus tells us that that is worth more than the wealth of the world. (Matt. 15: 26.) I am writing this from Cornersville, where I have preached twice to-day, and once at Ostella. I have been very busy, but hope I shall never be compelled to spend another idle day. May we all strive to do more in the Master's vineyard than ever before. Let us all be "doers of the word" (James 1: 22), remembering that the promise is given to those who do his commandments. (Rev. 22: 14.) I pray that God may awaken all that are indifferent and check all who are drifting.

W. W. BATES.

Texas.

San Angelo, January 10.—The work here is moving along very nicely. We have begun the new year with greater determination to accomplish good in the Master's vineyard.

JEWELL MATTHEWS.

Cleburne, January 10.—I held fifteen meetings during 1915, had two hundred additions, and received a liberal support. I spent September and October in Tennessee and Kentucky, returning by Vicksburg, Miss., for my Sabinal meeting. Here is the "glad hand" for more and better work in 1916.

A. B. BARRETT.

Weatherford, January 6.—I here report meetings held by me in 1915. At Mineral Wells, embracing the second and third Sundays in June, with one baptized. Austin Taylor conducted the song service. At Mount Calm, the fourth Sunday in June and the first Sunday in July. Eight were baptized. I shall hold another meeting in Mount Calm next August. At Poolville, the second Sunday in July. A short meeting, with no additions. At Parker, the third and fourth Sundays in July. Eight were baptized and some were restored. I am to hold another meeting at Parker in July. This will make my fourth meeting there. At Carey the first and second Sundays in August. Six or eight were baptized. At Estelline, the third and fourth Sundays in August, with ten baptized. This was my fourth meeting at Estelline. At Westover, the fifth Sunday in August. A short meeting, with one baptized. At Smyrna, Mo., the first and second Sundays in September. No additions. At Purdin, Mo., the third Sunday in September over the first Sunday in October. Six were baptized and eight or ten took membership. At Brownlog, Mo., three full weeks, including the second, third, and fourth Sundays in October. Eight baptisms; some by membership. At Grantsville, Mo., the fifth Sunday in October and the first Sunday in November, with one baptized. I have some time that I could arrange for meetings in the spring and summer. Address me at 212 Spring Street, Weatherford, Texas.

E. S. FITZGERALD.

El Paso, January 10.—We feel that 1915 was a good year for the cause of the Lord in El Paso. The membership of the church is twice as large at the beginning of 1916 as it was at the beginning of 1915, and the members are much better prepared for their task now. A house that will accommodate five hundred people has been erected—a very substantial structure—on the most prominent street in the city. The property is valued at seven thousand five hundred dollars. Some evangelistic work has been done outside of the city which resulted in even ninety additions to the church. The sacrifices of our local forces have been great. For all purposes the home forces have contributed to the work, in money, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-six dollars and twenty-six cents. This was a glad surprise when made known to the congregation on the first Sunday of the new year. We can hardly realize that so much has been done, especially when we consider how few there were to do it. A great amount has been done in visiting the sick, who are so plentiful here, admonishing the careless, and attending regularly upon every service of the church. Never have I labored with a more willing people than many of our members here. Each meeting is full of enthusiasm, and their desire to know is equal to the most zealous. The meetings are strictly conducted in a business manner, any and all taking a hearty interest. Young men, as well as old men, lead any service in public. The work is carried on like a well-ordered family and the disposition to appear wise or great is unknown. The new year is entered full of hope and determination. Aside from gifts at home, several friends from abroad have contributed monthly to this work. A strict account of all has been kept by a conscientious Christian and acknowledgments of the same made direct to each individual and church as the case may be. I am sure these good people rejoice with us. The present indebtedness is three thousand and eighty-three dollars and sixty-five cents. To keep up our work and pay off this indebtedness is too much for home forces alone; but we are sure that many of our friends are with us to the end, and a few more would come in mighty good. I know of no place where the work promises more. The surrounding territory lies uncultivated. El Paso is a great distance from any city and offers exceptional opportunities. The percentage of its growth is the greatest of any Western city, and it is our desire and prayer to our Father that the church's growth may be in proportion to the city's and prove a power for good in this long-neglected field. Last, we hope to convince our religious friends that the Lord's plan will work to-day, thereby reconstructing primitive Christianity. The version of a vice president of one of our banks (a Presbyterian) may be of interest to many. He recently remarked: "The church of Christ, being a new organization in El Paso, has been closely watched by us, and we are convinced that it has had the greatest growth and accomplished more according to number than any religious body in our city. I wish you continued success." For all assistance we are profoundly grateful, whether from individuals, churches, or editors. May each be rewarded in the glorious hereafter. Occasionally shall you hear from us, often enough to keep you apprised of the progress. J. W. DUNN.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Sins of Omission.

BY JARBATT L. SMITH.

What is a Pharisee? A Pharisee is one who is so good that he is good for nothing. The Pharisees paid their debts; they prayed every day; they did not steal, nor kill, nor commit adultery, nor do any disgraceful thing. They were so good that everybody pointed their finger at them and said: "There goes a religious man; he keeps the commandments (ritual), and God loves him so much that he has enriched him." But one more thing is necessary: the Pharisee knows that he is good. He knows that he is much better than the common folks. When he tells God about his virtues, he tells the truth. Why, then, did Jesus use such scathing language against the Pharisee? The only harsh words uttered by the Master were against these punctual, moral people. They had ceased to grow. There were worlds of opportunity awaiting them which they did not enter. Their religion was legalism. Their thought was on the reward rather than the service. They did their religion with the spirit of contract or bargain, rather than love.

Let us look at a few Pharisees. Dives is our best example. He was a fine, respectable citizen. He paid his debts, harmed no one, and was proud because of his wealth. He was sure that God loved him more than most men because he gave him wealth. Not a single sin (from the Jewish point of view) is laid up against Dives. But Lazarus was at his gate. This made a crisis. What has this to do with Dives? He did not harm Lazarus; he did not drive him away; he merely neglected him. But that neglect—failure to show love and sympathy—made all the difference between the Christian and the moral man, between heaven and hell. It is the sin of omission. The opportunity for service and kindness came to his door and he refused to be loving. Can any one enjoy the meal he refuses to eat? Can one enjoy a heaven of love when he refuses to exercise love? One does not need to do bad things to be lost, but merely neglect to do good.

The goats referred to in Matt. 25 were not the wicked people of the slums, not the robbers and sinners, not the publicans. No, they were fine, well-fed, moral, proud Pharisees. How they were surprised at the words of the Master! They thought they were sheep, but they were really goats. Why? Because they did wrong? Did they kill and steal and profane and blaspheme? No, they only neglected to be merciful and did not develop the essence of heaven—love. Their sins were the sins of omission.

So it is to-day in the church of Christ. They are very good people, blessed with health, strength, talents, money, and all that God's goodness could give them. Opportunity comes to their door and says: "Help a young man to prepare himself to preach." "Help the cause of the church or kingdom." "Help the preacher preach the gospel." But they sometimes answer that salvation is free and make many other excuses. This class sows sparingly, will reap sparingly, and may get in by the "skin of their teeth." But the luxuries of the home continue, plans for larger investments are propagated, and worldliness grows unhindered. What will you do with the opportunity? What you do determines your fate. The sins of omission are the sins of the Christian. How many times have we failed in the deeds of kindness and love! The letter we did not write, the good words that were not spoken, the comfort that was not given, the encouragement that was not tendered, the support that was not rendered—these are things that have not been done, even to the least, that face us in the judgment. The Christian life is not a negative life, merely abstaining from wrong, but a positive life, using every opportunity to enlarge the kingdom of Christ.

DOCTOR SAVES A BLACKSMITH.

Some time ago I was taken with kidney trouble, which caused me to give up my work as blacksmith. I lost my appetite and could not sleep from the dreadful pains that would come over me from my kidneys. I was treated by a physician for about three months. He could not help me; so finally he prescribed Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. I started taking same, and before I had finished taking the first bottle I began to eat and sleep better than I had in a long time. I continued to take same until I was entirely cured and took on considerable weight.

I am now back working at my trade again, and never felt better in my life. I appreciate what Swamp-Root has done for me, and will recommend it to any one who suffers with their kidneys. When physicians fail to give relief and then prescribe Swamp-Root, they sure know of its merits. I am

Our Red-Letter Offer.

AT this season of the year we make an extraordinary good offer as a mark of appreciation to new subscribers and in order that we may close our fiscal year free of debt. For a few weeks we will send the "old reliable" Gospel Advocate and The Bible Study Helper, the new monthly magazine devoted exclusively to Bible study, to new subscribers for one dollar and fifty cents, which is the price of the Gospel Advocate. If you send renewal, add twenty-five cents.

New subscriptions for The Bible Study Helper are coming in every mail. Here are some expressions from those who read the first number: "Indescribably good;" "deserves a liberal patronage;" "a fine piece of work;" "comes to fill a place not filled by any other magazine;" "like food to a hungry soul;" "its comments on the international lessons are excellent;" "the first number was worth the price of a year's subscription;" "every teacher and advanced student should have it."

Send your order to-day while you have the advantage of this exceptional offer.

"EDIFYING AS THE NEED MAY BE"

BY A. B. LIPSCOMB

Fifteen Minutes With Noah.

A short lesson is not indicative of the length of this patriarch's career, nor is it a measure of his greatness. "All the days of Noah were nine hundred and fifty years," and he is accounted to be one of the great men of the Old Testament. His name appears first in Paul's muster roll of the Old Testament heroes of faith, not because he was a greater than Abraham, but because he lived and wrought his deeds of righteousness before him. The author of the book of Genesis tells us he was a "righteous man, and perfect in his generations," and in the same connection we learn that he "walked with God." Peter describes him as a "preacher of righteousness."

Historically and proverbially, Noah is chiefly known to the world as the man who built the ark. As a feat of mechanical construction, there was nothing very remarkable about the ark. Compared with gigantic structures of to-day, it pales into insignificance. Almost any reputable architect could easily point out flaws in the building. It does not reflect any credit upon the inventive genius of Noah, for he did not make the plans. God furnished the plans. Noah built exactly according to instructions. His work was that of a carpenter rather than an architect.

What a privilege and relief it would be, we think, if only God would plan, outline, and describe our exact work for us to-day as to measurement, material, and arrangements, just as he did for Noah when the time came for him to build the ark! It would be easy to go ahead and do our duty with God's clear specifications in our hands. That is exactly what God wants to do for us and will do for us, if we will let him as Noah did. We must remember that Noah had been walking with God as a consistent habit for many years. The building of the ark was only one of the many things that God had planned for Noah. It was because he had been faithful in other things that God made him superintendent of the ark.

Noah Kept On Building.

Paul commends specially Noah's faith. Of course you have heard of the man who never mended his roof because he could not fix it when it rained, and when the sun was shining he could not believe that it would ever rain hard enough for it to leak. But Noah's great faith in God's word made him keep on building the ark through all those years that the sun kept on shining—building for a deluge that was to come far in the future. Through all the building period he lived and worked by faith, being assured that, in spite of all appearances to the contrary, the divine determination would be carried out. All around him were godless men of great physical strength who seemed, to all outward appearances, to be flourishing. It is more than likely that for gain they coöperated with Noah to the extent of furnishing some of the material for the building of the ark which they held in supreme disdain. Public opinion was wholly against Noah. The evil men of that time must have made sport of his labors, declaring that there never had been a great flood and there would likely never be one. If the young men were like the modern youth, they may have touched their foreheads significantly, saying: "He is not all there." Noah kept on building. All the while, by every blow struck, by every foot of work completed, space was given to the evil generations to repent, for by the construction of the ark Noah became a preacher of righteousness. His daily work upon the ark was the biggest part of his sermon. God was wonderfully patient with the people. Peter says the "long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." He wasn't trying to see how quickly the ark could be built. He was stretching out the time on purpose, hoping against hope that they might repent.

How Noah Drives Away the "Blues."

Noah was wonderfully patient, too, for a man. Mr. Moody used to tell how he learned to put away discouragement. One day he was in his study brooding over his lack of success, when a young man, who conducted a Bible class of a hundred members, came in. The young man was on the mountain top of exhilaration, while Mr. Moody was in the valley of humiliation. "What kind of a day did you have yesterday, Mr. Moody?" asked the visitor. "Very poor. I feel quite cast down. How did you get on?" "O, grandly! I never had a better day." "What was your subject?" asked Mr. Moody. "The life and character of Noah. Did you ever preach on Noah? Did you ever study upon his life?" "Well, no. I can tell what there is about him in the Bible. You know it is all contained in a few verses." "Study it more," the young man said. "It will do you good. It will drive away the blues." "When the young man went away," said Mr. Moody, "I read all I could find out about Noah. Presently the thought came stealing over me: Here is a man who toiled on for one hundred and twenty years and never had a single convert outside of his own family; yet he was not discouraged! I have never hung my harp on the willows since that day." We may find in Noah's hammering upon the ark year in and year out a wonderful example of how to wait upon the Lord. As the psalmist said: "Rest in Jehovah, and wait patiently for him: fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass."

Spiritual Lessons from the Flood.

The story of the flood has, of course, a great many moral lessons. It reminds us of the wise man's saying: "He that soweth iniquity shall reap calamity." (Prov. 22: 8.) It reminds of Plato's truism: "Sin and penalty go through the world with their heads tied together." It reminds us of Horace Bushnell's quaint proverb: "When God prepares a hammer, it will not be made of silk." It reminds us of what Mommsen, the scholarly historian, said:

History has a Nemesis for every sin!
Who spurns the Shrine of Right, nor wealth nor power
Shall be to him a tower.

But the best moral and spiritual lessons I get from the New Testament. Having already commented upon Paul's declaration, I remind you of Simon Peter's comparison of the ark with the ordinance of baptism: "Which also after a true likeness doth now save you, even baptism, not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the interrogation of a good conscience toward God." The lesson in this comparison, briefly stated, is this: To honor God in his commandments means to come into the church through baptism as the eight souls came into the ark; to refuse to obey means to be lost as the evil men of Noah's time were swept away for their disobedience. G. Campbell Morgan, speaking to a company of ministers recently, said that the attitude of the world to-day might be summed up in one word—indifference. This remark reminds us of our Savior's application of the story of the flood. "And as were the days of Noah, so shall be the coming of the Son of man. For as in those days which were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and they knew not until the flood came and took them all away; so shall be the coming of the Son of man. Then shall two men be in the field; one is taken, and one is left: two women shall be grinding at the mill; one is taken, and one is left. Watch therefore: for ye know not on what day your Lord cometh." (Matt. 24: 37-42.)

No Better Off Than the Antediluvians.

Thus it appears that, despite all our boasted civilization, when Jesus comes again, thousands of the world's leading citizens will be no better off than the antediluvians. Should not this solemn warning from God's own Son inspire every man among us to be watchful and to say with Joshua: "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord?" To be "in the same boat" with the wicked means to be in no boat at all. "Noah's ark" has long since been gathered to the dust, and people use it now as the butt of many a joke. But if you despise its lessons, it will come back to you in the judgment, reminding you as never before how the omniscient Father "chose the foolish things of the world, that he might put to shame them that are wise; and God chose the weak things of the world, that he might put to shame the things that are strong; and the base things of the world, and the things that are despised, did God choose, yea and the things that are not, that he might bring to naught the things that are: that no flesh should glory before God."

Partial Parents.

Do you not think parents make a mistake when they show partiality to a firstborn child and an indifference toward the younger ones?

This would be a truly frightful condition to be found in any home, and should least of all be expected in a Christian home. The only excuse for partiality would be when one child in the family is weak or sickly or in trouble of any kind, and so requires special sympathy and care. It often happens that one child will be by disposition and temperament specially congenial to a parent. In such a case the parent should take special pains to be thoughtful, helpful, and winsome to the others, so that they could not feel any restraint at thinking that one is a favorite. Kindness and attention to all and real comradeship will help the rest to come up to the parent's ideal. It is inconceivable that any Christian parent could be "indifferent" to any of the children. Almost the cruelest heartaches of life are those suffered by children who fancy their parents do not love them. Any mother who finds herself tempted to be specially fond of one child must exert herself to extra thoughtfulness for the others, and, in trying to make all happy, will find her heart expanding to give all an equal place of love.—Christian Herald.

FOUR CONTRIBUTORS

Golden-Wedding Anniversary of Brother and Sister J. D. Floyd.

Through the kindness of a Christian friend and brother who was in attendance, the publishers of the Gospel Advocate have received an account of the fiftieth anniversary of the wedding of Elder John D. Floyd and his wife, of Flat Creek, Tenn., which was celebrated on December 28, 1915. The great host of friends of this beloved couple among our readers will read this account with unfeigned pleasure:

Members of the Flat Creek church of Christ, their home congregation, planned that the event should be celebrated appropriately at the Christian meetinghouse at Flat Creek, and to that end sent out the word and invitations. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and, despite the rain and high waters of the day, the crowd was as large as could be comfortably cared for. Fifteen churches of Christ were represented by members and ten others by cards or letters and gifts. The meeting was presided over by Eugene Pearson, one of the Flat Creek boys. Singing, Scripture reading, prayer, and short talks were the order for part of the time. Elder B. F. Hart, of Petersburg; Mr. Ernest Bryant, Presbyterian minister, of Normandy; Dr. Enochs, a companion of their youth; Mr. W. W. Hix, a neighbor of forty-five years; Mr. Watt Gowen, an elder in the Flat Creek congregation; Mr. Jesse Neece, of the County Line congregation; Rufus Pearson, of Washington City, a relative; and Dr. Reager, of Shelbyville, each had part in this service, and strong was their testimony to the value of the lives Brother and Sister Floyd have lived in that country.

Mr. J. W. Frost, representing the community, read the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted, and presented them to him with well-chosen words:

"Whereas, in the administration of the affairs of an all-wise Providence, the community of Flat Creek has been given the life of Brother John D. Floyd; and whereas every day of his life has been lived or spent in such a manner as to fittingly represent the highest type of citizenship, the highest ideals of morality, and an honorable Christian character; therefore, he it resolved:

"First, That we, the citizens of the Flat Creek community, on this occasion of his fiftieth marriage anniversary, give expression of our profound appreciation of his kind association, wise counsel, and congenial fellowship.

"Second, We gladly acknowledge that the community has been materially benefited and blessed by his example and influence for good, and we sincerely hope the future holds in store for us many more years of his life, and that they may be happy and pleasing to him.

"Third, That these resolutions be presented to him as representing what his neighbors and friends think and say of him."

One of the main addresses of the day was made by C. E. Wooldridge, of Fayetteville, Tenn., on "I Have Fought a Good Fight," and was able and inspiring. Hon. J. J. Bean represented Lynchburg and made a fine address. He was one of the many who could say: "Brother Floyd baptized me, married me, and ministered in our family in sad hours." As Mr. Bean was the one designated to deliver the presents, he had the liberty to bring in other things, such as showing the wedding dress and the tablecloth used at the supper fifty years ago. He also read the names of representatives of five generations of the family (but not in direct line) who were present—namely: Elder J. D. Floyd; Mrs. T. J. Kimbro, a niece; Mrs. J. A. Wallace, great-niece; Mrs. T. E. Noblitt, great-great-niece.

The golden-wedding cake was beautifully decorated in yellow roses and dates and was sent by Mrs. T. K. Williams, of Tullahoma, Tenn. The following poem composed by her for the occasion was read by Mr. Bean:

The bells of youth for some may chime,
Making poetic fancies rhyme,
And Christmas bells for others jingle,
Making merry hearts to tingle.
But the bells that please my ears
Are the ones of fifty years;

They make your heart to rise and swell,
How they echo! and they tell
Of years else wrongly or rightly spent,
If wrong, then I should close my song,
And I would make my soul content
Of other bells my lips to tell.

But these are golden years that went,
On all that's pure and useful bent,
Making others' burdens lighter,
Making lonely hearts to brighten.
Many lips your praises sing,
Many prayers for you doth wing,
And methinks the gates of heaven will swing
When the message comes: "Tis done."
May the God of all your days
Guard you tenderly in the last days,
And may the wheel turn back to you
Some of its precious morning dew.

The congratulatory gifts were numerous and beautiful. In addition, letters and cards were received from various parts of the country. The honorees of this memorial occasion expressed their deep appreciation for the many tokens of love they received.

A Belated Article on the Song Service.

BY J. D. FLOYD.

Brother Lipscomb wrote me requesting an article for the "Song" Number of the Gospel Advocate. By some means the letter miscarried and was not received in time to prepare the article for that number. Articles in that number consider the song service from almost every conceivable angle, but at the risk of repeating some things already published I add a few thoughts.

J. M. Kidwill, of blessed memory, used to say the song service was the pulse of the congregation and that by it you could tell the state of the spiritual life of the congregation. Singing is commanded and is a part of the service of the church. The command to do a thing carries with it the obligation to learn how to do that thing. We are commanded to pray, and we learn that John the Baptist and Jesus "taught" their disciples "how to pray." It would be well for every congregation to spend a few days every year in being drilled, by a competent teacher, in singing. This, in my judgment, would result in greater good than the custom many congregations have of employing a leader for the protracted meeting. The song leader in the protracted meeting adds interest to that work, but my observation is that the regular services of the church afterwards receive little benefit from it. The leader in the meeting does not have time to give the necessary drill without interfering with the preaching of the gospel, which should be the important thing in these meetings. We have many worthy song leaders, and I would not deprive them of work in their chosen field; but if a church can do but one thing, let it give the singer employment in the drill in preference to the protracted meeting. Our congregation at Flat Creek has been noted, during the nearly fifty years of its existence, for its good singing. The first year of its existence it employed A. D. Fillmore for a ten-days' drill. His work resulted not only in great improvement in the church's singing, but in other churches around. J. H. Fillmore, in his young days, was with the church a great deal. Other good instructors have followed these, with the result that the singing has been good all the time. One of the most profitable drills we have ever had was last year, by Hugh A. Price, now of Morven, Ga.

I may be written down as an "old fogy," and I shall not complain at the appellation, but I fear the song service will never be what it ought to be until there is a great book burning. Too many little books filled with music of the jiggety-jig, skippety-skip, and jumpety-jump style are being scattered among the churches. A number of years ago the editor of the Musical Messenger, of Cincinnati, Ohio, asked two questions of a great number of preachers and evangelists: (1) "What is wrong with our church music?" (2)

"How can the wrong be remedied?" Out of a great number of answers received and published, Zack Sweeney's was the shortest and, I believe, the best. To the first question he said: "Too much Jim Crow." To the second: "Put Jim Crow out." If this was done, many books that have given currency to this style of music would go out. On one occasion, as an invitation song following an impressive sermon by Brother J. M. Kidwill, the brethren sang one of those jiggety-jig songs. When they were through, he said: "Now sing a song that has some religion in it"—a suggestion that would be in place often.

A few observations and I close. Singing should be with the spirit—that is, the sentiment should be in harmony with the truth. It should be with the understanding—that is, so those who hear can understand. Operatic singing in worship is a burlesque. Let the song fit the occasion. "Scatter Bright Smiles" would be out of place at a funeral; equally so would "Hark! from the Tomb a Doleful Sound" at a wedding. Let the singing, as well as everything else, "be done unto edification."

He Annihilated a Hobbyhorse.

BY F. W. SMITH.

J. M. Dixon, M.D., writing of J. B. Moody's pen productions, has this to say in the Baptist Builder of December 8:

It would be difficult to mention the best book or tract that the Doctor has ever written. Possibly, however, "Grace" excels any other. Other tracts that I might mention are: "Love the Greatest," which gets better every time I read it; "The Two Covenants," which, from a fundamental viewpoint, serving as a key to the whole Scriptures, excels anything I ever saw; "The Name Christian," in which he perfectly annihilates the Campbellite hobbyhorse. "My Church" is a Baptist work par excellence; "The Twelve W's of Baptism" is, likewise.

Mr. Moody has written extensively on religious subjects and engaged in a number of oral debates with those he delights to designate as "Campbellites." His very ardent admirer, Dr. Dixon, thinks Mr. Moody's tract on "The Name Christian" "perfectly annihilates the Campbellite hobbyhorse." Wonder why Mr. Moody did not "perfectly annihilate" the rider as well as the horse? Ah, he has nearly worn himself out trying to kill "Campbellism;" but the more he beats and pounds on that animal, the fatter and stronger it grows.

My first acquaintance with J. B. Moody was about twenty-seven years ago, when he tried so hard to kill "Campbellism" in Nashville. But he met an advocate of the truth in the person of James A. Harding, who made it uncomfortably warm for the "Campbellite" killer, inasmuch that Mr. Moody has been rather scarce in these parts ever since. Instead of his killing the thing he calls "Campbellism," he only gave it an increased impetus that went on in leaps and bounds until it has spread nearly over the city.

But back to Dr. Dixon's "hobbyhorse." Were not the followers of Christ called "Christians?" Did they not graciously accept and wear the name "Christian?" Is it wrong to follow precedents set by the inspired apostles? If not, where is the justice of dubbing those who follow the example of the early disciples "hobby riders?" Would Dr. Dixon become offended if some one should call him a "Christian?" In fact, does he not claim to be a Christian? If so, is not that his "hobbyhorse," too? Shame on the Doctor, Mr. Moody, and all others who berate people for their refusal to wear sectarian or denominational names. If any one should say to Dr. Dixon, "You are unworthy of the name 'Christian,'" he would be mortally offended, and yet he cries "hobbyhorse" at those who refuse to be anything else religiously than simply Christians. The Doctor has this to say about Mr. Moody's tract on "Grace:"

At the outset his doctrines of grace were too "strong meat" for my digestion, and gave me no small amount of anxiety for the justice of God and my own big-headedness; but as I grew less, God grew more gracious, until at last, as the poet said, I found myself praising with deep emotion, "None of self and all of thee."

No wonder he so felt when he imbibed Mr. Moody's theory of the grace of God, for that theory comes as near making a nonentity of mankind as anything ever invented by the wild imagination of man. Mr. Moody's theory of the grace of God leaves man a hopeless wretch, so dead in sin that he cannot think a good thought nor do a good deed until overpowered by the irresistible (?) and mysterious direct influence of the Holy Spirit, by which he is raised from the grave of sin. His theory of the grace of God in the conversion of a sinner is as much a physical work as the raising of Lazarus from the literal dead. There is absolutely no moral quality or spiritual power in Mr. Moody's theory of grace, and no one was ever converted to Christ by that theory. If any one was ever converted to Christ under the preaching of Mr. Moody, it was not done by his theory of grace, but in spite of it. The convert learned the truth from some other source.

Doctor Dixon says that at the outset Mr. Moody's doctrines of grace were "too strong meat" for his "digestion." We admit that they are tough on the spiritual digestion of any one used to the doctrine of grace set forth in the New Testament, and just how the Doctor ever managed to digest such food at all will always remain a mystery. It gave him "no small amount of anxiety for the justice of God." Well, I would not only be anxious about the justice of God in the matter, but the welfare of my digestive organs would give me great uneasiness also. No wonder the Doctor was anxious about the justice of God in the face of a theory that damns man if he does not, when he is absolutely powerless to do. "If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins;" and yet man is powerless to believe until moved by an irresistible power! Mr. Moody's theory of grace makes null and void the gospel of Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation. It robs God of the glory of saving sinners by the power he ordained to that end.

"Studies in Recent Adventism."

We have on hand a few copies of the scholarly book on the above subject, written by Henry C. Sheldon. It is an especially timely review and analysis of the assumptions, claims, and teachings of Adventism. The name of the author guarantees the character of the book—its lucidity, its scholarly style, its weight of authority. It will be an invaluable antidote to the materialism, Russellism, and premillennialism of to-day, and a strong weapon for students and preachers who must meet and answer this false teaching.

In view of the recent agitation concerning David's throne and the claim that the kingdom of Christ has not been established, but will be established in the near future in the city of Jerusalem, this book should receive a careful reading and wide circulation. We will send the book, post-paid, for fifty cents. Write quick, as the supply is limited.

McQuiddy Printing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

God's will is an angel bearing in his hand a little lamp to light you step by step on your heavenward way, at last bringing you to the door of home. If there are perplexities before you, simply begin to do your duty—the little of it that is clear—and the perplexities will vanish. If the task set for you seems impossible, still begin the doing of it. It would not be a duty and be really impossible. God never requires anything he does not intend to help us to do. The giving of a duty always implies strength to do it. In due time the mountain will yield to your faithful strokes. You will learn by doing. Life will brighten as you go on.—The Young People.

Words of Encouragement

"Success to you!"—John Hayes, of Mooresville, Ala.

"May the Lord bless you and all the faithful."—J. C. Estes.

From Philip A. Wall, at Obion, Tenn.: "The Gospel Advocate is growing better."

From J. H. Whisnant, at Atkins, Ark.: "I certainly do appreciate your special numbers."

"The Gospel Advocate, as usual, is all that one could ask for."—Mrs. Lucy Wilson, Russellville, Ala.

John T. Hinds, of Fayetteville, Ark., writes: "The special numbers during the year have been very fine."

From Jesse P. Sewell, at Abilene, Texas: "I could not but love the Gospel Advocate and the Nashville Bible School."

From Mrs. Agnes Williamson, at Argenta, Ark.: "Brother D. Lipscomb has stood the storms of persecution like the Rock of Gibraltar."

"I love the paper, as it has been in our family over thirty years. The special numbers are treasures."—Mrs. Agnes Williamson, Argenta, Ark.

From Murrell M. Pitts, at Murfreesboro, Tenn.: "I congratulate the Gospel Advocate upon its getting our esteemed Brother Larimore on the force."

From Robert L. Moore, at Mulberry, Tenn.: "I have been reading the Gospel Advocate from the beginning, and expect to continue so long as I can see."

From Annie Smith, at Lawrenceburg, Tenn.: "The special numbers are fine. I almost always read my paper through the day it comes and reread it."

From A. T. Kerr, at Brookport, Ill.: "I know that a word of encouragement now and then helps a fellow. May God bless you and the other editors of the Gospel Advocate."

From C. Petty, at Flomaton, Ala.: "The issue of the Gospel Advocate of December 30 is before me, and it is surely a good one. D. L.'s piece is worth the price of the paper."

"May the Gospel Advocate and The Bible Study Helper, all their editors, contributors, and beneficiaries, have a most prosperous year during 1916."—T. B. Thompson, Murray, Ky.

From J. Y. McQuigg, at Abilene, Texas: "May God bless you all in the great work in which you are engaged and spare you to your threescore and ten—and then some, if it be his will."

From Miss Mattie Holder, at Bridgeport, Ala.: "Your 'specials' are all fine, but the 'Song' Number was par excellence. Many, many thanks for your priceless New Year's gift. It is invaluable."

From I. B. Bradley, at Dickson, Tenn.: "I hope for the best year you have ever had. Let us all do our best. 'The King's business requireth haste.' 'Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.' May the Lord bless you in your work."

Editorial comment in the Christian Standard: "The Gospel Advocate of January 6 is a 'Review and Forward' Number, and contains much splendid matter. We are glad to note continued improvement along all lines by our Nashville contemporary."

From Isaac C. Hoskins, at Florence, Ala.: "Hearty congratulations on the acquisition of Brother T. B. Larimore as a member of the already strong and versatile editorial staff of the Gospel Advocate. His facile pen will enrich the pages of that excellent paper."

From W. S. Long, Sr., at Union City, Tenn.: "The 'Review and Forward' Number is the best. All have been good, but this one excels them all. If this is a sample for the year, I know we have something fine. I file it as my New Year's gift and will read it often."

From J. G. Malphurs, at Bunnell, Fla.: "Permit me to say that I enjoy your worthy paper, and I read nearly every line in it. Especially have your special numbers been of much benefit to me. I am at a loss to know how you will make the 'specials' of 1916 better than those of 1915."

From R. A. Craig, at Shelbyville, Ky.: "I want to congratulate you on your firm stand against untaught questions. I feel sure that you take the right side when you say you love the truth more than you love any man. May God bless you in your humble efforts to defend the truth and teach it only 'as it is written.'"

From John W. Kurfrees, at Germantown, N. C.: "After reading carefully the special 'Home and Father and Mother' Number of your valuable paper, I cannot refrain from expressing my hearty appreciation of it. I wish everybody in the country could read it. If at all possible, it should be distributed in tract form."

From W. T. Martin, at Madisonville, Ky.: "I am sending my renewal to the Gospel Advocate another year. I am glad to see the name of Brother Larimore added to the editorial staff. I am not acquainted with him personally, but he is well known through his pen. The special numbers are fine. I cannot get along without the Advocate."

From Mrs. F. C. Sowell, at Columbia, Tenn.: "I want to say that of all the good editions of the Gospel Advocate last year and of all the extra good special editions, to my mind, the 'Home and Father and Mother' Number was the best. It was hard to specialize, but somehow that number appealed to me more strongly than the rest. I am glad the special feature is to be continued."

From Mrs. H. W. Kirk, at Fountain Creek, Tenn.: "I am not a new subscriber, for I was 'raised' on the Gospel Advocate. My father, the late Thomas White, took the Advocate during his lifetime, being a subscriber from the time it was first published. After his death, my mother took it until she left us last spring to join father in the 'beautiful home of the soul.' I will renew her subscription when it falls due in April."

From John T. Poe, at Longview, Texas: "Your issue of January 6 is fine, instructive, and will induce much thought along the line of the world's moral status. I want to suggest a number on 'first principles,' to be followed by one on 'second principles,' or that which builds up and perfects Christian character. This one might be designated as 'The Model Church;' then 'Duty of Elders,' 'Duty of Evangelists,' 'Duty of Members in Whole.'"

From Dr. S. M. Dorris, at Bandana, Ky.: "I have been a subscriber to the Gospel Advocate for twenty-five or thirty years, and it gets better all the time. It is always full of good, solid Bible thoughts from a host of loyal brethren. I have often thought of the amount of good Brethren Lipscomb and Sewell have done through the pages of the paper in their long service. It cannot be estimated, and is felt from the Atlantic to the Pacific."

From W. T. Blalock, at Lead Hill, Ark.: "Inclosed you will find one dollar and fifty cents to renew my subscription to the dear old Gospel Advocate for another year. I have taken it for over forty years, and it gets better every year. Your special numbers are just fine. 'Around the Lord's Table,' the 'Song' Number, and the 'Home and Father and Mother' Number cannot be beat. I am getting old and cannot do anything much, but I certainly enjoy reading the Advocate. It is the next thing to the Bible with me. I pray that the Lord may bless you all. It was through the preaching of Brother David Lipscomb at McMinnville, Tenn., in 1872, that I first saw the light of the gospel. Brother Smithson, a blind man, held a meeting at McMinnville the same year, which converted me from sectarianism to the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. The longer I live and the weaker I get physically, the stronger I get spiritually. I am now in my seventy-sixth year and growing stronger in the Lord all the time."

From E. S. Jolley, Jr., British India: "After reading the last special number of the Gospel Advocate, I feel like I want to write you a letter and tell you that I think that it was just fine. I have often lamented the fact that our brethren, of all others, who should know how to sing, are the most backward of all. We claim that we stand for the New Testament order of things and are given to much "sputing" with our religious neighbors because they have substituted an instrument for the melody of the heart, when at the same time, perhaps, in a majority of our congregations, there is difficulty to find one who will even attempt to start a song. Are we excusable for such negligence? When the special came, I was in bed with a touch of sciatica and a pain in the side (all this has since passed away, for which I am very thankful); so my good wife read the paper to me. Before she had read half of the articles, I told her to get a song book and let us sing some. She readily consented, got a copy of 'Redemption's Way in Song,' and we began by singing our favorite, 'There is Music in Heaven,' followed by 'The Precious Name of Jesus,' and on and on we went singing until time to retire for the night. I hope that at least the part of that number relating to singing will be put in tract form and scattered broadcast among the churches and preached from the pulpit until every congregation in the land learns to sing spiritual songs with the spirit and the understanding also."

The Church of Christ—Lesson III.

1. What is it? In Matt. 16: 18 Christ says: "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it." As much as can be known about this institution we want to learn; hence we enter this third lesson with a most earnest prayer that God may bless us and help us to be as nearly perfectly honest as man can be, that we may see clearly God's holy will and be able to identify the institution that Christ calls his church.

(1) As to name, you will observe that it is called "the church of Christ" and "the church of God." (See 1 Cor. 1: 2; 20: 32; 11: 22; 15: 9; 2 Cor. 1: 1; Gal. 1: 13; Acts 20: 28; Rom. 16: 16; 1 Cor. 11: 16.) In referring to all the congregations existing at the time or in a given section, you will notice they are spoken of as "the churches of God" or "the churches of Christ." (See 1 Cor. 11: 16; 1 Thess. 2: 14.) It is easy to see why this great institution can be thus spoken of as both "the church of God" and "the church of Christ," when we see Christ's language in John 17: 10, where he says to the Father: "And all things that are mine are thine, and thine are mine." Whatever belongs to God belongs to Christ, and whatever belongs to Christ belongs also to God; hence this institution that Christ built is spoken of as God's church, Christ's church. Too, let it be remembered that it still belongs to them; they built it for themselves and have never leased it to any man or set of men; hence all of this talk about "your church" and "my church" should be banished from our fair land, and we should recognize the fact that God and Christ are the only ones who should have a church.

(2) It is spoken of as "the house of God." (1 Tim. 3: 15.) As a house, we see (a) Christ as its foundation (1 Cor. 3: 11); (b) God's children as living stones built upon this foundation (see 1 Pet. 2: 5; Heb. 3: 6; 1 Cor. 3: 9).

(3) It is also spoken of as "the body of Christ." (Eph. 1: 22, 23; Col. 1: 24.) As a body, we see (a) Christ as its head (Col. 1: 18; Eph. 1: 22, 23); (b) God's children as the members of this body (1 Cor. 12: 27). Too, it must be remembered that there is but one body. Christ, as head, does not have a multiplicity of bodies. (See Eph. 4: 4; Rom. 12: 5; 1 Cor. 12: 20.) It is a mistake, therefore, to try to make denominationalism stand for the one body or church of our Lord. "For in one Spirit," says Paul, "were we all baptized into one body," which is the church. (See 1 Cor. 12: 13.) If a man and wife will let the one Spirit guide them through the teaching of God's holy word, it will always lead them into the one church, and never lead the husband into one church and the wife into another, which two different churches actually forbid their eating the Lord's Supper together. In spite of this all-important fact, there are some of God's children in Babylon, and it is our duty to call them out. (Rev. 18: 4.)

(4) It is called "the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 16: 18, 19; Heb. 12: 22, 23, 28.) As a kingdom, we see (a) Christ as its King (Ps. 2: 6, 7; Acts 13: 32, 33); (b) God's children as its citizens (Eph. 2: 19).

(5) It is also spoken of as a "sheepfold." (John 10: 16.) As such, we see (a) Christ as the door and the Shepherd (John 10: 9, 14); (b) God's children as the sheep.

(6) Then, with a beauty that is sublime, the church is presented as the "Lamb's bride." (Rev. 19: 6-9.) For a fuller study of this relationship, read carefully Rom. 7: 4; 2 Cor. 11: 1, 2; Eph. 5: 22-32.

(7) From all of the above, we see that it is, indeed, a mistake to speak of a house made of wood or stone as "the church." The church of Christ is God's dwelling place on earth (Eph. 2: 22); but he dwells not in houses made with hands (Acts 7: 48; 17: 24). The house of God is a living, loving, praying, and working body. It assembles for worship, comes together into one place (1 Cor. 14: 23); and through persecution the church at Jerusalem was scattered abroad, and the scattered church went about preaching the word (Acts 8: 1-4).

Now, do you see what the church is? If you are not a member, why not become a member now? If you are a member, let me beg you to live pure, that your light may shine for the glory of Him who built the church and for the salvation of those with whom you associate.

The Blessed Assurance.

In connection with the lessons now appearing on this page, I wish to say that of nothing do we have greater assurance from our Heavenly Father than that we shall know his will if we want to know it. Away with the idea that we have to live in darkness about our soul's interest! Christ says: "If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the teaching, whether it is of God, or whether I speak for myself." (John 7: 17.) Again, he says: "If ye abide in my word, then are ye truly my disciples; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8: 31, 32.) David says: "The friendship of Jehovah is with them that fear him; and he will show them his covenant." (Ps. 25: 14.) It is our Father's will that we "walk in the light, as he is in the light." (See 1 John 1: 7.) The light in which we must walk is the "light of the gospel of the glory of Christ." (2 Cor. 4: 4.) He assures us that those who follow him shall not walk in darkness. (John 8: 12.) Those who walk in darkness know not whither they go, as our Lord hath said. (John 12: 35.) Paul, in writing to the brethren at Thessalonica, says: "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." (1 Thess. 5: 4.) How thankful we should be that Jehovah has given us the light—an abundance of light—in the gospel of his Son, in which gospel we are so clearly shown how to become his children and how to live as sons of God. Too, don't forget that the desire of the devil—the enemy of our soul's interest—is that we walk in darkness, that we live in ignorance of Jehovah's will. Let us see to it that he suffers a complete defeat at this point. There is but one way that we can drive him from the field, and that is by learning what the will of our Lord is. Don't forget the timely words of Paul: "Wherefore be ye not foolish, but understand what the will of the Lord is." (Eph. 5: 17.) Blessed, thrice blessed, is the man who delights in the law of the Lord and who meditates on that law day and night.

Should Be Read Again.

The following words from Brother C. W. Sewell, in our issue of January 6, should be read again:

Men are full of mistakes; the irrational animals make none. Yet the lower animals make no improvement, while men are capable of unlimited development. The sparrow that built its first nest in the trees of the garden of Eden knew as well how to lay the straws across and weave the feathers in as do those of the twentieth century; but man, taking advantage of his mistakes, is capable of continued improvement. Especially is this true of the Christian and the divine life. By a careful review of the past and a diligent study of God's word, the soul mounts higher and higher on the scale of Christian perfection.

If we are living conscientiously before God, our ground for improvement lies mainly in our increased knowledge of God's word and a resolute determination to improve on our every mistake. Perhaps we did the best we could last year; but our increased knowledge of the truth not only gives capacity for better work, but brings greater responsibilities. To meet this requires renewed effort.

MISSIONARY

BY J. M. McCALEB.

POSTAL INFORMATION: International post-office money orders can be bought at the rate of one per cent; but for any amount, however small, the cost will be ten cents. A check on any of the banks in America is good in Japan; personal checks are as good as any. The money itself is accepted by the banks. The ordinary postage on letters is five cents; newspapers, one cent.

ADDRESSES OF MISSIONARIES: Otoshige Fujimori, Takahagi, Kurimotomura, Katorigori, Shimosa, Chiba, Japan; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McCaleb, Zoshigaya, Tokyo, Japan; Mrs. William J. Bishop, 904 West Jefferson Street, Station A, Dallas, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Vincent, 73 Myogadani, Koishikawa, Tokyo, Japan; Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Jelley, Jr., Satara District, Satara, British India (funds may be sent to Don Carlos James, 2225 Dearing Court, Louisville, Ky.); Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Sister Andrews at Her Post.

BY I. B. BRADLEY.

By the time this reaches the readers, if all has gone well, Miss Sarah Andrews, who has gone out from the church of Christ at Dickson, Tenn., as a missionary to Japan, will have reached her field of labor. She left Dickson on the morning of December 25 for Vancouver, B. C., where she embarked on the steamship Empress of Japan, for the port of Yokohama, on January 1. She is due to arrive in the above port on January 15. This port is eighteen miles from Tokyo, the location from which she will conduct her work. She went alone, Brother and Sister Glenn, with whom she expected to make the trip, having been delayed on account of sickness. They expect to go to Japan later in the year. She went with the utmost confidence in her ability to make the trip in safety, trusting in the Lord to guard her and keep her to the end. She was eager and anxious to get started on her way, and reports from her up to the time of her departure on the steamer were hopeful and joyous. She had found some congenial companions and was doing splendidly. Everything had gone well and she was feeling good.

At the time of her departure I had on hand for her use a little more than three hundred and fifty dollars. After paying for her transportation to Yokohama and giving her one hundred and fifty dollars, I had as a nucleus for her future support about twenty-five dollars. Since her leaving I have received a few small amounts, so that I have on hand at this writing about thirty dollars. I should like to have about twenty dollars more to send her by February 15. Will not those who are interested in her success send me a donation at once? I have ten dollars and fifty cents per month pledged on her support. I would like to have others write me how much I can depend on for a monthly contribution. Will not some of those who have been so generous to send to her expense fund now help regularly in her support? Let me hear from you. Hereafter a personal receipt will be sent to every contributor and a monthly statement will be given in the Gospel Advocate and the Christian Leader. Who will be forward to make this pledge?

This is a great work, and is a part of the work of the great commission, which teaches: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations." We believe that Sister Andrews will be a valuable assistant to the workers in Japan. She is full of zeal and energy for the work, and is equipped with a good literary training received in Dickson Normal College and the West Tennessee Normal College. She has been a student of God's word since her childhood and has great reverence for the revealed way of the Lord. In this community she took great interest in looking after the sick and the poor and talked to them about their souls. She will make a valuable aid to the workers already in the field. With Brother McCaleb, who has been there more than two decades, to help her, and also with Miss Yoshie as a daily companion, she will have excellent opportunities to quickly learn the language, so that she can soon do her work personally. Let all who love the work of the Lord and desire to have a part in the work of converting the heathen help support Sister Andrews. Send direct to me. "What thou doest, do quickly." "The King's business requireth haste."

Report for November, 1915.

Personal Support: Florence, Ala., $20.05; Beech Grove, Tenn., $12.50; Highlands Avenue, Louisville, Ky. (October), $6.10; Harbert Avenue, Memphis, Tenn., $10; Blaine, Ark., $3; Concord (Sherwood), Ontario, Canada, $4.90; Patterson, Cal., $7; by Christian Leader, $6; name withheld, $5; Ashford Todd (October and November), $2; D. L. Lindsay, Texas, $15; P. E. Myers, Arkansas, $3; Portland Avenue, Louisville, Ky., $10. Total, $102.55. Also the following: House rent, $23.13; critical reading of a series of English textbooks, $15. Total, $38.13.

Japanese Evangelist at Zoshigaya: Receive ten dollars a month from the church at Lubbock, Texas. Need fifteen dollars a month. What other church will cooperate with the Lubbock brethren and give five dollars a month?

Literature Fund: Nothing received. Thirteen dollars behind with the printers for the Fukuin. Need five dollars a month to publish this paper. Who will furnish the five dollars and thus reach a thousand people each month? Also, we need forty dollars for tracts for the coming Katori festival on May 5.

For the support of Okei and Oharu: Mrs. J. J. Walker, $5. Balance on hand, $18.23. Need $8.60 a month.

Sendagaya Church: Richardson Church, Richardson, Deer Island, N. B., for Brother Ishii's support (by Christian Leader), $10. Pay him seven dollars a month. Paid in all for this work in November, $35.40. Funds short by $18.30. Had to supply this from my own personal income.

C. G. Vincent: "A Friend," Texas, $5.

Sister Tomie Yoshie: Sisters of the church at Charleston, Miss., $5; Nashville Bible School Church, $10. Total, $15. Need twenty dollars a month. Nashville and Charleston are giving regularly each five dollars a month. If two more churches will do as much, this will make the twenty dollars needed. I am now short with our sister's support thirty-one dollars and fourteen cents. I have had to supply this out of my own income. I sent my family in November only a little over half what they ought to have had. That our work may not be hindered, we need a more hearty support.

Chapel Fund: D. L. Lindsay, $10; church at County Line, Tenn., $6. Total, $16. Previously reported, $422.40. Including November offerings, $438.40. Cost of chapel, $627.95. Balance needed, $189.55. Given in Japan, $132.64, making a total of $571.04. This leaves a debt on the house of $56.91. The seats and pulpit will cost us sixty dollars. We hope our friends will help us meet these obligations at once so we may make better progress.

To The Churches of Christ in Tennessee.

I am anxious to have the name and post-office address of every member of the church in the State. Will not some member of each congregation collect as complete a list as possible of the membership of his or her home congregation and send it to me? Be sure and send correct address. If you are unable to send a complete list of the membership, send what you can.

SPECIAL DIRECTIONS.

Subscriptions are $1.50 a year, in advance, including postage to any part of the United States. To Canada and foreign countries, $2 a year, in advance.

The Date on the Yellow Label on your paper serves you as a receipt, and indicates the time to which your subscription is paid. When you renew, if the date is not changed within three weeks thereafter, please call our attention to it.

Discontinuances. No paper will be continued over twelve months after the subscription has expired. This will give all ample time to renew.

Payment for the Advocate, when sent by mail, should be made by post-office money order, express money order, registered letter, New York exchange, or postal note. Neither currency nor coin should be sent in a letter, unless registered; and when so sent, it is at the risk of the sender. Have your remittances made payable to the Gospel Advocate, and never to any member of the company.

Do Not Write Business on the same sheet as matter intended for publication.

Change of Address will be cheerfully made at the request of any subscriber giving post office, county, and State from which the change is to be made, and post office, county and State to which the paper should go after the change.

Renewals. In renewing, give the name just as it appears on the yellow label, unless it be incorrect, in which case please call our attention to it; and always give the name of the post office to which your paper is sent, as this is the guide by which we are enabled to find your name on our list.

Do Not Send Matter intended for the Advocate to the editors personally. This may occasion delay. Address the Gospel Advocate Publishing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Some Questions and Answers.

BY E. A. E.

Brother Elam: In 1 Cor. 11: 5 Paul says: "But every woman praying or prophesying with her head unveiled dishonoreth her head." (1) Is this in the public assembly? (2) Is she to pray in silence? (3) Can she prophesy in silence? (4) If she reads with the assembly of the church in the Bible lesson, will she sin? (5) If one part of the congregation is willing to leave off the Bible lesson in the assembly of the church as only a preference of theirs, but the other part demand that they submit to the demand as to a divine law, can they submit under such requirement without doing violence to their consciences? What should be done in such cases? These may appear silly questions; nevertheless, they are here. With charity in your heart, what is your advice?
T. J. DUNN.

"With charity in your heart, what is your advice?" It is this:

I . . . beseech you to walk worthily of the calling wherewith ye were called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; giving diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. (Eph. 4: 1-3.)

This is an age of contention, strife, denunciation, and division in many churches of many places. There are almost as many theories and ways in some places as there are teachers and preachers.

When Paul exhorted the Ephesians to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," and the Corinthians that they "all speak the same thing," that "there be no divisions among" them, and that they "be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment" (1 Cor. 1: 10), he did not write in a partisan spirit of a few denominational practices and names, but in the Holy Spirit of the contentions and factions of congregations of Christians. Every church must endeavor to obey God here. It is just as rebellious to refuse to obey God at this point as to refuse to repent or to be baptized. If we are not bound by the word of God at this point, we are not bound at any. If the word of God is not our guide and standard in keeping "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" and in all that it says in regard to avoiding many questions which produce strife, then we have no standard and guide and there can be no such things as unity and peace. If we are not bound by the silence of the Bible, we have no standard and guide and are left to be driven hither and thither by "every wind of doctrine." But God binds us by his silence:

The secret things belong unto Jehovah our God; but the things that are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law. (Deut. 29: 29.)

God has revealed his will that we may do it. Submission to God is the supreme lesson he seeks in all ways to teach us, and it is our supreme happiness to obey him. We are forbidden to go beyond the things which are written. (1 Cor. 4: 6; 2 John 2.) To do this is not only to transgress God's law, but it is to turn from him and Christ and the Holy Spirit.

In grief I often wonder if brethren in numerous places realize the enormity of the sin of gendering strife, producing bitterness, being filled and filling others with a partisan spirit and with cursings, and causing unholy divisions over their whims, notions, theories, speculations, and doctrines.

Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them in the sight of the Lord, that they strive not about words, to no profit, to the subverting of them that hear. Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God [not unto men, not unto one's own vanity and pride of opinion], a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth. But shun profane babblings: for they will proceed further in ungodliness, and their word will eat as doth a gangrene; of whom is Hymenæus and Philetus; men who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already, and overthrow the faith of some. Howbeit the firm foundation of God standeth, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his: and, Let every one that nameth the name of the Lord depart from unrighteousness. (2 Tim. 2: 14-19.)

Amidst all error and false teaching God's firm foundation stands, and whoever hears and does the words of Jesus builds on it.

As I have written before, we have seen men dying of cancer, which eats away the flesh and bones and blood until the whole body becomes corrupt and is consumed. Just so, says God, all these forbidden questions will fill the church with gangrenous sores until in rottenness it dies. Men who are guilty of these sins are worse than the ones who nailed Jesus to the cross. The latter tore and pierced Jesus' flesh with nails and spear, while the former rip asunder his spiritual body. The latter were ignorant; but the former, in self-conceit, pride of opinion, and willfulness, tear apart the church.

Gentle reader, how do you suppose Hymenæus and Philetus theorized and philosophized and concluded that the resurrection had passed already? How could they persuade others to believe such a theory? Those whose faith was overthrown doubtless thought Hymenæus and Philetus were specially qualified and sent of God to lead the benighted into fuller light and greater knowledge than Paul possessed. They doubtless, too, fell out with Paul for correcting this error and comparing false teaching to a gangrenous sore. And doubtless they accused Paul of making the sore and producing all the division caused by this false teaching. Well, Paul was accustomed to this. The ones who persecuted him, followed him from city to city, raised howling mobs, stoned him, dragged him out as dead, and disturbed the whole land, accused him of turning the world upside down. (Acts 17: 6.) Paul knew that the wicked and idolatrous Ahab accused the faithful and loyal Elijah of troubling Israel and Elijah's reply that Ahab with his own sins had caused all the trouble. (1 Kings 18: 16-18.) This is one of the strange and sad things of human nature: the ones who are faithful to God, as was Elijah, and who contend for the truth only—"the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3)—are to-day criticized, blamed, abused, condemned, and accused of dividing the churches. The "digressives" have not quit this yet. But they are by no means the only ones thus guilty. All who divide churches over their own theories and over any error do the same. This is the trick of all false teachers. The demons Jesus cast out of people requested him to let them alone. Error wants to be let alone. The false teachers at Corinth impugned Paul's motives, bemeaned him, and denied that he was an apostle.

To preach the truth simply, and all the truth, is the effort of all true gospel preachers. Justice to all and the spirit of Christ are the desires of all Christians. A partisan spirit, prejudice, and bitterness are condemned. Hence all Christians must determine to be neither partisan nor prejudiced. The impugment of motives is always wrong, and all should purpose in their hearts to never be guilty of that sin. All should pursue that upright and straightforward course which stands for itself and does not require explanation every few days. All should first live the truth and then teach it to others; thus they will be happy and a blessing to others.

The course of not a few is grievous. Some seem determined to seek preferment among brethren and to have the chief seats at feasts and in synagogues; others, to make and to wear some sort of religious titles and to form some kind of order of the clergy; and others, to crystallize around some theory.

Since Hymenæus and Philetus overthrew the faith of some by their false theory that the resurrection had passed already, we should not be surprised at some otherwise sensible people believing any theory or speculation offered in the name of religion. Preach anything, and some will believe it.

The Pharisees, so strongly condemned by the Saviour, were great theorists, and scrupulously exacting about them; but they said, and did not. They had the theory that swearing by the temple did not bind one, was nothing, but swearing by the gold on the temple bound one; swearing by the altar was not binding, but swearing by the gift on the altar was binding. (Matt. 23: 16-22.) Jesus called them "fools and blind." Not a few of the hairsplitting theories of to-day remind one of the Pharisees.

But has question 5 been answered? Yes, if the parties concerned will obey God. Lowliness, meekness, long-suffering, and forbearing one another in love are the foundation of "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." This foundation is not in the theories, speculations, and opinions of men; certainly not in the vanity, pride, self-exaltation, and factions of men. Commit to memory Phil. 2: 1-11. When brethren strive and pray to be of the same mind, to have the same love, to be of one accord, to do nothing through faction or vainglory, but in lowliness of mind to count others better than themselves, and to look to the peace and good and welfare of the whole church and salvation of sinners, they will understand how to study the Bible "in the assembly of the church" so as to learn the most, benefit the greatest number, and accomplish the greatest good.

"What should be done in such cases?" Each should count the other better than himself and do that which will maintain peace. No one can be conscientiously opposed to the study of the Bible and to teaching the Bible "in the assembly of the church." If "the Bible lesson" (whatever is meant by that) is left off by "preference," that cannot be a matter of conscience. "Preference" is not conscience. I might prefer one way of teaching the Bible to another, but I would most cheerfully yield that way to one on which the whole church could harmonize. God has not given just one way of teaching the Bible. All exhorting, reproving, rebuking, persuading, and edifying are teaching. (2 Tim. 4: 2.) He who would confine the church to just one way—and his way, at that—sins against the church and against God.

The other questions I answer in the order given:

1. No.
2. Yes, and in private.
3. Not "in silence;" but privately, as Priscilla taught Apollos (Acts 18: 26), and as Philip's four daughters (Acts 21: 9), Mary and Elizabeth (Luke 1: 41, 42, 46-55), and Anna prophesied (Luke 2: 36-39), and as the aged women taught young women (Tit. 2: 3-5).
4. No.

A Sword That Cuts Both Ways.

BY M. C. K.

Our journalist neighbor, the Western Recorder, of Louisville, Ky., does not at all times seem to have an accurate conception and appreciation of the matter of consistency. From a recent sermon of Dr. E. L. Powell on "Damnable Heresies" it quotes the following extract:

Sometimes the question is asked: "Do you think that this man who has just passed away will be saved?" He was not in any church; he did not subscribe to any creed; and you begin to think of the man's life and you recall his quiet ministrations. There come before you his stealthy benefactions, and we cannot understand why it is that he did not identify himself with any church organization; but will any one of us dare to say that he did not live the Christ life, and is there doubt on the part of anybody that if there is a heaven he has gone to it?

On this paragraph the Recorder then makes the following editorial comment:

This is both unique and refreshing, emanating as it does from an unexpected source. Indeed, Dr. Powell is the first preacher of this denomination, so far as we are informed, who boldly affirms without reservation or explanation that baptism is not essential to salvation.

Now, is not that a most remarkable conclusion to be drawn from such promises? Did not the editor of the Recorder see that, in thus criticizing Dr. Powell's theology on baptism as set forth in that paragraph, he is handling a sword that cuts both ways? Dr. Powell did not say a word about the essentiality or the nonessentiality of baptism, nor, indeed, did he even mention baptism at all. Of course, when the editor of the Recorder makes the point that the Louisville pastor preached a man to heaven without baptism, his criticism is entirely correct; but why limit it to baptism? Dr. Powell did not preach the good man in question to heaven without baptism any more clearly and certainly than he preached him to heaven without faith in Christ, and, for that matter, without everything else that constitutes a Christian, except the fact of being morally a good man. If it is "unique and refreshing" and furnishes comfort to the doctrine of salvation without baptism for Dr. Powell to preach a man to heaven without baptism, why is it not equally "unique and refreshing" with comfort for the doctrine of salvation without faith for him to preach a man to heaven without faith? If the Gospel Advocate understands Dr. Powell, he means to teach in the sermon in question that being morally a good and benevolent man who dispenses "stealthy benefactions" is all that is essential to salvation and going to heaven, "if there is a heaven." This is the way the sermon reads; and if the Recorder will look at the facts, we cannot see how it can be otherwise impressed.

After all, so far as the matter of the essentiality of baptism, or of faith, or of repentance, or of confession, or of prayer, or of the church, or of anything else is concerned, what is the real question at issue? Is it a question of whether, under any possible circumstances and for any possible reason, God Almighty could and might save a human being without these things? Or is it not rather the question: Does the New Testament teach and require faith, repentance, baptism, and membership in the church, with all that constitutes the Christian life? The latter question is clearly and abundantly answered in the New Testament, but the former is not. Then, why not present the teaching on the latter and let it go at that? Why not speak where the Bible speaks and stop where the Bible stops? Neither Dr. Powell, nor the Western Recorder, nor the Gospel Advocate, nor anybody else on earth knows that the moral man with even a multitude of "stealthy benefactions," who is not a Christian, will be saved; but they all know, or should know, that such a man with all other men will be in the hands of "the Judge of all the earth" and that he will do right about it. Why not preach this, and along with it lay all possible emphasis on what God, in the New Testament, requires of men, and on which its precious promises are based? Why not preach simply what is revealed, without addition, and without subtraction, and without modification?

Then, if in the final issue we shall behold "the Judge of all the earth" saving the non-Christian with his "stealthy benefactions," or anybody else who, to human perception, does not come within the purview of the revealed promises, we can all be grateful and rejoice over it. "The secret things belong unto Jehovah our God; but the things that are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law." (Deut. 29: 29.)

QUERY DEPARTMENT

Brother McQuiddy: "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness," etc. Why is it that the word "mind" is not used in the place of "heart?"

J. G. BARLOW.

"Heart" and "mind" are sometimes used interchangeably. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." (Matt. 22: 37.)

Brother McQuiddy: One of our members here has announced that she has left this congregation to go with her people, who are going to meet for Bible reading and singing in this community at the same hour the church meets. Pleading with her was all in vain. Some of her people left the church some time ago. If she should come to church now, should we pass her the bread and wine? X.

The right thing to do would be to go to her and endeavor to show her the mistake she is making. If she returns to the church, it is an indication that she is looking in the right direction, and in this she should be encouraged. It would then be proper to encourage her for returning and seek to lead her to make confession for leaving. When this is done, you will know where she stands, and, accordingly, how to act.

Brother McQuiddy: Is it right to have a Christmas tree in the church building on Christmas night, when it has already divided the Sunday school and has started trouble in the church? Give us scripture either for it or against it, if any.

B. H. MURPHY.

There is no divine authority for or against having a Christmas tree. There is no authority for the observance of Christmas Day, and its observance is no more binding than any other day. Indeed, it is a misfortune to have a day of this kind observed religiously that is not appointed by God. It tends to destroy the distinction between things divine and human. There is no sin in observing it as a day of thanksgiving and for giving gifts as thanks for the blessings of the year, but it is a sin to divide over its observance and to observe it as consecrated to God.

Brother McQuiddy: Is there any Bible reason for or against inviting a Baptist preacher to preach in a house where Christians only worship? Did the brethren who invited him commit a sin in so doing? Some of the brethren and sisters left. Did they commit a sin by leaving or not? I want these questions answered so that all the brethren and sisters may read them, and, too, that the church may not be torn up at this place.

E. W. PARKS.

Christians should not fellowship error; but it is to be presumed that the brethren invited the Baptist preacher as a courtesy, and not as an indorsement of his doctrine. No one should be invited to preach in the meetinghouse at a time that conflicts with the worship of the church. When God's worship is not interfered with, there is no sin, as a matter of courtesy or accommodation, in inviting a Baptist to preach in the church house. The walls of a meetinghouse are not sacred. Christians condemn sectarians for refusing to allow them to preach in their houses. Paul preached in the synagogue at Ephesus for three months, and because some were hardened and disobedient he went into the school of Tyrannus. (Acts 19: 9.) We cannot see that the brethren necessarily sinned in giving the invitation, neither did those sin who left and did not hear the Baptist preacher.

Brother McQuiddy: (1) Would it be wrong to permit the teacher of our literary school to put on a play in the church house, the school building being too small to accommodate the audience, the proceeds to go to improve the schoolhouse and grounds? (2) I would like for you to offer some comments on 2 Thess. 3: 6-12.

CAL MITCHELL.

(1) Provided the play is not corrupting in its tendency, we can see no wrong in permitting the teacher to have it in the meetinghouse. The people, however, should have enough interest in education to build and pay for a schoolhouse for their children without resorting to plays. (2) The scripture on which comment is asked (2 Thess. 3: 6-12) reads: "Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which they received of us. For yourselves know how ye ought to imitate us; for we behaved not ourselves disorderly among you; neither did we eat bread for naught at any man's hand, but in labor and travail, working night and day, that we might not burden any of you: not because we have not the right, but to make ourselves an ensample unto you, that ye should imitate us. For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, if any will not work, neither let him eat. For we hear of some that walk among you disorderly, that work not at all, but are busybodies. Now them that are such we command and exhort in the Lord Jesus Christ, that with quietness they work, and eat their own bread." In these passages several truths are very clearly taught. First, Christians are commanded to withdraw from the disorderly walking. They should not associate with them in any way that will encourage them in their wickedness. Secondly, Paul would have Christians imitate him as he followed Christ. Thirdly, while they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel, he had not used this right, but had labored with his own hands for support that he might not burden any one and that he might be an example to Christians. Fourthly, men should not be upheld in idleness. "If any will not work, neither let him eat." Idle men tempt the devil and become busybodies.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

The Pale Horse in Mexico.

Famine follows war in Mexico. There are long bread lines in the cities. Women come at midnight for the distribution that opens at eight the next morning. "We have seen," writes Dr. Butler, of the American Methodist Mission, "many of them so exhausted with the heat or by hunger that they were actually sleeping while leaning against the side of the house, or in some cases prostrate on the ground. One day a soldier came along and, seeing a poor woman with a crying baby in her arms, took her out of the line where she stood and placed her at the head of the procession. As she turned away a few minutes later with her three quarts of corn, about twenty women begged for the loan of her baby in the hope of being treated similarly."—Record of Christian Work.

Loving Service.

Christian service is a service of love. The more we do for Christ, the more we wish to do for him. When a Russian artist showed Tolstoi his beautiful painting, "The Last Supper," the latter, pointing to the central figure, said: "You don't love Him." "Why," said the artist, "that is the Lord Christ." "Yes," said Tolstoi, "but you don't love him, or you would paint him so that men and women would not only love him, . . . but be inspired for a life of loving ministry and heroic service." When we are so selfish and stingy that we hesitate about giving twenty-five cents to the church of God, are we properly painting Christ? When we are filled with envy and jealousy because another can do more for Christ than we, what kind of an impression are we making on men and women? When we act the part of a gloomy pessimist, finding fault with the service of our brethren, what kind of a picture of Christ are we painting? If there is no love in our service, it is cold, formal, and lifeless. "We should love as brethren." We should have fervent love one toward another. We may well appropriate the sentiment of the following lines from Henry Van Dyke:

There are many kinds of love,
As many kinds of light,
And every kind of love makes
A glory in the night.

There is love that stirs the heart,
And love that gives it rest;
But the love that leads life upward
Is the noblest and the best.

A Church Certificate.

A young man who was going to Chicago to make his way in the world fell in with an old sea captain who asked him if he had letters of introduction. "Yes," said the young man, showing them. "Have you a church certificate?" asked the captain. "O, yes, but I did not suppose you desired to see that." "Yes," said the captain, "I want to see that. As soon as you reach Chicago, hunt up your church and present that. I am an old sailor, and have been up and down in the world; and it is my rule, as soon as I get into port, to fasten my ship fore and aft to the wharf, although it may cost a little wharfage, rather than have my ship out in the stream, floating hither and thither with the tide." This is good advice. Every Christian, when going from one community to another, should always take his church letter with him and present it to the church on the first Lord's day after his arrival in his new field. The writer recalls an incident. Over thirty-five years ago, with his brother, he visited a church. Both left their church letters at home. A preacher had recently practiced a fraud on the church. The church had passed a ruling that no preacher who was not known to it could preach in their church house without a letter of commendation. This law was like the law of the Medes and Persians—unalterable. The crowd assembled for preaching. My brother and I were present. When our church letters were called for, we could not present them, for they were in our trunks at home. The suspense was great. The brethren had every reason to believe that there was no reason why we should not preach, but there was that law! Fortunately, just at this juncture Brother E. A. Land, now gone to his reward, came in, and, realizing the predicament, he very promptly vouched for the integrity of us both, saying that he had seen our recommendations in the Gospel Advocate. The meeting began that night and resulted in the addition of about thirty persons to the church. The report the Gospel Advocate gave of our work helped both us and the church. It is well to read a good religious paper, and it is also proper to have letters of introduction when going among strangers.

Bible Study Among the Blacks.

The Continent publishes an extremely interesting account of neighborhood Bible classes among the negroes of Birmingham, Ala. A quarter of a century ago two ladies, Miss Boorman and Miss Knapp, were sent South by the Baptist Home Mission Board to engage in colored work. They started by organizing classes of negro women for the study of the Bible, of missions, and of other lines of Christian activity. Each year in May these black women have an annual graduate service with certificates and contests in the recitation of Scripture.

But the thing has not stopped here. The learners have turned about and become teachers, and, as is natural, their pupils have been the little negroes of their own households. At thirty centers in Birmingham these black mothers have, once a week, held a neighborhood Bible class in their own homes, the core of whose work has been Bible memorization. During the last six months the lessons have been on the life of Christ. Not only have the important events been studied as we study them in the average Sunday school, but whole passages have been committed to memory. At the annual exercises in a Birmingham colored church five hundred little negroes, ranging between six and sixteen years, came to the front, individually or in groups, to repeat pages of Scripture narrative—the crucifixion, the resurrection, the parable of the good Samaritan, etc. In an hour and a quarter there was only one case of lapsed memory, and that due to stage fright. "I was amazed and delighted," says Mr. Lee McCrae, who tells the story, "not merely at the amount of Scripture that had been learned, but with the accuracy and intelligence shown by the pupils." At the close, each of the five hundred children received as a present the Testament from which he had been memorizing. This considerable gift came from the pockets of the black mothers. Music of a characteristic Afro-American type filled an important part in the exercises. "The Words of Jesus," set to music, was sung by the entire five hundred with great ease. And there were new folk melodies—"Dere ain't no hidin' frum de Lawd;" and one about heaven which is described as unusually beautiful, with allusions to the present conflict in Europe—"Whar we ain' gwine study war no mo', no mo', no mo'."

One could wish that white children generally could receive the training these black bairns are getting in the systematic memorization of the New Testament.—Record of Christian Work.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Compiled by A. B. Lipscomb

F. W. Smith is in a good meeting at Woodsfield, Ohio.

From Janie Thomas, at Kanima, Okla.: "The paper gets better with every number."

J. A. Hardison is preaching in and around Winter Garden, Fla. That sounds good these cold days.

M. C. Kurfrees returned to Louisville, Ky., Sunday, having closed a good meeting at Cloverdale, Ind.

Alvin J. Reagan died at San Angelo, Texas, on January 31. The Gospel Advocate expresses sympathy for the bereaved family.

From W. B. Newby, at Temple, Texas: "I shall do all in my power to get each adult member to read the Gospel Advocate before the year closes."

From James M. Daniel, at Lobelville, Tenn.: "I am an old man, and have read the Gospel Advocate for several years, and have received much comfort from it during the time I have read it."

We had two splendid services at Russell Street Church, this city, Sunday, with one confession at the morning service. We confidently expect Brother Sewell to be able to worship with us next Sunday.

W. T. Goalen, of Dothan, Ala., has been spending a few days with us. He was here to secure a tent to be used in Southeastern Alabama. Brother Goalen is a hard worker. He reports good results from his field.

The church at Shelbyville, Ky., is making splendid progress these days. R. A. Craig reports that "three young people were added to the congregation on January 16, and the interest is growing at every meeting."

Married, at Donelson, Tenn., on January 4, 1916, at the home of the bride's parents, Miss Naomi McFarland and Mr. Charles Combs, of Galveston, Texas, R. V. Cawthon officiating. This young couple have many friends who extend best wishes.

From P. R. Slater, at Shelbyville, Ky.: "It has been my desire that the Gospel Advocate be better supported and that its full space be given to editorials and helpful contributions. I have had you send the papers to others at different times."

From Ben West, at Lometa, Texas: "I have been reading the Gospel Advocate regularly for nearly one year, and most of the time for about ten years. I have gotten more real good from it in the past year than from all other readings except the Bible."

From H. S. Owen, at Christiana, Tenn.: "I am sorry Brother Sewell is sick, but hope and pray that he may get well if it is the Lord's will. I love to read his articles, for he always writes to the point. I wish the Gospel Advocate a long and useful life."

S. S. Lappin, editor of the Christian Standard, writes: "I drop you a word this evening to congratulate you on the addition of T. B. Larimore to your editorial staff. He is a man of clear thought and fine spirit. I believe he will be of value to our cause through this new connection and the Gospel Advocate be a better paper than ever."

T. M. Porch, of Ferris, Texas, one of our oldest subscribers, cheers us with the following note: "The Gospel Advocate was better last year than ever before. 'Around the Lord's Table' I consider the best number last year. I cannot see to read it now but very little, but wife reads it to me. I pray God's blessings on your good work and that the Advocate may grow better, if possible, all the time. I think it the best paper in the world. I have been reading it many years and will continue so long as I live."

T. W. Phillips changes his address from 1500 North Balinger Street to 1000 South Adams Street, Fort Worth, Texas. We are grieved to learn of the sad mishap to Brother Phillips, and hope that the earnest appeal in his behalf, written by Brother Poe, may meet with a quick response. Brother Poe writes: "Brother T. W. Phillips, of 1000 South Adams Street, Fort Worth, Texas, fell on the sidewalk, broke his right leg in the hip, and is flat on his back, in bed for, perhaps, two months. Let us keep his family alive till he can get to work again. Do not let his flour barrel get empty. Read Matt. 25: 31-46, and send what you want to meet on that side of the question in the judgment. My contribution has gone forward."

H. H. Montgomery, one of the elders at Shreveport, La., writes: "Please note in the Gospel Advocate that B. U. Baldwin is now traveling through Texas, visiting the churches in the interest of the church of Christ here, hoping to enlist the brethren in the much-needed work of building a meetinghouse in this city of thirty-five thousand souls. We are worshipping in a tent, which is the best we can do now; but if we can get a house, we can do much more for the Master's cause. Brethren, receive Brother Baldwin and lend a helping hand to the little, struggling band of forty men and women who are having much opposition in their efforts to build up a loyal church of Christ here. Pleas Bagget and I are elders of the congregation, and we will keep the work moving while Brother Baldwin is away."

We are glad to report that our friend and brother, V. I. Stirman, is getting some stronger after a serious illness. We print the following extract from an encouraging letter, written by Ira L. Winterrowd to Brother Stirman: "I have for a long time associated you, Brother Lipscomb, and Brother Sewell together, for the reason that you are all about the same age and all have battled so long for the same principles. To you and Brother Lipscomb I owe so much for whatever I may be as a preacher. You baptized me and encouraged and instructed me when there was no other who could at home. He was my Bible teacher while in school. I hope you both may be spared by the good Master years yet to do good. I consider, as I have said many times, that the church at Garrett owes its beginning and success to your constant teaching. I will never forget you."

Itinerary Notes,

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

I spent Sunday, January 16, at Murray, Ky., where I preached twice. The bad weather and the grip cut the audience down, so the brethren thought, but still there was a fair audience of earnest workers present. This is the home of Brother T. B. Thompson, who some time last year took unto himself a wife from Brother Bradley's home congregation, of Dickson. Sister Thompson is a sister in the flesh of the brave little sister who went recently to Japan as a missionary. Brother Thompson showed good judgment in his selection of a wife, and I do not know that Sister Thompson made any great blunder in her choice. The little congregation at Murray has a lot of opposition, but they seem to have a mind to work and are not afraid to stand up for their faith with any of their opponents. The Baptists seem to have a fine hold on the town of Murray, and they are well organized and ready to use the town just as far as they can, and they can go a long way for the benefit of the Baptist Church. I have heard of things being "priest-ridden;" but if I am not mistaken, this town is a little "Baptist-ridden." This is where the Baptist preacher, Taylor, lives; and if I am not mistaken, he has the town "Taylored," all except our little congregation. Well, if this is the thing the people like, then that is the thing they like. There are a few there who will bow to no denomination or religious clique, but will be found ready to contend for the truth on any part of the ground.

I left Murray on Monday evening and came home for a few days' rest. I was well received on my entire trip, and I find that the Gospel Advocate has many friends everywhere. It deserves them. When this is read I will be back in the field preaching and looking after the interests of the oldest and best paper there is representing the truth—the Gospel Advocate.

Following is my schedule for several days: Union City, Wednesday, January 26; Rives, Thursday, January 27; Obion, Sunday, January 30; Glass, Sunday (evening), January 30; Newbern, Tuesday, February 1; Dyersburg, Wednesday, February 2; Halls, Thursday, February 3; Ripley, Friday, February 4; Covington, Sunday, February 6; Henning, Tuesday, February 8; Memphis, Wednesday and Thursday, February 9, 10; Gadsden, Friday, February 11; Dresden, Sunday, February 13; Huntington, Monday, February 14; Camden, Tuesday, February 15; Fayetteville, Sunday, February 20; Huntland, Monday, February 21; Winchester, Tuesday, February 22; Estill Springs, Wednesday, February 23; Tullahoma, Thursday, February 24; Manchester, Friday, February 25; McMinnville, Sunday, February 27; Viola, Tuesday, February 29; Sparta, Wednesday, March 1; Science Hill (Rutherford County), Thursday, March 2; New Hope (Rutherford County), Friday, March 3; Woodbury, Sunday, March 5.

The Cause of Christ in Northern Cities.

BY E. A. BEDIČEK.

I recently held a three-weeks' meeting in Terre Haute, Ind. I preached in Cincinnati, Ohio, on the second Sunday in January. I have preached in St. Louis, Mo., and will again. I know a great work can be accomplished in all these cities, with the proper coöperation on the part of all disciples in Tennessee, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas. They need church houses and an evangelist in each city. They are able to contribute about one-half the amount. The church in the South must contribute the other half. There are sixty thousand people in Terre Haute, five hundred thousand in Cincinnati, and seven hundred thousand in St. Louis. One can speak every day to a nice audience at the noon hour at some of the public works. I did so at Terre Haute. They came to hear me at the revival. If the churches perform their duty toward each other and the world, they will cooperate and save themselves and others. Write H. T. Shake, 1000 North Center Street, Terre Haute, Ind.; P. B. Johnson, 4936 Fountain Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.; F. L. Rowe, 422 Elm Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. Help them build a house of worship and support an evangelist all the time in these cities.

Preachers write these churches and offer your services. If a preacher will locate in any of these places, he can and will be supported. Who will be first to act among the preachers and churches? Write me at Fresno, Cal., after February 1. Let us all keep in close personal touch with each other and the needs of the work. "We then, as workers together with him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain." (2 Cor. 6: 1.) If we do not fulfill our mission, help evangelize the world in the United States and across the waters, we will receive God's grace in vain. Let us cooperate. Do it now. Greater things for God, Christ, his church, and the lost in 1916! Be sure to coöperate. Northern cities need the help of Southern churches in Southern cities.

SEVERE RHEUMATIC PAINS DISAPPEAR

Rheumatism depends on an acid in the blood, which affects the muscles and joints, producing inflammation, stiffness and pain. This acid gets into the blood through some defect in the digestive process. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the old-time blood tonic, is very successful in the treatment of rheumatism. It acts directly, with purifying effect, on the blood, and improves the digestion. Don't suffer. Get Hood's today.

A New Remedy for Kidney, Bladder, and All Uric Acid Troubles.

Dear Readers: I appeal to those of you who are bothered with kidney and bladder trouble, that you give up the use of harsh salts or alcoholic medicines and in their place take a short treatment of "Anuric." I have taken many of Dr. Pierce's medicines for the past twenty-five years with good results. I suffered with kidney trouble for some years. I recently heard of the newest discovery of Dr. Pierce—namely, his "Anuric" Tablets. After using same, I am completely cured of my kidney trouble. A doctor pronounced me a well-preserved woman for my age, all due, I believe, to Dr. Pierce's medical aid.

MRS. MELINDA E. MILLER.

NOTE.—Dr. Eberle and Dr. Braithwaite as well as Dr. Simon—all distinguished medical authorities—agree that whatever may be the disease, the urine seldom fails in furnishing us with a clue to the principles upon which it is to be treated, and accurate knowledge concerning the nature of disease can thus be obtained. If backache, scalding urine, or frequent urination bother or distress you; or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, gout, or sciatica, or you suspect kidney or bladder trouble, just write Dr. Pierce at his Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and send a sample of urine and describe symptoms. You will receive free medical advice after Dr. Pierce's chemists have examined the urine. This will be carefully done without charge, and you will be under no obligation. Dr. Pierce, during many years of experimentation, has discovered a new remedy, "Anuric," which is found to be thirty-seven times more powerful than lithia in removing uric acid from the system. If you are suffering from backache or the pains of rheumatism, go to your best druggist and ask for a fifty-cent box of "Anuric," put up by Dr. Pierce.

The remedy is coöperation. Results strong and stronger. Churches and souls saved. Coöperate!

Are You Out of Sorts, impatient, melancholy, pessimistic, down on the world? If so, your liver is out of shape. Healthy people look at the world through rosy glasses. Buy a bottle of Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Invigorator—price, only fifty cents—and watch your spirits pick up. It cleanses and invigorates your sluggish liver and puts you on your feet again. No arsenic and no calomel. Purely a vegetable compound.

For sale everywhere. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

A Sure Thing.

According to L. R. Eastman, of Nashville, Tenn., taking "Renwar" for rheumatism is just like betting on a proposition when you know you will win. Mr. Eastman writes us as follows: "My attention was called to your remedy, 'Renwar,' for rheumatic trouble. I gave it a trial and have been permanently relieved. It is with pleasure I indorse the merits for 'Renwar' for rheumatism." If your druggist does not sell "Renwar," accept no substitute, but send us fifty cents for a bottle. Money cheerfully refunded if it fails to satisfy you. Prepared and guaranteed by Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.

"Special" Silk Hose Offer.

To introduce the beautiful "La France" silk hose for ladies and gentlemen, we offer three pairs, 50-cent quality, for only one dollar, postpaid, in the United States. Pure silk from calf to toe, with durable elastic lisle top, heel, and toe for long wear. Sizes, 8 to 10½. In white, tan, or black; assorted if desired. Money back promptly if not delighted. La France Silk Store, Box G, Clinton, S. C.

How many will volunteer this week to work for the Gospel Advocate?

A book is a friend; a good book is a good friend. It will talk to you when you want it to talk, and it will keep still when you want it to keep still—and there are not many friends who know enough to do that. A library is a collection of friends.—Lyman Abbott.

Calomel To-Day, Sick To-Morrow.

Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile, it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated, and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a fifty-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful; and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day, you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you; while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone, you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition, and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant, and safe to give to children; they like it.

This means big and little tents, and we make all kinds. A thousand satisfied users testify to their quality. Let us make you a quotation. No trouble at all.

OBITUARIES

On account of the large number of obituary notices coming to the Gospel Advocate the following rules must be observed: Obituaries that do not exceed one hundred and fifty words are published free of charge. When they exceed this limit, one cent will be charged for every additional word. Payment must accompany notice or else it will be reduced to one hundred and fifty words. Poetry will not be printed.

Allen.

The church of Christ on Church and Catoma Streets, Montgomery, Ala., has sustained a great loss in the departure from this life of our very dear sister, Virginia Briscoe Allen, wife of Brother E. M. Allen, Jr. Sister Allen entered the Master's service in 1907. She was married to Brother E. M. Allen on December 1, 1913, and was called to her eternal reward on December 23, 1915. She leaves an infant named "Jane Briscoe Allen." I have never known a purer woman nor a more devoted Christian. She taught a class of young women in our Sunday school, and these young women loved her dearly. She was liberal with her money and time and talent. The whole church is grieved, and we all extend our deepest sympathies to the bereaved husband and parents and other relatives.

C. E. HOLZ.

Fleming.

On Saturday evening, December 25, 1915, death entered the home of Thomas Fleming and took from him his loving companion, Elizabeth Fleming. She was born on December 11, 1843, and was married at the age of fifteen years. She obeyed the gospel at the age of fourteen years, and maintained that Christian spirit which is characteristic of a child of God until she was called home. She was a true and devoted companion, a kind and loving mother. She became afflicted with dropsy about two and one-half years ago, from which she never recovered, notwithstanding she was attended by the best medical skill that could be procured. Like Job of old, she bore her afflictions and sufferings with all the patience and Christian fortitude possible for any one to have. She is survived by a husband and eight children, besides a number of grandchildren, to mourn their loss. But we should not sorrow as those who have no hope. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." X.

Burcham.

Irven B. Burcham, formerly of Carter's Creek, Tenn., died of typhoid fever at his home in Deming, N. M., on January 1, 1916. The writer baptized him into Christ in the summer of 1913. He became an active worker in the church at once and was a good student of the Scriptures. Very few times, if any, did he miss the Lord's-day services, although at times it was a sacrifice to go. Brother Burcham made many friends by his integrity of purpose and sterling character, and his memory will long be cherished by the people in Deming. His brother, Carl Burcham, was with him during his last hours and took his remains to his old home in Tennessee for burial. Brother S. P. Pittman conducted the funeral services. Just before he died, he talked about departing this life, and he faced death bravely. He said he hated to be taken back to his home folks a corpse, but to tell them that he could say with the apostle Paul: "To be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord." Some day there will be a great gathering of all God's people.

E. N. GLENN.

Belew.

God never gave to earth a sweeter, fairer flower than little Juanita Allene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Belew, and the doting parents loved this precious jewel that God had given them with a passionate devotion. Her young life had been one glad ray of sunshine to all those of the home and to her grandparents, who so sadly miss her. She was ill but a short time, and all that skill and loving hands could do to relieve her was in vain. The pure and beautiful baby soul had heard the angels calling and went away to join the band of the good and pure with Christ, who so loved these little ones. Amid the sobs of loving friends, Brother T. C. King read God's solace to the broken-hearted. The burial was at Fuller's Chapel Cemetery, where little Juanita now sleeps beneath a wilderness of tear-stained flowers. While her life was short, just one year and eight months, we know that it was not in vain. So sweet and beautiful a thing could not be without its influence to make gentler and nobler the lives of those with whom it came in contact. Her influence will live on like the fragrance of a sweet flower till we meet in the better land.

X.

Carter.

Thomas Taylor Carter was born on August 10, 1839. He was married to Elizabeth Homes on October 11, 1860. Nine children blessed this union, six of whom survive him. Since the death of his wife, which occurred on December 2, 1907, he had made his home with his children. Several months ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis, from the effects of which he never recovered, and death came as a sweet relief on November 29, 1915. Brother Carter had been a Christian something like forty-five years, and few lives have been more consistent than was his. He had a large connection of relatives and friends, and all doors stood open to "Uncle Tom," as he was familiarly called by so many. He was a man of extreme modesty, gentleness, and kindness, by virtue of which he made friends wherever he went. His love for his children and their devotion to him in his old age was such as is rarely seen and beautiful to behold. He leaves three sons and three daughters and a host of grandchildren to mourn his departure. May they ever show by their lives their appreciation for that beautiful Christian life of a godly parent who has gone to his reward. After the funeral services by the writer, he was laid to rest by the side of his wife's grave in the old Carter graveyard. J. T. CLARK.

Bond.

Mrs. Mary M. Bond, relict of Thomas H. Bond, died at the residence of her daughter, in the town of Franklin, Tenn., on January 8, 1916. Her maiden name was "Banks." She was born on April 19, 1832. In her nineteenth year, on September 12, 1850, she became the wife of Brother Bond. Soon after her marriage she became a member of the church of Christ worshipping at Hillsboro, in Williamson County, not far from Franklin. Her married life, while filled with cares and household duties, was a happy one. Some years ago her dear, devoted husband passed over the river, and she now has gone to meet him, as I trust, on the sunny shores of the "sweet by and by." Brother and Sister Bond were both devoted to the service of the Master. They were punctual in their attendance to the duties of Christian work and worship as health and strength permitted. For sixty-five years Sister Bond fought the battle of life under the blood-stained banner of the King of kings and Lord of lords. She passed her life in and about the town of Franklin. She was known and universally respected, and had a host of loving friends and relatives. Every one could bear witness that she was an exceptionally good woman. Of her immediate family, she leaves eight children—four sons and four daughters—who mourn the loss of a dearly loved, devoted, affectionate, self-denying mother. JAMES E. SCOREY.

For Emergency Use.

Every well-regulated family should keep on hand a jar of Mentholatum.

Its uses are various, because it is an excellent antiseptic and germicide and also a delicate counter irritant—just the thing needed for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains, chapped skin, insect bites and stings.

Mentholatum is a combination of volatile aromatic oils with a heavier base.

In the case of scalds and burns the heavy base keeps out the air, a very necessary condition.

The lighter aromatic oils disinfect the surface and protect it from infection from without.

The lighter oils also set up a delicate counter irritation which seems to draw the soreness out of the injured part, reducing the inflammation and encouraging rapid recovery.

For this reason it is very much used for colds, sore throat, catarrh, and croup.

OUTLINES OF BIBLE STUDY

REVISED AND ENLARGED

BY G. DALLAS SMITH

FOR USE IN

BIBLE DRILLS, BIBLE READINGS, BIBLE CLASSES, PRAYER MEETINGS, AND HOME STUDY

A BRIEF DESCRIPTION

Outlines of Bible Study (Revised and Enlarged) is a book of one hundred and twenty pages, besides five full-page maps covering all Bible lands. It is printed in large, clear type, on good, heavy paper, and is substantially bound in stiff cloth.

The book contains seventeen drill lessons for use in Bible drills, Bible readings, or any other Bible class where it is desired to cover the entire scope of the Sacred Record in a short time.

Outlines of Bible Study is not a commentary in any sense of the word. It contains but few comments. It is not "literature" in the same sense that some object to literature. It rather guides one in his study that it may be intelligent and systematic.

CLINTON, S. C.

FROM THE FIELD

Alabama.

Bear Creek, January 19.—I preached at this place on Lord's day. Though the weather was very disagreeable, we had a good hearing. I find some true, loyal followers of Christ at this place, and, with their help and the grace of God, we expect to do good in the name of Christ for his cause. I was to preach at a point about three miles out of town at night, but the storm became so severe that the people could not meet. The place of meeting was Mountain Home. I understand that there is a faithful band of workers at that place. I have some time open for summer meetings. Write me at Belmont, Miss.
FRANK BAKER.

New Decatur, January 20.—The work at Jackson Street Church is moving along nicely. All meetings are well attended and all seem anxious to grow, therefore all have good appetites for the "sincere milk of the word." (1 Pet. 2: 2.) We all heartily enjoyed Brother Charles R. Brewer's visit and the splendid sermon which he preached on the night of December 30. We welcome preaching brethren and shall be pleased to have those who may pass this way stop off and preach for us. The Boaz-Locklear debate begins on the night of January 31 and will continue six nights. Let visiting brethren write me and we shall make arrangements for you. Take "Loop" car and get off at Maple Street, then walk one block to the right.
J. P. EZELL.

Mooresville, January 15.—One night during my meeting at Merrimack Mills, which has just closed, I had cause to compare the teachings of Charles T. Russell with the word of God; and when I stated that Mr. Russell in his books claimed that God revealed these things to him and that his arguments were not of human origin, one of his followers shook his head at me. I stopped and said: "My friend, do you mean to deny my statement?" He said: "I do, sir. Mr. Russell makes no such claim." I then asked him if he had Russell's books; and when he said that he had them, I dared him to go and get them. He did so, and we turned and read: "Yet that this is the result of extraordinary wisdom or ability on the part of the writer is positively disclaimed. It is the light from the Sun of righteousness that reveals these things as present truth." (Volume I, page 10.) I then asked him if he would let me have his books until the next night, promising the audience that I would show that Russell was a false prophet and a deceiver. He let me have the books, but would not come back the next night. A large audience was back the next night, and after the services I spent half an hour reading and exposing the false doctrine of Russell. One Baptist obeyed the gospel and some brethren who left on account of a preacher putting in unscriptural elders came back. Why will preachers ignore the plain statements of holy writ and put off on the church a work that is unscriptural and hurtful to the church? I want some one to tell me where we get any authority to vote on

Glass of Salts Cleans Kidneys.

If your back hurts or bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In twenty-four hours they strain from it five hundred grains of acid and waste; so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days, and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which every one should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

elders and deacons. One of the elders this evangelist appointed claims that we are not born of the Spirit until the resurrection. See, pure Russellism! And when asked what a sepulcher was, he replied: "A coffin." Paul says the Holy Spirit made elders; and unless they fill the requirements of the Holy Spirit, the fact that a preacher appointed them and a few voted them in does not make them scriptural overseers. I was made glad to see them come together and tell me that my labors there in past years was the cause of their having a house of worship. On the first Lord's day in February I begin at Hazelhurst, Ga., a truly mission field. Who will fellowship me in a month's work there? Address me at Mooresville, Ala.

Booneville, January 17.—I conducted twelve protracted meetings during 1915. Besides, I preached regularly once a month for the church in Booneville (my home congregation). I also preached for other congregations as often as I could reach them. I preached a great deal in destitute places. I here give the names of

FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glitters with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots fallish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. At Booneville, Ark., three baptisms; Monroe, Okla., no additions; New Hope Schoolhouse, near Alma, Ark., seven baptisms, two restored, one took membership; Indianola, Okla., two baptized; Romance, Ark., three baptisms, one restored; Enola, Ark., seventeen baptisms, two restored; Bryant, Ark., seven baptisms; Blaine, Ark., ten baptisms, one restored; Linker Mountain, near Dover, Ark., twelve baptisms, one restored; Conway, Ark., three baptisms; Bigelow, Ark., two baptisms; Canadian, Okla., one baptism, one took membership. Quite a number obeyed the gospel at different places where I filled appointments. My support did very well for the close times. I have promised to conduct meetings at four of the above-mentioned places during 1916. I am now ready to answer calls for meetings at almost any place and time except a part of July and August. Any congregation wanting my services in a meeting will please write me at once, so I can arrange time and date. Address Elder R. H. Johnson, Box 307, Booneville, Ark., as there is another R. H. Johnson at this place, and your letter may not reach me at all unless you address me as I indicate. Please keep this in mind, address me right, and I will get it. Brethren, let us make 1916 the best year of all in the Lord's work.

R. H. JOHNSON.

Colorado.

Olathe, January 16.—I am in the midst of a splendid meeting in Olathe in the "Christian Union" church building. Last night about every seat was filled and the interest was intense. Bad weather and sickness kept the brethren from attending, excepting two or three occasionally, but the outside people fill the house—at least they did last night. We have announced services indefinitely. We shall surely establish the church of Christ in Olathe by the help of God. Prospects are most flattering at this writing.

E. C. FUQUA.

Florida.

Ocala, January 16.—To-day was our preaching day at Capulet by Brother S. W. Colson. Large crowds and good attention. Please announce it in the Gospel Advocate, as we want other folks to know we are still at work.

W. F. HOOPER.

Tennessee.

Oblon, January 12.—I will report my work during 1915. I have preached for the congregations at Oak Ridge, Rehoboth, and Poplar Ridge (where there is no church), in Oblon County. I have also preached some at other places and at Fairview, Dyer County. I was the first preacher to preach at the last-named place some eighteen months ago, and have continued with them ever since when it was possible for me to be with them. Brother Holloway held their meeting for them, and they are now thinking of building a house for worship. The visible result of this work was three additions to the church. I also preached two funerals and married one couple during the year. I did not hold any meetings last year on account of my school work, but would like to arrange for four meetings during June and July. Any church wanting a meeting at that time may write me at Oblon, Tenn., Route 1. PHILIP A. WALL.

Turn Hair Dark With Sage Tea.

If mixed with Sulphur it will darken so naturally nobody can tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked, and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about fifty cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears. But what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach,
Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

Take Lime for Tuberculosis

In the Journal of the American Medical Association (July 27, 1912, Page 308), Dr. C. F. Dison, of Minneapolis, holds that a "deficiency of calcium" (lime) is responsible for the physical conditions which lead to tuberculosis, "and the therapy he advocates rests on this basis."

One of the reasons for the wide-spread success of Eckman's Alternative in the treatment of tuberculosis is its ability to supply this deficiency. It contains a lime salt in such combination with other valuable ingredients as to be easily assimilated by the average person. Many cases seem to have yielded to it.

We make no exaggerated claims for it, but prefer that it be tried on the same basis as any other prescription, and since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, it is safe. Price $1 and $2 per bottle. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct from the Laboratory. We would like to send you a booklet containing information of value and references.

Conversion—A Sermon.

BY H. W. JONES.

I. EXORDIUM.

Conversion is a process instead of some instantaneous act or change. Conversion does not take place "all at once," as some people think. Conversion is the act or process of turning—yes, man's turning from sin to righteousness, from death to life, from Satan to God. Righteousness, life, forgiveness and "every spiritual blessing" is in Christ. (Eph. 1: 3.) How, then, do we get "into Christ?" How do alien sinners start and go on unto (toward) Christ till finally they become fit subjects to be inducted into him? "Unto" means motion toward, but not actually "into."

II. POSITIVE STATEMENTS.

1. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." (Rom. 10.) Christ Jesus is our righteousness. (1 Cor. 1: 30.) Therefore we believe "unto" Christ, but not "into" him. We cannot believe "into" any body, organization, society, or State. We are said to believe "on" Christ, "in" Christ, etc., but never "into" Christ. Belief alone is dead. (James 2.)

2. All men must repent. (Acts 17: 30.) Repentance is unto life. (Acts 11: 18.) "The blood is the life." (Deut. 12: 23.) Therefore repentance is "unto" (toward) the blood of Christ, but not to the place or state where the blood is applied.

3. We are "baptized into Christ." (Rom. 6; Gal. 3.) All who are baptized into Christ are baptized into his (Christ's) death. (Rom. 6: 3.) Christ shed his blood in his death. His blood was shed for (unto) the remission of our sins. (Matt. 26: 28.) Therefore we first come to the blood of Christ (pardon, or remission of sins) when we, as penitent believers, are baptized into Christ's death.

"There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Immanuel's veins,
And sinners plunged beneath that flood Lose all their guilty stains."

So we see from a positive point of view that faith, repentance, and baptism are all conditions of conversion, or salvation. The heart is purified, changed, or cleansed, by faith in Jesus; the life is changed by repentance; the state, or relationship, is changed by baptism. Hence the whole man (heart, life, and state) is changed, or converted. And, mark you, all the above conditions are "bound" in a positive way and made effective by the blood of Christ.

III. NEGATIVE STATEMENTS.

Now, let us look at conversion from a negative point of view; let us see if man can "except" (take out) any one of these conditions and be saved.

How To Make the Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind and You Save $2.
Fully Guaranteed

This home-made cough syrup is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Its promptness, ease and certainty in conquering distressing coughs, chest and throat colds, is really remarkable. You can actually feel it take hold. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it in a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you—at a cost of only 54 cents—a full pint of better cough syrup than you could buy for $2.50. Takes but a few minutes to prepare. Full directions with Pinex. Tastes good and never spoils.

You will be pleasantly surprised how quickly it loosens dry, hoarse or tight coughs, and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiaacal, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, be sure and ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and don't accept anything else.

*A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., 233 Main St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

1. Jesus says: "Except ye believe that I am he, ye shall die in your sins." (John 8: 24.) So, we see, if you "except" (take out) belief, the result will be, "Ye shall die in your sins." Hence, no faith, no conversion; and no conversion, no salvation.

2. Jesus says: "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." (Luke 13: 3-5.) So, if you "except" (that is, take out) repentance, "ye shall perish." Hence, no repentance, no salvation.

3. Jesus also says: "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3: 5.) So if you "except" the water (which is used only in baptism), you "cannot enter the kingdom of God." And if you do not enter the kingdom of God, you can never be saved. Hence, no baptism, no promise of salvation to reponsible beings under the reign of Jesus Christ. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," says Jesus. And Peter, who had "the keys of the kingdom," said: "Can any man forbid the water, that these [Gentiles] should not be baptized?" The answer is: "No; if any man does forbid (except) the water, he does so at the awful peril of his own soul's salvation."

IV. CONCLUSION.

So, then, faith, repentance, and baptism are, all alike, "bound on earth and in heaven," and all who comply with these conditions are loosed from their sins. (See Matt. 16: 19; Acts 2: 36-38.) Then ever afterwards we should live a humble, careful, prayerful, Christian life. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life." (Rev. 2: 10.)

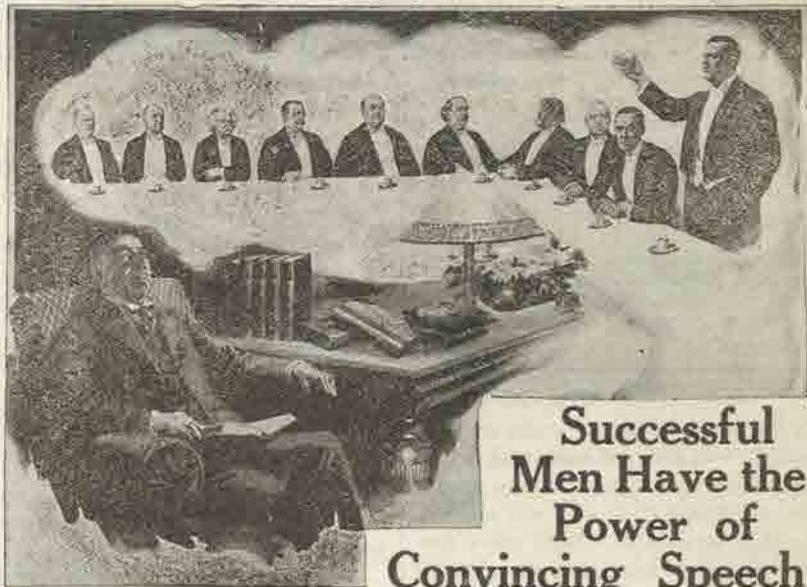

Don't Risk Your Life.

Don't let a wound or bruise or sore go neglected. A neglected skin wound often leads to blood poisoning, a disease hard to cure and sometimes fatal. Treat the afflicted spot with Gray's Ointment; it quickly allays the pain, heals the wound, and frees you from all danger of troublesome after effects. For nearly a century Gray's Ointment has been an indispensable family remedy for all abrasions or eruptions of the skin, boils, ulcers, sores, burns, cuts, bruises, etc. "I have used it in my family for more than fifteen years, and have not found any ointment equal to it," writes Mrs. E. E. Coleman, Mount Jackson, Va. Only 25 cents a box at druggists'. For free sample, write W. F. Gray & Co., 318 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn.

Help for Bronchial Trouble and Coughs.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has a wonderfully quick way of soothing and healing the raw, tickling surface of the throat and bronchial tubes. Will G. Richmond, of Inglewood, Cal., says: "Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has greatly benefited me for bronchial trouble and cough." For coughs, colds, croup, la grippe, and bronchial coughs, hoarseness, tickling throat, and stuffy, wheezy breathing, it acts with wonderful quickness and soothing effect.

What They All Say.

A few extracts from letters of club members will give you some idea of the many attractive features of the Gospel Advocate Piano Club and will explain why it is so popular. Here are a few samples taken from the correspondence at random:

I certainly am enjoying my piano. I couldn't have gotten any better piano in Decatur than the one I got from you if I had paid one hundred and fifty dollars more than this one cost me.—Mrs. F. B.

It is a beauty, and we are delighted with it. The tone is perfect. Your club is a grand thing.—Mrs. E. P. M.

I am perfectly delighted with it; and every one that has heard it, or has played on it, says they have never heard a finer-toned one. I can observe such a vast difference between this one and others that are in this community that have been placed by agents. Every one, even those who know nothing about music, can tell the superiority of this piano over others.—Mrs. J. R.

We like it mighty well. The tone is full and clear, and the smooth and glossy finish is certainly superb. We think it much better than we could have done here for the money.—Mr. O. F. P.

The piano has come, and it is everything I could wish it to be. The tone is so soft and mellow it sounds more like a harp. The base notes are remarkably full and round; the case is specially beautiful. I am entirely delighted with it. I never saw a more perfect instrument.—Mrs. W. J. B.

Almost every letter received from club members contains similar expressions of appreciation. The advertising manager of the Gospel Advocate cordially invites you to write for your copy of the club booklet and catalogue, which explain the big saving in price, the convenient terms, the superior quality and durability of the instruments, the protective guarantees and other attractive features of the club. Opening of New Meetinghouse in Detroit, Mich.

BY STEWART STEVENSON.

On New Year's morning, in spite of the inclement weather, a goodly number of brethren and friends gathered for the opening services of the Fairview church of Christ, Detroit.

Every one was expectant. Every one was desirous of seeing the new church house, but few realized the treat they were going to receive—a spiritual feast not soon to be forgotten.

A more suitable opening hymn could not have been selected—"All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." Every one joined in the singing, and the sentiment of that hymn was that of every heart present.

The opening prayer, led by Brother McGarry, was a petition for assistance in the larger work in the new meetinghouse. Following this came an address of welcome by our Brother Lindsay, who, after welcoming the visiting brethren, briefly reviewed the work in Fairview, telling of those things already accomplished and of the greater things we hoped to do in our new house.

The chairman, Brother W. G. Malcolmson, of Plum Street, referred to the fact that the usual theme at opening meetings of churches was the raising of funds. Such, however, was not the theme of our meeting, since Brother Paul Gray, following in the steps of his father, Brother John S. Gray, had so generously donated such a fine building.

Brother Witty, of Warren Avenue Church, drew attention to the fertile field in Fairview, to our splendid plea, to our fine workhouse, and to the co-operation of the other city churches in our work. He reminded us of our mission to afford a place of safety for the people of our neighborhood, to feed the poor, and to develop the character of the boys and girls who come to our Lord's-day school.

Then we rose to sing:

Joy to the world! the Lord is come!
Let earth receive her King;
Let every heart prepare him room,
And heaven and nature sing.

Brother Shepherd, of Vinewood, followed by referring to several incidents in the life of Christ. Did Christ not tell those whom he healed to tell no man? Did he not charge his disciples, after Peter confessed that Jesus was the Christ, that they tell no man? Did he not, after the transfiguration, caution Peter and James and John to tell no man? Even after his death, resurrection, and ascension, there was the command that they remain in Jerusalem until they be endued with power from on high. But the time came when they could speak; the results we Minister Tells How He Was Restored to Health.

The splendid restorative powers of Dr. Miles' Nervine were never better demonstrated than by the experience of the Rev. W. J. Houck, of Greencastle, Pa. We will quote from a statement that he made recently: "Several years ago I experienced some severe nervous shocks, which came at a time when my nervous strength and vitality had been greatly taxed by a severe season of work. My health was affected, and I was seriously threatened with nervous prostration. I could not sleep at night, and was so nervous that I would start at every little noise. My appetite was poor, and it seemed almost impossible for me to gain strength. Through the advice of a friend, I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine and Liver Pills. I soon saw that my health was improving. Instead of that tired and worn-out feeling which had so oppressed me, I felt strong and cheerful. I could sleep soundly all night, and would awake in the morning feeling rested and refreshed. Since that time, whenever I am overworked or feel 'run down,' I find a bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine is a wonderful help in bracing me up and in giving me renewed strength and health."

Dr. Miles Nervine will prove equally beneficial to others who are nervous and run down from overwork or from any other reason; and if it fails to benefit you, your money will be cheerfully refunded. It can be purchased at any drug store.

Bear ye the word of God
Through the wide world!

Tell how the day is won,
Tell from his lofty throne

Brother Clifton, of Fairview, reminded us that the fight is on—picket skirmishes are over and the real battle is being waged. On our side there are two forces—human and divine. From the human standpoint, we have the building, a band of united disciples working harmoniously, our Bible school with its staff of teachers and bright-faced boys and girls, and our smiling evangelist. With such human forces, we are encouraged and the work goes on. Then there is the divine side. We have the word of God, a book not made by hands; Christ is our Leader, and he never lost a battle; and God is on our side. If he be for us, who can be against us? But there is the adversary. The church is his battle ground. The world is his already, and so we have him to fight. He knows no fear and is ever busy. We can't fight him empty-handed. If we rely on our own strength, we lose. Again we sang:

Grace! 'tis a charming sound,
Harmonious to the ear;
Heaven with the echo shall resound,
And all the earth shall hear.

Brother Klingman, of Cameron Avenue, followed by referring to the beautiful church building, which brought to his mind a more wonderful house—the house built of spiritual stones meeting in it. As we must care for this earthly house, we must also care for our spiritual house. Then, too, there is another house—a house prepared eternally in the heavens. What must it be to be there? We want to enter there.

Our well-known and smiling-faced brother, W. D. Campbell, stated that he could tell every Fairview member by their smiling countenances. His talk was a practical exhortation to continue as we had begun. If we work earnestly and faithfully, God will give the increase. He reminded us that good resolutions, if kept, pave the way to heaven. To make up our minds to do better work is half the battle done.

Our own optimistic evangelist, E. G. Rockliff, in his remarks referred to the challenge made by Jehovah to his people of old to try him and they would receive a blessing. Down through the ages comes the same challenge to us to-day. Let us try him.

Although the meeting lasted nearly two hours, no one was uneasy. Every one was happy. Truly the feeling of every one present was expressed in the words of our closing hymn:

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above.

Led by Brother Muirhead, the closing prayer was one of thankfulness to Almighty God for all the blessings we had received and a petition for determination to go ahead; that the building would be a place where pure, unadulterated, and primitive Christianity would be always preached, and that it would prove a means of salvation to many.

La Grippe Usually Leaves a Bad Cough.

Both la grippe and influenza often leave a bad cough that hangs on and is weakening and exhausting. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is a simple, quick, and effective medicine for curing these bad la grippe coughs. E. C. Rhodes, of Middleton, Ga., writes: "When getting well of the grippe, I still had a hacking cough and for several months could get no relief. I began taking Foley's Honey and Tar, and soon I was well of both cough and cold, which never returned." All druggists sell it everywhere.

After the meeting a photograph was taken of the building and those present. We look for great things in our new house, and a hearty welcome awaits disciples of Christ at the Fairview church of Christ, Detroit.

A Nervous Breakdown,

no matter how trivial it appears, may be the beginning of the end of you. The heart and nerves are so closely connected that nothing can affect the nerves without affecting the heart. A shattered nervous system means a weak heart. If you are troubled with palpitation, short breathing, weak and irregular pulse, sleeplessness, swollen ankles, pains on either side of the chest, or the many other symptoms of a nervous breakdown, take "Reno-vine," the best of nerve tonic, and build up your nervous system. For sale by the best dealers everywhere. Price, fifty cents and one dollar. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

HOW ENGLISH ARMY OFFICER'S WIDOW KILLED ALL HER SUPERFLUOUS HAIR.

By Special Arrangement, She Offers Free Full Instructions How She Eradicated Hideous Growths on Face and Arms After Twenty Years' Failure With Electricity, Liquids, Powders, and Pastes.

Remarkable Secret of the Hindoo Religion, Now Exposed Freely for the First Time, Enables Any Woman to be Rid of Superfluous Hair Forever.

Through the generosity of Mrs. Frederica Hudson, widow of Major Hudson, of the Indian Army Medical Corps, Sixteenth Cavalry, British Army, any American lady can now secure quick and complete relief from the curse of superfluous hair.

Here is Mrs. Hudson's story: "For years I was sorely afflicted with a heavy mustache, several tufts of beard, and a hideous hairy covering on my arms. Like many others, I wasted a small fortune on the various preparations advertised, all of which made my growth all the worse. I also submitted to the terrible electric needle, but found that for every hair thus destroyed at least two came back in its place. My husband, who was Surgeon-Major in the British Army in India, discovered (as any one can learn by consulting the Encyclopedia Britannica and other standard works) that Hindoo women are forbidden by their religion to have hair on any part of their body except their head. Even the faintest trace of hair on lip, chin, or arms would forever ostracize a Hindoo woman. The Hindoo method of destroying hair, however, has always been a closely guarded religious secret; but, just before his own death, my husband saved the life of a converted native soldier, and persuaded him to reveal the secret of the Hindoo hair destroyer. My husband gave me the entire formula. I tried it. The very first application made the hair weak and withery-looking. In a few days the hair entirely disappeared, and since then I have never had a trace of hair to show. And so, having found that this remarkable remedy absolutely killed my heavy mustache, the coarse tufts of hair on my face, and the heavy covering on my arms, from which I suffered twenty years' humiliation, I want every woman to have the benefit of the secret which my poor husband secured for me. So write me to-day, sending me your name and address (please state whether Mrs. or Miss), together with a two-cent stamp for return postage, and I will send you free full and complete instructions, so that you need never have any trace of superfluous hair to annoy you again for the rest of your life. Address Mrs. Frederica Hudson, Suite 641 F. Bronson Building, Attleboro, Mass."

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Mrs. Hudson belongs to a titled family high in English society. She is connected with leading officials there, and is the widow of a prominent officer in the British Army; so you can write her with entire confidence. She has opened an office in America for the benefit of sufferers from superfluous hair. Her full address is: Mrs. Frederica Hudson, Suite 641 F. Bronson Building, Attleboro, Mass.

RHEUMATISM CONQUERED

I say that I can conquer rheumatism with a simple home treatment, without electrical treatment, stringent diet, weakening baths, or in fact any other of the usual treatments recommended for the cure of rheumatism.

Don't shut your eyes and say "impossible," but put me to the test.

You may have tried everything you ever heard of and have spent your money right and left. I say "well and good," let me prove my claims without expense to you.

Let me send you without charge a trial treatment of DELANO'S RHEUMATIC CONQUEROR. I am willing to take the chance and surely the test will tell.

So send me your name and the test treatment will be sent you at once. When I send you this, I will write you more fully, and will show you that my treatment is not only for banishing rheumatism, but should also cleanse the system of Uric Acid and give great benefit in kidney trouble and help the general health.

This special offer will not be held open indefinitely. It will be necessary for you to make your application quickly. As soon as this discovery becomes better known I shall cease sending free treatments and shall then charge a price for this discovery which will be in proportion to its great value. So take advantage of this offer before it is too late. Remember, the test costs you absolutely nothing. F. H. Delano, 541 F, Delano Bldg Syracuse, N. Y.

The Work in Macon, Ga.

BY M. H. CARTER.

God's work moves on. He ever provides ways and means for the accomplishment of his purpose in the lives of those who trust him.

Last year I refused school work that I might devote more time to proclaiming the gospel in Macon and Middle Georgia particularly. To God be all the glory for his use of me and others in this and all other fields wherein we have served our Master. All along the line he has blessed us in the Georgia work. There has been a harvest of precious souls; Christians have been strengthened; and material conditions have changed so that the one who comes into the field now to preach "as it is written" will find many faithful ones to cooperate in the extension of the kingdom.

God has granted the congregation which meets at the corner of St. John and Church Streets the privilege of obtaining a comfortable frame chapel, which, together with some essential repairs, has been paid for in full, except a little over six hundred dollars; and if other brethren and churches will cooperate in this great work, much may be accomplished for Christ.

We hope to see the truth gain many victories in this field. The field is white unto the harvest. Let all faithful Christians pray that God may grant victory unto his people. The special needs of the field are consecration and faithfulness in life and teaching of the Christians in that field, prayer and fellowship on the part of those interested in doing mission work for Christ.

Brethren S. H. Hall, Flavil Hall, Claus, Coleman, Price, Revis, and others will evangelize in the State to a large degree this year. There are quite a number of towns and cities in the State where congregations should be established this year. One of the great needs in new work is efficient leadership; and Christians who are contemplating a move to the South would do well to investigate conditions in Georgia with a view of helping build a new church. Because of circumstances the writer will be in other work for Christ, the Lord willing, but his heart's desire is that the greatest possible good may be accomplished in Georgia and everywhere.

Brethren and sisters, let us remember this work in our prayers; and let us cooperate financially with these people in sounding forth the word, and particularly at the present moment in meeting the remaining amount due on the building, that the work may not be hindered. And may God bless his people everywhere in living as he teaches, that when our days are done here we may enter in and dwell with him. Send contributions to W. M.

Following is a report of financial fellowship received for the building fund of the church at Macon from September 12 to December 31: From A. A. Cobb, Gordon, $15; Arthur Lavender, Gordon, $1; Brother Beck, $5; church at Sheffield, Ala., $9; Lewisburg, Tenn., $10; Eagleville, Tenn., $5; Trion, Ga., $2.50; Austell, Ga., $3; Rome, Ga., $5; Bryan, Ohio, $50; S. P. Pittman, $11.26; church at Welcome Hill, Ga., $12; also churches at Dasher, Black's Schoolhouse, Hahira, Union, Remerton, and Valdosta, $55.

Special contributions from the Macon church were over one hundred dollars. These were given by Brethren Lenoire, Biggers, Cobb, Mosing, Jones, Delk, Hightower, West, King, Fulsom, Carter; and Sisters Bullington, Dasher, Willis, and Walton. There remains a little over six hundred dollars due on the building, lot, necessary repairing, etc., which will be due in April and October, 1916.

The Macon congregation, Hardie's Chapel, and New Hope have contributed toward keeping an evangelist in this field. The remainder of the support has come from Dr. R. H. Carter, W. L. McQuigg, S. P. Pittman, R. F. Gill, Brother and Sister A. M. Holtz, Brother and Sister McKennon, and the writer, together with $30 from College Street Church, $10 from Franklin, and $20 from Valdosta.

Learn to Play Piano or Organ in One Evening!

You Can Learn to Play Piano or Organ in One Evening at Home By NEW METHOD. Sent Absolutely FREE on a Seven-Day Trial to Prove It. We Will Teach You to Play the Piano or Organ, and Will Not Ask You One Cent Until You Can Play.

FREE

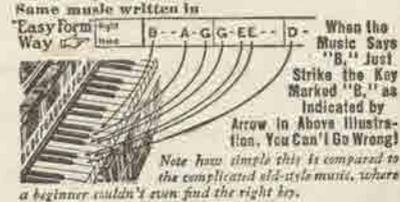

In this hurrying, busy twentieth century, people cannot afford to take several hours a day for several years in learning to play. They demand something easier, a shorter, simpler way—and this "Easy Form" Music Method is the result. Any person of ordinary intelligence can now sit right down and play, without any lessons, practice or special training. Just read the simple directions, turn to the selection you most fancy in the big volume of music, and PLAY it.

Any Child Can Play at Once

The "Easy Form" way is simplicity itself. No puzzling marks to study out, no mystic symbols and Chinese-looking characters to confuse you. With this new method you don't have to know one note from another, yet in a single evening you can play your favorite music with all the fingers of both hands, and play it well. It's so simple that it might justly be called

Shorthand in Music

No more spending of years in study and practice. Why? Because music has now been simplified so that anybody who can read printed letters—C-D-E-F-G-A-B-C—can read the new "Easy Form" music at a glance, and the key-board guide which is placed behind the keys shows you where to put the fingers of both hands on the right keys every time. No chance for failure, anyone can learn quickly. Young children and old people learn to play in a few hours and amaze and delight their friends.

You don't have to take anybody's word for "Easy Form," either. We think the best way to prove it is to let you yourself, be the judge. You can't doubt its value when you have learned to play by this method in a single evening. Therefore, we have decided to show our faith in "Easy Form" by sending the complete system—full instructions—100 pieces of standard music (all the favorites) and key-board guide—upon receipt of the coupon, without asking for a cent of money.

What Do You Think Of That! Never Played Before and Now Just Hear Her!

Thousands of Delighted Patrons

We have thousands of letters like the ones printed below, telling how quickly and easily people who didn't know one note from another learned to play by the "Easy Form" Music Method. It is so simple that there is no chance for mistake or failure—and the trial is absolutely FREE.

Much Easier Than Expected

I found your "Easy Form" just as you said. I think it is great and much easier than I thought. I do not doubt a firm when they will send their goods before they get their money.

MRS. ARTHUR I. VAN KLEEK, Mason City, Iowa.

75 Years Old—Learned in Three Hours

If I could not use the "Easy Form" method I would be ashamed to say so. It is very simple and easy to understand, I learned it in three hours. I am 75 years old, and never tried to play on the piano or organ, and did not know where middle C was until I got your easy method. Yes, anyone can learn to play by it.

REV. G. D. KING, Pastor, Christian Church, Porterville, Cal.

Send No Money

We don't want your money until you have given "Easy Form" a trial and concluded that you want to buy it. Keep the system for seven days, test it, see how easily it is to play. Then if you can bear to part with it, return it in seven days and owe us nothing. If you want to keep it (as you will) it will only be necessary to send us $1.50 at once. The balance may be paid in small monthly payments until the total price of $6.50 is paid. Remember, you are the judge. If you don't want to buy the "Easy Form" system after using it for seven days, you will not be at even a penny's expense. But don't delay. If you have tried most everything else, come to me. Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. Send attached coupon today and I will send you free my illustrated book on Rupture and its cure, showing my Appliance and giving you prices and names of many people who have tried it and were cured. It is instant relief when all others fail. Remember, I use no salves, no harness, no lies.

I send on trial to prove what I say is true. You are the judge and once having seen my illustrated book and read it you will be as enthusiastic as my hundreds of patients whose letters you can also read. Fill out free coupon below and mail today. It's well worth your time whether you try my Appliance or not.

Pennsylvania Man Thankful

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir:—Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years and have always had trouble with it till I got your Appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on; it just adapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in.

It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from ruptures if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it.

My rupture is now all healed up and nothing ever did it but your Appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself I will say a good word for your Appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am, Yours very sincerely,

JAMES A. BRITTON,
80 Spring St., Bethlehem, Pa.

Confederate Veteran Cured

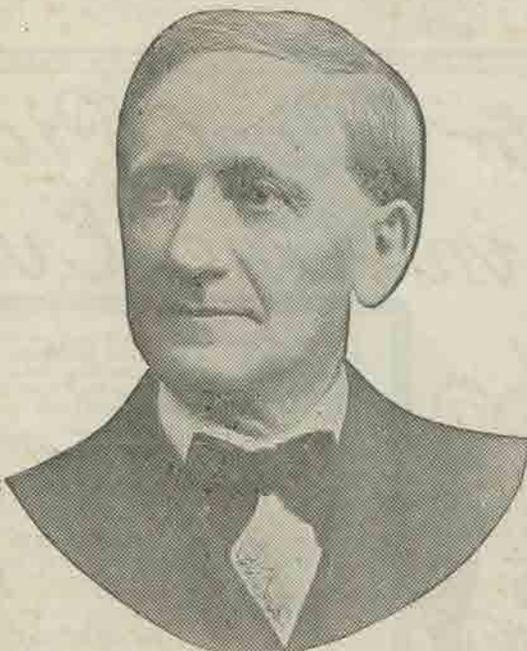

Commarca, Ga., R. F. D. No. 11.
Mr. C. E. Brooks,

Dear Sir:—I am glad to tell you that I am now sound and well and can plough or do any heavy work. I can say your Appliance has effected a permanent cure. Before getting your Appliance I was in a terrible condition and had given up all hope of ever being any better. If it hadn't been for your Appliance I would never have been cured. I am sixty-eight years old and served three years in Eckle's Artillery, Ogleshorpe Co. I hope God will reward you for the good you are doing for suffering humanity.

Yours sincerely,
H. D. BANKS.

Others Failed but the Appliance Cured

C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir:—Your Appliance did all you claim for the little boy and more, for it cured him sound and well. We let him wear it for about a year in all, although it cured him 3 months after he had begun to wear it. We had tried several other remedies and got no relief, and I shall certainly recommend it to friends, for we surely owe it to you.

Yours respectfully,
WM. PATTERSON,
No. 717 S. Main St., Akron, O.

Cured at the Age of 76

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir:—I began using your Appliance for the cure of rupture (I had a pretty bad case) I think in May, 1905. On November 20, 1905, I quit using it. Since that time I have not needed or used it. I am well of rupture and rank myself among those cured by the Brooks Discovery, which, considering my age, 76 years, I regard as remarkable.

Very sincerely yours,
Jamestown, N. C. SAM A. HOOVER.

Child Cured in Four Months

21 Jansen St., Dubuque, Iowa.
Brooks Rupture Appliance Co.
Gentlemen:—The baby's rupture is altogether cured, thanks to your Appliance, and we are so thankful to you. If we could only have known of it sooner our little boy would not have had to suffer near as much as he did. He wore your brace a little over four months and has not worn it now for six weeks.

Yours very truly,
ANDREW EGGENBERGER.

Ten Reasons Why

You Should Send for Brooks Rupture Appliance

1. It is absolutely the only Appliance of the kind on the market today, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.
2. The Appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of position.
3. Being an air cushion of soft rubber it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.
4. Unlike the ordinary so-called pads, used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
5. It is small, soft and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.
6. The soft, pliable bands holding the Appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.
7. There is nothing about it to get foul, and when it becomes soiled it can be washed without injuring it in the least.
8. There are no metal springs in the Appliance to torture one by cutting and bruising the flesh.
9. All of the material of which the Appliance is made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe Appliance to wear.
10. My reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon today.

Remember

I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail today.

"EDIFYING AS THE NEED MAY BE"

BY A. B. LIPSCOMB

The Quiet Evangelism. (Acts 8: 4.)

Coincident with the great persecutions against the church which was in Jerusalem following the death of Stephen, we read: "They therefore that were scattered abroad went about preaching the word." These words serve to introduce a phase of religious work which has been appropriately named "the quiet evangelism"—a term used to denote those methods other than preaching by which we bring the matter of primary obedience of the gospel home to the hearts of the people. In the nature of the case, we look to the regular services of the church mainly for its support. This is supplemented at intervals by what we call "protracted meetings." But the more we study the New Testament examples and principles, the more we are constrained to believe that evangelism should not stand for a mere spirit of special concern for the salvation of souls on special occasions, but should represent the constant attitude of every Christian's endeavor. Necessarily it means individual work for and with individuals. In some congregations individual work is carelessly thought of and in others it is totally neglected. The bane of what we call the "pastor system" is not found usually in the work that the pastor does for the congregation, but it is found in the neglect of the members, who, when they have contributed something to the pastor's support, feel that they have done all that God requires of them. Any system that we may adopt that does away with the "every-member" idea of teaching and preaching the gospel is pernicious.

When a Small Audience Was Inspiring.

The early disciples preached to multitudes, of course; but they made equal efforts with an audience of a household, or a few, or even one. These early propagators of the faith seemed utterly oblivious to the methods of organized work, of which the modern church makes so much. Philip the evangelist was just as painstaking when he preached to the Ethiopian eunuch as when he stirred the Samaritan capital; Simon Peter was just as earnest when he unfolded the gospel to Cornelius as when he opened the door of the kingdom to the multitudes on the day of Pentecost; Paul and Silas were as much rejoiced at the conver-

Our Red-Letter Offer.

AT this season of the year we make an extraordinary good offer as a mark of appreciation to new subscribers and in order that we may close our fiscal year free of debt. For a few weeks we will send the "old reliable" Gospel Advocate and The Bible Study Helper, the new monthly magazine devoted exclusively to Bible study, to new subscribers for one dollar and fifty cents, which is the price of the Gospel Advocate. If you send renewal, add twenty-five cents.

New subscriptions for The Bible Study Helper are coming in every mail. Here are some expressions from those who read the first number: "Indescribably good;" "deserves a liberal patronage;" "a fine piece of work;" "comes to fill a place not filled by any other magazine;" "like food to a hungry soul;" "its comments on the international lessons are excellent;" "the first number was worth the price of a year's subscription;" "every teacher and advanced student should have it."

Send your order to-day while you have the advantage of this exceptional offer.

sion of the jailer as when thousands paid their homage. Furthermore, the early disciples ignored the necessity of what the modern church calls an attraction or "drawing card." Every now and then you hear of a man who whistles sacred songs in order to get a crowd. The early disciples did not whistle their story. They told it in a plain, simple, straightforward way. You can depend upon it, all of these modern devices and machinery had their origin this side of the apostolic age. Among those early Christians the message itself was deemed sufficient to stir the emotions and win the allegiance of the people. A certain leper, whom Jesus had cleansed, was strictly charged to say nothing about it. "But he went out, and began to publish it much." It was a thing too good to keep. If the gospel is a precious message to us, it will be doubly so if we can bring others to share it with us. "No blessing is half enjoyed until it is divided." The pages of the New Testament abound with stir and life because every disciple had a good, hopeful word wherever he went, under whatever conditions he existed, for his fellow-creature who was in ignorance of the sweet evangel of the cross.

A Tonic for Lazy Members.

This kind of evangelism is needed for the development of the church. A Christian is never so strong and sure of his faith as when he has succeeded in winning others to the same hope. What a tonic it would be to the lazy, inactive members if each one would take it upon himself to "win one" and then to win another one to Jesus! Study the average congregation and you will note the meagerness of its spiritual development. Excepting a few—dozen, more or less—of the more forward and active, the members are doing nothing but coming to hear sermons and helping a little bit to defray expenses. A brother, who is a member of a congregation of four hundred members, made an inventory of their contributions. He found that there were six men, including himself, who were bearing the financial burden for that congregation. He consulted the other five and in that way learned how much they contributed every week. He deducted this amount from the average Lord's-day collection, and then he surprised the congregation by making this startling statement: "I find that we have three hundred and ninety-six members, many of whom come to church in automobiles, who contribute two cents apiece for the work of the church." I do not relate this incident as a rebuke to auto owners, but as an object lesson impressing the fact that there is a very vital connection between personal evangelism and the contribution we make for the spread of the gospel. If a Christian will make an honest effort to reach others with his message, he will soon discover their needs and the consequent importance of giving something for the proclamation of the glad tidings and the relief of the poor. You won't have to urge that Christian to increase his contributions. He will do it of his own accord.

Our churches need this quiet evangelism to save themselves from indifference and spiritual decline. The very effort to speak in the name of Jesus and to meet the objections of those who resist the invitation will turn the minds of Christian people back upon themselves and develop the much-needed faculty of introspection and give them a sense of their own unpreparedness. We often speak of deepening the spiritual life, and as a means thereto we generally think of high and lofty themes, right enough in themselves, which belong to the deeper things of the gospel. This is good, but the spiritual life is not deepened until the members go forth in some active way to bring this gospel to others and to make it influential in the actual life here and now. One of the fine sayings of Charles Kingsley was: "It is better to do a single good act than to dream of fine actions all day long." And on this point I can furnish abundant proof both from the Old Testament and the New Testament. Micah reveals an open secret that so few have learned when he writes: "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God." (Mic. 6: 8.) When Jesus Christ would convince John the Baptist of his divinity, he sent the latter's disciples back to say: "The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, and the dead are raised up"—and then, last of all and best of all, "the poor have good tidings preached to them." Does not practical-minded James sum up this lesson in a nutshell when he writes: "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deluding your own selves. For if any one is a hearer of the word and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a mirror; for he beholdeth himself, and goeth away, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was. But he that looketh into the perfect law, the law of liberty, and so continueth, being not a hearer that forgetteth but a doer that worketh, this man shall be blessed in his doing." (James 1: 22-25.)

We Must Multiply the Voices.

The method of persistent, quiet evangelism is the only way to reach the world. Comparatively few people hear sermons, and fewer still hear them consecutively. We cannot depend upon the pulpit to do the work of evangelism. It has its place, and a very important place; but unless supplemented by the hundreds who hear approvingly, it will fail to accomplish its work. They must speak. "What thou hearest in the ear, that proclaim from the housetop," applies more forcibly to the gospel than anything else in the world. We sing with considerable enthusiasm, "The whole wide world for Jesus;" but one thing is certain, pulpit utterances will never do it. All the members must work, must bestir themselves, before this happy consummation can be reached. We must multiply the voices that speak the message. We must multiply the testimonies that prove so winsome when once they are honestly told. If you should ask me to state the one thing above all that would greatly increase the usefulness of any congregation, what would I say? I would not say, "Send for some well-known evangelist to come and hold us a big meeting in the spring or in the fall." I would not say, "Let us raise one thousand dollars and send it away for mission work in some other State or in a foreign land." These things are good and are relatively important. But I would say, first of all: "Let each and every member of this congregation bear the gospel message to those he meets in his own community. Let Jesus' name be heard in your homes and in your neighbors' homes, in your shops, in your stores, in your factories, and on the streets."

Let Christian Women Tell it Too.

The message comes with just as much propriety and meaning to the good women of the church as it does to the men. It is true that God makes her a "keeper at home," and Paul says, "Let the women keep silence in the churches;" but the New Testament does not restrict her from this quiet evangelism. Paul commends unto the church at Rome "Phebe our sister, who is a servant of the church that is at Cenchrea." Priscilla joins with her husband in expounding unto Apollos "the way of God more accurately." Lydia, with a little handful of other women, conducts a prayer meeting on the river bank. Eunice and Lois instill the great truths of the Bible into the heart of the youthful Timothy. Of others Paul said, "Help these women, for they labored with me in the gospel," suggesting to us that his missionary company included a number of godly women who could reach their own sex and teach them the word of truth. If you will study the New Testament carefully, you will find that a large share of the work that was done for the church in its early history was done by the women who possessed the adornment of a meek and quiet spirit. Again, if you will search the annals of church history since that time, you will find it to be one long, continuous record of their good deeds.

She Loved to Tell the Story.

The other day I heard a very beautiful and gracious tribute paid to the memory of Sister Theresa Perkins, a devoted Christian woman, who had been called to higher ground after sixty years of faithful service in the church at Franklin, Tenn. When I say "tribute," I do not refer to the funeral discourse, but I have in mind the song that was sung by some of those who knew her works. It was an old, familiar hymn, but they had changed its wording without changing the sentiment to suit the occasion like this:

*She loved to tell the story
Of unseen things above;
Of Jesus and his glory,
Of Jesus and his love.*

*She loved to tell the story,
Because she knew 'twas true;
It satisfied her longings
As nothing else could do.*

*She loved to tell the story;
'Twill be her theme in glory
To tell the old, old story
Of Jesus and his love.*

When you and I stand before our Master in the day of judgment, our eternal welfare will hinge upon the answer to two all-important questions. The first one will be: "Did you hear and obey the gospel?" The other one: "Did you tell it to others?"

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

"Baptist Truth" or Error—Which?

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

In my rounds I was handed a small paper called "Baptist Truth," which appears to be, indeed, a peculiar kind of truth. As the name of the paper would indicate, it is devoted only to that truth which he calls "Baptist truth." It appears that the "Baptist Truth" has run against the thing which J. R. Graves once called the "bugbear of Campbellism," and he delivers himself on this wise:

We often ask men are they Christians? "O, yes, I belong to the Christian church." But we are not talking about that kind of a Christian, and sometimes tell them so. But we are talking about that kind that is born of the Spirit—one who loves and follows our Lord in the spirit and walks in his ways. We are not boosting Alexander Campbell's Christian church. That kind of Christians do not bless the world. They build no great churches to stand and give light and bear witness to the truth of our Lord. But their mission, it seems, is to oppose the truth and vaccinate men against the gospel of salvation through Jesus, lest they should believe the message and live. Like the scribes and Pharisees, they shut up the kingdom of heaven against men. They will not go themselves, and those that would enter they hinder. They sin against the Holy Spirit, blaspheming and ridiculing his glorious and divine work. Campbellism will do to live by, but it will not do to die by. It is the Romish, priestly, sacramental, ritualistic, blasphemous salvation of the old mammy of harlots dressed up in short gowns and called by a more euphonious and popular name. O man, as you value your immortal soul, shun the deadly, cold, lifeless thing as you would recoil and retreat from the dead reptile, whose fangs are known to be death to your physical life.

The brother says: "We often ask men are they Christians?" Why ask them that question, when his position is that they ought to be Baptists? If one is a Christian, he is saved; and if the Baptists are right, he cannot be lost. Then why be a Baptist? There is no salvation in being a Baptist. Then why be one? Then, Baptist truth does not make Christians. Then why bother with "Baptist truth," if there is such a thing? "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8: 32.) But if one is made free, he is a Christian; but he can be a Christian and not be a Baptist. Then there is no such truth as the "Baptist truth." It would be well for the brother to change the name of his paper and call it "Baptist Errors." This would be an exceedingly appropriate name.

But this "Baptist error" says they will say: "O, yes, I belong to the Christian church." But he is not talking about that kind of a Christian. But suppose this man who says he is a Christian says that he belongs to the body of Christ, which Paul says is the church. Then I wonder what he would say. Would he say he was not talking about that kind of a Christian, either? This is the kind the apostles frequently talked about. But the brother says he is talking about the kind that is born of the Spirit. Very well. But our Lord talked about the kind that is born of water and the Spirit, for he said: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3: 5.)

But the brother says he is not boosting Alexander Campbell. Neither am I; but I would like to boost the teaching of our Lord on this subject, and not the Baptist error. But the brother says this Campbellite kind builds no great churches. Maybe not; but if we will preach exactly as Christ and the apostles did, it seems that we might build up the body of Christ, which is his church, and that ought to give some light to the world.

The brother talks of somebody's vaccinating men against the gospel of salvation through Christ. These folks that seem to be haunting the brother ought not to vaccinate any one against the gospel of salvation through Christ, but they surely ought to teach the doctrine of Paul when he said: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 27.) These ugly folks our brother is troubled with ought not to sin against the Holy Ghost and ridicule his divine work. Both they and our Baptist brother should remember that it was the Holy Ghost who said through Peter: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." (Acts 2: 38.)

I do not think the brother should get excited if some should tell him plainly that the Holy Spirit has been credited with doing many things in Baptist meetings that he had no hand in doing. I think the brother is radically wrong in saying a thing will do to live by, but will not do to die by. No one should live by anything which he cannot afford to die by. As to his old mammy, I have no defense for her, in long or short dresses. His figure of the serpent would have been more frightful if he had given him with life instead of a dead serpent; but as I have no special love for the serpent family, dead or alive, I will let that pass.

What would our Baptist brethren preach or write about if they had not hatched up their bugbear of Campbellism? Brethren, preach the word.

"Thy Kingdom Come."

BY W. H. CARTER.

Paul teaches in 1 Cor. 12: 21 and Eph. 4: 4 that there is but one body, and this body is the church (Col. 1: 18), and that Jesus is the head of the body. This body is spoken of by several different names—as, the kingdom, the church, the household of God, the family, the temple, a building, a husbandry, etc.—none of which indicate different bodies, but all of them indicate some different feature or characteristic of the one body. God promised through Daniel that he would set up a kingdom which should never be destroyed, and should not be left to other people, and shall stand forever. (Dan. 2: 44.) The Jews, from this and other prophecies, were looking forward for the promised kingdom, and in announcing the birth of the Christ the angel said to Mary: "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." (Luke 1: 32, 33.) Notice here that this kingdom, when set up, "shall stand forever" and "shall have no end." A kingdom to be established at the second coming of the Christ, and which is only to continue one thousand years, does not, by a long time, come up to the predictions concerning the kingdom God said he would set up. It is to have no end, not begin and end with the one thousand years of the millennial reign of Christ.

John the Baptist came preaching to the people: "Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matt. 3: 2.) After John was cast into prison, "Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand." (Mark 1: 14, 15.) "The time is fulfilled." What time is fulfilled? Certainly for the setting up of the kingdom God had promised, and that John and Jesus said was "at hand." How could this statement of our blessed Lord be true, that "the time is fulfilled," if these brethren are right when they say the time for the setting up of this kingdom will not be fulfilled until the Jews are gathered at Jerusalem and the Lord Jesus shall have made his second advent into the world? Yes, Jesus said "the time is fulfilled." What is meant by fulfilling the time? Can it mean more or less than that the time has come when God is going to do what he had promised—set up a kingdom that shall have no end? If we are to wait now, after two thousand years have passed, till the Jews are all gathered at Jerusalem, should that ever be, we might have to wait two thousand more years before this is accomplished, and then we might have to wait two thousand more years before Christ would come, which would be six thousand years from the time Christ said: "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand." Leaving off all supposition, nearly two thousand years have passed, and you say the time is not fulfilled yet, and will not be till the Jews are gathered at Jerusalem; and Jehovah alone knows how long that will be, should it ever occur at all. You and Christ are at variance, brethren, and I have had my faith rooted and grounded in him too long to disbelieve him now. I am too near the end of the journey to allow heaven's truth to be supplanted by fiction or the speculative opinions of men.

"At hand." What does it mean? When Jesus said, "The kingdom of God is at hand," did he mean that it drew near or was a long time off; that the kingdom would not come until the Jews, thousands of years from that time, would all be gathered at Jerusalem? The best lexicographers tell us the word from which we have the words "at hand" means to approach rapidly, to come quickly, as of something that will take place in the near future. When Jesus sent his disciples out to preach, he said: "And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matt. 10: 7.) When he sent the seventy, he told them to say unto them "that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." (Luke 10: 11.) Again, Jesus said: "Verily I say unto you, That there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power." (Mark 9: 1.) From this we get a definite statement as to time, as to how long it was to be before the kingdom was to come. It was to be before the death of some of those who were then standing in his presence. Here we have the positive promise of the Son of God, the world's Redeemer, that it was to come before some of those standing there died. Now, if the kingdom has not been set up, then it follows that some of those people are still living, and, according to this Russell idea, must live on until the Jews are gathered at Jerusalem and on until Christ comes. Do you say that maybe some of them may yet be living? This question cannot be proven, when its truth depends on a thing that uninspired men of the school of speculative theories cannot know. According to the law of nature, those men are all dead, and the kingdom came before they all died. If not, the burden of proof rests upon those who have adopted this phase of Russellism to show that some of them are still living. If you cannot do this, then your theory stands in direct conflict with this statement of the Christ.

The people, even the disciples of the Christ, thought his kingdom would be earthly, and that he would be seated on David's throne in Jerusalem and reign here on the earth; and because they had this idea we are told that Jesus "added and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear. He said, therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return," etc. (See Luke 19: 12-27.) Notice verse 15: "And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom," etc. When did Jesus return, and when did he receive the kingdom? "I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." (Dan. 7: 13, 14.) When did Jesus, the "Son of man," go with the "clouds of heaven?" "And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their sight." (Acts 1: 2.) On the day of Pentecost, about seven days after this, Peter said: "Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulcher is with us unto this day. Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne," etc. (Acts 2: 29, 30.) Where do we find God's oath to David? "Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established forever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven." (Ps. 89: 35-37.)

Let us note now that the words "at hand" mean "to come nigh," to rapidly approach. Jesus and John the Baptist said it was "at hand," and Jesus said "the time is fulfilled," and that the kingdom was to come with power before the death of some who were then present with him. Luke says Christ ascended and a cloud received him out of their sight, and Daniel says he came with the clouds of heaven, and a kingdom was given unto him. Peter said God raised him up to sit on David's throne. No question, it seems to me, could be made clearer than this. Everything shows that his kingdom began on the day of Pentecost. (Acts 2.) On this occasion his Lordship is proclaimed. God had made him both Lord and Christ. What, my brethren, do you hope to gain by arraying yourselves against these truths and falling in line with C. T. Russell? You have all to lose and nothing to gain.

But we are told that the church was established on Pentecost (Acts 2), but the kingdom will not be set up until the Jews are gathered at Jerusalem and Christ shall come the second time. But notice that all the scriptures quoted above speak of the kingdom; and, if you are right (which you are not) in making the kingdom and church different institutions, then these scriptures show that the kingdom was set up on Pentecost (Acts 2), and it would be the church, and not the kingdom, that would be established at some time in the future. But the scriptures are too plain on this, that the church has been built.

One passage relied upon to prove that the kingdom is yet to be established, which will be done when Christ comes, is Acts 15: 13-17: "And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me: Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written, After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord who doeth all these things." James says "after this." After this—what? We are told that it means after the calling of the Gentiles. (Acts 10.) After that event the tabernacle of David will be built—the kingdom will be set up—and this will be at Christ's second coming, after the Jews are gathered at Jerusalem. Well, supposing you are right, then what? James says: "That the residue of men might seek after the Lord." Then, during this millennial reign, the people, somebody, the "residue of men," will have a "second chance." So you will be forced to swallow another dose of Russellism—the "second chance."

Simeon had told of his visit to the house of Cornelius, and James says the words of the prophets agree to this, and not to a gathering of the Jews at Jerusalem. All Jews are not of the house of David, and to build again the tabernacle of David means to reestablish his throne. The scriptures quoted in this article show that was done after Christ was raised up and ascended to heaven. They show that David's throne was established in heaven and that Christ is now upon it. Paul teaches that Christ is our High Priest; that he offered his own blood for us and now makes intercessions for us; and it was said that he should be a "priest on his throne." (Zech. 6: 13.) Now, just so sure as the Christ is a priest, he is on his throne, for he is to "be a priest on his throne." If he is not on his throne, he is not a priest, and Paul is found to be a false witness when he declares him to be a priest. This idea of the gathering of the Jews and of the kingdom not having yet been established, like all other phases of unbelief, leads to the denial of the plain teaching of God's word.

I have in my possession a paper published in defense of "Pastor" Russell, in which it is contended that the Jews will be gathered as a nation, and then Christ will come and establish his kingdom. Recently some good brethren have accepted Russell's visionary, imaginative, conjectural, speculative theory thus far, which is but a step toward the acceptance of the whole batch of speculative assertions. Listen to this prophecy: "Thus saith the Lord, Go and get a potter's earthen bottle, and take of the ancients of the people, and of the ancients of the priests; and go forth unto the valley of the son of Hinnom, which is by the entry of the east gate, and proclaim there the words that I shall tell thee." After telling of the scattering of the people and the destruction of Jerusalem, which came to pass about A.D. 70, he then says: "Then shalt thou break the bottle in the sight of the men that go with thee, and shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord of hosts; Even so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again; and they shall bury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury." (See Jer. 19.) C. T. Russell has the brazen effrontery to rise up in the face of this plain and positive prediction and say that the Jews will be gathered and made whole as a nation, and some of you boys have been caught in his snare. Now you need to repent, confess your sins, and get back in the "old paths," and be content to "preach the word."

Who is "a Well-Known Evangelist in Texas?"

An unsigned article under the caption, "My Wish for 1916," published in the Christian Leader and reproduced with editorial comment in our issue of January 13, has elicited the disapproval of many of our well-known and very deserving Texas preachers, who feel that in justice to themselves the name of the author of the "wish" should be made public. We have on file several letters urging this; but since one letter covers the case, we print herewith the request of Brother Charles R. Nichol, of Denton, Texas, who writes us that he has made a similar request of the publisher of the Christian Leader.

Brother Nichol's request follows:

In the Gospel Advocate of January 13, page 40, Brother A. B. Lipscomb writes under the heading, "A Shot from the Bushes," and quotes an article which appeared in the Christian Leader of December 28, 1915. The article in the Leader is prefaced: "The following is taken from a private letter of a well-known evangelist in Texas."

In this "private letter" from a "well-known evangelist in Texas," which the Leader publishes, the following is found: "I very seldom read the Gospel Advocate now, except to keep abreast of the times and get the news re Boll, etc. I can't endure the —, and the — isn't fit for kindling."

When I read the above in the Christian Leader, and then again in the Gospel Advocate, the question arose in my mind: Who is the "well-known evangelist in Texas?" There are a number of men in Texas who are "well-known evangelists." Is the above quotation from the "private letter" the statement of A. J. McCarty, A. B. Barret, T. W. Phillips, J. B. Nelson, Foy E. Wallace, A. W. Young, F. L. Young, J. S. Dunn, J. C. White? If not, who is this "well-known evangelist in Texas?" Possibly I would be counted as a "well-known evangelist;" but the statement quoted above is not from me. The publication of such statements as the above leaves me, as well as other brethren in Texas and elsewhere, in doubt as to whom reference is made by the preface above given in the Christian Leader. Is it just to the brethren that the name be withheld?

Again, this "well-known evangelist in Texas," as represented in the above quotation, names the Gospel Advocate and makes reference to some other papers, but he does not call the names of the other papers, or the publisher of the Christian Leader withholds the names of the other papers, and inserts a — and a — for the names. What are the papers reference is made to by "I can't endure the —, and the — isn't fit for kindling?" Does this "well-known evangelist in Texas" withhold the names of the papers to which reference is made by the dashes from the fact that he lives in Texas and fears the influence of these papers, or does he have reference to papers published in Texas by the dashes, or did the publisher of the Leader withhold the names? If the publisher withheld the names, why did he mention the Gospel Advocate and withhold the names of the other papers reference is made to?

Has the "well-known evangelist in Texas" the courage to speak out and let the people know just who he is, or will we have to learn by elimination?

Morbid curiosity does not cause me to write this inquiry. I want to know who this "well-known evangelist in Texas" is, and what papers reference is made to when he says: "I can't endure the —, and the — is not fit for kindling."

Our readers understand, of course, that the publishers of the Gospel Advocate are just as much in the dark as they are concerning the identity of the unknown writer. As to whether his name will be divulged is a matter to be settled by Brother Rowe, the publisher of the Christian Leader, and the unknown party himself.

The Church of Christ—Lesson IV.

2. When was it established?

(1) It had not been established when Peter confessed Christ, as recorded in Matt. 16: 15-19; for Christ then said, "Upon this rock I will build my church," showing that the building was yet in the future. Please to note that in verses 18, 19, in the scripture cited above, you have the future tense of the verb used seven times—viz.: (a) "Upon this rock I will build my church;" (2) "The gates of Hades shall not prevail against it"—his building the church, for the gates could not hold him, as is shown in his coming through them in his resurrection (see Acts 2: 24, 31); (3) "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom;" (4) " whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth" (5) "shall be bound in heaven;" (6) " whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth" (7) "shall be loosed in heaven." What would you think were I to try to make you believe that Peter then had the keys, had already bound and loosed, and that Christ had done the same in heaven? Certainly you would not believe me. Christ is speaking of something that is to take place in the future. Then why let any one come along and make you believe that the church existed, when Christ here promises that he will—pointing to some future time—build it?

(2) It had not been established at the time of Christ's burial; for Joseph of Arimathea was still looking for it to be established. (See Mark 15: 43.)

(3) It had not been established at the time of Christ's ascension to heaven; for the apostles were still waiting, expecting and inquiring about its establishment. (See Acts 1: 6-12.) The burden of the message of John the Baptist, Christ, the twelve, and the seventy was, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand," or "is come nigh unto you," showing that it was to be established in the near future. (See Matt. 3: 2; 4: 17; 12: 7; Luke 10: 1, 9.) Thus you follow the disciples in their expectation until their Lord ascends, leaving them waiting for it, with the instructions to tarry in Jerusalem till the Holy Spirit comes. (See Luke 24: 46-55; Acts 1: 6-12.) Now turn to Acts 2, read the whole chapter, and you find that the Holy Spirit came on the day of Pentecost, and the last verse in that chapter tells us that the church existed and the Lord was adding those that were being saved to it. When, then, was it established? On that day, of course.

(4) But look at another line of reasoning. (a) Read Mark 9: 1, and you learn that the kingdom was to come "with power," or when the power came. (b) Read Acts 1: 8, and you learn the power was to come when the Holy Spirit came. (c) But turn to Acts 2: 1-5, and you learn that the Holy Spirit came when "the day of Pentecost had fully come, and came, too, upon the apostles in the city of Jerusalem. Hence, Christ points forward to this day as the "beginning" (see Luke 24: 47); and Peter, after Pentecost, points back to it as "the beginning" (see Acts 11: 15). If you find a man who is skeptical here and wants to deny that it began then, simply show him that Peter calls what took place in Jerusalem on the first Pentecost after Christ's ascension "the beginning." Ask him, the beginning of what? Kind student, you ponder well the same question. There is but one answer, and that is, the church that Christ said he would build began in her glory and power on that day, the Lord adding those that were being saved to it.

(5) Turn to Dan. 7: 13, 14, and you learn that Christ received the kingdom when he returned to his Father in the clouds, a kingdom in which "all peoples, nations, and languages should serve him." Read Acts 1: 9-11 for an account of the fulfillment of this prophecy. Please to note that he received the kingdom when he "came to the Ancient of days" (Jehovah)—that is, when he returned to the Father, and not, as some would have you believe, when he leaves the Father and comes back to the earth. He is now reigning, and will so continue until all enemies are put under his feet. Then he will turn the kingdom back to his Father. (See 1 Cor. 15: 24.) Please to note, too, that Christ is preached by Peter in his first sermon as the one whom God had made both Lord and Christ; and made such, too, after he had been rejected by the people to whom Peter was preaching. (See Acts 2: 36; 4: 11, 12.)

(6) This time and place had been fixed for centuries for the beginning of the new economy. Turn to Lev. 23: 10, 11, and you learn that the "first fruits" of the harvest, which typified the resurrection of Christ (1 Cor. 15: 20), were "waved" "on the morrow after the Sabbath"—the first day of the week. Christ did not rise, then, by accident, "on the first day of the week." (Mark 16: 9.) This was the day fixed by his Father for him to come forth a conqueror of death. But read, in the same chapter, verses 15, 16, and you will find that they were to offer the "new meal offering" on "the morrow after the seventh Sabbath" from the day they brought the sheaf of the wave offering. This was Pentecost, the fiftieth day, from whence we get the name. This fiftieth day was also the first day of the week, and the "new meal offering" was a type of the "new covenant" of which Christ is Mediator (1 Cor. 9: 15), which began with his church on the day of Pentecost. Truly did Peter speak of it as "the beginning."

Two Important Questions.

The following questions have been submitted for con-brother may have run well, and of that period of his life sideration on this page:

1. When a preacher knows that a certain preacher has specific and grave charges pending against him in his home congregation, can he write glowing and favorable reports about him in the papers?

2. Can a church, under the same condition, have such a preacher to hold a meeting for them while such charges are being investigated?

These questions I answer in the order given:

1. We have no right to write glowing and favorable reports about any one when "specific and grave charges are pending against him in his home congregation," especially if such reports have a tendency to mitigate matters and blind the brotherhood to the man's real character. A brother may have run well, and of that period of his life in which he did run well favorable reports and references thereto could be made (see Gal. 5: 7), but never must such reference be made so as to blind the people from the present condition of the man. And most certainly men who have "specific and grave charges pending against them in their home congregation" must not be reported as worthy men until they are vindicated or repent and set themselves right with the home congregation.

2. No faithful congregation will have such a man to hold a meeting for them until the charges pending are shown to be false or the brother repents and is restored to the favor of his home congregation.

In conclusion, about both of these questions, let me say that the body of people on earth who claim the Bible as their guide and who are continually teaching others that they must "come back to the Book" are just as far from the Book, as a whole, on the how we should conduct ourselves toward disorderly members as others are when they teach sprinkling for baptism. It is a good thing that local congregations are independent and have the right to take the Book and go by it regardless of what others do or say. Too, I am glad to say that we have a few congregations that practice discipline as the Bible demands. It is certainly timely that one of the special numbers will be devoted to this question this year.

MISSIONARY

POSTAL INFORMATION: International post-office money orders can be bought at the rate of one per cent; but for any amount, however small, the cost will be ten cents. A check on any of the banks in America is good in Japan; personal checks are as good as any. The money itself is accepted by the banks. The ordinary postage on letters is five cents; newspapers, one cent.

ADDRESSES OF MISSIONARIES: Otoshige Fujimori, Takahagi, Kurimotomura, Katorigori, Shimosa, Chiba, Japan; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McCaleb, Zoshigaya, Tokyo, Japan; Mrs. William J. I Believe the Word and Preach It.

BY E. S. JELLEY, JR.

Of course all news is stale by the time it reaches India, and then a discussion of such stale news by me is still staler by the time it reaches you. Still, occasionally a matter arises which seems to need a few lines even from far-off India.

Well, I believe that the prophecies concerning Babylon and Nineveh have been fulfilled and that those concerning Israel will be fulfilled also. I do not preach these things out here, although they are a part of the word, because I have no Jewish audiences to convert; and while I have no doubt that such preaching would have a good effect upon Western unbelievers, yet it would not be understood by an Indian audience, and, hence, would not have a tendency to win them.

I also believe in the imminency of the coming of the Lord. The Lord himself says, "Behold, I come quickly," and I believe it; and if he comes to-day or in a hundred thousand years, I shall believe he has fulfilled his promise. I constantly preach the imminency of his coming; and while it may be that some of the brethren do not have "watch" for their watchword, it is mine, and should be that of every Christian.

I do not believe in the "futurist" program of Brethren Boll and Chambers, in which the antichrist who sits in Rome and who for twelve hundred and sixty years shed the blood of God's saints is ignored and an imaginary future antichrist is predicted, who will, they say, persecute the Jews three and one-half years. The Jews have been persecuted for many centuries, and I think they can stand a persecution for three and a half years. I do not believe with those brethren that God cares more for three and a half years' persecution of the natural Israel than he does for twelve hundred and sixty years' persecution of Christians (for that is the position they virtually take in denying that the antichrist is the pope.) That belief of theirs is not derived from the Seventh-Day Adventists nor from Russell; it comes from the Mohammedans via the Plymouth Brethren sect, of which George Müller was a member. The fact that the Mohammedans hold to it does not prove it false; but it is false upon its face.

I do, however, believe that the signs of Christ's coming, as outlined by him, were for the purpose of causing us to "lift up" our heads, for our "redemption draweth nigh;" and I believe the most of those signs given in Matt. 24, Mark 13, and Luke 21 have been fulfilled; and that fact, so far from dividing the church, should inspire every disciple to redoubled efforts and redoubled watching.

I do not believe the woman in the twelfth chapter of Revelation is the natural Israel at all, for she is said to be the mother of Christians; but Paul says Jerusalem which is above, which he pronounces to be the new covenant, is "the mother of us all."

In regard to baptism, I believe in and practice preaching Acts 2: 38. I have never denied fellowship to any one because he could not answer a cross-examination as to why he was baptized, but I also carefully avoid any remarks which may have a tendency to make one who may not have been scripturally baptized satisfied that he is safe. I leave the Scriptures to do their own convincing.

I never use that which the Spirit of Christ says "look not upon" to represent the precious blood of Christ; instead, I use "the fruit of the vine."

I believe that the Gospel Advocate is by far the most wide-awake advocate of discipling the nations at home and abroad (Matt. 28: 19) of any paper published among us; yet I doubt if it is nearly as strong on either home or foreign missions as many sectarian papers. I believe there is a strong tendency among our brethren to be content with faith, repentance, confession, and baptism, to the ignoring of growth in grace and fellowship in the spreading of the gospel.

Moving Pictures.

I baptized two men in our new baptistry at Zoshigaya on October 31—the first to be baptized in our new chapel. One is of our Gakuin students; the other, the ex-prisoner of whom former mention has been made. During the six months he has been working about the place he has rendered faithful service. He seems unusually happy at having found the Way. When these two men were baptized, only about half a dozen of the students attended, though all were invited. Brother Miyura's own brother (the two brothers room together) was one of those who did not attend. This is what Jesus meant, I think, when he said he came not to preach peace, but division.

From Sister Sarah S. Andrews: "I had a letter from Lois last week, saying that things were more hopeful now and that they hoped to start for Japan some time in November. The Lord willing, I will be ready when they are ready. The days are growing brighter, busier, happier, until from the depths of my soul I lift my voice in thanksgiving to God for allowing me a being in this wonderful world. In fact, I would rather have been a tiny blade of grass and to have shed forth for but one season that color which must have been uppermost in the mind of the great Creator than not to have lived at all. I have a great deal to give up in going to Japan, yet I am putting my trust in Jehovah and expect to go forward."

Custom often originates in ignorance, hence in error. Afterwards it is venerated and kept because it is an old custom, even though the reason for it cannot be given. Other customs have a reason for their origin; but in course of time the reason that gave the custom birth ceases to be a reason, and then the custom is perpetuated just because it has become a custom. For these reasons most customs are vain and unprofitable. "The customs of the peoples are vanity," says the prophet.

Brother R. S. King writes from Nashville, Tenn.: "We are going to make a special contribution next Lord's day [October 17] to be used toward Brother and Sister Glenn's expenses to Japan, and I am not going to be satisfied with less than fifty dollars. I am glad to have fellowship in this work. I want you to take especially good care of Brother John, as I love him like David loved Jonathan. I have never met your daughter yet, but hope to in the near future."

Speaking of the prohibition of the Christian religion in the public schools, a certain missionary said to me: "You may talk of Lincoln, Washington, Napoleon, or anybody like that, but you cannot speak about Jesus Christ. Mac, how can you explain that?" As one among other reasons, I suggested that it was because Jesus was not a patriot and made no attempt to help out the nationalism of his own country.

Loyalty to Christ.

BY E. A. E.

A good brother, whose query, I regret to have to say, has been misplaced, asks if loyalty consists simply in preaching against instrumental music in the worship and missionary societies.

No; nor by preaching simply against any other error or wrong practice, especially when this is done in the wrong manner and spirit.

First, let us remember that there is a right manner and spirit in which to do the right thing, and one right purpose to be accomplished. Paul expresses these as follows:

And the Lord's servant must not strive, but be gentle toward all, apt to teach, forbearing, in meekness correcting them that oppose themselves; if peradventure God may give them repentance unto the knowledge of the truth, and they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, having been taken captive by him unto his will. (2 Tim. 2: 24-26; see, also, verse 23.)

Paul says also: "Reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and teaching." (2 Tim. 4: 2.) Reproof, rebuke, and exhortation must be given by teaching and with long-suffering. This is the way to respect, help, and save people. Some one says: "But some are to be reproved 'sharply.'" Yes, but there is nothing so sharp as the word of God. It is "sharper than any two-edged sword" and pierces "even to the dividing of soul and spirit, of joints and marrow," and "is quick to discern the thoughts and intents of the heart." It pricks the heart and cuts to the heart. On the other hand, it is as soothing and healing as the balm of Gilead applied by the hand of the great Physician. To "preach the word" is all-sufficient. It contains all the reproof, rebuke, admonition, exhortation, persuasion, consolation, and blessings which God himself gives.

The errors, vain worship, and all sins of people must clearly and distinctly be pointed out and the fearful consequences shown in the light of the gospel; this must be done with all the firmness, power, and dignity of the word of God; but it must be done, too, with the teaching and mercy of the word of God. The manner and spirit in which one preaches depend upon why one preaches. If the one supreme and only purpose be to glorify God and save men, the right manner and spirit will be manifested; while the wrong manner and spirit cannot be concealed if anything else be the purpose.

"Loyalty" is a good word and means much. It should not be used in a sectarian sense or to designate a religious denomination. Elijah was loyal to God. To be loyal to Christ is to be true to him at all times; is to be honest in all the everyday affairs of life, honorable in all dealings with all men, truthful, reliable, upright, temperate, virtuous, just, merciful, generous, faithful in all relationships, godly, ready with all ability possessed to defend and to extend his kingdom in all the world, and to do all this in obedience to God and for Christ's sake. To pursue a gentle, kind, forbearing, humble, firm, steadfast, unswerving, straightforward, and unpretentious course in obedience to God is loyalty to Christ. A swaggering, daring, challenging, denouncing, boastful spirit and manner are anything else but loyalty to Christ. To suffer with Christ is to be loyal to him. Paul says far be it from him to glory," save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ," by which he was crucified to the world and the world to him. (Gal. 6: 14.) This is loyalty.

SOME THINGS LOYALTY IS NOT.

There was a good and needed article in the issue of this paper of January 13 by Brother Farmer. In this article he tells of a preacher who spoke "very vehemently" against "receiving people from the sectarian churches on their baptism, the class system of teaching the Scriptures," and "lesson helps as a gross innovation," but "who indulged too freely in the use of intoxicating spirits." I refer to this to show the idea and standard some have of loyalty, also their vanity and inconsistency. Drinking intoxicating liquor is a weakness of the flesh, but there is a very great inconsistency between such weakness and claims of loyalty. In the many weaknesses and imperfections of the flesh, men can be and should be Christians—first babes and then full-grown men—and God and good men are merciful toward all such; but in such weaknesses they should not set themselves up as examples and teachers in Israel. Men who do not restrain their appetites for strong drink, do not deal fairly and honorably, do not handle money committed to them in an open and honest way, or are not clean and virtuous, are not prepared to teach others. They may be logical and eloquent in the pulpit, but it is contrary to the word of God for any congregation to put them forward as teachers and examples of righteousness and godliness. When it comes to speaking out against the enemies of the truth, there can be no greater enemies of the truth than such pretended defenders of it. So, instead of such "vehemence" as Brother Farmer mentions, that preacher and all like him should be humble and penitent and should curb their own appetites, subdue their own passions, and endeavor to live soberly and righteously and godly in this present world. In so doing they will both save themselves and their hearers. While they may call themselves "loyal," they have a very low standard of morality and a miserably poor conception of the truth.

In this connection attention is called again to reports of impurity in five preachers, more or less prominent. This is done to show that not one, but different preachers of different States, while considered loyal and defenders of the faith, are accused of immoralities. I can hardly think all these preachers are guilty of this sin. But if they are not guilty, the ones who originated these evil and slanderous reports are, and this shows a no-better spiritual condition in them. This is shameful and a reproach upon the cause of Christ. It is a sad state of affairs when some preachers are guilty of dishonesty, rascality, drinking, and other immoralities, or, if not guilty, when others fabricate and circulate such vile and slanderous reports. One of two things should be done: such preachers, if guilty, should repent and bring forth fruit worthy of repentance, and make themselves less prominent, or quit preaching and be dealt with according to the mercy and righteousness of the Scriptures; or such reports should be stopped, and the originators dealt with according to the Scriptures.

The church of God should not be allowed to suffer and to be divided on account of the sins and ambition of a few. Where are the elders, and what are they for? Another deplorable thing is the spreading of charges and counter charges in abusive and scurrilous language all over the country, begetting a partisan and bitter spirit in others and producing discord generally. It is very sinful and very foolish in a congregation's allowing itself to become divided in feeling and sometimes in reality over the mistakes and sins of a preacher of another congregation and even another State. I wonder what otherwise sensible and good people who do this think Christianity is and the church is for. There is a scriptural way to settle all troubles and to let such settlement be known. It is very strange indeed that some who are so loyal in pressing some points of Bible teaching are not just as loyal in pressing and practicing the Bible way of settling difficulties. To keep the whole law and to offend in one point is to be guilty of all. It is as disobedient to God, or as rebellious, not to settle troubles according to his will as it is to refuse to be baptized or to worship "as it is written." Some preachers who hew to the line in telling others how to settle troubles according to the Bible are as far from following the Bible in the settlement of their own troubles as the east is from the west.

Some men say they cannot see a dog fight without taking sides with one dog or the other. This is true in regard to every church trouble in the world and one reason the trouble cannot be settled more easily. Men thousands of miles away from the trouble take sides when they know nothing of the facts. This is not the spirit of Christ and cannot be anything else but sinful and divisive. Love for the wrongdoer seeks to save him from his sins. To uphold and to attempt to justify him in his sins is not only not to befriend him, but to become a partaker of his sins. This is to become an enemy to him, to the church, and to Christ.

When such courses as the above are pursued, how can the church prosper and maintain peace and unity?

Brother Kurfees in a recent clear and convincing article tells of a case in point, which he says "caps the climax." Nothing could be more unfaithful and disloyal to Christ. The emphasis Brother Kurfees gives to the Bible teaching on this point should be felt by all, or the teaching should be continued until all congregations see it and determine in loyalty to Christ to be governed by it.

Think of this: When a congregation proceeds according to the will of God to discipline a brother, God ratifies that in heaven. (See Matt. 18: 18.) Then for another congregation to ignore the action of this congregation is to ignore God. This is most fearful indeed.

About thirty years ago a preacher in a certain State became involved in a trouble. He removed to Tennessee and asked to be received by a congregation without even an effort to adjust the trouble. This congregation declined to receive him. This was right. He removed to another congregation and asked it to receive him without adjustment, and this congregation likewise declined to do so. There can be no truth and right, unity and peace, without pursuing this course. As Brother Kurfees says, anarchy in the kingdom of Christ will prevail without this.

Christians and congregations of Christians cannot work in the spirit and after the tricks of politics—and dirty politics, at that. They cannot seek to carry their point, right or wrong, to have their own way, to do things through faction and vainglory, and to whitewash and uphold wrongdoers. They must seek to save the lost and to uphold in all particulars the government of Christ. This is loyalty to Christ.

When An Act is Obedience to God and Acceptable.

BY M. C. K.

We received, some time ago, the following communication and request, but this is our first opportunity to give it attention in these columns:

Dear Brother Kurfees: I have three questions that I wish you would kindly answer in full in an article in the Gospel Advocate: (1) Would God accept as an act of obedience an act performed by an alien that he has required only Christians to perform? (2) What effect would it have upon the acceptance of the said act if the performer thereof believed at the time of its performance he was a Christian, though, as a matter of fact, he was not? (3) Would God accept as an act of obedience an act performed by a man who understood and believed at the time that he was a Christian and did it as a Christian, though God has required only aliens to perform such an act? Yours fraternally, A. B. BARRET.

We give attention to the three questions in the order in which they are propounded.

1. It must be self-evident to every thoughtful mind that nothing can be "an act of obedience" to God which God himself has not commanded. The term "obey," to quote from Webster, means "to give ear to; to comply with the orders of." Hence, in any case where God has said nothing for man "to give ear to" and has issued no orders for man "to comply with," it would be impossible for an act to be obedience to him. Of course, any given act would be precisely the same act whether commanded by God or man, but it would not be obedience to God unless God had commanded it. And from these premises it follows that God could not "accept as an act of obedience" to him "an act performed by an alien," unless the "alien" were so commanded by God. He might "accept" the act, of course, whether he had commanded it or not, there being nothing revealed to the contrary; but the querist asks whether he would accept it "as an act of obedience" to him, and this could not be unless he had commanded it. Moreover, it follows, with equal clearness and conclusiveness, that "an act" which God "has required only Christians to perform," while it might be accepted by him if performed by others, yet it would not be "an act of obedience" to him, because he had not commanded it.

2. This would depend entirely upon whether or not the command were issued and limited to "a Christian." No matter how much "the performer thereof" may have "believed at the time of its performance" that "he was a Christian," yet if he was not one, his so believing would not make him such; and as to "what effect" this circumstance would "have upon the acceptance" by God "of the said act," it is impossible for us to tell without a revelation on the point. If it were a case in which God limited "its performance" to "a Christian," of course it would not be acceptable if done by others; if not so limited, while, in the absence of a revelation, we could not know that it would not be acceptable, yet we could not know that it would be.

3. This query is practically a reversal of the first one; and here again God could not "accept as an act of obedience" to him "an act performed by a man who understood and believed at the time that he was a Christian," unless "a Christian" were so commanded by God. In this case, as in the other, he might "accept" the act, of course, there being nothing revealed to the contrary; but he could not accept it "as an act of obedience" to him unless the one doing it, whether "a Christian" or an "alien," had been commanded by him to do it.

Referring to all these questions and to such questions in general, we think it proper here to observe that, unless we diligently guard ourselves, it is quite easy to allow hair-splitting distinctions and discriminations about the commands of God, on which there is no divine revelation, to lead us into unprofitable speculation and controversy. As far as we may be able, it is well to call the attention of both saints and sinners to the law of God and the requirements of God, giving due emphasis to the importance of respect for his authority; and where this is faithfully done, with equal emphasis upon the ruinous nature of sin and the certainty of the divine judgment and the divine retribution, it is not likely that men, whether saints or sinners, will fail to see what is required of them. Referring to certain instructions which he had given to Timothy, Paul distinctly says: "Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them in the sight of the Lord, that they strive not about words, to no profit, to the subverting of them that hear." (2 Tim. 2: 14.) And with equal significance he again warns against those who are "puffed up, knowing nothing, but doting about questionings and disputes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmising," etc. (1 Tim. 6: 4.)

Nothing is more clearly set forth in the New Testament than the duty of avoiding questions which engender controversy, strife, and division in the body of Christ. Even with strict adherence to the simple requirements of men laid down in God's word, we will still find enough room for constant battle and strife with the world, as did our Master and his great apostle Paul. "So then let us follow after things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another." (Rom. 14: 19.)

QUERY DEPARTMENT

Brother McQuiddy: Do you think it wrong for Christians to attend picture shows? This is indulged in here to a great extent among our own church people, and those who are supposed to be leaders in the church. I believe I can see that picture shows are sapping the spirituality from the church.

M. CHESNUTT.

The simple act of going to a picture show is not wrong. It is sinful to patronize shows that are vicious in their tendencies, and I am led to believe that most of them are of that character. They certainly are not feeders of our spiritual nature. The money spent in attending shows could be used to better purpose. Good judgment and discretion should be exercised in attending the picture shows, and Christians would be wise not to indulge such a practice.

Brother McQuiddy: (1) Please explain John 5: 39: "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." A brother said that was applicable only to the Jews. I think it applies to everybody. (2) Explain, also, Rev. 22: 19, 20: "And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy," etc. What book does John have reference to?

J. H. MACKAY.

(1) The Revised Version reads: "Ye search the scriptures, because ye think that in them ye have eternal life; and these are they which bear witness of me." There is no reason for limiting this to the Jews. (2) Rev. 22: 19, 20 refers to the book of Revelation; but if true of that book, it is also true of the whole Bible.

Brother McQuiddy: What is the duty of Christians toward soldiers and our country in times of war?

MRS. JAMES JAMIESON.

The Bible teaches very clearly that Christians should not go to war. It impresses upon Christians also that they should do good unto all men. It would be inhuman not to succor and relieve the soldier who is starving and suffering on the battlefield. While Christians are required to be in subjection to the higher powers (Rom. 13: 1), we are sure this does not require them to violate their conscience by giving of their means to buy machine guns in order to destroy and kill. We believe there are few governments that will demand their subjects to be false to their religious convictions. Christians, however, should be as true to these convictions in times of peace as in times of war.

Brother McQuiddy: Please explain 1 Cor. 1: 10, 13. What was the cause of the divisions in the church at Corinth? Was it simply a preference of teachers, or was it false teaching that caused the trouble? Does 1 Cor. 4: 6 have any bearing on the trouble? JOHN E. CAMPBELL.

Evidently the division at Corinth arose over their preferences for men. This is made plain in this passage: "For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you jealousy and strife, are ye not carnal, and do ye not walk after the manner of men? For when one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not men?" (1 Cor. 3: 3, 4.) The same lesson of humility is found in 1 Cor. 4: 6: "Now these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and Apollos for your sakes; that in us ye might learn not to go beyond the things which are written; that no one of you be puffed up for the one against the other." The worship of men rather than adherence to principle is one of the most prolific causes of division and strife in the church and in politics. People fall in love with a man and fight for him rather than for principle and right.

Brother McQuiddy: (1) Was Luke an inspired writer? Were the books of Luke and Acts given by inspiration? (2) On the day of Pentecost, who received the baptism of the Holy Spirit—the twelve alone, or the one hundred and twenty? R. L. HAYES.

(1) Luke was evidently inspired. Therefore, Luke and Acts were inspired books. (2) The baptism of the Holy Spirit was promised only to the apostles. (Acts 1: 5.) The division of the Bible into chapters and verses is not of inspiration. The last verse of the first chapter of Acts declares: "And he was numbered with the eleven apostles." The first verse of the second chapter says: "And when the day of Pentecost was now come, they were all together in one place." "Apostles" is the antecedent of "they." The most natural and reasonable construction of the language is that the twelve apostles were baptized in the Holy Spirit. There is no scriptural reason why the one hundred and twenty disciples should have received the baptism of the Holy Spirit.

Brother Sewell: Last summer I thought it necessary to have something to say in regard to church discipline to a congregation for which I was preaching monthly. I have lately found out that one of the elders became somewhat offended at my position, which was this: Inasmuch as we cannot control the actions of others, we ought to control our own by avoiding offenders in a social way, letting our relations to them be something like the relations that exist ordinarily between the whites and the blacks of the South. While we should try to make them feel that their offense has cut them off from the society of Christians, we should do all in our power to reclaim them, admonishing them in such a way as to show that we have their best interest at heart. Please give the Bible teaching on the above, and also state what you consider the idea generally held by the brethren to be. X.

The scriptural way is to insist upon an erring one that he set himself right; and if, after reasonable insistence, he still refuses to do right, withdraw from him. Paul said: "Withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us." (2 Thess. 3: 6.) I do not know any better way to do than that. The congregations that are trying to follow the word of the Lord, so far as I know, do that way.

Brother McQuiddy: Can a Christian belong to the Masonic lodge or any other lodge?
HOPE TAYLOR.

It has always appeared to me to be a reflection on the blood-bought church of Christ to enter any human institution. There is no authority in the Bible for any such action. On the other hand, Christians are admonished: "And whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him." (Col. 3: 17.) There is not a kind word that one can speak, not one prayer that he can offer, or one noble deed that he can do, that he cannot perform in the church. If a man proposes to be an active, working Christian, he will have neither the time nor the inclination to enter any of the fraternal orders. The earnest, faithful, and devoted Christian has no time, taste, or service for anything else save the church of Christ. The man who loves Christ with all his soul, body, and mind devotes all his talents and means to the church of Christ so as to fit himself for heaven. Many of us may show a failure to hold the church of God and his religion in high esteem in some other way as displeasing as being a member of a fraternal order. We should seek to lead the world to a nobler life by giving it a good example.

Brother McQuiddy: We have a question in our congregation that we have been unable to settle, and would like to hear from you in regard to it. Sister A and Brother B married. Then Sister A filed a bill in court against Brother B for divorce on the charges of adultery, and sustained these charges and got the divorce. Then Brother B and Sister C married, and Sister A is yet living. Now the question is, Are Brother B and Sister C living in adultery? X.

Sister A was warranted in her separation from Brother B by the Bible. The Bible is clear on this point. B's first mistake was in committing adultery. His second mistake was in marrying Sister C. If truly repentant for his wrong, he should have sought reconciliation with Sister A, whom he had wronged. The Lord gives the charge: "That the wife depart not from her husband (but should she depart, let her remain unmarried, or else be reconciled to her husband); and that the husband leave not his wife." (1 Cor. 7: 10, 11.) What is true of the woman is true of the man. A person in a state of sin cannot become a Christian without trying to correct that sin. No lapse of time will purge the cohabitation of its sinfulness. Committing adultery when he married the second time did not manifest any repentance for the first wrong. He should have proven his repentance by turning away from the wrong he had done and by living a consistent life of virtue. No doubt Sister A would have been reconciled to him had he done this; at least, such a course would have repaired the wrong in so far as possible; and this should every man do. To grant him the right to marry again while his first wife is living would be to place a premium on adultery. The church should not entertain the thought of factionalism over such a condition. Though God's way sometimes seems hard, it is always best.

Brother McQuiddy: Please answer the following questions: (1) In Heb. 6: 4, who are those who have been made partakers of the Holy Ghost? (2) What is the sin against the Holy Ghost? (3) What is the Holy Ghost?

J. A. CHAUDOIN.

Heb. 6: 4 reads: "For as touching those who were once enlightened and tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Spirit," etc. They had become partakers of the Holy Spirit in that they had received the knowledge of their salvation by the remission of their sins and had received the Spirit himself, witnessing with their spirits that they were the children of God. "The Spirit himself beareth witness with our Spirit, that we are children of God." (Rom. 8: 16.) Thus they were assured of God's mercy toward them, and of the efficacy of the atonement through which they had received such blessings. In the primitive church the extraordinary operation of the Holy Spirit was imparted by the laying on of hands. (2) Any sin may be persisted in until it becomes a sin against the Holy Spirit. Men could reject the teaching of John the Baptist and of Christ while here in person and be forgiven; but not so with the man who blasphemes, speaks against, or rejects the teaching of the Holy Spirit. "Therefore I say unto you, Every sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but the blasphemy against the Spirit shall not be forgiven. And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever shall speak against the Holy Spirit, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, nor in that which is to come." (Matt. 12: 31, 32.) (3) The Holy Spirit is usually regarded as one of the Godhead. In the Old Testament he is generally called "the Spirit of God," "the Spirit of Jehovah," sometimes "the Holy Spirit of Jehovah" or "the good Spirit of Jehovah." In the New Testament he is usually called "the Holy Spirit," sometimes "the Spirit of God," "of the Lord," "of Jesus Christ," as in Matt. 3: 16; Acts 5: 9; Phil. 1: 19. As a procreative power, he is called "the power of the Highest." (Luke 1: 35.) He was an influence with which Jesus was endued. (Luke 4: 4.) He was divine inspiration by which the prophets and holy men wrote and spoke. "Men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Spirit." (2 Pet. 1: 21.)

Mothers!

When was there a generation since boys were born that women did not go to war? Never a bayonet lunged into the breast of a soldier that had not already cooled its hot wrath in the heart of a mother. While the soldier has fought through one battle, the mother has wandered over a score of slaughter fields looking for his mangled body. He sings and plays the rough games of outdoor men in camp for a month, and then goes out to fight one skirmish; but every day and night of the thirty the mother has waked through a hundred alarms that never were. She has watched on the lonely picket post; she has paced the sentry beat before his tent; she has prayed beside him while he slept; the throbs of her heart have been the beads of her rosary. If a mother should write her story of the war, she would pluck a white hair from her temple and dip the living stylus into the chalice of her tears to write the diary of her days upon her heart.—Robert J. Burdette.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Compiled by A. B. Lipscomb

Brother Etam will preach at Flat Rock, this city, next Sunday.

Brother Sewell was able to worship with the Russell Street congregation, this city, last Sunday.

D. H. Halle preached the initial sermon in the new house at Blodgett, eight miles south of Winfield, Texas.

From B. B. Mears, at Horse Cave, Ky.: "I can live a Christian without your paper, but it would be a much harder thing to do."

W. T. Boaz, superintendent of the Tennessee Orphans' Home, will hold the spring meeting for the church at Sparta, Tenn., beginning on April 2.

M. L. Moore, of Bowling Green, Ky., will begin a series of sermons at the Nashville Bible School on Monday evening, February 7. All are invited.

F. W. Smith's meeting at Woodfield, Ohio, was very successful. Large audiences heard the sermons, and there were eight additions to the congregation.

C. M. Pullias writes that the work at Lewisburg, Tenn., is moving along well. This is the town where Brother Pullias hibernates a few weeks between seasons.

Ben West is making a specialty of children's Bible classes on Thursdays and Saturdays. They take great interest in the firing of questions at the teacher. The singing is fine.

T. B. Larimore has been prevented through illness from writing anything for the Gospel Advocate. He has been suffering considerably from sciatica, but we are glad to report that he is much improved.

From W. S. Long, Jr., at Manchester, Tenn.: "W. T. Goalen, of Dothan, Ala., was with us on January 30, and preached two very interesting sermons to large audiences. The church greatly appreciated his visit. He will spend this week at Decatur, Ala., and in that district."

F. C. Sowell writes from Columbia, Tenn.: "Price Billingsley is with us in a meeting at South Columbia, and his teaching is having a telling effect. His denunciations of sin are made strong by Bible proof texts. The leading aim in his efforts is to get members of the church to leave off their evil practices and do a greater work for God. May we as preachers make a heroic effort to stimulate the churches throughout this land and country to a greater and higher standard of Christianity."

From L. J. Jackson, at Valdosta, Ga.: "The meeting at Gainesboro, Tenn., continued more than two weeks and closed on Sunday night, November 14, with eight added to the fellowship. The audiences were most gratifying and showed a deep appreciation of the work done. This appointment concluded my work in the State for this year and one of the most successful religious campaigns I have conducted. All the meetings were largely attended and a spiritual awakening was manifest everywhere. I am now at home ready to begin again any day."

The news of the death of Sister C. C. Klingman, at San Angelo, Texas, on the evening of January 23, was received here with genuine sorrow and regret. She had made a hard four-years' fight with tuberculosis contracted in Japan. Let us all unite our prayers in behalf of the bereaved husband, and children, and for all who mourn the loss of this good woman. Have we not the right to feel that "she has not lost her life; she has only gained it?" Sister Klingman was a sister of R. C. Bell, president of Thorp Spring Christian College, and of S. A. Bell, a teacher in Cordell Christian College.

I wish to urge again that the readers of this page have fellowship with T. W. Phillips, of Fort Worth, Texas, who recently fell on the ice and broke his leg at the hip joint. This means that he will be physically helpless for several weeks. A. O. Colley, his collaborator at Fort Worth, writes as follows: "Brother Phillips has given his life to telling the story of the cross. Now that he is unable to work and on heavy expenses, we want to ask his many friends and brethren to rally to him in his affliction. Write him, enclosing a contribution for him, as soon as you read this. We will also help him here."

T. W. Bullington writes from Athens, Ala.: "Brother John Hayes, of Cedar Hill, Texas, closed a week's meeting with the Pleasant Valley Church, Athens, Route 6, on Sunday night, January 23. It appears that much and lasting good was accomplished by Brother Hayes, who is a great lover of the truth. For those who are not absolutely blind, his gospel messages are a great 'eye opener.' He whips, but it is done on the principle that 'whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth.' Although the weather was unfavorable, there was a large audience at every service. The interest grew wonderfully, and no one was proud for the meeting to close. Any congregation would do well to support Brother Hayes in a meeting."

Our good friend, E. C. Brossard, calls attention to the good results attained during the meetings of R. A. Largen from June 1, 1915, to November 1. Here is the record of the visible results: At Arbor Hill, Marshall County, 4 additions; Nut Grove, Marshall County, 2 additions; Wayland Springs, Lawrence County, 4 additions; Booneville, Lincoln County, 5 additions; Delta, Lincoln County, 18 additions; Friendship, Lincoln County, 14 additions, 3 restored; Corder's Cross Roads, Lincoln County, 18 additions, 5 restored; Mc-Burg, Lincoln County, 25 additions, 7 restored. Two of these congregations have increased from a few to one hundred members in the last eighteen months and are now doing active work for the cause of the Master." This is an unusually good report.

Brother McCaleb is greatly pleased with the special numbers. He writes us from Tokyo, Japan, on January 1, 1916: "Dear Brother Lipscomb: I have just finished reading the 'Home and Father and Mother' Number of the Gospel Advocate, and my soul is blessed and refreshed. I see two advantages in these special issues with subjects assigned. The first is, it gets the old contributors off the beaten track into new fields of thought, which sometimes brings out treasures that would otherwise be buried. The second is, by making special requests the more diffident are encouraged to write, which leads to the discovery of some of our best talent and most gifted writers. Hence one of the chief features of the special numbers is that they give variety. Loyalty to truth does not mean that we must get in a rut and become monotonous. May the Lord bless both of you during 1916."

J. D. Walling writes from Monticello, Ky.: "There is to be a debate at Mount Pleasant church house (Methodist Episcopal), in Wayne County, Ky., between J. E. Woolridge and the writer. Woolridge affirms: 'The Scriptures teach that rational adults are saved by the baptism of the Holy Spirit in answer to the prayer of faith, and that only such adults as have been baptized with the Holy Ghost belong to the church of Jesus Christ.' This will afford us, we hope, a great opportunity to preach the gospel in a very needy field. We have only some few sisters there, and not a brother, but several sympathizers. Woolridge has had several debates, and his brethren are very confident of his ability. I will appreciate very much the prayers of the brotherhood and any helps or suggestions from any brother. This will be a fine opportunity to give out tracts; so if any brother has any for free distribution, I would appreciate them. The debate is to begin on February 28. An effort is being made to have other issues discussed. Any who are disposed to attend should come to Burnside, Ky., and take boat to the lock; they will then be in one mile of the church house. Those down the river should come up to the lock. We would welcome with pleasure any brother."

Editorial Richness.

Under the caption, "Editorial Richness," the Christian Standard of last week contained the following editorial:

"The discussion of recent efforts looking toward the reunion of Christendom is particularly fine and discriminating. As one of Brother Kershner's early utterances commands attention, and will, we think, challenge the respect and win the approval of all thoughtful readers. We congratulate the Evangelist on this clear, strong note, and gladly adapt it as valuable in the present 'doctrinal revival.'"

"Not less trenchant and timely is the work of Brother Kurfess on 'Unfaithful Teachers.' In this editorial the Gospel Advocate is stressing the very point we have sought to make so frequently in recent months—that unscriptural teachers should be discountenanced by both churches and Christians; only thus can they be silenced. We welcome this vigorous and scriptural discussion. It, too, is strong doctrinal meat."

"Week by week the forces that can join in harmonious restatement are drawing together. From all evidences that appear now, we shall very soon be speaking the same things again, and with such power and clearness that ground lost in recent years of unfruitful bickerings may be regained. Toward this good end may the Holy Spirit lead us all."

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

Does Not Abrogate.

Christ commands the believer to be baptized. "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) The editor of the Western Recorder would do well to apply his teaching to baptism. He says:

Ignoring a command of God does not alter nor abrogate that command, not even if all the race unites in ignoring. The command to let the land rest on her Sabbath years was ignored by Israel for four hundred and ninety years; ignored by David and Josiah, by Isaiah and Ezekiel, by all alike. But God cannot be mocked and he was keeping count. When his day of reckoning came, the nation was sent to the hard captivity of Babylon for seventy years, one for every year in which that command had been disobeyed.

It is just as essential for people to obey the Lord in being baptized as it was for the Jews to observe the Sabbath years. If not, why not? For,

"Like unto ships far off at sea, Outward or homeward bound are we,"

so long as we are faithful in keeping and obeying the commands of God.

Heretical Results of Sunday Revivals.

Not the least of the very serious injuries to the cause of free, reasonable, and wholesome Christianity resulting from the type of revivalism of which "Billy" Sunday is the leading exponent is the impregnation of communities with an abnormal interest in the heresy of a spectacular second coming of Christ.

Mr. Sunday, it appears, is laying increasing stress upon his views on this subject. In earlier years he preached a single sermon or so on it during his meetings. More and more it saturates all his preaching, and he works it into the motives upon which his converts act.

A communication from a Pennsylvania reader makes clear the wide-reaching after effects of the preaching of this doctrine under the intense conditions that characterize the Sunday revivals. He says: "The whole country around here in a radius of one hundred and fifty miles, in which are located towns where "Billy" Sunday has conducted revivals, is literally "daffy" over the millennial doctrine. The churches are studying the Bible from that point of view, and a large proportion of the ministers have adopted it and are preaching it. It is very difficult to interest the churches in practical social Christianity."

Such a result is inevitable. The premillennial doctrine that Mr. Sunday digs out of the Bible by the most crude and indiscriminating interpretation is thoroughly antagonistic to the social ethics and practical idealism of Jesus. The theory that things are to get worse and worse up to the time the Lord appears leaves no room for the great social reconstruction which is inspired by the dream of an earthly kingdom of God.

Premillennialism is essentially pessimistic in its relation to human progress and the goal toward which social forces are taking mankind. The indwelling, living Christ is impotent to save the world. Only a cosmic cataclysm can triumph over evil.

The planting and fostering of a heresy like this in the thinking of a Christian community injures the true cause of Christ, in the long run, more than the moral reform of ever so many individuals benefits it.

It is a factor to be taken into consideration when modern-minded—or, we might better say, New Testament-minded—pastors are casting their vote on the proposal to invite Mr. Sunday to their communities.—Christian Century.

Premillennialism is of Jewish origin and is not the doctrine of Christ and the apostles. It is based upon a literal interpretation of Rev. 20: 4-6, which is figurative and has never been accepted as the creed of the churches. There is but one passage in the Bible upon which the doctrine can be based even by a faulty and vicious interpretation. The doctrine is not taught in that passage, since the premillennialists differ very radically among themselves. Premillennialism contradicts the doctrine of the New Testament concerning the resurrection and the judgment. It is grossly materialistic in that it contends for the restoration of the bloody sacrifices. It involves a second humiliation of Christ and dishonors the Holy Spirit. That it is essentially pessimistic and belittles the work of the Holy Spirit and the church of Christ is clearly shown by the following extract from W. E. Blackstone, one of its leading advocates: "Here, then, we are most emphatically taught not only that the world is growing no better, but that the professing church itself will lose its saltiness, becoming nominal and lukewarm, fit only to be spewed out of the Master's mouth. The entire teaching of the word of God, we believe, agrees with this." ("Jesus is Coming," page 154.) Thus it will be seen that the church is designed for a failure, fit only to be spewed out of the Master's mouth. The man who heartily believes and accepts such views will not labor to build up the church of Christ, against which the gates of Hades shall not prevail. He will lose interest in the church, and as a visionary he will devote his time waiting for Christ to come in a material body to rule as King over the Jews in Jerusalem. Hence, Blackstone says: "There is no hope, then, for the world, but in the coming of Christ, the King." According to premillennialism, Christ was mistaken when he said to his disciples: "Nevertheless I tell you the truth: It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I go, I will send him unto you." (John 16: 7.) It was best for Christ to depart in order that the Spirit would come and convict the world of sin, righteousness, and judgment. I cannot believe that Christ was false and that the Holy Spirit has made or will make such an ignoble failure. Some people are ready to believe anything except the Bible.

Ministers Become Discouraged.

Ministers sometimes feel like leaving the work that has fallen to them because the field is so hard. This is not a good reason. If it is a hard field, it is because good work is greatly needed there that must be done by a good man. If the work is very easy, one might well be induced to go to some place where greater demands are made. A weaker man might do the easy work. If the work is hard, let it be done with dependence on God and with loving consecration. There are no really easy places. Any church calls for all that a minister can bring of genuine manhood and of the grace of God.—Herald and Presbyter.

Ministers should take their own medicine. They teach others to work and endure hardness as good soldiers. They should cheerfully do likewise. They should be so busily engaged in the work of saving souls that they have no time for loafing. Christ, who has shown us the way, declares: "We must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." (John 9: 4.) It is unbecoming a preacher to whine because his field is hard. The more difficult the field, the more room there is for achievement. Preachers must themselves pay the price of success. Their labor demands the greatest sacrifice, and yet their service must be rendered cheerfully and with the whole heart. The minister who is ready to labor and sacrifice in order to win souls is sure to succeed in any field. Longfellow has well said:

The heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight;
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night.

How to Fight Tuberculosis

Dr. J. W. Carhart, of San Antonio, Texas, says: "Since lime salts constitute three-fourths of all the mineral substances of the human body, they must be supplied in the foods or supplemented in mineral preparations, or natural starvation ensues, with tuberculosis unchecked. The spread of tuberculosis and other preventable diseases is due largely to decalcified (lime lacking) conditions of multitudes throughout the civilized world."

Since lime is one of the ingredients of Eckman's Alterative, much of its success doubtless is due to its combination in such a way as to render it easily assimilable.

Eckman's Alterative has effected remarkable results in tuberculosis, which in many instances, apparently has yielded to it, and since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, it is safe to try. Price $1 and $2 per bottle. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct from the Laboratory. We would like to send you a booklet containing information of value and references.

The Randolph Street Church, Huntsville, Ala.

BY T. C. LITTLE.

This is the church that has attracted so much attention in the past by the things which they have suffered in the way of strifes, contentions, and divisions. It is not my purpose to discuss those troubles, but to speak of the present situation as I found it while visiting and preaching for them once a month last year. However, it is well for congregations to look backward occasionally and note their mistakes and failures of the past, so they may go forward the better. Since congregations and individuals are heirs to the same things, therefore they are never as perfect but what some wrong appears, or ever so bad that some good is not present. This congregation is not an exception to this rule. I have known them ever since its organization and before. There are now, and have been all the while, faithful, true, and self-sacrificing Christians, both men and women among them, but they are not congenial and have not dwelt together in peace. Some years ago they divided, then after a while they united again, and for a short while reports came from them that they were working harmoniously for the Lord. Soon the tempter came and sowed seeds of discord, and the heaven began to work, so that they were soon so unharmonious that another separation took place, a portion of the congregation going to the Masonic Temple to worship, leaving the others to worship in the house on Randolph Street. While I was preaching for these people as stated above, I visited and preached for those worshipping at the temple one Sunday morning and evening. I found in both congregations good, faithful men and women who deplore the conditions and are anxious to pursue the best course to allay any ill feeling that may exist among them and at the same time enable them to worship God in spirit and in truth. After preaching for them a year and giving the matter much earnest, prayerful consideration, without any ill will or unkind feeling toward any one, I believe separation was the proper solution of their troubles. The city is large enough for another congregation. It may require much patient, faithful long-suffering and many sacrifices before they enjoy the peaceful harmony and fellowship they desire; but if it will bring them into the presence of the Savior to hear him say to them, "Enter into the joy of thy Lord," it will more than compensate them for all they have endured. I do not believe they will dwell together in Christian love and fellowship as one congregation. I am sure there was a better feeling among these people when I gave up the work there

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

the descendants of the original Spanish and French settlers, prided themselves upon their hair; and rightly they should, for it was they who first knew the secret of beautiful hair, the one great successful remedy for hair diseases and the greatest of all hair foods—La Creole Hair Dressing. The recipe was kept a profound secret by the race until about fifty years ago; but now you can reap the benefits of their early discoveries by using "La Creole" hair dressing, the very best dressing for keeping the hair fluffy, light, and beautiful.

This wonderful preparation of the Creole race not only cleanses the scalp from all disease and filth, but also renews the life of the hair; makes it light and fluffy; restores to the hair its natural color and original luster; and supplies the hair with oil, food which it requires. No house should be without it. Ask your dealer for it. Price, $1. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

Opportunities in Florida.

BY JOHN E. BUNN.

During the last decade the State of Florida has, perhaps, had a greater percentage of development than any other Southern State. Her development has been unprecedented. This is due more to her climate than to any other one thing. Florida has a more pleasant winter climate than any other part of North America. Being a semitropical country, especially the peninsula, and fanned by the breezes from the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean, the peninsula of Florida is one of the most delightful winter homes in the world.

Vegetables are grown to perfection through the winter. Gardening begins in the autumn on the peninsula and is carried on through winter and spring. Summer is the no-crop or leisure season. The finest oranges and grapefruit grown in the world are grown in Florida. This industry is yet in its infancy. The world-famous everglades are being successfully reclaimed by a system of canals. The everglade soil is very rich. It looks as if in the near future the whole of the everglades will be made one vast winter vegetable garden. I have seen some of it in cultivation. I never saw prettier truck gardens in any State than we now have in midwinter in the everglades. More and more of it is rapidly being put in cultivation. In the past many mistakes have been made in truck gardening and fruit growing in Florida. The people are learning and fewer mistakes are made. People come here with almost nothing (some with no money at all), and by industry, economy, and good judgment are soon in comfortable circumstances. Those who have some money, of course, get along more rapidly. But, like everything else, some fail and abuse the country, while others succeed and praise it.

Florida is rapidly building up a fine system of transportation. The State has a good system of railroads, and others are being constructed. Seven of the great trunk lines traverse the State. The rivers and canals are becoming a network of transportation for small water craft. The great ocean liners plying the waters of the Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico touch numerous ports on both the east and west coasts. A fine system of public roads is being constructed. The country being level and an inexhaustible supply of the best of material being at hand in the State, the cost of road making is reduced to the minimum. The east coast of Florida surpasses any country I have seen in good roads.

The growth of the church and the interest taken in the spread of the gospel in Northern Florida and on the Boon to Fishermen.

The majority of people suffer from rheumatism, more or less. Fishermen and hunters are especially afflicted with this nerve-racking ailment. Mr. Frank Legler, of Nashville, Tenn., is a great hunter and fisherman, and is a firm believer in "Renwar." He writes in part as follows: "I took a few doses of 'Renwar' for rheumatism and want to say that it gave me quick relief. As I am exposed considerably in hunting and fishing, I am subject to occasional attacks of rheumatism, but with 'Renwar' always on hand I have no fear, as I know it will quickly drive away that tired rheumatic pain." If your druggist does not sell 'Renwar,' we will send you a bottle, postpaid, for fifty cents, and refund the money if you are not satisfied. Prepared and guaranteed by Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL DISCOVERY FOR KIDNEY TROUBLE.

For nearly nine years I was a great sufferer from what my doctor said was kidney trouble and my blood was out of order, enduring all that time excruciating pain in my back and across my bowels. I was drawn down so that I could only walk with my hands on my knees. My doctor said he could do nothing for me. I tried many kinds of medicine, but all to no avail. A friend told me about Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root; and as I had tried everything else that I heard of, I bought a bottle of Swamp-Root, and it did wonders for me. I prize it higher than any other medicine, and I shall recommend it to my friends. I wish to add right here that after using Swamp-Root for two months I began to straighten up and am now sound and well, and feel like I might live a long time yet to tell what your medicine has done for me.

Yours very truly, T. C. CLAY, west coast during the last few years is encouraging. So far as I can learn, the churches are at peace and moving along smoothly. There are a number of good evangelists who are doing good work in this part of the State. Their lives, as a general rule, are above reproach. Other evangelists are being developed and others are coming to Florida.

The east coast was practically an untouched wilderness until Mr. Flagler, a few years ago, built the Florida East Coast Railroad from Jacksonville to Key West and connected with it a steamship line to Cuba and South American ports. It is three hundred and sixty-six miles from Jacksonville to Miami, and five hundred and twenty-two miles to Key West. The climate at Miami is ideal in winter. I am told by people here of means who have traveled all over the world that Miami has the most delightful climate in the world. Every day this winter has been a beautiful, sunny day. The weather in January is like beautiful May weather in Tennessee and Kentucky. The average temperature for Miami ranges between 67.1 for January, the coldest month, and 82.2 for August, the hottest month. Miami uses the shortest thermometer in the United States. The marked evenness of Miami's climate is due to its proximity to both the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico, whose vast waters are nearly constant in temperature. Miami is almost surrounded by the gulf stream, and, therefore, is never too cold in the winter, and in summer is frequently much cooler than States further north. The rainy season is in the summer, there being little rainfall in the winter months. No fogs nor electric storms. A lady who has lived in Miami two years tells me she does not remember to have seen lightning or to have heard thunder during the time. We have occasional showers in winter, but the ground is never damp nor muddy. One time in seven years Miami has had a rainy spell of weather in winter, and that was in January and February of 1915.

Tropical and semitropical flowers, fruits, and all kinds of vegetables are growing and bearing in perfection through January and will continue till summer. The shipping season for vegetables begins with the winter and continues through the spring.

The population of Miami is almost twenty thousand. Nearly fifty thousand tourists visited Miami during last season. The sanitary condition of the city is excellent. Centering in Miami is an excellent road system, totaling about five hundred miles of automobile highway, the prettiest roads I have ever seen. Miami is the Southern terminus of the Dixie Highway, the national thoroughfare from Chi-

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Take Salts to flush kidneys if back hurts or bladder bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region; sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness; your stomach sours, tongue is coated; and when the weather is bad, you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

cago through the South. Miami is also the Southern terminus of the Montreal-to-Miami International Highway. I have ridden over some of these roads—north, south, and west. The beautiful homes, gardens, and fruit groves are charming beyond my powers of description.

My leading purpose is to write about the cause of Christ in Miami and on the east coast. No effort has ever been made to establish a New Testament church on the east coast south of Jacksonville, except at Miami, a distance of three hundred and sixty-six miles. A few years ago a few members who had moved here from Georgia, Texas, and Indiana began meeting from house to house. A little later Brother J. J. Hart, his wife and son, from Detroit, Mich., who were here for the winter, united with them and took an active interest in the work. About the same time our beloved brother, Clifton Tatum, and his faithful wife, who were here for the winter, began worshipping with them and took much interest in building up the church. Brethren J. W. Grant, L. J. Jackson, W. P. Skaggs, W. J. Haynes, G. E. Claus, and the writer have at times labored with the faithful few in Miami. We have about forty members. They are all poor people—day laborers and "truck gardeners." We have a neat, frame church house, well located. The house is paid for, but we owe one thousand dollars on the lot. The church house and lot has been provided chiefly through the liberality of Brethren Hart and Tatum. The local members have done what they could.

Recipe for Gray Hair.

To one-half pint of water add one ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up, or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

Through the efforts of Brother Tatum and the fellowship of Campbell Street Church, of Louisville, Ky., and Brother Hart, I came to Miami on January 1, 1915, for three months' work. Brother M. C. Kurfees was to have been with us in a meeting at this time. About the time we were getting our work under good headway and the prospects seemed bright, our plans were all upset and our hopes all blasted. Brother Tatum was stricken with paralysis and in a few days went home to God. Serious sickness in my own family called me away. We were all discouraged and disappointed. We keenly feel the loss of one of our very best friends, Brother Clifton Tatum.

I am back for four months' work with this noble little band. The work is difficult and our growth will be slow. It would be fine for this work if we had our house paid for and a good evangelist located here for all of his time. The Miami church should become a radiating center from which to spread the gospel in this great Florida east coast country. People are moving to this country very rapidly. Disciples of Christ will more and more emigrate to this country. This church must grow. Any one wishing to get information about this country may write me, and I will give his name to the secretary of the Commercial Club. Any brethren desiring informa-

Cured His RUPTURE.

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed, and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation if you write to me—Eugene M. LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR.

Use grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe and nobody will know.

The use of sage and sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy, and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out of date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a fifty-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old recipe, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair, and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft, and abundant.

RHEUMATISM CONQUERED

I say that I can conquer rheumatism with a simple home treatment, without electrical treatment, stringent diet, weakening baths, or in fact any other of the usual treatments recommended for the cure of rheumatism.

Don't shut your eyes and say "impossible," but put me to the test.

You may have tried everything you ever heard of and have spent your money right and left. I say "well and good," let me prove my claims without expense to you.

Let me send you without charge a trial treatment of DELANO'S RHEUMATIC CONQUEROR. I am willing to take the chance and surely the test will tell.

So send me your name and the test treatment will be sent you at once. When I send you this, I will write you more fully, and will show you that my treatment is not only for banishing rheumatism, but should also cleanse the system of Uric Acid and give great benefits in kidney trouble and help the general health.

This special offer will not be held open indefinitely. It will be necessary for you to make your application quickly. As soon as this discovery becomes better known I shall cease sending free treatments and shall then charge a price for this discovery which will be in proportion to its great value. So take advantage of this offer before it is too late. Remember, the test costs you absolutely nothing. F. H. Delano, 641 E. Delano Bldg Syracuse, N. Y.

When they exceed this limit, one cent will be charged for every additional word. Payment must accompany notice or else it will be reduced to one hundred and fifty words. Poetry will not be printed.

Pace.

William C. Pace was born on March 9, 1849, and died on January 1, 1916, at his home, Waterview, Ky. He was married to Miss Ellen Beck in 1870. Wife and two daughters survive their father and husband. Of the sixty-six years of his life, fifty of them were dedicated to his Master, and forty of those fifty found him faithful to the work of an elder. He immersed over twenty persons and was the life of the Waterview church. The people looked to him as their leader and his religion was never brought into question. One of the heroes of the church has departed from our ranks. His funeral services were conducted at his home by the writer.

R. T. HICKERSON.

Scott.

Brother J. F. Scott was born in Carroll County, Tenn., on August 15, 1853; obeyed the gospel in 1894, under the preaching of Brother John R. Williams; and died at Hydrick, Ark., on the evening of January 18, 1916. Brother Scott, on leaving Tennessee, the place of his birth, settled at Rector, Ark. He was a consistent, faithful member of the one body, a constant reader of the Bible and a ready advocate of its doctrines and principles, and a faithful attendant on the services. He ever manifested a desire to increase his usefulness in the church, notwithstanding the difficulties in the way of education. The congregation at Rector will certainly regret his departure from this sphere of action, but we feel no doubt of his triumphant entrance into the glory to which the good and true are entitled. He was one of the elders of the church at Rector, and was respected and loved by all. To Sister Scott and his boys and others we would offer our kindest sympathy in their bereavement. Let them be comforted in the Bible assurances of a final great reunion where there is no separation.

M. DONALDSON.

Miller.

On Sunday, December 13, 1915, death removed from the family circle Dr. L. D. Miller, after a short illness of paralysis. Brother Miller had been married twice. His first wife was Miss Fletcher. Two children survive that union. His last wife was Miss Brown. To that union two children were born, only one surviving—Esquire C. L. Miller, of Bradyville. By the death of Dr. Miller the family has lost a devoted husband and a loving father; the neighborhood, a faithful brother and a good doctor. He was ever ready to visit the sick and afflicted whether there was any compensation or not. He obeyed the gospel some forty-two years ago. He had practiced medicine forty years, having reached the age of sixty years. He leaves, to mourn his loss, three children, several grandchildren, and a host of friends, besides a loving wife who in her loneliness will miss him so much. To her I would say: Weep not, for our loss will be his eternal gain. The body was carried to the church house near his home, and there, in the presence of a large crowd of people, the funeral was conducted by Brother G. B. Mears, after which the body was laid to rest in the Jernigan graveyard.

MRS. B. MEARS.

Marshall.

Brother J. W. Marshall was born on May 18, 1836, and on May 10, 1915, at the home of his daughter, Sister George Crook, near Lebanon, Tenn., after having been sick for several weeks, when all was done that the faithful physician, devoted children, and kind neighbors and friends could do, the dark-winged angel, "Death," bore his spirit away to the realms of eternal rest. On December 19, 1867, he was married to Lucretia Proctor, who preceded him to the spirit world some years ago. During the War between the States Brother Marshall enlisted in the Confederate Army and served through this awful conflict. He was greatly loved by all the surviving soldiers of his company. About thirty-three years ago he decided to enlist in the Christian's warfare, and under the preaching of Brother E. H. Rodgers he obeyed the gospel of Christ, and in this struggle he was faithful until death. He was the senior elder of this congregation at Antioch, in Trousdale County, Tenn., and was loved by all the congregations.

IF YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Quiet and very unassuming, never speaking disparagingly of any one (if he could not speak well of any one, he never spoke at all), he went through life the friend of everybody. In the presence of a vast concourse of friends, his remains were laid to rest by the side of his wife, in the little graveyard at Antioch church house, to await the resurrection morn.

GEORGE W. FARMER.

Simpson.

Mrs. Kitty McMurry Simpson, beloved wife of A. B. Simpson, died on December 23, 1915, at the home of her stepmother, Mrs. G. W. McMurry, in Waverly, Tenn., aged forty-four years, eleven months, and nine days. Mrs. Simpson was a daughter of the late Dr. G. W. McMurry and his first wife. Her early years were spent at their home on Big Hurricane Creek, eight miles from Waverly. She was married to A. B. Simpson on November 11, 1894. Six children were born to them, three of whom survive—Mack Carroll, aged fifteen years; Olga, aged fourteen; and Inez, nine years of age. Mrs. Simpson was a sufferer from that dread disease, tuberculosis, and the family removed about two years ago from their home near Glenwood, on Blue Creek, to Greeley, Col., with the hope that a cure would be effected. Mrs. Simpson had been a member of the church of Christ since early childhood, and died with expressions of love and faith on her lips. Her remains were laid to rest in what is known as the "Bryant cemetery," near her late home. Funeral services were held by Brother H. I. Copeland. Surviving Sister Simpson, besides her immediate family, are her devoted stepmother, Mrs. Ida McMurray; two brothers—A. P. McMurry, of Waverly, and Will McMurry, of Dickson; a sister—Mrs. T. R. Meadow, of Union City; and two-half-sisters—Mrs. Zula Lowe, of Lowes, Ky., and Miss Beulah McMurry, of Waverly.

J. L. THOMPSON.

Brandon.

On November 19, 1915, at his home, near Wildersville, Tenn., Brother M. C. ("Clay") Brandon's spirit bid adieu to its house of clay and took its flight to "a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Brother Brandon was born on January 23, 1855. He was married to Miss F. V. Utley on November 16, 1876. To this union three daughters were born, two of whom are living—Mrs. Joe Tillson, of Wildersville, and Mrs. Fernanda Walls, of Clarksburg. These, with the wife and mother, are left to mourn the death of a loving father and devoted husband. Brother Brandon obeyed the gospel at Roan's Creek, in Carroll County, in 1877, and was faithful till God called him. He was appointed an elder at Roan's Creek several years ago, in which capacity he served until, a few years ago, he moved near Wildersville and was appointed an elder there, serving the church with Brother Willie Wilson as coelder at the time of his death. Brother Brandon was one of God's noble men. He was always at his post, helping in songs, exhortations, and prayers. If he knew beforehand that he would be kept from the service, he would notify Brother Wilson and insist that he look after the service. He loved his family, his

New Strength for Lame Backs and Worn-Out Conditions.

Dear Mr. Editor: I suffered from a lame back and a tired, worn-out feeling. I was unable to stand erect and scarcely able to get around. It would usually come on at first with crick in the small of my back. I took one box of Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets, and my back commenced to get better soon after starting to take them. I did not have to walk doubled over, as I did before using the "Anuric." It is the best remedy I have ever taken for what it is intended to relieve. I hope those who are in need of such a remedy will give these tablets of Dr. Pierce's a trial. Yours truly, A. G. DRAKE.

NOTE.—When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, or the twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism, and gout. The urine is often cloudy, full of sediment; channels often get sore; and sleep is disturbed two or three times a night. This is the time you should consult some physician of wide experience—such as Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. Send him ten cents for a large trial package of his new discovery—"Anuric." Write him your symptoms, and send a sample of urine for test. Experience has taught Dr. Pierce that "Anuric" is the most powerful agent in dissolving uric acid as hot water melts sugar. Being so many times more active than lithia, it clears the heart valves of any sandy substances which may clog them and checks the degeneration of the blood vessels as well as regulating blood pressure. "Anuric" is a regular insurance and life saver for all big meat eaters and those who deposit lime salts in their joints. Ask the druggist for "Anuric," put up by Dr. Pierce in fifty-cent packages.

friends, the church and its service. We will all miss him, but we believe our loss is his eternal gain. After a talk by the writer in the presence of a large body of brethren, relatives, and friends, his body was laid to rest in the Sellars graveyard, near Clarksburg, to await the resurrection of the just. Let us meet him in that home where no good-byes are spoken.

What is the Club?

The Gospel Advocate Piano Club is both a theory and a fact. The theory is that a piano factory can afford to sell one hundred pianos and player-pianos at a much lower price than it would be willing to make on an order for only one instrument. The fact is that the club has saved each of its members forty per cent.

The theory of the club is "coöperation." The fact is "perfect satisfaction." The theory is: "A square deal to every member." The fact is: "Every member is delighted."

If you are interested in securing a piano or player-piano of the finest quality at the lowest possible factory price, write for your copy of the club's catalogue, discount sheet, and terms. Address Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

FIRM FOUNDATION An eight-page weekly religious paper devoted to the restoration of primitive Christianity. Excels in church news; an able corps of writers; extensively circulated. Subscription price, $1 a year, payable in advance. Special rates for clubs. We believe that every loyal Christian should have the Firm Foundation visit his home.

Use This to Stop Your La Grippe Cough.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound quickly stops tiresome, weakening, and racking la grippe coughs. F. G. Prevo, of Bedford, Ind., writes: "La grippe left me with a severe cough, and I tried everything. I lost in weight, and it looked as if I never would get well. I tried Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, and two bottles cured me. I am now well and back to normal weight." All druggists sell it everywhere.

Better Than Spanking.

Spanking does not cure children of bad wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 195, South Bend, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child; the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

CALOMEL SELDOM
SOLD HERE NOW.

Nasty drug salivates, makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs fifty cents; and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine. No biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach, or constipated bowels. It does not gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick, and nauseated. Do not lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

A Chance to Make Money.

Mr. A. H. Daves, of Southern Alabama, writes: "As few people know of the wonderful opportunities here, my experience may benefit many. Ten years ago I came here without a dollar, got some free land, cleared one acre, and planted Satsuma oranges, which are frost proof. In three years I began selling fruit. That one acre now makes me an annual profit of over $1,000. I now have fifty acres of bearing Satsumas. My three and four-year-old trees yield a profit of $300 to $400 per acre, and my annual income is over $18,000, and growing larger every year." Any person can get from five to twenty-five acres of choice land in the Demonstration Plantation FREE by having oranges or figs and peaches planted on it. For particulars about this free land, address W. A. Roberts, Secretary, 339 Fifth Avenue, Block 203, Pittsburgh, Pa. If you can't go South yourself, an authorized company will plant your trees, care for them, and market the fruit for a share of the profit.

OUTLINES OF BIBLE STUDY

REVISED AND ENLARGED

BY G. DALLAS SMITH

FOR USE IN

BIBLE DRILLS, BIBLE READINGS, BIBLE CLASSES, PRAYER MEETINGS, AND HOME STUDY

A BRIEF DESCRIPTION

Outlines of Bible Study (Revised and Enlarged) is a book of one hundred and twenty pages, besides five full-page maps covering all Bible lands. It is printed in large, clear type, on good, heavy paper, and is substantially bound in stiff cloth.

The book contains seventeen drill lessons for use in Bible drills, Bible readings, or any other Bible class where it is desired to cover the entire scope of the Sacred Record in a short time.

Outlines of Bible Study is not a commentary in any sense of the word. It contains but few comments. It is not "literature" in the same sense that some object to literature. It rather guides one in his study that it may be intelligent and systematic.

PRICES

Single copy, prepaid, fifty cents; one dozen copies, prepaid, $5.50; twenty-five copies, not prepaid, $10; fifty copies, not prepaid, $18.50; one hundred copies, not prepaid, $35.

The Real Definition of Life is Nerve Force.

People often wonder what the difference really is between the living and dead body. Apparently nothing has been taken away, but still the complicated machinery of the body has stopped and cannot be started again. What is missing is "life," and the modern definition of life is "nerve force."

This nerve force must be distributed regularly all over the body. Directly it does not run smoothly, ill health will follow.

Dr. Miles Nervine benefits the health by evening up the distribution of this vital force of life and by taking all the "jars and jolts" out of the system.

In this conjunction the Rev. C. H. Cox, of Mason City, W. Va., has stated: "I have found Dr. Miles' Nervine to be unexcelled in all nervous disorders, and I have always recommended it to any one whom I hear is suffering in this way. We also always keep Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills on hand, as we feel they are invaluable. No words can truly express the real merit of Dr. Miles' Restorative Remedies."

Dr. Miles' Nervine can be used with advantage in all ailments which have a nervous origin or which have affected the nervous system. It is particularly beneficial in case of sleeplessness, nervousness, epilepsy, hysteria, chronic headache, and neuralgia.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is on sale at all drug stores, and is strictly guaranteed to benefit you or your money will be refunded by the druggist.

The Master's Vineyard

Alabama.

Flomaton, January 20.—On the second Sunday in this month I spoke twice to the West Side congregation, in Pensacola, Fla., with good crowds and fine attention. This is Brother Tracy's home congregation, and he is doing well here, being held in high esteem by both church and people. In the afternoon I visited the mission that Brother Tracy carries on in the southwest part of the city and heard him drill his Bible class. He is doing a splendid work at this place, too. He paid most of the house rent last year, in addition to carrying on the mission work. Another thing I notice is that when both preacher and congregation love the truth, the preacher never plays out nor grows old. The brethren at Pensacola love Brother Tracy as greatly as they ever did, and most of his life as a preacher has been spent there.

C. PETTY.

California.

Corcoran, January 25.—On the first Lord's day in this month I was with the church at Exeter, and we had, as usual, a good, spiritual service. The more I see of this people, the more I learn to love them. On the second Lord's day I was at Fresno, and at the close of the discourse a lady made the good confession and was immersed at once. She is the mother of several children, a very intelligent lady, and her faithfulness will mean the winning of her children and her husband to Christ. This is a fine congregation. The third Lord's day I was with the faithful at Hanford. We had a pleasant service and enjoyed the day. I believe I mentioned that Brother Larimore has a daughter living here. She is well and is looking well, Brother Larimore, and is very faithful to the Lord. May the Lord bless these churches.

L. D. PERKINS.

Canada.

Carman, Manitoba, January 16.—Brother W. F. Neal, evangelist of the church of Christ, Winnipeg, Manitoba, began a meeting with the church here on November 21 and continued it over four weeks, preaching thirty discourses. Brother Neal's preaching was among the finest we ever listened to, setting forth the word of God in its simplicity and purity, which, connected with his earnestness and sincerity as a man of God, carried the preaching home to our hearts, making an impression which, we trust, will not soon wear away. Although there were no additions as regards members, yet there was much addition to our faith and the church was greatly encouraged. Brother Neal hews right to the line in a fearless manner, yet in love.

H. A. ROGERS.

Florida.

Bunnell, January 21.—Mrs. White and I reached here last Saturday after a very pleasant trip via Knoxville, Tenn., where I preached on Wednesday night. If you do not want to have longing desires to return, you better not go to Knoxville. Our stay was only too short. The meeting began here on Lord's-day night in a store house, as our tent was not here. Crowds increasing so far. The tent is now up and has been used twice. Only one family, Brother J. G. Malphurs and wife, have been breaking bread since September. A young brother joined them lately. Some others we hope to enlist, and pray to be able to baptize some and establish a congregation. Pray for us.

R. C. WHITE.

Georgia.

Atlanta, January 24.—Good reports from all the places of worship Sunday. Bearden was at Ingleside in the afternoon and at West End at night; Smelser was at Golden Hill in the forenoon; Garrett was at East Point morning and evening; the writer was at West End in the forenoon, at the Western Heights mission in the afternoon, and at South Pryor at night, with one confession. The attendance at all the places is increasing. Brumit was at Buchanan and at Pleasant View.

S. H. HALL.

Trenton, January 22.—My four years' work with the church at Sheffield, Ala., closed with December. The time was pleasantly and profitably spent, some success being attained for the Master's cause. The growth was gradual, nothing exciting at any time. New members were added each year. We did not succeed in getting together enough to subtract any, which some thought should have been done. There was something over one thousand dollars paid out for improvements on the church property, besides my support for full time, except one day in each week which it was my pleasure to spend with the faithful and true band at Tusculumbia, in preparing a lesson in the forenoon, visiting and talking from house to house in the afternoon, and conducting the Bible study and prayer meeting at night. There were seven mission meetings held in the country around, one in South Florence, and one in South Sheffield. Some of the members gave monthly to missions, and a part of the time a monthly offering from the congregation was taken to help somewhere else. We also started a new congregation in South Sheffield that is doing well. They are meeting at present from house to house, but planning to build a meeting-house in the near future. I am now at Trenton in answer to a call from the brethren to help them preach the gospel in Dade County and other near-by places. What a noble example! If other churches will just follow, who can estimate the good that can be done? Support a man for all of his time, not to preach to you, but to those you cannot preach to personally, but can preach to indirectly through him.

Knoxville, January 18.—Since our last report we have received thirty-seven dollars for our seat fund. We are thankful to the givers of these gifts. Our seats will be here this month, and we are very anxious to have all the money so we can save twenty or thirty dollars by paying cash for them. The congregations everywhere ought to feel a deep interest in the work here, if for no other reason than that the State University is located here. Give this your serious consideration and let us hear from you soon. Brother R. C. White preached for us last week when we had come together for prayer meeting. Brother White gave a splendid lesson on a practical line for the church. Brother Marshall preached for us on Sunday evening. He is also an able preacher and gave a good lesson.

T. B. CLARK.

Big Springs, January 16.—I am now teaching school at this place. I teach a Bible class and preach on Sunday in the schoolhouse. I will visit my family and preach for the church at Cleveland once each month. The church house at Cleveland is assured. The sisters, led by Sister J. M. Carl, have been hauling rock to make a concrete foundation. The congregation has the lot paid for, but will have to borrow the money to erect the house. I feel sure that there are a number of brethren who have means, who, if they realized the importance of assisting the cause at Cleveland, would gladly do so. I am glad that churches have helped Knoxville. Now, Cleveland is between Knoxville and Chattanooga. Why not put the church in Cleveland upon its feet by helping them build their house? They are doing what could reasonably be expected of them. The restrictive clause is in the deed. It is just like putting money in the bank to invest in this worthy cause. It will return to you with interest. Brother, sister, can we persuade you to take stock? Send a donation to J. M. Carl, Cleveland, Tenn. If you are not able to send any means, pray that others may send, and work to answer your prayers. FRED M. LITTLE.

Texas.

Fort Worth, January 14.—I have been at West Dallas for a few nights and had a nice time. Some as faithful Christians as I ever met worship at West Dallas. HORACE W. BUSBY.

Six-Year-Old Had Croup.

"I have a little girl six years old who has a great deal of trouble with croup," writes W. E. Curry, of Evansville, Ind. "I have used Foley's Honey and Tar, obtaining instant relief for her. My wife and I also use it; and I will say it is the best cure for a bad cold, cough, throat trouble, and croup that I ever saw." Those terrible coughs that seem to tear one to pieces yield to Foley's Honey and Tar.

SECONDHAND BOOKS.

We maintain a regular department of secondhand books, and in this we are offering a rare opportunity for young preachers and others who want to start a library. We have rare opportunities for collecting old and rare books and standard commentaries and reference works at low prices. Most of the encyclopedias and other sets offered below are, for practical purposes, as good as new, some of them barely soiled. Prices are seldom as much as one-half the price of new. It is best to write us at once regarding any book desired in the following list, as calls for different books keep our list constantly changing. Memphis Notes.

BY W. HALLIDAY TRICE.

The cause of the Master is moving along nicely in Memphis. The congregation that has been worshipping in the home of Brother E. R. Wright, on Lauderdale Street, since our tent meeting out there last September, has secured the use of the school building on Olive Street. They are having splendid crowds at their services and are very happy in their new quarters. Brother J. A. Cullon, recently of Oklahoma, is now located in Memphis and is doing a splendid work. He preaches regularly for the congregation which meets at the Odd Fellows' Building on Sunday morning, for the brethren at Highland Heights in the afternoon, and at Olive Street at night. The cause is thriving at all of these places. Brother R. H. Bunner, formerly of West Virginia, is also located in Memphis now. He preaches each Sunday morning and evening for the congregation in New South Memphis. Brother Bunner is a hustler and is doing a good work. Our venerable brother, E. C. L. Denton, has returned from an extended visit to Texas and is giving a part of his time to the work on Walker Avenue. The work at Walker is doing well. We are certainly glad to have these preaching brethren here, and trust that with their assistance we may do a great year's work in 1916. The work at Harbert Avenue is prospering. Of course, some of the brethren who formerly worshiped with us have gone to other places of worship; but as others have come in, we still have as many as we have ever had at our services and the interest is good. On the first Sunday night in this month a gentleman abandoned the Baptist denomination and took his stand with us. For the convenience of some brethren who cannot attend services in the forenoon, we have the Lord's Supper at the evening service at Harbert Avenue, New South Memphis, and Olive Street. So Christians who live in Memphis or who are visiting or just passing through can have the privilege of commemorating the Lord's death at Harbert Avenue, Odd Fellows' Building, and New South Memphis at the forenoon service; at Highland Heights and Walker Avenue in the afternoon; and at the three places already mentioned in the evening. We extend a cordial welcome to all visitors. We will appreciate it if brethren away from here will write us the names and addresses of members who have recently moved here, that we may look them up and get them located with some of the congregations. My address is 2260 Vinton Avenue.

"Not Looking Each of You to His Own Things."

An old reader contained the story of an old German who gave a peach to his wife and to each of his four sons. The next day he asked the boys to tell what they did with them. The eldest said he had eaten his, but kept the stone to plant, so that he could have many to eat. The next said he had eaten his, thrown the stone away, and then had helped his mother eat hers. The third said he had sold his for enough to buy several more, besides finding the stone his brother had thrown away and eating the kernel. The fourth boy seemed ashamed to tell what he had done with his, but finally with blushes told how he had taken it to a friend who was sick. The friend refused to take it, so he left it on the bed and ran away. It is not hard for children reading this story to tell which one was unselfish. The men and women whose memories are most highly cherished are those who have given themselves unselfishly and devotedly to some noble cause.

How Jesus "Emptied Himself."

This is a well-chosen figure. It means he put off the shining raiment of a heavenly prince and put on the lowly garb of the Carpenter of Nazareth. Dr. Jowett gives us a fine illustration of this thought: "A little while ago a great cricketer, whose tremendous bowling is known throughout the whole world, might have been seen in a tiny garden, playing ericket with a little fellow not five years old. But the swift bowler had emptied himself and was tossing the lightest, gentlest balls to suit the feebleness of his little mate." If Jesus Christ had come as a great prince or prophet, he might have terrified and paralyzed the very people whom he came to save.

Earthy rulers count their thrones things to be grasped. They hold on to them so long as their powers last. They wade through rivers of blood, destroying the lives of innocent people that their thrones may remain intact. And finally, when the grim reaper cuts them down, they have it arranged beforehand that the scepter shall be wielded by one of their immediate family. But Jesus "humbled himself." The religion of Jesus Christ is the only one in the world that teaches humility. John Wesley wrote: "The Roman language, even with all the improvements of the Augustan Age, does not afford so much as a name for humility; nor was one found in all the copious language of the Greeks till it was made by the great apostle."

None the Less a King.

If you will search your Encyclopeda Britannica, you will find that Peter the Great of Russia, in order to teach and uplift the Russian people, entered the army himself as a private soldier, worked for wages as a ship carpenter lived among the workmen in a small two-roomed hut. He learned personally nearly all that he wanted to know—gunnery at Konigsberg, ship-building at Deptford, anatomy at Leyden, engraving at Amsterdam. There is still another example of a king leaving his palace and all the insignia of a king, his decorations and his magnificence, to go among his people, among the poor and sick, to learn their needs and give them aid, as was done at Messina after the earthquake. The king was just as really their king then as when he sat upon his throne; but he did not have the appearance of a king, but the form and appearance of a common man, a helper, a doctor, a nurse. Albert, king of the Belgians, does not sit upon his throne; but there isn't a subject at home or in exile but who does not consider him the noblest king alive to-day. These historical examples help us to understand and appreciate Paul's matchless description of heaven's exiled King.

The Name and the Kingdom.

Paul says in Heb. 10: 12: "But he, when he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down on the right hand of God." In anticipation of that time he said to the apostles in the commission: "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth." And the first time they stood up to preach, Peter said: "Let all the house of Israel therefore know assuredly, that God hath made him both Lord and Christ, this Jesus whom ye crucified." His name then began its power, for it marks the time when he took his seat on his mediatorial throne and was bequeathed the scepter. The reign of Christ on earth began on the day of Pentecost. The significance and power of his name shall continue through all the centuries of the Christian dispensation in which we are now living until the time when the purposes of his reign have been accomplished and he hands over the kingdom to his Father. "For he must reign, till he hath put all his enemies under his feet." (1 Cor. 15: 25.) To ignore the name of Christ is to repudiate his mediatorship between God and man, to seek to pull the crown from his head, the scepter from his hand, and to dethrone him as the rightful ruler and lawgiver, priest and prophet of the world.

Why We Should Pray in Jesus' Name.

Christ's name became the all-prevailing name after and not before his death. There was a time when it was not necessary to pray or make petition in the name of Christ. Jesus refers to that time in John 16: 24: "Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name." What we call the Lord's Prayer makes no mention of Christ. It ends: "For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever. Amen." Even that is an interpolation, for Luke makes it end: "And bring us not into temptation." This omission makes the Lord's Prayer an invalid prayer to us unless the name of Christ is added in some way. A Christless prayer now is no prayer at all and has no assurance of an answer. Parents teach their children to say: "Now I lay me down to sleep." It is a very beautiful sentiment, but it is not a prayer unless it is closed by the phrase, "in his name." For Jesus said: "No one cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14: 6.) Again: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, If ye shall ask anything of the Father, he will give it you in my name." Paul clinches the matter by writing: "And whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him." (Col. 3: 17.)

Children's Prayers for Morn and Night.

In lieu of the usual prayer verse for children which ends abruptly, "I pray the Lord my soul to take," making no reference to Jesus' name, I suggest the following as being more appropriate and suitable for morn and night:

"As, O Lord, I rise from sleep,
My soul, this day, in safety keep;
If death draw nigh, do not forsake;
May I of heavenly life partake.
And this I ask for Jesus' sake."

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.
And this I ask for Jesus' sake."

It would be far better to encourage the children, however, to address the Heavenly Father in their own language, expressing their desires in a perfectly natural way. There is no better proof of his condescending tenderness than that he bows down his ear to catch the faintest whisper of a little child. Have ye never read, "Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?"

A Man Sent from God and a Monster.

BY DAVID LIPSCOMB, JR.

"There was a man sent from God, whose name was John." There was a monster sent by Satan, whose name was "Herod." The Herods were all a pretty bad lot, except, perhaps, the last, Herod Agrippa II., before whom Paul made his wonderful plea.

The first Herod was the worst. His father, Antipater, came to Jerusalem from Edom, or Idumea. He was a cunning politician. His son, Herod the Great, by marriage and murder made himself king of the Jews. In order to please the Jews, he rebuilt their temple; and to please his Roman master, he carved the initials of the republic, S. P. Q. R., over the main entrance. He was bootlick to each succeeding dictator, Pompey, Caesar, Cassius, Antony, and Augustus, and enjoyed the "thrill that follows fawning." His hideous cruelty toward his own family is only surpassed by the slaughter of the two thousand little children at Bethlehem. He put to death his Jewish wife, Miriamne, and her three sons, the last one only five days before his own death. Augustus, on hearing of the execution of the first two, said he would rather be one of Herod's swine than one of his sons.

John, who came in the spirit and power of Elijah, had a career in part like that of the rugged Fishbite. He came to prepare the way of the Messiah; and after that work was done, he needs must, like Stephen, later on find other work to do. He found it in plenty, rebuking sin in places low and high. The times were evil, wickedness was rife. The world needed to be reprov'd "of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment."

John found his Ahab in Herod, the tetrarch, who had married his undecayed brother Philip's wife, but altogether with said Herodias' consent. Herodias, like Jezebel, verified the then unwritten line that "the female of the species is more deadly than the male." John could not or would not run away as did Elijah, and soon found himself in jail without the stigma, as many an honorable man has, the victim of malice and tyranny, from Naboth to Robert Emmet. Magna Charta and habeas corpus had no force in those despotic times. Herod "observed" him—that is, kept him in the dungeon of his capital, Tiberias, out of the reach, as he thought, of the fierce tigress, Herodias. His care of John was partly policy and partly mercy.

The baffled queen bided her time, and at the king's birthday feast shamelessly brought out her beautiful daughter as a natch girl to dance before the drunken king, who promised with an oath, a drunkard's oath, that was of more value in his eyes than a prophet's life, that he would give her whatsoever she might ask; and she, "being instructed by her mother," demanded the head of the man of whom the Master said: "Among them that are born of women there hath not arisen a greater."

A swordsman was sent to the jail, and presently returned with the gory head and presented it to the damsel—the dainty, dancing damsel—who got it out of sight as quickly as possible by handing it over to her mother. We can visualize Herodias gloating over this trophy like Antony's wife did over the lean and bony head of Cicero, piercing with bodkins the tongue that had inveighed against her husband, or the Parthian queen, Tamyris, filling the mouth of Crassus with molten gold. John's body, sine nomine corpore, lay on the prison floor till his disciples took it away and buried it, and then in their grief went and told

We have no further account of Herodias. Whether, like Lady Macbeth, she suffered remorse unspeakable, we know not. But Herod saw ghosts, I am sure. From what he says of Christ we can get an idea of what was going on in his mind. "This is John the Baptist, whom I beheaded." And when his courtiers, to calm him, said it was Elijah or one of the prophets, Herod said: "No, it is John the Baptist, whom I beheaded." No doubt in the night watches that stern visage came up before him and in his ears rang the words of the man of God: "It is not lawful for thee to have her." Perhaps, too, like King Macbeth, he would see the bloody head reappear at every banquet until he was almost driven mad. He wanted to see Jesus to verify his belief in John's resurrection, or mayhap to lay the ghost. Christ, who was neither afraid nor flattered, sent him a message that must have caused his ears to tingle: "Go ye, and tell that fox, Behold, I cast out devils, and I do cures to-day and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be perfected."

I am sure Herod was still haunted by his idea of John's coming back to life when he refused to pass sentence on Christ and shifted the responsibility back on Pilate, just as Pilate had tried to put it, under the guise of judicial courtesy, on him. There was too much innocent blood upon his hands already. Neither of these worthies, the cowardly Roman and the conscience-stricken king, remained in office long after the death of Christ. Pilate was called back to Rome in disgrace, and it is said that he suicided in the Swiss mountains. Herod was deposed about 4 A.D. His record is black, his memory shall rot, while John's, like the pathway of the just, "shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

A View of the Church.

BY W. T. BREEDLOVE.

I love thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode;
The church our blest Redeemer saved
With his own precious blood.

I love thy church, O God;
Her walls before thee stand,
Dear as the apple of thine eye,
And graven on thy hand.

For her my tears shall fall,
For her my prayers ascend,
To her my toils and cares be given
Till toils and cares shall end.

Beyond my highest joy
I prize her heavenly ways,
Her sweet communion, solemn vows,
Her hymns of love and praise.

1. When the Christian poet wrote these beautiful lines, he was not thinking of, nor did he speak of, a house like this one in which we have met to worship—a house composed of planks and shingles and nails; nor was he speaking of a more pretentious one, such as we sometimes see in the towns and cities, composed of brick and mortar or of stone and mortar, and ornamented with sky-piercing steeple and dome of brass. Such a building is sometimes called the house of God, but it is a misnomer. Paul says that "the Lord of heaven and earth" "dwelleth not in temples made with hands." (Acts 17: 24.) Solomon said: "Behold, the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded?" (1 Kings 8: 27.) Jehovah has said: "Do not I fill heaven and earth?" (Jer. 23: 24.) Do you ask, "Was not the temple called the house of God?" I answer, Yes. The temple was God's typical house. It was a type, not of church buildings which Christians now erect for their own convenience and comfort, but of the church of the living God, composed of the living men and women, boys and girls, who through faith have given their hearts to God and their lives to his service, together with the spirits of the departed, whose robes were, like ours, washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb. I hope you get the thought that the building in the poet's mind and in mine is not a building composed of inanimate, lifeless material, and, therefore, an inanimate and lifeless building, but a building composed of living material, and, therefore, a living building whose sacrifices and services, unlike the bloody and ritualistic sacrifices and services of the temple, are spiritual, rich, and living. The apostle Peter said to the Jewish Christians: "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." (1 Pet. 2: 5.) Paul, in writing to the Hebrews, says: "By him therefore let us offer the sacrifices of praise to God continually, the fruit of our lips giving thanks to his name." (Heb. 13: 15.)

2. Returning to the lines of the poet, we note the fact that he makes the term, "thy kingdom," equal to the term, "the house of thine abode," and the term, "the house of thine abode," equal to the term, "the church our blest Redeemer saved." It is a well-established principle that things equal to the same thing are equal to each other. Dropping modifying terms, we have: (1) "House" is explanatory of "kingdom" and is, therefore, equal to "kingdom." (2) "Church" is explanatory of "house" and is, therefore, equal to "house." (3) "Kingdom" and "church" are each equal to "house." Therefore "kingdom" and "church" are equal to each other. Now, let us hear Paul in his letter to the Ephesian Christians. "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners." This language implies they had been foreigners and strangers. This is true. They had been dead in trespasses and in sins, but God had made them alive in Christ. They had been without Christ; they had been aliens from the commonwealth of Israel; they had been strangers from the covenant of promise; they had been without God, and without hope in the world; "but now," says Paul, "ye who sometimes were afar off are made nigh by the blood of Christ." (See Eph. 2: 1-19.) "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints." Being fellow-citizens with the saints, they were of necessity citizens of the same government. Paul said to the Colossian Christians: "Who [the Father] hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son." (Col. 1: 13.) From this it is clearly seen that Paul and the Colossian Christians were in "the kingdom of God's dear Son," and, therefore, citizens of that kingdom. The Ephesian Christians were fellow-citizens with them, and, therefore, were in "the kingdom of God's dear Son." Let us read again: "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." God's household is his family. His family includes his children—all of them. Paul, writing to Timothy, says: "These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly: but if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth." (1 Tim. 3: 14, 15.) Here, evidently, "house of God" means the family of God, and is declared to be "the church of the living God." God's family includes every child of God; and since the family of God is the church of God, it follows, of necessity, that the church of God includes every child of God. We have already seen that the kingdom and the church are equal. Therefore the kingdom includes every child of God.

3. If we look at this divine institution from the governmental standpoint, it is a kingdom, Christ is the King, and his will as expressed in his word is the law of the kingdom.

4. If we look at it from the standpoint of worldly relation, it is the church, the called-out ones who have been called out of the world, sanctified and set apart to the service of God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

5. If we look at it from the standpoint of a building, every citizen of the kingdom of God on the earth, every called-out one, every child of God, becomes a lively stone in the building which "groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord," and "buildeth together for a habitation of God through the Spirit."

6. If we look at it from the family standpoint, God is the Father, Jesus is the Elder Brother, and every obedient believer on earth is a child in this one divine family.

7. How significant, then, the words:

I love thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode;
The church our blest Redeemer saved
With his own precious blood!

To love the kingdom of God is to love God, to love his law, to love his people. The love of God and his law means adoration, allegiance, confidence, obedience—full, humble, loving, and trustful. To the extent that I am lacking in this obedience, to that extent I am unfaithful and underserving. To love the people of God means an unselfish interest in them, earnest prayer for them, an ever-ready helpfulness in time of need, cheer and comfort in time of trouble.

I love thy church, O God;
Her walls before thee stand,
Dear as the apple of thine eye,
And graven on thy hand.

For her my tears shall fall,
For her my prayers ascend,
To her my toils and cares be given
Till toils and cares shall end.

O for the spirit and understanding in the singing of these lines! How it would warm our coldness into love and drive our carelessness and indifference toward each other all away! Soon the poet's dream would be realized and

Each would feel a brother's sigh,
And with him bear a part;
When sorrow would flow from eye to eye,
And joy from heart to heart,
Free from envy, scorn, and pride,
Our wishes all above,
Each would his brother's fallings hide,
And show a brother's love.

8. But let us read once more:

Beyond my highest joy
I prize her heavenly ways,
Her sweet communion, solemn vows,
Her hymns of love and praise.

Here again I am constrained to pray: O for the spirit and the understanding in the singing of these lines! May this spirit fill every Christian heart and manifest itself in every Christian life until careless and lukewarm Christians cease to neglect the assemblies of the saints, to take the back seats at church, or to answer the calls of duty with such words as these: "I pray thee, have me excused."

9. David said: "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" And nothing so binds the hearts and lives of Christians together, and so promotes the spirit of unity, harmony, and peace among them, as faithfulness in the service of the Master. Believing in the same Christ, loving and trusting the same Savior, obeying the same Lord, and walking in the light, the beautiful light, of the same blessed word, the word of God, it seems hardly possible for them to get very far apart. May God hasten the day when bickering and strife, party names and divisions, shall be no more, and disciples of a common Master shall sit down together at his feet, learn of him, imbibe his spirit, transcribe his life into their own, and peace, harmony, and good will shall prevail among them from the rivers to the ends of the earth.

The Prospects and Needs of the Putnam County Industrial School for Negroes.

At the request of David Lipscomb, one of the senior editors, Brethren J. S. Hammond and A. M. Burton recently paid a visit to the Putnam County Industrial School for Negroes, located at Silver Point, Tenn. Upon their return, Brother Burton sent us the following comprehensive report of the prospects and needs of this very deserving school, which we give to our readers in the hope that many of them may have fellowship in the support of the work:

On January 5, 1916, Brother Hammond and I went to Silver Point, a small place about seventy-five miles from Nashville, on the Tennessee Central Railroad. Probably about one hundred white and colored families live within a radius of two miles from the railroad station.

The property of the colored Bible school whose affairs we were to investigate consists of about eight acres of land, and is located about one mile from the station. The buildings, which are worth possibly one thousand dollars, are in very bad repair. There are now only nine boarding students, and that is more than they are prepared to properly care for.

From what I saw of the situation, it would probably be best to complete the residence the trustees have started for Brother Bowser (which could then accommodate from fifteen to twenty girls), repair the chapel building, and buy an adjoining tract of two acres with a two-room house (which would cost possibly two hundred and fifty dollars). I judge about seven hundred and fifty dollars would put the buildings now on the school grounds in good repair. Two or three hundred dollars additional could be well spent in providing machinery and tools for the use of the students.

They already have a printing press, and the faculty and students issue, at a small cost, a monthly paper known as "The Christian Echo." They also have a blacksmith shop and build wagons from the ground up. This work they could do much better with improved tools. Sewing machines for the girls are also needed, and some farming tools.

There is a white congregation of perhaps one hundred and twenty-five in the Silver Point community, but it is a rough country and those who live there are all poor in this world's goods. The white brethren speak in the highest terms of the colored school and of Brother Bowser's efforts, and especially of the marked improvement among the colored people of the community as a result of the school's influence.

Brethren Tim Williams and B. N. Whitefield, of the white congregation, met us at the train, and seemed to appreciate our visit and our interest in the colored school. I am sure they would gladly see to it that any funds we might see fit to contribute will be put to the best use possible, and also that they would give all the help they could themselves.

Two of the school trustees, Brethren Beasley and Clay, were present yesterday. They are both colored men, born into slavery and uneducated; but they are giving substantial encouragement to the education of the younger generation of their race.

The devotion of these ex-slaves impressed me more clearly than anything else that it is our Christian duty to help put the school on a self-sustaining basis. They have certainly been trying to teach the word of God under many disadvantages and among more trials and tribulations than anything I have ever witnessed.

Another thing they especially need is helpful books for their library, and I am sure these would be gladly contributed if an appeal for the same were made.

Our time was very limited in this investigation, as we made the round trip in a day; but from my observation, system and order in the school seem to be fair—as good as could be expected under the circumstances.

There is no market for any produce they might grow (except for their own use), and seemingly no demand for manufactured goods, except wagons such as they are now making.

Sectarian churches do not seem strong in the Silver Point community, either among white or colored population.

We would appreciate the kindness if our readers would send the names of all who are interested or contributions for the building fund to A. M. Burton, Life and Casualty Building, Nashville, Tenn.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Compiled by A. B. Lipscomb

Brother Sewell is steadily improving in health.

"The Gospel Advocate stands at the top of the list."—Roy Robinson, West Fork, Ark.

Brother Srygley is now in Memphis, Tenn. He will preach at Dresden, Tenn., next Sunday.

"I like the stand of the Gospel Advocate on all phases of materialism."—Thomas J. Bonner, Neosho, Mo.

We had an inspiring service at Russell Street Church, this city, Sunday. Two took membership and a young lady was baptized.

"I think the Gospel Advocate is getting better all the time. The special numbers are a treat."—J. F. Gipson, Haynesville, La.

From Mrs. M. G. Weaver, at Springfield, Mo.: "I am glad to know you have added Brother Larimore to your staff. He is a grand man."

M. L. Moore, of Franklin, Ky., is preaching at the Nashville Bible School this week. He lectures to the students each morning at the chapel service. Christians in and around Nashville should avail themselves of the opportunity to hear Brother Moore.

From J. P. Lowrey, at Senatobia, Miss.: "I am to meet J. R. G. Gregory in a four-days' debate, beginning on February 28, at Union Hill, about eight miles east of Tupelo, Miss. No place in all this great Southland is so much in need of gospel preachers as the great State of Mississippi. The brethren in Tate County are enthusiastic over the work planned for this year."

Charles Fremont Jones writes from Muskogee, Okla.: "The church here is of but six months' growth, but we have from twenty-five to forty names, all good and sound, and the future outlook is good. Stop off any time and see us and get acquainted." It is certainly encouraging to learn of the good start in this growing city of the West. Brother Jones lives at 319 North D Street.

J. S. Daugherty, Christian evangelist, of Elkhart, Texas, writes: "I wish to tell you how much I enjoyed the special numbers of the dear old Gospel Advocate during 1915, and how glad I was to learn that they are to be continued during this year also. Before filing the papers, I carefully read and mark each article 'good,' 'better,' 'best,' and 'very best.' I marked Brother Allen's 'Pretty Is as Pretty Does' and Brother Poe's 'Greeting to the Senior Editors,' in the issue of January 6, 'very good.'"

Now comes the good news that a few loyal souls have banded together in the great city of Pittsburgh, Pa. Hal P. McDonald writes concerning this work as follows: "Please say in the Gospel Advocate that there is a small congregation in this city. If any reader knows of members or persons here who should be meeting with us, please send me their address. One brother comes one hundred and nineteen miles nearly every Lord's day. There is room for a great work here, and the people are not so averse to New Testament claims. I am in school here and preach Sunday evenings." Brother McDonald's address is 222 Amanda Avenue, Mount Oliver.

C. H. Smithson, writing from Morrison, Tenn., sends us a brief summary of his last year's work, which follows: "Last year was a fine one with me. I held sixteen meetings, in which there were about one hundred and fifty additions, and received a good support, for which I am more than thankful. To God be all the praise. I am beginning my ninth year in the Master's vineyard with the fondest hopes of its being the best of all. I have time for a few spring meetings, and am anxious to hear from any one that desires my assistance. It is my intention to spend July and August in Texas, and I have some of that time yet to arrange. May God bless us all."

From W. L. Reeves, at Clemmons, N. C.: "I think the first number for this new year, the 'Review and Forward' Number, was simply excellent. The article by Brother David Lipscomb, senior editor, was par excellent. It contained much truth in few words. The articles by M. C. Kurfees, E. A. Elam, S. H. Hall, and A. B. Lipscomb are beneficial in many ways. They are replete with much food for thought. In fact, time spent in reading the Gospel Advocate is well worth the while. Success to you and all the staff of editors in the good work you are doing. I shall secure some new subscribers for it as soon as I can. So in this way you may count me as a helper in your good work."

From H. D. Jeffcoat, at Winona, Miss.: "I am sending two new subscribers. My wife and I think the paper worth many, many times what it costs, and we intend to take it as long as we live, if we can. If every member of the church would take and read the Gospel Advocate, all would be encouraged to do more for our Master and his church. There are only a few of us here (four heads of families), without any meetinghouse; but we meet each Lord's day from house to house, and we are going to support meetings in two places where the gospel has never been preached this year, if the Lord is willing. We are badly in need of a Bible-made preacher here to take the lead in this great work. We are weak and unlearned, but we will do the best we can until one sees fit to 'come over, and help us.' We would be glad to see all of the special numbers, together with Brother Elam's articles on Bible-made preachers, in a book. We will take one of them."

From Mrs. Attie Flintoff, Nashville, Tenn.: "Dear Brother 'A. B.': The Gospel Advocate grows so much better all the time and I enjoy it so much. Have often thought, 'I will write him a word of encouragement,' etc., but each time other duties pressed out the good intention. Yesterday I was enjoying to the fullest the 'Review and Forward' Number. I had just read Brother Elam's grand article, and thought: 'That is fine; I will write my appreciation of it.' I turned to the next, 'How to Make the Most of Life,' by 'A. B. L.' In the first line or two is this: 'The road to hell is paved with good intentions.' What a slap in the face! Thank you, I got it with full force; and here I sit, weak and nervous, trying to keep one block, at least, out of that pavement. Just as years past, when one day the babies were unusually fretful, cares seemed unusually heavy, tired and discouraged, I fell on the bed for a minute's rest, and taking up the Advocate, that had just come, about the first line my eyes fell upon was: 'Pray more and fret less.' Rebuked, ashamed, I burst into tears with the earnest prayer: 'O God, forgive me, and give me grace to conquer! I felt better after that. Thus for forty-five years the Advocate has come to my home to reprove, rebuke, encourage, and strengthen me; but never have I appreciated it so much as now, and since I have been too deaf to hear preaching. Particularly are the 'special' numbers fine. 'Home and Father and Mother' Number—O, well, they are all so good that I cannot say which is best. May God guide you and bless abundantly your every effort for good."

From J. O. Barnes, at Lake City, Fla.: "I wish for the dear old Gospel Advocate editors and brethren in the Lord a happy and prosperous new year, and that as a result of their ardent labors many souls may be saved and that every Christian may be built up in the most holy faith ere this year shall close. I love the Advocate for its loyalty to the truth and fairness in all matters discussed in its columns. For twenty years it has been a welcome visitor in our home each week. I have gained much Bible knowledge and edification from its clean and well-filled columns. All credit is due to the very efficient and godly editors, all of whom, doubtless, have imbibed to some extent the spirit of its senior editor, Brother David Lipscomb, the 'Stonewall Jackson' of this great Christian warfare, whose weapons are not of the flesh, but mighty before God to the casting down of strongholds.' (2 Cor. 10.) To him much credit is due for the safeguard which has been thrown around the priceless institution of God—the church of Christ—which has kept it from drifting with the tide of digression. We are glad that he still lives, and pray that he may yet live many more years to guide us in the way that is marked by the blood of the sinless Son of God. Brethren in the Lord, let us take courage and go forward in this great conflict with sin and Satan with the war whoop, 'Victory in the name of Christ,' who is our Captain, whose orders come from heaven, and, with the blood-stained banner of Prince Immanuel waving high above the camp of Satan, fight 'the good fight' even until death, at which time we can ascend to the top of Pisgah and from her lofty height (when our eyes grow dim in death and we fail to recognize the loved ones who stand by our couch with bursting hearts and dripping eyes, when our tongues fail to speak even a word in response to those so anxiously sought) we can by faith look across the river of death, even through the pearly portals of glory, and behold the crown of life which awaits all who have loved his appearing; then, after the judgment, we will enter into the city of God, and he will wipe away all tears from our eyes, and we will rally around the throne of God and bask in the sunshine of his presence, and, abiding in his love, we will sing hallelujahs throughout endless ages of eternity. 'What a meeting that will be' in that land of song, over where the angels sing!"

The Church of Christ—Lesson V.

3. The importance of being members of it.

As learned in Lesson III., the church is not only called "the church of Christ" and "the church of God," but it is spoken of as "the body of Christ," "the kingdom of heaven," "the house of God," the "sheepfold," and the Lamb's bride. (See again 1 Cor. 1: 2; Rom. 16: 16; 1 Tim. 3: 15; Eph. 1: 22, 23; Matt. 16: 18, 19; John 10: 16; Rom. 7: 4; Rev. 19: 6-9.) The importance of being members of this glorious institution is now before us. Let us enter the study earnestly praying that we may be the ones spoken of in Ps. 25: 14. Let us turn now and read it. It is taught by some that you can be saved out of the church Christ built. We want the truth in this matter.

(1) Looking at the church as a house, we see Christ as the foundation. (See 1 Cor. 3: 11.) May I ask, How may I rest on him as the rock foundation and refuse to become a part of this building?

(2) Looking at the church as Christ's body, may I ask, How can I sustain that living, vital connection with him that my soul so much needs, if I do not become a member of his body, the church, that is thus *vital*ly connected with him? Do you see? Every member, every part of my body is vitally connected with my head. Sever one of these members from my body, and this vital connection with the head is broken. Just so with Christ. Never can you live in a loving, living, vital connection with him without becoming a part of the body of which he is head. Are you surprised, then, to read that God "gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all?" (Eph. 1: 22, 23.)

(3) As a kingdom, we see Christ as King. Tell me now, can I submit to him as King and refuse to become a citizen of his kingdom? The only way that we can let him reign over us is to become a citizen of the kingdom over which he reigns. To refuse to thus become a citizen is to refuse, therefore, to let him reign over us. (Luke 19: 14, 27; Matt. 23: 13.) In connection with the above references, read Eph. 2: 19 and you will see that those who ceased to be "foreigners" became "fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." No, never can you stay out of the church and be saved or reconciled to God. Read verse 16 in this same chapter, and there you see we are reconciled to God (called back to him) in the body, which is his church. To refuse, therefore, to enter the church is to refuse to be reconciled to God. Do you wonder, then, at the second chapter of Acts closing with these significant words: "The Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved?"

(4) The Bible emphatically affirms that salvation is placed in Zion. (See Isa. 46: 13.) But turn now to Heb. 12: 22-24, and you learn that Mount Zion is "the church of the firstborn" (Christ), "the city of the living God," "the heavenly Jerusalem." And, too, please to note as you read that people, in coming unto it, came to the place where God, Christ, and the blood of Christ are to be found and enjoyed. And more, when they came to this "church of the firstborn" (Christ), they received a kingdom that cannot be moved. (See verse 28.) Away, then, with the idea that you can be saved out of the church!

(5) But looking at it as a sheepfold, it is positively affirmed that those who enter are the ones who will be saved. (See John 10: 9.)

(6) Christ is the High Priest and Intercessor for the people. But where does he serve as such? The Bible says, most emphatically, that he is such "over the house of God," which is the church. (Heb. 10: 21.) He serves not as priest and intercessor out of his church. Then, to come into his church is to have him to ever live at the Father's right hand to make intercession for us. How soul-stirring is the thought that Jesus now is at the Father's right hand thinking of me, interceding for me because I am a member of his body, the church! (See, also, Heb. 7: 25; 9: 24; Rom. 8: 34.) Connect with this all-important fact Paul's declaration that Christ is the "Savior of the body." (Eph. 5: 23; Acts 20: 28.) The church is the thing that is to be saved; hence, if you want to be among the number of the saved, become a faithful member of that which is to be saved.

(7) In conclusion, allow me to say that we can never become so morally good that we do not need to enter the church for salvation. As proof of this, I call your attention to Cornelius. Turn to Acts 10: 1, 2 and note what a splendid character he was. Then read the same chapter, verses 3-7, 22, also chapter 11, verses 13, 14, and you will see that God sent an angel, a warning angel, to tell him to send for Peter and let him tell him what he ought to do, words whereby he and his house should be saved. If this man was not saved out of the church, how can you hope to be? Note that up to the time of Cornelius' conversion the apostles and other Jewish brethren thought they had no right to the salvation that comes by becoming a member of the church of Christ. (See Acts 10: 28; 11: 1-18.) God worked three miracles to forever establish the fact that they have the right; hence Peter's significant words in Acts 10: 47. Baptism into the church of Christ had been forbidden them. God worked these miracles to show they had the right as much so as did the Jews. Too, read what Paul has to say on the same subject in Eph. 3: 4-6.

But enough. Christ said: "Upon this rock I will build my church." Do you believe, dear student, that he was talking of building a nonessential—a thing out of which you can be saved as well as in it? The Lord bless you in seeing how good it is to your soul to be housed in the church of the living God, in that kingdom that cannot be moved.

"Sick About Questionings."

Brother F. O. Howell writes as follows in the Gospel Message of January 1:

I know a man who rarely ever attends worship on the first day of the week, who has no influence for good among those whom he knows, who gives practically nothing to the support of the cause, whose life has been to the congregation of which he is a member a great reproach in the eyes of the world, who has never been worth anything to the cause where he lived or elsewhere as to that matter, but who has written as much possibly as any man among us on the "fuss about understanding the design" of baptism and who is now riding the "Sunday-school hobby." It seems to be the height of such brethren's ambition to sow discord among a united brotherhood. Such characters ought to be discountenanced, and men who write only for the sake of making a fuss should not write at all.

Sad indeed is the above description. Before I would say that such men ought to be discountenanced, I would suggest that a faithful effort be made to save them—an effort in which gentleness, forbearance, and true brotherly love are shown. Here Brother Howell, I am quite sure, will agree with me. But the Scriptures certainly teach that such men as described are not to be forever let go in their dirty work. Paul, in 1 Tim. 6: 4, 5, speaks of men who are "sick about questionings." The word translated by our word "doting" is translated, in the marginal reading, with our word "sick;" by others, by our word "distracted." Take any man who becomes "distracted" or "sick" over his hobby—for they ever make the question over which they are sick a hobby—and he becomes the character described in verse 4—viz., envious, having evil surmisings and evil suspicions, full of strife, a wrangler, a railer, and who will resort to anything to carry his point. In Tit. 3: 9-11 such characters are spoken of, and with such we are taught how to deal.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

"Is the World Growing Better?"

In a recent issue of the Gospel Advocate a number of brethren engaged in a "Round Table" discussion of the above question. The articles were forceful, interesting, and somewhat varied. The general trend of the articles pointed to an affirmative answer, though there were several provisos and explanations. Some expressed the thought that the question was hard to settle. This, no doubt, is true. Some nice distinctions were made between growing better radically and relatively, spiritually and morally. This writer does not wish to be a pessimist, and would be glad to say positively he was sure the world is growing better, but is afraid to so assert. There are so many factors entering into the settlement of this question, and so many of which we may have very inadequate knowledge, that we all might profitably speak with modesty.—John T. Hinds, in Firm Foundation.

Brother Hinds further observes that "the question is not if the world will be growing better in fifty or a hundred years from now, but is, is the world growing better? Is it growing better now?" Doubtless the purport of the question is, is the world better now than it was in the days of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob? It is probable the world grows in goodness as does an individual. An individual may be better now than he was ten years ago, yet he may be tempted and fall at this exact moment. Still, he gets up now more quickly with his eyes on the cross of Christ than he did ten years ago. So the world may be better now than it was fifty years ago, and yet it may be worse now than it was two years ago. But from its present backsliding it will rise to greater purity than it ever enjoyed before. The general trend may be onward and upward to the mountain top of a consecrated and perfected life. It may be steadily progressing onward and upward to where the snows of purity forever gleam in the glow of heaven, and yet there are seasons of retrogression and seasons of progression. Man does not grow all good or bad in a night. It is a conflict, a stubborn and everlasting fight with the powers of darkness. It is only through the grace of God that we conquer at last. Longfellow declares:

Saint Augustine! well hast thou said,
That of our vices we can frame
A ladder, if we will but tread
Beneath our feet each deed of shame!

All common things, each day's events,
That with the hour begin and end,
Our pleasures and our discontents,
Are rounds by which we may ascend.

We have not wings, we cannot soar;
But we have feet to scale and climb
By slow degrees, by more and more,
The cloudy summits of our time.

In our pessimism we forget the sins, vices, and excesses of the past. The Bible reveals to us some of the horrible crimes of the best people God could find in the patriarchal age. We are dazed and shocked more than tongue or pen can tell when the worst people of this age commit crimes no more revolting than David committed.

I quote from "Reminiscences of Scottish Life and Character," by Dean Ramsey. In his chapter on "Old Scottish Conviviality," pages 89, 90, he relates the following: "Now, of all the anecdotes and facts which I have collected, or of all which I have ever heard to illustrate the state of Scottish society in the past times, as regards its habits of intemperance, this assuredly surpasses them all: Of two well-known, distinguished, and leading clergymen in the middle of the eighteenth century, one, who had 'obtained much respect' and 'achieved the prominence of great citizenship in religion' is described as an enormous drinker of claret; the other, an able leader of a powerful section in the church, is described as owing his influence to his power of meeting the conviviality of the times. Suppose for a moment a future biographer should write in this strain of eminent divines, and should apply to distinguished members of the Scottish Church in 1863 such description as the following: 'Dr. — was a man who took a leading part in all church affairs at this time, and was much looked up to by the evangelical section of the General Assembly; he could always carry off without difficulty his five bottles of claret. Dr. — had great influence in society, and led the opposite party in the General Assembly, as he could take his place in all companies and drink on fair terms at the most convivial tables!' " This to us seems so monstrous that it is hard to believe such a condition possible.

The same author recites an anecdote concerning a learned judge. He says: "A case of some great offense was tried before him, and the counsel pleaded extenuation for his client in that he was drunk when he committed the offense. 'Drunk!' exclaimed Lord Hermand, in great indignation; 'if he could do such a thing when he was drunk, what might he not have done when he was sober!' evidently implying that the normal condition of human nature, and its most hopeful one, was a condition of intoxication."

The Scotch were no worse than the English and other nationalities in that age of the world. It is folly in our despondency to deify the goodness of the past.

The Church.

Christ loved the church and gave himself for it. The church is the concentrated wisdom, goodness, and power of God. James B. Duke, who has promised to give one hundred thousand dollars a year to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as long as he lives, recently declared: "The church is the most permanent influence for good in the world, and I know of no way I can do so much good with my money as I can in bestowing it on the church." The man who is giving his time, energy, and means to the church of God is in earnest about being a Christian. He is not turning away from the church of Christ to human organizations to work in and through them. Loving Christ with all his soul, mind, body, and strength, he knows that he can do more good by working in the church than he can in any human institution, no matter how good it is.

Ended in the Flesh.

The Western Recorder says:

New schemes for reforming men, schemes earnestly advocated, are continually coming up. How many more such schemes will be tried, only to end with failure, before men learn that not one soul can be reformed, much less a city or a nation, without the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit? Regeneration must precede all true reformation.

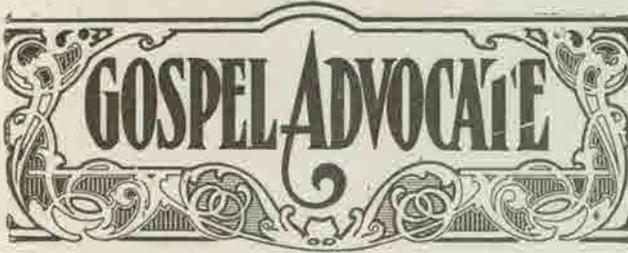

It is indeed sad that some who began in the Spirit have ended in the flesh. Such contend that Jesus is coming again in the flesh to rule with a rod of iron for a thousand years in the city of Jerusalem. These schemers have a fleshly Jesus reigning over men in the flesh. Paul teaches: "Wherefore we henceforth know no man after the flesh: even though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now we know him so no more." (2 Cor. 5: 16.)

Elaborate Machinery.

The Presbyterian scores a good point on its own denomination. The Western Recorder quotes approvingly and puts Baptists on their guard concerning the same point. The Presbyterian says:

The boards have grown into such elaborate machines that much of the time and much of the money has been spent in secretaries and conventions and conferences until the actual work and the worker become insignificant.

SPECIAL DIRECTIONS.

Subscriptions are $1.50 a year, in advance, including postage to any part of the United States. To Canada and foreign countries, $2 a year, in advance.

The Date on the Yellow Label on your paper serves you as a receipt, and indicates the time to which your subscription is paid. When you renew, if the date is not changed within three weeks thereafter, please call our attention to it.

Discontinuances. No paper will be continued over twelve months after the subscription has expired. This will give all ample time to renew.

Payment for the Advocate, when sent by mail, should be made by post-office money order, express money order, registered letter, New York exchange, or postal note. Neither currency nor coin should be sent in a letter, unless registered; and when so sent, it is at the risk of the sender. Have your remittances made payable to the Gospel Advocate, and never to any member of the company.

Do Not Write Business on the same sheet as matter intended for publication.

Change of Address will be cheerfully made at the request of any subscriber giving post office, county, and State from which the change is to be made, and post office, county and State to which the paper should go after the change.

Renewals. In renewing, give the name just as it appears on the yellow label, unless it be incorrect, in which case please call our attention to it; and always give the name of the post office to which your paper is sent, as this is the guide by which we are enabled to find your name on our list.

Do Not Send Matter Intended for the Advocate to the editors personally. This may occasion delay. Address the Gospel Advocate Publishing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

theories and opinions of men. Only that which the word of God plainly teaches is to be our guide and standard—our rule of faith and practice. In studying and writing the lessons, my prayer and unrelenting effort is to first learn and then to present only the will of God. Whenever I begin to write a lesson, I imagine numerous children and young people and others about me with whom I am trying to learn the will of God, and I am encouraged to think I may help some. I also imagine the critic and caviler near by to hear what is said, and they, too, are no little benefit. I try to guard against any flaw that may be picked. Still I make mistakes. No one is infallible. "In many things we all stumble." (James 3: 2.)

In preparing a lesson or in teaching it, or in teaching any part or all of the counsel of God, the true and faithful teacher desires to teach just the truth—just the will of God contained in the lesson, and not something about the lesson or an interesting and pretty story built upon the lesson. To impress just that which God teaches in a given lesson is a teacher's highest duty. To draw and to teach one's conclusions from the Scriptures is not the true teaching. Whether preaching from the pulpit, in private, teaching a class, or preparing a lesson for others to study, the only right thing to do is to present "the word." By one's humor, pretty and interesting stories, literary efforts, etc., the minds of the class or audience may be drawn away from the facts, truths, and principles of the Scriptures.

The word of God makes it clear that Jesus as King now in heaven is the fulfillment of God's promise to David to place his seed upon his throne. It is most regrettable that so much trouble has been caused by the speculation of men. Can we not be satisfied with presenting just what the Bible says on all subjects, and let it go at that?

Sadder still is the fact that these differences have produced in places a partisan spirit and strife.

On the use of the Quarterlies, I wrote this good brother that if any congregation can find a more effectual way of teaching the whole Bible, it is duty bound to adopt that way and to drop the Quarterlies. Every congregation is duty bound to use the most effectual ways of reaching and teaching the greatest number to the greatest advantage, since the Bible lays down no one way of teaching. Or if the Quarterlies do not teach the whole truth or any lesson or teaches more than the truth, again it should be laid aside. But it is wrong in any congregation to lay the Quarterlies aside through prejudice, strife, or spite. Nothing but right and the Spirit of Christ should rule any of us. We should not forget that we are Christians, that we should seek the greatest good of all, and that we should give all "diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." If others should fail to do this, we should not fail.

As to preachers, I wrote that when it comes to selecting a preacher to hold a meeting or to preach otherwise for a congregation, the elders and the church, in the interest of all, saints and sinners, should select the man who will accomplish the greatest good to the greatest number—the one who will preach the whole truth without addition or subtraction and without wavering, and who will preach it in the love of the truth and in all faithfulness. In selecting a preacher, harmony should prevail, especially among the elders. If a church cannot harmonize on one safe and sound gospel preacher, it should do so on another, and all should work zealously and unitedly with him for the greatest good. There should be no division over men, and certainly not over theories. Brother Lipscomb told me once that he could name a hundred gospel preachers, any one of whom would be acceptable to him to hold a meeting with a given church. There must be no playing of politics to carry a point in securing a man or in doing anything else. This is shameful in professed Christians. A preacher should not be selected because he will favor one theory or another, but because he will preach the whole counsel of God in faith and firmness, love of truth and loyalty to Christ, to Loyalty to Christ.

BY E. A. E.

Leaving out dates, names, and places, the following extracts from a private letter will help to show how a wrong spirit creeps into a congregation and trouble follows:

Dear Brother Elam: I know nothing of your financial surroundings, but I know you deserve all you receive. So I send you this check to show my appreciation of your comments on the lessons in the Quarterly. I think they are fine, on the first and second chapters of Acts especially, and all are good.

You know we are having this "second coming" doctrine taught here now, and I fear it will split the church. I have been and am still doing all I can to keep it down. But other members do not see it as I do, and seem to think there is no harm in it.

Nearly all the church here wanted you to hold our meeting; but the other elders were against me. They selected Brother —, believing he was soft on that question. I wish you could be here, but some two or three dislike the Advocate staff. . . . I fear there will be an effort to do away with the Advocate Quarterlies. I have heard of such talk. Your brother in Christ,

This brother has been thanked sincerely for his kind remembrance and appreciation of the work done on the Quarterlies.

It requires much hard work to prepare these lessons, and any appreciation of them is encouraging. Criticism is helpful, and, offered in the right spirit, is highly appreciated. Criticism makes me cautious and thoughtful. I have endeavored to keep the lessons free from speculation and please God and not men. The church is the pillar and ground of the truth—supports and advances the truth, the word of God, and not the theories and ways of men. The mission of the church is to save men, not to divide into cliques, parties, and sects. How very grievous it is that such a state of affairs should arise over that which all admit is not essential to salvation! If some one should indulge in preaching some speculations or giving his opinions on certain subjects, the thing to do is not to divide over what he preaches or over him, but to pursue the course the Bible marks out.

At different times in life I have heard men on "the millennium;" but they offered what they said only as their opinions and never insisted upon any one's accepting it as a matter of faith and salvation. More than thirty years ago I heard Dr. Brents on "the millennium." He announced at the beginning of his discourse that it made no difference whether or not his audience believed "one word" he had to say, so far as their salvation was concerned. He gave the church credit for having too much respect for the word of God and love for one another to divide over his sermon. Had he thought the church would have been filled with strife over it, he would have dropped the subject as one would drop exploding dynamite or avoid poison. He seldom ever preached this sermon. Since he announced at the beginning of his sermon that it made no difference whether or not people believed it, I have thought many times since that it would have been far better not to preach it at all, but to preach that which people must believe and do in order to be saved. In doing this he may have saved some; in not doing so, some may have been lost.

Let me say here by way of parenthesis that, since such men as Dr. Brents and our venerable and beloved Brethren Lipscomb and Sewell and J. D. Floyd and others, with their mature thought and study of the Bible, investigated "the millennium" before some of our younger preachers were out of their swaddling clothes, does it not smack of presumption and vanity for them to claim a clearer and deeper insight into the secret things of God than such men have?

Instead of dividing over such questions, all elders and all churches should study the Bible and pursue the course it so plainly marks out, the one which is infallibly right. The peace and unity of the church must be sought and maintained at the sacrifice of all theories, pet notions, speculations, scruples, personal preferences and personal rights. God must be obeyed here as much so as in any other commandment.

On the other hand, no true preacher of the gospel will have any division over himself. Paul would not. He declares that he and Apollos were coworkers in God's tilled land, one planting and the other watering, while God gave the increase; but they were not rivals, filled with envy and jealousy and seeking chief places and highest honors. Every true preacher, Paul-like, has "daily" "anxiety for all the churches." He works and prays for the peace and good of all the churches. A division in a church a thousand miles away hurts and grieves every true preacher and every child of God. Every true preacher will do all in his power to allay trouble, settle difficulties, heal breaches, and prevent divisions contrary to the teaching of Christ in churches across the continent from him because he has the spirit of Christ and seeks the peace and good of all. Let us commit to memory the following: "Where jealousy and faction are, there is confusion and every vile deed. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without variance, without hypocrisy."

May God overrule all this to a more thoughtful study of his word, to a clearer understanding and more faithful discharge of the duties of elders, to a better knowledge of the various questions to be avoided, and to a stronger endeavor to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace!

The "Doctrinal Campaign."

BY M. C. K.

The Christian Standard and some other religious journals are just now giving great prominence and emphasis to what they are pleased to term a "doctrinal campaign," by which they mean a restatement of the simple facts, commands, and promises of the gospel of Christ as embodied and set forth in the great themes discussed by the inaugurators and original promoters of the nineteenth-century Reformation. The Gospel Advocate gladly joins its contemporaries in advocating and urging such a doctrinal campaign.

We take occasion, however, at the very outset, to call attention to the fact that it was no part of the original program of evangelization as mapped out by the Lord himself to merely have periodical "campaigns" for the proclamation of these great principles. On the contrary, according to that program, the doctrinal campaign which began at Jerusalem on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ was to proceed uninterruptedly from that starting point to the ends of the earth and for all time. "Ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." (Acts 1: 8.) Now there was to be no interregnum for the exploitation of other things, whether they be the philosophies, speculations, and "advanced thought" of men, or of anything else, but there was to be a bold and continuous preaching of the word—an unceasing effort to "make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever" the Lord had commanded them. (See Matt. 28: 19, 20.)

Now, the inauguration of the Reformation of the nineteenth century grew out of the widespread departure from these principles, and its leaders not only at once caught the meaning and spirit of the divine program, but for the first forty years of the movement they strictly adhered to it with practical unanimity, and that period is one of the brightest and most glorious pages of ecclesiastical history. The like of it had not been seen since the voice of Luther and his compeers awoke the thunders of the Vatican at Rome and shook Germany from the center to the circumference.

But great changes have taken place within the last half century. A spirit of restlessness at an early period seized many of the leaders and propagators of this movement, and they have spent much of their time in vain and hurtful wrangling over untaught questions. In the estimation of some of them, they have even failed to find sufficient room on the programs of their annual missionary conventions for the exploitation of their views on current problems, some of which they had better have banished from the pulpit and never have discussed at all. They have clamored for room for learned dissertations and great papers which will give them the appearance at least of keeping abreast of the times and of modern "advanced thought," overlooking the fact that the divine program, if strictly adhered to, will not only furnish an antidote for all the ills of all the centuries, but will also successfully meet the claims of so-called "advanced thought" and, at the same time, keep the churches and all the people in touch with God's power to save.

Hence, from our point of view, we do not join the "doctrinal campaign" with the view of a temporary presentation of the great themes which occupied the attention of the early reformers, and then of suspending the "campaign" for something else. We insist that, so far as the matter of preaching and the salvation of souls is concerned, there is nothing else for any century nor for any period. The great commission as carried out in the preaching and practice of the apostles and of the apostolic churches, as set forth in the New Testament, is the one great theme which should occupy the attention of our pulpits and religious journals at all times and under all circumstances. God knew what to provide for the souls of men in all the centuries, and as we continue to study his word our faith and conviction become stronger that what he has provided is the one great message with which to meet and overthrow all error and to answer all the philosophies and vagaries of "advanced thought" in every age. It is the divine food upon which the hungry souls of men are to subsist through all time.

This does not mean that we are to preach nothing but faith, repentance, and baptism; but it does mean that, because of the needs of some of the people, we are to preach them at all times, and should, therefore, never draw the illogical and hurtful conclusion that we have reached a time in our history when they are no longer needed. It does not mean that we may select some one theme and ride it as a hobby, to the exclusion of other themes which were also given a place on the divine program; but it does mean that all of them are needed at all times for somebody, and hence that none of them should be stricken at any time from the divine program.

We take the liberty to reproduce in this connection some of the utterances of men who have responded to the Christian Standard's call for a "doctrinal campaign," and it will be seen that they are in perfect agreement with the position which we have here set forth touching the divine evangelistic program for all time.

I do not know of anything that has happened in years that is as far-reaching as your plan for the doctrinal campaign. God bless you.—W. H. Book, Columbus, Ind.

This campaign is in obedience to the great commission, therefore push it.—Alfred M. Haggard, Des Moines, Iowa.

I cannot be other than heartily with you in your doctrinal campaign, for my experience has been that doctrinal preaching converts sinners and builds churches.—Hugh McLellan, San Antonio, Texas.

I fully indorse the doctrinal campaign. Our younger members especially need it.—J. W. Lowber, Austin, Texas.

I indorse the move for a universal doctrinal campaign. The world is getting tired of stale theology and is hungering for the gospel.—G. W. Grifft, Bloomingdale, Ind.

Let us make it world-wide and unanimous. Doctrine is teaching, and wherever and whenever we have taught, we have won; wherever and whenever we have compromised or failed to teach, we have failed. I am for doctrine—always in the spirit in which it was given—not only for one year, but for all time, and no matter who originated the campaign or who opposes it.—T. J. Legg, Indianapolis, Ind.

There has not been a time within the last forty years that doctrinal sermons were so badly needed as at the present time. I hope all our preachers and members everywhere will catch this fever. Paul said to Timothy: "Hold fast the form of sound words," etc.—C. B. Scott, Cleveland, Ohio.

Why should any one oppose such a campaign? Were not Paul's campaigns doctrinal? Did not Peter's sermons have the same ring? If we emphasize the things preached by them as essential to becoming a Christian, who can question it?—F. T. Ray, Eldon, Mo.

I am heartily in favor of the doctrinal campaign, for it is badly needed. Glad it was started, and think great good will be the result.—Bela Metcalfe.

Nothing else wins for the church of Christ. The responsibility is laid upon us, then why not assume it? The great revival reports are but forerunners of what we shall reap if the ministers and churches line up in this needed work. I began my ministry with a doctrinal campaign, and it still goes on.—Z. E. Bates, Tiffin, Ohio.

With Paul, let us go, "not with excellency of speech, or wisdom, proclaiming the testimony of God, but determined to know nothing among sinners, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." "Preach the word."—A. Sanders, Evanston, Ohio.

I think the Lord knew what he was doing when he made the gospel and commanded the apostles and the church to preach it to all the world. I have never conducted anything but a "doctrinal revival," and know from experience that it pays. It is the kind of preaching that brings the Bibles from their resting places and influences people to "search the Scriptures to see whether these things are so."

—H. E. Oldaker, McComb, Ohio.

Yes, let the word pass all along the line, and let us press with renewed vigor and zeal the doctrinal campaign. As the multitudes were astonished at the doctrine of Jesus when he delivered the great Sermon on the Mount, so let us again at least impress them with a faithful and united presentation of this doctrine as it is expanded and variously applied in the New Testament, and we shall doubtless see a great awakening in the churches and a consequent exhibition of greater energy and activity.

Itinerary Notes.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

The fourth Sunday in January I spent at Martin, Tenn., preaching morning and evening. It had been nearly twenty-five years since I held a meeting in Martin. The town then was new and the congregation had not been long established. Most of the old ones who were active twenty-five years ago are gone. Perhaps a dozen who were members there are yet on this side, but they are all beginning to show age now. A few more years and it will be a new congregation. They have a much larger membership now than they had then. Their meetinghouse has been remodeled and enlarged and the congregation is doing a fine work. This is the home of Brother Eph Smith, who is held in high esteem as a teacher and preacher. He is principal of the public school, and there are few men more popular with the patrons of a school than Brother Smith. He preaches somewhere in the regions round about Martin every Lord's day.

Monday night I ran down to Greenfield. This place was not on my program, but an appointment was made for me and a very nice audience met me at the Christian meetinghouse. Brother Hollins lives here, and he was at home. It was our first meeting, though I had seen his tracks before. He came from Middle Tennessee to this country, like many of the other good people of West Tennessee. Brother Hollins and his wife were both educated at Burritt College. Many fine people were started out right from Burritt College. I can see no reason why the church at Greenfield may not continue to be a power for good in the community.

Tuesday night I was at Gardner only three miles west of Martin. Gardner was once a larger place than Martin; but when the Illinois Central Railroad was built, it crossed the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway at Martin instead of Gardner, and a larger town was built at Martin. But we have a small band of as brave, true Christians in and around Gardner as can be found anywhere. Brother Whorton, the accommodating merchant of the place, is always ready to look out for the preacher and see that the fire is burning in the meetinghouse stove. Brother and Sister Gray live near with her mother, and this is always a good home for the preacher. The congregation is small, but they are living in peace.

Wednesday night I was in Union City. Brother George White, that I used to know in Wilson County, met me at the train, and we spent all the afternoon visiting among the members. This is a great church for Whites. There are four or five families in the congregation named "White," and they are no kin, so far as they know. It is almost a White church. This congregation has had a hard struggle for years. The opposition has been strong and the prejudice bitter, but they are growing despite it all. Their leaders are good, efficient men, and they are working in harmony, and their faith will grow exceedingly. It was a pleasure to me to preach to them and try to encourage them in their battle for the right.

Thursday night I preached at Rives. Though it was threatening rain and the night was dark, we had about fifty out at meeting. This congregation is made up of farmers in the country around Rives; and while it is a fine farming country, the roads can very quickly get almost impassable when it rains a lot, as it has done this winter. The Obion River is not far away, and it can be seen over the bottoms from nearly any part of the town. Not all the good things of this world can be found in any one place, and there are few places but have their drawbacks. But this is a goodly country and the cause has been firmly established here. I am now getting into the territory where Brother John R. Williams has done the best labor of his good and useful life. The good brethren of Obion County should see that he lacks no good thing; and when the Lord calls him up higher, the sweetest flowers that bloom in the good county of Obion should be placed on his grave. The brethren of Rives want him to hold their annual meeting this year. This is right. There is much water in West Tennessee now.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

Brother McQuiddy: Is it right for a person who is a Methodist member to see his error, repent, and confess Christ in the church of Christ, and never be baptized into the church of Christ? Can he or she be called a Christian with the Methodist baptism only? Please lead me into the light, as I cannot understand it that way. X.

Secarian baptism is worthless. Believers cannot be baptized into the Methodist Church or any other denomination, but they are baptized into Christ. (Rom. 6: 3; Gal. 3: 27; Col. 2: 12.) If God's word leads people to be baptized, it does that word an injustice and Methodism overmuch honor to call such obedience "Methodist baptism." Whenever people confess their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, the faithful minister of the gospel is commanded to baptize them into Christ. "And Philip said, If thou believest with all thy heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they both went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him." (Acts 8: 37, 38.) The apostles labored to convince their hearers that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God. Believers in Christ were baptized. Those who now believe with all their hearts that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, are scriptural subjects of baptism. Faith in Christ and a sense of one's duty to be baptized "cometh of hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ." (Rom. 10: 17.)

Brother McQuiddy: The church where I meet is divided over the literature. What do you think about it where it causes division? Do you think it a part of the worship? If this is not adding to God's word, I do not know what adding means. Please explain. W. H. Sisco.

All Christians agree that it is right to teach the word of God and that it is downright disobedience not to teach it. "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) The Holy Spirit has not revealed any method of teaching the word of God to the exclusion of other methods. Some teach from the blackboard, some by oral and some by written comment. The written is the more accurate because it requires more research, thought, and preparation. The man who tries to bind any method of teaching upon his brethren which God has not bound upon them, to the exclusion of others, is sinning by adding to the word of God. Those who object to literature are sinning by seeking to bind the oral method of teaching upon the church, when God has given no such command. The Bible itself was given in fragments and not all at one time. Our concern should be to teach the truth in the most effective manner. If we can teach more people by the use of literature than we can without it, we sin in neglecting to use it. God demands of us the best service we can render. To fail to obey the command to teach in the most effective way is to do so at our own peril.

Brother McQuiddy: Please tell us through the Gospel Advocate what is meant in Rev. 20: 1-3. What did John mean to teach here? In other words, are we to understand that the devil is now bound in chains and that some time in the future he is to be loosed to go out and deceive the nations? Or are we to understand that the devil is now loose and that the angel will come some time in the future to bind him for a thousand years? W. B. BROWN.

Rev. 20: 1-3 reads: "And I saw an angel coming down out of heaven, having the key of the abyss and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, the old serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, and bound him for a thousand years, and cast him into the abyss, and shut it, and sealed it over him, that he should deceive the nations no more, until the thousand years should be finished: after this he must be loosed for a little time." The book of Revelation is a book of symbols. The abyss is named in Rev. 9: 1, 11; 11: 7; 17: 8. The things that John saw are symbolical, and they imply that in some way the power of Satan shall be virtually destroyed upon the earth. Unbelief rendered even the power of Christ abortive, at least for the time being. Matt. 13: 58 declares: "And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief." Christ, to use the figurative language of Revelation, was "bound" by unbelief in the hearts of his hearers. Even so Satan is bound by the faith of good men. The thing that renders Satan powerless is righteousness in the hearts and lives of men. So the Spirit and power of Elijah were reproduced in the life of John the Baptist. (Luke 1: 17.) Whenever the spirit of Abraham, Moses, Joshua, David, Samuel, Isaiah, Daniel, Paul, and Stephen lives and reigns in the lives of men, Satan is bound. Thus it is seen that whenever righteousness is regnant on the earth the devil is bound, and whenever wickedness reigns Christ is bound. Stalwart, unyielding, and sacrificing Christian character is invincible and renders Satan impotent. A man may be drunken and lawless; but if he repents under the influence of the gospel, he ceases to serve Satan. The devil loses his power over him. I do not know just when the period will be in which the devil will be chained with the chains of truth and when the law of God shall be written upon every heart. It is certain that that time has not yet arrived.

Brother McQuiddy: In John 19: 26 we read: "When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold, thy son!" To whom did Jesus refer by "thy son?"—himself or John, of whom we read in verse 27? J. O. BARNES.

John 19: 26, 27 says: "When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold, thy son! Then saith he to the disciple, Behold, thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home." Jesus' love shines forth on the rugged cross, and while greatly suffering he commits his mother to the care of John, the beloved disciple, "Woman, behold, thy son!" Of this Clarke says: "This is a remarkable expression, and has been much misunderstood. It conveys no idea of disrespect, nor of unconcern, as has been commonly supposed. In the way of compellation, man! and woman! were titles of as much respect among the Hebrews as sir! and madam! are among us. But why does not Jesus call her mother? Probably because he wished to spare her feelings; he would not mention a name the very sound of which must have wrung her heart with additional sorrow. On this account he says, Behold thy son! This was the language of pure natural affection: 'Consider this crucified man no longer at present as any relative of thine; but take that disciple whom my power shall preserve from evil for thy son; and, while he considers thee as his mother, account him for thy child.' It is probable that it was because the keeping of the blessed virgin was intrusted to him that he was the only disciple of our Lord who died a natural death, God having preserved him for the sake of the person whom he gave him in charge."

DO YOU SUFFER FROM BACKACHE?

When your kidneys are weak and torpid they do not properly perform their functions; your back aches and you do not feel like doing much of anything. You are likely to be despondent and to borrow trouble, just as if you hadn't enough already. Don't be a victim any longer.

The old reliable medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, gives strength and tone to the kidneys and builds up the whole system. Get it today.

Club Solves Piano Problem.

The greatest danger in buying a piano or player-piano is the difficulty in selecting one of real and lasting quality. There are so many cheap imitations on the market that the chances of full and permanent satisfaction are slight unless you are an expert judge and are extremely careful in your selection.

If you feel that you are not a good judge of the quality, durability, and value of an instrument, or if you have not time to make an exhaustive investigation of these matters, why not throw the responsibility on the Gospel Advocate Piano Club? It has already made the investigation for you and will assume the full responsibility of giving you absolute and perfect satisfaction and the largest possible value for your money. What your insurance policy is to your home, the club is to your piano or player-piano.

But the club does not stop there. It clubs your order with those of ninety-nine other subscribers, thus securing the lowest possible factory price for each club member. It provides convenient terms of payment, the strongest guarantees of quality and durability, and gives you the opportunity to try your instrument thoroughly before you buy. The club absolutely guarantees perfect satisfaction in every detail of piano buying. Write for your copy of the catalogue to-day. Address the Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Georgia.

Get Rid of Rheumatism.

The majority of people suffer more or less from rheumatism. Those who just have it lightly neglect to take a remedy which has been tested and proven efficient, but simply try to get relief by rubbing the parts affected. Rubbing will not cure rheumatism, it merely relieves the part affected and drives the rheumatism to some other part. If allowed to go on, rheumatism becomes one of the most dreadful of bodily ailments, and in a great many cases results very disastrously. "Renwar" has proved its efficiency in thousands of cases. If you suffer from rheumatism and cannot buy "Renwar" from your druggist, we will send you a bottle, postpaid, for fifty cents. If you are not entirely satisfied, we will refund your money. "Renwar" is prepared and guaranteed only by the Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.

The Old Mexico Mission.

BY W. A. SCHULTZ.

Since I have announced that it is my intention to return to Mexico at once to endeavor to build up the cause of Christ in that destitute field, I am glad to state that several brethren and congregations have expressed a willingness to have fellowship with me in that great work. Six congregations have agreed to contribute five dollars each per month. Our living expenses will be about sixty dollars per month. I am sure that six more congregations can be found that will contribute five dollars per month each. It will cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars to get to Mexico. Some have made contributions toward my moving expenses. About fifty dollars has been donated. I am so confident that I will have the means in hand to go on that I am making every arrangement to start on February 10.

Brother I. D. Simpson is going with me. He is a young preacher of excellent ability and a good singer. He will be of much help to me. He is not asking for any assistance, but I am sure that the brethren will at least bear his expense to Mexico. Brother Simpson is an old student of Abilene Christian College and is well reported of by all the brethren who know him. His address is Trent, Texas.

I am also arranging to take Brother George M. Sanchez, a Mexican preacher of the gospel, with me. He is a man of splendid ability and has had marked success in preaching among his people. The Mexican people are aware of the fact that their troubles are directly attributable to the Catholic Church, and hence the majority of them in the part of the country where I labored are strongly anti-Catholic. Now is the time to give the Mexican people the gospel in its purity. I shall preach to the American colonies; Brother Sanchez will preach to the Mexicans. I shall also assist him all in my power in this work. Brother Sanchez has a wife and two children. He thinks he can support himself and family on twenty-five dollars per month. That will be little enough. Brethren, if you want to assist this worthy man to preach the gospel to the Mexican people, send a contribution to Brother I. D. Simpson, Trent, Texas, or Brother G. H. P. Showalter, Austin, Texas, for him. We need to have this man at work every day.

I hope no Christian will be carried away with all of the war talk and "scare heads" in the newspapers. We hear much talk nowadays about intervention by the United States in Mexico. All of that is covered by such a thin veneer that I am surprised that any one would be deceived by it. All of that propaganda is inspired by two Warfare in the Blood.

In the constant struggle of the army of phagocytes in the blood against an opposing army of bacteria and other noxious matter, the element most necessary in the battle for health is fresh air.

The air supply is received through the lungs and respiratory tract.

When the lungs, throat, and nostrils are engorged by colds, sore throat, croup, etc., the air cannot reach the membranes, and through them the blood, because of this barrier of engorgement.

Hence the phlegm should be loosened and thrown off, that the air supply to the blood may be ample.

This object is attained by the liberal use of Meththolatum on the chest and throat and in the nostrils.

The volatile aromatics of the Mentholatum encourage the loosening and expectoration of the phlegm.

For this reason Mentholatum is almost indispensable in cases of sore throat, colds, catarrh, and croup, also effective for chapped hands and lips.

sources—the millionaire corporations that have investments in Mexico and the Roman Catholic Church. Some of those corporations have been subject to no law of God or man, and they howl vociferously for intervention when there is any effort made to force them to obey the law of the land. The Catholic priesthood has practically been driven out of Mexico, and they want intervention so that they can go back to prey upon the people. Should the United States intervene, this horde of vampires that have sucked the life-blood of the Mexican people for the last four hundred years would return with the American army. A war with Mexico would only be a war to further the interests of the corporations and the Catholic Church.

Dallas, Texas.

BY J. M. GAINER.

Permit me to give a short history of two years' work with the Garrett Avenue church of Christ, Dallas, Texas, from which place I have just come. On January 11, 1914, we started our regular work with about twenty members, and were partially supported by the Pearl and Bryan Streets congregation, whose property we were using. Every member cooperating, we soon were able to enlarge our work, and on January 1, 1915, began work without any outside help. This, too, without making one special appeal for more finances. The only times I remember any talk of money were when the monthly reports were read and when incidental teaching along this line was included in the preaching. On January 1, 1916, the congregation acquired the property, assuming a small indebtedness and paying two years' back interest. This is the only debt the congregation has ever had since its affairs were in its own hands.

In addition to this, the house has a room, or locker, which is continually stocked with clothing, shoes, food, etc., which the church distributes as it has calls, doing away with all personal donations other than through the church. Never have I been where any body of Christians more nearly conformed to the apostolic standard of church work.

The congregation has now about eighty members, having lost almost that number by death and removals. And it is situated in the most difficult part of the city, so far as this work is concerned.

Permit me to say, also, that all the members were loyal to each other, and Mrs. Gainer and I were proud to be servants of such a body of Christians. It was with deep regret that we changed our location. Brother C. C. Klingman is now with the church, and, with such a leader, I feel sure God's name will be known further and his cause grow rapidly.

I am now located at Scottsboro, Ala. I am ready to go anywhere in the northern part of this State to preach the gospel. I will appreciate any request for preaching or any information regarding places where the gospel is needed, which can be reached from my home. May I be used all the time?

Get Rid of a Racking La Grippe Cough—It Weakens.

For the severe racking cough that comes with la grippe, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is wonderfully healing and soothing. It eases the tightness over the chest, raises the phlegm easily, and helps the racking, tearing cough that is so exhausting and weakening. R. G. Collins, expostmaster, Barnegat, N. J., says: "Foley's Honey and Tar Compound soon stopped the severe la grippe cough that completely exhausted me. It can't be beat."

OBITUARIES

On account of the large number of obituary notices coming to the Gospel Advocate the following rules must be observed: Obituaries that do not exceed one hundred and fifty words are published free of charge. When they exceed this limit, one cent will be charged for every additional word. Payment must accompany notice or else it will be reduced to one hundred and fifty words. Poetry will not be printed.

West.

On January 22, 1916, the death angel came and claimed Willie Louise, the little daughter of Brother and Sister R. L. West. While she was only three weeks and five days old, it was hard to give her up; but may we remember that God knows best and does all things well. She was so bright God saw fit to take her to himself, where there are no tears, no sorrow, no pain, and no death.

J. C. WEST.

Gammill.

Carl Gammill was born in Ouachita County, Ark., on August 24, 1893, and died at Millville, Ark., on December 31, 1915. He obeyed the gospel in 1907 and lived a consistent Christian during his short stay on earth, beloved and respected by every one. He will be missed, especially by his two sisters, to whom he was a father and protector. I officiated at his burial and also baptized him. Brother Gammill is gone, but not forgotten.

JOHN A. COOK.

Cooper.

Brother Jonathan O. Cooper, of near Rogersville, Ala., was born on February 9, 1856, and died on January 14, 1916. He enlisted in the service of our Master in November, 1888, and thus served as one of his soldiers for considerably more than the fourth of a century. He was a good father and a true friend. He leaves, to mourn his departure, a devoted wife, several children, and a number of kinsmen. The remains were carried to the cold, dark earth under the spreading oaks that shade the Cooper burying ground near town. The services were directed by his friend and ours, the drummer preacher, Brother W. W. Bates, on Saturday afternoon, January 15.

E. M. H.

Growbarger.

Mrs. Juliette Henry Growbarger, wife of William Growbarger and daughter of Leonard Dunn, aged seventy-two years, died of pneumonia, at her home in McHenry, Ohio County, Ky., on January 7, 1916. She was the mother of eight children—four boys and four girls—three of which have passed to the great beyond. She obeyed the gospel forty years ago and lived a Christian life from that time. She learned a lesson that few Christians learn—that is, to pay the preachers, to be gentle and kind, and to speak a good word for every one. Her last words were: "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and has prepared for me a home far above this earthly home, and I am going to that home."

While the church at McHenry has lost a jewel, we sorrow not as those who have no hope; for she has gained a crown and a life far beyond this world of pain, toil, and heartaches.

J. L. HINES.

Thomas.

On December 21, 1915, the spirit of Brother Will Thomas left its earthly house, we trust, for "a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Brother Thomas was also a member of the Cedar Dell congregation, in Marshall County, Tenn. Funeral services were conducted by the writer in the Cedar Dell church house in the midst of a host of sorrowing relatives and friends. Brother Thomas leaves a wife and one daughter; three sons and two daughters preceded him to the grave. Brother Thomas died with that fearful malady, consumption; but he bore his afflictions with that fortitude that characterizes a child of God. The general expression is that a good man has gone. Sister Thomas will miss his association and counsel, and the congregation and neighborhood will miss him. May the solace offered in the Scriptures comfort and console Sister Thomas and her daughter, Sister Bettie Deen, and cause them to strive more faithfully to reach the heavenly goal.

N. C. DERRYBERRY.

Lucas.

Rhoda A. Lucas, formerly of Louisville, Ky., aged seventy-one years and two days, died on Sunday morning, January 9, 1916, at the residence of her brother, Alex. A. Lucas, in Houston, Texas. She obeyed the gospel more than fifty years ago and tried to live a consistent Christian life. She was strong in faith and wanted to go. One of her favorite passages of the Scriptures was: "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us." (She suffered long.) The funeral services were conducted by Elder A. McGary, assisted by Early Arceneaux and A. G. Dunn, ministers of the two local churches in Houston. The church and Sunday school where she worshiped and many friends expressed their sympathy in beautiful floral offerings and in many other ways, after which her remains were laid to rest in Hollywood

Bingham.

The great messenger of death stalked his icy figure over the land of Fosterville on January 8, 1916, and claimed as one of God's holy angels R. C. Bingham. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Bingham, of Fosterville, Tenn., and leaves a father, mother, brother, and sister, with a host of friends, to mourn his death. He was born on July 25, 1898. Clyde was in school at Burritt College and was attacked with typhoid fever, which caused him to be removed to his home. A faithful member of the church of Christ was he; hence all who knew him loved him for his devotion to God and man. The short, sweet life he has lived can never be excelled and his strong influence will forever be felt. He met duty with a smile, always occupying a front seat at church and opening each meal with prayer. He was kind and sweet to all, and the very atmosphere where Clyde was known is filled with sadness. His life was an example of purity and a shining light to guide one and all. No mind can fully grasp his true worth, for he was a rare jewel. His last words were sweet—"My, my Lord," in whom he lived daily. We knew him well, and a more beautiful Christian character will never be created than Clyde; hence his absence is heart-rending. Services were conducted by Brother Gleaves. One of the pall-bearers was his devoted lifetime chum, W. H. Thomas, whose heart is sad indeed. But God knoweth best. To his bereaved father, mother, brother, and sister, this is hard to bear; but we admonish them to be consoled by his upright, Christian life, and to continue to trust in the reward of their gracious Creator and live to meet their darling again. May Heaven's richest blessings be with his loved ones and friends.

ALMA MOORE.

Ranson.

Mrs. A. C. Ranson, née Anderson, was born in Franklin County, Ala., near Russellville, on September 11, 1843. She was a member of one of the pioneer families of North Alabama, and one of some prominence, her brother being a judge of one of the State courts. She was reared in the county of her birth, and lived all but about six or seven years of her life there. She obeyed the gospel under the ministry of one of the pioneer preachers of that country, Brother R. B. Trimble, in the year 1867, and witnessed the earnest struggle of the church of Christ for existence, against strong opposition from the already strongly entrenched denominations of the country. She loved the church and the simple teaching of the New Testament and was always interested in the work of Christianity. She was strongly opposed to the introduction of any of the modern innovations in the church and was satisfied with the Lord's way as revealed in the New Testament. She attended all the protracted meetings within her reach as long as she was able to do so. I heard Dr. A. C. Henry, one of the strongest preachers Alabama ever had, say:

Sister: Read My Free Offer!

I am a woman.
I know a woman's trials.
I know her need of sympathy and help.

If you, my sister, are unhappy because of ill-health, if you feel unfit for household duties, social pleasures, or daily employment, write and tell me just how you suffer, and ask for my free ten days' trial of a home treatment suited to your needs. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any man. I want to tell you how to cure yourself at home at a cost of about 12 cents a week.

If you suffer from women's peculiar ailments causing pain in the head, back, or bowels, feeling of weight and dragging down sensation, falling or displacement of pelvic organs, causing kidney and bladder weakness or constipation and piles, painful or irregular periods, catarrhal conditions and discharges, extreme nervousness, depressed spirits, melancholy, desire to cry, fear of something evil about to happen, creeping feeling along the spine, palpitation, hot flashes, weariness, sallow complexion with dark circles under the eyes, pain in the left breast or a general feeling that life is not worth living,

I INVITE YOU TO SEND TODAY FOR MY FREE TEN DAYS' TREATMENT

and learn how these ailments can be easily and surely conquered at home without the dangers and expense of an operation. When you are cured, and able to enjoy life again, you can pass the good word along to some other sufferer. My home treatment is for young or old. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain how to overcome green sickness (chlorosis), irregularities, headaches, and lassitude in young women and restore them to plumpness and health. Tell me if you are worried about your daughter. Remember it costs you nothing to give my home treatment a ten days' trial, and does not interfere with daily work. If health is worth asking for, then accept my generous offer and write for the free treatment, including my illustrated booklet, "Women's Own Medical Adviser." I will send all in plain wrappers postpaid. To save time, you can cut out this offer, mark your feelings, and return to me. Send today, as you may not see this offer again. Address, MRS. M. SUMMERS, - - - - - Box 195 SOUTH BEND, IND.

10 CENT "CASCARETS"
IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach,
Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They
work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

Purely Vegetable—Not Narcotic

Unnecessarily used for over seventy years, for soothing children. Soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, dispels wind colic and is the best known remedy for infantile diarrhoea. Makes baby's teething safe. Insist on "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" and accept no substitute. Twenty-five cents at good druggists.

PLEASE MENTION THIS PUBLICATION

"If all God's people were like Sister Aggie and loved his house like she does, his work would never go down." Such was his estimate of this good woman, and he called her "Old Faithful." She was of a bright and sunny disposition and was fond of the companionship of the people of the Lord. She liked to talk of the work of the Lord and about his word. She was full of life, charitable, tender-hearted, and a good attendant in the sick room. I knew her for nearly twenty years, and I think I never knew a finer character, and one who loved the church and God's word better. Her presence has cheered and brightened many homes, and her wise and prudent counsel has been of inestimable value to the children of her sister, with whom she had made her home for twenty years or more. She was married to R. H. Ranson in 1836, and moved to Lauderdale County, Ala., to make her home. Her husband did not live many years, perhaps six or seven. After his death she moved back to the home of her sister, Mrs. J. C. Allen, near Darlington, Ala., and remained a widow until her death, November 15, 1915. She had been sick for quite a while, though not seriously so, and no one thought the end so near until about a week before her death. Then she, realizing that the end was near, called her niece to her and gave directions about her funeral. She selected the pallbearers; the minister for the funeral discourse—Brother L. S. Lancaster, of Russellville, Ala.; and the writer to prepare an obituary notice for the Gospel Advocate and the county paper. She bore the cross and confidently looked for the crown. We believe she was faithful to the end and trust by faith and earnest endeavor to meet her in the city of the great King. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; . . . that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." I. B. BRADLEY.

Nips Trouble in the Bud.

That's what Gray's Ointment does! It heals wounds and bruises and prevents serious blood poisoning that often results from a neglected skin wound. For ninety-four years Gray's Ointment has been a standard household remedy for all eruptions and abrasions of the skin—bolls, sores, ulcers, carbuncles, burns, poison oak, and similar ailments. Keep a box in the house. It will save you many an ache and pain, and is a sure preventive of dangerous blood disorders that may end fatally. Only 25 cents a box, at druggists. You can get a free sample by writing to W. F. Gray & Co., 818 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn.

Have You a Chronic Illness?

If you have, you will surely be interested in the Bodi-Tone trial offer, which is printed on the last page of this paper. Bodi-Tone, which is now seven years old, has made a great record in such cases. The manufacturers believe in it, for they will send you a box to try, no matter how old, hard, or obstinate your case may be. If it does not help you, you need not pay for it.

SALTS FINE FOR KIDNEYS.

We eat too much meat, which clogs kidneys, then the back hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness, and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean; and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink, which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Stop Cheating Your Family.

You doubtless fully realize your duty to your family in making your home life attractive, entertaining, cultured, and refined; and you have promised yourself that some day you will fill that vacant spot in the parlor with a splendid piano or player-piano of the sweetest tone and highest quality, or that you will replace the old rattle-trap with a superb new instrument. But the days, the months, and possibly the years have silently crept by, and still there is no good music in your home. In the meantime, home is not what it might be, for a home without a high-grade piano or player-piano is seriously and hopelessly handicapped.

You have only one life to live here; why let procrastination steal your family's best opportunity for social, mental, and spiritual advancement? The Gospel Advocate Piano Club will solve the financial problem for you now. It was organized to overcome the very difficulties which confront you. By clubbing your order with those of ninety-nine other subscribers, you save forty per cent of the price and yet are responsible only for your own order. Convenient terms of payment are provided. You try the instrument in your own home and must be thoroughly satisfied before finally accepting it.

Write for your copy of the club's catalogue and full particulars to-day. Address Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

Another Word from Brother Yohannan.

BY J. W. GRANT.

Again I have heard, but not by a letter direct to myself, from Brother Yohannan. This time he wrote to Brother J. S. Dunn, of Dallas, Texas. Brother Dunn promptly sent the letter to me, and I gladly give some of its contents to the Gospel Advocate readers, as I know that many of them, like myself, will be glad to hear from him. The letter made a quick trip, too, as it is dated December 15. Brother Dunn got it on January 20, making it only a month and five days on the road. In it, among other things, Brother Yohannan says:

I send much Christian love to all the brethren and sisters in Christ. Please, brethren, remember me in your prayers while we are in this terrible calamity, as I do the same for you all. . . . I am thankful to say that while we are in this bad calamity the God heavenly took [has taken] care of me until this time. I am well and doing my Christian duty, preaching the gospel of Christ to the poor sinners. This is the duty of every Christian.

Also I let you know, dear brethren, that I have been plundered nearly the fifth time by the Turkish people. It is a very hard time for us to live. Possibly you have heard what calamity has befallen the Syrian people by the Turkish people. Now we need your encouragement and your prayers. . . . Also, I would like to come to America in the spring, but I have not the expense [money] to come on.

As before published, I mailed to Brother Yohannan, on November 20, a draft on London that represents eighty dollars of our money. He had not had time to receive that letter when he wrote to Brother Dunn; so I hope to hear from him soon in answer to it. I also have on hand for him now forty-two dollars and fifty cents, which I shall not attempt to send till I hear from my last draft. I am encouraged, by getting my last letter from him and by Brother Dunn getting this one, that mail conditions are favorable to his getting all the mail that is properly directed and sent to him. I would like to send him next time much more than I now have on hand; and will gladly do so if his friends will send it to me. I will always gladly receive, care for, and send to him all that may be intrusted to me for him. I will use my best judgment and the best means at my disposal to insure against loss in transit of all that is sent to me. My permanent address is West Station, Nashville, Tenn., and mail properly sent to me there can hardly be mislaid or go astray. I respond to all donations that I receive with a postal-card acknowledgment, and enter every amount I receive on my books. I make no public acknowledgment of receipts in the papers, giving names of contributors. If it takes that to get the donations, then they do not come my way.

Your Five Hundred Muscles.

The five hundred muscles in the human body depend on pure and rich blood for their health and contractile energy, which is the ability to labor. If they are given impure blood, they become enfeebled, the step loses its elasticity, the arm its efficiency, and there is incapacity to perform the usual amount of labor.

What a great blessing Hood's Sarsaparilla has been to the many toiling thousands whose blood it has made and kept pure and rich! This medicine cleanses the blood of all humors, inherited or acquired, and strengthens and tones the whole system. It is important to be sure that you get Hood's Sarsaparilla when you ask for it. No substitute for it is like it.

Your Heart

is closely connected with your nerves—so close, in fact, that anything which affects your nerves must necessarily affect your heart, and vice versa.

If you are troubled with palpitation, dizziness, shortness of breath, swelling of ankles, pain on either side of the chest, or weak and irregular pulse, symptoms of a nervous breakdown, the best way to remedy the trouble is by giving your heart and nerves the proper tonic. Renovine for the heart and nerves is the best tonic for soothing and restoring a shattered nervous system. For sale by all reliable dealers, fifty cents and one dollar. Manufactured by the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

Sent on Trial.

If you are sick, you can get a full-size one-dollar box of Bodi-Tone on twenty-five days' trial. If it benefits you, you pay one dollar for the same; if it does not help, pay nothing for it. This is the way Bodi-Tone is being offered to the sick in the large announcement on the last page of this paper and the way thousands have already been cured by it.

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK, UGH.

“Dodson's Liver Tone” better than calomel and cannot salivate.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury—quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated, and all knocked out, and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel, just remember that your druggist sells for fifty cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and cannot salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children, because it is perfectly harmless and does not gripe.

Pastor's Son Relieved from Epilepsy.

Epilepsy has long been a bugaboo among American mothers.

There are two forms of this disease—one, which is accompanied by unconsciousness and falling fits; the other, where the spasm is so fleeting that it is hardly recognizable. Both of these forms will yield to persistent treatment with Dr. Miles' Nervine.

The Rev. J. A. Schuler, of Severy, Kan., had a little boy who suffered from epilepsy. After three years of fruitless treatment, it was decided to give Dr. Miles' Nervine a fair trial, and the result was this letter: “I want to thank you for the inestimable benefit Dr. Miles' Nervine has been to my son who was afflicted with epilepsy. He had suffered for three years prior to taking treatment with this remedy. He has never had an attack since the first dose he took of Dr. Miles' Nervine. He has so improved in general appearance and looks that you would not know he was the same boy. The medicine is everything that it is claimed to be. We had tried everything else we could think of, but failed to benefit my son until we used Dr. Miles' Nervine.”

Parents who have children who suffer from epilepsy, St. Vitus' Dance, and other like ailments, should avail themselves of this remedy which has been successful before the public for the past thirty years.

If the first bottle does not prove the remedy up to your expectation, your druggist will refund your money.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR
FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots fashish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

This means big and little tents, and we make all kinds. A thousand satisfied users testify to their quality. Let us make you a quotation. No trouble at all.

FROM THE FIELD

Alabama.

Hanceville, January 28.—On the fourth Lord's day in January I preached at Bethesda Church, in the southern part of Cullman County. At this place we have some young men who are now taking an active part in church work. From Bethesda I drove eight miles farther south and held services on Sunday night in a new meetinghouse that is now about completed. This was the first service in the new house. Every one seemed to enjoy the services very much. There was a fine audience present. This house was practically built by two brethren. They have worked about two and a half months on the building. This house, if cared for, will stand as a monument, testifying of the faithfulness of these brethren long after they shall have gone to their reward. The disciples of Christ in Cullman County are improving in the good work. Last year there were two new congregations set in order, with fairly good houses in which to worship. There were one hundred and twenty-five additions to the church in the county. This is practically a destitute field. However, we hope and pray for great good to be accomplished this year.

M. A. CREEL.

Colorado.

Olathe, January 31.—In the face of the concerted action of the denominations in Olathe to forestall it, I launched a series of sermons in the town on the "New Testament Religion and Church," which continued through seventeen nights. It was something entirely new in Olathe (since my last report I have been told a few sermons had been preached here some years ago, but scarcely anybody went out to hear them), and the people filled the house practically every night and listened eagerly. After I had tried for one week to unfold the New Testament church in all its beauty, including unity among God's children, in every discourse contrasting this divine institution with modern denominationalism and showing that those who professed Christianity in Olathe had either to stand with and work for the denominations and against the New Testament requirement or to stand with and work for the New Testament church and against denominational divisions, I called upon the audience (the house was full) to manifest by standing which of the two positions they would with all their heart occupy and diligently work for. Fully one-half of the large audience immediately arose and testified they would stand and work for only the New Testament plan in everything religious. These included representatives from perhaps every denomination in town; even one preacher stood among them and thereafter never missed a single sermon. As the meeting progressed the sentiment increased in favor of this stand, until, at the close, I doubt if there was a person in the house (house about full) who dissented from our position. A number of Baptists and Christian Union people told me they were con-

Where Drugs Fail.

Many chronic diseases fail to respond to drug treatment, even in the hands of the best physicians, whereas acute diseases usually respond readily. When a disease has become chronic, drugs often seem to do as much harm as they do good, for the system rebels against them. It is just this class of cases which derive the greatest benefit from Shivar Mineral Water. If you suffer with chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, gallstones, kidney or liver disease, uric-acid poisoning, or other conditions due to impure blood, do not hesitate to accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer as printed below. His records show that only two in a hundred, on the average, have reported no beneficial results. This is a wonderful record from a truly wonderful spring. Simply sign the following letter:

stand among us. Sunday afternoon was set apart for a meeting for this purpose; but three hours before the appointed hour a fierce blizzard set in (the worst of the year) and raged till after night, preventing practically the meeting, though a few of us met. Three members of the Christian Church took their stand with us, and one Baptist came to tell us she and her whole family and two other families would unite with us next Lord's day, and that she knew of others who intend to do likewise; and we learned of others who are determined to be baptized. So it will be another week before we can tell the result of our labors for the present; the ultimate result cannot be calculated now. Never in my life did I see one meeting in a raw town directly result in such an impression. The Baptist, Methodist, and Presbyterian preachers, of course, did not darken our door during the whole meeting. They could not have more hugely contributed to our success, however, as their actions tended to disgust many of their own "flock" with their kind of "religion." We are now negotiating for the lease of a house in Olathe, and for a while, at least, I will have to preach here twice on Lord's days and, perhaps, once five miles west at the schoolhouse where the brethren meet for worship. Three times will keep me busy on Lord's days. It is not improbable that we may build in Olathe within the next year or so. Such so far for the Olathe work which began in the Mormon debate in December. The few brethren meeting at the schoolhouse five miles from Olathe will try and meet the expense of the meeting, so far as the house, fuel, lights, and janitor's fees are concerned. I having received from one brother here two dollars and fifty cents for my services. Brethren, do not forget this work in your prayers. You cannot find a more worthy work anywhere. E. C. FUQUA.

New Orleans, February 1.—I am just home from two weeks' work in Mississippi. Three additions at Lilly Orchard—a husband and wife and one young lady. Why Suffer With Backache, Kidneys, or Rheumatism Now?

Dear Readers: Before using "Anuric Tablets" I had such a terrible backache that I could hardly do my housework, but after taking one box I could do my work with comfort. I take pleasure in recommending both "Anuric" and "Favorite Prescription," as they have done wonders for me. I would advise others to try them, because I know they will find great relief. You all have undoubtedly heard of the famous Dr. Pierce and his well-known medicines. His late discovery, "Anuric," is one that has been successfully used by the physicians and specialists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, in Buffalo, N. Y., for backache and kidney complaint. It is good for diseases arising from disorders of kidneys and bladder, such as backache, weak back, rheumatism, inflammation of the bladder, scalding urine and urinary troubles. MRS. S. M. SIMONS.

NOTE.—No matter where you live, Dr. Pierce can help you if you suffer from any of the chronic complaints—pains and aches which so often afflict mankind and womankind. You and Dr. Pierce can get together, by mail, without anybody knowing it, and he will give you his careful, simple, expert advice as a physician, without fee.

To prove that "Anuric" is a certain uric acid solvent and conquers headache, backache, kidney and bladder disease, and rheumatism, send ten cents to Dr. Pierce for a large trial package of "Anuric," and send for free medical treatise on any chronic disease which you may name. Scientists affirm that this remedy is thirty-seven times more potent than lithia. If you are a sufferer, go to your druggist and ask for a fifty-cent box of "Anuric."

Get good blood through the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Sold in either tablet or liquid form.

SWAMP-ROOT SAVES KIDNEY SUFFERERS.

You naturally feel secure when you know that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver, and bladder remedy, is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit-producing drugs.

The same standard of purity, strength, and excellence, prescribed by Dr. Kilmer many years ago, is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

Swamp-Root is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs. It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses. It is not recommended for everything. According to verified testimony, it is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver, and bladder troubles.

If you suffer, do not delay another day. Go to your nearest druggist now and get a bottle. All drug stores sell it in two sizes—fifty cents and one dollar.

However, if you wish first to try this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention the Gospel Advocate.

The Ideal Man a Healthy Man.

Ideal conditions of living in which the individual takes exactly the right amount of exercise regularly, and the right amount and quality of food and drink, would give strong, healthy development and immunity from disease.

It is the abuses and excesses of life in civilized society which produce derangements of the digestive and eliminative organs. Unfortunately our habits of eating, drinking, exercising, sleeping, in modern life, throw a terrible strain upon those organs, causing congestion, inflammation, and unfitting them to perform their functions as nature provided.

The consequence is a long train of diseases of the various organs. Fortunately, however, nature has been good to us in supplying numerous herbs and barks, from which corrective drugs are obtainable—drugs which, while they encourage the organs to greater activity in their various functions, leave no ill results.

Such a combination is found in Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, a combination of a number of valuable extracts, which in this combination have a specific and positive action on the liver and kidneys, encouraging the eliminative functions, improving digestion, allaying inflammation, and reducing congestion.

This preparation has been found most effective in the experience of thousands of people during the last forty years, and is highly recommended for use in cases of incipient Bright's disease, uramic poisoning, rheumatism, and other kidney and liver ailments.

For sale at all the drug stores in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

our strength we can accomplish more. But in order to do this work successfully, we must have a tent; and not being able to buy one ourselves, we appeal to the brethren to do so for us. Ohio.

Beallsville, February 1.—I closed a meeting at Marietta on January 30, with twenty additions to the congregation—fifteen baptisms. I preached to a large and respectable audience at Woodfield last night. Brother F. W. Smith had just closed a meeting there, and he is honored and loved by the whole church. I begin here to-night.

Oklahoma.

Maud, January 31.—I have recently moved from Porum, Okla., and am now located at this place. I am taking a vacation from the music-teaching work, the first I have had for nine years. I am preaching monthly at the following places: On the first Lord's day, at Konawa; the second, at Holdenville; the third, at Maud; and the fourth, at Calvin. I preached at Konawa yesterday, which was the fifth Lord's day in January. I will preach at Shawnee next Lord's day. The greater part of my time this year has been contracted for, and, beginning on the first of July, I will be actively engaged in the singing-school work and evangelistic field. All correspondents will please note the change in my address. I will say, however, that mail sent to Stigler, Okla., will always reach me. May God bless the faithful, and may all our feeble efforts in the true work of the Lord be crowned with success.

Huntland, February 3.—The first Lord's day in January I failed to reach my appointment at Shady Grove on account of swollen streams. The three other appointments—Salem and Huntland the second Lord's day, Caney Hollow and Leslie the third, and Hatchett's Schoolhouse the fourth—were filled. On the fifth Lord's day I had the pleasure of preaching to the brethren at Center Ridge Schoolhouse, morning and evening. I shall, the Lord willing, preach there each fifth Lord's day in the year.

Centerville, January 24.—I have just returned from a visit to Upper Cane Creek, in the western part of Hickman County and the southern part of Lewis County. Cane Creek is a splendid tributary to Buffalo River. Near the Hickman County line the creek divides into the east and the west prongs. Flat Rock Church, on the east prong, and Skeleton's, on the west prong, were visited by me. Flat Rock has one of the best-organized Sunday schools I have seen in a coun-

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG.

Nobody can tell when you darken gray, faded hair with Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy, and abundant with a brew of sage tea and sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about fifty cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair, and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp, and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. It's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft, and abundant.

Lime Starvation Causes Tuberculosis

In the Medical Record (New York) of December 18, 1909, Dr. John F. Russell says: "The condition which is recognized as preceding the active development of tuberculosis in the adult may be considered as due to lime starvation. * Among inorganic substances lime salts appear to be of special physiological importance, * but if the salts are not in organic combination, it is difficult to suppose that the cells can appropriate them for food."

Years of widespread use confirm our belief that the success of Eckman's Alternative in tuberculosis is due largely to its content of lime, in such combination with other valuable ingredients as to be easily appropriated by the cells.

Doubtless this has had much to do with the results in many cases which appear to have yielded to it. As it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, it is safe to try. Price $1 and $2 per bottle. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct from the Laboratory. We would like to send you a booklet containing information of value and references.

try church. Promptness, interest, splendid singing, and care for the sick and needy are outstanding qualities in this church. We need a congregation lower on the creek at Farmer's Exchange and one at Sycamore, while those "dead" ones at Pleasantville and Beardstown need reviving. Venerable J. D. Floyd once did good work at the latter place. The right kind of laborer could do good at these points if he had outside support. Brother Spears will likely labor in Lewis County this year, having returned from Arkansas. Brother Northcutt, a well-beloved man in my field, will return to hold three meetings in western Hickman this year. A fine field it is, if there was a man of consecration and ability, like Northcutt, located in it to properly work the territory.

Texas.

Childress, January 25.—Last summer Brother Perry and I made a note to the bank and borrowed money to buy a tent for gospel meetings, intending all our brethren to use it who desired to do so. The note is now past due and we cannot pay it without help. So we appeal to the brethren to help us on this, and to those who will help we offer the use of the tent for their summer meetings. It is a large one and fine for the purpose, and we will be glad to extend the use of it to those who will send us a donation on the payment thereof. Send contributions to me or Brother H. L. Perry, Kirkland, Texas.

TICE ELKINS.

Atlanta, January 28.—Since last report I have preached three times at Blodget and one time at home. The brethren at Blodget (eight miles south of Winfield) have built them a nice new chapel, and I had the honor of preaching the first sermon in it. These brethren have made a great sacrifice to build this house. They are few in number and poor, but they have a mind to work. They owe one hundred and four dollars and fifty cents borrowed money on this house. If there is a place anywhere that is worthy and that would appreciate help, it is Blodget. If you want to help a worthy cause, send to Brother Walter Cone, Route 2, Leesburg, Texas. The restrictive clause is in the church deed.

Don't shut your eyes and say "impossible," but put me to the test.

You may have tried everything you ever heard of and have spent your money right and left. I say "welland good," let me prove my claims without expense to you.

Let me send you without charge a trial treatment of DELANO'S RHEUMATIC CONQUEROR. I am willing to take the chance and surely the test will tell.

So send me your name and the test treatment will be sent you at once. When I send you this, I will write you more fully, and will show you that my treatment is not only for banishing rheumatism, but should also cleanse the system of Uric Acid and give great benefit in kidney trouble and help the general health.

This special offer will not be held open indefinitely. It will be necessary for you to make your application quickly. As soon as this discovery becomes better known I shall cease sending free treatments and shall then charge a price for this discovery which will be in proportion to its great value. So take advantage of this offer before it is too late. Remember, the test costs you absolutely nothing. F. H. Delano, 541 F. Delano Bldg Syracuse, N. Y.

How To Get Rid of a Bad Cough

A Home-Made Remedy that Will Do It Quickly, Cheap and Easily Made

If you have a bad cough or chest cold which refuses to yield to ordinary remedies, get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking a teaspoonful every hour or two. In 24 hours your cough will be conquered or very nearly so. Even whooping cough is greatly relieved in this way.

The above mixture makes a full pint—a family supply—of the finest cough syrup that money could buy—at a cost of only 54 cents. Easily prepared in 5 minutes. Full directions with Pinex.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup preparation takes right hold of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough in a way that is really remarkable. Also quickly heals the inflamed membranes which accompany a painful cough, and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. Excellent for bronchitis, spasmodic croup and winter coughs. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children like it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiaicol, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex,"—do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., 233 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Beasley, $1; John Leathers, $1; Harry Leathers, 50 cents; John W. Hooper, $1; Miss Fannie Massey, $1; Lanton, Maury County, $8.76; ladies of the church at Centerville, one box of clothing; chure hat Laguardo, $7; Miss Kate Cavener, $1; Scott's Hill, $10; Spencer, $5.13; Bethel, Maury County, $4.10; Cathey's Creek, $5.40; A. (To be continued.)

For Weakness and Loss of Appetite.

The old standard general strengthening tonic, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic, drives out malaria and builds up the system. A true tonic and sure appetizer. For adults and children. Fifty cents.

Men and Women who have been in poor health for years, who have tried most of the prominent medicines, have found that one single box of Bodi-Tone did more good than all the others combined. Most of these folks had tried good physicians and had doctored at a heavy cost over a long time. Its history of success during the past seven years has proven beyond a shadow of doubt how the Bodi-Tone plan of toning all the body is a right plan that helps to cure the body's disorders, and that it is a real aid to nature. Read the liberal offer on the last page of this paper, then send for a box on trial and test it.

Old Folks

Young or Old

No matter whether you are a man or a woman, twenty years old or seventy, all you need do is send the coupon with your full name and address and it will be sent to you, without a penny from you. Age is no barrier to health and this offer is open to all Old People, as well as middle-aged and young men and women. We want to send every elderly person a full-sized one dollar box of Bodi-Tone on twenty-five days' trial, the same as we send it to the young and middle-aged, all at our own risk and expense, to prove how Bodi-Tone acts in ailments of the old as well as the young, to prove what it does for persons suffering from bodily weakness and ailments, whether from age or otherwise. This trial offer is open to all men and women, freely, generously, without any age limit. Thousands of persons, old and young, have sent for Bodi-Tone on trial, without paying a penny, and found it put new flesh on their bones, new vigor in their minds, new vim in their muscles, and new vitality into every vital function, and we want you to try it, to see if it will not do as much for you.

All you need do is tell us you will try it and a dollar box will be handed to you.

It makes no difference who, where or what you are, Bodi-Tone takes all the risks, and asks no pay if it does not benefit. You don't need to write a long letter, don't need to fill out any tiresome blanks, don't need to send any money or stamps. We don't ask to know your ailments and you need not write a word about it. All troubles originate in the body, and Bodi-Tone sets the body right. All you need do is clip out the coupon, which tells us you want to try Bodi-Tone, fill in your name and address, and we will send Bodi-Tone to you. This is how Bodi-Tone wants to be tried by old and young, this is how it wants to prove its curative powers. We are glad to send it to you without a penny, glad to give you a chance to try it, to learn about this medicine which has brought new health and vigor to so many sick, suffering and feeble persons, old and young, glad to show you how health can be created at all ages with the right medicine, made from the right ingredients. If Bodi-Tone benefits you as it has benefited thousands, pay us a dollar for it. If you are not satisfied, don't pay a penny. We won't ask for pay or dun you, for we leave it all to you. Clip the coupon and send for Bodi-Tone today.

Bodi-Tone

Does just what its name means—cures disease by toning all the body, and we want you to try a box at our risk and see what it will do for your body. Bodi-Tone is a small, round tablet, that is taken three times every day. Each box contains seventy-five of these tablets, enough for twenty-five days' use, and we send you the full box without a penny in advance, so that you can try it and learn what it is, so you can learn how it works in the body, how it cures stubborn diseases by helping nature to tone every organ of the body. Bodi-Tone is a little word, but it means a great deal, everything in health. When all the organs are doing their part, when each is acting in a perfectly natural way, when all the functions are healthy and performed with natural vigor, when the energy, strength and power of resistance to disease are all at a natural point, then the body is in proper tone. When disease has attacked any part, the tone of the entire physical body should be raised to the highest point, to make all the body help to cure. This is the power which Bodi-Tone offers you to help you get new health.

Not a Patent Medicine

Bodi-Tone is not a patent medicine, for its ingredients are not a secret. It contains Iron Phosphate, Gentian, Lithia, Chinese Rhubarb, Peruvian Bark, Nux Vomica, Oregon Grape Root, Cascara, Cascapara, Sarsaparilla and Golden Seal. Such valuable ingredients guarantee its merit and power.

When you use Bodi-Tone you know just what you are using, know it is good and safe and know you are taking the kind of medicine to provide real help for the body. It contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs, nothing that your own family doctor will not endorse and say is a good thing. It does not depend on killing pain with cocaine, opium, morphine, or other dangerous drugs. It does not excite the body with alcohol, but it tones the body and cures its disorders with remedies Nature intended to tone and cure the body when that power was given them. Thus, Iron gives life and energy to the Blood, Sarsaparilla drives out its impurities, Phosphate and Nux Vomica create new nerve energy and force, Lithia aids in the Kidneys, Gentian does invaluable work for the Stomach and Digestive forces, Chinese Rhubarb and Oregon Grape Root promote vigorous Liver activity, Peruvian Bark raises the tone of the entire system, Golden Seal soothes the inflamed membrane and checks Catarrhal discharges, Cascara gives the Bowels new life in a natural way, and Cascapara makes all more valuable by bettering their quick absorption into the blood. A remarkable combination that does wonderful work for the body's health. Each of these ingredients adds a needed element from nature to the body. We claim no credit for discovering the ingredients in Bodi-Tone, each of which has its own well-deserved place in the medical books of most of the civilized world. We simply claim the credit for the successful formula which we invented, for the way in which these valuable ingredients are combined, for the proportions used, for the curative force which thousands of sick have found in Bodi-Tone. Many of its ingredients are regularly prescribed by doctors, either separately or in combinations with such drugs as each doctor may favor, for there are wide differences of opinion among the doctors of various schools. The exact combination used in Bodi-Tone is what makes Bodi-Tone the cure which doctors have failed and gives Bodi-Tone the curative and restorative power that makes possible the remarkable cures experienced by Bodi-Tone users.

You Need It

If you are tired of ceaseless doctor bills and wearied of continual dosing without results, you need Bodi-Tone right now. If your local doctor is doing you no real good, if you have given him a chance to do what he can and the ordinary medicinal combinations he used have failed, give this modern, scientific combination of special remedies a chance to show and prove what it can do for you. Its greatest triumphs have been among men and women with chronic ailments who had good physicians without lasting benefit, and for this reason all chronic sufferers are invited to try a box at our risk.

Bodi-Tone offers its valuable services to you right now, if you are sick, if you need medicinal help, if your bodily organs are not acting as they should, if your body is not in its right, natural and normal tone. This is what Bodi-Tone is for, to help Nature restore tone to the body, to restore health, vigor, vitality and strength.

If there is anything wrong with your Kidneys, Bodi-Tone helps to restore tone to the Kidneys, helps to set them right. If there is anything wrong with your Stomach, Bodi-Tone helps to tone the Stomach, helps to set the wrong right. If there is anything wrong with your Nerves, your Blood, your Liver, your Bowels or your General System, the health-making ingredients in Bodi-Tone go right to work and keep on working day after day, producing results of the kind sufferers appreciate. If you have Rheumatism, Bodi-Tone helps to eliminate the Uric Acid from the system while it restores tone to the Kidneys, Stomach and Blood, thereby preventing a continuance of Rheumatic poison and putting new activity into muscles, nerves and joints. Bodi-Tone should be used by all women suffering from any Female Ailment, for its splendid toning properties have been found of special value in such ailments.

We Risk All

Why delay another day, when a trial of this proven medicine is yours for the asking? Why keep on suffering, when by clipping the coupon, filling in your name and address and mailing it to us, you can get a twenty-five days' treatment of this great remedy which has already restored thousands to health, which thousands everywhere are trying about? It just costs a stamp and you don't pay a penny unless it benefits. The powers of Bodi-Tone have been amply proven by three years of glorious cures. It has been tested by thousands, in a great variety of ailments in both sexes at all ages. Persons suffering from Rheumatism, Stomach Trouble, Kidney, Liver and Bladder Ailments, Uric Acid Diseases, Female Troubles, Bowel, Blood and Skin Affections, Dropsy, Piles, Catarrh, Anemia, Sleeplessness, LaGrippe, Fains, General Weakness and Nervous Breakdown, have tested Bodi-Tone and fully proven its remedial value in such disorders. Read the reports, send for a box and try it.

Did More For Him Than Three Specialists

CARRERS, GA.—I had been diseased for fifteen years, with what the doctors called Systemic Catarrh, I had pains all through my body, in my Bowels, Stomach and Back, and my Heart would flutter and another so it appeared that I could not live. I had Indigestion and Constipation, with blind spells. Everything I ate soured on my Stomach. It seemed I could not stand it much longer. I tried all the doctors in my settlement and three specialists of Atlanta, Ga., and most of the patent medicines I heard of, without any relief, until I got Bodi-Tone. By the time I had taken a treatment of Bodi-Tone I could eat anything I wanted, and there was not a pain in my body. Bodi-Tone has done more for me than all the doctors could do. I am seventy-five years old. J. F. PETTY.

Rheumatism From Neck To Ankles, With a Bad Cough

LANTANA, TENN.—I had Rheumatism for twenty-five years from my Neck to my Ankles, Catarrh of the Head for about twenty years and a very bad Stomach for about five years. I took medicine from the doctor all last Summer. I had a terrible swimming in my head for years, and last Winter I took a terrible cough and spit up quantities of mucus, which the doctors said was Bronchial Asthma. They doctored me all winter with but little benefit. I saw Bodi-Tone advertised, sent for a trial box, and I got my cure from this medicine. I am stouter this Winter than I have been in thirty years and seem to be entirely cured of all my troubles. I have gained thirty-two pounds since taking Bodi-Tone, and can walk ten miles in a day. I am sixty years old. I owe all my good health to Bodi-Tone and believe it saved my life. Mrs. EMILY DRYER.

Kidney, Bladder, Stomach and Heart Trouble

WAUSEON, OHIO.—Bodi-Tone has done wonders for me. Last Fall I was so run down that I could hardly get up and down. I doctored and received only temporary relief. I tried everything and had about made up my mind that there was no help. I could not eat and didn't seem to crave anything. Everyone thought I would not live through the winter, and I really thought so myself. My Kidneys and Bladder were so bad, and my Stomach also. I had such weak spells with my Heart that it was not safe for me to start out to walk, as I could only stand on my feet a little while. My head was Dizzy. I saw the Bodi-Tone offer and decided to try once more. I have not felt so well for years as I do since I used Bodi-Tone. I am in my seventy-second year and can do a days' work. Everyone is surprised to see me as I am now. They all can see what Bodi-Tone has done for me. A. SAMS.

What a Man Says of Himself.

Of all the men who have lived in the Christian era, we may safely say that none has received such encomiums of praise as the apostle Paul. He has not only been called the greatest Christian, but he has been called the greatest man. It has been pointed out that he was a "great traveler," "great writer," "great orator," "great philosopher," "great organizer." A better term is used, and one that includes all of these attainments, when we simply say: "He was a great follower of the Lord Jesus Christ." He was one of the comparatively few Christians who could afford to say: "Be ye imitators of me, even as I also am of Christ." (1 Cor. 11: 1.)

But my lesson on Saul this week does not cover that part of his career which calls for such eulogies. Rather than tell you what men have said of him, I shall dwell especially upon what he said of himself. Daniel Webster once spent a summer in New Hampshire and attended a little country church morning and evening. His niece asked him why he went there, when he paid so little attention to far abler sermons in Washington. He replied: "In Washington they preach to Daniel Webster, the statesman, but this man has been telling Daniel Webster, the sinner, of Jesus of Nazareth."

The Pit from Which Saul Was Dug.

No doubt the brightest and costliest jewel that shines in some ruler's crown to-day was once dug out of the miry clay, was ground and polished before it began to shine. It should be worth our while to consider the background of Saul's conversion, the pit out of which this great Christian was dug. The name "Saul" signifies in the Hebrew "asked of God." He was probably named for the first king of Israel, the fierce and unrelenting persecutor of David, a fitting name for the fierce and unrelenting persecutor of "David's greater Son" in the persons of his disciples. Saul's parents were pure-blooded Jews, but they were Roman citizens. Professor Ramsay tells us that this fact "may be taken as proof that his family was one of distinction and at least moderate wealth." Saul was born in Tarsus, the chief city of Cilicia, at the northeastern corner of the Mediterranean. In his time it was a metropolis, a free city with a free harbor, mistress of a large and fertile territory. Tarsus was noted for its educational advantages, it being one of the great university cities of the Mediterranean world. So great a scholar as Strabo tells us that the Tarsian university surpassed in some respects those at Athens and Alexandria. It is significant that nothing has been handed down concerning its football victories. Its progress lay along other lines. I once heard a very public-spirited man who lived in a rather remote and unpromising town say he was "for his town, anyway," and he added with an outburst of patriotic zeal: "If I lived in Hades, I would holler for it." Saul did not have to strain his imagination when he revealed his pride in Tarsus. After the same manner that we call ours the "City of Opportunity," Saul could say to the Roman officer who rescued him from the Jerusalem mob: "I am . . . a citizen of no mean city." (Acts 21: 39.)

As a boy young Saul learned tent-making, for the wise rabbinical law required every Hebrew boy to learn a trade. Tarsus was celebrated for its goats'-hair cloth, and the making of tents was the commonest trade there. He received his elementary education in the synagogue, reading, writing, and simple arithmetic. He was given a thorough grounding in the Scriptures. He was not allowed to go to the university at Tarsus. That would have been contrary to Jewish feeling and custom; but he was sent to Jerusalem to study under Gamaliel, one of the great Hebrew scholars of his time. Under this famous teacher he "studied with passionate devotion, the literature, the law, and the hope of Israel." Religiously speaking, he was a Pharisee, one of the party advocating the strictest observance of the law and adding to the law a multitude of man-made particulars. All the elements of Saul's birth and education combined to fit him for preaching the gospel to the Gentiles. His life in Tarsus introduced him to the world of commerce, to traders and students from many lands. His strict Hebrew home life and education brought him into closest touch with the Jews and gave him entrance to every synagogue. His familiarity with Greek language and customs at Tarsus brought him into touch with the Gentile world. His possession of Roman citizenship made him safe in all parts of the Roman empire. He learned a trade which could make him a living wherever he went. In modern times many books have been written and many lectures have been delivered on the importance of manual labor. In Saul's time they did not write books on the subject, nor spend hours delivering and listening to lectures along this line; but every Hebrew boy did learn his trade.

The Chief of Sinners.

It was natural that Saul should hate the Christians. He was deeply religious, and he felt that the Christians were overthrowing the very foundation of his fathers' religion. His opinion of Christ was based on the slanders current among the Pharisees, representing Jesus as a heretic, a brawler, a fanatic, and a blasphemer. It was this false notion of Christ and his followers that created in Saul's heart an intense hatred for them. I do not know of any other example in literature that compares with the description of his persecution of the Christians. And the fine thing about the description is that most of it comes from his own lips in the shape of "an honest confession" that is "good for the soul." Luke tells us that he took care of the garments of those who stoned Stephen, "was consenting unto his death," and that he was "breathing threatening and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord." His desire to kill them became the very breath of his life. But Paul himself tells us that he "shut up many of the saints in prison," "strove to make them blaspheme," and "persecuted them even unto foreign cities." He tells us he persecuted the church "beyond measure." We learn from this that a man may be as deeply in earnest in propagating error as in disseminating truth; as conscientious in doing wrong as in doing right; as zealous in persecuting the church of God as in preaching the gospel of Christ. He represents himself as a blasphemer, a persecutor, and the chief of sinners. If you had been asked to name the greatest of sinners, would you have named the apostle Paul? Hardly. How did it come to pass that Paul so judged himself? His standard of judgment was not his fellow-men, but Jesus Christ himself. He had seen himself in his Savior's light on the road to Damascus, and recalling how he had tried to make the saints blaspheme, and realizing that in persecuting them he had persecuted Christ, he is appalled by the blackness of his guilt. But what gave him the bad preëminence of being the chief of sinners? Some think that the greatest sinners among us are the saloon-keepers, the drunkards, and the gamblers. I do not entertain this view. It was not indulgence in gross sins and degrading vices, such as profanity, drunkenness, and debauchery, that made Saul the chief sinner. Saul was a clean young man; he was not a sinner of this kind. Sinners of this class are to a great extent without influence. They injure and destroy themselves rather than others. Their excesses disgust and repel all who have not fallen as low as themselves. It is the man of orderly habits, of courteous manners, of learning and wit, of position and wealth, who, when an enemy of truth and righteousness, wields an immense power for evil. Such a man instills the poison of unbelief and immorality into the hearts of the young and unsuspecting and leads them astray before they are aware of their danger. This is a thing to be remembered by parents on sending their children away to college. There are some of the Class A colleges and universities who are not only fostering, but openly teaching, infidelity under the guise of higher criticism. I heard a good man say not long since: "I had rather see my son or my daughter dead than to know that they were under such a teacher's influence." It is always safe to keep your children near you, where you can put your finger upon their thought and guide and influence their lives in the right direction. Remember, God has not only given you their bodies, but he has committed their souls into your care. He that gets drunk and wallows in the mire may plead the strength of his depraved appetite as an excuse to some extent for his vice; he that steals food or raiment for himself or his family may plead the want and woe of starving and shivering wife and children in extenuation of his offense; he that smites his fellow-man to death may plead the greatness of the provocation and the heat of his anger as a palliation of his crime; but the man who opposes the truth and persecutes those who hold it assails the highest and most enduring interests of humanity, defies the authority of Jehovah, and tramples the blood of Jesus under his unhallowed feet.

The "Peoples' Church" a Farce.

Reviewing his acts of persecution against Christians, Paul said in his masterly address before Agrippa: "I verily thought with myself that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth." (Acts 26: 9.) This statement utterly explodes the prevalent but pernicious idea that it matters not what a man believes or thinks, provided he is sincere. In one of the Northern cities there is a church called the "Peoples' Church," where any one is eligible for membership who believes something and is conscientious in that belief. Jews and Gentiles, Catholics and Protestants are all welcome, just so they "believe what they believe." It is not necessary to be baptized unless you think it is necessary to be baptized. You need not partake of the Lord's Supper unless you feel like it. The prophets would have condemned an institution like that. They would have written on its walls the question that appeals to our common sense: "Can two walk together, except they be agreed?" (Amos 3: 3.) The apostle Paul would have inveighed against it, not only by his teaching, but by his own experience. Saul of Tarsus was sincere and conscientious in doing the very things that made him chief of sinners. In this he verified one of the Savior's prophetic warnings: "They shall put you out of the synagogues; yea, the hour cometh, that whosoever killeth you shall think that he offereth service unto God." (John 16: 2.) It does matter, then, what a man thinks and believes. Indeed, it is a matter of vital importance. No amount of sincerity can change error into truth, wrong into right, or give to the one the power and value of the other. The body of a sweet little babe was let down into the cold grave because her loving mother with her own gentle hand had administered a large dose of morphine sincerely believing it was quinine. Poison kills just as surely when thought to be food or medicine as when known to be poison. So error misleads and destroys though it may be conscientiously believed to be the truth. Jesus said: "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." It was only after Paul learned the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, obeyed it, and was baptized into his spiritual body that he was able to say: "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." O, the joy of the time when Christ lifted him from the deep, dark pit of his own conscience and made him a monument of God's mercy, an "example of them who should thereafter believe on him unto eternal life!" Do not deceive yourself with the thought that you are all right so long as you are honest in your religious views, but study the word of God that you may find the truth as it came to Paul, and, obeying it, may know that you have passed from death unto life.

A Mixture of Reproof and Tenderness.

The first time I read the story of Jesus' appearing unto Saul on the way to Damascus, I received the impression that when this noted sinner heard the voice saying unto him, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" the words must have been very stern and full of wrath. But I have long ago changed my view. The more that I study the dealings of my blessed Savior, the more I am impressed with his infinite tenderness in dealing with sinners. The repetition of Saul's name is characteristic of the Jesus of the Gospels. I see him again in that quiet home in Bethany, and I hear him say: "Martha, Martha, thou art anxious and troubled about many things: but one thing is needful." I see him again standing over against the holy city, his heart aching and his hands stretched out in mute appeal: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, that killeth the prophets, and stoneth them that are sent unto her! how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!" Again I see him about to enter the garden of Gethsemane, and I hear him say: "Simon, Simon, behold, Satan asked to have you, that he might sift you as wheat: but I made supplication for thee, that thy faith fail not." Every time I hear the repetition I find a mixture of reproof and of tender pity. And now when I study this lesson of conversion, I do not hear words of anger, but I hear a voice of yearning speaking in terms of ineffable tenderness: "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" And again: "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest. It is hard for thee to kick against the goads." It is hard for anybody to do that. It is hard to realize that Jesus wants you; that Jesus died to save you; that you know the way, but you will not come. Saul might have turned his back on the Savior. Moved by arrogance, he might have kept quiet about the matter and continued to propagate the religion of his fathers. He might have pleaded family pride or offered some of the excuses that men offer to-day. But Saul was not "disobedient to the heavenly vision." He was a man of action. With him, to perceive a truth was to seek to carry it out in his life. That principle made the chief of sinners the empire builder of the kingdom of Christ in the world. Dean Stanley said: "That event changed the fortunes of mankind." Bishop Lee said: "It ranks by the side of the call of Abraham, the exodus from Egypt, the overthrow of Jerusalem, the discovery of America, and the reformation of the sixteenth century." And Schaff, the distinguished scholar, said: "The conversion of such a man and with such results is one of the strongest proofs of the resurrection."

Christ Knows Your Name.

Luke, the historian, with the delicate touch and technical language of a physician, tells that the scales fell from Saul's eyes. His feelings must have been like those of a painter's daughter who had been blind from childhood, but whose sight was restored by a skillful operation. Her father was a noble man in character as well as in personal appearance. When the daughter saw him, she cried out: "Just to think that I had a father like this so many years, and I never knew him!"

Christ called Saul by name. Just so the Savior knows my name. God knows you. Christ knows you. He can call your name as he called the name of Saul. He knows all about you. He knows the street you live on, the number of your house. He knows the impulse that prompts you when the preacher presses home the gospel invitation. "God is angry with me," said Luther one day to his teacher. "No," said the teacher, "you are angry with God." If you are not angry with God, if you have nothing against his Son, he can save you, as he saved Saul. And you can say with the chief of sinners: "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and of the knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past tracing out!"

Itinerary Notes.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

I reached Obion on Saturday evening, January 29, and preached until Monday night. I did not get out to Glass on Sunday evening on account of the roads. Obion County, I am told, is the fifth county in the State in point of wealth, but they have about as bad roads in the winter as any county in the State. There is a growing feeling in the minds of the citizens that the roads ought to be improved. It would add greatly to their material prosperity and it could help their religious growth. There is nothing that improves people intellectually and religiously like meeting together, if they meet for the right purpose. People cannot be as useful or as helpful to each other housed up as they can to come in contact with each other in a social and religious way. Christianity should make an effort to improve the roads of this good county. Obion is the home of Brother T. M. Carney, a faithful preacher of the ancient gospel, who is satisfied with that which is clearly revealed in the Word. The church in Obion is doing a great work. It is composed of fine people who are not afraid to spend their time and money for the advancement of the cause of the Master. They are not liable to be bothered much with innovations upon the worship as long as they retain the leadership they now have. Here we see more of the faithful work of Brother John R. Williams.

From Obion I went to Newbern and preached on Tuesday night. They have the organ and other aids (!) in the church at Newbern, but it was left out the night I preached there. There are several there who do not believe in its use in the worship, but they are not meeting. Several meet with the church, and they use the organ, but they try to console themselves with the idea that they can worship God in other acts of worship and not be responsible for the things that are done which they do not believe in. But I do not consider that the truth, the whole truth, is represented in Newbern. The church that is now in Newbern is so mixed and interwoven with sectarianism that they simply will not stand for the whole truth. They are trying, I fear, to build up by catering to popularity rather than by contending for the truth. Nearly all the denominations have greatly the advantage of them on the popularity question, and so they have but little chance. If they would throw that all down and begin to preach the word, not alone on morality, but on what it takes to make a Christian and on the items of Christian worship, something might be done at Newbern. As it is, they will likely drift along on good terms with the denominations, but used too much as a foot mat for them all. They need a man at Newbern to rally the forces and establish the pure worship there. There are a number of true believers there, but they are timid and not yet ready to take hold of the matter and brave the storm of persecution they know would break loose on them should they try it. Certainly some one will try it before long. I pray that it may be soon undertaken with firmness, and yet in a spirit of kindness and brotherly love. Nothing should be done through strife or vainglory, but in lowliness of mind, with meekness and gravity, the work should be undertaken.

Dyersburg was my next stop. Here the faithful few meet in the courthouse; but as there was no appointment made and the weather was cold, I did not have the pleasure of speaking for them. I spent the night at Dyersburg pleasantly with Brother Moore and saw most of the little courthouse congregation in their homes. I learned that Brother Brigance preaches for them once a month, and with his efficient help they should grow. They are hoping to be able in the near future to build a house and make the work permanent.

After leaving Dyersburg, I stopped off at Halls, but found I could not reach Antioch, where I had an appointment, on account of the roads. There are ten or twelve sisters at Halls who do not worship with the church there on account of the innovation, but they have no leader and consequently are doing nothing. I stopped here with Sister Wright, who is the daughter of Brother George Haynes, who used to live at old Rock Springs, in Rutherford County, but who now lives in the land celestial. We made a hasty appointment at Gates, five miles below, and went down and preached on Friday night. There is a small band that meets regularly at Gates, but they need encouragement and help. Kindness, gentleness, but firmness with patience, are all greatly needed.

A Modern Evangelist.

BY F. W. SMITH.

A very earnest request has been received at this office that an article appear in the Gospel Advocate relative to "Billy" Sunday, the noted evangelist. I know nothing of Mr. Sunday, save what has appeared in newspaper reports of his sermons and a tract from his pen on the "Second Coming of Christ." Hence what is now said has no reference whatever to his personal character, but to his teaching as a professed preacher of the gospel of Christ. That he has wonderful drawing powers cannot be denied; but the methods used in giving play to these powers are, in the judgment of many sober-minded people, very questionable indeed. The truth is, if he be correctly reported, his methods would, if found in the Bible, render that book as useless as a faded flower. If the antics and language ascribed to Mr. Sunday had characterized the preaching of Christ, Peter, James, and John, or any evangelist of the New Testament, it would have killed the Bible so completely that no one would have much respect for it. And yet professed believers in the Bible flock by the thousands to see a man act dramatically in the pulpit and hear him use language very unbecoming any one professing Christianity. If he has ever told a single sinner what to do to be saved from his past sins in the language of the inspired apostles, it has entirely escaped my notice. He preaches the old mysterious doctrine of a direct operation of the spirit in conversion, and ignores Peter's answer to inquiring sinners in which they were told: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins." (Acts 2: 38.) If he were to preach Peter's sermon on Pentecost without note or comment, it would kill his meeting. He dare not preach the commission (Mark 16: 15, 16), insisting on obedience in baptism in order to reach the promise "shall be saved." To do so would be to lose his popularity and scatter his vast audiences.

In his tract on the "Second Coming of Christ," he teaches the premillennial doctrine, over which many religious teachers seem to have gone daft. He holds that Christ will come and establish his kingdom so soon as his body, the church, is completed; that when the last soul is converted necessary to complete Christ's body, that he will then come. Just where he learned that it took a definite number of souls to complete Christ's body, he does not tell us. Christ had a body while Paul was on the earth—at least, that inspired apostle thought so. "Now ye are the body of Christ, and severally members thereof." (1 Cor. 12: 27.) Again: "For in one Spirit were we all baptized into one body." (1 Cor. 12: 13.) The apostle does not say it is a part of his body or an incomplete body, but he says it is the body of Christ. It was as complete then as it will ever be, in so far as numbers are concerned. That is Russellism. But I am reminded here that it will not do to call a man's doctrine

"Russellism," although he may teach one or more of Mr. Russell's peculiar tenets. Well, I shall do it, anyway, without the fear of any man's proving to the contrary. Mr. Sunday teaches Judaism (there I go again violating the rules of etiquette in calling a thing "Judaism") by contending that Christ will establish a kingdom when he comes on the earth, and that sacrifices—animal sacrifices—will be established. He does not tell us for what purpose, but he just knows it will be done, and, Blackstone-like, the temple will be rebuilt, etc. You see, Mr. Sunday interprets the prophecies literally, assuming that the ones he so interprets have never been fulfilled.

Finally, as a preacher of the gospel of Jesus Christ, "Billy" Sunday is a colossal failure. Sam Jones is the first man that started in this country the sensational style of preaching adopted by Mr. Sunday, who is trying to imitate Mr. Jones.

My Visit to the Fanning Orphan School.

BY FRANCIS M. TURNER.

As I have all my time on Sundays taken up in regular appointments, I have no time for work at other places, except on fifth Sundays. I rarely ever get an opportunity for visiting among the churches. But on Sunday, January 30, I had a most delightful visit to the Fanning Orphan School, which is under the management of David Lipscomb, Jr.

At the morning service there were five confessions. These young ladies I buried with their Lord in baptism the following afternoon. At the night service another young lady made the good confession. She was baptized the next morning just after breakfast.

The Bible is taught daily in the Fanning Orphan School, and that is why the pupils there so readily accept the gospel call to repentance and baptism. There are no more attentive listeners than the Fanning girls.

The school is one of the best-equipped institutions in the South. There you will find system in both the school and the farm management. I do not know of a place managed in better style. The girls are taught the household arts as well as books. The proof of the pudding is the eating. All you need to convince you of the efficiency of the household arts department is to dine at the table prepared by the trained hands of these noble girls. When you take a stroll over the farm and see all the modern conveniences, you are convinced that Professor Lipscomb understands farm management. Nothing but the keenest interest in such work would prompt Brother Lipscomb to take such pains to put everything in apple-pie order.

Sister Lipscomb is just as thoroughly interested in caring for the girls as Brother Lipscomb is in managing the school and the farm. The beauty of it all is that the girls go about their tasks with so much pleasure. They are ever ready to respond to duty's call.

This school is not properly understood by many of the brethren. It is not a school for the orphan children only, but it is a real girls' school of the highest type, worthy of the respect and hearty patronage of any Christian family. It is located five miles from Nashville in a most delightful section of the county. The air is pure and bracing, and there is no chance for vice such as is common to the city to reach the home.

If you are not acquainted with this school, visit it at your first opportunity, or write to Brother David Lipscomb, Jr., Route 1, Nashville, Tenn., for a catalogue of the school.

A sinner has not descended to the level of humility in repentance which God requires till he gets so he can confess his sins without saying anything about his righteousness or the palliating circumstances which go to reduce the gravity of his offense in his own eyes.—The Young People

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

"Come-to-Church" Effort in the East.

Philadelphia has promoted a "Come-to-Church" campaign. Cards were hung in the street cars, posters were put up over the city. The population was carefully canvassed and the results given to the ministers. Post cards have been issued to the preachers, fifty thousand in number, which are sent to the people whose absence from church has been noted. This is a good example. There should be more preaching from house to house. Churches should heed the admonition to exhort one another daily. House-to-house visitation can be made very effective.

Church Statistics Appear.

The statistics for American Christianity for 1915 have made their appearance. The religious bodies have made another good year's growth. The gains in membership reported by the large denominations for 1915 are as follows: Presbyterian, North, 55,000, the largest annual increase in its history; Disciples, 50,000; Baptists, North and South, 145,000; Episcopalians, 26,000; Lutherans, 60,000; Methodists, North, 104,000; and Roman Catholics, increase in population not in enrolled membership, 242,000. It is interesting to note how large a percentage of the religious population is in nine leading religious bodies. These have 33,800,000 out of the reported church population of 38,725,000. The percentage of gain is less than it used to be, and is now less than the percentage of growth in the population.

Every Christian should resolve to lead at least one person to Christ during the year 1916. This would give the church an unprecedented increase.

For Preachers.

We print below a little story taken from the Western Christian Union. There is a moral in it for those preachers who spend their time in loafing. Time is so short, eternity so long, heaven so sweet, and hell so awful that no minister should waste his time sitting in idleness. Here is the story:

Two pastors' wives were visiting together. One said: "I don't know what we will do—my husband is so discouraged. Somehow his people do not care to hear him preach, and our salary is far behind. My husband feels so blue that he does not like to visit the people and pray with them, and so he sits around at home nearly all the time." The other sister said: "We are getting along fine. My husband spends much of his time in visiting, and the people like to have him kneel and pray with them in their homes. Our congregations are always good, and our salary is paid up promptly." While the two good sisters were talking they were mending trousers. One was mending her husband's trousers at the seat, the other was mending her husband's trousers at the knees. "There's a reason."

Thinking and Drinking.

Man's mind can almost work miracles. It sweeps away almost every sort of obstacle—except sin. And drunkenness is a deadly foe to the mind. So some one has said: "Drinking makes thinking impossible; some day thinking will make drinking impossible." The first half of that epigram is true; the second half is not. No matter how evident the deadly disasters of drinking are made to the mind of man, his thinking will never make drink disasters impossible—though it may by law banish the saloon. For such drinking is sin; and the clearest, most concentrated thought of man will never drive sin out. One or another individual, or a great many individuals, may, by thought and will power, forever stop drinking; but mankind will never, by taking thought, make this or any other sin-caused thing impossible. Sin will be impossible when God is all and in all; and that day will not be ushered in by the help of man's mind.—Sunday School Times.

When public sentiment is what it should be, many people will be deterred from drinking. When men think wisely and correctly, many will be influenced not to drink by the terrible crimes that are attributable to drunkenness. May God speed the day when all men shall love the truth and work righteousness.

What Are Religious Fundamentals?

The Christian Century editorially says: "Theology has emphasized doctrines, ordinances, and ritual, as well as fundamental elements of religion. The prophets and the Master emphasized love and the sacrificial life."

On this subject the Christian Century also declares:

If any of these first Christians had been catechized regarding their views on the trinity or inspiration or the atonement or church orders or ordinances, they would have made but a sorry showing. Yet they seem to have met the entire approval of the apostles. Cornelius, the Roman captain, may have had some instruction in the theories of his pagan faith, but Peter required of him no technical knowledge of religion in any form. He only said: "In every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him." Nor did that other captain with whom Jesus spoke in Galilee know more of the subtleties of religion. But the Master said of him: "I have not found such faith, no, not in Israel." And to the dying thief, who had opened to him his confidence, he said: "This day shalt thou be with me in paradise."

Men have tried to conceal the significance of these great sayings by insisting that in some strange way the conditions of life were changed after the Lord's departure, and the same assessments of life were no longer valid after the day of Pentecost. But Jesus' words are of an eternal quality. The simple truth is that he cared only for the life of love and sacrifice. Wherever he found it, he was satisfied. Wherever he found it lacking, he was disturbed.

It is certainly not the purpose of this journal to depreciate the value of love or a life of sacrifice. Paul wrote to the church at Rome: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your spiritual service." (Rom. 12: 1.) A greater than Paul said: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength." (Mark 12: 30.) John, the beloved disciple, writes: "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is begotten of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love." (1 John 4: 7, 8.) But it by no means follows that those who keep his commandments do not love God, for the same beloved John says: "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous." (1 John 5: 3.) But in order to put to shame just such writing as the editor of the Christian Century has published, the Holy Spirit, through John, emphatically affirms: "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." (John 14: 15.) With all who respect Bible teaching more than man's wisdom the Spirit shows the folly of taking the position that the Christian Century has done when he says: "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6: 46.) If men would love God sufficiently to keep his commandments, much confusion and strife would be avoided and the church would move triumphantly forward to victory.

The Church of Christ—Lesson VI.

4. How to Become Members of It.

(1) In a special address in which I was asked to answer the question, "Why am I a member of the church with which I stand identified?" I began by saying: "I am a member of the church of Christ because I cannot help it." This, at first, I felt sure, sounded strangely to the audience. But I explained by saying that the church of Christ, the institution he built, is so related to him that you cannot come to him for salvation without becoming, at the same time and in the same way, a member of his church. In my judgment, no truth has been kept from the people by modern teachers more than this one. Hence, I am exceedingly anxious that you see it so clearly revealed in God's holy word.

(2) Now turn to Acts 2: 47, and you find these words: "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." This is the King James Version. The American Revised Version says "those that were saved," or "were being saved." From this we learn that it is the Lord's business to add daily the "such as should be saved" to his church. There is no such thing as being saved to-day and at some future time being added to Christ's church; the day that you become "such as should be saved," on that very day the Lord adds you to his church. Too, we should be exceedingly thankful of this blessed truth—viz.: that he adds us to his church, not the Mormon Church or some other human organization.

(3) Now drop back in Acts 2 to verse 41, and you will see who "the such as should be saved," spoken of in verse 47, are. It says: "Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls." Read again verse 47, and you see who did the adding and to what they were added. Now, if you want to know the word they gladly received and obeyed, begin at verse 22 and read carefully through verse 40, and you will see. Christ, and him crucified, was preached to those people. They were convinced that he was the Christ, the Son of the living God. "They were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and the rest of the apostles, Brethren, what shall we do? And Peter said unto them, Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. For to you is the promise, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call unto him." With many other words he exhorted them to save themselves from that crooked generation. They that gladly received his word were baptized, and the same day were added by the Lord to his church. Do you see? In the same way do we become members of the church to-day. It is the preacher's duty to preach Christ, and him crucified, unto the people, tell them what he says do, and exhort them to do it. This is all the preacher can do. It is the sinner's part to gladly receive the word preached and obey it. This is all that he can do. It is the Lord's work to save those who do this and add them to his church.

(4) Hence we are now in condition to see the folly of man's talking about opening the doors of the church of Christ. Man cannot do this. He can preach Christ unto the people, tell the people what Christ says, and beg them to obey it, as stated above. This covers his work, so far as getting people into the church is concerned. Christ has "the key of David;" he is the one "that openeth and none shall shut, and that shutteth and none openeth." (See Rev. 3: 7.) Remember that Christ said: "Upon this rock I will build my church." (Matt. 16: 18.) He is the builder. And he builds by taking those that obey him and adding them to his church, each soul being a "living stone" in this building. (1 Pet. 2: 5.) You cannot gladly receive his words and obey them without becoming a member of his church; for he adds to his church every soul that obeys him. Hence the church, which is called "the house of God" (1 Tim. 3: 15), is spoken of as those who obey him in contradistinction to those who do not obey him (see 1 Pet. 4: 17). Please to note here that the Spirit says that judgment must "begin at the house of God [the church]; and if it begin first at us [the house of God], what shall be the end of them that obey not the gospel of God?" Those who "obey not the gospel of God," then, are a class of people spoken of as not being members of the house of God. If you obey the gospel of God, you will become a member of God's house, for our Lord adds all such to his church. There are, therefore, just as many members of the church of Christ as there are souls who have obeyed the gospel. How glad we should be that the question as to our being members of the church of Christ is not one to be settled by human judgment by prejudiced, sectarian hobbyists! Praise God that "the firm foundation of God standeth, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his!" (2 Tim. 2: 19.)

(5) Christ is the door of this blessed institution, hence is the only one who has the right to say on what conditions you may enter. (See John 10: 9; and read again Rev. 3: 7.)

(6) He gave these conditions to his apostles, as you will see in Matt. 16: 18, 19; 28: 18-20; Mark 16: 15, 16. Read in connection with this what Paul has to say about it in 2 Cor. 5: 18-20. In talking to Cornelius, he called the entrance a birth "of water and of the Spirit." (See John 3: 5.)

(7) These conditions were first given to the people by the apostles on the day of Pentecost, which we have studied under numbers (2) and (3) above. The people on that day were found out of the kingdom. But when the day's work had ended, the three thousand who gladly received the words of the apostles and obeyed them were in the kingdom. Hence they were born of water and of the Spirit; for Christ says you cannot enter without this. But the record simply speaks of penitent believers being baptized in the name of Christ. This is what being born of water and the Spirit means. (See 1 John 2: 29.)

Don't fail to study what is given above on how to become a member of the church of Christ with what was said in Lesson V. on the importance of becoming members. Note the harmony.

"Studies in Recent Adventism."

We have on hand a few copies of the scholarly book on the above subject, written by Henry C. Sheldon. It is an especially timely review and analysis of the assumptions, claims, and teachings of Adventism. The name of the author guarantees the character of the book—its lucidity, its scholarly style, its weight of authority. It will be an invaluable antidote to the materialism, Russellism, and premillennialism of to-day, and a strong weapon for students and preachers who must meet and answer this false teaching.

In view of the recent agitation concerning David's throne and the claim that the kingdom of Christ has not been established, but will be established in the near future in the city of Jerusalem, this book should receive a careful reading and wide circulation. We will send the book, postpaid, for fifty cents. Write quick, as the supply is limited.

Out of Dresses.

[This is a chapter from Brother McCaleb's new book, "Memories of Early Days." Our readers can secure the book for fifty cents, postpaid. Send orders to J. M. McCaleb, Tokyo, Japan.—EDITOR'S NOTE.]

Long after I had outgrown them I can remember seeing the little dresses I used to wear, laid away in the drawer; for, being the last and the least, there was no younger member of the family who might fall heir to them. And I also remember quite distinctly when this change was made. My mother had made me a pair of panties that buttoned on to a waist, or body, and the eventful day came when I must change from baby dresses to garments, showing that I was no longer "it," but "he"—no longer a baby, but a little boy. But I was by no means well pleased with the change. In the first place, it was something I had not been accustomed to, and, being somewhat of a conservative nature, my heart did not take so readily to the new idea. But the chief objection to the innovation was not so much because of its being of a different style, but because of the buttons on the waist. They did not strike my fancy in the least, but the very sight of them was hateful to me. They were of smooth, white glass that came up to a point in the center, and were quite conspicuous and shiny. Very nice little buttons they were as I now think of them, but for some reason they were exceedingly distasteful to me. Neither was this from training; it was inbred. Though in no way fussy or fantastic about dress, but possibly, in the eyes of some, a bit neglectful as to personal appearance, yet I have always been hard to please when it comes to buttons. Even now, when buying a suit of clothes, one of the first things that catches my eye is the buttons. If they are not according to my liking, the suit is laid aside for another. Covered buttons are more to my taste than others till they get slick or begin to peep through; then they are the worst of all. If I could manage to get on without buttons altogether, as the Japanese do, I would like it better still.

But, not to get too far away from my story, I remember the very place where my mother tried to get me into that first pair of little trousers. It was out on the old piazza to the right as one comes out of the house. She took off my little dress, and, holding the panties up before me as she bent over from behind, tried to get me to put my foot in; but I squirmed and twisted, and shook my little rebellious elbows back and forth, and stamped up and down, and cried. I can hear her even now as she tried to coax me into them, but without success at that time. Finally she brushed me out to play and went on about her housework till the naughty spell should wear off. I do not remember in this particular instance whether it was true or not, but, judging from the way she usually dealt with her children, no doubt she reasoned the case with me till I became reconciled. Be this as it may, not many days had passed till I went visiting with her up to Cousin Myatt's as proud of my new suit, in spite of the buttons, as most little boys are at such times.

Our mother often admonished and sometimes scolded, but rarely ever whipped. I have no remembrance of ever feeling the sting of a switch from her hand. Child ideas and sentiments may seem to older people foolish and unreasonable; but to the child they are very real and deep-seated, and a wise parent will endeavor to enter into the child's thoughts and feelings and, as far as possible, consider the matter from the child's point of view. Children are born with certain traits, tastes, and weaknesses—with bad tempers, dull minds, timid feelings, lazy dispositions, and kindred misfortunes—for which they are no more responsible than some are for having crossed eyes, a stub nose, or a humped back. Parents and others to whom children are committed should act with discretion and take all these things into consideration and train with patience and kindness, rather than scold and abuse. Parents are often found scolding their children when they ought to be teaching them.

Art of Keeping Well.

The art of keeping well is a matter of keeping busy. I am fifty-eight years old. I have never been sick an hour; never consulted a doctor. My father is a physician. He is ninety-four years old. My mother is eighty-five. Both are well, hearty, and work every day. I was educated for a physician. A man should live to five times the length of time that it takes him to reach his maturity. He is physically grown at twenty. Five times twenty is one hundred, so I am told. Here is the recipe for living a hundred years:

1. Deep breathing in the open air, with your mouth closed.
2. Moderate in eating; simple dishes; Fletcherize; eat fruit every day, especially bananas.
3. Exercise at least two hours in the open each day—walking, working in the garden, playing with the children.
4. Sleep eight hours in a thoroughly ventilated room.
5. Drink all the water between meals you care to.
6. Don't bother to forgive your enemies; just forget them.
7. Keep busy. It is a beautiful world, and we must and will and can leave it more beautiful than we found it.

There are two classes of people in the world—those who eat too much and those who eat too little. Almost every one who has an unlimited quantity of food at his disposal overeats. Fortunately, those in moderate circumstances who overeat have to work, and this is their salvation. They absorb enough oxygen so that they burn up the slag. God help the rich; the poor can work.

Man needs opposition. When he has everything his own way, he is in a very dangerous position. 'Tis then he makes a fool of himself, if ever.

The rich have a few diseases, with their other possessions, that are all their own. Bright's disease, cirrhosis of the liver, appendicitis, are all distinctly rich men's diseases. Appendicitis comes from overeating, lack of physical exercise, and medication. Cirrhosis of the liver is distinctly a disease of men who use spirituous liquors, who underexercise and underbreathe. Bright's disease is the possession of the "rounder," the "boozer," and the man with a heart full of hate.

It is a tragic thing to think that in the big cities of America thousands of school children are underfed. The child that has not had a good breakfast cannot study. Growing youth needs nutritious food.

In the country and in the villages lack of food is only a pleasantry. In the big cities are found the two extremes—the people who overeat and the people who are slowly starving.

Intelligence does not belong to any one class. Certainly high intelligence is not the exclusive possession of the rich.

Dr. S. Weir Mitchell once said: "Ninety per cent of all my patients are suffering from malnutrition. They eat about one-third more than they really need, and, as a consequence, are sick fully one-third of the time." Meal once a day is quite enough for any one who works indoors. We should eat more fruit, salads, and less meat. Then we should breathe deeply in the open air and sleep in well-ventilated rooms. Fresh air is free.

No class in the world needs education so much as the wealthy. "Lord, enlighten thou the understanding of the rich," should be the prayer of every person who works for social betterment.—Elbert Hubbard.

Questions and Answers.

BY E. A. E.

Quitman, Ga., Route 1, January 3, 1916.—Dear Brother Elam: Having learned to regard you very highly through your articles in the Gospel Advocate, I am asking a favor of you. There was a congregation organized here at this place (Welcome Hill) about twenty years ago, and there has never been any elders appointed yet. Please explain the scriptural way of appointing or ordaining elders. Having no elders, the membership has been carelessly kept up with, some of the members (?) being so indifferent till it is hardly known who all profess to be members. Now, what would be the right and best way to adjust such unfavorable circumstances?
J. E. DYKES.

The time to appoint elders in a congregation should be determined, not by the number of years it has been in existence, but by the development of men with the qualifications of elders. Some congregations seem never to have developed such men or much of anything good. The reason is, such congregations do not work at the Lord's business, either public or private, and the members do not feel their individual responsibility to God and men. The Hebrew Christians were reproved for not developing into full-grown men spiritually, for not being able to teach others, and for having to be taught again the first principles of the oracles of God. (Heb. 5: 11-14.) How many deserve the same reproof to-day!

The facts of scripture are: Paul and Barnabas preached in Antioch in Pisidia, Iconium, Lystra, Derbe, and other places; people became Christians; they were started in all the public services of God and private work of Christians, were mutually edifying and encouraging, and in two or three years Paul and Barnabas returned and appointed elders in the congregations in these places. (Acts 14: 23.) There were churches on the island of Crete before there were any elders appointed in them. (Tit. 1: 5.) So now let two or three or more Christians—as many as are in a place—meet to worship God on the first day of the week, live as Christians should in their everyday lives, do all they can to teach and to have the Bible taught to others and to exert a good influence; then the congregation will grow; and when men have developed the qualifications of elders (which can be done in less than a lifetime), let these men be appointed and serve as such.

The qualifications of elders are given in 1 Tim. 3: 1-7; Tit. 1: 5-11. These are practical, not beyond the reach of human beings, and are applicable to men on earth and not to angels in heaven. These qualifications belong alike to all Christians, as development of body and mind to all human beings; but all are babes to begin with in either case. Those who are older in the church, wiser in the Scriptures, more developed and stronger in all parts of Christian character, and more capable in every way to set good examples and to teach and to help others, should develop the younger, and especially should care for the babes in Christ.

Both the qualifications and the work of elders should be more carefully studied by many and the duties of elders more faithfully discharged. This must be done before the church can be developed and protected as the New Testament teaches that it should be.

The Revised Version very properly uses the word "appoint" instead of "ordain." Elders are appointed, and they are not appointed arbitrarily. The men appointed must have developed before their appointment the qualifications. We have an example in Acts 6: 1-6 of a congregation's selecting men of certain specified qualifications to do a certain work. "Look ye out . . . from among you seven men of good report, full of the Spirit and of wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." There is no form or ceremony of looking out or finding men of certain qualifications to do a certain work. These men having been found, they were appointed by the apostles to do this work. There is no appointing ceremony or form of procedure given in the New Testament. It is stated, "And when they had prayed, they laid their hands upon them;" but this seems to be in addition to the appointment, and not a part of it. Hands were laid upon people to confer a blessing, some power, or something not before possessed and which the ones who laid on the hands could give. Some good men think that fasting, praying, and the imposition of hands constitute the appointing ceremony. With no intention of discussing the question, I say it has never been made clear to me that this is an appointing ceremony that those who have nothing to confer by the laying on of their hands can perform. Let, then, a congregation look out from among themselves men who have the qualifications of elders in the practical degree meant by the Bible and request them to serve as elders, and let this be announced to the congregation. No one now can bestow miraculous power or authority by the imposition of hands. The apostles bestowed miraculous power by the imposition of their hands. No one can know the qualifications of men in a congregation so well as the members themselves; hence no comparative stranger is competent to look out such men. Then, if there are men in the Welcome Hill congregation qualified to serve as elders, let them be looked out and requested and appointed to do so; but if there are not yet such men there, let the church work on until such have been developed. However, whether men are called "elders" or not, there are of necessity men who take the lead in the worship and in all the work of the church. These should continue to do so, and should receive all possible encouragement and help. Also, they should insist upon all others, who are capable, conducting the public services and doing all other work. It is best to engage all in some work; in fact, to be a Christian is to work in private if not in a public way, and in a public way if competent to do so. In this way only can a church be fully developed.

Amite, La., January 22, 1916.—Dear Brother Elam: Col. 1: 13 teaches that we are delivered out of the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of the Son of God's love, and 2 Pet. 1: 1-11 teaches that we who are Christians are to prepare for the entrance into the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. (1) Are there different stages of the kingdom? (2) If there are, are we in the preparatory stage? (3) If we are in the preparatory stage, when will it end, and when will the "eternal kingdom" begin? (4) Can both exist at the same time?

W. J. JOHNSON.

It will be profitable just at this time to study the kingdom of God, the Father's kingdom, the kingdom of heaven, the kingdom of Christ, the kingdom God set up "in the days of these kings," the kingdom which cannot be shaken, the kingdom which will never be destroyed but will stand forever, the heavenly kingdom, the kingdom prepared for the good from the foundation of the world, the eternal kingdom.

1. Let every one get a complete concordance and Bible and look up everything the Lord says about the kingdom. Nothing must be omitted or overlooked even.

2. It must be borne in mind that there are no conflicts or lack of harmony between the statements of the Bible on this or on any other subject. God never contradicts himself.

3. All the gracious Father in his wisdom sees is sufficient for the instruction and salvation of the race he has revealed. (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17.) Secret things belong to him. (Deut. 29: 29.)

4. Do the different expressions above concerning the kingdom mean so many different kingdoms, or so many different periods or stages of the same kingdom, or are they descriptive terms of the same kingdom?

5. It is worse than useless—it is divisive of the body of Christ and, therefore, sinful—to attempt to draw distinctions where God has drawn none; to attempt to explain that which God has not revealed and is, therefore, yet secret with him; and to take up and press the many questions which God says must be avoided. It is as wrong and sinful and divisive to refuse or fail to shun, to avoid, to let alone the many questions which God commands to be avoided, and for the reasons he gives, as it is to refuse or fail to preach that which he commands to be preached.

6. The word of God and the lives of men must not be measured by our unreal and hairsplitting distinctions, logical [the lack of it] deductions and conclusions, and vain reasonings; but the word of God—all that which God teaches on this and every other subject—must be our standard and guide; and when our theories and notions, reasonings and speculations, finely drawn distinctions, logical (!) deductions and wise (!) conclusions vanish into thin air before the revealed will of God or the silence of the Bible, they must go without regret and in the triumph of truth.

When we consult any dictionary, we will see that a kingdom is the territory ruled by a king. God's kingdom is his rule throughout the universe.

The earth is Jehovah's, and the fullness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein. (Ps. 24: 1.)

Jehovah hath established his throne in the heavens [notice, "the heavens"]; and his kingdom ruleth over all. (Ps. 103: 19.)

To the intent that the living may know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the lowest of men. (Dan. 4: 17.)

I blessed the Most High, and I praised and honored him that liveth forever; for his dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom from generation to generation; and all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing; and he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou? (Dan. 4: 34, 35.)

See, also, 2 Chron. 20: 5, 6; Ps. 47: 2, 8.

God's kingdom is coextensive with his rule as regards both time and territory. "Even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God." (See Ps. 90: 1-4.) A thousand years in God's sight is "as yesterday when it is passed."

Jesus existed "in the beginning" with God as "the Word." "The Word was with God, and the Word was God." "All things were made through him." (John 1: 1-3.) Now he upholds all things (Heb. 1: 1-4); in him "all things consist," or hold together (read Col. 1: 15-18). "The Word became flesh, and dwelt among us." (John 1: 14.) Jesus came "into the world"—came to earth—to establish God's rule over men, or God's kingdom on earth. He declares this to Pilate. (See John 18: 33-38.) God created all; but the race rebelled and the earth was filled with sin. (Gen. 6: 13.) God sent Jesus to restore God's rule over men, to reclaim the earth, which groans under the curse of sin. Jesus teaches his disciples to pray that God's will may be done on earth as it is in heaven. God gave Jesus all authority in heaven and upon earth to do this (see Matt. 28: 19, 20), and God made him King to rule over this. He is now King, and has been since his ascension to heaven—is to-day "the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords." (1 Tim. 6: 15.) Jesus' rule over men is God's rule over them. Jesus has not one kingdom and God another. God rules on earth through Jesus. Hence this rule on earth is called many times in the New Testament "the kingdom of God" (see a few of these—Matt. 12: 28; 21: 31, 43; Mark 9: 1; 15: 43; Luke 7: 28; 9: 27; 10: 9, 10; 16: 16; 17: 21; 1 Thess. 2: 12); it is frequently called "the kingdom of heaven;" it is called "the kingdom of the Son of God"—hence it is Christ's kingdom; its subjects are called "a kingdom" (Rev. 7: 6), "a holy nation" (1 Pet. 2: 9); and its rule is "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit" (Rom. 14: 17). Even David's throne and Solomon's throne was God's throne (see 1 Chron. 29: 23), because God ruled through them.

With this and much more that the Scriptures say before us, we ought to be able to answer these questions.

(1) Australia is not a "different stage" of the kingdom of Great Britain, but Great Britain's rule in Australia. God's rule on earth through Christ is not a "different stage" of God's kingdom from his rule anywhere else, but his rule among men. His rule through Jesus, the kingdom of Christ, began as a little stone developed, was established, people are now in it as subjects—"a royal nation"—"a kingdom," and this rule will never be overturned, but will stand forever. This stone becomes a mountain. But this is God's rule on earth, not "a stage" of his kingdom.

(2) Under this rule of God on earth through Jesus Christ the subjects are growing, developing, and preparing, as they escape from the corruption that is in the world by lust and become partakers of the divine nature, for heaven—for the change also of their human and vile bodies into the likeness of Christ's glorious body and to live in God's government, or under his rule, forever, "the eternal kingdom" of God.

(3) The word of God makes this plainer than men's theories and speculations can, and we must be contented with what God says. No theory can change that which God declares. He says:

Then cometh the end, when he shall deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have abolished all rule and all authority and power. For he must reign, till he hath put all his enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. For, He put all things in subjection under his feet. But when he saith, All things are put in subjection, it is evident that he is excepted who did subject all things unto him. And when all things have been subjected unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subjected to him that did subject all things unto him, that God may be all in all. (1 Cor. 15: 24-28.)

This is "the heavenly kingdom" (2 Tim. 4: 18) and "eternal kingdom" (2 Pet. 1: 11).

4. No. We have seen that there are not two kingdoms.

Causing Divisions and Occasions of Stumbling.

BY M. C. K.

Division among the followers of Christ comes from two separate and distinct sources. First, it comes from teaching and urging things which God requires men to do; and secondly, it comes from teaching and urging things which he does not require. Now, guilt is always involved in both cases; but in the former it attaches to those who refuse to accept the things taught and urged, while in the latter it attaches to those who do the teaching and urging.

Our Lord himself declares that he came to make division in the former of these ways. We give the fact in his own bold and solemn language: "Think not that I came to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I came to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; and a man's foes shall be they of his own household." (Matt. 10: 34-36.) "Think ye that I am come to give peace in the earth? I tell you, Nay; but rather division: for there shall be from henceforth five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three. They shall be divided, father against son, and son against father; mother against daughter, and daughter against her mother; mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law." (Luke 12: 51-53.)

Thus he distinctly declares that he came to send a sword and division; to array the members of the same family against one another, and to create division among them in spite of the tenderest of all earthly relationships. But, in the light of the context, and, for that matter, in the light of all the word of God, it can plainly be seen that division, in all such cases, is brought about not by the reckless and wanton spirit which presses its opinions or anything else which is not required of men by the Lord, but by solemnly presenting what is thus required and by its acceptance on the part of some and its rejection on the part of others. Division in such cases must come, but the guilt which it involves always attaches to those who refuse to accept the things required.

Now, it is a lamentable fact that in all ages of the church there have been those who disturbed its peace and harmony by causing division in the second of the ways here named. Strange indeed must be the infatuation which seizes one who will thus deliberately create division among the followers of Christ. In one of the many private letters received on the current baleful and regrettable controversy, a thoughtful brother says:

How any lover of the peace and unity among the brethren can ever bring himself to see that he ought affirmatively to urge any idea or notion to the disturbance of the peace of the church, except those things that are vital to the salvation of the people, is more than I have ever been able to understand. Brother Boll himself admits that his notions, whatever they are, are not at all vital to the salvation of people. This it seems to me would have held him back from the exploitation of his notions. But there is a peculiarity about the course of those who become imbued with some new idea. It overwhelms the individual till it becomes, in his mind, the beginning and end of all else.

No "lover of peace and unity among the brethren" will ever do such a thing unless, as just stated, he is seized by some strange infatuation; but instead of this being an extenuation, it is an aggravation of the offense. It is deplorable, too, that when men become thus dominated by the spirit of strife that is willing to rend the body of Christ, they lose all sense of shame over the outrageous spectacle which they present to the world. In the Literary Digest, February 5, 1916, we find the following report of such a scene:

In a little town on the Atlantic coast a church divided, a writer in the Christian Work (New York) tells us, "the outgoing element erecting their building just across the alley, which the town has named Hell's Alley," while the two factions, with no sense of shame, attend their respective churches, conducting prayers and songs and preaching and worship.

Surely such men in such a situation, if they will pause and seriously reflect for a moment, do not expect their "prayers and songs and preaching and worship" to be well pleasing to God or to be heard by him. These "Hell's Alleys of separation," says the Literary Digest, are in "our various denominations," and the unholy strife goes on. As if in defiance of the Most High himself, men continue to press their opinions and speculations and the revolting spectacle of strife and division continues. The only effective remedy for it is the divine remedy given by Paul to the church in Rome: "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them that are causing the divisions and occasions of stumbling, contrary to the doctrine which ye learned; and turn away from them." (Rom. 16: 17.)

When the bishops of the churches throughout the country and the churches under their leadership shall adopt this remedy, then, and only then, will the mouth of such disturbers of Zion be stopped. This high-handed sin of disturbing the peace of God's people has the distinction of being classed with the seven things hated by Jehovah: "There are six things which Jehovah hateth; yea, seven things which are an abomination unto him: haughty eyes, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood; a heart that devise wicked purposes, feet that are swift in running to mischief, a false witness that uttereth lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren." (Prov. 6: 16-19.)

Surely all who retain any regard for the cause of God will pause and reflect.

Some Questions Answered.

Brother Sewell: (1) Does 1 Tim. 2: 12 prohibit a woman from saying anything on Lord's day? Can she exhort the same as a man, so she does not take the lead to teach? (2) Does the word of God prohibit Christians from using tobacco? If so, are not Christians prohibited from selling it? (3) Is it right for Christians to fox hunt? There is getting to be lots of it done, and even elders sometimes do it. Please give us your advice on this, as it is getting worse. (4) Please explain 1 Cor. 11: 5, 6. Can a woman pray on Lord's day when we meet to remember Christ? (5) Please explain Matt. 24: 29-41. Doesn't verse 30 refer to the coming of Christ? Please answer these questions, giving all the light on them you can.

C. M. MOBLEY.

(1) The verse to which you refer in 1 Tim. 2: 12 is so closely connected with verse 11 of the same chapter that we give both verses together: "Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence." These verses have reference evidently to the public services and worship of the church, and do not refer to private life. If a woman knows more about the Bible than her husband, it would certainly be all right for her to teach him at home or anywhere in private. Aquila and Priscilla together taught Apollos "the way of the Lord more perfectly"—not publicly, but privately; took him unto themselves, doing the teaching in the private circle. So what Paul says in this passage evidently refers to teaching in the public assemblies of the church, just as in 1 Cor. 14: 34, 35, in which he says: "Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church." Evidently the word "church" in these passages does not mean a meetinghouse, as we so often use the word "church" in these days, but means Christians, the church of God assembled for public worship. For women to presume to preach or teach publicly in public assemblies of the saints is certainly rebellion against the plain teaching of the above passages. But we do not understand these passages to forbid women to teach the word of God in the home or a class of children to itself in the Lord's-day school, but in public worshipping assemblies it is certainly forbidden.

(2) There is nothing directly said on the subject of using or selling tobacco. Tobacco was not known till many centuries after the New Testament was written. But there are passages that seem to embrace the principle of the use of tobacco in some of its features, at least. James (1: 21) says to Christians: "Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls." (James 1: 21.) Now we will not affirm as to whether the use of tobacco is necessarily filthy or whether all of those who chew are filthy; but sure it is, if you look at a good many men who chew it, you will see the filth oozing out of the corners of their mouths, running down their chins onto their beard and upon their shirt bosoms. And if that is not filthy, what is? And if such would lay aside the use of tobacco, would they not look much cleaner? And in a few cases similar things have been seen in the case of women who use snuff. Now if all would cease to use it, would it not increase cleanness and decency? And doctors say the use of it tunes up the nerves too highly, and also say there is no nourishment in it to the human body. So, to say the best that can be said of it, the use of tobacco is a useless habit. But there is so much money involved in the tobacco trade, and involving also the bread and butter of so many people, that there is scarcely a show of hope to be entertained that the use and traffic of it will die out.

(3) There is no more harm in the simple matter of hunting foxes than there is in hunting wild ducks or quails, so far as I can see. The trouble lies in the behavior of fox hunters while they are out on their hunting trips. There is no harm in hunting the foxes that catch the chickens. So get after the hunters about their ungodly behavior and get them to be quiet on their hunting rounds, and not make fox hunting a pretext for improper conduct. And as to the elders that go into improper behavior, show them what the Bible says about the character of elders; and if they do not desist from all improper behavior, drop them from the eldership.

(4) Certainly Christian women should pray in worshipping assemblies, as well as men. But they should pray silently. They should not lead the prayers, should not speak out, but should in their hearts and in their thoughts make hearty amens to the prayers uttered by the brethren. They are not allowed to speak out in such assemblies or to in any way be public leaders in such meetings.

(5) The verses you name in this query are generally understood to have reference to the second coming of Christ. In verse 29 the word "immediately" is evidently used in a restricted sense, not meaning immediately in point of time; not that the second coming of Christ would be immediately after the destruction of Jerusalem, of which Jesus had just been speaking, but of the long period of time which would reach to the second coming, and that the second coming would be the next great event that would occur after the destruction of Jerusalem. The great working of God's providence will surely bring about the second coming and the final end of the world in due time. Prophets in foretelling future events were not as particular in measuring time as in stating the events they were foretelling, often stepping over long periods of time as though little or no time would prevail between the great events.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

Brother McQuiddy: Some one has asked about the healing of the lame man at the Beautiful gate, whether the lame man had faith himself, or was it faith only through the apostles Peter and John? Please let us hear what you have to say about it. (MISS) VIRGIE MINGEA.

It is not quite clear whether the apostles refer to their faith alone or to the faith of the lame man as well as their own. The faith referred to may have been the faith alike of both the healer and the healed, but there is no way of proving it. It is certain, however, that the power of the healing came through faith in the name of Christ. The apostles would have it distinctly understood that their power or holiness was not responsible for the miracle, but Jesus Christ alone was responsible.

Brother McQuiddy: Please answer the following: "The number of the men came to be about five thousand." Tell me where to find the two thousand, and also why the women were not included in this number. MARTHA DAUGHERTY.

The two thousand, no doubt, were the number added at the close of Peter's second sermon, which was delivered "in the porch that is called Solomon's." For an account of this sermon read the third chapter of Acts of Apostles. The term in the Greek (andres) does not properly include women; so that this is the number of male believers. It is probable that most of the converts of Pentecost and of this occasion were men. Oriental women were not likely to attend public gatherings in large numbers. It is an Oriental custom to number the men, leaving out the women. This may account for no mention of women.

Brother McQuiddy: (1) How and when did Jesus become perfect? Was it through temptation in the wilderness or death on the cross? (2) Do you think or find any scripture showing that Christ felt pain in dying or had the same feeling of pain that we do? (3) In what way are we baptized by the Spirit? (1 Cor. 12: 13.) CHRISTIAN.

(1) Christ was not made perfect by any specific act, but by the things he suffered during his life. "Though he was a Son, yet learned obedience by the things which he suffered; and having been made perfect, he became unto all them that obey him the author of eternal salvation." (Heb. 5: 8, 9.) (2) Christ was human as well as divine, so would naturally feel pain. He had upon him the weight of the sins of the whole world. If he had not suffered pain, he would not know how to sympathize with those who are afflicted. "For we have not a high priest that cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but one that hath been in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. (Heb. 4: 15.) (3) "For in one Spirit were we all baptized into one body, whether Jews or Greeks, whether bond or free; and were all made to drink of one Spirit." (1 Cor. 12: 13.) The Spirit is the agent leading us to be baptized into one body. To say the Spirit directs us to be baptized and we are baptized in the same Spirit is the same in meaning. This is in accord with other passages. "For as many of you as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 27.) "Or are ye ignorant that all we who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death? We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life." (Rom. 6: 3, 4.) These passages teach the same truth. The Romans and Galatians were by the Spirit baptized into one body.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Compiled by A. B. Lipscomb

Get ready for a feast of good things in the "Faith" Number, which will appear on March 2.

From Mrs. C. H. Baker, at Moulton, Ala.: "The Gospel Advocate gets better all the time. The special numbers are fine."

Early Arcenaux writes to tell us that his work in Houston, Texas, is progressing well. He conducts four Bible classes each week.

We are indebted to G. C. Brewer, of Columbia, Tenn., for an interesting report of the Boaz-Locklear debate, which was conducted recently at New Decatur, Ala. This report will appear in an early issue.

From I. L. Boles, at Canoe, Ala.: "Three were baptized and one restored at the regular monthly appointment last Sunday at Bay Minette. The church there, under the leadership of H. R. Kirby, is working."

From J. D. Walling, at Monticello, Ky.: "In a short meeting at Number One Schoolhouse there were three restored and brethren promised to meet on 'the first day of the week' to worship. All seemed to enjoy the meeting."

The meeting conducted at the Nashville Bible School by M. L. Moore, of Bowling Green, Ky., has been very fruitful for good. Six of the students have been baptized. Brother Moore preached at Watkins Hall on Sunday afternoon.

Tice Elkins writes from Childress, Texas: "The season starts bad for me. My wife is down with dropsy, and I am kept at home with her. I am not keeping any of my appointments on her account. I beg those to whom I am indebted for books and tracts to be patient."

H. H. Montgomery writes from Shreveport, La.: "Please keep before your readers the fact that B. U. Baldwin is now traveling through Texas soliciting aid for our church building here. We have received for this purpose the following amounts: From Ben West, $5; Sister Draper, $1."

From J. S. Cunningham, at Olmstead, Ky.: "I have been a subscriber for your excellent paper for forty-six years, and consider it the best paper in the brotherhood. The special numbers devoted to the 'Lord's Supper,' 'True Education,' and 'Home and Father and Mother' are the finest I have ever read."

John T. Smithson writes: "Our meeting at Hopkinsville, Ky., is moving off nicely. We have had good interest and the crowds have increased from the beginning. We hope there will be many to turn from the world and sin to the Lord and his service. Pray for us that much good may be accomplished here in this meeting."

John E. Dunn writes from Miami, Fla.: "The work is slow and hard here, but I am determined by the grace of God to make it grow. The members are standing by me nobly. We have preaching in the church house on Sunday morning and evening, and preach in private homes, school-houses, and clubhouses on other nights."

J. M. McCaleb sends us the most cheerful "abroad" item this week: "I baptized three young men at Zoshigaya on Sunday morning, January 9. One is a student of Zoshigaya Gakuin; the other two are from the Sunday school. This makes thirty-two at this place since the work was first begun. The outlook for 1916 is very hopeful."

The congregation at Lewisburg, Tenn., made a donation of twenty-five dollars toward the building fund for the Bible School and Orphans' Home for colored people in Putnam County. This is a good example that other churches should follow. Send your contribution to A. M. Burton, Life and Casualty Building, Nashville, Tenn. He will gladly furnish any necessary information.

Friends will be pleased to learn that Miss Sarah Andrews, the brave Christian girl who left Dickson, Tenn., several weeks ago for Japan, arrived safely on January 16. Brother McCaleb writes: "Miss Sarah Andrews, a missionary from the church at Dickson, Tenn., reached Japan on January 16. She made the entire trip alone, had no accident, didn't get seasick, and only made five changes on the way. She is much impressed with the needs of her new field of labor and feels that she is in a land of strange things. She will cooperate with us in the work at Zoshigaya. We express our thanks to God, to her parents, to the church at Dickson, and to all others in cooperation for sending us this promising new worker."

R. C. White, a Tennessee preacher, is very active in the Lord's work in Florida this winter. His last report comes from Macclenny, Fla., and is as follows: "The meeting at Bunnell closed with a fine interest after twenty days. We left a congregation of ten to keep house in a rented building. No baptisms, but a good foundation for many in the future, I hope. As loyal brethren pass, Brother Malphurs would be glad to have them stop and preach. Notice is here served on John E. Dunn to stop as he returns from Miami, and I. B. Bradley as he goes, if he still intends to go. The meeting here at Macclenny is fine—six days old and crowds about doubled, with interest fine. I hope for many saved."

From C. C. McQuiddy, at Forest Hill, La.: "A. K. Ramsey filled his regular appointment here the first Sunday in February, with one confession at the morning service. The night service was well attended, the subject being 'The Steps Through the Church to the Tree of Life.' He showed faith, repentance, and baptism are the steps that put you into the church, after which you reach the tree of life by adding to your faith the seven grace steps—courage, knowledge, self-control, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and love. This we believe to a great extent has disabused the minds here of that old falsehood, 'that we believe baptism, and it alone, saves.' Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights were spent in sounding out the word at Long Leaf. This is a hard place to get a hearing, but we had fairly good attendance. The word will not return void, but accomplish that whereunto Jehovah has sent it. Avaristie Hebert, who came out of Rome last July, had at last reports baptized five hundred and eleven persons into the one body. No wonder Rome hates him. Pray for him, and send him a card of encouragement to Crowley, La. Let us show him the love of the brethren is with him in his work."

A few weeks ago we joined with some of the Texas brethren in urging that testimonials of love be sent to T. W. Phillips, the evangelist at Fort Worth, Texas, who had sustained a very serious accident. What a pleasure it is now to report, as is not usually the case, that the response was quick and liberal! Brother Phillips writes: "I desire to say in the Gospel Advocate that my financial needs have been sufficiently supplied at present, and that I have sent a letter of thanks to all who took part in the grace of ministering to my necessities. The Fort Worth churches have especially been good to me. I am in bed yet, and will be for some days, but hope to resume my place in the evangelistic field by the middle of April or first of May. I also wish to thank the Advocate for the kindly mention made of my accident and misfortune. My noble son, O. E. Phillips, wanted to bear my expenses in this misfortune; and, too, my banker came to see me, and said: 'Now, preacher, don't want for anything. Just check on us, and I'll take care of you until you are on your feet again.' But Brethren Davis, Colley, and Poe took the matter in their hands to inform the brotherhood of my accident, and the responses have been very generous. The Lord bless and prosper you all."

“Behold, I Come as a Thief.”

BY E. N. GLENN.

“Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.” (Rev. 16: 15.)

Many times we are told in the Scriptures that our Savior will come again. I am sure that Christians do not think of this as much as they should. It is a blessed thing to know that he will come again to claim his jewels. Are we ready for him if he should come “to-night?” We are admonished to be ready. He may come to-night. No one can tell. If he does not come soon, the Bible will still be true, for it has never set a specific time for his coming. It might be several hundred years. Who knows? Not “man,” nor even “the angels in heaven.” (See Matt. 24: 36.) But the Bible tells us he is coming. We believe that he will. Christians believed it a hundred years ago—yea, nearly twenty centuries have passed since the message rang out from heaven: “Behold, I come quickly.” The early Christians expected him to come in their lifetime. But still the advent was “afar off.”

While Christ will come as a “thief in the night,” the Christian should “not be in darkness,” that that day should overtake him “as a thief in the night.” Why? Simply because we have been told that “he is coming.” This is the Christian's secret. Others will not be expecting his coming; but the Christian will be prepared and expecting him and ready to meet him. But we are not told the time. We must consequently be ready for him at any time. One night recently we had no services at the church of Christ on account of the electric lights being cut off, and our little band went down to hear the “Second Advent” preacher. His sermon was on Daniel's “twenty-three hundred days.” He labored long and hard to show that these prophetic days represented twenty-three hundred years, and began three hundred and eighty-four years B.C. and closed the middle of the present year—1916! His conclusion was that Christ was coming soon—this very year, according to prophecy. Therefore, we should be ready. I feel sure that this preacher's count of the prophetic days ended on the wrong year (1916), yet I am certain that “Christ is coming.” I am also certain that he will “come as a thief” in the night, and that “no man” knoweth the day or the hour or the year. Very much damage has been done the prophetic statement that Christ will come by religious “false prophets.” Rather let us preach, “Be ye also ready.”

Indorsement of Brother D. E. Hales.

The Gospel Advocate has received a request to publish the following indorsement of Brother D. E. Hales, of West Eminence, Mo.:

Poynor, Mo., January 1, 1916.—This is to certify that we, the undersigned, elders of the church of Christ, residing near Poynor, Mo., known as the New Liberty congregation, do hereby recommend and indorse Brother D. E. Hales as a Christian gentleman and a preacher of the gospel of Christ, and we commend him to the public as a worthy man for that position, and heartily indorse him in the work of the ministry.

Woman's Crowning Glory

Is beautiful hair—coveted by all, but possessed by few. If you have allowed your hair to become coarse, stiff, streaked with gray or void of its original luster, the trouble lies in the absence of the natural hair oil. There can be no life without food; so unless the hair is well fed with proper oil, it cannot be expected to retain its luster and beauty.

La Creole Hair Color Restorer, when applied to the scalp, will restore those ugly, grizzly hairs to their natural color and at the same time leave the hair light and fluffy.

The tremendous success of La Creole Hair Dressing has encouraged a large number of imitations. The merit of this preparation has been proven through fifty years, continuous use; and just as counterfeit money never reaches the same high plane of value as the genuine, so none of the imitations of “La Creole” Hair Dressing ever attain the peculiar value of the original. Ask for La Creole Hair Dressing and refuse to accept any substitute. For sale by all dealers. Price, one dollar. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

Watch Your Heart If You Wish Health.

Weak hearts are more common than weak stomachs, lungs, eyes, backs, or kidneys. Every time your heart misses a beat, your life is being shortened. Heart disease, taken in its early stages, is quite easy to relieve; but every day that treatment is delayed the relief becomes more difficult.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy, taken in conjunction with the Nervine or alone, has proven very efficient in relieving heart disorders.

The Rev. George W. Kiracofe, of Keller, Va., in this connection stated as follows: “It has been many years since I was cured of heart trouble by Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and Nervine. I am just as sound as a dollar in that organ to-day. Before I took these remedies, my breathing had been short and at times difficult; there were sharp pains about my heart, accompanied by fluttering which would make me feel faint and languid. The least excitement or worry would unnerve me. The trouble grew steadily worse. Doctors' prescriptions did me no good; but since using Dr. Miles' Remedies, all symptoms were removed and have never returned since.”

If you suspect that you have heart trouble, avoid all dangerous delays.

It costs you nothing to try these remedies if you are not benefited. All you have to do is to return the empty bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money.

Cutting Down the Cost of Pianos.

Have you ever stopped to ask yourself the question why oranges which sell for five cents each cost only two cents by the box, or why apples sell so much cheaper by the bushel than by a nickel's worth? It is the same way with pianos. If you were to purchase one hundred pianos (eight car loads) from the factory, you would get a much lower price than if you purchased only one. That is why the Gospel Advocate Piano Club, composed of one hundred buyers who club their orders into one big order, is saving its members at least forty per cent on high-grade pianos and player pianos.

You are cordially invited to write for your copy of the club's beautifully illustrated catalogue, which fully explains the big saving in price, the convenient terms, and the guarantees of quality and permanent satisfaction. Address The Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

India News Bulletins.

Bombay, November 30, 1915.—At present there are seven regular attendants and one man who is learning, but not putting in full time, owing to other duties. Not only that, but the teacher, Brother James S. Thorat, is also learning. In addition to primary branches, the brethren are committing to memory all the verses in the Scriptures in regard to truth and falsehood, also studying the book of John. They will meet with the other workers and take an examination and have a two-weeks' course of study at Devlali, God willing, after my return from Naini Tal, to which place I am starting to-day to assist and instruct Brother Umrao Singh for a month.—E. S. Jelley, Jr.

Mailani, December 9, 1915.—I am about twelve hundred miles from Satara, assisting and instructing Brother (Dr.) James Umrao Singh. He went this morning and removed a cataract for a blind man. Brother Umrao Singh is an able preacher and uses the word with effect, but he is the only man in the great united provinces, which begin south of Agra and extend to the Himalayas and reach from the Panjab to Bengal. Brethren, will not some disciple or congregation furnish him a helper? Five dollars per month will furnish one. Send him English literature to Kuriagaon, post office Jeoli Kot, District Naini Tal, U. P. British India, for distribution. He can use thousands of papers and tracts.—E. S. Jelley, Jr.

Satara, December 17, 1915.—Brother Chavhan reports forty-one immersions. Brother McHenry has gone to the Nizam's Dominions, from which region it is reported that people of nine villages wish to become Christians. Mrs. Jelley is ill, so I had to be summoned from the north by telegram. On January 1, God willing, I am to open the Devlali Bible study for all workers and their wives, save the worker in the far north.—E. S. Jelley, Jr.

Ahmednagar, December 21, 1915.—I am now in Ahmednagar, a witness in a murder case. Coming here I learned that a student at the late Jeur Bible study had baptized sixteen persons on December 12, making the total for the month so far fifty-seven. Who will come out?—E. S. Jelley, Jr.

EAT LESS MEAT

IF BACK HURTS.

Take a glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys; they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up, and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure any one; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Gospel Advocate Piano Club Prevents Waste

You will not find many men who would deliberately throw away one hundred dollars, and yet there are many who unintentionally waste that amount every year in one way or another. Careless buying is one of the most common ways of wasting money. The founders of the club had that fact in mind when they adopted the principle of cutting down the cost of pianos by cutting out the waste in marketing them. The club claims to save its members forty per cent, and asks you to give it an opportunity to prove this fact to your entire satisfaction by thoroughly testing the piano in your own home before obligating yourself to pay for it. It will cost you only a postal card to investigate; and if the testimony of club members who have all ready received their instruments is to be relied upon, you will undoubtedly be delighted with the saving in price, the convenient terms, and the superior quality of the instruments. By uniting our orders in a club of one hundred members, each secures the benefit of the lowest possible factory price and yet is responsible only for his own order.

Write for your copy of the catalogue and full particulars to-day. Address The Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

Among the Colored People

The Shepherd's Care.

BY S. R. CASSIUS.

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." (Ps. 23: 4.)

This is the first time in my life that I have ever been fully able to appreciate the full joy of suffering. In some way I have been always taught that God suffers sickness, pain, sorrow, and death to come upon us because he is angry with us, and that he takes these methods of showing his displeasure.

People argue that God sends these things on us to make us or some one else better. I do not believe it, because his word does not teach it. There is nothing in God that in any way resembles sickness, sorrow, pain, or death. God is the opposite of all these things. But they are here, and here to stay—not through the will of God, but because of the weakness of the flesh. Two weeks ago I entered the valley of the shadow of death. All my body revolted against life. Every sense tried to die. My food and water, which God had given me for life, seemed all at once to turn against me. My friends came in and said that God had sent this sickness on me in order to show his power. I did not then believe it; I do not now believe it. All that I could see was the mingling of the powers of the world, the flesh, and the devil. If my faith in God had been weak and if my confidence in the flesh had been strong, I would not have lived to write this letter, because to have trusted in the flesh would have been sin, and "the wages of sin is death."

Hear what David said under circumstances equally as grievous: "Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." I fear too many of us love to lean for support upon the staff, but faint when we are chastened with the rod. We seem to forget that if God loves us, we ought in return for that love do those things that God loves to see us do. God deals with us as with children, and we know that our earthly parents love us and watch over us and try to guide us away from everything that is not right, and that their love is intensified toward us in proportion to our love and obedience to their will. But if we resist their will and do things that are hurtful to them and a detriment to the laws that be, they still love us; but on account of sustaining the right, they

Pain in Back, Miserable All Over.

Dear Mr. Editor: All last winter I suffered from a terrible pain in my back. I felt miserable all over, and could not walk but a short distance. I was unable to work and did not sleep well at night, as I was obliged to arise frequently. I learned of Dr. Pierce's Anuric that cures such troubles and sent to him for a trial package. This relieved me of getting up at night in a short time, and I have gained considerable. I am better now than I have been for some time. I sleep better, have less rheumatism, and do quite a lot of work for a woman of my age. I had brick-dust settlings in my water before using "Anuric;" now there is none.

Kindly print this letter; it may help some one else who suffers as I did or worse.

[Signed] MRS. ELLA A. GARRISON.

NOTE.—Every man or woman ought to use occasionally a proper remedy for the headache, backache, languor, nervousness, and depression to which he or she may be subject. When the kidneys are weak or diseased, these natural filters do not cleanse the blood sufficiently, and the poisons are carried to all parts of the body. There follow depression, aches and pains, heaviness, drowsiness, irritability, headaches, chilliness, and rheumatism. In some people there are sharp pains in the back and loins, distressing bladder disorders, and sometimes obstinate dropsy. The uric acid sometimes forms into gravel or kidney stones. When the uric acid affects the muscles and joints, it causes lumbago, rheumatism, gout, or sciatica. This is the time to try "Anuric," the new discovery of Dr. Pierce for kidney trouble and pains in the back and all over the body. Write Dr. Pierce and send ten cents for a large trial package, or ask your druggist now for a fifty-cent box of "Anuric."

are compelled to let us reap the result of our action. So it is with God. He has placed before us that which is right, and has given us his spirit to guide us in all that is right and away from all that is wrong.

So, then, when we are sick or in distress, or even death assails us, we know that God has not sent these things, but that somewhere in our lives some law of life, peace, or happiness has been broken and we are reaping what we have sown. Whether we did it ignorantly or willfully, the fact that the law has been broken makes us understand that the penalty must be endured. But if we are true, loving children, we will not faint, but will with joy endure the affliction, with a resolve to so live that a like thing will not happen to us again.

I fully intended to have been off in the field somewhere preaching the word of God, but somewhere in my plans I must have made "a bobble." So I am enduring this light affliction and trying to see my mistake, in order that this backset may work for me a greater weight of eternal glory.

Brethren, as soon as I get out of here I want that tent, and I am taking this method of asking you to help me get it. My address is Meridian, Okla., Route 2, Box 54; or send your gift to the Gospel Advocate office.

HUMORS COME TO THE SURFACE in the spring as in no other season. They don't run themselves all off that way, however, but mostly remain in the system. Hood's Sarsaparilla removes them, wards off danger, makes good health sure.

Synthetic Treatment.

The human mind can concentrate attention on but one thing at a time.

Hence we attempt to analyze any complex subject, frequently losing sight of the unity of the thing analyzed.

Thus we divide the mind of man into sensibilities, thought, process, and will; or the faculties of emotion, reason, and volition. Yet these three faculties are one ego, one person, and they cannot be separated in fact, however we may separate them in thought.

In the realm of physiology the same is true. We divide the system of digestion, assimilation, and elimination into various organs variously named, and forget that these organs are but parts of the one system by which the body is sustained in health and strength.

The liver, stomach, kidneys, bladder, and other organs are so correlated that in effect they are one, and what hurts one hurts all.

It is on recognition of this fact that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy is composed of a number of valuable extracts, each serving a specific purpose in toning up one or more of the various organs of digestion and elimination.

If one organ is diseased, all are affected. Hence, in treating one organ it is desirable to treat the whole system.

This is quite thoroughly done by Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy.

This preparation has been on the market for forty years, and has proven its merits in a vast number of cases of Bright's disease, uric-acid poisoning, rheumatism, and other liver and kidney ailments.

La Grippe Usually Leaves a Bad Cough.

Both la grippe and influenza often leave a bad cough that hangs on and is weakening and exhausting. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is a simple, quick, and effective medicine for curing these bad la grippe coughs. E. C. Rhodes, of Middleton, Ga., writes: "When getting well of la grippe, I still had a hacking cough and for several months could get no relief. I began taking Foley's Honey and Tar, and soon I was well of both cough and cold, which never returned." All druggists sell it everywhere.

The Two Covenants.

BY JOHN T. POE.

The Christian dispensation is the consummation of the ages. It is called "the last days." It is the end of the drama, which embraces the creation, the fall, and the redemption of man. It is the last effort of God to save men. And when this dispensation shall end, another state and condition for man shall be ushered in; this being a preparatory state for that beyond death and the grave—through which all must pass.

God's dealing with man embraces three dispensations, or ages of the world's history, so far as history informs us—the patriarchal, the Jewish, and the Christian. The Christian age will wind up the drama of human redemption. The patriarchal dispensation marks the beginning, the infancy of man—the genus Homo; the Jewish, his youth; and the Christian, the world's manhood state. God has made two covenants with man—the first, or Abrahamic, fleshly; the second, for all men, spiritual. The first was faulty in that it could not take away sin, being fleshly. This covenant was designed no doubt to prepare man for the second and spiritual covenant, which could take away sin. The first covenant was made with Abraham, his descendants, and his purchased servants. (See Gen. 12: 17.) The second was designed for all the world, and could effectually take away sin. Under the first there was no real pardon for sin, for the blood of animals could not take away sin. Yet without shedding of blood there could be no remission of sins. It was provided, however, that all who lived faithful to God under the first covenant should receive remission of sins under the second covenant—that is, they were virtually pardoned, but not legally so, for the reason that without the shedding of blood there could be no pardon; and since the blood of animals could not take away sin, it follows that there could be no legal or actual pardon for sin until Jesus poured out his blood on Calvary. Then, to speak after the manner of men, the vouchers for the obedience of all who lived faithful to God went forward to the cross on Calvary and were cashed with his blood. When he died and shed his blood, he became the propitiation for sin. Justice could be appeased and sin pardoned.

Thus the new covenant is better than the old, in that it takes away sin and its penalty, to all or for all who indorse the new by obedience to its provisions and requirements in Christ. And hence the gospel, the glad tidings of the new covenant, is

GRAY HAIR DARK.

Try grandma's old recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked, or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp, and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about fifty cents.

Don't stay gray. Try it. No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick, and glossy.

"Renwar is Guaranteed."

When a manufacturer of any product has enough faith in it to sell it on a positive guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded, there must be a great deal of merit to that article. "Renwar" has been tested in thousands of cases and proven efficient in the treatment of rheumatism. So sure are the manufacturers that "Renwar" will give entire satisfaction, they sell it on a positive guarantee of money back if the purchaser is not entirely satisfied with the results. If you suffer from rheumatism and cannot buy "Renwar" from your druggist, send fifty cents for a bottle to-day. Prepared and guaranteed by the Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.

Thorp Spring Christian College.

BY CARL A. GARDNER.

The work of our school is moving nicely along. Since its last report the school has enrolled a very appreciable number of new students. Almost every student that was with the school before the Christmas holidays returned immediately after Christmas. Practically all of the students are doing work above the average, and I have never seen a more loyal and energetic band of boys and girls.

Arrangements are now being made for a great "home-coming" of the old students of this school at the close of the present session. We are anticipating some good things then.

The senior class in the college numbers about fifteen, while the graduating class in the high school will not fall far short of the same number. The college seniors are preparing to issue an "annual," which will be a new feature of the school work here.

The school continues to make progress. The Board of Directors have recently negotiated for a beautiful park of fifty acres within a stone's throw of the present school property. It is the opinion of many that this will mean much to the school in many ways. At the present writing a move is being launched to make more beautiful the present beautiful campus of our school.

We invite all to investigate the claims of this school. Its work is fully credited by the University of Texas and other higher institutions of learning.

THE BURNETT-WEAVER DEBATE ON METHODISM.

IN TWO VOLUMES OF MORE THAN FIVE HUNDRED PAGES.

Disputants:

T. R. Burnett, Christian; J. C. Weaver, Methodist.

THE ONLY COMPLETE DEBATE BETWEEN CHRISTIANS AND METHODISTS NOW PUBLISHED.

Each disputant has sixty-eight speeches. The corresponding speeches are of equal length by actual count of words.

PROPOSITIONS DISCUSSED IN VOLUME ONE.

PROPOSITION 1. The Scriptures teach that sprinkling or pouring of clean water upon a proper subject, in the name of the Holy Trinity, by a proper administrator, is Christian baptism. Weaver affirms; Burnett denies.

PROPOSITION 2. Infant baptism is authorized by the word of God. Weaver affirms; Burnett denies.

PROPOSITIONS DISCUSSED IN VOLUME TWO.

PROPOSITION 1. The Scriptures teach that in the conversion of the sinner the influence of the Holy Spirit is confined to the word of truth, or gospel, as contained in the New Testament. Burnett affirms; Weaver denies.

PROPOSITION 2. The Scriptures teach that baptism is for (in order to) the remission of sins. Burnett affirms; Weaver denies.

3. The creed criticized. Burnett leads; Weaver responds.

J. C. Weaver, of Henderson, Texas, is a recognized authority in his church. He is a man of talent, and has been debating for many years.

T. R. Burnett is one of the shrewdest men of the present time among the disciples of Christ. As a debater, preacher, and author, he takes first rank. His arguments stand out as clear as light. He has a style that is unique—peculiarly his own—that attracts and charms the reader. When one begins reading his writing, he is led on as if by some impelling force, and can hardly lay the book down till he has finished it.

These books sparkle with interest—fresh, lively thought, and strong, convincing argument.

OUTLINES OF BIBLE STUDY

REVISED AND ENLARGED

BY G. DALLAS SMITH

FOR USE IN

BIBLE DRILLS, BIBLE READINGS, BIBLE CLASSES, PRAYER MEETINGS, AND HOME STUDY

A BRIEF DESCRIPTION

Outlines of Bible Study (Revised and Enlarged) is a book of one hundred and twenty pages, besides five full-page maps covering all Bible lands. It is printed in large, clear type, on good, heavy paper, and is substantially bound in stiff cloth.

The book contains seventeen drill lessons for use in Bible drills, Bible readings, or any other Bible class where it is desired to cover the entire scope of the Sacred Record in a short time.

Outlines of Bible Study is not a commentary in any sense of the word. It contains but few comments. It is not "literature" in the same sense that some object to literature. It rather guides one in his study that it may be intelligent and systematic.

PRICES

Single copy, prepaid, fifty cents; one dozen copies, prepaid, $5.50; twenty-five copies, not prepaid, $10; fifty copies, not prepaid, $18.50; one hundred copies, not prepaid, $35.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF,
HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

The Chinese Woolflower

Introduced by us last year has proved a great success everywhere and a most wonderful floral novelty. It is a Celosia of new form and easy growth. Plants throw out scores of branches bearing balls of crimson wool nearly a foot thick. Also many laterals with smaller heads, and fresh green foliage. Flowers form in June but none fade before frost, continuing to expand and glow with its wonderful crimson-scarlet color, very showy and succeeds anywhere.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL.

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a fifty-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick, I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day, and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone to-night and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless; so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate; so let them eat anything afterwards.

Recipe for Gray Hair.

To one-half pint of water add one ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up, or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

BY F. C. TAYLOR.

Some time ago Brother F. M. Strickland made a call in behalf of the little band at this place. But few have responded as yet. I here give a correct report of all we have received to date, as follows: Brother J. H. Gibbs, Lawrenceburg, Tenn., $2; Mrs. W. R. M. McKissick, Culleoka, Tenn., $1; Brother T. P. Priestley, Greenfield, Tenn., $1; Brother and Sister T. A. Davis, Vandalia, Ind., $2. Total, $6. We are thankful for this.

Brethren, I know there are many calls through our papers for help, and I regret that I am not able to respond to all, but I am not financially able to do any more than I do. But if the brethren knew just the struggle that we have here and the location of this place, I feel sure that they would help us freely. If three hundred members would contribute only one dollar each, it would place the cause on a firm foundation here, and then we would have a house of worship which we would be proud of. Searcy is the county seat of White County and a nice town of about five thousand population. It has the great Galloway College, owned by the Methodist people, and has a nice brick Baptist church house; also, two kinds of Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Adventists, and Catholics (the latter have no house as yet). The town is centrally located in the county, in what is known as the Searcy Valley, two miles from Little Red River, and has three railroads and several industrial plants in operation. There are a few "digressives" here that will not meet themselves nor meet with us; in fact, they are a drawback to the cause. During my sojourn here of about seven years I have worked hard to build up the cause here, have borne the expense of several meetings practically alone until recently, and now the congregation has grown some and the brethren are helping all they are able; but we will have to be helped some now, or it seems we will go down to some extent, as we only have such a short time to raise the money. We have a strong force against us to keep us from being permanently established here; but if we fail in getting the house, we will try to meet from house to house until the Lord gives us more help to front the battle, and by his help we will succeed. I will say to the brethren and sisters who have helped us in our struggles that we are going to record your names, not only in our book, but in our hearts, so that when we get able to help you in like manner we will be so glad to do so. My address is Box 423, Searcy, Ark.

The Quest for Wisdom.

BY L. T. RIGHTSELL.

There is no wisdom equal to that which makes one wise unto salvation. Worldly wisdom is not to be despised; but unless it be acquired as a stepping-stone to spirituality, it is more likely to turn out a curse than a blessing. Solomon learned the futility of many things, and, no doubt, like all wise men, changed his viewpoint on many subjects as he advanced in years. But there was one subject on which he did not change his mind; that thing was his first choice—wisdom. Almost everything else was “vanity and vexation of spirit,” but true wisdom was the thing which he prized to the last.

Wisdom is the opposite of folly. Folly chooses show, wisdom chooses substance. A silly child will sooner pick up a piece of glittering glass than a jewel, because the glass is larger and apparently more valuable in his eyes. A piece of colored glass which has been cast away is easily discovered, but a valuable diamond eludes the eye of almost every one.

Jesus told of a field which a certain man bought because he knew there was a treasure in it. Though it cost everything else that he had, yet he sold all and invested in that field. The Bible furnishes a field wherein we find riches inexhaustible. Knowing the Holy Scriptures, we are sure that we will be wise unto salvation. Through no other medium in our day can we learn how to be restored and reconciled unto God. Having the words of the Bible in our minds and pondering them in our hearts, we have this treasure—wisdom—of which Solomon speaks.

But the search for wisdom must be prosecuted according to knowledge. We may expect nothing from haphazard methods. A miner may stumble upon a lead, but there is no dependence in this kind of mining. New and more effective methods are coming into existence all the time for the discovery of ore or of precious stones. The system has been reduced to a science. There is no more guesswork or gambling about it than there is about farming. And though every gold digger does not find a treasure, yet there is a reasonable prospect of his making good wages.

The search for wisdom calls for the greatest care and industry. An old prospector in western North Carolina told me that he had spent many a day prostrate on the ground, crawling along and looking for gems. Some days he found nothing, on others he had moderate luck, and on others he made finds of considerable value. The

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Dr. Osler on Tuberculosis

Sir William Osler, Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford, says in his "Practice of Medicine" (1892), on page 249: "The healing of pulmonary tuberculosis is shown clinically by the recovery of patients in whose sputa elastic tissue and bacilli have been found. * In the granulation products and associated pneumonia a scar tissue is formed, while the smaller caseous areas become impregnated with lime salts. To such conditions alone should the term healing be applied."

The success of Eckman's Alternative in tuberculosis may be due partly to its content of a lime salt in such combination with other valuable ingredients as to be easily assimilated.

It is worth a trial, unless other treatment already is succeeding. We make no promises concerning it any more than do reputable physicians with their prescriptions, but since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, it is safe. average miner of the West is often tempted to lie down and take his ease in a pleasant, shady spot. After having received "grub stakes" and the means of taking life easy for a time, he thinks there is no need to work so hard, and he may give up his toil for days and weeks at a time. He makes a fatal mistake. So the Christian is making perhaps the mistake of his life when at any time he gives up the search for wisdom. Notes from West Tennessee.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

For some time I have been silent on "Notes from West Tennessee," reading and studying what others write of "wars without and within," hobbies and hobby riders, departures from the faith and practice of the New Testament teaching, etc.

In West Tennessee we have many things to contend with, and one especially that time after time I have been requested to notice, and that is the charge of "Campbellism." In Lake and Obion counties there are a respectable class of people—men and women who claim to be Christians only and only Christians, only this and nothing more or less—striving to live according to New Testament teaching, but by their religious neighbors they are called "Campbellites." Such remarks as these: "I wish that stinking old Campbellite meeting would close;" "It makes me mad to see them pass my house;" "Is there no law to stop that old Campbellite meeting?" The prejudice has grown into extreme hatred, and this hatred is instilled in the minds of their children to the extent that small children will call these people "Campbellites" to their face.

In some localities, among the more intelligent, this is not done as it is among the other class. Preachers who claim to be called and sent of God are guilty of this more than the laity. They certainly know better. If not, they are to be pitied. For the benefit of this class I wish to insert what Alexander Campbell had to say about it. Will they believe what he said?

Kentucky, April 15, 1828.

"CAMPBELLISM."

The following query was sent up to a small association in this State for an answer: "What must a church do with her preacher who has embraced Campbellism?" To which the association in her wisdom replied: "As we know not what Campbellism is, we cannot tell her what to do."

A correspondent in Kentucky asks me "what Campbellism is." To which I answer: It is a nickname of reproach invented and adopted by those whose views, feelings, and desires are all sectarian; who cannot conceive of Christianity in any other light than an ism.

These isms are now the real reproaches of those who adopt them, as they are the intended reproaches of those who originate and apply them.

He that gives them when they are disclaimed violates the express law of Christ. He speaks evil "against his brother, and is accounted as a railer or reviler, and placed along with haters of God and those who have not lot in the kingdom of heaven." They who adopt them out of choice disown the Christ and insult him; for they give the honor which is due to him alone to the creature of the devil; for all slander and detractions are of the creation of the devil.

If Christians were wholly cast into the mold of the apostles' doctrine, they would feel themselves as much aggrieved and slandered in being called by any man's name as they would in being called a thief, a fornicator, or a drunkard.

And they who bestow such names are actuated either by the spirit of foolish jesting or that vengeful spirit which would sacrifice the life as well as the reputation of those who deprive them of the means of self-aggrandizement at the expense of the intelligence, liberty, and true happiness of mankind.

A Reasonable Service.

BY FRED W. CHUNN.

It is very reasonable to live a Christian life. It is true that there are some things connected with the "Christian system" that are beyond the reason of man; but just to live a true and simple, Christlike life is reasonable from every viewpoint. Suppose, for instance, that God is not; that Jesus Christ is not his Son; that the apostles were all impostors; that the Bible is untrue; and that both soul and body will molder to dust, never again to be raised; would it not then be better for the universe to be Christianized? I answer emphatically, Yes.

Christianity lengthens physical life. Man's research for prolonging life has extended almost into infinity. Many different sciences have been discovered. Medicines, mind culture, and physical culture have been administered. Yet it is a sad but actual fact that sin has shortened the life of man from the hundreds to an average of about thirty-three years. "Fear of the Lord prolongeth days: but the years of the wicked shall be shortened." This has been, is now, and will continue to be true. God is the best law of health.

Christianity adds to one's peace, prosperity, and happiness in this world. The wicked man may prosper for a time. He may rise to worldly pomp, wealth, and power, but sooner or later adversities with failure will come. "Blessings are upon the head of the just: but violence covereth the mouth of the wicked." The most successful business man lives a clean life, takes not the name of God in vain, tastes not the fatal cup, with his fellow-man is honest, and to Jesus Christ is true. His prosperity is permanent. "There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's, but he shall receive a hundredfold now in this time, . . . and in the world to come eternal life." "The wicked flee when no man pursueth," and is generally in a state of unrest, being in no wise happy; but "the righteous are bold as a lion," reveling in the sweet consciousness of right doing. Peace of mind is theirs to enjoy, as they engage in those things that bless themselves and their fellow-travelers in this world of care.

Christianity will ultimately bring to us eternal life. God is, Jesus is his Son, the apostles were sincere and honest, the Bible is true, and all that are in their graves "shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection

HEAT FLASHES, DIZZY, NERVOUS

Mrs. Wynn Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her During Change of Life.

Richmond, Va. — "After taking seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new woman. I always had a headache during the Change of Life and was also troubled with other bad feelings common at that time—dizzy spells, nervous feelings and heat flashes. Now I am in better health than I ever was and recommend your remedies to all my friends." — Mrs. LENA WYNN, 2812 E. O Street, Richmond, Va.

While Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such warning symptoms are a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness.

For these abnormal conditions do not fail to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Brother R. H. Boll's Strange Denial.

(A Frank Statement from the Editors and Publishers.)

Believing that a mere announcement of the fact of Brother Boll's agreement with the publishers of the Gospel Advocate to cease his speculative teachings would be sufficient, we have thus far refrained from publishing the individual testimonies of brethren who were present and heard him make the agreement; but, inasmuch as Brother Boll has not only denied that he made the agreement and is circulating his denial, but the charge is now made that the publishers of the Advocate have not dared to publish the statement of Brother G. Dallas Smith lest it be found not to sustain them in their claim, we take pleasure in saying that the statement of Brother G. Dallas Smith and others were not solicited by the publishers, but were turned over to us by other brethren, and we have held them for use only in case it became necessary to use them. We have so far withheld them for the reason that we did not think the cause of truth demanded their publication; but now, in the light of this new development, we cannot properly do less than let the public have the facts as they transpired at the conference; and we take the greater pleasure in doing so since Brother G. Dallas Smith's statement, stripped of its needless verbosity, is not only in harmony with all the other statements, but clearly and pointedly confirms our claim that a positive agreement was made.

Brother Boll now says that he did not agree to cease teaching the speculative things that were disturbing the churches. He not only did so agree, but he did it voluntarily, expressly, and positively; and it was on this distinct and expressed agreement between him and the publishers that he was taken back on the paper. It is not a case of misunderstanding, and some of the facts, as will be seen, show that it cannot be such a case. What he distinctly and repeatedly said and agreed to is a matter of fact and knowledge, concerning which ear and eye witnesses cannot be mistaken. They cannot know, of course, what Brother Boll meant or intended, but they do know what he said. Moreover, after the agreement had been reached and the publishers had yielded to his earnest request to let him omit the agreement from his public statement (a request which, of course, he would not have made if he had not made an agreement), he asked Brother J. C. McQuiddy if the agreement which he had made ought to prevent him from writing and publishing a certain book on the prophecies which he then had in view.

We were glad that Brother Boll agreed to adopt our judgment as his own and assured him that we would not bind or restrict any editor only as he is bound by the word of God. He in turn assured us that he had decided it was best to refrain from teaching his peculiar views that were creating division. Hence, bound by and dictated to only by Jehovah, he agreed to refrain from such teaching, and only upon this condition was he restored to his former position. It is noble thus to agree with brethren, but a covenant with the Lord is all the more sacred and binding and makes denial morally impossible. J. C. McQUIDDY.

I was present when Brother Boll, yielding, as he stated, to his own good judgment in the matter, made the positive agreement outlined above. My memory is so clear as to when and how he made it that I can but regard his subsequent denial and attempt to put the Gospel Advocate in a false light as a breach of confidence and trust wholly unworthy of Christian manhood. What a glorious privilege it would be to express forgiveness should our dear brother have the grace to pursue the course he has so insistently urged upon others in times past through the columns of this paper and acknowledge his error! Not one of the misguided friends with whom he has surrounded himself, and who are bent upon propagating divisive teachings, would suggest this to Brother Boll. But he himself should understand that true friendship, impelled by the word of God, must insist upon it as the only righteous course. A. B. LIPSCOMB.

Being present and a party to the conference, I can state unequivocally that Brother Boll made the verbal agreement to cease teaching the things which were disturbing the churches. I was present and heard him make this agreement. The publishers, editors, and regular contributors would never have considered for one moment Brother Boll's resuming his work on the Advocate without such an agreement on his part, which point had been thoroughly considered and determined upon by them before the conference. Brother Boll not only made this agreement in my presence and in my hearing, but he made it distinctly and expressly. He agreed that our judgment that he should cease teaching the disturbing things was correct, but that he wanted to act on it as his own judgment and not as dictated by others, and the publishers consented to this. The matter was thoroughly canvassed, and there is not only no room for misunderstanding, but it is a case in which there cannot be any misunderstanding as to what he said. I distinctly heard it and state of my own knowledge that he made the agreement.

F. W. SMITH.

Brother R. H. Boll's denial is astonishing out of measure. I was present in the conference and heard the agreement reached by him and the publishers that he would cease his speculative teachings which had been disturbing the churches, and it was on the condition of this expressed agreement that he was allowed to resume work on the paper; but at his own request, for which he gave reasons, he was allowed to omit incorporating this agreement in his public statement.

In order to encourage him in the peculiar and trying situation, I took special pains to have a talk with him immediately after the conference and before leaving the Advocate office, in which I told him not to come back to Louisville feeling that he had disgraced or humiliated himself; that he had not done this; but that he had only yielded where it was noble to yield, to all of which he made the very cordial reply: "I thank you, Brother Kurfess." Submitted in the fear of God.

M. C. KURFESS.

To Whom It May Concern: Having been requested by some brethren to make a statement relative to the conference recently held in Nashville between Brother Boll and themselves, I cheerfully state the facts as I understand the matter. I wish to say, in the first place, that I deeply deplore the unhappy termination of the settlement reached in that conference. I was partly responsible for the conference, and I acted conscientiously in the interest of the cause of Christ in general and these brethren in particular. I then thought, and I still think, that brethren could and should get together and settle their troubles in the spirit of Him who said, "All things therefore whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do ye also unto them;" and to bring about this settlement in this spirit, I took the initiative which led to the conference. I was then, and I am still, a friend to both Brother Boll and the editors of the Gospel Advocate. In the main, I was, and I am still, in hearty accord with the contention of the editors of the Gospel Advocate on the points of doctrine at issue—if I understand them. But I did not think then, and I still do not think, that Boll is any sense a "Russellite," or that he is a "dangerous teacher" because of his peculiar views on the kingdom and unfulfilled prophecy. I did not then think that the difference between Brother Boll and the editors of the Gospel Advocate was sufficient to lead to any kind of division. I am of the same opinion still. And this is why I took the initiative in the matter of trying to adjust the differences between them.

As to the conference: I understood then, and I still understand, that Brother Boll persistently refused to agree with men that he would refrain from teaching anything he believed the Bible taught; and, as I understood him, he believed his conclusions reached from the study of unfulfilled prophecy were taught in the Bible. However, he did leave the impression on my mind, and I think on the minds of the other brethren, that his better judgment would lead him, at least under the present conditions, to refrain from such teaching whenever and wherever it was likely to cause trouble. As I understood Brother Boll, he was unwilling to enter into any kind of an agreement with men, either verbal or written, to refrain from teaching whatever he believed the Bible taught. He insisted that he should be left free under God to teach whatever he believed the Bible authorized; but he led me to believe that if he was left free to teach and write as his own judgment directed, that no trouble would arise over the so-called "untaught questions."

My understanding of the matter, as well as Brother Boll's, is shown by the little conversation which took place between us immediately after the conference closed. As we walked away from the office of the McQuiddy Printing Company, Brother Boll asked me if I thought the settlement we had just reached would interfere with his teaching the book of Ezekiel in his Bible classes. He said he had already arranged his courses of study for the winter, and that he had planned to take his classes through the book of Ezekiel. I told him plainly that I did not think, according to our adjustment of the matter, he would be forbidden to teach Ezekiel or any of the other prophets, provided he did not push and feature his peculiar views on unfulfilled prophecies. His answer was that he had never featured it. Brother Boll will, of course, remember this conversation.

To be more explicit, I do not understand that there was a positive agreement on the part of Brother Boll to cease teaching the things over which the trouble arose; but there was a clear understanding, on my part at least, that his better judgment in the matter led him to refrain from such teaching. As I understood it, Brother Boll was not so much determined to continue to teach it as he was determined not to promise or agree not to do so; for he seemed perfectly willing for us to understand that there would be no further trouble over the "untaught questions" if he came back on the Advocate. Hence he insisted that we "trust him" without a promise. This I was perfectly willing to do.

Finally, I have tried to be fair to both sides to the controversy. I have honestly tried to state the facts as they appear to me; and I sincerely hope that our Father in heaven may overrule this whole matter to his own honor and glory and to the salvation of all concerned.

G. DALLAS SMITH.

Brother G. Dallas Smith, who was brought into the conference by Brother Boll, has written much in his statement that is not relevant to the subject. Leaving out this extraneous matter, our readers will see that it is a clear and positive testimony in perfect accord with the other statements, as the following analysis will show:

1. He states that "immediately after the conference" Brother Boll asked him if he "thought the settlement we had just reached would interfere with his teaching the book of Ezekiel in his Bible classes." Thus, first of all, we here indirectly get the clear admission from Brother Boll himself that he had entered into an agreement not mentioned in his public statement that might be violated by teaching the prophecies of Ezekiel. Let the reader note this significant fact. Then, Brother Smith further states that he gave this significant answer to Brother Boll's question: "I told him plainly that I did not think, according to our adjustment of the matter, he would be forbidden to teach Ezekiel or any of the other prophets, provided he did not push and feature his peculiar views on unfulfilled prophecies." Exactly so. Mark the proviso, for it discloses the truth. "Provided he did not push and feature his peculiar views," then "he would" not "be forbidden to teach Ezekiel;" but if he did so "push and feature" them, then, according to Brother G. Dallas Smith, Brother Boll "would be forbidden" by our adjustment "to teach Ezekiel." Thus we have the clear, pointed, and positive testimony of Brother G. Dallas Smith that Brother Boll made the verbal agreement to cease his speculative teachings.

2. Brother Smith further says: "There was a clear understanding, on my part at least, that" Brother Boll's "better judgment in the matter led him to refrain from such teaching." This is the exact truth again; and when it was discovered that Brother Boll had adopted this judgment, which had all along been the judgment of the publishers and on which they had strenuously insisted, they generously conceded that he might act on it, as he preferred to do so, as his own judgment and not as dictated by others. And "hence he insisted that we 'trust him,'" but not "without a promise," for we already had that, and Brother Smith so testifies, but he insisted that we trust him without compelling him to incorporate his promise or agreement in his public statement. This is the point on which he asked to be trusted, and the publishers, not wishing to be so exacting as to appear to have no confidence in him, finally agreed to let him make his public statement without including the agreement to cease his speculative teachings.

3. As to being a Russellite, Brother Smith was present and heard the fact distinctly set forth that the Advocate had never said and had never even claimed that Brother Boll was a Russellite, but that it had said that he was teaching some of Russell's doctrines; and if he is not doing this, then Russell himself is not doing it. Some of his and Chambers' teachings had been designated in our columns as Russellite-Advent doctrines, and we refused to withdraw the statement, because it is strictly correct; but the fact was made clear and was understood by all that the Advocate had never said Brother Boll was a Russellite, and Brother Smith was present and heard it all.

Little Things and Big Things in Life.

BY J. G. ALLEN.

Believing that much time in life is wasted by many Christians in trying to do something great, to the neglect of one thing that is far better, I feel prompted to drop a few hints that I am sure will be helpful to everybody.

We are all familiar with the old proverb which says, "Save the pennies and the dimes will take care of themselves." Now this language is not in the Bible, but the principle is there; for saith Paul: "Ought not the strong to bear the infirmities of the weak?" There is the plainest kind of common sense in the Bible when we examine its rules of life. The weak are the ones that need assistance; the strong are able to care for themselves.

In every department of human endeavor we will find that the ones that succeed are those that give close attention to the smallest details, and those who fail practically overlook little things. The Jews furnish us a good illustration of this principle. The day came in their life that they "despised small things," and we see in that the cause of their ruin.

We might truly say of the Savior that he was a stickler for small things, for saith he: "One jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." And he gave us the promise of his presence when we are faithful to his word—yes, when even two or three gather in his name, he promises to be their guest; also in the great commission he repeats this promise, making it world-wide and time-lasting. (Matt. 28: 19, 20.)

The Bible tells us that God's ways and man's ways are opposite; and when we study the Bible, we are so often reminded of this difference. The Jews could see no harm in adding just a little thing to God's service, such as washing pots and other vessels as a special service to God; still the Savior told them they made void the commandments when they did that. Now the Jews became angry when they were told that they did not believe in God. Of course they resented the charge. Why? Because blind; and the cause of their blindness was, they despised little things and could not see that to add to or take from one item of the law placed them on the side of unbelievers. This same principle is true with us to-day. Paul says: "If a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully." James says: "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." The law is perfect; and if man ever meets God in peace, it will be in and through the spiritual law of Christ, for there is no other way.

Strange things happen among us to-day. We meet with many brethren who oppose the organ, church societies, etc., who are doing just as bad as those who advocate these other things—that is, they, too, are adding to the word of God. Many congregations are divided over the opinion of some leading brother to-day. This is classed among the greatest crimes that men commit against God.

Brother David Lipscomb told a story some years ago where two leading members divided a strong congregation over a hog—yes, a hog. No one stole the hog, of course; they would not do a thing of that kind—that would be a sin. But I tell you what they did do: they committed a crime against God and man that was greater than if they had stolen ten thousand hogs. They forced their opinion as to how old a hog became before he shed his teeth. One man said that at a certain age they shed them. The other said: "Not so; they never shed teeth from age." Now, that question was regarded as a joke at first, but by and by they became serious and began to bring in other things until the results were as stated above.

Brethren, when I first heard the story, I thought that some one was mistaken, for surely sensible people would not do a thing so foolish; but I learned some things by an actual experience and am satisfied that many congregations have been divided through little jealousies among brethren that were just as foolish.

Let us all remember that it is our duty as Christians to endeavor "to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," and that there is nothing in the form of an opinion that will justify us in dividing Christians. So when these questions come up, let's all strive to check it before it grows to such large proportions we cannot manage it.

May the blessings of our Heavenly Father be with all who in sincerity and truth are striving to serve him through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Misrepresentations.

BY F. W. SMITH.

It is bad enough to misrepresent through ignorance, excusable ignorance, but infinitely worse to do so with facts before the eyes to the contrary or without making any effort to obtain the facts. Now and then appear statements to the effect that the Gospel Advocate not only discourages, but really opposes, the study and teaching of certain portions of the Bible. As a sample of such misrepresentations, we give the following from a Baptist exchange with a large circulation:

It is said one of the brethren took his Bible to the office of the Gospel Advocate and asked its force to mark out that part of the New Testament that "we who speak where the Bible speaks" that "we must not preach."

"It is said." Well, who said it? Did "one of the brethren" to whom reference is made say that? We hardly think so, and yet the author of the foregoing peddles this falsehood out to thousands of people who will never know but that he penned the truth. Of course it is but just to concede that the author "heard" what he gave to his readers; but did he make any effort to ascertain from the proper source as to whether or not such a thing as he describes actually occurred? If not, is not he and all others who have circulated such reports upon mere hearsay guilty of a great sin? Such misrepresentations have been corrected time and again, but there are those who have read these corrections, or had an opportunity to do so, that continue to circulate this falsehood. Now I challenge any man, woman, or child to show from anything that has ever appeared in these columns that the Gospel Advocate has ever discouraged or opposed the study of any part of the Bible or the teaching of any part of the Bible. Unless those who have busied themselves in publishing and peddling such statements can produce the proof, they should henceforth refrain from such a sinful course. The Gospel Advocate has from its beginning discouraged and vigorously opposed the teaching of human opinions and speculations about the Bible, and this it will continue to do, by the help of God, so long as it may live; and in view of its increasing circulation, supported by manifold commendations on its stand against the speculations of men, it bids fair to live a long time. While this paper proposes to contend earnestly for the faith, and craves the cooperation of every lover of the truth, it does not pose, and never has posed, as the guardian of the brotherhood. Those who help to make this paper are no more obligated to contend for the truth than others, and for one to stand by who pretends to be for the truth, and hear or see the Gospel Advocate criticized for its loyalty without a protest, is a poor soldier.

"Commercializing the Gospel"—The Other Side. (No. 4.)

BY LEE JACKSON.

Through our papers and in their public discourses many leading brethren have had much to say relative to the plea that is being made in behalf of a return to apostolic teaching and practice. With regard to this plea, a plea which we have learned to refer to as "our plea," I am ready to make a statement which I am almost afraid to make for the reason that I may be misunderstood. The statement is this: The plea that we are making for doctrinal soundness and for a strict conformity to the regulations governing the New Testament worship is not necessarily a plea for the spirit of Christianity. As conceived of in the minds of many among us it may be, and in the minds and hearts of all it ought to be such a plea, but it does not necessarily follow that as a matter of course we are making this sort of a plea. The religion of Christ is more than soundness in doctrine and more than strict conformity to New Testament regulations in worship. In addition to these requirements, it is also a service, and in its relation to the world of mankind at large this service is the predominating feature. Our teaching may be to the letter as the apostles taught and our form of worship strictly according to New Testament pattern, and yet, if the service be neglected, both the teaching and the worship are dishonored before the world; and in dishonoring these we dishonor the Christ to whom we claim to be loyal. Because of the neglect of this service on the part of professed Christians in the past, men have claimed Christianity to be a failure; and because of the present neglect of this service, many are now claiming that our plea is a failure. This is one of the important things that many of those prominently identified with our plea fail to see; and just whether or not this is the result of obstinate willfulness or because of a one-sidedness in thinking, which incapacitates them for seeing it, is really a difficult point to determine. It was with reference to this glorious phase of gospel teaching that Jesus said: "If any man serve me, him will the Father honor." (John 12: 26.) And in behalf of this sort of service the apostle prayed and made request for the brethren at Colosse, that they might be filled with the knowledge of the Lord's will in all spiritual wisdom and understanding, "to walk worthily of the Lord unto all pleasing, bearing fruit in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God." (Col. 1: 9, 10.) And this honor and glory comes to the name of Christ through the efforts of working congregations, and not simply through the self-sacrificing labors of gospel preachers. Yet, notwithstanding their pleadings for a strict observance of New Testament teaching and worship, some of our leaders inconsistently claim that honor to the cause of Christ comes through the efforts of neglected, self-sacrificing preachers who make tents to support themselves, while the wealthy congregations served by these well-paid leaders are to be left at ease in the possession of their accumulated wealth, and increasing in that worldly-mindedness which dishonors Christ. This sort of condition does not speak well for our plea, and it is a condition which at present stands in the way of victories which might otherwise be gained for the Savior's cause. Would it not be well for some of these leaders to keep quiet and let the admonitions to "make tents" be given by the preachers who really work at the business of making tents?

In a previous article I mentioned that several preachers have written me in commendation of these lessons which I am trying to enforce, and requesting me to go straight to the mark. From one of these letters I make this quotation: "It is easy for the man in the shade to advise the man with the spade, but it comes in bad grace from the man who never uses the spade." This is from a preacher whose name frequently appears in our papers, and who enjoys the reputation of being an able and successful defender of the faith. The tone of his letter indicates that he wants to give me a hint that he, too, knows of some preachers who are "easily resting under their own vine and fig tree," or, in literal terms, who are comfortably fixed and getting good money for the preaching that they do, and who are given to the habit of blithely advising less fortunate preachers to "dig with the spade" for their own support while they preach the gospel in destitute regions. And all the letters of indorsement which I have received indicate that the writers are more or less acquainted with this condition of affairs and know something of these comfortably fixed men who advise others to dig, but manage to avoid using the spade themselves. Of course this advice comes in rather bad grace; but we are not to feel surprised at getting such advice from these men, for we know that it is the man of wealth who is always most ready to advise poor people how to do without money, and that it is the close-fisted, avaricious man who tells farm tenants and laboring men how to support preachers by selling butter and eggs; and they tell me that old bachelors and old maids know more about how to manage children than those who have raised families.

I request that it be remembered that we are contending for the principle of upholding the honor and dignity of Messiah's kingdom, and not that we are especially to feel concerned about protecting preachers from hardships and difficulties consequent upon manual labor. It is written: "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." (Gal. 6: 2.) Brother Elam is now giving us some excellent lessons relative to Bible-made preachers. Does Brother Elam suppose that a truly Bible-made preacher would think of quitting the ministry of the gospel simply because he was forced to do manual labor as a means of support? Does he really believe that the preacher whose Bible education has fully imbued his soul with the spirit of the Christ could rest easily under the shade of his own vine, enjoying the good things of this life, and never feel impelled to go out into the waste places, suffering hardships and privations in his efforts to carry the gospel to the lost? Like Paul, such a preacher will say: "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." Such preachers as Brother Elam is now writing about do not need either his or my admonitions to induce them to endure hardships as good soldiers, making self-denying sacrifices in order that they may preach Christ to the lost. And observations through a series of years lead me to the conclusion that these Bible-made preachers whom we all so much admire are the ones who suffer most as the result of the influence of those who teach the congregations that preachers should make tents for their own support; for this tent-making rule is most generally applied to the preachers who have enough of the spirit of the Christ to impel them to go with the gospel message to those who are poor and destitute. The men who are careful to prepare themselves to preach only to wealthy and well-established congregations are usually fairly well cared for. They are frequently so well paid for the times that they stay at home when not feeling well or when the weather is bad that they can sit in an easy-chair and advise the poorly paid preachers that they should make tents for their own support. These Bible-made preachers may through adversity become impoverished mendicants, and the world may dishonor them and dishonor their calling; yet such men are honored by the Father, and honored by the ever-supervising presence of Him whose saving power they proclaim. But what about those professed Christians who are enjoying the blessings of accumulated wealth and who are dishonoring their Redeemer's name through their greed for gain, and who are bringing into disrepute the truth which they profess to love? There is to-day no greater obstruction to the propagation of the cause for which we plead than the spirit of worldly-mindedness which so dominantly rules the mass of the membership in our congregations. And this spirit is encouraged and upheld through the example of professed Christians who are in reality worshipping at the shrine of mammon. Much has been said relative to the bad influence of unworthy preachers; yet this influence of a comparatively few poor, unworthy preachers is only as the weight of a pebble compared to the influence of the congregations which make no effort to uphold the standard of truth which they claim to be theirs. If we hold the truth and boast of our loyalty to the truth, and this truth is not operative in our hearts and lives, it not only aggravates our guilt before God, but it disgusts and drives away great numbers of those whom it is our duty to win to Christ.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

I preached at Ripley, Tenn., on Friday night, February 4. We only have a small congregation there, and mostly women, but they are as faithful as can be found anywhere. Their house is small and on a small lot, but it is pleasant, especially in the winter, and it has a sanctified, quiet appearance which seems to prepare the heart for worship. The little congregation has inherited a very nice sum of money which will soon pass into their hands, and they hope in the near future to build a nicer and larger house, perhaps on a larger lot. The present little house suits the simple worship very well, but maybe they can reach more people in a better house.

I spent the first Sunday in February at Covington. The congregation is not a large one, but they are very well satisfied with the apostolic way. Many of them seem to think that Brother F. W. Smith is quite a preacher. He has held several meetings at Covington, and they are a little inclined to measure other preachers by him. I did not try to race with the "Bishop of Franklin," but I had no reason to complain at the treatment accorded me. I think I know now why Brother Smith is so willing to speak a good word for the church at Covington: they deserve it. The opposition all down the railroad from Obion to Memphis against the simple way is rather strong, but, with continued faithful effort, the brethren will succeed. While I could not do much for them on a flying visit such as I made, still I was glad to do something.

I missed Curve on my way down, and so I ran back up there on Monday night, February 7. This was the home of Brother Alf. Carter, one of the strong men of West Tennessee. He has passed over to his reward, but his work still remains. His widow still lives near Curve. One or perhaps two of his sons were out at meeting. There is a strong congregation at Curve, but it is made up mostly of farmers and is, therefore, considerably scattered. Brother Elihu Scott lived and died in an adjoining neighborhood, and labored much in the country around. He, too, was a strong man. Brother Parish in recent years labored much here and in this county, but he, too, has gone to his reward. I do not find many young men to take the places of these grand men of God in this country. Worthy young men should be encouraged to take the places of these old ones who have gone to their reward.

My next stop was at Henning, where I spoke to a good audience on the evening of February 8. This is the home of Brother Leon Harding, the noted and efficient leader of song. He has developed into quite a good preacher, and is held in high esteem by his neighbors and brethren as a good citizen, a good neighbor, and a faithful teacher of the word. Few men can lead congregational singing like Leon Harding. Here at Henning Brother Harding found his wife, and she is a great helper in the work of the Lord. The congregation is not large, but it is zealous and faithful to the old landmarks.

I left Henning on the morning of February 9 for Memphis. Brother Trice met me at the train, and I went to his home to make it my home for the night. Brother Trice is doing a fine work in Memphis. I spoke twice in Memphis—at Harbert Avenue and Olive Street. There was a good audience out at both meetings. They have a good house on Harbert Avenue and the congregation is growing nicely. They have four meeting places in Memphis and several good preachers. Brother E. C. L. Denton lives in Memphis; and while he is growing old, he is yet in the harness and able to do good service for the cause. Memphis is also the home of Brethren Cullom and Bunnier, and they are both competent preachers of the word. With Trice, Cullom, Bunnier, and Denton, and a lot of other good Christian men and women as colaborers, there is no reason why they may not succeed in Memphis. They have the right idea, too, in establishing as many congregations as possible in the city. In building up many congregations they reach the more people and develop more workers. I had a pleasant visit to Memphis, as I had with all the congregations on my way down. I reached Memphis just as the crest of the big rise on the Mississippi River reached there, and it was certainly some river. The loss of property has been great, human lives have been sacrificed to the angry floods, but man will soon forget it and go on in his sinful ways.

The Wise Teacher.

BY DR. W. H. MURPHY.

(Written especially for the Gospel Advocate.)

I know 'tis true that I must do
Just what the great Teacher has said,
If I would gain his love so true
And by his gentle hand be led.

I then must go to Him who'll show
To me the one straight roadway fair;
There I'll learn and most surely know
That I have found my Shepherd there.

This Teacher kind will fondly bind
My heart to him; for I can see
That I must learn of him to find
He will my loving Savior be.

I love him so, to him I'll go,
Then he'll take from me all my sin.
When I've done his commands, I know
His house I've found and entered in.

The Lord will see that I shall be Near the cross, and know how he died.
At his request, to his cross I'll flee,
And gladly show I'm satisfied.

This Teacher fine will ever shine
In my lowly heart. I must go
To him and live, for he is mine;
And there, with him, I'm safe, I know.

This saving one, God's loving Son,
My truest friend, that loves me best.
Away from him I'm all undone;
In him I'll have eternal rest.

It is too bad that I have had
A life from him apart, so bold;
While Jesus seeks to make me glad
And place me in his shielding fold.

I am to blame if I his name
Refuse to honor, love, and wear,
Since I may go to him and claim
His mercy and his glory share.

This Shepherd dear will ever hear
Those who will heed his loving call.
To those who hear he's always near,
To guide them from the fatal fall.

"Jacob's Ladder."

This is the title of an excellent book of sermons preached by Brother E. M. Borden at Neosho, Mo. They were stenographically reported by Miss Bell. The compilation is the work of Brother T. B. Clark. All who have read the book are well pleased with its vigorous treatment of live themes. We will send it for one dollar and twenty-five cents, postpaid, to any address. Address all orders to the McQuiddy Printing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

Encouragement for Mothers.

It would be well to print the following testimony of John Ruskin and give it to every mother. He says:

All that I have taught of art, everything I have written, every greatness that has been in any thought of mine, whatever I have done in life, have been due simply to the fact that, when I was a child, my mother daily read with me a part of the Bible, and daily made me learn a part of it by heart.

"Bear Ye One Another's Burdens."

It is so much better to be a lifter than a leaner. It is noble to help others bear their burdens. As we pass through the world, we should feed the hungry, clothe the naked, comfort the sorrowing, and relieve the sufferings of the downtrodden and afflicted.

That man is marked by truest manliness,
That woman is the noblest of her kind,
Who, self-forgetful, looks abroad to find
Another's pain, and strives to make it less;

Who under foot desires of self has trod;
Who, midst the daily round of toil and care,
Finds time a fellow-laborer's cross to share,
And does that, not as pleasing men, but God.

Not Myself, But Christ.

It has been said of Napoleon: "Having decided what was to be done, he did that with all his might and main. He put out all his strength. He risked everything and spared nothing—neither ammunition, nor money, nor troops, nor generals, nor himself." Nor himself! There was the secret of Napoleon's victories. A far greater and nobler than Napoleon said: "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." (Phil. 1: 21.) We should live, not for worldly glory and honor, but for Christ.

You and to-day, a soul sublime
And the great pregnant hour of time,
With Christ himself to bind the twain.
Go forth, I say; Attain, Attain!

Do Your Best.

The Record of Christian Work teaches a good lesson in the following:

Frances Willard used often to say: "Understand this first, last, and always; the world wants the best thing—it wants your best." Not your "good enough" or even "better than the average," but your best. Even in the smallest details of life our best should be given. For what is worth doing at all is worth doing the best. Everything we do in a "good enough" way weakens, and to set our standard no higher than "the average" is to court feebleness. Then

"In life's small things be resolute and great
To keep thy muscles trained: for knowest thou
When Fate thy measure takes or when she'll say,
I find thee worthy, do this thing for me?"

Should the Saloon Be Supported?

The Watchman is responsible for the following:

A father and son were sitting at the breakfast table, when the son asked: "Father, how do you expect to vote?" "Son, I will vote for local self-government." "Well, father, the practical effect of that vote is to continue the saloons in Richmond, is it not?" "Yes, son, that will be the effect." "Father, I am twenty-one. Some of my associates drink, and frequently they have invited me to go with them into saloons. I can truthfully say to you and mother this morning that I have never darkened the door of a saloon; but if the saloon is good enough for you to vote for, it is good enough for me to support, and the next invitation that comes to me, I will accept and go in and drink." The father lost his appetite; his eyes filled with tears; a lump came in his throat; and he said: "My son, I will vote for prohibition."

Still Living.

A man in Indiana went some years ago to New Mexico and was said to have been killed there by the Indians. The spiritual mediums have had his spirit up several times and conversed with it and were highly edified by his revelations of the other world. Now he turns up at his old home alive and still in the flesh. The mediums have been ridiculed and have not yet found a way to explain.—Western Recorder.

Necromancy, fortune telling, and seeking unto familiar spirits is of the devil. It is a sin of which no Christian should be guilty. "And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits and unto the wizards, that chirp and that mutter: should not a people seek unto their God? on behalf of the living should they seek unto the dead? To the law and to the testimony! if they speak not according to this word, surely there is no morning for them." (Isa. 8: 19, 20.)

Christian Influence.

A young minister about to enter the gospel ministry said that at one period of his life he was almost an infidel, but that there was one argument in favor of Christianity which he could never refute—the consistent conduct of his father. Another young man said: "I tried to be a skeptic, but my mother's life was too much for me." Christians are Christ's epistles "known and read of all men." Our dear Lord's best interpreters are humble human beings. Christians should never forget that they are writing for Christ, the best and purest being this world has ever known. They should do nothing that will bring reproach upon that holy name. Christians are the light of the world, the salt of the earth, and should so live that they may win thousands to Jesus Christ. As Napoleon charged one who bore his name as he entered battle to "remember whose name you wear," so the child of God should always remember that he wears the name of Christ. Christians should thank God that, as one has said, "the duties of a Christian life are continuous." Their work is not completed until they wear their crown in glory. Ida Q. Moulton, in Record of Christian Work, tells of a devoted church worker, a woman of great influence in her community, who said: "Well, I have done my share. I'm going to stop and let some one else do the work now." She was wrong in this, for the Christian must continue in well-doing. Christians must fight the evil one throughout life. The song is correct when it says:

My soul, be on thy guard,
Ten thousand foes arise;
The hosts of sin are pressing hard
To draw thee from the skies.

O watch, and fight, and pray,
The battle ne'er give o'er;
Renew it boldly every day,
And help divine implore.

Ne'er think the victory won,
Nor lay thine armor down;
The work of faith will not be done
Till thou obtain the crown.

Fight on, my soul, till death
Shall bring thee to thy God;
He'll take thee, at thy parting breath,
To his divine abode.

Japanese Farming Implements.

BY J. M. McCALEB.

(Read before the Asiatic Society, Tokyo, Japan.)

No nation has ever risen to a state of civilization that did not till the soil. To the extent that the earth yields her products, to that extent a people make progress. All above the ground comes out of it. The chief problem with man is how to get the greatest results in return for his labor. The solution of this problem depends on the use of farming implements. If we only stop to think how helpless man would be as a tiller of the soil with nothing but his hands, we are then prepared to realize how indispensable are tools for tillage.

One of the serious defects in the economic conditions of Japan to-day is that agriculture has not kept pace with other lines of progress. In almost everything else the country has made remarkable advance. But the Japanese farmer of to-day is practically right where he was half a century ago; and half a century ago found him right where he had been for many centuries past. He plants the same crops and does things in the same slow and laborious way his ancestors have done before him for untold generations. That there are some marks of improvement is most cheerfully conceded, but the advance is by no means adequate for the demands of the times.

I. A DESCRIPTION OF JAPANESE FARMING IMPLEMENTS.

1. Preparing the soil ready for planting. The principle tools are the long hoe for the dry land and the hoe-fork for the rice lands. The long hoe is about six inches wide and about a foot and a half long, the size of the hoe and the length of the handle varying considerably in different localities. In some instances the handle is four or five feet long, while in Kyushu, for example, it is scarcely two feet, being but little longer than the hoe itself. The hoe-fork is a modified rake with a short, heavy handle and only four teeth much elongated and enlarged. When the soil of the paddy field is once turned over with this hoe-fork, the immense clods are crushed by means of a rude harrow with only one row of teeth and drawn by a horse, or else by means of the hoe, one clod at a time. In some sections the field is drained and, instead of the hoe-fork, a primitive plow is used. It has only one handle and consists mainly of wood, with only the point made of iron, a plow reaching back to a very primitive age and similar to the ancient plows of some other Oriental countries. These and the reap hook for harvesting and an instrument for stripping the rice from the straw, a more detailed description of which will appear further on, constitute, in the main, the farmer's outfit.

2. Planting and cultivating. When it comes to rice, this is done almost entirely by hand minus any tools whatever. The seed is first sown in a bed especially prepared, and the plants are allowed to grow till eight or ten inches high, when they are pulled up and transplanted in the field, in rows about a foot apart. While the plants are growing to maturity, the farmer goes in from time to time and stirs the mud around the roots with his hands and destroys any grass or weeds that may have appeared—a task very trying on the back, hands, and feet, and one that the Western farmer would scarcely endure. For the same purpose there has been invented of late years a sort of revolving harrow called Suiden Johoshi, an invention by the Konoen. It is just wide enough to pass between the rows, and is constructed boat fashion so as to slip over the mud as it is pushed along by means of a handle from behind, while the harrow wheel in the bottom of the little boat rotates and stirs the soil. But its use as yet is by no means considerable, most of the work still being done in the primitive way by bending down and using the hands. For planting and for the cultivation of dry-land crops, the hands and the hoe are used almost exclusively, the hands for planting and pulling out the weeds and the hoe for stirring the soil.

3. Harvesting. For harvesting the grain, the kama, or reap hook, is used almost exclusively, the most primitive method of harvesting known. What seems still more remarkable is that the kama of Japan is almost identical with the oldest reap hook known to history. "Records of this implement are found in Egyptian history B.C. 1400 to 1500. The earliest form of the sickle had a slightly curved blade with a straight handle." (New International Encyclopedia, Volume XVI., under "Reaping.") As simple and as primitive as is the Japanese kama, perhaps no other implement of the farm is so universally used. With a blade only seven or eight inches long and a handle about fifteen, it serves to reap all the grain of Japan, one bunch at a time.

A detailed description of all the various farming implements now offered in the market, yet but little used, would require too much space; but, before passing from this part of the subject, it may be proper to mention the rice stripper, a sort of iron-toothed comb by means of which the rice is stripped from the head, the Japanese name of which is ine-koki manga or simply manga, which literally means ten thousand teeth, a characteristic Oriental exaggeration. This, too, is exceedingly primitive. The frame is about two feet high, and the teeth, six or eight inches long, point upward. Small handfuls of straw are drawn through these teeth, stripping off the grain. A machine operated by one man by means of pedals attached to a revolving cylinder in which are iron teeth that strip the grain from the straw is now being offered for sale. Though very simple, it is on the principle of threshing machines in the West. It is inexpensive and does the work of several men operating in the old way. This is a very hopeful start toward a better method of threshing. The suriusu is a primitive hand mill for husking the grain after it has been stripped from the straw. This could be greatly improved by an up-to-date husker attached to steam, electricity, or water power.

Appreciates the Advanced Gospel Quarterly.

Brother A. D. Milroy, of Brenham, Texas, has written the following letter to the McQuiddy Printing Company:

Dear Brethren: I have just seen a copy of your Advanced Gospel Quarterly for the first quarter of 1916. It has given me much joy to read your splendid exegesis of the first four lessons. In my humble opinion, it is the most connected, concise, and scriptural explanation of the text it has been my pleasure to read this year, and I use several quarterlies in my studies of the word. It certainly goes to show most clearly that the same Holy Spirit shall guide us into all truth through the Holy Scriptures, and the main cause of a divided church is, as ever, "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."

To My Friends.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Some of you may wonder why you have neither seen in print anything from my pen this year nor received prompt reply to letters you have written me.

I have neither right nor inclination to murmur or complain, but the grippe has had me almost, if not altogether, all the time from the beginning of 1916 till now; and, while the jovial and jolly may jest and joke about the grippe, the grippe itself is no joke, as, I fear, many of you may know, and may never be able to forget.

According to a habit from which I am never willing to deviate, I began my first series of meetings for the New Year with a last-night-in-the-old-year rally, hoping that series of meetings might be my longest and best for this year. I delivered seven discourses to seven good audiences, went home, went to bed, and there am I yet. I'm improving, however, and hope to be able, in the very near future, to preach the word.

I consented, or agreed, to accept the honor of being added to the editorial staff of the Gospel Advocate, January 1, 1916, because friends and brethren assured me good would result from my doing so. I have accepted and hold the appreciated position with the plainly expressed understanding that I am to write when, and only when, I wish to write. My connection with and work on the paper are to, in no wise, interfere with my evangelistic work. My mission is to preach the word. I belong to Christ and my friends, however; hence, if my pen can add a little to the little good my tongue may do, it shall always be ready to add that little.

One of old Kentucky's brilliant statesmen is reputed to have said, in a characteristic flight of oratory: "While I cannot hope to ever be able to lift men to heaven, I thank God that I have no desire to drag angels down to earth." While my life and labors may not elevate the standard, tone, and spirit of our paper, I shall do all in my power, as wisely and well as I can, to prevent their lowering them, always earnestly "endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

To this end, I shall try to be true to the advice, admonition, or exhortation of the apostle Peter with which I close this little letter: "Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous: not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing. For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile: let him eschew evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it. For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers: but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil." (1 Pet. 3: 8-12.)

The Western Recorder on Unitarianism and "Campbellism."

BY M. C. K.

The ordinary flippant use of the terms "Campbellite" and "Campbellism" so common in some religious journals, notably in the Western Recorder, of Louisville, Ky., does not call for formal reply, if for any attention at all. But when they are used in a connection and in a manner to create not only a false, but a decidedly injurious, impression, the case is far different and it is proper to give it attention. Such an instance occurs in the Western Recorder of January 27, 1916. It is found in the "Query Department," conducted by "Senex," and is as follows:

A brother asks, "Are the Disciples Unitarians?" and adds the following, which suggested his surmise: "Some time ago I attended worship at the Disciples' church, where a series of meetings was in progress. In looking through their hymnal, I noticed what seemed to me a most remarkable change in that grand old hymn, 'Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty.' In all the books I had seen before, the first and fourth stanzas closed with 'God in three Persons, blessed Trinity.' But here, to my great surprise, the first stanza closed with 'God our all and blessed eternity.' This change seems a clear refusal to acknowledge the trinity of the Godhead."

The change would seem to suggest a Unitarian explanation. And this prompts the remark that from the beginning of Mr. Campbell's Reformation to this good day, not a few of his theological followers have been known for their Unitarian views. As is well known, several of their most intellectual leaders did not believe in the personality of the Holy Spirit, which they usually denominated as "it." It is probably true that more of their ministers have gone to the Unitarians than to any other people. Originally, Campbellism was strongly tinged with Unitarianism. This is probably still true.

Of course, we do not know what kind of a theological hobgoblin the Recorder has in mind when it uses the term "Campbellism," but we do know what is believed and taught by the people whom it designates as "Campbellites" and whom it charges with teaching "Campbellism;" and, in this instance, not content with simply calling them Campbellites and accusing them of teaching Campbellism, it goes to the extreme of branding them as Unitarians. Now, it may be that "Senex" is not yet old enough to know better than to make this ugly and groundless charge; but we are quite sure that the editor of the Western Recorder, regardless of his age, knows that the people whom he has allowed to be thus maligned in his columns are not only not Unitarians, but have always been among the foremost and strongest opponents of the infidelity of Unitarianism. In fact, the charge is not only untrue, but, in the face of all the facts in the case, is unwarranted from every point of view. From the inauguration of the Reformation of the nineteenth century down to this present day the voice of history thunders its solemn and emphatic refutation of the charge, and the Recorder ought to blush with shame that it gave it a place in its columns. The representative men among this people, from the very beginning and throughout their history, have always and everywhere presented a solid phalanx against what the Recorder has here falsely charged upon them. Their pulpits, their journalism, and their books, including commentaries and books of sermons, with all other lines of periodical literature (and they have contributed much to the religious literature of the period), furnish a standing and monumental refutation of the charge. And if the facts do not bring the blush of shame to both "Senex" and the Western Recorder, surely it will be because their powers of appreciation have become impaired.

That men tinctured with Unitarianism have sometimes crept into the ranks of this people is not denied, and the same is probably true of every religious people on earth which professes to accept Christianity, and if the Recorder had merely stated such a fact, we would not have demurred; but when it makes the charge that, as a people, they the "strongly tinctured with Unitarianism," we enter our most solemn caveat and declare that the charge is false in toto, and it has been our impression that the Western Recorder knows that it is false. Moreover, the Recorder's charge about their belief "in the personality of the Holy Spirit" is equally loose and misleading. Even if the charge were true that they have "usually denominated" the Holy Spirit "as 'it,'" that would not prove that they do "not believe in the personality of the Holy Spirit," any more than the same fact would prove the same thing against some of the writers of the New Testament themselves. As represented in the Revised Version, the apostle John himself quotes John the Baptist as distinctly saying: "I have beheld the Spirit descending as a dove out of heaven; and it abode upon him." (John 1: 32.) Will the Recorder say that these two Johns "did not believe in the personality of the Holy Spirit?" If not, why not? But if they did believe in the personality of the Holy Spirit, notwithstanding this use of "it," why cannot the same be true of others?

For a long time the Gospel Advocate has been disposed to magnify the points of agreement between it and the Baptists and to make an honest effort to see how near the two peoples can come to union and coöperation in the Lord's work without any sacrifice of truth or principle on the part of either, and we deeply regret to see in the pulpits or in the journalism of either people any disposition to misrepresent or to magnify the points of disagreement and thus widen the breach and perpetuate division in the body of Christ. Surely union among the followers of Christ, a condition of things so dear to his own great heart as to call forth that memorable prayer for it in the shadow of his cross, is sufficient to subdue candid and reflecting men into a seriousness that would spurn the very thought of misrepresentation. So far as we are concerned, we have determined to magnify the points of agreement and to minimize the points of disagreement between ourselves and all others, as far as this can be done consistently, and to continue to plead and to pray for the coming day when we can see exemplified as well as sing:

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above.

Conversion—What is It?

BY E. G. S.

This word has been and still is most wonderfully abused and perverted as to its meaning. The word "convert" means to turn; as, to turn round, or turn about. Jesus said to his disciples: "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 18: 3.) Peter said to the Jews when preaching the gospel to them: "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord." (Acts 3: 19.) In the Revised Version both of these passages have the word "turn," in the active voice, instead of the passive "be converted." In the first passage Christ was talking to his disciples, who had already entered the preparatory state of the kingdom through the preaching of John, and yet they had to be converted again or they could not enter the kingdom of heaven. They were ambitious, worldly-minded, seeking worldly honors in what they thought would be an earthly kingdom; for they still thought Christ had come to establish an earthly kingdom and wanted the highest honors in it. The Savior meant to impress them that they must turn from all such worldly and fleshly aspirations before they could be members of his kingdom. There are thousands of church members to-day that need just that sort of conversion. The importance of such conversion is greater than may at first be supposed, since a lack of it would keep them out of the kingdom of heaven. Christians, therefore, should be very careful as to the sort of lives they are living. They should strive to see every mistake they make and every wrong thing they do, and repent of it—"be converted," as this passage puts it. But the Revised Version of it is certainly plainer and better, as it expresses just the thing that must be done in all such cases. It simply says: "Repent ye therefore, and turn again." This relieves the apparently mystical meaning of the expression "be converted," as though conversion were something to be wrought in a man by some abstract, secret, mystical, spiritual power working in his heart to convert him. This version lays the responsibility upon the man and tells him to do the turning. Those disciples were cultivating aspirations directly contrary to the life the followers of Christ were to live in the church of God. Jesus meant that those disciples must turn away from such gross fleshly desires and study and practice the spiritual principles that he was beginning to introduce to guide people in the kingdom which he had come to establish. And now, since that kingdom has come and all its requirements have been made known, all Christians should so study the word as to be able always to see all their missteps and promptly turn from them. Paul puts the matter thus: "Put to death therefore your members which are upon the earth: fornication, uncleanness, passion, evil desires, and covetousness, which is idolatry." (Col. 3: 5.) Those disciples to whom Jesus spoke coveted earthly honors, earthly wealth, worldly pleasures, and such like things, which were so out of harmony with the church of God that they of necessity had to turn from them or fail to be members of that spiritual body, which meant the loss of the soul to them. Those to whom Paul spoke were indulging the same sort of fleshly aspirations, and must of necessity put them off, crucify them, or they would fail to enter the eternal kingdom. This is the sort of conversion all need who cultivate such impulses. They must turn away from all mere worldly, fleshly things or be forever lost. Turning away from these worldly things and following the will of God is what Jesus meant by conversion in the passage first quoted above.

But when Peter said to the Jews at Jerusalem, "Be converted," he meant something a little different. The church in its fullness had been set up and Peter was preaching the gospel to them to make Christians of them. The record is very brief regarding the preaching on this occasion and its results, and all the requirements are not named; but enough is said to indicate that faith had been preached and that Peter knew some of them were believing the truth when he commanded them to repent and be converted—that is, turn again. This shows that people are responsible in the whole matter. In the conversion of the sinner there are three steps to be taken—faith, repentance, and baptism. All these were required in the preceding chapter when the three thousand were saved. So these people were believers when the above commands to repent and turn again were given to them. Then, in addition to their faith, they were commanded to repent and then to turn. So the word “turn” takes in baptism, the last step in conversion. When they had taken these steps, the promise of pardon was theirs. Their faith did not work pardon in them, repentance did not, nor did their baptism. These acts of obedience prepared them for pardon, but did not work pardon in them. Pardon does not take place in man, but is exercised in the mind of God. Nor do these acts of obedience merit or procure pardon. They only prepare man in heart, in life and relationship, for remission. These requirements obeyed put men into Christ, “in whom we have our redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our trespasses, according to the riches of his grace.” (Eph. 1: 7.) This shows that remission of sins comes through the blood of Christ. But this blood is effective only for the obedient. No man in disobedience to God, while refusing any one of these requirements, has the shadow of a promise from God that he can receive pardon in that condition. If a man believes and then refuses to repent, that moment his faith is dead and he remains in his sins. Jesus says: “Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.” (Luke 13: 5.) So that settles the doom of all sinners that refuse to repent. Baptism is as positively commanded as is repentance; therefore the man that refuses to be baptized is just as much a rebel against God as the man who refuses to repent. James (2: 10) lays down the principle that “whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet stumble in one point, he is become guilty of all.” Whenever any man refuses any command of God, he arrays himself against God by refusing to do what God says do and is not fit for pardon. There can be no harmony, no unity, between God and any man that rejects anything that God commands. Those people that believe they get religion and that their sins are pardoned before baptism and fail to be baptized have no unity with God or Christ, are rejecting both the wisdom and authority of God. There is not a promise in the New Testament that such have been or ever will be pardoned in that attitude. They are not fit for pardon while they are trusting in man’s wisdom instead of the word, wisdom, and authority of God.

Paul embraced the whole ground of conversion, of becoming a Christian, when he said to the Thessalonians that they “turned unto God from idols, to serve a living and true God.” (1 Thess. 1: 9.) They turned to God. In doing this they believed the gospel, repented, and were baptized. In doing these things they turned from idols and entered upon the service of God. The ultimate purpose of turning to God from idols was that they might serve God, might give their lives to him. All want to go to heaven when they die, but they do not all want to serve God in this life. They do not want to go through a life of self-denial here. By the “get-religion” system that has been so long preached by so many and the preaching people off to heaven in funerals that had never obeyed the gospel, but had on their deathbed claimed they were ready to die, people have been impressed that a real life of service is not needful to go to heaven. Many seem to think that if they can have a few moments in which to give their hearts to God, he will take them to heaven without a lifetime of self-denial and service. They seem to feel that a lifetime of service to God is a sort of punishment, a life of gloom and sadness, and that it takes away all the pleasures of life. But the truth of the matter is that a lifetime of faithfulness in the service of God produces the happiest, the most enjoyable life that anybody ever lived on this earth. The happiness that results from the Christian life is real and is lasting. Fleshly pleasures are but fleeting, and pretty generally leave a pang of regret or remorse that far more than overbalances the momentary pleasure. True Christians are very much happier in visiting the fatherless and widows, waiting on the afflicted, and meeting with saints on the first day of the week and worshiping the Lord than any are in visiting theaters, attending the dance, or engaging in any other fleshly, worldly amusements.

Questions and Letters.

BY E. A. E.

—, Tenn., February 7, 1916.—Dear Brother Elam: Does 2 Thess. 3: 6 mean for the church to withdraw from a member before he is admonished by the brethren—that is, a brother that has been repeatedly drunk—or are they to proceed as recorded in Matt. 18: 15-18? X.

Read 1 Thess. 5: 12-14. In this first letter to the Thessalonians Paul says: “Admonish the disorderly, encourage the faint-hearted, support the weak, be long-suffering toward all.” The elders should take the lead in this good work. In his second letter to the Thessalonians Paul would not command them to withdraw from any “disorderly” brother contrary to his directions in the first letter. Then the “disorderly” must first be admonished before withdrawn from.

All that God teaches on a subject must be studied and practiced before his will on that subject can be known and done. All congregations or individuals really desirous of doing God’s will and of pleasing him will do this. All who have theories and notions of their own and are governed by prejudice and the spirit of vengeance will not do this, but will attempt to justify their course by some isolated passage of scripture.

The factious man is to be rejected, because he is perverted, sins, and is self-condemned; but he is not to be rejected until after the first and second admonition. (Tit. 3: 10, 11.) The drunkard does not do more harm than the factionist, if as much. All disorderly ones must be treated alike and dealt with, therefore, according to the will of God. The weak ones must be supported and the faint-hearted ones encouraged. Again, Paul says those who are spiritual should restore any brother who has been overtaken in a trespass, but should do it in the spirit of gentleness, looking to themselves, lest they also be tempted. (Gal. 6: 1.)

In 2 Thess. 3: 6-15 Paul specifies disorderly walk—that which is not according to the inspired teaching he had delivered. He also specifies some disorderly characters. He declares that he did not walk disorderly among the Thessalonians and that they should imitate him; that he ate no one’s bread for naught, but worked night and day (not because he did not have a right to a support while he preached the gospel, but to make himself an example, which he urged them to follow, and, therefore, to work at something useful); that if any man would not work, neither should he eat; and that he had heard of some there who were walking disorderly because they were not at work and were busybodies. He commanded all who were not at work to go to work in quietness (to let the business of others alone) and to eat their own bread—to earn a living. This disorderly walk of not working at something useful and of being busybodies receives but little attention in many places, but does a great deal of harm.

The elders and the whole church should not stop with admonishing the drunkard, the factionist, the idler, and all others who walk disorderly, but, having done this without effecting a reformation, should withdraw from all such. All the members should withdraw their Christian association from all such to the end that such may become ashamed and repent and be saved. (See 2 Thess. 3: 14; 1 Cor. 5: 1-8.)

But after one has been withdrawn from, he is not to be treated as an enemy, but admonished as a brother. (2 Thess. 3: 15.)

High Bridge, Ky., January 28, 1916.—Dear Brother Elam: I have just read your article, "Some Questions and Answers," in reply to some questions of Brother T. J. Dunn, in the Gospel Advocate of the 27th inst., and I greatly desire to thank you for the excellent reply. I think I know about those untaught questions that are forever coming up in the different congregations. Your good article will do so much good. May God bless you, my brother, in your work in the Lord.

J. R. PRESTON.

This indorsement is appreciated. It is encouraging to learn that many good men are concerned in keeping down the questions which God commands churches and teachers to avoid, and that so many deplore the contention and strife which spring from them.

It is just to say that I have received, also, a very lengthy criticism of this same article. Let it be borne in mind that, before attempting to answer the questions, I wrote upon general principles against strife and division over untaught questions and emphasized the duty to heed God's command to give diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. I think it is unwise to publish this criticism, not because it is a criticism (just criticism accomplishes good), but because it misses entirely the purport of my article and misconstrues and misapplies it. The wisest and best way, it seems to me, is to avoid a multiplication of unpleasant personalities and unprofitable strife by not beginning them. A straightforward and conscientious investigation of any subject in the light of the word of God and in the love of truth always accomplishes good. Tit for tat, contending in a partisan spirit, attempting to carry a point in vainglory, and dealing in personalities do not teach people or maintain unity and peace. Yet good can be done in showing one's inconsistencies and unchristian course.

A GOOD LETTER WHICH SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

601 Nevada Street, El Paso, Texas, December 28, 1915.—Dear Brother Elam: Through my home people, Brother Dunn, and others, you have kept in touch with our work at this place, and I know no one rejoices more over the progress made than you do, since it was through you the work was really started, and I never cease to be thankful that I wrote you for advice and that you gave it.

Next Sunday will be the ninth anniversary of our work. I am the only one of the number who met that day in a private home to worship as our Lord directs that has been here continuously; there are not more than four or five in all of that number with us now.

Our growth has been slow; but we kept on working, hoping, praying that at some time we should firmly plant the truth here, and now our hopes are about to be realized. We have such a nice, neat house of worship (we owe a goodly sum on it), ample for years to come, and a splendid helper in Brother J. W. Dunn; and while we are yet quite weak, if we can only have a little help for a while, I am sure we shall not only be able to stand alone, but let the work spread to the destitute fields right at our door. We have received so little outside help yet, but for this we are very grateful indeed. Without it we could not have carried the work on as we have. I am thoroughly convinced that the Lord is with us and has abundantly blessed our efforts.

We appreciate the interest you have always manifested in us. The suggestion relative to making appeals through the various religious papers is good, I am sure, and is the one most usually resorted to; yet, somehow, we prefer to worry along the best we can and let that be the very last resort. I shall never be willing to have it stated, "We shall lose our house if we don't get help," and similar pleas until it really comes to that; and if we are that indifferent, we deserve to fail. We are making some personal appeals. My family have helped more than any others; then some close personal friends. I was able to get them to see from my point of view.

Will you not see if you can get some congregations or individuals, or both, to make some donations? Lebanon was kind enough to give five dollars a month this year, but failed to answer directly when we asked that they continue this fellowship. We shall be very grateful if you will do this. Knowing so many people and knowing what we are doing, I feel sure you can help us in this way.

The sacrifice some here are making is great. I never knew I could do so much; still it seems I do very little as it is.

We have a city of about seventy thousand population and no congregations for long distances from us. Where can one find a larger field in which to help?

With every good wish to you and yours for a prosperous New Year, I am,

Your sister in Christ,

MAMIE YOUNG.

While this letter was not written for publication, it teaches a good lesson and demonstrates how a few earnest ones can succeed in the work of the church. This congregation is manifesting, too, the self-helpful and right spirit in not making public appeals. Yet it is not wrong always to let others know the work and needs of a given worthy church. Many abuse the use of public appeals. The most effective way I have of inducing individuals and congregations to help this most worthy work in El Paso is publishing this letter. I trust this faithful and devoted young sister will be pleased with my doing so, and I hope many will respond to the call.

There are not three more worthy and inviting fields than this one; Knoxville, Tenn.; and the one in which Brother J. D. Walling is so faithfully at work in Kentucky, with Monticello as his post office. While some so readily and generously respond to fields not so needy, I wonder that these places are not more liberally helped.

Two Good Religious Papers At the Price of One.

Hundreds are accepting this exceptional opportunity to secure two good religious papers at the price of one. We do not wish any of our readers to miss it, and hence call their attention again.

At this season of the year we make an extraordinarily good offer as a mark of appreciation to new subscribers and in order that we may close our fiscal year free of debt. For a few weeks we will send the "old reliable" Gospel Advocate and The Bible Study Helper, the new monthly magazine devoted exclusively to Bible study, to new subscribers for one dollar and fifty cents, which is the price of the Gospel Advocate. If you send renewal, add twenty-five cents.

New subscriptions for The Bible Study Helper are coming in every mail. Here are some expressions from those who read the first number: "Indescribably good;" "deserves a liberal patronage;" "a fine piece of work;" "comes to fill a place not filled by any other magazine;" "like food to a hungry soul;" "its comments on the international lessons are excellent;" "the first number was worth the price of a year's subscription;" "every teacher and advanced student should have it."

Send your order to-day while you have the advantage of this exceptional offer. It will last only for a little while. Send all orders to the Gospel Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.

What would you think of a shipbuilder who put rotten timbers into the hull of his vessel, but excused himself by saying that later on, when the cabins were being built, he would use sound wood? Is it any more absurd, though, than for boys and girls to build bad habits and evil thoughts into the early foundation years of their lives and expect to make it up by "being good when they grow up?"

—The Young People.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

Brother McQuiddy: Is it right or wrong for a congregation to keep a record of its membership, their financial work, etc., and at the end of the year have this read to the congregation? Is it orderly or disorderly? Does it in any way add to or take from the word of God? M. E.

The local church must know its members and where they live in order to properly look after and care for them. Every church owes it to itself to use the best possible system in keeping informed in regard to its membership. It is disorderly to fail to keep a record of the membership. A record is essential in order that the sick may be visited, the hungry fed, and that those who are negligent may be exhorted to be faithful in their service to God. Christians should seek to be more efficient. Business men are studying efficiency and leaving nothing undone to produce at the lowest possible cost. Why should Christians be diligent in business and slothful in the work of Jehovah? Is business more important than the soul? To blindly worship God is sinful. "Let all things be done decently and in order." (1 Cor. 14: 40.) Members of the body have a right to know what is being done and how their contributions are used. This necessitates a report of the financial condition of the church. It would be well to make a report more frequently than annually. Paul was very cautious lest evil should be spoken of his good name. He would not carry the means collected at Corinth to Judea, but insisted that they should send their own approved messengers. No man or set of men who properly regard their own character will handle money for a church or any one else without keeping such an account of receipts and expenditures, with proper vouchers as to how it was used. Reports are necessary to show the proper vouchers and that funds were properly used. A man who will not do this is not fit to handle money for any one. When the contribution is made, it would be well for some one to count it and turn it over to the treasurer and both keep an account of it. This is necessary protection of the treasurer's character. Things are not done scripturally that do not protect the characters of the servants. Proper attention to such things will prevent troubles.

Brother McQuiddy: (1) Does any kind of seed impart vegetable life to the earth into which it is sown? If not, why claim that the word of God (seed) imparts divine life to the heart of the sinner into which it is sown? (2) Can one, before natural birth, desire natural life? If not, how can one, before the new birth, desire spiritual life?

I. A. DOUTHITT.

(1) I know of no teaching, either human or divine, that warrants the conclusion that any kind of seed imparts vegetable life to the earth. God gives to "each seed a body of its own." "Except a grain of wheat fall into the earth and die, it abideth by itself alone; but if it die, it beareth much fruit." (John 12: 24.) The seed is the word of God which falls into the heart. The word of God is the seed of the kingdom. (Luke 8: 11.) The seed is the material substance in which the germinal principle of life dwells. Then the word of God is the material seed in which the germinal principle of spiritual or divine life dwells. If the word of God is received into the heart, the Spirit of God must go with it, because the word of God is an incorruptible seed. The word can never be separated from the spirit dwelling in it. "It is the spirit that giveth life; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I have spoken unto you are spirit, and are life." (John 6: 63.) In receiving the word of God into the heart, one receives the Spirit of God that dwells in that word. The Spirit becomes a living, working principle in the heart only as the word is believed and obeyed. The Spirit which is divine gives through the word which embodies that divinity the divine life. (2) It is not safe to press analogies between the human and divine. No one knows anything about what the unborn child desires. There is a vast difference between the desire of a grown person and an unborn babe. This question falls under the head of untaught and doubtful questions, which gender strife and create division rather than godly edification in Jesus Christ. It would be wise to postpone the study of this nonessential, impractical question until we become skilled in the knowledge and practice of the questions which are taught and which are helpful and practical.

Brother McQuiddy: There is an old brother who is preaching here and one of the foremost elders who teach, as near as I can state it, that Christ and the apostles contradict each other, and disregard any teaching of Christ that is not corroborated by the apostles, and claim that "that was when he was back under the law." The preacher also says that Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John are uninspired. The elder claims that some of the writers were not apostles, hence we are not bound by their writings. Did the apostles bind anything on us in the New Testament, except Christ's teaching, guided by the Holy Spirit? Did James write under the law in addressing himself to the twelve tribes of Israel? Need we only heed Paul's writings, as he was sent to the Gentiles?

F. D. WHITELAW.

"Every scripture inspired of God is also profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness: that the man of God may be complete, furnished completely unto every good work." (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17.) The New Testament contains the testimony concerning Jesus which the original witnesses gave to the world, and this testimony has come down to us without material corruption. The truth of this statement is maintained by the talent, the learning and piety of the Christian world, and is admitted by many competent and learned unbelievers. The genuineness of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John is established from such sources. Renan affirms: "The composition of the Gospels was one of the most important events to the future of Christianity which occurred during the second half of the first century." "All, in my judgment, date back to the first century, and they are substantially by the authors to whom they are attributed." To doubt the genuineness and integrity of the gospel as presented by Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John is to question the integrity and genuineness of the New Testament. To repudiate a part is to repudiate the whole. Christ indorsed the apostles and the apostles corroborate Christ. There is no contradiction between them, but perfect agreement. It is true that Christ kept the law and fulfilled it, but he lived and died for the world. When all authority had been given unto him in heaven and on earth, he said: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) The apostles derived all their power and authority from Christ and taught what he commanded them to teach. In other words, Christ spoke and taught through the apostles. Paul says: "For I make known to you, brethren, as touching the gospel which was preached by me, that it is not after man. For neither did I receive it from man, nor was I taught it, but it came to me through revelation of Jesus Christ." (Gal. 1: 11, 12.) As Paul taught the things revealed by Christ, so did all the apostles. James wrote, as did all the apostles, by the guidance and direction of Christ and the Holy Spirit. His letter is addressed to Hebrew Christians scattered abroad among the Gentile countries.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Compiled by A. B. Lipscomb

W. E. Morgan has changed his address from Fort Worth, Texas, to 149 Park Street, Portland, Maine.

A. S. Derryberry's address is changed from Lebanon, Tenn., to 702 Reid Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

C. M. Pullias will begin a meeting at Murray, Ky., on March 5. T. B. Thompson says: "We are expecting a spiritual feast."

A new house of worship has been completed near Dothan, Tenn. This is W. T. Goalen's field of labor, and success is greatly due to his indefatigable efforts.

From Mrs. M. E. Byars, at Alma, Ark.: "I have been a reader of the Gospel Advocate since 1872. The good it has done, our Heavenly Father only knows."

From Mrs. B. A. Dillard, at Chillicothe, Texas: "I thoroughly enjoy every number of the Gospel Advocate, but the special numbers are indeed a treat."

From Mrs. S. V. Gillespie, at Oxford, Miss.: "I have been a subscriber to the Gospel Advocate for about ten years, and believe the 1915 issues are the best for any year since I have been a subscriber."

From C. H. Black, at Garrett, Texas: "I am a new subscriber, and I like your paper fine. I was a Word of Truth reader and came by the Advocate that way. It is a great help to me in my ministerial work."

W. Stephen Witt, of Hitchcock, Texas, writes: "I am preaching at Galveston two Lord's days each month. Splendid services on February 13. Three made the confession and were baptized in the Gulf, there being 'much water.'"

From J. M. Dennis, at Racine, Mo.: "I am here at Racine in a meeting which began on Tuesday evening, February 15. The meeting starts off nicely. I preached on last Lord's day and at night at Neosho, Mo. Neosho is now the home of Rufus Green, of Tennessee. I was glad to meet Brother Green."

Can you teach German? Then you will be interested in what W. F. Ledlow, of Lockney, Texas, writes: "I want to correspond with some one—man or woman—who can teach well four or five years in German. We want a teacher with a degree from a good college. State least salary, give experience, etc. In case we employ a lady, we should like to have one who can teach domestic science also."

John T. Poe feels good over the quick and hearty response to the call in behalf of T. W. Phillips, who is recovering from a painful accident. Brother Poe writes: "Who would not belong to God's mutual aid? God bless the brethren for their prompt fellowship. The S. O. S. call was heard and quickly answered. We need the church and a full and confident trust in God; that's all."

From Ben West, at Lometa, Texas: "A revival of interest along all lines of service is sweeping this town and community. New members at every Sunday service. Five Bible classes weekly. Good attendance at six services weekly. We have begun a revival to continue three hundred and sixty-five days. We have near one hundred in Sunday school. I have twenty-five young people in Brother Elam's Advanced lessons. Pray that we keep humble."

From Thomas E. Milholland, at Denison, Texas: "We are still moving up and on in the Master's work in Denison. Two were added last Lord's day. Our hearts were made to rejoice to see a house full of eager, anxious, waiting people. I preached on "The Blessedness of Giving" at 11 A.M., and at 3 P.M. we had a business meeting and pledged six hundred and seventy dollars on our church debt. We hope to raise all by the time it is due. We thank God and take courage."

Information Wanted.—My husband, Evangelist J. M. Norwood, left home (Tarpon Springs, Fla.) on January 22 for Hildreth, Fla. Since then I have not heard a word from him. I will appreciate any information as to his whereabouts from any one. Address Mrs. M. A. Norwood, Largo, Fla., Box 10.

I hope that any of our readers who can supply this sister with the desired information will not hesitate to do so. The brethren write us that she is a good, Christian woman.

W. S. Long, Jr., sends us some notes from Manchester, Tenn.: "Sister Jenkins, one of our oldest members, was called to the spirit world on February 19. Several copies of The Bible Study Helper reached Manchester last week. The March number is most excellent, and is helping the Lord's-day Bible classes. Manchester is looking forward with much pleasure to the coming of Brethren Srygley and Brewer on Friday evening, February 25. The writer preached at Summitville, Tenn., on Sunday morning and at Hickerson Station on Sunday night. The new chapel at Summitville will soon be ready for use."

Christians who have visited or who contemplate a visit to Florida will be pleased to read the following encouraging note from James A. Hardison, at Winter Garden: "We met on February 13 at Brother Gregory's residence, and we shall meet next Lord's day at the schoolhouse here, the Lord willing. Any one visiting in Orange County during the winter is earnestly requested to come over and visit us. We shall be glad to meet you at the train and furnish you a nice place to stay while in the city. Before coming, write me what day you will arrive and I shall meet you at the station. Our number at Winter Garden is nine, and there are six in the immediate vicinity."

John Hayes writes from Hazlehurst, Ga.: "The debate closed on February 17, with a large audience and fine interest. I will now continue the meeting as long as the interest demands. Brother Hall, of Atlanta, was my moderator for two days, and Brother Claus, of Valdosta, two days. It was truly a pleasure and profit to me to be with these godly, consecrated men, and they were a great help to me in this discussion. The debate closed without any hard feelings on the part of any one. The audience was not as large as it would have been but for the work of the pastors of the other churches in talking against the debate and persuading many to stay away. So, like the Catholic religion, they want the people kept in ignorance."

It is not every day in the week that some Christian opens his heart to give five hundred dollars toward building a meetinghouse. But here follows an exceptional example in which two hearts were opened. W. F. Roberts writes from Troy, Tenn.: "A few weeks ago we began a building fund for a meetinghouse in Troy by depositing eighty-five dollars in the bank. Up to about a week ago it had grown to one hundred and twenty-five dollars. Sunday, to the surprise of the church, we announced the receipt of a check for five hundred dollars, which was given by Sister Margaret Andrews, of this place. She gives this amount to carry out the expressed (to her) intention of her late husband, John W. Andrews, who died last December. May she be rewarded bountifully for her liberality, or, in Paul's language, may this fruit abound to her account."

John B. Peden, at Buchanan, Fla., writes: "I am planning to make a trip to Arkansas, Mississippi, and Alabama this summer to spend about two months—say, July and August—and would like to spend the time preaching where I can do some good. I am not advertising for a job or looking for money. If you need a meeting and think I am the man you can use, let me hear from you. As to who I am, I refer you to John H. Coker or Ben Flowers, elders of my home church, Buchanan, Fla.; A. H. Burnes, Mingo, Miss., who has known me from childhood; or to George B. Hoover, Tampa, Fla. I would be glad to visit some of the churches in South Alabama and North Florida on this trip."

Brother Peden is highly recommended, and we trust that churches will cooperate with him in arranging his trip.

E. E. Sewell, one of the former teachers, and T. F. Dunn, one of the alumni of the Nashville Bible School, have located with their families near Hazlehurst, Miss. They purpose to spread the gospel in this new field. The following from Brother Sewell will be read with interest: "I am well pleased with my new location so far. The elevation is high for this far South, about five hundred feet, same as that of Nashville. The land is rolling and well drained and health conditions of the best. I am near the twenty-seven-hundred-acre stock farm of T. F. Dunn, lately moved from Tennessee, and the sixteen-hundred-acre farm of William Goodbar, a son of my former employer at Memphis. The soil is a red clay and sandy mixture, somewhat thin, but capable of being brought to a high degree of fertility. It is an ideal country for stock raising as well as for fruit and truck, six hundred and fifty cars of which are shipped annually from Hazlehurst, seven miles distant. Land prices are very low now, thanks to the temporary dethronement of King Cotton by the boll weevil. Brother Dunn's family and mine constitute the church here now, but we hope to change this state of affairs. My address is Wesson, Miss."

The Boaz-Locklear Debate.

BY G. C. BREWER.

A debate between Brother W. T. Boaz, of Columbia, Tenn., and Mr. J. A. Locklear, of East Gadsden, Ala., was held at New Decatur, Ala., beginning on January 31 and continuing six nights. Despite the inclement weather the debate was well attended, there being a crowded house at every session. Several visiting brethren from different parts of the country were there, and the good people of the Decatur church showed great hospitality and entertained us all royally.

What we usually call "the general church question" was discussed, each man affirming that the church of which he is a member is the church of the New Testament.

Brother Boaz led in the first half of the discussion with the affirmation, "The church of Christ, of which I, W. T. Boaz, am a member, is scriptural in origin, doctrine, and practice." In his first speech Brother Boaz displayed a chart which set forth the origin, doctrine, and practice of the church, showing that it was organized on the day of Pentecost, showing the steps of induction or initiation into it, and showing how its members should live. In his very first utterances Mr. Locklear showed his inability to meet the arguments. His opening remarks were confused and contradictory. He said he would accept Brother Boaz' chart as it stood, but a little later he challenged Brother Boaz to put his finger on the passage that says a church was built on Pentecost. Being strengthened by his own challenge, he then turned to the chart and put his pointer on the word "baptism" and said he would also differ from Brother Boaz here. With that he seemed to get sufficient control of himself to remember the usual false charges made against us and launched into a tirade on baptism. He accused Boaz of believing in nothing but baptism, of hastening to "dive into baptism," etc. With things of this nature he filled the time of his first speech. When Brother Boaz came to the stand again, he cleared away the rubbish and continued his affirmation.

In Mr. Locklear's second speech he said Brother Boaz' church could not be the church of Christ, because it did not contain apostles, miracles, tongues, etc. He hung upon the wall a diagram of two churches. One, he said, represented the church of the New Testament, and this had Christ as the door and contained apostles, prophets, and all those whom God set in the church, also all the spiritual gifts mentioned in the Bible. The other diagram, he said, represented the church of which Boaz is a member, and it had baptism

Use This to Stop Your La Grippe Cough.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound quickly stops tiresome, weakening, and racking la grippe coughs. F. G. Prevo, of Bedford, Ind., writes: "La grippe left me with a severe cough, and I tried everything. I lost in weight, and it looked as if I never would get well. I tried Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, and two bottles cured me. I am now well and back to normal weight." All druggists sell it everywhere.

Revivalist Tells of Relief from Pain.

St. John the Divine, in his vividly drawn picture of heaven, as his closing and most convincing argument of making this assertion St. John felt its glories, states: "And there shall be no more pain." (Rev. 21: 22.) In that no more glorious prospect could be placed before the human mind.

Pain saps our strength in the battle of life. It is the strongest helper of disease.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills bring wonderful relief from all pain. For the past twenty years these pills have been increasing in popularity until now they are the most generally used remedy for use.

The Rev. R. M. Bentley, of Shelbyville, Ind., the popular revivalist, has the following to say about these pills: "I feel it my duty to suffering humanity to say something in regard to Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. I consider them a Godsend. For myself, I fail to find words to express my gratitude for the relief that they bring. Hundreds of times when it seemed the pain was too great to allow me to go on the platform, I have found in them a sweet relief. I have used them for over ten years, and always tell others about the benefit that can be derived from them."

If you suffer from any pain, purchase a box; and if you are not perfectly satisfied, return the empty box to your druggist and he will be glad to give you your money back.

as the door and contained only elders and deacons. Brother Boaz' moderator objected to this chart as a misrepresentation, because Brother Boaz had already said Christ is the door, and had also said Paul and the twelve apostles were in the same church with him, and had showed that the miracles recorded in the Bible were given in confirmation of the gospel which he (Boaz) preaches. He had challenged Locklear to name an apostle in his church that is living to-day. When the moderator objected to the chart, Mr. Locklear sat down and refused to speak further that night. His moderator said, however, that they would rearrange the diagram and bring it back the next night.

The next night they produced the chart with all the spiritual gifts in it, and Brother Boaz accepted it and asked Mr. Locklear to either accept his chart or say where it was wrong. Locklear said he agreed with it all, except that the church was set up on Pentecost and that we are baptized into Christ. This eliminated all points on Brother Boaz' proposition except the two mentioned, and it was agreed that they should have the whole attention of the debaters the next night, and they shook hands and closed that session. The next night Brother Boaz affirmed the two points stated above, and Locklear begged the question and blubbered through his entire first speech, quitting eight minutes before his time was out. But in his second speech, which was his final negative, he undertook to answer arguments that had been made all through the debate. A fine thing for a holy, sanctified, sinless fellow!

On the fourth night Locklear took the lead with the affirmative that the church of God, of which he is a member, is scriptural in origin, doctrine, and practice. He said the church originated in the mind of God and was in process of development through all the days of the Old Testament, of John the Baptist, and of Christ, and was fully set up and completely organized on Pentecost. And yet, while he was in the negative, he had quoted Christ's language in John 17, "I have finished the work," etc., to prove that the church was set up, finished, before Christ's death. Brother Boaz agreed with his affirmation on origin and tried to get him to shake hands and eliminate that point, but he was afraid. The fifth night, however, he did shake hands with Brother Boaz in agreement that the church was set up, or completely organized on the day of Pentecost.

Locklear would not come out on any point of doctrine. He absolutely refused to say whether he was baptized with the Holy Spirit, whether he be-

THE BURNETT-WEAVER DEBATE ON METHODISM.

IN TWO VOLUMES OF MORE THAN FIVE HUNDRED PAGES.

Disputants:

T. R. Burnett, Christian; J. C. Weaver, Methodist.

THE ONLY COMPLETE DEBATE BETWEEN CHRISTIANS AND METHODISTS NOW PUBLISHED.

Each disputant has sixty-eight speeches. The corresponding speeches are of equal length by actual count of words.

PROPOSITIONS DISCUSSED IN VOLUME ONE.

PROPOSITION 1. The Scriptures teach that sprinkling or pouring of clean water upon a proper subject, in the name of the Holy Trinity, by a proper administrator, is Christian baptism. Weaver affirms; Burnett denies.

PROPOSITION 2. Infant baptism is authorized by the word of God. Weaver affirms; Burnett denies.

PROPOSITIONS DISCUSSED IN VOLUME TWO.

PROPOSITION 1. The Scriptures teach that in the conversion of the sinner the influence of the Holy Spirit is confined to the word of truth, or gospel, as contained in the New Testament. Burnett affirms; Weaver denies.

PROPOSITION 2. The Scriptures teach that baptism is for (in order to) the remission of sins. Burnett affirms; Weaver denies.

3. The creed criticized. Burnett leads; Weaver responds.
J. C. Weaver, of Henderson, Texas, is a recognized authority in his church. He is a man of talent, and has been debating for many years.

T. R. Burnett is one of the shrewdest men of the present time among the disciples of Christ. As a debater, preacher, and author, he takes first rank. His arguments stand out as clear as light. He has a style that is unique—peculiarly his own—that attracts and charms the reader. When one begins reading his writing, he is led on as if by some impelling force, and can hardly lay the book down till he has finished it.

These books sparkle with interest—fresh, lively thought, and strong, convincing argument.

lieved in total depravity, or whether his church had any organization larger than a local congregation. He would not even attempt to answer Brother Boaz' arguments. He spent his time in tergiversation and whining. On his side this was not a debate; it was a fiasco. I think the intelligent members of Locklear's church saw the failure. There was and is some talk of their getting one H. M. Riggle, a strong, representative

How to Have the Best Cough Remedy and Save $2 by Making It at Home

Cough medicines, as a rule contain a large quantity of plain syrup. A pint of granulated sugar with $\frac{1}{2}$ pint of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

Then get from your druggist 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for \$2.50—a clear saving of nearly \$2. Full directions with Pinex. It keeps perfectly and tastes good.

It takes hold of the usual cough or chest cold at once and conquers it in 24 hours. Splendid for whooping cough, bronchitis and winter coughs.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes the inflamed membranes in the case of a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol, and has been used for generations to heal inflamed membranes of the throat and chest.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2 $\frac{1}{2}$ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., 235 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Lime and Tuberculosis

Dr. Roberts Bartholow, former professor in Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, says in his Materia Medica (1895), on pages 215 and 216: "Clinical experience has shown that it (referring to a calcium salt) possesses the ill-defined property known as alterative, removes certain toxic or morbid materials and secures their secretion by the organs of elimination. . . . The testimony which has lately been published in respect to its curative powers in consumption is certainly very striking."

He does not refer to testimony regarding Eckman's Alternative, since the medical profession never publicly recommends proprietary remedies. However, many cases of consumption seem to have yielded to this remedy.

This success may be due largely to the fact that in Eckman's Alternative a calcium (lime) salt is so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be easily assimilated by the average person. It contains neither opiates, narcotics nor habit-forming drugs, so is safe. Price $1 and $2 per bottle. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct from the Laboratory. We would like to send you a booklet containing information of value and references.

man and a prolific writer in their church, to debate with us at Decatur. It is to be hoped that they will. If they want their doctrine properly set before the people, they will certainly have to get somebody; and as some of us agreed to pay Mr. Riggle's railroad fare from his home to Decatur, now is their time. What will they do?

Brother Boaz fully lived up to his reputation in this debate. Of course he did not have a fair chance, as he had no opponent, but he presented the truth in a strong and forceful manner. He kept his part of the discussion on a high plane. He pressed his opponent so hard that had he been a man of greater intelligence, he would have either come out in defense of his doctrine or quit the debate. Brother Boaz was not abusive, however, and his language was not offensive, but his strictures on Locklear's doctrine were merciless.

The writer of this report moderated for Brother Boaz, and a Mr. Walker, of Birmingham, Ala., moderated for Mr. Locklear.

Dr. Walker is an ex-physician. He gave up his medical profession for his belief in divine healing, though he is himself afflicted. On the fifth night of the debate the subject of divine healing came up, and Brother Boaz challenged Locklear to demonstrate his power to heal by relieving his moderator, who, we had observed, had a stiff knee and was otherwise afflicted. At the close of Brother Boaz' speech the moderator took the stand to testify. He admitted that he had a stiff knee, but said the Lord had healed the disease, which was tuberculosis of the bone. He said surgical operations and all other methods of medical science had failed to do him any good, but that he was now healed by the power of God. The next day, however, Brother Walker went to a physician in Decatur, and we accidentally or providentially found it out, and on consulting the physician we learned that the disease was still there. In the debate that night Mr. Locklear gave the names of people who were healed, but they were all far away in other States. Brother Walker was not used, though Brother Boaz asked them to reintroduce their witness.

My heart goes out in sympathy for Brother Walker, and I do not blame him for having the very best medical attention and at the same time praying to God for a restoration to health, just as we pray for our daily bread and at the same time work for it; but when his brethren are affirming in debate that they are apostles of the Lord, that they have been baptized in the Holy Spirit and can do miracles, I would advise Brother Walker to stay at home.

Six-Year-Old Had Croup.

"I have a little girl six years old who has a great deal of trouble with croup," writes W. E. Curry, of Evansville, Ind. "I have used Foley's Honey and Tar, obtaining instant relief for her. My wife and I also use it; and I will say it is the best cure for a bad cold, cough, throat trouble, and croup that I ever saw." Those terrible coughs that seem to tear one to pieces yield to Foley's Honey and Tar.

One Hundred Dollars for One Cent.

It will cost you a one-cent postal card to write for your copy of the handsomely illustrated catalogue of the Gospel Advocate Piano Club, which will explain to your thorough satisfaction how the Club of One Hundred Piano Buyers saves each member one hundred dollars or more on the price of high-grade pianos and player-pianos. You cannot afford to buy a piano until you have investigated the club, for you cannot afford to throw away the money-saving opportunity it offers you.

As an individual buyer, purchasing at random, you are weak; but as a member of the club, you have the strength of an army of one hundred buyers, and, therefore, secure the lowest possible factory price. The club makes the payments easy, ships your piano at once, freight prepaid, subject to your approval after one-month's trial. Perfect satisfaction is absolutely guaranteed to every member. A Correction—Florida.

BY JOHN E. DUNN.

A recent letter from Brother W. A. Cameron, of Largo, Fla., calls my attention to a mistake in my article in the Gospel Advocate of February 3, under the caption, "Opportunities in Florida." In my article I said: "No effort has ever been made to establish a New Testament church on the east coast south of Jacksonville, except at Miami." I insert Brother Cameron's correction of my error:

About nine years ago Brother Shoulders held a meeting at Arch Creek, the particulars of which I cannot give. About twelve years ago a Brother Yowell and wife moved to Tillman from Texas, and through their influence I went there and preached eight days at Malabor, five miles south of Tillman. I stopped with them, and we walked to and fro every night. We failed to accomplish anything, so far as I could see, but it was an effort. About fourteen years ago I established a congregation of twenty-five or thirty members at Matanzas, twenty miles south of St. Augustine. They held together more than ten years, during which time I baptized several others; but they finally got so poor they had to move away. Five years ago I established a congregation at Mims, five miles west of Titusville, which now numbers about thirty-five members. They have a neat, small house of worship which is paid for. Four years ago I established another congregation at Turnbull Bay, on the Florida East Coast Railway. There I baptized every human in the neighborhood who was old enough. They are alive and worshipping regularly. I was there ten days ago. I have baptized more than a hundred people between St. Augustine and Miami. If I were at home, I could give you the exact number of miles traveled, sermons preached, additions by baptism and otherwise, amount received, and cost of the work. But my, my, the territory yet untouched! At this writing I am nearly on the east coast—only about thirty miles inland. We have seven members here, all very poor people and so situated that they cannot take care of the preacher. Therefore I am boarding. We are using a union house. I began on Saturday night. We are having fine crowds. I do not know how long I shall be here.

I have been giving my all to this

if you will cleanse the air passages with a douche, or spray, of warm salt water and then apply Mentholatum (as an antiseptic and delicate counter irritant).

Its volatile aromatic qualities destroy the germs and encourage restoration of the membranes. It brings easy breathing and relieves attendant headache.

Mentholatum is harmless, cleanly, and soothing. Its constituents are prescribed for this purpose by leading physicians everywhere.

It is also excellent for cold sores, catarrh, croup, chapped skin, abrasions, burns, scalds, and other forms of inflammation.

SUFFERED FROM LAME BACK, WEAK KIDNEYS, AND DIZZINESS.

Dear Editor: Last winter I suffered terribly from lame back, weak kidneys, dizziness, and uric acid in the blood which caused rheumatic pains. I sent to Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., for his new remedy—"Anuric." As soon as the box of tablets came by mail, I commenced taking them and reaped untold good from their use.

(Signed) MRS. KATE THOMPSON.

Note.—This "Anuric" is adapted especially for kidney complaints and diseases arising from disorders of the kidneys and bladder, such as back-ache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, congestion of the kidneys, inflammation of the bladder, scalding urine and urinary troubles. The physicians and specialists at Dr. Pierce's great institution in Buffalo, N. Y., have thoroughly tested this prescription and have been with one accord successful in eradicating these troubles, and in most cases absolutely curing the diseased kidneys.

Patients having once used "Anuric" at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel have repeatedly sent back for more. Such a demand has been created that Dr. Pierce has decided to put "Anuric" in the drug stores of this country in a ready-to-use form. If not obtainable, send one dime by mail to Dr. Pierce for trial package, or fifty cents for full treatment.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood cleanser and alterative that starts the liver and stomach into vigorous action. It thus assists in making rich, red blood, which feeds the heart, nerves, brain, and all organs of the body. You feel clean, strong, and strenuous—instead of tired, weak, and "all in."

Florida field for fifteen years and feel that I am almost acquainted with it and its needs. The brethren are poor and badly scattered. They are not able to support the work as it should be. We are always hoping for greater things.

With a prayer for you and the cause in Miami, I am,

Your brother in Christ,

W. A. CAMERON.

Pine Castle, Fla.

I am glad to give the above correction and encouraging news to the readers of the Advocate. Brother Cameron is an earnest, self-sacrificing, faithful New Testament evangelist. He is, perhaps, the best-acquainted man with the cause of Christ in Florida, and has likely done more work in this State in the last fifteen years than any other preacher. I wish we had a score more like him in Florida. Brother R. C. White has recently closed a successful meeting on the east coast, at Bunnell, and set in order a church of eleven members. All of the above places are one hundred and sixty-six miles north of Miami, except Arch Creek, and we have nothing there now. My remarks were mainly about the condition on the east coast in the vicinity of Miami. This is a vast untouched mission field. We hope to get the work at Miami during my stay here where we can locate an evangelist here for all of his time. I believe this country has a bright future. It is an inviting mission field. Miami and vicinity is the most delightful and charming country I ever saw. The public schools are fine and the best roads anywhere in the South.

I OWE MY HEALTH

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Washington Park, Ill.—“I am the mother of four children and have suffered with female trouble, backache, nervous spells and the blues. My children's loud talking and romping would make me so nervous I could just tear everything to pieces and I would ache all over and feel so sick that I would not want anyone to talk to me at times. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills restored me to health and I want to thank you for the good they have done me. I have had quite a bit of trouble and worry but it does not affect my youthful looks. My friends say ‘Why do you look so young and well?’ I owe it all to the Lydia E. Pinkham remedies.”

—Mrs. ROBT. STOPIEL, Moore Avenue, Washington Park, Illinois.

We wish every woman who suffers from female troubles, nervousness, backache or the blues could see the letters written by women made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have any symptom about which you would like to know write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for helpful advice given free of charge.

Grateful for Help.

BY S. R. CASSIUS.

I wish to thank our brethren for the following amounts given me during the month of January toward my evangelistic work and tent fund: B. F. Hart, Tennessee, $1; Jacob Stamm, West Virginia, $2; J. M. Burgess, Indiana, $1; S. G. Haner, Oklahoma, 25 cents; D. J. Puckett, Ohio, $1; Sister Annie Peeples, Tennessee, $2; Sister Finley Coltrane, West Virginia, $2; Sister J. T. Taylor, Texas, 25 cents. So far, this is all I have received during January, for all of which I am humbly thankful. I have been confined to my home for five weeks, and part of the time I have been very sick; but, thank God, I am better, and if nothing happens I will be out in the work before this acknowledgment gets into print. Brethren, if you know how badly it is needed in my work, you would surely give me that tent. I have done what I could to impress you with the great need of my people. I can now only commend you to the God of all truth, that he may cause you to make a little sacrifice for the sake of my poor, sin-blinded race. If it would suit you best, send your gift to the Gospel Advocate; or direct to me—Route 2, Box 54, Meridian, Okla.

Notes from India.

BY W. HUME M'HENRY.

I have just returned from a visit in the Nizam's Dominions, to a village where our men were recently forbidden to preach the gospel by a Mohammedan official. Since this part of the country is under Mohammedan rule, it is only natural that they should be opposed to the preaching of Christ, but believing that God had many people in that region, we went forth, nothing fearing, with a fervent prayer that God's word might run and be glorified. On this occasion no one hindered or dared make us afraid, so we were permitted to preach the word with all boldness. Conscious of the fact that they might be severely persecuted, fifteen men confessed their faith in Jesus as their Savior and were buried with him in baptism by Brother Y. K. Jacob on November 19. Others were almost persuaded, and we have reason to believe that numerous villages in this region are ready to be won for Christ. Our hearts rejoice over the prospects.

During these troublous times, when thousands of the best men are being sacrificed upon the altar of their country, it is considered most commendable

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER.

It's mercury! Attacks the Bones, salivates and makes you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel, when fifty cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and cannot salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury, and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick, and nauseated to-morrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead, and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue, or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you do not find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel, your money is waiting for you.

What it Cost.

BY DON CARLOS JANES.

"Have you ever thought what it cost for you to have salvation? When God made worlds, his words were enough. He threw plants from his finger tips as easily as the raindrops in the springtime. He dipped his hand into eternity and oceans flowed from his hands like the dew. But when he wanted to save man, he had to send his only Son to die. Born in another man's manger, buried in another man's grave. His first companions were cattle and his last were thieves. His first pillow was straw and his last was thorns. Have you ever said 'Thank you' to Jesus? The basest wretch on earth is the wretch who is ungrateful. You are not refined if you are ungrateful to God. You are low and base and vulgar. Do not talk about society and about being in the upper set if you do not cultivate a spiritual life."

The redeemed soul can afford to thank God daily for the gift of Jesus. We are taught to be polite to our fellows; we should be grateful and thankful to our God. With a great salvation and at a great cost we have been saved. Let us be appreciative of this as far as it is possible for finite beings to appreciate the act of infinite love. Let us live close to God.

A WARNING.—To feel tired before exertion is not laziness; it's a sign that the system lacks vitality and needs the tonic effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sufferers should not delay. Get rid of that tired feeling by beginning to take Hood's Sarsaparilla to-day.

OLD PRESCRIPTION FOR WEAK KIDNEYS.

A medicinal preparation like Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root that has real curative value almost sells itself. Like an endless-chain system, the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is a physician's prescription. It has been tested for years and has brought results to countless numbers who have suffered.

The success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver, and bladder diseases, corrects urinary troubles, and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

Do not suffer. Get a bottle of Swamp-Root from any druggist now. Start treatment to-day.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention the Gospel Advocate.

Why Experiment?

Your health is too valuable to experiment with untried remedies. The only safe plan is to use remedies that have been thoroughly tested and proven efficient and those that are positively guaranteed by their manufacturers. The statement that "Renwar" positively relieves rheumatism is backed by hundreds of testimonials voluntarily given by those who have used it, and "Renwar" is sold on an absolute guarantee of satisfaction or money back. If you suffer from rheumatism and cannot secure "Renwar" from your druggist, we will send you a bottle, postpaid, for fifty cents, and we will refund your money if it fails to give you satisfaction. FROM THE FIELD

Alabama.

New Decatur, February 17.—The work in New Decatur is progressing nicely. The interest is much increased since we came, and two have been added by letter and one restored. The Boaz-Locklear debate served as a stimulus in many respects, despite the incompetency of Mr. Locklear and his unwillingness even to present the teachings of the saints, for Brother Boaz did some excellent teaching. We were pleased to have in our midst so many visiting brethren, among whom were about ten preachers of the gospel, who took part in the informal meetings at 2:30 P.M. throughout the week, and one of whom preached daily at the noon hour near the Louisville and Nashville Railroad shops. Brother W. T. Goalen remained over and preached for us on Sunday and Sunday night. From all of which, with our continuous labors; the preaching by Brother J. T. Harris, of Florence, the week following the fourth Sunday in February; and the preaching in the annual meeting which begins, the Lord willing, on the fourth Lord's day in May, by T. Q. Martin, of Winchester, Ky., all expect great good.

J. PERRY EVELL.

Florida.

Plant City, February 8.—The meeting at Plant City is now a thing of the past. We closed out Sunday night after three weeks of earnest labor. Opposition here is fierce and every effort to baffle us in our progress is put forth. I preached twenty-eight times and baptized nine. One wanderer returned, two came from the Catholic Church, and two from the Methodists. We were greeted by the largest audiences that have ever been in that building. I consider the meeting a success from every standpoint. I hope all the brethren in Tennessee are enjoying life and prosperity. We are having real summer time down here.

J. PAUL KIMBRELL.

Winter Garden, February 13.—We began the worship here on the third Lord's day in January. There are nine members of the church here. We have thirteen dollars in the treasury. We shall buy some books for the song service and Sunday school at once and begin laying plans for building a house of worship. Any suggestions or financial support from the brotherhood abroad would be greatly appreciated. Send all donations to the treasurer, Brother Lee C. Gregory, and any suggestions or any other information of any nature to him or to me. Address me until next report at Winter Garden, Fla. My permanent address is Columbia, Tenn. We are at work in earnest here, and we expect great results within the next two months. People of the town are interested in the preaching of the old Jerusalem gospel "that has stood the trials of the ages past" and shall stand forever.

HAD PELLAGRA SEVEN YEARS. THANKS GOD HE'S CURED.

Cowards, S. C.—David G. Fate, of this place, writes: "I am glad to say to you, after waiting forty days, that I still feel like I am cured of pellagra. I had this disease for the last seven years. The fourth day after beginning your medicine I went back to work and have been able to do my work ever since. I thank God for your remedy."

There is no longer any doubt that pellagra can be cured. Do not delay until it is too late. It is your duty to consult the resourceful Baughn.

The symptoms: Hands red like sunburn; skin peeling off; sore mouth; the lips, throat, and tongue a flaming red, with much mucus and choking; indigestion and nausea; either diarrhea or constipation.

There is hope. Get Baughn's big free book on pellagra and learn about the remedy for pellagra that has at last been found. Address American Compounding Co., Box 2036, Jasper, Ala., remembering money is refunded in any case where the remedy fails to cure.—Adv.

continued until January 21. We had two services each day during the first week, but only at night the second week. Brother Barnes did some very fine preaching, mostly to the church. The congregations were small, but attentive. There were no additions to the body, but some sleeping members were waked up, and the attendance at the regular meetings has been better since he was here. Brother Barnes is one of the most spiritual men I ever knew—just a common, home-made preacher who lives what he preaches and carries with him always a heart full of love for his neighbors and brethren. To know him is to love him. He has just given up all secular employment, and is giving his whole time and interest to the Master's work in Florida. Any congregation wanting a meeting will make no mistake in calling Brother Barnes.

school year. We sought for others to meet with us, but were not able to find any that would meet regularly with us at first. We began the regular worship in our house, only two of us, and I can gladly say that we enjoyed it, although it possibly appeared to some nothing but religious fanaticism. It is a grand experience and, I might say, a trial of faith to meet in one's home. Try it, brother, when you are sick or when you move to some place where there needs to be a church established. Since Christmas Brother Horace Copeland, a young preacher from Dover, has been meeting with us. He sings well, and was of great assistance in our meeting. Brother R. C. White, of Nashville, Tenn., held the meeting. While there were no baptisms, a little band of ten have promised to meet for regular worship. One lady came from the Baptist Church, and some others decided to lay aside their differences if they had any. A real estate man promised to hold two lots for us two years if we would put up a building. He also proposed to help to meet the expenses of building. When we think best we shall proceed to investigate the advisability of putting up a meetinghouse. We have rented for temporary use a cottage that will give us a large room to meet in and a good room for a Bible class. The brethren passing through are requested to stop over with us, especially those who preach. Below is a list of churches that had fellowship in the meeting: Church at Midway, near Lake Butler, Fla., $5; church at Rincon, Ga., $6.65; Union Church, near Dasher, Ga., $8; Black Schoolhouse, near Valdosta, Ga., $5; church at Oxford, Fla., $1.50; Brother A. L. Colson, Trenton, Fla., $1; Brother D. A. Dean (through Brother White), Obion, Tenn., $4. Total, $31.15. We wish to thank those who had fellowship in this work.

J. G. MALPHURS.

Georgia.

Hazlehurst, February 7.—The meeting began here last night with a good audience, and we are expecting to do a great work for the Master. I went out to hear the Baptist preacher, and he "challenged any man" to deny his teaching. We do not go around with a chip on our shoulder, but they must not throw out challenges that way when a soldier of the King is around. He backed square down from all questions except apostasy. So Sunday next we begin to debate that question. Then, if he refuses to discuss the other question, I shall continue the meeting. Brethren, here is a town of fifteen hundred souls and not a member of the church of Christ. Two miles from town there are four members. We broke bread there. Shall I spend my time here without support? If you doubt the worthiness of this call, write Brother Lipscomb or Brother S. H. Hall, of Atlanta. I am here, and, support or no support, I expect to remain a month or longer. The Presbyterians have let us have their house, but we have to pay for electric lights. Write me in care of W. N. Gantt, Hazlehurst, Ga. JOHN HAYES.

Hazlehurst, February 15.—At this writing I am moderating in a debate between Brother John Hayes and J. B.

Davis, Baptist, at this place. The debate goes well. Brother Claus, of Valdosta, is with us. But the matter that I wish especially to get before the brethren just now is that Brother Hayes needs more fellowship than he is receiving. We have only four members here, and they are poor in this world's goods. It is Brother Hayes' desire to remain here for at least a month and endeavor to establish the cause permanently at this place. Too, after he is through here, he would be glad to visit some other section where we have only a few brethren and continue such work till the last of May. Other places are calling for just such work. Help us, brethren, to keep him here. I am here at my own charges helping all I can. The Atlanta brethren (West End) contributed five dollars and ten cents toward his support last Lord's day and will help more as soon as they can. S. H. HALL.

MONEY IN PIGEONS

Make Your Back Yard Profitable

THE demand for squabs in the Northern, Eastern and Southern markets has never been supplied, because pigeon raising as a business is comparatively new. Buy a half dozen pair of select birds, fence in a small portion of your back yard, and watch them go to work. Success is easy. They raise from eight to fifteen pairs of squabs a year. Your squabs and fancy birds will bring handsome returns. You will actually make money in a hitherto useless part of your back yard. Pigeon raising is not a fad or fancy. It is a profitable business. Let us start you right. Our breeders are the best, and raised from prize winning parents. We will furnish you with the birds and teach you how to raise them, and you will reap a handsome profit with a very little outlay. Thousands are taking advantage of this same opportunity. Write to-day for our literature on pigeon raising as a money making proposition, or better still, write us to send you a few pair of Belgian Carneau at $3.00 per pair, White Swiss Mondrines at $5.00 per pair, White Kings at $3.50 per pair, or White Mattise at $1.00 per pair. Our birds are all guaranteed. Your money back if after two months you are not satisfied with their work. Better prices on larger orders. Write to-day and get the pick of the flock.

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glitters with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Are We Logical?

BY L. D. PERKINS.

As a body of Christ's followers we have contended that we occupy logical positions, and, generally speaking, most of our preachers and many who are not preachers do hold to positions that are logical, and especially when we confine ourselves to the word of God; but when we get away from that, we are like a ship without a compass. Now, of all the illogical positions, I have seen none that will beat the position of those who admit that private, individual Christians have a right to establish schools and teach the Bible along with other textbooks, and then, when individual Christians proceed to establish such schools and teach the Bible in all its truth with the other books, for these same men who have admitted that it is right for such schools to exist to oppose them in every way possible and cry that they are doing the work of the church. This, I say, is the most illogical and senseless position I have seen a body of our people take. The most foolish and sinful thing about it is that these men are pressing it to the division of churches. One cry is: "The school is doing the work of the church." I ask, is there any truth to such a statement? Is it not a fact that in any community where one of these schools has been established the churches near to it are doing more teaching, and more efficient teaching, than they ever did before? I believe all churches near to such schools will confirm me in this statement.

I cull the following from the writings of one of our good men: "Another preacher said to me recently that he did not believe any one understood the book of Revelation. He said that Martin had written on it, that Johnson had written on it, and they differed; hence his conclusion that no one understood it. Then I wondered what Revelation meant, anyway. Did it not mean something made known? And if so, was it not possible that this Revelation had reached the understanding of some, even if it had not his and mine?"

To the question, "What does Revelation mean?" we would say with the writer that it means "made known," but it is not necessary for us to conclude that the book of Revelation was made known to us. In the first verse of this book it tells plainly to whom it was made known. It is plainly stated that "He [God] sent and signified it by his angel to his servant John." The word "signify" is defined to mean: "To make known by signs or words; to express, convey, or communicate to another by words, signs, gestures, or the like." This,

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS.

Says backache is sign you have been eating too much meat.

"When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region, it generally means you have been eating too much meat," says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once, or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure, and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

then, settles the question as to what is meant and to whom it was made known. It was to his servant John, and it does not mean, nor need we conclude from the word "Revelation," that it was made known to any other mortal—or ever will be, for that matter. The apostle Peter said: "Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scriptures is of private interpretation." (2 Pet. 1: 20.) This ought to settle some other matters that have been necessarily consuming considerable of our good space in the Advocate.

Another illogical position I see from the pen of some one in one of our papers is as follows: In pointing out those he terms "hobbyists" and of those he assumes as such, and that they should not be allowed to preach, he points to some of our good people who are in the habit of taking their collections by laying it on a table in place of passing around a basket. The word of God says: "As I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." (1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.) The word of God does not legislate whether we shall lay it on a table, lay it in a hat, or flip it on a drum. Each individual is left at liberty in this matter—only, he is to give. The proposition that is bothering me is not whether they lay it on a table, flip it on a drum as do the Salvationists, or put it in a basket that may be passed. I fear many are doing neither as God would have them do. I do not care or bother myself about which way we do it; the proposition is, do it. But the point I wish to make is this: The man who thus legislates where God has not, and then is pleased to call those who may differ from him "hobbyists," and warns churches against letting such a one preach, I say he is a dangerous man. He is committing a grievous sin. He has lost his head of reasoning. The Gospel Advocate is clear from such unsound reasoning, and I am confident that it will continue to so be.

A Nervous Breakdown,

no matter how trivial it appears, may be the beginning of the end of you. The heart and nerves are so closely connected that nothing can affect the nerves without affecting the heart. SAGE TEA DANDY
TO DARKEN HAIR.

It's grandma's recipe to bring back color and luster to hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you will get a fifty-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous sage-tea recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

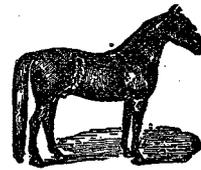

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly, and thin, have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around; so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

OUTLINES OF BIBLE STUDY

REVISED AND ENLARGED

BY G. DALLAS SMITH

FOR USE IN

BIBLE DRILLS, BIBLE READINGS, BIBLE CLASSES, PRAYER MEETINGS, AND HOME STUDY

A BRIEF DESCRIPTION

Outlines of Bible Study (Revised and Enlarged) is a book of one hundred and twenty pages, besides five full-page maps covering all Bible lands. It is printed in large, clear type, on good, heavy paper, and is substantially bound in stiff cloth.

The book contains seventeen drill lessons for use in Bible drills, Bible readings, or any other Bible class where it is desired to cover the entire scope of the Sacred Record in a short time.

Outlines of Bible Study is not a commentary in any sense of the word. It contains but few comments. It is not "literature" in the same sense that some object to literature. It rather guides one in his study that it may be intelligent and systematic.

PRICES

Single copy, prepaid, fifty cents; one dozen copies, prepaid, $5.50; twenty-five copies, not prepaid, $10; fifty copies, not prepaid, $18.50; one hundred copies, not prepaid, $35.

Outline Sermons on the Old Testament

This volume, containing 139 outlines of sermons by 46 eminent English and American clergymen, is fully indexed by subjects and texts.

Outline Sermons on the New Testament

This volume contains 300 outlines by 77 eminent English and American clergymen; it is fully indexed by subjects and texts. The outlines furnished in these two volumes have been drawn from the leading pulpit thinkers of every denomination in Great Britain and America, including Rev. Drs. Wm. M. Taylor, John Cairns, Howard Crosby, Theodore L. Cuyler, Charles H. Spurgeon, R. S. Storrs, H. J. Van Dyke, James McCosh, J. T. Duryea, Alex. MacLaren, Joseph Parker, C. F. Deams, Canon Farrar, Dean Stanley, Bishop Phillips Brooks, and many others. The subjects are practical rather than controversial.

Outline Sermons to Children

With numerous anecdotes, fully indexed by subjects and texts. This volume, containing 97 outlines of sermons of a very high grade of thinking, by men of acknowledged eminence in possessing the happy faculty of preaching interestingly to the young. It contains enough illustrations and anecdotes to stock for many years the average preacher of children's sermons.

Anecdotes Illustrative of Old Testament Texts

529 anecdotes and illustrations, fully indexed by subjects and texts. Dr. Guthrie says his hearers often remembered the illustrations in his sermons when they had forgotten the abstract truth.

Anecdotes Illustrative of New Testament Texts

614 anecdotes and illustrations, fully indexed by subject and texts. Preachers will find this book a very godsend to their preparation for the pulpit, and full of windows to let in the light.

Expository Sermons and Outlines on Old Testament

These sermons by distinguished preachers embrace a great variety of subjects from the Old Testament, are rich in application, and will be an education and inspiration to many.

Pulpit Prayers by Eminent Preachers

These prayers are fresh and strong; the ordinary ruts of conventional forms are left and fresh thoughts of living hearts are uttered. The excitement of devotional thought and sympathy must be great in the offering of such prayers, especially when, as here, spiritual intensity and devoutness are as marked as freshness and strength.

Platform and Pulpit Aids

Consisting of striking speeches and addresses on Home and Foreign Missions, the Bible, Sunday-school, Temperance, and kindred subjects, with illustrative anecdotes. Just the book an over-worked pastor who has many speeches to make, with little time for study, will appreciate.

TWO PLANS OF PAYMENT

We will forward at once the whole set of 8 volumes, securely packed, and guarantee safe delivery on receipt of $5, you paying express or freight charges or, send $1.00, and promise, in your letter to pay $1.00 a month for 6 months, making $7.00 as complete payment, and we will forward at once the whole set of 8 volumes, securely packed, and guarantee safe delivery, you paying express or freight charges.

Customers living a long distance from us may send, if they choose, 70 cents additional, and we will prepay express or mail charges and guarantee delivery. As to our responsibility, we refer to this paper or to any Commercial Agency. Established 1895.

"FAITH AND WORKS" NUMBER

Gospel Advocate

Volume LVIII.

NASHVILLE, TENN., MARCH 2, 1916.

Number 9.

Now faith is assurance of things hoped for, a conviction of things not seen.—Paul.

TWO MIGHTY OARS.

Lo, when the boatman stems the flowing tide,
And aims direct his little boat to guide;
With both oars working he can headway make,
And leave the waters foaming in his wake:
But if one oar within the boat he lays,
In useless circles round and round he plays.
So faith and works, when both together brought,
With mighty power and heavenly life are fraught
To help the Christian on his arduous road,
And urge him forward on his way to God.
If faith or works, no matter which he drops
Short of his journey's end, he surely stops.

—W. Holmes.

But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith apart from works is barren?—James.

What is Faith?

BY H. LEO BOLES.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

Some things are defined by their relative importance—some by what they are, and some by what they are not. Again, some things cannot be defined; they may be explained, illustrated, described, or discussed, but cannot be defined. The use or meaning of anything always determines its definition; and as the use of anything changes, so its definition varies.

Faith is not restricted to the religious realm, but is found in every department of human endeavor. It is a reasonable inference from testimony. It is a conviction or belief in the truth of a proposition based upon testimony. "Faith is the medium or channel through which divine influences are conveyed from God to the spirit or heart of man." It is an acceptance of God and an adjustment of the life in harmony with his will. In science, faith is a working hypothesis upon which one makes an investigation; in personal relations, faith assumes the form of trust.

"Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, a conviction of things not seen." (Heb. 11: 1.) This statement is not so much a definition of faith as it is a description of its relation to the soul as a power of endurance and a means of enjoyment. It is well-grounded confidence of hope.

The term "faith" is used only once in the Old Testament: "The righteous shall live by his faith." (Hab. 2: 4.) The adjective "faithful" and the noun "faithfulness" are used only a few times in the Old Testament. "Belief," as a noun, is not used in the Old Testament, and is used only once in the New Testament: "But we are bound to give thanks to God always for you, brethren beloved of the Lord, for that God chose you from the beginning unto salvation in sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth." (2 Thess. 2: 13.)

The verb "believe" and its derivatives are used several times in the Old Testament. While these words are peculiarly New Testament terms, yet the principle which they represent is clearly set forth in the Old Testament. "Faith" and "belief" are synonymous terms, or, rather, the two words are applied to the same principle under slightly different conditions. "Faith" is always a noun, while "believe" is usually a verb. These scriptures show that they are used synonymously: "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." (Matt. 8: 10.) "And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee." (Verse 13.) Again, Paul, in speaking of the justification of Abraham, said: "And Abraham believed God, and it was reckoned unto him for righteousness." (Rom. 4: 3.) Again, in speaking of his justification, Paul says: "Is this blessing then pronounced upon the circumcision, or upon the uncircumcision also? for we say, To Abraham his faith was reckoned for righteousness." (Rom. 4: 9.) Again, the writer of the Hebrew letter says: "And without faith it is impossible to be well pleasing unto him; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that seek after him." (Heb. 11: 6.)

There is another term that is used synonymously with "faith," "belief," and "believe." It is the term "obey," "obedience," etc. Christ said: "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life; but he that obeyeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him." (John 3: 36.) This shows that the words "believeth" and "obeyeth" are applied to the same principle. One is used positively and the other is used negatively in this quotation. Peter, speaking of the conversion of the Gentiles, says: "And he made no distinction between us and them, cleansing their hearts by faith." (Acts 15: 9.) Again, the same writer says: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in your obedience to the truth unto unfeigned love of the brethren, love one another from the heart fervently." (1 Pet. 1: 22.) This shows that the principle of obedience is the principle of faith or belief. James says: "Thou seest that faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect." (James 2: 22.) "For as the body apart from the spirit is dead, even so faith apart from works is dead." (Verse 26.)

Sometimes the term "faith" is used in a very comprehensive way. It is sometimes used to include the whole Christian system, the entire acceptance of the gospel and obedience to the same. This scripture is given as proof: "And a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith." (Acts 6: 7.) This means that they accepted the whole system of the Christian religion and that they became obedient to all of its requirements in becoming children of God. Sometimes it is used to include the entire Christian life. I think that Peter used it in this comprehensive way when he said: "Whom not having seen ye loved; on whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice greatly with joy unspeakable and full of glory: receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls." (1 Pet. 1: 8, 9.) This helps us to understand what Paul meant and what the jailer must do when the jailer asked, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" and Paul answered and said: "Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved, thou and thy house." (Acts 16: 30, 31.) Paul meant that the jailer, like all others, must accept the whole Christian system, with all its requirements, promises, and hopes. He must become "obedient to the faith." This means much more than is often taught by religious teachers who are emphasizing a theory of salvation by faith only. I think that the restricted use of "faith" has been taught and emphasized so much that people have lost sight of the full, scriptural meaning of the word.

No one can act in harmony with God's will unless that one has faith in God. "And without faith it is impossible to be well pleasing unto him; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that seek after him." (Heb. 11: 6.) The act of believing in God, or obeying God, puts one in harmony with God's will, and to remain faithful one continues in harmony with God's will. Unfaithfulness or unfaithful means out of harmony with God's will. "To be in the faith" is to be in harmony with his will, to abide in the teaching of Christ. "Try your own selves, whether ye are in the faith." (2 Cor. 13: 5.) Again: "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit ye like men, be strong." (1 Cor. 16: 13.) These scriptures mean that we are to continue in harmony with the will of God. The question, "What is faith?" may be answered by saying that it is a harmonious relationship between God and man. This helps us to understand what Paul meant when he said: "And we know that to them that love God all things work together for good, even to them that are called according to his purpose." (Rom. 8: 28.) When one is in complete harmony with God's will, he is in harmony with everything that is good, true, holy, righteous, and godly; and being in this state and continuing in it, everything in the universe must work for the present and eternal good of that one.

No one can know the will of God, save as it is revealed to him in the word of God; so no one can have faith except by hearing the word of God. "So belief [faith] cometh of hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ." (Rom. 10: 17.) Faith is founded upon God's word, not upon human tradition, moral philosophy, or scientific hypothesis. Other scriptures emphasize the same thought. "But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach." (Rom. 10: 8.) Again: "Brethren, ye know that a good while ago God made choice among you, that by my mouth the Gentiles should hear the word of the gospel, and believe." (Acts 15: 7.)

Faith in God.

BY A. B. GUNTER.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

There is much in the subject that I have in hand for the special number. So much could be said about the different kinds of faith and faith in its different phases, but the subject that I have is "Faith in God;" and to have faith in God simply means to be loyal to him, to believe in him, to rely upon him.

Take, for instance, the example given by the Savior in Mark 11: 22. When he had pronounced a curse upon the fig tree, they soon noticed that it was withered. Then Jesus said unto them: "Have faith in God." He further says: "Verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say to this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith. Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Of course we do not believe that we can do things miraculous, because we do not have that miraculous faith; but we can pray for things consistent with his will and receive blessings accordingly.

James (1: 5) says: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." But the individual must make certain preparations and put himself in a certain attitude before God will hear and answer his prayer. The preparation to be made in order to acceptable prayer is: (1) His heart must be purified by faith. (Acts 15: 9.) He becomes a man of God and prepared unto every good work by acting upon that faith. (2 Tim. 3: 17.) Since prayer is a good work and he has been thus prepared, he can then approach God in an acceptable way, and that is by faith. Again, James says: "But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord." (Verses 6, 7.)

The Bible teaches that we should walk by faith, that we should pray in faith, and that when we come to God we "must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." In fact, whatsoever is not of faith is sin.

Faith in Men.

BY J. P. LOWREY.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

Faith is a most wonderful word. "We walk by faith, and not by sight." Through faith in the Christ the Christian can look beyond the dark river of death and see the home of the redeemed. But it is upon faith in men that I have been requested to write. It is by faith in men that the affairs of this world are moved. It was the faith that Napoleon's men had in him as a leader that prompted them to scale the Alps. Faith in Columbus led Spain to stand behind his voyage which gave to the world "the land of the free and the home of the brave." Faith in men, leaders in countries beyond the sea, is causing much of the world to be bathed in human blood to-day. I pity the man who has lost faith in his fellow-man. He is a hopeless character, so far as success in this life is concerned, and there is but little hope for him on the other side.

Since so much depends upon our faith in men, either for good or bad, it behooves us to know that those in whom we place our trust are on the Lord's side. No man can be trusted as a leader of men unless the principles for which he stands come from the book of God—the Bible.

Faith in Moses prompted his brethren to throw off the cruel yoke of bondage and follow him. But when God vince them. They had faith in him and, through his sent him to be their leader, he gave him power to con- teaching, faith in God, and were thus shown a better country. When our Savior came to give to the world a more perfect law, he came from God's throne armed with power to convince the races of earth. Likewise the apostles were guided by the Holy Spirit, and thus enabled to cause thousands to have faith in them and become fol- lowers of them. And in this, the morning of the twen- tieth century, God has not left us without a standard by which to measure those who aspire to be leaders of men before placing our confidence and faith in them. He does not give to them some miraculous power by which to con- vince, but has given to us a standard by which to measure them. A failure upon the part of men to study that standard—his word—has caused many to place their trust in false teachers and allow themselves to be misled. Ev- ery man follows the trend of his faith. If his faith comes from false testimony, he is destined to sorrow. I know many good and honest people who are allowing themselves to be led to eternal destruction by false teachers in whom they have faith. They have never taken the time to meas- ure these leaders by the divine standard to see if they were on the side of truth and righteousness. Were it not for the fact that so many have faith in false teachers, instead of having faith in the teachings of the inspired apostles, the angels in heaven would have cause to rejoice.

Nothing short of an active faith in Christ will save.

Faith in Institutions.

BY E. M. BORDEN.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

The above title is one selected by the Gospel Advocate force. There are so many institutions that I am just a little bit at sea as to how to proceed; but surely it could not be a question as to whether we should have faith in human institutions. Even those who have embraced hu- man institutions do not claim that a person must believe in them in order to be saved.

Then the theme must be within the limit of Bible insti- tutions. If we believe the Bible, we believe in the institu- tions of the Bible. If I observe a Bible institution and do not believe in it, I make it a sin; yet we can truthfully and scripturally say that Christ is our creed. These Bible institutions, such as baptism and the Lord's Supper, pic- ture the truths concerning the death, burial, and resurrec- tion of Christ. In eating the Lord's Supper, we do it with the facts of his death, burial, and resurrection on our mind. It is a spiritual service. If I do not believe what the Bible says concerning it, I cannot partake of it in faith. I would not like to say that a man can be scrip- turally baptized who does not believe what the Bible says concerning it. If a man should say to me, "I want you to baptize me, because I know the church demands it, but I do not believe it is necessary," I am sure I would ask him to consider it more. Is it not necessary to obey God? It surely must be, or the Lord would not have demanded it.

It is certain that it is not necessary for me to believe hobbies of men concerning the Lord's Supper and baptism to make my worship acceptable to the Lord; but it is cer- tain that I can bring damnation to my own soul by not eating discerning the Lord's body. Another thing is cer- tain: A person cannot render acceptable obedience who depends on the faith of another. He must obey on his own faith. If a person is baptized because I say he must be, it will do him no good. He must believe what the Lord says about it. We cannot number the Christians by counting those who have been immersed, for some are immersed who have not previously had a change of heart. I give an exact quotation when I say, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

Faith's Consolation.

(Culled especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

Beloved, it is well:

God's ways are always right;
And love is o'er them all,
Though far above our sight.

Beloved, it is well:

Though deep and sore the smart,
He wounds who knows and cares
To heal the broken heart.

Beloved, it is well:

Though grief benight our way,
'Twill make the joy more dear
That comes with dawning day.

Beloved, it is well:

The path that Jesus trod,
Though rough and dark it be,
Leads home to heaven and God.

The Growth of Faith.

BY F. W. SMITH.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

The most precious plant that grows on this earth is that which is rooted in the soil of a good and honest heart, which is termed in the holy Scriptures "faith," and through which man is saved now and eternally. Peter says it is a precious thing: "Simon Peter, a servant and apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained a like precious faith with us in the righteousness of our God and the Savior Jesus Christ." (2 Pet. 1: 1.) How "precious" is that faith? Let the same apostle tell us: "That the proof of your faith, being more precious than gold that perisheth though it is proved by fire, may be found unto praise and glory and honor at the revelation of Jesus Christ." (1 Pet. 1: 7.) The smelting process will separate the pure gold from every particle of dross or foreign substance, while at the same time the gold will lose none of its weight, color, or purity, though subjected to the hottest of fires for a million of years. It is unlike genuine faith in that the years of constant friction will wear the gold away, while the trials of storms and the fires of persecutions will cause faith to grow larger and shine brighter with the increasing years, and then sink to rest in the bosom of God in a burst of glory transcendently more beautiful than any evening sunset that ever flung back good-night kisses upon a world over which the dark shadows were creeping. Faith springs from a spiritual seed—the word of God, which is the seed of the spiritual kingdom. "Now the parable is this: The seed is the word of God. And those by the wayside are they that have heard; then cometh the devil, and taketh away the word from their heart, that they may not believe and be saved." (Luke 8: 11, 12.) Thus, unless the word of God comes in contact with the heart, there can never spring from the soil of the heart the precious plant of faith. It is "precious" because it embraces God's power unto salvation. "For I am not ashamed of the gospel: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." (Rom. 1: 16.) It holds within its strong grasp the world's Redeemer. It is also "precious" because it leans upon the manifold promises of God to his faithful children. "Whereby he hath granted unto us his precious and exceeding great promises; that through these ye may become partakers of the divine nature, having escaped from the corruption that is in the world by lust." (2 Pet. 1: 4.)

But let us not forget the onward impulse of the divine life so beautifully and clearly expressed by the psalmist: "They go from strength to strength; every one of them appeareth before God in Zion." (Ps. 84: 7.) Normal life is a principle of growth, no matter what its sphere, whether vegetable, animal, or spiritual. The outward pulsations are simply manifestations of an inward principle struggling for growth and development. Within the acorn is an oak tree; and when that vegetable seed comes in contact with proper environments, there are the movements of life within the earth, its prison house, and soon we have the outward manifestations of that life climbing on "from strength to strength" toward heaven, whence came its life. Likewise, within the word of God—the seed of the kingdom—is Christian manhood and womanhood, which, when received into the soil of a good and honest heart, soon produces the movements of spiritual life which find an outward expression in the growth of faith. Hence we read: "We are bound to give thanks to God always for you, brethren, even as it is meet, for that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the love of each one of you all toward one another aboundeth." (2 Thess. 1: 3.) Their faith spread beyond their own community: "For from you hath sounded forth the word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but in every place your faith to Godward is gone forth; so that we need not to speak anything." (1 Thess. 1: 8.) As vegetable plants need to be trained and cultivated in order to grow and develop the best fruitage, so must the plant of faith be trained and cultivated in order to produce the fruits of righteousness. Faith must go "from strength to strength" to become effectual in the salvation of the soul. It must be cultivated by engaging in good works—spreading the glad tidings of salvation in the earth—feeding the hungry and clothing the naked. Give to faith the proper environments and it will grow and become fruitful. Let us take heed, brethren, lest haply there shall be in one of us an evil heart of unbelief in falling away from the living God.

What Kills Faith?

BY J. PETTEY EZELL.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

The scope assigned me in the "Faith and Works" Number is not the defining of a dead faith, but, to me, the more difficult task—viz., "What Kills Faith?" When in the vegetable and animal kingdoms we discover objects cold, lifeless, and inactive, we readily discern that they are dead; but the question, "Who or what is the perpetrator of the crime?" has often baffled and perplexed councils of the wisest.

But inasmuch as the word of God is the seed of the kingdom (Luke 8: 11); the seed is sown in the heart (Mark 4: 15); faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God (Rom. 10: 17); and with the heart man believes (Rom. 10: 10), I think we may safely conclude that the heart is the seat of faith, for we believe with and in the heart (Rom. 10: 9, 10), and also the seat of unbelief (Heb. 3: 12). The hearing, then, is the avenue through which the heart is reached.

Moreover, since faith is a product of the seed, the word of God, which is truth (John 17: 17), and since it comes through hearing, it is reasonable and scriptural to conclude that "words of falsehood" (Isa. 59: 13, 14) propagated by the devil, who is a liar and the father thereof (Matt. 13: 39; John 8: 44), through "false Christs" (Matt. 24: 24), "false prophets" (Matt. 7: 15), "false apostles" (2 Cor. 11: 13), "false brethren" (Gal. 2: 4), and "false teachers" (2 Pet. 2: 1), the evil seed, which through the hearing is received into the heart, counteracts the "words of truth and soberness" (Acts 26: 25), and thus kills, destroys, or overthrows the faith.

This being true, we are taught to "be swift to hear" (James 1: 19), and that "if any man have ears to hear, let him hear" (Mark 4: 23), but in verse 24 we are admonished: "Take heed what ye hear." And this is imperative, lest we also fulfill the prophecy of Isaiah, our hearts wax gross, our ears become dull of hearing, our eyes we close, lest we, seeing with our eyes, hearing with our ears, and understanding with our hearts, should turn again and Jehovah should heal us. (Matt. 13: 14, 15.)

The Holy Spirit stamps his approval of this fact, saying, and that expressly, that "in later times some shall fall away from the faith," and his explanation as to what did it and how it was done is forthcoming: "Giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons, through the hypocrisy of men that speak lies, branded in their own conscience as with a hot iron." (1 Tim. 4: 1, 2.) Paul so teaches in 1 Cor. 15: 14, recognizing the fact that faith becomes vain through the acceptance of erroneous teaching.

Finally, for a fuller answer to the question, "What kills faith?" see the Savior's explanation of the parable of the sower. (Mark 4: 14-20; Luke 8: 11-15.) "Those [seed] on the rock are they who, when they have heard, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, who for a while believe, and in the time of temptation fall away." They were tempted when they were drawn away by their own lusts and enticed. Then the lust, when it conceived, brought forth sin; and the sin, when it was full grown, brought forth death. (See James 1: 14, 15.) "That which fell among the thorns, these are they that have heard, and as they go on their way they are choked." Choked with what? With "the cares of the world," "the deceitfulness of riches," "the pleasures of this life," and "the lusts of other things." Therefore, as the Israelites of old were overthrown in the wilderness by lusting after evil things, and were cut off from Canaan, the land of promise, by reason of their unbelief, even so, and for the same reasons, shall it be said to some: "Depart from me, ye cursed, into the eternal fire which is prepared for the devil and his angels." (Matt. 25: 41.)

My brethren, these are some of the evils which war against the soul, that prey upon the heart, drawing away its affections, thus rendering faith invalid (Gal. 5: 5) and inactive, the life cold and formal, which same sad condition, in the long, long ago, brought forth the cry: "But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?" (James 2: 20.) Truly is such a one a vain (literally, empty) man—empty-headed, empty-handed, and empty-hearted—empty-headed in that he is so deluded as to think that a dead faith can save him; empty-handed in that he is devoid of good works, true spiritual riches; and empty-hearted in that he possesses no real love either for God or his fellow-man.

Fruits of Faith.

BY W. T. GOALEN.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

I have been requested to write an article for the "Faith and Works" Number on the subject, "Fruits of Faith," and gladly take up such an important topic, which I hope and trust will be of benefit to all in our endeavor to serve the only true and living God and Jesus Christ, whom he sent into the world as the propitiatory sacrifice for the sins of the whole world.

Faith is the most essential prerequisite in order to our pleasing God, for we read in the sacred oracles which are able to make us wise unto salvation that "without faith it is impossible to please him" (Heb. 11: 6); and we are also informed that the faith that is well pleasing to God is that which is produced by the instrumentality of the instruction of his word, for Paul makes the statement to the brethren in the church of Rome that faith is out of (ex) the hearing (or instruction) of the word of God (Rom. 10: 17).

It is utterly impossible to have faith in a person or thing unless it come by the faculty of hearing and the instruction of an outside agent, the agent in the scriptural sense being the one who brings the message from God.

Faith is a psychological act, an action of the mind, and is defined in God's word as being "the assurance of things hoped for, a conviction of things not seen." (Heb. 11: 1.) We work on the principle of faith in all our relations one with the other. The student, in his endeavor to acquire an education, takes the word of another—that is, his teacher; and the merchant, in his dealings with his fellow-man, takes the word of another; and thus they work on the principle; and our God, who is invisible to our mortal eyes, expects us to work on the same principle and be fully assured that what he promises to us we may surely hope for, and be convinced that all his promises to us will be made good in the right time.

Now the fruits of faith will be surely made manifest by our actions; for a faith which works by love is that which is most acceptable in the sight of our Heavenly Father.

The alien who is separated from God by his sins, who hears the wonderful story of God's love and the love of his only begotten Son, and believes the story of Jesus and his love, will surely be moved, if he loves God, to the obedience of faith, and by his submission to the requirements of the law of faith manifest a fruit of the faith which he has in the Son of God by obeying from the heart the form (type, mold) of doctrine which has been delivered to him, so that he may be freed from the guilt of his old sins and become reconciled to his God.

A Christian must assuredly manifest the fruits of faith in his life, and by assimilating in his mind the milk of God's word will grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and learn to add to his faith, the basis of action, the characteristics of the Christ life which should be embodied in his life, so that the life he lives in the flesh may be lived by faith in the Son of God, who loved him and gave his life so as to produce before the world the Christ life as an example to those who are not Christians.

The fruits of faith will be developed by our being moral and spiritual, for no one can be a Christian or spiritual man without being a moral man; and in order to manifest the fruits of faith in our lives, we must cultivate them to the best possible advantage with the professed object of glorifying God.

Further, we could not manifest the fruits of faith in a better way than by showing that we have those characteristics spoken about by the apostle Peter: "In your faith supply virtue; and in your virtue knowledge; and in your knowledge self-control; and in your self-control patience; and in your patience godliness; and in your godliness brotherly kindness; and in your brotherly kindness love." (2 Pet. 1: 5-7.)

The fruits of faith will be further manifested by the sacrifices we make for the cause of our adorable Redeemer, who by the teachings of the Holy Spirit has demanded that we present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is our spiritual service; and the more we imbibe the teachings of the word of God, the more our faith will be increased, and the fruits of faith will be manifested in our lives, and thus will we grow more and more unto the perfect day when the fruits of our faith will be rewarded by the Judge of all the earth, who will do right and "render to every man according to his works: to them that by patience in well doing seek for glory and honor and incorruption, eternal life." (Rom. 2: 6, 7.) Eternal life in the paradise of God will be our reward for having made the effort in our lives lived in the flesh to manifest by our actions the fruits of faith.

There are faiths and faiths, each with their appropriate objects and results. But there is only one which brings to you, as a needy sinner, the gift of God, which is eternal life, through Jesus Christ your Lord.—Selected.

“WHAT MY FAITH MEANS TO ME”—Three Testimonies.

Earnest C. Love, of Santa Rosa, Cal., Says—

I suppose it is the editor's wish that I state what my faith is to me personally, although it is not essentially different from the faith of any other child of God. Before stating what it means to me, it seems best to state what my faith consists of. Paul says that faith is “a conviction of things not seen.” (Heb. 11: 1.) If we have conviction with regard to things not seen, this conviction must come through testimony. Where there is no testimony, there can be no faith. But this testimony seems to bring little or no conviction to the minds of some. Without going into details of argument as to why I believe the Scriptures, I will simply say that I believe the whole Bible. I have a strong conviction that it is God's book—that its histories are true, that its laws are perfect, that its judgments are righteous, that its prophecies are inspired, that its commands should be obeyed, that its promises should be trusted and its warnings feared and heeded. Now, since the Scriptures are the ground of my faith, what does it mean to me? That question cannot be answered fully in a few words. It means an answer to three puzzling questions on which the mind of the human family is never at rest and never will be till faith comes into its own and men accept the Bible as true. What are the questions? (a) What is man? (b) Whence came man? (c) Whither is he bound? These questions have been asked by all men, from the wisest philosopher down to the lowest savage. The remarkable thing is that the untutored savage knows as much about it as the philosopher, leaving out what they can learn from the Bible.

It is only lately that men have even attempted to answer the first question, “What is man?”—that is, men who ignore the Bible. Their ridiculous attempts to account for the origin of man by the theory of evolution would be amusing were they not fraught with such fearful consequences. But I need not puzzle and wonder, for the Bible says that man is “the offspring of God” (Acts 17: 29) and that he is “a living soul” (Gen. 2: 7). Thus the faith of the Christian enables him to go serenely on with his duties because that question is settled.

The answer to the second question is partially implied in the answer to the first. If man is “the offspring of God,” then he came from God. His origin is divine. God breathed into the form of clay “the breath of life.” Thus was a spark of the life of God put into the man. (Gen. 2: 7.) God is our Father. (Heb. 12: 9.) He formed our spirits within us. (Zech. 12: 1.) God created the form of clay in his own image and gave it life—an unending life—a part of himself. Thus another of the great questions is answered, and that, too, in a reasonable and satisfactory way. This thought is elevating and comforting in a high degree. I never could understand what comfort evolutionists and agnostics get out of their “faith.” What “good” could ever come of believing that the only progenitors of the human family were long-tailed, hairy monkeys?

Now we come to the third and last of the three questions. Some have said that this is the most important of all. “Whither is man bound?” What makes this question so important is the fact that man is continually going somewhere. Of all the millions that have lived in the earth in ages past, none have remained here long. They have appeared here for a brief moment and then have passed on—on into that mysterious land beyond the tomb. Here, again, philosopher and savage ask the same question, the one asked by the troubled patriarch of old: “If a man die, shall he live again?” (Job 14: 14.) The Bible comes to man's rescue here and answers the momentous question for him by raising the thin veil between these earthly coasts and those eternal shores. Yes, man lives beyond the grave! Was not the beggar Lazarus alive on the other side? (Luke 16: 25.) Did not Moses and Elijah stand with the glorified Savior on the mount of the transfiguration? Were not the martyrs of Jesus very much alive when John the Revelator saw the great company of them? (Rev. 6: 9-11.) Had I been permitted to stand with the angels before the throne of the great I Am, and with the multitude of redeemed saints, arrayed, along with the others, in a white robe, and bearing a palm of victory in my hand, and permitted to join in the chorus of praise to the Almighty, in that “clime where flow no tears,” I should have said: “This is life! Yes, man lives!”

But since this is my faith, what does it mean to me? It means everything. In the very nature of the case, it must mean everything or nothing. It means everything to me. With a hope which this faith begets, a Christian is ready for any fate. Let the dark clouds of adversity hang low and threatening; let the fierce lightning of persecution flash angrily in our faces; let the winds of temptation shriek; let tempests rage; let demons howl; but the Christian has taken passage over Life's Ocean in the Ship of Faith, and so can laugh at all these things.

My faith robs the deathbed of its terrors and lights the way through the tomb. When I kept a lonely vigil at the bedside of my then only living sister, and at 1:12 A.M., December 12, 1905, heard the “death rattle,” and saw the “death dew” gather upon her pale cheek, and saw the last few efforts to breathe, and then saw her lie pale and still in death, my faith was then the only comfort. It is man's only comfort in such times. She “is not dead, but sleepeth.” On the resurrection morning she will awake. I will meet her again, with all of the saints and loved ones who have gone on before. There will be a grand reunion! Mother will be there! They, when they died—our loved ones—did not go, out into cold oblivion and utter forgetfulness; but when their eyes closed in death and the scenes of earth faded from their view, their vision was greeted with scenes of unimaginable splendor, and there spread before their bewildered eyes a landscape of eternal beauty, “where the flowers bloom forever and the sun is always bright.” That is a part of what my faith means to me. Can you blame me for not wanting to part with it?

W. F. Neal, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, Says—

Brother J. W. McGarvey said that “Dr. Edward Robinson was the most noted of American philologists.” Dr. Robinson renders the definition of faith given in Heb. 11: 1 as follows: “Faith is confidence in respect to things hoped for; conviction in respect to things not seen.” From this rendering we see clearly how the great cloud of witnesses in this faith chapter were stimulated to action, great endurance, suffering hardness as good soldiers of the cross, looking forward with “confidence in respect to” hoped-for reward. Paul called his sufferings for Christ “light afflictions.” The “confidence in respect to” hoped-for reward doubtless was the great incentive that caused this great army of witnesses to have “conviction in respect to things not seen.” My faith means to me, in the enduring hardness as a good soldier of Christ, to see the “silver lining” in the clouds that gather in life's pathway and to never allow the sun to go down in my horizon. Now, in view of this hoped-for reward, to see lethargy and a pessimistic spirit characterize the lives of Christians, especially preachers of the gospel, is not only a hindrance to the cause, but a seeming rejection of the examples of faith given in Heb. 11. My faith means to me optimism under all circumstances in the religion of Jesus Christ. With the rich and precious promises vouchsafed us in God's word, how can we be otherwise? "And we know that to them that love God all things work together for good." (Rom. 8: 28.) It is even best for the world to look on the bright side of things. A worldly optimist who came into the Free Press office (a Winnipeg daily paper) a few days ago, when the mercury registered fifty degrees below zero, was asked: "What do you think of this weather?" He said: "It is fine; just the thing we need. The ground will freeze so deep that when the thaw comes the earth's best substance will be brought to the surface, and 1916 will reap the finest harvest for years, and the whole of Western Canada will be prosperous on account of the same." My faith makes me hopeful through hardships, losses, and sorrows. We must see to it that we retain through all these a heart gentle as a little child's and full of trust and hope. The secret of such victorious living is a trust in God that never fails.

Lee P. Mansfield, of Vernon, Texas, Says—

In Gal. 5: 6 we read this statement: "For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by love." We learn from this that in order that we may be benefited by our faith, it must be a faith that works. "Faith without works is dead," says James. Now, I have a working faith, and I am going to tell what that faith means to me.

1. My faith means that I have accepted God as my Father; that I put my trust in him. It means that I will let him lead, and all that he does for me is for my good. David said: "No good thing will the Lord withhold from them that walk uprightly." It means that his eyes are over me and his ears are open to my cry, and I can truly call him my Father and my God.

2. My faith means that I have accepted Jesus as my Savior, King, Guide, and Redeemer. It means that I will follow him. He is my example; therefore I will imitate him. It is not, "What would Jesus do?" but, "What did he do?" If I do, then, as he did, I am living by faith. My faith leads me to obey him; hence it means a life of devotion to him.

3. My faith means that I have accepted the Holy Spirit as my Comforter and my Teacher. I get from what the Spirit says all things I need for my consolation in Christ and all my instruction in Jesus.

4. My faith means that I have been made a child of God. "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." (Gal. 3: 26.) "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God." (Rom. 5: 1.) Then faith means that I am justified and have peace with God. It is at least one of the things that bring me into the enjoyment of peace.

5. My faith means that I have solemnly obligated myself to live a life of faithfulness to my King. "Be thou faithful unto death" is the teaching of our Lord. Faith, then, sometimes means faithful, or faithfulness. When I say, "I have faith in Jesus," I mean that I am doing his will. I am simply proving faithful to my trust. Paul says: "We walk by faith." That means walk by the teachings of Christ. So my faith means I am walking with God.

6. My faith means that I have a promise of a home up in glory. "Faith is . . . the evidence of things not seen." It, then, leads me to a better world. Jesus says: "In my Father's house are many mansions." Faith points me to those mansions to get me to live a better life. My faith takes me into the presence of God and makes me see the things that God has in store for us.

May our faith always mean these things to us, so that we can and will throw away the things that hinder and run the race before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith.

Two Inseparable Ideas.

BY DAVID LIPSCOMB, JR.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

To write anything on the subject of faith and works after our Savior has talked, and Paul, Peter, and James have written, seems to be a task of supererogation.

The two ideas are inseparable. There is no faith that is not accompanied by action. All the inspired writers agree as to this statement, and the Master nowhere has voiced the thought of a stillborn faith.

But it may not be amiss to speak briefly of the effect the precious faith has had upon the minds and lives of men and women since the apostolic days. To the same degree that the ancient Hebrews suffered for conscience's sake, others in later days have given up their all and their lives for the faith and hope that was in them. From Stephen, the first martyr, to Margaret Owen, who was drowned on Solway Firth because she would not pray according to the king's commandment, men and women have testified to their faith in Christ Jesus, and him crucified. Sometimes they were misguided. Sometimes they miscalled selfish ambition "faith" and died clasping the crucifix with bloody hands. They waged the cruelest wars in the belief that thus God was being served and the stainless Christ followed. Sir Galahad, blinded by the superstition of his time, went forth in purity to "carve the casques of men." Sir Launfal, with a vision cleared by experience, learned that the Master was to be served by helping the poor and weak, and that in the even distribution of alms pride had no place. For in the vision Christ told him:

"Who with his gifts gives himself feeds three—Himself, his hungering neighbor, and me."

In time past faith in God and his Anointed has worked mightily in the hearts of men, and is still working, and will continue to work till the whole be leavened. While it appears, in the light of the great conflict at present raging, preposterous to dream of universal peace, yet, as we look at what has been done in bettering conditions, we may dare to believe and hope that wars may cease and the great engines of fight be hammered into the rolling stock of peace, and the "God save England" be replaced by "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love." It took the world many ages to abolish the slavery curse; nearly nineteen hundred years of Christianity were necessary. Now, wherever faith in Christ prevails, there is no involuntary servitude except for crime. We are at work on other great problems—intemperance, vice, and war. We may work intemperately, spasmodically, even foolishly, but it is the leaven of faith at work on the rude hearts of men, and no effort should be despised. God will bring about the right.

"It may not be my way,
It may not be thy way,
But in his own good way
The Lord will provide."

Let us work and pray that the time may speedily come when we may

"Ring out old shapes of foul disease,
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold,
Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace."

And when the Son of man comes, he will find faith on the earth.

Why She Did Not Fear.

A father was holding his blind daughter on his knee, when a friend who had called took her in his arms. The little one made no outcry. "Aren't you afraid, darling?" the father asked. "You don't know who has you." "No," was the prompt reply, "but you do." Faith in her father's loving care banished fear.—W. Hetherington.

Faith's Power in Miracles, in Prayer, and in Daily Living.

C. E. Coleman Writes of Faith in Miracles.

A miracle is a wonderful thing—an event contrary to the established course of things, or transcending the ordinary laws governing the universe.

The same Power that set in order the laws of nature for the welfare of man is able to deviate from the uniform order when His purpose and wisdom demand. Real and true miracles are of God, and have in ages past accompanied divine revelations, establishing their genuineness.

If God ever allows a false prophet, a false Christ, or an evil spirit to work a miracle, it is that the truth may eventually be made to shine with more splendor, as in the case of the magicians in Egypt.

Christ had power over the elements, over disease and death, and gave the apostles power, not only to perform wonders by faith, but to give others the same power. They failed to cure an epileptic on account of the lack of faith, and the Master told them that if they had faith as a grain of mustard seed they could remove a mountain. (Matt. 17: 15-20.) Faith was as essential with them in doing miracles as with us in being saved. (Matt. 21: 21; John 14: 12; Mark 16: 16.) On some occasions those being healed exercised their faith. (Matt. 9: 28; Acts 14: 9.)

The element of faith on the part of God's representatives has always been present when miracles were performed. By faith the hosts of Israel passed through the Red Sea as by dry land. By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they had been compassed about for seven days. Today men's hearts and lives are changed by faith from self and sin to God and righteousness. Not a miracle, we say, but more wonderful and far-reaching.

H. H. Hawley Writes of Faith in Prayer.

Believe in prayer? Why not? Is it possible that there are Christians who do not believe in prayer? Can one believe in a wise, loving Heavenly Father whose "eyes are over the righteous" and not believe that "his ears are open unto their prayers?" Can one accept as true the gospel statement that Christ rose from the dead the third day and not believe that he "ever liveth to make intercession for us?" Can one believe all the Bible says concerning the judgment and eternal life and reject all it says about the need and efficacy of prayer? Surely not. It seems almost absurd to entertain such an idea and superfluous to write about it. And yet, on further reflection, we feel sure, even with our limited opportunity of gaining information on such a subject, that many Christians pray but little, some not at all; and the inference is, of course, that they do not believe in it. We have reason to think, too, that with some who do pray, it is merely a matter of form, and not with any real faith that the prayer will be heard; and to this tendency James evidently refers when he exhorts the one who prays for wisdom to "ask in faith, nothing doubting." I can think of no practice more ridiculous than to pray without faith, and yet this seems to be the case with some. At any rate, it is certain that one of the weak points in many a Christian's armor is lack of earnest prayer. I am sure that no Christian is fully prepared to meet the trials of his faith or to take up the work the Master has intrusted to him without a firm belief in the power of fervent prayer and a constant recourse to this unfailing source of spiritual strength. "Lord, teach us to pray," said the disciples to Jesus; and there is great need that we be taught, not only how to pray, but to realize that prayer is essential to our spiritual growth.

If any reader has doubts concerning either the need or the efficacy of prayer, it cannot be because of lack of testimony in the Scriptures. Even the casual reader of the New Testament cannot fail to note the frequency and earnestness with which Jesus and his disciples prayed. The Master sometimes spent the whole night in prayer. Nor were his petitions the dead and faithless formalities that are often heard to-day, but they were the earnest supplications of an overflowing heart, offered in sublime confidence to a loving Father who heard and would answer him. "I knew," he says, "that thou hearest me always." And Paul tells us that Jesus "offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto him that was able to save him from death, and was heard in that he feared." (Heb. 5: 7.) He prayed for his disciples as well as for himself, and even his enemies were included in his petitions. Now, if Jesus needed to pray, do not we much more? And if God heard the prayers of his first begotten, will he not turn a listening ear to his more needy children if they cry unto him in faith? Jesus thought so, and taught, by parables and otherwise, "that men ought always to pray, and not to faint." (Luke 18: 1.) He not only taught his disciples how to pray, but assured them of an answer to their petitions, saying, "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things unto them that ask him?" The disciples remembered these lessons, and the early history of the church records many examples of their faith and zeal in this respect. They "all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication." (Acts 1: 14.) When they had occasion to rejoice at the release of Peter and John from the Jewish council, they did not forget to give God praise. (Acts 4: 24.) When Peter was again in prison, "prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him." (Acts 12: 5.) It was when Peter and John were going up to the temple to pray that they were offered the opportunity of healing the lame man, through which so great a door was opened for the gospel. Who knows but that many a "door of utterance" would be opened to gospel preachers to-day, if more fervent prayers were offered by the churches in this behalf? Paul certainly thought so, for he requested the prayers of the brethren at Colosse that a door of utterance might be opened to him at Rome. (Col. 4: 3.) The instructions of the apostles to the disciples were in harmony with their practice. "Pray without ceasing" is Paul's injunction to the Thessalonians. "I will that men pray everywhere," he says to Timothy. To the Ephesians he commends prayer as one of the necessary parts of the Christian's equipment in his fight against Satan and sin. I might multiply references of this kind, but space forbids. But if we consider it necessary to heed the apostles' instructions on all other matters, how can we ignore their plain teaching on this subject?

The attitude of many toward prayer seems to be that its chief benefit is to be found in the reflex influence it exerts on the one who offers it, rather than in any direct answer from God. I grant that there is a grain of truth in this idea, provided it is a prayer of faith; but to assert that this is the chief advantage of prayer is to reduce it to an absurdity, as well as to contradict the plain teachings of the Scriptures. If this were true, how could the prayers of the Roman brethren help to deliver Paul from unbelievers in Judea (Rom. 15: 31), or the prayers of the Corinthians avail to deliver him from death (2 Cor. 1: 11)? Or how could the Ephesians, through their prayers, help Paul to open his mouth boldly to preach the gospel at Rome (Eph. 6: 19), or the Colossians assist in opening a door of utterance there (Col. 4: 3), if God does not directly answer prayer? John says: "This is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us." (1 John 5: 14.) Truly, "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

Brethren, let us all pray more earnestly and more frequently. God asks us to pray. We need to pray. Our efforts in the Master's service require the help of prayer. We should pray on our own behalf for wisdom (James 1: 6), for pardon and for deliverance from temptation (Matt. 6: 12, 13), for mercy and grace to help in time of need (Heb. 4: 16). We should pray for our enemies (Matt. 5: 44), for them that are in authority (1 Tim. 2: 1), and for our brethren that they may be strengthened (Eph. 3: 16). We should pray for the unsaved (Rom. 10: 1), for laborers to be sent into the harvest (Matt. 9: 38), and that doors of utterance may be opened to them (Col. 4: 3). "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need."

Bynum Black Writes of Faith in Daily Living.

When a young man is about to devote his time and money in getting ready for some one of the many useful professions, if his faith should undergo a change as to the success usually attained, he abandons his line of thought and gives his time to other undertakings. It has been said that faith is the mainspring in all lines of human activity. Christianity, the greatest of all professions, is no exception to this inexorable law, and the adherent must necessarily have faith as the incentive and power to prompt him to live the life and do the work of the truly spiritual. It has been said that the doctrine of justification by faith is a "senseless doctrine." On the other hand, we see it philosophically necessary, and that all other professions are analogous in this respect; faith, in the goal to be attained, being the incentive. If the Infinite had inaugurated a system of religion without faith, it would have been a senseless doctrine, and no thinking man would have accepted it. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." (Heb. 11: 1.)

The most obstinate person will not deny that faith which works by love will purify the heart. "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." (Heb. 11: 6.) Without faith in God and in a Redeemer, there is no power to lift up the perishing—no way to obtain sanctification "in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." (1 Cor. 6: 11.) By the eye of faith the saint sees the dawning day of eternity, and in the midst of doubts, tears, and fears there is a golden stream of heavenly light which gives him a "peace which passeth understanding." Millions have "tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come," and have been made to rejoice in glad anticipation of eternal life and a glorified entrance into that "city whose builder and maker is God."

It is not faith which makes religious bigots. It is not faith which makes hypocrites. We see the counterfeits. They serve to show the existence of the genuine. To attack the misfits and failures is not going to destroy the genuine. The holy religion of our Lord has withstood all the assaults of the evil spirit in all the centuries dead, and still lives to commend itself to future generations of the children of men. If this groaning, sinful age had only "walked by faith" (2 Cor. 5: 7), they would now be walking in the paths of peace. To walk by faith is to walk by the word of God, for "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." (Rom. 10: 17.) All students of the word know that the "weapons of our warfare are not carnal." (2 Cor. 10: 4.) The horrors of this sinful age shock the sensibilities of a thinking world. The true believer knows that the "wages of sin is death;" he knows the penalty is sure; and when he sees the sins of this wicked age, he is filled with indignation, astonishment, and fear. He beholds all this on account of a lack of faith. The world is cursed with greed and graft, sin and shame, sorrowing and suffering, wars and woes, dread and death.

To say that Christianity has tried, or been tried, and has failed to save mankind, is not a true statement of what religion promises to do for a suffering world. A profession is not to do the trying. The suffering must try the remedy, and this the world has refused to do when it comes to the spirit and ethics of the gospel of our Lord.

Walking With God in Faith.

BY F. C. SOWELL.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

When we walk with God, we please him. "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God." The good life Enoch lived was walking with God, for we see from Gen. 5: 24 that "Enoch walked with God."

Noah also walked with God in doing the commandments of the Lord. "And Noah did according unto all that the Lord commanded him." "Noah was a just man and perfect in his generations, and Noah walked with God."

We, as disciples of the Lord, cannot please God now unless we reverence him and keep his commandments. The beloved John said: "I rejoice greatly that I have found certain of my children walking in the truth, even as we received commandment from the Father." There is nothing that would give us more pleasure while we live and more solid comfort when we die than walking in the commandments of God. "And this is love, that we should walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, even as ye heard from the beginning, that ye should walk in it." Love puts purity in the church, and the result of this is growth and prosperity.

The children of the Lord must behave themselves in the house of God and allow the Spirit of Christ to lead them in the paths of righteousness, if they hope for the hand of the Almighty to be with them in aiding and giving strength in every time of need.

The devil will not seek company with those who walk in the truth, but they will be comforted in the inner man with the great and exceeding precious promises of the Lord. The apostle John said: "Greater joy have I none than this, to hear of my children walking in the truth." God is truth and love, and he will abundantly bless those who seek him in truth and sincerity. "Hereby we know that we are in him: he that saith he abideth in him ought himself also to walk even as he walked."

Every child of God should make the word of God his daily companion, that he may become each day better and better acquainted with God. The better we know him, the better we will love and serve him; then we are stimulated with the glorious hope of living in the home of our Father's love.

May peace and love rule in the church of God.

What It Cost.

(Culled especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

Not words alone it cost the Lord
To purchase pardon for his own;
Nor will a soul by grace restored
Return the Savior's words alone.

With golden bells, the priestly vest,
And rich pomegranates bordered round,
The need of holiness expressed,
And called for fruit as well as sound.

Easy, indeed, it were to reach
A mansion in the courts above,
If swelling words and fluent speech
Might serve instead of faith and love.

But none shall gain the blissful place,
Or God's unclouded glory see,
Who talks of free and sovereign grace,
Unless that grace has made him free!

—William Cowper.

THE FAITH THAT SAVES—TWO EXPRESSIONS.

S. H. Hall, of Atlanta, Ga., Says—

Whatever may be said about faith, the thing that interests the soul that longs for salvation is, the faith that will save. Nothing is more easily learned than this. To get a comprehensive view of this all-important subject, let us raise the following questions:

1. What does faith do for the soul? (1) It purifies the heart. (Acts 15: 9.) (2) It sanctifies us. (Acts 26: 18.) (3) By it we are justified. (Rom. 5: 1.) (4) By faith we walk. (2 Cor. 5: 7.) (5) We live by faith. (Gal. 2: 20.) (6) It is the victory that overcometh the world. (1 John 5: 4.) (7) Without faith it is impossible to please God. (Heb. 11: 6.) Certainly, then, the importance of faith cannot be too strongly emphasized. The way God drives the importance of this lesson home to the soul is marvelous. Nothing is more outstanding than its importance. The man who believes the Bible certainly believes that without faith there can be no sanctification, purification, justification, right walking, right living, a life that pleases God, and victory in the end as well as all along the way without faith; for the Bible positively affirms that there cannot be.

2. How does this faith come? Here our Father answers in no uncertain sound. "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." (Rom. 10: 17.) For the further consideration of this, read the following scriptures: John 17: 20; 20: 30, 31; Acts 15: 7. Note, too, that the devil understands that this is the way faith comes, hence he does all he can to keep the word out of the people's hearts. (Luke 8: 11, 12.)

3. But there are different kinds of faith—viz., "living" or "perfect faith" and "dead" or "imperfect faith." (See James 2: 14-26.) Now, when the Bible declares, as we have learned above, that faith purifies, sanctifies, justifies, and saves, what kind of faith is it that does these things for us—the living faith or a dead faith? Living faith, of course.

I give two examples of faith. (1) In John 12: 42, 43 it says: "Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue: for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God." The Bible says: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life. "Did these people have everlasting life? Were they sanctified, purified, justified, by this faith? Certainly not; they had faith only, and this does not justify. (See again James 2: 24.) (2) But look at another example. In Acts 6: 7 it says: "And the word of God increased; and the number of disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith." What about them? Were they justified? Certainly so; for it is the obedience of faith that saves. This is the faith that was placed in the apostolic commission: "Through whom we received grace and apostleship, unto obedience of faith among all the nations." (Rom. 1: 5.) Hear Paul again in Rom. 16: 26, where he declares the gospel "is made known unto all the nations unto obedience of faith." Nothing could be made plainer than this. And note how beautifully the following words from Paul chime in with this: "But thanks be to God, that, whereas ye were servants of sin, ye became obedient from the heart to that form of teaching whereunto ye were delivered; and being made free from sin, ye became servants of righteousness." (Rom. 6: 17, 18.) Hear Peter also on the same thought: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in your obedience to the truth." (1 Pet. 1: 22.)

Yes, faith saves us, but not until it steps out on God's promises in loving obedience to his commands. "Faith which worketh by love" is the faith that avails. (Gal. 5: 6.)

J. G. Allen, of Nashville, Tenn., Says—

"Saving Faith" is the subject assigned to me for the "Faith and Works" Number of the Gospel Advocate, and I appreciate being called on for the same; and while I am not responsible for being called on to write this article, I am responsible for what I write. This is a plain rule revealed in the New Testament. "But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." (Matt. 12: 36.) Words are the signs of ideas; and every word we speak, either good or bad, makes an impression of the same nature as the word. So let us be careful about our words. "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God." (1 Pet. 4: 11.) "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." (Rom. 10: 17.) "For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." (Matt. 12: 37.)

We learn from these scriptures many things that will enable us to draw right conclusions. The word of God produces faith, if it produces anything. This being true, whatever ideas I possess on the subject of faith, repentance, baptism, the Lord's Supper, the name of God's people, or anything else pertaining to man's duty to God, his neighbor, or himself, if I cannot find an exact duplicate of these ideas in the Bible, the word of God, I may be certain that I am not in possession of the faith that saves. Hence the importance of a personal examination along these lines. Read 2 Cor. 13: 5, and then prove yourself by the word of God, "whether ye be in the faith," for God never accepts a bare statement without proof.

God tells us who pleased him in former ages by faith, but reminds us that every one of them had his faith tested, tried, proved, before it was accepted; and from the standpoint of a tried faith, we are encouraged to prove our loyalty to Christ, the author of the common faith, the faith of the gospel that offers salvation to all on the same conditions. "But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?" (James 2: 20.)

Yes, Abraham and all those godly men of old were saved by faith when their faith led them to do just what God told them to do, and not before. So we are bound to conclude that the faith that saves us is obtained only by hearing, believing, and obeying the gospel just like men and women did in New Testament times under inspired apostles' directions; and if any man thinks he possesses the faith that saves without doing those things that inspired apostles required, he is deceived. The only way for any man to know that he possesses the faith that saves is to prove himself by God's rule revealed in the New Testament by inspired apostles; but instead of men doing that to-day, they are being governed in their work by each other. "For we dare not make ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves; but they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise." (2 Cor. 10: 12.)

I have often noticed that only a few members of each congregation do all the work, while the majority either pull back, criticize, or oppose the work in some way. Now that is all wrong and shows a lack of the faith that saves, for the Bible says: "For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also." (James 2: 26.) The Bible tells us that those who obeyed the gospel in New Testament times "continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." (Acts 2: 42.) They never ceased their "work of faith and labor of love," but worked twenty-four hours seven days in the week. These people believed God; they had the faith that saved; they were not ashamed to tell the message to few or many; they realized that "the disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord." They never wasted valuable time trying to invent new plans to overcome the opposition, but had full confidence in the Lord's plan and the power of his word that nothing could resist, "but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds."

Wherever they went, the light of God's word shone so bright that even many of the priests could see the truth, "and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith." Jewish and pagan altars, though strongly fortified, could not stand against the word of God, the foundation of the faith that saves.

We see a band of Christians as they enter the great heathen city of Ephesus, which contained a temple at whose altars not only the Ephesians, but all Asia, worshiped. They never falter, but, clad in heaven's armor, they begin their fight; and when the smoke of battle has cleared away, see what a change has taken place! We see a temple standing, but not like the one before the battle. The one that stood before the battle represented the combined influence and human wisdom and prestige of all the ages; the temple that stands after the fight represents the wisdom of God. It is the church of God, of which every Christian on earth is a member.

God's wisdom recorded these things in the Bible to show us the difference between human and divine wisdom and to encourage us to "be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might;" for nothing can resist the word of God, if Christians will believe it and use it. The greatest need of the world to-day is the plain word of God unmixed with human wisdom.

I must stop writing, but am not half through; but lest I infringe on space allotted in the "Faith and Works" Number, I give this closing thought and quit: If we believe and do all the word of God requires us to believe and do, it will make of us all that God expects us to be in this life: and when we die, God will say: "Come up higher." Why? Because we die in possession of the faith that saves.

Faith's Relation to the Plan of Salvation.

BY JOE M'PIERSON.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

In the investigation of the above subject, two theories are brought prominently before us. First, "salvation by faith alone" as taught in the Methodist "Discipline," on page 16, Article IX., which says: "We are accounted righteous before God only for the merit of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ by faith, and not for our own works or deservings. Wherefore that we are justified by faith only is a most wholesome doctrine and very full of comfort." Upon this unscriptural theory multiplied thousands of good, honest, and conscientious people are willing to risk their eternal salvation. In fact, the whole denominational world are agreed on this construction placed upon faith, and all of them, so far as I have been able to learn, believe, teach, and practice the same. The other theory on the subject of faith is that faith in God, in the Lord Jesus Christ, in his promises revealed to us through his word, coupled with works (obedience to the commands of the gospel of Christ), puts the one thus obeying this gospel into Christ, into remission of sins, and the obedient one becomes an heir and joint heir with Christ to that inheritance that Peter says is "incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who by the power of God are guarded through faith unto a salvation ready to be revealed in the last time." (1 Pet. 1: 4, 5.) This, to my mind, correctly represents the two theories on faith as they are taught by the representatives of each theory. The question, then, to be determined by the anxious inquirer after the truth is: Which one of the two theories is correct?

They both cannot be correct and in harmony with the truth of God.

God is not a respecter of persons. He has not revealed in his word two or three different ways of justifying or saving man. When the Gentiles were permitted by the goodness and grace of God to become members of the church of Christ and be made heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, the apostle Peter was so happy over the occurrence that he said: "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to him." (Acts 10: 35, 36.)

Faith is essential to salvation. "Being therefore justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." (Rom. 5: 1.) Again: "And without faith it is impossible to be well pleasing unto him [God]; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that seek after him." (Heb. 11: 6.) Now, in view of the fact that we are justified by faith and cannot please God without faith, the question naturally presents itself to us: What is this faith that justifies and saves us? Secondly, how do we obtain or come into possession of it?

What is faith, and how is it obtained? Faith is a dependence on the veracity of another. A confidence or trust, because it relies upon the truth of a promise made by another. Or, as Paul puts it: "Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, a conviction of things not seen." (Heb. 11: 1.) How do we come into possession of it? "So belief [faith] cometh of hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ." (Rom. 10: 17.) The word of God contains the promises of God through Christ to man. The love of God, his promises to the obedient, his threats to the disobedient, are all revealed therein. The gospel is taught to man. Man believes it. This belief creates in man confidence, trust, in Christ and his promises, and man, according to the confidence or trust he has, obeys the commands of his Savior. Man's obedience to the commands of the gospel, when fully taught his duty, can be measured by his confidence and trust in the promises of his Redeemer.

For example: Mr. B is a carpenter. Mr. A asks Mr. B what he will charge to furnish the material and build him a gate five feet high and eight feet wide. Mr. B figures a moment and replies: "I will build the gate, furnish everything, for ten dollars." Mr. A says: "That will be satisfactory to me. Build the gate and I will pay you." Now, if Mr. B believes Mr. A has the money to pay for the gate when it is completed, and has confidence and trust in him and his word, he will work on the gate until it is completed, and trust Mr. A for his pay. But, on the other hand, Mr. B might believe that Mr. A has the money to pay for the building of the gate, but he has no faith, no trust, no confidence in him. Hence he says: "Mr. A, you pay me first and I will build the gate."

This, my dear reader, is the principle upon which this "faith-alone" theory is operated. The sinner is taught that God will accept and pardon him the very instant he believes, independent of his obedience to the gospel of Christ. This "faith alone" system makes Christ trust the sinner, instead of the sinner trusting Christ. Christ says: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." This commission of the Author of our salvation places our salvation at the end of our obedience to the gospel. The gospel teaches faith, confidence, trust in the Lord; that if, we, with these principles in our hearts, obey the commands of our Lord, trusting him to faithfully keep his word, we will be forgiven. This "faith-alone" system says: "Not so, Lord; you save me first, and then I will obey such of the commandments as I see fit to obey, because I am already saved"—thus making Christ trust the sinner, instead of the sinner trusting Christ. The faith that saves, that justifies, is that principle composed of confidence and trust in God, in Christ, in his promises, and is produced in the hearts of men by the word of the living God. This faith, confidence, trust, created in our hearts, will lead us to humbly go forward and obey each command of our Lord just like he says do it and for the express purpose that he says do it. Faith and works will always bring the blessings of God. Hence, James, discussing faith and works, asks: "What doth it profit, my brethren, if a man say he hath faith, but hath not works? can that faith save him? If a brother or sister be naked and in lack of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Go in peace, be ye warmed and filled; and yet ye give them not the things needful to the body; what doth it profit? Even so faith, if it have not works, is dead in itself." (James 2: 14-17.) "Ye see that by works a man is justified, and not only by faith." (Verse 24.) "For as the body apart from the spirit is dead, even so faith apart from works is dead." (Verse 26.)

The Trial of Our Faith.

BY EARLY ARCENEAUX.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

"Wherein [in the hope of salvation] ye greatly rejoice, though now for a little while, if need be, ye have been put to grief in manifold trials, that the proof of your faith, being more precious than gold that perisheth though it is proved by fire, may be found unto praise and glory and honor at the revelation of Jesus Christ." (1 Pet. 1: 6, 7.) The things which are seen are temporal. Even gold perishes; yet it is a very precious metal and very enduring as temporal things endure. In verse 18 Peter speaks of gold as a corruptible thing. Yet it will stand the test of fire; the fire removes the dross and proves the genuineness of the gold. Our faith, having stood the test of fiery trial and having been perfected by loving obedience, shall be more precious than fine gold which has been purified from its dross by fire.

Every man's faith must be tried. Faith is the cardinal and guiding principle in the spiritual life; it is our spiritual eyesight. We walk by faith, not by sight. With the natural eye we look out upon the things of sense; by faith we have an insight into "things which are not seen, which are eternal," and perceive things which eye saw not, and ear heard not, and which entered not into the heart of man till God revealed them. The essence of faith is nowhere more clearly described than in the expression, "By faith . . . he endured, as seeing him who is invisible." (Heb. 11: 27.) God is invisible, but the man of faith endures trials and withstands temptation as if God were before his very eyes. "Faith is assurance of things hoped for, a conviction of things not seen." (Heb. 11: 1.) But hope clings to things which are eternal, the things which are not seen. "For in hope were we saved: but hope that is seen is not hope: for who hopeth for that which he seeth? But if we hope for that which we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." (Rom. 8: 24, 25.)

Things spiritual and eternal are understood only by faith; and faith comes by hearing the divine testimony concerning these things. The great battle of humanity has ever been the conflict between the flesh and the spirit—the question as to whether to place the affections on the things of sense about us, tangible and material, yet perishable, or on the things which are not seen, but which are nevertheless the solid and enduring realities of life. In this conflict Esau fell. To satisfy the fleshly desire of the moment, he sold his birthright. Christ permitted Peter to walk upon the water. But when he took his eye and his mind off Christ and considered the waves and the fury of the wind, he was allowed to sink. In his extremity he cried: "Lord, save me. And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and took hold of him, and saith unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?" Doubt will sink us every time beneath the waves of life's tempestuous sea. We must look by faith to Him, and keep our eyes above the storms and waves. Yet, blessed assurance, if we begin to sink and in our weakness cry, "Lord, save me," he still will, as it were, stretch forth his loving hand, take hold of us, and pull us up! Peter walked on the water by faith.

The same conflict is seen in the case of Israel in the wilderness. They had seen God's wonders in Egypt and his mighty deliverance of them from bondage. They had the promise of the God whose love and power had been thus demonstrated, of a good land flowing with milk and honey, and his assurance of blessings untold. Yet they feared enemies whom God had promised to put to flight before them; and in the hour of trial, forgetting God, they despised the land and in their hearts turned back to the fleshpots of Egypt, unmindful of the burdens they had borne there. "They believed not his word." (Ps. 106: 24.) We say this seems so strange. But have we not seen like conduct? Are we laying up treasure in heaven rather than upon the earth?

Yes, we are saved in hope. Hope is inspired by the exceeding great and precious promises of God. In this earthly conflict, lest we become earth-bound, it is essential to strengthen our faith by continual study of God's word, and to keep our hope of eternal and fadeless joys bright by meditating upon his rich promises, that we may set our affections on things which are above and abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul. Thus we escape the corruption which is in the world through lust and become partakers of the divine nature. The Christian does not hope only in this life; his inheritance, which is incorruptible and undefiled and fadeth not away, lies across the Jordan of death. "Wherefore girding up the loins of your mind, be sober and set your hope perfectly on the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." (1 Pet. 1: 13.)

The apostolic age was an era of fierce persecution. Christians then had to endure especially fiery trials. How appropriate to their needs under such conditions was the following impressive passage: "But call to remembrance the former days, in which, after ye were enlightened, ye endured a great conflict of sufferings; partly, being made a gazingstock both by reproaches and afflictions; and partly, becoming partakers with them that were so used. For ye both had compassion on them that were in bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your possessions, knowing that ye have for yourselves a better possession and an abiding one. [Here again appears the contrast between the uncertain things of this world, valuable only in a very relative sense and to be used only a few short years, and the things eternal; and here we see faith being tried. It caused them to give up even joyfully earthly possessions that they might have an abiding inheritance, an interest in the home eternal in the heavens.] Cast not away therefore your boldness, which hath great recompense of reward. For ye have need of patience, that, having done the will of God, ye may receive the promise. For yet a very little while, he that cometh shall come, and shall not tarry. But my righteous one shall live by faith: and if he shrink back, my soul hath no pleasure in him. But we are not of them that shrink back unto perdition; but of them that have faith unto the saving of the soul." (Heb. 10: 32-39.)

They that have crucified the flesh with its passions and lusts are Christ's. "And if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, heirs according to promise." (Gal. 3: 29.) "Know therefore that they that are of faith, the same are sons of Abraham." (Verse 7.) "So then they that are of faith are blessed with the faithful Abraham."

Among the Faithful Workers

Compiled by A. B. Lipscomb

The editors and publishers need your help and are counting on you.

Prove your faith by your works and send us some new subscribers.

The "Faith and Works" Number solicits your attentive consideration.

Read the supplement to this number and let us hear from every reader before April 1.

C. D. Crouch has moved from Bowie to Rock Springs, Texas. Correspondents will please note the change.

A brother at Elizabethtown, Ill., sends us a communication with no name attached. We will be glad to publish the article when the name is supplied.

The contributors to this special number deserve the thanks of the brotherhood. Personally, I am greatly indebted to them for their splendid articles on assigned topics.

Edward White, of Mims, Fla., writes: "The Gospel Advocate is worth five dollars a copy to any one who is seeking the Lord's way." He is greatly pleased with the special numbers.

From R. D. Smith, at Sherman, Texas: "Interest in our work is excellent. Fine audiences to-day (February 20) and one confession, to be baptized Wednesday night; also one baptized a few nights since."

From B. D. Landes, Russellville, Ky.: "I note that some of the readers refer to some particular number of the Gospel Advocate as extra fine; but, holding up the cross as they all do, every number is the best. May God bless 'D. L.' and 'E. G. S.'" T. W. Phillips, of Fort Worth, Texas, continues to improve in health. He notes one of the compensations of accident and sorrow by saying: "I never knew before that I had so many friends." Thus does our Heavenly Father reveal his goodness in an unexpected way.

Married, at the Russell Street church house of worship, in Nashville, Tenn., on February 23, at 3 P.M., Mr. John Granville Gardner, of Winchester, Tenn., and Miss Helen Proctor Dawson, of this city. This happy couple is extended warmest congratulations.

The many friends of F. B. Srygley, our field editor, will be grieved to learn of the death of his brother, F. G. Srygley, which occurred at Coal Hill, Ark., last week. The deceased was a faithful Christian who exerted a wide influence. His family has our deepest sympathy.

Jarratt L. Smith writes: "A brother in Rutherford County, Tenn., wants to sell E. S. B. Waldron's 'Gospel Proclaimer.' Write me, inclosing stamp, at 167 Fourth Avenue, Nashville. Will D. L. Hutchinson, formerly of Pikeville, Tenn., please write me at same address?"

R. D. Smith, a brother of G. Dallas Smith, at Murfreesboro, Tenn., and one of our most useful Texas preachers, is planning a trip to his old home in Tennessee during the spring or summer. While in this State, congregations would do well to secure his services for a meeting. Address him at Sherman, Texas.

The church at Murfreesboro, Tenn., is supporting T. B. Clark in mission fields and is anxious to get in correspondence with brethren or sisters at places where this kind of work is most needed. Here is a fine opportunity for those who will act quickly. Those interested should address G. Dallas Smith, Murfreesboro, Tenn.

From Warren E. Starnes, at Savoy, Texas: "You have lots of friends in Texas and are gaining more. We have an interest in the paper that should be made of more worth to you and the cause. I have never doubted the fact which follows: 'The Gospel Advocate is getting better all the time,' as some have expressed it. I suppose this could not be otherwise, as it stays the best."

Our field editor is meeting with a cordial reception wherever he goes, and we are told that his sermons at the various stops are very much appreciated. Following is his schedule as thus far arranged: Science Hill (Rutherford County), Thursday, March 2; New Hope (Rutherford County), Friday, March 3; Woodbury, Sunday, March 5; Chattanooga, Sunday and Monday, March 12, 13; Bridgeport, Ala., Tuesday, March 14; Tracy City, Wednesday and Thursday, March 15, 16; Decherd, Friday, March 17; Huntsville, Ala., Sunday and Monday, March 19, 20; New Decatur, Ala., Tuesday, March 21; Lynnville, Wednesday, March 22; Robertson's Fork, Thursday, March 23; Campbell Station, Friday, March 24; Columbia, Sunday, March 26; Stiverville (Maury County), Monday, March 27; Theta (Maury County), Tuesday, March 28; Cathey's Creek (Maury County), Wednesday, March 29. Brother Srygley preaches twice on Sunday. Week day appointments are all for the evening.

We have received the following letter from Tice Elkins, which we publish in the hope that there may be a quick and liberal response: "I have not asked for help, but will have to soon, if conditions do not change for the better. My wife is still in bed, helpless and afflicted, and I am assured she will so remain for many weeks yet. Then, our oldest boy, fourteen years old, is suffering with an infected sore on the mouth, and blood poison very imminent. So here I am, and will stay here a long time yet before I can get away to fill my appointments. Since last report I have received from the Hereford Grove brethren seven dollars, and twenty-five dollars from the congregation here at home, and it is gone; but we are not despairing, for we know that the whole body of Christ will not forget a member, if they are apprised of that member's misfortune. Now, as to help, if those I am in debt to will be patient a while, I could rest better if I received nothing; but for a preacher to stop preaching means that he will be in sore need soon, if he has no other way to live. I will do all I can for the Master here at home, but do not look for me away for a long time yet. My address is Childress, Texas."

Joe S. Bassilleo writes from San Francisco, Cal.: "The church meets here regularly at 149 Eddy Street. We have been striving to get enough funds to purchase a building site and build a meetinghouse here. We have been meeting at the above address for a few years once each Lord's day. Our meeting place is on the third floor in a lodge building. On account of the high rents, we are unable to do any better. So it hinders our adding to the cause. In such a large city as San Francisco we ought not to be so far back on the advancement of the cause. While we have a small fund for our building fund, we could probably go ahead and build, if the churches throughout the country would come to our rescue and help us get out where we can spread the gospel to many who are now groping in darkness and who could be enlightened through our spreading the word. When we can do this, we will not only be doing justice to those whom we enlighten, but we can rest assured that we will be rewarded accordingly. I have decided that the best way for all brethren and the church throughout the country to aid us in this our cause and their cause is to send the small sum of two dollars per church. By each church doing this, I feel sure that before long we can have a meetinghouse and add many as we spread the word. Any contributions to this fund may be sent to the Gospel Advocate or the Pacific Christian, Santa Rosa, Cal."

Faith Expressing Itself in Action.

BY M. C. K.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

To all who are familiar with the New Testament it is a well-known fact that faith and works go hand in hand in the lives of all genuine Christians. In fact, to be a genuine Christian necessarily implies such a combination of faith and works, and we can no more conceive of such a Christian living with faith, but without works, than we can conceive of the physical man living without bread. The great Teacher himself said, "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to accomplish his work;" and the same spiritual exercise in good works is no less the food on which his faithful follower must subsist. The truth here is well expressed by the lines of Hannah More:

If faith produce no works, I see
That faith is not a living tree.
Thus faith and works together grow;
No separate life they e'er can know;
They're soul and body, hand and heart,
What God hath joined, let no man part.

Perhaps no subject connected with the development of church life and character stands out with greater prominence or receives greater emphasis in the New Testament than the subject of faith and works. And hence, as a slight indication of our own appreciation of the great theme, we give it a place in our series of Gospel Advocate "specials" and make it the subject of the present special number. We hope, in this way, to assist in bringing the matter before the churches in a manner commensurate, in some degree, with its great importance; and the particular phase of the subject selected for treatment in this article is "Faith Expressing Itself in Action."

First of all, we may profitably raise the inquiry: What do we mean by faith expressing itself in action? Referring to that remarkable instance of a resolute and determined purpose of four men to bring a palsied fellow-man to Jesus to be healed, the historian says: "And Jesus seeing their faith saith unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins are forgiven." It is interesting here to ask, How could Jesus see their faith? Is faith something that can be seen? If so, how can it be seen? We cannot literally see the human will, but we can see the human arm in motion, which is nothing more nor less than the will expressing itself in action; and, on the same principle, Jesus saw their faith—that is, he saw their faith expressing itself in action.

The impressive story, as given by Mark, is as follows: "And many were gathered together, so that there was no longer room for them, no, not even about the door; and he spake the word unto them. And they come, bringing unto him a man sick of the palsy, borne of four. And when they could not come nigh unto him for the crowd, they uncovered the roof where he was; and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed whereon the sick of the palsy lay. And Jesus seeing their faith saith unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins are forgiven."

Look now at the picture. So great is the multitude which is thronging Jesus that it is impossible to gain access to him through the door. Four men are deeply interested in an afflicted fellow-man, and they want to bring him to Jesus to be healed, but it is impossible, by the ordinary means of ingress to the building, to reach Jesus; but this apparently insurmountable difficulty did not deter them in their course. So strong was their faith that Jesus could heal the afflicted man that they were determined to be baffled by no obstacle. The roofs of the houses at that time and in that country were made of movable tiling; and these four men, actuated by a burning interest in a fellow-man, were so deeply in earnest in the effort to help him that they carried him to the top of the building, took up the tiling, and gently lowered him into the room where Jesus was; and thus Jesus saw their faith—saw their faith expressing itself in action.

After the establishment of the church the same combination of faith and works continues, and the New Testament churches furnish some shining examples, among which the Thessalonian church stands preëminent in the exemplification of its faith by works. In the letters addressed to that church by the apostle Paul, he seems to take special delight in saying as many beautiful and praiseworthy things as he can about it, some of which we here note for the imitation of other churches.

1. He points out, first of all, three separate and distinct lines along which the splendor of their deeds had cast its radiance: "We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers; remembering without ceasing your work of faith and labor of love and patience of hope." Here was not only a genuine case of faith expressing itself in action, but it was so expressing itself in all directions wherever human need could be found. By their "work of faith" they were responding to the Macedonian cry for the gospel and were thus establishing other churches and planting on new territory the banner of their King; by their "labor of love" they were going, like angels of mercy, with the gospel's healing balm, binding up the broken-hearted, giving liberty to the captives, comfort to the sorrowing, bread to the hungry, and the cup of cold water to the thirsty, all under the inspiration of Him who said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me;" and by their "patience of hope" a halo of gladness and encouragement was cast over all their shining deeds. If the churches of to-day would but imitate this one characteristic of the Thessalonian church, the gospel, like a wave of celestial glory, would sweep to the ends of the earth.

2. He also said of them: "Ye became imitators of us, and of the Lord." To say this of those who had "turned unto God from idols, to serve a living and true God," was certainly high praise, and much more than he could say even of some on whom the light of the true God had never ceased to shine.

3. Although they had "received the word in much affliction," yet it was "with joy of the Holy Spirit." The lash of persecution could not stifle the new life to which they had been begotten in the Lord. They had become imitators of the apostles, who "counted it all joy to fall into manifold temptations," and of the Lord, who said: "Rejoice, and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets that were before you."

4. They had "sounded forth the word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but in every place" their "faith to Godward" had "gone forth." As "a city set on a hill" which "cannot be hid," they had become a radiating center of gospel light, and from them this light gleamed in every direction. Like the Philippians, they were "seen as luminaries in the world."

5. Finally, they had become "an ensample to all that believe in Macedonia and in Achaia." This was not only another note of high praise, but it shows that the Thessalonian church had attained to the eminent distinction of being a model for all others. Fortunate indeed it is that it has a place in the New Testament record where other churches can study and imitate its great example. Surely this church found its mission and filled it well. Its members had learned the secret of making here on earth "heavenly places in Christ Jesus," and their church life, fashioned and molded after that of the Son of God and so radiant with faith and good works, proclaimed, like a herald from the skies, the impressive words of the beautiful hymn:

To comfort and to bless,
To find a balm for woe,
To tend the lone and fatherless,
Is angel's work below.

The captive to release,
To God the lost to bring,
To teach the way of life and peace,
It is a Christlike thing.

And we believe thy word,
Though dim our faith may be;
What'er for thine we do, O Lord,
We do it unto thee.

A Scriptural Analysis of Faith.

BY E. A. E.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

I. THREE THINGS.

We must think, speak, write, and do all we do in word and deed, privately and publicly, in the absolute control of three truths—foundation stones, basic principles, chart and compass and anchor—namely: (1) God is; (2) responsibility to God and, therefore, to men; (3) the Bible is the word of God, the standard and rule of faith and works.

Unless we are governed by these three truths, we cannot be wholly relied upon in that which we think, speak, write, and do, either publicly or privately.

In view of the fact, then, that God has revealed his will to men in the Bible and that it is their only guide in all matters of faith and practice, I ask:

II. WHAT IS FAITH?

The Bible does not give technical definitions; it describes principles and gives examples of them. It gives the mighty principles of grace and love and shows what they are and the great ends to which they lead. God is love and God is light. Of love, the Bible says of our love for God: "This is the love of God, that we keep his commandments." (1 John 5: 3.) It shows what love is and gives examples.

It describes grace and religion and gives examples. (2 Cor. 8: 9; James 1: 27.) So it gives the principles of faith and shows what it is in that which it leads people to do. Also, it shows what unbelief is by showing that which it moves people both to do and to leave undone.

Faith is assurance of things hoped for, a conviction of things not seen. (Heb. 11: 1.)

The margin says "the giving of substance to," and the Authorized Version says "the substance of." This is very strong, and as clear as it is strong.

Hope itself is a great principle and a sustaining and mighty power.

For in hope were we saved; but hope that is seen is not hope: for who hopeth for that which he seeth? But if we hope for that which we see not, then do we with patience wait for it. (Rom. 8: 24, 25.)

Without faith there could be no hope. Faith sees and embraces from afar the things hoped for, brings them near, gives substance to them, makes them real, endures in order to obtain them, and patiently waits for them. By faith Moses saw him "who is invisible." (Heb. 11: 27.) By faith "we know that if the earthly house of our tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building from God, a house not made with hands, eternal, in the heavens." (2 Cor. 5; see, also, verses 2-11.) By faith we know the terror of the Lord, and know that all must stand "before the judgment seat of Christ." Hope is "an anchor of the soul," "both sure and steadfast and entering into that which is within the veil;" and faith gives us the "strong encouragement" that this joyful hope will be fully realized (See Heb. 6: 13-20.)

But faith not only looks to the future and is not only "assurance of things hoped for," but it is also "a conviction of things not seen." The last statement looks to the past as well as to the future. All we know of the creation of "the heavens and the earth," the transgression of Adam, the remedy for sin—the purposes, promises, and prophecies of God to redeem the race and the earth, and their fulfillment in Christ—we know by faith. All we know of Christ—his birth, life, death, resurrection, ascension, work of intercession—we know by faith. We know all these things because "it is impossible for God to lie," and this is given as the reason that all he promises will be received through patient continuance in well-doing.

III. HOW FAITH COMES.

From Genesis to Revelation the truth that faith comes by hearing the word of God is taught. Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, etc., believed just what God said—the promises he made and the commands he gave—and obeyed him. All examples of faith from Abel to the disciple who wrote Revelation show that to believe whatever God says is faith. John the Baptist bore testimony of Jesus that all hearing what he said might believe in Jesus. (John 1: 7, 15, 34.) Paul says it matters not who preached the gospel, whether he or the other apostles, "so we preach, and so ye believed." (1 Cor. 15: 11.) "And many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized." (Acts 18: 8.) Peter declares: "God made choice among you, that by my mouth the Gentiles should hear the words of the gospel, and believe." (Acts 15: 7.) Paul says also that the Thessalonians will be saved in the day of judgment because they believed his testimony concerning Jesus—"because our testimony unto you was believed"—and that his testimony—"the word of the message, even the word of God"—was accepted, "not as the word of men, but, as it is in truth, the word of God," which also worked in them because they believed it. (2 Thess. 2: 7-10; 1 Thess. 2: 13.) The word of God works effectually in people only as they believe it. It produces no effect or bears no fruit when not believed. It is belittled and even rejected when placed on a par with the theories and wisdom of men. The kingdom of Christ is a spiritual kingdom, and the word of God is the seed of it, and, therefore, is spiritual seed. Faith and all spiritual fruit spring from this seed; no seed, no fruit. God has never made a promise or given a commandment to men not expressed in words. It is impossible to conceive of a prophecy, promise, or command not expressed in words. "If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: for the witness of God is this, that he hath borne witness concerning his Son." (1 John 5: 9.) If the testimony of men will establish facts, much more will the testimony of God do so, for it is impossible for him either to lie or be mistaken. All we know of all that has been recorded in profane history, except the very little we have seen with our own eyes, we believe upon the testimony of men. All we know of God, of Christ, of the Holy Spirit, the way of salvation, heaven, hell, and the great hereafter, we receive from the testimony of God.

Faith never staggers at any seeming impossibility which God states or promises. If God says an old woman past age for bearing children will become the mother of a child, it is faith to believe it; if he says the walls of a certain city will fall after having been compassed about according to his directions, it is faith to believe it; if he says the dead will be raised, some to everlasting life and some to everlasting destruction, faith knows this will be done. On this very point Paul says: "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord." (1 Thess. 4: 13-18.) This is true because God says it. "So belief cometh of hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ." (Rom. 10: 17.)

IV. WHAT IS FAITH IN GOD, IN CHRIST?

"Ye believe in God, believe also in me." (John 14: 2.)

Faith in God is believing what he says—all he says about himself, about Jesus of Nazareth, about the Holy Spirit, about men, about eternity, about all things. No one has faith, trust, confidence in God, when he does not believe what God says. Faith in God and in Christ embrace confidence in them that they are all they claim to be and will do all they promise. He who disbelieves anything God says lacks faith in God; one cannot have faith in God and disbelieve anything he says. He who disbelieves anything Christ says has no faith in Christ. Faith comes by hearing the word of God, and he who rejects the word of God rejects God, and, hence, has no faith in God. One has faith in God only to the extent that one believes what God says. One may believe that God and Christ exist and not believe in them. The children of Israel fell in the wilderness because they did not believe in God. (Deut. 1: 32; Ps. 78: 22.) They believed God exists, but did not trust in him, put their confidence in him, rely upon him, and submit to his guidance or will. In the particular case referred to Moses and Aaron did not believe in God—Moses and Aaron did not believe in God! (See Num. 20: 8-13; 27: 12-14.) In this case they did not, and, hence, sinned and "rebelled" against God's word. We believe the devil exists; but we have no confidence in him, no faith in him, and do not believe what he says. He is a liar and the father of lies. No trust can be put in him. There are men in whose existence we believe, but in whom we have not a speck of confidence, because they do not keep their word and cannot be relied upon. We have confidence in men and believe in them when we trust their word and can rely upon them to meet all their obligations. So we believe in God and in Christ when we believe all they say, trust in them, and rely implicitly upon them to keep their word or to fulfill their promises.

V. ONE FAITH.

There is "one faith;" but this faith differs in degree from dead faith to great faith. The "work of faith," or that faith without works is dead, will be dwelt upon more fully next week.

VI. "THE FAITH."

In contrast with the law of Moses, and, therefore, the works of the law, faith is used to embrace the entire gospel of Christ. Examples: "A great company of the priests were obedient to the faith" (Acts 6: 7); Felix heard Paul "concerning the faith" (Acts 24: 24); "unto obedience of faith among all nations" (Rom. 1: 5; 16: 26); Paul preached "the word of the faith" (Rom. 10: 8), and he preached "the faith of which he once made havoc" (Gal. 1: 23).

Harmonizing Paul and James on Faith.

BY J. C. M'Q.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

The man who truly loves God and his holy word never interprets the Scriptures so as to make them contradict themselves, if he can construe them so as to harmonize.

Paul declares: "Being therefore justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." (Rom. 5: 1.) He says, also, in Gal. 2: 16: "Yet knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law but through faith in Jesus Christ, even we believed on Christ Jesus, that we might be justified by faith in Christ, and not by the works of the law: because by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." James affirms: "But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith apart from works is barren? Was not Abraham our father justified by works, in that he offered up Isaac his son upon the altar? Thou seest that faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect; and the scripture was fulfilled which saith, And Abraham believed God, and it was reckoned unto him for righteousness; and he was called the friend of God. Ye see that by works a man is justified, and not only by faith." (James 2: 20-24.) By reading the eleventh chapter of Hebrews we can easily discover what Paul means by faith. He there clearly shows that it is the faith that leads a man to do what God commands him to do that justifies. A good way to ascertain the meaning of faith is to note what men of faith did. "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, through which he had witness borne to him that he was righteous, God bearing witness in respect of his gifts: and through it he being dead yet speaketh." (Verse 4.) The faith that justified him led him to do as Jehovah bade him. His was not a dead, inactive faith, the bare assent of the mind, but it was a faith that expressed itself in obedience. Take another illustrious example of faith: "By faith Noah, being warned of God concerning things not seen as yet, moved with godly fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; through which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is according to faith." (Verse 7.) God bade him build an ark. He told him exactly how to build it. The command was explicit, pointed, and clear. His faith moved him to do just as God commanded him to do. One more example will suffice: "By faith Abraham, being tried, offered up Isaac: yea, he that had gladly received the promises was offering up his only begotten son." (Verse 17.) The test of his faith was most severe and trying, yet it failed not. His faith led him to offer up his own son. There is not an example in all the oracles of God where a faith that is too craven, timid, and cowardly to speak out, come out and express itself in action, ever saved or justified anybody. Virtue and vice will blend as readily as faith in the heart and disobedience in the life. An obedient life flows from faith as a pure stream from the crystal fountain. As there can be no stream when there is no fountain, so there can be no living faith without obedience. Faith as a condition of salvation appropriates the promises. Conditions are as inflexible and as essential as causes. Bread is a condition of life, yet it is not the cause of life. The air is a condition of the bird's flying, yet not the cause of the flying. God saves when we have faith in him. When we have faith in him, we obey him. There is no promise given to faith until it expresses itself in obedience. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." "And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6: 46.) "Blessed are they that wash their robes, that they may have the right to come to the tree of life, and may enter in by the gates into the city." (Rev. 22: 14.) Paul does not say that a man is justified "only by faith," but he impresses that the faith that justifies bears fruit, and that when there is no fruit there can be no faith. We may as consistently contend that when the stream is as dry as a powder horn there is a fountain as to contend that there is justifying faith when there is no obedience. When Paul represents faith as justifying, it is a living faith that speaks out, comes out and obeys. He is in perfect accord with James when he says that "faith apart from works is barren." When James affirms, "Ye see that by works a man is justified, and not only by faith," in the phrase, "not only by faith," he is considering faith a dead faith apart from works; while Paul is considering a living faith, one that speaks out, comes out and expresses itself in obedience, when he represents himself and the Romans as being justified by faith. Rom. 6: 4 reads: "We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life." Thus we see that the faith that justified them expressed itself in the first act of obedience which belongs to faith, is inseparable from faith, and in which is an element of faith. They arose to walk in newness of life, to continue in well-doing.

As it is seen that there is no conflict between Paul and James on faith, it may be well also to show that there is no conflict on works. Christians look to God through Christ to save or justify them and realize that they cannot keep any law perfectly. If they were depending on perfect obedience to law to save them, the first time they blundered they would be in a hopeless condition. But under Christ it is different. "And if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous: and he is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the whole world." (1 John 2: 1, 2.) Again, the beloved John declares: "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." (1 John 1: 8, 9.) If we could be justified by perfect obedience to law, we would not need Christ. Knowing this, Christians have turned to Christ in order that they may be justified by the faith that is in him. But this does not mean that Christ will save us in lawlessness and without law. "Nay; but by a law of faith." (Rom. 3: 27.) The faith that justifies requires us to walk in the steps of Abraham. "And the father of circumcision to them who not only are of the circumcision, but who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham which he had in uncircumcision." (Rom. 4: 12.) That we are justified by faith in Christ by observing his law and not in lawlessness is clearly established by Paul: "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus made me free from the law of sin and of death." (Rom. 8: 2.) It is worse than folly to argue that because no flesh can be justified by works of law, therefore Christ justifies without law and while in willful, malicious, and downright disobedience.

Read the supplement to this special number. It shows how to prove your faith by your works.

The Trial of Our Faith.

(Verse 9.) But Abraham's faith was tried. "By faith Abraham, when he was called, obeyed to go out unto a place which he was to receive for an inheritance; and he went out, not knowing whither he went." (Heb. 11: 8.) The call directed him to leave his country, his kindred, and his father's house. (Gen. 12: 1.) Later, when God promised him an heir, he staggered not through unbelief on account of his age or his wife's barrenness, but he believed God. Isaac was born. Through him the promises were to be fulfilled, and in him all Abraham's hopes centered. Then Abraham was told to offer up Isaac as a burnt sacrifice, to do which seemed to be the blotting out of all his hopes. But his faith stood the test. No man ever had better occasion to question the wisdom of a divine requirement. But Abraham simply obeyed. The dearest earthly idol of his heart did not stand between him and God.

By faith Moses forsook Egypt, deliberately choosing to suffer ill treatment and to take his place with a nation of slaves rather than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, esteeming even the very reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt. He looked to the recompense of reward; he looked beyond the present, chose for God, and in doing so chose immortality for himself. What a name and a fame is that of Moses! Had he made the opposite choice, who can imagine the result?

Abel has been dead six thousand years, but "yet speaketh." We do not live only for the hour, but for all time and eternity. Let the man of faith be not discouraged. Other generations may rise up to call you blessed. Some one has said that an idea is traveling very rapidly if it becomes known to and accepted by the world in one hundred years! Suppose Martin Luther and Tyndale and their collaborators had been cowards! We might be under the heel of the pope to-day. What if Campbell had been a coward? They had faith in their work. Opposition only nerved them for greater things.

"Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial among you, which cometh upon you to prove you, as though a strange thing happened unto you: but inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, rejoice; that at the revelation of his glory also ye may rejoice with exceeding joy." (1 Pet. 4: 12, 13.) Some one has said: "God had one Son on earth without sin, but never one without suffering." "Tribulation worketh steadfastness." "It is the rough work that polishes. Look at the pebbles on the shore! Far inland, where some arm of the sea thrusts itself deep into the bosom of the land, and, expanding into a salt loch, lies girdled by the mountains, sheltered from the storm that agitates the deep, the pebbles on the beach are rough, not beautiful; angular, not rounded. It is where long white lines of breakers roar, and the rattling shingle is rolled about the strand, that its pebbles are rounded and polished. As in nature, as in the arts, so in grace; it is rough treatment that gives souls as well as stones their luster; the more the diamond is cut, the brighter 't sparkles; and in what seems hard dealing, their God has no end in view but to perfect his people's graces." (Guthrie.)

Childlike Faith.

(Called especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

The childlike faith, that asks not sight,
 Waits not for wonder or for sign,
 Believes, because it loves aright,
 Shall see things greater, things divine.
 Heaven to that gaze shall open wide,
 And brightest angels to and fro
 On messages of love shall glide
 'Twixt God above and Christ below.

—John Keble.

HEROES OF FAITH IN THE TWO TESTAMENTS.

M. A. Creel Writes of Old Testament Heroes.

Let us now call to memory some of the old heroes and their good deeds.

We look with delight on Abel, Enoch, and Noah, and on Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph, as examples for the imitation of the good of all ages.

Abel was the second son of Adam. It is to be said with credit to Abel that he was the first of Adam's race to become a martyr. Up to this time the earth had not been drenched with man's blood. Abel, like all other heroes of the Bible, died in faith. (Heb. 11: 13.) "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts; and by it he being dead yet speaketh." (Heb. 11: 4.) By studying the account given in Gen. 4: 1-8 we learn that Cain slew Abel because of jealousy. It is to be remembered, too, that Cain was in the wrong from the first to the last. "And in process of time it came to pass, that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the Lord. And Abel, he also brought of the firstlings of his flock and of the fat thereof. And the Lord had respect unto Abel and to his offering; but unto Cain and to his offering he had not respect. And Cain was very wroth, and his countenance fell. And the Lord said unto Cain, Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen? If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door." To do what the Lord commands is to do well. To do well is to be accepted. Therefore, to be accepted, we should always do what Jehovah commands, and no more. "Sin lieth at the door" when we do not well. To fail to do what Jehovah commands is to do not well. "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." (Eccles. 12: 13, 14.) In Cain's case the first wrong led to a greater. For that reason we should avoid the first wrong. The first wrong is committed when any one leaves the word and is governed by opinion. Abel obeyed Jehovah; he did right, but suffered wrong at the hands of his brother. Sometimes a Christian suffers reproach for contending for a "Thus saith the Lord" for everything in the service of the church. He is kicked off and is looked upon as an old fogy. But hear a word of encouragement from Peter: "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy. If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified." (1 Pet. 4: 12-14.)

Enoch walked with God and was raised to heaven, while angels fell to earth. Enoch was a type of perfected humanity. He blessed the world three hundred and sixty-five years and was then translated. He is credited with inventing the art of writing and the sciences of arithmetic and astronomy. We owe much to Enoch in many ways.

Noah was the second head of the human family, as Adam was the first. This hero was the only righteous man on earth at one period of the world's history. After leaving the ark, his first act was to build an altar and make an offering unto the Lord. From this heroic deed we should learn not to be too deeply concerned in our temporal welfare. "By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed: and he went out, not knowing whither he went." (Heb. 11: 8.) In this Abraham walked by faith. He did not wait for any additional proof from God that he would receive the inheritance. It was enough for him to know that Jehovah had made the promise. He again proved his great faith in Jehovah's word in the offering of Isaac, his son, upon the altar. (Gen. 22: 1-12.)

All these great men were heroes because they not only believed, but worked. James says: "Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar? Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?" We must work out our salvation with fear and trembling. (Phil. 2: 12.)

T. M. Carney Writes of New Testament Heroes.

It seems very natural for men to aspire to become heroes of what they term "a worthy cause." Many have gone out upon the battlefields and distinguished themselves as heroes in carnal warfare. Possibly we will meet many of these grand characters in the "great boundless beyond"—not because they were heroic in war, but for the reason that they were heroes of faith. We often read of those who battled and sacrificed for a lost cause, and our hearts go out in deepest sympathy for them; yet, with all this and more, it is possible for such to fall short of God's glory and what the Bible would call a hero of faith.

On behalf of the above statement I call attention to the words which were spoken by the sinless Christ. Hear him: "For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Mark 8: 36, 37.) I am sure that many heroes of worldly fame have come to realize that the glory attributed thereto is vain. Solomon had all that for which the eye, flesh, and heart could lust; yet he was not contented. All this was "vanity and vexation of spirit." It is said of the brave, heroic English general, James Wolfe, that on the night his army sailed silently down the beautiful St. Lawrence River, preparatory to taking their final position on the plains above the city of Quebec, where that great and deadly battle was fought on September 13, 1759, that he repeated over and over to his companions the following stanza:

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Await alike the inevitable hour:
The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

My dear readers, this is only too true of those who strive simply and solely for worldly fame and earthly glory, which thing can never satisfy the hungry, sin-sick soul. But with the hero of faith it is wholly different. He never loses; even death itself means victory to him.

Listen to the sublime saying of the grand, heroic Paul: "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." (Phil. 1: 21.) Why? Because here is a New Testament hero. He was not striving to obtain a corruptible crown, but one that is incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven." (1 Pet. 1: 4.) Paul had in mind an ideal Hero, one who was tempted in all things like as we are tempted, yet without sin.

My friends, our spiritual Leader is the greatest Hero of all causes, of all countries, and of all ages. He has triumphed over persecution, death, hell, and the grave; has been crowned King of kings and Lord of lords. With such a Hero as our Captain, Leader, Commander, and Savior, it is possible for us to put Satan to flight upon a thousand battlefields and subdue every foe. But many seem to lose sight of their spiritual Leader, and, instead of following him, they are continually turning aside to hearken unto men. This is very unlike a New Testament hero. "We ought to obey God rather than men." (Acts 5: 29; see, also, 1 Cor. 4: 6.) It is said that all the apostles died a martyr's death, save the beloved disciple, John, and Judas. But one can be a New Testament hero without being an apostle. Many of those who constituted the church in its beginning were heroes in deed and in truth. They were ever ready to teach, defend, and practice the one system of faith at all hazards. Paul, in referring to some, said that they "laid down their own necks" for his life. (See Rom. 16: 4.) Christ said: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (John 15: 13.)

Paul was chief among the apostles and distinguished himself as a hero upon any and all occasions. Whether in prison, in tribulation, in prosperity, or in poverty, he was still the grand, sublime, heroic Paul. He expressed himself as being ready to die for the name of the Lord Jesus. (Acts 21: 13.) Every act of Paul's career as a Christian is proof and positive evidence that this was spoken from a conscientious, loving heart. But this is not all; he was willing to spend and be spent for the salvation of others. (See 2 Cor. 12: 15.) Surely he lived and died a hero, for we hear him saying: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." (2 Tim. 4: 7.) "Heroic words, heroic lesson, heroic man."

Now, my prayer to God the Father is that we, as followers of Christ, may be able to so conduct ourselves toward God and toward man that our names will be written upon the heavenly scroll with the New Testament heroes of faith.

APT QUOTATIONS

An atheist once asked Bishop Boyd Carpenter if he believed that Jonah was swallowed by a whale, and received the answer: "When I go to heaven, I will ask him." "But suppose he isn't there," the other persisted. "Then you ask him," was the quick retort.

To thy heart take faith,

Soft beacon light upon a stormy sea;
A mantle for the pure in heart, to pass
Through a dim world untouched by living death;
A cheerful watcher through the spirit's night,
Soothing the grief from which she may not flee;
A herald of glad news, a seraph bright,
Pointing to sheltering heavens yet to be.

—Lucy Hooper.

A Swede was about to start as a missionary to India, when some of his friends tried to dissuade him, saying: "It is so hot there you can't live. Why, it is one hundred and twenty degrees in the shade." "Vell," said the man of faith, in great contempt, "ve don't have to stay in the shade, do ve?" It is just possible the Lord will make it hotter for folks who habitually hunt the shade than for those who get out into the sunlight where they can see to work.—Robert E. Speer.

I had a young man in my congregation who believed that he was refusing and rejecting salvation because of some unsolved problems. One day he determined to accept Christ as a Savior and afterwards settle his intellectual difficulties. But, so soon as he had made this decision, he found that his doubt had vanished. He thought that his blindness was intellectual; but his heart turned Godward, the veil was done away; and many a soul has had a like experience. A will to believe clears the mental vision. We see clearly when we are ready to see.—A. T. Pierson.

On two occasions—and so far as we know on only two—the Lord stated that he found great faith; that is to say, he found faith in sufficient quantity to warrant an experiment as to its powers. Singularly enough, it was exhibited once by a man and once by a woman. Of the centurion, Christ said, "I have not found so great faith in Israel;" and to the Syrophenician woman he said: "O woman, great is thy faith." Let us draw near to this Adam and Eve of great faith in search of answers to inquiries of great import as to the result and worth of faith.—Wiseman.

Faith is evidenced by our obedience and our love; for these three are but different sides of the same prism, each helping the other, each transmutable into the other. It is shown by our cheerfulness, our freedom from fear and anxiety. He who walks by faith takes no strolls through the land of fretfulness. Disappointment is destroyed. Sorrow is turned into joy. Affliction is welcomed because of the love which sends it and the spiritual gain which attends it. It is a proof of growing faith when we can put and keep the world, our particular world (for each one has his own) completely under foot.—The Riches of His Grace.

I have seen

A curious child, who dwelt upon a tract
Of inland ground, applying to his ear
The convolutions of a smooth-lipped shell;
To which, in silence hushed, his very soul
Listened intensely; and his countenance soon Brightened with joy; for murmurings from within
We heard—sonorous cadences! whereby,
To his belief, the monitor expressed
Mysterious union with his native sea.
Even such a shell the universe itself
Is to the ear of Faith. —William Wordsworth.

The saintly Richard Baxter it was who said that he had a better ground of assurance for the extension of the divine mercy to himself personally in the use of the word "whosoever" than if the name Richard Baxter were used. For were it said that "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that Richard Baxter believing in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," what assurance, said he, could he have that he was the person meant? It might be some other one of the many Richard Baxters in the world for whom it was intended; and thus his peace would have no guaranteed stability. "But when God says 'whosoever,' I know I am one of them and that the glad tidings are for me without any peradventure."—Campbell.

In his furrowed fields around us,
God has work for all who will;
Those who may not scatter broadcast,
Yet may plant it hill by hill.

Yearning hearts are often near us,
Conscious of their Spirit-need;
These are hills prepared by heaven
To receive the precious seed.

Shall we find these hills and plant them?
Shall we scatter when we may?
Or with idle hands stand waiting
Till the seedtime pass away?

Glory waits the faithful workmen
Who perform their Master's will;
Then, O Christians! will ye weary
Of this planting hill by hill?

Soon life's springtime will be over,
And its autumn days will come;
Happy then will be those workmen
Who have sheaves to carry home.

The above report, being for the last quarter in the year, is the largest report we ever have to make. This report includes our reunion and board meeting, and always we have our greatest donations at this season of the year. We are at this writing in the middle of January and donations very slow. I am doing my best to superintend the Home work, run a two-hundred-and-seventy-five-acre farm, preach somewhere every Sunday, and raise funds to meet all running expenses of the Home and farm and also to pay the Home out of debt this year. I am sure you can see the stupendous task before me;

President Wilson's Message on Advertising

Contained in the following letter to the President of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

THE WHITE HOUSE WASHINGTON

October 11, 1915.

My dear Mr. Houston:

Advertising is a factor of constantly increasing power in modern business, and it very vitally affects the public in all its phases, particularly since the mediums for the dissemination of advertising have increased so remarkably in recent years. For business men, therefore, it is of the utmost importance that the highest standards should be applied to advertising as to business itself.

The country is to be congratulated on the work of the Associated Advertising Clubs to establish and enforce a code of ethics based upon candid truth that shall govern advertising methods, and the effect of its work should be of the greatest benefit to the country. It ensures permanence and stability in industrial and distributive methods, because it means good business judgment, and more than that, it indicates a fine conception of public obligation on the part of men in business, a conception which is one of the inspiring things in our outlook upon the future of national development.

Cordially and sincerely yours

and if this work of child saving appeals to you, you will help us in the undertaking. I am now forty-one years old and have been in this work six years; and from the beginning I have had, with the help of my wife, the burden of the entire work on my shoulders—the admitting of every child to the Home that enters, the correcting of the inmates, the buying of all supplies, the keeping of books, the writing of all letters (which within itself is a man's job), the keeping up of all repairs on the building, and placing of children in homes over the country; and in connection with this work I have found homes and employment for many widows and poor girls who needed help. I have had to look after every legal transaction for the Home. Besides this, I have held meetings all over the country, had from one to two debates a year, preached somewhere every Sunday, and in a large measure, aside from the Home work, have had to make my own living. Now, what is the result? The first of 1910 we had nothing but about nine orphan children and our present building started; no money, no household goods except my own. We now have one block of land inside the city of Columbia; a building with forty-two rooms well furnished and equipped in every way, and an outside laundry building; a large farm, with seven head of horses, near thirty hogs and pigs, about fifteen cows, and a milk house on the farm; with about seventy children in the Home, and have placed many all over the country in good homes. What is our condition? We owe on this property worth near fifty thousand dollars about seven thousand dollars, and have about five thousand dollars subscribed to meet this debt. Can we not—will we not—come to the rescue of the work and pay this off in short order? Two thousand Christians at one dollar each can complete the job. Shall we continue longer in debt? You alone can settle that question. My work has been heavy, but my burdens and those of my wife will be made much lighter when we are entirely free from debt. I believe you will do your part. I have believed in you, and do still. Remember, we need your help in feeding and clothing these children and paying the Home out of debt.

Thanking all our friends for all past favors, also the dear old Gospel Advocate for the help it has given us, and wishing for all a prosperous and happy year during the year 1916, we beg to remain

Your obedient servants,
MR. AND MRS. W. T. BOAZ.

BACKACHE, SWELLING OF HANDS AND FEET.

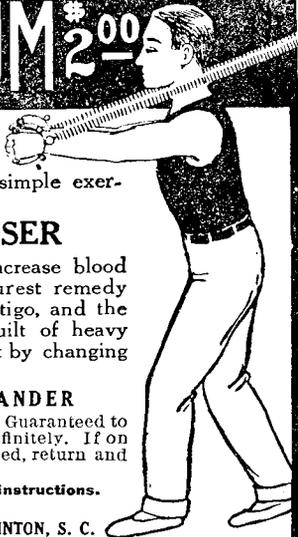

Dear Editor: I appeal to those of your readers who are bothered with backache and a constant tired feeling to give "Anuric" a trial. It is a remedy recently discovered by Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. I suffered from backache, swelling of hands and feet, too frequent excretion from the kidneys, and many other symptoms. I was unable to work, but after taking just one box of "Anuric" according to directions, I am again able to perform my daily duties.

(Signed) W. R. BRAY.

NOTE.—Folks in town and adjoining counties are delighted with the results they have obtained by using "Anuric," the newest discovery of Dr. Pierce, who is head of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, in Buffalo, N. Y. Those who started the day with a backache, stiff legs, arms and muscles, and an aching head (worn out before the day began because they were in and out of bed half a dozen times at night) are appreciating the perfect rest, comfort, and new strength they obtained from Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. To prove that this is a certain uric-acid solvent and conquers headache, kidney and bladder diseases, and rheumatism, if you have never used the "Anuric," cut this out and send ten cents to Dr. Pierce for a large sample package. This will prove to you that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid, and the most perfect kidney and bladder corrector. If you are a sufferer, go to your best druggist and ask for a fifty-cent box of "Anuric." You run no risk, for Dr. Pierce's good name stands behind this wonderful new discovery as it has for the past half century for his "Golden Medical Discovery," a general tonic made from roots with pure glycerine which makes the blood pure, his "Favorite Prescription" for weak women, and "Pleasant Pellets" for liver ills.

The Chinese Woolflower

Introduced by us last year has proved a great success everywhere and a most wonderful floral novelty. It is a Celosia of new form and easy growth. Plants throw out scores of branches bearing balls of crimson wool nearly a foot thick. Also many laterals with smaller heads, and fresh green foliage. Flowers form in June but none fade before frost, continuing to expand and glow with its wonderful crimson-searlet color, very showy and succeeds anywhere.

The Master's Vineyard

California.

Tulare, February 14.—We had an inspiring service in our house in Tulare yesterday. Brother L. D. Perkins, of Corcoran, preached for us. Having a desire to worship "as it is written," we began with the first of the year 1916 to have the Lord's-day worship in our home. At first there were only myself and wife, although we invited some others to meet with us, who had led us to believe they felt as we did in the matter; however, when we began the work, they continued to meet with the Christian Church. We feel that the Lord was with us and blessed us, and we are glad that he has said: "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst." We learned that Brother Perkins was to be at Exeter on February 6; so I went to Exeter and had a talk with him, and he kindly offered his service one Lord's day in each month. I notified some disciples who live in the country and some of our friends in the town that Brother Perkins would be here on February 13. So they came, twenty in all, and Brother Perkins gave us a splendid lesson from 1 Cor. 15. We would be glad to have any gospel preacher who might be passing this way to meet with us. Our address is 259 South F Street. We ask an interest in the prayers of all who are interested in the extension of New Testament Christianity. I feel that the Gospel Advocate has been a great help to me in making me stronger in the faith and helping me to see the importance of speaking where the Bible speaks and being silent where the Bible is silent. We hope that great good may be accomplished this year.

L. MEADE WILLIAMS.

Colorado.

Boulder, February 22.—We (the church of Christ) are trying to build us a small meetinghouse here at Boulder, and would like to have the cooperation of all the brethren who can and will cooperate with us in building it. Brethren, there are only two meetinghouses in all of Colorado that are owned by the church of Christ. Do you not think this is a pretty good place to do missionary work? Send all contributions to Brother John D. Evans, 12 Broadway, Denver, Col., or the undersigned. May God bless you in your assistance.

JAMES H. BAILEY.

Florida.

Lacota, February 16.—Brother J. O. Barnes held a meeting at Lacota, beginning on January 22 and continuing over three Lord's days. He did excellent preaching. We had no additions, but much good was done. Brother Barnes is a good man, and any one wanting a meeting could not get a better man. He set the church to work with the literature, which, I think, is very good for the old as well as the young.

M. V. GORE.

Lake City, February 21.—After four weeks of earnest labor with the churches in the southern part of the State, where the cause of Christ is weak (but struggling to carry the good work forward), I have been at home with my family and working with the churches in and around Lake City, trying to strengthen the work here. Two precious souls have been baptized into Christ and one wanderer returned to the fold since I came home. I leave this afternoon for a mission meeting at a destitute point for an indefinite period, praying that the Lord may use me to establish a New Testament church of Christ there. Pray for me and the work in the Master's vineyard.

J. O. BARNES.

Georgia.

Hazlehurst, February 23.—The interest grows since the debate. The Methodist and Baptist pastors tried to get the Presbyterians to turn me out of their house, but failed. I do not know how long I will be here, but I expect to keep sowing the seed and leave results with God. I spent one night with a Methodist family. They said that the debate opened their eyes. A Baptist said to me: "You have convinced me I am wrong." No wonder these scared pastors used their influence to keep people away from the debate. There is other mission work I hope to do before my departure for Texas. My next work will be at Christian Home, near Newton, Ala. Correspondents should address me at Hazlehurst, Ga., care of W. N. Gantt.

JOHN HAYES.

Mississippi.

Tishomingo, February 7.—We have received the following donations with which to ceil our house: From the church at Berea, Ala., $5; Christian Chapel, Ala., $5; New Hope, Ala., $3.65; Brother Williams, Mynot, Ala., $2; Brother Storumt, Iuka, Miss., $1; Minor Hill, Tenn., $2.40. Total, $19.05. Our house is not completed, but we have it nearly ceiled. We are doing good work with our Bible lessons each Lord's day. Brother Frank Baker, whose address is now Belmont, Miss., is preaching for us one Lord's day in each month. It is a treat to have him with us. He is a good preacher and able to take care of the cause. He has some time not yet taken up. Any one desiring his services will do well to write him.

summer and strengthening myself for the campaign by a close study of the word. I would be glad to hear from congregations wanting meetings in April, May, July, or August. I want to be busy in the Master's vineyard.
M. S. MASON.

St. Louis, February 21.—The work in St. Louis is progressing very nicely, with good interest from all, considering the bad weather we have had. We hope soon to have a very strong man in the field here to work this city as it never has been worked before. I have received some contributions from some sisters interested in St. Louis—viz.: Sister Carson, Herrick, Ill., $50; Sister Ticie Johnson, Los Angeles, Cal., $7; Sister Dorsey, Perry, Ill., $5; Sister Stephens, Red Key, Ind., $1. These amounts have been sent in to help support the work and use in our building. The burden is heavy and the supporters are few. We need fellowship and cooperation. We trust that others may become interested in spreading the gospel in this dark spot. I go this afternoon to the hospital for an operation. I ask the prayers of all Christians.
LOTTIE JOHNSON.

Springfield, February 14.—As the brethren are aware, about five years ago a band of fifty-five loyal members of the church of Christ erected a house of worship on the corner of Johnson and Dale Streets, in North Springfield. Through the untiring efforts of these brethren a number of tent meetings have been conducted in different parts of the city. In June, 1914, Brother John T. Hinds assisted in a tent meeting in the southern part of the city. Everything bade fair to further prosecute the work then started. Hence, last June the writer assisted in a meeting, which was followed one week later by a series of meetings, with Brother O. L. Hardin as preacher. During this meeting the purchase of a very desirable lot at the corner of Phillips and Evans Streets was the real beginning of the newly erected meetinghouse. The building is a very commodious, comfortable one. The first Lord's day in this month was our first meeting there, and also the beginning of another series of interesting sermons delivered by Brother Hardin. Large audiences each night, and attention all we could wish. Several have cast their lots with us as co-laborers in the work. Others are yielding to the gospel commands. Everything is very promising to have soon a very energetic, wide-awake congregation. Any one passing this way will always find a hearty welcome at either place of worship.

C. L. WILKERSON.

Tennessee.

Knoxville, February 17.—The work here is progressing very nicely this year. Good crowds at our services. Brother W. E. Morgan spent the first Sunday in this month with us, and preached two very fine sermons, with one confession at the conclusion of the evening sermon. Brother Morgan is one of our ablest preachers, and it is a pleasure to be with him. I have known him for several years, and have always known him as a stickler for the cause of Christ, regardless of the cost. He was on his way to the work in

THE BURNETT-WEAVER DEBATE ON METHODISM.

IN TWO VOLUMES OF MORE THAN FIVE HUNDRED PAGES.

Disputants:

T. R. Burnett, Christian; J. C. Weaver, Methodist.

THE ONLY COMPLETE DEBATE BETWEEN CHRISTIANS AND METHODISTS NOW PUBLISHED.

Each disputant has sixty-eight speeches. The corresponding speeches are of equal length by actual count of words.

PROPOSITIONS DISCUSSED IN VOLUME ONE.

PROPOSITION 1. The Scriptures teach that sprinkling or pouring of clean water upon a proper subject, in the name of the Holy Trinity, by a proper administrator, is Christian baptism. Weaver affirms; Burnett denies.

PROPOSITION 2. Infant baptism is authorized by the word of God. Weaver affirms; Burnett denies.

PROPOSITIONS DISCUSSED IN VOLUME TWO.

PROPOSITION 1. The Scriptures teach that in the conversion of the sinner the influence of the Holy Spirit is confined to the word of truth, or gospel, as contained in the New Testament. Burnett affirms; Weaver denies.

PROPOSITION 2. The Scriptures teach that baptism is for (in order to) the remission of sins. Burnett affirms; Weaver denies.

3. The creed criticized. Burnett leads; Weaver responds.

J. C. Weaver, of Henderson, Texas, is a recognized authority in his church. He is a man of talent, and has been debating for many years.

T. R. Burnett is one of the shrewdest men of the present time among the disciples of Christ. As a debater, preacher, and author, he takes first rank. His arguments stand out as clear as light. He has a style that is unique—peculiarly his own—that attracts and charms the reader. When one begins reading his writing, he is led on as if by some impelling force, and can hardly lay the book down till he has finished it.

These books sparkle with interest—fresh, lively thought, and strong, convincing argument.

Lime Against Tuberculosis

In the May 25, 1912, issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association appeared this statement concerning calcium (lime) medication in the treatment of tuberculosis: "Under the systematic, continued and persistent regime of calcium assimilation, Van Geison has seen a number of his patients improve. The sputum clears up of tubercle bacilli, which finally disappear, and the patients are discharged with healed pulmonary tuberculosis."

Ethical journals seldom speak so positively about a remedial agent, yet this testimony coincides with that from many consumptives who have secured like results through the use of Eckman's Alterative.

Since calcium is a constituent of this remedy, its healing power may be due to the way this element is so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be easily assimilated.

Eckman's Alterative contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, so it is safe to try. Price $1 and $2 per bottle. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct from the Laboratory. We would like to send you a booklet containing information of value and references.

TOBACCO HABIT CURED OR NO COST.

Harmless, bonded, home remedy. Indorsed by physicians and home people. Send no money, but your name to-day. J. Edward Cook, G. A., King-Ni-Ko System, Wichita, Kansas.

Portland, Maine. The brethren in Maine should feel themselves very lucky to enjoy the labors of as pure and fine a character as Brother Morgan is known to be by all who know him. He is the only gospel preacher in the work in New England. Look for what I have to say about the work there in the near future. Our seats have been delayed one month, and we hope to be using them by the fourth Sunday. The brethren at Carter's Creek mean to make us a contribution next Lord's day. How many others will do the same? We have received five dollars since our last report. I can furnish homes, where the work will be paid for, for two ambitious Christian young ladies from fifteen to thirty years of age. If interested, write me. I can furnish positions for two hustling young men in the insurance business. Let me hear from you.

T. B. CLARK.

West Virginia.

Buffalo, Box 81, February 22.—There were four more confessions here last Lord's day. I think this is doing pretty well, considering our circumstances and surroundings. We have no regular meeting place of our own here. All our meetings are held in schoolhouses, private houses, and under trees. We have a few faithful ones here, and they are helping me all they can, but they are not able to do much. My own financial affairs are in a precarious condition, and I must have help at once, if I am to make good in this almost entirely destitute field. Can't you send me a check or a money order now? Please do not wait. And, by the way, Brother M. A. Creel, of Hanceville, Ala., and Brother B. F. Moody, of Albertville, Ala., could do more and better work if they could have your help. So if you cannot help me, for the love of God, do not forget these noble, God-fearing men. That section can never be fully evangelized without outside help. I know the entire situation. Send one or both of these men a dollar—no, send him fifty dollars, a hundred dollars—and let him use it in building up those weak congregations or in some destitute place. And let all within the limits of that field do all that they can for such men. That is the one hope for that field; and this field is in precisely the same fix. We must encourage all of our mission workers this year. I will make a full report of all receipts later, and I hope to have something to report.

Rev. A. B. Mowers Advocates Nerve Remedy.

Nervous indigestion is one of the commonest of the many forms of nervous trouble. It is very hard to treat usually, but those who have used Dr. Miles' Nervine all report that it was not long before their trouble vanished entirely.

Every ailment must have a cause, and the cause is what should be removed. When the cause lies in the nervous system, Dr. Miles' Nervine cannot be too strongly advocated. It is backed by thirty years of successful use.

The Rev. A. B. Mowers, of York, Pa., is an ardent advocate of this remedy, since it completely relieved him. He made the following statement for publication: "Nearly ten years ago I was troubled with nervous indigestion in its worst form. I had sick headaches nearly every day, with a dizzy, dull feeling. I was extremely nervous, confused, and suffered much with constipation. I was informed of Dr. Miles' Nervine and Liver Pills, and determined to give them a trial. I used them as directed and received much relief. I continued the Nervine until I had used several bottles. I now enjoy good health, relish my meals, and can eat any kind of food without fear. I take pleasure in recommending Dr. Miles' Remedies to the public."

Dr. Miles' Nervine or Liver Pills can be purchased at any drug store, and the purchase price will be cheerfully refunded by the druggist if, after using the remedies, you are not satisfied with the results obtained.

CALOMEL TO-DAY, SICK TO-MORROW.

Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile, it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated, and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a fifty-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful; and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day, you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you; while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone, you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition, and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant, and safe to give to children; they like it.

A Dangerous Practice.

BY C. H. WETHERBE.

A large number of people are noted for their "taking chances." They are very venturesome people. They possess a great deal of a certain type of courage, even boldness. This disposition manifests itself in various ways, and in regard to many things we speak of them as those who run dangerous risks. Men who have a business turn of mind will frequently take bold chances in some sort of financial speculation. They act upon the old proverb, "Nothing ventured, nothing won," and many of these men are apt to lose more than they gain. Then think of the thousands of people who take chances in the matter of traveling. We see it in many of the fatal accidents which occur everywhere. It is a common thing for people in wagons to attempt to cross a railroad track while a train is approaching. They take the chance of crossing the track without harm to themselves, but are either killed or seriously injured. Think, too, of the many fatal automobile accidents as the results of taking senseless risks. Many of the deaths which are attributed to "divine Providence" are nothing less than the results of human folly in the form of needless risks. But the greatest of follies is that of one's taking his chance of getting saved in the hour of death without any true preparation for that hour and for eternity. Many an unsaved person has said that if a certain professing Christian will go to heaven when he dies, he himself will take a chance of going there just as he is. He says that his chance is as good as that of any one. But such a person should know that no one ever went to heaven by chance. A sinner has many chances in this world to accept salvation through faith in Christ. If he will not avail himself of such a chance, he will die unsaved and be eternally lost. Get saved now.

Little Sins.

Some years ago in an exhibition in London, England, could be seen a cable worm, a tiny creature that had pierced through the Atlantic telegraph cable and stopped all communications between two continents. So a small, hidden sin or evil habit may stop our prayers, that bond of unison which, like a telegraph cable, connects earth with heaven and God's children with their eternal Father.—Selected.

Faith Without Works.

BY W. W. FREEMAN.

(Written especially for the "Faith and Works" Number.)

What sympathetic heart or what unfortunate one of earth has not often recalled James' statement that "faith without works is dead?" The man with practical common sense is impressed with this truth. With Jesus it was not "saying" or professing that counted, but it was being and consequent doing. (Matt. 7: 21.) So do Peter and Paul agree in the Spirit that men purify their souls "through obeying the truth" (1 Pet. 1: 22), in obeying from the heart "the form of teaching" (Rom. 6: 17) as they "gladly receive" the words of the Spirit (Acts 2: 4, 41, 47). Thus being "born again" (John 3: 5) "of incorruptible seed, by the word of God" (1 Pet. 1: 23), men come "into the kingdom" (Col. 1: 13) or family (Gal. 3: 26, 27) of God, and have "fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life" (Rom. 6: 22), so escaping "everlasting punishment" with "all who know not God and obey not the gospel" (2 Thess. 1: 8).

Emphasis of these truths will be made by others, and it falls to me to speak somewhat of "Faith Without Works"—faith by itself, or, at least, apart from works. Some effort is to be made in a comparison of values. In such efforts we should not allow any one of many plain statements to be annulled. Much futile and harmful controversy would be eliminated if those differing could make the same use of the terms in touching the several phases of a proposition. Our effort should ever be for truth and for peace, not for victory or for defense of one's old position. Men must differ, but brethren will agree—even to differ. In Scripture usage the terms "faith" and "works" vary in content with different connections and with different writers. "Little faith" (the degree some of us have), "great faith" (seems to have passed away with the "age of miracles," sorry to say), and "dead faith" (the sort held by many who put much stress on baptism, strange (?) to say) are mentioned in the New Testament. We also read of "the faith," "the common faith," and "one faith." These evidently refer to the same thing—that is, the faith in Jesus Christ. (Rom. 10: 6-17.)

The term "faith" may include the process of becoming a Christian and even the entire Christian life. Paul says "faith is come" (Gal. 3: 25)—the reign of "grace and truth" (John 1: 17); "examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith" (2 Cor. 13: 5); also, "the household of faith" (Gal. 6: 19). Jude admonishes to "contend

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Take Salts at first sign of bladder irritation or backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out. They weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog, and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness, and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts, or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." "Faith alone," "without works," as "faith" is here used, will save, but this use is far different from another.

The restricted sense is seen in James 2: 19; John 12: 43; Mark 16: 16; and in passages in which the term is exclusive rather than inclusive of other conditions of forgiveness. One's decision as to the use would depend on whether one holds other stipulations as implied in the term "faith," or "believe," or as impliedly reserved to be presented later in due order. That faith by itself in this exclusive sense does not save, we may be sure; "that there is one God," demons "believe, and shudder." Such faith in Christ is no better. A much-quoted passage (John 3: 36) says: "He that believeth on [Greek, eis] the Son hath everlasting life." This passage is very strong and pointed, but is nothing implied? Is this "faith without works?" Here and in other places is simply a brief, direct statement that distinguishes between those who believe and those who disbelieve. The complement of this quotation is, "He that believeth not on the Son [A. S. V., "obeyeth not the Son"] shall not see life." Here, as in other places, "obedience of faith" is taken as a matter of course. Those people in John 12: 43 "believed on [Greek, eis] him;" but will any one dare say they were saved and could never be lost? They would not confess him, "for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God." This faith was the "one faith," was of the right sort, was well founded, but it did not find the divine expression required. It was all right in itself, but it was not inclusive of items implied in many passages as necessarily and naturally consequent of faith. (John 3: 16; Acts 16: 31.) If faith in Christ were by itself sufficient, these were saved. But these were not saved; therefore faith by itself does not save an alien sinner. If faith in this exclusive sense save, and save forever, then none but unbelievers can be lost.

That faith saves, we agree—that is, none can be saved without it. (Mark 16: 16.) Men talk of "intellectual faith," and often the question is begged in talking of "saving" faith. All faith is "intellectual;" its being of the saving" or not depends on the person in whom it is centered, whether in Jesus or another. (Acts 4: 11.) If it is in Jesus, it is the "saving" sort; but, as we have seen, even this may fail to save. Perhaps conviction of sin or love for the Lord is lacking. The "faith" that is made exclusive of these cannot save, however large a degree of it one may have. Simple mechanical solution of the gospel plan of salvation can only aggravate the woeful condition of the disobedient, so also must disobedient recognition of Jesus as the Christ. "Obedience of faith" follows in a state of repentance as certainly as form follows substance; one cannot be shown without the other. "If a man say he hath faith, but have not works, can that faith save him?"

We may predicate salvation of faith itself, but not of faith by itself (in the restricted sense). It comes first, is the basis, the "substance," and is reckoned of God for righteousness, especially when the assurance is beyond the span of human understanding. A man is justified in believing—that is, it is counted to him as right for him to believe. "By works also

A Woman's Problem

How to Feel Well During Middle Life Told by Three Women Who Learned from Experience.

The Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Read these letters:—

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I started the Change of Life five years ago. I always had a headache and backache with bearing down pains and I would have heat flashes very bad at times with dizzy spells and nervous feelings. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new person and am in better health and no more troubled with the aches and pains I had before I took your wonderful remedy. I recommend it to my friends for I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. MARGARET GRASSMAN, 759 N. Ringgold St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Beverly, Mass.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for nervousness and dyspepsia, when I was going through the Change of Life. I found it very helpful and I have always spoken of it to other women who suffer as I did and have had them try it and they also have received good results from it."—Mrs. GEORGE A. DUNBAR, 17 Roundy St., Beverly, Mass.

Erie, Pa.—"I was in poor health when the Change of Life started with me and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or I think I should not have got over it as easy as I did. Even now if I do not feel good I take the Compound and it restores me in a short time. I will praise your remedies to every woman for it may help them as it has me."—Mrs. E. KISSLING, 931 East 24th St., Erie, Pa.

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Such letters are received and answered by women only and held in strict confidence.

is a man justified"—that is, it is right for man to do what God tells him to do. The latter is to count for no less than the former, for both are from the heart, and the latter is even more expressive; but neither has intrinsic value or merits divine recognition. Some who would justly condemn me, if in my teaching I attached saving efficacy to baptism, fail to see their own error in making the same claim for faith. This "faith" that people are so wont to speak of as opposed to the term "works" is, in truth, a work itself, "the work of God." (John 6: 29.) If one be unable to allow "works" without insisting on "merit" and other objectionable features,

KIDNEY MEDICINE DISSOLVES GRAVEL STONES.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root sells well with us because it invariably produces good results in kidney, liver, and bladder troubles. We sold a dollar bottle to one of the inmates of our Soldiers' Home near here, and after using it he brought in about one dozen gravel stones, some as large as a pea, which he had passed. He states that he obtained wonderful relief from the use of Swamp-Root. ERNEST A. BROWN, Lafayette, Ind.

Personally appeared before me, this 28th day of July, 1909, Ernest A. Brown, of the Brown Drug Company, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

Prove What Swamp-Root Will Do for You

Send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample-size bottle. It will convince any one. You will also receive a booklet of valuable information telling about the kidneys and bladder. When writing, be sure and mention the Gospel Advocate. TO DARKEN HAIR

APPLY SAGE TEA.

Look young. Bring back its natural color, gloss, and thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked, and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray, or dry, scraggly, and thin. Mixing the sage tea and sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about fifty cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is so sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft, and luxuriant.

he must also eliminate faith, for "with the heart man believes." (Rom. 10: 10.) Thus is one driven from "faith alone" to grace alone, and this position means Universalism, for Paul says: "The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men." (Tit. 2: 11.) But another passage says, "By grace are ye saved through faith;" and we shall hold on to faith even though it is something that an unbeliever does.

Over-emphasis on faith has perhaps arisen from that common drift of infidelity among us which allows that God works in things we cannot see and understand (?), but would exclude him from more manifest operations. Right here is a great trouble. That faith is of God, no one will deny (Rom. 10: 17; John 17: 20); but what is by vote counted by men as "saving faith" is often nothing more than that one believes that he does "believe," believes that he does have "saving faith," is fully persuaded that he is saved. Now this persuasion is not "the faith" of New Testament confessors; they confessed faith in Christ as the Son of God, the Messiah, Savior, Lord. (Rom. 10: 9; John 12: 43; 3: 16; Acts 8: 37.) This imagined "irresistible grace," as a few hold it to be, certainly is not faith in Jesus Christ, though some may have this in addition to their "assurance" that they are saved. If it were faith in Jesus, still were it insufficient until it express itself in the test of baptism.

This act, with faith and repentance, is not to be confounded with acts of the moral order or those of Christian living. It is poor logic that if one can live a perfect life for a minute, he may do so for another, and on for a lifetime. Though the Lord gives help here now (1 Cor. 10: 13), he at the same time provides the Advocate (1 John 2: 1). Here the problem of God's "manifold grace" is involved, let us thank the Lord, and herein will the living faith be "reckoned for righteousness apart from works." (Rom. 4: 5, 6.) One may easily fall short in living and still have living faith in that it is exercised in many instances; here lies clearly "justification by faith," and this only. "Faith working through love" avails (Gal. 5: 6) "under grace" (Rom. 6: 1-4); but not until baptism is one raised to walk the new life in Christ, in the kingdom, the name, the family. This is not "baptismal regeneration," neither is it baby sprinkling or purely a figurative "figure;" it is the "bath of regeneration" following naturally, scripturally, and necessarily in the spiritual birth of one begotten by faith in Jesus. (John 5: 1.) It is the believer that is "begotten;" for through faith, not otherwise, is one led scrip-turally to accept the Lord's appointments. Nor does this idea that faith, and nothing else, directs, exclude impelling motives. Love divine is the dynamic passion that moves the human engine along the grades discovered by faith. Of neither, alone and inactive, may one assert a good thing, unless it be a forecast on the basis that they are life—which, prospectively, they are. If a corpse lives, then does "faith without works" live also; if a corpse is helpless, so is faith only.

We must insist that the man be converted. One test, and only one, is by divine authority required of one professing faith in Jesus before he may enjoy the fellowship of new creatures in Christ Jesus. Not accidental, but willing submission to this requirement is proof of conversion. Though on the part of the Author this act may be a "symbol" fraught with meaning, on the part of the man it is not necessarily more than an act of humble, loving obedience to Jesus. It is counted a good thing for one to believe on Christ, but this is void, unavailing, if the same man dispenses with the divine ordinance of baptism as nonessential. If it seem unjust that God not save disobedient believers, it is not less strange that he requires faith itself. Should men be saved without baptism or faith, certainly it would ill become any to object; but I shall choose the safe side and not make void a commandment of the Lord and demand an extension of his grace. Though God grants salvation to "whoever will," one may not expect it on one's own terms. After all we may do, salvation is a gracious gift of God, and the most pious of earth recognize God's grace as the ultimate basis for salvation. Though, however, this is involved, we dare not discount obedience. As in the face of the doctrine of necessity one holds to "freedom of the will," and so preserves individuality, responsibility, and morality (as opposed to "determination"), so must ministers of the gospel of the grace of God ask an expression of the faith that it may be "reckoned for righteousness."

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles as the prescription ointment—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of ointment—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength ointment as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

BY F. E. SRYGLEY.

I left Memphis on Friday morning, February 12, and arrived at Gadsden in time to preach at 10:30 A.M. A nice audience was out at meeting, though it was a week-day appointment. Many of them came several miles. If they attend the day meetings so well at their protracted meetings, it would no doubt be a pleasure to hold a meeting for them. I learned that Brother A. G. Freed preaches for them one Sunday in the month, and, of course, he is held in high esteem by all the faithful. I had never stopped at Gadsden before, but one of my friends and a schoolmate at Mars' Hill lived and died here. Theodore Humphreys was not a stout boy physically, but a truer friend never lived. He was one of the very best boys at Mars' Hill in 1880, my first year there. He married Sister Rebekah Wade, who also had been a student at Mars' Hill when it was a mixed school. Rebekah died several years ago and Brother Humphreys married again. I met three of his children and two brothers, but Theo. has gone to the glory land. He stood firm in the faith to the end. At Mars' Hill we were not laught especially against these modern innovations, for they had not then arisen among us; but I am firm in the conviction that a smaller per cent of the preachers trained at Mars' Hill went off after these innovations than any other school in the country, chiefly, as I believe, because Brother Larimore taught them a respect for the Word, which has been their anchor. A few left us though, for which we are all sorry. As I thought of Brother Humphreys and other friends of my school-boy days, I wondered what became of Brother Chisholm, who was Theo.'s roommate. I saw him, I believe, the last time in Fort Smith, Ark. I wonder if he still lives in the hope of a bright hereafter.

I left Gadsden immediately after preaching on Friday morning and went to Cross Roads, only three miles from Alamo, and preached that night and on Saturday morning. There are many faithful ones about Cross Roads, and I will not soon forget their kindness.

The second Sunday in February I spent at Dresden, preaching morning and evening. The drop in temperature cut our audience down at Dresden, but the faithful few were out. The congregation is not a large one, but they are faithful. What few members we have attend well, and they are of the best citizens of the town. The truth will succeed here. This is now the home of Brother Etheridge, who is a faithful preacher of the gospel. He was not at home Sunday, but I was with him much of the day Monday. He is a good man and deserves his popularity with the faithful.

Monday night, February 14, I spent at Camden. They have a nice house there, but it was built at considerable sacrifice of a few. The membership at Camden, as at Dresden, is small, but they are working in peace. They have only three or four male members, but some of as good women as live. They do not fail to meet and worship God. The Lord bless these faithful men and women.

My trip through West Tennessee, which lasted over three weeks, was, indeed, a pleasant one to me. I will not forget the interest taken in me and my work and the kindness shown me on all the trips. When this appears in the Gospel Advocate, I will be out on my third trip for this year.

Better Than Spanking.

Spanking does not cure children of bed wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 195, South Bend, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child; the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

What They All Say.

A few extracts from letters of club members will give you some idea of the many attractive features of the Gospel Advocate Piano Club and will explain why it is so popular. Here are a few samples taken from the correspondence at random:

I certainly am enjoying my piano. I couldn't have gotten any better piano in Decatur than the one I got from you if I had paid one hundred and fifty dollars more than this one cost me.—Mrs. F. B.

It is a beauty, and we are delighted with it. The tone is perfect. Your club is a grand thing.—Mrs. E. P. M.

I am perfectly delighted with it; and every one that has heard it, or has played on it, says they have never heard a finer-toned one. I can observe such a vast difference between this one and others that are in this community that have been placed by agents. Every one, even those who know nothing about music, can tell the superiority of this piano over others.—Mrs. J. R.

We like it mighty well. The tone is full and clear, and the smooth and glossy finish is certainly superb. We think it much better than we could have done here for the money.—Mr. O. F. P.

The piano has come, and it is everything I could wish it to be. The tone is so soft and mellow it sounds more like a harp. The base notes are remarkably full and round; the case is specially beautiful. I am entirely delighted with it. I never saw a more perfect instrument.—Mrs. W. J. B.

Almost every letter received from club members contains similar expressions of appreciation. The advertising manager of the Gospel Advocate cordially invites you to write for your copy of the club booklet and catalogue, which explain the big saving in price, the convenient terms, the superior quality and durability of the instruments, the protective guarantees and other attractive features of the club. Address the Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Georgia.

Notes from West Tennessee.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

Continuing from last week, I will proceed to give the remainder of Alexander Campbell's answer to what "Campbellism" is. He continues:

One inspired man's name weighs as much as another's when put into the scales of the sanctuary, and where good information and moral character exist it is just as honorable; but no intelligent Christian could be pleased to be named a Paulite, a Cephite, though either of these is a thousand times, ten thousand times more honorable than a Calvinist or Lutheran. But neither Paul nor Peter would own that man as a consistent disciple of Christ who chooses to call himself by Paul, Apollos, or Cephas.

I have always disclaimed everything sectarian; and if the people of different sects slander me or any of those who prefer the Scriptures to any human creed, and the kingdom of Jesus the Messiah to any sect—I say, if they slander us with the names and epithets which we disavow, they must answer to Him who judges righteously.

But for ourselves we protest against the name, the precepts, the feelings of any sect or schism in Christendom.

Though some persons use such names without the intention of slander or reproach and are not conscious of doing wrong, they ought to remember that in this way all sectarian names began to be approved.

The time was that the terms "Lutheran" and "Calvinist" were a reproach. When these men died, they became honorable, and are now gloried in.

This was effected by the admirers of these men, first, for the sake of distinction and to avoid circumlocution, and then with acquiescence, adopting the designation which their opposers gave them.

We wish all the friends of the ancient gospel and the ancient order of things to remember that our motto is, and we hope ever will be, to call no man Master or Father in things pertaining to the kingdom of our Lord. (Christian Baptist, pages 451, 452.)

"So they let his bones alone, with the bones of the prophet that came out of Samaria." But the bones of Alexander Campbell are not "let alone," are not permitted to rest in quietude; but slander, reproach, and misrepresentations are continually cast upon that respectable class of men and women who claim to be Christians only and nothing more. If Alexander Campbell preached the word of God, certainly that did not make Campbellites. The word of God only makes Christians only—"only this and nothing more."

If a person is a Christian and something else, whatever the "something else" may be, it required something besides the word of God to make them that "something else." This "something else" besides being a Christian is causing all the trouble among religious people. "For whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

brother, and sister, and mother." (Mark 3: 35.) If it is the will of God for one to be a Baptist, Campbellite, Methodist, or Presbyterian, he failed to say so; and as "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God," certainly no one "by faith" can be a Baptist, Campbellite, Methodist, or Presbyterian. "Without faith it is impossible to please him." Then let us walk by faith.

Don't Use Soap

on your hair. It is too strongly alkaline and will do a great deal of damage. The hair should be of a soft and silken texture. Each individual hair is of delicate construction and requires scientific, careful treatment. If your hair is harsh, dry, coarse, and scanty, then you are not giving it proper treatment. The hair needs food just as the rest of your body; and in order to keep your scalp nourished and your hair plentiful and beautiful, you should supply it with the proper food and treatment. The Creoles, of Louisiana, possessed a formula for keeping the hair beautiful, and for many years kept the secret to themselves; but now you may enjoy their discovery by using "La Creole" Hair Color Restorer, the same recipe which the Creoles used. It darkens hair in the natural way and keeps the scalp in healthy condition. For sale by all reliable dealers. Price, $1. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

MACEDONIAN CALLS

An Appeal for Shreveport, La.

BY H. H. MONTGOMERY.

To the Brethren Everywhere: We are making the biggest effort of our lives to build up the cause of true Christianity in this city of thirty-five thousand people. We could go into a digressive "Christian Church" here of eight hundred members, with a splendid brick building; but about forty of us prefer to carry on the work of the Lord as was done in apostolic times and steer clear of all the modern innovations practiced by said "Christian Church," and we have induced Brother B. U. Baldwin, a young preacher, to travel in Texas and lay our condition before the churches and ask aid to buy a lot and build a house. We have a tent in which we worship each Lord's day and meet for prayer service and Bible study each Wednesday night. We need your help to build, that we may be the better prepared to accommodate the people and get a hearing. Brother Baldwin is a hard worker and fully determined in this work. He has had some encouragement in the way of promises, for which we are very thankful, but we must have more or fail. Ask Brother John E. Dunn and Brother J. L. Stovall who we are.

An Appeal for the Church at Temple, Texas.

BY W. B. NEWBY.

To the Churches of Christ: The church of Christ at Temple, Texas, through its elders, makes this appeal to you. Some two years ago the Baptist denomination in this section of our city built them a new church home at a different location. This left them with their former church property, corner Seventh Street and Avenue G, for sale. Our loyal brethren got busy at once and closed a deal for same. The purchase price was three thousand dollars—one-half cash, the balance in three notes of five hundred dollars each, due one, two, and three years. We succeeded in raising the fifteen hundred dollars cash. We now have a balance of four hundred dollars on a note that is past due, the party holding same having notified us that it must be paid by March 1, 1916. Our little congregation is making a desperate effort to meet this; but we need help, and need it now. If your church is strong financially, will you not come to our aid? We do not ask for donations, unless you wish to make same, but ask that you make us a loan, for which we will execute our note. A number of us are making monthly donations to be set aside to meet these obligations. To illustrate: We have raised during January and February about sixty dollars in addition to our regular weekly offering. By this plan we hope to be able to lift our debt and thus escape the shame and humiliation that it would be ours to suffer if our property should have to be sold to satisfy the claims against it. Will you, as a congregation or as an individual, lend us a helping hand? Address all communications to W. W. Jacobs or W. B. Newby, elders of the church of Christ, Temple, Texas.

Help in Sight.

BY FRED M. LITTLE.

As pure air is to the stifled, so is the good news which Brother W. C. Phillips, who attended the Boaz-Locklear debate at New Decatur, Ala., brings to the ears of the little, struggling congregation at Cleveland. The church at Columbia, Tenn., in response to an appeal by our beloved Brother Boaz, has agreed to send Brother G. C. Brewer to be with us for ten nights, which means to this hungry congregation ten great suppers. It is said that "the darkest hour is just before the dawn." Surely this is true in this instance. We need to have the encouragement which Brother Brewer will be able to give. Besides, we need to have many of our brethren to visit Cleveland and see the situation as it is, and go out to encourage others to become interested in this important

Make Your Back Yard Profitable

THE demand for squabs in the Northern, Eastern and Southern markets has never been supplied because pigeon raising as a business is comparatively new. Buy a half dozen pair of select birds, fence in a small portion of your back yard and watch them go to work. Success is easy. They raise from eight to fifteen pairs of squabs a year. Your squabs and fancy birds will bring handsome returns. You will actually make money in a hitherto useless part of your back yard. Pigeon raising is not a fad or fancy. It is a profitable business. Let us start you right. Our breeders are the best, and raised from prize winning parents. We will furnish you with the birds and teach you how to raise them, and you will reap a handsome profit with a very little outlay. Thousands are taking advantage of this same opportunity. Write to-day for our literature on pigeon raising as a money making proposition, or better still, write us to send you a few pair of Belgian Carneaux at $3.00 per pair, White Swiss Mondaines at $5.00 per pair, White Kings at $3.50 per pair, or White Maltese at $4.00 per pair. Our birds are all guaranteed. Your money back if after two months you are not satisfied with their work. Better prices on larger orders. Write to-day and get the pick of the flock.

Enjoyed the Stay.

BY M. L. MOORE.

On Monday following the first Lord's day in February I went to the Nashville Bible School to continue a meeting which Brother H. Leo Boles had begun on the day before. I was much pleased to see the large attendance and the good deportment of the pupils. There was one confession and baptism before I got there and five others while I was there. I feel that the meeting did much good, as all were drawn closer to our Heavenly Father.

It would be hard to find a more painstaking faculty than works in harmony with President Boles to make this the great school that it is. Brother Boles gives the school his entire time and energy, and the Lord is greatly blessing in that the school is the best in its history. The singing was fine throughout the meeting. The members of this congregation who do not attend the school were attentive and aided much in making the meeting what it was.

My home was in the boys' dormitory, and I desire to thank Sister Lipscomb and the boys for their kind treatment while I was there. It was a blessing indeed to visit Brother and Sister Lipscomb. I went in to see them first, as I felt it would be the very way to begin my part of the work of the meeting to call on them first. I often called to see them while I was there. Sister Lipscomb attended almost all the chapel services, but Brother Lipscomb was not well enough to attend at any service. May the Lord bless them and make the remaining days of their lives the continuation of the blessing they have ever been. I had two pleasant visits to Brother Boles' home. The girls were thoughtful of my comfort and always kind.

When Louise of Prussia Went to Napoleon

One Hundred Years Ago

Louise went to Napoleon on a delicate and humiliating mission.

A clever woman, a beautiful woman, was Louise of Prussia. Had she accomplished her mission that night, the history of Europe would be different today.

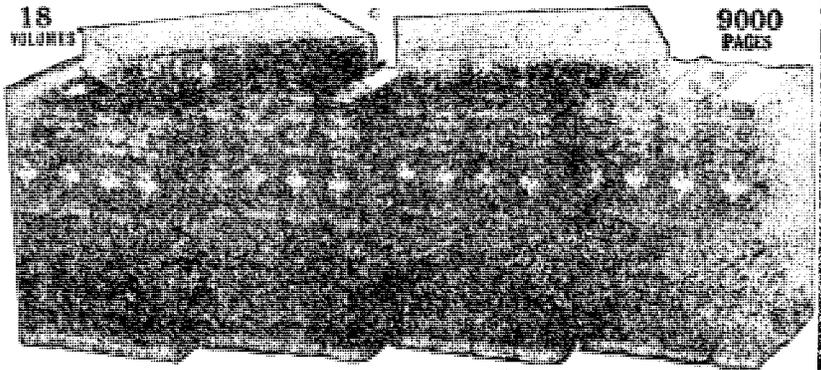

Beneath the surface of the mighty war now going on are the secret, twisted threads of intrigue and passions of a hundred years.

To understand the fearful upheaval in Europe you must know that hidden history frankly told in imperishable form in

Muhlbach's Historical Romances

These wonderful volumes tell the private, personal life and character of great men and women. History is here written in story form. These volumes are beyond question the most fascinating historical romances that have ever been given to the world. They contain a history of the crises in Germany, Austria, Russia, England, Switzerland, Egypt, France, Holland and Prussia during two hundred years of startling events, told in intensely interesting and romantic form. All classes are represented in these volumes as they lived and loved, thought and acted. Thus the human interest always prevails and has given this set of books enduring popularity. These wonderful historic romances are among the books that never die. They are interesting, instructive, reliable, truthful, wholesome and good. In the volume devoted to Napoleon and Blucher practically every historic character that the life of the great emperor touched in any way is here given—all the men and women of his time. The new edition is printed from new plates, upon extra quality of paper from easy-to-read type, are attractively illustrated and bound in Art Buckram Cloth, titles stamped in gold.

The Encyclopedia Britannica says: "Muhlbach's works show a talent for lively description and narration that gives enduring popularity and a power in weaving alluring romances from those stirring times that is unsurpassed."

GOSPEL ADVOCATE

Volume LVIII. No. 10.

NASHVILLE, TENN., MARCH 9, 1916.

$1.50 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

We Propose to Give Our Readers a Fine $2 Self-Filler Fountain Pen—Offer Good for Twenty Days Only.

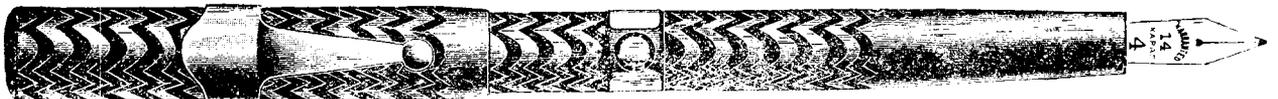

A Personal Note to Our Readers.

You can depend upon it that we would not use the front page for an announcement of this kind were it not an urgent matter in which we desire your quick coöperation. Our fiscal year closes on April 1, and only twenty days remain in which to make collections to cover our obligations. You have doubtless intended all along to help us in the good work being accomplished by the Gospel Advocate, but many have been negligent in carrying out this good intention. We now urge that you let us hear from you without delay. We especially ask that—

- (1) Every subscriber in arrears will send us his renewal.
- (2) Every friend of the paper send us at least one new subscriber before April 1.

To encourage your quick coöperation, we have decided to make one of the most liberal offers we have ever made. The fact that we have on hand about five hundred fine fountain pens from our Christmas stock makes this possible. To old and new subscribers who will send us $2.25 we will send one year's subscription to the Gospel Advocate, one year's subscription to the Bible Study Helper (our new monthly, edited by A. B. Lipscomb), and one of these splendid self-filler pens. When you pause to consider that the regular price of the Advocate is $1.50 and the Bible Study Helper is 60 cents, you will see that you get this pen for nothing.

This Fountain Pen Has the Following Features:

- (1) It is the actual size of the illustration shown above, and is the same size of all $3 and $5 pens.
- (2) It has a guaranteed 14-carat gold point.
- (3) It is a self-filler.
- (4) It has a beautifully chased barrel.
- (5) It has a metal ring that snugly covers the filler vent.
- (6) It has a metal clip that keeps it in your pocket.
- (7) It has a guarantee that you will be pleased, or we will take it back.

Please note that this pen we propose to give you will do all the work of the $3 and $5 pens. It is not sold by the stationers for less than $2.

Remember, this offer holds good only so long as the pens last, and will positively be withdrawn on April 1. Clinch yours by writing to-day. Address all orders to the

"EDIFYING AS THE NEED MAY BE"

BY A. B. LIPSCOMB

The Rose of Jericho.

There is a plant known as the Rose of Jericho which flourishes anywhere and everywhere and under the most adverse conditions for plant life. It grows in the hot desert, in the rocky crevices, by the dusty wayside, in the rubbish heap. Travelers who are naturalists tell us even more: that the fierce sirocco will sometimes tear it from its place and fling it far out upon the ocean, and there, driven by the storms and tossed by the salt waves, it still lives and grows. Does not this plant suggest the abiding and deathless life that we may live in Christ? Impelled by gratitude and reverence, I would unfold this week the beauty of our Rose of Jericho.

"Abide in Me."

When Jesus lived and walked upon the earth, the word he chiefly used when speaking of the relations of the disciples to himself was: "Follow me." A short time before his crucifixion, when he knew he was about to go back to heaven, he gave them a new word in which their more intimate and spiritual union with himself should be expressed. The chosen word was not "Follow me," nor its parallel, "Come unto me," but "Abide in me." I fear that there are many professed followers of Christ from whom the meaning of this word, with the blessed experience it promises, is very much hidden. While trusting in their Savior for pardon and for help and seeking to some extent to obey him, they have hardly realized to what closeness of union, to what intimacy of fellowship, to what wondrous oneness of life and interest, he invited them when he said, "Abide in me." This is not only an unspeakable loss to those Christians themselves, but the church and the world suffer in what they lose.

I do not believe that we preach as often as we should along the line of this text. We have much to say of the atonement and pardon through his blood, we frequently expound the conditions of entrance into Christ, and we sound over and over again the Savior's blessed "Come unto me;" but we do not emphasize the importance of abiding in Christ, the living union with him that he illustrates with the figure of the vine and the branches.

How You Used to Feel and Now.

Many Christians are dissatisfied with their experience because they feel their lack of this union with Christ. Perhaps it is that way with you. You heard his blessed invitation, "Come unto me," and you obeyed it. You doubtless have never repented of having come at his call. You experienced at the time that his word was truth; all his promises he fulfilled; he made you a partaker of the joy of his love; his welcome was hearty; his pardon was full and free; his love was sweet and precious. And you had reason concerning the wealth of his blessing. "The half was not told me."

But now the aspect is not so bright. The blessings you once enjoyed are lost; the love and joy of your first meeting with the Savior, instead of deepening, have become faint and feeble. Perhaps you have wondered what the reason could be, that with such a Savior, so mighty and so anxious to develop and uplift, your experience of salvation should not have been a fuller one. The answer is simple enough. It is suggested by this text. You either did not fully understand or did not rightly remember that Jesus' invitation did not merely mean "come to me," but it meant "come to me to stay with me." That is the full sense of the word "abide" as used in this text. When Jesus entered and was passing through Jericho, a small-statured rich man, named "Zaccheus," climbed a tree in order to get a glimpse of him. And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and said unto him: "Zaccheus, make haste, and come down; for to-day I must abide at thy house." All that "abide" means in that passage was that our Lord intended to spend the day with Zaccheus. But when the host had spoken of the honest purpose of his life to his guest, the Savior honored him by saying: "To-day is salvation come to thy house." That meant that Jesus had come to abide in that house as a permanent guest.

A Meal or Two With Christ.

The trouble with most of us is that our experience with Jesus Christ as a Savior is only a temporary pleasure. In the mountains of Switzerland the wonderful Passion Play is acted every ten years. I am told that the actors in this drama are trained from childhood for their respective parts. Mr. Hale told of an American woman who with her party found rooms in Oberammergau at the home of Lang, who takes the part of Christ in the play and who speaks English well. During a pause at dinner one day this American woman loudly and flippantly said to Lang: "This is the first time I ever had dinner with Christ." Lang looked at her in astonishment, then said very solemnly: "Madam, I hope it will not be the last." Is it not true that many are content to enjoy a spiritual feast or two with Christ, their new-found Savior, and then seek the food that perisheth? But he said: "Abide in me." It was not to refresh you for a few short hours after your conversion with the joy of deliverance from sin and then to send you forth to wander in its sadness again. He has destined you to something better than a short-lived blessedness. He has prepared you for an abiding dwelling with himself, where your whole life may be spent, where the work of your daily life may be done, and where all the while you may be enjoying unbroken communion with him.

When Two Streams Meet.

Last summer while in Michigan I saw two streams flow down their separate courses and then meet in union. One came from the peaty bog and was dark with the color of wine; the other came from a different source and was pure and lucent as a diamond. When the two met, the murky stream began to lose itself in the crystal flow of the other until it was entirely lost in its limpid depths. And so it is in the union of a Christian with Christ. The two lives commune like the meeting of the streams, and the turbid stream, dark with its journeyings through the fields of trespass and sin, flows into the "river of water of life which is clear as crystal" and begins to share the riches of its purity. The holy Savior receives the virus of our guilt; we receive the virtue of his holiness. The loving Savior receives the stains and sometimes the shame of our unloveliness; we receive the unsearchable treasures of his love.

The Completeness of the Union.

In studying this text, I am struck with the completeness of its meaning. Jesus does not merely say, "Abide with me," but he says, "Abide in me." The union he desires is not only unbroken, but it is intimate and complete. In these words he introduces to us an idea of nearness to God that is not conveyed in the Old Testament. It is one of the many passages that reveals the superiority of the new and the better covenant. Enoch walked with God, but it was never said of him that he "walked in God." David, the psalmist, in some of his ecstatic moments, cried, "Lead me to the rock that is higher than I;" and again, "I will abide in thy tabernacle forever," "I will take refuge in the covert of thy wings;" and again: "Thou wilt prolong the king's life; his years shall be as many generations. He shall abide before God forever." That was indeed a precious nearness for the man after God's own heart; but the Christian can say more than this as he draws nearer still: "I abide in Christ, and Christ abides in me." Paul says we are "made nigh by the blood of Christ." "Let us therefore draw near with boldness unto the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy, and find grace to help us in time of need."

"Optic or Auditory—Which?"

The following article, written by Brother J. Lem Keevil, with a prefatory statement by the editor of the Tennessee Christian, appeared in the February issue of that paper. Brother Kurfees reviews it on our editorial pages.

Beginning with this issue, we shall present in the editorial column from the pen of Brother J. Lem Keevil, minister of the Fifth Avenue Christian Church, Knoxville, a number of short articles of a matter of vital importance to our work in Tennessee—of vital importance because the matter about which Brother Keevil will write has been one of the causes of the division of the church of Christ in Tennessee. Let us note carefully the articles as they shall appear. They will be presented in that terse, straightforward, right-to-the-mark way that is characteristic of Brother Keevil. His first article is "Optic or Auditory—Which?" It follows herewith.

OPTIC OR AUDITORY—WHICH?

And the disciple with no ax to grind spake unto the brethren, saying: Two men went up into the house of the Lord to worship him. One had little natural musical talent, but had been long and with care trained in musical notation; the other worshiper had no knowledge of musical notation, but had been by nature richly endowed with a quick ear for music, so that to him to hear music was to know it. As they entered each was handed a hymn book. To the one trained in music the book meant much; to the other, untrained in music, the book meant little. The congregation entered on the worship of the hour, and as they stood a musical instrument softly played the hymn tune announced. To the one with little natural musical talent the instrument meant little, while to the other it meant much. When the congregation sounded out the hymn, each man took up the melody and worshiped God. The worshiper trained in musical notation, but with little natural musical ability, paid but scant attention to the instrument—he fixed his attention on the printed page of the hymn book and entered with joy into the service. The worshiper with no knowledge of musical notation, but with a natural ear for music, paid but little attention to the hymn book—he fixed his attention on the instrument, caught up the melodies there pouring forth, and entered with joy into the worship. The one with the hymn book used his optic nerve, while the other listening to the instrument used his auditory nerve. The heart and the brain of the one used the optic nerve, and flashing the harmonies impressed by the printed page to the vocal cords, the worshiper reproduced those harmonies; while the heart and brain of the other worshiper used the auditory nerve, and flashing the harmonies impressed by the instrument to the vocal cords, the worshiper reproduced those harmonies. The one used the optic nerve and a book of music, while the other used the auditory nerve and an instrument of music. Each used something not definitely mentioned in the New Testament—one a modern book of music, the other a modern instrument of music. Which of these sinned—the one who used the modern book of music, or the other who used a modern instrument of music? Again I say unto you, Which of these sinned—the worshiper who entered into the worship of song by fixing his optic nerve on the printed page of a modern hymn book, or the worshiper who gained the same end by fixing his auditory nerve on a modern instrument of music? Search the Scriptures and find therein where the latest and most modern aids may be brought to the assistance of the optic nerve, while the auditory nerve must be left to struggle along unaided. And the disciple with no ax to grind turned and went into his own house hearing again the words of the Master: "But in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."

Have Miracles Ceased?

BY F. W. SMITH.

The following request, received quite a while ago, became misplaced and has just come to light:

Please write something on Mark 16: 17, 18. Do these verses mean that a Christian may do all these things now? A Holiness preacher said the other day that every Christian can do these things now. I cannot see why they should not be done now, but I do know that I have never seen any of them performed.

Exactly so; and neither has that Holiness (?) preacher nor any other kind of a preacher since New Testament times seen them performed. The way to test that Holiness preacher or any one else that makes such claims to miracle working is to challenge him to perform. Ask him or them to prove the assertion by work. Let him or them perform a miracle or remain very quiet about being able to do so. Offer one of these so-called miracle workers a little genuine poison to drink, and see whether he drinks it or not. To insist that the signs to which reference is made in Mark 16: 17, 18 were to be performed in all ages by all believers is to make infidels, for the world demands proof of all that professed believers claim, and no professed believer can substantiate the claim in this case. The fact is, only a comparatively few believers could perform miracles in the days when miracles were performed for the establishment of Christianity in the earth. "These signs" did follow some believers as confirmation of their message that they were sent of God; but since the revelation is complete and it is declared that the Scriptures completely furnish us unto every good work, what more is needed? (See 2 Tim. 3: 16, 17.) Miraculous demonstration was necessary in the beginning of Christianity, for it, like everything else, began in miracle, but is perpetuated by law—"the law of the Spirit of life." As vegetable seed perpetuates vegetable life, though originating in miracle, likewise the seed of the kingdom, the word of God, perpetuates spiritual life, though the seed began or was confirmed in miracle. The following on the verses in hand from J. W. McGarvey is sufficient:

The promise is not that these signs shall follow for any specified time, nor that they should follow each individual believer, but merely that they shall follow, and follow "the believers" taken as a body. They did follow the believers during the apostolic age—not every individual believer, but all, or nearly all, the organized bodies of the believers. This was a complete fulfillment of what was promised. He who claims that the promise includes more than this presses the words of the promise beyond what is necessary to a full realization of their meaning; and he who affirms that the signs do yet follow the believers should present some ocular demonstration of the fact before he asks the people to believe his assertion. Signs were intended to convince the unbelievers, and they were always wrought openly in the presence of the unbelievers; let us see them, and then we will believe. Paul's expectation was that prophesying, speaking in tongues, and miraculous knowledge would vanish away (1 Cor. 13: 8); and so they did with the death of the last apostles and those to whom they had imparted miraculous gifts.

That class of religious teachers, including the Mormons, who are going about over the country making such pretensions as miracle working are either crazy or are hypocritical deceivers—that is, they deceive many who are not informed in the word of God. There is one way by which they can be effectually stopped—viz., let all among whom they go say: "We are from Missouri; you will have to show us." There is not a sane person on earth who pretends to miracle working but knows he or she is a deceiver. Give all such a wide berth.

Pioneer Work.

BY J. D. FLOYD.

A little thing will often arouse in one's mind memories of the past that were almost forgotten. Last week Brother C. E. W. Dorris came to my house in search of old papers and publications of the brethren. We spent two days in going through those I had packed away. Among the things brought to light was a little out-of-date hymn book. It was one of a dozen I bought when I was a "saddlebags" preacher, to carry with me to my appointments among the hills and hollows of Bedford County and adjoining counties. My mind at once became reminiscent.

To show the young preachers of to-day how much more favorably they are situated and to encourage them to make all circumstances contribute to the work of sowing the good seed of the kingdom, I draw upon my memory for some of my experiences in my early days. In that day automobiles had not been dreamed of, and even buggies were, "like angels' visits," few and far between. For a number of years I went to my appointments astride a bald-faced chestnut-sorrel horse, named "Neighdo," or a small sorrel mule, named "Tom." By the way, though he was so small my feet would almost touch the ground, yet he was the easiest-riding animal I ever rode. As my work for several years was at schoolhouses, in groves, and in private houses, I had to equip myself accordingly. I paid ten dollars for a capacious pair of saddlebags. Into these, if it was a Sunday and Sunday-night appointment, were placed a Bible, the dozen hymn books, and a few "Star" candles; if for a longer time, a shirt or two were added—yes, they were shirts then, but "linen" now. If the meeting was in a schoolhouse, seats were arranged as best they could, song books distributed, when I led in singing such songs as "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" "O Thou Fount of Every Blessing," "Since I Can Read My Title Clear," etc. This was followed by reading and prayer, then a sermon on "A Proper Division of the Word," "Power in God's Word," "What Must I Do to Be Saved?" "Conversion," "The Divine and Human Part in Salvation," or some other scriptural theme. If the appointment was at night, some kind of a candle holder was improvised, the candles were taken out of the saddlebags, and the house lighted. While engaged in this work, meetings were held in all sorts of places. I held a meeting of a few days one time, preaching in a schoolhouse at night and on a bridge over a beautiful stream in the day. One time I went to an abandoned schoolhouse without floor or seats, and we had to cut away the bushes and briars to reach the door. One time, equipped as I have described, I preached seven nights at a schoolhouse seven miles from home. After preaching I would ride home across the ridges, get what sleep I could, arise early in the morning and plow in wheat until near night, then dress, and on a fresh horse make my way to the meeting place. In this meeting I baptized seven and laid the foundation for a church. Was all this labor in vain? While not many additions were made, many people were taught the truth and the foundation of a number of churches laid. While all this was many, many years ago, few meetings are held in which there are additions to the church, but what some of these are descended from those who were brought to a knowledge of the Lord in these unpretentious meetings. My later work as a preacher has been under more favorable auspices, but I am not sure but there is more fruit for the Master from this pioneer work.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

I spent the third Sunday in February at Fayetteville. It had been a quarter of a century since I had preached at Fayetteville, and, like everything else, the town and its people had changed very much. Some of the old guard are still there. Brother T. C. Little is still active in the Lord's work. He was out on Sunday morning at some near-by congregation declaring the gospel. He has been a very useful man in these parts, and has in him the promise of many more years of faithful service. His age and experience have thoroughly seasoned him for the trials and conflicts of life. I have no doubt he is a better preacher than he ever was, and he was a good one in his younger days. At his age men do not fly off at a tangent, and they rarely ever go into speculations and untaught questions. "Old men for counsel and young men for war." Brother C. E. Wooldridge also lives at Fayetteville and preaches there and in the country near. I preached twice at Fayetteville—morning and evening; and in the afternoon I preached at Milina, about seven miles away. Brother Wooldridge says they know how to get work out of a man. Brother Wooldridge is the right man in the right place. It was certainly a great pleasure to be with these good people again.

I preached on Monday night at Huntland to a good audience. Several from old Salem were out at the meeting. Our good brother, Gaston Collins, now lives in Huntland. He is developing into a good preacher of the gospel and is held in high esteem by the brethren. Brother Collins was reared near Huntland, and the friends he has there now were the friends of his childhood. They know him, and to know him is to love him. From all appearances he has a long life before him, and we are all sure it will be a useful life.

Tuesday night I spent at Winchester, in the home of Dr. Grisard. We had a nice meeting at the meetinghouse on Tuesday night. It had been several years since I had preached at Winchester. This is the home of our brother, E. L. Cambron, who preaches here a part of his time and is deservedly held in high esteem by the church and the community. They have for years been doing a fine work at Winchester by supporting a man in the field. They do not expect the preacher to make all the sacrifice to preach the gospel in the hard places over their county, but the whole church at Winchester takes off the preacher some of the burdens by assisting in the support of his family while he does the preaching. This is right. I believe this disposition in our churches all over the country is growing.

I spent Wednesday night at Estill Springs. There are only a few members there, but they are not afraid of the work. A few years ago they lost their house by fire, but they were not discouraged, but went right to work and built it back. They now have a nice house and as faithful a little band as can be found anywhere. They had the meeting well advertised and a good audience was out at meeting that night. It is a pleasure to meet with and encourage such faithful people.

When I got down to Tullahoma on Thursday evening, I learned that I had no appointment there, and so I got a train out and went back to Nashville and spent the night at home.

This was a very short trip, but quite a profitable one in many ways. I meet with many things to rejoice over, but amid all our joys we must meet with sorrows. The thorns are among the roses. Life has its burdens and sorrows, and they seem to be about equally divided. May the Father of light and love keep us and comfort us in our sorrows.

Read carefully our offer on the first page of this issue.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Compiled by A. B. Lipscomb

C. M. Pullias is in a meeting at Murray, Ky. This is his first meeting during 1916.

Brother Sewell has so fully recovered his health that he was able to preach last Sunday at the Nashville Bible School.

The church at Campbell, Mo., will support one native worker in India. Other congregations should follow this good example.

J. D. Northcut, of Tracy City, Tenn., will begin a meeting with the South College Street Church, this city, on Sunday, March 19.

From J. D. Northcut, at Tracy City, Tenn.: "I regard the Gospel Advocate as the greatest factor in the promulgation of the principles of the church in the Southern States. It is better than ever in its history."

From C. E. Holt, at Montgomery, Ala.: "Our work in Montgomery is growing. We began the new year with fine prospects. This is our fifth year in Montgomery, and we earnestly pray that it shall be the best."

W. T. Boaz writes: "In my report for the Tennessee Orphans' Home for last quarter in 1915, I failed to report a donation of $9.65, sent by friends at Magnolia, Ark., through Brother T. E. Tatum. I regret the oversight."

George W. Farmer, the hard-working evangelist, who lives at Lebanon, Tenn., reports a new congregation of twenty-five members set in order at Rockwood, in Roane County, Tenn. A fuller report of this work will appear under another caption.

We extend a message of loving sympathy to T. Q. Martin, of Winchester, Ky., whose dear mother passed to the beautiful beyond on March 1. We shall count on some friend to send us a more extensive notice. Her most precious legacy is the memory of a long and useful life.

A. H. Lannon, of Elizabethtown, Ill., desires to hold some meetings in Tennessee during July, August, and September. He also writes: "As I intend to leave this part of the Master's vineyard next fall, I am ready to correspond with brethren with reference to a new location." Address Brother Lannon at Elizabethtown, Ill.

From C. Maynard, 315 Irving Street, Muskogee, Okla.: "Please say through the Gospel Advocate that the church of Christ in Muskogee meets each Sunday at 315 Irving Street, and all members passing through or stopping over in the city are cordially invited to meet with us. Church just started a few months ago, but our progress has been very encouraging."

From L. S. White, Dallas, Texas: "The work at Pearl and Bryan Streets Church, this city, is doing well. We are having the largest audiences we have had for a long time. There were five additions to the congregation last Sunday and two the Sunday before. Our protracted meeting will begin the first Sunday in April. W. M. Davis, of Fort Worth, will do the preaching. We are expecting a fine meeting."

Mrs. Lou E. Hoskins writes from Crofton, Ky.: "I thoroughly enjoy every number of the Gospel Advocate, but the special numbers are excellent. I am glad you have Brother Larimore on the staff. He is a grand, good man. May God bless all of the force, and especially Brother Larimore. I hope he will soon be able to write and preach, too. Please send the February number of The Bible Study Helper."

From G. Dallas Smith, Murfreesboro, Tenn.: "As a result of an effort to enroll two hundred and fifty students in our Sunday school on the first Sunday in March, we enrolled three hundred and twenty-two, going far beyond the mark we had set. About one hundred and twenty-five of these came from the three colleges located here—Soule College, Tennessee College, and the Middle Tennessee State Normal. This is by far the biggest Sunday school we have ever had."

A very encouraging report comes from Jewell Matthews, San Angelo, Texas: "The church here is in splendid condition. Peace and harmony prevail. The church is helping the helpless and needy in the city, preaching the gospel in the surrounding country, and having fellowship with the Japan work. We have an enrollment of one hundred and ninety-eight in our Bible school. It is grand to see the little children assemble on each Lord's day to learn more about the blessed Jesus. I preach a special sermon to the children each month."

From O. L. Hardin, Battlefield, Mo.: "The meeting in Southwest Springfield, on the corner of Phillips and Evans Streets, began on February 6 and continued to February 23. Visible results were nine baptisms and about thirty by membership; also the congregation set in order, with elders and deacons, with about one hundred members; also four large classes in the Bible study with teachers over same. We have a good, comfortable building, and the future looks bright indeed for great work in Springfield for the Master. You will always find a hearty welcome with these good brethren. Visit them when in the city."

If you need a good tract on the instrumental-music question, you will be interested in the following announcement: "I want to put about four hundred copies of my review of W. C. Wright's music tract in the hands of readers and workers in the next sixty days. During that time I will send one copy for fifteen cents, two for twenty-five cents, or one dozen for one dollar and forty cents. The advocates of instrumental music in the worship are working to spread their tracts on the subject. We should counteract the error by using the truth. Address all orders to A. O. Colley, 1908 May Street, Fort Worth, Texas."

From Charles L. Talley, 1104 Highland Avenue, Montgomery, Ala.: "Our work here at Highland Park is doing fine. We are having the best attendance that we have ever had in the five years of existence. The suggestion has been made by several that our house that was only remodeled last spring is to be enlarged. I am planning for a meeting with home forces for the month of April. I have one of the best-attended prayer meetings in the city. I will be in a position to hold two meetings this summer. Can hold same in July or August. Would like for them to be for not less than two weeks each. Could go almost anywhere. So if any congregation wishes a preacher that is content to preach the word unmixed with traditions, speculations, and fads, they can write to me at the above address."

W. T. Goalen, of Dothan, Ala., who has been visiting some of the churches in an effort to secure funds for mission work in Southeastern Alabama, has been successful. He writes from Paducah, Ky.: "Please report through the Gospel Advocate that the following donations were received for the seating of the tent so kindly donated to me by the Twelfth Avenue congregation, in Nashville, Tenn., for the work in Southeast Alabama: Manchester, Tenn., $3; New Decatur, Ala., $8; Elkmont, Ala., $6; Columbia, Tenn., $9.66; Fayetteville, Tenn., $13; Lewisburg, Tenn., $16; Petersburg, Tenn., $8.10; Lawrenceburg, Tenn., $7; Sheffield, Ala., $7.95; Iuka, Miss., $5; Corinth, Miss., 50 cents; Henderson, Tenn., $4.50; Jackson, Tenn., $7.10; Trenton, Tenn., $7.50; Obion, Tenn., $7. Total, $100.31.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

The Church of Christ—Lesson VIII.

5. Conditions of Entrance Specifically Studied.

(2) Repentance. No command, doubtless, is so difficult to get man to obey as that of repentance. It has to do with the stubborn will, and to change this will is the most difficult thing we have to do in leading man to salvation. It is not hard to lead a man to believe; the fact is, it is hard for men to keep from believing. There are but few, if any, infidels whose minds are perfectly satisfied with their position that Christ is not the Son of God. Neither is it hard to induce a penitent believer to be baptized and to get him to see what baptism is; the fact is, he is hungry to be baptized or do anything else God commands. If there is in his heart a disposition to call in question the importance of baptism, it is a clear indication that repentance is what the man needs, and not baptism. The penitent believer will unhesitatingly do anything he is shown to be the will of God. Too, it is not hard to show him. Please to note, carefully, the following thoughts on this subject:

(a) The necessity of repentance. Repent or you will perish is the way Christ puts it in Luke 13: 3-5. To be prepared for the judgment, "all men everywhere" are commanded to repent, says Paul in Acts 17: 30, 31. Time would fail us to turn now to every place in the Bible where the necessity of repentance is pressed upon us.

(b) How is repentance brought about? It is so hard to get men to repent that some have thought that man cannot unless God, in some miraculous way, gives him repentance. God certainly gives repentance, for the Bible so affirms (see Acts 11: 18); yet repentance is something man does, as seen from references under (a) above. God gives repentance through means just as he gives us food. Food is a gift of God, and we are taught to pray: "Give us this day our daily bread." Yet we expect this to be done only through the means God has ordained—viz., rain, sunshine, soil, and man's work or appropriating these means to the end intended.

God's means to produce repentance is preaching the gospel, God's power to save. (See 1 Cor. 1: 18-24; Rom. 1: 16.) In the gospel God is revealed as a God of goodness and a God of severity; a God of goodness to those who will obey him, but a God of severity to those who will not obey. (See Rom. 11: 22; 2 Cor. 5: 10, 11, 14; Heb. 10: 28-31; Rom. 2: 4; 2 Pet. 3: 7-11; Rev. 20: 10; 21: 7, 8; Ex. 34: 6, 7.) You misrepresent God when you present him only as a God of goodness; for he is as much a God of terror and vengeance on the evildoer. The gospel, when so preached, is God's power unto salvation; through it repentance is produced. But too often, I am sorry to say, what the gospel says about God's punishment of the wicked is handled as a joke. Do not forget, dear student, that "it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God" as a rebel to his government! He will by no means allow the guilty to go unpunished. "Behold then the goodness and severity of God" (Rom. 11: 22)—not just his goodness, but behold his severity as well; for he is a God of truth, and will as certainly do what he says about punishing the wicked as he will in blessing those who obey him. May the Lord help us to so see him and preach him to the people, that they may repent before it is forever too late.

(c) The relation of repentance to sorrow. Sorrow is not repentance, but comes before repentance and produces it. (See 2 Cor. 7: 8-10.)

(d) Its relation to a reformation of life. A reformation of life is not repentance, for it comes after repentance and is the fruit of it. (See Luke 3: 7-14.)

(e) What is it, then? It is simply a change of the stubborn will from "I will not obey" to "I will obey." See how clearly this is brought out in Matt. 21: 28, 29. Godly sorrow produces this change of will, and a change in life follows this change.

(f) We are sometimes asked: "How sorry must a sinner become before he repents?" He must become sufficiently sorry that he will change his mind in reference to his sins by turning his back on them and being willing to do anything God says for him to do. It is hardly probable that a man will be too sorry for his sins; the great difficulty is in getting him to see his meanness to that degree that he will sorrow unto repentance. There is one intimation in the Bible of a man's being "swallowed up with his overmuch sorrow." (2 Cor. 2: 6-8.) May the Lord help us to see our sins that we will sorrow unto repentance, and to so show others their sins that they will do the same. This is the crying need of to-day.

The Hayes-Davis Debate.

This debate took place at Hazlehurst, Ga., beginning on February 14 and continuing four days, with two sessions a day of two hours each. Both speakers affirmed their respective positions on how we are saved and apostasy. It was my pleasure to moderate the first two days, being assisted by Elder Hendrix, of the Baptist persuasion. Brother G. E. Claus, of Valdosta, was with us and took my place the last two days, relieving me so that I could make a needed visit to Macon.

As a rule, in reporting debates, "our man" comes off with a great victory. In this discussion, I have no hesitancy in saying that Brother Hayes did his work well. He is consecrated to the cause of truth, has studied hard and thus become familiar with the truth, and presses it with great zeal and earnestness upon his hearers. I am glad that this neglected State has been favored with this discussion, and hope more such discussions we may have.

The debate was kept on a high plane from beginning to end. No demonstration was allowed from the audience. The auditors listened with much interest. Mr. Hendrix was a most agreeable man to work with as moderator. He showed absolute impartiality to the speakers and did as much as any of us in keeping the discussion on a high plane. But the speakers required but little effort on our part to do this; they both believed the things for which they were contending and earnestly presented them. Brother Claus sends this brief comment on the last two days: "I reached home Friday morning from Hazlehurst. The remaining days of the debate were better, if possible, than the first two. Both speakers conducted themselves well. Brother Hayes was strong on the last day. His voice began to give way, but his argument was invincible. Davis never did attempt to tell about the rulers in John 12: 42. Hayes pressed him in every speech until it almost got to be a joke. Even his own people were able to see the impossibility of his answering. His moderator acted the gentleman all the way through. In making your report of the debate, I think it worthy of comment to note that neither Davis nor his people once said 'Campbellite.' I did not hear the word during the debate. My impression is that great good will come of this discussion if it is followed by a good meeting."

Let me say again to our readers that it is Brother Hayes' desire to remain in this neglected field for a few months. He is following the debate with a series of sermons, and his last report is encouraging. From Hazlehurst he runs over into Alabama for a short meeting, and will return to this State about the fourth Sunday in March. Who will help us in supporting him for two other mission meetings? If you wish to send your donations to him directly (and this is best), address John Hayes, Newton, Ala., Route No. 2, care of E. M. King, till March 18.

Wanted.

Ida Q. Moulton says, in the February issue of Record of Christian Work:

If the saloons in a certain town in the South should all agree to advertise facts, this is what they would say:

Wanted—

One hundred boys for new customers. Most of our old customers are rapidly dropping out.

Ten committed suicide last week.

Twenty are in jail; eight are in the chaingang.

Fifteen were sent to the poorhouse; one was hanged.

Three were sent to the insane asylum.

Most of the balance are not worth fooling with—they have no money.

We must have new customers—fresh, young blood.

Or we will have to shut up shop.

Doesn't make any difference whose boys you are—we need you. You will be welcome.

The Moon Eclipsed.

Do you call to mind the fable, how once, during an eclipse, the moon complained to the sun, saying: "Why do you not shine upon me as you used to?" The sun replied: "I am still shining. Do you not enjoy my light?" "O, I see," said the moon; "the earth has got between us." No matter how large a man is, when he gets to know more than the Bible, he soon shrinks up to nothingness. The truly great man is the man who knows, believes, and obeys the truth. A small man with the Bible in his heart and life is great; a great man with the Bible out of his heart and life is little. Don't allow the world to come between you and Christ, if you would be his faithful servant.

Christian Influence.

Christ says: "Even so let your light shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven." (Matt. 5: 16.) The world is quick to detect the failures that are apparent in the lives of Christians. In a certain New England town there lived a rich and prominent deacon who was known to be hard at a bargain, close-fisted, forcing wages down and prices up. As he passed a crowd of men one day, one said: "There goes the founder of the Atheists' Club." The life of such a man makes it hard for some people to believe the Bible. They hold the Bible responsible for the vicious conduct of hypocrites. Hypocrites seek to establish themselves with the people at the expense of the Bible. The truth, however, will outlive all its enemies. Christians should be as "wise as serpents and as harmless as doves." The Spirit admonishes through Paul: "Do all things without murmurings and questionings; that ye may become blameless and harmless, children of God without blemish in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom ye are seen as lights in the world." (Phil. 2: 14, 15.) If we trust him and follow him, the Spirit assures us of Christ: "Who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye be unreprouvable in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. 1: 8.) It is comforting in the conflicts of life to know that his grace is sufficient for us and that he will not allow any temptation to come upon us which we are not able to bear.

"Circumstances Alter Cases."

That is a very old proverb, but very many persons never seem to realize the truth of it, except when they want to act upon it themselves. Very generally people think they have a right to tie others down to the letter of agreements, or rules, or utterances, after the conditions under which these were made have passed away and other conditions have supervened to which they were never intended to apply. But if such persons find themselves unable to carry out an agreement or to comply with rules because of changes in conditions which were not contemplated at the time the rule or agreement was made, they are likely to see reason enough for claiming that the rule is obsolete.

A case in point: Our contract with paper makers calls for white paper, but it is not now possible to get enough of the chemicals needed for bleaching to produce white paper in great quantities. Clearly it would be absurd to claim that the paper makers must fulfill their contract literally whether they can get chemicals or not.

Another case: The submarine and the aéroplane and the sixteen-inch gun have changed completely the conditions of war, and the changed conditions necessitate changes in the rules of war. Just what changes will have to be made is another question. That will have to be decided when this war is over, and the warring nations will have to be allowed the benefit of such changes as are then found to be reasonable.—New York Weekly Witness.

Paper has advanced from twenty to thirty per cent. Bibles have advanced. Ink has advanced, and almost everything used in the printing business has advanced. I quote from a letter just received from one of the largest, best, and most reliable paper makers in the United States:

From the advances that have been made in the prices of all grades of writing papers, you are undoubtedly informed concerning the conditions now affecting the raw-material market, as called to your attention by us in our letter of August 17, 1915, and later in our letters of January 8th and 31st last. These abnormal conditions have gradually become more and more acute by reason of the use of large quantities of rags for munitions and other purposes, sold at exorbitant prices, which heretofore have been available for the making of paper.

The situation has now become so alarming that not only have prices on this stock advanced fifty per cent on some lines to over one hundred per cent on others, but in some instances the stock is not to be obtained at any price.

For months we have absorbed this constantly increasing cost, together with similar advances on supplies, increased labor cost, etc., aside from the small increase in prices recently made on some of our lines, when we stated that "these advances are not commensurate with the increased production cost to-day."

The unprecedented conditions existing to-day, however, compel us now to withdraw quotations on all of our lines, and until conditions warrant our again quoting stable prices we can accept orders only subject to conditions existing when order is received, or when we are able to fill it.

All orders now on our books will be shipped in strict accord with the conditions under which they were accepted, and we believe that it is needless to assure you that any future business intrusted to us under above conditions will be handled in an absolutely fair and conscientious manner and without unjust advantage being taken of an unfortunate situation, which you cannot possibly regret more than we do.

We ask your continued confidence and coöperation, with the assurance from us that no advance in prices will be made that is not in strict accord with good business practice and fully justified by the actual increased cost of production.

I have given this letter to our readers that they may see existing conditions. This is only one out of many of the same kind. So far the wants of the Gospel Advocate have been anticipated and cared for. We are fearful that protection here will soon be cut off. Our readers can greatly aid us now by paying in advance for their papers. If you are in arrears, do not delay to pay up and renew. Do it now. It requires money, and a considerable amount of it, to properly take care of the paper on which the Gospel Advocate is printed. Your promptness will help us to protect the paper by ordering ahead on our paper supply.

Auditory, Optic, and Other Nerves in the Worship of God.

BY M. C. K.

It seems to be a question only of time and circumstances, or of angle of view, as to what particular form the fallacy in the argument for instrumental music in the worship of God will assume. The latest which has come to our notice, and which we are requested to review in the Gospel Advocate, appears in the Tennessee Christian of February, 1916, and will be found on page 235 of our present issue. We ask the reader to give it a careful examination before reading our reply.

We call attention at once to the fatal and fundamental fallacy which runs through the whole article and on which its entire contention depends. It consists in coolly assuming that, as to the music to be made in the worship of God, the matter at issue is nothing more nor less than the matter of using either optic or auditory nerves or both in making that music, and that, since neither one is "definitely mentioned in the New Testament," we have the same right to use the one that we have to use the other. Now, let the reader carefully note that here are two assumptions, neither one of which is true, and yet the validity of the brother's whole argument depends on the assumption that they are both true. Of course, if this observation be correct, his argument falls to the ground. One of the assumptions is that the issue is over using either one or the other of two sets of nerves in the worship of God. This is not true. The issue is over the kind of music to be made in the worship of God, regardless of either nerves or anything else that may or may not be used in making that music. The other assumption is that those opposing instrumental music in the worship of God are inconsistent in the fact that they indorse vocal music which requires the use of the optic nerves in looking at the staff notation in a book, but condemn instrumental music which requires only the use of the auditory nerves in listening to the notes of an instrument. This again is not true. The opponents of instrumental music in divine worship believe it equally proper to use either of these sets of nerves or both as may be possible or necessary to use them, and they heartily agree with Brother Keevil that in both cases "something not definitely mentioned in the New Testament" is used.

What, then, is the trouble? Now, with the faith and courage of true Christians, let us face this question with both candor and fairness. Nothing profitable can possibly be gained by closing our eyes either to facts or to the inevitable conclusion to which the facts lead. Be it observed, then, that on a part of this program as Brother Keevil has arranged it God has distinctly and definitely legislated; while on the other part of it God has not legislated, but has said nothing at all. Hence, on the former, the Gospel Advocate and other opponents of instrumental music in divine worship, unlike Brother Keevil, contend for God's legislation and oppose all deviation therefrom; while on the latter, like Brother Keevil, they presume to say nothing at all, or they refuse to legislate where God has not legislated. Look now at the facts. Of the two coordinate species or kinds of music which have always existed—namely, vocal and instrumental—God has legislated the former into his worship under Christ, but he has not legislated as to the use of either optic, auditory, or any other set of nerves in making that music; and hence, although we are always bound, when making music in the worship of God, to make the kind which God specifically appointed, yet, as to the use of this or that set of nerves in making that music, we are not bound, but may use any or all of them as may seem proper or necessary.

To make the only issue at this point still more clear and to show the perfect consistency of the opponents of instrumental music in their contention, let it be further observed that, as long as we have in divine worship the music which divine wisdom has legislated therein, it is wholly immaterial whether we use one set of nerves or another in making that music.

Perhaps Brother Keevil and others can see this point to better advantage if we appeal to the use of another set of nerves in the worship of God. The Roman Catholics and some others burn incense in that worship. Now, when Brother Keevil tells them, as we presume he would tell them that he cannot burn incense in the worship of God because God has not appointed it, suppose they should reply that Brother Keevil indorses the use of the optic and auditory nerves in looking at the staff notation in a book and listening to the notes of an instrument in the cases of vocal and instrumental music, and why can he not indorse the use of the olfactory nerves in the case of burning incense—what would he say? Yea, rather, what could he say? We answer for him, that the only proper thing he could say would be to remind them that there is no issue between him and them on the use of any one set of nerves any more than another in doing a thing which God has commanded to be done, and that he opposes their burning incense, not because they use in it a set of nerves "not definitely mentioned in the New Testament," but because the thing done is a thing which God has not appointed to be done; but that, if they will show where God has commanded or appointed incense to be burned in his worship, he will raise no controversy over the fact that in vocal music they "enter into the worship of song by fixing the optic nerve on the printed page," but that in the burning of incense they "enter into the worship" by inhaling its sweet odors through the olfactory nerves. Of course, they could then retort with great force against him by saying that, according to his own logic against the use of incense in the worship of God, he would have to abandon the use of instrumental music in that worship; that, if it is a matter of nerves, why should it be right for him to use his auditory nerves in making instrumental music—a thing God has not commanded—but wrong for them to use their olfactory nerves in burning incense—another thing God has not commanded? And before this question Brother Keevil would either stand speechless or be compelled, if consistent, to admit that his own argument had been turned against him to the complete annihilation of the very position which he sought to establish by it

Finally, the whole matter turns, after all, on the issue between the commandments of men and the commandments of God. The latter we are to do, and not the former, as the great commission distinctly says, "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you;" and certainly "the disciple with no ax to grind" and all other disciples, for that matter, should go into their houses "hearing again" and giving heed to "the words of the Master: 'But in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.'"

The Immunity of the Good.

BY E. G. S.

"And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?" (1 Pet. 3: 13.)

This is an exceedingly important question. In fact, it really amounts to an affirmation that no one can permanently harm those who are truly and faithfully following the Lord. This truth is thoroughly verified in the Old Testament in the dealings of God with the Jewish people. The Lord never left them to guess at what they were to do or what they were not to do. He always told them plainly also the blessings that would attend them if they did his will, and also the troubles and punishments that would be sure to come upon them if they did not do his will.

When Adam was created, a garden was also provided for his support; and he was plainly told that he might freely eat of the fruit of all the trees of the garden, except one. Of that he was forbidden to eat; and he was told that if he did eat of it he should surely die. Eve was likewise told the same. But she allowed herself to be deceived by Satan and ate of it, and gave of it to her husband, and he also ate of it. For this offense they were cast out of the garden, shut out from the tree of life, and thus doomed to mortality. Thus sin brought death into the world. If sin had never come, there is no evidence that death would have come. The tree of life was in the garden, and they had access to that while they remained pure; but so soon as sin came, for that sin they were cast out and were never again permitted to enter. Obstructions were placed to keep them out.

The principle that was started with Adam and Eve has never been changed, of judging men by their works. Throughout the Jewish dispensation this principle of judgment was universal. When those people had come out from Egyptian bondage and had sinned ten times, they were kept out of the promised land till the rebellious ones had all died. Then those that had not so sinned were permitted to enter in. During this wandering, which lasted forty years, many encouraging promises were given those people upon the condition that they would faithfully follow the word of God. And at the same time many serious warnings were given of great disasters and punishments that should come upon them if they should fall into sin. The Lord said unto them, through Moses: "If ye walk in my statutes, and keep my commandments, and do them; then I will give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit. And your threshing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time: and ye shall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land safely. And I will give peace in the land, and ye shall lie down, and none shall make you afraid: and I will rid evil beasts out of the land, neither shall the sword go through your land." (Lev. 26: 3-6.) These promises included everything that was necessary to make them a prosperous and happy people; and these promises were all based upon the condition that they should faithfully keep his commandments. God never promised such blessings as these to a wicked and rebellious people. Hence, further on in the same chapter, he gives a long catalogue of terrible evils that should come upon them if they should turn away from him and plunge into wickedness. He said: "But if ye will not hearken unto me, and will not do all these commandments; and if ye shall despise my statutes, or if your soul abhor my judgments, so that ye will not do all my commandments, but that ye break my covenant: I also will do this unto you; I will even appoint over you terror, consumption, and the burning ague, that shall consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart: and ye shall sow your seed in vain, for your enemies shall eat it. And I will set my face against you, and ye shall be slain before your enemies: they that hate you shall reign over you; and ye shall flee when none pursueth you." (Verses 14-17.) These verses show that their punishments would grow worse and worse until they should be destroyed, if they did not change their course.

In fact, there is but one possible ending to a continued course of sin, and that is utter ruin. So nothing good can come upon a persistent sinner. But our text at the head of this article shows that no permanent evil can betide the righteous. And it is a matter of fact that always, when the Jews were a faithful people, the blessings of God attended them; but when they went wrong, their sins always found them out and they suffered the penalties for their sins. But we have the full testimony of both the Old Testament and the New Testament that the righteous have always been cared for and that they always will be. God will not overlook any truly righteous man or woman. All such are precious in his sight and will not be forgotten. No truly righteous person need ever be uneasy for a moment about God's tender care over his people. Let them all be careful to do their part and trust God to do his.

There are so many examples of God's goodness and mercy to the faithful that faithful Christians need not have a moment's uneasiness about any of his precious promises made upon the condition of faithfulness upon the part of the people. The thing, therefore, for the Lord's people to do is to see to their side of the covenant, which is that they must be faithful in all that God has required them to do. One trouble is that many professed Christians are thoughtless and indifferent about keeping up their side of the covenant. Christians must be faithful in the service of God to the end of life, and only those who are thus faithful to the end have the promise of eternal life. Jesus, in foretelling the troubles that would come upon Christians, said: "But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." (Matt. 24: 13.) This positive statement of the matter ought to be enough to keep Christians faithful to the end of their lives. Such promises are only to the faithful, and the Lord's people can well afford to be always watchful and faithful to him that so loved the world as to be willing for his Son to die, to shed his own lifeblood, that all that would serve him faithfully to the end should be permitted to enjoy eternal life in the heavenly home, where pain and sorrow can never come.

Information Wanted.

Brother W. F. McMullen left Largo last December. It is important that we get in communication with him. We will appreciate any information from any one as to his whereabouts. Address W. A. Cameron, Largo, Fla., Box 10.

Elders of the Largo Church.

Teaching the Word of God.

Brother McQuiddy: We have started a nice little Sunday school in our congregation on Olive Street, and seemed to be getting along nicely, and now the question has arisen: "By what name shall we call the man who presides as our leader, or superintendent?" We called him "superintendent" until we were advised of the fact that it is unscriptural. Now we desire and intend to do everything in the way the Bible directs. We need advice. X.

There is divine warrant for the church meeting upon the first day of the week and teaching the Scriptures. Our Lord enjoined upon his disciples to upbuild and extend his church by making scholars of those who would be learners and by teaching them to observe all things which he had commanded them. When all authority had been given unto him in heaven and on earth, he said: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) We have the same Greek word in Matt. 4: 23 from which we have "teaching" in this verse. It there reads: "And Jesus went about in all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." Here a clear distinction is made between the interlocutory teaching of the synagogue and preaching—the public proclamation of the gospel. We have the same word in Matt. 21: 23-27: "And when he was come into the temple, the chief priests and the elders of the people came unto him as he was teaching, and said, By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority? And Jesus answered and said unto them [in accordance with a very common method of response in Jewish Bible-school teaching], I also will ask you one [counter] question, which if ye tell me, I likewise will tell you by what authority I do these things. The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven or from men? And [at that question] they [the questioning priests and elders] reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say unto us, Why then did ye not believe him? But if we shall say, From men; we fear the multitude; for all hold John as a prophet. And they answered Jesus, and said, We know not. He also [then] said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things." We find again the same word in Matt. 22: 16, and Jesus teaching by the same method of questions and answers. After our Lord had entered upon his public ministry, he is spoken of again and again as teaching in the synagogues, as distinct from his preaching there. If we were wholly unfamiliar with the synagogue method of teaching by question and answer in that day, we might be at a loss as to the difference between the teaching and preaching in the same sacred structure. But knowing what we do, it is fair to infer that our Lord bore a part in the morning worship and preaching in the synagogue and in the afternoon service of worship and teaching in the same synagogue. Matthew, who wrote especially from the Jewish standpoint, said, in terms which all Jews would understand, that "Jesus went about in all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom" (Matt. 4: 23—teaching by that form of instruction which admitted of free interlocutory play between teacher and taught, and preaching by the distinct heralding of a message from God. Find the same distinction between teaching and preaching in Matt. 9: 35; also Matt. 11: 1.

We find the same distinction kept up after the church is established. It is said of Peter and the apostles: "And every day, in the temple and at home, they ceased not to teach and to preach Jesus as the Christ." (Acts 5: 42.) The Spirit says: "Paul and Barnabas tarried in Antioch, teaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also." (Acts 15: 35.) Many other passages can easily be cited, but these furnish clearly and beyond all doubt divine command and example for teaching the word of the Lord by the catechetical method. To fail to do this is to fail to do as Christ authorized and did himself and as the apostles practiced.

From the days of Abraham systematic "instruction" had its place in the plans of the chosen people of God. From the days of Moses the Jewish church had a measure of responsibility for the religious training of the young. From the days of Ezra the Bible school was a recognized agency among the Jewish people for the study and teaching of God's word. In the days of Christ there was in the land of his birth and sojourn a system of Bible schools corresponding very closely in their general features with what is now generally called a "Sunday school." In founding his church, he made Bible-school work its basis. The disciples prosecuted their labors of evangelizing and of edifying accordingly. The Bible school was the starting point of the church of Christ; and it was by the same method of teaching that the church was first extended and upbuilt.

To fight against this method of teaching is to fight against God. To try to take this method of teaching away from the church is to bind it where God has not bound it and to take from it a method that has divine warrant and approval. I would suggest that the church assemble and teach as well as preach the word of God. As the elder must be apt to teach, let him or some one whom he may designate to do so take the oversight in teaching the word of God. Call the one who thus leads the elder or teacher. The church that neglects to teach the word of God to the children will soon die.

Reply to Brother Lee Jackson on "Commercializing the Gospel." No. 1.

BY E. A. E.

It would be better could this article have appeared in the same issue of the paper which contained Brother Jackson's article, but I did not know of its existence until I saw it in print. I should be glad if all would read it again.

I read all Brother Jackson's articles of which this is No. 4, and heartily commend all the scriptural teaching they contain. Some things in the former ones I passed unnoticed, thinking that the best way to treat such things; and I would pass this one without reply, but for my duty to correct false reports and to bring out the truth, and but for the fact that some one else may have read my articles as carelessly as Brother Jackson seems to have done. Had he given these articles a careful reading, he could not say what he does say or ask such questions as he does. In fact, had he not called my name two or three times and asked me these questions, I could never have known that his article is an attempted reply to anything I have ever written.

I suppose I may congratulate myself that he admits that I am now giving "some excellent lessons relative to Bible-made preachers." However, my greatest encouragement and comfort are in what Paul says:

For am I now seeking the favor of men, or of God? or am I striving to please men? if I were still pleasing men, I should not be a servant of Christ. (Gal. 1: 10.)

The criticism my articles receive is a good indication that they are being felt and doing good.

I am glad I am no man's judge, and equally glad no man is my judge. Paul says of his critics and accusers:

Here, moreover, it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful. But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment: yea, I judge not mine own self. For I know nothing against myself, yet am I not thereby justified: but he that judgeth me is the Lord. Wherefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who will both bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and make manifest the counsels of the hearts; and then shall each man have his praise from God. (1 Cor. 4: 2-5.)

If I can please God, I shall be happy.

In the first paragraph of his article Brother Jackson properly emphasizes "the spirit of Christianity" and condemns the sectarian and denominational idea and spirit lurking in "our plea." "Our plea" is on a par with "our doctrine," "our church," etc. What is "our plea" more or less than or different from the plea of all God's people in the world or from "the gospel of Christ"—"the whole counsel of God"—"the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." We are commanded to use "sound speech," "sound words," etc. There can be no such thing as Christianity without the spirit of it. "If any man hath not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." (Rom. 8: 9.) And there can be no such thing as the spirit of Christianity without Christianity itself, or as having the spirit of Christ in disobedience to Christ. There is such a thing as being

Lovers of self, lovers of money, boastful, haughty, railers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, implacable, slanderers, without self-control, fierce, no lovers of good, traitors, headstrong, puffed up, lovers of pleasure, rather than lovers of God; holding a form of godliness, but having denied the power thereof: from these also turn away. For these are they that creep into houses, and take captive silly women laden with sins, led away by divers lusts, ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth. (2 Tim. 3: 1-7.)

Then there is such a thing as having "the form of Godliness" and being as corrupt as Satan would have men be. There were such characters in Paul's day and there are such now. There is such a thing as being "doctrinally sound" and yet lovers of money, selfish, boastful, puffed up, slanderers led away by divers lusts, and paying too much attention to silly women. Against all such have I been writing. It seems to me that Brother Jackson fails to grasp the situation and to draw the line between the characters condemned by the word of God and the Bible-made preachers.

Again, as Brother Jackson says, there may be "a strict conformity to the regulations governing the New Testament worship," without humility, reverence, awe, the love of God, and the true spirit of worship. God must be worshiped in spirit and truth. With the heart man believes unto righteousness; in godly sorrow, or from the heart, man repents; from the heart man is baptized; discerning the Lord's body and blood, in self-examination, in memory of Christ, proclaiming his death, and in hope of his coming, man eats the Lord's Supper; man gives cheerfully from the heart, and not with a blast of trumpets to have praise of men; man prays with the spirit, and not to be seen of men, and sings with grace and melody in the heart to God; and man is to do all he does in word and deed, in the name of the Lord Jesus. Then "the service" of God consists, not only in acts of public worship, but in the earnest and conscientious and faithful discharge of all daily duties to God and men—meeting all financial and all moral obligations and discharging all home duties as parents and children, husbands and wives. For instance, all Christian men who in obedience to God follow some useful occupation in order to make an honest living and to rear their children in industry and self-helpfulness, economy and uprightness, righteousness and godliness, and all Christian women, who are "workers at home" and are guiding their household in the fear of God, are as much in "the service" of Christ as when they engage from the heart in the acts of public worship.

Brother Jackson is furthermore correct in saying:

And this honor and glory come to the name of Christ through the efforts of working congregations, and not simply through the self-sacrificing labors of gospel preachers.

All Christians are the light of the world, the salt of the earth, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, with all the rights and privileges, duties and obligations of children of God, and all, according to ability and obligations, are teachers and preachers. If I ever wrote a line in my life on any subject, I have emphasized this truth. The emphasis I have placed on this truth seems to be one offense I have given some, who object to any reference to the tendency to form a special and favored class of preachers, or a kind of clergy. I am glad to have the indorsement of Brother Jackson on this. We should give honor to whom honor is due, and in honor should prefer one another; but we should oppose giving the honor to a class of preachers who glory beyond their measure—that is, "in another's province in regard to things made ready to hand" (see 2 Cor. 10: 10-18)—who seek the "wealthy and well-established congregations" already built up, or "made ready to their hand," by the tent-making preachers. So soon as tent-making preachers get a congregation "well established," some place hunter is ready "to take charge of it."

Brother Jackson says:

The men who are careful to prepare themselves to preach only to wealthy and well-established congregations are usually well cared for.

This, as a rule, is true; but these are not Bible-made preachers. The Bible says nothing about carefully preparing "to preach only to wealthy and well-established congregations." Those who are careful to make just such preparation for such purpose have not the spirit of Christ, are the very ones who "commercialize the gospel," the young clergy now so rapidly developing, who do not intend to preach in destitute places or anywhere else without a guaranteed salary, and who do not intend to soil their hands with any kind of work. They bade farewell to work the day they began such preparation, entering school in all probability at reduced rates or upon the generosity of others. It is a waste of time for any one, whether in "the shade" or blazing sun, to suggest "a spade" to this class. When lecturing once a class, in which were several young preachers, on the health, the mental, physical, and spiritual strength, dignity and nobility of useful and honorable employment, one of the preachers said: "You do not mean digging post holes?" I replied that I have dug many post holes since I have been preaching, and I meant that, or any other digging, or any other honorable work necessary to be done. This does not mean that all preachers and Christians must dig post holes, that without digging post holes none can become Christians, or that men cannot and should not devote their whole lives to the good work of preaching the gospel; but it does mean that being a preacher does not raise one above manual labor or always above the necessity of it. This shows, too, the conception some young preachers have of this whole matter, and that they at once rise above anything like real work so soon as they begin to don "the ministerial robes." They may have dug post holes, worked on the farm otherwise, been mechanics or street scavengers; but having started even to become preachers, they feel that they are thereby exempted from all such work. They are the ones who sit "in the shade," as Brother Jackson says, and advise farmers, mechanics, merchants, street scavengers, and all the poor hard-working people to work hard and to keep at it—"to dig with the spade"—in order to support them and their families while they "are easily resting under," not their own "vine and fig tree," but the vine and fig tree others have planted and cultivated. They do not want even the trouble of gathering the figs and grapes after others have cultivated them. They parted company with "the spade" or any kind of real work when they decided to "study for the ministry," to become professional "evangelists" with a title, or "singing evangelists." These are the ones who seek "the wealthy and well-established congregations" and abuse the churches for lack of liberality, and who teach that when the churches are supporting them in ease and idleness they are supporting the cause of Christ and upholding the dignity and honor of the kingdom of heaven. I do not know who the "several preachers" are to whom Brother Jackson refers and who gave him the incorrect information which he has imparted through his article to the world; but, if he will give their names, I doubt not we shall find that they are located with some "wealthy and well-established congregations" now, or are seeking such locations. This is the wrong I am seeking to uproot, while I am endeavoring to present fully and clearly all that the Bible teaches on the duty of all congregations and individual Christians to extend the kingdom of Christ throughout the world and to support liberally and cheerfully all worthy preachers of the gospel, either in cities or the country, at home or abroad. The world is the field.

The Bible is an open book and before us all. Let us study, practice, and preach all it teaches on all things that pertain unto life and godliness. Let us imbibe and manifest the spirit of Christ. No men should attempt to preach until they realize that preachers are examples in every good word and work and should teach and lead people in all the way of God. Preachers are not to work for their own ease and comfort (while they should be comfortable), but for the good of all and the advancement of the church of God.

Hoping to continue this article next week, I shall close now with a quotation from Brother Lipscomb, which has been given before:

We hope the day is far distant when the Christian brotherhood will feel it their duty to sustain a man who spends the week in light, unprofitable, and frivolous conversation and lounging about with the idle, visiting after the order of a tattler, and engaging in no useful occupation for six days, to preach, it matters not how eloquent a discourse, on the Lord's day.

We opine and hope that it will take many years of astute logical reasoning to convince the man of toil that it is his duty to labor and sweat in weariness and self-denial to support a preacher in idleness six days in the week to preach a fancy discourse on the seventh. It will doubtless prove a difficult task to convince the parent that it is his duty to make his children delve and dig to support a preacher's children in idleness and to enable them to dress in glistening silk while his own wear the faded and patched cotton. What then? Are we saying these things to discourage the support of teachers and evangelists? Nay, verily, but to direct teachers to pursue the only course that deserves or commands a support.

Let me emphasize the wholesome advice Brother Lipscomb gives preachers "to pursue the only course that deserves or commands a support." The very preachers who are always looking out for their own ease and comfort, complaining at hardships and lack of support, and are place seekers—leaving one place to go to another because of an offer of a little more money—are the very ones who come down to old age forlorn, destitute, and soured, while those who have preached in contentment and gratitude for the accomplishment of the greatest good without complaint are the ones who are comfortable in old age. If examples are called for, it will be my pleasure to give them.

This is only a sample of the much sound teaching our venerable and godly brother has given along this line. With him, and with good will to all, let me say I desire to point out to young preachers this same course, the only course which deserves or will command a generous support, and I endeavor also to teach all congregations to give it.

Interest Grows in Worthy Cause.

The editors of the Gospel Advocate are pleased to report that the effort of the white brethren at Nashville to help the Bible school for negroes, located at Silver Point, Tenn., get into sound financial shape, under an efficient business management, is progressing favorably.

Brother J. S. Hammond reports: "Having been on extra duty for a while, I have not made any effort for the school at Silver Point yet, but seemingly it promises to be an easy and pleasant job. I dropped into a house a few days ago to make a short call, and among other things the school for negroes was discussed; and when I went to leave, a check for fifty dollars was handed me for that purpose. Last Saturday, while at the market, I met a brother on the Public Square, and as he shook hands with me he said: 'I want some fellowship in the effort to help the darkies put their school on a working basis. Can you use a horse?' Of course I told him we could do so, for we can get money out of a horse. So far I have been too busy to possess him, but he is our horse. This may be better than I could have done if I had been trying, though it makes the situation look good to me."

Brother A. M. Burton writes: "The first check for the Silver Point school came from Brother L. A. Winstead in behalf of the Bible Union congregation, of Latham, Tenn.; amount, seven dollars. This was in response to the article in the Gospel Advocate—the medium that has done much to aid needy congregations and worthy causes. It was through its pages I first heard of the negro Bible school, and I have been afforded the privilege of fellowship with many other needs and enabled to show my faith by my works because of the liberality of the paper's management in giving space to set forth the help required. The orphan homes, Bible schools, church houses at needy points, and individuals in need of assistance who have been helped are examples of the influence of the paper and the faith of the brotherhood that what it advocates will advance the Master's cause."

Brother Don Carlos Janes, of Louisville, Ky., writes: "Regarding the negro school at Silver Point, Brother Bowser, its superintendent, is a man who is making brick without straw. He held a meeting here and did good work. Our colored mission still lives and shows a good interest."

Brother C. M. Pullias, of Lewisburg, Tenn., is impressed with the necessity for better teaching of the colored race, and through him the Lewisburg congregation has donated twenty-five dollars to the cause.

Brother W. T. Boaz, of the Tennessee Orphans' Home, at Columbia, Tenn., writes: "I am heartily in sympathy with the move you have made to put on a more permanent basis the colored school at Silver Point; and, as I told you, you can count on me."

Brother N. B. Elder, of Mount Pleasant, Tenn., writes that the congregation at that point, and also the one meeting at Gordonsburg, desires to have fellowship in the movement.

The congregation at Manchester, Tenn., will give the contribution of a set Lord's day to the cause of bettering the condition of the negro Bible school.

Brother O. P. Barry, of Alexandria, Tenn., writes that he will be glad to assist in this work.

Brother George W. Farmer, of Lebanon, Tenn., states his position in the matter as follows: "In regard to the Bible school for negroes, I am in full sympathy with that and every other move that will be calculated to elevate and make better the race."

Brother J. C. McQuiddy also approves of the effort to place the school on a businesslike basis and desires to have fellowship in the movement.

These few instances of well-known brethren and congregations are given to show that a general interest is being taken in the work and to impress its importance upon the brotherhood at large.

Anything you can do to help will be greatly appreciated by all concerned, and we hope you will decide to have fellowship in this worthy and badly needed work. Contributions may be sent to A. M. Burton, Life and Casualty Building, Nashville, Tenn., or to the office of the Gospel Advocate. They will be promptly acknowledged.

ENRICH THE BLOOD

Hood's Sarsaparilla, a Spring Tonic-Medicine, is Necessary.

Everybody is troubled at this season with loss of vitality, failure of appetite, that tired feeling, or with bilious turns, dull headaches, indigestion and other stomach troubles, or with pimples and other eruptions on the face and body. The reason is that the blood is impure and impoverished.

Hood's Sarsaparilla relieves all these ailments. It is the old reliable medicine that has stood the test of forty years,—that makes pure, rich, red blood—that strengthens every organ and builds up the whole system. It is the all-the-year-round blood-purifier and health-giver. It embodies the careful training, experience, and skill of Mr. Hood, a pharmacist for fifty years, in its quality and power to cure. Notes from West Tennessee.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

In the last "Notes" I gave the remainder of what Alexander Campbell said in answer to "What Campbellism Is;" and if people would give him credit for honesty, the question would be forever at rest. But it seems this they cannot or will not do, and so the matter is constantly before the people.

If Campbell taught something as necessary to the salvation of the soul not taught by the Bible, and some one believed what he taught, not taught by the Bible, simply because he taught it, and made no effort to investigate the matter, but accepted it simply because he taught it, that person, I believe, could be truthfully called a "Campbellite." But the class of men and women in Lake and Obion counties called "Campbellites" are not of this class. In intelligence, honesty, soberness, and truthfulness, they compare favorably with their religious neighbors, and are not a whit behind them in point of intelligence and in knowledge of the Bible. But few of them ever read one sentence of Campbell's writings; they know nothing of what he taught, only as they hear it from others. And herein lies the whole trouble; for what they hear from "others" of his teaching is the very opposite to what he did teach. It is nothing uncommon in West Tennessee for preachers who claim a special divine call from God to preach, to tell the people that Campbell believed and taught a water salvation. "No blood—all, all a water salvation." Oftentimes have my brethren who are ignorant of what Campbell taught asked me if he really believed and taught that salvation was in the water. When told that he did not, they would say: "I heard a preacher say from the pulpit that he did. When Campbell said he did not and some preacher says he did, both statements cannot be true; if one be true, the other is false. Such glaring annunciations in the hearing of people who are earnestly, honestly, lovingly, and sincerely trying to serve God as he directs do not fall upon the ears as listlessly and noiselessly as the gentle night zephyrs. At one time when traveling on the train, a man on the opposite side of the car turned to me and said: "Are you a preacher?" I answered that I was "so called by some people." "What kind of preacher are you?" I thought of Brother Srygley's answer when asked the same question—"A pretty good one;" so I answered: "I try to preach the same gospel the apostles preached and belong to the same church they did." "O, yes. You are a Campbellite."

As a general thing, the majority of the people are more ready and willing to believe and receive false teaching than they are to believe and receive the truth. Truth is handicapped, "confined to reality, and must walk in the one straight and narrow way; but error has a thousand broad and devious paths, and may build how and where she pleases." So the fight is between truth and error, and he who is on the side of truth is sure of victory, and he who is on the side of error is sure of defeat. In this part of the country the people who are wearing unscriptural names have learned that they are not scriptural; but, rather than give them up, let them go, they are determined that the class of men and women who claim only to be Christians shall be called "Campbellites."

The Value of Fresh Air.

The oxygen of the air is the world's great scavenger.

Drawn into the lungs, it oxidizes the refuse in the blood through the lungs.

But when the lungs are engorged by croup, catarrh, or colds, the oxygen cannot penetrate the phlegm, and, therefore, cannot reach the membranes through which it purifies the blood.

Apply Mentholatum in the nostrils and upon the throat and chest.

The body heat releases the aromatic volatile oils contained in the Mentholatum. These oils are pungent and penetrating.

When inhaled they accelerate the flow of the secretions, loosening the hardened phlegm and encouraging its expectoration.

Then comes the life-giving, refreshing air—nature's restorative.

Mentholatum is also a germicide and antiseptic.

It also has a rapid healing effect upon all inflamed surfaces, such as chapped skin, burns, and bruises.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS.

If your back hurts or bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In twenty-four hours they strain from it five hundred grains of acid and waste; so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days, and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which every one should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

What Causes Tuberculosis

In the opinion of many medical authorities, tuberculosis is aided, if not actually caused, by a loss of lime from the system. "Where there is a decalcification, the lime salts must be supplied medicinally," says Dr. J. W. Carbert, of San Antonio, in the May, 1913, issue of "Medical Progress."

To supply these salts often is difficult, since in some forms they are not easily assimilable. In Eckman's Alternative, however, calcium (lime) is so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be assimilated by the average person, and to this, in part, is due its success.

We make no boastful claims, but many cases of tuberculosis apparently have yielded to it. It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, so is safe to try. Price $1 and $2 per bottle. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct from the Laboratory. We would like to send you a booklet containing information of value and references.

Old Folks Saved from Suffering

Mrs. Mary A. Dean, Taunton, Mass., in her eighty-seventh year, says: "I thought I was beyond the reach of medicine, but Foley Kidney Pills have proven most beneficial in my case."

Mr. Sam A. Hoover, High Point, N. C., writes: "My kidney trouble was worse at night, and I had to get up from five to seven times. Now I do not have to get up at night, and consider myself in a truly normal condition, which I attribute to Foley Kidney Pills, as I have taken nothing else."

Mrs. M. A. Bridges, Robinson, Mass., says: "I suffered from kidney ailments for two years. I commenced taking Foley Kidney Pills ten months ago, and, though I am sixty-one years of age, I feel like a sixteen-year-old girl."

Foley Kidney Pills are tonic, strengthening, and upbuilding, and restore normal action to the kidneys and to a disordered and painful bladder. They act quickly and contain no dangerous or harmful drugs.

Many Failures Are Due to Headaches.

A headache saps your energy and ambition; it kills your vigor and vitality.

Many have become not only nervous wrecks, but business and domestic failures, owing to the constant drain on their nervous systems by headaches.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills have for the past quarter of a century proved to be the popular relief for headaches and other forms of pain. They bring the desired relief surely and quickly. They contain no habit-forming drugs and have no bad after effects. People who have used them are only too glad to testify to their merits, so that others may also be free from pain.

The Rev. J. A. Riley, of Trout, La., has the following to say: "For over ten years I have used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills whenever I was in need of a remedy for pain, to allay fever or induce a natural sleep. I also find that they quiet the nerves. I have used them freely in my family to the exclusion of all other remedies, and have always found them to do their work to perfection, and never in a single instance have they had any bad after effects. I heartily recommend them as a safe, pleasant, and effective remedy."

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are sold by all druggists at twenty-five cents for twenty-five doses. Your money will be returned if they are not found perfectly satisfactory.

Martin.

Emily G. Martin (née Vandeuier), wife of Elder J. W. Martin, was born on September 15, 1836; was married to Elder Martin on April 3, 1851; and died in Rogers, Ark., on January 10, 1916. Sister Martin was the mother of ten children, six of whom, together with her aged companion, are left to mourn her death. She identified herself with the Baptist Church when but a girl, but later she was baptized into Christ, where she afterwards lived a faithful and devoted Christian until death. The writer was called upon to say a few words of comfort to the bereaved family and friends of the deceased, and it was certainly a very great pleasure to have such a noble Christian life to hold up as a beacon to those left behind. A. M. FOSTER.

Sadler.

Mrs. Verda McGlasson Sadler, wife of W. F. Sadler and daughter of J. G. and M. D. McGlasson, was born on May 27, 1876, and died on August 6, 1915, at her home in Gainesboro, Jackson County, Tenn. She obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother John Lyon, of Tompkinsville, Ky., in the fall of 1892. Mrs. Sadler was a loyal Christian, attended church regularly, and was a teacher in the Sunday school of her home church at the time of her death. She endured with much patience an illness of several weeks' duration, and received from mother, sisters, and husband the kindest care and all the attention that it was possible to give. She leaves a husband, one child (Eugene Sadler), five stepchildren, a mother, two brothers, and several sisters. Funeral services were conducted by Brother John W. Fox, after which interment took place at the Pharris Cemetery, near Gainesboro, Tenn. X.

Neal.

Just as the sun was setting on January 13, 1916, the beautiful life of Mrs. George Neal completed its mission on earth and, surrounded by her family, loved ones, and friends, answered the summons, "Come up higher." She was forty years of age last August, and in the very noontide of life she left us and passed out to that haven of rest where sunsets never come, but where the day is one of perpetual sunshine. Her life was the embodiment of all that makes character lovable. She was truly a Christian character, having been a member of the church of Christ in Bonham for many years, during which time she was a very active member. She will be sadly missed by her fellow-workers in the cause of Christ. The funeral services were conducted by Brother Tom Walker, burial taking place in the family cemetery near Bonham. And yet we know that somewhere in the sunlight of God's love her beautiful life will live on. MRS. TOM WALKER.

Vick.

Martha Lenora Montague was born in Perry County, Tenn., on September 8, 1857; was married to W. W. Vick on December 13, 1876, at Bells, Tenn., by Brother T. B. Larimore; united with the church of Christ at Liberty, Lawrence County, Tenn., in 1878; and died in Dallas, Texas, on December 11, 1915. Her husband; one son, W. M. Vick; and two daughters, Mrs. Richard Mills and Mrs. Robert Crump, all of Dallas, survive her. She also leaves two brothers—W. H. Montague, Bells, Tenn., and James Montague, Memphis, Tenn.; and three sisters—Mrs. James Culp, Bells, Tenn.; Mrs. G. W. Anderson, Gainesville, Texas; and Mrs. Bertha Smith, Dallas, Texas. She became a member of the Pearl and Bryan Streets Church soon after I began work there ten years ago, and was a regular attendant. I often visited the home, and think I knew her well. Her illness was long and weary, and I often saw her during that time of suffering, yet she did not murmur. She was a modest, womanly woman, and believed in women of that type. She was a great blessing to her husband, her children, and the church. She reared her youngest sister, Mrs. Smith, who was left an orphan in childhood. Such women are the kind that go to the "home where changes never come." The writer conducted her funeral in the presence of a host of friends. L. S. WHITE.

Slayden.

Dr. T. J. Slayden died at his home, near Clarksville, Tenn., on December 1, 1915, and was buried at Mount Olivet, Nashville, Tenn. Services were conducted by Brethren E. G. Sewell and H. T. King. Dr. Slayden was a son of Dr. C. Slayden, a prominent Hickman County physician. He received his medical training at the University of Nashville and Vanderbilt. He is survived by his wife (who was Miss Lily Roberts, of Columbia, Tenn.), three brothers, and two sisters. He obeyed the gospel while young in years, and lived a conscientious life.

tious, self-sacrificing, Christian life in all faithfulness and humility. He was modest and retiring by nature, yet fearless for the truth and immovable on any question of Christian principle. While practicing medicine at Riverside and Allen's Creek, Tenn., he did much to further the cause of Christ there and elsewhere. Largely through his efforts the congregation at Riverside was established, and for several years he was one of the faithful elders therein. Failing in health, he gave up the medical profession and moved to his farm near Clarksville eight years ago. He was soon made an elder of the Oakland congregation and was "esteemed exceeding highly in love for his work's sake." He was patient, faithful, and true to the end. The influence he leaves behind is of that quality which will linger long to comfort and inspire those of us who knew him but to love him. D. H. FRIEND.

Bowman.

There is no time in our lives when we feel our weakness more than when we see those we love suffering death and are powerless to help them. So it was with Brother William Bowman as he stood by the side of his dying wife and saw that dear wife who had been so kind, so devoted, and so true to him passing away from him forever. Sister Sophia B. Buford Bowman was born on July 3, 1881; was married to William W. Bowman on November 17, 1901; and died at her home, in Grantsburg, Ill., on January 21, 1916. She had been ill for some time, but no one could have borne it with more patience than she. She became a Christian in October, 1907, under the preaching of that grand man of God, Brother Joe Ratcliffe, and began her march for heaven under the banner of her Lord and King, and as the end drew near she expressed a willingness to meet her Savior. To the bereaved husband I offer my deepest sympathies. Only a few more days of weary waiting, only a little longer to toil and strive, and then you can step over in yonder world of beauty, there to clasp the hand of your companion, who will never leave you, but will welcome you home forever. Brother C. M. Stubblefield was called to speak words of comfort to the heartbroken husband and friends.

J. D. CLEMENTS.

Porch.

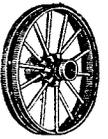

Died, near Bakerville, in Humphreys County, Tenn., on January 11, 1916, our dear old brother, James Porch, at the ripe old age of eighty-six years and nearly one month. He obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother Trimble, of sacred memory, at the age of eighteen years, and was, therefore, a member of the church of Christ sixty-eight years. He was married in early life to Martha Beech, who preceded him to the great beyond many years. There were five children, but three of them had already passed on to be with their mother before he was called to meet them in the sweet beyond. Brother Porch was a brother to Dr. W. T. Porch, of Waverly, Tenn., and Brother George Porch, of Nashville, Tenn. Two of his children and several grandchildren and great-grandchildren are left on this side to mourn the loss of a father and grand-

Make Your Back Yard Profitable

THE demand for squabs in the Northern, Eastern and Southern markets has never been supplied, because pigeon raising as a business is comparatively new. Buy a half dozen pair of select birds, fence in a small portion of your back yard and watch them go to work. Success is easy. They raise from eight to fifteen pairs of squabs a year. Your squabs and fancy birds will bring handsome returns. You will actually make money in a hitherto useless part of your back yard. Pigeon raising is not a fad or fancy. It is a profitable business. Let us start you right. Our breeders are the best, and raised from prize winning parents. We will furnish you with the birds and teach you how to raise them, and you will reap a handsome profit with a very little outlay. Thousands are taking advantage of this same opportunity. Write to day for our literature on pigeon raising as a money making proposition, or better still, write us to send you a few pair of Belgian Carneaux at $3.00 per pair, White Swiss Mondaines at $5.00 per pair, White Kings at $3.50 per pair, or White Maltese at $4.00 per pair. Our birds are all guaranteed. Your money back if after two months you are not satisfied with their work. Better prices on larger orders. Write to-day and get the pick of the flock.

WOMAN HAD NERVOUS TROUBLE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.

West Danby, N. Y.—“I have had nervous trouble all my life until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nerves and for female troubles and it straightened me out in good shape. I work nearly all the time, as we live on a farm and I have four girls. I do all my sewing and other work with their help, so it shows that I stand it real well. I took the Compound when my ten year old daughter came and it helped me a lot. I have also had my oldest girl take it and it did her lots of good. I keep it in the house all the time and recommend it.”—Mrs. DEWITT SINCEBAUGH, West Danby, N. Y.

Sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, backache, headaches, dragging sensations, all point to female derangements which may be overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

father. Brother Porch was a faithful soldier of the Confederate Army for four years, but for sixty-eight years he was a soldier of a different army. He fought many bloodless battles for the Lord, and it is for these battles that he will wear the crown in glory. This winter seems to be gathering many ripe sheaves for the eternal garner. Let old Brother Porch's brothers, his children, his grandchildren, and his friends take courage at the prospects of a reuniting in the glory world. It is sweet to believe that our loved ones are not lost, but gone before.

F. B. SRYGLEY.

Berryman.

Charles Errett Berryman was born on August 25, 1894; was born again, “of water and of the Spirit,” in September, 1907, being baptized by Brother J. E. Barbee; left his frail tenement of clay on February 6, 1916, after a lingering illness of tuberculosis. “He was his mother's only son, and she a widow.” We mourn for him because we miss him so much, both in the church here at Wysox and in all the community, for every one loved Charley who knew him; always modest, respectful, and gentle. But how much more the loving mother and sister who survive him miss him, only their own hearts can know. But they have the hope that ever gives us courage when a Christian dies. His greatest concern seemed to be for his mother; for often when he would be calmly talking of his departure he would say: “But what will you do, mamma?” Brother J. L. Hines spoke appropriate words of sympathy and consolation to the bereaved ones, and of solemn warning to the unsaved, after which his body was laid to rest beside his father and little sister, who preceded him only a few years. “Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.” (1 John 3: 2.) “And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.” (Rev. 21: 4.) “And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass.” (Rev. 21: 18.) What infinite bliss to be reunited in such a home, to praise God through eternal ages!

C. S.

Halbert.

James C. Halbert was born in Lincoln County, Tenn., on February 23, 1838, and died on December 23, 1915. He was married to Miss Fannie Gibson in 1859, with whom he lived until October 19, 1915, when she died; and truly did they walk hand in hand and heart to heart throughout life's journey. It was beautiful to witness their devotion and fidelity to each other all the way. He enlisted in the Confederate Army in 1862, in the Forty-first Tennessee Regiment, was a lieutenant in Captain Griffin's Company, surrendered at Washington, Ga., in 1865. He was a brave and good soldier, a splendid officer, and was loved by his men. When the war was over, he returned to his young and beautiful wife and children, who received him

SOLD HERE NOW.

Nasty drug salivates, makes you sick and you may lose a day's work

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

“Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results,” said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs fifty cents; and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine. No biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach, or constipated bowels. It does not gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick, and nauseated. Do not lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

with open arms as joyfully as if he had been victorious. They began life anew on the farm where he was born, and lived there until death came to take them away. In early life he united with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and lived an earnest, faithful life. After hearing the gospel preached by W. H. Dixon, Jesse Sewell, and others, he was baptized with Christ about forty years ago. He had been a close student of the Bible for years, and then he became a subscriber and reader of the Gospel Advocate, and thus he acquired a knowledge of the Bible and Christian religion rarely ever surpassed. It was a delight to see the comfort and pleasure he received from them in his declining years. His faith never wavered and his confidence in the word of God to lead men and women to the beautiful home of the soul never faltered. Soon after his baptism he was called to the eldership of Gum Springs congregation, which he faithfully served until death. He sacrificed much for the cause of the Master and exerted a saving influence over those with whom he associated. His was the home of the preachers who visited this congregation, and no stranger was turned away from his door hungry, cold, or thirsty. How blessed to so live that we finish our course in joy and peace and hope! Having walked by faith, he could look back over a life spent in the service of the Lord and truthfully say: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness." After forty years of intimate friendship, association, and fellowship that was never marred by word, thought, or deed on the part of either of us, it gives me unfeigned pleasure to say that in every station in life, whether state, family, or church, I believe he met the obligations of life as God would have him do. A noble man, a good and true citizen, a devoted husband and father, a kind neighbor, a faithful friend, and an earnest Christian who continued "steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, in breaking of bread, and in prayers," unto the end. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." T. C. LITTLE.

Sixteen Years of Trouble

ended for H. H. Jackson, Friar's Point, Miss., with the use of Gray's Ointment. "I am glad to report that it has made a permanent cure of a sore of sixteen years' standing," he writes. This is one of the numerous instances of the remarkable curative powers of Gray's Ointment. Since it was first prepared in 1820, it has been used year in and year out by American families for boils, sores, ulcers, wounds, burns, bruises, and all abrasions and eruptions of the skin. TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA.

If mixed with Sulphur it will darken so naturally nobody can tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked, and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about fifty cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears. But what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

Each "Pape's Diapepsin" digests 3000 grains food, ending all stomach misery in five minutes.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach remedy in the whole world and besides it is harmless. Put an end to stomach trouble forever by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

Sacred Secret Kills SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Until middle age, I had a regular mustache and beard and a hairy covering on my arms. Everything I tried, including the electric needle, only made it worse. Finally, my husband, an Officer in the British Army, secured from a Native Hindoo Soldier the closely-guarded secret of the Mohammedan Religion which forbids the Hindoo women of India to have even the faintest trace of Superfluous Hair anywhere on their body. I used it and in a few days my hair-growths had entirely disappeared. Today not a trace can be found. I will send free to any one, these secret FREE of my success.

Makes Stubborn Coughs Vanish in a Hurry

Surprisingly Good Cough Syrup
Easily and Cheaply
Made at Home

If some one in your family has an obstinate cough or a bad throat or chest cold that has been hanging on and refuses to yield to treatment, get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex and make it into a pint of cough syrup, and watch that cough vanish.

Pour the 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents, and gives you a full pint—a family supply—of a most effective remedy, at a saving of $2. A day's use will usually overcome a hard cough. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste. Children like it.

It's really remarkable how promptly and easily it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. A splendid remedy for bronchitis, winter coughs, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

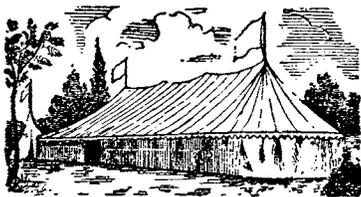

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction goes with this preparation or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., 233 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

This means big and little tents, and we make all kinds. A thousand satisfied users testify to their quality. Let us make you a quotation. No trouble at all.

California Notes.

BY E. A. BEDICHEK.

Since arriving in Fresno, I have heard from three volunteer soldiers—one each from Kentucky, Missouri, and Texas—all willing to undertake the work in Northern cities. I have forwarded their letters to churches in the North.

Cincinnati has a very zealous band of disciples, and with the Christian Leader's help, along with a live, earnest worker as a proclaimer of Christ's good news to the five hundred thousand people in the city, much good can be accomplished. Allow me to urge all the churches who have houses of worship paid for to help build a house in Cincinnati, Terre Haute, and St. Louis. What I have said about the church and prospects of the cause in Cincinnati is also true of the work in the other cities named.

As long as the editors are kind enough to publish a brief statement about the work in the North, I will remind the readers every few weeks of their opportunity and duty in extending the kingdom throughout the North. The work could soon be made self-sustaining with the proper effort.

I arrived in Fresno on February 6, after a seven-days' journey from St. Louis, via Memphis, Little Rock, Texarkana, Houston, San Antonio, El Paso, and Los Angeles. I preached at South Heights Church in San Antonio. I found the members there zealous in the Master's cause, working in sympathetic coöperation with Brother Bills and his splendid wife. They expressed themselves as delighted with the sermon. I had formerly labored with them, and it seemed like returning home to meet them and speak once more words of admonition and encouragement. It makes one's soul rejoice to labor with such disciples. Brother C. R. Nichol was present, on his way home from the preachers' meeting at Georgetown. It was a great pleasure to meet Brother Nichol, as I dearly love him for both his own dear self and his work's sake. I hope I can meet him often. Brother Bills is making good in his work in San Antonio. I have known him for ten years, also his parents, his wife and her parents. They are both jewels indeed, pearls of great price. South Heights is very fortunate in having them as collaborators. There is a bright future for the cause of Christ in San Antonio.

I will give one month to a meeting in Dinuba, one month in Fresno, and one month in Patterson, in the order named. Then I will spend two and one-half months in Texas and Oklahoma, through June, July, and August, and will return to Fresno in September and devote several months to

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Fresno before going out much to other points. Fresno has fifty thousand people, is one of the best financial centers in the State, and cannot be excelled in agricultural products and educational advantages. We hope for great things to be accomplished in and around Fresno. They all have a mind to work, and as one man say: "Let us rise up and build."

For Weakness and Loss of Appetite.

The old standard general strengthening tonic, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic, drives out malaria and builds up the system. A true tonic and sure appetizer. For adults and children. Fifty cents.

What is the Club?

The Gospel Advocate Piano Club is both a theory and a fact. The theory is that a piano factory can afford to sell one hundred pianos and player-pianos at a much lower price than it would be willing to make on an order for only one instrument. The fact is that the club has saved each of its members forty per cent.

The theory of the club is "coöperation." The fact is "perfect satisfaction." The theory is: "A square deal to every member." The fact is: "Every member is delighted."

If you are interested in securing a piano or player-piano of the finest quality at the lowest possible factory price, write for your copy of the club's catalogue, discount sheet, and terms. Address Associated Piano Clubs, Gospel Advocate Department, Atlanta, Ga.

A Question of Duty.

BY C. H. WETHERBE.

We should never place too high a value upon what we do for God. We are not allowed to think that God is under any special obligation to us for doing our utmost to serve him. It is our duty to do our very best for him, quite regardless of any sort of compensation for our services. In speaking of the Master and his servant, Christ said: "Doth he thank the servant because he did the things that were commanded? Even so, ye also, when ye shall have done all the things that were commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which it was our duty to do." These words were primarily addressed to the apostles, but they have equal application to us and to all Christians. And yet how apt we are to suppose that if we are as serviceable to God as we possibly can be, he ought to show us favor quite beyond what others receive from him, who have not done nearly as much as we have! You say, are we not rewarded according to our works? You remind me that the Bible says so. Yes, it is true that the Bible says that people are rewarded according to their works, whether they be good works or bad works. But this does not mean that it is according to the amount or extent of one's work, but it is according to the character of the work, and also the character of the person. A good person does good works, while a bad person does bad works. It is a bad person's duty to give himself up to the service of God; and when one has become a servant of Christ, it is his duty to do his utmost to please him without any thought of compensation for it. One Christian may do a great deal more than another Christian, yet the one who does the most has no greater claim on God than the other one has. Each does his own duty, if he obeys the will of God.

Sister: Read My Free Offer!

I am a woman.
I know a woman's trials.
I know her need of sympathy and help.

If you, my sister, are unhappy because of ill-health, if you feel unfit for household duties, social pleasures, or daily employment, write and tell me just how you suffer, and ask for my free ten days' trial of a home treatment suited to your needs. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any man. I want to tell you how to cure yourself at home at a cost of about 12 cents a week.

If you suffer from women's peculiar ailments causing pain in the head, back, or bowels, feeling of weight and dragging down sensation, falling or displacement of pelvic organs, causing kidney and bladder weakness or constipation and piles, painful or irregular periods, catarrhal conditions and discharges, extreme nervousness, depressed spirits, melancholy, desire to cry, fear of something evil about to happen, creeping feeling along the spine, palpitation, hot flashes, weariness, sallow complexion with dark circles under the eyes, pain in the left breast or a general feeling that life is not worth living,

I INVITE YOU TO SEND TODAY FOR MY FREE TEN DAYS' TREATMENT

and learn how these ailments can be easily and surely conquered at home without the dangers and expense of an operation. When you are cured, and able to enjoy life again, you can pass the good word along to some other sufferer. My home treatment is for young or old. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain how to overcome green sickness (chlorosis), irregularities, headaches, and lassitude in young women and restore them to plumpness and health. Tell me if you are worried about your daughter. Remember it costs you nothing to give my home treatment a ten days' trial, and does not interfere with daily work. If health is worth asking for, then accept my generous offer and write for the free treatment, including my illustrated booklet, "Women's Own Medical Adviser." I will send all in plain wrappers postpaid. To save time, you can cut out this offer, mark your feelings, and return to me. Send today, as you may not see this offer again. Address,

This is "PRAISE AND THANKSGIVING," the 320-page new song book for 1916, to which S. W. Beazley, A. J. Showalter, J. D. Patton, T. B. Mosley, C. H. Gabriel, B. B. Beall, and H. M. Eagle are the largest contributors, more than one hundred of the songs being from these foremost gospel song composers of America.

The price is 30 cents a copy for the limp binding or 35 cents for the board binding, but 25 cents in stamps sent to THE A. J. SHOWALTER COMPANY, DALTON, GA., will bring you a sample copy of the limp binding. Forty thousand copies were demanded of the printers in thirty days, and that is the best evidence that you will be pleased with it. Mention this paper when you write.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret-to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

FROM THE FIELD

Florida.

Hildreth, February 28.—A brother wrote me of their needs here and at the same time informed me that the brethren were poor and had no money. I find, as he said, a number of brethren scattered around among the pine forests, all very poor, but good. There is work here for a half dozen men, and it seems to me that our brethren who are able should support faithful preachers while they evangelize this field. There is at the place where I am now preaching, five and one-half miles from Hildreth, a small house of worship, once owned by a few brethren, but lost on account of their ceasing to meet for worship now over two years, since, according to the deed, it was to revert to the original landowner when no longer used. However, it is a very poor, unfinished old "shack;" yet we appreciate the kindness of the owner in letting us use it. I have preached three times, and find the people anxious to hear. I believe I shall be able to succeed in getting as many as a dozen to meet regularly for worship, and hope to see others obey the gospel. From this point I shall go to at least one other place not far distant in hope of doing needed mission work there. I shall give at least three weeks to each point, as less time, under existing conditions, would be insufficient for the accomplishment of the end sought. On my former trip I held three meetings in two months, and realized about fifty-one cents per day above expenses. Besides this, Sister Melly Vickery, of Robstown, Texas, where I established a good congregation while I lived at Corpus Christi, sent us ten dollars, for which we are profoundly thankful. Until such States as Georgia and Florida are evangelized, and faithful preachers supported while doing the work, we should hide our faces in shame at the thought of doing doubly expensive mission work in foreign fields. I actually need and would greatly appreciate fellowship in this work. My address is 46 Angier Avenue, Atlanta, Ga. W. J. Rice.

Georgia.

Atlanta, March 2.—Services at all the places were delightful last Lord's day. Woodroof was at South Pryor morning and evening; Waits was at Ingleside; Childers and Ritchie were at Golden Hill; R. C. White, of Nashville, Tenn., was at West End morning and evening and at Constitution in the afternoon; Garrett spoke at East Point in the forenoon, and the writer began a series of sermons there at night, with two erring Christians restored to fellowship; Brumit was at Pleasant Grove in the forenoon and made South Pryor a short visit at night. We are also glad to state that Brother Carter is back with the Macon work. His support has never been what it should have been at that place. Let all those who had fellowship with him formerly please resume it; and we earnestly insist that others will also help in that great work. Send all donations to W. M. Mosing, 349 Hines Terrace, Macon, Ga., and it will be duly receipted. S. H. HALL.

Fayette City, March 1.—Recently Brother Bedichek offered some New Year's resolutions. Among them was one to put a good, strong man in each of the cities of the North. I think this is the right move. The opportunities in the big cities are certainly greater than in the country. The need of Christ is greater there; and when once we get a good, strong church started in the big city, it can be used as a base of operations for the surrounding territory. Suppose we push the plan. G. M. RANCE.

Antioch, Route No. 2, March 1.—It is seldom that I write anything for our good paper, the Gospel Advocate; but as I believe that many of my old-time friends and brethren would like to hear from me, I offer a few words. I have not been well for many months. My throat gives me more or less trouble all the time. But I am still in the harness. I have just established a congregation near my home, eleven miles from Nashville, on the Murfreesboro pike. We meet in an old storehouse every Lord's day. Interest in these meetings is growing. We hope to accomplish much good at this place. It has been suggested that we name our place of worship "Luther's Mission."

A. J. LUTHER.

Lebanon, March 3.—On last Lord's day the writer set in order a congregation of something near twenty-five members at Union Chapel, below Rockwood, in Roane County, Tenn., and baptized two young ladies on Monday morning. Rockwood is just one hundred and twenty-five miles from Lebanon, on the Tennessee Central Railroad, and Union Chapel is two and one-half miles south of Rockwood. This is the only congregation after the New Testament order in this county. East Tennessee is truly a destitute section of the country, and I would be glad to see the congregations take more interest in this field and let us see if we cannot plant a few more congregations in this part of the State, and then East Tennessee can take care of itself. Brother Clark is at Knoxville and Brother Little is at Cleveland, and there are no other preachers that I know of in this part of the State giving all of their time to the work. But we hear Brother Little has had to go to teaching school. This is too bad. Brethren, we should not allow that. He should be kept busy all the time. The harvest is plenteous, but the laborers are few. GEORGE W. FARMER.

Arlington (Box 113), February 29.—It has been some time since I wrote the Gospel Advocate of my condition. I wish again to thank the brother who has contributed to my support every month since I asked aid through the Advocate, and who will not permit me to mention his name or thank him directly by letter. I wish to say to him that I certainly appreciate his help, as I still have only succeeded in raising about half of the ten dollars required for my expenses here in this pleasant home. I am happy and contented and am treated as if I were really a member of the family by birth. A father or brother in the flesh could not receive kinder attention, and I should hate to lose this home. Sister Smith would keep me free if she were able; but her husband is not a Christian, and it is impossible for her to keep me and pay for my support alone. One congregation in Tennessee sends me one dollar per month. I pray that God may bless them and that they Required for Health and Beauty.

It is surprising that it is necessary to repeat again and again that the health and beauty of the skin require that the blood shall be pure. If the arteries of the skin receive impure blood, pimples and blotches appear, and the individual suffers from humors. Powders and other external applications are sometimes used for these affections, but will never have the desired effect while the causes of impure blood remain.

The indications are very clear that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, removing pimples and blotches, and giving health and beauty to the skin. It gives tone to all the organs and builds up the whole system. Insist on having Hood's Sarsaparilla when you ask for it. Do not take anything else.

THE BURNETT-WEAVER DEBATE ON METHODISM.
IN TWO VOLUMES OF MORE THAN FIVE HUNDRED PAGES.
Disputants:
T. R. Burnett, Christian; J. C. Weaver, Methodist.
THE ONLY COMPLETE DEBATE BETWEEN CHRISTIANS AND METHODISTS NOW PUBLISHED.
Each disputant has sixty-eight speeches. The corresponding speeches are of equal length by actual count of words.
PROPOSITIONS DISCUSSED IN VOLUME ONE.
PROPOSITION 1. The Scriptures teach that sprinkling or pouring of clean water upon a proper subject, in the name of the Holy Trinity, by a proper administrator, is Christian baptism. Weaver affirms; Burnett denies.
PROPOSITION 2. Infant baptism is authorized by the word of God. Weaver affirms; Burnett denies.
PROPOSITIONS DISCUSSED IN VOLUME TWO.
PROPOSITION 1. The Scriptures teach that in the conversion of the sinner the influence of the Holy Spirit is confined to the word of truth, or gospel, as contained in the New Testament. Burnett affirms; Weaver denies.
PROPOSITION 2. The Scriptures teach that baptism is for (in order to) the remission of sins. Burnett affirms; Weaver denies.
3. The creed criticized. Burnett leads; Weaver responds.
J. C. Weaver, of Henderson, Texas, is a recognized authority in his church. He is a man of talent, and has been debating for many years.
T. R. Burnett is one of the shrewdest men of the present time among the disciples of Christ. As a debater, preacher, and author, he takes first rank. His arguments stand out as clear as light. He has a style that is unique—peculiarly his own—that attracts and charms the reader. When one begins reading his writing, he is led on as if by some compelling force, and can hardly lay the book down till he has finished it.
These books sparkle with interest—fresh, lively thought, and strong, convincing argument.

Christ Our Surety.

BY JOHN T. POE.

Jesus became surety for all men, only that provision was made and guaranteed to all men by and through the new and better covenant which God made with man in Christ and which was sealed with his blood—not that the salvation of all men is guaranteed through him, for, in that case, Universalism would be true; but inasmuch as we know from the teaching of God's word that the incorrigible and disobedient will not be saved because of disobedience, the suretyship of Jesus must relate to covenant and not to man's eternal salvation. He is our security or surety for the fulfillment of every blessing promised in the new covenant. He guarantees every provision, every promise made therein. Hence, it is said that "he is the author of eternal salvation to all them that obey him." And again: "He is able to save unto the uttermost all who come to God through him"—not that he will do it absolutely, as predestinarians teach, but he is fully able and will save to the uttermost all who obey him. The new covenant promises eternal life to all who obey its provisions and to no others. Jesus is our surety for the fulfillment of that and all other promises made therein, if we obey him. In this way his death procured salvation for all men by securing to the world a covenant of favor, which would save all who obey him, and it is ample if we will accept and obey; and Jesus guarantees in it the full, free, and certain forgiveness of sins, the Holy Spirit as a Comforter, God's own presence in the valley and shadow of death, a resurrection from the dead, the gift of immortality and eternal life, and a home in the mansions of heaven, with God as our Father—heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ, happy for evermore.

Your Heart

is closely connected with your nerves—so close, in fact, that anything which affects your nerves must necessarily affect your heart, and vice versa.

If you are troubled with palpitation, dizziness, shortness of breath, swelling of ankles, pain on either side of the chest, or weak and irregular pulse, symptoms of a nervous breakdown, the best way to remedy the trouble is by giving your heart and nerves the proper tonic. Renovine for the heart and nerves is the best tonic for soothing and restoring a shattered nervous system. For sale by all reliable dealers, fifty cents and one dollar. THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Outline Sermons on the Old Testament

This volume, containing 139 outlines of sermons by 46 eminent English and American clergymen, is fully indexed by subjects and texts.

Outline Sermons on the New Testament

This volume contains 300 outlines by 77 eminent English and American clergymen; it is fully indexed by subjects and texts. The outlines furnished in these two volumes have been drawn from the leading pulpit thinkers of every denomination in Great Britain and America, including Rev. Drs. Wm. M. Taylor, John Cairns, Howard Crosby, Theodore L. Cuyler, Charles H. Spurgeon, R. S. Storrs, H. J. Van Dyke, James McCosh, J. T. Duryea, Alex. Maclaren, Joseph Parker, C. F. Deems, Canon Farrar, Dean Stanley, Bishop Phillips Brooks, and many others. The subjects are practical rather than controversial.

Outline Sermons to Children

With numerous anecdotes, fully indexed by subjects and texts. This volume, containing 97 outlines of sermons of a very high grade of thinking, by men of acknowledged eminence in possessing the happy faculty of preaching interestingly to the young. It contains enough illustrations and anecdotes to stock for many years the average preacher of children's sermons.

Anecdotes Illustrative of Old Testament Texts

529 anecdotes and illustrations, fully indexed by subjects and texts. Dr. Guthrie says his hearers often remembered the illustrations in his sermons when they had forgotten the abstract truth.

Anecdotes Illustrative of New Testament Texts

614 anecdotes and illustrations, fully indexed by subject, and texts. Preachers will find this book a very godsend to their preparation for the pulpit, and full of windows to let in the light.

Expository Sermons and Outlines on Old Testament

These sermons by distinguished preachers embrace a great variety of subjects from the Old Testament, are rich in application, and will be an education and inspiration to many.

Pulpit Prayers by Eminent Preachers

These prayers are fresh and strong; the ordinary ruts of conventional forms are left and fresh thoughts of living hearts are uttered. The excitement of devotional thought and sympathy must be great in the offering of such, prayers, especially when, as here, spiritual intensity and devoutness are as marked as freshness and strength.

Platform and Pulpit Aids

Consisting of striking speeches and addresses on Home and Foreign Missions, the Bible, Sunday-school, Temperance, and kindred subjects, with illustrative anecdotes. Just the book an over-worked pastor who has many speeches to make, with little time for study, will appreciate.

Renew Your Health At Nature's Fountain

Without the Expense and Loss of Time Necessary for a Visit to the Spring

THE CRISIS

There comes a time in the life of practically every man and woman when their digestive or eliminative organs, or both, fail to respond to drugs prepared by human skill. In fact drugs seem to do them about a much harm as good for their systems rebel against all drugs. These are the cases which physicians call "stubborn" and "chronic" for the reason that they persist in spite of drug treatment. I do not refer to incurable diseases such as cancer and consumption, but to that larger class of functional disorders which we meet every day, where the organs of digestion and elimination are impaired.

For this class of cases our best physicians and our big city specialists send their wealthy patients to the mineral springs where, in the great majority of cases they are permanently restored or decidedly benefited. But what about the poor man who has not the money or the busy man or woman who cannot spare the time to spend several weeks or possibly months at a health resort? Shall circumstances deny them the restoration to health which Nature has provided? Read my answer in the coupon at the bottom of this page.

I have the utmost confidence in the Shivar Mineral Spring Water for to it I owe my Restoration to Health and probably my Life. It has made me tens of thousands of friends in all parts of America and even in foreign countries, whose faces I have never seen. Yet I count them my friends for the Shivar Spring Water has bound them to me by lasting gratitude.

ask you to read their letters, a few samples of which I publish below for your benefit, and if you find among them any encouragement as to your own health do not hesitate to accept my offer which has no limits or conditions except those shown on the coupon. If you could read the letters that come to me daily, numbering about ten thousand a year, and the vast majority of them similar to those printed below, you would not wonder that I make this offer displaying my absolute confidence in the restorative powers of Shivar Mineral Water.

INDIGESTION

Savannah, Georgia.
I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well, and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

La Grange, Ga., Nov. 25, 1914.
I feel it my duty to suffering humanity to make public announcement of the benefits I have derived from Shivar Spring Water. I have been a sufferer for the past twenty-five years from indigestion and dyspepsia. After one week's trial of Shivar Water I commenced to improve, and after drinking it for four weeks I gained fifteen pounds. I feel better and stronger than I have in twenty-five years. I strongly recommend this Water to any one with stomach trouble of any character, and truly believe it will cure ulcer of the stomach. I am writing this voluntarily and trust it will fall in the hands of many who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with indigestion and nervous dyspepsia.

C. V. TRUITT,
President Unity Cotton Mills.

DYSPEPSIA

Baltimore, Md., April 30, 1914.
For many years I suffered with stomach trouble as a direct result of asthma. I consulted the very best specialist in this country, and spent quite a large sum of money in my endeavor to get relief. However, I had about come to the conclusion that my case was hopeless, but by accident I happened to get hold of one of your booklets, and decided to try Shivar Spring Water. After drinking the water for about three weeks I was entirely relieved, and since that time have suffered but little inconvenience from my trouble. I cheerfully recommend the use of your Water to any one that may be suffering from stomach trouble.

It is a great pleasure to tell you that your Water has been a great benefit. I may say a great blessing, to me. My wife says it has helped me more than anything else I ever tried. I have been, for thirty years, a sufferer from stomach trouble.

REV. E. H. ROWE,
Co-President Southern Seminary.

RHEUMATISM

Leeds, S. C.
I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent cure. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

C. A. CROSBY, M. D.
Florence, S. C.

I suffered with indigestion and kidney trouble, and a year ago was stricken with acute articular rheumatism; was helpless for months, and since using your Spring Water I am walking without any crutch and improving daily. Indigestion much relieved. I wish I could write Shivar Spring Water in the sky so that the world could become acquainted with it.

MRS. THEO. KUKER.

BILIOUSNESS

Greenville, S. C., Feb. 25, 1914.
For over two years, following a nervous breakdown, I have suffered with a liver so torpid that ordinary remedies were absolutely powerless. Under such circumstances, I came to Shivar Spring, and began drinking the Water. Upon advice however, the first night I took a laxative; the second night a milder one. Since then I have taken none at all. The effect of the water has been remarkable — its action on my liver most marked, and my health and spirits greatly improved. I am satisfied that the laxative, followed by the Water, was the proper treatment in my case. My condition is now perfect.

RENAL AND CYSTIC

Columbia, S. C.
I suffered for eight years with kidney trouble and inflammation of the bladder to the extent that I would have to get up during the night some five or six times. After using this water only a few days, I am entirely relieved and suffer no more effect of the trouble whatever.

J. P. D.

High Point, N. C., Oct. 5, 1914.
My wife has had a bad kidney trouble for several years. She has been using the water only about three weeks and it has already made her a new woman. Her color is much improved her appetite is all that she could wish for, her digestion seems to be perfect. We give Shivar Springs credit for it all.

GALLSTONES

Greenville, S. C.
Shivar Spring Water cured my mother of gallstones, or, I might say, it snatched her from the hospital door, as the doctors had said nothing short of an operation would do her any good. After drinking the Water she was able to get out of bed, and is today stout and healthy. I hope these few lines will be of help to some one suffering as my mother did.

"EDIFYING AS THE NEED MAY BE"

BY A. B. LIPSCOMB

"Without Me Ye Can Do Nothing."

The close union of the vine and the branches is absolutely indispensable. If we do not experience it, we are dissatisfied with ourselves; but, what is worse, Christ is dissatisfied with us. Our profession is spurious and counterfeit without it. Christ speaks plainly when he says, "Without me ye can do nothing." Every living thing normally requires for its development an environment containing air, light, heat, and water. In addition to these, if vitality is to be prolonged for any length of time, and if it is to be accompanied with growth and the expenditure of energy, there must be a constant supply of food. Just so Jesus Christ supplies the food for spiritual sustenance; and how shall we receive it if we are not among the branches? He lays down the law of spiritual life in the words: "He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood abideth in me, and I in him."

"Abiding" Means "Feeding."

J. Hudson Taylor, a missionary from China, tells of the mistake that he made, and that many of us make in our interpretation of the passage. "I had thought that abiding in Christ meant keeping our hearts so fixed upon Christ, so constantly meditating upon him and dwelling in him, that we never lose the consciousness of his presence. Now what I thought was abiding, I have since seen was feeding upon Christ. Feeding is a voluntary act. We go to the table and sit down and partake of what is there. But the man who wanted to feed all day and all night wouldn't be a desirable member of any community. That was what I was trying to do, and because I couldn't manage it I would get into a sort of almost religious dyspepsia. I had a little hospital and dispensary work that kept me busy. Perhaps a man would be brought into the place with an artery cut and in imminent danger; within half an hour the question whether he would live or die would be settled, and one's whole attention would be wrapped up in the patient, and one wouldn't think of anything else until the result was known, and then the thought would steal over me: 'Why, for two hours I haven't thought of Jesus.' And I would go off into my closet almost in despair and confess this sin. I was in great distress indeed. I wanted to be feeding at the table all the time. Now, if a man has two or three square meals every day, and perhaps a lunch or two between, he ought to be able to go to work."

This is a simple and good illustration of abiding in Christ. It does not mean that we are meditating upon him all the time or that we have every moment of our lives a mental consciousness of his presence. If it did mean that, then surely no one has ever abided in him. But abiding in Christ means being one with him in prayer, in meditation, and, best of all, in Christian work.

"Abiding" Means "Fruit-Bearing."

We make a serious mistake if we try to make this union nothing more than a mental process. A preacher asked a certain woman why she missed the Lord's-day service. She said: "I did not come to church, but I had a blessed time, at any rate. I simply cut away from everything and was shut up all day in communion with my Lord." When she had finished, the preacher said: "Did you know that your seat was empty in the assembly of the saints; that there was a call for your service in the work of that day; that a class of little children was not instructed because you were at home communing with your Lord? Are you right sure that it was the Savior with whom you were shut up all day?" Union with Christ cannot be dissociated from the practical side of our lives. Jesus himself gives us the test of abiding in him: "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit, he taketh it away; and every branch that beareth fruit, he cleanseth it, that it may bear more fruit." What the vine is interested in, the branches must be interested in. The beloved John makes the lesson plain and practical when he writes: "Hereby we know that we are in him: he that saith he abideth in him ought himself also to walk even as he walked." Sometimes when people get their names on a church book, they are contented in the thought that they are branches and that Jesus is their vine. They are branches so long as they continue to bear fruit. When they cease, he cuts them off whether the church overseers do or not. It is really not difficult to tell whether the branches of a church are few or many, if you will just examine its fruits. There is a certain church whose annual report has come to be somewhat of a classical illustration. It reads something like this:

Number added to the church last year by baptism, none.

Number added by letter, none.

Number dismissed by letter, five.

Number who have died, three.

Amount raised for home missions, nothing.

Amount raised for foreign missions, nothing.

And when the letter closes each year there appears this tragic appeal: "Pray for us, brethren, that we may continue faithful to the end."

The prayer that church should ask for is for some great power to lift them from the ash heap where Jesus Christ cast them long ago. May the Lord deliver us in the spiritual sense from what Grover Cleveland was pleased to call the sin of "innocuous desuetude."

The Blessings Involved.

If I had the time, it would be a great privilege to call attention to the blessings received by those who thus abide in Christ. It would be a delightful, but almost endless, task. It would include every spiritual blessing, beginning with deliverance from past sins and ending with a home in heaven. It would necessarily include a reference to our sufferings and an explanation of how Christ cleanseth his branches that they may bear more fruit. It would involve the statement of how Christ Jesus "was made unto us wisdom from God, both righteousness and sanctification, and redemption." It would involve the fullness of Him who filleth all in all. It would declare a perfect trust and security of soul. It would end with the comprehensive statement of the apostle Paul: "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or anguish, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Even as it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we were accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor things present, nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." (Rom. 8: 35-39.)

A Man's Proposal and Christ's Proposal.

This is the leap year and proposals are in order. He may propose; but if he does not, this year is her chance. But let us suppose that he does. Then I give you a bit of advice, which is free, for some one else gave it to me. "You think you love the young man who is coming this Sunday night to visit you. Suppose he "declares himself" and asks you to become his wife. Are you prepared to say to him: 'I love you, and will trust you through life with my happiness and the lives and weal of our children?'" He is jolly, gay, and handsome, and all the darts of Cupid are twinkling and sparkling in his eyes; but will those eyes always find expression from the love of a true soul?

To-night he says many pleasant things and draws pretty pictures for the future. Does he go to-morrow to a work which gives promise to the fulfillment of your desire in life? Do his ambition and achievements satisfy you? Does his everyday life shine with the noble endeavor of a trustworthy man? Is he doing all he can to build future usefulness and happiness in which you can feel blessed? To these may I not add an important question that includes them all: "Is he a Christian or a man of the world?" These are questions which the experience of after years make many women weep in the bitterness of soul that they were not thought of before they answered "Yes."

Now Jesus makes a proposal. He asks you to come to him and to abide in him always, "so long as you both shall live," which means forever. You run no risk when you accept his proposal. You may prove untrue to him, but he will never prove untrue to you. Surely, when you think of all that he has to offer, you are ready to say to your Savior:

"If I could have my dearest wish fulfilled,
And take my choice of all earth's treasures, too,
Or choose from heaven whatso'er I willed,
I'd ask for you."

Itinerary Notes.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

I spent Friday night and Saturday, February 25, 26, at Manchester, Tenn. There was a fine audience out at meeting on Friday night. The church at Manchester seems to be in good condition. Brother Long makes his home here, and, as everybody knows, is full of energy. He seems to be doing a fine work in Manchester, and all the faithful appreciate him for his work's sake. The church seems to have a fine hold on the town and community. Through Brother Long they are doing a lot of work in the country around. This is as it should be. In this way they can not only help others, but indirectly help themselves. The population of the towns is constantly increased from the country; and by building strong churches around the towns, the town churches will be increased by immigration from the country. The farmer with a small field could not expect a bountiful crop unless he deadened the timber around him. There should be a friendly feeling cultivated by all between the town and country. I learned that they have a fine attendance at all their meetings. The Sunday-morning Bible study is well attended. They do not seem to think that the passage, "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together," applies alone to the assembly when the Lord's Supper is eaten. It is right for Christians to attend every assembly of the church, if they are able to do so. The meeting to study the Bible on Sunday morning or to teach it to others on Sunday night, or a meeting to perform any other duty of the church, should not be forsaken by the Christian who is able to attend. If I am not mistaken, the church in Manchester is doing well and there is before it a bright and useful future.

I spent Sunday, February 27, at McMinnville. They always have large audiences at McMinnville, and it has always been a pleasure to me to meet with them. While there is no perfect church except the perfect model in the New Testament, and no perfect man except the man Christ Jesus, the McMinnville church is a good church in many ways, and there are many good men and women in this church. Brother Price Billingsley was in Canada holding a meeting, and I did not get to see him, but his faithful wife was out at meeting. If it was much colder in Canada where Brother Billingsley was than it was in McMinnville. I do not envy him his trip. Some six or seven inches of snow fell there Monday, and I did not get out to Viola, where I had an appointment for Tuesday night. I called the brethren up, and they seemed willing that I should give up the appointment. It is not generally best to do this, because it gives the preacher a bad reputation. We ought always to try to fill every appointment we make; and if at any time we are forced to make a disappointment, the reason should be good enough to be accepted by everybody. I never feel good when I cause a disappointment.

I stopped at Doyle on Tuesday night, the night I was to have been in Viola, and an appointment was soon circulated and we had a nice audience out at meeting. The brethren meet at Doyle in the Northern Methodists' house, as they have no house of their own. They meet every Sunday and have their Bible study and worship. They are doing very well here, so far as I could tell, and they are looking forward with interest to Brother Pittman's meeting which he is to hold for them in the early summer.

I preached at Sparta in the evening of March 1. The rain hindered the meeting some, but still a very good audience, considering the weather, was out at meeting. Brother J. D. Gunn makes his home at Sparta, and his loyalty in preaching the truth is unquestioned and unquestionable. It will be a cold day in August when Dan Gunn sacrifices the truth for any purpose or for anybody. One can look at Brother Gunn and see that he asks no quarters and accepts no compromise. An unconditional surrender to the truth is what he seems to demand. I admire such men. The church at Sparta is noted for its liberality and is constantly on the lookout for opportunities to help the weak places. I learned that they are developing some good talent at home by doing much of their public teaching with their own membership. This is right. All churches should edify themselves as far as they can and send the preachers to the weak places to build up churches. Some of the Sparta brethren have the idea—and I think it a good one—that they ought to pick out a place and continue to support the preacher in that place till they are able to stand alone—not hold one meeting in a place and then neglect the few new members to die, but continue to send a preacher to the same place till they are able to stand alone. This, I am sure, is right. The Sparta church is doing a fine work, and it is an inspiration to meet with them.

Hard on the Methodists.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Under the heading, "Irish Shots," B. F. Vance, in the Baptist Flag of February 24, has the following to say:

Big Methodist meeting here. Big evangelist from Georgia; big crowds and a big lot of Baptists attending; big rich member did a lot of beggin' to get me to go, but I told him, "No!" I told him that Methodism denied every doctrine that Baptists teach, and if such diametrical opposition to, and contradiction of, Baptist doctrines does not constitute "causing the divisions contrary to the doctrines we have learned," then such a state of affairs cannot exist, and since the good Book beseeches (implores, begs,) me to avoid such people, to prove my loyalty to the Book, I beg to be excused.

This paragraph is closely followed with this bit of poetic effusion:

A Baptist may think he's doing well
While singing in a gate of hell;
But there'll come a time he'll find his wrong,
And the devil got his praise and song.

There are no quotation marks accompanying this "rhyming," and we are left to the conclusion that it sprang from the fertile brain of Mr. Vance. Be that as it may, and whatever may be said of the author as a writer of verse, one thing is certain—viz., his poetry discloses a few facts to which attention is invited.

1. A Baptist may sing "in a gate of hell." That is certainly getting pretty close to that "place" without "falling from grace." But suppose a Baptist should die while "singing in a gate of hell?" Would the angels come that near to the flames for the "once-in-grace-always-in-grace" singer? Beloved, we would advise you to find some other gate at which to do your singing. But we are told of such a Baptist: "There'll come a time he'll find his wrong, and the devil got his praise and song." Now, if the devil gets a Baptist's praise and song, what will likely become of that Baptist? Was he in the grace and favor of God while giving the devil his "praise and song?" He must have been, if the doctrine of the Baptists, "Once in grace, always in grace," is true.

2. By implication this poetry designates that Methodist revival as "a gate of hell," and the "big lot of Baptists attending" as singers at that gate. Now, if there had been just one Baptist singing at that gate, he might have been excused on the ground of never having been regenerated; but here were a "big lot" of Baptists engaged in that singing, and it would hardly be fair to say that a "big lot" of Baptists in one community were unregenerated.

3. But there will come a time, we are told, when the Baptist who "sings at a gate of hell" will "find his wrong." It must be a very little wrong, if one can "sing at a gate of hell" and let the devil get "his praise and song" and then go to heaven! It seems that Mr. Vance has thrown the cherished doctrine of "once in grace, always in grace," into a pickle with his poetry. Is this New Testament doctrine, that one can "sing at a gate of hell" and remain in the grace and favor of God?

Mr. Vance says he told his friend who was trying to persuade him to "sing at a gate of hell" that he must be excused. He says: "I told him that Methodism denied every doctrine that Baptists teach." Well, this is a revelation in more ways than one. We have always known that the things which makes one a Baptist are not found within the lids of the Bible, but we did think they taught faith in Christ, repentance from sin, and a change of heart. But since Mr. Vance says that "Methodism denied every doctrine Baptists teach," if he be correct in this statement, we must understand that Baptists do not teach faith in Christ, repentance from sin, and a change of heart, for Methodism teaches these things. Either Mr. Vance has misrepresented his brethren or Baptist doctrine must be understood not to include faith, repentance, and change of heart. Well, that is the naked truth, anyway; for the things enumerated are Bible doctrine, and in no sense whatever Baptist doctrine.

But he thinks opposition to Baptist doctrines constitutes the cause of divisions contrary to the doctrine received in New Testament times from Christ and the apostles! Why, my friend, neither Christ nor a single apostle taught one word of Baptist doctrine. Where do you read in the New Testament about "Baptist doctrines?" Of the first converts to Christianity it is said: "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' teaching and fellowship, in the breaking of bread and the prayers." (Acts 2: 42.) That is the way the Book talks, my brother; but what would you give if it could be made to read, "And they continued steadfastly in the Baptist teaching or doctrine?" The Baptists themselves, with their human denominational name and unscriptural practices, have caused division among the professed followers of Christ, and it is not fair to seek an escape from the just censure.

But, again, the Baptists claim that the Methodists are children of God, in a state of salvation; hence, according to this, the Methodists only oppose things taught by the Baptists that are nonessential to salvation. Why, then, all of this fuss, and why compare singing at a Methodist revival to "singing at a gate of hell?" What a stress Baptists place on the nonessentials! Will Mr. Vance give us some more poetry? Let us hope not.

Should We Be Silent?

BY W. H. CARTER.

My article in the Gospel Advocate of February 3 has been the cause of one brother's writing to me and suggesting that we all hold our peace on the "kingdom question" until a certain brother sets forth what he believes on that question in his own paper. I am not a subscriber to that paper and do not know anything about what that brother is setting forth as his belief, and may never see a copy of it. So if I should be silent until I learn from him what he believes, and should never learn, I would forever be silent. Am I morally, religiously, or in any other way bound to this brother, or any one else, to be silent on the "kingdom question," or any other question, until this brother, or any other brother, writes out what he believes? Sometimes, no doubt, "silence is golden," but is this the time? Does the Bible teach us to hold our peace until error has gotten under full headway, or to cry aloud and spare not? If it is truth, God's truth, that the kingdom of the Christ was set up on the day of Pentecost following the resurrection of Christ, and some one takes the position that it was not, writes it out, and it is published and sent broadcast over the land, why wait until some other brother writes out what he believes about it before any one says anything or makes an effort to show it to be erroneous? Sometimes error spreads rapidly, and it might take this brother a long time, in a circuitous way, to tell what he does believe; and when he does tell, who is under obligation to believe as he does? By the way, are some of the brethren resting upon their oars and waiting for this certain brother to write them out a creed that they may know what to believe on the "kingdom question?" Do you say the idea is preposterous and the insinuation ungenerous? Then why wait till he writes out what he believes?

I mentioned what Mr. Russell teaches on this question, and spoke of some brethren's accepting Mr. Russell's teaching, and showed from plain scriptures that they are in error. I called no names, personated no one, but it seems the shot drove center, knocked out "all four points," and caused my good brother to come to the rescue of one certain brother and claim that we should not condemn Mr. Russell for teaching the truth, and, therefore, should not condemn this certain brother for teaching the same truth. Then why wait till he writes out what he believes? If he believes as Mr. Russell does on the "kingdom question," Mr. Russell has written it out for him. Why wait for it to be written out again? If he does not believe as Mr. Russell does, then my article does not apply to him. If he does, then why not keep on pegging away at it as long as there is one to beg for an armistice until some one can write out what he believes? The truth is, I felt like the time had come when we should all speak out so that the brethren should know where we stand on this vital point of doctrine. I am not ashamed of any position I take, and want people to know it, so that when they call me to preach to them they will know what to expect. I will not then slip in on them and lead some astray.

Christ's was a humble spirit. What a matchless view of his humility we have in John 12, when he rose from his supper, laid aside his garments, and took a towel, girded himself, poured water into a basin, and began to wash his disciples' feet! Christ is on earth as one that serveth. Humility followed him from his birth in the manger to his borrowed grave. We have just as much of Christianity as we have humility.—The Young People.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

By S. H. Hall

The Church of Christ—Lesson IX.

Conditions of Entrance Specifically Studied.

3. Baptism. Let it be remembered that in Lesson VI. we learned that the "Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." In studying the conditions of entrance, we are simply learning how to become "such as should be saved." This is the lesson of paramount importance to man on becoming a member of the church of Christ, for the Lord adds daily to his church such as should be saved. There are just as many members of the church of Christ on earth to-day as there are souls who have allowed themselves to become such as should be saved. In the two preceding lessons we have learned that faith and repentance, undoubtedly, we must have, else we cannot be numbered with the such as should be saved. With a heart hungering for God's will, not ours, to be done, let us now open the "blessed Book" and see what our Lord has to say on the subject.

(1) Is it essential? Well, so far as I am concerned, I do not care whether it is or not. By this I simply mean that if it is the Lord's will to save me without my being baptized, I have no objections whatever to his doing so. Why should I? And, too, if it is the Lord's will not to save me without my being baptized, I am just as well satisfied. Can you give me one reason why I should not be? I tell you there is too much of this going to the Bible wanting your own will to be done, not God's; wanting to find your own preconceived ideas taught there, regardless of whether it is Jehovah's will or not. Here let me say that it is terribly dangerous to thus trifle with God and his holy word. "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him; and he will show them his covenant." (Ps. 25: 14.) Are you among the number? If not, well do you need to learn the lesson that whether you want the Lord to or not, he will have his own will and way in saving men, and that this will will stand, unchanged, though the heavens fall. Why should I, then, try to make the Bible teach something that it does not teach? Though I may deceive myself into the idea that it does so teach, in the end my folly will be revealed; hence all that I have gotten out of my course is the temporary satisfaction that the Bible teaches as I want it to, and must be humiliated in the end to be made to see that I have handled God's word deceitfully.

Now, we will not concern ourselves just yet whether God saves us before, in, or after baptism. The question is simply this: The soul who refuses to be baptized, can we number him with such as should be saved? Do we have one example under the new covenant of Christ's so considering the soul that refuses to be baptized? Now I ask you to carefully and prayerfully read the following scriptures and judge for yourselves as to the essentiality of baptism: Matt. 3: 13-17; 28: 18-20; Mark 16: 15, 16; Luke 7: 30; Luke 24: 46-49; Acts 2: 36-41; 8: 5, 12, 35-39; 9: 6; 22: 16; 10: 5, 6, 47; 11: 13, 14; 16: 14, 15, 27-33; 18: 8; Rom. 6: 3-5, 17, 18; Gal. 3: 26, 27; Rom. 8: 1; 2 Cor. 1: 20; 5: 17; Eph. 1: 7; Col. 1: 13, 14; 2: 10; 1 John 5: 10, 11; 1 Thess. 4: 13, 14; Rev. 14: 13; 1 Pet. 3: 18-21. Please to note in the above array of scriptures that salvation is in Christ, not out of him, and that we are clearly taught that the penitent believer is baptized into him. But you say: "Brother Hall, certainly a man who refuses to be baptized is not among the such as should be saved. Baptism is the outgrowth, the fruit, the indispensable consequence of salvation. The man's refusing to be baptized, or even hesitating, is proof positive that he is unsaved. If he were really a saved man, he would be baptized regardless of all opposition." So I have heard it contended. But if this be true, you are making baptism an essential and indispensable fruit of salvation, hence establishing its essentiality, just as a begettal precedes and is absolutely essential to a birth. Would you say the begettal alone is essential? Certainly not. Both are absolutely essential. It must be admitted that, before you can have any scriptural baptism, faith and repentance must establish in the soul a begotten state. But why call that salvation apart from the birth? Had we not better leave it just as Christ put it—viz.: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven." (John 3: 5.) Here we have it all, completed. And look again at all the examples of conversion cited above. Where do you find a man numbered among the such as should be saved until he was baptized? Where do you find people in the days of the apostles deferring their baptism or feeling the least indifferent toward it? But enough for this lesson.

The Work in Florida.

We give our readers the following letters from two of our best workers in the Southern field. Brother Cameron has done more, doubtless, than any other living man for the cause in Florida. Too, we have no worker who has said so little about his work, and about whom, perhaps, less has been said by others. Brother Dunn is a most excellent worker in every way, and must be commended for wanting to get the Florida field before the brotherhood. Let us not stop until every need of this field has been met. We earnestly insist that these brethren let us know more of its needs, and may the brethren everywhere give it their attention and see that all needs are supplied.

Pine Castle, Fla., February 12, 1916.—Dear Brother Dunn: Your card to hand; also your letter of the seventh inst. reached me this morning, having been delayed in the forwarding.

I would be exceedingly glad to see you while you are in the State and talk over the situation. I think that I know the State about as well as almost any one in it. I have been traveling Florida for over thirty years. In different kinds of work, I have seen all sides of it. For fifteen years I have been devoting my time to the spiritual side of it. I feel that I understand our real need down here. I often feel as I think Nehemiah felt when in the night he viewed the ruins of Jerusalem. I certainly feel like saying to my brethren just across the State line as he said to his brethren. (Neh. 2: 5, 17.) Often I could shed tears over our deplorable condition if it would do any good. It seems so strange to me that our brethren and papers are giving so much time and space to get, send, and maintain workers in the foreign fields, and make no effort to save those under the very shadow of their church spires. I, you understand, am not at all opposed to the foreign work; that's all right. But, in the name of God, why not try to save those next to us? Here in Florida, with the same amount of means at my command that either of the missionaries has, I could have fifty additions to their one. Soon Florida would be self-supporting and the work would go on unhindered. I have given my all, almost my very lifeblood, to this field and work. Yet it seems to be unknown beyond the State line. I have asked myself so many times: Why is it thus? Is it my fault? Am I lacking in ability, in consecration? Or is it because the brethren do not know about the work, or have they no confidence in me? I say all such questions arise in my mind. But I can find no satisfactory answer to any of them.

I know some fine young men here in the State who would gladly give themselves to the work, if they could get only a partial support. Brother Saunders, who graduated at Potter Bible School and who is a most acceptable preacher, has had to turn to the farm. Brother Colson, of the same school, is devoting his time to teaching school. Both are fine boys and capable of doing much good; but they have to live.

I have many calls that I cannot respond to for want of means. Right now I am wanted at Fort Green Springs, but cannot do a thing there without a tent. There is a fine opening for me at New Smyrna; but the only chance to get in there is to rent a hall, and that will cost one dollar and fifty cents per night. I cannot afford it.

I am hoping that some day the churches will awake to the opportunity right at their door and that Florida will come into her own in the way of the truth.

May the Lord bless you.

W. A. CAMERON.

Dear Brother Hall: The above is very interesting reading matter. We know what Brother Cameron says is all too true. Brother Cameron is in the farthest of the "Far Southern Field," and I am at the extreme Southern point. Therefore I am sending it to you. Our work here is slow and difficult, but I am enjoying it. I am preaching and teaching in the church house part of the time and in schoolhouses and from house to house in homes the rest of the time. We must have a good, all-round evangelist, who will endure hardness as a good soldier, in Miami. Who shall it be? I baptized a lady, who is in middle life, in the Atlantic Ocean, Monday at 3 P.M. It was an impressive scene. I think this field inviting for a great work.

JOHN E. DUNN.

The Outlook.

Naturally I am an optimist. I do not now recall anything that has come my way since I have been trying to live the Christian life that I could not see the hand of God and sunshine in. If I understand the Scriptures that abound in "his precious and exceeding great promises," this is the way it should be.

But I had in mind, when I wrote the above heading, the outlook for the cause of Christ in this State. We are praying that this may be a great year, and I verily believe it is to be our best. Brother C. E. Coleman, with his good wife, is on the ground in Dade County, battling away. We are expecting good things from that section this year. Brother Adair Chapman is not asleep, but is circulating good literature and preparing for a harvest of souls. Brother Lovell is back in our State, teaching school and conducting two Bible studies on Lord's day, preparing for a harvest. In a letter from Brother Mosing, good news comes from Macon. Those brethren are at work. This always brings blessings from above. We hope to have Brother Frank B. Shepherd on the ground there. So soon as Brother Carter can conveniently do so, he means to reënter this field. Brother Reavis and Brother Flavil Hall are working away in North Georgia, and good is daily being done. Brother Hugh A. Price, Jr., is doing a fine work in the southern part of the State, teaching school and preaching the word. The Vaidosta brethren, with Brother Claus as their evangelist, are a tower of strength to the work in this State. Brother Prevatt is doing a good work at Dasher, teaching and preaching the gospel. Brother Brumit is located near Buchanan, farming and doing a great work as a minister of the word. The forces in Atlanta have started better this year than ever before. We pray God's blessings upon them all—not only those named above, but several hundred whose names are just as worthy to be called. Let us all read more, pray more, work more, and the Lord will be in us to "will and to work, for his good pleasure." (Phil. 2: 13.)

"Pushing the World Along."

BY F. W. SMITH.

This is the title of a volume of short sermons, nineteen in all, by George P. Rutledge. The subject-matter of each discourse is good, suggestive, and helpful in many ways, but in a few instances there seems to be a lack of fitness between the text and the sermon. While in such cases the text may be wrested, still the lessons given are profitable and the book is well worth the price. This neat little volume may be had of the Standard Publishing Company, Cincinnati, Ohio (Eighth, Ninth, and Cutter Streets), for one dollar.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

Work.

We cannot go to heaven without paying the price. Instead of teaching that the world is growing worse, we should consecrate our strength and energies to the correction of evils. We may well devote our talents and strength to the prevention of the oppression of the poor. Seek to prevent the degradation that comes from the liquor traffic.

"We are not here to play, to dream, to drift;
We have hard work to do and loads to lift."

Bible Characters.

Scoffers sometimes speak slightly of the Old Testament saints, and count their weaknesses and sins an argument against the inspiration of the inspired record. To our mind, it is a proof of inspiration. The Bible is a plain book. It does not varnish nor gloss over its characters. It differs from human compositions. Their heroes are perfect. No selfishness or sin is allowed to mar their actions. The Bible gives the truth and the whole truth. It does not encourage saint worship. Its narrative is in accord with its assertion that there is not a just man upon the earth that liveth and sinneth not.—Herald and Presbyter.

The Bible represents things and persons as they really are, and not as we would have them. In this respect, as well as many others, it is different from all other books. Equal attention is given to the virtues and vices of men. No human production does or can do this. Hence the Bible is a divinely inspired book.

Pure Ideals.

Whatever we do, we should do heartily as unto the Lord and not unto men. Solomon says: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." (Eccles. 9: 10.) Paul declares: "Brethren, I count not myself yet to have laid hold: but one thing I do, forgetting the things which are behind, and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 3: 13, 14.)

A tourist, while rambling around on the south coast of England a few years ago, came upon an old, rusty cannon, almost sunken out of sight in the mud. After much effort, he managed to read this inscription:

Aim me straight and keep me clean,
And I'll carry a ball to Calais Green.

Calais Green was fifteen miles from the spot on which the cannon stood. Is there any better foundation for strength and clearness of aim than a pure life and high ideals? We must aim high if we would reach high.

The Wicked Responsible for War.

An irresponsible, conceited, quarrelsome, and opinionated man on a throne has power to bring on a war and lead to the murder of millions of the men in his own country and in the countries with which he has quarreled. Privileged financial and aristocratic interests may also combine to make war for their own private profit or the gratification of their own personal spite. Without doubt, too many privileges have been accorded to men who have been unprepared and unworthy to carry them. The wise and good and responsible people of the world should have a voice in deciding whether a war shall be declared, and it is certain that, if left to such people to decide, some wars never would have occurred.—Herald and Presbyter.

People who are preaching the degeneracy of the human race appear to hold the best people of the day responsible for the most cruel war now raging in Europe. We may be sure of one thing, and that is that Christians are not responsible for this war. The religion of Christ opposes war. Christ says: "Love your enemies, and pray for them that persecute you; that ye may be sons of your Father who is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust." (Matt. 5: 44, 45.)

Cloaked Infidelity.

Infidelity is never so dangerous as when it expresses itself in pious phrases. We have seen in several papers a select reading on "Why I Love the Bible," by William Newton Clarke. He loves the Bible, not because he is required, for that would be only an outward reason; not because it was let down from heaven, for it grew upon earth; not because it comes straight from God, for many of its words breathe out the spirit of men. O, no, he loves it "because it glows with the light and love of Christ;" "because it shames, inspires, and calls upward. It is the book of faith and hope and love; of comfort, holiness, and power; of salvation and eternal life;" "because out of it I may gather, and have gathered, a little book most precious, a Bible from within the Bible, which I bind to my heart." In other words, he loves the Bible, not because it is God's word or has any authority, but because he finds some things in it he likes. He picks out what he approves and makes that his Bible. This is the doctrine of man's inner consciousness as a standard of authority superior to the Bible. It would be bad enough if plainly declared, but when sugar-coated with pious phrases and expressions of affection and comfort and hope, it is deceptive and doubly dangerous.—Herald and Presbyter.

Without modification I most heartily indorse the above from our esteemed contemporary. We should love the Bible because it is God's book, speaks with his authority, and because we can know what is righteous, pure, and elevating only as we learn it from God through the Bible. If men are to accept from the Bible only the part that suits them, we will have as many standards of right as we have men. God knows better than we, and "it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." (Jer. 10: 23.) God is perfect, but man is sinful and needs the pardon God offers him. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto Jehovah, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith Jehovah. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." (Isa. 55: 7-9.) If a man accepts only such parts of the Bible as his reason approves, he does not accept those parts because they are the word of God, but because his reason approves them. The man who can reason his way to heaven needs neither God nor the Bible; but this can no man do. Those who insist that they must have a good and wise reason for all God does or has done before they can worship him cannot and do not worship him at all. The genuinely converted man puts away childish things. "Except ye turn, and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 18: 3.) The editor of the same journal very pertinently says on the same subject:

We are always suspicious of the man who claims an inner revelation superior to the Old and New Testaments, or who puts some "larger truth" in place of the gospel. We sympathize with a writer who says that "this talk about the 'new truth,' the 'larger truth,' the 'modern truth,' and the 'higher truth' is sound, and nothing but sound." Truth does not change. As the same writer says: "The changes are in the groups who look at the great Sun of truth—the Bible—and bark at it, or they are hunting spots on it; some are shooting arrows at it; some are firing aeroplane guns at it; but it goes on in its great course, giving out its glorious light."

QUERY DEPARTMENT

Brother McQuiddy: Our Bible class at Flat Rock had a little disagreement over Acts 7: 59: "And they stoned Stephen, calling upon the Lord, and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Who called upon God and said, "Receive my spirit?"

W. H. DOWNEY.

Undoubtedly it was Stephen who called upon the Lord, "saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." They that stoned had spirits, while Stephen had a spirit. As the spirit of Stephen was in the act of being separated from his body by death, he (Stephen) asked the Lord to receive his ("my") spirit. Stephen was being stoned to death, so could appropriately call upon the Lord to receive his spirit.

Brother McQuiddy: I claim that to be apt to teach as an elder does not necessarily mean that we should be on our feet. One of our young preachers differs with me and asked for chapter and verse. As you are better prepared to answer it, I will ask you to do so, as it may benefit others.

W. J. McALISTER.

You are correct and the young preacher is in error. He reminds me of myself. I had preached six sermons and imagined I was a fair preacher, as the six sermons resulted in six baptisms. I undertook to hold a meeting in connection with my brother. He heard my failures, so advised me, after the meeting was over, not to try to preach again until I attended school another year. The same advice would be helpful to the young preacher. The verse in which you find "apt to teach" is authority for your contention. Webster defines "apt" "fit, or fitted; suited, suitable; appropriate." The Holy Spirit teaches that the bishop, or elder, must be fitted or suited to teach the word of God. He must be fitted to teach it sitting, standing, walking, or by whatever method he may elect to teach.

Brother McQuiddy: Please explain: (1) "Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away." (Matt. 5: 42.) Is it our duty to lend to every one that would borrow of us? (2) "But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face." (Matt. 6: 17.) Is it our duty as Christians to fast? If so, when, and how often? If not, what does this scripture mean?

J. D. STEWART.

(1) Palestine swarmed with the blind and beggars. The Lord does not bid us to give to every one, nor to lend to every one, for this would not be a blessing, but to have a spirit that will ever be ready to do so whenever it is right. To give and to lend are two duties of charity which Christ joins together and which he sets on an equal footing. In such matters both prudence and charity must be consulted. It is sinful to uphold the indolent in his idleness. (2) The Savior was dealing with the motive that led to fasting. He was showing the right and wrong way of righteousness in contrast. He was insisting that nothing should be done for show, to be seen of men. While fasting is not now enjoined upon us, it is not wrong, and, indeed, is often richly blessed, but never when our object is to appear to men to fast. We should glorify God in all our acts of devotion.

Brother McQuiddy: What should be done with church members who continually stay away from the services, especially the Lord's Supper? Some say they cannot meet in the morning, and one of the elders refuses to have the Lord's Supper at any time except Sunday morning. Should we withdraw fellowship from members who refuse to attend the services, after repeated warnings and invitations to come to them? If so, who should take the initiative in such work? Suppose the elders do not have time to attend to it?

G. M. RANCE.

Those who deliberately and willfully absent themselves from the worship should be admonished to forsake their evil way. "And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works; not forsaking our own assembling together, as the custom of some is, but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day drawing nigh." (Heb. 10: 24, 25.) Note that members should exhort one another. It is not scriptural for one or two to do all the exhorting. Frequency of exhortation should give no one offense. Paul says: "But exhort one another day by day, so long as it is called To-day; lest any one of you be hardened by the deceitfulness of sin." (Heb. 3: 13.) The church should exercise due diligence for the salvation of souls; every member should realize his individual responsibility. The Scriptures do not warrant partaking of the Lord's Supper only in the morning. The elder, in seeking to bind this custom upon the church, is endeavoring to fasten his opinion upon it. Those who will not meet to worship God after repeated warnings and exhortations have withdrawn themselves from the church. The church should take public recognition of this through its elders or those who are accustomed to take the initiative or lead in church work. The elder who does not have time to do his duty does not have time to be a Christian elder. He is elder in name only. Every Christian has all the time there is, and time enough in which to do his duty.

Brother McQuiddy: (1) Is it appropriate to sing song No. 172 in the "New Christian Hymn Book?" (2) Is it right to sing No. 250 in the same book? (3) A man in this community married his niece. A son was born unto them. The action of the elders led them to get a divorce; however, they still live together. The son is now twenty-one years old. The woman claims membership in the church; sometimes she attends and communes. Is she a member in good standing?

X.

(1, 2) I see no impropriety in singing the songs mentioned. (3) If you will read the eighteenth chapter of Leviticus, you will find that the marriage of near kin is prohibited by the law of Moses. Notwithstanding the prohibitions in this chapter, it must be evident that in the infancy of the world the marriage of near kin was necessary and that even brothers must have matched with their own sisters. This must have been the case in Adam's family. When this necessity no longer existed, the thing became improper and inexpedient for two reasons: (a) That the duties of relatives might not be confounded with those of a political or social kind; for could a man be a brother and a husband at the same time and fulfill the duties of both? Impossible. (b) That by intermarrying with other families the bonds of the social compact might be strengthened and extended, so that the love of our neighbor might be found to be an easy duty and that feuds, divisions, and wars might be prevented. In the absence of finding any law in the New Testament forbidding the marriage of our kindred, it is safe and right to respect the prohibition as given by Moses. We do find, however, that the principle promulgated by Moses is indorsed by the Holy Spirit when he disapproves of the church at Corinth for permitting a man to have his father's wife. The man and woman to whom the querist refers would not have been divorced had they not known they were living in sin. Such willful disregard of the authority of God's word and of the approved conduct of society should not be countenanced by the church. The church should withdraw fellowship from such people and they should be turned over to Satan that they may learn how to behave themselves.

My Mother, Again.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

In a characteristically concise, but superlatively complimentary, editorial, Brother Burnett, editor and proprietor of Burnett's Budget, speaks of my article written for a recent number of the Gospel Advocate, on "What I Owe to My Mother."

The merit of that article is my mother in it. Take her out of it, and little will be left. As I sit here to-day, still confined to my room, while winds from the west shake snow from their wings, I am with her again, shivering in the cold of a long-ago day I can never forget—a day like this, but colder. I am thinking of her as the bravest little woman in the world—mother, doctor, nurse, and comforter combined—a friend to everybody—sympathetic, tender, unselfish, and true. I do not wonder that all who knew her loved her; but I do wonder why her son was not a braver, better boy, and why he did not become and be a wiser, better, greater man. The children of such mothers should be a blessing to all, a curse to none, cherishing a spirit of sympathy for everybody and for everything that can sigh, suffer, sorrow, or be sad.

My erstwhile pupil, my brother in Christ, my never-failing, never-wavering friend, Judge M. H. Meeke, a great lawyer and a great judge, was alone at his desk when he received a copy of the Advocate containing the article of which Brother Burnett writes. He immediately read the article and wrote the following letter, never dreaming of its ever appearing in print; but I am sure he will not object to my inserting it here:

Nashville, Tenn., December 24, 1915.—Dear Brother Larimore: I have just read, in the Gospel Advocate, your article, "What I Owe to My Mother." Every one who has, or has had, a Christian mother should read it. The subject-matters of the article—I mean the points in your life where your mother touched and impressed it—are rich food for thought, helpful to the careworn pilgrim and calculated to do much good to those who read and heed them.

Brother Larimore, I think your life and your family became entwined with the life of my father's family in a strange and most peculiar way. I have considered it, in the providence of God, a great blessing to us; and I have always tried to make the blessing reciprocal. My father was devoted to you, as I am sure you know. My brother, George, who was with you less than any other one of us, was partial, very partial, to you; and, in his last moments on earth, he requested that the catalogue of your Mars' Hill school and a copy of your Franklin College valedictory address be placed under his head in his coffin—which was done. How strange this was, and still is, to me! It is more like things we read of than things we know.

I met your mother at Corinth, Miss., and took her to my father's Tennessee home, sixteen miles over a common country road, the first time she was ever in that country. We had a good team, and I drove fast, making the trip in a little less than two hours. Occasionally I would ask her if I was driving too fast; and she would quietly answer: "Not at all." There were no frights, no screams, no catchings of me by the arm. She acted as if she had confidence in the driver and had been behind prancing steeds before.

After that trip I knew her well. I adored her while she lived, and I revere her memory now. My father and every member of his family loved her—my mother, if possible, more devotedly than any of the rest. Brother Rufus, who was with her most, was devotedly fond of her. He has told me that, as she neared the end, she frequently called for him. I said to him: "I thank God that there was one of my name near enough to her to answer her calls, and I'm sure you answered every one of them."

She was a pleasant companion for the old and the young—for all. While her educational culture and social attainments may not have been up to date, she was always easy in or with any company she met. I remember a time, at my home in Nashville, when several friends of my family were present, and you were a little late in arriving—a thing very unusual for you—and the company was all at the table in the dining room when you came in. Your mother, then nearly ninety years old, rose from the table and approached you with the greeting, "My son," grasped your hand and kissed you, with the calmness and grace of a veritable queen—which she was. Her manner was so timely, sweet, and unaffected that it elicited expressions of approval from those present.

From my first acquaintance with her I appreciated her most highly, and she seemed to love me with the tenderness of a mother. She never criticized me or any one else, so far as I know; but she was always ready with expressions of approval and commendation for every worthy act I did of which she had knowledge. She was at my father's and Rufus', while Rufus lived on the old home place, much, as you know; and I never heard any expressions concerning her, from servants or others, that did not seem to emanate from love and appreciation. All were always glad when she came and sorry when she went away.

I have seen her in the midst of a bevy of noisy, chattering children; but never a word of impatience did she utter. Always gentle, she was as firm in her convictions of faith and duty as the rock of Gibraltar. She was a wonder to me. The sunshine and goodness of her life will be felt in the world through years to come.

When I finished reading the article about your mother, I wanted to say something; I knew no one to whom I could more appropriately say it than to you; and, not having an opportunity to say it, I have written some of it. May the Lord bless us all, and hide, with his tender compassion and infinite love, our many errors and mistakes.

"Jacob's Ladder."

This is the title of an excellent book of sermons preached by Brother E. M. Borden at Neosho, Mo. They were stenographically reported by Miss Bell. The compilation is the work of Brother T. B. Clark. All who have read the book are well pleased with its vigorous treatment of live themes. We will send it for one dollar and twenty-five cents, postpaid, to any address. Address all orders to the McQuiddy Printing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

What Should Be Our Attitude Toward the Young Men's Christian Association.

BY M. C. K.

The following note of inquiry is submitted for our consideration by a most thoughtful, faithful, and conscientious brother, and we not only gladly give it attention, but, because of the general importance of the principles involved, we answer it through the Gospel Advocate. The inquiry is as follows:

Mr. M. C. Kurfees, Louisville, Ky.—Dear Brother Kurfees: I am coming to you again that I may profit by your knowledge of the principles underlying the New Testament teaching and your logical acumen combined. The proposition to establish a Young Men's Christian Association is being agitated here and received with much enthusiasm; and some of the members of the church are in favor of it. What should be the attitude of the church of Christ toward the Young Men's Christian Association? If the institution is not to be supported and encouraged, upon what grounds the refusal? If you were invited to speak or preach at a Young Men's Christian Association building by the secretary, would you? If not, why not? I thank you, in advance, most cordially for information requested. X.

In the case of some things like the problem here presented, it is difficult to write the truth and make proper defense of it without appearing to condemn what ought not to be condemned. Hence, in order that our investigation may be free from all improper bias and proceed upon safe and sound principles, it is necessary to make some discriminations. This fact and the importance of it will appear as we proceed. Hence, we invite careful attention to the following points:

1. That the Young Men's Christian Association does things that are right and proper is a well-known fact to all who are familiar with its organization and work. It goes without saying, therefore, that these things ought not to be condemned, but should be encouraged on every hand.

2. It is, nevertheless, a fact that, as a religious body, organization, or institution, it is unknown to the New Testament. In other words, apart from the association of young men in their capacity as members of the church of God, there was no such thing as a Young Men's Christian Association in the apostolic age. This fact can be verified by any one who will take the pains to read the whole of the New Testament.

3. If young men were thus associated merely as individuals and were doing whatever religious work they do as members of the church of God, such association and such work would be justified on precisely the same ground as would any possible good, done in the name of the Lord, by an individual Christian. Missionary work, or any other religious work which it is proper to do, for that matter, done thus by an individual or individuals, who do not assume the oversight and management of such work for the churches, would be justifiable, under some circumstances, on the same ground. The wrong of the modern missionary society is not in the fact that it is necessarily wrong for an individual or individuals to do religious work in their individual capacity, for it is not; but it is in the fact of taking the supervision and management of the work of the churches out of the hands of the board divinely appointed for that purpose, and placing such supervision and management in the hands of a board appointed by man. And it so happens that these two boards, the one local and the other general, represent two distinct ecclesiastical orders or systems that are antagonistic to each other. It is a plain case of displacing divine wisdom with human wisdom. In a similar way, young men make a mistake here in departing from the divine arrangement when they refuse to associate themselves for work in the divine institution founded for that purpose, and in founding another for the same purpose with different terms of membership.

4. But "what should be the attitude of the church" toward this institution? What has already been said will help us to answer this question. We must not condemn or refuse to encourage what is right; and yet we must not indorse or encourage what is wrong. Hence, a preacher should treat this institution just as he should treat all other institutions that have in them both good and evil. Standing aloof from membership in them and from any other step that would so entangle him as to make him uphold the wrong in them, he may commend the good they do and condemn whatever is wrong. So, like Paul, we would "speak or preach" wherever the people will hear the word of God; but it would be wrong to hamper one's self even in preaching the word of God in a way that would make one support or uphold what is wrong. Hence, with these facts and this "attitude" clearly understood by the parties concerned, he may "speak or preach at a Young Men's Christian Association building," or anywhere else, and thus, like Paul, seize every possible "opportunity" for working "that which is good toward all men."

Reply to Brother Lee Jackson on "Commercializing the Gospel." No. 2.

BY E. A. E.

Attention was called last week to a part of Brother Jackson's article. The other part of it staggers me. He says:

Yet, notwithstanding their pleadings for a strict observance of New Testament teaching and worship, some of our leaders inconsistently claim that honor to the cause of Christ comes through the efforts of neglected, self-sacrificing preachers who make tents to support themselves, while the wealthy congregations served by these well-paid leaders are to be left at ease in the possession of their accumulated wealth, and increasing in that worldly-mindedness which dishonors Christ. This sort of condition does not speak well for our plea, and it is a condition which at present stands in the way of victories which might otherwise be gained for the Savior's cause. Would it not be well for some of these leaders to keep quiet and let the admonitions to "make tents" be given by the preachers who really work at the business of making tents?

In a previous article I mentioned that several preachers have written me in commendation of these lessons which I am trying to enforce, and requesting me to go straight to the mark. From one of these letters I make this quotation: "It is easy for the man in the shade to advise the man with the spade, but it comes in bad grace from the man who never uses the spade." This is from a preacher whose name frequently appears in our papers, and who enjoys the reputation of being an able and successful defender of the faith. The tone of his letter indicates that he wants to give me a hint that he, too, knows of some preachers who are "easily resting under their own vine and fig tree," or, in literal terms, who are comfortably fixed and getting good money for the preaching that they do, and who are given to the habit of blithely advising less fortunate preachers to "dig with the spade" for their own support while they preach the gospel in destitute regions. And all the letters of indorsement which I have received indicate that the writers are more or less acquainted with this condition of affairs and know something of these comfortably fixed men who advise others to dig, but manage to avoid using the spade themselves. Of course this advice comes in rather bad grace; but we are not to feel surprised at getting such advice from these men, for we know that it is the man of wealth who is always most ready to advise poor people how to do without money, and that it is the close-fisted, avaricious man who tells farm tenants and laboring men how to support preachers by selling butter and eggs; and they tell me that old bachelors and old maids know more about how to manage children than those who have raised families.

I do not know Brother Jackson, but I have felt always a deep interest in his good work in Mississippi. Paul had anxiety for all the churches. I think Brother Jackson is an honorable man and a Christian; but all Christians and honorable men of the world hate insinuation, innuendo, and declarations not based on truth. He makes strange utterances and serious charges. The most charitable construction to be placed upon these is that he has been misinformed.

What good can he and his informants hope to accomplish by such publications?

My only purpose in noticing these things is to deplore and decry such procedure and to deplore and decry the course some others are pursuing.

1. There is strife in many places over different things.
2. There is an undercurrent of complaint, dissatisfaction, agitation, criticism, and a holier-than-thou feeling flowing in a network of private correspondence.
3. There are evil reports and reports of actual evil in circulation.
4. There is a scriptural way to settle these things.
5. All who engage in these things should say in the open and to one's face that which they say to one's back. Solomon says, "He that uttereth a slander is a fool;" and God condemns the man who takes up a false report.
6. Some preachers and congregations seem to have lost sight of the unity and peace of the church and the meaning even of Christianity—purity of heart, humility, suffering wrong rather than doing wrong, righteousness and godliness. For examples, behold the church in New Orleans; that which is going on in and flowing forth from Dallas, Texas; at Flat Rock, a suburb of Nashville, a church of more than two hundred members divided over purely personal matters and two houses on the same street and close together going up, and that, too, in spite of the efforts and prayers of many good men and women in the city to allay the strife and prevent this course; the contentions and troubles in other places over unrevealed things and questions which God says should be avoided.
7. All these things are reproaches upon the cause of Christ and monuments of shame.
8. These things come primarily from preachers and the innocent suffer with the gully.
9. "In all things" preachers are to be "ensamples in all good works." (Tit. 2: 7.) They should never be vainglorious, should never speak from themselves (stop here and read John 7: 17, 18), should never have a partisan spirit, and should always consider in lowliness of mind others better than themselves. Preachers, then, must be examples of fairness, justice, honesty, honorable dealing, truthfulness, genuine goodness, and Christianity in all things, as well as "doctrinally sound" and "able defenders of the faith." If they are not such examples, they should not preach. If they are preaching for the good they can do, they will make themselves such examples. Paul says he wronged no man, corrupted no man, took advantage of no man. (2 Cor. 7: 2.) All preachers should say the same. So should all Christians. It is a curse to the church in any place to have fastened on it preachers who do not work and pray to this end.
10. In some congregations there are no elders; in some others the elders are not fulfilling their mission—not doing the work allotted to them by the Lord—and young preachers are virtually managing such churches. In one of these churches a leading and generous brother said to the young preacher that it would be well to have a certain man to hold their meeting, but the preacher replied that he had already picked the one he wanted to hold the meeting. This is only one instance, which means there are others. This is not the scriptural way; but this is the tendency in some places. (More of this some time.)
11. With an open Bible, it is not difficult for men of ordinary ability to see what is right between man and man, how to settle differences, and what is obedience to God. (See Isa. 35: 8.)

But what does Jackson say? He advises "some of these leaders" "to keep quiet and let the admonition to 'make tents' be given by the preachers who really work at the business of tent-making." This means that those who write on work do not work themselves. A serious charge. He proves this by "several preachers." He quotes from one, "whose name frequently appears in our papers and who enjoys the reputation of being an able and successful defender of the faith," who says "it comes in bad grace from the man who never uses the spade" to advise others to do so. This preacher gives Brother Jackson "a hint that he, too, knows of some preachers who are easily resting under their own vine and fig tree, . . . who are comfortably fixed and getting good money for the preaching they do, and who are given to the habit of blithely advising less fortunate [he considers these others fortunate] preachers 'to dig with the spade' for their own support while they preach the gospel in destitute regions." Not only so, but he says "all the letters of indorsement" he has received "indicate that the writers are more or less acquainted with this condition of affairs and know something of these comfortably fixed men who advise others to dig, but manage to avoid using the spade themselves." He says: "For we know it is the man of wealth who is always most ready to advise poor people how to do without money, and that it is the close-fisted, avaricious man who tells farm tenants and laboring men how to support preachers by selling butter and eggs." To sum up, he and these "several preachers" who know of "this condition of affairs" say that, not one, but "some preachers" and "some of our leaders," who have written on this subject, are avaricious and close-fisted, sit in the shade in ease and comfort and encourage farm tenants and poor people to sell butter and eggs to support preachers, "get good money" for their preaching, are well paid by wealthy churches, but leave these churches at ease in accumulated wealth and increasing worldliness to the dishonor of Christ. This is wrong. Such preachers do not write on tent-making and other useful employment. They cannot, because they have not studied the subject and do not know what the Bible teaches in regard to it, and they seem not to want to know. They object to others writing on the subject. But I ask, could there be a more corrupt set of men or more lamentable "condition of affairs" than these depicted by Brother Jackson? The sons of Eli and Samuel were not more corrupt; the scribes and Pharisees denounced by Jesus were no worse; none can be more pharisaical and hypocritical. This is "commercializing the gospel" in the basest form. And Brother Jackson and his informants know who these men are. These men are not supposed characters; they are "some of our leaders."

Now, justice, fairness, truth—yes, the cause of Christ—demand that Brother Jackson give the names of these men; I insist upon this. I will join him and his informants in trying to save these men and in saving the churches from them. Is Brother Lipscomb one? He has written much on this subject, and I have quoted largely from him. He is not avaricious and close-fisted; was never well paid and never got "good money" for preaching to wealthy congregations; never encouraged such congregations in ease and worldliness. No man in the last fifty years ever preached in more "destitute regions," has been more liberal with his means, has worked more every day free of charge for the church, or has written more fully and clearly on useful employment. Brother Jackson must tell who these men are; if he does not, we may think he includes Brother Lipscomb.

Also, Brother Jackson must give the names of his informants. He says they are urging him "to go straight to the mark." What is "the mark"? He must be assured that his information is "straight," or he might go crooked. I shall gladly publish the names of his informants and all they say—the one, too, "whose name frequently appears in our papers and who enjoys the reputation of being an able and successful defender of the faith" with all the rest. Let these "several preachers" come out from hiding behind Brother Jackson—out of ambush—and strike in the open. Brother Jackson should not allow them to urge him on to do that which they have not the courage to attempt. Truth, justice, honor, and manliness demand that these informants of Brother Jackson not only declare themselves, but also give the names of "the leaders" they declare are guilty of the sins they have reported to Brother Jackson.

Paul says no man should be condemned before he has had the right to meet his accusers face to face.

We had a case not very long since of "a prominent preacher's" informing the Firm Foundation of some things about Nashville in general and Brother McQuiddy in particular, but destitute of the courage to show himself.

After saying I am "now giving some excellent lessons relative to Bible-made preachers," Brother Jackson asks:

Does Brother Elam suppose that a truly Bible-made preacher would think of quitting the ministry of the gospel simply because he was forced to do manual labor as a means of support? Does he really believe that the preacher whose Bible education has fully imbued his soul with the spirit of Christ could rest easily under the shade of his own vine, enjoying the good things of this life, and never feel impelled to go out into the waste places, suffering hardships and privations in his efforts to carry the gospel to the lost? Like Paul, such a preacher will say: "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." Such preachers as Brother Elam is now writing about do not need either his or my admonition to induce them to endure hardships as good soldiers, making self-denying sacrifices in order that they may preach Christ to the lost.

Brother Jackson does not know what I have written. To his questions I answer most emphatically, No. He mentions a class of preachers which is not Bible-made. Should not such preachers be admonished? He says:

The men who are careful to prepare themselves to preach only to wealthy and well-established congregations are usually well cared for. They are frequently so well paid for the time that they stay at home when not feeling well or when the weather is bad that they can sit in an easy-chair and advise poorly paid preachers that they should make tents for their own support.

These are not Bible-made preachers, whoever they are, and Brother Jackson knows who they are. If not, he should be very careful about what he says. With all my power I am writing against this principle of carefully preparing young men to preach only for "wealthy and well-established congregations." Why should Brother Jackson object to my doing this? He gets on both sides of the fence.

I have had more to do with preachers, perhaps, than Brother Jackson. I have helped to educate some at reduced rates and on credit, who, having received their education, turned lawyers and never finished paying what they owed. One young man after leaving school beat his way along, obtained money under false pretense, and was finally published for stealing a hundred dollars. The treasurer of our board of directors at his last report held notes against several preachers "whose names appear frequently in our papers," all of whom seem "doctrinally sound" and some of whom may be called "able and successful defenders of the faith." In "Queries and Answers," page 137, Brother Lipscomb says:

It is vain to talk of converting the world when the church shows it is not converted, and tolerates, if it does not encourage, untruthfulness and dishonesty among its members. These are often shown in other than overt acts and words. Young preachers sometimes come to school and set in to work their way. Sometimes we hear such reports as these: "They do as little work and count in as much time as possible." A man who does this in any affairs of life is lacking in truthfulness and honesty. Every service that a Christian renders on earth should be rendered to God. Every contract should be faithfully carried out.

Men who are untruthful, dishonest, and make no effort to carry out their contracts, however well they may be prepared to preach to wealthy churches or to "defend the faith," are not qualified to preach the gospel, but are a curse to the church.

If, in the providence of God, Brother Jackson's article should prove the means of bringing dishonesty and other wrongs to light and ridding the church of the class of preachers he describes, we should be glad.

Whatever "well paid," "comfortably fixed" preachers, sitting "in easy-chairs," "in the shade," preaching for wealthy churches, have told poor people and farm tenants to do without money and to sell butter and eggs to support preachers, Brother Jackson knows, I have done my best to teach these and all other preachers that it is their duty to train their own children in industry, economy, and useful employment, and wherever they can to make their own butter and to produce their own vegetables, chickens, and eggs. A hard-working and very liberal man said to me a few months ago that his wife kept house, attended to the milk and butter, looked after his chickens and kept the family in eggs, etc., and he saw no reason why the preacher's wife of the same place could not do the same; that the preacher could keep a cow, have a garden, and his wife could raise chickens, and do so much better than they were doing. The preacher, he said, was pleasant, but spent much of his time, when at home, on the streets and in the stores. To this kind of teaching many preachers object. This seems to be the offense I have given.

In my articles on Paul's making tents, Jesus' being a carpenter, useful employment, "minister" and the Bible use of the word, the support due faithful preachers, or on any other subject, are clear, straightforward, frank, open, and honest efforts at bringing out the teaching of the Bible. If they contain anything unscriptural, let Brother Jackson or his informants join issue with me there in an open and dignified Christian investigation, and, therefore, free of all personalities and insinuations.

My life, too, is an open book, as my articles are above board and stand for themselves. Paul says we should not be so foolish as to compare ourselves with ourselves; but if such comparison is instituted, one might come out ahead and then not be much before God.

Pleased With "Character."

W. D. Cunningham, the well-known missionary in Japan, writes to a friend who had sent him a copy of "Character," by the lamented Senator E. W. Carmack, the following appreciative words:

I have read and reread with great delight "Character," by Carmack. It makes me feel how much I missed when in 1908 I called at the office of the great man and he was not in. One thing that impresses me is the regret that one with such high thoughts and splendid felicity of expression did not devote himself wholly or mainly to the pulpit, which in our day is degraded all too often by dissertations on impractical, unimportant, and uninteresting themes. The beautiful form in which this lecture is printed and bound is quite in keeping with the high character of the message it contains. I thank you for the privilege of reading it.

This beautiful and inspiring book will be sent for one dollar, postpaid. Send your order to the McQuiddy Printing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Mrs. A. B. Bryant tells of a little girl who was walking home with her father one night, holding on to his hand, when she suddenly begged: "Take my hand, papa! I can take only a little piece of yours, but you can hold the whole of mine!" In his strong grasp she seemed comforted, but stopped again, asking: "Papa, are you afraid?" He assured her he was not, when she cheerfully started on, with the words: "All wight! If you isn't, I isn't." The man afterwards remarked: "I have read many books on faith, but nothing ever appealed to me like that. I'm trying to trust God that way."—Selected.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Compiled by A. B. Lipscomb

W. A. Cameron is in a good meeting at Tampa, Fla.

The "Preparedness" Number will appear on April 6. Prepare for it.

W. T. Goalen, of Dothan, Ala., preached at Twelfth Avenue, this city, last Sunday.

I. B. Bradley came to see us Monday. He reports that the church at Dickson, Tenn., is in splendid condition.

E. P. Watson, of Lexington, Tenn., writes: "Our work moves on very well in this section. We have more calls than we can fill."

Brother Sewell preached an excellent discourse at Russell Street Church, this city, last Sunday. His effort was much appreciated by a large audience.

From John R. Williams, Hornbeak, Tenn.: "The 'Faith and Works' Number can hardly be excelled. It certainly was brimful of the very best. I inclose a check for three dollars."

E. D. Shelton, of Madisonville, Ky., sends "best wishes to the dear old Gospel Advocate."

This paper is one "old maid" that likes such words as "dear" and "old."

From W. E. Morgan, 149 Park Street, Portland, Maine: "We had three good services on March 5. Our crowds are on the increase each Lord's day. The future for the cause looks bright. The Lord be praised."

F. W. Smith will preach at Russell Street Church, this city, next Sunday, and the editor of this page will fill his appointments at Franklin, Tenn. Speaking of "preparedness," this is "warning" enough to both congregations.

W. Chenault, of Memphis, Tenn., writes: "To my way of estimating, that 'Faith and Works' Number is a very great paper, worth the cost of the year's subscription."

Far be it from us to discount the estimating faculties of our brother.

All the Christians in Nashville and vicinity should be especially interested in the announcement that Brother J. D. Northcut, of Tracy City, Tenn., will begin a meeting at South College Street, this city, next Sunday (March 19). Repeat this announcement to your congregation and do all that you can for the good of the meeting.

From Tice Elkins, at Childress, Texas: "My wife is still confined to her room. She has not left it for six weeks. We have received twenty-seven dollars from all sources during February and have not suffered. Thanks to all. We had a fine day at the church on March 5. One good old man from the Presbyterian Church took his stand with us."

From O. M. Reynolds, Memphis, Texas: "The Gospel Advocate for the past fourteen months has been improving in every respect by leaps and bounds. A year's filing of the paper, I think, is equal to a first-class divine library. I am careful to keep well and neatly every number. The 'specials' have never been paralleled. May the Lord bless you."

From L. S. White, at Dallas, Texas: "The Pearl and Bryan Church had another glorious day, March 5. Three more were added to the congregation at the morning service, the largest audience that we have had for the past fifteen months. The church is making up money to build an 'annex' to the meetinghouse, which will have four classrooms."

From C. A. Buchanan, Wichita Falls, Texas: "I think our work here is gaining ground. We are increasing in all of the following ways: Membership, actual helpers, liberality, average attendance, etc. We have several very good preachers in the congregation, and the church will offer its regular preacher to places not able to support preachers for some meetings this year. The church here will stand behind his support."

From W. H. Carter, Lafayette, Tenn.: "To the brethren in Tennessee and Alabama along the Louisville and Nashville Railroad from Nashville, Tenn., to Birmingham, Ala.: I am due to begin a meeting about ten miles north of Piedmont, Ala., on the first Lord's day in August, this year, and I can arrange for one or two meetings along the railroad on my return from Piedmont. If you can use me for a week or two, write me at Lafayette, Tenn."

From Ben West, Lometa, Texas: "Interest is deepening here, with great crowds at all services. The Sunday school grows weekly and orders twice the number of helps (furnished by the McQuiddy Printing Company) of the preceding quarter. Every Sunday evening large crowds in automobiles go with me to some point in the county for service. A large number of children go and sing and recite scriptural stories in addition to the sermon by the minister. New helpers every week in the church."

From Jewell Matthews, San Angelo, Texas: "Jesse P. Sewell, president of the Abilene (Texas) Christian College, preached here on March 5, morning and evening. In the evening he preached on 'Christian Education.' The brethren gave something like ninety dollars on the library fund for Abilene Christian College. I preached in Abilene on Sunday. I visited the school on Saturday. The school has a noble student body and a very efficient faculty. It is a wide-awake school in every respect."

From C. W. Thompson, Galveston, Texas: "There is a little band of Christians here who are working for the Master in the midst of Catholicism, sin and its curses, as is always found in cities like this. G. A. Dunn preaches for them the fourth Sunday evenings. They are planning for a meeting this spring. I know not a more worthy people than these brethren and sisters. The 'Faith and Works' Number is so pointed, grand, sweet, and beautiful that words fail to tell its worth to the cause we love."

From T. W. Phillips, at Fort Worth, Texas: "I desire to say, through the dear old Gospel Advocate, that I am now able to sit up nearly all day, and feel that I am rapidly improving. I cannot walk a step yet, but hope to be able to go on crutches in a day or so. I also wish to say in the Advocate that I am booked to begin a meeting at Winfield, Texas, on Saturday night before the third Sunday in April, and I hope to have the brethren from Mount Vernon and Mount Pleasant, Texas, visit the meeting, as these places are near by."

From W. Hume McHenry, Satara, Satara District, British India: "I want to express my appreciation of the special issues of the Gospel Advocate during 1915, and especially the 'Home and Father and Mother' Number. It was a most excellent paper. I am glad the special-issue feature will be continued. Please acknowledge, through the columns of the Advocate, the receipt of nineteen dollars from my home congregation, Nazareth, near Murfreesboro, Tenn. It is good to be remembered so substantially at Christmas time. May God bless the donors."

From J. H. Copeland, Bunnell, Fla.: "At the invitation of J. G. Malphurs I came here the last of December from Dover, Fla., to preach and lead song services around here and neighboring towns. I have preached several times at a little schoolhouse about three and one-half miles from here, with good interest at every service. I have started a Sunday school, with the Bible lesson helps, and all seem to enjoy the lessons very much. We are expecting A. L. Colson, of Bell, Fla., to be with us next month and hold us several meetings. Pray for us that we may do much good for the Lord."

HAVE GOOD HEALTH

Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the Old Reliable Spring Tonic.

Don't let the idea that you may feel better in a day or two prevent you from getting a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla today from any drug store and starting at once on the road to health and strength.

When your blood is impure and impoverished it lacks vitality, your digestion is imperfect, your appetite is poor, and all the functions of your body are impaired.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful blood tonic. It will build you up quicker than any other medicine. It gives strength to do and power to endure. It is the old standard tried and true all-the-year-round blood purifier and enricher, tonic and appetizer. Nothing else acts like it, for nothing else has the same formula or ingredients. Be sure to ask for Hood's; insist on having it.

A Short Trip to Florida.

BY W. L. REEVES.

Panama City, Fla., is a nice, thrifty, seacoast town situated on St. Andrews Bay, at the terminal of the Atlanta and St. Andrews Bay Railroad. It has a population of near two thousand. It is the county seat of Bay County. Millville, another seacoast town, just two miles east, has a population of two thousand; with St. Andrews three miles west, with the many residents who live between these towns along the beautiful bay shore—about six thousand people among whom a gospel preacher is greatly needed, and among whom the right kind of an energetic, self-sacrificing preacher could do much good in teaching the true principles of the Christian religion.

I am just now (March 1) back in my regular field of labor in North Carolina from a trip to Panama City, where I spent the month of February in one meeting, during which time I preached forty sermons, baptized seven souls, did quite a lot of personal work, distributed a lot of tracts, and left a happy little band of brethren who will carry on the work which one man and his noble wife started early last fall. There is a good, exemplary lesson for others in Brother Applegate's course. As soon as he moved to Panama City he and his wife went to breaking bread in their home each Lord's day. Soon afterwards he wrote me what he was doing, and asked me to come and preach some to the citizens there. On receiving his letter, I remarked to some brethren that there would be a congregation built up in that place. Such faith and zeal in one man and his excellent wife will establish a church in any city. This very course by one man, his wife and daughter, two years ago, was the beginning of the work we now have in Winston-Salem, N. C., with a house paid for and nearly fifty members, who have already established a mission at another place in the city.

Panama City needs a tent and a preacher who can stay there among the people and labor at that place and the near-by towns mentioned above. It would be a good investment if several congregations would contribute liberally to help those brethren secure a tent and a preacher to use the tent. I am confident that great and lasting good can be done there in this way. If any who read this wish to help forward such a work in Florida, they should send direct to Brother L. L. Applegate, Panama City, Fla. I have never been called upon to hold a meeting in any town where there was just one man with zeal enough to carry on the worship with just his family, but what my help resulted in a church being built there.

Gray Hairs

mean that your hair is not receiving proper attention, and yet a gray hair will do more to make you look old than anything else. Rid yourself of an aged appearance by giving the hair correct treatment and proper food. There can be no life without food; and unless you give your hair the proper attention, you cannot expect it to retain its luster and beauty. Use "La Creole," the best of all hair dressings, and see your gray hairs disappear. This dressing was discovered by the Creoles, of Louisiana, many years ago, who were famous for their beautiful hair. Since then it has worked wonders, banishing gray hairs and restoring the hair to its original luster. As a hair dressing it has no equal, keeping the scalp in a clean, healthy condition. It has stood the test for over fifty years. Do not use strong alkaline soaps, as they do more damage than good. Use "La Creole" hair dressing, the natural preservative. For sale by all dealers. Price, $1. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

Purely Vegetable—Not Narcotic

Millions of mothers have carried their children through the critical teething period by using nothing but Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays pain, banishes wind colic and is a wonderful remedy for infantile diarrhoea. Ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup." Accept no other. 25 cents.

Lime Combats Tuberculosis

"It is difficult to escape the conviction that lime starvation and lime assimilation are the real issues behind the masks of vulnerability and resistance in tuberculosis," wrote the late Ira Van Gelsion, M. D., in the N. Y., Medical Record, May 11, 1912.

Ordinarily, lime is not easily assimilated, but Eckman's Alternative contains it in such form and combination as to insure assimilation by the average person. This explains its success in many cases of tuberculosis which apparently have yielded to it.

Containing no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, it is safe to try. Price $1 and $2 per bottle. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct from the Laboratory. We would like to send you a booklet containing information of value and references.

OBITUARIES

On account of the large number of obituary notices coming to the Gospel Advocate the following rules must be observed: Obituaries that do not exceed one hundred and fifty words are published free of charge. When they exceed this limit, one cent will be charged for every additional word. Payment must accompany notice or else it will be reduced to one hundred and fifty words. Poetry will not be printed.

Averitt.

Sister Estella Strange Averitt was born on July 17, 1873, near Little Rock, Ark., and died at Wall, Texas, on February 4, 1916. She leaves a husband, six children (four boys and two girls), and a host of friends to mourn for her. Sister Averitt had been a devoted Christian for seven years. Funeral services were conducted by the writer. J. D. SHIPMAN.

Wandell.

My dear husband, C. P. Wandell, departed this life on January 8, 1916. He was ready to go, and said for me not to worry, as he would be at rest, and for me to trust in the Lord and all would be well. He did not live for self. He wanted to help others and make them happy if he could. He had so many children friends. All that knew him loved him. O, how I miss him! I am all alone; not one relative near and no children living. O, it is so hard to bear my trouble! But I know the good Lord will make a way for me to bear it all. MRS. C. P. WANDELL.

Jordan.

Sister Addie Jordan, wife of A. W. Jordan, died at her home on January 29, aged sixty-three years. She died suddenly of heart failure. She is survived by her husband and several children. She was a woman of lovable character, aiding heroically Brother Jordan, who for several years has been stricken with paralysis. She obeyed the gospel when quite young, and, having put on the armor of God, fought a good fight and kept the faith, believing there was a crown awaiting her coming. She was buried at Old Berea, in Marshall County, Tenn., where she had lived for a number of years. Funeral services were conducted by the writer. J. S. BATEY.

Vawter.

On January 19, 1916, death came and laid hands on Brother J. T. Vawter, who had been a faithful Christian for more than twenty-five years. Brother Vawter had passed the threescore mark. He fought the good fight, kept the faith, and now there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness. He was born in Monroe County, Ky., where he lived nearly all of his life, but for the past year he had been living with his daughter at Horse Cave, Ky. I had the pleasure of knowing him and have been encouraged by his earnest Christian examples. He is survived by mother, three children, and four sisters. His death was their loss, but his eternal gain. EMMET CREAMY.

Barton.

On January 2, 1916, death released the spirit of Mendoza Barton from this earthly tabernacle and the spirit returned to God who gave it. While we think of the horrors of death, we should only be thankful in a case like this, as her life here was only pain to her. Her husband preceded her some years ago. Sister Barton could not hear and could hardly see. She fell on December 30 and never rallied from it. She was born in Rutherford County, Tenn., on March 5, 1837. She came to Illinois about 1857 and resided here most of her life. She was mother of two children, both of which are dead. She was the only daughter of Richard Bevins. She had nine brothers; only three survive her. Early in life she obeyed the gospel and lived a consecrated life. Her last words were that she was ready and anxious to go. Her body was laid to rest beside her husband in Hazel graveyard. Brother J. T. Hight conducted the services at the church house. She leaves three grandchildren, three brothers, and many friends. If she had an enemy in the world, no one knew it. What a blessing it is to so live that we can die thus! JAMES H. LUNN.

Smithson.

David Smithson was born in Warren County, Tenn., on May 28, 1825. He was married to Catherine Smith on September 17, 1851. To their union eight children were born, six of whom survive him. Since the death of his wife, which occurred on August 11, 1899, he had made his home with his son, John, the youngest child. He had been a member of the church of Christ forty-five years. He loved to go to church. Just a short time before his last illness he invited Brother Foster, of Sparta, Mo., to their home to hold a week's meeting. As a result of this meeting twelve persons made the good confession and were baptized. He was a friend of the Gospel Advocate and dearly loved to listen to the instruction it gave, especially that of Brethren D. Lipscomb, Sewell, Larimore, and Elam. His love for his children and their devotion to him in his declining years was such as is rarely seen and beautiful to behold. He leaves two sons and four daughters and a host of grandchildren to mourn his departure. May we all ever show

Bell.

Sister Sarah Tennessee Bell, daughter of John J. and Mary A. Smith, was born in Rutherford County, Tenn., on February 22, 1854. In March, 1874, she was married to W. T. Daughtry. To them were born three children—Hattie, Fannie, and May. In 1878 she had the misfortune of losing her husband. In 1880 she was married to Robert W. Bell. To this union were born two children—Charley and Lizzie. In 1882 they moved to Arkansas, and a few years later moved to Gans, Okla. Sister Tennie had been in bad health for several years, and despite the best medical skill and tender nursing by her children, the death angel entered the home, and on November 15, 1915, her gentle spirit was wafted to that eternal home beyond the starry skies, there to bask in the sunlight of God's eternal love forevermore. While very young Sister Tennie obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother Jesse L. Sewell, and lived a devoted Christian the remainder of her life. I would say to the husband and the dear children and grandchildren: Sorrow not, as for those who have no hope; but let us all try to live in such a way that we may be permitted to meet sister and mamma in that beautiful home of the soul, where sickness, pain, and death will be felt and feared no more.

Riley.

At the request of Brother William Riley, of Cedar Dell, Marshall County, Tenn., I record the death of their only daughter, Dela Oma Riley. She was born on January 19, 1881; obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother Sam Sewell at the age of thirteen; and died on December 20, 1915. Funeral services were conducted by the writer in the Cedar Dell meetinghouse in the presence of a large number of sorrowing friends and relatives. Sister Dela was never strong physically, but was very strong spiritually, having made the Bible her study. Brother Mark White has told me that a question hardly ever passed her unanswered in the Lord's-day lesson. She loved her father and mother, the church, and the assembly of the saints. She loved to talk about the Bible, the church, and heaven. She died with nervous prostration. She was confined to her bed four years, lacking four months, yet she never murmured. Her greatest concern in that respect was that she feared she would wear her father and mother out. I would not say to them not to grieve after so loving a daughter as Dela was, but I would say, when this cloud of grief has vanished away and you have become more reconciled, study your Bible and rely upon the rich promises of the same as your source of comfort and consideration. May those promises comfort and console them.

two years and two days. He was married to Lucinda Harman in 1856, and this union remained till 1880, at which time she died. There were eight children born unto them, and all still remain upon the earth. Brother Brown was again married in 1881, to Mrs. Willie Morford. To this union four children were born. He was a member of the church of Christ more than half a century. He worshiped with the church at Old Lasea, Maury County, Tenn., and served as an elder in the church a number of years. Brother Brown was blessed with a strong body, was an industrious and hard-working man, providing well for his family and manifesting hospitality, and was a useful man in his community. He loved the church and attended the meetings regularly. In service and worship he wanted nothing but the Lord's way of doing things. From his knowledge of the word of God he knew the Lord would accept nothing but that which is pure and good. May his children feel and realize the importance of yielding with reverence to God's divine institutions and walking with God and not allowing the perverted practices of men to keep them out of the path of righteousness. While the widow is made sad in the death of her husband, she can rejoice in the blessed thought that there is something "better farther on" for the faithful servant of the Lord. May the Lord bless and comfort each member of the family and heal their hearts of sorrow and sadness. Let us strive to be ready when we are called to go hence.

Stops Tobacco Habit.

Elders' Sanitarium, located at 513 Main Street, St. Joseph, Mo., has published a book showing the deadly effect of the tobacco habit, and how it can be stopped in three to five days. As they are distributing this book free, any one wanting a copy should send his name and address at once.

IF YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Experience is the Best Teacher of All.

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating." One is far more apt to believe a man who tells what he has done than a man who tells what he could do. So it is with medicine. The real proof of the merits of Dr. Miles' Restorative Remedies lies in the fact that they have been used beneficially for over a quarter of a century, and thousands have actually testified to benefits they have received.

We know that Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills will relieve all aches and pains, because thousands have found this to be proven by actual experience.

The Rev. W. D. Barger, of Hagerstown, Md., has stated: "Voluntarily and unsolicited, I wish to bear witness to the high character of Dr. Miles' Restorative Remedies. To me personally they have been a great blessing, especially the Nervine, the Anti-Pain Pills, and the Liver Pills. In cases of headaches or pain of any kind they act like a charm. I have given many of them to the suffering, and the results have always proven gratifying."

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills have no unpleasant after effect. They are not constipating; they do not contain any of the dangerous habit-forming drugs. We do not claim that they remove the cause of the pain, but we do claim that they bring quick relief in a harmless manner.

They are sold by all druggists at twenty-five cents a box, containing twenty-five doses. If not satisfactory, your money will be cheerfully returned.

Borden-Nunnery Debate.

BY E. P. WATSON.

The debate which was announced to begin at Prospect Baptist Church, about halfway between Wildersville, Tenn., and Parsons, Tenn., is now a thing of the past. The debate began on February 8, between E. M. Borden (Christian), of Little Rock, Ark., and A. U. Nunnery (Baptist), of Parsons, Tenn.

Mr. Nunnery affirmed for the first two days that the Baptist Church is scriptural in origin, doctrine, and practice. He stated that the Baptists could trace their line back to the personal ministry of Christ and challenged Brother Borden to bring up history to the contrary. Brother Borden was more than equal to the occasion, and Mr. Nunnery soon began to beg off from history. He established the Baptist Church in a mountain in Galilee where Christ appointed the twelve. Mr. Nunnery is well posted in Baptist doctrine, much better than he is in Bible doctrine, but is very poor in his logic.

Brother Borden affirmed the last two days that the church of Christ is scriptural in origin, doctrine, and practice. Brother Borden put up some strong arguments, and did it in such a way that all could see and understand, and yet presented them in a way to leave the audience in a good humor.

During the discussion Mr. Nunnery admitted the following points: (1) That the church contains the redeemed in the aggregate; (2) that we are baptized into Christ figuratively; (3) that a man can be a Christian and in God's family and not be in the Baptist Church; (4) that a man can go to heaven and not believe Baptist doctrine; (5) that Campbell only organized a local assembly; (6) that God adds people to his family; (7) that the sinner must receive the Spirit before conversion; (8) that we preach a change of heart before baptism; (9) that the Baptist Church is not God's family; (10) that eis aphasin hamartion means "in order to" in Acts 2: 38; (11) that the conversion of the eunuch is contrary to Baptist doctrine.

Mr. Nunnery failed to meet the following arguments: (1) That the heart in Matt. 15: 18-20 is the inner man. Nunnery said that it was the heart of flesh. (2) He said that babies are born under just condemnation, but did not give chapter and verse that says that they are saved if they die. (3) Would not touch at Matt. 7: 21. (4) Did not answer the argument on Dan. 7: 13, 14; Acts 2: 29. (5) Failed to touch the argument on the new man as given in Zech. 11: 10, 11; Col. 2: 14; Heb. 9: 26. (6) Did not gainsay that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God. (7) Did not an-

The Modern Problem of Efficiency.

The great world war now in progress, by reason of the remarkable example of national efficiency displayed by Germany, has directed the thought of the world to the study of methods of efficiency. Each individual should apply this important lesson to his or her own physical condition. Health is seldom at a standstill. We are either growing physically and mentally more efficient or we are declining in efficiency. Success in life depends on having the mind clear and capable. A sound body is essential to a sound mind; yet there are daily fluctuations in the quality of our digestion and in the efficiency of our eliminative organs. Good work, whether physical or mental, depends upon the efficiency of these organs; and there are few people whose labors are not handicapped by indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, incipient Bright's disease, uric-acid poisoning, rheumatism, or other liver and kidney ailments. An efficient friend under such conditions is Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, composed of a number of valuable extracts, each one selected for its specific action in toning up one or more of the various organs which make up the digestive and eliminative system.

Tens of thousands of people in the last fifty years have found Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy of excellent value in the above-mentioned diseases. As it is harmless, it may be used whenever there is digestive or eliminative trouble. For sale at all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

swer the argument on apostasy as given in Matt. 24: 9-13.

The debate was carried on in a kind and nice spirit and good feeling prevailed the entire time. Large audiences attended and gave the best of attention; had to be called to order once or twice. The people of the community were very kind and took care of the needs of all. I am sure that great good will be derived from this discussion. Mr. J. G. Cooper, of Hollow Rock, moderated for Mr. Nunnery; the writer, for Brother Borden. At the close of the debate the debaters were asked to repeat the discussion at Parsons some time this fall or summer.

Brethren, if at any time the church of Christ needs defending, you need not be afraid to call upon Brother Borden as defender, for he is able to meet the very strongest in a religious discussion.

Notes from West Tennessee.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

Yesterday (March 5) I preached for the congregation at Gladly Hill. Though it was not the regular appointment and but few knew that I would be there, still we had a nice audience and a good service. The congregation is getting along nicely in studying the word of God and in the worship on the first day of the week.

On the third Lord's day in February I visited the congregation at Rehoboth, not knowing that it was the regular appointment of young Brother Walls. I preached only once. He preached on Saturday and Sunday nights; I preached at 11 A.M. on Sunday and returned home.

On account of bad weather and worse roads, I have not been able to get into Lake County since Christmas. Just as soon as I can travel the road I shall go to Burrus Chapel and Jones Chapel and "see how they do."

Brother F. O. Howell is preaching once a month at Glass, also once a month at Cloverdale. Brother Lewis E. Jones, of Troy, is preaching once a month at Bethel. In addition to preaching once a month at Rehoboth, Brother Walls preaches once a month at Oak Ridge. Brother T. M. Carney still preaches for Obion.

On the second Lord's day in May, the Lord willing, I shall begin a tent meeting in Obion, which will be the fifteenth meeting for me at that place during the thirty years I have been trying to preach.

On the second Lord's day in June I shall begin a meeting in Rector, Ark.

On the second Lord's day in July the camp meeting will begin at Gladly Hill. Several have promised to become new campers this year. It is a nice place to camp—good shade, good spring water (to be carried up a steep hill), and only about three miles to the lake, where fresh fish can be bought any day except Sunday. Buy you a tent, come and be with us; it will do you good.

On the first Lord's day in August the Jones Chapel meeting will begin. Following this the Burrus Chapel meeting. Both are in Lake County.

Unless they can secure a preacher for July or August, I will go to Rehoboth in September. October, November, and December still open for meetings. Should any place desire my services for either or all of these months, write me at once, at Hornbeak, Tenn.

Now, brethren of Lake and Obion counties, a word to you. I want you to assist me in circulating the Gospel Advocate by increasing the number of readers. Many good papers have been started up in the last few years and then gone down at the loss of good brethren who tried to keep them going. Each family needs a good religious paper, and there is none better than the old Gospel Advocate. So send me your names and one dollar and fifty cents and receive it once a week for twelve months. There is no one issue of the Advocate but what is worth more than the price for one year. The larger the circulation, the better the paper the editors can get out. I shall try to keep you posted on "Campbellism" in West Tennessee. Some "mity" interesting things are yet to be said of "Campbellism" in Lake and Obion counties. Send me your name and one dollar and fifty cents at once and receive the paper.

HUSBAND SAVED HIS WIFE

Stopped Most Terrible Suffering by Getting Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Denison, Texas. — "After my little girl was born two years ago I began suffering with female trouble and could hardly do my work. I was very nervous but just kept dragging on until last summer when I got where I could not do my work. I would have a chill every day and hot flashes and dizzy spells and my head would almost burst. I got where I was almost a walking skeleton and life was a burden to me until one day my husband's step-sister told my husband if he did not do something for me I would not last long and told him to get your medicine. So he got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and after taking the first three doses I began to improve. I continued its use, and I have never had any female trouble since. I feel that I owe my life to you and your remedies. They did for me what doctors could not do and I will always praise it wherever I go."—Mrs. G. O. LOWERY, 419 W. Monterey Street, Denison, Texas.

If you are suffering from any form of female ills, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and commence the treatment without delay.

Acknowledgment and Thanks.

BY MRS. HATTIE L. KNIGHT.

Believing an acknowledgment of receipt is due the churches and individual brethren and sisters that so liberally contributed to the fund solicited by Sister S. Estelle Parkhurst, of Unity, Maine, for the purpose of providing me with osteopathic treatment, and not only acknowledgment, but thanks also, which I can offer from a heart overflowing with gratitude, I am asking for space in the Gospel Advocate to make and offer the same.

Thinking the circumstance which prompted such generosity may be of interest to those who are in ignorance of the matter, I will go into details and state that when three years of age I had scarlet fever which settled in the spine. As a result, I gradually weakened until, at the age of twenty-two, the spinal trouble had developed to such an extent that I had become a complete invalid, unable to do any work or to sit up but little of the time.

But sometimes sickness is a blessing in disguise, and in my case was instrumental in bringing me to Christ, and at the age of twenty-seven I was taken upon a bed to the water, where I was buried with Christ in baptism. Can I ever regret these long years of invalidism? They will always be the most precious years of my life. Now I had something to live for, something to enjoy. With the exception of six months, during which I was helpless, I have always been able to study my Bible, and have written many thousands of words lying in bed. Just think! Unlimited time to study one's Bible! How many there are whose hours are so filled with the duties that make claims upon good health that would almost envy me such a privilege!
