The Church Will Not Fail.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Under propitious skies most people are placid and press forward in the discharge of their duties, believing that right will eventually triumph. When the clouds are dark and lowering, the same people are ready to murmur and complain and seem to forget that God is ruling over all. Like Elijah, they get under the juniper tree and declare that the church is not doing the work that God ordained that it should do; they are ready to find fault with the man who urges the church to improve its opportunities and to enter every avenue that is open for the accomplishment of good and to advance the kingdom of Christ in the world. With stolid determination they refuse to listen to reason and use whatever influence they have to prevent others from cultivating the fields about them. Such exalt forms to the position of worship and devote their energies to the discussion of the traditions of the fathers instead of humbly going forward and doing the work that God has commanded them to do.

The church has wasted its energies and opportunities in laboring to build up denominationalism instead of building up the church of Christ. Christians have been discussing Calvinism, election and reprobation, total depravity, and the final perseverance of the saints, more than they have been concerned about improving their opportunities to teach the erring the way of life, minister to the afflicted, and lift up the fallen. Even those who contend for a "thus saith the Lord" in the worship devote their time and energies to the discussion of how many cups shall be used in the commemoration of the Lord's death. While they have been using from two to eight cups all the time, and there is no "thus saith the Lord" for this, they now object to having as many as fifty cups. Others of the same class are devoting their energies to the discussion of whether the Lord's Supper should be eaten before or after preaching, standing or sitting, in the morning or in the evening. Still others object to passing around the contribution basket, claiming that the members should walk up and deposit their contributions on the table. Strange that they cannot see their inconsistency! There is just as much scripture for passing the contribution basket as there is for passing the loaf or the cup. We also find others magnifying the order of worship, still others contending for an exclusive method of teaching, while none is revealed in the Bible. While Christians must walk by faith, and not by sight, and should be guided by "it is written" in the worship, it is as unscriptural to add forms of worship where God has not made any form as it is to add to or take from the word of God. The Savior says: "But in vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men." (Matt. 15: 9.) The worship of the scribes and Pharisees was not pleasing to God because they exalted the traditions of the elders above the word of God. They contended for forms and did not comply with the word of God. Se Christ declares: "Every plant which my heavenly Father planted not, shall be rooted up." (Matt. 15: 13.) The man who exalts any special form of service or worship to the position of a command, and thus seeks to bind it upon the consciences of men, is guilty of a grave sin. Whenever Christians become so wedded to forms of worship that they are ready to disfellowship all who do not use precisely the same forms and methods of worship that they do, it is time for them to consider well the woes that Christ pronounced upon the scribes and Pharisees. To them he said: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye tithe mint and anise and cummin, and have left undone the weightier matters of the law, justice, and mercy, and faith: but these ye ought to have done, and not to have left the other undone. Ye blind guides, that strain out the gnat, and swallow the camel! Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites' for ye cleanse the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full from extortion and excess. Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first the inside of the cup and of the platter, that the outside thereof may become clean also." (Matt. 23: 23-25.) The exaltation of human forms to the position of binding authority is dangerous and, therefore, to be condemned. While dark clouds are now hovering over the entire country, the church should not cease to be active, but should improve every opportunity for lifting up the fallen, guiding the erring, and preaching the gospel to every creature. The church shall not fail, because truth is eternal and abides forever. Christ said to Peter: "And I also say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it." (Matt. 16: 18.) When we view the past history of the church, we reach the irresistible conclusion that Christians have been wedded to parties; that they have been partisans; that they have loved denominationalism more than they have loved the simple church of Christ. They have devoted their time, talents, and energies in contending with one another over theories entirely too much, to the neglect of sacrificing for the needy. Without stopping to discuss the right or the wrong of institutions through which men are contributing, we must freely confess that Christians are contributing by the thousands, whereas before they contributed by hundreds. Enormous sums have been appropriated for the relief of the suffering and for caring for the wounded, for clothing the cold and feeding the hungry. Who is so wedded to a form that he will contend that the church should not do such work? May we not hope that the church by this terrible war is being aroused from its selfishness and awakened to its duty of preaching the gospel to every creature and of helping those in distress as it has never done before? Selfishness has been, and is, the damning sin of the age. If the world can be aroused from such a condition and brought to a proper realization of its duty in being a good Samaritan to those who are in distress, are we not justified in saying that God is bringing good out of this terrible war to his people?

The children of Israel and of Judah had to be brought into Babylonish captivity before they would cease the worship of idols. While their bondage was hard—very trying and severe—yet from that bondage we learn that great good resulted to the people of God. From it dates the synagogue worship and the dissemination of Bible knowledge. Beginning with the days of Ezra, the public conscience was enlightened and impressed with the duty and necessity of studying the Scriptures. So God is able to overrule this cruel war and bring good out of it to his children who cling to him and do his will. The Holy Spirit says: "And we know that to them that love God all things work together for good, even to them that are called according to his purpose."

While Christians deplore war and do not want it, they are not justified in sitting down and criticizing the government and seeking to hinder the efforts of those who are ready to give of their means in order to preach the gospel to every creature and who are anxious to dress the wounds of suffering humanity wherever found. How dwelleth the love of God in the heart of the man who can close his eyes and stop his ears to such appeals for succor and help!

The Word of the Lord Is the Standard of Righteousness.

BY E. G. S.

All that the word of the Lord requires us to do is right, and we need not be the least afraid to do all that it says do. It is never right for people to follow their own opinions instead of doing just what the word of the Lord says do. This is where thousands make a very great mistake. The word of the Lord says just what ought to be said on every subject on which it speaks, and it is our duty to obey all its requirements. We do not need to study a moment to determine whether what it says is right or not—that is not required of us; but we do need to understand just what it says for us to do, and then be certain to do it.

When the word of God says, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ," all should promptly obey. The command to believe is very plain. We need not suppose that the word "believe" means something mysterious, something hard to understand; for the passage explains itself—"believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." That is about as plain as the English language can make it. This command given by Paul and Silas to the Philippian jailer needs no further explanation. Any one that understands plain English can understand it. What we need to do is to believe and obey the truth as it is given. To simply accept and believe what it says should be the end of the matter.

If it be asked, "Why should people believe on Christ?" the answer is given in great plainness: "And thou shalt be saved, and thy house." This tells why people everywhere should believe the gospel. To be saved is the most important thing that can be attained, while to be lost is the most awful thing we can think of. If people live along through this life rejecting the gospel of Christ till death comes, they will be eternally lost-no end to their lost condition. There is not the shadow of an end to the loss of such a soul. When Jesus promised that those that would believe and be baptized should be saved, he immediately added, "but he that believeth not shall be damned." That is one of the most solemn warnings ever given. I would not know how to express anything more awful. To be damned as expressed in that passage means the eternal loss of the soul. I wonder if those who keep putting off their obedience to the gospel ever try to realize how much is really involved in it? Surely, if they did, they would not continue the risk, but would at once obey the gospel and enter upon the Christian life, which is their only safety. This is the only way for sinners to make sure of the safety of their souls.

Eternal life is sure to all that will do what the New Testament requires at their hands, while eternal death will as certainly be the doom of all that do not obey the gospel in this life. To obey the gospel as required is to become Christians and to continue faithful in living the Christian life until death takes us over the river. When we are faithful unto death, the Lord will do the rest. There is no use for any to think of being taken to heaven that fail to serve the Lord in this life. But why any in Bible lands should fail to do this is wonderfully strange. Jesus said to his disciples: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." (Matt. 5: 16.) Therefore people need not expect the Lord to do all that is necessary to prepare them for eternal life, when he requires them to do so much and makes their eternal life depend upon their doing what he commands them to do. Eternal life is promised to none but the obedient. Therefore those who are expecting the Lord to prepare them for eternal life have no foundation for any such expectation. The Lord has prepared the plan of salvation and has fully revealed the life that people must lead on earth to prepare them for a place in the eternal home of glory; but he has put it upon the people to do the living. Hence they have no promise of the glory home unless they strive to live as he has directed them to live.

Man has no part in making the laws by which he is to live-this is the Lord's part altogether; but to obey the laws the Lord has given is altogether man's part, and the Lord will not obey the commands that he has laid upon man. If God should do the commands he has laid upon man to do and then save man on the fact that he had done the saving fer him, this would free man from all responsibility, and yet would save him simply by his own goodness. However, he has not done this; but the very reverse is true. God, not man, made the laws by which men, not God, must be saved, and all that refuse the laws that God has made are doomed to perish eternally. Why, then, will men, for whom God has done so much, set God's word aside and prepare to go down to perdition? It would be wonderfully great if all the people in Bible lands would obey the gospel and thus be eternally saved. Full obedience to the gospel is not finished when people simply become Christians, but only when mortal life is ended. Then the faithful are eternally safe.

A sense of failure is as much a mark of rising ideal as of failing performance.—Stephen B, Stanton.

"Rejoice in the Lord Always." (Phil. 4: 4.)

RY E. A. E.

We are commanded to do three things, at least, concerning God's will: (1) to will, with all that the will embraces, to do his will; (2) to pray that in health as well as in sickness, in joy as well as in sorrow, in prosperity as well as in adversity, in life as well as in death—in all things at all times—his will and not ours be done; (3) to pray that his will may be done on earth as it is in heaven.

Do we so will and so pray?

Until we will to do God's will—not ours, not our theories, notions, conceptions, and precepts—we are not in fit condition of heart to learn his will and can derive but little benefit from the study of any Bible subject. But when we have determined to do God's will at every cost and at all hazards, "where there is a will, there is a way," and Satan himself cannot prevent our learning it and performing it.

Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear, (Matt. 13: 46.)

I beg leave to say, then, that when I wrote the injunction at the head of this article, I first said: "Am I doing this?" Amid annoyances, perplexities, discouragements, disappointments, afflictions, sorrows, bereavements, trials, and persecutions, do I "rejoice in the Lord always?" If I am not endeavoring to do this, can I be honest in calling the attention of others to it?

But do we really believe God, and, therefore, believe that he intends for us to "rejoice in the Lord always?" We dare not say we believe he does not intend for us to obey him in anything. Yet the prevailing and besetting sin of the people of God is unbelief. Against this they are solemnly warned. (See Heb. 3.)

This injunction to "rejoice in the Lord always" is fre quently given in the New Testament. (See Phil. 3: 1; 4: 4; 1 Thess. 5: 16.) It can be obeyed, then.

Christians must cultivate this joy by looking at lifeits labors and sorrows and brevity, the fading of all things earthly and the certainty of heaven-in the light of the word of God. They must set their "affections upon things above" and "love not the world;" they must be contented with pursuing an industrious and honest and godly life and with having food and covering; they must not be avaricious and covetous or worldly ambitious; they must not be anxious "for the morrow," or for what may happen in the future, or for food and raiment, while they follow in the fear of God some useful occupation in order to supply their necessary wants and use the economy which the Bible teaches; but they must seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and trust him to fulfill all his promises. This joy depends upon faith in Christ and trust in the love and power of God. It must be "in the Lord"in the privileges, blessings, "living hope," and "the precious and exceeding great promises" "in the Lord." Read 1 Pet. 1: 3-9. When we think of the "living hope" which comes through "the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead;" of " an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven" for us; and of being "by the power of God . . . guarded through faith unto a salvation ready to be revealed in the last time," we do "rejoice greatly with joy unspeakable and full of glory." This is not a worldly joy, but a supreme, undisturbed, abiding joy, which comes through faith, tested by "manifold trials" and "more precious than gold that perisheth though it is proved by fire," "the end" of which is the salvation of our souls.

Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be fearful. (John 14: 27.)

The world cannot give this joy or peace; there is nothing in all worldly wisdom, ambitions, honors, and possessions to produce and maintain it. Human language cannot express it; it is "unspeakable and full of glory."

Let your forbearance be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand. In nothing be anxious; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus. (Phil. 4: 5-7.)

Upon these conditions—letting our "forbearance," or "the meekness and gentleness of Christ" (2 Cor. 10; 1), under mistreatment and persecution, be so sincere and genuine that all men will recognize it; being "anxious for nothing," not worrying, borrowing trouble, and doubting God; and with continual thanksgiving for God's abundant goodness and grace, making known our requests to him by prayer and supplication—"the peace of God, which passeth all understanding," will guard our "hearts and thoughts in Christ Jesus." As we comply with these conditions wellsprings of joy will fill our hearts and gladden our lives.

It is easy enough to rejoice when everything according to human wisdom and from a worldly viewpoint seems prosperous and happy and none are sick and afflicted and bereaved; but how are we to rejoice in afflictions, reverses, temptations, chastisements, persecutions, and death itself? The Bible gives the reasons for rejoicing in all these things.

Blessed are ye when men shall reproach you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you faisely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets that were before you. (Matt. 5: 11, 12.)

Paul declares that "all that would live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." (2 Tim. 3; 12.) Then, none who "live godly" will escape. If we have the faith to endure it "in the meekness and gentleness of Christ," the peace of God described above will fill our hearts and we will receive the great reward in heaven.

We are to "count it all joy" when we "fall into manifold temptations," knowing that the proving of our faith worketh patience—steadfastness; and when steadfastness has accomplished its work, we will be "perfect and entire, lacking in nothing." (James 1: 2-4.)

For this reason we also rejoice in tribulations. (Rom. 5: 4, 5.)

We rejoice in all chastening, which for the present seems not joyous, but grievous, but which yields "peaceable fruit" unto all who are exercised thereby, or lay it to heart, "even the fruit of righteousness." Chastisement comes through the love of God for our greatest good. If we receive no chastisement, we are not God's children. (See Heb. 12: 6-13.)

We are to rejoice "with the truth" (1 Cor. 13: 6); rejoice with those who rejoice (Rom. 12: 15); rejoice with the angels over all who repent (Luke 15: 7, 9), while all whom we turn to Christ are our joy and glory and crown (Phil. 4: 1; 1 Thess. 2: 19, 20); rejoice that we are "counted worthy to suffer dishonor for the Name" (Acts 5: 41); rejoice inasmuch as we "are partakers of Christ's sufferings," that at the revelation of his glory we "may rejoice with exceeding great joy" (1 Pet. 4: 13); and rejoice always, because "we know that to them that love God all things work together for good, even to them that are called according to his purpose" (Rom. 8: 28).

Christians have the right to rejoice, "having promise of the life which now is, and of that which is to come" (1 Tim. 4: 8), and being "heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ" (Rom. 8: 17). To think of being glorified with Christ and reigning with him fills the heart with the most ecstatic joy.

This joy is no spasmodic outburst or exuberancy of fleshly emotions; it is a calm, serene, abiding, sustaining, and comforting peace, which comes only through steadfast and faithful service of God, unknown to the world—"sweet peace that knows no ending."

THE PASSING OF A QUIET AND GENTLE SPIRIT.

Let us connect this joy and peace and hope of the gospel of Christ with the passing into "the better land" of the spirit of the dear mother of my wife, of Haynie and Sam Thomson, and the loving grandmother of our children. I use the words "dear," "loving," and "gentle" in their full meaning, because I have never known a family more tenderly, closely, and beautifully bound together by the cords of love, and a mother, mother-in-law, and grandmother more devoted to her entire family. There can cheer the hearts of loved ones no sweeter memories than those which follow her. They are like the fragrance of the flowers which remain after the flowers have withered, like the mellow golden glow on the western sky after the sun has set.

Her life in our home for more than twenty years—her quiet and gentle life—was a benediction to the family. There are blessings in having lovable old people in the home which can come in no other way. God has not said in vain, "Honor thy father and mother," or made vain promises of blessings to all who do this, Coming through such beautiful and loving service are tenderness and kindness, peace and joy, which the world, with all its pleasures and wealth, emoluments and glories, can neither give nor take away. And, at last, the parting blessing of such characters is worth far more than silver and gold and will abide forever.

I have been made better by the kindness and gentleness, peace and purity of this life.

A few years ago Mrs. Thomson's only sister, two years younger than herself, but whom she survived two years. Mrs. Robinson—"Aunt Mit," as we called her—spent the winter in our home and remained into the spring. But for her daughter and only surviving child, Mrs. Nelson—"Cousin Bettie"—now of Atlanta, Ga., we would have persuaded "Aunt Mit" to remain with her sister and with us all to the end. "Aunt Mit" and "Mamma," as the children affectionately called their mother, were happy together, and it was a pleasure and delight to have them so and to see them travel again the paths their youthful feet once trod.

"Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight, Make me a child again just for to-night; Mother, come back from the echoless shore, Take me again to your arms as of yore. Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care; Smooth the few silver threads out of my hair. Over my slumbers your loving watch keep; Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep."

"Mamma's" nearest relative by blood in Tennessee, left behind, and a girlhood companion, is Mrs. Rachel Word, the widow of the late R. Q. Word, of Wilson County, Tenn., who is eighty-four years of age, and who also has been with us since November last. We carried Cousin Rachel into "Mamma's" room about two hours before "Mamma's" departure, but not knowing the end was so near, and they bade each other a most affectionate farewell. Cousin Rachel yet lingers on the brink.

It will prove helpful and encouraging to others to record some of the characteristics of this kind, gentle, Christian woman. She possessed remarkably fine judgment; she was free from all jealousy, scorn, and envy; she was frank, sincere, without guile, destitute of all hypocrisy, used no diplomacy, and, therefore, was in all feelings, thoughts, and words truthful and honest; she loved quietness and peace and never uttered one word or performed one deed calculated to disturb the harmony and peace existing between any persons on earth; no gossip and scandal and slander to neighbors and friends escaped her lips; I have never seen any person who could remain more successfully silent when nothing should be said: she loved her home, her husband, and her children, and the heart of her husband safely trusted in her; and all other characteristics were adorned with woman's chiefest charm, becoming and innate modesty. Her life at home was in happy accord with the word of God and in striking contrast with the ambitions and worldly lives of numerous church women of to-day. Many women seem to ignore the commands of God to wives and mothers and home-keepers. With many there seems to be no such thing as retirement, while the teaching of the Bible in regard to "shamefastness and sobriety," "modest apparel," and "a meek and quiet spirit" is "idle talk." Home-building, home-keeping, and motherhood-the greatest and now most needed work in the world-in the sacred purity of the New Testament are not the ideals of most women.

Before her marriage to Samuel P. Thomson in the eighteenth year of her age, she was Elizabeth Ann Halley. She was born in Clark County, Ky., on March 16, 1833 Her mother was Barbara Valandingham, a woman of remarkable industry and strength of character. It belongs to the women of this family through succeeding generations to make home-keepers, dutiful and faithful wives and mothers, devoted to the interests and welfare of husbands and children. Although a widow for thirty-seven years. "Mamma" was as devoted to the memory of her husband as she was to him. He was always her husband. As she neared the end, she spoke more frequently of him.

He, too, was reared in Clark County, Ky., but removed to Tennessee before the War between the States; enlisted on the Southern side; was made captain of his company, became unable for active service through failing health; spent the remainder of the time in the potash works in Georgia; and returned with thousands of others, brave and heroic, to rebuild a devastated country. He was a genial, upright, popular, and admirable man, whom it was never my pleasure to know.

Four children were born to this happy couple: Haynie, Mary (Mrs. Elam), Valla (Barbara Valandingham), and Samuel P., Jr. Valla died twelve years ago. The other three survive their mother. These boys—men now—were most thoughtful, tender, and dutiful sons, and were and are still and will always be kind and devoted brothers. They were very careful, with their sister, to satisfy every want and gratify every wish of their mother and to fill her days with comfort and peace. May the Lord comfort and sustain them and likewise bless them. And he will.

For more than thirty-six years "Mamma" was a member of the congregation of Bellwood, Tenn. Coming into this congregation was not her first step in the service of God; years before this she had been religious; but at this time she told me she wanted to be a Christian only and to so rear her children. During the very cold weather of last winter she with other afflicted ones at home held delightful services on Sundays in memory of Jesus, led by a grandson.

She expressed herself frequently as ready to go, her only regret being the grief her departure would cause her children. But theirs is a sweet sorrow, being not without hope and brightened by the fact that death is gain.

At 6:30 P.M., March 11, as the shadows of the evening began to fall, her heart ceased to beat, she quit breathing, and without a struggle and even a gasp her spirit left the earthly house of this tabernacle for the building of God, "a house not made with hands, eternal, in the heavens."

Precious in the sight of Jehovah is the death of his saints." (Ps. 116: 15.)

The funeral services were conducted by Brother J. W. Eatherly, one of the elders of the Bellwood church.

Missionary

News from Hindustan.

BY S. O. MARTIN.

All the missionaries of the church of Christ in Satara, India, are quite busy at present packing up for Aurangabad, Deccan, India. We have already rented a large bunga low suitable for all of us. This will be a better location for us, since we will be in the district we are working and will not have to pay out railroad fare to get there. Satara being a greater elevation, the climate is much better, and for that reason we have lived here to somewhat get acclimated.

Brother McHenry and I were out in the Nizam's District about two weeks ago and had a good meeting with the brethren in several villages. The harvest will be on hand in about two months, and the brethren will all be working, and for that reason we want to arrange to have a mass meeting of as many villages as we can get together before that time. This will be somewhat of a "love feast" that you have read of in the Bible so common in the New Testament times.

There are many customs of India which are like those prevalent in Palestine in the days of Christ. Some of these might be of interest to the readers of the various papers. Just recently Brother Janes asked us to tell the American brethren how we worship here. I might say that, in the main, it is similar to American style; however, in our meetings the native brethren sit on the floor as their custom is, and we sit on chairs as our custom is at home. At prayer the natives kneel down and place their head in their hands upon the floor, or upon the ground if it is in a native house, since their houses have no floor except the ground plastered over with thin cow manure, which, when dried, makes a very hard floor, much better than the dusty earth. Out in the district at prayer time, instead of ringing the church bell, they call prayers by clapping their hands. This is quite easily heard by all the villagers of one caste; for they all live in close compounds, their houses being all built in a huddle. Heretofore you may have been hearing of "whole villages turning to Christ." Thes terms would be very much misleading, since the villages are made up of different castes; for instance, Mangs, Mahars, etc. These separate castes have separate huddles of houses, and one would very seldom, if ever, get more than one caste out of a village to accept Christ. But this is often the case; for if one family of a certain caste become Christians, then the whole section of the village will turn over. To show you something of how far-reaching this caste prejudice is, I will tell you of an instance which is or has been very common. The people of these different castes have a separate well out of which to draw their water. If a man from another easte should draw water from their well, it would defile the water and the well would be immediately filled up. Such cases have often happened. Even if a Mahar should touch the Mangs' well, they would sometimes fill it up For just such reasons these people are constantly in clannish quarrels. After they become Christians, even the lowcaste people still hold to their caste prejudices to some extent; and in the high-caste circles, sometimes, if a sweeper is baptized, many high-caste men leave the church. These are a few of the difficulties. I have many other things to say, but "ye are not able to bear them yet." Perhaps I shall tell more next time.

The people live in villages here much in the same way as they did in Palestine. They, no doubt, did this in former times as protection against robbers and wild beasts; and since customs change very slowly, if at all, they have kept up the custom of their fathers. As a result, the farmers and all live in villages. For this reason they "go forth to sow." Some of them may go for several miles out, and for this reason we have the expression: "Behold, a sower went forth to sow."

Just recently I received a card from an old brother whom Brother McHenry baptized last April. This man since that time has gone out as an evangelist without pay and baptized over one hundred people. We hope to go over to see him soon. I also had a card from another one of the workers who has recently baptized ten persons. Pray for us. "But to do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased." (Heb. 13: 16.)

This leaves us all fairly well. As for myself, I am fat and fine. Sister McHenry has been in bed for two or three days, but was up to-day.

Training Little Children

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Article 4-Delightful Occupations for Mothers to Follow on Their Walks With Their Children.

Walks and talks foster a desire for wholesome recreation that can be enjoyed whether the purse is full or empty that is of benefit physically, morally, and mentally, and that can be shared with others. On your walks point out the trees that make a strong appeal to the children -those that bear fruit; also the hickory and chestnut trees, the maples with their keys that fit so snugly on the nose, the oaks with their acorns that can be hollowed out and used as cups or pipes.

Collect milkweed pods and bittersweet with its bright berries to beautify the children's rooms. Pick wild flowers, each in its due season, spring beauty, violets, wild geraniums, daisies, black-eyed Susans, and goldenrod, and you will soon be asked to tell why the bees hover over the flowers, and you will also watch the bees at work.

Keep your eyes open for cocoons in the fall. Put them into a wide lantern chimney resting upon a saucer, the top covered with mosquito netting, and await developments. When the butterfly emerges, the children will have had an experience more deeply impressed, because more intimate, than any classroom illustration. As the children grow older, you will try different caterpillars in this same chimney device, and will watch the spinning of the cocoons or the transition into the chrysalid state. Sometimes the children's sharp eyes (usually sooner than your own) will discover eggs already laid on leaves, and you will watch them emerge into wriggling little bodies. One little girl was fortunate enough to see the eggs hatch about ten minutes after she had gathered the leaf, and ever since she has kept her eyes open for another such "find." Frogs, toads, and tadpoles are sure to be noticed by the children, and will afford much interesting study if an aquarium can be provided for them at home.

Get acquainted with the birds. Begin in the late fall and winter when there are so few species that they can be easily learned and their notes readily distinguished-the woodpecker, the nuthatch, the chicadee, the junco, the English sparrow, and the white-throated sparrow. When these have become familiar, the early-spring birds will soon be added to the list-the robin, the grackle, the flicker, the meadowlark, the song sparrow, the bluebird. With these birds well known, the child will possess sufficient knowledge to discover others for himself, and he will find never-ending delight in greeting the birds as the harbingers of the seasons.

The nests that are commonly seen-the chipping sparrow's in the hedges, the oriole's stocking hanging from the branch, the robin's well-shaped nest in the crotch of the tree, and the house sparrow's careless, untidy home-will soon be readily recognized.

On your walks retell stories read or heard, both you and the children participating in the telling. Invent stories, basing them on a beautiful sunset which you are witnessing, or on a cloud scene as the clouds shape themselves into varied forms, or on any other phase of the landscape which may attract you.

Repeat "Mother Goose" jingles as you go marching on; make up jingles yourself, and get the youngsters to help. You will have great fun acting out some of your stories like "The Three Billy Goats Gruff" under a real bridge.

Count your steps from one point to another (with little ones only up to ten or twenty). Count forward and backward. Odd numbers, even numbers, simple multiplication tables, combinations in adding and substracting, can be well drilled, especially during the cold weather, when one walks briskly and observation or loitering is impossible. Simple problems will be really enjoyed if you use names of playmates and stores and purchases with which the child is thoroughly familiar in his own experiences. Seeds and shells can be used for concrete work in simple adding, subtracting, etc.

At times you will encourage silent communion with nature, which in more mature years gives a "peace that passeth understanding." The children will readily accede to your request, "Let us all be quiet for a while," especially at the twilight hour when the sun's glory and radiance are still reflected in the west.

Moonlight walks, despite the disadvantage of exceeding the usual retiring hour, have no equal in imbuing children with a sense of the mystery and the power and the glory of the universe, and this experience should not be denied our children. They should be permitted this walk with the parents at least once each season, when the moon is full and seems to bathe not only the earth, but the innermost soul, in soft, healing light.

Then, if you will add a few sunrise walks in the summertime, you will be certain of having stored up in your children and in yourself memories and delights that will remain forever.

Chinese "Five Kings."

"The Five Kings" is the name of the sacred book in which is incorporated the religion of the Chinese as well as a great number of other peoples of the Orient.

The doctrine is a complex system of moral, social, political, and religious teaching built up by Confucius on the ancient Chinese traditions, and, although its author lived more than five centuries before the birth of Christ, it is still perpetuated as the state religion of the Chinese.

Confucianism is a religion without positive revelation, with a minimum of dogmatic teaching, whose popular worship is centered in offerings to the dead, in which the notion of duty is extended beyond the sphere of morals proper so as to embrace almost every detail of daily life. -Exchange. =

Lost in Her Own Home.

Have you never been homesick? If you have not, I doubt if you really know what home means. With all the moving throngs we meet everywhere, there are thousands who are literally dying of homesickness. The other day I called in a home. Two years before a young bride had started housekeeping; they had spent all they could on their little home and its furnishings. Shortly after her arrival, she began to look for company. Each morning the home was put in order, and then in the afternoon she sat waiting for some one to ring the doorbell. She had waited for two whole years, and I was the first caller in the home; and when she told about it, tears came. All around about that home there stood the churches, each church wondering why it was not getting the people. If only they had met this woman on the plane of her need, she would have gone to any church which would have ended her homesickness. -The Christian Herald.

Church Gains Falling Off.

We reprint from the Literary Digest the following concerning the statistics of the different denominations, believing it will be read with alacrity and interest:

Financial but not numerical prosperity is the distinguishing mark of the church history of the United States covering the year 1917. "War conditions" is the phrase covering the year 1917. "War conditions" is the phrase used by Dr. H. K. Carroll in explanation. The net increase in members was only 573,295, and this is less by 183,329 than the total gain reported for 1916. It is also less than the average of the past five years. Fluctuations in membership statistics, it is pointed out, are common even in ordinary years, but the nature of the variations of the past year point to definitely assignable causes. "A few denominations may have prospered more than usual under the prevalent war conditions; but churches with a large element of foreign-speaking population have had a lean year." Hungarian Reformed Church reports the loss of one-fourth of its entire membership, and "the Roman Catholic Church, embracing large bodies of European population, has had an increase, according to the estimate of the editor of the Official Catholic Directory, of only about 175,000 population, equivalent to about 148,750 communicants, as against 390,000 increase in 1916, a falling off of about 241,-000." The report which Dr. Carroll prepares for The Christian Herald (New York) shows that it is the larger bodies that make the gains, as in former years.

"The Roman Catholic Church, with 14,618,000 communicants, added 148,750; the Methodist Episcopal Church, with 3.887,000, gained 144,000, its largest increase in this century except one; the Disciples of Christ, with 1,237,000, advanced by 59,000; the Northern Presbyterian Church, advanced by 59,000; the Northern Presbyterian with 1,581,443, gained 38,416; the Baptists, Northern, Southern, and Colored, with 6,106,604, gained nearly 77,-Church of Christ, Scientist, declines to give statistics of

It had in 1906, 85,096.

"The aggregate of church members for the 167 denominations is 40.515,126. This huge total is made up chiefly nations is 40.515,126. This huge total is made up chiefly of the great denominational groups, as, Baptists (fifteen bodies), 6,442,393; Catholics (three bodies), 14,663,342; Lutherans (eighteen bodies), 2,460,937; Methodists (sixteen bodies), 7,782,018; Presbyterians (eleven bodies), 2,225,879; Disciples of Christ (two bodies), 1,396,466; Protestant Episcopal (two bodies), 1,083,366; Reformed (four bodies), 514,061; Eastern Orthodox (seven bodies), 490,500; Mennonites (twelve bodies), 66,542; Eviends (four 490,500; Mennonites (twelve bodies), 66,542; Friends (four bodies), 119,263; Dunkards (four bodies), 128,363; United Brethren (two bodies), 367,959; Adventists (six bodies), 117,569; Evangelical Association (two bodies), 209,483; Scandinavian Evangelical (three bodies), 62,900; Latter-Day Saints (two bodies), 420,000.

"There are 181,808 ministers, an increase of 1,244, and 226,609 churches, an increase of 1,006."

Church union is showing activity among the Lutherans, Methodists, and Presbyterians. Four Norwegian Lutheran bodies have achieved consolidation and-

"An agreement exists to merge three of the four large general bodies of Lutherans—the General Synod, the General Council, and the United Synod South. If the plan is ratified, the united body will have about a million communicants.

'Plans for the reunion of the Methodist Episcopal and Southern Methodist Episcopal Churches have ress. The united body would have over 6,000,000 communi-The Northern and Southern Presbyterian Churches are also considering whether they cannot consolidate."

In spite of the smaller membership gains, optimism is the note of the man who gauges statistically the religious life of the country. Money "talks" in tones mingled with more accents than mere "amounts." Thus:

"The financial resources of the churches, heavily taxed contributions to the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Knights of Columbus, and similar organizations for the care of soldiers and sailors of our own and zations for the care of sonders and sanors of our own and allied countries, and for the relief of war-devastated populations, have not failed to support generously their own church and benevolent work. Besides the many millions going through general and denominational channels for war purposes, the leading churches show large increases in the amounts contributed for missions, home and foreign, and other denominational enterprises. The Presbyterian Church (Northern) gave $4,250,000 to its missions, an increase of $500,000, and for all denominational purposes, $31,000,000, a net increase of over $3,000,000. The Methodist Episcopal Church gave $5,500,000 to its missions, an increase of $250,000, besides special contributions of many millions to educational, endowment, and ministerial pension funds. It plans to raise for its missions $15,000,000 a year for the next five years. The Protestant Episcopal Church finished its ministerial pension fund at the end of February last, for which it raised nearly $8,750,000, $3,750,000 beyond the goal it had set. Its total contributions for other denominational purposes reached the sum of $25,500,000, an increase of $1,400,000.

"Altogether it has been a great year for the churches, which show a strong tendency to increase of cooperation and federation, finding, despite differences in creed and church government, much common ground for harmonious work in caring for the nation's armed forces and in assisting our government in furthering the purposes of the war in every way possible."

Ministers, Don't Swear!

The following from the Literary Digest is to the point. Profanity should be condemned. The pulpit should be free from it.

At first blush it seems an extravagant idea to caution ministers and religious leaders against encouraging swearing; but in a world where so many things have come about that one-half the people, at least, universally damn, it is not strange that profanity creeps into the pulpit, too. The Watchman-Examiner (Boston) finds it "disgusting, not to say horrifying, to every right-minded person to note the increasing use in common speech of words and phrases that come under the category of the profane." This, of course, applies to the nonclerical part of society; but when we brand profanity as "an offense against common decency and good manners, as well as a sin against God," the Baptist journal wonders if this is "any less true when the offender is a minister and the place a what is a minister and the place a what is a single service. offender is a minister and the place a pulpit and the occasion or the excuse the heat of passion against an iniquitous nation and an unrighteous war." We read:

Years ago Dr. Joseph Parker, of the London City Temple, startled and shocked the world by exclaiming in the midst of an impassioned denunciation of Turkish atroci-ties: 'God damn the Turk!' Such an invective, and others of a similar character, with another application and ob-jective, have become so common nowadays that they nel ther startle nor shock us as the original utterance did. But ought we not to be startled and shocked? Are such expressions in the pulpit or in supposedly religious speech in accord with the spirit and temper of the gospel for which the pulpit stands? Would it not be well to leave the matter of dealing with the eternal destinies of those responsible for this wicked war entirely in the hands of a God who is almighty, merciful, and just? There is no excuse in these days for smooth sayings and mineing words; no excuse for a man in whose soul is not seething hot and furious hatred for the iniquitous war, and fierce indigna-tion against those whose cruel ambitions and lustful passions have thrust it upon us. But there is no excuse for the minister who in his endeavor to declare that hatred allows himself to use words and phrases that in any other connection and directed toward any other objective he would be the first to condemn as profane. Even though he might justify to himself his strong words by the plea of extreme provocation, it would not be strange if the average boy in the congregation before him failed to catch the essential and saving distinction between damning the Kaiser and damning anything else against which for any reason resentment might rise. Men who stand as representatives of religion should be ever on the alert against anything that smacks of extravagance."

Every church should know its membership. In order to keep informed as to the residence and membership of your church, you should have a church record. Our Church Record is the very thing you need. Price, $1.50.

From E. S. Jelley, Jr., Dehra Dun, U. P., India: "There is considerable interest and the promise of many converts in a short time."

In resonnse to several inquiries, we regret to write that it is no longer possible for the Gospel Advocate to supply wine for communion purposes.

If you need a good Testament with explanatory notes, send us a new subscriber and we will make you a present of one that retails for two dollars.

The services at Belmont Avenue Church, this city, will be conducted next Sunday by Alex. Perry and S. F. Morrow, two of the elders of the congregation.

"Civil Government"—Its Origin, Mission, and Destiny, and the Christian's Relations to It. This book is the outgrowth of the author's most matured thoughts on this subject. A. Wilkinson said of it: "I think the book is worth its weight in gold." Pages, 158. Price, 75 cents.

From Willis G. Jernigan, Fort Worth, Texas, March 12: "I am at present with the Weatherford Street church of Christ, in this city. The church meets in the basement of the courthouse. The brethren here are doing remarkably well, and we hope to have a permanent location in the near future. My address is 1107 East Belknap Street."

R. A. Craig writes from Chaplin, Ky.: "We are having fine attendance at Fairmount. Interest in the Bible classes continues to increase. The brethren at Love Ridge and Fairview are planning to make a greater sacrifice this year Much interest is being manifested at Russell Schoolhouse. The brethren at Antioch are beginning to see their duty. I will preach at Van Buren on the fifth Sunday in this month."

From John Hayes, Mooresville, Ala.: "I closed a meeting on Sunday night at the Dallas Cotton Mills, at Huntsville. One young lady made the good confession and was baptized into Christ. When I called upon her to confess her Savior before men, she spoke clearly and distinctly: 'I believe with all my heart that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.' The attendance was small, but interest was good to the last. This was my first meeting this year. The doctor had forbidden my trying to preach regularly through Februa.y. My throat is well again, and I am glad to be busy once more."

T. E. Tatum writes: "I rented my farm some time ago to a good brother in Tennessee, but he found it difficult to ship his goods through and he failed to come, so my farm is yet for rent. I want to move my family elsewhere, and then I want to 'do the work of an evangelist.' I must not leave my family alone in the country. My children are all girls, except little Paul, ten years old. I want to move to some town where protection can be had while I am out. Seeing the great need of evangelistic work, my life is miserable on the farm. We are about three miles from Hallsville, on a public road, a telephone line, a rural mail route, and within two hundred yards of a good schoolhouse and a good church house. Our land produces cotton and peanuts well and makes fairly good corn. We have much pasture for cattle and we are very well fixed for raising hogs. We have good health here. I am working daily from daylight until dark preparing land and planting crops. I have corn large enough to plow and more coming up. Our garden is fine and is now (March 23) furnishing us vegetables daily. Will some good, Christian family come and do this work and let me 'preach the word?' I want to spend the remaining remnant of my days preaching the gospel and circulating wholesome religious literature. I mean to keep busy on the farm until you come. Write me at Hallsville, Texas."

From L. Meade Williams, Tulare, Cal., March 17: "The work at this place is moving along very nicely. Our attendance is increasing from time to time. To-day L. D. Perkins, of Armona, was here and preached a splendid sermon on prayer, based on Acts 2: 42: 'And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers.' This was the last of a series of four sermons based on this scripture-'Apostles' Doctrine,' 'Fellowship,' 'Breaking of Bread,' and 'Prayers.' We had quite a number of the brethren and sisters from Fresno with us to-day. We have a very nice hall where we meet, which is well heated and seated and lighted. We are still hoping to have Brother Larimore with us some while he is in California. Tulare is located in the central part of the San Joaquin Valley, and is a very fine dairy section of the State. Any one desiring information may address me at 129 South D Street. Any one coming to Tulare and desiring to meet on Lord's day with us will find us in the Ryan Hall, on K Street, between Tulare and Kern. Some who have come to Tulare, on inquiring where the church of Christ met, have been directed to all parts of the city, and have had some difficulty in finding just where we are located. This is a good part of the State to locate in, if you are thinking of coming to California."

Mrs. W. K. Cunningham writes from Oilton, Okla., March 25: "This is a new town of about three or four thousand souls, most of them such appallingly wicked souls, caring nothing for anything that is sacred and holy. So far I have not found a person who wishes to worship God just as he directs. There is only one church building here (Methodist), and there are about fifty members, I have been told, of the Christian Church who are not meeting at present for lack of a place to meet. I went Sunday to the Methodist church, preferring to go to some place where God's word would be read and prayer would be offered, and heard a very good talk on Matt. 7: 9, 10: 'Or what man is there of you, who, if his son shall ask him for a loaf, will give him a stone,' etc.? There were eight or ten men present. Just think-in all this town eight or ten men at church! Men on the streets boldly and loudly take God's name in vain and the officers do not care. Sunday night there were crowds pouring out of the theater and picture shows and hundreds at a street carnival as we came from church. It almost makes me wish I were a man and could publicly preach the gospel to them in its purity, realizing that nothing but the power of the gospel of Jesus can stop such people in their mad rush to perdition. I talked with a doctor's wife from Tennessee, who is a member of the 'Christian Church,' and she said: 'No, we're not meeting now, but we have the Ladies' Aid." said: 'But I do not believe in the Ladies' Aid Society.' She replied: 'O, you're not nonprogressive?' I write this praying that some one-some gospel preacher in Oklahoma, perhaps-may see it and 'come over, and help us.' I think this is almost as truly a heathen land, as far as true worship is concerned, as Japan and India. I have just been living here a few days, and do not know whether one could get these people to hear the gospel or not, but surely some would. Pray for us."

HALF SICK, HALF WELL

A Condition That Will Not Improve Upon Itself.

In the Spring the depressing condi-tion that many call Spring fever often runs through families and neighbor-hoods.

This indefinite, hard-to-describe state of poor health probably means that you are thin-blooded and anemic. Exhausted thin blood gets thinner, low vitality falls lower, poor appetite be-comes poorer. Then the thoroughly exhausted system can no longer resist, and on comes the prostrating illness or serious disease.

Treat the half-sick, Spring-tired condition with that splendid course of medicine—Hood's Sarsaparilla, to fortify the whole body; Peptiron, to ironize and make rich red blood's Hood's Pills to rouse the liver to its regular daily duties,—and the half-well revives to perfect health. Each medicine is valuable in itself but is trebly so when used in this combination.

WHEN WRITING OUR-ADVERTISERS PLEASE MENTION THIS PUBLICATION Noah a Just Man.

BY E. G. ROCKLIFF.

Noah was the son of the second Lamech, the grandson of Methuselah and the tenth in descent from Adam. Adam had been dead about one hundred and twenty-five years when Noah was born. Noah's father was fifty-six years old when Adam died; so he would be able to tell his son many things about the first man. Noah lived to be nine hundred and fifty years old, thus rivaling the great forest trees in years of life.

The beginning of Gen. 6 shows up the sharp division that existed between the descendants of Seth and the descendants of Cain. The descendants of Seth are designated the "sons of God "-faithful and obedient; for that is what the title means. The women of the Cainite race are called "daughters of men." This title is in striking contrast with "sons of God;" for while the latter means faithful and obedient, the other means faithless and disobedient. Daughters of bad men, and they are degrees worse than their fathers. They were good to look upon and won the hearts of the descendants of Seth by their beauty and blandishments, and intermarriages upon a large scale took place. As is usual in such alliances, the worst part gained the ascendancy. The offspring were more depraved than their parents, and a universal corruption of minds and morals took place. Many of them were giants in stature, "mighty men," "men of renown." The word used here is "Nephilim," and implies in this case "apostate."

These people filled the earth with violence, so much so that God was grieved, and it repented him that he had made man on the earth. Yet he mercifully afforded a respite of one hundred and twenty years, during which time faithful Noah sought to win the world to repentance by preaching. There was still found faith on the earth, for Noah was a good man, finding favor in the eyes of God. The old Book says he was "a just man and perfect in his generations, and Noah walked with God."

God gave Noah instructions concerning the building of an ark. When God spoke, Noah listened. He did not suggest any improvements upon God's plans, as men have the presumption to do to-day, but "according to all that God commanded him, so did he." It must have looked a funny thing to Noah and the people of his day-that three-story ark with but one window in the roof and one door in the side; but it never seems to have occurred to the builder, though no doubt much advice would be given him by onlookers, to alter in any way or to improve upon the directions God had given. It was not built like a ship to plow its way through the water, but like a househoat to float and hear its burden until the flood time was past. Noah worked on that boat one hundred and twenty years, and while he worked he pleaded with the people to get right with God.

We preachers get discouraged sometimes when we look upon the might of the forces of evil; but how about Noah, the one preacher in a world filled with wickedness? We get anxious about results. He won seven souls in one hundred and twenty years of faithful preaching. All honor to the man who can hold on under such trying circumstances! Paul says of this great and good man: "By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith." (Heb. 11: 7.) When God saw the universal depravity, he said: "My spirit shall not always strive with man." Yet his Spirit did strive with man for one hundred and twenty years "while the ark was a preparing." (1 Pet. 3: 19. 20.) By this Spirit-that is, the same Spirit by which Christ, being put to death in the flesh, was quickened-"he went and preached unto the spirits in prison [or spiritual darkness]; which sometime were disobedient, when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." Noah was the preacher that the Spirit used as his instrument in turning the antediluvians away from their sin to God. Away with the interpretation that would give these old sinners with whom Noah pleaded one hundred and twenty years another chance!

Try to picture Noah's task. A corrupt world; giants in stature and in crime stalking through the land; Noah probably the goat, the butt of their coarse jests. It is probable that after he had been working day after day for many, many years, the people would call him mad and tell him that it did not look any more like rain than on the day he began to build.

Life was not going by like a song for the old boat builder, yet he raised his voice in warning day after day and went on with his building, fol lowing God's directions as a modern builder follows his blue prints. Then one day it did rain, and it was some rain. "The fountains of the great deep were opened up, and the windows of heaven were opened." Noah and his converts were safe in the ark; black death and desolation reigned everywhere without.

I like to read about Noah's coming out after the flood had dried up. His first thoughts are of God, for he builds an altar and offers sacrifice unto him. This act was well pleasing to Jehovah. Noah put God first, and God blessed him,

The ark that Noah built is a type of the church. It could never havebeen that, if Noah had swerved a hairbreadth from the divine pattern. It had but one door. So has the church. Jesus says: "I am the door." You cannot get in but by him, any more than one could get into Noah's ark but by the door. "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." It had but one window, and that was in the roof. All the light we need in the church we get from above. It is the light from other sources that has produced sectarianism. They did not have enough light from above, so put side windows in their ark. There were no infants in the ark. There are none in the church. They do not need an ark of safety, for they are safe, There was life in the ark and death outside. There is life in the church and safety; there is danger and death outside. Only those who entered the ark were saved from the flood. You must enter the church, the ark of eternal safety, or be lost. There is safety only in Christ, and you cannot come into Christ without being added to the church. That element that destroyed the world-water-floated the ark and saved Noah and his family. "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us." (1 Pet. 3: 21.) Do not ever say again that baptism has nothing to do with salvation. Just as surely as Noah's salvation depended upon making the ark according to God's plain directions, so your salvation depends upon following his directions and coming into the ark provided for you in the way he commands. He put water in the plan of salvation, and you cannot take it out and be saved. It is God's plan for us that we believe, repent, confess Christ, and be baptized, just as it was his plan for Noah to put one window in the roof and one door in the side of the ark; and if we are wise, we will obey, for obedience is the test of our love for him. Noah's greatness consisted in his doing what God told him to do. You can readily follow, dear reader, this easy road to real greatness.

The Lazy Muscles That Cause Constipation

BY R. H. SINCLAIR

It is now agreed by all of the great authorities that constipation is not a disorder of the stomach or even of the small intestine, but of the large intestine or colon.

Under normal conditions this large colon, which is about five feet long and shaped like a horseshoe, extracts the liquids from the waste matter intrusted to its care and promptly passes the residue on.

But, unfortunately, due to our sedentary lives, the colon has gradually become so lazy from lack of exercise that it is unable to perform its functions.

If we were able to live outdoors and to exercise vigorously every day, our colons would handle their work properly, for exercise is the greatest and most satisfactory colon stimulant known.

To most of us sufficient daily exercise, however, is not possible. We have neither the time nor the inclination; instead, we dose ourselves with laxative drugs, mineral waters and other nostrums, with the result that, while we get temporary relief, we not only aggravate the condition, but find that repetitions of the same dose later fail to produce results.

But relief, even when obtained, is not sufficient. To maintain health and efficiency, it is absolutely of paramount importance to create and maintain day in and day out freedom from intestinal poisons, and this is impossible with laxatives.

There is a new way, however, to keep the colon sweet and clean—a way which has the same effect as vigorous exercise, yet without the inconvenience or time-consuming features of exercise, and the results are even better because the treatment is localized.

The principle upon which this new method is founded is the same as that used in massage. We all know that massage has the same effect as exercise; it stimulates the nerves and strengthens the muscles. Colon massage as practiced by osteopaths has proved wonderfully effective.

This new method of massaging the colon involves the use of a device called the "Kolon Motor"-a mechanical masseur, the face of which is shaped to fit over the colon when placed against the abdomen. You merely put the Kolon Motor on a door or wall, lean up against it, and turn the handle for a few moments. The face rotates with a scientific waving motion which immediately stimulates the colon and causes proper functioning. A couple of minutes in the morning each day is all that is required; and unless your experience is different from the hundreds of other users, you will feel like a new person after the very first application.

Before the Kolon Motor was offered to the public, a number of well-known physicians were acquainted with its merits and used it in their practice. Without exception the results were most gratifying; in fact, every physician who has tested the Kolon Motor indorses it most highly.

Martin's Method, Incorporated, Department 5911, 105 East Thirtieth Street, New York, has prepared a booklet called "Colon Cleanliness," which they will be pleased to send gratis to all readers of this magazine. In this booklet the Kolon Motor is clearly illustrated and its application shown. It also contains a scientific discussion of auto-intoxication, and explains why and how the Kolon Motor produces such assured results. Letters from well-known physicians relating their experience with the Kolon Motor also form a part of the book.

There may be some who scoff at the idea of colon hygiene and its direct relation to health and efficiency, but the wiser ones will write for this free book and learn what this wonderful device is accomplishing for so many others.

Let us put away, then, let us put away oblivion of the truth-namely, ignorance; and, removing the darkness which obstructs, as dimness of sight, let us contemplate the only true God, first raising our voice in this hymn of praise: "Hail, O Light!" For unto us, buried in darkness, shut up in the shadow of death, light has shone forth from heaven, purer than the sun, sweeter than life here below. That light is eternal life; and whatever partakes of it lives. But night fears the light, and, hiding itself in terror, gives place to the day of the Lord .-Clement of Alexander.

There is just one way to remove freekles and make the skin clear and beautiful. It is in this way that Kintho Cream gets rid of the old, freekled skin, gradually and harmlessly, and gives a soft, clear, white, youthful and beautiful skin, which of course should have no freekles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed, and your freekles should begin to disappear in a day or two. It is well to get a cake of Kintho Soap also, as this helps to keep the freekles away, once Kintho has removed them.

What Tennessee Folks Say ABOUT A NEW DISCOVERY

Many local people are glad to testify to the good results obtained from Anuric, the discovery of Doctor Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for kidney and bladder disorders, backache, rheumatism and all uric acid troubles. This is what Mr. E. W. Bagshaw says:

Alabama.

Gadsden, March 18 .- Our work is moving along nicely here at present. Two very enjoyable services yester-day. We are planning to do some evangelistic work in this section this summer, and hope to be able to do much in building up the cause of the Master here.-Aruna Clark.

Bay Minette, March 12.—The con-gregations at Trenton and Cherry Sink, Fla., united in having the illustrated lecture work at Trenton. also preached at each place. Last week was spent with the church at Bethel, near Bell, Fla. Brother Rucker has recently closed a short meeting near Newberry, with three additions. There is need for an evangelist to spend his whole time in that section of the State.-Don Carlos Janes.

Lomax, March 12,-Dr. A. B. Baxley has located with us, and has preached four Lord's days in succession. has been doing evangelistic work In Chilton and adjoining counties for twelve months. Brother Baxley is a real good preacher; he sticks close to the Bible. We are greatly pleased with the interest manifested by the few members we have and the people generally. We hope to be able in twelve months to have a good enrollment and the people taught the gospel in its purity.—J. Thomas Daniel.

Fort Deposit, March 15 .- Prospects are bright and encouraging in and around this place for the advancement of the cause of Christ, more so than for years. The congregation here is a wide-awake little band and the work moves on nicely. Brother R. H. Rogers, recently of the Nashville Bible School, located with us the first of this year. He is a young man, about twenty-five years of age (the people call him our "boy preacher"); nevertheless, he is doing his work wellpreaching the pure, simple gospel in its primitive form. He also makes friends with all, rich or poor, and everybody seems to admire his ability to do so. We have good attendance at each service. We have had some to move in, and it seems the weak are taking new courage. Our Tuesday-night Bible class is one of our most interesting meetings. In this section it seems that the people in general are becoming more in sympathy with the truth. In fact, they are growing weary from being led into so many untaught things and are now seeing the need of the pure gospel. The thing we need to do is not to let Brother Rogers' support decrease, but bring some one to help him. We have about eight different places near here where a preacher can get a good crowd; so you see this is too much for one man, We are planning for a good meeting here in June. Brother Pittman, of Nashville, Tenn., is to do the preaching.—R. C. Taylor.

Florida.

March 17.-I began a Lake City, meeting in Taylor County, near Perry, on Tuesday night after the first Lord's day in March and continued it till last Friday night, when I was called home by a message from my wife saying that my thirteen-year-old boy was seriously ill and that the attending physicians advised his being taken at once to a specialist for operation in the head (opening of the mastoids). The operation was successfully done in the hospital at Jacksonville, miles away, and the little fellow is resting well at this writing, with a prospect of recovery. Yet it gives us much anxiety, and the waiting will be long and otherwise burdensome. We ask the earnest prayers of our brethren in Christ that God's will may be done in this sad and dark hour of affliction, physically and otherwise. We had a fine meeting with visible results. The church was edified, one wanderer was restored to fellowship, one came from the Baptists, and seven were baptized into the one body. May we all press on into greater usefulness in the Master's vineyard.—J. O. Barnes.

Kentucky.

Stop, March 17.—Several persons attended our Lord's-day service here. One man confessed his Savior and was baptized by Brother Harrison Matthews in the evening. A large crowd witnessed the baptizing. Brother Obie Shearer will preach for us on the sec-ond Lord's day in April. The harvest truly is ripe, but the laborers are few. W. C. Ramsey.

Oklahoma.

Braman, March 18 .- I located in Oklahoma last November to work with this congregation, and I have found it a continual source of happiness to labor with a church where harmony is met on the "one faith." At the Bible reading and the Lord'sday worship (morning and evening) everybody is enthusiastic. With such workers, the community will be made better. Two confessed their Lord and were baptized yesterday. These babes in Christ need the care of older ones to help them to grow. May the Lord help us to be discreet in dealing with the young.-W. T. Hines.

Tennessee.

Decherd, March 11.—I visited the congregation at Bethel, in Bledsoe County, on the third Lord's day in February. I preached to a packed house at eleven o'clock. The elders asked me to preach at Atpontley at night, which I did, also on Monday night. We had large crowds; could not seet all of the people. The out not seat all of the people. The outsiders asked me to hold a meeting for them. I have promised to begin a meeting at this place on the third Lord's day in this month, to continue for ten days or two weeks. This is a destitute place. I believe I will have a good meeting. The cry is: "Come and preach for us." The Bethel congregation is getting along nicely. Brother J. L. Hines preached for them last year and has many friends there.

—R. E. L. Taylor.

Ped Hill, March 10.—Our Sunday school at this place is in fine condition. We meet upon the first day of every week to remember our Lord and to study his word. The carpenters are now here to begin building our new meetinghouse. We hope to have it finished by the first of April. Brother R. E. L. Taylor has promised to come and hold a meeting for us as soon as we get our house finished. Brethren, we are in debt for lumber to build our house. If any one wishes to help us out, we will appreciate it very much. "God loveth a cheerful giver." I received a check for one dollar from Brother F. J. Agee, of Friendship, Tenn. Brethren, let us wake up and work for Christ more and more, for we know not what hour the Lord will come. Pray for me.—Charlie W. Agee.

Texas.

Ennis, March 11.—Spirited services, filled house, record attendance in Sunday school, and two additions at the Ennis Avenue Church yesterday. In April we are to have a "made-in-Ennis" revival. Our six embryo preachers and this minister will do the preaching. Brother G. A. Dunn will be with us in June.—Ben West.

Cleburne, March 18.—I am preaching somewhere all the time, doing what I can to stir up the pure mind of the churches by way of remembrance. Many, I fear, have departed from their "first love," and need to be encouraged—not scolded—to return. Brother Smith will be here soon to labor with this people in word and doctrine. While watching and waiting, let us not forget to labor.—F. L. Young.

Kirbyville, March 18.—I had another good trip to Votaw. On Saturday, at 7:30 P.M., united Sister Rosie J. Moore and Mr. A. C. Hart in marriage; preached at 7:45 P.M.; also preached on Sunday at 11 A.M. and 7:45 P.M. One wandering sister was restored and one fine young man made the good confession. He was baptized on Monday at 9:15 A.M. At 9:45 A.M. another splendid young man confessed Christ and was baptized at the same place.—J. S. Daugherty.

Henrietta, March 18.—The meeting at Henrietta closed last night. We organized with fifteen members (I found only three or four when I came), and sixteen more lined up with us the last two days of the meeting; so, counting my own family, we now have thirty-five. I preached three weeks and worked hard every day. Brother T. S. Teddlie led the singing. He is a wonder in the song field, and he would be at it all the time if the brethren would use him. He presents a splendid appearance in public and is a fine "mixer." The following sums have been received for the support of the work here: From F. A. Gardner, $5; church at Wellington, $50; C. C. Hornsby, $60; J. F. Williams, $10; Sister Spalding, Henrietta, $15; Brother Blair, $1; Sid McDonald, $2; by E. Christian, $1; W. H. Cremer, $1; Tom Reeves, $2.50; contributions here during the meeting, $24. Total, printing, advertising, and all other expenses of carrying on the meeting and the work, $75. Every cent we receive will be used to make this work permanent and strong till self-supporting. May God bless every one who helped me to prepare a place for my family to worship God and to save this wicked town. Brethren, call me when I can help you.—Tice Elkins.

The Third Lord's Day in April.

BY H. C. SHOULDERS.

The brethren at Lexington, Ky., are few in number, but are making a hard struggle to restore primitive Christianity in that city of about forty thousand people. The most of them are the working class and are not able to give a very great amount at one time. For some time I have been trying to help them raise the money to buy a lot and build them a house of worship. Last August we succeeded in buying a lot in a good locality, with a splendid dwelling, for the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars cash. In order to secure this property, we had to borrow sixteen hundred dollars from one of the local banks. With what they have paid and what I now have in bank is about four hundred dollars, leaving a balance of twelve hundred dollars still due on the property. When we purchased the property, it was rented until the first of April, 1918. The congregation has met in a rented hall since its beginning, but will move into their own house the first Lord's day in April. They will have to make some changes in partitions and will then have a very nice place which they will use until they can build. The deed to this property has the restrictive clause which forbids the use of instrumental music or anything not taught in the word of God. Many individuals and congregations have given toward this work, and I assure you every gift has been appreciated by these brethren; but they need lots of help yet to put them where they can carry on the work as they should and as they would like. The brethren everywhere should rally to the support of this work and thus put them in a position to carry on the work of preaching the gospel and saving souls. This is an open door for some real missionary work. brethren, elders, evangelist, and individuals, make a special appeal for a contribution for the Lexington building fund on the third Lord's day in April. Let every member of the body of Christ who may chance to read this consider it a special appeal for a contribution, or mention the matter before your congregation and take a special collection for the Lexington work. Remember, the third Lord's day in April is the time and my address is Box 194, Sellersburg, Ind. I will acknowledge everything sent for the work in the papers.

Why I Believe in Nuxated Iron

As a Tonic, Strength and Blood Builder

By E. Sauer, M. D.

Probably no remedy has ever met with such thenomenal success as has Nuxated Iron. It is conservatively estimated that over three milion people annually are taking it in this country alone. It has been highly endorsed and used by Former United States Senators and Members of Congress; Physicians who have been connected with well-known hospitals have prescribed and recommended it; Monseigneur Nandini, a prominent Clergyman, recommends it to all. Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, says it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician.

aimi, a prominent Clergyman, recommends it to all. Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, says it ought to be used in every nospital and orescribed by every physician.

Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, and former House Surgeon Jefferson Fark Hospital, Chicago, says Nuxated fron has proven through his own tests of it to excel any preparation he has ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders.

gestive disorders.)
Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor dep't.) New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says there are thousands of men and women who need a strength and blood builder but do not know what to take. In his opinion there is nothing better than organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for entiching the blood and helping to increase the strength and endurance of men and women who burn up too rapidly their nervous energy in the strengous strain of the great business competition of the day.

If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two fivegrain tablets of Nuxated from three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

Note:—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by former memoers of the United States Senate and House of Representatives, and other prominent people, with such surrising results, and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere Unike the older inorganic fron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black tor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refur d your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" neutralizes excessive acid in stomach, relieving dyspepsia, heartburn and distress at once.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress, due to acidity, will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness, or belching of gas, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath, or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach sweetener in the whole world, and, besides, it is harmless. Put an end to stomach distress at once by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, or any stomach disorder caused by fermentation due to excessive acids in the stomach.

How Shall We Express It? BY H. M. PHILLIPS.

There are a few things the Bible gives no special directions on. I suppose we are left to our wisdom in regard to such. If so, then it may be that the wiser ones among us can settle what would be best to say in reference to certain things. We are to speak where the Bible speaks, and we are to be silent where it is silent. This extends to principle as well as to plainly spoken words. Now, I would like for some one who is qualified for the task to tell us how to express certain acts of service connected with the worship of the church, as well as other things spoken of in the Scriptures.

1. As to the Lord's Supper, we know that "the first day of the week" is the time to eat it. But when is "the first day of the week?" From Saturday at sundown to Sunday at sundown, you say. Then what do the following expressions mean? "In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week." "Very early on the first day of the week, . . when the sun was risen." "On the first day of the week, at early dawn." "On the first day of the week, . . . while it was yet dark." Does the first day of the week begin on Saturday night or Sunday morningwhich? If the first day of the week extends from Saturday at sundown to Sunday at sundown, would it be safe to eat the Supper on Saturday night? Anyway, when is the first day of the week? The safe plan would be from sunup to sundown on Sunday, would it not?

2. How shall we express that which is done by the one who takes the lead in the work, or performs the public part? Is it safe to say he waits on the table, officiates at the Lord's table, leads in the worship as the Supper is eaten, or performs the public work of the Lord's Supper? We are in need of a safe, scriptural expression here. Who can furnish it? Some object when it is said that one officiated at the Lord's table, but give nothing in its stead. We also hear of one leading the singing or a prayer. Is that safe?

3. Shall we say that elders were appointed, selected, or ordained? Then, shall we say how it was done, or that it makes no difference how? Does the Book tell the way, or does it leave us to guess? But one says the Bible speaks of ordaining elders. Now, how may we know when they are ordained? We must know what must be done, and how it is to be done, in order to speak correctly. Can we all be at unity on this point, so as to speak the same thing?

4. Shall we say that the church is God's only society through which a Christian is to work, or is it better to say that there are exceptions in war cases? Is it safe to do all our giving to those away from home through the church, that God may have the glory in the church, or is it as good to do this through some worldly organization? Shall we enter some human society, or work through one, in order to do good? If we can do so now, why not all the time?

5. What expression shall we use in speaking of religious papers? Shall we speak of such a paper as a church paper, a paper by a part of the church, or a paper by a certain faction of the church? How shall we express it? Each seems a little jealous of the others, a little different from the others, and each advocates certain things that the others do not advocate.

6. What shall we call the church of Christ? Does the church of Christ include people who do not wear the scriptural name? Are those in other bodies worshiping contrary to the Bible a part of the church? If a man obeys the gospel and is sayed from his past sins, how far in the world can he go before he ceases to be a part of the church? If a man is not living as the Bible directs, is he a part of the church of Christ? Is it safe to say that saved people who live up to the requirements of the Bible compose the church? Then, how shall we express it?

Now, can we, as a body, say that unity is our purpose? Are we not all too prone to put up our own ideas and try our best to get all others to accept them as the only way of safety? Are we willing to lay aside all evil speaking, jealousy, envy, and traditions, to be guided by the Bible and good common sense? I fear we often fight for that which the Bible does not reveal, because of our habits or thoughts, and regard not the plain teaching of God. If the Bible gives no special name or expression, may I not use any that sets forth the point clearly?

FOOT TROUBLES.

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimeny of hundreds of people living in the Southland and elsewhere, E. P. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.—Advt.

Man Must Abide in the Doctrine of Christ.

BY W. T. REEVES.

John says the man who abides not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God. (2 John 9, 10.) From this we see that we are in a lost state if we are not abiding in what Christ teaches.

Man must first enter into Christ's doctrine before he can abide in it. To believe what he taught and obey what he demands to bring us into his covenant is what every man must do in order to enter into his doctrine. "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him." (Col. 2: 6.) We receive the doctrine of Christ by means of faith and obedience; so, according to this passage, we are to abide in his doctrine by faith in what he says and obedience to what he commands. "For we walk by faith, not by sight." (2 Cor. 5: 7.)

The doctrine (teachings) of Christ fixes the bounds of our faith. "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." (Rom. 14: 23.) Therefore he who abides not in the doctrine of Christ is guilty of sin.

Christ taught the truth. (John 8: 14.) To the Jews who believed him, Christ said: "If ye abide in my word, then are ye truly my disciples; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8: 31, To abide in Christ's word is equal to abiding in his doctrine; therefore it is necessary to abide in his doctrine in order to be a true disciple and in order to be made free from sin. I take it that Christ means for man to reject the traditions, speculations, and private interpretations of men and just abide in what he says; for through Peter's pen he tells us that "no prophecy of scripture is of private interpretation." (2 Pet. 1: 20.) Man is to see, hear, understand, believe, and obey Christ's commandments, and Christ will heal him. (Matt. 13: 15.) But Paul says: "Whereby when ye read ye may understand." (Eph. 3: 4,)

These days there seems to be a number of would-be leaders among the people who would be glad to have others accept their interpretations of the Scriptures. Of such Christ said: "He that speaketh from himself seeketh his own glory." (John 7: 18.)

To every one I would say: "Little children, let no man deceive you." (1 John 3: 7.) Again, we read: "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits [teachers] whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world." (1 John 4: 1.)

Brethren, for your own good and for the sake of peace in the one body. the church, do not be led off after strange doctrines. The best way to deal with unfulfilled prophecies clothed in uninterpreted symbols is to study them carefully and content ourselves by saying, "I believe God," as Paul said: "Sirs, be of good cheer; for 1 believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me." (Acts 27; 25.) Nothing less nor anything more can be of sufficient benefit to any of us. Then why do men launch out on the sea of speculation and try to dive deep into the waters of private interpretation of the many prophetic symbols and unfulfilled statements of God's holy book?

Every man who does it knows that every other man who has done so before him has failed woefully in many of his applications, and especially in their date setting, which they figure out by the days, months, and years spoken of by the prophets.

To such speculators I ask: Do you think there ever lived an uninspired Jew who could or did interpret Joel 2: 28-32, or Isa. 53: 7-10, or Ps. 16: 9, 10, correctly? 1 opine that no such was ever done before their fulfillment, nor afterwards, either, without supernatural knowledge to inform them (us) that such and such things which were happening in due time were the things spoken of by the prophets. Then, should not uninspired men now realize fully that modesty should be manifest in all the conclusions and interpretations they reach in their study of the symbols and unfulfilled prophecies of the Scriptures?

Should not uninspired men be as cautious about thrusting their private interpretations of prophecy upon their brethren as they should be of making laws where God has made none, or setting aside some of his appointments and substituting others? To be sure that a prophecy is correctly inter preted, it is necessary that the one who does so speak as the Holy Spirit speaks: "Knowing this first, that no prophecy of scripture is of private interpretation: . . . but men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Spirit." (2 Pet. 1: 20, 21.)

If preachers will do as Christ wishes them to do-" speak as the oracles of God" (1 Pet. 4: 11)-there will be far less division among us. Let us do this, and not violate John 7: 18 to seek our own glory.

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

Grandma Kept Her Locks Dark, Glossy, and Youthful With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked, and faded hair is grand-mother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," for about fifty cents a bottle. It is very popular, because nobody can discover it has been Simply moisten your comb applied. or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of dis-

Brother Keeble's Report.

On the third Lord's day in February I met with the congregation at Lebanon, Tenn., and remained with them until Wednesday. I have made many visits to Lebanon, but I believe that there was more of the spirit of Christ exhibited in each service than on any of my previous visits. On Thursday night, February 21, I met with the congregation at Silver Point. though the attendance was small, the interest was good. After I arrived here, I found Brother Bowser and his assistants preparing to celebrate George Washington's birthday, and I remained over. They rendered an excellent program. On the fourth Lord's day in February I met with the little band at Cookeville. The morning service was nicely attended, and at night the house was packed. Brother Gilbert Johnson's mother, about seventy years of age, made the good confession and was to be baptized the day I left. It was my purpose to leave on Monday for McMinnville; but when this old lady came forward, interest grew so that the brethren asked me to stay longer, and I consented. Brother Johnson and wife always make it pleasant for me when I stop with them. While there they engaged me to hold their meeting this season, which will be my fourth meeting at this place. On February 27 I got off the train at Smartt and went out to Antioch and preached to an interested congregation. On the next day I preached at Hiwassee, a mission point out from Morrison. On the first Lord's day in March I met with the Viola congregation, and interest was good night and day. I have held four meetings here, and during the time they have built a very neat meetinghouse.

On Monday after the second Lord's day in April I am to begin my fifth meeting at Bellbuckle. This work is greatly supported by the white congregation at that place. When I went there the first time, I found only two or three, but now there are between twenty and twenty-five there, worshiping in the schoolhouse. Brother Mingle (a white brother) meets regularly with them, trying to teach them how to keep house for the Lord. I am planning to hold a meeting at Tuscumbia, Ala., and also at Sheffield, if it is the Lord's will. I am very proud to have the white brethren call me back to Louisville, Ky., for another meeting. It is uplifting to be with people who treat one so Christianly. I am asking Christ to give me power to live

Another Significant Remnant, T

A correspondent of the Associated Press reports that one of the buildings wrecked in a recent air raid in London was a branch office of a religious printing organization, with a window full of illuminated mottoes. The shop and its windows were completely wrecked; but one motto, pinned to a pillar which remained standing, stood out in striking prominence over the heap of dust of débris. It bore this verse: "And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet." -Exchange.

Calomel To-Day, Sick To-Morrow

Dose of Nasty Calomel Makes You Sick and You Lose a Day's Work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a slug-gish liver. When calomel comes into gish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile, it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel billous, headachy, constipated, and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a fifty-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful; and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day, you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides. it may salivate you; while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone, you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition, and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant, and safe to give to children; they like it.

My Recent Visit to the Luling Orphans' Home.

BY A. O. COLLEY.

I have just returned from Luling, Texas, where we have an orphans' home, known as the "Bell Haven Orphans' Home." I was sent there by the Pearl and Bryan Streets church of Christ, in Dallas, with three dependent children. I was requested by the churches of Christ in Dallas to write an article setting forth my ideas of the Home; and, by the permission of our good Sister Clarke, who stands at the head of the Home, I have agreed to do so.

I wish to say in the beginning that what I have to say will be unbiased, an honest statement of facts gathered from personal observation and investigations made while there.

I reached there on Friday, February 1, one of the coldest days we have seen in these parts in a long time. I found all hands engaged in trying to keep the children from suffering from the cold and trying to protect the pot plants and other flowers, many of which had to be given up. The Home is located about three-fourths of a mile from the business section of a little town with fifteen hundred or two thousand inhabitants.

I found the leading men of the town in sympathy with the Home, speaking in very complimentary terms of Sister Clarke's ability to handle, in a business way, every condition that arises, in sickness or in health. The banker with whom she deposits a part of her donations said he could not see how she could care for so many children on the amount of money she seemed to receive and expend. Her physician said he never had any trouble with a patient under the care of the Home (and he has been the attending physician for eighteen years), and that he had never known of her punishing any of them enough to call it real punishment, and yet her orders were obeyed by all. He did not know where she received the money with which to meet the great demands made of her, but her bills were all promptly paid.

For my own satisfaction and for the purpose of answering others who wanted to know, I inquired into the business plans of the Home. I found that the Home had trustees, and the land that had been purchased had been so deeded that it could not be diverted from its faithful stand for New Testament order of worship, nor misappropriated in case of her death. All of which seemed not to be very well understood by many who seemed to love the Home and who want to give for its future existence.

This Home is not run by servants, who would have to have salaries out. of the donations for the Home; but, instead of servants, it is run by the boys and girls who go there. In that cold time there were a few boys, none of whom seemed to be over twelve years of age, cutting the wood used in the Home and pumping water by hand (this pumping was done only when the wind was not sufficient to turn the windmill.) One of the girls was the bookkeeper and stenographer. She was taken by the Home when she was seventeen months old. She is now about eighteen years old, has completed a business course, and is nearly through high school.

Some have complained by letter to the Home, and others, perhaps, have withheld donations, because Sister Clarke's financial reports in the papers show a nice balance—a few thousand dollars. Having surveyed the grounds I find where she could have spent judiciously a larger sum than her balance shows. She needs a sewerage system, bathroom equipment, city waterworks, and more modern equipment to do her work. Sister Clarke is very much overworked, and unnecessarily so, because she has not had sufficient funds to put in labor-saving devices.

Her heart is set on saving enough to put up and modernly equip a school building—one that can accommodate not only the children she has with her now, but more as they may be offered to her. A goodly part of the balance shown came by the will of some friends to the Home, some of whom were not members of the church of Christ, but who loved humanity and wanted to leave their estate so that it would help to bless dependents even after their death.

Let none of us complain any longer, but let us earnestly pray and faithfully work to put into the hands of this God-fearing and child-loving mother in Israel, in the person of Sister Jennie Clarke, the needed funds to erect and equip the Home as it should be. Her books are open to any lover of the Home to examine. Please do not burden her with curious questions that do not profit the questioner, as she has her hands full of real work.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a small bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life; and if not overcome, it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen, and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store, and just try it.

BY M. S. MASON.

Now, again, Johnny and Mary want to go on a fishing excursion on a Saturday afternoon. You object because the skies foretell a heavy rain. But they just fret and whine and make the household miserable and just think papa and mamma are "perfectly mean." Just let them go. About four o'clock it does rain and the water falls in torrents, and about half past four you see the fishing party coming. Hide out. Mary and John alight and come in; and in those dripping garments they run all over the house, shouting "Papa!" "Mam-Don't say a word. After a while they sit down by the kitchen stove to dry. They are damp, toodamp in body and damp in spirit. Just let them alone and soon they will begin to sob, and John's head will fall on his sister's lap and their tears will mingle with the drops from the drenched garments, and in the loneliness of those moments two aching hearts will realize that papa and mamma were not mean. They knew best, and they are wishing for papa and mamma now that they may throw their arms about their necks and ask forgiveness. Now just at this time appear upon the scene. The prodigals have returned. Forgive them, dry their tears, give them dry clothing, prepare a warm supper, and act as if nothing had happened. But something did happen, and it took place in the hearts of two repentant children. It was a red-letter day in the calendar of their lives, and one they will never, never forget.

And then John, when he arrives at about the age of fifteen, will want to go to Oklahoma. Pay his way and give him sufficient expense money, and let him go, and in about ten days you will get a letter from John wanting money to pay his fare back home. Write him that the doors of home are open, but that he will have to get back the best way he can. In a few days he comes walking in and takes up his abode at home again, weary from his_ journey, but perfectly contented.

Teach your children that Bible quotation: "The way of the transgressor is hard "-not the words, but the truth. Let them know it from the very depths of their hearts because they have trodden the path and their feet have been pierced by its thorns.

I have thought and thought and am forced to conclude that the only decent way you can punish some children is with the rod. Robert G. Ingersoll once said, regarding the use of the rod: "The next time one of you parents whip your children, you want to have yourself photographed; and when the Rheumatism and Indigestion.

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between indigestion and rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for dyspepsia and indigestion, relieves rheumatism and the rheumatoid diseases, such as gout, sciatica, neuralgia, and nervous headache. All of these dis-eases are probably related and all are probably due, in whole or in part, to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and biadder roubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that, if used continuously for a reasonable time, it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant, of Savannah, writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians; went to Baitimore and consulted specialists there; and still I was not benefited. child dies, you want to go out to its grave on Sunday afternoon and look on that photograph and think of the flesh now dust that you so cruelly beat." Mr. Stanley G. Clark, one of the greatest authorities on moral reform in the United States, has th's to say: "Parents are too lenient with their children at present. They release the child too early. They don't punish enough. An occasional spanking now and then reinforces the moral purposes of the child."

Mr. Ingersoll was both right and wrong. Mr. Clark was eminently right. Mr. Ingersoll in his great tenderness presented only one side of the matter. He forgot that there are children that must be whipped or they will be lost. It was true in his day. It is truer to-day than ever before. You needn't get furiously angry, grit your teeth, and beat your child like a beast. Be calm about it; and when you are through, don't sling him across the room or kick him out of doors. Take him to your heart and show him you punished him out of a spirit of love and make every stroke bring his footsteps nearer the paths of truth.

But now to the case of the child's death by which Mr. Ingersoll so eloquently appeals to us. That reminds me of a bit of discussion which took place in one of my college classes between the professor and a lady student. The question of home discipline arose in some way, and this lady, standing, addressed the professor in about these words: "Now, Dr. Hall, I have a very sweet little girl, but she is very rude, and I often think I ought to chastise her; but she is very weakly, and I fear that sometime after I had punished her she might die, and I would never get over it in the world. Now, Doctor, tell me truly, what would you do?" And that old professor, out of a great heart, a wide experience, and a profound knowledge of men and morals, looked his questioner firmly in the face, brought his fist down upon the desk with a fierce rap, and said: "Spank her, madam, spank her, and 'blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." The old Doctor was righteously right. If I had a child, under no circumstances would I spare the rod of correction; and should God call my darling home in the morning of life, I should not lament that I had governed with a firm hand.

That "Fifty-Fifty" Rule.

It seems simple enough, yet causes not a little perplexity and criticism.

"As their part in reducing the consumption of wheat flour, the consumers of the country are called upon, in purchasing such flour, to buy at the same time an equal weight of the other cereals (corn meal, cornstarch, corn flour, hominy, corn grits, barley flour, sweet-potato flour, soya-bean flour, and feterita flours and meals). The housewife may use these products separately in making bread, cakes, and pastry, or mix them as she thinks best. The retailers are to sell wheat flour only with an equal weight of these other cereals."

Thus the restriction rests upon the buyer and the retailer. If the retailer does not heed it, he is liable to lose his chance to do business, because the licensed wholesaler cannot sell to him without liability of losing his license and putting himself out of business. Therefore, for a customer to insist upon her grocer selling her wheat flour without the substitute, pound for pound, is asking him to expose himself to the loss of his whole trade. Yet just such cases are known, in one of which the customer canceled her order, threatened to withdraw her trade entirely, and left in an angry mood because the grocer politely informed her of the regulations and said he could not disobey them. She was a "slacker."

We hope there are not many of that sort, but many are more or less perplexed by the order. As a matter of fact, the other cereals have in many cases been eaten in about the proportions required. It is not necessary to take one kind of substitute cereal; any desired combination may be made, as a half pound of oatmeal, a quarter pound of rice, and a quarter of corn As for boarding houses, the grits. landlady will generally find the boarders read to cooperate when she has placed the situation before them. Just let her imitate the Food Administration plan and call them into a conference and secure assurances of cooperation. We venture to say that if she showed that it would cost her ten cents more a day to use the substitutes, and that the added cost would exhaust her profit, the boarders would consent to make good the difference as their part of the war burden. It is worth trying.

But the "fifty-fifty" is not difficult. Where Graham or whole wheat flour is bought, five pounds of either to three pounds of the substitutes is the right proportion. Make it as easy as possible for the retailer. He has his troubles, and as one of them said, "catches it coming and going."

Don't Go Overloaded.

In the day's work, none of us should go overloaded. There is not so much the danger of undertaking too much as there is the danger of carrying too many burdens. Honest work is inspiring and elevating, while worry frets and fevers. The temptation to worry should be resisted as a temptation of the devil. Worry, our Savior taught, is no more nor less than lack of faith. After discoursing to the multitudes concerning the Father's providence in the natural and animal kingdoms, he exclaimed to those who were anxious and careworn: "O ye of little faith!" (Matt. 6: 30.) We should not look upon our worry as an excusable part of our disposition, but, making it answerable for our errors, should strive to get rid of this as of any other sinful fault.

Live One Day at a Time.

God only expects us to live true and faithful one day at a time. You have observed, no doubt, that self-evident principle that is sometimes ingeniously employed by banking institutions to capture the wary coin: "You take care of the dimes; the dollars will take care of themselves." It usually means that you should bring the dimes to the bank, and the bank will see to the proper evolution of currency. In the matter of Christian growth, God would teach us, through Jesus, that if we will take care of each day in our lives, he will watch over the years and will make them years of peace and plenty. To make each day's work successful, we should walk by faith and not by sight. Even in the journey of a day we cannot predict what lies before us. We know not what the day may bring forth, whether joy or sorrow. We recognize the truth of Longfellow's words: "Some days must be dark and dreary." But whatever perplexities may arise, there is no reason why any of us in our short-sighted ignorance should de spair. If we are Christians, we should learn to take our troubles to our God in prayer. Phillips Brooks has said:

The little sharp vexations,
And the briers that catch and fret—
Why not take all to the Helper
Who has never failed us yet?

Tell him about the heartaches, And tell him the longings, too; Tell him the baffled purpose When we scarce know what to do.

Then, leaving all our weakness With the One divinely strong, Forget that we bore the burden, And carry away the song.

A Guidebook for the Journey.

Of one thing we may feel perfectly sure. God has given us a Guidebook, a Badeker for every day's journey, that is both divinely inspired and perfectly infallible. "This is the book," says Coleridge, "which always finds us! It is the book that leads the blind in paths they have not known—that makes the darkness light before them." It is the book that sheds the clear light of understanding on all the questions that beset the soul. It is the book that affords a precept and a principle for every step in life.

"The steps of a good man or ordered." Eliezer humbly asked God to guide him, and he made good speed indeed. He was directed to the very place and to the very person that he needed. He described his happy and successful day's journey at its close by saying: "I being in the way, the Lord led me to the house of my master's brethren." When you and I are in the way of salvation described in the word of God and continue our walk according to its divine direction, we shall never go astray.

When the Day Is Done.

But there comes an end to every day's journey. We should close the day, as we should begin it, by prayer to God, thanking the Giver of "every good gift and every perfect gift" for the preservation of our lives. Just before we pray there is another duty that devolves upon us, a duty that was first suggested to my mind by an evening memorandum that I saw tacked ever the desk in a teacher's living room. It read something like this: 7:30 to 8:30, Latin; 8:30 to 9:30, Greek; 9:30 to 10, Reading; 10 to 10:30, Résumé." This was many years ago and my knowledge was rather limited. I asked him what "résumé" meant. He laughingly told me that it meant a recount of the day's events. Each one of us should make such a résumé at the end of every day. Let each one question his own heart: Did I start right? Did I commence with prayer? Was I cheerful? Was I trustful? Was I overanxious? And, most important of all, did I use the Guidebook? If, when we make the summary, we find that we have been lacking in these simple duties, like Vespasian we must say, "Diem perdidi," which means, "I have lost a day." But if we have walked aright, what an inspiration when we can truly say: "I have gained a day; I have safely passed another milestone on the great highway of life; I am one day nearer to my eternal home!"

Christian Education.

(A paper read by George A. Klingman at a recent meeting of the Faculty of Abilene Christian College.)

It is the purpose of this paper to lay the greater emphasis upon the first word of our theme. By the use of the term "Christian" we desire to designate that which is based upon the principles taught in the Bible by Christ and his apostles. By the use of the term "education" we wish to convey the idea of thorough equipment for efficient service to God and man. We must concede that a man may be learned and not educated—in the proper sense of this term -and recognize the fact that one may be prepared for efficient service in the interest of his fellow men without sustaining a proper relation to God through Jesus Christ. Christian education embraces all the best methods and courses of study necessary for a general preparation and whatever may be required to fit one for any special work or service in life, but with special reference to the principles of eternal truth and righteousness as revealed to us in God's holy word.

In the development of our theme we propound a fourfold question and hope to give such an answer as will meet with the approval of all who know and love the truth, and who, therefore, seek the glory of God through our Lord and Saylor Jesus Christ.

What, then, is the true import of Christian education. (1) physically, (2) mentally, (3) morally, (4) spiritually? When God created man, he made him perfect physically. Man sinned and God subjected him to vanity (decay, death). Christ died in order to deliver us from the bondage of corruption into the liberty of the glory of the children of God. To be sure, we shall exchange these fleshly hodies for spiritual bodies; but while we are still here "in the body," we are to cleanse ourselves from all defilement of the flesh (2 Cor. 7: 1); we are to "glorify God" in the body, for we have been bought with a price, and the body is a temple of the Holy Spirit which is in us (1 Cor. 6: 19, 20). Surely Christian education provides for the care of such a temple. Very early in life should the chlid be taught to honor this wonderful physical structure as the work of a wise Creator and as a precious gift from God, intrusted to our care. Training as to proper habits of diet, hygiene, exercise, recreation, and rest is of the utmost importance-it is, in fact, essential for securing the best results in any service to be rendered. "Mens sana in corpore sano" ("A sound mind in a sound body") is wholesome Christian philosophy. It is not within the province of this paper to dwell in detail upon the regimen of physical development, but simply to call attention to the fact that Christian education includes all that contributes to a vigorous, healthy physical organism. May we entertain the hope that this much-neglected part of education be given its proper place, especially in all our Christian schools and colleges.

2. It is too often the case that education is understood to mean the training of the mind only. This erroneous view is largely responsible for that dangerous form of "mental culture" that inflates its victims with self-conceit, so that, "professing themselves to be wise, they become fools;" they substitute the pale light of human reason for the blazing glory of the Sun of righteousness; they deceive themselves and others with vain philosophy and sciences falsely so called, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men which make void the commandments of God. Filling the mind with facts, while an important consideration in the realm of education, does not, in and of itself, fit a man for usefulness in life. A man may know something about many things, or he may know very much about one thing, and in either case may be all the more a fool. Human knowledge is limited. "If any man thinketh that he knoweth anything, he knoweth not yet as he ought to know." "Now we know in part;" we shall know fully, even as we are fully known, when we shall see him face to face. Knowledge has been compared with a wheel composed of an infinite number of spokes, each spoke of infinite length; and one of the marks of true mental culture and proper education is a spirit of humility and of condescension in the presence of the living God, who is omniscient. When the oracle pronounced the sage of Athens the wisest of men, he was puzzled to know how this could be until he discovered that he was the only man among the teachers of his day that knew that he did not know. The others, he said, were like himself in that they did not know as they ought to know, but differed from him in that they did not even know that they did not know anything. Now it is the province of Christian education to train and develop the wonderful powers of the human mind in such a way as to enable it to render the very best service to the human family. There is a standardized curriculum for elementary, preparatory, and academic training, which presumably furnishes the foundation of an education; and while it is not the purpose of this article to criticize the present system almost universally accepted among us, yet may we venture the suggestion that it behooves Christian educators to examine very carefully the entire foundation work of our present educational system. The most valuable studies are not those which may be classified as "practical," but those which are most useful in the proper development and training of the mental faculties. Just as the various parts of the human body are wisely related to each other, and in order to obtain the best results there must be all-round, harmonious development, so are the faculties of the human mind related; and in order to do its best work, there must be the harmonious, all-round development of the mental powers, resulting in what we are accustomed to call a "well-balanced mind."

In this connection it may be interesting to raise the question: How much suffering, crime, sin, and insanity may be justly attributed to a failure along this very important line of education? For is it not fearfully true that a man is what he thinks?

3. Ever since man brought sin into the world the question of right and wrong has to a greater or less degree affected the experience and history of the human family. Every nation has its code of ethics, every tribe among the savages or semicivilized—yea, it would seem at times that each individual has a code of his own. Scientifically speaking, ethics and religion are distinguishable. Confucius was a great philosopher and moralist, but who would think of calling him a religionist? At the same time, the very basis and center of morality is the character of God, and there is, therefore, a perfect ethical system. Christian education demands the teaching of that system as revealed in the Bible. God's moral law is eternal and has been fully expounded by the great Teacher himself, whose life and character beautifully embodied "all the fullness of the Godhead," and met fully and completely the sinless perfection required by that eternal law. When we look for the concrete form of this law, we find it in the judgments, precepts, statutes, commandments, testimonies, and ordinances of the Old Testament, reiterated with correct emphasis in the teaching of the Christ and epitomized in the matchless production called "the Sermon on the Mount."

We do not hesitate to assert that that system of education which fails at this point fails utterly and criminally and ought to be relegated to the things unworthy of our consideration, and, like the other idols of heathenism, "cast to the moles and to the bats," as directed by the prophet of God.

Christian education is much more concerned with proper heart culture than it is with intellectual gymnastics. It is infinitely more important for the heart to be pure and filled with the love of God and a burning desire to do that which is right in his sight than it is to have the most brilliant intellect in the world with the crudition of the ages at its command.

4. As we approach the climax of our question, we do so with the fearfulness of responsibility fully manifest in our own consciousness. James (3: 1) says: "Be not many of you teachers, my brethren, knowing we shall receive heavier judgment." In the physical training a mistake may be corrected more easily than in any other department, and possibly with less serious effects or consequences Even an accident resulting from violation of law may only mean a broken bone, which may in a short while be restored to its normal function. In the event of fatality, it would only mean the cessation of activity in fleshly form and, in the case of a Christian, a deliverance from the "bondage of corruption into the liberty of the glory of the children of God." Not so, however, in the spiritual realm. Errors are not so easily corrected. Violations of spiritual laws are fraught with more serious consequences; and where they are fatal, they are eternal, resulting in eternal separation from the presence of God-the second death.

We are not unmindful of the fact that God has delegated to his church, assembled in congregational capacity, certain acts of worship, works of faith, and spiritual sacrifices, and no other institution except that divinely appointed agency has the right to assume for itself these privileges and prerogatives. At the same time, this does not and should not separate the development of the spiritual life from Christian education. It would be like a pyramid without its apex, a king without his crown. It may be difficult to detect any spiritual value attaching to some branches of human knowledge; indeed, there is only an indirect relationship between some studies and the spiritual life; yet all that contributes to the proper education of a Christian is valuable for the reaching of the goal. Even the Bible m r be used as a textbook in such a way as to deprive the students of that great spiritual power and force couched in the words of the living God, which are spirit and life.

The highest honor that God can bestow upon a child of his is to grant him the privilege of teaching spiritual things, and the Christian educator must be familiar with the spiritual laws of the kingdom of heaven and be able to teach others also before he can lay claim justly to that high distinction. Union-Life. BY C. E. HOLT.

"In union there is strength; in division there is weakness." To this axiomatic truth we might add, "in union there is life." While the word "life" is, in a very important sense, undefinable on account of the fact that connected therewith are mysteries profound and, to the human mind, wholly inapprehensible and incomprehensible, things which cannot by human knowledge, human wisdom, and human ingenuity be fathomed nor sealed nor measured, yet to even the layman in the study of biology there are a few things very apparent.

The union of elements which in their nature are, according to the inflexible and immutable laws of affinity, related to each other constitutes a state of energy and motion that is called "life," This is true in the vegetable, the animal, and the spiritual departments which we usually call "kingdoms." In the animal kingdom there is what we call "sex"—the male and the female. According to the unchangeable law of reproduction, one is absolutely powerless without the other. The law of sex is also found in the vegetable kingdom.

There is what we term an "analogical relation" between animal and spiritual life. The Savior's teaching sparkles and glows with this truth. He reduces the matter to its most simple form by using the most simple things with which to illustrate the greatest truths—truths which in the abstract would be beyond our reach and our apprehension.

The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us. In him, the divine Logos, we behold the Father's power and goodness toward mankind. In him the human and the divine are perfectly blended. The selection of a woman, a human being, to be a cooperant with God in man's redemption is the mystery of mysteries. It defies the power of man in its solution. The Holy Spirit came in actual contact with a human germ, giving it vitality and energy and power. The divine became incarnate with the human. In this wonderful transaction no law of nature was violated. The material, the human, was only aided by the divine. Both were necessary to accomplish the end sought. The divine apart from the human would have produced a being wholly divine. There would not have been a human element in him. The same would be true if the order should be reversed. All this is simply preliminary to another phase of the subject.

Spiritual life in a human being is the result of a union of two forces—the divine and the human—one peculiarly our own, but not in the sense of origination or creation, for man has no power to create. Human beings can, by a proper use and application of the divinely established laws of nature, produce life, but they cannot create life. But there must be antecedent life—life existent in those whose duty and privilege it is to reproduce life. Hence the use of the prefix "re," We only reproduce life—preëxistent life. So in the conversion of men and women in a spiritual sense. There is, therefore, in the conversion of human beings to Christ a union of two forces. This correlation of forces, or elements, comes through an established law in the kingdom of heaven.

Jesus spoke of this anticipatively when he said: "He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly [his inner self] shall flow rivers of living water. (But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)" (John 7: 38, 39.) In conversation with a Samaritan woman, he said: "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water." (John 4: 10.) In these instances he rather referred to the activities, the effects of conversion, the good works which constitute the good fruit of a tree made good.

But how make a bad tree good? Can it be done? In answering this last question, I quote from the Savior. "Either make the tree good, and his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt: for the tree is known by his fruit." (Matt. 12: 33.) From this language it is very apparent that a bad tree may be made good, while a good tree may be made bad. This figure of speech is very common to the great teachers of both the Old and New Testaments. Men are often called "trees."

But the process of making the bad tree good, so that grapes instead of thorns may grow thereon, is that to which we now give attention. The heart of man is the fountain of life. It might be compared to a well or spring or fountain. If the well is filthy, you can never purify the water by cleaning and painting the pump. There is entirely too much of this work done in protracted meetings. Some preachers are only good "pump painters."

I once listened to a beautiful sermon delivered by a man possessed of a deep, resonant voice and of almost faultless diction. His elecutionary powers were very modern and very charming. He was a man of fine personality—tall and straight and handsome. He was neatly attired. The audience leaned forward when he spoke. His words fell like sweet, mellifluous strains of music upon their eager, listening ears. He painted the pump in beautiful colors, as beautiful as the rainbow, but he did not touch the waters of the soul. I went away from that meeting thinking, and I am thinking yet.

In that meeting many were baptized—put into the water, and, of course, taken out of the water—whose lives were not changed in any sense, as their subsequent conduct plainly showed. Where is the trouble, and what is its solution and remedy? To this I shall call the attention of my readers in following articles.

Why Will We Permit This?

BY PRICE BILLINGSLEY,

The Holy Spirit points out the steps of baptism, and he who disregards these explicit instructions and substitutes therefor the sprinkling of water is a gross offender against God. Even so God's law with respect to erring Christians is no whit less explicit or less binding and important than his directions as to baptism. But do we not, while vehemently urging that everybody must respect the divine legislation on baptism, permit the violation of God's law as to the steps we must take in restoring or dealing with wayward church members? If one presses God's emphatic decree that the lawless shall be either restored or withdrawn from, do we not turn away apathetically or become positively hostile to such teaching, lest to follow it would lead to disturbance and trouble, when, at the same time, were one among us to sprinkle and pour instead of immerse, there would arise a veritable storm of criticism and protest that the sacredest of holy ground had been desecrated and the Spirit's plain commands violated? Is not the complaint of the denominational peoples that we make too much of baptism somewhat justified? What can men say of our faith and consistency so long as we so strenuously insist upon following God in some things, while at the same time we turn from and ignore his laws on other matters? Talking of God's laws, Paul charges that we "observe these things without preferring one before another, doing nothing by partiality." (1 Tim. 5: 21.)

Then what course must we pursue toward the erring? Certain it is that we must "comfort the feeble-minded, support the weak, be patient toward all men." (1 Thess. 5: 14.) We are to "exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine." (2 Tim. 4: 2.) Also, we are to "warn the unruly" (1 Thess. 5: 14), to "rebuke before all" (1 Tim. 5: 20). But when these corrective measures fail to cor rect-and they sometimes do fail-then resort must be had to the drastic course of severing our relations with them. We must "withdraw" from the unruly and "disorderly' (2 Thess. 3: 6); the "wicked" are to be "put away" (1 Cor. 5: 13), "delivered to Satan for the destruction of the flesh" (verse 5), are not to be "companied with" (2 Thess. 3: 14), "with such a one no not to eat" (1 Cor. 5: 11), "that he may be ashamed" (2 Thess. 3: 14). We are then to "mark" such (Rom. 16: 17), "note" them (1 Thess. 3: 14), and "reject" them (Tit. 3: 10). And yet even then they are, if possible, to be "restored" (Gal. 6: 1; Ezek. 34: 4); to be sought after and admonished (2 Thess. 3: 15). I know all this must be done patiently and kindly, but it must be done. These are divinely commanded steps to be taken with erring brethren, as plain as plain can be, and who shall dare to say the law is of less importance than primary obedience to the gospel? Who of us has the privilege to pass on Jehovah's edicts-to say we shall rigidly adhere to some of them, but may safely disregard others because, for sooth, they are either unimportant or to observe them would be inconvenient and troublesome?

I recently heard a noted specialist tell of a man with several different maladies, including stomach trouble, coming to him for aid, and how, when the afflicted stomach was pumped out, it was found that certain pieces of food had lain in it for near a week, which malassimilation had caused the diseases. The specialist went on to say that normally food once taken into the stomach begins an immediate assimilative process with the living forces and tissues of the body, the refuse being at once thrown off as nonassimilable and dangerous. He showed that when the food we eat is not thus compounded with the active organic structure of the body and is not thrown off, it very quickly becomes a clog to the body's proper functioning, curtails its energies for locomotion and service, and, more serious still, this nondigestible matter becomes a source of infection, a veritable breeding ground for various disease germs, resulting in the poisoning and perhaps the utter breaking down of the whole system. As I listened to his illuminative and incisive treatment of this theme, the thought came to me of how aptly the laws he dealt with illustrate the very trouble about which I inquire; for when one enters the body of Christ he normally begins a union and an active functioning with the live elements of the body, and so goes forward in growth and service, an effective and necessary part of the whole. If, however, he is not so joined, is not changed into the new sphere, but rather lies inert and unassimilated, he not only will at once become a dead weight to clog the body and reduce its effectiveness to serve and bless the world, but-alas!he begins to poison all the rest of the body in contact with him. This clearly is why God warns and so pointedly instructs hereon. It is imperative that Christians shall grow and serve in things spiritual, or else, failing this, that they shall be severed from the body. God himself so decrees. And in all humility may I add and declare it to be my settled conviction that it is just because we have failed to observe his directions, notably in the above-mentioned matters, that many one-time strong churches have ceased to grow and prosper and that we are failing to justify the high hopes entertained by some as to the spread and power or universal good of our reformatory movement begun so happily less than one century ago. It is of the first importance that men shall be baptized, but certain we can be that it is no whit less important that the baptized shall live correct lives or be withdrawn from. For years many people have been baptized; but much of this material has not been worked up at all, but left raw where it was. Not having been either developed or thrown off, it literally gluts and weighs down many a congregation, crippling its energies and influence. And if this condition is allowed to continue, our life is menaced.

Here follows a message from the war-stricken country, dated A.D. 30:

34 Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world:

35 For I was ahungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in:

36 Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me.

37 Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee ahungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink?

38 When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee?

39 Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?

40 And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Armenian and Syrian Fund or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

An Urgent Matter.

The time is drawing very near when we must have all necessary funds fo the portraits of David Lipscomb and James A. Harding. It is to be much regretted that so many have failed to do their part so far, but we yet hope that many will at this time of need. Many to whom personal notice was sent have not yet even acknowledged same. The two pictures are nearly ready to be finished, and means not yet enough to pay the bill. Let us have a ready response to this appeal. You want a part in this means of bestowing honor on two of God's noble men; two preachers who have moved hundreds to a nobler life; two teachers who have moved hundreds to a nobler life; two teachers who have molded your life and fitted it for usefulness here and happiness hereafter; two men whose names are respected by many to-day and will be household words for generations yet unborn.

The high prices have caught us this year on this as on other things; and had not Sister Noble been such a friend to the school and these men, this work would have cost at least fifty to one hundred per cent more. I had one or two artists to ask over two hundred dollars each for the work. I have on my list marked paid, $101; $35 in good promises from trustees; and about $60 in other good promises, including $50 promised by Brother John E. Dunn and wife to be raised among friends and students. This totals $196. I can see enough in good prospect to make $200. We, therefore, must have soon some more cash and promises to make the required amount. This needed sum is about $75. I say "about" because the frame and picture of Brother Harding is sixteen inches longer than Brother Lipscomb's, and hence canvas, etc., longer. I have not the exact amount of extra goods, paint, etc., needed. Sister Noble promised to make this as little as possible. I am figuring $25 extra. Send at once to R. C. White, treasurer, 322 Peachtree Street, Nashville, Tenn.

By MRS. LOUISE GULDLIN SIMENSON

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Article 4.

We all know the quotation, "Give me the first seven years of the child's life and you may have the rest." The author of this statement knew that he could in the first seven years make an impression which all subsequent influences would be unable to eradicate. Some scientists are now asserting that the first three years of a child's life are the most important, that during this time impressions are received and stored in the subconscious mind which later determine the trend of character. If we would stop to consider how much a child learns during the first six years of its life, we would find that it amounts to more than is acquired by a student during a four years' college course.

Fræbel saw that even though the child's school life begins at six, he is really learning during all the previous years, in a more or less haphazard manner, depending on what his particular surroundings might be. Therefore, Fræbel devoted his time to the study of the little child and the instinctive methods of training used by the mother.

In this connection Elizabeth Harrison says: "Fræbel learned from the mother everything which he afterwards embodied in his teachings, but his philosophical insight showed him the reason for all the mother's instinctive play, and he in turn discloses the reason to her. He offers to each mother the collective wisdom of many. His penetrating into child nature and its needs enabled him to select what was typical and universally valuable from meaningless sing-sing, which the mothers also used. With the aid of his wife and some friends, he collected many of the plays in use in his own country and published them with explanatory pictures and music in a book, called "Mother Play." ("Mottoes and Commentaries of Fræbel's 'Mother Play," translated by Susan E. Blow; published by D. Appleton & Co.; price, $1.60.)

Susan Blow says in her translation of the "Mother Play" that the place of places to use this book is the home. William T. Harris, former Commissioner of Education, says in his Preface to Miss Blow's translation, "There is no philosophy for the young weman compared to the philosophy of Fræbel;" and P. P. Claxton, Commissioner of Education, writes in his article on "The Real Share of the Home in the Education of Children:" "Among the means of education in these years of childhood are also to be counted song, and story, and play. Every mother should know how and what to sing to children, what stories to tell and how to tell them; how to make the most of the child's desire for play. In this spontaneous activity of the child, Fræbel and his followers find the most valuable means of education."

Freebel saw that the mothers of his day were too busy with other things to pay any attention to his ideas, and he concluded that it would take three generations before the world would appreciate what he had to give it. The three generations have now elapsed, during which time his wonderful ideas have been appreciated by a mere handful of earnest men and women. But the time has come when our young motherhood will want and demand these ideas, too, and will receive them. $\mathfrak{D} \oplus \mathfrak{D}$

With childlike confidence we await, undisturbed, our Father's answer to our prayers, knowing he will give us that which with fuller knowledge we should ourselves seek.

—Bishop Westcott.

"The Tongue."

Beasts, birds, serpents, and things in the sea have been tamed, and can be tamed, by mankind, but the tongue no man can tame. In its wild and reckless distribution of words many hearts have been stung and wounded, some, perhaps, never to be cured. The Lord has given instructions as to the manner in which we are to use our tongues.

It is a dangerous thing to disturb the peace, unity, and good feeling among brethren. "A froward man soweth strife; and a whisperer separateth chief friends." Jesus says: "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." I would infer, then, that a whisperer who separates friends would be called a servant of the devil. The tongue should always be bridled; for without it, "it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison." The word of God should dwell in our hearts richly; for from the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." But, on the other hand, "a man that beareth false witness against his neighbor is a maul, and a sword, and a sharp arrow."

God did not give man his tongue to wound the heart of his neighbor, but to use as a benediction to all people. For this reason the tongue should always be kept bridled, and then it will direct men in the paths of righteousness. Religion is not acceptable without the bridling of the tongue. "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain."

"Wherefore putting away lying, speak every one truth with his neighbor; for we are members one of another." It is so much better to always tell the truth to every man. Let us take Jesus as a living example of truth. He said: "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me."

"Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers." Don't be a tale-bearer or backbiter; you cannot do this and follow Christ "Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ."

Have pure thoughts, speak kind words, and do kind deeds; for in so doing you will make a good name, bring a benediction upon your life, and erect a monument of honor to your memory.

Holiness does not need to be talked about; it talks. I quite agree with you that the nearer a man lives to his Lord, the less he announces his nearness in actual words; but the more evident it is in tone and temper, and these are the things of holiness.—G. Campbell Morgan.

That which can be commonly seen and handled and conceived is inferior to the eyes by which it is taken in, and the hands by which it is touched, and the faculties by which it is discovered; but that which is infinite is known only to itself. This it is which gives some notion of God. who is yet beyond all our conceptions—our very incapacity of fully grasping him affords us the idea of what he really is. He is presented to our minds in his transcendent greatness, as at once known and unknown; and this is the crowning guilt of men, that they will not recognize the One of whom they cannot possibly be ignorant.—Tertullian.

Query Department

Brother McQuiddy: Please explain 1 Pet. 5: 2, 3, which reads: "Tend the flock of God which is among you, exercising the oversight, not of constraint, but willingly, according to the will of God; nor yet for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as lording it over the charge allotted to you, but making yourselves examples to the flock." I wish an explanation of "oversight" and "lording."

J. E. Pryor.

Taking the oversight means looking after the congregation, giving each member the work to which he is best adapted. The faithful bishop seeks to develop the church by seeing that every joint, every fiber, and every band performs its proper function. The bishop who rules the congregation is not to do so in a dictatorial or arbitrary way, but is to rule in a spirit of love, just as a wise, affectionate father rules and controls his own household. The efficient elder, or bishop, leads the flock to a higher and nobler life mainly by giving them a good example of service and obedience.

Brother McQuiddy: Kindly advise me in regard to the following: A few scattered members meet together from Lord's day to Lord's day under an arbor. Finally they gain sufficient strength to build a house for worship. elders or deacons have been appointed, as the members, or some of them, considered it best to wait until suitable material could be developed for these offices. However, a preacher comes and holds a meeting, who decides that no further time should be lost, that elders and deacons must be appointed, and goes ahead with only a part of the congregation present and organizes. A number of the members oppose this action and are very much dissatisfied. Would it be unscriptural for them to rescind their act in organizing and continue to meet as before until harmony and peace is restored, and then, when they have the proper material, call the church together and let all have a voice C. A. WHEELER. in the matter?

Preachers should not organize congregations when they are ignorant as to the abilities and talents of the membership. The members are acquainted with each other and should look out men best adapted and suited for the work to which they are appointed. Not every man in the congregation is suited for a teacher or leader. It would not be unscriptural for the congregation that has been organized, and thus disorganized, to rescind the act. As it is the duty of all Christians to correct the mistakes made, the scriptural course would be to undo the wrong that has been done. It is not well for churches that have not the material for elders and deacons to be in a great hurry to appoint elders. Men should grow into such work, should develop a fitness for it, before they are appointed elders or deacons. The congregation should certainly be consulted as to who is best adapted or fitted for the work of an elder, or bishop.

Brother McQuiddy: (1) Our class wants to know what is meant by "a needle's eye." (Matt. 19: 24.) (2) Is the case of the rich man and Lazarus (Luke 16: 19-31) a parable? Pastor Russell deprecated the doctrine of end-less punishment and diligently propagated the theory of annihilation. He thought to strengthen his position by figuring this out a parable. How could that help him? (3) Since the rich man was manifestly not a miser—"he was clothed in purple and fine linen, faring sumptuously every day"—do you attribute his mistake in life to indifference? If not indifference, what was the fundamental error in his character? (4) Is not Russell's teaching that the spark of life goes out and the soul ceases to be at death, as a flickering candle goes out in water, destructive of the basic truth of the Bible and its religion that the Christian religion prepares one to live and to form a character that will stand? (5) Does not this parable teach that one has conscious existence after death and enjoys his active faculties, such as the power to remember, think, plan, design? (6) But if the "establishment" of "our earthly house" falls down, why does not the "inner man" cease "functioning?" (7) May we conclude from this parable that our earth-life will open to us as a record book of events and deeds, and that at death we have no more cognizance of earthly affairs? JAMES E. CHESSOR.

Matt. 19: 24 declares: "Again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. And when the disciples heard it, they were astonished exceedingly, saying, Who then can be saved?" The rich young man who furnished occasion for this teaching had great possessions; so Jesus taught his disciples that it was hard for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven. Jesus explains this in Mark (10: 24) by saying: "How hard it is for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God!" which shows the sense of the passage. The man who is worth only a thousand dollars may trust in his riches the same as a man who has one hundred thousand dollars. It is just as impossible for a man who trusts in riches to go to heaven as it is for the camel to go through the needle's eye. I, therefore, incline to the thought that the "needle's eye" is simply the eye of a needle, and is not used to represent a pass in a mountain, as is sometimes contended. (2) The case of the rich man and Lazarus, I am inclined to think, is a real one. The language does not read like a parable. There is no comparison; but it says, "There was a certain rich man." But it matters not as to whether it is a real case or a parable. Christ taught the truth by parables, as well as by realities. If it could be proven a parable, this would not strengthen the doctrine of Russellism. (2) The mistake of the rich man has always appeared to be a failure to improve the opportunity that was placed at his door. He treated the needs of a poor, suffering fellow being with indifference. The rich sometimes use their means for the oppression of the poor. Instead of using their opportunities and advantages for their relief, they use their money to oppress them. (4) If eternal death is endless, then eternal life is endless. It is better to take what the Bible says than to take any man's speculation on this subject. (5) The case of the rich man and Lazarus teaches conscious existence after death. The rich man knew who he was and who his brethren were in this life. This shows that he knew himself as he had been in this world. This implies conscious existence after death. (6) I am not so sure that I understand the import of this question. Paul teaches us that when we cease to exist in our present state we will be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven. He says: "For verily in this we groan, longing to be clothed upon with our habitation, which is from heaven: if so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked." (2 Cor. 5: 2, 3.) The mortal ceases to function in order that he may be clothed upon with immortality. (7) The case of the rich man and Lazarus impresses forcefully the thought that in life our characters are formed. During life we either become good or bad, and the characters we form while we are living will remain with us throughout eternity. The rich man had the same selfish nature in Hades that he had in this life. While he sought relief from his terrible suffering, he manifested no penitence; he was impenitent still. During life the great gulf which was between the rich man and Lazarus was formed. He knew, or at least thought he knew, that his brothers were living the same life of rebellion that they were living when he departed from them, and selfishly pleaded for their salva-

Further Consideration of New Testament Nomenclature.

BY M. C. K.

With all well-informed and properly thoughtful persons, it goes without saying that, in our use of any New Testament term, we should include in it precisely what is included in it in the New Testament, no more and no less. Of course, whatever we might include in it, either more or less, would, to that extent, be a variation from its New Testament usage and would, to that extent, convey a different idea from what it conveys, and was intended to convey, in the New Testament; and hence, to that same extent, such a usage of the word would be erroneous and misleading. It is strange indeed that it should ever be necessary at all to argue a matter like this, and yet it is sometimes necessary to do so.

A very significant illustration of the confusion existing on this subject in some quarters is found in a leading editorial in the Christian Century of February 14, 1918. Writing under the heading, "If You Mean Immersion, Don't Say Baptism," the editor says:

Sometimes this confusion of terminology finds expression even in more deliberative formulations, and here it is even more regrettable than in casual speech. There lies before us at this moment a booklet prepared by the pastor of a large city church for the purpose of giving instruction to the children and young people of his parish on the substantial truths of Christian faith and life. Its materials are arranged in the form of a catechism. Under the question, "What is baptism?" this pastor lets himself say: "Baptism is the immersion in water of a penitent believer in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit." This, of course, is an execrable caricature of the New Testament conception of baptism, and when his attention is called to it no one will be readier to acknowledge that it is so than will the greatly esteemed author of this catechism himself. Such a definition misses the essential point of baptism altogether. Baptism is not the immersion in water of the penitent believer; it is the induction of the penitent believer into the body of Christ, which is the church, and it is this act, not the physical plunging in water, that is performed in the name of the holy Trinity and by the authority of the Lord Jesus himself.

It would be difficult to couch in smaller space a more complete subversion of every principle of philology bearing on the case, and every law governing the translation of thought from one language into another, than is occupied by this excerpt. It is utterly astonishing that men of the learning which the Christian Century is credited with having should perpetrate such a blunder and such an absurdity. Let us look at the facts in the case.

- 1. The term "baptism" is not an English word at all, but is purely a Greek word; and in both the King James and the Revised Version it is merely transferred, and not translated at all. The only variation in these two versions from the strictly Greek character of the word is the change from Greek orthography to English orthography; but even here, there is change in only one letter, the final vowel in its Greek spelling being dropped in the English form of the word.
- 2. Hence, whether it is right, "if you mean 'immersion,'" to "say 'baptism,'" depends altogether on whether "immersion" is a translation of baptism or not-whether the word "immerse" in the English language conveys the same idea that "baptize" conveys in the Greek language. If it does not, then, of course, if we mean "immersion," we should not say "baptism;" but if it does, then we should say it. Why not?
- 3. On precisely the same principle, if the word "sprinkle" or "pour" in the English language conveys the same idea that "baptize" conveys in the Greek language, then, if we mean "sprinkle" or "pour" when speaking in English, we should say "baptize" when speaking in Greek. Why not? Hence, the pastor who said, "Baptism is the immersion in water of a penitent believer in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit," was not guilty of making "an execrable caricature of the New Testament conception of baptism," provided the word "baptism" in Greek means "immersion" in English; but the editor who says, "Baptism is not the immersion in water of a penitent believer; it is the induction of the penitent believer into the body of Christ," is guilty of making a statement which is both unintelligible and absurd; for, when he says "it is the induction of a penitent believer into the body of Christ," even a mere tyro in the use of language will instantly ask, "it" what "is the induction of a penitent believer into the body of Christ?" To merely tell us that "baptism" is such an induction is to tell us nothing in English, so far as the act expressed by the term is concerned, for baptism is Greek. What is this "it" when we come to speak English? What is the act which we are to perform, and which, when performed in obedience to Christ's command, "is the induction of a penitent believer into the body of Christ?" If it is "immersion," let us say it; and if it is "sprinkling" or "pouring," let us say it No matter what term in English conveys the same idea, that is the term to use, of course, when we wish to express it in English.
- 4. When the Century editor further says, "Baptism Is not the immersion in water of a penitent believer; it is the induction of the penitent believer into the body of Christ. which is the church, and it is this act, not the physical plunging in water, that is performed in the name of the holy Trinity and by the authority of the Lord Jesus himself," he clearly concedes what the word means in English. but shows himself badly confused over the act denoted by the word, on the one hand, and the meaning denoted by that act in the New Testament command, on the other hand. Of course, New Testament baptism is not merely "plunging in water," but it is "plunging in water" in obedience to "the authority of the Lord Jesus himself," and for the specific "induction of the penitent believer into the body of Christ." When thus performed, it becomes a most solemn and impressive transaction. Hence, just as we may, in a given case, perform the specific act denoted by a command of Christ without any reference to obedience to him, so we may, by mistake, perform an act as obedience to him which he has not commanded; and there fore, in all such cases, in order to be right, we should both perform the act which he commands, and should perform it as obedience to him.

It is the purpose to further consider, in another article, the matter of Greek and English equivalents to express the act which, in this case, is enjoined by the divine command.

Looking on the Bright Side.

BY E. A. E.

Rejoice in the Lord always: again I will say, Rejoice. (Phil. 4: 4.)

Continuing from last week our consideration of this repeated injunction of our Father in heaven, let it be remembered that God never commands men to do that which is impossible. Then, by prayer, supplication, thanksgiving, studying the Bible, and the cultivation of contentment, we can develop a cheerful and joyous spirit.

Life, with its labors and sorrows, reverses and disappointments, privations and persecutions, afflictions and death, has a bright side. But the bright side is not that there are no such things, and that these and "all human woe" have not been caused by sin. People who expect no such things will be disappointed greatly and grievously, will live in gloom, and can see nothing but darkness ahead. The bright side is not in nursing sorrow, brooding over misfortunes, and feeding upon wrongs suffered at the hands of others.

If one could travel around the earth at the rate of a little more than one thousand miles an hour, going from east to west and starting at midnight, one could live forever in darkness. It does seem that some can travel sufficiently fast in the sorrows and gloom, darkness and woes of life as to never be reached by the light and blessings, joy and peace of the gospel of Christ. On the other hand, if one could travel so fast, by starting at noon, one could live forever in the brightness of midday, excepting the shadows of passing clouds.

Walking in the light is the Christian life. There are the shadows of passing clouds; but with Christians it is always day. Their Leader and Savior is "the light of the world." The darkness of the world-sin, Gethsemane, the cross, the grave, and all the powers of Satan-did not and cannot overtake and overcome this light. All who follow Jesus "shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." (John 8: 12.) So long, then, as we ourselves walk in the light, darkness cannot overtake us. (John 12: 35.) "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all." "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship with one another, and the blood of Jesus his Son cleanseth us from all sin." (Read 1 John 1.) John declares to us all these blessed things "concerning the Word of life," concerning fellowship with the Father and his Son and one another, and concerning "the eternal life," "that our joy may be full."

The bright side is the side of mercy and right, the side of light and love, the side of Christ and God.

" If God is for us, who is against us?"

The bright side is not being ourselves served, being relieved of care and responsibility, being always loved; but meeting obligation courageously, loving and serving others, and faithfully obeying and trusting God. The bright side is the practical side. We must "walk in the light" and keep up with the light in order to enjoy the light. When we fall behind the light, darkness and gloom will overtake us. If we hate one another, for example, we are "in the darkness until now." If we love one another, we abide in the light and will have "no occasion of stumbling." If we hate one another, we not only walk in the darkness, but the darkness has so blinded us that we know not whither we go. (1 John 2: 7-11.) Love is service, and "God is love." Whoever loves is begotten of God and knows God. (1 John 4: 7, 8.) Christians " are all sons of light, and sons of the day." (1 Thess. 5: 5.)

Brother Lipscomb, as our readers will doubtless remember, when asked who was the happiest person who has ever lived on earth, replied: "Jesus, because he served the most and accomplished the most for others." The servant of all is happiest of all, as well as the greatest of all; rather, being truly the greatest of all embraces real happiness. Had Jesus brooded over his sorrow and grief, his mistreatment and persecution, his betrayal by his familiar friend, his desertion by his disciples, the injustice and cruelty of his trial, the crown of thorns and the cross, and had he lost sight of the truth that all these were the salvation of so many others, he could not have endured them. By his stripes others are healed, by his blood others are saved, by his death others receive life eternal. For the glory beyond he endured the cross and despised the shame.

Thousands of godly mothers, who have given their lives in self-forgetfulness and self-sacrifice to their homes and families, have tasted of the graciousness of this joy.

It is in the reach of all Christians.

The bright side is not that we have no sin and that we have not sinned grievously, but in the blessedness of forgiveness.

Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not reckon sin. (Rom. 4: 7, 8.)

The bright side is not in having no burdens and cares, but in the privilege of casting our burden and all of our anxiety upon the Lord, because he will sustain us and cares for us. (See Ps. 55: 22; 1 Pet. 5: 6, 7.)

The bright side is not that we do not labor and are not heavy laden, but in the gracious invitation to come to Jesus and to learn of him, with the promise that we shall find rest unto our souls. (Matt. 11: 28-30.) The bright side is that in our weakness and mistakes and sins we can go in full assurance of faith to the throne of God and obtain mercy and receive sufficient grace for our time of need. Jesus is our Advocate to plead for us, our Priest to make intercessions for us; his heart is touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and, having been tempted in all points as we are now being tempted, he knows how to help us and does help us.

The bright side is not that we will not suffer and have all manner of evil spoken against us falsely for righteousness' sake, but that we are so counted worthy to suffer for the Name and are exhorted to rejoice and be exceeding glad because the righteous of old were so persecuted and great is our reward in heaven.

This enabled Paul and Silas at Philippi, with their bleeding backs and their feet fast in the stocks in the inner prison, to pray and to sing hymns unto God at midnight.

If for deep-rooted and godly convictions Christians should be so persecuted as to be arrested and imprisoned to-day, they would cheerfully submit to the powers that be, offering no resistance and making no effort to avenge themselves, but would pray for their rulers, sing praises to God, and rejoice in the Lord.

A disciple is not above his teacher, nor a servant above his lord. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his teacher, and the servant as his lord. If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more them of his household! (Matt. 10: 24, 25.)

Worse things than suffering for Christ's sake or for conscience' sake can befall people. We have just seen that Jesus declared that it is a source of great joy to be counted worthy to suffer for his sake. He will confess all who do this before God and the angels. It is a most fearful thing to deny Jesus, to betray his church, or to sin against the consciences of even the weakest brethren.

The bright side is not that there are no tears, no sorrows, not thousands and thousands of bleeding and aching and breaking hearts, no enemies, and no wickedness; but in weeping with those who weep, relieving the afflicted, feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, feeding enemies even and praying for them, taking no vengeance, not resisting the ones who are evil, suffering wrong rather than committing wrong, and not only doing good for evil, but overcoming evil with good. (Rom. 12: 9-21.)

All multiplied wickedness, extended ruin, increasing destruction on the earth and worldliness in the church cannot be obliterated, all responsibility for them or any part of them cannot be thrown off and the consequences of them avoided by saying simply that all should be cheerful. Seeing the naked and sometimes awful facts and being deeply concerned over the condition of the church do not create the facts and make the woeful condition. Refusing to see and to consider them does not destroy them. There is "a time to weep." "Jesus wept." He wept over the godless Jerusalem. He offered up prayers and supplication with strong crying and tears. Who has not read with deep interest the lamentations of Jeremiah? He is called "the weeping prophet." If there was ever a time to weep over the condition of the church, now is that time.

For her my tears shall fall,
For her my prayers ascend;
To her my cares and tolls be given,
Till tolls and cares shall end.

It is a fact that all the world, except eight souls, being overflowed with water, perished; but the "preacher of righteousness" who warned the people and foretold this destruction was not a pessimist and lacked neither faith nor hope, for he has been listed by the Lord in the illustrious roll of the faithful.

Lot "vexed his righteous soul from day to day" over the wickedness of Sodom. With the blind "prosperous ease" of Sodom and Gomorrah, destruction forever fell upon them.

See in Isa. 1: 4-7 what that faithful prophet says about Judah's being a corrupt people, ladened with iniquity, full of corruption, and having forsaken God until the whole head was sick and the whole heart faint, and the body from head to foot being full of wounds and bruises and sores. All of Isalah's life and teaching never turned Judah back to God. The people went from bad to worse. Read the book of Jeremiah in order to see how he stood almost alone against numerous false and corrupt priests and prophets. These priests and prophets were all agreed, and stood together and in harmony on the side of wrong and the people. Jeremiah was persecuted, imprisoned, put in the miry dungeon; but he never ceased to warn the people. When he could not preach because of his imprisonment, by God's directions he wrote his warnings against the sins in a book and had his scribe, Baruch, to read it to the people. The unpious king cut this book-the word of God-in pieces with his penknife and burned it in the fire. (See Jer. 36.) The people were carried into captivity and Jerusalem was destroyed. But all the false teachers of Jeremiah's time could not change the truth.

If some have not burned the Bible to-day, have they not in the wisdom of the world set it aside?

Jesus says:

Except a grain of wheat fall into the earth and die, it abideth by itself alone; but if it die, it beareth much fruit. (John 12: 24.)

Peter thought Jesus took the wrong view of life, took him to one side, and rebuked him, telling him he must not talk so. Turning his back upon Peter, Jesus said: "Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art a stumblingblock unto me: for thou mindest not the things of God, but the things of men." (Matt. 16: 21-28.) So men think to-day. Minding the things of men and not the things of God is a stumblingblock to the church to-day. Every one who has read the New Testament knows the vast distinction it draws between the wisdom of the world and God's wisdom.

Jesus pronounced the doom of Jerusalem and the Jewish nation and the destruction of the whole world, declaring that because "iniquity shall be multiplied the love of the many shall wax cold;" said that few would be saved and the many lost; and asked if the Son of man, when he comes, will find faith on the earth. Christians are to be cheerful, hopeful, and happy; but their joy and peace come through being faithful to God, serving in love their fellow men, and in looking forward in unwavering faith with bright expectation and glorious anticipation to the new heavens and new earth in which the righteous will dwell forever.

Jesus did not measure the greatest good by material prosperity, worldly honor and wealth, but by the sacrifice of his life for the world—for his enemies—and salvation of souls from sin, Satan, and the grave.

Fellowship.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

A few years ago, a good brother, whose name was "Rice," thought he had discovered the divinely prescribed order to be observed by "the saints and faithful" when they met for work and worship on the first day of the week. The prescribed order, as he thought and taught, was clearly stated in the forty-second verse of the second chapter of Acts of Apostles: "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers."

The good brother announced his discovery, and forthwith proceeded to preach and practice accordingly.

Of course, if this verse states the divinely prescribed order of procedure when the saints and faithful meet for public work and worship, all of us should practice it; hence, when we come together, we should first give attention to the apostles' doctrine, then to the fellowship, then to the breaking of bread, and last, but not least, to prayers—not a prayer, but prayers.

So thought and so taught and so did the good brother who thought he had made the important discovery; hence, when the congregation of which he was a member and a leader assembled on the first day of the week, first, two or three chapters of the epistles to the churches were read, to meet "the apostles' doctrine" demand; then came the weekly contribution; then, the Lord's Supper; and, finally, the prayers—not a prayer, but prayers.

They could not sing till after they had completed the service, of course, for singing had no place on the divinely prescribed program, as they thought and taught; hence could be no part of the service.

Why, then, did they give attention to the contribution, as that was not on the prescribed program, either? Because they thought "fellowship" and the contribution were one and the same thing, and that, therefore, as fellowship was on the divinely prescribed program, the contribution was virtually on it.

Is the Bible responsible for our calling the contribution the fellowship? NO. The word "fellowship" occurs no less than seventeen times in the Bible—twice in the Old Testament and fifteen times in the New Testament; but, in the entire realm of God's revelation to man, there is not the slightest shade of a shadow of an intimation that the Lord Almighty ever so much as imagined that any man, woman, or child ever might, could, would, should, or did call or consider the weekly contribution or any other contribution or collection the fellowship. There may be authority for calling the Sunday contribution the fellowship. I do not know. One thing I do know, however: there is no Bible authority for it.

Brethren called the suggested system "the Rice heresy," and some congregations wrangled, disputed, and divided over it. I well remember a strong congregation—a good one, too—that was divided into two distinct bodies when I was called there for a series of meetings, one body meeting in the meetinghouse, the other in the courthouse. Neither party was stubborn or harsh, however; hence the division ceased almost immediately after the meeting began, and thus a successful meeting was assured.

If Brother Rice had been a hard-headed ignoramus, loving a hobby better than he loved the Lord's cause or the Lord's people, he might never have acknowledged his mistake. Being an honest, sincere, sensible man, however, he saw his mistake when his attention was kindly called to it, promptly repudiated his unfortunate teaching, and thus stopped the disturbing tide he had started.

The following are Bible sayings on the subject of fellowship:

"Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which frameth mischief by a law?" (Ps. 94: 20.)

"God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord." (1 Cor. 1: 9.)

"But I say, that the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God: and I would not that ye should have fellowship with devils." (1 Cor. 10: 20.)

"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?" (2 Cor. 6: 14.)

"And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision." (Gal. 2: 9.)

"And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ." (Eph. 3: 9.)

"And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." (Eph. 5: 11.)

"I thank my God upon every remembrance of you, always in every prayer of mine for you all making request with joy, for your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now." (Phil. 1: 3-5.)

"If there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies, fulfill ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind." (Phil. 2: 1, 2.)

"That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death." (Phil. 3: 10.)

"If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth: but if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." (1 John 1: 6, 7.)

I would not willingly say anything to discourage the weekly contribution. Christians are clearly taught, in the law of the Lord, to commune and contribute "on the first day of the week"—to lay by "in store"—as the Lord has prospered them. Thus should the treasury of the Lord be replenished as the weeks go by, that lack of means may not prevent our doing the work the Lord would have us do. While we have not the slightest biblical authority for calling the weekly contribution "the fellowship," and while I am very sure that is far from the scriptural meaning of fellowship, we should never neglect that duty; and if all of us attended to it in the right spirit, some of us would be better and happier than we are, and more souls would be converted to Christ.

But what is fellowship? Webster's definition of "fellowship" is "partnership," and his definition of "partnership" is "fellowship." According to Webster, then, any kind of fellowship is partnership, and any kind of partnership is fellowship. The Bible clearly and strongly sustains this position; hence Webster is correct. We can have fellowship—partnership—with each other, and with the Father and the Son. "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ." (1 John 1: 3.)

We should never mistake the broad and blissful meaning of the word "fellowship" so far as to concude that it means simply the contribution. We should realize that it means a glorious copartnership—a fellowship of labor in the vineyard of the Lord, Christians working together for the glory of God, the honor of Christ, and the salvation of souls. Christian fellowship is a fellowship of faith—"faith that works by love and purifies the heart." It is a fellowship of hope—"which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil." It is a fellowship of love—"and above all these things put on love, which is the bond of perfectness."

It is a fellowship of both joy and sorrow-"rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep." It is a fellowship of rejoicing in the Lord, Christians being exhorted to "rejoice in the Lord always" and to "rejoice evermore." It is the fellowship of soldiers-soldiers of the cross, clad in the panoply of heaven and armed with the sword of the Spirit, bravely battling for the salvation of the sons and daughters of men. It is a fellowship of suffering and sorrowing and sighing and weeping, because of sympathy with those that sigh, sorrow, suffer, and are sad. Christians may enjoy this sweet fellowship on earth; and they have the sacred promise of a sweeter fellowship in that brighter and better world, with our Heavenly Father, our Savior, the Holy Spirit, and with the redeemed of every age, country, and clime, while the eternal ages roll their endless cycles on.

That Book.

My Dear Brethren and Sisters: Some time ago I was requested by some good brethren to bring out a book setting forth the teaching of the Scriptures on church organization, the appointment of elders, deacons, evangelists, etc. Not being able to meet the expense, I called on the brethren to assist me by sending in one dollar in advance for a book. Only a small amount was received. Recently the request has been revived, and some brethren are proposing to subscribe more liberally. Now, do you think it would be good to bring out the book? Are you willing to make a donation from one to ten dollars and take it in books? Surely such a book will do good, and the money invested in it will be well spent. Please let me hear from you at once. Address me at Lafayette, Tenn. W. H. Carter.

R. V. Cawthon is conducting a meeting with the Reld Avenue congregation, this city.

James A. Allen is preaching this week for the congregation on Eighth Avenue, North, this city.

Fred Cowin, of McMinnville, Tenn., preached for one week at the Fanning Orphan School. Twelve young ladies were baptized. Eleven of the number are in the school.

From J. W. Dunn, Paris, Texas, March 27: "We had fine crowds last Sunday. Interest is growing. Three confessions and baptisms. The church is more active than ever, with a promising future."

From W. P. Skaggs, Tom Bean, Texas, March 30: "We had two excellent services last Sunday, and two made the good confession and were buried with their Lord in baptism. Our interest is growing, and we are hoping to accomplish a good work in the Lord."

"Salvation from Sin." This book is composed of the editorials of David Lipscomb, collated by J. W. Shepherd, and contains many of the best and most profound thoughts of its author. It contains an index to subjects and an index to scriptures. Contains 440 large pages; printed in large, clear type. Price, $1.50.

From Joe L. Netherland, Yuma, Tenn., March 25: "My school having closed, I am now ready to give all of my time to preaching the gospel. If any congregation needs my services for protracted-meeting work during the months of April, May, or June, let them write me at once. I am willing to go anywhere I can be of any service for the cause of Christ."

The Christian Quarterly is a magazine of religious news and general intelligence published quarterly in the interest of primitive Christianity at West Gore, Nova Scotia, Canada. D. McDougall is editor and publisher. The associate editors are H. M. Evans, O. H. Tallman, O. E. Tallman, Charles W. Petch, S. Whitfield, A. Weston, and J. L. Hines. We wish for these brethren much success in circulating the Quarterly.

J. A. Cunningham writes from Bowie, Texas: "Through the kindness of Dr. W. S. Vickery, a faithful member of the church of Christ and an elder in the church in Bowie, I am permitted to read the Gospel Advocate, which is like a letter from home to those of us that are from Tennessee, besides the help to us in the spiritual life. I am now in my seventieth year and am doing very little preaching out of Bowie. I have settled down to the work of an elder in our home congregation, thankful that I have the blessed privilege of laboring in the vineyard of the Master, and praying that I may be of use in his service until my labors are ended on earth. We miss Brother Lipscomb from the columns of the Advocate, but we should be comforted with assurance that he is enjoying the rest that remains for the people of God, and that his works follow him."

H. C. Shoulders writes: "The third Lord's day in April is the time set for the great drive on the church debt for the little band at Lexington, Ky. They owe about twelve hundred dollars on the property now. Just a little from every one will drive this debt clear out of the way and put these brethren where they can have the gospel preached and soon be helping to spread the truth in regions beyond. Then remember the time and that every individual and congregation has been asked to have an interest in this great effort to drive the debt away and help save souls. Now, every member of the body of Christ with his shoulder to the wheel, and the work will be done, you will be happy, and God will be pleased. Remember, my address is Box 194, Sellersburg, Ind. I will acknowledge through the paper all money received for the Lexington work."

Field Notes.

BY C. E. HOLT.

I have visited Lebanon, Tenn., in the interest of the Gospel Advocate. While there I preached two sermons to appreciative and appreciated audiences. In former years I have conducted some enjoyable and also very successful meetings in that beautiful and classical city.

The schools of Lebanon rank among the best in the South. The law school there is one of which the great Lycurgus would be proud. Many eminent lawyers have been educated in this most excellent institution. Brother John A. Klingman, the present minister of the church there, is a graduate from this great school, being thus prepared, if circumstances should ever require it, to make friends with the "mammon of unrighteousness." may be a wise thing for a preacher to do. The Savior says: "And I say unto you, Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations." (Luke 16: 9.) For a preacher to be able to take care of himself when, for any reason, the churches fall or refuse to support him is, from a human standpoint, at least, a thing to be commended. There are no indications that Brother Klingman will become persona non grata with the church at Lebanon or elsewhere, for he is held in high esteem by all whom I heard speak about him and his work in Lebanon.

Brother George W. Farmer, one of the best preachers in the brotherhood, lives in Lebanon. He has done, and is still doing, a fine work in Middle Tennessee. Brother Farmer is a stanch friend of the Gospel Advocate and keeps the "ball rolling" in looking after its subscription list in Lebanon and contiguous territory.

The churches of Wilson County are fortunate in having fine preaching talent among them. Brother E. A. Elam's home is near Lebanon, and he wields a great influence over ecclesiastical affairs in that section of Tennessee. Being an editor of the Gospel Advocate and the author of the Sunday-school helps published by the McQuiddy Printing Company, which are so extensively used by our people, his influence is more than local.

The church at Lebanon is fortunate in having our genial office editor, A. B. Lipscomb, engaged for a protracted meeting for the present year. I understand that he will be followed by Brethren L. S. White and T. Q. Martin, men of renown among our type of Christians. So we see that the church has planned for some spiritual feasts.

The Gospel Advocate circulates well in and around Lebanon. That gives them not only a great Bible educator in their homes, but gives them a safeguard against unscriptural excrescences with which the body (church) is liable to become afflicted.

While in Lebanon I had an ideal home with Sister Edgerton, the widow of the late Dr. Edgerton, a physician of great learning, whose death was a great loss to the people of that entire section of country. Sister Edgerton is a woman of rare worth. Her venerable father, Brother S. H. Pate, an octogenarian, and one of the best-informed men among us, together with her saintly mother, adorn and enrich the home. It makes one feel better to associate with these consecrated Christians.

For many years Dr. J. W. McFarland was a leader in the Lebanon church. He was an elder, and a very consecrated man. He has gone from them now, but his work remains. Sister McFarland, his faithful companion through life, survives him and is quite active. He has some noble sons there who are true to the cause of New Testament Christianity. His youngest daughter, Mrs. Remy, now of Guitrie, Okla., was at the old home when her beloved father was called away. Her devotion to him was beautiful.

There are many good, true disciples in Lebanon, and all, with a few exceptions, read the Gospel Advocate. Some of the oldest ones there were baptized by Tolbert Fanning.

Spirit of the Press

A Worthy Cause.

An earnest brother who has a Christian boy at Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C., sends the editor of this page a letter with the request that it be given our readers. 1 take pleasure in complying with this request, and so follows his letter:

I have read with much pleasure the good articles in the Gospel Advocate concerning the duty of Christians in time I heartily indorse the stand taken by Brother Dunn and one or two other good brethren. These brethren realize that the gospel is God's power unto salvation and appreciate the necessity of preaching it to our boys in the camps. I sincerely hope that other good brethren will realize the need of this important work and that in the near future a great effort will be made by the church to have the gospel preached to our boys in the camps. should be the desire of every Christian to have fellowship in such a noble work.

If I have been correctly informed, there is no church of Christ in Columbia, S. C., and none in Camp Jackson. But it rejoices my heart to know that there are some earnest, Christian soldier boys in the camp who so love the Lord and are so determined to serve him that a number of them (my boy included in the number) meet on the first day of the week to break bread, to sing songs, to pray, and to continue in the worship as did the early church. Such loyalty and devotion to the truth certainly should encourage some good preaching brother to go to Camp Jack-son to preach the gospel, to work with the boys, and to do all that he can to advance the religion of Jesus Christ among the soldiers. These Christian boys are certainly entitled to the help, cooperation, and encouragement of all faithful Christians.

As this is undoubtedly a call to duty, who will rise up, as did Isaiah, and say, "Here am I; send me?" The call is urgent and should be heeded.

This letter is worthy of our most serious consideration. A grave responsibility rests upon the church. The church should be ready to cooperate and support those who are willing to faithfully preach the gospel of Christ in the camps. Christians should make sacrifices to teach the gospel to Christian soldiers and others who are exposed to so many severe trials, temptations, and hardships. When men are going down to darkness without the light of truth, it is no time to stop and discuss whether it is right to preach the gospel to men who are exposed to such dangers; whether it is right to feed the hungry, to clothe the cold, and lift up the fallen. The church is the "light of the world," the "salt of the earth," and should work earnestly now to sow the seed of the kingdom while it is day, "knowing that the night of death draweth near, when no man can work." A number of camps are calling for preachers. Will we fail to enter the open door and preach the gospel to the boys in the camps? Will we neglect this solemn duty and devote our time to criticizing denominations and denominational preachers who are taking up the work in the camps? Will we sit with folded hands while the Roman Catholic Church enters the camps and declares error to Christian soldiers and thus lead them away from righteousness and truth? To those who neglect such opportunities the Savior says: "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6: 46.) The Savior commands us: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation." (Mark 16: 15.) Christians must be vigilant, must be earnest, and must make sacrifices in order to advance the kingdom of God in the world.

Thinking probably that some one would like to write a letter of encouragement to these Christian soldiers, I give the name and address of the son of the father who sent the above letter. It will be well to write to Frank Herbert Neely, Battery C, 317 Field Artillery, Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C. While others are encouraging and helping our boys, we should not fail to do all that we can to encourage the sons of others.

May God speed the day when sin and error shall be driven from the earth and when righteousness shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

The Outward Forms of Christianity Are Spiritual.

Christianity is a system of faith. The faith that is in the heart expresses itself in obedience. It is not possible for a man to obey God who has no faith. "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." When one acceptably obeys God, his faith comes out in word, in action, and in obedience. The faith that remains dormant in the heart is dead. A dead faith never brings a blessing to any one. The editor of the Christian-Evangelist expresses this truth clearly and forcefully as follows:

Christianity is a religion of the spirit; but to adapt it to mortals in the body, it has certain outward forms by which it may objectify itself in the life of the individual. There have been two extremes in the religious world on this subject-those whose religion consists largely in outward forms, and some who dispense with all forms, like the Friends or the Quakers. Neither of these is the New Testament ideal. It provides for the confession of Christ "with the mouth" the faith that is in the heart. If there be no faith in the heart, there is no confession in the New Testament sense of the word. It provides baptism as a further testimony of the soul's faith in a risen Christ and a declaration of its own purpose to walk in newness of life. But if there be no such purpose in the heart of self-dedication, there is no baptism, in the New Testament sense of that ordinance. On this we are all agreed. But the outward form is essential also to complete the New Testament ordinance. It takes both the inward change and the outward act to constitute Christian baptism. So of the Lord's Supper. It is a spiritual ordinance having an outward form. If either the spiritual preparation or the outward act be omitted, the ordinance as instituted by Christ is not observed. The Greek term rendered in some versions "baptism" and in some "immersion" implies in its New Testament use a believing heart, submitting itself to Christ in a symbolic burial with Christ, in water, in his name. If you strip the term "immersion" of this or its Greek original. But no doubt the translators who rendered the original word by "immersion" aimed to carry with it the same spiritual meaning that attached to the original word, and those who so translate and practice have been the champions of believers' baptism.

Baptism is spiritual, as well as faith, prayer, repentance, or anything else connected with Christianity. It comes from the heart and is a spiritual service. "But thanks be to God, that, whereas ye were servants of sin, ye became obedient from the heart to that form of teaching whereunto ye were delivered; and being made free from sin, ye became servants of righteousness." (Rom. 6: 17, 18.) Christ, in being baptized, fulfilled all righteousness. Again, the Holy Spirit tells us, through Peter, that baptism is "the interrogation of a good conscience toward God, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ." (1 Pet. 3: 21.) The man who scoffs at the outward acts of Christianity-that terms them "carnal"-should as well scoff at Christianity itself. The faith that is in the heart comes out in obedience in the life.

Motives That Bring Blessings.

Nothing is more superlatively important than our getting our hearts perfectly right, as far as it is possible for us to do so, and ever be moved, in all that we think, say, and do, by motives that God can approve. I feel that it is correct to say that one whose motives are right cannot stay wrong. A prayerful consideration of 1 Tim. 1: 12, 13 will, I think, convince the thoughtful of this truth. What we do is vitally important, but not so important as why we do certain things. What Paul did before his conversion was wrong-very wrong-so much so that it made him "the chief of sinners." But his motives were right; hence our Father, who knows the heart, would not let him stay in darkness. Motives that were right is the thing that caused God to fix his heart upon Saul. I am sure that one whose motives are pure-wholly sincere-cannot stay wrong; they will come to the light, and soon discover it and embrace it.

But how about people whose motives are wrong? Will they ever come to the light? Will they ever learn? Which is the more dangerous-to be a man in error with motives that are right, or to be a man with the pure word of God with motives that are not right? For me, I take the former. There is hope for the man who ever moves with motives that are pure. I see but little hope for the man who moves, who acts, with motives that are not right. Will you read, with care, 2 Thess, 2: 10-12? Think not that this applies exclusively to the people who have embraced faise teaching. There are people in the church of Christ, people who know the teaching theoretically, that have never "received the love of the truth." The truth can be received without receiving the love of the truth. What is said in 2 Tim. 3: 1-7 does not apply exclusively to disciples under the influence of false doctrines. There are people who have "the teaching," "the word of faith," who know it and can give book, chapter, and verse for what they say, who are, undoubtedly, among the number spoken of in this scripture. They have the "form of godliness"-the correct form-and the "form of sound words" mentioned in 2 Tim. 1: 13; but "the power thereof" they have not, and even deny. It must be remembered, too, that they are "ever learning"-perhaps can quote more scripture from memory than others-but to a real knowledge of the truth they never come. Really knowing the truth is tantamount to knowing God, knowing Christ, and having God's Spirit to dwell in you.

But now to the only right motive. What is it? How may we know we have it? Whenever we move, and our recognition of God is not the soul, the very essence of the motive, we are simply not walking in the truth. "In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he will direct thy paths." (Prov. 3: 5.) There is nothing, then, that I can do, by his permission, in which he is not to be thought of and considered. Take this advice; and if you are wrong in some of your thoughts and conclusions, you will get right. One more reading will suffice: "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." (1 Cor. 10: 31.) How can I, with this scripture before me, do anything and give God no thought? No, brethren, as certain as I am now writing, God has been driven out of our thoughts, words, and acts until he took his flight for more congenial hearts in which to dwell. Every time we eat, we should think of him and give him thanks; every time we take a drink of water, we should think of him and deep down in our hearts give him thanks. The air we should not breathe, the sunshine we should not enjoy, the food we should not eat, and the raiment we should not wear, without giving God thought, thanksgiving, and praise. Too, when we go to the parks, when we sit down to an innocent game to give our minds rest from the wearing routine of our daily work, we should give him thanks for the diversion and for the pleasure. Tell me not that this is the way the Christian should not live. Doubtful indeed it is that those who live not this way through the week really have God in their songs, prayers, the eating of the Lord's Supper, and the giving of their means on Lord's day. Some try to have. But what a battle they have to fight to keep God in their acts because their conduct through the week got them out of the habit! How real the happiness, how sweet the peace, how deep the joy, how great the strength of that man or that woman who ever keeps his or her heart fixed on God! (Isa. 26: 3.)

The Atlanta Work.

BY MORGAN H. CARTER.

Through his people God is accomplishing a good work among the three congregations of Atlanta which together are undertaking to build up Christianity in its New Testament type of work and worship. The West End Avenue church has recently had several very interesting downtown services. There are splendid prospects of much being accomplished in the central part of the city toward the conversion of men and the conservation of Christians who come to our city as transcient residents. Brother S. H. Hall is preaching at these services.

A revival is in progress at the East Point chapel. The writer is speaking each evening. One precious soul has thus far been converted to Christ. Brother Ben Harding will begin a meeting at the South Pryor Street chapel next Lord's day. We especially request the prayers of God's people in the interest of these two revivals.

Besides the Sunday-morning Bible classes, which are increasing in attendance and interest, we have a number of midweek classes for children, young people, and adults. Many have enrolled in these classes, which are being taught by Brother Hall and myself, together with a staff of able assistants.

We will gladly give any information at our disposal to elders, preachers, or teachers who would appreciate suggestions regarding Bible classes. We have had extensive experience in this type of work, and the West End Church is especially interested in being of service to all. We will gladly tell you whatever we can regarding methods and work which we have tried and found helpful.

The work at Camp Gordon is especially interesting, and prospects are very bright for much more being done than ever before. Be sure to send us any names and addresses of men in this or other camps to whom we can be helpful. Remember this work and all the harvest field of God in your prayers.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't Stay Gray! Here's a Simple Receipt that Anybody Can Apply With a Hair Brush.

The use of sage and sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy, and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out of date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a fifty-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Com-pound," you will get this famous old you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of disease.

Our meeting at Sugar Grove, Ky., closed on the second Lord's-day night in March. There were no additions. but I think much good was done in the way of sowing the seed. The little band manifested a deep interest in the work, and they have our many thanks. On the third Lord's-day morning I spoke for the Jackson Street Church, in Nashville, and Brother M. Boyd spoke at night. On the fourth Lord'sday morning Brother Allen preached for us, and Brother M. Keeble preached at night. New Congregation at Fort Worth, Texas.

BY J. H. LAWSON.

I am glad to announce to the brotherhood that another valuable piece of church property, with a large stone building thereon, has been purchased, and the cause will be reëstablished in the central part of Fort Worth. Some time ago Brethren George W. Birchfield and J. G. Wilkinson proposed to the South Side-Central Church to purchase the First Presbyterian Church property, located on the corner of Fourth and Calhoun Streets, two blocks east of the Westbrook Hotel, agreeing to pay one-half of the purchase price if the South Side-Central would pay the remainder. This proposition was accepted and the property thus purchased. A congregation, to be known as the Central church of Christ, will be worshiping in the new building before this announcement appears in the paper. Through this great liberality the cause of Christ in Fort Worth is now in better condition to do great things for the Lord than at any time in the history of the city, and we feel sure that greater things are in store for the truth by reason of this great sacrifice. With Glenwood in the southeast, South Side-Central in the southwest, North Side in the north, Camp Bowie Christian Tabernacle on the west, and the Central in the central part, and all with good buildings, we feel much encouraged for the outlook for the cause of Christianity in the splendid city of Fort Worth. This newly acquired property is worth at least thirty thousand dollars, and I believe it is the best meetinghouse now owned by the brotherhood in Texas. Two Presbyterian churches united. which made this property available for purchase.

Visiting brethren and sisters will have no trouble in finding this church. for it is two blocks east from the Westbrook Hotel, and the Westbrook is on Main Street, and the largest hotel in the city. When passing this way, be sure to visit this place of worship, and then on to Camp Bowie to the tabernacle there.

Brother M. H. Moore, City Superintendent of Schools, who is well and favorably known to the brotherhood as a sound and able preacher, has agreed to lead the forces of this church and to preach for the congregation, and all communications with reference to this congregation should be addressed to him. Brother Moore has spent many years in Fort Worth and is held in high esteem by the citizenship of the entire city, and I am sure that he will lead this congregation to a high plane of usefulness in the Master's kingdom.

The first service in the new building will be held on the fifth Lord's day in March at 11 A.M., and at 3 P.M. we will have the opening service at the Camp Bowie tabernacle.

Calomel Seldom Sold Here Now

Nasty Drug Salivates, Makes You Siek, and You Lose a Day's Work.

Every druggist in town-your druggist and everybody's druggist-has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking Its place.

Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local drug-gist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. The program for the week at St. Elmo is as follows: Sunday, Bible school at 10 A.M., preaching at 11 A.M. and 7:30 P.M.; Tuesday night, young men's class; Wednesday afternoon, women's class; Thursday night, prayer meeting.— F. Jackson, March 26 .- I was with the church in Brownsville in March. They are a faithful little band of New Testament worshipers and are growing in number, yet few, as the congregation is young. They have bought a lot (paid cash for it) and raised half of the money for a new house of worship. The purpose is to build this year. Having shown their faithfulness, they are entitled to help and encouragement from the older churches of Christ. I hope every congregation in West Tennessee will help Brownsville with one Sunday's contribution. Please keep this in mind and send them an offering as soon as possible, as they want to start the building in the early part of June. Send all money to Dr. W. F. Whitehurst, Brownsville, Tenn. Ennis, March 25.—This minister preached at Oak Cliff Church, Dallas, and Brother Dunn preached here, Sunday. Brother Dunn did us much good by his visit, and the brethren want him back. I found a large body of enthusiastic workers at Oak Cliff. They have a large Sunday school, teachers one hundred per cent efficient for Christ. May the Lord keep us humble and consecrated. Denton, March 25.—I gave my lec-ire on "The Soul of Man" at Hamture on mon, Okla., in the Methodist church, last Thursday night, and those there seemed to be pleased. Dallas, 401 Montreal Avenue, March 26 .- I was called to Chapel Hill, near Trenton, to preach on Saturday night, Sunday, and Sunday night. This is Brother W. N. Carter's home congrega-tion. He is away almost every Sunday, preaching at other places, but his good wife and three sweet children go to church there all the time. However, he sent some one in his place this time and stayed at home, because it was my first trip there, to be with me and help me out. He, his wife, and his children all know how to sympathize with a minister and make him feel pleasant in their home and at church. He knows what preachers have to contend with. He is loved and respected by the church and neigh-bors. He is one of our best preachers. I shall go back monthly .- J. C. Estes.

Germ Thoughts in the Word.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

When God created the first Adam, he surely imparted to him knowledge, and he was perfect in scholarship, so much so that I doubt if there ever was a man since that time who excelled him in learning, and it will be admitted that there were none before him. By the law of Rome, Jesus was deprived of an education. "And the Jews marveled, saying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" (John 7: 15.) Yet Jesus was the most refined and finest educated man in both literal and spiritual affairs that ever lived on earth. The reason that God imparted to him special knowledge and ability to teach was that he might give a perfect plan of redemption. Please read Deut. 18: 18-22. Then read Isa. 11; 61: 1-3. The above-named prophecy will show that God was to give to him spiritual power in order that he might accomplish the great plan of redemption. That Holy Spirit which was placed upon Jesus contained the germ thought of every good act mentioned in Christ's teaching, which acts now are the fruits of the Spirit. Reader, did you ever sum up the import of the germ thoughts in the words of the Holy Spirit, which came upon Jesus when he was baptized? That Spirit contained the spiritual germ thoughts of love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, wisdom, understanding, counsel, might, fear, equity, mercy, righteousness, justice, vengeance, knowledge, patience, virtue, praise, purity, cheerfulness, charity, brotherly kindness, forgiveness, giving to the poor, and all other good works. Each of the above germs are implanted in the heart, being transmitted there by and through the word of God which is sown in the heart and demonstrated in life by actions. The above gives a very good idea of how people are animated by the gift of the Holy Spirit. Do you not know that there is a difference between the gift and the giver? Paul said: "But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." (Rom. 6: 23.) God is the giver, eternal life is the gift, and Christ is the Mediator through whom God gives the gift of eternal life. Acts 2: 38 says: "And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." Here we have a giver and a gift. The giver is certainly the Holy Spirit, as much so as God is the giver of the gift of eternal life. Then what was the gift that the Holy Spirit was going to give to these persons after repentance and baptism? The apostle explains in the next sentence by saying: "For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off." God, by his Holy Spirit, had made promise to Abraham that "in Christ" all the families on earth should be blessed. Whatever blessing that promise contained, having been given to Abraham and his children by the Holy Spirit, these persons would come into the possession and blessings of that gift on their obedience to the command: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." The promised blessings in Christ given to Abraham by the Holy Spirit are also given to all obedient believers. Salvation is one of the blessings, and eternal life is another, which the Holy Spirit gives. Whatever God does, the Holy Spirit does. So God's promise to Abraham was the Holy Spirit's gift to obedient believers. Those who do not believe that the Holy Spirit gives gifts should read 1 Cor. 12: 4-14. Inside of God's words are spiritual and divine ideas which is the germ to eternal life. Sow the word, let it grow, cultivate it, and eternal life will be the harvest. I do not know of any Holy Spirit outside of God's word that is safe to trust as a guide to heaven.

Let the McQuiddy Printing Company do your printing, binding, engraving, and lithographing.

The Christian Home. No. 13.

RY M S WASON.

And as he reaps, so shall be the harvest. Some one has said: "Sow a thought and reap an action; sow an action and reap a character; sow a character and reap a destiny." Don't forget, fathers, as you see your sons recklessly sowing the seeds of evil. There is a reaping time coming, and God has said: "As a man soweth, so also shall he reap." All the great characters of the world pay tribute to the home as the foundation on which the strength of their future life was builded

The Christian home is a home of Christian qualities and equipment, and it would not deserve the name were it not the home of Christian devotions. These may be discussed in two classes -table thanks and evening devotions. The Bible says, "In everything give thanks," and we are irreligious when we go to our meals as the ox to the manger or the swine to the swill. There is no more opportune time in the experience of childhood to teach your children the dependence upon the Creator than at mealtime, when the mother and little ones bow their heads and the earthly father sends up the expression of a grateful heart to the Heavenly Father for his beneficent hand that blesses the earth with the necessities of life.

But perhaps the most beautiful and impressive of all sacred services are the evening devotions. Families in these strenuous times, like chickens, just fly up to roost, or, like dogs, just lie down. But our grandparents, before retiring, held family prayer, and the spiritual welfare of our rising generation demands that we restore this sacred service at the fireside. At the hour of retiring each evening, gather your family about you, read a scriptural lesson, and give thanks to God for his watch care, his comforts, his providence, and his blessings, through the toils and trials of another day; and as the shadow of night incloses your abode in its sable embrace, so the great arm of God shall enfold you and yours within his bosom. And that spot is holy ground where, at the mother's knee, kneels the little ones and breathes that little nursery prayer, no one knows how old:

"Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep; If I should die before I wake, I pray thee, Lord, my soul to take."

Ah, those evening devotions! They are the blood upon the doorposts of the ancient Israelites which the avenging angel of divine wrath shall see, and, as of old, shall "pass over you."

It is a home of beautiful and interesting things. Those bright little eyes are always looking, and those sharp little ears are always listening, and it is no wonder they are cross and fretful when they look day after day on bare, black walls and hear only the dull tread of heavy feet on rough oaken floors. Have something in your home to entertain the eye, to charm the ear, and to interest the mind.

Fill your home with books. I have often heard my father tell of a custom in a home where he spent a portion of his boyhood. The family was a large one, and after the evening meal was over and the dishes were cleared away, the same table from which they had eaten was covered with all kinds of good literature-books, magazines, newspapers, and journals-and from the same board that supplied a repast for the body was served a banquet for the mind. I find those pupils most easily taught at school who are surrounded by abundant reading matter at home, and I am sure that the reading habit, the habit that virtually decides whether the individual shall have a mind enriched with literary wisdom or barren with ignorance, can be formed in no other way.

Adorn the walls of your home with good pictures. Pictures are great molders of character. Count Zinzendorf, the great Moravian preacher, ascribes his conversion to the influence of a picture of the Savior. Late one afternoon he had wandered into a little chapel and began to admire the sacred pictures on its walls. He was attracted to a picture of Jesus in Gethsemane. On his face was written all the anguish of that lonely hour, and below the likeness read an impressive question: "I did so much for you; what have you done for me?" It pricked his heart, and he resolved as he passed out that for the great price of suffering his Master had paid to redeem his soul, he would slightly repay him by giving his life to his service. Those pictures in your home, besides the power to delight the eye, may be only one example showing how silently, day by day, the environment of the home is shaping the growing life of your child.

Have music in your home. (Note that I say "home.") A great English writer has said that pure music is the only (worldly) enjoyment in which we may indulge without harmful excess. Music is the language of the soul. Sacred chords drive out every dull care and evil thought from the fireside. Have the children learn to sing. No home is wholly unhappy whose inmates sing. Give me the woman who sings as she works-she has the spirit of an angel; but beware of the woman who can, but never, sings. Verily, she "hath a devil."

Flood your home with pretty and profitable things. Do not wait for birthdays to buy presents for your wife and children. Get them something every time you go to town.

UF TETTERINE

Jewish and Christian Tithing.

Under the ancient Jewish economy tithing was regulated by a code of laws which were amplified and made still more complex by the rabbis; but under Christianity the supreme law of love has been substituted and is applicable to the tithing problem quite as well as to others. We are to give according as God has "prospered us," and from a generous and loving heart. One who wishes to tithe his estate should reckon on the increase in value. or number, or whatever form his available assets may assume, excluding, of course, the necessary expenses of conducting his business. As to household expenses, these are elastic, and one's domestic and personal expenditures are liable to increase with every augmentation of income, such increase frequently being one of extravagance rather than of necessity. It is quite conceivable that the whole income might be thus swallowed up. But if we act conscientiously, we will not "rob God" by multiplying our expenditures until nothing is left for his work. "The liberal soul shall be made fat," and this especially applies to the character of our gifts to God's work. While we are not to devote to that work money which we may rightfully owe to our creditors, we can exercise self-denial in many things, so that our tithable "increase"-or, if no increase, then our surplus over and above all proper expenses-may be such as to assure a liberal gift to the cause of religion.—Christian Herald.

Can People Be Saved Out of the Church?

BY T. A. PHILLIPS.

From some expressions we often hear concerning the church, we would think it a nonessential thing. How often we hear such statements as: "O, the church does not save; Christ saves!" Now, it is true that the church does not save. But the question is: When and where does Christ save? Does he save in his body or out of his body?

The church is Christ's body (Eph. 1: 23); and Paul says that Christ is "the Savior of the body" (Eph. 5: 23). The very fact that he says "he is the Savior of the body" implies that he will not save those who are out of the body. Again, we are reconciled unto God "in one body." (Eph. 2: 16.) But the body is the church; therefore we are reconciled to God in the church. Now, inasmuch as Christ and the church are one, we cannot be in Christ and not be in the church. To argue otherwise would be to say that they are not one; but Paul says they are one. (Eph. 5: 31, 32.)

Therefore, the same process that makes one a Christian adds him to the church. This truth is the very best reason why the Bible says nothing about "joining the church." No one joined the church in the apostles' days, for the simple reason that when people obeyed the gospel the Lord added them to the church. (Acts 2: 47.) He added to the church "such as should be saved;" and we are told that he saves "them that obey him." (Heb. 5: 9.) Therefore, God adds all to the church who obey his word. (Mark 16: 15, 16; Acts 2: 36-38.)

The church was purchased with God's own blood. (Acts 20: 28.) Is not the blood essential to salvation? Then, how can people think they can go to heaven and not belong to the only institution that God has purchased with his blood?

In Ex. 20: 24, God says: "In all places where I record my name I will come unto thee, and I will bless thee." In the new covenant God has recorded his name in his house (Isa. 56: 5), which is the church (1 Tim. 3: 15). Therefore, for God to bless us, we must be in the church.

To be a child of God, we must be led by his Spirit. (Rom. 8: 14.) But "by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body," or church. (1 Cor. 12: 13.) Therefore, we cannot be led by the Spirit of God and remain out of the church.

The word "church" comes from the Greek "ekklesia" and means "the called out." Paul says we are called by the gospel. (2 Thess. 2: 14.) Therefore all who obey the gospel belong to the church—have been called out, separated from the world, and we must obey the gospel to be saved. (2 Thess. 1: 7-9.)

My dear reader, have you been called out from the world? If not, will you hear and obey his call? There is no other way, and the blessed invitation is for all.

"The History of the Fall and Dissolution of Christendom."

BY DR. J. E. THOMPSON.

The following notice of my book was clippped from the Book News Monthly, of Philadelphia:

"The History of the Fall and Dissolution of Christendom." By Dr.J. E. Thompson. The McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

The author feels that he has found the key to the Apocalypse and that he can with certainty predict that we are near the end of the present era, which has lasted for almost two thousand years; that two more eras are to set in before the coming of Christ and fulfillment of all prophecies. The author is either entirely ignorant of the results of modern biblical scholarship or else ignores them entirely.

The above is incorrect in almost every statement.

First, the key used by the author to read the Apocalypse is to interpret the Bible by the Bible and to translate figurative words and symbols by their use in the Bible. This is not new as a theory, but may be in practice.

Secondly, the author does not believe that he or any one else can "with certainty predict that we are near the end of the present era," but states time and again in his book that no one can tell when this will be.

Thirdly, "that two more eras are to set in before the coming of Christ." The book has no such statement or even thought in it, but it plainly shows that the prophecies foretell the coming of Christ at the end of the Christian era and the dissolution of Christendom. The scribe who hands out the above mental squint cannot be a superior judge of biblical scholarship or anything else that requires mental apprehension. The author of "The History of the Fall and Dissolution of Christendom" was not seeking to copy after or learn anything from what is erroneously called "modern biblical scholarship;" for its results, as far as his researches have carried him, show him nothing but mutilated scripture and infidelity. The book in question was written to show what the Apocalypse contains, and, therefore, not "the results of modern biblical scholarship."

The phrase, "modern biblical scholarship," as used above, no doubt refers to men whom our book reviewer regards as having attained to a height of biblical knowledge. Those who claim such knowledge, according to my observation, have not got it. The author of "The History of the Fall and Dissolution of Christendom," anticipating opposition from that source, sent out many thousand circulars when the book first came out, a few months ago, in which he made a fair, detailed statement of an offer to pay one hundred dollars reward to any one who would find a misplaced scene

DOCTOR SAYS NUXATED IRON WILL INCREASE STRENGTH of DELICATE PEOPLE IN TWO WEEKS TIME

In many instances says City Physician persons on have suffered for years without knowing what are not made them feel tired, listless and run-down when their real trouble was lack of Iron in of the blood—how to tell.

If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied a multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleen at night, others are sleep; and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases, it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old fron to put color in your cheeks and good, sound, healthy fiesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and one of the best blood builders in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the feeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

Manufacturer's Note: Nuxated Iron which is recom-

Manufacturer's Note: Nuxated Iron which is recommended above is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make then black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser, or they will refund the money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

in the book, as to whether such scene was a past or future event. That offer is still open. A number of books have been ordered from far and near with a few of taking down the one hundred dollars, but so far no one has attempted it. Yet the book places every scene in the Apocalypse in the future, as well as the formation and fulfillment of the prophecy of the metallic image of Daniel and quite a number of other scenes in that book. We would be glad to hear from any one who feels able to show such error.

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You —Drink Lots of Water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back, or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive. It cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

At the beginning of a new year it is fitting that one should total up one's resources. Take an inventory of your physical, mental, and moral possessions. Do not bother about your finances. They will be secure, provided you are well equipped physically and mentally.

Whatever may have been your status during the past year, resolve that you will improve it this coming year. Your body should throb and thrill with the superb energies that come with health.

See that this year brings you all that should be yours. Whatever may have been your shortcomings in the past, turn into a new path now. Imbibe the spirit of determination.

"My life shall be a power. I will dominate myself. I will master my weaknesses. I will shun bad habits.'

Make these statements to yourself over and over again. Repeat them a hundred—a thousand times; and act up to your affirmations.

By merely saying, "I am strong," you cannot become strong. But by saying, "I am going to work for strength," you impress the idea upon your mind so forcibly that the thought results in action; and action always counts for something.

Though each human atom is a product largely of inheritance, one is influenced tremendously by environment, by the thoughts and influences with which one comes in daily contact.

We are creatures of habit. We are made or broken by these daily habits Invalidism is largely the result of habit. Weakness is the outgrowth of habits. Habit makes a strong man.

Therefore it is well to carefully investigate your habits. Are they good, bad, or indifferent? Are they making you stronger or weaker each day?

Most of us imagine that we are full grown as soon as we reach adult age. There was never a greater error.

We may stop growing in stature. but we should continue to develop even physically. We should become stronger in body up to, at least, the age of thirty.

The mind should continue to grow as long as life lasts, and a clean, strong body is unquestionably of great service in promoting such growth.

Do you want to make the most of your life?

Recognize the importance of maintaining your physical forces at highwater mark. Develop the tolerant spirit. Realize the brotherhood of mankind. Fill your life with activity to such an extent that you have no time or energy to spare for personal enmities.

Make your brain and your body your servants. Only when you have done this can you live the life of achievement. With your brain keen, your body throbbing with the forces of life, and with the ambition and enthusiasm of youth as an inspiration at all times, regardless of your age, you are capable of attaining whatever end may be the goal of your desire.-Bernard Macfadden, in Physical Culture.

The Lure of Brotherhood.

"Brotherhood" is a most appealing word. I dare say there are more organizations called "brotherhoods," and they are more popular, than any other kind in the world. This is not strange when we reflect how the word "brother" stirs and softens the deepest emotions of the human heart. It is a family word, and in its first and literal application speaks of the tender affection which children of the same father and mother normally have for each other. Of course, there are some exceptional cases. There are some disappointing relationships in which the milk of human kindness is soured, and where we should naturally expect brotherly love there is unnatural hatred. Yet the normal feeling is so usually found that it has become figurative for any relationship where it seems natural to expect a brotherly affection. It is in common use among many societies and organizations even when the society has no object in view beyond the attainment of some temporal advantage. For instance, the members of a cooperative or insurance society quite frequently address each other as brothers. There is a lure about the term "brotherhood" which is contagious and irresistible. Men of every rank and social distinction are attracted to it. The great philosophers and explorers have their various societies. Even the hoboes of the country, which represent our most floating population, can boast of a brotherhood.

Things That Make the World a Neighborhood.

Doubtless more is said and written to-day about the "brotherhood of man" than ever before. Modern business methods are such as call attention to this great relationship. When the prices of stocks and bonds on the New York Exchange show a violent fluctuation, it not only means that Wall Street is agitated, but it means also that the fortunes of people all over the country are enhanced or imperiled. When a man or a syndicate corners the grain market, he endangers the living welfare of thousands. The great war is teaching the lesson of the brotherhood of man. It has brought the prince down to the poor man, and may I not add that it is teaching the poor man how to become a prince? It seems bewildering to be told, yet it is true, that boarding schools in Bolivia and Chile are forced to close part of their work, and their very existence is imperiled by the war. Such crises call attention to the interlocking of interests which has gone on since steam and electricity "made the world a neighborhood." It is the twentieth century's comments on the words of the Scriptures, "No man liveth unto himself."

An Aspiration for Ages.

The notion of men and women not of the same parentage forming a brotherhood is not a new idea by any means. For hundreds of years it has been the aspiration of the wisest and best of our race that men may truly become brothers throughout the wide world. It is true that all the forms of brotherhood referred to in modern speech are in the Bible. The notion of national brotherhood is found in the Bible. The Jews addressed each other as brother in this sense. Stephen, speaking before the council at Jerusalem, called its members "brethren," thus appealing to their affections as men of the same race. Furthermore, the type or literal form of brotherhood is found in the Bible. We read of "James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother." The idea of men being brothers because they have the same Creator is there. In his memorable address at Mars' Hill, Paul told his hearers that God "made of one every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth," and he further reminded them of what one of their own poets had said along the same line: "For we are also his offspring." The idea of the brotherhood of man has inspired some of the best things ever written by our poets. It is quaintly expressed by the Scotch bard in the well-known lines:

For a' that and a' that,
It's coming yet, for a' that,
That man to man, the warld o'er,
Shall brothers be for a' that.

We think, too, in this connection, of James Russell Lowell's description:

Where'er a single slave doth pine,
Where'er one man may help another,
Thank God for such a birthright, brother,
That spot of earth is thine and mine.
There is the true man's birthplace grand,
His is a world-wide fatherland.

The Christian Brotherhood.

But there is a brotherhood more endearing and more important in its scope and significance to the followers of Christ than any of these I have mentioned. It is a brotherhood concerning which we hear very little, comparatively speaking; and, strangely enough, when we do hear or read something to-day, it is too often by way of disparagement. We hear some one say that "the brotherhood is lax," or "the brotherhood is asleep," or "I am ashamed of the brotherhood," instead of speaking words of encouragement and praise. I have known of a few misguided souls who claimed to be Christians, yet who objected to being called "Brother" or "Sister," and who never used these terms in addressing others. I am immediately reminded of those who are ashamed to acknowledge their brothers and sisters in the flesh. Said Bolton Hall: "I looked at my brother with the microscope of criticism, and I said: 'How coarse my brother is!' I looked at him with the telescope of scorn, and I said: 'How small my brother is!' Then I looked in the mirror of truth, and I said: 'How like me my brother is!'" Our attitude toward the brotherhood, which is just another way of saying our attitude toward ourselves, should not be one of carping criticism, but one of sympathetic and hopeful endeavor. Whatever we may think or say about the Christian brotherhood, the fact remains that Jesus intended that this should be the most important of all earthly relationships; and to the extent that we "throw cold water" upon it and belittle its meaning, to that extent do we displease the Master. The Christian brotherhood transcends every other brotherhood in importance because of its supernatural foundation called the "new birth." This thought is clearly contained in 1 John 5: 1: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is begotten of God: and whosoever loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of hlm." This passage means that every one who is thus born of God loves God as his Father, and loves all those who have also been born of God. These are in the New Testament called "the brethren" or "the brotherhood." As a matter of fact, the term "the brotherhood" appears just once in the New Testament-in Pet. 2: 17, where we read: "Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Honor the king." But wherever we find in the New Testament the term "brother" or "sister" or "brethren" used to designate the relation to Christ, there the "Christian brotherhood" is implied.

On one occasion the mother of Jesus and his brethren, including both sexes, brothers and sisters, sought him. With a sweep of his hand toward his disciples, Jesus indicated that thenceforth his disciples, those who believed on him and were seeking to do the will of the Father, whether male or female, should be considered as his brother or sister or even his mother. Thus did Jesus Christ not only sanction, but glorify, the Christian brotherhood.

The Eldership.

BY J. PERRY HODGE.

"The elders [presbuteros] which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder [sumpresbuteros], and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed: Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." (1 Pet. 5: 1-4.)

The word from which "elder" is taken means an aged If language means anything, the above is ample authority for the aged persons of any congregation to feed the flock of God, taking the oversight thereof, not as bosses, lording it over God's heritage, but as examples to the flock. But some one may inquire: "Do not these aged persons have to be appointed before entering upon these duties?" Not if the above language is to be counted as meaning what it says. "But," says some one else, "did not Paul and Barnabas ordain or appoint elders in every church (Acts 14: 23), and was not Titus left in Crete by Paul to ordain or appoint elders in every city (Tit, 1: 5)?" Certainly they were; but neither Paul and Barnabas nor Titus ordained anybody to be elders. The elders were there, and they were appointed, not to be elders, but to the work that they as elders were qualified for doing. The meaning of the word as used at Tit. 1: 5 is to place, or set down-that is, the elders were assigned to the place for which they were fitted, and set down, or established, in that place to which they were assigned, like persons who are already teachers are assigned to their places in certain schools and established in those places to which they have been assigned. The word at Acts 14: 23 means to elect by stretching out the hand. But who was thus elected? Why, elders, of course, and not men to be made elders. They were elders already.

Did not the appointment make officers of them? No. the work a man does is his office. If these aged men were feeding the flock of God, taking the oversight thereof, as Peter exhorts, their office was feeders of a flock (poimen). or shepherds, and they as pastors (poimen), feeders of a flock, or shepherds, were so by reason of the work they were doing, and not by reason of any assignment or appointment. They were as surely pastors (pointen), feeders of a flock, or shepherds, before appointment, as Paul and Barnabas were apostles, or evangelists, before they were appointed. The appointment of Paul and Barnabas (Acts 13: 1-3) was not to make evangelists or preachers of them at all; they were that already; but it was merely to assign them to the work their qualifications had fitted them fornamely, that of going to the Gentiles and preaching Christ to them. The office of an elder is not that of being an elder; he is an elder by reason of his agedness; but his office, if he is mindful of Peter's exhortation, is that of a feeder of a flock, the flock of God, as a shepherd or overseer, and he is, or ought to be, this without constraint or appointment, and without having to be hired or in any way rewarded. (1 Pet. 5: 1-4.)

But you want to know what is the use of appointing elders, do you? Well, in the days of the apostles, when men and women heard the gospel and were baptized, and the fact became known to the apostles, they sent some of their number to the city or place where these new disciples were, in order that by the laying on of hands they might receive the Holy Ghost. (Acts 8: 12-17.) The Holy Ghost conferred a gift, for the promise was to all, as many as the Lord God might call (Acts 2: 38, 39), and the gifts of the Holy Ghost differed. "But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to an other divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues." (1 Cor. 12: 7-10.) Now, in the same way that the Spirit separated Paul and Barnabas to the work unto which they had been called (Acts 13: 1-3), so the Spirit divided to every man severally as he willed (1 Cor. 12: 11). Some were as feet to the body, some as hands, some as ears, some as eyes, some as the nose, some as the mouth, and so on. (1 Cor. 12: 12-27.) Thus, on account of the gifts of the Holy Ghost differing as they did, each man by these diversities of gifts separated by the Holy Ghost, not to different works, but to different parts of the same work, and thus "hath God set the menbers every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him (1 Cor. 12: 18)-" first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers" (verse 28). The order in which God set teachers in the church was: Apostles; prophets; evangelists; pastors (poimen), feeders of the flock of God as shepherds or overseers, and teachers. (Eph. 4: 11.) Now, since the appointment of Paul and Barnabas was not to make evangelists of them, since they were that already, neither is the appointment of elders to make feeders of the flock of God as shepherds and overseers of them, because, if they have heeded Peter's exhortation, they are that already; but their appointment is merely for the purpose of separating them for the work whereunto the Holy Ghost by the gift conferred has called them (Acts 13: 1-3), and determines whether an elder who is already a feeder of the flock of God shall be as a foot, a hand, an ear, an eye, the nose, or the mouth in the body. Each of these offices may be employed in the feeding of the body. and every one is very important in its respective place. All, however, whether foot, hand, ear, eye, nose, or mouth, is engaged in the general work or office of feeding the body and looking out for the welfare of it in its every relation.

But if the aged men are feeding the flock of God as shepherds, taking the oversight thereof, why appoint them or assign them to certain places in the church? Because all cannot be apostles, prophets, teachers, workers of miracles, healers, speakers with tongues, or interpreters of tongues. (1 Cor. 12: 29, 30.) Therefore, since all cannot with profit to the church be the same thing in the church, each should be assigned to the place in the church where he can do the most good. A man can always do the most good in that place for which his qualifications fit him, and, therefore, whether the man himself had rather be placed in a more honorable place should not be the rule for his appointment or assignment, but he should be assigned to that place in which he can do most good for the church.

Is it not an office to be an elder? Certainly not; it is a condition in life to be an aged person if one lives long enough. Yes, but were not the elders officers? Certainly those of them who were heeding Peter's exhortation were officers. One's office is what he does; and if they were feeding the flock of God as shepherds, taking the oversight thereof, their office was that of feeders of the flock of God, as overseers thereof. Suppose a young man has been a member of the congregation ten years and an aged person has just come in; who is the elder of the two? The elder (presbuteros) is the aged person. Should be be appointed? Certainly not, if he is a novice or new member. But suppose he heeds Peter's exhortation to feed the flock, taking the oversight thereof? In that case, if he is a feeder of the flock of God as a shepherd, taking the oversight thereof, he, being an elder and having ability as a feeder of the flock of God, should certainly be assigned to his place, the same as other elders who are feeders of the flock of God. But suppose his feeding is not good sound food for the flock? Then, he is not heeding Peter's exhortation, although he may be honestly doing the best at it he can; and since he, instead of feeding the flock, is poisoning them on account of being unskilled in the word of God, he is a novice and should not be appointed till he has been instructed in "the way of the Lord more perfectly." The qualifications of an elder is that he be sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, sound in charity, or love, and sound in patience (Tit. 2: 2), and until an aged man fills this measure he is a novice; if not in point of time he has been a member, he is in point of knowledge of what it takes to be a Christian in the

Were not elders appointed to be bishops? If so, there is no account of it. Were there not bishops and deacons in the church of Philippi? Yes. (Phil. 1: 1.) Well, how did they become bishops and deacons, if they were not made so by appointment? In Paul's address to the elders of the church at Ephesus, he charged them to take heed unto themselves, and to all the flock over which the Holy Ghost had made them overseers to feed the church. (Acts 20: 11-28.) How did the Holy Ghost make them overseers? First, by exhorting them to take the oversight over the flock of God by the mouth of Peter (1 Pet. 5: 1-3), and, second, by laying down the qualifications by which they could measure themselves for that office (1 Tim. 3: 1-7). Are not the qualifications at 1 Tim. 3: 1-7 the qualifications of an elder? No; they are the qualifications of a bishop. A man may be an elder and not be a bishop, but no one may be a bishop who is not also an elder. Was not Titus restricted, in his appointment of elders, to such as had attained these qualifications? He was. The language of his commission was: "And ordain [appoint] elders in every city, as I had appointed thee: if any be blameless, the husband of one wife, having faithful children not accused of riot or unruly. For a bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God; not self-willed, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre; but a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate; holding fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers, For there are many unruly and vain talkers and deceivers, specially they of the circumcision: whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake." (Tit. 1: 5-11.)

If Titus was restricted in his appointment of elders to such as had acquired the qualifications of a bishop, were not all whom he appointed "bishops?" They were. Then are all elders who heed Peter's exhortation to feed the flock of God, taking the oversight thereof, "bishops?" They are, if they have attained to the qualifications required by the Holy Ghost for that office; and when such are up to standard they are stewards of God—that is, they are managers of his household, or family. All elders who have not yet attained to this measure, who heed Peter's exhortation to feed the flock, taking the oversight thereof, have the same authority—that is, the authority of Peter's charge to them-that they had before. But Paul says: "Let the elders that rule well [that is, those who have attained to the qualifications required] be counted worthy of double honor, especially those who labor in the word and doctrine." (1 Tim. 5: 17.) Therefore it is becoming in saints that due deference be given to those who by their qualifications have acquired the rule over them (Heb. 13: 7), and that they obey them (Heb. 13: 17), saluting them (Heb. 13: 24). In conclusion, all elders are exhorted to feed the flock of God. Such of them as attain to the qualifications laid down as a standard should be appointed or assigned to their own proper places in the church, and all others should continue to feed the flock under the management of those who have by their qualifications acquired the rule over them, and as fast as they attain to the standard they, too, should be appointed or assigned to their places. There would be no friction nor schism in the body or church if this rule were followed.

Primitive Christianity in Southwest Mississippi.

BY C. NETTERVILLE.

By "Southwest Mississippi" I mean that portion of the State south of Vicksburg and west of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroad. Before the Civil War primitive Christianity was on a very good footing in this section of the State. If my information is correct, no effort had been made prior to that time toward planting a congregation in the city of Vicksburg, but quite a good start toward building up in the country south of this city had been made. A decided preference was shown toward country locations over the towns and cities. This was due, I think, to causes other than prejudice against the urban population. Doubtless it was due to the fact that decidedly the best class of our population at that time resided in the country. However that may be, the fact remains that our best efforts were put forth in building up in the country. Quite an auspicious beginning had been made in Wilkinson County, where at one time, if my memory is not at fault, a religious paper was published by our brethren; and when the war began, we had quite a nice start in the educational line, with a male and a female academy in operation. Besides this, we had several strong congregations in this section of the State which had enjoyed the benefits of one or more visits by Mr. Campbell and other men of ability. But when that besom of destruction, the Civil War, had swept over our fair land, this work, like every industry in this country, lay in ruins, and, when the dove of peace found a resting place in our stricken land, a new start had to be made. Handicapped, as we were, by poverty, on the one hand, and prejudice, on the other, the work was hard and the progress slow. However, some progress was made as the years went by, and in the course of time we had a membership in this country not to be ashamed of. But when the tide of innovation set Southward, it swept relentlessly onward and almost completely overwhelmed the congregations that had been established here. At this writing I know of but one congregation regularly organized and at work in all this country-my home congregation. Yet all is not lost. Scattered over this country are brethren true and faithful, who have not bowed, and who will not bow, the knee to Baal; and in a number of places in the country and in one or two of the towns can be found a good nucleus on which a congregation can be built. My object in writing this is to stir up an interest in this work, if possible, that we may reclaim this lost ground to the cause of primitive Christianity. We have brethren in different parts of the South who have labored in this field and know the possibilities here and feel a keen interest in this work. I am taking this method of acquainting them with present conditions and needs, as well as the outlook for the future of this work. Circumstances have compelled me to change my place of abode, but I do not expect to lose interest in this work. In this I am not influenced solely by personal feeling. I think it a fruitful field to work in, and indulge a hope of seeing the work done that is necessary to reclaim this lost ground for the Master.

Work done here in the right way would probably be self-sustaining, except in the towns. There is a small body of believers in Vicksburg who have kept up the work for a number of years, but they are not aggressive enough and seem to have "slept on their rights"—on their opportunity to occupy the land, at least. Furthermore, within the last few years the "digressives" have taken possession of a considerable portion of it, built a house thereon, and are building up a congregation that will be a great obstacle in the way of building up the Master's kingdom in that city. Yet the right man put there and adequately supported might redeem the situation.

Natchez is a strategic point and is worth a big effort; but what the chances are for a successful work there, I cannot say. We have a few sisters who have been very zealous and earnest in their efforts to build up there. Whatever work is done there will need to be well safeguarded, as there are quite a number of "digressives" there; and that denomination watches closely for opportunities to capture and divert to their uses work done by us. Already one or two efforts have been made to capture that place. Since I left Mississippi, Brother J. P. Lowery, of Senatobia, has held a few weeks' meeting there, with what results I have not been apprised.

Several years ago Brother John T. Smithson did some preaching in Woodville, which paved the way for the establishment of a congregation in that town. At the time we were not able to follow up this work by building a house and putting the membership to work for the Lord, and the "digressives" immediately took possession. Thus our work was lost temporarily, at least. In this town, as in all the communities where congregations have existed in the past, there are brethren who are willing to take hold of anything tangible in the way of work for the Lord; and many of those who have been led astray by these innovators have yielded to their seductive persuasions simply because of their ignorance of the teachings of the Bible. Such is the fact relative to a large percentage of those congregations that have departed from the teachings of holy writ. These have a claim on us, and it is our duty to teach them "the way of the Lord more perfectly."

My opinion is that this digressive movement has reached that stage where a reaction is due. It seems to me that the pendulum has reached the limit of its are and must soon swing back. At least, I am constrained to think that the time has come to strike a heavy blow for the Master's cause in Southwest Mississippi. The brethren there think that a change in their way of working is a necessity, and they are not encouraging the work of transient evangelists. A strong man is wanted who is willing to cast his lot with them. A man who is able and willing to do the work required, I am sure, would be supported while doing it. They have two young men (Nashville Bible School boys) and an older brother who can teach in public, but they are not giving their whole time to preaching, each being engaged in a breadwinning occupation; but they can and will greatly help in carrying on the work. Now, brethren, if any of you who know this field think that you can assist these brethren in finding a man suited to this work, or if any of you who read this think you would be willing to enter this field, please write to C. T. Netterville, Wilkinson, Miss., or to the writer, 3021 Knight Street, Dallas, Texas.

Truth gains more even by the errors of one who, with due study and preparation, thinks for himself, than by the true opinions of those who only hold them because they do not suffer themselves to think.—John Stuart Mill.

"For their sakes"—that is the principle of service; "1 sanctify myself"—that is the education of the individual; and in the giving of a consecrated individual for the sake of an unconsecrated world the desire of Jesus Christ, even for himself, is fulfilled.—Susan E. Blow.

When we think of the stream of words ever flowing from our lips, and how few grains of gold that stream has brought down amid all its sand, and how seldom Christ's name has been spoken by us to hearts that heed him not nor know him, the exhortation, "Let your speech be always with grace," becomes an indictment as truly as a command.—A. Maclaren

Prayer has, by God's covenant of mercy, a spiritual and supernatural blessing. It draws down, as it were, to your aid, Him who proceedeth from the Father and the Son—the Holy Spirit of God and of Christ, the Comforter and Guide of believing souls. Indeed, the very words of the precept which point out prayer as so sure a remedy point out also that it is not always, nor for the most part, an immediate remedy for the evils of life.—John Keble.

Training Little Children

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association. New York, N. Y.)

Article 6.

Every young mother should memorize a few of the songs and finger plays and study the explanations, mottoes, and pictures in Fræbel's "Mother Play," so that she may begin to use them in her home long before the kindergarten age. I have used them and find that they teach the virtues which later it is so hard to instill, for, as Freebel says: "Mother, you can now do with a touch as light as a feather what you cannot later accomplish with the pressure of a hundredweight."

I have also found that the songs and plays fill the child's heart with joy and contentment, entertain him immensely, and supply his imagination with wholesome food. If the mother has memorized some of the songs, she can sing or eroon them while busy about her household tasks, and in this way can often direct her child's thoughts and play, with definite aims in view. Her walks or rides with the children may also be made occasions for such play.

To illustrate how Freebel's philosophy helps the mother to train her child, let us consider first the pat-a-cake play. You smile and say: "Why, all mothers play pat-a-cake with their babies; that is nothing new." Yes, mothers have played pat-a-cake for ages and ages; but if they want to know why they play it, let them turn to Freebel, who points out that the reason the little game is so widely known is because "simple mother wit never fails to link the initial activities of the child with the everyday life about him," He also says: "The bread or, better still, the little cake which the child likes so well, he receives from his mother; the mother in turn receives it from the baker. So far, so good. We have found two links in the great chain of life and service. Let us beware, however, of making the child feel that these links complete the chain. The baker can bake no cake if the miller grinds no meal; the miller can grind no meal if the farmer brings him no grain; the farmer can bring no grain if his field yields no crop; the field can yield no crop if the forces of nature fail to work together to produce it; the forces of nature could not conspire together were it not for the all-wise and beneficent Power who incites them to their predetermined ends."

It is because we mothers have felt, perhaps dimly and unconsciously, the lesson which the pat-a-cake play teaches of dependence on one another and the gratitude each owes to all that we have played this little game from ancient times.

I start to play pat-a-cake with my baby when he is six months old. It affords him great satisfaction to exercise his arms and to direct his movements so that both little, dimpled hands meet together. When he is about eighteen months or two years old, I begin to show him the picture of pat-a-cake found in Frœbel's "Mother Play." Through this means I gradually and easily lead him to see that "for his bread he owes thanks not only to his mother, to the baker, to the miller, to the farmer, but also, and most of all, to the Heavenly Father, who, through the instrumentality of dew and rain, sunshine and darkness, winter and summer, causes the earth to bring forth the grain."

It is only after having studied the picture thoroughly and read the chapter on pat-a-cake in the "Mottoes and Commentaries" and committed to memory the verses and tune in the "Songs and Music" of Frebel's "Mother Play" that I am ready to teach pat-a-cake to my baby; and as I have shown, I do not teach it all at once, but refer to it again and again, perhaps when we are out working in the garden on a sunny day or in the house watching the rain. When my child is old enough to be interested in such things, we go into a bakery shop and, to the astonishment of the baker, ask if we may see his ovens. We often pass a mill, and I tell my child that this is the place where the farmer brings his grain. Thus the lesson of pat-a-cake goes on for a long time before it is first played in babyhood. It teaches us to be ever thankful, and baby learns to say: "Thank you, dear mamma;" "Thank you, dear baker;" "Thank you, dear God."

There are many other songs and games in Fræbel's "Mother Play" which I give to my children long before the kindergarten age. In all of these they take the greatest delight. I begin early to sing the songs and play the finger games which nourish the instinct of love for the members of the family and affection for animals.

THE FAMILY-MOTHER SONG FOR TEACHING AFFECTION.

This is the mother, so busy at home, Who loves her dear children, whatever may come. This is the father, so brave and so strong, Who works for his family all the day long. This is the brother, who'll soon be a man; He helps his good mother as much as he can. This is the sister, so gentle and mild, Who plays that the dolly is her little child. This is the baby, all dimpled and sweet; How soft his wee hands and his chubby pink feet! Father and mother and children so dear, Together you see them-one family here (Emile Poulsson.)

The active child of four or five instinctively desires to measure himself against children of his own age; and If deprived of the opportunity to do this, he loses much of what is necessary for his highest and best development. Through contact with each other, children learn to wait their turn and to be considerate in many other ways.

Moreover, the child wants to make things; and although the mother can play little songs and games with him while carrying on her household tasks, she cannot always take the time necessary to direct and assist the child in manual occupations. This is one reason why the kindergarten fills a great need. Association with playmates and work with various materials and tools and songs and games are all provided in the kindergarten.

It was because of my study of Fræbelian methods and their successful application to the child below four, and because I realized how impossible it was for me, a busy mother, to meet the growing needs of my children, that I wanted a kindergarten in our town, not only for my little ones, but for all the boys and girls, a number of mothers and fathers became interested in my project. We petitioned our Board of Education and a kindergarten was soon established. It was a success from the very start.

I have grown to believe that the one thing worth aiming at is simplicity of heart and life; that one's relations with others should be direct and not diplomatic; that power leaves a bitter taste in the mouth; that meanness, and hardness, and coldness are the unforgivable sins; that conventionality is the mother of dreariness; that pleasure exists not in virtue of material conditions, but in the joyful heart; that the world is a very interesting and beautiful place; that congenial labor is the secret of happiness. -A. Encouraging.

Christians should find encouragement in the fact that ten States have now ratified the prohibition amendment, South Dakota being the last to vote in favor of this nation-wide movement for the destruction of the liquor traffic. The list is growing rapidly and encouragingly, and it is to be hoped that all the States, before the seven-years' limit has expired, will vote for the destruction of whisky. Let us pray that no State will record its vote in favor of making drunkards and for the continuance of a traffic that destroys manhood and brings untold misery.

o o o "The Finished Mystery."

The "Pastor Russell" interdicted volume called "The Finished Mystery" is being suppressed, and all copies of it are being seized by the United States authorities. Can ada has taken the same action. The book is seditious and pro-German. The "International Bible Students' Association" is said to be responsible for its circulation; and if so, this is another count against these troublers. This book is characterized by the authorities as violating the espionage act, and those who possess it are liable to arrest. This is a time for people to be good citizens and Christians above suspicion.

The above is clipped from the Herald and Presbyter, and doubtless will be read with much interest by our readers. The teaching of Russell does not tend to encourage men to obey the gospel, but leads them rather not to obey it by inducing them to believe that men will have a chance after death. He preached another gospel than that which Paul preached; and the man that does so, the anathemas of heaven rest upon them.

o o o Irreverence.

All must freely admit that there is a flippancy and an irreverence about holy things which should not be encouraged. Christians in their conversation, and even in their prayers, exhibit a familiarity with the Almighty that borders on the blasphemous. The associate editor of the Western Recorder fittingly writes on this subject as follows:

One of the greatest needs of this age is the developing of a spirit of reverence for God and divine things. Many people, in their prayers, address God with that flippant familiarity with which they would speak to the stable boy or order their meals in a restaurant. They say: "Now, Lord, I want this and I don't want that." And: "Now, Lord, you have my permission to do so and so, but don't be slow about it." Some even go so far as to call on God to "damn our enemies." Such prayers are not only irreverent, but positively blasphemous. "Thou shalt reverence the Lord thy God." O O

Before the Boys Come Back.

The Literary Digest tells of a Scotch clergyman, Lauchlen McLean Watt, of St. Stephen's Church, Edinburgh, who commands that the people put their houses in order before the boys come back. He was chaplain of the Black Watch and the Gordon Highlanders Divisions and went through some of the most terrible battles in France with these battalions, and saw both commands cut virtually to pieces. At a supper of the Canadian Club in New York City, the press reports him as saying: "What are you religious men going to do when the boys come home—those boys who have missed death, but who have come so close to the eternal mystery? Those boys and we chaplains are tired of your squabbles in the name of Jesus Christ. We are not going to tolerate longer the old divisions between men and the old fights between sects which have divided communities. In death and facing death there is no difference as to religion. We leave it to God to sort them out as they fall battling for those glorious liberties which he gave to all men."

The above clearly demonstrates that when men come to die they look to the pure and simple religion of the Lord Jesus Christ, and not to denominationalism, for their salvation. It emphasizes the position that Christians have been contending for—that is, that there should be but one body of the Lord Jesus Christ, and that Christians should not contend over theories and personal opinions, but should be satisfied to take the word of the Lord as their guide. I am sure that when we all get up yonder to the great judgment bar of God the question will never be asked: "To what denomination did you belong?" But our eternal destiny will be suspended on whether we have done or not done the will of the Lord.

This clergyman, who has been in many bloody battles, expresses in his own way what he thinks of the religion of the men at the front. It is not my purpose to indorse or to criticize his view of their religion, but to emphasize the thought that the world is beginning to realize that its need is Christianity and not denominationalism. According to the reporter, he further says: "I want to say to you that in the trenches and camps you will not find any plaster saints. Thank God for that. Sloppy religion is all dropped into the Channel as the boys are crossing. You will find true, straight, fearless men, tender and ready to live earnestly, or to die without a grudge even against their enemies. Thank the Lord that is the kind of men the allies have in France."

It is not possible for us to understand the workings of an all-wise Providence in the accomplishment of his purposes, but let us hope and pray that the Lord will bring good out of this terrible and most cruel war. May we not hope that denominationalism will soon fade from the earth and that the Lord's prayer will be answered, when he prayed: "Neither for these only do I pray, but for them also that believe on me through their word; that they may all be one; even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us: that the world may believe that thou didst send me." (John 17: 20, 21.) We should not conclude that the church of Christ has failed and that there is not a great work to do. Even men of the world are now looking to the church as never before and saying with decided conviction that upon the church depends the outcome of this war. Whether this be true or false, it is certainly undeniably true that the church has a great work and influence at home in maintaining the morale of the people and in helping them support the great benevolent and religious work for the health and happiness of mankind.

It is also true that the churches have labored more to uphold denominationalism than to maintain the religion of Christ in its purity, and it may be that in a measure the failure of the Christian ministry to emphasize the absolute necessity of obeying the commands of God has been the cause of the war. If Christians had persistently exalted the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ, and had commanded that kings, princes, and potentates all alike bow to the authority of Prince Immanuel, it is probable this war would never have happened.

It is gratifying to know that in a terrible crisis like this the world is looking to the Lord Jesus Christ through the church for salvation. Christ is certainly the last and sure support in such trials.

India's Prayer in Song.

BY W. HUME M'HENRY AND S. O. MARTIN,

The Lord of glory cometh,
With all his angels bright;
Then be ye ready for him,
Before the coming night.

The light of day is dawning
For those who love his name;
Then why neglect the fallen?
To save them Jesus came.

Three hundred thirty million
Dumb idols are all vain;
They ne'er can save a sinner
From all his guilty stain.

Why stand ye idly waiting?
His coming draweth nigh.
Then help the dying nations
To meet their Lord on high.

From the Ganges' rolling waters, Comes India's call to-day: Come over now and save us— O come, O come, we pray.

O foreign brother, sister, Will you now hear our call, That daily goeth upward, Unto the God of all?

CHORUS.

"From unreal to the real,
From darkness to the light,
From death to life immortal."
Lead us to mansions bright.

This was written in Bendala, India, Aurangabad District, December 27, 1917, while on an evangelistic tour among the native brethren. The words quoted are found in one of the Hindoo sacred books. It may be sung properly to the tune, "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus."

Letter from the Firing Line.

Aurangabad, Deccan, December 22, 1917.—We arrived here at twelve o'clock last night from Satara. We have planned many times to make this tour, but Satan hindered us. Early this morning a small company of Christian soldiers arrived at the bungalow where we are stopping. All seemed very happy to see us. We have just closed a devotional service, in which most of them expressed their gratitude at having us join them, and spoke hopefully of what they believed the Lord would do through our united efforts. We hope to make a tour among all the villages where our brethren reside. In this way we hope by the words of exhortation to confirm them in their faith.

Of course, we would have our brethren in America realize that a people who have been bound with the chain of ignorance for many centuries cannot be expected to become full-fledged saints at once. Those of us who have been more fortunate keenly realize that though the spirit is willing, the flesh is weak; and, like Paul, we oftentimes find ourselves doing that which we would not. If this be true of us, how much truer it must be of people just from heathenism! They have numerous temptations to contend with which we know nothing of, and we cannot appreciate what it means for them to become Christians. There are many things that would discourage one, if he did not realize from reading the New Testament that the early soldiers of the cross met with like conditions. If the apostle to the Gentiles could address the church at Corinth as the sanctified in Christ, called to be saints, then we take courage and press forward, trusting God to give the increase.

In speaking of mission work, both at home and abroad, we hear much about "results." A fatal mistake that many make is that they try to measure results by a standard erected in their own minds-that is, man's work is considered successful or unsuccessful in proportion to the number of baptisms reported. If the foreign missionary does not report scores of baptisms monthly, it is thought that he is not at his post. Likewise, it is regrettable to say that his support is often increased or decreased according to the number of baptisms reported. Just here, there are two fundamental points that should be especially noticed: First, with the true servant of God it is not he who labors, but the grace of God which worketh in him; second, it is not he who gets the results, "but God that giveth the increase." Do you then see the fallacy and the littleness of your standard? Since the results are with God and not with man, whether there be few or many baptized, we know that "our labor is not in vain in the Lord." It is true, we could report many "dips" in water, but we prefer to do a more thorough work by baptizing those whom we have reason to believe are obeying the teaching of the Lord from the heart.

There were eleven baptisms this month. One was by Brother Martin in Bombay, and ten were by the native brethren. We shall write more as our tour progresses.

Financial Report for 1917.

BY S. O. MARTIN.

Since landing in Dehra Dun, U. P., India, on December 28, 1916, having been sent out by the churches of Christ in America, I have received the following amounts, exclusive of passage from America to India, which includes all expenditures for railroad tickets in America and India as well as steamship tickets. However, I think one of Miss Straiton's remittances has been lost, to the amount of five dollars. Up until Mrs. Martin's death, or about the time she became ill, we balanced our book of receipts and found that we had received up to September 4, 1917, $1,371.75; since that date until December 31, $485.92. Total, $1,857.67. Given to us for passage, etc., about $485. Total amount received, $2,342.67.

This may seem a fabulous sum for one missionary to receive, and so it is; but remember that my doctor's bill while ill with fever in Dehra Dun was about $200, my drug bill and store account in general was about $500, and I had two nurses (one day and one night nurse) at about three dollars per day, and my illness was from January 16 to April 1. Remember, also, that the $485 was given, but was spent for passage; thus it is gone. During Mrs. Martin's illness and death considerable expense was incurred; but, in spite of all difficulties and sorrows, I am still, by the grace of God, in the service of the Master, with some funds ahead in case of emergency. Pray for me and be as good as you were last year, and I shall never grumble.

It might be of interest to know that I am having a tombstone erected at Mrs. Martin's grave which will cost considerably, since war prices are charged for everything.

We can all be servants of God wherever our lot is cast, but he gives us different sorts of work, according as he fits us for it and calls us to it.—George Eliot.

The Danger of Apostasy.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Is it possible for a Christian to apostatize and finally be lost? I have been requested to write an article on this subject. In order to clearly understand the subject, we must define that there is salvation from sin, or remission of past sins, and salvation in heaven. Christ commanded his apostles in the great commission as recorded by Matthew: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Mark records this commission as follows: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." The commission as recorded by Luke reads: "Thus it is written, that the Christ should suffer, and rise again from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name unto all the nations, beginning from Jerusalem."

Thus it is seen that, taking the commission as recorded by these three evangelists, in order to enjoy remission of past sins, one must believe, repent, and be baptized. Where Mark puts "shall be saved," Luke inserts

"remission of sins," showing that the salvation that is enjoyed when one is baptized is the remission of past sins. It needs no argument to convince any one that the very moment that one is baptized he is not saved in heaven. The doctrine of "once in grace, always in grace," robs the life of the Christian of all virtue. If, when a man becomes a child of God, it is impossible for him to apostatize and finally be lost, he would not have any feeling of approval when he overcame the world, the flesh, and the devil. Feeling that he was acted upon as a machine and that he was simply carrying out an unalterable law of God, man would be no more than a dummy. He could not possibly have any emotions of approval or disapproval. To him there could be no virtue or vice, no sin or holiness. This of itself is abundantly sufficient to show that the doctrine that it is impossible for a man to fall away and finally be lost is not in harmony with the word of God. The Bible abounds in teaching that encourages the Christian to be watchful, to abstain from the very appearance of evil, to work out his own salvation with fear and trembling. Such admonitions are worthless and senseless in the light of the position that it is impossible to apostatize. We read in 1 Pet. 5: 8, 9: "Be sober, be watchful: your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about seeking whom he may devour: whom withstand steadfast in your faith, knowing that the same sufferings are accomplished in your brethren who are in the world." Such admonitions in which the Bible abounds are wholly unnecessary if it be not possible for the child of God to fall.

The doctrine not only charges this terrible inconsistency upon the wisdom of Jehovah, but it also charges that the devil has been seeking for almost six thousand years to destroy one saint, and yet has failed. Satan is not so lacking in sagacity as to be guilty of continuing a work that has been a failure and must be so long as time shall

The Bible gives us a number of scriptures showing that men have fallen away from grace. The children of Israel were especially elected and were a holy people. Deut. 7: 6 declares: "For thou art a holy people unto Jehovah thy God: Jehovah thy God hath chosen thee to be a people for his own possession, above all peoples that are upon the face of the earth." While Israel was a chosen people, we find, by turning to First Corinthians, tenth chapter, that many of them fell and were finally lost. "With most of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown in the wilderness." They tempted God and were bitten of serpents; they committed fornication and died in one day three and twenty thousand; they murmured and were destroyed of the destroyer. "Now these things happened unto them by way of example; and they were written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the ages are come." After giving these examples, the apostle draws the conclusion and applies it to the Christian: "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

We learn also that Paul, who labored so abundantly, says: "But I buffet my body, and bring it into bondage" lest by any means, after that I have preached to others, I myself should be rejected." (1 Cor. 9: 27.) Paul, in writing to the Galatian Christians who were contending for the Jewish rite of circumcision, which belonged to the law of Moses, declares: "Ye are severed from Christ, ye who would be justified by the law; ye are fallen away from grace." (Gal. 5: 4.) Thus it is clearly seen that the Galatian Christians who were turned from Christ and went back to Moses were fallen away from grace. As they could not be saved by obedience to the law of Moses, it would be impossible for them to be saved so long as they continued in this life of rebellion. Jesus declares, in reference to unclean spirits: "But the unclean spirit, when he is gone out of the man, passeth through waterless places, seeking rest, and findeth it not. Then he saith, I will return into my house whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished. Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits more evil than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: and the last state of that man becometh worse than the first." (Matt. 12: 43-45.)

Peter, in writing to Christians, says: "For if, after they have escaped the defilements of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein and overcome, the last state is become worse with them than the first. For it were better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after knowing it, to turn back from the holy commandment delivered unto them. It has happened unto them according to the true proverb, The dog turning to his own vomit again, and the sow that had washed to wallowing in the mire." (2 Pet. 2: 20-22.) This shows clearly that the washed Christian can turn to the filth and degradation of the world.

We find that not only individuals, but the churches as such, apostatize from the faith. John writes to the church at Ephesus: "But I have this against thee, that thou didst leave thy first love. Remember therefore whence thou art fallen, and repent and do the first works; or else I come to thee, and will move thy candlestick out of its place, except thou repent." (Rev. 2: 4, 5.) To the church at Thyatira, John writes: "I know thy works, and thy love and faith and ministry and patience, and that thy last works are more than the first. But I have this against thee, that thou sufferest the woman Jezebel, who calleth herself a prophetess; and she teacheth and seduceth my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed to idols." (Verses 19-21.) John, in writing to the church at Laodicea, says: "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot. So be cause thou art lukewarm, and neither hot nor cold, I will spew thee out of my mouth." (Rev. 3: 15, 16.)

While many other scriptures could be given, these are abundantly sufficient to establish the danger of apostasy and to encourage Christians to be vigilant and persevering in order that they may be able to overcome the world and at last be crowned with the crown of life.

BY E. A. E.

A FOREWORD.

In the patience of our readers I hope to present for their consideration and mine a series of articles on the church and the world, making an effort, at least, to show the difference between the two, as set forth in the Bible, and that the world is, always has been, and always will be opposed to the church.

Of course, in this, as in all other investigations of religious matters, the Bible is our standard and guide. We are forbidden to believe every spirit, "because many false prophets are gone out into the world;" while we are commanded to "prove the spirits"—to "prove all things," and to "hold fast that which is good." (1 John 4: 1; 1 Thess 5: 21.)

There is, however, a discouragement to such investigations—namely, only a few of the whole church are disposed to use the time and to take the pains to devote any serious thought to the continued consideration of any Bible subject, or to such a consideration at all. That the word of God is not studied now in order to learn and to teach his will on "all things that pertain unto life and godliness" as it was by our fathers is a matter of deep regret and a source of much trouble and sorrow. Then the cry was: "How readest thou?" "What saith the Scriptures?" "To the law and to the testimony." The word of God was the end of all controversy. One reason Paul gives for charging Timothy so seriously and so solemnly to "preach the word;" to "be urgent in season, out of season;" to "reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and teaching," is, "the time will come" when the church "will not endure the sound doctrine; but, having itching ears, will heap to themselves teachers after their own lusts; and will turn away their ears from the truth, and turn aside unto fables." (2 Tim. 4: 1-4.) When such a time comes to the church that they will not "endure the sound doctrine," when they will "turn away their ears from the truth" and "turn aside unto fables," when they will seek and pile up unto themselves such teachers as will tickle their fancy, satisfy their curiosity, and gratify their lusts, they will not devote any time to a serious and prayerful investigation of any Bible subject, or to the study of the word of God purely to learn and obey his will. It is not the will of God they seek.

Let us devote a short space to this charge to Timothy:

1. Did so true, faithful, and good a man as Timothy (see Phil. 2: 19-24) need this charge? Then, how much the more do we preachers of to-day need it! Timothy heeded it; will we?

2. "Preach the word," not something else. There are many other things which preachers may preach and do preach. These may be speculative opinions, philosophic and scientific matters, "the leading issues of the day," political affairs, or sensational trumpery. Some of these things may be true and in their place interesting and profitable; but that they are within their place true and interesting is not enough. Are they the word of God? Do they "pertain unto life and godliness?" Will they save? Paul determined "not to know anything," "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." (1 Cor. 2: 2.) That Paul determined this means he sat in judgment on all subjects, separated them, picked out or chose the one only which could save, and decided to know nothing else. He preached not himself [his own wisdom and power, thoughts and ways], "but Christ Jesus as Lord," and himself 'a servant [bond servant] for Jesus' sake." (2 Cor. 4: 5.) The gospel alone can save, and that alone would Paul preach. The cause of Christ rests upon preaching the gospel; the gospel is the cause of Christ. The curse of God rests upon the man or even the angel who attempts to preach another gospel. Let us not be deceived as to what the gospel is-its facts, commandments, promises, and hope. It embraces the whole Christian life. Christians live in obedience to the gospel. Obedience to the gospel is not a milestone in the journey from earth to heaven, to which one comes and passes and leaves behind. A man says he "obeyed the gospel" forty years ago. What has he done since? Has he not obeyed it any since? Then, to say the least of it, he has failed in his obedience to the gospel. He was running well; who hindered him that he 'should not obey the truth?" (Gal. 5: 7.) Are not obeying the truth, becoming "obedient unto the faith" (Acts 6: 7), and obeying the gospel the same? Then, what is "the full gospel?" What is it when it is not full? Can it be the gospel at all, when not full? Does "the full gospel" not embrace the entire Christian life? Is there anything which God requires men to do or forbids their doing that is not embraced in "the full gospei," or in the gospel? If so, one can preach "the full gospel" and yet fail to declare "the whole counsel of God" or "all things that pertain unto life and godliness." And if so, one may obey "the full gospel" and yet fail to do all the will of God and be lost. (Matt. 7: 21-27.) One must do the sayings of Jesus and follow him to be saved. But is not this obedience to the gospel? Let us speak as the Bible speaks and say "the gospel," "the gospel of God," "the gospel of Christ," "the gospel of your salvation," "the gospel of peace," etc. Paul speaks of "the fullness of the blessing in Christ." (Rom. 15: 29.) He speaks of certain women who "labored" with him "in the gospel" (Phil. 4: 3), and of others who "labor in the Lord" (Rom. 16: 12). There can be no difference between laboring "in the gospel" and laboring "in the Lord." Then, we must know that "the full gospel," or simply "the gospel," is nothing more and nothing less than "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints," "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," and obedience to it is submission to "the whole counsel of God" and the observance of "all things whatsoever" Jesus taught the apostles. Does not the man who knowingly fails to teach "publicly and from house to house" "the whole counsel of God," the observance of "all things whatsoever" Jesus taught the apostles and the importance of hearing and doing the sayings of Jesus, and continuing steadfastly in "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," and to "admonish every one night and day with tears" knowingly fail to preach "the full gospel?" Paul kept back "nothing that was profitable," and "in all things" set a good example. We are to imitate him, because he imitated Christ. (1 Cor. 11: 1.)

- 3. "Be urgent in season, out of season." Clarke's Commentary says: "Be urgent, whether the times be prosperous or adverse, whenever there is an opportunity; and when there is none, strive to make one. The Judge is at the door, and to every man eternity is at hand. Do not be contented with stated times and accustomed places merely; all time and place belong to God, and are proper for his work. Satan will omit neither time nor place where he can destroy. Omit thou none where thou mayest be the instrument of salvation to any."
- 4. "Reprove," "rebuke," and "exhort" are different words and mean different things. Of "reprove" the margin says, "to bring to the proof." The word of God is the standard by which all teaching and all courses of life must be tested. Call wrongdoers in the church to account, convict and confute all teachers of error in the church. This must not be harshly done, but done, neverthelessdone "with all long-suffering and teaching." What can be sharper or reprove more successfully than the word of God? He who reproves by the word of God can be forbearing. Love suffers long and is kind. It is not the reprover, but the word of God, giving the reproof. To "rebuke" is to point out the sins of wrongdoers in the church and to chide them severely with the purpose of restraining them; and this, too, must be done "with all long-suffering and teaching." To "exhort" is to persuade by argument, to urge by incentives, to warn through fearful consequences to activity in the Christian life; to comfort and sustain by the promises of God; to encourage the timid and those lacking in courage. There can be nothing more encouraging than "all long-suffering" in the one who exhorts, or fuller of inducement to the Christian life than the "teaching" of the gospel.
- 4. Think of it! The church "will turn away their ears from the truth, and turn aside unto fables!" What is the truth? "Thy word is truth." (John 17: 17.) What are fables? Thayer says: "1. A speech, word, saying. 2. A narrative, story; (a) a true narrative; (b) a fiction, a fable; universally, an invention, falsehood." He then cites 2 Pet. 1: 16, and adds: "The fictions of the Jewish theosophists and Gnostics, especially concerning the emanations and orders of the æons, are called muthoi [A. V., "fables"] in 1 Tim. 1: 4; 4: 7; 2 Tim. 4: 4; Tit. 1: 4." Since Jewish fictions in contrast with the word of God are fables, all fiction is; and in contrast with "the word," any "speech," "word," "saying," "narrative," "story," or even "true narrative" of men, is classed as a fable. Then, to turn away from the word of God to any of these is to turn "aside unto fables." How fearful and alarming this is! How many just now are doing this!

- 5. Does any one suppose that the heaps of teachers referred to by Paul and condemned for preaching fables believe and announce to their audiences that their "tales," "stories," "sayings," "fictions," "lectures," etc., with a little moral and religious coloring, are not the word of God? Does any one suppose that any church in seeking such will acknowledge that they have turned away their ears from the truth to fables?
- 6. It is grievous that so many such teachers can be found just at such times as Paul mentions. It is true that for such teachers faithful preachers of "the word" will be cast aside. It is true, also, that Paul declares that if he was still pleasing men, he could not be a servant of Christ. (Gal. 1: 10.)

The New Jerusalem.

BY E. G. S.

The apostle John, who was inspired and was able to tell what would be in the future, says some wonderfu! things regarding what shall come to pass hereafter. He says: "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, the new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new." (Rev. 21: 1-5.)

Now these are wonderful things indeed. One important thing about the matter, however, is the fact that the divine record does not tell when these things will take place. Nevertheless, that is the very thing which modern speculators try to tell. This is all mere human speculation. Human wisdom is wholly incompetent to give such information. We may guess and speculate about it, but that gives no light on the subject. The best we can do in the case is to believe heartily that the wonderful events foretold in the book of Revelation will surely come to pass. That is as far as we need to try to go. The time is wholly in the hands of the Lord, and whenever he sees proper he will bring them to pass. We can believe these things will take place as foretold, but cannot tell when they will take place. for the Lord has not told us that. So we had just as well wait with patience. It is our duty to believe all that the word of God says about these wonderful things, but to speculate about the time of their fulfillment is a mere waste of time. Let us study these prophecies, try to understand what they portend, and believe that they will be fulfilled as foretold; but let us stop at that, and not speculate about things of which we know nothing. There are many men that are speculating extensively on these matters about which they know nothing at all. I do not give myself any trouble over these human speculations as to when or how these prophecies will be fulfilled, but I do most heartily believe they will be fulfilled whenever the Lord is ready for such events to take place.

To try to tell when or how these wonderful events will be brought about is more than the human mind can tell. It was evidently not intended that uninspired men should know these things, or else they would have been madplainer by inspired men. It is certainly well for all to understand that this earth and the heavens will not always remain as they now are. We are plainly taught that the time is coming when the earth and the heavens shall pass away with a great noise. It would not prepare us for salvation if we knew exactly when these changes will take place; but if we will faithfully comply with the demands of Christianity to the end of life, that will prepare us for an eternal home in heaven. That is something we ought to think about till mortal life shall end. The New Testament plainly teaches what sort of a life it takes to prepare us for the eternal joys of heaven. Furthermore, it plainly teaches that all who are faithful to the word of the Lord to the end of this mortal life will surely be taken to that glorious and happy home. These are things for us to be continually thinking about as our days and years are passing by. There is no promise of heaven to those that will not prepare for it in this life.

It is not in the power of uninspired men to know anything on this subject that has not been revealed, and it is a waste of time to try to explain what has not been revealed. We can believe that what God has foretold will come to pass just as he says, but we must leave the time wholly with the Lord. The important thing for us to do is to try to be ready when these things do come to pass. That may be long after this generation has gone to the grave. But we need to be watching and praying daily to be ready for that wonderful day. Not only should we be watching daily for that day, but we should be striving and praying daily to be ready for it when it comes. Everything will be all right for us if we will so live through this life that when the final day comes the Lord will say to us: "Come, ye blessed of my Father; enter into the joy of thy Lord and be forever at rest with him."

"War bread" is far from being a new measure to conserve food resources. The children of Israel, when they defended Jerusalem against the siege, were advised by Ezekiel to utilize every possible means for supplementing their wheat supplies, and that was more than twenty-four hundred years ago. A writer has revived Ezekiel's recipe. as follows: "A thirteenth-century commentator, David Kimchi, drew attention to the verse in Ezekiel, which said: 'Take thou also unto thee wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentils, and millet, and fitches, and put them in one vessel and make thee bread thereof.' 'The prophet,' commented Kimchi, 'thus warns the disobedient children of Israel that during the siege of Jerusalem they will no longer be able to make their bread with pure wheat, but they will have to mix with it all kinds of grain and vegetables with which flour is not made unless extreme need makes it necessary to do so.' Whatever Ezekiel may have meant by his advice to the children of Israel, he furnished a recipe for war bread which is pretty certainly the oldest extant in the world. David Kimchi's comment is seven hundred years old, and Ezekiel wrote seventeen hundred years before Kimchi."

The Food Administration sent a valentine to the maltsters on February 14 in the form of the following telegram: "You are directed, until rules governing maltsters are issued, to cease all purchases of barley and other grains for malting." This was done in order to insure a greater supply of cereals which may be substituted for wheat, according to the official statement. Barley flour is an excellent substitute, and there is no reason why it should not become popular.

One of the largest mills in the United States has suggested a basis upon which experiments in mixing barley flour with wheat flour may be made. It recommends that for dusting flour only barley be used, cutting out wheat entirely. For all kinds of bread—wheat, Graham, or raisin—from fifteen to twenty-five per cent of barley flour should be used; for Boston brown bread, thirty-three per cent; and for pie crust, griddle cakes, noodles, muffins, and puddings, up to fifty per cent of barley flour may be used. As barley flour increases the absorption and decreases the time of fermentation, a trifle more liquid is needed when it is used than with wheat flour alone.

A sister writes from Dover, Fla., April 3: "The church Antioch is doing splendid work. The young Christians, at Antioch is doing splendid work. as well as the older ones, are pushing the work along for the cause of Christ. The church here has a good prospect for a bright future."

From H. T. King, Franklin, Ky., April 7: "There were two confessions (one of them my own little daughter) to-day. Fifty were present at prayer meeting last Thursday night. The prayer meeting was started since I came here, and this was our fourth meeting. Interest in all lines of our work is increasing.

From Charles L. Talley, Howell, Tenn., April 8: "Any church or congregation wishing to secure a preacher for a meeting can write me at the above address. I am exceedingly anxious to arrange my work in a way that I can be of greatest service in the field. I can arrange to go anywhere and stay as long as interest demands."

From James H. Russell, Carlstrom Aviation Camp. Arcadia, Fla.: "There are boys at this camp that I cannot get in touch with, who are members of the church. would be glad to hear that some good brother intends to come to this place to help the boys in the church work. We want a preacher of the gospel here, that we may serve God when we have the privilege."

From J. B. Nelson, Houston, Texas, April 6: "I am in what promises to be a good meeting with the Central church of Christ, this city. G. A. Dunn is the regular preacher and is doing a good work. The other two congregations, with their preachers, John M. Rice and Early Arceneaux, are assisting much. Much effort is being put forth to build a strong down-town church."

From Carl Barnette, Greenville, Ala., April 8: "I have received to date the sum of fifty-seven dollars and eightyfive cents toward my fund to purchase a mule, for which may the Lord bless the donors. I am still indebted for the animal to the sum of forty dollars, which is due on May 3. Those who wish to further assist me in this kind of work can send their contributions to me during this month.'

From F. L. Paisley, Metropolis, Ill., April 1: "I wish to thank the brethren who sent affidavits that I was before the war, and am now, a regular minister, to give as proof that I belong in Class V. in the draft, but their efforts and mine are so far vain. It will be a help to me if brethren can furnish me with meetings till after the call. enough booked to keep me busy from the middle of May till September."

From M. S. Mason, Rogersville, Mo., April 3: "Since my last writing I have filled regular appointments. Work good at all places. Mastus is improving its church property, and Flint Hill will likely do the same kind of work during the summer. People should not be content to live in elegant homes and worship out of doors. J. C. Frazee, of Buren, Ind., preached at Rogersville last Lord's day. The congregation at Rogersville will lift their debt this year and then launch out on some mission work in 1919."

From Ben West, Ennis, Texas, April 2: "Largest crowds ever at the Ennis Avenue Church yesterday. A new record made in attendance at Sunday school. Preaching services deeply interesting, with several new members. Brethren Busby and Austin Taylor preached and sang at 3 P.M. Many visitors from Italy, Bardwell, Waxahachie, Trum-bull, Ferris, Garrett, and other points. Preparation is being made for the 'made-in-Ennis' revival that begins on April 21, to continue eight days. Visitors welcome.

From D. S. Ligon, Elk City, Okla., April 5: "I am at this writing at Elk City, preaching every night. I found the church here divided in teaching and faith, but I am doing all that I can to keep 'the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace' and to help them get in position to do more for the cause of the Master. One is to be baptized this afternoon. He is an old man, some sixty years old, and has been a Methodist for years. I am to begin a meeting at or near Waynoka on the night of April 13. I do not have all my time arranged for meetings during the summer. Brethren, if you need a meeting and can support me, write me at Denton, Texas."

The sudden death of Mrs. W. H. Callendar in this city early last Saturday morning was the cause of much grief and sorrow. At the time of her death she was seventy-three years of age. For many years Brother and Sister Callendar were members of the Owens Chapel congregation, near Brentwood, Tenn., and their service for Jesus Christ in that neighborhood was so great that it cannot be easily calculated. A few years ago Brother Callendar sold his farm and moved to Nashville. During this time they have worshiped with the Lawrence Avenue congregation, and by their simple, unpretentious, Christian conduct en-deared themselves to all the members. Besides her husband. Sister Callendar is survived by several children and grandchildren. She also leaves two sisters, who are the widows of the lamented David Lipscomb and of the la-"Precious in the sight of the mented H. G. Lipscomb. Lord is the death of his saints."

T. W. Phillips writes from Fort Worth, Texas: "It has been some time since I made a report of my work, but not for the lack of interest in the work of the Lord, nor for love for the Gospel Advocate. I have simply been a very I have just closed a very fine meeting at Hillsbusy man. boro, with thirty-one additions to the church-twenty-four by confession and baptism. J. W. Chism is the local minister, and the success of this meeting was largely due to his and his good wife's untiring interest and labor of love with the church and people before the meeting began and during the time I was there. My home was with these noble people, and a better home I never had anywhere. The meeting ran eighteen days and nights, including the second, third, and fourth Sundays in March. I am now in a meeting here at home, with the Brooklyn Heights Church, which is located in the southeast corner of Camp Bowie. The crowds are fine, and quite a number of the soldier boys are attending each service. Two have already been boys are attending each service. Two have already been baptized. C. J. Robinson started this meeting for me Sunday morning, and I took charge of it on Monday night. My next meeting is to be at Bynum."

Sister James McNeelis writes from Braden, Tenn.: "I would like to make a request or an appeal through the Gospel Advocate to some one of our ministers to come to this part of the State to evangelize. Several years ago a preacher came from Oklahoma and preached for us. people heard him gladly and about twenty-five persons obeyed the gospel. Many have asked me if we could not get the same man to come back again. As I have not seen or heard anything of that brother for about three years and do not know his address, I cannot answer for him. His name is H. L. Taylor. The people in our neighborhood are plain, simple, farming folks, most of them, but they want the gospel preached; and while they might not be able to recompense a brother as richly as he might deserve, yet I am sure they would make sacrifices to 'pay the Surely some of our brethren could afford to help a brother throw out the life line to these people here. I heard a man say only a few days ago that he would like to be baptized if only we had a church here; and, so far as to be baptized it only we had a chirch here, and, so lat as I am informed, he has never heard a plain gospel sermon. But I have read many good articles in the Gospel Advocate to him and talked to him about the gospel plan of salvation. Won't you kindly ask some good brother to write to me and my husband and let us see what can be done?"

We gladly give this sister's letter space in the hope that there may be a quick response.

Any one of the three medicines will do you good—the use of all three will accomplish wonderful results for you. Try this treatment this Spring.

"What Beautiful Hair!"

Have you ever heard that remark made as some one passed by who had carefully kept hair? Did it not make you envious, and did it not make you ashamed of every coarse, stiff, or gray hair in your head? Did it not make you wish that you, too, had kept your hair carefully and could hear similar compliments passed on you? Do not envy a beautiful head of hair. It is your privilege to have one. The beauty of the hair depends entirely on its care, and its luster depends on the food on which it subsists. Hair must be fed. Every single hair is a distinetly individual living thing, and it demands food. Unless you feed it, it is going to be stiff and coarse and void of beauty. Follow the example of the Creoles of Louisiana, who pride themselves on their hair. Get their recipe. It was kept as a race secret for many years, but you can get it now by asking your dealer for "La Creole," the natural hair dressing, or by sending one dollar to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful-Get a small bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it imme diately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You cannot have nice, heavy. healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life; and if not overcome, it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen, and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store, and just try it.

System in Giving.

BY S. WHITFIELD.

God is the great author of system. There is system in all of his works. It can be seen in everything that God has made. There is system in the Bible. When the temple was put up, there was not the sound of a hammer to be heard, for everything was made according to God's direction. There is system in the gospel, in the worship, and in all the work of the church. God never does things in a haphazard way.

I suppose that all of us have known people in this world that have made a success in whatever they did, for they did everything in a systematic way. They always had a time to do what they did and a way to do it. They always had a place for everything, and everything was always found in its place. We have known others who failed because there was no order in what they did.

"For God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints." (1 Cor. 14: 33.) "Let all things be done decently and in order." (Verse 40.) Where there is confusion, there is no order; and where there is order, there is no confusion. Where there is confusion, there can be no success; but where there is system, there may be success. God is the author of order and system; but man or the devil is the author of confusion. If we wish to succeed, we must follow God's way, and not man's way.

When God taught man to give in Old Testament times, it was in a systematic way, and in the New Testament the way that God teaches man to give is orderly and systematic. The most of Christians give in a haphazard way. "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." (1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.) This passage teaches us that we are to give as God has prospered us; or the more we get, the more we are to give. From different parts of the country there comes the cry that the churches are not giving any more now than they were before we had high prices, They are getting twice as much (or more) wages as they were before, and they are getting twice as much (or more) for their products as they were before high prices started. Now, if the churches are not giving any more now than they did before, they are only giving half as much (or even less) as they did before; and they are Now, if the brethren had been giving a per cent of their income or gain before the high prices started-and some did-and if the same per cent were given now, then we would be giving as God has prospered us; we would be giving in a systematic way; and it would amount to twice as much (or more) as with the low prices; and the needs of those or the work that we were supporting would be met as well as they were met in days of low prices. It is high time for us to look into this question and get started according to God's perfect system of giving, and then we may be able to keep right.

The New Testament says that we are to give as we purpose in our heart, and as God has prospered us. (1 Cor. 16: 2; 2 Cor. 9: 7.) Now, I do not see how we can do as these two passages teach without giving a per cent of our prosperity. If any one knows how it can be done, I would be glad to know it. From my experience and observation, those who give a per cent give more than those who do not, as a

It is true that all that we are and all that we have belong to God, for we have been purchased by the blood of Christ, and we should use it all to the honor of God and the good of his cause; but we are to lay aside and give part of our income to support the widow, the orphan, the poor, and the gospel.

I submit some reliable information about Christian preachers in Tennessee before the union with the Reformed Baptists (the Campbell move-

Elder James E. Mathews, writing to the Gospel Luminary from Barton, Ala., September 10, 1831, says:

Brother Clough: Yours of the eighth ult, came by last mail, at which time I was from home, attending a camp meeting. I now, in compliance with your request, hasten to reply, embracing the different subjects of inquiry contained in your letter.

With respect to the condition and prospects of the Christian churches in Alabama and Tennessee, I will state that, according to the best information which I have, there are about sixty churches in Tennessee with probably four thousand members, and in Alabama about twenty churches with about fifteen hundred members. Some of these churches are very large, and many of them are in a flourishing condition. When I came to this country, something over five years ago, there was one small church of about ten members; that church now contains upwards of two hundred members, and I have planted another church in my immediate vicinity of about sixty members.

Elder More and myself have had great opposition by the popular sectaries, but that opposition has comparatively ceased. Our prospects, in one respect, are a little discouraging at present, as Brother More is about to leave this country, and I am left, with a broken constitution and fast declining health, to attend to almost all the churches in North Alabama. There is one circumstance, in this country, which tends to check our progress. Our preachers have to rely almost entirely on the labor of their own hands for support. Many of the preachers are men of talents, and some of them of the first order, few of them have engaged in writing. The doctrine of baptism "for remission of sins" generally prevails, but in a more qualified sense than it is held by Alexander Campbell, editor of the Millennial Harbinger. The following is a list of the names of most of the preachers in Tennessee and Alabama:

Daniel Travis lies in an unmarked grave at Gallatin, Tenn. He died on July 6, 1826. I was informed by Dr. Hall, the present owner of Andrew Carnahan's old home, that Andrew Carnahan built the old Carnahan meetinghouse, the first Christian meetinghouse in Tennessee, in the year 1790. He was doubtful as to whether he came from North Carolina or Virginia. He was already a Christian before coming to Tennessee. About the same time Andrew McBride and his brothers came from North Carolina to Tennessee. Andrew Mc-Bride was a Christian preacher before coming to the State. According to Humphries, Isaac McBride died in 1824; Andrew and Joseph McBride, in 1826. ("Lives of Deceased Christian Ministers," page 221.) Those associated with Elijah M. Ward were called "Wardites." Will some one tell me where his Tennessee home was located? Andrew P. Davis, Corder Stone, James Miller, and John Mulkey preached baptism to the penitent sinner for the remission of sins years before A. Campbell. John Mulkey, whose associates were called "Mulkeyites," rejected the mourner's bench and baptized candidates on the confession of their faith in Christ from the year

Any information in regard to the above-named preachers will be thankfully received by the writer.

COMB SAGE TEA IN FADED OR GRAY HAIR

Look Young! Common Garden Sage and Sulphur Darkens So Natu-rally Nobody Can Tell.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy, and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for about fifty cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied; it is so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft, and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of disease.

"CASCARETS" WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels-Take Cascarets to-night.

Furred tongue, bad taste, indiges-tion, sallow skin, and miserable headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's first step to untold misery-indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A ten-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

The Master's Vineyard

Arkansas.

Emerson, April 1.-The Gospel Advocate of March 21 published an article from Brother George W. Farmer on "More Men Needed in the Camps," in which some good suggestions were offered. Let me further suggest that Brother Farmer or some other good man head this work and begin at once to act on those suggestions. I would have written him direct, but did not know his address. I took up the matter with the brethren at this place, and, while we are few in number and all poor, we pledged ourselves to contribute ten dollars per month to the support of some suitable man who would go to Camp Pike, at Little Rock, and do a work similar to what Brother Dunn is doing at Camp Sevier. We will also visit some other congregations and try to get them to help us in this. If we cannot raise enough money in this section to support a worker at the camp, it may be that there are others at a distance who will join us. Next is the man. We shall have to look to Brother Farmer or some one else to find a man qualified for the work and willing to go even after we have secured his sup-Let all who are interested in this work speak up and say how much they are interested.-J. California.

Armona, March . 29 .- I am glad to report the work as progressing in this part of the world. On the third Lord's day I was with the new congregation at Tulare, with a very large audience, and a nice service, indeed, it was. They have now some excellent leaders and the work is promising. We had hoped to have Brother T. B. Larimore in a meeting, but his time has been engaged at other places. He begins in Los Angeles on Sunday, and after a month's meeting there will go to Fresno for a meeting, and from Fresno he will go to-Berkeley, Brother Larimore is a great man and will do good wherever he goes. Tulare is in the center of one of the finest stock and fruit districts in the State. Land can be bought on good terms and at reasonable prices. Tulare has a population of about three thousand and is a beautiful place. No saloons, good schools, fine citizens—a fine place to locate, if you contemplate coming to California Last Lord's day we had an excellent audience at Hanford. Brother John Plummer, a young preacher, of Corcoran, preached. Sub-ject, "Loyalty to Christ." It was fine. He has preached about a half dozen times. I met him at Tulare soon after he arrived from Texas, and saw he had the ability to preach, and encouraged him in the good work, and 1 believe he will make a fine worker for the Lord. Brother W. Halliday Trice is at Fresno, and is doing a fine work, keeping peace and harmony and a steady growth. Brother G. W. Riggs is at Los Angeles. There ought to be ten more good preachers there, and a support from churches in the East until more congregations can be established and built up. Brother C. A. Norred is at Riverside, dividing his time between Riverside and Pomona. Brother S. S. Witty is at Ontario; B. W. Davis, Placentia; C. C. Condra, Santa Anna; H. H. Turner, Pasadena; J. B. Elmore, Downey; J. E. Sniffin, Dos Palos; E. C. Love, Santa Rosa; Max Langpaap, San Francisco; G. G. Wyatt, Madera; G. W. Winters, Forestville; Willie Green, Berkeley; L. C. Haulman, Porterville; and there may be others I do not Aside from those of us who have built up the work here, we have with us H. M. Chaffee, H. G. Cassell, and W. P. Reedy, Review preachers in California. I can remember when E. C. Love, G. W. Winters, and I were the preachers in California. Others came to our assistance and have done a puble work. We are and have done a noble work. We are not of those who are discouraged, but are "pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Brother Sanders, of Los Angeles, who has gone to his reward, did much in pressing forward the work in California.—L. D. Perkins.

Tennessee.

Chattanooga, April 3 .- I am now in a good meeting with the Cowart Street Church, in this city. Last year I held seventeen meetings, with one hundred additions. Of these meetings, there were in Florida, one in Alabama, two in Texas, and eleven in Tennessee. My present address is 4 West Fortyninth Street, St. Elmo, Tenn.-J. D. Northcut.

SALTS IS FINE FOR KIDNEYS, QUIT MEAT

Flush the Kidneys at Once When Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers Meat Forms Uric Acid.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, con-stipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders, comes from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or If the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure. It makes a delightful effer-vescent lithia-water drink, which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding seri-ous kidney complications.

OBITUARIES

Laster.

On November 7, 1917, the messenger of death came and released from its earthly prison the meek and gentle spirit of Robert Ivey Laster, which, with willing obedience to the messenger, winged its flight onward and upward to that home above. While we grieve, we do not grieve as those who have no hope. To the mother and father we extend our deepest sympathy; and although the silver cord be loosed or the golden bowl be broken, we can look on the newly made mound and say: "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

A FRIEND.

Payne.

Amy Elizabeth Payne departed this life on January 9, 1918. She was born on February 19, 1852. She was mar-ried to Samuel Burr Payne on November 20, 1873, and from this union there were six children. Sister Payne united with the church in early life and remained a consistent Christian to the end. Hers was a lovely, Christian character; and although during later days she endured much bodily suffering, yet she bore it pa-tiently and with Christian fortitude. Sister Payne was a kind neighbor and a devoted wife and mother. She leaves a husband and five children to mourn her loss. Funeral services were conducted at the White Mills Christian Church by Brother George Tinsley, and burial followed in the White Mills cemetery.

MeMinn.

The death angel has visited the home of J. P. and Fern McMinn and called from them their darling babe, Dorothy Hall. She was born into the earthly home on January 14, 1917, and was transplanted on March 10, 1918, to a far and more excellent place of abode. She is survived by a father, mother, one little brother, and a number of relatives, who are deeply grieved over her departure. We all loved her so much, she was such a bright, sweet child, and the removal of such a ray of sunshine has caused our hearts to be sad indeed. But God has called her higher, and we must bow in humble submission to his will. Brother Eph Smith made a very comforting talk, after which her little body was laid to rest at Emmaus cemetery, beneath the flower-covered mound. It was so sad to come back mound. It was so sad to come back home without her, but we can look forward with joyful hearts to that time when we shall meet our loved one again, in that "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," whose builder and maker is God."

time. He would sit and try to read the dear old Gospel Advocate that he loved so well, but it would often drop from his hands as he tried to read its pages. He had read it for many years and was a firm believer in its teaching. The last years of his life he was deprived of meeting to worship at the church where we had worshiped for thirty-five years, because instrumental music had been introduced and he could not conscientiously meet with the brethren; so he read his Bible at home and followed nothing but its precepts. He, like myself, was heartbroken over these innovations. His afflictions and troubles are over now. He has gone to the Savier whom he loved and tried to obey, while I, his wife and companion for nearly sixty-two years, am left to mourn till the Master calls me home. L. A. Grow.

Moss.

On March 11, 1918, at 8 A.M., the spirit of little William Pervines Moss, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Moss, was called from earth back to heaven. He was given to them to brighten their home only sixteen months and a few days. Never was a brighter ray of sunshine sent into a home—beautiful of face, an angel's smile; and a little hand that waved to those he loved at their coming and going now waits and beckons on the other shore. He will be waiting at the beautiful gate to welcome father, mother, brother, little cousins, relatives, and friends; for many were the friends he had won with his smile in his brief life. They sorrow not as those who have no hope, for Jesus said: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." The shadows hang heavy; but as the writer of the song said, so say I to them: Let God's "kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom," lead thee on!

MRS. GEORGE W. GRAVES.

Ray.

Sister W. E. Ray (née Mollie Mc-Carty) was born on May 17, 1862. She became a member of the body of Christ and united with the Antioch congregation at Schoehoh, Ky., about forty years ago. I have been told that she lived true to the confession of her faith in Christ. When one understands and appreciates the fact that the faith that avails is the "faith which worketh through love" (Gal. 5: 6), he or she will walk in loving obedience to the blessed Master. ter Ray is believed to have complied with the terms of acceptance of salvation, which is the gift of God to us; and she was led to daily Bible reading and would ever kneel in humble devotion to Jehovah at evening. She was married to Mr. W. E. Ray, of Auburn, Ky., on May 29, 1905, Brother E. G. Sewell officiating. To this union no children were born. The sudden coming of pneumonia claimed her for its victim on the eighth day. survived by her husband, four sisters, one brother, many other relatives, and a host of friends. The writer preached the funeral to a large assembly in the Baptist meetinghouse at Auburn. Then Professor Bernett paid a wonderful tribute to her, having known her from her childhood in all the walks of this life.

Sleepless nights spent worrying over supposed ailments, constant dosing with habit forming drugs and narcotics, and useless attempts to brace up with strong coffee or other stimulants are what keep them suffering and vainly longing to be strong. Their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. Without iron the blood has no power to change food into living tissue and, therefore, nothing you eat does you good; you don't get the strength out of it. When iron is supplied it enriches the impoverished blood and gives the body greater resistance to ward off disease. Maxwell.

Our once happy home has been made sad and lonely by the death of my dear husband, James Porter Maxwell, who departed this life on Octo-ber 7, 1917. He was born on October 23, 1874, and was married to Martha Ada Wray on December 18, 1898. To this union six children were born. One died in infancy, leaving three boys and two girls. He leaves a fa-ther, three brothers, seven sisters, and a wide circle of friends to mourn his loss. He obeyed the gospel, under the preaching of Brother J. W. Shepherd, in 1897, and lived a consecrated, Christian life. He was ever ready to defend the truth in Christ Jesus. He was a good husband, a good father, a good neighbor, and, best of all, a good Christian. He had been a leader in the church at Patterson for sixteen years. Our home has always been the preachers' home; he always enjoyed having them with us. The church here has lost the only member that would take the lead in the Lord's-day The Bible says that "all things work together for good to them that love God." But-O!-how sad to think I will have to tread the pathway alone, with no loved companion to help me battle through the trials and troubles of this life! How sad to realize I can never see his face and hear his voice again in this life! But I pray that the Lord will bless us, and that he may help me to bring up my children in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord," so that some sweet day we can be a united family again in that "beautiful home of the soul," where there is no sickness, sorrow, death, and no sad farewells, but pleasure and happiness for evermore.

Harlin.

George W. Harlin was born on April 19, 1848, and died on February 23, 1918. The passing of Brother Har-23, 1918, lin to the other side is a great loss to his children and companion, as well as to the church of Christ at Glasgow, Ky., of which he was a devoted mem-ber. For about fifty years he had been a faithful follower of Jesus. All who knew him were impressed with his earnestness and the pure life which he led. Besides a faithful companion, Sister Fannie Harlin, of Glasgow, he leaves two children-Brother John H. Harlin, of Glasgow, and Sister Mattie Comer, wife of Brother A. B. Comer, of Nashville, Tenn. Only one grandchild, Sewell Harlin, son of Brother and Sister J. H. Harlin, is left to miss a grandfather who doted on him and was never happier than when they were together. It is sad to say good-by to those we love so well; yet what a comfort to know they are ready to go! Brother Harlin had naught to fear in crossing to the other side, where he watches for our coming. Funeral services were conducted in the home in Glasgow on February 24, in the presence of a large number of friends. Following the friends. Following the services the remains were carried to Gamaliel, Ky., for burial. Brother Harlin lived for many years at Gamaliel, and the night preceding his burial was spent in the home of Brother and Sister R. F. Comer, Sister Comer being the only member of the family left, sister to Brother Harlin. the Lord bless all who are left to mourn the departure of Brother Harlin and lead us into that home into which we believe he has led our dear departed one. New Discovery Brings Costly Panama Within Reach of All.

Within Reach of All.

New York, N. Y. (Special)—It is now proven that the styllsh Panama, up to now only worn by the best-dressed people, can now be sold for $1. You don't have to be skeptical about the low price, as it gives service like the $5 and $10 kind, but not so fine a weave; and by this new discovery of weave one can hardly tell the difference. A Panama gives a man or woman distinction and at the same time comfort. Mr. George J. Bungay, 28. South William Street, of New York City, is backing up his discovery by sending a real hand-woven Panama, any size, trimmed, blocked, with silk band, to any one for $1, postpaid. Fitted with leather sweat band, 25 cents extra. Furthermore, his policy is that, if you are not entirely satisfied, he will return your money.—Advt.

The Meeting for Worship. BY S. WHITFIELD.

"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching." (Heb. 10: 25.)

If the "assembling of ourselves together" refers to any meeting of the church, it certainly refers to the meeting on the first day of the week for worship, for this meeting is so clearly defined in the New Testament. Jesus rose from the dead on the first day of the week, and this day became the day of worship according to the new covenant. The church was established on this day, and the early Christians came together on this day to attend to the apostles' teaching, fellowship, to break bread, to pray and sing.

There were some who did not assemble for this purpose in the days of the apostles, and there have been some ever since who have forsaken the assembling of themselves together, and there are still some, if not many, who neglect this important duty.

Disciples of Christ have been trying to teach the sects for years that the Sabbath means every Sabbath, and that the first day of the week means every first day of the week, which is true: but it seems to me that we need considerable of this teaching right at home, even among ourselves. If we would do our duty along this line, it would not be so hard to teach others what is right. It is still true that actions speak louder than words. Practical Christianity is the kind that counts. Saving and not doing will never save souls.

Suppose that every Christian in the world would fail to meet on the first day of the week to worship God for one whole year, what would be the effect? Where would the cause of Christ be at the end of that year? What would be the result, if we all would stop meeting for all time? The church of Christ would soon be something of the past.

Every one knows, who has tried hard to do his duty as a child of God that it is hard enough to keep ourselves interested and live the Christian life when we meet on the first day of every week to worship the Father, through Christ, in spirit and in truth, and try to do all else that God has required of us.

If we do not spend Lord's day-the day of the resurrection of our Lordin attending to the apostles' teaching, the fellowship, breaking of bread, the prayers, and singing spiritual songs, we will soon spend it in some worse way. If we do not thus spend it in doing good, we will spend it in doing evil. The world is forgetting the Lord on Lord's day fast enough, and we would soon forget him, too, if we did not meet. Observation teaches us that this is true. Let us spend the first day of the week in attending to spiritual things-in minding the things of the Spirit, and not the things of the flesh.

No person can live and keep healthy and strong without food, and no one can keep strong spiritually without spiritual food. The meeting on the first day of the week for worship is one of the ways in which we obtain spiritual food. It is a great feast to the soul. Every child of God should be hungry for such a feast on the first day of every week. Each meeting should be a foretaste of the great meeting, at last, around the throne of

It should be a part of our work as preachers to encourage people to meet, even as it is our duty to get people to obey the gospel. It is just as important to get God's children to come together for worship as it is to induce the world to be baptized. We tell people that they cannot be saved unless they are baptized. Why do we not tell the Lord's people that they cannot be saved unless they gather themselves together to remember Jesus in his suffering? Sometimes preachers themselves do not meet. This is a bad example. How can we expect others to do their duty when we do not do it ourselves?

Some Christians meet if it is convenient; but if it is not, they do not meet. If it is favorable weather, a preacher is to be present, or during a big meeting, they will come then. They never seem to get the idea into their minds that they should come together in season and out of season. If we attend to temporal duties regardless of conditions, but only attend to spiritual duties when it is favorable, we are putting temporal things ahead of spiritual things. Duty to God should always come first. A revival along this line is much needed.

We are to exhort one another; and so much the more, as we see the day approaching. Some say that this is the first day of the week; some, that it is death; and others, that it is the judgment day. It does not say what day it is, and what is the difference? As the first day of the week is approaching, so is death and the judgment. By getting ready to do our duty on the first day of the week, we are getting ready for death and also for the judgment.

The Fountain of Youth.

The fame of the prophet Elijah had traveled far. To him came Naaman, a ruler of Assyria. Naaman's disease was grievous, and the caravan was laden with princely gifts. Naaman expected a great cure, but the prophet Elijah advised a bath in the muddy tordan.

We are all Naamans, and our vanity has magnified our ills. We want the great cure, the mystery, the pomp and ceremony, and the laying on of hands. To meet our vain demands, the minor prophets of medicine have produced a supply of such great cures. They have consulted the stars in our behalf; they have borrowed mystic powders from the alchemists and compounded elixirs from witches' herbs; with microscopes they have searched for the fairy tales of science, explored our anatomy for phagocytes and discovered ductless glands.

For these great cures we have paid our treasures, and often in vain. But the true prophets of the Lord of nature have naught to recommend but a bath in the muddy Jordan of common sense hygiene. Temperance and regularity are essential to long life, and exercise should be equitably distributed throughout the length of life, and throughout the various bodily activities.

Extreme temperance in diet as a means to long life was widely proclaimed some centuries ago by an Italian philosopher who claimed to have lived on one egg and a little wine each day. As meats and wine were then considered the sole sources of strength, the gentleman doubtless thought it unnecessary to tell us how much bread and vegetables he ate. But despite this evident omission, his principle was sound.—Gordon Reeves, in Physical Culture.

THE STORY OF A GREAT DIS-COVERY.

The hardships of a traveling salesman's life had wrecked my health. My family physician diagnosed my case as chronic gastritis, brought on by disease of the liver and complicated health and travellar Leonsulfed specific by disease of the liver and complicated by kidney trouble. I consulted spe-cialists who confirmed his diagnosis. Months passed, I grew worse and was finally compelled to give up my work. By chance I heard of some wonder-ful cures which had resulted from drinking the water of a little spring in the Mineral Bolt of South Caroling.

the Mineral Belt of South Carolina, a picture of which spring appears on this page. In desperation I tried it. On the second day I thought that I could notice some improvement; at the end of the first week my appetite and digestion had returned and I was much stronger; at the end of the third much stronger; at the end of the third week I felt that I was completely cured. That was six years ago and I still enjoy perfect health.

Knowing that it had restored my health and believing that it had saved my life, I bought the Spring.

I then determined to see whether the water would give others as it had the water would cure others as it had cured me. I shipped ten gallons absolutely free of charge to each of one thousand sufferers from chronic discases. Only four reported no benefit from the use of the ten gallons. The other nine hundred and ninety-six reported decided benefit or complete cures. Many claimed that the water had saved their lives

I realized that I had discoved one of the world's greatest mineral springs, and I decided to devote my life to it and I decided to devote my life to it. But how could I make the world listen; how could I make them believe my story? The precious water was running to waste while thousands were suffering. I said, I will make them believe me by showing my faith in them and in the curative power of the Spring. I will tell them that the water shall cost them nothing if it allment fails to benefit.

The world listened!

Some wrote for proof and I sent them the letters which I had received from their fellowmen Others accept ed my offer without question Thou-sands have written me reporting relief and permanent cure of a great variety of chronic diseases

To this end I requested the advertising manager of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate to come to see me. At my desk I opened my mail and showed him the letters from men and women from all parts of the country who had suffered and who had found relief. I gave him my letter files and induced him to spend several hours reading my past correspondence with those who were past correspondence with those who were using the water. I showed him the chemical analysis and letters from physicians explaining the curative properties of the

As you are well aware, in 1809 I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, softeeges, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered 10 gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months from date I began drinking it gained 29 lbs., was strong and perfectly well and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happly blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. The Obligations of Brotherhood.

To impress the duties and obligations involved in the Christian brotherhood, let us note some passages where the relationship is mentioned. In Peter's exhortation where the term is used, be begins by saying: "Honor all men." The apostle uses a very striking and suggestive discrimination in his selection of words in this verse. We know that it is extremely difficult to find a point of view from which it can be seen to be even possible to honor all men. There are some men so base that it seems that the only feeling we can possibly have toward them is one of contempt. But no doubt the apostle was thinking of the Christian's duty toward all men in the light of the cross. Christ died for all; and as the word "honor" means "to value," and since the soul of the man for whom Christ died, however debased by sin, is of more value than the whole world, "honor" is not out of place. Yet, with this explanation before us, it is admittedly difficult to follow the injunction.

Then the apostle adds: "Love the brotherhood." If it requires an effort to find the point of view from which it would be possible to honor all men, when he proceeds to name the duty toward that section of mankind whom he names "the brotherhood," one feels immediately the suitableness of the word "love" in this connection. It should be as easy and natural as breathing for one member of God's family to love his brothers and sisters. If this feeling of tender regard does not exist in your heart toward your brethren in Christ; if it is not being expressed daily by deeds of kindness, hospitality, charity, and a refusal to judge your brother or put a stumblingblock in his way, then there is something seriously the matter with your religion. It is an indication that you have not put on Christ as you should, and you need to cultivate the feeling of brotherhood until it becomes part of your very being, so that you can truly "love as prethren."

Paul says, in Rom. 12: 10: "In love of the brethren be tenderly affectioned one to another; in honor preferring one another." Again, in Heb. 13: 1 he exhorts: "Let love of the brethren continue." There are far too many who started out in the Christian life with the idea of cherishing the brotherhood, but have given it up. They need to be reconverted along this line.

Something Lovely, Noble, and Big.

The cultivation of a brotherly spirit is one of the loveliest attributes in the world, and there is no confinement to its possibilities. One of the old writers said: "There is a brotherhood between us and flowers and trees, between the green things that wither and the bright and beautiful ones that die. The dead violet is the fragant memorial of the infant that drooped and died; the still unscattered dust of the flower that fades in June brings to our remembrance the fair form that was suddenly breathed on by some mysterious emissary and passed away in her noon. Another falls from the tree of life like the sere leaf. In the woods in winter we cannot be too long alone; visions and associations will gather around us-departed forms and almost forgotten faces will rise like the shadows from the grave."

The cultivation of brotherhood is one of the noblest traits in the development of human character. This is what makes noble parents, loyal school-teachers, honest tradesmen, sincere and joyous workers of every line and condition, and far-sighted statesmen who will be lovers of country, home, and children. It is the real remedy for shortening the days of test and trial, for bringing order out of chaos, peace out of war, for making our nation sound, stanch, and true in every fiber.

The cultivation of brotherhood is one of the biggest things that we might possibly consider. There are many graphic and thrilling stories coming from the bloody trenches in Europe, and each has its point. But one of the most pleasing to me was that which related how some men in one of the allies' trenches, learning that desperate hunger existed in the opposite trench of the enemy, threw some loaves of bread over to them. A little later a German crawled to the other trench and warned the man that a mine was soon to be exploded, which enabled them to escape. Whatever may be said of the patriotism of such an action, no one will deny that the spirit of brotherhood was commendable. And in simple faith I believe that brother-hood is even greater than patriotism. "But if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him to drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." (Rom. 12: 20.)

The Brotherhood Supreme.

The loveliest, the noblest, and the best brotherhood of all is that which Jesus died to establish. He said: "But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your teacher, and all ye are brethren." (Matt. 23: 8.) The world can never improve upon the principles of equality and fraternity and service that are couched in the Master's words. To occupy an honorable place in his brotherhood is the grandest achievement in the human race. Sometimes we argue among ourselves as to whether it is absolutely necessary for one brother to patronize another because he is a brother in Christ. But, to my mind, the mere matter of patronage in business is a pitiably small thing by which to weigh the love of the brethren. If you would see the standard of affection and loyalty that was recognized and upheld in the days of the apostles, turn to 1 John 3: 16 and read: "Hereby know we love, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." God have mercy and pity upon the poor, self-conceited, make-believe Christian who is ashamed to recognize a brother or sister in Christ and to treat them as such!

In the days of the apostles the "brotherhood" was not a speculation, but a living fact. It was not a Utopian dream such as the socialists promise the world, but a veritable reality. It was not something which was to when certain things could be brought about, but something already existing, a community that could be loved and was loved.

It should be our endeavor to male the Christian brother-hood all that our Savior intended; and if in the fabric of the manhood and woman hood of this generation it has fallen below the standar. The New Testament, let it be our work to restore it the New Testament, let it be our work to restore it the new Testament, let it be our work to restore it the new Testament, let it be our work to restore it the new Testament, let it be our work to restore it the new Testament, let it be our work to restore it the new Testament, let it be our work to restore it the new Testament, let it be our work to restore it the new Testament, let it be our work to restore it the new Testament, let it be our work to rehip and to such a plane that it may magnify our Lord and bless the world. It can be done. "Let the Bible be substituted for all human creeds; facts, for definitions; things, for words; faith, for speculation; unity of faith, for unity of opinion; the positive commandment of God, for human legislation and tradition; piety, for ceremon; morality, for partisan zeal; the practice of religion, for the mere profession of it: and the work is done."

God's Purpose in Sending Jesus Into the World.
BY J. D. WALLING.

When God made the world and saw that it was good, designed and completed for man's happiness, not only rich in fertility, but full of grandeur and beauty, the psalmist, looking upon it, was moved by the power of its splendor to say: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him?" He realized that it was a master mind that could conceive of a world of such beauty, possibilities, and power; that it was a master hand that could create it. Then, it was a wonderful love that could place poor, weak, and ignorant man over it. But it was in his divine purpose that man should be "to the praise of his glory." Man could only be "to the praise of his glory." Man could only be "to the praise of his glory" in a contented and happy state. Hence, God placed man "over the works of thy hands: thou didst put all things in subjection under his feet."

Part of God's eternal plan is seen in Eph. 3; 8-12: "Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, was this grace given, to preach unto the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ; and to make all men see what is the dispensation of the mystery which for ages hath been hid in God who created all things; to the intent that now unto the principalities and the powers in the heavenly places might be made known through the church the manifold wisdom of God, according to the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord: in whom we have boldness and access in confidence through our faith in him."

The apostle Peter gives a further insight when he says: "Knowing that ye were redeemed, not with corruptible things, with silver or gold, from your vain manner of life handed down from your fathers; but with precious blood, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot, even the blood of Christ: who was foreknown indeed before the foundation of the world, but was manifested at the end of the times for your sake, who through him are believers in God, that raised him from the dead, and gave him glory; so that your faith and hope might be in God." (1 Pet. 1: 18-21.) Redeemed, bought back, from what? We have an intimation of all this in the sentence on the serpent: "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: he shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." (See Gen. 3: 14, 15.) So Paul tells us man was "sold under sin." Again: "So we also, when we were children [they were children under the law], were held in bondage under the rudiments of the world: but when the fullness of the time came [that is, when the world had been tutored under the school-master, the law, and John the Baptist, the harbinger], God sent forth his Son, born of a woman, born under the law, that he might redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." (Gal. 4: 3-5.)

The Redeemer was promised to Abraham. "Now to Abraham were the promises spoken, and to his seed. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." (Gal. 3: 16.) "And in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." (Acts 3: 25.) He was predicted in the prophets. "The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor the ruler's staff from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the obedience of the peoples be." (Gen. 49: 10.) "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulders; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even forever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this." (Isa. 9: 6, 7.)

Man, in his lost condition, "sold under sin," under condemnation, weak and ignorant, could not come to God. Hear Job (11: 7-10): "Canst thou by searching find out God? Canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection? It is high as heaven; what canst thou do? Deeper than Sheol; what canst thou know? The measure thereof is longer than the earth, and broader than the sea. If he pass through, and shut up, and call unto judgment, then who can hinder him?" So Jesus, in his tender love and infinite wisdom, was sent to reveal God, his mysteries, and his love, wisdom, and power, unto man, that man might see God, and, seeing him, might love him, and, loving him, might be drawn to him, and, being drawn to him, might be saved. "Making known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he purposed in him." (Eph. 1: 9.)

Jesus revealed the Father as a person. "At that season Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou didst hide these things from the wise and understanding, and didst reveal them unto babes: yea, Father, for so it was well pleasing in thy sight. All things have been delivered unto me of my Father: and no one knoweth the Son, save the Father; neither doth any know the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son willeth to reveal him." (Matt. 11: 25-27.) "Philip saith unto him, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us. Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and dost thou not know me, Philip? he that hath seen me hath seen the Father; how sayest thou, Show us the Father?" (John 14: 8, 9.) When we see by faith the Christ as he ministers to the helpless, makes the dumb to speak and the deaf to hear, heals the sick, drives out demons, and raises the dead, we do not see the man Jesus, but we see the great, loving heart of our God. His wonderful power! "The Father abiding in me doeth his works." Wonderful love! Everlasting power! Who could see him and not adore him? Who could behold his power and not worship him?

He revealed the severity of God. God had said: "Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense." (Heb. 10: 30.) So Jesus said: "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." Paul tells us that God set forth Jesus to show "his righteousness at this present season: that he might himself be just, and the justifier of him that hath faith in Jesus." (Rom. 3: 26.) Jesus must, therefore, come into the world, do his works, and die, to show the Father not only in his love, his severity, but also in his justice. God's justice could not be shown short of the death of Christ. "Since then the children are sharers in flesh and blood, he also himself in like manner partook of the same; that through death he might bring to naught him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and might deliver all them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage." (Heb. 2: 14, 15.) Who was it held in bondage? "To show his righteousness because of the passing over of the sins done aforetime, in the forbearance of God." (Rom. 3: 25.) God in his long forbearance had passed over the sins of some. Their sins were not forgiven, but passed over, till Jesus in his death shed his blood, entered into Hades and overcame the devil, arose from the grave with the keys of death and hell, "entered into that within the veil," and offered his blood for the remission of sins. (See Heb. 9: 11-15.)

But he revealed the grace of God. "For the grace of God hath appeared, bringing salvation to all men, instructing us, to the intent that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly and righteously and godly in this present world." (Tit. 2: 11, 12.)

Jesus came as the great Teacher. "Never man spake as this man." He taught as one having authority. He said: "It is written in the prophets, And they shall all be taught of God. Every one that hath heard from the Father, and hath learned, cometh unto me." (John 6: 45.) In order, therefore, for one to come to the Father, he must hear and learn. Jesus, therefore, taught of the Father and thereby revealed the way to God. He said: "I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father, but by me." It was through him, his death and shed blood, him as a "propitiation, through faith, in his blood," that sins which were passed over by the forbearance of God were forgiven. So it must be through him, as Teacher, the way, the truth, the life, his death and shed blood, one may reach the Father and his forgiveness now.

But he said: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." (Matt. 7: 21.) He said: "Except ye believe that I am he [the Christ], ye shall die in your sins." (John 8: 24.) "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." (Luke 13: 5.) cept one be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3: 5.) But all that do the will of God enter the kingdom; therefore all that do the will of God are born of water and Spirit. But only the clean, those that have their sins remitted, can enter the kingdom, and "apart from shedding of blood there is no remission." (Heb. 9: 22.) Jesus, therefore, said: "For this is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many unto remission of sins." (Matt. 26: 28.) But Jesus' blood was shed in his death. The bondage of sin was broken in his death. Those that do the will of God enter the kingdom. But the will of God is, they shall be all taught. Jesus said, therefore: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) Paul tells us that one reaches the death of Christ in baptism. "Or are ye ignorant that all we who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death? ' (Rom. 6: 3.) As Jesus' blood was shed in his death and the bondage of sin was broken in his death, and people are baptized into the death of Christ, where his blood is and where remission is, we can now see why he said, "Except one be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom," and God's purpose in sending Jesus into the world, "in whom we have our redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our trespasses, according to the riches of his grace, which he made to abound toward us in all wisdom and prudence" (Eph. 1: 7, 8)—that lost mankind might hear the gospel, believe and obey it, and

This explains why Peter at Pentecost said: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus. Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." It explains why they "that were scattered abroad went about preaching the word," and "Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and proclaimed unto them the Christ." They, the people, were to be taught of God. To preach the word was to preach the truth. "Thy word is truth." To preach the truth was to preach Jesus. "I am the way, and the truth." So, "when they believed Philip preaching good tidings concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." It explains why Philip "opened his mouth, and beginning from this scripture, preached unto him Jesus." It explains why, when on their way, "they came unto a certain water; and the eunuch saith, Behold, here is water; what doting hinder me to be baptized?" It explains why Ananias, coming to believing, penitent, praying Saul, said: "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on his name." It explains why Peter commanded devout, praying, almsgiving Gentile Cornelius and his "to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ." It explains why Paul and Silas, in the Philippian jail, "spoke the word unto him [the jailer], with all that were in his house," and why "he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, immediately." There is, therefore, no good reason why Jesus should not be preached as of old, and why believing penitents should not be baptized in the name of the Lord and receive the remission of their sins and the spirit of a Son. Sinner, why not now?

We often do more good by our sympathy than by our labors.—Frederic W. Farrar.

From Z. T. Sweeney.

Columbus, Ind., March 20, 1918.—Editors Gospel Advocate.—Dear Brethren: On my return from Florida I find issue of the Gospel Advocate containing my statement, with your brotherly and courteous reply. I am indeed pleased to see that we agree in so many things and differ in so few. To "make up the issue," as the lawyers say, we agree in the following particulars:

First—We agree that if the convention should do "anything wrong whatsoever," it would be the privilege of individuals and churches to "withdraw from the concern."

Second—That "what the constitution says is a sufficient guarantee that the convention has no desire to modify things that are fixed and final,"

Third—That the churches should not enter into a business corporation with power to invest in and hold real estate, etc.

Fourth—That there is no scripture forbidding any number of Christians uniting to carry out the commission, nor from using good business methods in so doing. That the Foreign Christian Missionary Society is not objectionable as a "forwarding agency," and that such supervision as is afforded by the constitution probably cannot be improved upon.

These are very substantial points of agreement and go a long way toward tearing away the "thin veil" that separates us.

So far as I can see, there is only one thing that constitutes the difference between us—viz.: The Gospel Advocate thinks that the constitution empowers the convention to interfere with the local autonomy of the churches, and we do not think so. The Advocate says: "Give us a human business organization which can build orphanages and schools, with no power, whether vested in a convention or a foreign missionary society or in anything else, to interfere in any way with the divinely constituted rights of the local churches, and we shall certainly not oppose it."

You ground your objection to the convention upon Article III. of its Constitution, which reads as follows: "Voting shall be viva voce, except that in case of a doubtful result and on demand of one hundred or more members the chair may order a ballot, and on such ballot each congregation shall have but one vote, etc. As I have previously stated, "I opposed that article at the start," but I did so on the ground that it was unbusinesslike, and gave way to the judgment of my brethren because I knew that it was impossible to ever put such a vote into operation. I repeat now that if the convention shall exist for a hundred years, no such ballot will ever be taken. It is an idealism pure and simple. The ballot cannot be resorted to except in case of a doubtful result. Under parliamentary law, there can be no doubtful result. Parliamentary law is too exact a science to admit a doubtful result. Let me call the attention of your readers to a few of the simplest rules of parliamentary voting. When a viva voce vote is taken, the speaker must announce the vote as it appears to him. If there is a call for "a division" and a standing vote, the chair is then bound to count the vote or appoint tellers to count it. They must count in pairs, one from each side. They must agree upon the vote; and when the reports of the tellers are added up, there can be no doubt ful result unless "figures lie." The result will show one of three things; (1) A clear majority, (2) a tie, (3) a majority of one.

If the first result is obtained, there can be no ballot. If the second is obtained, the motion is lost and there can be no ballot. If the third is obtained, the speaker has power to cast his vote and make it a tie, in which event the motion is lost. If he chooses not to vote, there is a majority of one and there can be no ballot ordered. So a ballot under the constitution is an utter impossibility. Knowing all this at the time, I yielded that which was sentimental and ideal, and thereby obtained from those contending for Article III. concessions which were vital and fundamental, as a compromise. The article stands in the constitution, but it is a dead letter and will remain so as long as it remains in the constitution.

Of course there is no power on earth that can prevent any deliberative body from volating its constitution if it chooses to do so. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man" to devise a constitution which cannot be violated. If such an emergency should arise, the Gospel Advocate will find many of us fighting side by side with it for the sacredness of the constitution. But it is not necessary to anticipate any such action. Let us take the present constitution at its word not to interfere with "things that are fixed and final" till we are compelled to act otherwise.

Yours in Christian bonds, Z. T. SWEENEY.

Should Be a Good Citizen.

No man should become so engrossed with his own affairs that he cannot be a good citizen. Christians should lead holy and unblamable lives. The one who is too busy to do church work, to attend its services and to help forward with its efforts, is a great help to Satan's cause and is highly regarded by him. The man who will not feed the hungry, dress the cold, and minister to the wounded is neither a good citizen nor a Christian. It is always time to advance the kingdom of Christ.

Preach the Word.

The gospel is God's power unto salvation. Whenever the preacher turns away from the gospel of Christ and becomes a popular lecturer and entertainer, he loses his influence as a preacher. The most effective preachers are those who rely on the gospel story for the conversion of men. The Western Recorder very pertinently remarks on this subject:

The claim is being made to-day that "the pulpit has lost This may be true in many cases, but it is only true where the evangelical and evangelistic preacher of the gospel of the blessed Son of God ringing out in tones of authority against sin, when souls were shaken with the sense of their guilt before God and turned to a Savior for redemption, has given place to the popular lecturer and pulpit entertainer.

What "the Blues" Mean.

It is sinful to have the blues. Yes, just unadulterated, old-fashioned, inexcusable, black-hearted sin. When we stop to think what the blues are made up of, the sin is evident. A chemist who has recently found Christ as his whole life and victory and joy writes to a friend: "A Christian should never be blue. Green ignorance and yellow fear and cowardice compose it. The gospel and faith will cure it instantly." This chemist has rightly analyzed the ingredients of spiritual blues. A person cannot be rejoicing and be blue at the same time. God gives the Christian a simple and unmistakable commandment: "Rejoice in the Lord always." (Phil. 4: 4.) But we cannot rejoice on he a simple and unmistakable commandment: "Rejoice in the Lord always." (Phil. 4: 4.) But we cannot rejoice, or be joyful, by our will power; joy is beyond the power of any human being to accomplish or produce; it is wholly supernatural; it is part of "the fruit of the Spirit" (Gal. 5: 22), therefore can be produced or brought into existence in a human life only by God himself. But it will be produced instantly by the Holy Spirit in the life of any Christian who "late god" register by simple faith in tian who "lets go and lets God," resting by simple faith in the sufficiency of Christ to meet our every need, even our need of joy. As we accept the whole of the gospel—the good news—by faith, our green ignorance and our yellow fear are instantly dispelled by the glory of the radiance of the Sun of righteousness shining in us. If Christ is always trustworthy, then blues are never necessary, and joy is always possible.-Sunday School Times.

It is the duty of Christians to rejoice. "Rejoice in the Lord always: again I will say, Rejoice." (Phil. 4: 4.) "Whom not having seen ye love; on whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice greatly with joy unspeakable and full of glory." (1 Pet. 1; 8.) Christ is ever present with his faithful children.

Using the Sword at Home.

Home is the place to learn how to use the sword of the Spirit. In Deut. 6, following the giving of the commandments, Israel is directed: "Thou shalt teach them diligently unto the children, and shalt talk of them . . . in the house." Over against the word "teach," in the margin of the Bagster Bible, are given the alternate words, "whet" or "sharpen." It is in Christian homes that the dren should learn to fence with the sword of the Spirit, the word of God, which is "sharper than any two-edged sword." It is a more wonderful weapon than King Arthur's magic "Excalibur." Do not think your child is too young to take it in hand. It is a great mistake, as H. Clay Trumbull pointed out in his "Hints on Child Training." to think that a child cannot "take in the great truths concerning God's nature, and the scope of God's power, as fully as a theologian can take them in." The teacher of the ele-mentary grades in the Sunday school needs the coöperation of parents, and Mrs. Maud Junkin Baldwin shows in this Elementary Number of the Sunday School Times how it can be given.—Sunday School Times.

The religion of Christ will never fail this nation until it has first been driven from the families of the land. Timothy's training began before he was born. His faith first dwelt in his grandmother. His was an unfeigned faith "which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice." Yes, keep the home fires of devotion burning, for the family is the salt of the church as the church is the salt of the earth. Children taught the scriptures at home and who see the religion of Christ exemplified in the lives of their parents usually grow to useful manhood and a noble womanhood. Christian parents should not get under the juniper tree and pray to die, as did Elijah, but they should be watchful and not fail to teach the Bible to their children.

O O O

Prayer and Humiliation.

If the people of our nation, in true confession of their sin and in humble penitence and faith in God's goodness and grace in Jesus Christ, get together before God's throne in united prayer, we have much assurance for believing that there will be given to them a speedy victory over the foe whose attacks upon their life and liberty are being resisted.

A resolution is before Congress, called for by Christian men at Washington City and elsewhere, asking the Presi-dent to call the nation to the devout observance of such a day of prayer and humiliation. We have reason to think that Congress will act in accordance with this request and that President Wilson will call the people to engage, devoutly and prayerfully and humbly, in beseeching the favor of God upon the efforts of our nation to secure peace and safety through victory for our sorely tried and suffering

Thus did President Lincoln summon the people of our land, in a dark and critical hour of our nation's history, to come before God unitedly in prayer and humble confession of sin and implore his delivering grace. The words used by Mr. Lincoln have been incorporated into the resolution introduced into Congress and may be read on another page

We hope that it will be the case that we shall all be brought to this confession of our shortcomings, to this sense of our absolute need of God, and to a united imploring of the help of the Almighty in the securing of the noble ends for which we are carrying on our defensive, unselfish, and righteous warfare.-Herald and Presbyter.

We "ought always to pray, and not to faint." God is pleased when we persevere in prayer. Greater victories have been won by prayer than by the sword. Our prayers should be offered in faith and in harmony with God's will. "And this is the boldness which we have toward him, that, if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us: and if we know that he heareth us whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions which we have asked of him." (1 John 5: 14, 15.) May truth and righteousness prevail. May Christ's kingdom grow until it covers the earth as the waters cover the sea.

"President Lincoln set apart Thursday, the 30th day of April, 1863, as a day of national humiliation and prayer, and requested that 'all the people abstain on that day from their ordinary secular pursuits and unite at their several places of public worship and the respective homes in keeping the day holy to the Lord."

Does the Constitution Empower the Convention to Interfere With Local Church Autonomy?

BY M. C. K.

On page 364 of this issue of the Gospel Advocate we publish another courteous and brotherly article from Brother Z. T. Sweeney. We ask our readers to give it a careful perusal before reading our reply.

The one vital issue between us in this controversy, as our brother correctly maintains, turns on the power constitutionally vested in the convention, and we have endeavored, in the heading placed over this article, to state that issue in the form of a simple question. Brother Sweeney answers that question in the negative; but we, without the slightest reservation, answer it categorically in the affirmative. Thus the issue is sharply drawn, and on this position we are willing to stand or fall, as the facts may demand. Moreover, we are glad to meet our brethren of the missionary society on the issue as thus succinctly stated, and shall strive to do so, as far as we may be able, in the spirit and manner of our common Master.

The battle between us on this issue is mainly over Article III, of the Constitution. This is the article which shows how the convention is empowered to decide things by a majority vote of the members. On the statement in that article that "voting shall be viva voce, except that in case of a doubtful result and on demand of one hundred or more members the chair may order a ballot," Brother Sweeney says: "If the convention shall exist for a hundred years, no such ballot will ever be taken." Well, what if it is not? What does that have to with the convention's power to decide things by a majority vote? Even where the "result" is not "doubtful," the fact still remains that the result is decided by a majority vote, and the mere circumstance that the voting is "viva voce" in no wise changes this fact. Hence, quoting from our reply in the Gospel Advocate of March 7, "we still insist that, in any and all cases, when a general ecclesiastical body, empowered to decide matters for the local churches by a majority vote, takes action, no matter what that action may be," and no matter whether the voting be viva voce or by ballot, "the said churches are compelled to pursue one or the other of these courses "-that is, they will be compelled to either go with the wrong measure adopted by the majority vote or withdraw from the convention, one or the other.

There is simply no escape from this alternative; and hence, from the incontrovertible facts before us and by every principle of sound logic which applies in the case, the constitution does empower the convention to interfere with local church autonomy. To say that a church, at such a juncture, would still have the right to pull out of the concern and have nothing to do with it, is simply to surrender the whole question; for a church as ordinarily tied up with any one of the other forms of ecclesiasticism in modern times, whether Episcopal, Methodist, Presbyterian, or what not, could do precisely the same thing in the same situation.

On the contrary, under the ecclesiastical order so plainly taught in the New Testament, such a situation is utterly impossible. Here every church is an independent, autonomous concern, and not subject to dictation, control, or any sort of interference by some higher body. A properly organized church is not only the highest ecclesiastical body recognized in the New Testament, but there is not in that volume a vestige or a hint of divine authority for any other. Hence, when a church goes wrong, under the New Testament order, as they have sometimes done in all ages, it does not necessarily carry the other churches with it; but when the convention or general body by a majority vote goes wrong, it carries with it all the churches which are tied up in the concern and which give it their support.

We see no reason to call in question anything our brother says on "parliamentary law," but we fail to see its bearing on the issue between us. That issue is created, as we have seen, by the establishment of a general ecclesiastic order under which local churches are subject to the control of, and to be carried into measures by, a power external to themselves; whereas the New Testament order, by the very organic constitution of local churches, disconnects each church organically, but in no other way, from every other church, and leaves it free to supervise and manage its own affairs in all lines of its activity. We should be glad to have our brethren of the society join us in the effort to maintain, magnify, and encourage this order, thus completely "tearing away the 'thin veil.'" Indeed, why should they not? It is not only the expression of divine wisdom, but it reduces the possibility of evil in ecclesiastical affairs to a minimum, whereas the society order opens the way for the maximum of evil. Possibly this was the divine reason for establishing the local, and steering clear of the general, organization.

BY E. A. E.

INDIFFERENCE AND OTHER SINS.

Every way of a man is right in his own eyes; but Jehovah weigheth the hearts. (Prov. 21: 2.)

All the ways of a man are clean in his own eyes; but

Jehovah weigheth the spirits. (Prov. 16: 2.)

The way of a fool is right in his own eyes; but he that is wise hearkeneth unto counsel. (Prov. 12: 15.)

It is encouraging, refreshing, and edifying to read an article or to hear a sermon when the writer or preacher in the love of truth and the spirit of Christ teaches the will of God on the subject under consideration and every one is impressed with the fact that this is his desire and purpose. For instance, Brother Larimore's much-needed and excellent article on "Fellowship."

It is discouraging to read so many articles and to hear so many sermons, written and delivered in the spirit of the world, endeavoring seemingly to prove by the wisdom of the wise that God is right on certain questions, or to justify the positions taken by the writers and speakers, or to sustain the theories and notions of men, or to display a knowledge of history and literature in general and powers of eloquence, or to create a sensation, or to moralize a little on some current events.

Brother David Lipscomb was a good and wise man and safe teacher, because he feared God and trembled at his word. "The fear of Jehovah is the beginning of wisdom," and God blesses the man who "is poor and of a contrite spirit, and that trembleth" at his word. (Isa. 66: 2, 5.) I never knew a man who manifested a deeper reverence and greater awe for God and his ways, or was more of a contrite spirit, or more greatly feared to trifle with or to add to and take from the word of God in the least thing. He told me more than once that he studied a subject anew every time he discussed it. He never took it for granted that he knew and understood all about it. He studied and wrote and spoke on the subject of laying on of hands all his life as a teacher; yet, a few years before his death and before his decrepitude, he told me that he took up every passage on the subject, every case and example in both the Old Testament and the New Testament, in order to learn more fully what the Bible teaches. He was far more anxious to learn and to teach the will of God than to sustain any position he may have taken formerly on the subject. Because he studied anew every subject or continued all along to study "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," there were vigor and freshness in his articles so long as he was able to write. For this reason his articles were always interesting, instructive, and sought. Everybody was impressed with the fact that he sought the truth through the love of the truth and endeavored to teach it for the good of the people; that he never sought position, popularity, or money; and that none of these things ever interfered with his straightforward course in practicing and teaching the will of God. He never refused an open, honorable, and thorough investigation of any Bible subject. Although Dr. Brents and Brother J. M. Barnes, able men, differed from him on the subject of the Bible cause for laying on hands, he invited them both at different times to present to the Nashville Bible School and all others who could attend what they understood the Bible to teach on the subject. This was not a controversy and was not done in a controversial spirit; it was a search for truth. He wanted all to see every phase of the subject. Truth and right never fear investigation. Again, Brother Lipscomb with Brother John F. Rowe discussed fully in the Gospel Advocate the subject of Christians' relationship to civil government; and, later, he invited Brother G. G. Taylor, a man of most excellent ability and full of the Holy Spirit, to preach on the subject to the Nashville Bible School, although Brother Taylor did not in all things agree with him. But this is the way to learn the whole truth, to be of the same mind and the same love, and to speak the same thing. Again, a brother was invited to discuss in the Nashville Bible School all the Bible has to say in favor of societies and instrumental music in the worship. He declined.

To some subjects embraced in "the whole counsel of God" very many younger, if not wiser, preachers than Brother Lipscomb are wholly indifferent. For some reason they seem to think that such subjects are not worthy of their time, although in the Bible. Paul declared "the whole counsel of God" on all Bible subjects-that is, on "all things that pertain unto life and godliness." And nothing deterred him; through fear of persecution and death he kept back nothing. He did not hold his "life of any account as dear unto" himself. (Acts 20: 24.) His only purpose was to accomplish his course in preaching "the gospel of the grace of God." At Cesarea many brethren and his dearest friends wept and besought him not to go at the time to Jerusalem, because "bonds and afflictions" awaited him; but he asked why they were weeping and breaking his heart by attempting to persuade him to stop in this course, when he was ready, not only to be bound, but to die at Jerusalem. I repeat, preachers have no choice of what they shall preach; God settles that. They cannot be indifferent to, or fail or refuse to teach. all that God reveals on any subject. Never mind the consequences; God will take care of them. Never be foolhardy, brash, and rash, but always wise as serpents and harmless as doves. Never flaunt convictions in the face of any one. Never court or invite persecution or boast of courage. Those who boast of courage when there is no danger are the first to deny their Lord and to flee when danger faces them. In calmness, firmness, gentleness, and the spirit of Christ, go straight forward in the right. How many preachers of to-day, for instance, purely for truth's sake and the salvation of the givers, teach fully all the word of God on the grace of giving? How many study first and then attempt to teach the qualifications and work and responsibility of elders? Soon the rising generation will not know from all the preaching and teaching they hear that there be any such persons as elders or any such work as that of elders. The tendency of many preachers is to virtually do away with the rule and other work of elders. The course, if not the intention, of many preachers is to do away entirely with elders and their work. How many preachers of to-day teach all that God says on economy? On the different reasons for all following useful employment? On the scriptural way and duty of the church to support widows indeed? On the duty of children and grandchildren to work at some honest occupation in order to support their parents, grandparents, and other helpless relatives? On the duty of all Christians as individuals to visit (caring for and helping otherwise) the fatherless and widows in their afflictions? On the work of women as home builders and keepers and the God-appointed mission of women and against the course thousands are pursuing? On the ornament of "a meek and quiet spirit" and against immodest dress and costly array and jewels of pearls and gold? On the bearing and proper training of children? On keeping unspotted from the world? On worldliness and wickedness in general? On honesty, uprightness, rendering to all their dues, and, therefore, paying all just debts? On speaking every man truth with his neighbor and, therefore, against lying in all forms? How many preachers and teachers of to-day are seeking to build up the New Testament church in all its parts and work and God-ordained mission? How many are studying to present themselves approved unto God (not unto men), workmen who need not to be ashamed, handling aright (rightly applying or holding a straight course in) the word of God? How many are preaching all the Bible says on loving enemies, doing good for evil, overcoming evil with good, avenging not oneself, giving place unto the wrath of God, loving one's neighbor as oneself, loving brethren from the heart fervently, and loving God with all the heart and soul and mind and strength? How many are first endeavoring to practice this? How many are forgiving others, begging pardon for wrongs they have done others, and practicing all that the Bible teaches on this subject? How many are knowing nothing, save Jesus Christ and him crucified?

In one of Brother J. M. Kidwill's notebooks, which I have, he says he made it a rule to study anew every subject on which he preached before preaching on it, however much he had studied it before. This he did because he loved the truth, sought the truth, and was never satisfied with his present knowledge of the truth.

Since such good and useful men and such thoughtful and wise teachers as Brethren Lipscomb and Kidwill thus studied and continued to study the word of God on all subjects, how much the more should the rest of us do so? All who seek to be saved to instruct and to save others do this.

Referring again to useful employment or to the teaching of God that all Christians must learn honest occupations for necessary wants and in order to help the needy, it was feared a few years ago that all church members and some preachers did not even appreciate this. Now, since so many have failed to do this because the Bible teaches it. the government has taken it in hand to see that all do work at something profitable in some way. This is right and encouraging. God teaches most clearly that Christians must be profitable and useful people in any government under which they live. How much better it is to do this for Christ's sake than to be forced to do it! The lamentable fact is that so many have never learned that this is a part of Christianity because, for one reason, so few preachers ever considered it their duty to teach it or to practice it.

In the next article we hope to see further that no preachers, teachers, elders, or churches can be indifferent to any duty, to any work, or to anything the Bible teaches.

More Criticism Than Work.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Brother J. T. Fields, of Benton, Ky., complains that the disciples are quarreling more than they are working. He says:

Brother McQuiddy: If we are to send the gospel to the boys in the camps, let us do so now. I am not caring anything about the Y. M. C. A. Let us quit quarreling for the present and do something. We are a people that dispute about everything and hurt ourselves more than all other people injure us. I will cheerfully do all I can when the way seems clear. So let us preach the gospel to the boys in the camps now.

We are not aware of quarreling with any one over the Y. M. C. A. Our efforts have been to induce the brethren to preach the gospel to every creature; and as the boys in the camps are creatures and are our boys, we have been seeking to stir up the churches to preach the gospel to them.

It is doubtless true that some do more criticizing than they do work for the Master. It is discouraging that some devote so much of their time to criticizing that they find no time to work as the Lord directs. Those who contend for being guided by "it is written" should certainly be more zealous in doing the work of the Lord than are errorists in preaching their false doctrines. It is not enough to contend for the truth while we sit with folded hands and do nothing. The conduct of some is calculated to lead us to think that they criticize others in order to cover up their own failures. It will not be well with such when they appear at the judgment. Christ says: "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6: 46.)

Many make great professions and pray most earnestly for the salvation of the world, while they do nothing to help advance the kingdom of God in the earth. Not those who make the greatest professions, not those who pray seemingly most earnestly, not those who do even great works in the name of Christ, are approved and justified by him, but those who do the will of the Lord. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, did we not prophesy by thy name, and by thy name cast out demons, and by thy name do many mighty works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity. Every one therefore that heareth these words of mine, and doeth them, shall be likened unto a wise man, who built his house upon the rock: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon the rock. And every one that heareth these words of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, who built his house upon the sand; and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and smote upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall thereof." (Matt.

Paul tells us plainly that not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified." (Rom. 2: 13.) While men are to be commended for walking by faith, a theoretical faith that does not speak out, act out, and come out in a life of obedience is dead, and is, therefore, worthless. James (1: 22-25) speaks thus "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deluding your own selves. For if any one is a hearer of the word and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a mirror: for he beholdeth himself and goeth away, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was. But he that looketh into the perfect law, the law of liberty, and so continueth, being not a hearer that forgetteth but a doer that worketh, this man shall be blessed in his doing."

The practice of speaking against brethren and seeking to find fault with them cannot be too severely condemned. Condemning our brethren unjustly only makes our condemnation the more terrible. Again, James (4: 11, 12) says: "Speak not one against another, brethren. He that speaketh against a brother, or judgeth his brother, speaketh against the law, and judgeth the law; but if thou judgest the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge. One only is the lawgiver and judge, even he who is able to saye and to destroy: but who art thou that judgest thy neighbor?"

The churches and preachers must act quickly and promptly if they preach the gospel in the camps. Let the preachers who are willing to do this work speak out, and let the churches who are ready to support them make such readiness known. Our earnest endeavor is to get the work done, and done as the Lord directs.

Value of the Human Soul.

BY E. G. S.

Jesus said: "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

Very few people seem to realize the value of the soul. Jesus plainly shows in this passage that the whole world would be insufficient as a price for the soul. It would be impossible to place an adequate value upon the soul. When we think about the money value of our souls, we are lost. We cannot name how much money it would take to purchase our souls from us. No man can give an estimate of the money value of this world. It is entirely beyond our ability to express the soul's value as we express values of earthly things. We cannot sell and deliver our souls, even if we desired to do so. Hence, Jesus presented a most important question when he asked what profit it would be to a man to gain the whole world and yet lose his own soul.

With the soul lost in eternal perdition, there is nothing left for a man to do. He is fixed for eternity. While a man lives, he is free to think and act for himself; but when death comes, that is the end. He is then assigned to an eternal destiny according to the life that he lived on earth. If his life was directed in the faithful service of God here, he will be placed in the heavenly home; but if he neglected the service of God in this life, he will be cast into the lake of fire "prepared for the devil and his angels." Then there will be no power that can take him out of that pit. But all that will yield heart and life to the service of God here will be taken to the heavenly home, where no power can interfere to take them out. There is the most perfect safety provided for all faithful servants of the Lord. The only true way, therefore, to provide for our safety in time and for eternity is by faithfully serving the Lord in this life. This will make our salvation sure.

Why all the people in the Bible lands do not obey the gospel and thus forever secure the salvation of their souls is very strange to me. But the love of the world and the lust of the flesh is a great hindrance to the word of the Lord. Most people think so much about the world and its pleasures and treasures that they do not take the interest in the salvation of their souls that they should. This is an awful mistake to make. When people are done with the affairs of this life, then they begin to realize the value of the soul to an extent they never did before; but it will then be forever too late to prepare for the heavenly home. We must make that preparation in this life or we can never make it at all. This world has its charms and treasures, but what are they when compared to eternal life? Eternity and eternal realities lay hold of us when the time of preparation is forever past and cannot be called back. The joys of Christianity have all been missed by not embracing it while we lived, and its precious opportunities are forever passed and cannot be recalled. Nothing whatever can be done in the way of preparation when Death lays his icy hands upon us. All we can do then will be to yield to the cold demands made upon us by the grim monster. No greater mistake can be made than to put off the preparation for death till the end of life is at hand, for we will be in no condition then to make any preparation that will do us any good. All we can do will be to drop off into eternity just as we are when that event comes. There was never a more dangerous thought indulged than the thought of waiting till death is upon us to make preparation for it. As the poet savs:

"Life is the time to serve the Lord, The time to insure the great reward."

Therefore let no one think for a moment of waiting till death actually comes to make preparation for it. It would be but an insult to the Lord to put off our day of grace and at the last moment ask the Lord to take us home to glory.

Very few people seem to realize just what sort of preparation is necessary to save their souls. A large portion of the religious world believe and teach that people must "get religion" in order to be prepared for death. But there is not one word said in the New Testament about "getting religion." The religion of that book is something to be done. The word of God says: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." (James 1: 27.) Hence the religion of the New Testament is something to be done, not something to be got. Many of the religious teachers of this world are deceiving the people by teaching their opinions about religion instead of teaching just what the word of God says about it. The command of the New Testament is, "Preach the word," not their opinions about the word.

CONTROL TO USE A CONTROL OF THE PROPERTY OF THE WAY IN THE WAY IN THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY

We rejoice in the spirit of self-sacrifice that prompted some of the above-named gifts. One good sister "resolved to send the price of the eggs I got on Sundays in March." Her hens were real sympathetic toward the cause, for she adds: "I got more eggs on Sundays than on other days." Another sister writes: "I will wear last year's hat and send the money saved to the suffering people." Two friends sent two old watches that were sold for three dollars, and this much was added to the fund through their thoughtful deed. Let us say again that we deeply appreciate the many encouraging messages that come with the money. While we do not have space to print them, we read them all carefully and reciprocate every good wish and prayer. The following from Brother W. W. Shook, who sent the offering of the church at Belmont, Miss., is a good sample of the many expressions received: "May God bless your efforts in behalf of sighing, suffering humanity, and may the church of the living God wake up to a realization of its duty, and may Christians understand that to give glory in the church we must give in the church."

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Armenian and Syrian Fund or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Missionary

Letter from Dehra Dun, India.

BY E. S. JELLEY, JR.

The year 1917 came in finding me down with fever sores from exposure and under-nutrition and mental suffering; it leaves me in better health than I have had for years, although my nerves are a bit tired. God does not temper the wind to the shorn lamb, but he strengthens the lamb to bear it—blessed be his name! I was thinking about David's words about our Father giving him songs in the night, and I felt that I could sing in the night also if I had a song which would not disturb others. So on railway journeys I made the following, and made or fitted a quiet tune to it:

Unto thee, O Father, I look up and pray; Keep thou me in all my ways, O keep me night and day.

Half this world's in darkness, Half is in the light; Day and night unto thee Both are just alike.

I look up and trust thee,
Thou art all to me;
Heaven is naught without thee—
Earth is heaven with thee.

I look up and praise thee, Father, Savior, Friend! Let me walk beside thee Till my journey's end.

In thy dear Son, Jesus, Thou art manifest; He is ever near me, Me he gives sweet rest.

I look up and bless thee,
Thou my heart's blest King!
Giver of our Jesus,
Unto thee I sing.

Many times when despair has sought to possess me, I have sung this song in the night and been strengthened.

Then there are the psalms of David, so much neglected by us—what words of strength and comfort they contain! Most of the first forty-six of them seemed to have been written just especially for me and my present circumstances, and they gave me hope and kept me from madness. I read the thirty-fifth psalm several times. Then over in the fiftieth I found what God requires of us—not burnt offerings, but "call upon me in the day of trouble." Again, the expression, "God my exceeding joy." These psalms would have driven away any traces of antispecial-providence heresy, if I had been afflicted with it, for they taught me that our Father cares and is ready to help.

As for the work, I have done more, perhaps, than I had hoped to be able to do this year even if unforeseen troubles had not arisen. I took part in Bible studies at Bhalgaon, Shevgaon, and Ghogargaon, besides meeting the workers on other occasions and some itinerating among the brethren. There have been perhaps under a hundred baptism.

When I am in Bombay, I speak in the Wesleyan Chapel by invitation of their missionary. Naturally I cannot skin the sects in their house, yet I try to give them a message which will awaken in them a desire to follow the Lord in all things.

About two months ago a man came to me with proofs that he (a prominent high-caste Hindu) had for years been holding truth-seeker meetings, and that finally they had organized what they called the "Christian Assembly." What remained was for them to be baptized; but no one dared to take them in owing to the prior claim of the Church of England to jurisdiction, which claim he would not for certain reasons recognize. Four hundred men of middle castes were actually ready to become Christians, and in all there were about two thousand adherents pledged to become Christians. Brethren, pray for them.

At the beginning of the year my children were dangerously ill, and so was Mrs. Jelley. Our baby, Alethia, born on January 12, was dreadfully emaciated, weighing only about four pounds. Now only one child is sick, and that with a cold. Mrs. Jelley is feeling better than at any time since she left Canada.

As to expenses, they have risen greatly—railway fares increased, telegraph rates increased, the price of cloth quadrupled; and then this year I have had so many unforeseeable expenses that I am at present about four hundred dollars in debt. Help me if you can without hurting your own family.

Finally, brethren, pray for us and for all of the workers, and for the Christians of India—my sons and daughters in the gospel.

A Request from Brother Jelley.

Brethren, as you know, missionaries generally go home "on a furlough" every five to seven years to recruit up their broken physical energy. I also need this change badly. Furthermore, if I am to see my mother before she also is called away, it will have to be soon; for she has been an invalid for the last thirty-five years, and is now seventy-one years of age. Finally, as her support has been taken away from her and my eldest daughter, I must go home and do something for them.

Brethren, however you feel toward me, whether you wish to support me in the future or not, if you have had anything to do with sending us out or with our support, I trust you will see the reasonableness of my request to be sent home at once. If you have not helped us in the past, then here is an opportunity. It will take over a thousand dollars to land us on the Pacific Coast. If one hundred brethren would each contribute ten dollars at once, it would nearly get us home.

However, some of the one hundred are going to back out from sending the ten dollars. Then let one or two churches make up for them by sending one hundred dollars at once. You know we are not very forward about missionary matters, and it will take an effort to raise that amount of money.

Please do not allow sectarians and the board people to reproach us with, "These people sent out a missionary, allowed him to be in want, and could not get him home again."

Your brother in Christ, E. S. JELLEY.

Doubtless Brother Jelley needs a rest, but we would suggest that the brethren make a contribution to give him a rest in India, and not bring him back to this country. Doubtless he could find some place over there where he could rest and recuperate. To bring him back here would be rather expensive, and the funds utilized for that purpose should be devoted to the conversion of the heathen. If his health is in such a condition that he cannot possibly recuperate there, then the brethren should make contributions to bring him back here at once.

Query Department

Brother McQuiddy: Are the ordinary soda crackers such as are manufactured by the Tennessee Biscuit Company of the proper material to be used as communion bread? In other words, what constitutes leavening, and do common crackers contain it?

H. L. M.

Bread that has leaven in it should not be used in the Lord's Supper. When the Passover was instituted, they used unleavened bread. This means bread without leavening. Soda crackers certainly contain leaven. Wafers made up with sweet milk or water would be acceptable. Probably sweet milk would be preferable.

Brother McQuiddy: Please explain 1 John 1: 8, also 1 John 3: 9. What is it to be born of God, and how may we harmonize these two passages?

1 John 1: 8 reads: "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." 1 John 3: 9 reads: "Whosoever is begotten of God doeth no sin, because his seed abideth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is begotten of God." The first passage teaches that no one is sinless. The second passage teaches that it is inconsistent for the child of God, so long as the seed, which is the word of God, remains in him, to practice sin. He will not lead a life of sin. The spirit begotten of God—the new creation—does not sin, and cannot sin and remain God's child. But sometimes the old nature revives and for a moment exerts its power. Hence, Paul says: "It is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me." (Rom. 8: 20.)

Brother McQuiddy: We, as a church assembly, would like to be advised in regard to the Lord's Supper. Which is the more scriptural, the use of the old-style two-cup method or the individual communion set? As there are so many contagious diseases, it seems unsanitary to use the two cups.

M. A. Dodson.

This query has been answered a number of times in the Gospel Advocate. The Scriptures do not say how many cups shall be used. I think, however, that there is nothing in the contention that there is danger of communicating diseases by the use of the same cup. This has been the custom of the church for a long time, and yet I have never heard of one single case of disease being communicated in this way. While the Bible does not condemn the use of individual cups or the individual communion set, there is danger of the church becoming worldly. Christians are not to be conformed to the world. On this ground the use of the individual communion set could be condemned more than upon any other. However, let it be clearly understood that there is no teaching in the word of God that authorizes the use of from two to eight any more than it authorizes the use of fifty or as many cups as may be used. * * *

Brother McQuiddy: In your issue of February 28, in answering Mrs. R. A. Hogan's question relative to the sin against the Holy Spirit, I note that you give the two customary ideas as to what it is, and still leave it, to my mind, in uncertainty. Are we to understand that God will forgive all kinds of sin except one, and has not revealed that one? Are we to go through this life and not know whether we are committing this sin or not until we reach the judgment? Does it seem exactly fair for God to let his child blunder along in such an uncertain way? You say that "it is unbecoming to be dogmatic as to what is the sin against the Holy Spirit." Possibly you are right, but I cannot understand why it is "not becoming" to contend for what God has revealed. W. A. CAMERON.

While I gave two customary ideas as to what the sin against the Holy Spirit is, I am inclined to the view that any sin persisted in may grow into a sin against the Holy Spirit. The sin against the Holy Spirit is not a specific The obedient know they have not committed the sin against the Holy Spirit. Men could reject the teaching of John the Baptist, could also reject the teachings of Christ. and yet have an opportunity of being saved. When the Holy Spirit came and guided the apostles into all truth and organized the church of God, they could accept his teaching and be saved; but whoever turns away from this teaching of the Holy Spirit, whoever rejects the last will and testament sealed by the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, will not enjoy pardon in this life nor in the life to come. No other provisions will be made for his salvation. This seems to me to be in harmony with the teaching of God's word. But, as this matter is not as clearly revealed as it is that a man must believe in Christ, I hold that it is "unbecoming to be dogmatic" as to just what the sin against the Holy Spirit is. We may be clear and positive where God has spoken; but where he has not spoken plainly, it is not becoming to assume that our judgment is infallibly correct. * * *

Brother McQuiddy: (1) Please explain John 3: 15, which reads: "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him," (2) Also, what do you believe about heavenly recognition? Do you believe we will know our loved ones there as our loved ones?

Mrs. W. J. Hogan.

(1) The meaning of John 3: 15 is that whoever hates his brother has murder in his heart, and is, therefore, a murderer at heart. Murder is conceived in the heart before it becomes an act. Cain hated Abel and conceived murder in his heart before he murdered him. Just so, every murder springs from hatred-is first conceived in the heart and then is brought forth in action. (2) As to recognition in heaven, we have but one actual case revealed in the Bible. The rich man recognized Lazarus in Abraham's bosom. There are a number of passages of scripture which are meaningless unless there is recognition in heaven. The question of future recognition is not directly raised in the word of God. On the mount of transfiguration, when Jesus was transfigured before three of his disciples, Moses and Elijah appeared and remained with them. Moses had been dead nearly fifteen hundred years. Elijah had not seen death, for God took him. Moses and Elijah appeared as men and were recognized as such. Paul teaches that the body with which we are "clothed upon" at death does not differ materially, so far as can be observed, from that which we shall have when our vile bodies are fashioned like unto his glorious body. Moses and Elijah appeared as two men, and not as formless, featureless spirits. Their appearance was in glory. This indicates future recognition. When men pass into the future state, they are still conscious of who they were in this life and of what they did. This presupposes future recognition. This is evident from the language of Christ when he says: "Many will say to me in that day, Lord. Lord, did we not prophesy by thy name, and by thy name cast out demons, and by thy name do many mighty works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." The same thought is found in the judgment scene revealed in the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew. These with many other scriptures indicate to me that people will recognize one another in the future state. However, we should be more concerned about living that life that will fit and qualify us for heaven than about knowing each other in heaven.

Alexander Yohannan has started on the return trip to his home and people in Persia.

For the benefit of inquirers, we wish to state that John E. Dunn's address is Camp Sevier, S. C., Y. M. C. A. Head-overters.

We regret to report that Brother Kurfees is quite sick and will be unable to attend to his correspondence for a few days.

Fred Cowin is preaching for the church at Horse Cave, Ky. After this meeting he will return to his home at Toronto, Canada.

R. V. Cawthon has closed a good meeting with the Reid Avenue congregation, this city. He is now preaching for the church at Rothchild Avenue.

From Robert Sweeney, Decherd, Tenn., April 9: "I wish to express my sincere thanks to the good people of Decherd and community who stood so nobly by us during the long suffering and death of my loving wife and companion. May the Lord bless you all."

C. H. Baker writes: "I have six weeks' time, beginning the first of June and extending up to the second Lord's day in July, that I would be glad to devote to meetings. Any one who may desire my service in a meeting should write me at Kirkmansville, Ky."

From Thomas E. Hedges, Labelle, Fla., April 11: "William Rucker, of Adrian, Fla., has just closed a seven-days' meeting at this place with four confessions and baptisms. They were two young ladies, teachers in the high school; one young lady student; and the wife of our esteemed physician, Dr. Roberts. Brother Rucker is a good speaker and makes the message plain and easy to be understood. May the Lord bless and help him in his work."

"Commentary on Acts of the Apostles." By David Lipscomb. A commentary on the Acts of the Apostles, with questions suited for the use of families and schools. This commentary is especially adapted to the comprehension of the masses of the people. It also contains a chronology of the Acts, map showing Paul's missionary journeys, brief biographies of the apostles, and an introductory chapter on the Holy Spirit. Pages, 249, and Index. Cloth bound. Price, $1.

From E. N. Glenn, Deming, N. M., April 9: "I am just up from sickness. I was threatened with pneumonia; and as that disease is almost fatal in this high altitude, I was compelled to stay at home pretty close. I was out at the camp on Saturday. I found one young man who said he had decided to live the Christian life. Pure Christianity is a hard proposition in this camp. I am inclosing a list of some boys there who I think will be benefited by the Gospel Advocate. Some have obeyed the gospel, the others have not. I thank you for your interest."

From C. E. Coleman, 200 Woolfolk Street, Macon, Ga., April 12: "The work here is going on right well now. We hope to be able to give a good report before the year has passed. We have services at Camp Wheeler, Y. M. C. A., building No. 44, at 2:45 P.M. each Sunday. I thought that maybe a little notice in the Gospel Advocate would help to get us in touch with more members. We are anxious that all attend. Several of the Macon members go to the camp with me every Lord's day. I spend one-half day each week among the soldiers, and will be glad to have the addresses of brethren or friends of any of the readers of the Advocate."

George M. Rance writes from San Antonio, Texas: "I have just received the sad news of our loss at Luling. Sister Clarke writes that the little church there was completely destroyed; also the girls' dormitory is a complete wreck, and the large barn and other outbuildings. Fences were destroyed; wagons, buggies, clothing, curtains, wall paper and shrubbery were greatly damaged, and some of the cows in the barn were injured; but there was no loss of life nor injury to any of the inmates of the Home. The loss is placed at seven or eight thousand dollars; but that can be replaced, and I believe it will be when our brethren realize the situation. We need a hall and dormitory and other buildings there at once; so brethren are urged to send contributions at once to Sister Jennie Clarke, Luling, Texas."

From F. P. Fonner, Buffalo, W. Va., April 10: "I have received help in my work as follows: From L. H. Bretz and others, $3; "A Sister in Christ," Orme, Tenn., $2; J. H. Caldwell, $5; A. S. Miller, wife, and daughter, $5; D. H. Hisel, $5; R. J. Sidwell, $5; Mrs. Dan Leathers, $1. This help is very much appreciated. Mrs. Fonner has been real sick, but she is some better now. We have had some extra expense on that account, and, of course, we need some extra help now. Please remember us in prayers and offerings. Always address me at Buffalo, W. Va., or through the Gospel Advocate office. The work is doing very well in this section, but would do better if we had a meetinghouse of our own. Our members here are much scattered, and we must build a house this summer in a central location for the benefit of all. We cannot do this without outside help. Any money sent us for this purpose will be rightly used."

From Tice Elkins, Henrietta, Texas, April 10: "I closed the meeting at Erick, Okla., last Lord's day, with four baptized, one to confess his sins, and a good interest. I came to Elk City and preached that afternoon and night to large crowds, and then came home Monday. I preached here last night, will preach again to-night and next Sunday. I will be busy doing mission work entirely in Clay County till the last of May; and, brethren, it is not self-supporting yet, so do not forget to help me. You can see by my former reports that I have made good and successful use of your aid, and I will still do it, but you must help. I have received since last report the following amounts for this work: J. A. Henson, $5; Bluegrove Church, $10; Sister Ranier, Rochester, Texas, $2. Total, $17. Many thanks in His name. The work here is fine. If I can get enough to help me stay with it a few weeks, I will show you that the gospel will win. Come on and help me, brethren; it is for Christ's sake I ask you for the support."

Ira B. Henthorn, 4405 Xerxes Avenue, South, Minneapolis, Minn., makes acknowledgment of the following contributions for the Minneapolis mission work from February 1 to March 31: From A. M. Burton, Nashville, Tenn., $20; E. H. Martin, Minnesota, $4; Clara G. Smith, Kansas, $1; F. S. Graham, Illinois, $1; Highlands congregation, Lonisville, Ky., $5; Sophie Wiley, California, $1; congregation at Buechel, Ky., $12.45; "A Brother," Indiana, $2. Total since February 1, $46.45. Minneapolis collections since February 1, $42.05, making in all, $88.50 for the period. Adding this to the balance on hand at last report, $59.61, gives $148.11. There has been expended for preaching, $4.60, leaving a balance on hand, April 1, $143.51. Brother Henthorn says: "Our meeting has had to be delayed for several reasons until May, but at that time we will be prepared for a real battle. We have not yet enough funds on hand for all advertising and hall expenses aside from what we will need for the evangelist, but hope to have plenty by the date of the meeting. We meet every Lord's day at Sister Polsen's house, with occasional visitors."

(A discourse by J. D. Floyd.)

The parable of the sower shows us that spiritual life is a development from seed, and that seed is the word of God. Four classes heard the word. but only one, in the end, was benefited, and that was the one who heard the word, meditated upon it, understood it. The true preacher to-day preaches the word and hopes to benefit those who hear. Believing as I do that I can do my hearers most good by helping them to a better understanding of the word, I preached, a short time ago, a discourse on "The Order and Purpose of the New Testament Books," Having the same purpose in view, I shall to-day seek to find the purpose of the miracles in the early days of the church.

Very soon after Jesus began his personal ministry, he selected, from his disciples, twelve men to be his apostles. These formed a kind of training school for about three and a half years. They heard his teaching; saw him heal the sick, cast out demons, and raise the dead; were witnesses of his death on the cross, and saw his body borne away to the tomb. To them he appeared after his resurrection. He companied with them for about forty days, speaking to them of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. To them, just before his ascension, he committed the duty of teaching "all nations," preaching "the gospel to every creature," and preaching "repentance and remission of sins among all nations." He told them where to begin-at Jerusalem; whenafter being "endued with power from on high;" the order of their work-Jerusalem, Judea, Samaria, and the uttermost parts of the world. Having thus commanded them, he was parted from them and received up into heaven. About seven days after this, on the day of Pentecost, the apostles were together in Jerusalem, when, in accordance with his promise, he sent the Holy Spirit upon them, thus enduing them "with power from on high." Here they began their work. The Acts of Apostles contains a partial history of this work for about thirty years.

During these thirty years, from one church (congregation) the number increased to many hundreds, and the disciples from three thousand on Pentecost to many, many thousands of all nationalities. During this entire time there was an intermingling of the ordinary and extraordinary. ordinary was common to all cases of conversion; the extraordinary was divine. Of the extraordinary (miraculous), about twenty were without any intermediary. Examples of these are the outpouring of the Spirit on Pentecost, the appearing of an angel to Philip in Samaria, the light that appeared to Saul, and the earthquake at Philippi. About the same number were wrought through the instrumentality of inspired men. Of these, a part were apostles and a part were men to whom the apostles had imparted spiritual gifts by the laying on of hands. Many are confused to-day because they do not understand the purpose of these extraordinary things. They think they must see a light, hear a voice, or something unusual must occur, or their conversion is not genuine. A son once called me to see his father, a very old man, who was near death's door. I asked him if he had ever been religious. He replied that he had not. On my urging the importance of giving himself to the service of Christ, he replied: "I know what you want. You want to get me into the church, but I tell you right now I am never going into any church until God by some visible token indicates that he wants me to." Eighty years of age, irreligious, and still waiting for something extraordinary -a something God has never promised and not necessary to conversion.

If these extraordinary things are not essential parts of conversion, it is in place to show the purpose they served. Mark, after giving the commission Jesus gave to his apostles to "preach the gospel to every creature," closes with these words: "And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following." Paul, in Hebrews, says: "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost?" The apostles proclaimed an extraordinary fact—that God had raised Jesus from the dead; hence extraordinary testimony was necessary to sustain that fact. To illustrate this, I give one instance. Peter healed a noted lame man as he was going into the temple. He immediately preached to a large concourse. As he did on Pentecost, he proclaimed the resurrection of Jesus. The people who heard were witnesses of the healing of the lame man; hence the record: "Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand." (See Acts 3, 4.) Of the Samaritans it is said: "The people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did." (Acts 8: 6.) Another view of the matter throws light on the question. All things, both in the vegetable and animal world, have had their origin in miracle. It took a miracle to create the first oak tree; so of each pair of the various species of animals, as well as man; but all have been perpetuated by ordinary and fixed principles. The same is true of the religious systems God gave to man. The same is true here as in the aforementioned cases. Miracles were necessary in the inception, but not in the perpetuation. Striking miracles were wrought in the beginning of "the Jews' religion," but were not necessary to its perpetuation. So of the Christian religion. Miracles were wrought in the beginning, and were, therefore, necessary; but it has been perpetuated many hundred years without them. I am not ignorant of the fact that a great and corrupt religious organization, as well as modern healers, claim the power to do things that belong to the realm of the miraculous, but I stand by my statement. None of the things done in any way favor the miracles wrought by the apostles. The New Testament was not written when the things recorded in Acts were transpiring. All that had been revealed of the New Testament was in the minds of the apostles and the memory of those taught by them. To help them in the formative period of the church, spiritual gifts were imparted to many of the disciples by the laying on the hands of the apostles. Paul, in speaking of these gifts, says: "The manifestations of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal."

One or two more questions and I am through. How long were these extraordinary things to last? Paul answers this question: "Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." (1 Cor. 13: 8-10.) The implication is clear that when the church was fully established and a perfect revelation was given, these things that belonged to the childhood age of the church were to cease. The same truth is taught in Eph. 4. If I were asked the question when the miraculous ended in the church, my answer would be: When the last apostle and the last one to whom they had imparted spiritual gifts were dead, then they ceased. While many loud claims are made, I am sure no miracle the counterpart of those wrought by the apostles and men of spiritual gifts has recurred.

One more thought. If the converting power was not in the extraordinary, where was it? I answer, in the word preached. On Pentecost it is said: "When they heard this, they were pricked in their heart." At Solomon's porch: "Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed." At Samaria: "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." At Ceserea: "Ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe; . . . and put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith "-mark you, not by the baptism of the Holy Spirit. All this is in harmony with Paul's statement: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation."

Council Hill, April 5.—I have been doing manual labor this spring, but have preached somewhere almost every Sunday. Brother Park and I are in a mission meeting three miles from town. We are having a good hearing. I have a position at our school here and can support my family that way and get out and preach at night. have three more meetings to hold following this one. We are paying our own expenses—buying oil, furnishing our own conveyance, etc. The gospel has never been preached in this country very much, and we want to do what we can to tell the story of the Brother J. B. Nelson, of Dallas. Texas, will hold a meeting for us here in town, beginning on April 30. There are three of us to do the paying, and we are not able to give him a support. If a preacher does not receive one hundred and fifty dollars or two hundred dollars for a meeting now in these days of "high cost of living," his family will suffer. er Nelson does not expect a support here, but we do not want him to have to make all the sacrifice. He can easily get one hundred and fifty dollars at other places for the time he has promised us. Will you help us a little in this meeting? Brother Park and I do not ask help in the work we are doing. We are "making tents" for a support and preaching every night. However, we would ap-preciate a little help for Brother Nelson, that he may not have to make too great a sacrifice in the work here. Who will be first to respond? Send contributions to me and I will report same. On account of some parties who were interested selling their homes and leaving Albion, my normal at that place for July has been canceled. My time is vacant now from the first of June to the last of July. Who wants a good normal music school? One hundred and fifty dollars for seventeen days is the price. Write me. I would be glad to hold some meetings in these two months if you do not care for the singing normals.—W. W. Slater.

Fort Worth, April 10.—The month of March was a busy one for the South Side-Central Church. Over seven thousand dollars in cash and five thousand dollars in pledges was raised to buy a stone church building from the First Presbyterian Church, and a new congregation was organized in the central part of the city, which will be known as the Central church of Christ. The new congregation started with an attendance of two hundred and fifty in the Sunday school. Brother M. H. Moore, superintendent of the city schools, will lead their work for a while. The South Side-Central's contributions for the month were nearly three hundred dollars, not counting a special contribution for We had a number of Camp Bowie. additions during the month. The first Lord's day in April we had one addition from the Magnolia Christian Church and one confession. Field Notes. BY C. E. HOLT.

One of the prettiest, cleanest, and most hospitable towns in Tennessee is Cookeville, the capital of Putnam County. It has a very fine citizenry, far above the average town. It also has fine schools.

The Polytechnic School is one of the best in the South. It is young, but vigorous and progressive in its work and plans. It is an ideal school, in an ideal town, with ideal grounds. Brother Jere Whitson, one of the chief promoters of the school, gave twenty acres of land, which is being put in fine condition, and this adds greatly to the utility and maintenance of the school. The State of Tennessee makes appropriations for the support of the school, thus making it one of the best and one of the cheapest institutions in the country for the young men and young women of the country. The president of the school, Prof. Thomas A. Early, is a man of fine executive ability, and he has a corps of thoroughly competent teachers to assist him. Imagine, if you can, my surprise when told that board in the dormitories is only nine dollars a month! Those who live there look well, and I did not hear a word of complaint. Brother B. H. Murphy and wife are both in school, and they board in one of the dormitories. Brother Murphy is one of the most efficient song leaders among us and is of great worth to the church there.

The church at Cookeville is one of the best in the State. It has a fine membership. Almost all of them are now taking the Gospel Advocate. Show me a church the members of which read the Gospel Advocate, and I will show you an active church, one that is alive to missionary work as well as to other duties. The church at Cookeville supports Brother John E. Dunn's family while he looks after some of the soldier boys in Camp Sevier, at Greenville, S. C. This is a good work in which Brother Dunn is engaged, and I could wish that more of our preachers were with the boys in the camps and in France. I am sorry that more of our preachers are not connected with army work. But the Cookeville church does more than support Brother Dunn's family. They give liberally to other things. A giving church is always a growing church. A stingy church cannot live and thrive and grow. God's blessings will not be poured out upon a stingy man or woman or church. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Can any one tell me who said that?

My preaching in Cookeville was appreciated, as I had good reason to believe, and the audiences were good.

There is, as I was led to believe, a good feeling existing among the members of the different religious organizations. The town has the usual number of Protestant denominations. All these were engaged in holding prayer meetings-early morning prayer meetings-on account of the great war in which we are engaged. I was pleased to note such a broad, Christian spirit manifested in their prayers even toward the Germans. There was no rancor nor bitterness manifest, but feeling of deep sympathy for all the people of the countries now engaged in the great war.

While in Cookeville my home was with Brother Jere Whitson and family. It is an ideal home. It is a home with all that home means. Miss Fannie Lou, the baby girl, but large enough and brave enough to drive an automobile, rendered me valuable assistance in getting around among the people. She is a most excellent young Brother John H. Whitson, woman. the bachelor son of the family, and one of the best men in the world, is an important factor in Cookeville. He is a fine business man as well as a fine church man. He is a man that carries religion into his business as well as business into his religion. He would make an ideal husband.

My work for the Gospel Advocate in Cookeville was made much easier on account of the efficient preliminary work by that most excellent man, Brother S. Hayden Young. He had prepared the way so well that my work was a real pleasure. It hardly seemed like work at all.

I wish I could mention all the good brethren there by name, but space is limited. I would like to go to Cookeville again.

PANAMA HATS HAND-WOVEN

New Discovery Brings Costly Panama Within Reach of All.

Within Reach of All.

New York, N. Y. (Special).—It is now proven that the stylish Panama, up to now only worn by the best-dressed people, can now be sold for $1. You don't have to be skeptical about the low price, as it gives service like the $5 and $10 kind, but not so fine a weave; and by this new discovery of weave one can hardly tell the difference. A Panama gives a man or woman distinction and at the same time comfort. Mr. George J. Bungay, 28 South William Street, of New York City, is backing up his discovery by sending a real hand-woven Panama, any size, trimmed, blocked, with slik band, to any one for $1, postpaid. Fitted with leather sweat band, 25 cents extra. Furthermore, his policy is that, if you are not entirely satisfied, he will return your money.—Advt.

SALTS IF KIDNEYS OR BLADDER BOTHER

Harmless to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids-Splendid for System.

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread. The water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation, and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they cannot control urina-tion. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric-acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, efferveseent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

DO YOU LOVE CHILDREN?

Dr. J. H. DYE MEDICAL INSTITUTE, C-4 Lincoln Bidg., Buffalo, N. Y.

God's Love for His Children.

BY D. B. MIZELL.

"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." (Rom. 8: 28.)

Paul does not mean that all things, of themselves, in an impersonal way, work together for good to them that love God. He means to assert that God makes all things work together for good to them that love him, to them who are the called according to his purpose; and this text is a Godgiven pledge of his love and special providence for those for whom it is intended

In order to determine for whom this pledge is intended, we must put emphasis on the clause, "to them that love God." The clause, "to them who are the called according to his purpose," is not added in order to limit the number of "them that love God" to any particular class of "them who are the called according to his purpose;" but the clause, "to them that love God," does limit and point out what class of the called is here referred to. Jesus says: "For many are called, but few are chosen." (Matt. 22: 14.) All to whom the gospel comes are called, but only those that obey the gospel-" that love God"-are chosen and become the elect. Not all the called are chosen; but all the elect are also the called. "They which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ." (Rom. 5: 17.) While abundance of grace is extended to all, the promise is to those only who receive it, and not to them that reject it.

Now, all of God's children are a called people, a chosen or elect people. "Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied." (1 Pet. 1: 1, 2.) "But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation." (Verse 15.) "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light: which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy." (1 Pet. 2: 9, 10.)

In his letter to the Thessalonians, Paul tells us what this calling means and how God makes it. "But we are "I Would Not Part with it for $10.000"

So writes an enthusiastic, grateful customer, "Worth more than a farm," says another. In like manner testify over 100,000 people who have worn it.

bound to give thanks always to God for you, brethren beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth: whereunto he called you by our gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ." (2 Thess. 2: 13, 14.) In the letter to the Romans, in which we find our text, Paul first reminds them of his special call to the apostleship: "Paul, a sewant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God." (Rom. 1: 1.) Then he reminds them of their call, which is the call common to all of God's children: "Among whom are ye also the called of Jesus Christ; to all that be in Rome, beloved of God, called to be saints: Grace to you and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ." (Verses 6, 7.) The pronouns "we" and "us," here used by Paul, do not refer to the other apostles, for none of them is in any way joined with him anywhere in this letter; but they refer to the called at Rome, whom he is here addressing, together with himself, which is the proper grammatical construction. This is clearly shown by what he writes in the next chapter.

"Even us, whom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles. As he saith also in Osee, I will call them my people, which were not my people: and her beloved, which was not beloved. And it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people; there shall they be called the children of the living God." (Rom. 9: 24-26.) After making the statement that "we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, Paul goes on to the end of this chapter in explaining how we know this. Now, some of the things of this life which are dearest to us and most assuredly known by us can be known only by faith. For instance: We know George Washington, his life and character, only by and through faith. We know who are our father and mother only through faith. Yet there is no fact that we know better. So it is with the fact that God makes all things work together for good to them that love him. It can be known only by faith; but to the man who has faith in God, the evidence in support of this declaration is so clear, so conclusive, and so overwhelming, that he can and does know with the most perfect assurance that it is true.

The gist of Paul's reasoning as to how we know this is as follows:

1. It is God's will, according to his purpose, that all things shall work together for good to them that love him.

Former Health Commissioner Says Nuxated Iron

Should Be Used in Every Hospital and Prescribed by Every Physician—Attributes His own Great Physical Activity Today at Over 60 Years of Age Largely to His Personal Use of Nuxated Iron

WHAT FORMER HEALTH COMMISSIONER KERR SAYS

"As Health Commissioner of the City of Chicago, I was importuned many times to recommend different medicines, mineral waters, etc. Never yet have I gone on record as favoring any particular remedy, but I feet that in Nuxated fron an exception should be made to the rule. I have taken Nuxated Iron myself and experienced its health-grims strength-building effect, and in the laterest of the public welfare, I feel it my duty to make known the results of its use. I am well past my three-score years and want to say that I believe that my own great physical activity is due largely today to my personal use of Nuxated Iron, and if my endorsement shall induce anaemic, nervous, run-downmen and women to take Nuxated Iron, and receive the won-derful tonic benefits which I have received, I shall feel greatly grafified that I made an exception to my life-long rule in recommending if. From my own experience with Nuxated Iron, I feel that it is such a valuable remedy that it ought to be used in every haspital and prescribed by every physician in this country."

MMR Kerns.
Former Health Commissioner, City of Chicago.

Manufacturer's Note—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by Former Health Commissioner Kere with such surprising results, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorgane iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not indure the teeth, make them black, nor uses the standard manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Former Health Commissioner Kerr has given years of his life fighting for public health in his own and other cities. It was he who introduced Anti-toxin for Dipatheria in Chicago's Health Department. He purified this milk for the Consumers and thereby helped to save the lives of thousands of habies. He introduced the anti-spitting ordinance which has been copied all over the country and also took care of the sewers and garbage in the interest of public health. He is positive that the wide spread use of Nuxated Iron would greatly lessen the werries and troubles of Health Commissioners in keeping up a high standard of public health.

2. He is able to do what he wills and purposes to do. "He is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think." (Eph. 3: 20.)

3. And no one can prevent him from doing it. "If God be for us, who can be against us?" (Rom. 8: 31.) "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." (Rom. 8: 38, 39.)

I have for years believed that this text is God's promise that he will make all things work together for good even to me, upon this one condition—that I love him; and I have this week re-read the whole of this letter to the Romans in order to see if my faith is well grounded. I conclude that it is. "For he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." Heb. 13: 5.) "And I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." (2 Cor. 6: 18.)

The Florida Mission Fund.

BY J. O. BARNES. It will be remembered that in the Gospel Advocate some weeks ago the writer made known his intentions to collect a fund, to be known as "the Florida Mission Fund," the purpose of which is to support an evangelist to preach the gospel in the destitute fields of Florida. I am glad to report that several have heartily approved the plan and have contributed to the fund, and, as a result, we now have a small amount in bank to the credit of that fund, which is being used in preaching the gospel at a point eight miles of Lake City, the preaching being done by Brother J. H. Murrell, of Tennessee City, Tenn., who is spending several months in Florida, in the interest of the cause of Christ His meeting closed on the night of April 5, with much good done in seed sowing, which will doubtless bear fruit in the near future. We hope to keep this good work going on, but, in order to do so, we must have funds with which to support the work. Therefore we earnestly ask the brotherhood to cooperate with us in this work by sending us offerings regularly each month, so we can use it for the support of the evangelist doing the work. I here give a report of the Italian mission of Bellaire, Ohio, for the month of March.

We have good meetings, with large crowds and good interest. On Sunday, March 31, another young lady confessed Christ. We have changed the time of our meetings to 3 P.M. and 7:30 P.M. on Sunday evening instead of having meeting Sunday morning in Bellaire. Many Italian families have moved to Shadyside, and, the Lord willing, I will open in the month of May a Bible school at Shadyside. We meet at 10:30 A.M. there.

I never did say what the shop was doing, as I was ashamed to tell that I never make more than six dollars per week. The people that live in that part are not of the better class and trade is no good. The place is fine for a mission, but not for a pressing shop. In the month of July, the Lord willing, I will come to Nashville for a week, and we will speak about these ington, Pa., $11.27; Neffes, Ohio, $5; Sunbury, Pa., $8; F. L. Rowe, office, $10; Brother A. M. Burton, Nashville, Tenn., $5; Eleventh Street Church, $32.20; Lawrence Avenue Church, $5; West Nashville Church, $12.50; Belmont Avenue Church, $12.50.

Brethren, I thank you for this fellowship in the work of the Lord. I am doing my best for the cause of the Master. May you be richly blessed.

Who Will Help?

BY D. S. LIGON.

Brethren, I am now asking for some help to assist me in going over into Sevier County, Ark., to hold some meetings. I have been wanting to go there for some years and do some mission work that is badly needed in that part. I know the county well. I was raised there, and I know the conditions there as not many preachers are able to know them. I want to begin this work the first Sunday after I get there. Will the brethren who read this send me some help and have a hand in supporting this work? Write to J. W. Shaw and G. W. Weatherly, elders of the church of Christ at Denton, Texas, my home, for information as to my ability and worthiness. I pray that I may be able to spend the month of May and part of June in the abovenamed field; and then, brethren, I will have to go home and stay with my children and let my wife, who has been under the treatment of the doctor for eighteen months, go to Mineral Wells. Those who desire to help me stay in that mission work a month or more should address me at Denton, Texas.

A tale in ten chapters, beginning April 25, in The Youth's Companion. the East goes to a Western horse ranch and meets a curiously baffling set of circumstances which lead to his friendship with the wild horse that gives this intensely in-teresting story its name.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN. After the church was established at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost, the first movement made by the divinely inspired apostles in appointing officials was to find honest men. The first qualification mentioned was, they were to be "of honest report." That implies that there were persons present whose honesty might not have a good report. It appears that in making the selection the first question asked would be: "Is he honest?" "Do the people who know him say he is honest?" A very short time before that they had trouble over not only a dishonest man, but one who had publicly lied to the Almighty; and it is claimed by some that the Ananias Club had its origin from that sad affair, but I think it originated in the garden of Eden. The apostles wanted men whom they could trust, men who would act honestly. A man who receives the word of God in his heart must act honestly with God in receiving it or it will not save him. Paul says: "Provide things honest in the sight of all men." (Rom. 12: 17.) Again: "Providing for honest things, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men." (2 Cor. 8: 21.) Do you know of any contributions, or money collected, or chickens, or pies or cakes, being sent for a good purpose, which never reached the persons for whom such things were contributed? The apostles wanted honest men who could be trusted to carry food to the needy or give the collection to the person for whom it was collected. I speak from over fifty years of sad experience and personal knowledge; and I, with Paul, pray to God that people "should do that which is honest." (2 Cor. 13: 7.) Even thoughts, as well as conversation, should be honest. Jesus said: "And he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much." (Luke 16: 10.) A man who cannot be trusted and does not act honestly in handling money for a preacher, or for any purpose whatever, and takes the advantage and keeps back part or all for his own use or for the use of others, is certainly on the common level with Ananias, whom God struck dead for a dishonest act, and who had (to shield himself) lied to God about it. Christians are commanded to "walk honestly toward them that are without." (1 Thess. 4: 12.) The word "walk" there stands for act, conduct, or dealing. There is not much brotherly love manifested when a man acts dishonestly with money intrusted in his hands, and his influence for good is gone when detected.

Help the Brethren at Poplar Bluff, Mo.

BY JAMES E. LAIRD.

Some time ago the brethren at Poplar Bluff, Mo., made an appeal through the Gospel Advocate for some preacher to preach some for them. In answer to that appeal I went there and preached for them a week. I found about twelve very faithful and worthy members there. They have bought a meetinghouse from the Methodists for twenty-five hundred dollars, and they got a bargain in it. However, they bought it on time, and, being few in number and poor people, they will have all they can possibly do to pay for it

They have asked me to hold a meeting for them, and I have promised to do so. I have employed Brother Leonidas T. Holland, of Greenfield, Tenn., to sing for me, and he and I will go there in June and hold a month's meeting without the promise of a cent, unless the brethren elsewhere help us. So, as we are not able to hold the meeting at our own expense and the brethren there are not able to support us, I am making this appeal and asking the churches that can and will to set apart the first Lord's day in June as the day to contribute to the support of this meeting and to pray for its success. Brethren, I consider your prayers as important as your contributions; for I know it will be a hard fight.

Other brethren will have something to say about this meeting; so please watch for their articles, and do not forget the day. The first Lord's day in June is the day set apart to contribute to and pray for the success of the meeting. Please send all contributions to L. M. Ward, Poplar Bluff, Mo., and he will report the same through the papers; and should more be sent than is needed to support the meeting, it will be applied on the house.

Sun and Air.

One morning I put out a square of linoleum to sun and air on the lawn. It was just after refreshing rains and the grass was especially lush and green. Sometime in the afternoon the linoleum was taken in. It was not till some days later that I noticed a square of withered grass. I was puzzled, but presently recalled the square of linoleum, identical in size with this blighted spot. Heavy, impervious to light and air, it had in a few hours withered the grass. That conspicuous vellow patch impressed me. I looked at it and felt as never before the lifesustaining value of sun and air. I felt, too, that in the inner life of man there must be something that corresponds to sun and air. God is love; and "in him we live, and move, and have our being," even as we live, and move, and have our physical being in the all-embracing air. And as the sun rises on our earth, so on the human soul does "the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings." With such conditions, we can but flourish unless we allow selfishness to shut us away from them and to make us a blighted area on God's fair landscape.-Ida Ahlborn Weeks.

Try This For Your Health.

For diseases which do not readily yield to drug treatment, such as chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism, uric-acid poisoning, and diseases of the kidneys, bladder, and liver, the best physicians send their wealthy patients to the famous mineral springs. Some even spent months at the spas of Europe, and were almost invariably benefited or permanently relieved.

I believe that the Shivar Spring is the greatest mineral spring ever discovered; and I believe it so firmly that I offer to send you enough water for a three-weeks' treatment (two fivegallon demijohns) on my guarantee that if it fails to benefit your case I will refund the price. You would hardly believe me if I told you that only about two out of a hundred, on the average, say that they have re-ceived no benefit. The water is re-storing thousands. It restored my health when my friends and physicians thought my case was incurable, and I am willing and anxious for you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If I win, you become a life friend of the Spring; if I lose, will be sorry for you, but I will appreciate your courtesy in giving the water a trial, and will gladly refund your money on request. Sign the following letter:

Shivar Spring,

Box 21E, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen: I accept your offer and inclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send; and if I report no benefit, you agree to refund the price in full upon the receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

NOTE.—"I have had the pleasure of serving the little church at Shivar Spring as pastor for years, and am therefore well acquainted with Mr. Shivar and his associates, whom I gladly commend as honorable business men and worthy of the confidence of the public. I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water, and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McA. Pittman.

Sad News from Bell Haven Orphans' Home, of Luling, Texas.

Dear Brethren and Sisters: It is with a sad heart that I take this means of informing you of the great damage done by the cyclone which struck this Home at about six o'clock, April 5. A greater portion of Bell Haven, which has required about twenty years to develop by the help of your contributions and my labor, was swept away in a moment. Many who have viewed the ruins estimate the loss at about six or eight thousand dollars. The large barn was demolished, and all vehicles and wagons within. Cows were injured, and the old buggy horse was brought out of the wreck alive by the aid of fifty men who came to our rescue and removed the weight that pinned him down. The church house was scattered and all torn to pieces. The girls' dormitory was moved seven feet from the foundation and damaged all over, window glasses nearly all broken. It is apt to fall down at any moment. The pretty summer house on the children's playground was demolished. Another small cottage was blown from its blocks. Gates and fences are all torn down. Furniture, pictures, wall paper, and clothing were damaged greatly. Shade trees and shrubbery are damaged, too. We thank God that no children were hurt. They were not in the dormitory at the time. I had them in my charge. The children are all much grieved over the loss of their pretty home, and they have no comfortable place to sleep, and cannot have until the dormitory is repaired, and for this reason we want to begin the work of repair as soon as possible. While this has been a severe trial, I cannot afford to sit down and grieve over this great loss, but, with an eye of faith, I shall renew my courage by the aid of God's people, and shall put forth every effort to rebuild Bell Haven, and for this purpose I trust that the churches and friends will send liberal offerings at once, or pledges, so that we may know what we can do.

Your sister in hope of a hearty re-MRS. JENNIE CLARKE, sponse to this important call, Superintendent Bell Haven Orphans' Home.

The "Teach Me's" of the Scriptures.

It would be profitable for any reader to study the "Teach me's" of the Bible. "Teach me" is a good text to consider in connection with the training of little children. It is always inspiring to find children who are willing to be taught. Most children have a teachable spirit. With some the desire to learn is a craving not easily satisfied. In the Allegheny district a miner was killed, leaving a twelve-year-old daughter. He was a good man and much beloved by his fellow workers. As a token of their love they resolved to make a present to the child, and to give her the very thing she most craved. They thought that she would ask for a new dress or a trip to the metropolis. But the wise child surprised them by saying: "I wish most of all to have an education." The miners were true to their resolution, and now this girl is being educated at their expense.

Teachableness on the part of children not only creates, but intensifies, parental responsibility and that of teachers in the church and in the public schools. They must see to it that the "teach-me" feeling is not developed into an unholy passion. It is one of the most important duties of Christians to see that children are brought up in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord." When Horace Mann, the great educator, was making an address at the dedication of a very costly school building, he commended the enterprise and stated that "if one child was saved through this great outlay of money, it would be money well spent." The address finished, some one in the audience took him to task for making what was regarded as a rash statement. "Surely, Mr. Mann, you would regret this great effort if only one child was benefited." "Not if it was my child," was the laconic answer.

A Statesman's Cry.

When we turn to the Psalms, we find it is not a child who cries, "Teach me," but a grown man. It is none other than David, the great general, the great statesman, the great leader of men, the composer of the grandest litany in existence, and, best of all, "the friend of God." We should learn from this that a man who is self-satisfied is not destined to be useful or great. A know-it-all spirit does not betoken progress. One thing is certain: if a man lacks the teachable spirit, he will not be saved. Jesus said: "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." No doubt the teachableness of the little child was one of the main points that the great Teacher had in mind.

While David had the quality which made him anxious to learn from others, and even from nature herself, still he realized that his supreme teacher was God. He addresses his "Teach me's" to the Heavenly Father. Some of the things that David would learn from God are well worth our consideration. In Ps. 143: 10 we read: "Teach me to do thy will; for thou art my God: thy spirit is good; lead me into the land of uprightness." In every business house it is the duty of the employees to know and perform the will of the proprietor. Oftentimes this is unpleasant, for the employee feels that the employer is making a serious blunder in directing him to do this or that. It is grating to be subject to an unwise and imperfect will. But no such feeling should ever possess the child of God. He knows instinctively that his Father makes no mistakes, and it is, therefore, profitable to know and do his will. Because God's "spirit is good" he will lead his children " into the land of uprightness."

"Teach Me Thy Paths."

But David says in Ps. 25: 4: "Show me thy ways, O Lord; teach me thy paths." A path is a place made by the feet of travelers, the place where they walk. In this world there are good paths and forbidden paths. More people are walking in forbidden paths than in the good paths. Jesus reduced the number of the ways of this earth to two. He said: "Enter ye in by the narrow gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many are they that enter in thereby. For narrow is the gate, and straitened the way, that leadeth unto life, and few are they that find it." (Matt. 7: 13, 14.)

Man's paths often lead to destruction, but God's paths always lead to heaven. How important, then, it is to pray David's prayer: "Teach me thy paths!" When Christians walk in forbidden paths, they not only injure themselves, but set a bad example for others. They violate the teachable spirit of their own children and cause others to stumble. Booker Washington said: "The longer I live, the more I am convinced that the education obtained from books and costly apparatus is not to be compared with that to be obtained through association with great men and women." But what must we say of the evil influence that is thrown around those teachable negroes and other classes who are associated with people neither good nor great? Whenever a Christian begins to die, the first symptoms are in his feet. He turns away from the house of worship; he cuts out the prayer meeting; he goes no longer to the homes of the poor and needy, but walks in forbidden paths. David prays again in Ps. 119: 12: "Blessed art thou. O Lord: teach me thy statutes." The statutes to a Christian may stand for the laws of the kingdom and the principles of truth and righteousness laid down for his guidance in the New Testament. It is really incumbent upon us to answer our own prayer in this respect by studying these laws daily. In the same Psalm we read: "Accept, I beseech thee, the freewill offerings of my mouth, O Lord, and teach me thy judgments." In order to know a man's heart, we need to understand the purpose for which he desires Instruction. Sometimes an ulterior motive is behind the thirst for knowledge. Men and women have been educated to become thieves and spies. But in David's appeal. "Teach me thy judgments," the motive is apparent. It is coupled with a prayer for the Lord to accept his mouth's utterance. To make his speech acceptable, he would learn of God's judgments. All of us should order our language so that our words will be unto God as a freewill offering.

Are You Really Educated?

Are you really educated? To solve this question, a professor in Chicago University has given out a series of questions, and states that the replies will indicate education or the lack of it. Some of the leading questions are:

Has your education given sympathy with all good causes and made you espouse them?

Has it made you public-spirited?

Has it made you a brother to the weak?

Have you learned how to make friends and how to keep them?

Do you know what it is to be a friend to yourself? Can you look an honest man or a pure woman straight in he eyes?

Will a lonely dog follow you in the street?

The professor's questions are interesting and practical in a way, but I think a much better test and a scriptural one is for each one of us to follow the reasoning of David and to inquire:

Am I doing the will of God?

Am I walking in his paths?

Am I keeping his statutes?

Am I acquainted with his judgments?

A lonely dog might follow me in the street, but that would be only a superficial test of the professor's making; the other is God's.

We have a Leader so gentle that we can go, as it were, to his tent at night, and tell him we are afraid of to-morrow's warfare—that the hard battle has weakened our nerves. O tender Savior, wounded unto death, and yet strong in the consciousness of an indomitable power, thou shalt lead us forth conquering and to conquer!—Selected.

"There Shall Not a Hoof Be Left Behind."
BY MORGAN H. CARTER.

While Moses was watching the flocks of Jethro by Mount Horeb, an angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush. Moses turned aside to see why the burning bush was not consumed, and Jehovah gave him a great message for Israel, a gospel of deliverance for a nation of slaves.

With Aaron, his brother, Moses went before Pharaoh as the ambassador of Israel's King the great I Am. But the wicked Pharaoh refused to let Israel go. So does Satan to-day refuse to let people in bondage to him go that they may serve God. But Moses, who was a type of Christ, insisted; and as Pharaoh further refused, the Lord sent a series of plagues upon the land.

The first was the turning of the water of the land into blood. This was followed by the terrible plagues of frogs and lice; and further to make conditions more grievous, another plague was sent.

Pharaoh then offered to compromise: "Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land." But Moses replied: "It is not meet so to do." Under the same circumstances to-day the devil insists that we worship in the land. He will let you work, pray, and give, just so you remain in the world of sin; for so long as you do, you are yet in his kingdom. "You don't have to be a Christian to be saved," he says. "Just live a clean life; it makes no difference about being a member of the church." But it does make a difference, a great difference. Jesus said: "I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14: 6.)

No, it would not do for Israel to worship "in the land," and it will not do for you or me. In no other name is there salvation, except in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life; but he that obeyeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him."

Pharach continued his offer of compromise. "Go not very far," he said. Satan tries the same trick with us. Multitudes of professing church members who claim to be "loyal" are simply ritualists, having a form of doctrine, but denying the power thereof. They say, "Lord, Lord," but do not the things Christ commanded. Their hope is in the performance of certain formal matters in the church, which they ought to do, but they leave undone the weighty matters of justice, and mercy, and loving, helpful service. They say, "Be ye warmed and filled," but they "give them not the things needful to the body." What does this profit? Do you think you will get into the kingdom by nice talk, presenting "our plea," "knocking" the sects, etc.? If you are not a sectarian yourself, I am unable to tell why. You have some kind of religion, but it is certainly not Christianity; for Christians feed the hungry, clothe the naked, visit the sick and imprisoned, and bear the fruit of the Spirit, which is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, and self-control. Do you live thus? If not, how can you claim to be a disciple of Jesus? You have not gone very far. You have taken the advice of the devil and become a lukewarm parasite. You are neither hot nor cold. Repent quickly ere the Lord cast you out. No unfruitful branch shall long remain on the true vine.

The plagues continued, and Pharaoh again offered to compromise by letting the men go, but keeping the women and children. To-day many are failing to take their home circle with them. Christian parents are allowing boys and girls to grow up in their own home and be led astray by wicked companions and evil influences. There are actually homes where the people claim to be Christians and do not even have daily family prayer and Bible reading. How such people expect to receive God's blessing on their home and their children, I cannot see. What will they do in the judgment, when the sweet, precious children, given to them as pure as the crystal snow, come before God to be condemned for their iniquity, and they realize that their own careless, slack, sinful method of training was responsible? Leave not the women and children behind. Take them all the way.

Finally, Pharaoh said: "Go, but leave your cattle and possessions behind." We, too, are told to do that; and how many-alas!-have indeed left all their property, time, and interests outside the kingdom! Their heart remains where their treasure is; and there is no getting them to do much for the Lord. They are too busy. Their work occupies their entire attention. Their social duties are heavy. When they are asked about any special movement in God's interest, they do not see where it would be of special benefit. These people are robbing God. They are unthankful for his blessings, forgetful of his mercy. They speak of church work as tiresome and dry. I heard of some people like that once before, who said: "Behold, what a weariness it is!" God said of such people who brought to him the lame and the sick and the blemished as an offering: "Cursed be the deceiver." But are those who refuse to give their best to God to-day any better than they?

Leave not your cattle and possessions behind. Consider yourself a steward of all you have. It is God's property; your time is God's time, and God's work should come first; for, if you are a saved man, you are Jehovah's bond servant, and all that you possess or can ever command is and always will be his.

Moses heard Pharach's offers of compromise, but did not accede to his demands. No compromise for Moses. Hear his splendid reply: "There shall not a hoof be left behind."

Let us awake, arise, and with all the power of our soul battle for God, not leaving a stone unturned for the salvation of every possible soul. Let us think, speak, and act for Christ. Altogether, on to victory! Leave not a hoof behind! Put it "over the top" for Christ, our King!

Lessons from Job. BY DAVID THOMPSON.

Among all the interesting characters of the Bible, there is none of greater interest to the careful student than that of Job. We commonly think of him only as an example in the matter of patience, and in that he is, indeed, a shining example; but there are many other grand lessons that may be learned from a study of his life. A more complete picture of all that it should take to constitute perfect happiness here on earth below has never been drawn. See Job, perfect, upright, fearing God, turning away from evil, surrounded by a large and pleasant family, all domestic animals necessary in that time there in abundance, troops of servants going at his beck and call, and over it all a loving God smiling in approval. Is it not a perfect picture? This was the condition of the man whose life we are to study.

Job loved his family and was very much concerned about the spiritual welfare of his children. Upon certain occasions when they were feasting in each other's houses, as the custom of the people of the land then was, Job was very careful to offer sacrifices for them, and purify them, lest in their feasting they had sinned and renounced God in their hearts. It would be well for this and coming generations if all parents were equally anxious concerning the spiritual welfare of their children. We are very careful to see that they have proper food and clothing, that they have the best medical attention when sick, and that they have all the school advantages we can give them. This is all well and good; they should have these things, though they are not necessary to the salvation of their souls. One may be reared on the coarsest of fare, clad in rags, have the most meager school advantages, and yet live a life approved of God and go to heaven. While people are careful about these worldly advantages, thousands upon thousands allow their children to grow up with no knowledge of God's word and make but little effort to give them this knowledge. Yet a knowledge of this word is a thing without which they cannot see God as his children. Do we care most for the spiritual or temporal welfare of our children? Might we not learn a good lesson from Job at this point?

I now call attention to a conversation between God and Satan, a record of which is found in Job 1: 6-12. From this conversation two thoughts may be taken which will prove both a pleasant and profitable study. First, we notice the evident pride that God took in pointing out Job to Satan. He seemed to take pleasure in telling Satan of his great goodness and uprightness. Is it not grand to think of a man's living such a life here on earth that God would point him out with pride to the master of the underworld, as much as to say, Here is one whom you have never been able to beguile? Job lived this life, and so may you and I gain God's approval by doing our best to live as he directs and follow in the footsteps of the Nazarene. How is it with you, brother? Does God point to your life with pride? Is he pleased by your daily conduct? Let us all make an earnest effort to so live that, if occasion should arise, God could point us out to Satan and commend us as he did Job. Is it not a thing worth working for? The second thought I desire to talk to you about is the constant watch Satan keeps over the loyal and brave servants of God, if perchance he may seduce them to his own service. We are prone to think of him as confining his efforts to the wickedly inclined and weak, but this is a grave mistake. Job was the most righteous man then on the earth, and he showed such an intimate acquaintance with his life and conditions, telling God just how he had cared for him, made a hedge about him, etc., that we plainly see that God had been keeping a close watch upon this godly man. The more godly the man, the more closely is he watched by Satan, if I be not deceived in his methods. He knows that a good servant of God will make a good servant of the devil if he can but seduce him and enlist him in his service. We must ever be on our guard, for he is watching all the time. Make a personal matter of it. Realize that Satan is watching you, and watching you all the time. We need to sing indeed and in truth:

"My soul, be on thy guard,
Ten thousand foes arise;
The hosts of sin are pressing hard
To draw thee from the skies."

I wish now to notice the manner in which Job bore the trials that God sent upon him. When, one by one, all of his possessions had gone from him, his last child dead, poor and desolate indeed he was, the Bible says he worshiped God and blessed his name. Wonderful lesson! When trials come to us, let us think of Job and turn to our Father above, and comfort and blessing are sure to come. When to the man in his extremity, sitting among the ashes and scraping himself with a potsherd, there came his wife and suggested that he curse God and die, he rebuked her severely and professed again his loyalty to God. Surely, with this wonderful lesson constantly before us, grumbling and complaining should forever vanish from the earth

After the test was over and God's infinite power had touched and made his body well, the Bible says that God gave him twice as much substance as he had before and that another family of sons and daughters were born unto him. He was allowed to live a hundred and forty years to enjoy these blessings. Such is the manner in which God deals with his loyal children. Storm clouds may obscure the sky and all prospects look dark, but we may rest assured that at the proper time all will be light. God never forsakes his children as long as they are true to him; and since he sends only that which is best all that comes upon us should be considered as a blessing, in disguise though it may be. "Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy." (James 5: 11.)

Keep the Camp Fires Burning.

BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

Never in the history of the present civilization has the world been called upon to face so critical a situation; never have the people of our own nation been called upon to grapple with such complex conditions or to solve such intricate problems as now; never have we had a better time to prove what is in people; never since the beginning of the Reformation has the faith of God's people been more sorely tried, the cause of Christ put to a severer test. or when people need to realize the mission and appreciate the supreme importance of the religion of Christ more than now.

It is no time to wilt down and give up; but it is a time that the whole world says, rise with pluck and courage and demonstrate to humanity and to God what you are capable of being and doing.

People at this time are called upon to give to the world their best and profoundest thought, their calmest and best seasoned judgment, their most heroic and indefatigable energies, in order to produce the material things for which the whole world is calling so long and loud. If these strained relations are to be the means of stimulating the highest and deepest thought, exciting the most fertile imaginations, arousing the dormant energies, and curbing the reckless extravagance and sinful prodigality in material things, then indeed is the proverb, "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good," true with us to-day.

But shall the moral and the spiritual keep in the lead of, or even abreast with, the material developments? This is the question of momentous importance now. This question demands the most studious thought and the most prayerful consideration of the people.

People are called upon and even forced to economize in everything and in every way. This we believe is good as applied to material things, for we have been an extravagant nation of people in many things. Only two things seem to be as abundant and as easy of access as ever—air and water. Had it been possible, no doubt many, having been caught in the mad current of greed and graft, would have gotten a corner on these and have put such a price on them that government control would have been necessary in order that poor people might breathe and have their thirst slaked.

Yes, we are called upon to eat less meat, less flour; use less sugar, less coal, less gasoline, less light; the railroads have curtailed passenger service so that people will have to travel less; and now, with the diminution in the use of these things and many others, are the people going to economize on their religion and the things that meet the wants of the spiritual man?

It was the common complaint coming from the preachers everywhere last year that people were hard to interest upon the subject of religion, and there was, as a rule, a very perceptible falling off in attendance at religious services and the interest in protracted meetings was hard to arouse. Now, is it possible that professed Christians are going to prove recreant to duty and let the camp fires along the line of march and battle burn low, and in many instances go entirely out? Are we, with all our cutting off and shutting down, going to practice the same in our religion? Are we going to economize right along here? Are we going to read our Bibles less, go to church less, pray less, pay less, preach less, and do less in every way for the Master's cause? We have already heard of several congregations that are going to try it without any preaching-times getting too close. Brethren, are we, in the midst of all this confusion, sadness, and sorrow, going to let the cause for which Jesus suffered and gave his life suffer? No, let it never be. If ever at one time more than another our faith should be stronger, our zeal more active, and we needed to manifest more true devotion to God, it is now. The people of our nation need to cover themselves in sackcloth and sit in ashes and cry mightily unto God. It is a time above all others when we should be "not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord." Paul says, "put on the whole armor of God" and "having done all to stand," and "praying always in the Spirit, and watching in all perseverance and supplication for all the saints." It is certainly a time when prayer and watchfulness are needed.

In view of the fact that almost all kinds of evil follow and attend carnal war, we may look for perilous times to follow whether the present war continues indefinitely or is brought to an immediate close. The church is to be the great balance wheel to conduct, and will be largely responsible for what is to follow. When these awful war clouds shall have passed away and the smoke of battle has settled down and we shall get upon some lofty eminence to view the ruins and the prospects for the future, much indeed will depend on how well the church has done its duty during all the days of death, destruction, sadness, and sorrow. The oil of peace must be poured upon the turbulent waters, and the wine of joy and gladness must be poured into the hearts of the sad and sorrowing. Yes, we shall "let the lower lights be burning, send a gleam across the wave," by keeping the camp fires burning.

"Preach the Word."

BY W. J. M'ALISTER.

If all of our preachers would preach the whole gospel in all of its fullness like some do and like they all did years ago in this part of the country, the denominations would not be so anxious for us (I mean the leaders) to preach to their flocks in their houses. If we should show them that one cannot believe into Christ by faith alone and that the Bible heart is not a lobe of flesh in this natural body, and also show them that the Bible reveals only one way of salvation or one way to get into Christ-viz., by faith, repentance, and baptism-their houses would not be opened to us. We owe it to the people to show them, in a spirit of love and gentleness, the truth of God. Why not teach them that it takes the truth to make one free, and that error, no matter how honestly believed and practiced, will free no one from sin? How can we lead those in error into the light of God's truth when we fail or shun to declare the full gospel? If we only emphasize that part of the truth they believe, knowing at the same time they are in error on vital issues, are we their friends, and are we loyal to Christ? To me these questions are extremely vital; and if I am in error, I will be glad to be set right. Some of our brethren will say that because the denominations are kind enough to let us preach in their houses we should not object to their using the organ while we are holding a meeting in their house. This is a surrender of the truth and compromising, to the injury of these good people we hope to benefit. We should not fail by both precept and example to show that instrumental music in the Lord's worship is unauthorized. It seems to me that preachers who act that way are not true to the truth, but rest under the condemnation of God. If you criticize an old preacher, some of the young preachers will tell you it is wrong, as he is old and childish; that we should look over his mistakes. Now, if these mistakes pertained to farming or any other worldly calling, that would be proper; but when souls are in the balance, it becomes a different matter. Poison administered by an old man will have the same effect as it would have if administered by a young man. Age cuts no figure when it comes to handling the word of God. But the older a preacher gets, the more he should know about the Bible and the more careful he should be in his preaching. In the days of old our preachers taught the whole truth and the denominational leaders would shut the doors of their church houses in their faces. But then the people would follow these preachers to groves, brush arbors, private houses, barns, and other places, attracted by the beauty, power, and simplicity of the gospel. Thus many were led to see and embrace the truth. One of our preachers told me (and I know it to be a fact) that he had been preaching for a denomination for thirty years, and that they still wanted him to preach to them. If one of them has ever given up denominationalism, I never heard of it. Brethren, preach the word. Do not be afraid.

Unveiling of Paintings of David Lipscomb and James A. Harding.

Brother R. C. White, the treasurer of the committee appointed to raise the funds and let the contract for the paintings, informs me that he lacks seventy-five dollars of having the necessary amount to pay the artist for the paintings.

The portraits are about completed. They will likely be completed by the time this is in print.

We should like to have the friends of Brethren Lipscomb and Harding and the ex-students of the Nashville Bible School contribute to this fund. Numbers have promised to give, but have neglected to send their gifts in. The time is short. We desire to unveil the portraits on Alumni Day, May 15.

All ex-students, teachers, and friends of the college are invited to be with us on Alumni Day. We are expecting it to be a great occasion. Brother and Sister Harding tell me they expect to be with us. It will be fine to have Brother and Sister Harding with us again. Sister David Lipscomb will be present, the Lord willing. I hope to be at home during commencement week. Brother, friend, fellow alumnus, send immediately your contribution to R. C. White, 322 Peachtree Street, Nashville, Tenn.

John E. Dunn, President Alumni Association.

There are times when we need to be thrust back upon ourselves, to go "apart into a desert place." Isolation bids us find ourselves, and finding ourselves we grow sufficient within ourselves. We may have allowed people to crowd upon us, have given to them too much place and time, while we have forgotten or avoided our own imperative concerns by a fictitious interest in others. Alone in the desert Christ confronted the struggle. Thus we must all do; and the sooner we fight that crucial battle with self and the powers of darkness, the sooner are we ready to do our life work, to enter upon a career of service for God and man.—Ida Ahlborn Weeks.

"Defining the Conscientious Objector."

BY E. A. E.

Since I was a boy of sufficient age to study the history of the United States and to comprehend to any degree of appreciation the Constitution, I have said it is the greatest human construction on earth, and the government based on its principles is in many ways the greatest government in the world, civil and religious liberty being its chief corner stone.

Whatever any individual or many individuals may think in regard to its being one's duty to engage in combative service, it remains a fact that thousands in the church of Christ and as Christians, however much they love their country and are willing and ready otherwise to do for it, cannot conscientiously engage in carnal warfare; and it is a fact that the government, led by our wise and worthy and magnanimous President, recognizes this and has generously made provisions to meet the genuine and sincere convictions of each individual. Nothing more generous could be asked.

We are grateful to our Father in heaven and grateful to our government for this full and likewise patriotic provision. All who have prayed in obedience to Ged for our rulers, that we may "lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity" (1 Tim. 2: 1, 2), should most willingly and cheerfully and heroically, as they have been willing all along to do, perform any service whatsoever the government ks them to perform not contrary to these convictions.

It is a great mistake and, I trust, unintentional misrepresentation on the part of some brethren to speak of the honest and real Christian who cannot conscientiously engage in carnal warfare as being opposed to "the war," thus placing him in a bad light before the government. The government very generously puts it "war in any form "-war as such. This is the true statement of the case. We thank our government for this statement,

I copy from the Literary Digest of April 13, under the above heading, in full, President Wilson's explanation of the whole matter, together with the Literary Digest's comments, for the benefit of all concerned:

Conscientious objectors past and future will have no complaint that their status is ill-defined or that their objections have been unheeded. President Wilson has taken pains to make clear what provision may be made for the men whose scruples withhold them from combatant service; but they have to make clear to military authorities that such scruples are genuine. Moreover, those who have already passed through fires for the sake of what they have believed or have named their "conscientious objections" may have their sentences and the findings of court-martial "revised," and brought to the attention of the President "for remedy, if any be needed, of sentences and judgments found at variance" with the new provisions now enunciated. The order first defines the status of the objector and the ground whereby he acquires title to the term,

"1. By virtue of authority contained in Section 4 of the Act approved May 18, 1917, entitled 'An Act to Authorize the President to Increase Temporarily the Military Establishment of the United States, whereby it is provided, And nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to require or compel any person to serve in any forces herein provided for who is found to be a member of any wellrecognized religious sect or organization at present organized and existing, and whose existing creed or principles forbid its members to participate in war in any form, and whose religious convictions are against war or participatien therein in accordance with the creed or principles of said religious organizations; but no person so exempted shall be exempted from service in any capacity that the President shall declare to be noncombatant, I hereby declare that the following military service is noncombatant service:

"(a) Service in the Medical Corps wherever performed. This includes service in the sanitary detachments attached to combatant units at the front; service in the divisional sanitary trains composed of ambulance companies and field-hospital companies, on the line of communications, at the base in France, and with the troops and at hospitals in the United States; also the service of supply and repair in the Medical Department.

"(b) Any service in the Quartermaster Corps in the United States may be treated as noncombatant. Also, in rear of zone of operations, service in the following: Stevedore companies, labor companies, remount depots, veterinary hospitals, supply depots, bakery companies, the subsistence service, the bathing service, the laundry service, the salvage service, the clothing-renovating service, the shoe-repair service, and transportation repair service, and motor-truck companies.

"(c) Any engineer service in the United States may be treated as noncombatant service. Also, in rear of zone of operations, service as follows: Railroad building, operation, and repair; road building and repair, construction rear-line fortifications, auxiliary defenses, etc.; construction of docks, wharves, storehouses, and of such canton-ments as may be built by the Corps of Engineers; topographical work, camouflage, map reproduction, supply-depot service, repair service, hydraulic service, and forestry service,"

Title to the term here follows:
"Persons ordered to report for military service under the above Act who have (a) been certified by their local boards to be members of a religious sect or organization as defined in Section 4 of said Act, or (b) who object to participation in war because of conscientious scruples, but have failed to receive certificates as members of a gious sect or organization from their local board, will be assigned to noncombatant service as defined in paragraph 1 to the extent that such persons are able to accept service as aforesaid without violation of the religious or other conscientious scruples by them in good faith entertained. Upon the promulgation of this order it shall be the duty of each division, camp, or post commander, through a tactful and considerate officer, to present to all such persons the provisions hereof with adequate explanation of the character of noncombatant service defined, and upon such explanations to secure acceptances of assignment to the several kinds of noncombatant service above enumerated; and whenever any person is assigned to noncombatant service by reason of his religious or other conscientious scruples, he shall be given a certificate stating the assignment and reason therefor, and such certificate shall thereafter be respected as preventing the transfer of such person from such noncombatant to combatant service by any division, eamp, post, or other commander under whom said person may thereafter be called to serve, but such certificate shall not prevent the assignment of such person to some other form of noncombatant service with his own consent. So far as may be found feasible by each division, camp, or post commander, future assignments of such persons to noncombatant military service will be restricted to the several detachments and units of the Medical Corps in the absence of a request for assignment to some other branch of noncombatant service as defined in paragraph 1

The duty of the military authorities in dealing with the cases likewise comes in for clear definition:

"3. On the first day of April, and thereafter, monthly, each division, camp, or post commander shall report to the Adjutant General of the Army, for the information of Chief of Staff and the Secretary of War, the names of all persons under their respective commands who profess religious or other conscientious scruples as above described, and who have been unwilling to accept by reason of such scruples assignment to noncombatant military service as above defined, and as to each such person so reported a brief, comprehensive statement as to the nature of the objection to the acceptance of such noncombatant military service entertained. The Secretary of War will from time to time classify the persons so reported and give further directions as to the disposition of them. Pending such directions from the Secretary of War, all such persons not accepting assignment to a noncombatant service shall be segregated as far as practicable and placed under the command of a specially qualified officer of tact and judgment, who will be instructed to impose no punitive hardship of any kind upon them, but not to allow their objections to be made the basis of any favor or consideration beyond exemption from actual military service which is not extended to any other soldier in the service of the United States.

"4. With a view to maintaining discipline, it is pointed out that the discretion of courts-martial, so far as any shall be ordered to deal with the cases of persons who fall or refuse to comply with lawful orders by reason of alleged religious or other conscientious scruples, should be exercised, if feasible, so as to secure uniformity of penalties in the imposition of sentences under Articles of War 64 and 65, for the willful disobedience of a lawful order or command. It will be recognized that sentences imposed by such courts-martial, when not otherwise described by law, shall prescribe confinement in the United States disciplinary barracks or elsewhere as the Secretary of War or the reviewing authority may direct, but not in a penitentiary; but this shall not apply to the cases of men who desert either reporting for duty to the military authorities or subsequently thereto.

"5. The Secretary of War will revise the sentences and findings of courts-martial heretofore held of persons who come within any of the classes herein described, and bring to the attention of the President for remedy, if any be needed, sentences and judgments found at variance with the provisions hereof.

Everything in nature contains all the powers of nature. The world globes itself in a drop of dew; so do we put our life into every act. Every act rewards itself. A man cannot speak but he judges himself. With his will or against his will he draws his portrait to the eye of his companions by every word. Every opinion reacts on him who utters it. The Loaf.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

The following brief paragraph from the pen of our venerable brother, H. L. Walling, of McMinnville, Tenn., appeared in the Gospel Advocate of February 21, 1918:

"TO THE CHURCHES SCATTERED ABBOAD.

"Peter taught the church at Jerusalem to be steadfast in the apostles' doctrine, fellowship, breaking bread and in prayers. First, the teaching; second, the contribution; third, the Lord's Supper; then sing a hymn, then dismiss. There was no foot washing; that was done at Bethany, at Simon's house. Martha and Mary were there. I advise to make all appointments before the contribution and the Supper. We thank the Lord for bread, not a loaf. Unleavened bread is not a loaf. The dictionary says a loaf is a large lump of bread—baker's bread (it is leavened). We use unleavened bread and the fruit of the vine (grape). Why do some call unleavened bread a 'loaf?'"

Instead of trying to answer Brother Walling's question—"Why do some call unleavened bread a loaf?"—I submit for his consideration the following from the pen of Alexander Campbell—not that Campbell is final authority on the subject, but because he answers Brother Walling's question so clearly, so completely, so wisely, and so well:

"On the Lord's table there is of necessity but one loaf. The necessity is not that of a positive law enjoining one loaf and only one, as the ritual of Moses enjoined twelve loaves. But it is a necessity arising from the meaning of the Institution as explained by the apostles. As there is but one literal body, and but one mystical or figurative body having many members; so there must be but one loaf. The apostle insists upon this: 'Because there is one loaf. we, the many, are one body; for we are all partakers of that one loaf.' (1 Cor. 10: 17.) The Greek word arios, especially when joined with words of number, says Dr. Macknight, always signifies a loaf, and it is so translated in our Bibles: 'Do you not remember the five loaves?' (Matt. 16: 9.) There are many instances of the same sort. Dr. Campbell says 'that in the plural number it ought always to be rendered loaves; but, when there is a numeral before it, it indispensably must be rendered loaf or loaves. Thus we say one loaf, seven loaves; not one bread, seven breads.' 'Because there is one loaf,' says Paul, 'we must consider the whole congregation as one body. apostle reasons from what is more plain to what is less plain; from what was established to what was not so fully established in the minds of the Corinthians. There is no dispute about the one loaf; therefore, there ought to be none about the one body. This mode of reasoning makes it as certain as a positive law; because that which an apostle reasons from must be an established fact, or an To have argued from an assumpestablished principle. tion or a contingency to establish the unity of the body of Christ would have been ridiculous in a logician, and how unworthy of an apostle! It was, then, an established institution, that there is but one loaf, inasmuch as the apostle establishes his argument by a reference to it as an Our third proposition is, then, established fact. lished, that on the Lord's table there is of necessity but

This quotation is from page 317 of "The Christian System," believed by many to be—"Campbell on Baptism" excepted—Brother Campbell's best book. It is published by the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn. Price, postpaid, one dollar.

Yes, the Bible says "they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers;" but I did not know that meant "first, the teaching; second, the contribution; third, the Lord's Supper; then sing a hymn; then dismiss."

The Bible says "the God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree;" but I did not know that meant, first, God raised him from the dead; second, he was slain; third, he was hanged on a tree—the tree of the cross.

When we presume to assume to fix and fasten a certain system or order of work and worship on God's children where he has left them free, we are treading on dangerous ground.

Christian Living.

BY J. C. M'Q.

It is not so difficult to preach the truth, to teach the law of God, as it is to practice the religion of Christ. "The law of Jehovah is perfect, restoring the soul: the testimony of Jehovah is sure, making wise the simple." (Ps. 19: 7.) "And a highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for the redeemed: the wayfaring men, yea fools, shall not err therein." (Isa. 35: 8.) Calling attention to the effort necessary to live the Christian life, the Savior says: "Enter ye in by the narrow gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many are they that enter in thereby. For narrow is the gate, and straitened the way, that leadeth unto life, and few are they that find it." (Matt. 7: 13, 14.)

Paul, in writing of the terrible conflict that is waged between the flesh and the spirit, declares: "For that which I do I know not: for not what I would, that do I practice; but what I hate, that I do. But if what I would not, that I do, I consent unto the law that it is good. So now it is no more I that do it, but sin which dwelleth in me. For I know that in me, that is, in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me, but to do that which is good is not. For the good which I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I practice. But if what I would not, that I do, it is no more I that do it, but sin which dwelleth in me. I find then the law, that, to me who would do good, evil is present. For I delight in the law of God after the inward man: but I see a different law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity under the law of sin which is in my members. Wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me out of the body of this death? I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord." (Rom. 7: 15-25.) Thus matchlessly does the great apostle Paul portray the conflict that must be waged by every Christian. He won the victory only through the name of Christ, and this with him was a cause for rejoicing and thanksgiving.

The description of this conflict is an explanation of the fact that many who eloquently proclaim the gospei fall very far short in its practice. Many who tell thousands how to live the Christian life are themselves very poor exemplars of the Christian religion. They teach self-control, but do not practice temperance; they proclaim liberality from the housetop, but they are not cheerful givers; they are earnest in picturing the blessings of self-denial, but they fail to give effect to their message by deeds of self-denial and sacrifice. "Thou therefore that teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal? thou that sayest a man should not commit adultery, dost thou commit adultery?" (Rom. 2: 21, 22.) That poor, feeble, Christian widow who knits and sews in a quiet corner, and who, in devotion to Christ and in love for the brethren, donates the products of her hands, though small they be, to the relief of the suffering, is a far better interpreter of the Lord than are those who eloquently proclaim the whole counsel of God, but practice it not. Humble, devout souls are the best exponents of the gospel. A boy, when asked under whose preaching he was converted, answered: "Nobody's; it was my aunt's practicing." Godly living is more powerful than eloquent proclaiming; it will woo, mellow, and win the heart as nothing else does. The world justly scoffs at the preacher who shows others the way, but walks not in it himself; but it has the greatest admiration for the humblest person who leads a quiet, unblamable, and holy life. "Even so let your light shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven." (Matt. 5: 16.)

The Christian who reflects the light borrowed from Christ is a most powerful factor in advancing the kingdom of God in the world. It is like this: Daniel Webster was engaged in a lawsuit. He wished to show that two cogwheels were the same size. His opponent made an eloquent appeal to prove they were not the same size. When Webster began his speech, he had the wheels placed before the jury and said to them: "There they are; look at them for yourselves." With these few words he demolished all that opposing counsel had said.

Neither can you destroy the influence of a godly life by denunciation and criticism. Its influence will live to lift men to the throne of God long after its persecutors have perished.

"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the wicked, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of scoffers: but his delight is in the law of Jehovah; and on his law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the streams of water, that bringeth forth its fruit in its season, whose leaf also doth not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper. The wicked are not so, but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away. Therefore the wicked shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous. For Jehovah knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the wicked shall perish." (Ps. 1.)

Gospel teaching is like Samson shorn of his locks, unless it is enforced by godly living. We should not be such partisans that we uphold professed Christians in evil doing. We must hate sin and overcome it. Only the godly will be acquitted at the judgment.

Some of the Wonderful Things in the Book of Revelation.

BY E. G. S.

In the seventh chapter of Revelation the writer is speaking of the number that were sealed. First he speaks of twelve tribes and of twelve thousand of each tribe sealed. Then he says further: "After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands; and cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." (Verses 9, 10.) It is generally understood that this passage has reference to the vast number of people that will be saved. If that be true, which is most likely, then it is utterly useless for us to make any attempt to get at the number that will be eternally saved in the heavenly home. Neither can we reach any definite estimate of the number that will be eternally lost. Both numbers will be inexpressibly large.

If we will read and study the New Testament, we can readily understand that all who faithfully do the will of God until death will be saved in eternity. This is the subject for us to study, rather than try to reach the number that will be saved or lost. In fact, the greatest matter in all the world for us to consider is whether we will strive to be among the saved in heaven or allow ourselves to be eternally lost.

Many people who claim to be in the narrow way are neglecting to do many of the things they are required to do. Hence all Christians should strive to understand what they must do to be saved, and strive most earnestly to do them so long as they are permitted to live on the earth. Only by living patiently and earnestly the Christian life can any one hope to be safely housed in the eternal glory home. The Lord has so expressed it in his word that we can be very well assured as to whether we shall spend eternity in heaven or in eternal suffering in the lake of fire, When Jesus said, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven," he certainly meant that some would start on their way to the heavenly home that would not hold out to the end of life and would fall short of the promise of eternal life. Failure will not be because we cannot understand the word of God, but because we do not obey it. Eternal life is certain to the faithful, while eternal death is equally certain to the unfaithful and disobedient.

But some have neutralized the word of God by calling it a "dead letter." If it be true that the word of God is a dead letter, how can it be that it is able to condemn the disobedient and unfaithful? I have never yet heard any one claim that the word of God will not be able to condemn the wicked; but there are many who claim that those that humbly obey the word will not be saved. The word of Christ to the apostles was: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Now, if the word of God is able to condemn the unbelieving, how is it that it has no power to save the believer? Certainly some very unreasonable assumptions are made by religious teachers regarding the inability of the word of God to save those that believe and obey it. The better way, the only safe way, is to drop the opinions of uninspired men and go by what the word of God says.

"The word of God is quick and powerful." The word "quick" means "living." Therefore, the expression, "the word of God is quick," means that it is a living or lifegiving word; and that is what it really is. It gives spiritual life to all that will obey it. When men say the word of God is a dead letter, they palpably contradict what the word of God says about it. When the New Testament says the word of God is quick-that is, living and powerfulthat ought to forever settle the question that it is not dead. There is, therefore, plenty of assurance that the word of God has power enough connected with it to accomplish all that the Lord intended for it to accomplish, if the people will do what the word requires them to do. Hence those that are claiming that the word of God is powerless and are waiting for God to save them by some sort of innerworking power are cheating themselves out of the salvation of their own souls. All should be diligent in learning and doing just what the Lord says do till the day of their death, and then they will be safe for eternity, as there is no power that can then take them out of the Lord's hand. With the word of the Lord in hand, all can obey it and be saved in heaven, if they will.

A Trip to Senkobo Mission.

BY F. B. SHEPHERD.

The following is from a letter from Brother John Sherriff, of Forest Vale Mission, Rhodesia, Africa:

I have with me my dear wife, our darling Theodora, and Sister (Miss) Bannister, from Nyasaland. We left Bulawayo by train at 9:30 P.M., Monday, August 27, crossed the Zambesi at the Falls on Tuesday at noon, and arrived Livingstone Township at 2:15 P.M. Brother Peter Masiya and two natives met us at the station. By 6 P.M. I had engaged a wagon and fourteen donkeys for twentyfive shillings (about six dollars) to take us with luggage, stores, etc., out to Makuni Mission. It was lovely and moonlight; and when we were fairly on the way, out came the skoff (food) and we had lunch and dinner combined as we crawled along in the wagon. Of course the water bag had to take the place of the teapot.

About one and one-half miles out we passed a river (dry) near to some vegetable gardens, and I sent Peter to buy some vegetables and we kept going on. The next thing I knew was that the driver had got off the track and we were hung up in the bush. The road was very indistinct, my wagon, I understand, for the past five years being the only one to travel it, and the torrential rains had almost washed it away in places. Well, we just had to wriggle in and out and cut our way through the scrub and trees. Sometimes it looked as though the driver was trying to tie the turnout in a knot, and doing his level best to turn the wagon upside down. . . About 10 P.M. we came to a dry spruit (river) which had about three feet of a About 10 P.M. we came clean drop over the bank where the road crossed, the rains having washed the sand away. The ladies got down, and we took off a big box of stores, secured the other boxes, screwed the brake hard down, took out the two donkeys off the pole, whipped up the others, and over the wagon pitched like a huge sled. We got things straightened out once more and the sisters on board and trekked till 1 A.M.; outspanned and camped for the night. spanned at 6:30 A.M. and reached Makuni Mission about 8:30. We spent the day saluting different ones who came to see us. How would the above program suit you, my brother? Crawling along behind the wagon through forest in the moonlight, I thought to myself: Well, this is just the kind of a time I would like the Lord to come and find us struggling to carry out his last command. And I looked heavenward and felt quite sure he was smiling down upon us and saw all that was going on. "And this is the victory that overcometh the world, even your faith.

On Monday night our donkey wagon came out; packed up and left at 4 A.M. Tuesday for Livingstone; arrived at Livingstone Station about 10:30 A.M. and took train that evening for Senkobo, twenty miles north. are only two houses at the station where the train takes in water (this is a line through to Broken Hill, Congo Belje, and eventually to Cairo, Egypt).

Mr. Uys, cattle inspector, kindly lent us a horse and saddle, which wife rode, with Theodora on her lap. He also lent us four native carriers, who made a Machilla with two poles run through two sacks, and these carried Sister Bannister on their shoulders, other natives carried blankets, stores, etc., and away we went, a real Livingstone Arrived at Senkobo about four, hungry and tired. We only have a pole-and-thatch but, but have made ourselves very comfortable. Wife, baby, and I sleep outside. Lovely and bracing. I have always liked this place far Wife, baby, and I sleep outside. before Makuni Mission. There is a splendid supply of good water even now, the last month of the dry season; the people are more anxious for us, are cleaner and healthier and more advanced. I have decided to let Peter Masiya shift over here We will keep the meetings going at Makuni, but no school.

Just new this country for miles is all open to us (it will not always be so). I wish I had a white brother to settle here in the middle with Peter and his wife, and some three native teachers to place in the villages round about. A good work could be done in time. The Sisters' Circle in New Zealand are paying Peter's salary of fifty shillings per month, but we want a school and a lot more than his salary to do any good. We have had some good meetings The people gather around the camp fire until nearly ten o'clock every night. We are packing up to-night to walk to Senkobo to-morrow for Tuesday's train home. good-by, dear brother and sister. Hope I haven't tired you with the above.

Later, I am glad to report that the shifting of Peter Masiya from Makuni was a good move, for he writes me that he has one hundred and five scholars and some one hundred and thirty at his meetings. Also old Mjara, who met David Livingstone when he crossed the Zambesi, is Brethren, here is a chance to do a great work, and one that shall be to the Master's glory. This is a part of the country explored by the great missionary, David Livingstone, an untouched part of the world; but, as Brother Sherriff writes, it will not always be so. If we do not make an effort to get the gospel in its purity before these people in the near future, some corruption will be taught them, and then the task will be many times harder. I know of but one man in America that is sending to Brother Sherriff regularly, and he sends but little. Won't some live church assume the support of a native teacher at about thirteen dollars per month, or, better still, a man to help Brother Sherriff?

If any care to send donations to me, I will see that they reach Brother Sherriff, paying the fees out of my own pocket. Should I need indersement, write to J. C. McQuiddy, A. B. Lipscomb, or E. A. Elam. Address me at Lometa, Texas.

By MRS. CHARLES R. LONG

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Article 7.

What are the qualities that make a person "livable with," as we say?

Is not the fundamental one respect for our own rights and for the rights of others? And is not one side of the question equally as important as the other?

If my child must respect certain rights and privileges which belong to me as a parent, then I must respect rights and privileges that belong to him.

One of the first marked traits a child develops as soon as he is able to play with others is wanting to have things for his very own. He quickly learns the "mine" and "thine" of things, and especially the "mine." It is my book, my rattle, my ball, and great is the uproar when he is requested to share his property rights with another. At this stage young mothers are often given to discouragement and make such remarks as: "I do not know what I shall do with my boy. I fear he has an extremely selfish disposition. He refuses to let any other child so much as touch any of his playthings." But wait, dear mother; remember that instincts are crude when they first appear and must be wisely and patiently trained.

Let us first respect the child's rights and say: "Yes, it is your ball, but won't you let your little friend play with it?" By following this method, we shall find the child becoming more and more aware of his playmates as well as his own rights. He will share his favorite blocks with another, not because some grown-up in authority says, "You must," but voluntarily, because he respects the rights of another to share in his play. The idea does not formulate itself in his little mind in so many words, perhaps, but it is the response that follows from instinctively recognizing that he is being given his due and that it pays to mete out like measure to another.

The general idea of the kindergarten is just that—the recognition of the child as an individual having rights, and of training this individuality by allowing it to express itself voluntarily.

Of necessity this expression must be guided and guarded, so that the best qualities of self find the readiest expression. Children are quick to accept the standards of living that we are privileged to set them, quick to respond to the frown or the smile, and slow to question where they are accustomed to receive justice.

At no time of life so much as in childhood is the opportunity given to bring out and establish traits of character that make for a sound manhood or womanhood.

One of the greatest opportunities within reach of all mothers is through the medium of story-telling. Stories interest children enormously, absorbing the entire attention for the time being. They establish a bond of mutual sympathy between the story-teller and the listener. They teach lessons of bravery, unselfishness, kindness, and a regard for truth, with no seeming effort in those directions. They also develop the imagination. When we stop to think that every invention we have, every great effort accomplished, was first developed in some individual mind through the aid of the imagination, we will do everything we can to foster this great power in our children.

Every child who has the opportunity of attending a wellorganized kindergarten has a distinct advantage over one who is denied such an opportunity. While the kindergarten idea may to some extent be carried out by the mother in the home, much additional training is afforded the child by coming in contact with groups of children of similar age, and by spending two or three hours daily under the guidance of the trained worker, whose efforts are all aimed at developing what is brightest and best in his unfolding life.

The poetry of all growing life consists in carrying an oldness into a newness, a past into a future, always. So only can our days possibly be bound "each to each by natural piety." I would not for the world think that twenty years hence I should have ceased to see the things which I see now, and love them still. It would make life wearisome beyond expression if I thought that twenty years hence I should see them just as I see them now, and love them with no deeper love because of other visions of their lovableness. And so there comes this deep and simple rule for any man as he crosses the line dividing one period of his life from another, the same rule which he may use also as he passes through any critical occurrence of his life. Make it a time in which you shall realize your faith, and also in which you shall expect of your faith new and greater things. Take what you believe and are, and hold it in your hand with a new firmness as you go forward; but look on it with continual and confident expectation to see it open into something greater and truer.-Phillips Ø Ø Ø

Those who devote themselves with great labor to the pursuits of piety and religion, although obtaining only some small fragments from the manifold and boundless treasures of divine knowledge, yet, by the very circumstance that their mind and soul are engaged in these pursuits, and that in the eagerness of their desire they outstrip themselves, do derive much advantage; and, because their minds are directed to the study and love of the investigation of truth, they are made more capable of receiving the instruction that is to come; as if, when one would paint an image, he were first with a light pencil to trace out the outlines of the coming picture, and prepare marks for the reception of the features that are to be afterwards added, this preliminary sketch in outline is found to prepare the way for the laying on of the true colors of the painting; so, in a measure, an outline and sketch may be traced on the tablets of our heart by the pencil of our Lord Jesus Christ. And therefore, perhaps, it is said: "Unto every one that hath shall be given, and be added." By which it is established that to those who possess in this life a kind of outline of truth and knowledge shall be added the beauty of a perfect image in the future. - Origen.

O O O

While yet I wore the wondrous rose of youth, And trod life's flower-lined, opening way, There came one shrouded in a robe of gray, Who leant upon the arm of one called "Truth." So quaint her style and fashion, so uncouth, That filled was I with doubt, dread, and dismay; And to escape her gaze I did essay, Yet ever, ever, was transfixed forsooth. Scarce knew I when youth's rose began to fade, Perceived at last its fragrancy was past, Then turned to dwell within life's solemn shade, There learned my vision had been overcast! Henceforth I am of Duty unafraid, And long time since my lot with hers have cast.

Subscribe for a Christian Paper.

The Arkansas Methodist thinks it almost an incredible thing that a Christian should be found who is not taking "the church paper." It says: "We sympathize with the pastor who is dependent, for his church officials, upon men who lack the loyalty or vision which the denomination paper is intended to impart."

Let us substitute "Christian" for "denomination" and urge all disciples to take a Christian paper. Christianity will support us in the critical hour of death, and not denominationalism. When we come to die, we will find comfort in the thought that we have followed Christ and that we have advanced his kingdom in the world, and not denominationalism.

War on Noncombatants.

The Red Cross on the white field of an armlet was formerly an emblem of an emissary of mercy and a guaranty of protection. The Germans have changed all that; and since it also makes an excellent target, they have calculated that for every hit may be reckoned the loss of five hundred American soldiers. So the surgeons and stretcher bearers of the American army will no longer wear the white and red brassard. The New York Evening Sun repeats the confession of a captured German officer that the medical men of the American forces have been marked for death by the Prussians. "The death of one army surgeon equals the loss of five hundred American soldiers, and a stretcher bearer counts as much as sixteen infantrymen." This cool calculation, observes The Evening Sun, is characteristically German, and it adds this comment:

"It may be that this 'confession' is not authentic; but the resulting order is. While the deliberate policy of classifying surgeons and stretcher bearers as worth so many American private soldiers and systematically firing on the Red Cross may not have been adopted universally in the German army, it has been established by many witnesses that such attacks are by no means infrequent, certainly not accidental. Moreover, it is established beyond doubt that German sharpshooters have been decorated for hitting the noncombatants engaged in aiding the wounded."

The men dedicated to such service are peculiarly noncombatant, whether so estimated by army regulations or not; but noncombatantism has the exquisite effect of stirring up German animosity. The achievements of the "mystery" gun on Good Friday in Paris mark off this anniversary of 1718 as another Innocents' day. So says a writer to the New York Sun, with this addition:

a writer to the New York Sun, with this addition:
"In a Paris church in which worshipers were assembled a German shell fired by a long-range Krupp gun killed men, women, and children as they prayed.

"Paris is not besieged. By no stretch of the imagination does one gun firing blindly from a distance of some seventy-five miles constitute a siege. In the case of Zeppelins and airplanes the pretense has been advanced by the German high command that bombs are aimed at 'millitary establishments.' In the case of this latest implement of the Krupp factory no such pretense is possible. It is simply firing blindly at the huge target of an immense city with no other possible object than to terrorize by a daily slaughter of innocents as many noncombatants as possible—women, children, old men, cripples, and priests, not to speak of those who still call themselves neutrals, one of whom, a diplomatic official, by a strange irony of fate, is among the victims of this latest and crowning heathen horror.

"Upon the day of his crucifixion a sanctuary of Jesus Christ has been desecrated by the German emperor; the blood of the youngest and weakest of his flock has bespattered his altar."—Literary Digest.

Accepting as true the above, it is evident that those engaged in noncombatant service are in great danger of losing their lives. While engaged in dressing the wounds of the wounded, in relieving the suffering of the afflicted, and in being true to their conceptions of duty and right, they may be called upon to give up their lives. It is far better to die giving the thirsty drink, feeding the hungry, and relieving suffering than to die doing nothing. In the terrible crisis that is now over the world it is not difficult to find a work for every truly righteous man. The government of the United States very readily respects the consciences of all its subjects and generously assigns each a work to do.

Those who cheerfully accept noncombatant service are loyal citizens and should not be scoffed at as cowards and slackers. It is a brave man who quietly submits to being shot, without shooting at those firing at him, while he is caring for the wounded.

The young man who accepts the position of a stretcher bearer or an ambulance driver should do so with his eyes wide open; he should do so realizing that he is a special target for German bullets.

The government may use noncombatants advantageously, but it cannot so use the absolutist. There is no place to use the man who will do nothing.

"For My Sake and the Gospel's."

"A cup of cold water only, in the name of a disciple." Not for humanity's sake; not the merely human instinctthe mother sacrificing for her child, friend rescuing friend, citizens striving for the welfare of the nation, the soldier laying down his life in battle. These do not touch the vital nerve in the redeemed soul. None of them meets the "for my sake and the gospel's." It is not ministering to humanity as humanity. It is ministering to saved humanity because of the relation of that humanity to Jesus Christ. It is when the cup of cold water is given because he who receives it "belongs to Christ;" that is the test of love to Christ. Because those on the left hand have done nothing for those on the right out of love to Christ, they are left to themselves, to go away to the place prepared for their master and his angels. It is not guesswork, not a mistaken interpretation of the sayings of the Master. It is right here, in the next chapter (Mark 9: 41): "Because ye belong to Christ." Not because you ask for it; not because you are a wayfarer in need; not because you are sick or helpless; but "because ye belong to Christ." Not because he who does the good deed belongs to Christ, though he may abound in such deeds-has the Spirit of his Master -but because he to whom the cup of water is held out belongs to Christ .- Journal and Messenger.

A United Church.

The Christian-Evangelist says: "A divided church is an impotent church. A united church alone can conquer the world. Christ, the crucified and risen One, is the only basis for such union."

On this the Herald and Presbyter remarks: "The church is more apt to prove impotent when it puts union in the place of Christ crucified and risen than when differing on many points. The churches agree in preaching the gospel. One of the greatest dangers of the age is the substitution of unity or anything else for the gospel."

The fallacy of the Herald and Presbyter is that men do not correctly represent Christ who advocate division and not unity. Christ prayed that his followers should be one, and Christians are admonished to "keep the unity of the Spirit In the bond of peace." Those who substitute division for unity are substituting another gospel for the gospel of Christ.

Sister J. E. Hoffman cheers us with the following: "Husband and I have only been subscribers since December, 1916; but in this short time we have grown so attached to the Gospel Advocate that we would be willing to give up all our other papers in order that the Advocate might be a regular visitor at our home."

H. Clay, Route I, Silver Point, Tenn., sends this: "To all contributors and friends of the Christian College at Silver Point, Putnam County, Tenn.: Some changes have been made in the running of the school. All contributions for the school from now until further notice should be sent to James Ealey, Route 1, Silver Point, Tenn."

Notice from Q. A. Allen, 603½ Twenty-sixth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.: "To the churches in the country who may need some one to help in the song services or lead in singing: I can give a part of my time to the churches in Tennessee during their summer and fall meetings. Those who may wish my services should write me as soon as possible."

Latter must be able to do work acceptable to the better conservatories. Must be Christians. Reasonable salaries. Address "College," care of A. B. Lipscomb, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

From G. W. Riggs, Los Angeles, Cal.: "Brother Larimore began the third week of our meeting yesterday (April 15). The attendance and interest just moderately good. But yesterday we had basket dinner in a beautiful near-by park, the result of which was a delightful day with two large audiences. Brother Larimore still preaches the pure gospel in a simple, impressive manner. We are hoping for a good meeting."

From Charlie Taylor, Paducah, Ky., April 18: "On April 10 I closed a two-weeks' meeting at Dongola, Ill., which resulted in eight baptisms. Large crowds greeted us at almost every service, and we feel sure that much good was accomplished in His name. The work in Paducah moves along splendidly. We are soon to begin our evangelistic work in the city. The brethren here have a mind to work and are standing by us nobly. May God bless every effort put forth in harmony with his will."

Mrs. R. A. Hovious, wife of Elder R. A. Hovious, died at Jackson, Miss., on April 13. She is survived by six sons and three daughters. They are: W. R. Hovious, T. J. Hovious, and J. H. Hovious, of Vicksburg, Miss.; H. M. Hovious, of Ringgold, La.; Fred Hovious, of Jackson, Miss.; P. L. Hovious, Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. John Brooks, Meridian, Miss.; Mrs. John Shore, Cornelia, Ga.; and Mrs. Elmer Brummitt, Danville, Ky.

The Gospel Advocate extends sympathy.

Andrew Perry, of Watseka, Ill., asks: "Have you read and studied the great book, entitled 'Civil Government,' by our honored and lamented brother, David Lipscomb? If not, send seventy-five cents to the McQuiddy Printing Company and get the book. I am glad I had the opportunity of getting this book years ago, and I have been the means of putting it into the hands of many readers. It is a work that is simply unanswerable. Several have tried to answer it and have failed. Send for it and read it."

From T. H. Matheson, Saint Jo, Texas: "We have just gone through a gloomy, sad time here. The weather has brought very dark days. This, with the loss of one of our elders, H. D. McDowell, whose spirit left us at 2:30 A.M., April 16, has made it dark and dreary. During the time he was leaving us he was surrounded by three preachers, a large family, and a host of brethren and friends, all of whom were constantly quoting passages of scripture suggesting a good life that had been lived and the reward in the life that he was soon to be 'clothed upon.' He was truly a Christian, and the loss of his work in the church will be felt greatly. John F. Lauderdale and I conducted the funeral services, which had to be made short on account of an approaching rainstorm."

John S. Durst, of Junction City, Texas, writes: "My book, 'Fifty-two Bible Subjects Examined,' will be ready for those who may want a copy by the time you read this notice. You can order from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn., or from the Firm Foundation Publishing Company, Austin, Texas. Those who have sent the money for it to me will receive a copy from my home office. Brethren, I ask you to circulate this little book. I tried to make it beneficial to all classes, and hope it will do good. Besides, the small amount that I get for it, after paying all expenses of printing and selling, will assist me a little, while I hope you will get its worth in return. The price is fifty cents a copy."

The Gospel Advocate bespeaks a favorable reception for this new book.

From W. T. Buffaloe, Route 1, Monette, Ark., April 17: "The readers of the Gospel Advocate will probably remember that I recently reported that the disciples at Black Oak, Ark., were preparing to build a house of worship. The house was near completion yesterday, but last night a terrific storm made havoc of the structure and laid it flat upon the ground. I am just from there, and I found the few members almost heartbroken. This is a little flock and also a rather new one in the field, but I never saw more zealous workers in my life. They are to meet to-morrow to start the work anew, believing the Lord will provide the means. Who will assist these worthy brethren in their trials by sending some amount to help defray this double expense? Send contributions to me, at Route 1, Monette, Ark., or to E. C. Chrisco, Black Oak.

A Pressing Duty for Every Congregation.

BY JOHN A. KIINGMAN.

Think of what the primitive churches would have suffered and what the Christian world would miss to-day if Paul had depended alone on the influence of his speech. Is this not an hour in which preachers, elders, and all Christians should freely use the pen in making known the glad tidings and in sending messages of cheer and kindly admonition to men who need this spiritual influence above all else? This is not a time for faultfinding and talking about what the church ought to do, while we sit in idleness. Let us learn a lesson from the four lepers. "Then they said one to another, We do not well; this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace: if we tarry till the morning light, punishment will overtake us; now therefore come, let us go and tell the king's household." (2 Kings 7: 9.)

Let us hold up the hands of the men who are preaching the gospel to our boys in the cantonments; but let us also send gospel messages directly to the men in the service. Papers, books, and tracts do good, but nothing touches and reaches the heart like a message that breathes of love and personal interest. It seems to me that God will hold each congregation responsible if this matter is neglected. "The pen is mightier than the sword."

The following letter is a copy of such as the Lebanon church is sending out. I thought it may encourage others to do a similar work. We are not sending carbon copies. They are never so much appreciated. Where there are no preachers located and where one person has not the time to write all the letters, the work could be distributed among the members.

At one of our business meetings a committee was appointed to write to the men in military service who have gone out from the homes represented by the church of Christ at Lebanon.

We desire that you be informed of our deep-hearted interest in you personally, and our appreciation of you as men who are nobly serving our great and glorious republic in an hour of testing and trial. You are remembered in our petitions before the throne of God, in our public meetings. and also in our prayers at the hearthstone. We sorely miss you in our town life, on the streets, in places of business, in our social circles, and in our religious gatherings. We miss your manly faces, your friendly greetings, and your genial fellowship. is a part of our sacrifice in this world contest. But, though we miss you, we are proud of the noble manhood that has gone out from our little city in answer to our nation's call.

In the midst of suffering and heartache, this war is bringing us nearer to God and causing us to see and feel the need of our souls. Uncle Sam will, no doubt, be victorious in this great strife; but we have a greater and more powerful enemy to overcome than the Kaiser. Jesus said: "For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose lis own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Mark 8: 36, 37.) Let us fight the good fight of faith and lay hold on eternal life. Let us put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil, (Read Eph. 6: 10-20.)

May God bless you and bring you safely back to your friends and loved ones. But if, for the sake of the orphan, the widow, the oppressed, and the downtrodden, your life is sacrificed, may you fall as a Christian soldier in the triumph of your faith.

"Fallen, on Zion's battlefield. A soldier of renown, Armed in the panoply of God, In conflict cloven down, His helmet on, his armor bright, His cheek unblanched with fear, While round his head there gleamed a light. His dying hour to cheer."

> Sincerely yours. A. W. MCCARTNEY, ROBERT L. WHITE. JOHN A. KLINGMAN Committee.

Baxley-Riggins Debate.

BY J. THOMAS DANIEL.

The Baxley-Riggins debate was held at Mount Pleasant, Chilton County, Ala., on March 29, 30.

The proposition discussed was:
"The New Testament Scriptures teach that water baptism, preceded by faith and repentance, is for, or in order to, the remission of sins, and is essential to salvation." Brother Baxley, of the church of Christ, affirmed; and Mr.
Riggins, of the Evening Light, denied.

Brother Baxley, in his opening address, went back to the beginning and the creation of man, pictured him in the garden of Eden in his holiness. Then Satan entered, giving rise to two spiritual forces in the world. He showed that conflict comes between truth and error. Truth never conflicts with truth. He showed that our Savior established only one church, one order of work and worship, and prayed for unity to prevail (John 17: 20), and that unity did prevail until ambitious men began to substitute the traditions of men for the commandments of God. It was fully explained that we are not under the law of Moses, but under the law of Christ. (Col. 2: 14; Eph. 2: 14; Rom. 10: 4.) He showed that every act in religion comes from one of two sources (the devil excepted)-that is, from God or from men-and that the point of authority once settled would determine or settle this question. He showed that the denial of this proposition is not a doctrine of faith, and is, therefore, "vain" and sinful to those who practice it. (Rom. 10: 17; 14: 23.)

In his second argument Brother Baxley used the great commission, diagramming on the board, and showing faith, repentance, and baptism to be the essential steps in the commission. Mr. Riggins was asked to erase all that was not essential, but he dared not touch it. Jesus asked the Jews: "The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men?" Dr. Baxley asked Riggins: "The baptism in the commission, whence is it? from heaven, or of men?" Riggins said: "From God."

Other questions were: (1) Is salvation conditional? If yes, what are the conditions? (2) At what point is the penitent pardoned, and what are his evidences of it? (3) Is the command to be baptized the word of God? If yes, baptism is a part of the new birth, for we are born of the word of God. (1 Pet. 1: 23.) If no, why do you practice it? (4) If baptism, with the antecedents, is not "for the remission of sins," what is it for? What is the design of baptism? Explain the commission in the light of your answer. (5) How do you explain John's statement that the Spirit, the water, and the blood agree in one, in view of the fact that you claim to "receive the Spirit" and have "the blood applied" without baptism? (1 John 5: 8.) (6) Is there any salvation out of Christ? Is it not a fact that we believe into Christ, repent into Christ, confess into Christ, and are baptized into Christ? (Mark 16: 15, 16; Acts 2: 38; Rom. 10: 9, 10.) To all the above questions Riggins absolutely refused to answer.

In Brother Baxley's next argument he showed that salvation is in His name. (Acts 4: 11, 12; 10: 43, 48; Matt. 28: 19, 20; John 20: 30.) this point Mr. Riggins was asked to tell how we get into his name; but he answered not a word. Then came the blood argument. Brother Baxley made a cross on the board, and represented Christ's death on the cross by a big letter D and his blood in his death by the letter B in the D. Scriptures used: John 19: 34; Matt. 26: 28; 1 John 1: 7; Rom. 6: 3; 2 Cor. 5: 17. He also used John's language in 1 John 5: 8, "The Spirit, the water, and the blood agree in one," and the Savior's language in John 3: 5: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

Brother Baxley's last argument consisted of the cases of Cornelius, the Pentecostians, and Saul of Tarsus linked together, using the expressions, "oughtest to do," "shall we do," "must do." (Acts 10, 2, 9, 22.)

It was my pleasure to serve as moderator for Brother Baxley in this discussion. A. D. Duke (Baptist) was moderator for Mr. Riggins. The right spirit was manifested throughout the debate. Dr. Baxley presented the truth humbly, but firmly, boldly, and satisfactorily to all Bible readers. He spoke the right word at the right place and at the right time. Any congregation needing a man to defend the truth and present the gospel where it will have a lasting effect will make no mistake by calling Dr. Baxley.

We believe that the good done in this debate will stand as a monument to Brother Baxley and as a victory for the Lord. Although Mr. Riggins claimed that Brother Baxley had changed the proposition, in his last speech he granted that baptism, taken in connection with faith and repentance, is essential to salvation.

SAGE AND SULPHUR DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Brush This Through Faded, Streaked Locks and They Become Dark, Clossy, Youthful.

Almost every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked, or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about fifty cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of disease.

The Master's Vineyard

Canada.

Selkirk, Ontario, April 12.—On Sunday morning, March 31, at the conclusion of a discourse on "The Trial of Jesus," four persons came forward, three of whom confessed their faith in Christ and on the following Monday were buried with Christ in ice-cold water of Lake Erie, to rise to walk in newness of life. The fourth person, having been baptized a few years ago by a preacher of the "Christian Church," expressed his desire to be united with the church of Christ and confessed his wrongs. During the last ten months seven persons, now all heads of families, except one, have been added to the congregation here. Thus the work of the Master moves on. Brother H. A. Rogers, of Carman, Manitoba, who has been busily engaged in evangelistic work in Saskatchewan and who has been successful in winning souls for Christ, has given publicity of the expediency of having help in his chosen field of labor in proclaiming the primitive gospel of Christ. It is apparent from what he says that the Westerners are now ready for the word of God. Some of our brethren have wisely responded to this call and have expressed the expediency of having a number of congregations cooperate in this important endeavor, and have taken definite steps to have an evangelist sent to the above field, supporting him while engaged in the interest of the Master's cause in the West. The writer has been selected to do this work and has decided to go, and arrangements are being made to be on the ground as soon as possible. Having lived and worked in the interest of the cause of the Master in the West for four years, I feel that I am competent to take up the work, anticipating success as a soul winner. Your prayers in behalf of the Lord's cause in this particular part of the world and your coöperation in this endeavor will be much appreciated by all concerned. Your fellow-ship is solicited. Send all contributions for this work to Brother H. A. Rogers, Carman, Manitoba, Canada. Reports of how the money is being used and the progress of the cause will appear in some of our Christian papers.-W. F. Cox.

Forest Hill, April 15.—Much improvement along all lines. Laborers increased. Brother C. K. Mathews, of Louisville, is now located at Turkey Creek and has opened up some new territory and baptized several. I have visited Simpson and Pisgah twice each this year. Two confessed their Lord at the latter place last night. I am to preach at Hobson and Elmer the coming week. These places are in new territory. Brother C. C. McQuiddy will preach at Pisgah on the second Sunday. This good brother has done and is now doing some splendid work for the Lord in this section. He is our railroad agent, Bible teacher and preacher, possessor of unlimited amount of energy and full of the Spirit.—A. K. Ramsey.

Dayton, 137 East Third Street, April 15.—I preached some sermons at Magnetic Springs. Three were baptized. Do not forget the Japan work, brethren. Let me have now your offering for May. Good reports from "over there." Not enough money in hand for the May remittance.—C. G. Vincent.

Elk City, April 10.-I began here on March 28 and closed last Monday night. The Elk City church has had its share of troubles for several years, but I am glad to announce that all these things are over and the church is now at peace, with great possibilities for doing good in the Master's vineyard. Brother Tice Elkins preached last Sunday afternoon and at night. After the sermon at night the matter of difference between the brethren came up, and, by the help of God. Brother Elkins and I got the brethren to come to an agreement, and now all is well. Young Brother Smith and Brother Carman will preach for them a while, and Brother Joe S. Warlick is to begin a meeting for them on I am to begin a meeting at or near Waynoka on Saturday night, -D. S. Ligon.

Chattanooga, April 9.—Our meeting with the Cowart Street Church is entering the second week, with good interest and two additions. Brother E. Gaston Collins is leading the song service.—J. D. Northeut.

Chattanooga, April 15.—The crowds at Central yesterday, says Brother Hoover, were the best of the year. The preceding week two were baptized. Brother Hoover has recently closed a fine meeting at the C. S. Shops. The gospel is having its effect on those machinists. They love Hoover and gladly receive the message he brings them. The meeting at Cowart Street continues. Brother Northcut is being well received. Brother Collins is conducting the singing. Two confessions to date. During the past two weeks three have been baptized at St. Elmo. Large crowds and good interest yesterday. One confession last night.—F. L. Wallace.

HEAVY MEAT EATERS HAVE SLOW KIDNEYS

Ent Less Meat If You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble—Take Glass of Salts

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid, which excites the kidneys; they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish, and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood; then we get sick. Nearly all rheu-matism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness, and urinary disorders come from sluggish

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This your kidneys will act fine, famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irrita-tion, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; it makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which every one should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Dallas, April 16.-The Lord is blessing me in health now and I am doing lots of physical labor, as well as put-ting in every Sunday preaching from two to three times, and sometimes on Saturday night. It usually takes all day, or at least spoils, Saturdays and Mondays going to and coming from places where I preach on Sundays. The remainder of the week I put in at work here at home from about 6 A.M. to 10 P.M. cultivating a garden and a few acres in farm products to make something to live on and to feed a pig, a cow, and a few chickens, and keep up my work preparing my subjects necessary to the growth and development of the congregations with which I am laboring this winter and spring at different towns up and down our railroads out of Dallas. I can see a marked improvement at the places I go regularly; but, being with them only once a month from about fourteen to thirty hours each time, the growth is too slow. I work and pray for better conditions .- J. C. Estes

"Noah, a Just Man."

BY J. R. BRADLEY.

In this short article I want to ask Brother E. G. Rockliff a question or two. In the issue of the Gospel Advocate of March 28, page 302, under the above heading, our brother says: "Noah worked on that boat one hundred and twenty years." Again, he says: "Yet his spirit did strive with man for one hundred and twenty years, while the ark was a preparing. Brother Rockliff, will you please harmonize a few plain Bible statements, which I will now give, with your statements I have quoted? "And Noah was five hundred years old: and Noah begat Shem, Ham, and Japheth." (Gen. 5: 32.) "And Noah was six hundred years old when the flood of waters was upon the earth. And Noah went in, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him, into the ark, because of the waters of the flood." (Gen. 7: 6, 7.) Now, if Noan was five hundred years old when he begat these sons, and these sons had to be born into the world and grow up to manhood and get married before they and their wives could enter with Noah into the ark, how could he have been "working on that boat a hundred and twenty years," seeing that he was six hundred years old when the flood of waters was upon the earth? Subtract five hundred from six hundred, and there are only one hundred left.

So it was only one hundred years from the time these boys were begotten till "the flood of waters was upon the earth." I know those wicked people had a "probation" of "one hundred and twenty years" (Gen. 6: 3), but I am not at all certain that Noah "worked on that boat" all those hundred and twenty years. I feel almost certain that he did not. Now, Brother Rockliff, I do not write this to get up a controversy. I certainly like your article that I mention, and can say "amen" to all but your statement in question.

Why I Believe in Nuxated Iron

As a Tonic, Strength and Blood Builder

Probably no remedy has ever met with such phenomenal success as has Nuxated Iron. It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone. It has been highly endorsed and used by Former United States Senators and Members of Congress; Physicians who have been consected with well-known hospitals have prescribed and recommended it; Monseigneur Nanalni, a prominent Clergyman, recommends it to all, Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, says it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician.

Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, and former House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, says Nuxated fron has proven through his own tests of it to excel any preparation he has ever used for reading red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders.

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor dep't.) New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says there are thousands of men and women who need a strength and blood builder but do not know what to take. In his opinion there is nothing better than organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for enteling the blood and helping to increase the strength and endurance of men and women who burn up too rapidly their nervous energy in the strengous strain of the great business competition of the day.

If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two fivegrain tablets of Nuxated fron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have enfined.

Manufacturer's Note: Nuxated Iron, which has been used by former members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives, and other prominent people with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to overy purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

The Christian Home. No. 14.

Make your home attractive on the outside, too. Cut down those ugly old weeds and lay out some nice, large lawns and plant some lovely flowers, Plant trees and put swings out under their shady boughs. Provide outdoor games, and in the long, warm days of vacation the children will be filling their lungs with fresh, pure air, developing their bodies and expanding their souls, and in the evening they will come in with tired limbs and flushed cheeks and caress you, and, when you have put them in their beds and kissed them good night, a smile will play on their faces, for they are happy even in their dreams.

It is a home of cleanliness. I believe in the truth of the old proverb: "Cleanliness is next to godliness." We may say truthfully that cleanliness is godliness. Quit sweeping the dirt under the beds and behind the doors. I like the idea of spring cleaning, but I like the idea of fall cleaning and summer cleaning and winter cleaning. Clean all the time instead of having to run "hubby" and the children off to the hotel for a week while you renovate and overhaul the entire premises.

We read in story books how it delighted the children to steal away some quiet hour and climb to the attic, that museum of family relies and curious things. But you have never read that that attic has many times been the source of that fire that destroyed the home; and lurking in that old, dingy retreat of cobwebs and foul air are the germs of disease that may rob your home of its dearest treasures. Don't have any old rubbish rooms. If you must preserve some antique curiosities and family heirlooms, reserve a room, design it for a museum, and keep it in order.

Clean up on the outside, too. Some people throw dishwater out under the window and old tin cans and bottles out into the yard, as if they thought that was not a part of the premises. They put on a very nice front, but O those back yards! Clean up that old rubbish. Get it clear off the farm or out of town. Clean out your fence corners. Even keep the public highway clean where it touches your possessions. Keep your outbuildings clean. Keep your stables clean and your horses will neigh their thanks and draw your carriage more lightly; your cow will stop kicking and give better milk. Keep your poultry house clean, and your old rooster will crow more lustily in the morning and your hens will lay winter and summer. Even keep your doghouse clean or kill your dog.

Not only are clean homes more pleasant for their occupants in every way, but their greatest blessing is the health they bring. Quit paying so much to the doctor and buy more soap. Disease rarely invades the home of cleanliness. Parents will allow their premises to become filthy, disease will creep in and remove from the home one of its jewels, and the good, old, pious minister will come to you with this message of consolation: "Be of good cheer; the Lord giveth, and the Lord taketh away." Dear brother and sister, the Lord had nothing to do with it. It was weeds, rats in the cistern, flies, and pools of dishwater out under the kitchen window that called your darling home.

It is a home of order. Order is Heaven's first law. "A place for everything, and everything in its place," is the motto of business success. visited a home a few months ago where the gentleman had just moved into a new dwelling. He had a medicine cabinet placed in the wall so he could always find his medicine easily, and he was very eager to show it to me. I opened the door expecting to see the contents arranged as by the skill of an apothecary, but, lo and behold, the first article I beheld was a box of tacks! I shudder to think what might have been the result had that father arose some night for the paragoric and made a mistake. Some men leave their farming machinery all winter right out in the field where they make their crop. They are always misplacing some article and inquiring of their wives about it. They cannot even keep up with their hats. O that mother! What a knowing soul she has to be! When she is not busy searching for something her husband has lost, she must be answering the calls of her children. All day long it is, "Mamma, where is this?" and, "Mamma, where is that?" Dear mothers, quit running yourself weary after your children. Teach your son to brush his clothes and put them away, and your daughter to care for her belts, her combs, her hats, and her rats, etc.; and when they lose things, let them find them, and they will learn to apply that happy rule of order: "A place for everything, and everything in its place."

Then, as well as a rule of place, she should have a rule of time. A time for everything, and everything on time. Have regular meal hours, regular hours to rise and retire. Have certain days for certain tasks and certain days to go shopping. Plan your work and work your plan, and, whatever comes or goes, you will be prosperous.

Don't let your homes go to wrack.

Keep your gates on the hinges, replace that picket that is gone out of your fence, tack that board on the barn, stop that hole under the yard fence where the pig gets in Instead of slaughtering the poor dumb pig. Make your premises look like they were inhabited.

It is a home of economy. It is not what we earn in this life that makes us wealthy. It is what we save. Many a man is toiling his life out today, and as fast as he fills the family coffers they are emptied by a wasteful family. Waste is sin. It is in violation of that scriptural command: "Be ye moderate."

Some Mission Work in Sevier County, Ark.

BY D. S. LIGON.

Brethren, I am now making my arrangements to do some mission work in Sevier County, Ark. That is a field much neglected, white and ready for harvest. I have always been willing to do my part of the mission work here in our "homeland," but I am not able to do this work at my own expense. Will the brethren not help me preach the old Jerusalem gospel in this field? I want to be there to begin the first of May. Will you disappoint me in this matter, brethren? I hope you will not just pass this matter up, but will at least send me one dollar to help me. My wife has been under the treatment of the doctors for more than sixteen months; and when I get through my work in Arkansas the month of May, 1 will be compelled to return home and send my wife to Mineral Wells, Texas, to see if she can get some relief there. If you want to help me do this much-needed work, send your help to me at Denton, Texas. My address while in Arkansas will be De Queen, Ark. Pray for me and mine.

Tragedy of Childhood.

Nothing is more despicable than to deceive a child in any way. Their plastic young minds receive and hold impressions that we can never eradicate, try we ever so hard. WHEN WRITING OUR ADVERTISERS PLEASE MENTION THIS PUBLICATION The New Book on Revelation. BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

I have just read Dr. J. E. Thompson's new book on Revelation, "The History of the Fall and Dissolution of Christendom." The book is very entertaining and many passages are really eloquent. The brother shows a respect for the word of God that is very commendable. His interpretation of Revelation is new and entirely original. He seems to follow no uninspired commentator. His effort to get his definitions of the figures of Revelation from the word of God, I am sure all lovers of that book will appreciate, whether they agree with him or not. I like any man's effort that tries to prove his position by the Bible, though I may think he fails. Brother Thompson's description of the wilderness of Edom, into which he says God's people must yet go, is very fine even if one reads it like he would a book of fiction. It sounds to me like a fairy tale or a beautiful dream, but I do not conclude from that that it must of necessity be false. Sometimes "truth is stranger than fiction." Dr. Thompson objects to those brethren who say about his book that they "do not know;" so I will not write myself down as belonging to the "know-nothing party," but will say, "I am a seeker." I believe the book will have many readers. There are many things in it to be commended.

Debates.

BY J. W. ATKISSON.

I was converted from Calvinism to the New Testament Christianity by hearing a religious debate of six days' duration; and I have been instrumental in bringing about a number of public discussions since that time, which have resulted in much good. I mention especially the Wright-Edwards debate in July, 1886; the Thompson-Lawson debate, published in book form, in 1898; and later the Tant-Frost debate on instrumental music in the worship and man-made missionary societies to preach the gospel.

Another oral debate which I was instrumental in bringing about was between Brother W. H. Williams, of Lena, Ind., and Elder John R. Daily, the vaunted champion of Calvinism. I wanted one of our very ablest debaters to meet Daily, but failed to get any of them sufficiently interested to do so, except Brother John F. Rowe who said if he debated with Daily it must be done in the columns of the Christian Leader; but Daily did not want a debate of that kind. So I got W. M. Browder to take the matter up; but he got into politics and could not get ready for the debate, and the matter dragged along for a year or two when I turned the matter over to Brother Williams, and by that time circumstances made it impossible for me to attend the debate. Daily refused to publish the debate in book form, as he agreed to do, because he did not think Brother Williams was a strong debater nor a very prominent man. He said that Brother Williams was not a thoroughly representative man and very deficient in literary education. He said that he had long wanted to hold a discussion with W. B. F. Treat, J. A. Harding, or some other man of good ability, but that our brethren had refused to select such a man to meet him. Since then he has debated with Brother I. B. Bradley, of Dickson, Tenn.; but I never heard whether he regarded Brother Bradley a representative man or not.

Letters From Rheumatics.

Possibly you have imagined that you could never get your own consent to write a testimonial letter; but if you have ever experienced the excruciating pains of rheumatism, you can at least appreciate the feelings of those who have been relieved of this terrible disease by drinking the Mineral Water from the justly celebrated Shivar Spring, This water overcomes many diseases, including indigestion, gout, uric-acid poisoning, and liver and kidney diseases; but no patrons of the Spring are more enthusiastic in their praise of the water than those who have been relieved of their rheumatism.

Hundreds of letters like the following have been received by the manageing have been received by the management:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that that acted nicely in each case, and I believe that, if used continuously for a reasonable time, it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant, of Savannah, writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians; went to Baltmore and consulted specialists there, and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living, when I began to use Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes, of Virginia, writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for rheumatism. I am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam, of South Carolina, writes: "Mrs. Carter, of Virginia, writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water temoved every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

Sister Florence Sweeney was born on May 30, 1877, and departed this life on April 5, 1918. She was baptized into Christ in the year 1903, and from that time until death she lived a true and devoted Christian life. She was the wife of Brother Robert Sweeney, a good, Christian husband, and he and three children are left to mourn her departure. She bore her afflictions very patiently. She was conscious until death. Her last words were: am ready to go." Funeral service were conducted by the writer. Funeral services

C., on December 15, 1850, and died on March 30, 1918, near Mount Carmel, Limestone County, Ala. She obeyed the gospel in 1879. neral services were held at the Wallace cemetery, where she was buried. The writer spoke words of comfort and consolation to the loved ones left to mourn their loss. She left a husband, three sons, and one daughter. Let us not forget the words of Jesus in his consolation to Martha: "Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth on me, though he die, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die." (John 11: 25, 26.)

Reese.

My little brother, Jord Junior, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Reese, was born on February 14, 1917, and left this earthly home for one where there is no pain nor death on February 7, 1918. His life was short; but O how sweet to us! His place is vacant and cannot be filled. He leaves a father, mother, and two sisters to mourn his death. All belong to the church of Christ except my little sister. This is the third boy that we have given up. But little Junior is sleeping in the arms of Jesus. He was loved by all who knew He had a smile for everybody. He first had whooping cough, then catarrhal pneumonia, and then catarrhal fever, and died after being sick almost two months. Funeral services were conducted by our uncle, A. W. Reese, and he was laid away in the old Corinth cemetery. MYRLE REESE.

Nicks.

Mrs. Margaret S, Nicks died on January 9, 1918, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. P. C. Hanes, near Jones Valley, Tenn., aged eighty-eight years and six months. She obeyed the gospel at the age of thirteen years and continued faithful until death. She loved the Bible and delighted in talking of its divine teachings. She leaves daughters and several grandchildren. She was a loving mother, a kind neighbor, and a true friend, and all who knew her loved her. She suffered much for a long time, but endured all her afflictions with Christian forti-tude. Now let us think of her as having gone from the weariness and pain into the heavenly home beyond the grave. Assured by the hope that she has entered into rest, let us press onward until we meet her in heaven, where separations never come.

Reese.

Homer Gale Reese was born on February 14, 1914, and died on February 12, 1918. He was the son of W. W. and Emma Reese, of Corinth, Ark. His stay on earth was short, lacking two days of being four years; but he brightened the pathway of the family while he lived, and now he has crossed over the "valley and shadow of death" to becken the loved ones to that beautiful home beyond. The writer was called on to speak words of comfort to the sorrowing ones. Homer was a loving and obedient child and had a sweet disposition. It is sad to part from loved ones in this life; but in this great world of sin, who knows but what it is best for them to die in childhood, that they may meet Him who said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven?" To the dear loved ones I would say: May God help you to so live that you will meet little Homer where sad partings J. A. COPELAND. come no more.

Hutcheson.

Brother Willie Sutton Hutcheson, of Route 1, Pikeville, Tenn., was born on November 12, 1898; was "born again" under the preaching of Brother R. N. Moody during the summer of 1914; and departed this life on November 15, 1917. At the time Brother Hutcheson became sick he was at Lebanon, Tenn., in school, preparing for the duties and obligations of life. He was a fine, Christian young man. the son of Brother and Sister J. Hutcheson, of Pikeville, and leaves his parents and several brothers and sisters to mourn his loss. But they are children of God and know how to ap-preciate the following: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; for their works follow with them." Brother T. J. Smith, one of God's noble servants, has passed into that rest that awaits the people of God. Brother Smith was born on October 18. 1841. He was married to Miss Frances E. Blakey on November 19, To this union eleven children were born. Two preceded the father to the great beyond. Nine and the wife are left to mourn the death of husband and father. Brother Smith obeyed the gospel in 1868 and was a faithful Christian until death. was an elder in the congregation at Bear Wallow and will be greatly missed. The church there has suffered a great loss. It can be truly said that he fought the fight of faith and kept the faith until the end. The funeral service was in the home, conducted by the writer, in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and brethren, where we tried to comfort the bereaved.

King.

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl M. King on Wednesday morning, February 6, 1918, and greatly saddened the life of Mrs. King by taking her loving companion from her. Mr. King was born on August 8, 1893. He obeyed the gospel in 1997 or 1908, being baptized by Brother G. Dunn, and had ever since lived faithful to his Master. Of course, we none live above sin, but Mr. King was faithful to confess his faults and pray to be forgiven. He was quietly and happily married to Lillie Raines on October 27, 1915. He was a faithful, loving companion, and made Mrs. King's life one of happiness. To them was born a sweet little girl on November 2, 1916. She, too, will miss the tender love of a father The remains were placed in the family graveyard near the home of his father. She was baptized by Elder J. J. Newby in the early eighties. She suffered with pellagra for some time and was not able to overcome it, though having the medical aid at hand. She bore her suffering with Christian fortitude, though she often expressed a desire to rest with the redeemed on the other shore. Hugh A. Manning.

A noble, Christian life was ended on earth when, on the morning of March 4, 1918, Sister Jennie A. Manning closed her eyes in death. She was the youngest of three daughters of Brother and Sister Holloway, who came from Tennessee, and who were living in Obion County when Sister Jennie was born—June 9, 1894. In the year 1900 Brother Holloway with his family moved to Texas and located near Rock Hill, Montague County, where, in the year 1907, Jennie obeyed the gospel. She was married to M. T. Manning on December 24, 1916. They located on a farm near the homes of the parents of both, in Wise County, and started life together with reasonable prospects of happiness and usefulness before them. But how uncertain are the things pertaining to this world! A large number of friends of the deceased and the sorrowing ones as embled to show their love and sympathy. I was impressed with the importance of the teaching of our blessed Master, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness," and again with that of the apostle Paul: "If in this life only we have hope in Christ. we are of all men most miserable." Sister Manning will be missed in the family circle, in the church, and by the many friends that she leaves behind, and especially by a loving companion who needs her help so much in caring for the sweet little babe that was born to them just four days be-fore her death. Brother Holloway will be remembered by many readers of the Gospel Advocate, especially by of the Gospel Advocate, especially by the brethren in Obion County and ad-joining counties, in Tennessee, as a faithful preacher of the primitive gospel. He has accomplished much both in Texas and Tennessee in the Lord's vineyard. May the Lord bless him and his faithful wife in this sad bereavement, and may the brothers and sisters in the flesh and all the sorrowing ones look up through their tears to Him who is able to give them strength and comfort in this sore trial. Sorrow's Compensations.

Human sorrow has its compensations. Sometimes the compensations far outweigh the sorrow. It is true that the great sorrow that now encompasses the world has its compensations. Just how great and far-reaching they will be can hardly be determined until the war is over. Then men and women can calmly view the gigantic struggle with retrospective eyes and get a better idea than now of its blessings.

We are forcibly reminded of the rich man in one of Jesus' parables. Being in torment, he asked Abraham to send Lazarus to cool his parching tongue. Denied this privilege, he then asked that Lazarus be sent to his father's house to warn his erring brethren. It required the suffering of hell to bring this rich man to his senses. He paid no attention to the usual warnings that come to those enjoying health and prosperity. In hell he began to think about his soul. We cannot say that we are living in hell to-day, but Sherman's analogy was not greatly overdrawn. Our abnormal environment is such as to make us think along serious lines. The gist of life itself should now be clearly understood. While the daily papers tell of thousands who are being thrust suddenly and violently into eternity, we should thank God that we are still here and able to be of service to the world. The Bible does not cheapen the idea of human life as some philosophies do. There is nothing in this wonderful book to encourage rashness or suicide. The Bible exalts the privilege of living for the good of others. I like to believe that the things necessary to life, to true success, to real victory, are now coming into prominence and that there is a new valuation placed upon God's greatest gift, and that valuation shall prevail when peace and security return to a war-smitten world.

The Rock of Ages.

God has always been the one supreme Being absolutely necessary for our safety and happiness, but we have been miserably slow to appreciate this fact. If this cruel war shall bring our God into the prominence that he inherently deserves and shall remind us of our wasted opportunities and bring us to the sackcloth and ashes of a genuine repentance, it will be the best part of the silver lining behind the cloud. We have sung for many years of the "Rock of Ages," but have we ever realized so keenly as now how we may cling to that Rock? This is a Hebrew metaphor wherein the rock stands for strength and endurance. Isaiah said: "For in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength." In the Old Testament the rock stands for an asylum, not as an obstacle. The psalmist said: "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God." (Ps. 90: 1, 2.) Is this not a time when all men everywhere should seek for such a dwelling place? In the general upheaval, the universal tumult, the smashing of human ideals, the irruption of tremendous brute force upon the innocent and the helpless, there is but one refuge. Out of all this destruction and chaos and loss there should be rising all over the world humanity's deep sense of its need of God. In their sad plight men and women should be finding unheard-of comfort in the words: "The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms."

"This is my Father's world.

O let me ne'er forget,
Tho' the wrong seems oft so strong,
God is the ruler yet."

The Need of the Savior.

I like to believe, too, that the divine Savior is being called for now as never before. While the lords of war and destruction and death are on the rampage, the Lord of life, who "brought life and immortality to light" through his blessed gospel, should be to the fore in every heart. Many of the boys drafted into service are misunderstood by those who are zealous without knowledge. Great efforts are made to provide vaudeville and moving pictures free of cost in the camps. But the soldiers are not nearly so hardened and frivolous as one might believe. It is not true of the majority that they care nothing for serious things. They usually keep their real feelings to themselves and do not divulge their thoughts, save to their closest comrades. Every man knows that he is facing death and there is no joke about it. All the "Smileage" tickets procurable cannot efface this solemn fact. They are not lacking in physical courage, but they feel unprepared to die. They realize the need of the Savior who has been neglected in their lives heretofore. As one of them said to an older man: "What we want is a Savior who can be with us when our home folks cannot reach us."

It occurs to me that we need to send more men into the camps, and to support them well, to tell these boys about Jesus Christ and his gospel. To pay no attention to this craving or pass it by with an irrelevant criticism is unworthy of the Christian character. Let us be zealous and enter the open door of unusual opportunity. There is no greater ignominy than to be a slacker in the service of the Master.

Self-Justification.

BY F. W. SMITH.

"I hearkened and heard, but they spake not aright: no man repenteth him of his wickedness, saying, What have I done? every one turneth to his course, as a horse that rusheth headlong in the battle." (Jer. 8: 6.)

Usually men and women seek to justify themselves in whatever course they pursue in life. It is a rare exception for one to unreservedly admit that he or she has done that for which there was no justification. If a man plunges into dissipation, he tries to justify himself on the ground that he was seeking to drown his troubles. If the poor steal from the rich, he pleads the right to thus act on the ground that the other fellow had more than his share or more than he needed. If the rich oppress the poor, it is done with the claim that capital demands rich returns. Men cheat and swindle in the marts of trade, and seek to justify it on the principle of shrewd business methods. Women refuse to return to the merchant the extra goods which by mistake he gave them, and seek to justify their act by saying: "It was the merchant's fault." Both men and women fail to pay their car fare-pocket that which belongs to another-and think they are excusable because the conductor "overlooked" them. "It was the conductor's business," say they, "to take up our fare." Thus the effort of "self-justification" runs through all the concerns of life, and Satan never played a more winning card. In the passage before us the Israelites were guilty of the grossest of sins, and yet when reproved by the Lord they repented not, but had the brazen effrontery to ask: "What have I done?" This means, "I have done nothing wrong," or, "I am unconscious of having done anything wrong." A very common way, indeed, of seeking to justify some act in which others have been injured. But such an air of innocence cannot conceal nor atone for sins committed.

THE MANNER IN WHICH ISBAEL ENTERED THIS SIN.

1. Some people go into sin little by little. They begin by doing little things of a doubtful nature, and thus educate themselves to commit the grosser forms of sin. The conscience cannot be murdered in a day. It takes many and off-repeated stabs to finally crush its life and stifle its warning and protesting voice. The practice of sin is a growth, and from very small beginnings it spreads its poison of death throughout the moral system. You cannot stunt or dwarf sin by practicing sin. It will be like the drunkard's "tapering off"—the latter end will be worse than the former. Nip it in the bud, smother it in its birth.

2. God charged Israel with rushing blindly into the awful sin of idolatry. He uses the action of a horse rushing headlong into battle with which to illustrate the course pursued by that people. "Every one turneth to his course, as a horse that rusheth headlong in the battle." Thus they madly and heedlessly entered upon the worship of idols. They even taught their children to do the same. "The children gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead the dough, to make cakes to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto other gods, that they may provoke me to anger." (Jer. 7: 18.) There are many fathers and mothers to-day who, by example, teach their children to sin. They talk about their neighbors before their children and quarrel with each other in their presence. In many ways mothers and fathers are constantly teaching their children to sin, and God will hold them to a fearful account for it. There are those to-day who, like the Israelites, rush headlong into sinful ways. They give themselves up completely to a blind infatuation, and plunge all at once into a life of sinful dissipation. Others unthinkingly and carelessly enter upon a sinful course, not dreaming of its fearful consequences.

SIN BRINGS MAN BELOW THE ANIMAL CREATION.

1. The thing that differentiates mankind from beasts and birds is the power to think and reason. Man has a soul with wonderful faculties, and because of this wonderful endowment he becomes a responsible and accountable being.

2. But when sin holds sway over the carnal nature of man, when the fleshly passions of men and women become unrestrained, reason is dethroned, and they have not even the instinct that guides the fowls of the heavens and the beasts of the fields. "Yea, the stork in the heavens knoweth her appointed times; and the turtledove and the swallow and the crane observe the time of their coming; but my people know not the law of Jehovah." (Jer. 8: 7.) Again: "The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib; but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider." (Isa. 1: 3.) To what depths sin drags the human family! Reason is slaughtered, judgment butchered, and the baser elements rule as a king.

3. The sad condition in which the sin of idolatry had placed Israel is one of the most pathetic things of history. "And death shall be chosen rather than life by all the residue that remain of this evil family, that remain in all the places whither I have driven them, saith Jehovah of hosts." (Jer. 8: 3.) They had to eat the fruit of their doings, suffer the consequences of their evil ways. Sin is a remorseless master, a merciless tyrant, an unpitying ruler. He who becomes enslaved to such a master begins a life of hell on earth, and unless freed from the iron grip is doomed to an unending torment.

SIN'S FINISHED PRODUCT.

1. The prophets preached in vain to idolatrous Israel. "And thou shalt speak all these words unto them; but they will not hearken to thee; thou shalt also call unto them; but they will not answer thee." (Jer. 7: 27.) Sin had accomplished its deadly work with that people. A sinful life exacts its toll, demands and collects its revenue from both body and soul. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." (Ezek. 18: 20.) Paul declares that the wages of sin is death. "For the wages of sin is death; but the free gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord." (Rom. 6: 23.) Sin leaves its mark upon everything it touches. It is the blighting and withering frost of the soul, and entails upon the body disease, pain, misery, and death. The infant in its mother's arms came with an unshapely and deformed body because of sinful indulgences upon the part of its ancestry. Poisonous blood flows through its little veins, destined to mar its whole life and cause it to suffer untold pain from the cradle to the grave. Yes, sin exacts its toll, and collects it with an unpitying eye and an unheeding ear to the wails of its victims. Its finished product is expressed in these words: "And the sin, when it is full grown, bringeth forth death." (James 1: 15.) If we desire not such fruit, then we should not plant such seed. "For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." (Gal. 6: 7.)

2. The awful harvest of Israel's sowing came, and for centuries their children have been reaping the bitter fruit of that sowing. They sowed in the garden of God-the land of Palestine, the cradle of the best civilization and the birthplace of Christianity. They sowed in Jerusalem, the city of the great King, and in the temple within whose sacred precincts angels would scarcely dare to tread. They played the whore upon every high hill and under every green tree until their idolatrous sacrifices became a stench before high heaven. God's prophet was told to say: "This is the nation that hath not hearkened to the voice of Jehovah their God, nor received instruction: truth is perished, and is cut off from their mouth. Cut off thy hair, O Jerusalem, and cast it away, and take up a lamentation on the bare heights; for Jehovah hath rejected and forsaken the generation of his wrath." (Jer. 7: 28, 29.) That sad song of lamentation is being sung almost the wide world round, and wherever the children of that generation roam as wanderers over the face of the earth, their eyes turn longingly to the hills of Judea; but beneath their shadows and across the plains from which they once gathered their rich harvests will never again be heard their joyous songs. They said, "What have I done?" and through the dark night of long centuries the children of Abraham have answered that question as wandering sufferers over the face of the earth. The flame of glory that once shone upon the pathway of that people has become forever extinguished, and their only access to the grace and favor of God is through Jesus Christ.

3. No, my friend, there is not, and cannot be, the slightest justification for sin in any form, and we only delude ourselves when we play at self-justification. The only remedy for sin is the blood of Christ, and the only way for us to reach its cleansing efficacy is by faith in, and obedience to, the Son of God. It is bad to commit sin, but it is noble to repent of it and turn away from it. We can never fear and hate sin until we come to view its awful consequences. So long as we dwell upon the momentary pleasures of sin, we lose sight of its bitter fruitage, its finished product, its sad ending.

"There is a fountain filled with blood, Drawn from Immanuel's veins; And sinners plunged beneath its flood Lose all their guilty stains."

Making the Best Out of a Bad Situation.

BY LYTTON ALLEY.

A very pertinent thought at the present time; for from every direction there is thrust upon one's vision a storm cloud, the war god's rolling din fills the earth, and the death teller takes his toll. With such an environment, the mind is flooded with conflicting emotions and the very mudsills of one's faith are shaken by doubts and fears.

A question fraught with much significance, especially to the child of God, takes form in the following words: "Is God in this war?" Since Jehovah is everywhere, we unhesitatingly answer in the affirmative: Yes, God is in this war. "But," says one, "if this be true, why do not the forces of right triumph over the forces of evil?" In short, why can't the allies with one mighty rush clear the fields of France of the haughty Huns? This question is similar to the one ofttimes asked by some—viz.: "Why doesn't God kill the devil?" And further, we might add: Why are we subjected to the many temptations and afflictions along life's highway—if God is in it all?

In determining the answer to these questions, we must be reminded of the fact that man is responsible for the conditions which surround him. Before man fell there was no such thing as war, and perfect peace was his portion. But sin brought suffering into the world; and since all have sinned, all must drink of the bitter cup.

It seems that Jehovah has so fixed it in his great economy that purity comes through suffering. Jesus was made perfect in his work through suffering. And the lessons impressed by suffering are never forgotten. The horrors of the Civil War were so deeply embedded in the minds of the people of this country that the lust for war was so purged from their hearts that civil strife may never again divide the United States.

In the present great conflict, no doubt, God is overruling the movements of the millions involved in the dreadful carnage, and at the proper time the issue will be decided, and out of the wreck and ruin, out of the crucible, as it were, will come the precious metal, purged from its dross, in the form of a unified world whose standard shall be universal right instead of imperial might. The lessons learned through the horrors of modern warfare will have so impressed the minds of men that, in the words of the prophet, "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

Now, how may we make the best of the situation that confronts us? Certainly not by useless anxiety and worry. for these only lead to frosted locks and shattered nerves. Not by fretting at those measures of the government which do not conform to our own ways of thinking, for this will only lead to a discontented mind. How, then, shall we maintain our equilibrium while the earth is being rocked with war? By trying to be cheerful. Listen to the Master as he speaks to the man with the palsy: "Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee," (Matt. 9; 2.) To the disciples, quaking with fear, Jesus said: "Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid." (Matt 14: 27.) To Paul, besieged by a wicked rabble, seeking his life, Christ said: 'Be of good cheer." (Acts 23: 11.) To his disciples, and, through them, to the whole world, the Son of God says: "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." (John 16: 33.)

An Interesting Letter on the Situation in an Army Camp.

BY JOHN E. DUNN.

I am sending the following letter from a noble, Christian young man in an army camp. I wish some of the preachers would volunteer to go to Camp Jackson. Several have written to me about the work I am doing and have asked how to get into a camp. I have not time to answer these letters. I get hundreds of letters. I do my best to hunt up the men that mothers and other loved ones request me to find; but to find all is an impossible task. Only those who visit us and see what we do can ever know how busy we are. For the last three weeks I have worked every day from fourteen to eighteen hours without any intermission.

I cannot understand why it is that many more will not volunteer to go to the soldiers, who are the young men of the nation to minister to, and help them in the Herculean battles they are fighting. Two men left this camp this week to tour the country to get workers to do the kind of work I am doing. I suppose my work will take me to France with our boys. I have been told that I would be called on to go overseas during the year. If any one wants to get into an army camp to labor among the soldiers, I know of but one way to do it. Write to the National War Work Council (for the Southeastern Department), Y. M. C. A. Building, Atlanta, Ga. This is the channel designated by the government through which to reach the soldiers in the army and navy. We have camp pastors here who get passes to come into the camp; but their work amounts to but little and is not satisfactory, and they have but meager opportunities. Of course, if any one is opposed to coming in and working under the auspices of the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A., he will have to stay out.

I believe God wants me to do all I can to help and save our boys in this trying ordeal of their young manhood. I believe the service given these young men will bear fruit in future generations. Here is the letter I promised to give our readers:

Camp Jackson, March 20, 1918.—Dear Brother Dunn: I have been informed about your work at Camp Sevier, and will say that I greatly admire the work that you are doing there in the camp. I would be the happiest fellow that ever breathed if we could only have a man like you in our midst to help us few Christian boys who are in Camp Jackson. I would be glad if you could come to our camp sometime [It is impossible for me to go.—J. E. D.] when you are not so very busy. We try to meet here and carry on worship as best we can. We have been doing so since about the first of January. I have missed three Sundays since we began. I have been the dependence for leadership all the time. At certain times I was hindered and could not get there on account of some special duty.

I shall now tell you who I am before I write more. I am a West Tennesseean, from Reelfoot Lake, in Obion County, near Hornbeak. That is the home of our beloved John R. Williams, who has been located there and preaching the gospel for more than a quarter of a century. It was he who taught me the way of light, the light that "lighteth every man that cometh into the world." It is he whom I should rather hear preach than any other man I ever heard. He baptized me nine years ago last August. I have had the privilege of hearing him preach many soulstirring and uplifting sermons since that time. I have not heard a gospel sermon since I have been in the U.S. N. A. If you could have time to come over to Camp Jackson or send some worthy gospel preacher to preach for us gospel-hungry poor souls, we should be cheered a great deal by the favor. This camp is an open, inviting field for some God-fearing and God-loving preacher. If he should come, a great work could be done.

I have just read in the Gospel Advocate that you were under quarantine. I hope ere this writing that the quarantine has been lifted and that you are free to go over the camp wherever you should like to go. For fear that I shall worry you by my tiresome scribbling, I shall close this poorly written letter. I hope to hear from you soon poorly written letter. I hope to hear from you soon.

I send you my very best regards and wishes for the success of your work in Camp Sevier.

I am yours for the truth and right.

A Brother in Christ,

PT. LUTHUR F. WALLACE,

Battery B, 318th F. A., Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C.

This letter breathes the spirit of a faithful young soldier of the cross of Christ. My heart goes up in prayer to God for this young brother. There are hundreds and probably many thousands of other young men in the United States army and navy. I wish I could multiply myself into a sufficient number of men to be with all of them. I am getting to where I love to be in camp with the boys. I really enjoy it.

"Around the Lord's Table" was published in response to numerous requests from all parts of the country. Brother A. B. Lipscomb converted the recent special Lord's Supper number of the Gospel Advocate into a handsome pamphlet suitable for preservation and ready reference. This publication presents every phase of this important subject. Price, 25 cents.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

By S. H. Hall

The Georgia Work.

Words cannot express the sore need of more workers in this State. We have some of the best workers that can be had; but to be continually baptized with appeals for help when you cannot answer them nor find a man to do so is, sometimes, terribly distressing. Many of the brethren and churches in Tennessee have been very good to us in helping us in supporting new workers in this State, but we are barely touching the hem of the garment, so far as the actual demands are concerned. May God bless the dear souls who are helping, and may he give us more laborers in this great field.

A Strong Appeal.

That our readers may know a little of the nature of some of the many letters that come to me from different sections of this State, I submit the following from a good sister:

Well, Brother Hall, you said you would take charge of the work here and see that we have a church sometime soon, and I am still hoping. I felt like you would do a wonderful work here, but am sorry to say it all is about to go dead on us. May God help us to bring this matter to life again before it is everlastingly too late. I am getting in a hurry about it. I am interested in my soul's salvation and that of my children also, and the salvation of all others who would be saved. I am not partial. I love every one. I wish I could preach; I would do something here. But I can't; and if I could, I do not believe in women's preaching; hence it would not avail for the needs of this place.

Now, I am going to close by asking you to think seriously of this place and pray over it. You have assured us that we were remembered in your prayers. Continue to pray, and maybe your prayers will be answered in the near future. The prayers of the righteous availeth much. We want all Christians to pray for us. Brother Hall, I believe you are a good man and that you are doing a great work there. I have lots of faith in you. I hope I have said nothing that will offend any one, for I do not mean to do so. Excuse bad writing, for I am too nervous to write.

There it is, brethren; what do you think of it? Such letters are continually coming to me, and God knows I do my best to meet every call; but I am just one man, hence can do only one man's work. I shall do my best to answer every call, or have it done. The Nashville Bible School congregation gave us two young men for all of last summer, and we have the promise of two more this summer. They will never know how much this helps. One of the young men who is due to come this summer is coming to stay, if arrangements can be made. Brother A. M. Burton, of Nashville, Tenn., has been one of the best friends of the Georgia work, and continues to be. I would be glad to name others, but time and space forbid this. We want them all to know we appreciate their fellowship and that we are doing our best to push the work onward and upward. Just now there are more than twenty towns in my mind where we have from two to a half dozen members calling for meetings. We will do our best to get to them all; but we certainly could use to an immense advantage more than double the number of men we now have in this field. Let me insist that the brethren continue to pray for us.

Camp Gordon.

Great indeed are the opportunities that present themselves to us at Camp Gordon. Brother Carter or the writer makes it a rule to be there every Lord's-day afternoon. Brother Carter was there last Lord's day (April 21), and two of the boys made the good confession and came into the city and were baptized that night. We mean to begin regular work there every Sunday night and two nights in the week. This is not enough, but it is the best we can do till the other workers get here.

Amazingly strange it is that we have members—not in Atlanta, but at other places—who object to the camp work's being done; and even preachers among the number, it seems. The first thought in my mind when this work suggested itself to me was the great number of the best young men we have in our churches having to go to the different camps because they were of draft age. The idea of letting our young men who have ever been favored with the regular Lord's-day worship, and who hunger for such worship, be denied this privilege because in the camps is out of all reason. Some of the best young men that it has ever been my pleasure to meet, I have met at Camp Gordon. Note the following words from just one letter received about these young men:

Brother Hall: Brother Clyde Shacklett, of the West Nashville congregation, left for Atlanta this morning (April 1), having been drafted into the army. He has a noncombatant classification. I understand that he has been in correspondence with you and learned of arrangements by which the boys are permitted to meet for worship. I feel especially interested in Clyde's welfare, as I consider him not only one of the best, but the very best young man I ever knew. I shall be perfectly satisfied if I can feel sure that my own boys, when they reach his age, are such as he is in morals and character generally.

These words came from Brother J. E. Acuff, one of our best men. Yes, Brother Clyde had already written to me about his coming, we have met him, and he is at work with us in the camp.

Besides the boys who are Christians, think of the hundreds who are not. We want to save every soul possible.

A number of brethren and churches in Tennessee have sent special offerings for the camp work. This will be used to increase our forces, that more and more may be done for the boys.

The Work at Dalton.

The writer, assisted by Brother Flavil Hall and Brother Graves, did a little more than two weeks' work at Dalton recently. This was very enjoyable and much good was done. The brethren had been meeting in a storehouse, but we arranged with our brethren who believe in the innovations to use the Cumberland Presbyterian house which is leased by them. This adds more than words can express to the work there. I am so glad to say that I am much pleased with the spirit of the brethren there who differ with us on some questions. They are meeting and worshiping with us, but leave the running of the work wholly in our hands.

The people were delighted with Brother Flavil Hall, and he has promised to help Brother Graves with that work for a while. Brother Graves has been with the work about five months, preaching twice a month in Dalton, once a month at Donnegan, and once a month at Tunnel Hill. He also has succeeded in getting the house at Sinal (about five miles from Dalton) re-covered and otherwise repaired. He has not succeeded so well in getting them to resume the regular meeting; but this will be done, the Lord willing. Brother R. R. Brooks, of Chattanooga, Tenn., was with the Tunnel Hill brethren on the third Lord's day in He was formerly a minister of the Methodist Church, but was baptized into Christ during my meeting at St. Elmo, Tenn., last fall, and he is making us a valuable worker. He is to visit Atlanta the fourth Lord's day in this month. 0 0 0

Miscellaneous Items.

Brother Morgan H. Carter recently closed an interesting meeting at East Point, with four baptized into Christ and the work greatly encouraged.

Brother Ben Harding recently spent about ten days with the South Pryor Street brethren, of this city. His preaching was greatly appreciated by those who heard him. Bad weather hindered this meeting, but the faithful there were encouraged to go onward and upward with the work.

I was with the Liberty Hill brethren on the third Lord's-day afternoon in April. I also conducted a cottage service late that afternoon in the home of Brother Richard Pittman, who is unable to attend services. The same night Brother S. P. Hunnicutt and wife went with me to preach to a colored congregation who wants to get right with the Bible. These, with the discourse in the forenoon at West End Avenue, made four discourses for me in one day. The meetings were great at all the places.

The Atlanta brethren were encouraged recently by Brother C. E. Wooldridge, of Fayetteville, Tenn. He is a "live wire" and helped us much. Brother E. A. Elam also stopped over one night on his way to Valdosta, Ga., and preached a splendid discourse for us. We hope to have both of these brethren with us again soon.

C. G. Vincent Thinks Brother Jelley Should Be Brought Home.

BY J. C. M'Q.

I cheerfully give the following from Brother Vincent to our readers:

On the missionary page of the Gospel Advocate of April 18 appears an appeal from Brother Jelley for funds to bring him and his family home. He tells of his nervous condition and his great desire to be with his aged mother and his daughter, who live in Dayton.

It has been seven years since our brother and his family went out to India. Seven years in a heathen land is long enough for any American missionary to spend in continu-A longer term under the mental and climatic strain simply means inefficiency. No one except a man who has spent a term of years among a strange people and a people of a different race and color, habits, customs, and so on, can realize what the mental and physical and, above all and most of all, the spiritual strain is. I have had the experience and know.

The sectarians, we all must admit, have worked at this missionary problem with more earnestness and seriousness of thought and much longer than we have. They seek the highest degree of ability and efficiency in their missionary They seek the endeavors. It is the judgment, drawn from the logic of known facts, of boards and those in the control of missionary activities, that, whether the missionary is utterly broken down in health or in fair health at the end of seven years, it is wise and good for him and his family, for the churches at home, and, in the end, best for the cause in the mission field, to have the missionary to return home for a year or longer. He can do a great deal of good to the cause at home as well as for the mission field he leaves. He can also be built up in his faith by fellowship with his brethren in the Lord. Paul felt all of these needs.

Brother McQuiddy makes two or three suggestions in reply to Brother Jelley's request to be brought home. Of course, Brother McQuiddy, in making these suggestions, has at heart Brother Jelley's welfare and Christ's cause in India. I believe that the reasons just given above are sufficient to justify the brethren to invest the amount of money asked for by our missionary to India; but there are two other reasons, hinted at in Brother Jelley's request, that would justify the brethren in sending twice the amount asked for. To-day my wife and I visited the one referred to so kindly by Brother Jelley as "my mother, an invalid for thirty-five years," and the other, "my eldest daughter." Our aged sister hobbles about on crutches, almost helpless, and is a constant sufferer. Travasnih, the daughter, about fifteen years of age, tries hard to take care of her grandmother; but she, too, is not strong. She tried to stay in school and take care of Sister Jelley, but it was too much for her; so now she is compelled to sacrifice her much for her; so now she is compelled to sacrifice her schooling and to remain at home all the time and be a nurse and housekeeper as best she can. These two live alone. Their income is meager, and they are poor, Brother E. S. Jelley, Sr., their chief support, having died last November. It is the sense of duty to his mother and daughter that Brother Jelley feels more than anything else, and we should enable him to do his duty by them. Travasnih was recently baptized, and she is in every way a sweet, Christian girl, and our hearts go out to her. I dare say that if Brother McQuiddy, knowing him to be a dutiful son and a wise and good father, could visit the humble cottage on an unpaved street in the poor district of Dayton where this invalid mother and this daughter live and see the actual conditions, he himself would write a check for one hundred dollars, perhaps more, to bring Brother Jelley home to his loved ones, and he would see to it that the needed amount would soon be on its way to India.

To suggest, as Brother McQuiddy does, for Brother Jelley to seek rest and recuperation somewhere in India is about the same as to suggest to a man suffering from hay fever in Tennessee to seek relief somewhere in Tennessee. relief cannot be found in that State. He must go to the trouble and expense of going to the distant North. He must get away from the conditions and causes. Brother Jelley might seek rest in India, but he could never get the kind of rest he needs; for everywhere are the Hindus and their customs, conditions of life, and manner of living, to-gether with the unspeakable "sights" that get on one's nerves. I had very good health in Japan, but I felt this mental condition. Every missionary who has spent a term in any of the Oriental mission fields tells the same story.

Another suggestion offered by Brother McQuiddy is that the money which it will require to bring the Jeiley family home should be "devoted to the conversion of the hea-then." It goes without saying that, in the event Brother then." It goes without saying that, in the event Brother Jelley does not get to come home, no extra thousand dollars will be raised for the conversion of the heather! No special effort will be made to raise a thousand dollars for that very worthy purpose

Let us remember that Brother McQuiddy only made suggestions, and that, too, without knowledge of the needs of Brother Jelley's sick mother and fifteen-year-old daughter. Personally, I know that he should be brought back, regardless of the war-time cost. Let us do it. I urge you to do it, brethren. I believe that Brother McQuiddy will start off the list with a liberal gift, now that he knows of the needs of Brother Jelley's mother and daughter. Golden Rule requires us to put ourselves in Brother Jelley's place and him over here. What we would that he should do for us were the conditions reversed, we should Accepting as true the suggestion of Brother Vincent that Brother Jelley cannot recuperate in India, then the churches should contribute promptly and cheerfully to bring him home. The brother who gave more liberally than any other in sending Brother Jelley to India and who has given much to the support of Brother Jelley's work thought it would be prudent and best to give him a needed rest in India; but, as this cannot be done, the thing to do is to provide for his home-coming.

The invalid mother should not be forced to wait for Brother Jelley to return home to provide for her the necessaries of life, but Christians should make such provisions for the mother and daughter now. Those who really know their condition and have witnessed their suffering should do what they can to make them comfortable. The Lord expects and demands that we improve such opportunities. "But whose hath the world's goods, and beholdeth his brother in need, and shutteth up his compassion from him, how doth the love of God abide in him?" (1 John 3: 17.) The rich man wrecked his life when he failed to minister to Lazarus. He should have taken sufficient thought and time to show Lazarus how to help himself. This is the best help any one can render another. When any man uses his means and talents for the oppression of the poor, he will reap in the end eternal misery. There is no escape.

The Christians in Dayton should care for this mother and daughter immediately, provided they have the necessary means of relief. Surely it should not be necessary to go very far to find Christians who will gladly make the necessary provisions for the invalid mother. The hand that does not reach out to help those right at our own doors does not reach out to those far away.

Our tardiness in relieving the poor reflects unfavorably on our Christian liberality. Our liberality must not be dormant. Just as our faith, it must come out in action.

An Exhortation to Earnestness.

BY D. L.

[This is a hitherto unpublished article. It was found among the papers of our late lamented editor, and is, therefore, to be considered one of his last messages to the readers of the Gospel Advocate, "He being dead yet speaketh."—Editor's Note.]

Our efforts this year will be especially directed to urging activity and earnestness in spreading the word of God—in preaching "Christ, and him crucified," to the world. Much failure exists from a lack of effort. The lack of effort comes from a lack of real interest in the salvation of the world. We lack interest because our faith in Jesus Christ is not an active, living faith. It is dead because it is not perfected by the works of service to God.

We generally quote the passage, "Faith without works is dead, being alone," to prove that faith without baptism does not save. But I doubt if baptism ought to be called a work. It is the outworking, or fruit, of faith. It is the result, or fruit, of a working faith. So it is a fruit, a development, an embodiment, of the living faith. It no doubt proves that a faith that does not work and bear the fruit of obedience in baptism will not save. But that is not the purpose of the passage. The passage was written to Christians-those who had been baptized into Christ; those who had embodied and declared their faith in a burial with Christ by baptism; whose faith had borne the fruit of obedience and proved itself in baptism. To those who are in Christ the warning, searching inquiry comes: "What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him?" (James 2: 14.) The Holy Spirit asks this question of the brethren-of those whose faith had been proved in baptism: What profit is your faith, your baptized faith, if it have not works? Can even this faith save?

The next verse shows the character of works to which the Holy Spirit refers. "If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit? Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone." (Verses 15-17.)

The faith of the great body of professed Christians in our day and country "is dead, being alone." If dead, it neither profits them nor others. A dead faith profits no one. It dies and remains dead because it does not work. A man "joins the church" and does nothing to benefit himself or his fellow men, and his faith dies. He becomes a drone and not a worker in what should be a hive of Christian industry. How many of us do anything to help the world to Christ? How many attend the regular worship? Yet this is not Christian work. The worship is a part of the embodied faith. It stands in the spiritual kingdom where eating does in the physical. We eat to gratify our appetites. The result of it is, we grow and are made strong that we may work. A man is in a bad condition when he has no appetite for food. Unless this condition can be changed, unless he can gain an appetite, he will grow weak and die.

We worship to gratify the hunger of our spirits for spiritual food. The worship, private and public, is the soul coming to God for food. Many of those in the church have no appetite for spiritual food, have no hunger of the soul. They are, spiritually, in a bad condition. Weakness and death must come to the soul unless this be changed. Faith embodies itself in acts of worship. The worship is a part of the faith. To neglect that is to neglect and deny the faith. But faith-embodied faith-will not save when alone. It must work. It must spend time, labor, and means in doing good to our fellow men, spreading the kingdom of God, thus glorifying and honoring God. How many of us do anything to save souls and honor God? Every one must work or his faith will die-if it is not already dead. We can work personally. Each can, by his time and labor, look after the sick, relieve the afflicted, and preach the gospel to the lost.

Every man, woman, and child in the church of Christ must do this work in person. In Christ, men and women cannot discharge their duties and receive the blessings by proxy. The father or mother cannot delegate the teaching of the word of God to the child-to another. The child is entitled to that teaching mingled with a father's or mother's love. Have you ever spoken a word of warning or encouragement to your cook, your washerwoman, your household help? Why not? You cannot relieve yourself without doing this, and it would add to your spiritual strength and happiness. It would help them. It would incite their love for you. It would cause them to do their work for you more faithfully. It would please God. It would honor the Savior. It would be a rich crown of rejoicing for you in the day of judgment. My sister, do not let another week pass without doing something on this line. You will find the work, after the start is first made, a pleasant, joyous one, yielding to you the sweetest pleasure of your life. And you, brother, how about your employee? Speak to him of his eternal interest. Do not delay or postpone. It will help him to be more faithful and trusty as an employee. It will bind him to you. It will perfect your faith by works and make it bear precious fruits to the honor of God.

Then, there is your neighbor. You have passed him all these years. You have asked him concerning his health, his family, his crops, his business affairs; but you have never mentioned his soul and its well-being. Why not at once do this? You will find that it adds to your happiness. It will draw him nearer to you, make him a better friend and truer neighbor. It will save a soul from death—possibly two, yours and his. We do not lack opportunities. We refuse to use those God places right in our pathway. Let us use these in faith, and God will open others to us.

So many churches do nothing from year to year, when a neighborhood only a few miles away would gladly hear the gospel if you would carry it to them. "The eyes of the fool are in the ends of the earth," and he never sees what lies before his door. The churches should be faithful. A church that does nothing to help others does nothing to help itself. It will die. Opportunities are close by. With a little means and an earnest heart, much good can be done—souls saved from death, God honored, and Jesus glorified on earth.

It is a strange, strange thing to hear preachers talk of lacking preaching places, with millions dying in sin all around us. That schoolhouse, not a mile away, is an invitation to preach. Some of the best and most satisfactory work of my life, even since I came to Nashville, has been done in the round-log hut of a poor renter. Where there is an earnest will, a way can be found. Your nearest neighbors in ignorance and sin, yet you cannot find preaching places! O brother, humble yourself before God, as a true follower of the lowly Nazarene, and, like him, let your heart be firmly set on saving the lost. Talk to them; let them know you are anxious to help them, and the poor will open the way for you to work among them. The trouble is, we are not seeking the lost, nor are we desirous to preach the gospel to the poor.

Our Brother Kidwill, a poor man, with a family of girls dependent on him, told me some years since that he had made it a rule to try to build up at his own charges a new congregation in a destitute field every year. He had generally succeeded, and never came to want. Why not all preachers be fired with the same heavenly ambition and do as much?

Dear brethren and sisters, we are only playing at religion while our fellow men are going down to death. Let us awake and be faithful—make our faith perfect by works.

The World Against the Church. No. 3.

INDIFFERENCE AND OTHER SINS.

Continuing from article No. 2 on the matter of indifference to the teaching of the word of God, on some subjects, at least, attention is called to a preacher, who claims to speak where the Bible speaks and to be silent where it is silent. After I had placed before him a mighty array of scriptures on "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," he said virtually that that was not what he was then seeking, but that he was seeking only "a closer fellowship." True to this declaration, his editorial articles on this subject were destitute of quotations from the Scriptures or teaching of the Scriptures in any form.

Article after article from many who profess to be teachers in Israel and "doctors of the law" new appears without one direct quotation from the word of God. Not a few sermons are void of such quotations. No preacher or writer should expect people to accept his theories and deductions as infallibilities.

It is true that on many points a reference to the teaching of the Bible is sufficient for old students of the Bible; but since all have not such knowledge and since the instruction, edification, warning, and salvation of all are sought, no pains must be spared to place the plain and full teaching of the word of God before them on all subjects.

To all who believe God, his word is sufficient. Why go through a course of theorizing and reasoning and concluding about anything, when God has already spoken directly and plainly on it?

When Gabriel declared to Mary the wonderful truth that she would become the mother of the Son of God and Savior of the world, he said: "For no word from God shall be void of power." (Luke 1: 37.) When God says a thing, it is true because he says it. "It is impossible for God to lie." (Heb. 6: 18.) Paul gives as his reason for believing and rejoicing in the promise of salvation that God "cannot lie." (Tit. 1: 2.) "God is not a man, that he should lie." (Num. 23: 19.) "The strength of Israel will not lie nor repent." (1 Sam. 15: 29.) Jesus says to his Father:

"Thy word is truth." (John 17: 17.) In the midst of a terrific storm at sea, when sailors and soldiers despaired of life, when all had fasted for fourteen days, when everything had been done that human wisdom could suggest, Paul stood in their midst and told them that not one would be drowned, that not a hair on the head of any one would be harmed, because God had revealed that to him the previous night, and he added: "Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer: for I believe God, that it shall be even so as it hath been spoken unto me." (See Acts 27: 9-37, especially verse 25.) No speculation and human reasoning is of any value, but is a great hindrance, where God speaks. Paul proves all the stupendous things concerning the resurrection of the righteous dead, of the change of the righteous living in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, of the coming of Christ, and of the gathering together of all to be ever with him, by the simple declaration of God: "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord." (See 1 Thess. 4: 13-18.) This is all true and will all come to pass, because God says it is true and will come to pass. The most powerful evidence is the word of God and is all-sufficient. Why not, then, go directly to the word of God for proof? Why drink far down the stream, muddled and fouled by the theories and speculations, wisdom and reasoning of men, when one can drink directly from the unadulterated, the pure fountain of truth? Let us go at once and in a straight course, and, therefore, by no circuitous route and devious way, to the word of God. When God speaks, all men of faith accept what he says and act implicitly upon it. This is faith; and "we walk by faith, not by sight,"

Since God says, "Wherefore come ye out from among them," "and touch no unclean thing," and "keep . . . unspotted from the world," that is what he means, and he must be believed and obeyed. All who fear God and desire to be saved are striving to do this.

A sensible and good man and an elder of his congregation will allow me, I think, to relate that which several heard him say recently in regard to getting the word of God before the people. Years ago he kindly said to a brother: "If you would read more from the Bible and talk less, it would be better for the church and you would accomplish more good." That brother acted upon this wise suggestion. Of course, this means the Scriptures must be read intelligently and be properly applied. No time must be wasted in fumbling and hunting for passages.

We cannot afford to fail to continue to study the word of God, to fail to fill our sermons and articles with the word of God, to fail to listen to sermons and to read articles of others teeming with the word of God, and to fail to be grateful to every one who helps us to better understand the word of God and to become more spiritual and wiser every way. However much one may know and may have already done, the word of God will still build him up and give him "the inheritance among all them that are sanctified." (Acts 20: 32.) No one is too old, too wise, or too good to learn more and more, to grow in favor with God and men, and to "press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." At least, Paul was not, even when inspired and old and imprisoned for the gospel's sake.

To be self-satisfied with one's present knowledge of the Bible and spiritual attainments and, therefore, to cease giving all diligence to cultivate and develop the Christian virtues and graces is a most alarming condition. The church in Laodicea was in this condition and congratulated itself that it was rich and had need of nothing, not knowing that it was "wretched," "miserable," "poor," "blind," and "naked." Christ knocked at its door, seeking admission. He admonished it to receive the chastisement of the Father and repent; he instructed it in regard to the course to pursue in order to become alive and earnest, faithful and zealous. It is a fearful thing to shut Christ out of a church; to refuse even to let him in when he pleads for admission. This lukewarm state, cold indifference, selfsatisfied condition, is most distressing.

God pronounces a woe upon all who "are at ease in Zion" (Amos 6: 1; Isa. 32: 9-15); upon all so blinded by ease and error and indifference to his word as to "call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness: that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter. Wee unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight!" (Isa. 5: 20, 21.) While God pronounced these woes through Amos and Isaiah, he said during the same period, through Hosea (4: 1, 6), that he had "a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is [was] no truth, nor good, nor knowledge of God in the land," and that his people were "destroyed for lack of knowledge." Why this woeful condition? This is the cause: before this God declares that "for a long season Israel was without the true God, and without a teaching priest, and without law." (2 Chron. 15: 3, 4.) There were numerous priests and prophets, whose duty it was to teach the word of God, but they had not done so. Let it be borne in mind that they had not ceased to teach at all, but, with all their teaching, they had not taught the word of God; they had taught something else-idolatry, for instance. Later on God said:

I sent not these prophets, yet they ran: I spoke not unto them, yet they prophesied. But if they had stood in my council, then had they caused my people to hear my words, and had turned them from their evil way, and from the evil of their doings. (Jer. 23: 21, 22.)

Jehovah declares that these prophets taught "the deceit of their own heart" and prophesied lies in his name; but that not one of them could "hide himself in secret places" so that God could not see him, because God fills heaven and earth. God was against all such prophets and priests. (See Jer. 23: 23-49.) Now, as then, people turn from the truth to the deceit of men's hearts and heap unto themselves teachers who are experts in teaching fables It is astonishing with what ease and success many preachers "by their smooth and fair speech" can entwine error with truth, link it with the word of God, give it a coating of the gospel, and "beguile the hearts of the innocent."

Read again the book of Amos. Learn who Amos was and when and why he preached. When the kingdom of Israel was at its very height of material and worldly glory, luxuriousness and "prosperous ease," its prophets and priests were most corrupt and it was in the lowest depths of impiety, licentiousness, covetousness, and idolatry, and was on the verge of that destruction as a nation into which its sins swept it, never to be reclaimed.

All this has been written for our admonition.

It is not only discouraging, but grievous, to be forced to think that in some places the plain teaching of the word of God against worldliness is not sought. It is encouraging and helpful, however, to know that in many other places that whatever the word of God teaches (nothing more) against it will be studied and gladly received.

We print this week another timely message from the It reads:

"We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death. Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal Hereby perceive we the love of God, life abiding in him. because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. But whose hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the tove of God in him? My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth."

Missionary

Annual Report.
BY J. M. M'CALEB.

I received during the year $2,063.27. Income in Japan, $261.55. Total, $2,320.23. I sent my family $973.44. Given to the work, $173.07. In hand, $236.71. This leaves $937.01. From this I invested $120.29 in three acres of land, with the view of establishing a Christian farmer, which still leaves $816.72. I was behind some at the end of last year, but I regret that I did not make note of it so as to say just how much. Then, besides, my efforts to the contrary notwithstanding, some leaks out without being recorded, and at the end of the year I find it hard to make expenditures and receipts match.

For Miss Sarah Andrews: Received and forwarded, $45.20.

For Brother Fujimori: Received and forwarded, $93.25. For Literature Fund: Received and spent, $157.22. Spent extra for this work 29.56 yen ($15.78).

For Brother Ishii: Received and spent, $122.50.

For Sendagaya Church: Received and spent, $181. Spent extra 111.61 yen ($55.80).

For Brother Vincent: Received and forwarded, $11.

For Zoshigaya Church: Received and spent, $243. Spent extra 37.45 yen ($18.73).

All these "extras" just noted are included in the amount "given to the work."

I did not baptize even one at Zoshigaya in 1917, and only two elsewhere. The results sometimes seem very discouraging and never at any time very encouraging. It seems that some of us are destined to fill a very small place and spend our lives apparently in vain. Once Jesus said to his disciples: "Others have labored, and ye are entered into their labor." The first laborers saw no results. I seem to be of that class; but if there is only a harvest, though reaped by others, I am quite contented to labor on.

January and February Report.

BY SARAH ANDREWS.

January.—Ladies' Sunday-school class, Petersburg, Tenn.. $2.50; through I. B. Bradley, $50.

February.—Class No. 3, Russell Street Church, Nashville, Tenn., $10; through I. B. Bradley, $50; Nashville Bible School Church, $15; sisters at Donelson, Tenn., $1.

Grateful thanks to those who have had part in the above donations. May the Lord bless you. Miss Cypert and I have moved from 68 Zoshigaya to 17 Nakatomizaka, Koishikawa, Tokyo. We are happily and comfortably situated in a real Japanese house inside the city quite near the Language School, Koishikawa Church, and yet within walking distance of the Zoshigaya work. The work that I have been able to do in connection with the language study during the past has been done with the Zoshigaya Church, but since my health has improved I hope to give a part of my time to the Koishikawa work as well-that is, as long as I am in Tokyo. The work that I have mapped out for the future, of which I shall speak more in detail later, is as yet prospective, and necessarily so, since both I and the Japanese who is to help me in this work are in preparation. She has another year in school, beginning next month, and I want more time on the language. The more I get out into the work, the more I realize that a thorough knowledge of the language is essential, and by God's grace I expect to get it.

Now for a few items on the custom of moving in Japan. Man-propelling carts are used, all being loaded and the things delivered at the same time. Loaded carts are often seen being pulled through the streets one behind the other, and the financial standing of the mover is shown by the number of carts used. The evening of our moving day, according to Japanese custom, we sent soba, or Japanese macaroni, to the nearest neighbors. This soba is put up in long bundles, and this special article is given to show that we wish these people to be friendly toward us for a long time. To further bear out the custom, the next day O-Iki San and I went to these homes and expressed in words what we had shown in sending the soba. Since moving we have already come better in touch with Japanese life and are glad of the change.

o o o The Japan Mission.

BY C. G. VINCENT.

Recent letters from the faithful preachers and other workers show that, step by step, progress is being made. Two baptisms reported since my last report to the papers. At this writing Brother Hiratsuka is doing some work in Shiodamura, our mission about one hundred miles north of Tokyo. We have a few members up there. No doubt Brother Hiratsuka will do much good in the way of encouraging these believers, though he should fail in making converts. He goes to this place once a year. There are four villages about four miles apart, and he has meetings in each one. I made this trip once. I was the first American, or white man, to be seen in these parts. I recall that in one of the inns we were served devilfish, and I suffered a terrible spell of indigestion. Apart from this, the visit was a most enjoyable one.

I want to thank the brethren again for the interest they have shown and are still showing by their offerings. I have been able, I am happy to report, to forward a check on the first of each month to cover the current expenses of the work. I am confident that the brethren will not fail me. The work must go on; it will continue, for the friends to missions will see to it that this cause is supported. Let me have now your offerings for next month.

We are still calling for a brother to go out as a missionary and take up the work. Who will go? It is hard for me to understand why no one responds. What is the matter? Who will say: "Here am I; send me?" The need, it seems to me, is imperative, and some one—in fact, two men, at least—ought to be sent out at once.

A few words now about the Dayton mission. It seems that wherever we go and locate, it turns out to be a "mission field." For three weeks a few of us, all that we have been able to find, have met for New Testament worship. Last Lord's day we met in the home of Sister Jelley, the mother of our missionary to India. We have had two baptisms already. One of these is Travasnih, Brother Jelley's oldest daughter. The other is Herman Stroup, the son of Brother and Sister J. U. Stroup, who worship with us. To-day we met in our room and had two visitors. We want to rent a hall in the center of the city and thus have a regular place for worship. We are poor. If any who read this are interested to the point of helping us bear this expense, we shall appreciate same. Dear reader, do you know of any faithful child of God in Dayton whom we can ask to meet with us? Do you know of some one who knows or might know of some one? If so, write that person and me. Let us cooperate in finding the Lord's people in Dayton. Surely in this city of nearly 150,000 souls there are many who would like to follow the Bible strictly. Address me at 137 East Third Street, Dayton, Ohio.

It Makes the Mother's Task Easier if She Learns to Love What She Has to Do.

Article 8.

If I were a fairy godmother, I would wave my wand and say to all mothers: "Love what you have to do." Children's wants are so numerous and a mother has such constant demands made upon her that she needs to retire within herself often, and, no matter how tired she may feel, repeat again and again: "I love what I have to do." Then suddenly she will feel better, and it becomes easier to go on with the task of caring for and training the children. It pays in dollars and cents, as well as in peace of mind and satisfaction of spirit, to devote much thought toward starting the children right.

What are some of the simple ways in which we can help our little ones? Let us begin the day happily, no matter how we feel, and never be discouraged nor allow the children to become so. Together, mothers and children can learn to be honest, obedient, and faithful.

It should not be forgotten that all virtues thrive best in a healthy body. Therefore, give the child plenty of fresh air, have him sleep in a well-ventilated room, and allow him to wear clean, whole clothes and eat simple food.

Let the children take hold and help about the house a little. At four and one-half years old they can wash dishes, and they love to do so. An oilcloth apron will keep them dry. They can also help make beds, brush up crumbs, and do many other things. But we must not nag the children at their tasks, remembering that interest in useful work may be most successfully developed by keeping it in the realm of the play spirit.

We have churches and schools to help in our work with our children, but it comes back every time to the parents and the home to develop in the children the simple practices which lead to right and happy living.

We must be patient in answering questions; and if we do not always know the answer, let us try to find out with the children. Fun is as natural as breathing to most children. Try to laugh with them at their simple jokes.

Let us take a little time at the end of the day, if we can, to tell a short story. The quiet will do us all good. Perhaps we may have seen a bird, a squirrel, or a child do some amusing thing as we glanced out of the window while at work. The wind may have been chasing the pretty leaves, or the sun playing hide-and-seek among the clouds. Stories are not all to be found in books. It is a big accomplishment to learn to do things in the child's way-things they like to do, but which we have often denied them because we felt we did not have time to be bothered.

If the little ones see that mother and father are trying to find something to love in all their trying tasks, before we know it the home will always be full of sunshine. If we have a fretful child to deal with, find out first if he is being properly nourished, then try telling him stories which will take his mind off himself.

Many children are often disagreeable because they have not enough of the right things to do, such as games and songs that provide activity and stimulate the mind, and occupations that answer the child's need to be doing and making something.

A most important point for the mother to realize is the necessity of sticking to the lessons she needs to teach every single day until the right habits are permanently formed in her child.

No one can tell us exactly the things it is best to do with children. But if we begin to watch and think, read when we can and exchange experiences with other mothers, many suggestions will be found to meet our need. Take a glimpse backward into your own childhood and many ideas will occur to you in that way; and through it all we will find that the children are helping to bring us up, too. Courage and joy prolong life, and we can well afford to stand and wait, feeling sure that if our motives have been right and we can find something to love even in the hard things of life, our little ones will see and know and will "rise up to call us blessed."

Folks Need a Lot of Loving.

Folks need a lot of loving in the morning; The day is all before, with cares beset— The cares we know, and they that give no warning; For love is God's own antidote for fret.

Folks need a heap of loving at the noontime-In the battle lull, the moment snatched from strife-Halfway between the waking and the croon time, While bickering and worriment are rife.

Folks hunger so for loving at the nighttime, When wearily they take them home to rest— At slumber-song and turning-out-the-light time— Of all the times for loving, that's the best!

Folks want a lot of loving every minute The sympathy of others and their smile! Till life's end, from the moment they begin it, Folks need a lot of loving all the while, -Strickland Gillilan, in the Advance.

The divine reproach is different from that of most people. They reproach us for asking too much; God reproaches us for asking too little. "Ask largely," he challenges, "that your joy may be full." If our cup looks empty, the fault may be with our asking. All great successes are the answer to great askings. The moment we begin to limit our expectations at the hands of God we register partial failure for our plans. There is no reason in heaven why America should not go dry. Nor is there any adequate reason on earth except in our lack of urgency. We shall hardly win more than we demand. We shall not win much less than we demand when we demand with prayer and voice and vote.-George Clarke Peck.

This is the great wonder of the love of God-not that he loved mankind, but that he loved them beyond his world; not that he redeemed them, but that he came himself to redeem them by becoming one of them. This was the awful surprise which burst upon the world when first it was told among men that their God and maker had come down to earth, and had been born of a woman, and had lived a poor man's life, and had died the death of a slave. No wonder that it startled Jew and Gentile, Greek and Barbarian-startled some to love and adoration; startled others to unbelief and mockery. Some were drawn to repentance and a holy life, while others were driven away in shuddering fear at so awful a surprise at so near a God. No wonder that those who did not receive it counted it as foolishness. It must be so unless we see in it the inconceivable and infinite love of God .-- R. W. Church.

Spirit of the Press

The "Too-Slow" Progress of the Kingdom.

A good deal of the too-slow progress of the kingdom is due to the necessity for diplomacy among the sects, a careful balancing of the rights of this church and the courtesies due to that one; but it would be criminal should there be anything sacrificed now to this sort of mere ecclesiastical courtesy while souls are being lost.-The Christian Advocate (New York). 0 0 0

"Prayer" and Applause.

"The Reverend X was in the midst of prayer when his congregation broke into a roar of applause." And the applause shook the edifice, which was a church. So say the press dispatches. We wonder whom it pleased most-God or the pastor or the congregation? Of course, it may have been just an uproarious "Amen!" and, again, it may have been a very "eloquent" prayer, and, once more, it may not have been a real prayer at all.—The Homiletic Review.

Buy a Liberty Bond.

The appeal to the people of the nation to buy the bonds of this third Liberty loan is reaching the hearts and the pockets of men and women and children all over the land. The loan is being absorbed, and we have reason to hope that it will be oversubscribed very greatly. If we do not take up these bonds, we may be wearing bonds of another sort, heavier and harder to wear. We are told that if we do not "come across," the Hun will. We may be compelled to give and sacrifice, outright, if we do not take up this investment. We are not asked to give, but simply to lend, at a good rate of interest, in an untaxable investment, the safest that is offered in the whole world. If these bonds are not safe, nothing is safe. They are safe as long as our government stands; and if our government fails and falls, there is no human quarter in the world that is safe. But our government will not fail. We are confident. We are assured. But we must buy these bonds to make it safe and impregnable. We must stand up for our government loyally and confidently. We are going to come through to victory and a lasting peace, by the grace and preserving mercy of God. We watch and pray, and fight and pay.-Herald and Presbyter.

It is far better to voluntarily buy Liberty bonds in order to uphold and maintain the government that guarantees to us religious freedom and which is striving to insure lasting peace to the governments of this world than it is to be forced to pay an indemnity to Germany. It is no more morally wrong to make a loan to the greatest human government on earth than it is to pay taxes to that same government, which are used in the prosecution of the war. Yet all Christians are cheerfully paying taxes, and in doing so are obeying God. The Spirit commands: "Let every soul be in subjection to the higher powers: for there is no power but of God; and the powers that be are ordained of God. Therefore he that resisteth the power, withstandeth the ordinance of God; and they that withstand shall receive to themselves judgment. For rulers are not a terror to the good work, but to the evil." (Rom. 13: 1-3.)

While this journal doubts not that war is antichristian. the time for the discussion of this war is passed, for the government is already in war and has conscripted many Christian young men. Many noble young men are fighting conscientiously against tyranny, which they have been taught to hate, and are battling, as they conceive it, for the maintenance of every righteous principle, for freedom as against autocracy and for the religion of Christ as against a form of infidelity.

Christians should not be so stupid as to do anything that will prolong the war or that will result in the sacrifice of more lives. It is their duty to aid their government to conclude a righteous peace with the least possible sacrifice of lives. Christians are very inconsistent who are now saying so much against this war, yet never raised their voices against war in times of peace. I can as cheerfully buy a Liberty bond as I can pay my taxes, and for me to decline to do all that I can conscientiously to aid and support the government of the United States would be rebellion against God and an encouragement to the German kaiser and the brutal militarism for which he stands.

The Mormon Menace.

The Utah Gospel Mission has been in the fight against Mormonism for seventeen years, its purpose being the evangelizing of Mormon regions in cooperation with all evangelical churches and in preventive effort against the Mormon system outside. Some facts given in the 1918 Annual of the Mission are: During the past year sixty-one Mormon organizations outside the Utah region were added two hundred and fifty-four previously reported; advertising matter furnished by Mormon headquarters appeared in some eighty papers of the United States, including daily papers in the leading cities of the country; the polygamist, Brigham H. Roberts, and a son of Joseph F. Smith have secured appointments as chaplains in the United States army, and the word has gone out to Mormon soldiers in the army to miss no chance to spread Mormon-While the Christian people of ism among their comrades. our country are giving their attention to questions of service to the nation and the men of the army and navy, Mormonism will use this opportunity to reach the men in the service and to carry on their work in neglected fields of our home territory.—Christian Advocate.

Christians should always be busy in service to the Master, and should never be so busy at anything else that they do not find time to propagate the religion of Christ. Men who know the truth should be active in its dissemination. Christians should be active in spreading the gospel in the camps. How many churches and preachers are ready to enlist for this work? The following editorial paragraph from the Christian Advocate should be stimulating to Christians:

A burly Irishman in one of the army camps was persuaded by a Y. M. C. A. worker to take a New Testament and read it. Within a few days he was back at the Y. M. A. building to tell the man who had given him the book that the religion he found in the Testament was what his friend, Mike, needed, for Mike was in the hospital desper-ately sick and lonesome. The Y. M. C. A. man was wise in that he did not give Pat another book, but told him to go to the hospital and read to Mike from his own book. And in the going and the service to a friend Pat came into the light and helped Mike to a new religious experience. Both are standing strong for Christian living in their But there is another message in this incident. When the New Testament was offered to Pat, he said: never got any religion at home, because I had to work seven days in the week and could not go to church." Now we may say that Pat could have come into the Christian life even though his work drove him seven days in a week. Of course he could have done so, but do you suppose that his surroundings were such as to awaken a real desire to know Christ? He had to go to an army camp, where men are busy twelve to fourteen hours a day, to find time to get religion. The secret of it was that in that camp were Christian men watching every chance to reach those soldiers and who were there to bring the message to men even while these soldiers were about their daily tasks. Can the church be silent when there are thousands of men and women at home who, like Pat, have not time to go to The commercial and industrial system that demands every day of a man's time in return for a meager living cannot stand the test of measurement by the principles of human justice and other Christian ideals.

Much interest is being manifested in the meeting at Lawrence Avenue, which is being conducted by C. M. Pullias, of Birmingham, Ala.

A preacher has been secured for the mission field at Braden, Tenn. Sister McNeelis appreciates the many responses to her appeal that recently appeared in the Gospel Advocate.

Mirabeau said that the best way to instill liberty into the hearts of the people is to begin with the infant in the cradle and to let the first name it lisps be "Washington." With all due respect to the memory of our first President, we would suggest that the first name taught the lisping infant should be "Jesus."

In a number of Western States the law requires that when poison is placed out in the field for the killing of squirrels or gophers, a sign shall be posted, reading: "Poison out." This is for the protection of the wayfarer. How appropriate and how sensible it would be if the law required that over the entrance to every saloon, every house of ill fame, and every gambling den there should be the placard: "Poison out."

From G. Dallas Smith, Cleburne, Texas, April 23: "I began my work with the Central church of Christ here yesterday. We had fine audiences both morning and night, and the church seems to be in fine working order. They built a two-thousand-dollar house last year, and it is free from debt. I hope to have a pleasant sojourn with these brethren, and that our labors together will be for the advancement of the Master's cause."

The Food Administrator recently sent out a letter to his aids in the State organizations of the Food Administration in which he said: "The extensive use of suburban gardens for planting last year proved of extreme importance in increasing the national food supply. Even with the car shortage which has developed during the last three months and the total inability to move the large reserves of potatoes and beans, we have been saved from positive shortages throughout the country largely by virtue of the accumulated household stores, which are the results of home endeavor.

"One good mother is worth a hundred schoolmasters," says a time-honored proverb. A British magazine recently stated that there were at least three members of the British cabinet who confessed that they owed more to their mothers than to any other person, one of these being Mr. Lloyd George. Men of influence and greatness in the United States have not been slow in according to their mothers the praise that they merited. "All that I am my mother made me," said John Quincy Adams. Lincoln speaks in a somewhat similar manner: "All that I am, or hope to be, I owe to my angel mother."

J. O. Barnes writes from Lake City, Fla.: "God still blesses the labors of his faithful ones. I preached at Spring Warrior, near Perry, on the second Lord's day in this month, both morning and night, and on Saturday night before, to a well-filled house. On Monday night I began a meeting in a schoolhouse near Fenholloway and continued it until the following Friday night, closing at the water with two baptisms. Much interest was manifested, and soon we are to have a new meetinghouse there in which to worship God. From there I went to Evergreen, near McAlpin, in Suwanee County, where I preached on Lord's day, morning and night. On this trip there were seven additions—four baptized, one from the sects who had already been immersed, and two restored to fellowship."

The following letter from Miss Anna K. Gill, at Minco, Okla., is self-explanatory: "For the past two years I have been teaching in the college here, but I do not want the position for another year. Mrs. Sager, the president of the college, has asked me to give her the name of a member of the church of Christ who could take my place next year. This I was unable to do. But doubtless you know several such teachers to whom you could speak of the place. There is work in some of the classes from the fourth through the eighth grade in addition to expression classes. The salary is forty dollars and board, with the privilege of taking additional private pupils. Many of the pupils have more or less Indian blood, which affords some novelty to an Easterner, at least in the beginning. Mrs. Sager does not want a very young woman, but prefers one over twenty-five. This will be a great favor to Mrs. Sager, and I shall appreciate it very much if you will put some one in communication with her. Correspondence should be addressed to Mrs. Sager, Minco, Okla."

Miss Nellie Straiton, of Fort Worth, Texas, writes: "Early this morning (April 24) I received the following cablegram from Sister Armstrong-Hopkins in India 'Husband dead; money needed." I immediately cabled fifty dollars to Sister Armstrong-Hopkins. Most of this money I had on hand, having received it during the month. The balance I raised from friends in Fort Worth. However, as you can readily realize, this will not be nearly sufficient to meet her needs in this emergency; in fact, it is not even a sufficient sum to send under ordinary circumstances. There are some Christians who have been very faithful in the matter of this mission work, giving regularly every month; but there are many, many others who must surely wake up to this great need, and I know you will respond liberally to this call. I want to send a remittance by mail just as soon as a sufficient sum reaches me. Please send at once. As a great many of you know, Brother and Sister Armstrong-Hopkins have been in India for six or seven years as missionaries for the churches of Christ in the United States. About two years ago both of them were very seriously ill in Delhi, and, although Sister Armstrong-Hopkins recovered from this illness, Brother Armstrong-Hopkins never fully regained his former health and strength; and although I have not yet received particulars, I feel sure his death is the outcome of that terrible time that they experienced the summer of 1916. If you wish to send a little note of sympathy with the money you send, I will gladly forward both the letters and the money immediately. Address Miss Nellie Straiton, 1030 South Lake Street, Fort Worth, Texas."

WHEN WRITING OUR ADVERTISERS PLEASE MENTION THIS PUBLICATION Help the Brethren at Poplar Bluff. BY M. S. MASON.

A mission meeting will be held at Poplar Bluff, Mo., during the entire month of June by James E. Laird, of Senath, Mo., assisted by a capable song leader. The brethren there are few, and, with all the zeal they can possibly muster, they must have help to pay for their property and this meeting. They wish as many congregations in the brotherhood as are able and so disposed to set apart their respective contributions the first Lord's day in June to this work.

Brethren, this call is worthy for three general reasons.

First-The cause demands missionary endeavor. The church is living far below its obligations in mission work, and yet we know the great commission and that missionary endeavor is the one source of church growth and the filling of gaps in depleted ranks.

Second-Poplar Bluff is a city of considerable size. Primitive missionary effort planted the cause in large population centers, where there were many people to reach and much wickedness to blot out; and the enemy quarters being strongest, gave more glory to the victory. The cause planted securely in Poplar Bluff is a victory for truth in a strategic section of a wonderful harvest of souls. We cannot miss the opportunity.

Third-Money conditions are such now that aid can be given that was not possible a few years ago; and a few years later the situation may not at all be so advantageous. From every place come in reports of magnificent contributions. It shows the people are giving because they are able. What an excellent time to take up the burdens of the weak and extend the boundaries of the dominion of the Christ!

Specifically this call is worthy for three reasons

First-The congregation at Poplar Bluff is worthy. In adversity for several years, they have stemmed the tide, remained loyal, and now have undertaken this greater task, resolved that they will bear every atom of the burden they can themselves in their enterprise. We are helping those who help themselves.

Second-There is no more worthy man to hold the meeting than James E. Laird. Brother Laird's deeds will live long after his departure in the hearts of lovers of truth in Southeast Missouri and Northeast Arkansas. It is not extravagant to say that in mission fields of his section of the country he has made the "desert blossom as the rose." In his wake is found the ruins of erroneous teachings, valiant contenders for the faith, and good church buildings. At his own risk he has employed a capable helper for the song work, for he believes nothing is too good for the cause. Brethren, if Brother Laird cannot establish the cause in Poplar Bluff, it cannot be done. But it will be done, and by your support he will do it.

Third-This is the psychological moment. All are ready now. Who knows but our failure now will cause such discouragement as will cause many to lose courage and never take heart again?

While the congregation is ready, the preacher is ready, the song leader is ready, the general public is expectant, let us rally, and may God have all the praise for a glorious victory in the name of his Son.

Brethren, consider this matter seriously; and if you can at all see your way clear to help, send a generous contribution to L. M. Ward, Poplar Bluff, Mo. He will report to the papers all received.

Tracy City, April 21.-We closed a good meeting at Cowart Street Church, in Chattanooga, with three baptized. Brethren Hoover, Wallace, Boyd, Brooks, Chrisman, Jernigan, Collins, Wooldridge, McCampbell, Phillips, and Mason, all preachers, attended and contributed greatly to the success of the meeting. E. Gaston Collins conducted the song service, assisted by Brethren Reader and St. Clair. This is a splendid congregation. Brother E. H. Hoover is doing a fine work at the Central Church. Brother Wallace is accomplishing good results at Cowart and St. Elmo. All the preaching brethren are certainly carrying the work forward in Chattanooga .- J. D. Northcut.

Ennis, April 22.—Four quickening services at the Ennis Avenue Church yesterday. One addition. Prof. R. M. Morgan is in a great music school with us. He is a specialist in this work and is doing much good.-Ben Cleburne, April 22.—I preached at Eva last week. One was baptized. I was at Rio Vista yesterday, where I preached twice. I shall begin a fif-teen-days' meeting at Iowa Park next Thursday. Whether the Master delays his coming or not, all should work and watch and pray .- F. L. Young.

Denison, April 22 .- We had splendid services at the Armstrong Avenue church of Christ last Lord's day. new names were added. The house was filled morning and evening. terest in every part of the church's activity is good. Vocal music training announced for June 1, by Ira Y. Rice, instructor, followed by a meet-ing. Brethren, while buying bonds, buy books, too, and get ready for your meetings.—Thomas E. Milholland.

Henrietta, April 22.—By the time this is read I will be in the midst of another mission meeting in this (Clay) county, at Byers, a place all the preachers have avoided, and a hard place, but where there are lots of people to hear, and where the church of Christ must be set in order. I am assured of about half a support here in the county, and it will be all the few here can do. Brethren, it will require at least fifty dollars from outside sources to carry the meeting on three weeks. You did not fail before, and you will not fail me now. Send your aid to me here at Henrietta, Box 518, and it will be reported in all the papers. Do not wait one for an-other, but hurry and help—do it now. I will be in the work trusting God and the brethren for food and raiment, "What thou doest, do quickly." The work at Henrietta is moving on spiendidly, and it is cheering to see it, after the fight we had to start it. I preached at Charlie yesterday and Saturday night, to good crowds. I will go to Bowie next Lord's day.—Tice Elkins.

Dear Friends:

I am sorry to tell you I have not sold enough whetstones to pay for the car, and it will soon be summer, and I am still here in bed yet. I was so in hopes that I could get the car, so I could be put out in it this summer to see if it would help me; but I have only sold about half enough to get the car, and I once more appeal to you with all my heart and ask you all to please kindly send me a dollar for a fine whetstone. I have lain here in bed for nineteen years, and God knows that I have had a hard time in this world, and being a poor boy all my life has made it so much harder on me; and I do trust that you every one are willing to help me a little to pay for the car to try to make my sad lot that has befallen me more bearable, and rest my tired, suffering body a little, and brighten the few remaining days of the short time that I have to stay here. When you write, tell me if you want me to send the stone. Some may prefer to give me a dollar or two to help me get the car, which I need so badly. Please do not forget me this time, and help me a little if you can, and I believe God will help Your brother in misfortune,

Old People. BY CARL G. SMITH.

It is said: "Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years, and was gathered to his people." (Gen. 25: 8.) He lived to be one hundred and seventy-five years of age. What was said of him may be said of many old men and women to-day. The making of many a young person is due to the noble influence of the old. The young can do a great deal to strengthen the characters of their youthful companions, but it takes the beacon of the light that has burned long and has grown brighter as it burned to call with assurance to the approaching one. I know this by experience. The little I may ever do as a teacher of God's word, I will attribute to encouragement received from old men. I wish to refer to some of these great men.

Old Brother Charlie Hobbs has passed away, but I will ever remember the time when he announced that I would preach on a certain day (it was my first effort), and then when I had awkwardly fumbled through, he commended my effort and gave out another appointment for me. Though he had reached his threescore and ten and I was yet in my twenties, we spent many hours together conversing on the subject that was dear to both of us-the Bible. His wife, too, has been a standard for womanhood. She has been a compass to her neighborhood. She has been a balance wheel to the church, at all times condemning hobbies among the brethren. Often these two have been almost alone at the Lord's-day meetings. Could you wonder that these could awaken in a soul the desire to do greater things for God? They have fought the fight and won. I knew, therefore, it could be done. It is this characteristic in Christ and Paul and other great men that pulls us up higher. They have shown that to overcome is possible. We follow in their footsteps.

Brother Joe Camp ("Uncle Joe"), who resides in a little village in Talladega County, in the State of Alabama, must be about as good as Paul was; and I do not think this is disrespectful to Paul. He is already "in a good old age" and "full of years," but is still living and preaching at every opportunity. I spent the summer of 1916 with him in meetings, and, though there is a difference of almost fifty years in our ages, he is as good a companion as I could desire. He has inspired me to become a good man like he is. He never frets; he never abuses any one; he does not "take thought for the morrow," for he knows God's hand is in it all. And how he can preach! I wish I could hear him now. He knows the Bible and practices it. In his younger days he rode many miles to fill his appointments, and even now he can make five miles on horseback to tell the old story. But I am sure that he and many other pioneers have failed to receive the proper appreciation of their struggles to establish primitive Christianity. Wherever Brother Camp goes, the people love him, even those who differ from him. How great it would be if all the young men of the world could be associated with such characters as thist

Just a word about another old soldier who has fought almost to the end. Probably thirty or more years back there came into Clay and Talladega counties a man bringing the strange doctrine of the Bible. It was, indeed, strange to those country people, because they had never heard it. This man would ride his pony many, many miles, and at night when the people had gathered in he would tell them how to rightly divide the word of truth; and at one place almost the whole congregation, which was a Baptist church, turned loose their error and accepted the Bible as their only guide to heaven. The good that such men as this have done can never be estimated. He was a missionary after the manner of Paul. Whenever he returns to the place just mentioned (which he tries to do each year), they hail him with the deepest respect and devotion. Nothing they have is too good for him, not even their money. I taught school at this place for some time, and have come to know and love Brother J. M. Joiner, for this is the name of the noble pioneer. He came to the school one day and gave me some advice and encouragement that I shall never forget.

But I must close. However, I must not stop until I tell of one of the favorite sayings of Brother Joe Camp. Many times I have heard him say that he would like to preach as though it were his last time and as he would if he knew that Christ was in the audience. He was so anxious to preach nothing but the truth.

There are two elements that go to the composition of friendship-truth and tenderness.-Emerson.

NAPOLEON ONCE SAID:

"A foot-sore army is an army half defeated." Men in training camps, in cantonments, in the army and navy suffer from blisters and sore spots on their feet. Every "comfort kit" should contain one or more hoxes of Allen's Foot—Base, the antiseptic powder to shake into the shoes. It freshens the tired aching, smarting feet and heals blisters and sore spots. The Plattsburg Camp Manual advises men in training to make daily use of Foot—Ease. Sold everywhere, 25c.

Weaknesses.

BY J. W. ATKISSON.

We all have our weaknesses, and at times it seems difficult to keep them and our prejudices from doing hurt to the cause we all love.

For instance, one man gets the idea that, because he can preach a little or speak in public tolerably well, he ought to rule the church and dictate everything pertaining to the work and worship of the church. Then, another has got the idea that, because he can and does pay in more money to the church than his less fortunate brother, he ought to be allowed to dictate about everything pertaining to the work and worship. Then, again, there are some men, and women, too, who think they ought to have the oversight of the church and dictate everything because of their social standing and ability to mingle with the masses and influence the rich people. Then there are others who have an idea that, because they read a paper which has highly inflated ideas of its soundness and loyalty to the truth and of the ability and importance of its editors and supporters, they ought to be allowed to have the oversight and care of the church. And then another imagines that he is quite well qualified for the eldership because he is opposed to lesson leaves, quarterlies, and other helps to study the Bible. Then up jumps another brother and asserts that he is better qualified for the place because he does not oppose lesson leaves and other lesson helps. Then another seeks the office of a bishop because of his splendid literary education. Then the clannish man wants those of his clan to have the eldership and to run the whole thing just to his liking. So all of these human weaknesses are frequently allowed to work much harm and injury to the cause of Christ,

But what is the remedy for such a state of affairs? The entire third chapter of James is the best remedy that I know.

Sacrifice.

Is sacrifice so hard a thing?
We give a useless seed
To God's kind care, and—lo!—we reap
A harvest for our need.

We give a scanty draught to one Who faints beside the way; There flows a fountain for our thirst Some weary, woesome day.

We give a little flower of love To light a darkened room, And—lo!—our gardens overflow With beauty and with bloom.

Ah, sacrifice is but a door
To dwellings of delight,
And selfishness the subtle key
That locks our joy from sight!

The Upbuilding of the Master's Kingdom.

BY C. NETTERVILLE.

It must not be inferred from anything I may say that I am opposed to "evangelistic work." On the contrary, I claim that not a tithe of such work is being done that should be done. It is not for less preaching that I contend, but for more teaching. 1 do not plead for a smaller enlistment in the "army of the Lord," but for a better training of those who are enrolled under the banner of "King Immanuel;" for the imparting of more skill to the hand of the soldier, that he may wield the "sword of the Spirit" more effectually; for more strength to the arm that bears the "shield of faith" with which to quench the fiery darts of the "evil one." My contention is not that we need a smaller army, but a betterdrilled soldiery, a better-disciplined host, that we may triumphantly march against the citadels of the enemy, "conquering and to conquer," until every foe shall be subdued and every knee made to bow in humble submission to the will of Him who is "Lord of all and the rightful Ruler of the universe.

My conception of Christianity is not that it is a negative nor even a passive institution, but that it is an aggressive, even a very militant, system of religion. To no one thing is the life of a Christian more aptly likened in the sacred writings than to that of a soldier. To have fought a good fight was a great consolation to the most militant of the apostles when the time came for him to lay down the weapons of his warfare against the hosts of Satan and enter into that rest prepared for those who have "fought the good fight of faith." His admonition to the Ephesian brethren had been that they put on the whole armor of God, that they might be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. His charge to his son in the gospel was: "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses. I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession; that thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Tim. 6: 12-14.)

The hosts of his Satanic majesty have been marshaled in hostile array against the Lord and his anointed from the very beginning of God's dealings with mankind. Satan is no myth. The idea of an "impersonal devil" did not come from the word of Blood Poison is Sneaking.

It steals upon you in the most unexpected manner. Beginning with a mere scratch of the skin and aided by the careless touch of a pair of dirty hands, the slight wound becomes infected, festers, and spreads. Blood poison sets in and unexpectedly the entire body is affected. Too often it proves fatal. Don't be foolish. Take care of yourself. The application of Gray's Ointment in all cases of cuts, burns, scalds, bruises, stings, sores, whether large or small, will put a stop to any possible chance of infection and blood poison. God, but it emanated from the fertile brain of this archenemy of the human race. Not only is the devil possessed of a strong personality, but he possesses great power, which he uses, never for good, but always to draw men away from their allegiance to their God, against whom he rebelled and thereby lost his high estate, since which time it seems to be his one aim to draw men away from the service of God. He is bold as well as cunning. He measured swords with the angels of God when he rebelled and fell. He met the Almighty in a successful contest for the fealty of the first pair in the garden of Eden. He met him again, but went down in defeat, when he took the Son of God upon a high mountain, and, showing him all the kingdoms of the world, offered them to him if he would "fall down and worship" him. But with that defeat he was not dismayed. He has waged an unrelenting war upon the followers of the lowly Nazarene from that day to this; hence the necessity of the followers of the Lord Jesus Christ marshaling themselves in opposition to the ambitious schemes of him who aims to dethrone the Ruler of the universe.

The Book certainly teaches that the aim of the Christian religion is character building. The completion of a perfect Christian character seems to me to be the keynote of God's teachings to man. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works," is the way the great apostle to the Gentiles puts it when exhorting Timothy to increased zeal and activity in preaching the word. I do not gather from the teachings of Him who "spake as never man spake" that the great Ruler of the universe stands much in need of negative characters in the great realm over which he exercises supreme authority, but that he wants very positive and very active, not to say aggressive, characters, and that men are put here to be developed into just such characters as will be suited for the work which he has to be done. And I conceive that he has devised a plan and placed at man's disposal all the means and instrumentalities that man may need to develop and perfect these characteristics which so completely fit him for the work his Master has in view for him in his future state.

Now, if this is true-if man is to be not simply rescued from his sinful state, but fitted for a very exalted one by developing in him those qualities of mind and heart which render him capable of enjoying it-then it is necessary for him to go on to perfection, daily doing the things prescribed whereby a completed Christian character may be evolved.

I think it will be clearly seen that evangelistic work is but a small part of the labor that devolves upon the followers of Him who devised the scheme of human redemption when we bear in mind that obedience to the gospel call simply inducts people into the kingdom of God, with their past sins blotted out; that after this they are not only to add to their faith virtue (courage), knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and love, in order to complete their Christian characters, but that they are to panoply themselves in the whole "armor of God" and be prepared to go forth and do, not only defensive work, but aggressive work for their Lord and Master. It seems quite clear to me, as the work necessary to bring to perfection the reguired Christian character and to train one for efficient service in the army of the Lord is so very much greater than that necessary to enlist men in his army, that the proportion of those engaged in the former service should be very much greater than those in the latter-that there should be many more teachers than professional preachers engaged in the work of building up the Master's kingdom in any country. Hence my contention is that we need, not fewer preachers or evangelists, but more teachers or elders in the churches of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

The highest exercise of charity is charity toward the uncharitable .--Buckminster.

Talking.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

Once a very great teacher said: "So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty." (James 2: 12.) The teacher who said that was also a servant, and no doubt but what he said it on account of what his Master once said. His saving was this: "But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment. For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." (Matt. 12: 36, 37.) When I was sent to school at the age of six, scholars were requested to recite a speech on Friday evenings. My mother offered me a prize if I would memorize and recite these lines:

'If Wisdom's ways you wisely seek, Five things observe with care: Of whom you speak, to whom you speak

And how, and when, and where."

That caused me to take up with a song, then familiar, the last line of the chorus of which was: "Don't talk till you've something to say." Solomon said: "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." (Prov. 25: 11.) Another man not so wise as Solomon said: "The words of a talebearer are like snake bites; they poison the whole crowd." He tried to improve on the words of Solomon. (Prov. 26: 22.) Jesus spoke of a class of people who would "say, and do not." Yes, they could promise, be first and foremost in talk, and could plan, guide, and direct; but, like signboards. they never travel the road. Usually whatever is imbedded in the heart will be manifested in talk. "For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." (Matt. 12: 34.) Paul said: "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, neither filthiness nor foolish talking." Sometimes talk is said to be dull, while at other times it is as sharp as a buzz saw. Harsh words usually fall heavily upon the heart. "For the ear trieth words, as the month tasteth meat." (Job 24: Meat must have salt, and some people use pepper (in sausage); but Paul left that out when he said: "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man." (Col. 4: 6.) When talking, do not use harsh, flery words seasoned with pepper; but, with the grace of God, use words which have a saving power. That kind of salt will saye. Sometimes talk is as light as chaff blown from a cyclone straw stacker. If you ever stacked straw and derived any benefit from the broken wheat beards and chaff which was blown upon you, you might be as equally benefited by light, silly, chaffy, talking and jesting.

Calomel To-Day, Sick To-Morrow

Dose of Nasty Calomel Makes You Sick and You Lose a Day's Work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury Calomel acts like dynamite on a slug-gish liver. When calomel comes into gish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile, it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel billious, headachy, constipated, and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a fifty-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful; and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day, you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides it may salivate you; while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone, you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition, and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant, and safe to give to children; they like it.

Debate.

BY W. C. PHILLIPS.

Beginning on May 28, at 10 A.M., Brother C. R. Nichol, of Thorp Spring, Texas, will hold a debate with T. S. Payne (Holy Roller), of Cleveland, Tenn. The duration of the debate will be four days, with two sessions a day. The propositions are the general church propositions.

Those coming from afar will please let me know at once in order that provisions for taking care of them may be made in advance. congregation is small and the most of them live in town, and town folks know what that means (short in bed room); but a strong effort is going to be made to accommodate all who will attend.

The debate will be held in a large tent, and the interest in the debate is such that it is predicted that five thousand people will attend.

We are expecting East Tennessee to be illuminated with the true light of the gospel as never before.

Our Florida Meeting.

BY T. B. THOMPSON.

On March 25 I left home for Avon Park, Fla., where I engaged in a meeting of seventeen days' duration. I found a splendid band of loyal disciples, comprising a representative portion of the very best people of the town. As yet they are meeting in a two-story school building which they have bought and equipped for that purpose. I baptized five, all members of the same family, which, together with those lately baptized by Brother Homer C. Hinton, who lives at Avon Park, brought the number up to twenty-nine. Every member seems to be in earnest about the work, and they have accordingly laid out great plans for the future; in fact, such plans as would stagger churches many times larger numerically and financially. They have asked me to live, love, and labor with them, and a proposition looking to that end is pending. Brother Ott and wife and son, lately from Campbell, Mo., were the occasion of my going there. Space forbids my mentioning personally many who showed us exceptional personal kindness. Mrs. Thompson did not go as I did, but, through the kindness of some in furnishing that which was lacking, she followed soon. To say we enjoyed our trip and stay in Florida is the mildest possible way of putting the matter.

Dear reader, would you not like to move to the land of oranges and help build up the cause of the Lord? Many people spend their winters there, while many for health have moved there permanently. Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir: Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years, and have always had trouble with it till I got your appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on; it just sadapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in.

It would be a veritable Godsend to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it. My rupture is now all healed up, and nothing ever did it but your appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself. I will say a good word for your appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am.

Ten Reasons Why

YOU SHOULD SEND FOR BROOKS RUPTURE APPLIANCE.

- It is absolutely the only appli-ance of the kind on the market to-day, and in it are embodied the prin-ciples that inventors have sought after for years.
- The appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of po-sition.
- Being an air cushion of soft rub-ber, it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.
- 4 Unlike the ordinary so-called "pads" used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
- It is small, soft, and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.
- 6. The soft, pliable bands holding the appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a barness.
- There is nothing about it to get foul; and when it becomes solled, it can be washed without injuring it in the least.
- There are no metal springs in the appliance to torture one by cut-ting and bruising the flesh.
- All of the material of which the appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe appliance to wear.
- 10. My reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon to-day.

Why Paul Loved the Church at Philippi.

Paul's relationship to the church at Philippi was a very tender one. How could be but love her? For, in the first place, he had suffered for this church, and therefore it was only natural that he should love it as men love something for which they have suffered. For that reason Christ loved the church. For that reason a mother loves her child. In the second place, this church, more than any other, perhaps, stood for the simplicity of the gospel. There was less cause for rebuke than was found anywhere else. Then, again, its members were never forgetful of Paul's needs. They frequently helped and sustained the apostle in one way and another. Sad to relate, I know of some preachers who have baptized hundreds of people, who are now poverty stricken and sadly neglected. If each person now living whom they have baptized would contribute so much as five dollars toward their relief, it would sustain them for the balance of their days. The conduct of the Philippian church toward their preacher is such as to provoke shame and repentance upon others who are really able to do more if they had a mind to work.

Eleven years after Paul first visited Philippi and while a prisoner at Rome, he wrote them an epistle. It is in no sense a rebuke, but a real, sure-enough love letter which served as an inspiration for faithfulness. There are many good things in it, but all are summed up in the admonition found in the twenty-seventh verse of the first chapter: "Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ." In connection with this text, Paul brings out some essentials that enter into every worthy Christian life.

"Stand Fast in One Spirit."

The first essential is steadiness. Paul hopes to hear that they "stand fast in one spirit." Was there ever a time in this nation's history when we could place a higher value upon this requisite for success? With Britain's "back to the wall" and France and America holding the lines for dear life against the advancing armies of the enemy, what disaster would follow if those in command did not know how to keep steady! Now the church at Philippi was subject to all the dangers of a new church. There was the unfriendly aspect of the Roman law, the hostility of the Jews ever seeking to stir up opposition and strife, and, worse than all, the universal presence of unbelief, which was intangible, but none the less destructive. They had to be Christians in the face of a great majority, and a majority which included worldly wealth, wisdom, and influence. Christians living now have the same obstacles to contend against. Paul's admonition to live a life worthy of the gospel has lost none of its appropriateness. There is admittedly great difficulty for Christian men and women living in these terrible war times to keep poised and steady and undismayed. Our loyalty to Jesus is put to a crucial test.

I think of a great ocean vessel plowing into the storm through the darkness of the night. The waves dash against that vessel in vain. She goes right on in a straight, undeviating course. Her steadiness is explained by the hand that is on the helm and the eye that is on the compass.

It is a time that Christians everywhere must keep their eyes upon the great Pilot of souls and "stand fast in one spirit."

Be Strenuous and Fearless.

Paul also hoped to hear that the members of the Philippian church were "striving together for the faith of the gospel." This suggests another essential, which is perseverance. The admonition to keep steady does not imply indifference or a merely hold-your-ground position. The Greek for "striving" is equal to our word strenuous. True, this is a shopworn word, but there is none to take its place. In Paul's mind there was likely a picture of an athletic contest wherein youths stripped of every superfluous weight were racing toward a goal. Christianity does not mean standing still further than to be steady in faith. It means going forward. The very essence of the gospel is extension. Let us note the object of the striving. It must be "for the faith of the gospel." Striving for any other faith is folly.

"And in nothing terrified by your adversaries." We are told that there is in this expression the idea of a scared horse frightened by its own shadow. Such a figure is unworthy of the true Christian life. We read almost every day how some great battle line is "stiffened," meaning that something has put new iron and fiber into the soldiers. We need this quality in Christian warfare. Death should never affrighten the prepared Christian. For after his explanation of the resurrection, Paul cries: "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" How beautifully does he connect his idea of fearlessness with that of steadiness when he concludes with the words: "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

The Preacher As a Financier.
BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

It is frequently said of some preacher that he is a "bad manager," a "shiftless fellow," that he "has no business sense," he "is a poor financier." In fact, it seems to be the consensus of opinion that preachers are poor financiers.

Sometimes they are severely criticized and stoutly condemned. No doubt, a little of this is just; but much of it is very, very unjust. As a business man in general, the preacher is looked upon as a joke. It is more than people are expecting if once in a great while we should find a preacher a good business man, for the two do not seem to take hold of the man at the same time—or, rather, they are not "ketchin'" at the same time, as the man said of whooping cough and mumps.

Not long since I met a brother whom I had never met before, and in our short conversation he mentioned certain preaching brethren whom he knew personally, and he said some very nice things about them, mentioning the fact that they were fine preachers, and then said to me: "I do not know what kind of preacher you are; haven't heard you." I said: "O, well, I am one of these poor preachers." He said: "Well, there are two senses in which that may be taken. That may mean poor in ability to preach, or it may mean poor financially." I said: "I suppose it might apply in both senses to me." He said: "I do not doubt in the least that it applies financially. As a rule, our preaching brethren are all poor. They seem to be poor financiers. But, in the other sense, I have heard but few of them that were poor in ability to preach. They seem to know their lessons, and they know how to tell what they know. I never heard many poor ones." I thought that was a very high compliment.

It has always occurred to me that preachers, as a rule, were very poor financiers; or, in other words, when a man becomes a preacher, he surrenders all the business acumen he ever had. Yet, when I consider it another way, I think they may not be such poor financiers, after all.

What is it to be a financier, anyway? It is to be skilled in finance; to be a money maker, a money getter; to be successful in secular business. I know some good preachers—and good men, too—yes, fine men—among our brethren who are in good circumstances; and they are good business men with it—men who make money, as the people would say. How is that, anyway? Would these brethren say they made what they have preaching? No, by no means. Do they owe their worldly possessions to the fact that they preach the gospel? Do they preach as a means of getting gain? Certainly they do not. Be it understood here that I have no reference to anybody else's preachers or any class of preachers save those who preach the full and pure gospel. The fact that these brethren have what they have must be accounted for in some other way.

Some of these brethren managed by industry, economy, and the exercise of good business judgment to get well fixed in life before beginning to preach, and now they run their business and preach what they can; but they do not neglect their business. Some started out to preach, giving it all of their time, and after laboring faithfully and prayerfully for a while they saw themselves getting poorer, falling behind with obligations, getting in debt, family in need and neglected, and then the people began to say "bad management," "bad financing," and they abuse them generally and refuse to help or encourage them, but are always ready to give them a whack at every opportunity. Some of these brethren turn their attention to secular callings and preach occasionally, but they do not neglect their business. Some farm, some teach school, some practice medicine, some practice law, some write insurance, some keep books, and some merchandise, and in doing these things they do well and make money; but they study their business, and do not neglect it. No profession or calling is going to run itself; to succeed, it must be pushed.

> He who seeks one thing in life, And but one, May hope to achieve that thing Before life be done.

Some men seem to be born into the world with great business capacity, while some acquire this by education and development. However, let that be as it may, business, to succeed, must be looked after. To succeed in anything, the heart must be set upon that thing. To succeed in farming, the heart must be set upon farming; to succeed in merchandising, the heart must be set upon merchandising. So with anything else we try to do. To succeed in anything, we must have our heart set on that one thing.

One of the most successful men I have ever known in business was in the habit, before putting a big deal through, of eating and drinking scarcely anything, sleeping but little, and withdrawing himself from social circles entirely for three or four days before this transaction was made. Why? His whole being was in this deal; he was completely absorbed. Should his calculations be defective, he is a ruined man financially. He must give it his very best thought to be safe.

The articles from our beloved Brother Elam in recent issues of the Gospel Advocate on "professional preachers" and "making merchandise of the gospel" are very fine, and to which I want to give my hearty indorsement, for they certainly are the truth and are to the point. I do hope both preachers and "laymen" will read them and enjoy them and profit by them as I feel I should.

The man, young or old, who starts out in this world to get money is going to pursue the course that he believes will bring him money, let it be legitimate or illegitimate. If he thinks he can get it by preaching for it, he preaches for it; and if it is money he is preaching for, he is just as liable to preach one thing as another. This is the trouble to-day—too many out preaching as a business consideration. It is the bread-and-butter question with them, and not the one all-important consideration or motive. These preachers bring reproach upon the cause and are not worthy the name of a preacher. What should be the true motive of the preacher? He should desire above everything else to advance the cause of truth and righteousness and to be a "soul winner for Jesus," a "fisher of men." If this is really his aim, he is sure to put his whole soul into it; and just as the man cannot be a good lawyer and a good farmer at the same time, or a good physician and a good merchant at the same time, for the reason that the two cannot occupy the mind and receive equal and needed attention at the same time, one suffering at the expense of the other, so the same principle holds true with preaching. "The King's business" and some other business do not go well together; one or the other must suffer. If the preacher has a great longing, yearning passion for souls. need we be surprised if he should be a poor financier-that his farm goes down, his house and barn get out of repair, the stock of goods runs down, and things generally needing attention about the house? Why, he has been engaged in "catching men," winning souls for Jesus, and has had no time or thought for business.

Where and What Is God? BY F. W. SMITH.

"Is there a God besides me?" (Isa. 44: 8.) The subject suggested by this momentous question is one of transcendent importance, because it deals with two doctrines wholly irreconcilable one with the other. These conflicting doctrines are designated as "the immanence of God" and "the transcendence of God." One denotes an impersonal God as set forth in the pantheistic theory; and the other denotes a personality that is apart from and above the universe, reigning as the Creator of all things, and who, if this material world and every form of life found upon it should be extinguished, would still exist as the eternal Spirit. Now, over and above and beyond all forms of matter, organic or inorganic, animate or inanimate, sustaining and upholding them, and yet distinct from them, is an uncreated, self-conscious Being. To this Being is applied the term "transcendence," because he is unconfined and unconfinable, unlimited and illimitable, transcending all derived and derivable knowledge, wisdom, and power. By the "immanence of God" is meant the presence of God only in nature-the mystic, indwelling life we see manifested all about us. Pantheism says: "Deep through the universe runs the thrill of life; and wheresoever that life is, there is God. His personal habits are the laws of nature. His love of beauty is seen in every valley. It is he who wakes in the waking of spring; it is he who moves in the torrent and the tide; it is he who rises to the joy of consciousness in the consciousness of his highest creature, man." All of this is true only in a secondary sense; for beyond the "thrill of life running deep through the universe" is the Giver of that life, and the vibrations of life, from the sparrow to the eagle, from the sprig to the giant oak, and from the lowly worm that crawls in the dust to the kingly beast that roams the forest, are simply visible manifestations of an invisible Spirit. These all were flung from his creative hand, each to its sphere, for the comprising of one grand and sublime whole, forming a universe to glorify its Builder. The Bible sets before us "a God transcendent, like some consummate painter adorning with his brush the lilies of the field, or like some master craftsman fashioning the fowls of the air for flight." Pantheism has only a God that glitters in the stars, that blooms in a flower, that smiles in the sunshine, and speaks only in the voices of nature. Its thesis is: "God within us, but no God beyond us." Thus, in trying to bring God near unto us, they have denied the Fatherhood of God, and all that it means to a weary and troubled soul. In a futile effort to bring him near to man, those precious attributes of love, mercy, long-suffering, and infinite goodness predicated of the God of the Bible have been discarded for the mere drapery of the universe in the midst of which the Father of spirits sits in matchless majesty looking out over the creation of his mighty power.

The Darwinian theory built upon supposed scientific investigations (as if such investigations were infallible) has wrecked the faith of untold thousands in the Bible and the God of the universe. It denies the Bible account of man's creation, scoffs at miracles, and then spreads before the human mind the most stupendous miracle of all miracles in the doctrine of so-called "evolution." should attempt to prove the "miraculous," and possessed the data with which to confirm the doctrine of evolution. no miracle of the Bible could equal it. It is infinitely easier for me to believe the Bible account of the origin of man than it would be to accept the theory that man evolved from an ape, the ape from a lower and an entirely different species of animal life, descending through lower and different forms or species of life, reaching at last to an infinitesimal spark of life originating-where and by what, evolution dare not attempt to say. The Bible account and order is that everything shall bring forth after its kind, and all the boasted scientific investigations have utterly failed to find that one species can be transmitted into another. Every such effort results in a hybrid-a mongrel animal or plant. The immutability of species is as certain as the immutability of God himself, and the only reasonable order of creation is that given in the book of Genesis. The order, adaptability, and fitness of nature belies the doctrine of evolution and all of its kindred systems.

But back to the "immanence of God." Pantheism, in seeking to bring God near to man, is walking by sense and sight instead of by faith. It is simply a material religion based upon a material God. Nearness in a spiritual sense cannot be determined by physical measurements. The one nearest to us may not be at our elbow, but thousands of miles away. There are men to-day nearer their wives. mothers, sisters, and brothers while on the battle fields of France than they are to the soldiers by their side. They are in the heart's deepest and warmest affections of their loved ones in this land of tears, hopes, and fears. To place my hand upon a tree and imagine that God is near me because of physical contact with a soulless, unthinking, and speechless thing would be to confess myself ignorant of the book of nature. But to look up and away from all material things and realize that there is a Being who knows, understands, loves, and pities me-then is that Being truly near unto me, even in my heart and my soul. Hence the fact is, in seeking to bring God near us simply through material agencies, the pantheist places him far, far away.

What, then, is God? "God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship in spirit and truth." (John 4: 24.) Spirit calling unto Spirit; spirit, through the medium of revealed truth, the ever blessed Bible, in daily and hourly communion with Spirit; the spirit of man feeling and realizing that there is a great and ever-living power over him, about him, and in him. Who is God? He is the Father of spirits. "Furthermore, we had the fathers of our flesh to chasten us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live?" (Heb. 12: 9.) What can bring us nearer than divine Fatherhood? There is something so comforting, restful, and sweet in the words: "Our Father who art in heaven." A Being who watches over us by night and follows us with his infinite love and goodness by day. So, whether enfolded in the arms of restful slumber or walking in the noonday sun, he is with me-yea, in my soul and in my life.

Truly there is no God besides the Christian's God. If it were possible to destroy the personality of God, away would go the individuality of man. I cannot think of man as a personality—a living, sentient being—without thinking of whence he came. Is there not a greater Personality? Is there not a Being who gave to man the power to think, reason, plan, and execute? Nature would wither, all animal and vegetable life would perish, if there was not a personal God to uphold and vitalize it from day to day. The physical universe would crumble like a withered flower, the stars would turn pale, the sun grow cold, the seas and rivers dry up, without a personal God to supply. sustain, and keep them. Behold the beauties of nature unfolding about us-the bud, the flower, and the golden fruitage! Listen to the rapturous music swelling like ocean waves from millions of animated things, rolling like the well-rounded notes of the soft flute in a master hand, and ask: Is there a master Mind and a master Hand back of it all? Take the timid plant rooting on the hillside, the flower springing by the wall, and the oak towering on the mountain, and each needs the warmth of sunshine, the refreshing showers, and the plant life from the air in order to live and grow. Back of the sun, back of every raindrop, back of etheral billows that sweep over mountain and plane is the great God of the universe. Blessed be his name, and may all that is within me proclaim his glory now and for evermore.

Glad and Sad.

BY S. H. HALL.

You will understand, kind reader, why such a heading to this article; for mingled feelings of gladness and sadness, I presume, come to every soul who strives to live the Christian's life.

Yesterday (April 28) was a glad day with us in our Atlanta work. All the services were well attended, and two more of our soldier boys at Camp Gordon confessed their faith in Christ. One was baptized at West End last night, and the other is to be baptized at the camp to-night by Brother Clyde Shacklett. The writer, accompanied by Brother Richmond and wife and Brother Luther Thomas, enjoyed a fine service with the boys yesterday afternoon. Quite a number of the boys were at West End last night. Some of as fine Christian boys as it has ever been my pleasure to meet have been at Camp Gordon. The greater number of the Tennessee boys have gone on to Camp Sevier and Camp Jackson in South Carolina, but we have some fine characters still here to help. Those who have helped us most are Brethren Sanford, Cook, and McCollum. This splendid trio is now augmented by Brother Clyde Shacklett, who comes from the West Nashville (Tennessee) congregation. We are delighted with him, and he goes to work at once, helping us to convert and baptize the unsaved into Christ and strengthen the Christian boys as they come. We are so thankful and pray God to bless these faithful boys and the Atlanta brethren in helping them all we can. We will have three services a week at the camp from now on, and this we hope to increase just as soon as we are financially able to increase our forces. Let me insist that those who have sent offerings to this end continue to do so, and that others fall in line in this good work. Send all offerings to R. L. Harwell, 153 Oglethorpe Avenue, Atlanta, Ga., and state that it is for the Camp Gordon work. The camp is about fifteen miles out from Atlanta. It costs something to go and come. Besides, we must use more free literature in our work there.

Another thing that made yesterday such a glad day with this writer was the privilege of having in his home Sister Ben West and her two daughters and of meeting "Brother Ben" at the depot and shaking his hand again. I baptized Brother Ben at Little River, Ky., about sixteen years ago, and led Sister West to see that she was in Babylon and to come out. Their oldest daughter, Elizabeth, has since been baptized into Christ. She was about two years old when her father was baptized. Brother and Sister West soon left the Little River congregation and have been on the "go" quite a good deal since and have not had the encouragements of a strong congregation with which to worship. But they have ever been faithful. They go now to Nashville, Tenn., for a stay. I was glad to tell them that they would be blessed with opportunities there, and that if they started out to visit every church of Christ in Nashville, and visited only one each Lord's day, that it would take them about eight months to get around. I am wondering which of the Nashville congregations will be the fortunate one to have these good people to make their church home with them.

And you are wondering where the sadness comes in? Well, it comes from the flood of appeals that come to my desk for help when I simply cannot give them the help. Note the following appeal from a good sister in one of our towns:

Brother Hall: While I know you are too busy in your own field to give any time to outside issues, I am going to infringe on your time a few moments. I wish I could have a face-to-face talk with you; but as I cannot, I will just say that we need a minister here and must have one. We have been without a preacher a year or more, and we feel the effects of it. We have a good Bible study, though small. We had fifteen communicants yesterday (April 14). This is good as far as it goes, but does not go far enough. The Baptists have the best man here they have ever had. The Methodists have a right popular man. It behooves us to get busy. Can you lend us any assistance? Can you come or send Brother Carter next Lord's day? Let us know as soon as possible.

I am glad to say that a man will go this month, the Lord willing, and they will have a man for a series of revival services. But the thing I want to impress upon the friends of this work is that we cannot answer all such calls. "The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest." (Matt. 9: 37, 38.) Just as true is this to-day as when Christ uttered these words. My brother, will you continue to pray for us?

The Lord's Supper.

BY E. C. FUQUA.

The Lord's Supper is a memorial institution, to be observed by all of the Lord's people "upon the first day of the week." "And upon the first day of the week, when we were gathered together to break bread, Paul discoursed with them," etc. (Acts 20: 7). This institution looks back to "the night in which he [Christ] was betrayed" (1 Cor. 11: 23), when he, full of sorrow, told them that this Supper was to be eaten in contemplation of his shed blood, which he was in the act of pouring out for remission of the sins of many (Matt. 26: 28). At the institution of the Supper, Christ said: "Drink ye all of it; for this is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many unto remission of sins." (Matt. 26: 27, 28.) They must drink of it because it represents his blood, by means of which they were to be sayed.

This clearly demands that all who are indebted to the blood of Christ for salvation must for that reason observe the Lord's Supper. It is so essentially related to and identified with the blood of remission as to demand recognition as a blood provision, an essential to eternal redemption—"poured out for many unto remission of sins." Is it any wonder, then, that Paul informed the church at Corinth that, because of its perversion of the Lord's Supper, "many among you are [spiritually] weak and sickly, and not a few sleep?" (1 Cor. 11; 30.) Many were "weak and sickly," and some were dead, spiritually, because their perversion of the Supper had really deprived them of its virtue as an essential spiritual institution.

No one can despise the Lord's Supper without despising the shed blood of Christ, of which the Supper is the solemn memorial. The two are too nearly the same in significance to allow the honor of one and the dishonor of the other. We dishonor the Lord's Supper when we fail to assemble to honor it. Christ has sanctified "the first day of the week" to the honor of the Lord's Supper, and any failure to observe this provision, unless providentially hindered, is a dishonor both of the Lord's day and of the Lord's Supper. To dishonor a divine institution is to despise that institution. Christians are most solemnly warned against despising or lightly esteeming any particle of the divine appointment. (Heb. 10: 28-31.) The Lord's Supper upon the Lord's day is a divine appointment, so recognized throughout the Christian world. We are in immident danger when we can treat this appointment with cold indifference, as so many do.

Indifference toward the Lord's Supper is indifference toward the Lord's blood. "This is my blood," said he. Not the literal blood, of course, but the solemn memorial of that blood. So to despise the Lord's Supper is to despise the memory of the Lord's death and that shed blood by which our cleansing from sin was purchased. To thus neglect or forget our cleansing is a fearful crime against the blood of the covenant. And what else can the apostle have in mind when he says: "For he that lacketh these things is blind, seeing only what is near, having forgotten the cleansing from his old sins." (2 Pet. 1: 9.) The Supper is the divine reminder of the actual elements that procured our release from sin. If the thought of our release from sin and a devil's hell brings joy and thankfulness to our heart, then we will most naturally rejoice at the recurrence of each occasion for remembering the death of the One who released us. If we do not find joy unbounded in the thought that Christ rescued us from death eternal, we are most ungrateful wretches, and, of course, have missed the happiness and supreme delight of the pure Christian religion. Thus gratefulness makes us punctual at the Lord's Supper, and attending the Supper punctually makes us still more grateful. These, therefore, by divine design, work in the interest of each other to the daily rejoicing and strengthening of the Christian's heart. Do you get this benefit?

Christ's command still rings in the ear and heart of every loyal Christian: "Drink ye all of it"-that is, all the disciples of Christ must observe the Supper. That disciple, therefore, who does not observe the Supper on its appointed day is living in disobedience to a divine command. Sickness and death will unerringly follow such disobedience. "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man and drink his blood, ye have not life in yourselves. He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day." (John 6: 53, 54.) Of the loaf Jesus said, "This is my body:" and of the cup he said, "This is my blood." (Matt. 26: 26-28.) While the eating of his body and the drinking of his blood means simply living as he directs, nevertheless, the Lord's Supper is such an essential part of such a life as to be called the "body" and "blood" of the Lord; and Paul tells us that in unworthily eating the Supper we become "guilty of the body and the blood of the Lord." (1 Cor. 11: 27.) This shows how closely related are the elements of the body and blood to the memorial institution, or Lord's Supper. Let all take note of this.

In view of these awful truths, we can appreciate this warning given by Paul: "Let us hold fast the confession of our hope that it waver not; for he is faithful that promised: and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works; not forsaking our own assembling together, as the custom of some is, but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day drawing nigh." Then follow the words: "For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more a sacrifice for sins." (See Heb. 10: 23-32.) "Our own assembling together" can refer to nothing else than the one assembling commanded on the "first day of the week" and observed by the church. (Acts 20: 7; 1 Cor. 11: 17-34; 16: 1-5.) The church had no other general "assembling." This injunction of Paul's is, therefore, equivalent to a positive command to every disciple to see that he assembles every Lord's day to remember the Lord's death. Whoever tries to lessen the necessity of thus "assembling," by that act he attempts to lessen the necessity of the redeemed child's remembering the death of his Redeemer. Satan alone could attempt or desire such a thing.

The early church "continued steadfastly in the apostles' teaching and fellowship, in the breaking of bread and the (Acts 2: 42.) Not only did they do this by inspired instruction from the apostles, but they had a divine example to imitate—that of Jesus himself, who met with the disciples when they assembled on the day of his resurrection (John 20: 19) and on the next occasion of their assembling on the next Lord's day (John 20: 26). This intimates a consecutive and regular "first-day-of-the-week" "assembling" on the part of both the disciples and the risen Lord; and he blessed their meeting on both occasions. This was in the interval between his resurrection and ascension to heaven. It shows that the "assembling" of the disciples "upon the first day of the week" "to break bread" (for this is what that "assembling" was for, as positively stated in Acts 20: 7) dated from the very day of the Lord's resurrection. Thus the institution and the day were linked together at the resurrection.

There is strong significance in the Holy Spirit's use of "the Lord's day" in Rev. 1: 10, in describing the first day of the week. This proclaims the first day of the week as his. It is therefore sanctified to his especial service. That especial service which calls for a certain day out of the seven is the service of commemorating his death in the Lord's Supper. Therefore, to neglect this service on this day and proceed to appropriate the day to our own pleasure is most certainly to profane the Lord's day. If not, why not? The day is his, not ours. He gives us six days for pleasure and profit; but the first day, he tells us, is his —"the Lord's day." Shall we honor it as his? After we assemble to remember his death, there is no scriptural prohibition of our enjoying the remainder of the day in innocent enjoyment, but not before.

Nothing more certainly proclaims one's falling away from his "first love" toward Christ than his failure to assemble with the saints to remember the Lord's death. It is a certain index. All over the world the members to be depended on in zealously holding up the cause of truth and keeping the church active and pure are those most punctual and regular in commemorating the Lord's death on the Lord's day. Those who assemble only when they "feel like it" are those who fear the Lord only when they "feel like it."

Seriously ask yourself this question: "If every member of the church were like me, to whom could the Master look to keep his church alive and extend the arm of salvation to a lost world?"

Impracticable and Speculative Questions.

BY J. C. M'O.

A sister sends me a list of questions with the request that I answer them through the Gospel Advocate. She further states that the questions were presented to her by a Baptist, who takes the Gospel Advocate. The questions are as follows:

No. 1. Do you baptize a man who loves God or one who hates God?

No. 2. Do you baptize a child of God or a child of the devil?

No. 3. When does a child take the nature of its father, when begotten or when it is born?

No. 4. If a man has heard the gospel, believed, repented, confessed, and should die before being baptized, would he go to heaven or hell?

No. 5. Is a man begotten of God before he is baptized?

No. 6. If the begotten spirit of a man should go to hell, would that not be a child of God in hell?

No. 7. Is a saved person a child of God?

No. 8. If a child of God should apostatize, would be by doing so cease to be a child of God?

No. 9. Do you believe that there will be any of God's children in hell?

No. 10. Does the "stranger" spoken of in John 10: 4, 5 represent the devil or sin?

No. 11. Can any of the saved be lost if they never follow the voice of the "stranger?"

No. 12. Will any of the Lord's sheep follow the "stranger?"

I am glad that I do not know the person who propounded the above questions. My lack of information as to the identity of the person clearly demonstrates that what I write in reply to these questions is not personal.

The questions in reality serve but one end, and that is to show that the querist is not concerned so much about what God says on any subject as he is to uphold his partisan theory. In the first seven questions he is evidently attempting to make the impression that a man can be saved without obedience to the plain and positive commands of God. His questions further reveal the fact that he is more anxious to uphold his theory than he is to know just what God commands him to do and to do it. It is certain that the man who knows and does the will of God will be saved, although he may not be able to give an answer to a single theoretical and speculative question presented by our Baptist friend. If this Baptist had the proper respect for the commands of God, he would devote his energies to doing the will of God, and not to asking such speculative questions; it would be sufficient for him to know that Christ commands baptism and that it is man's duty to obey the commands of Christ.

Frequently men seek to cover up their lack of regard for God's authority by hiding behind such unlearned and untaught questions. But Paul admonishes Timothy: "But foolish and ignorant questionings refuse, knowing that they gender strifes." (2 Tim. 2: 23.) Again, the Holy Spirit admonishes: "If any man speaketh, speaking as it were the oracles of God." (1 Pet. 4: 11.) Again, the Holy Spirit exhorts: "Hold the pattern of sound words which thou hast heard from me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus." (2 Tim. 1: 13.) Here the injunction is not only to hold sound words, but to held the pattern of sound words. Due appreciation of the authority of these scriptures would have kept our Baptist friend from couching these questions in the language used by him. It would be well for this querist to remember: "But he that looketh into the perfect law, the law of liberty, and so continueth, being not a hearer that forgetteth but a doer that worketh, this man shall be blessed in his doing." (James 1: 25.) In the light of these scriptures, I now give attention to his questions.

No. 1. Baptism is a commandment. The believer who is being baptized is keeping the commandment of God. "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous." (1 John 5: 3.) Men who hate God cannot enjoy scriptural baptism.

No. 2. The Bible nowhere says anything about baptizing a child of God or a child of the devil. I baptize believers just as did Peter on the day of Pentecost. Christ says: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Peter, in obedience to the command of Christ, baptized believers. To them he said: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 38.)

No. 3. Evidently no one partakes of the nature of the Father until brought forth by him. The Holy Spirit declares: "Of his own will he brought us forth by the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his creatures." (James 1: 18.)

No. 4. The Bible teaches us that believers were baptized. We do not have a single example in the Bible of the failure of a believer to be baptized. To believers the privilege or power is granted to become sons of God. "But as many as received him, to them gave he the right to become children of God, even to them that believe on his name." (John 1: 12.) We might ask, what will become of the man who dies praying for faith?

No. 5. Believers who are begotten or brought forth of God obey the Son, as is evidenced in John 3: 36. "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life; but he that obeyeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him." None but believers can be scripturally baptized.

No. 6. The Bible nowhere teaches anything concerning the begotten spirit of a man going to hell. The spirit which is brought forth of the will of God and continues in doing his will has the promise of everlasting life. The man who is born again of water and of the Spirit enjoys the remission of his past sins. If this man remains faithful until death, he will enjoy salvation in heaven.

No. 7. Yes, the responsible saved person is a child of God.

No. 8. He would no longer be an approved child of God. He would be disowned and disinherited.

No. 9. No.

No. 10. I have no reason to believe that the "stranger" represents either. Travelers in the East testify that it is literally true that sheep will not follow a stranger. The stranger may probably represent one pretending to be a shepherd of the flock of God, who knows nothing of the salvation which he claims to preach.

No. 11. No.

No. 12. Men may be saved, apostatize, and finally be lost. This is true of Judas, who was at one time an apostle. Ps. 41: 9 reads: "Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, who did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me." Jesus quotes this in John 13: 18. He applies it to Judas. Judas was lost. (John 17: 12.) Hymenæus and Alexander were also of the same class, as is shown in 1 Tim. 1: 19, 20: "Holding faith and a good conscience; which some having thrust from them made shipwreck concerning the faith: of whom is Hymenæus and Alexander; whom I delivered unto Satan, that they might be taught not to blaspheme."

The World Against the Church. No. 4. BY E. A. E.

"THE ENEMIES OF THE CROSS OF CHRIST."

Who are "enemies of the cross of Christ?"

The archenemy of the cross of Christ is Satan. This all the church will readily admit. Paul, "filled with the Holy Spirit, fastened his eyes" on Elymas, the sorcerer, and said:

O full of all guile and all villainy, thou son of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord? (Acts 13: 9, 10.)

Of course, a man "full of "all guile," "all villainy," a "son of the devil," an "enemy of all righteousness," and who never ceases to "pervert the right way of the Lord," is an enemy of the cross of Christ in all things and at all times.

But who of the church will acknowledge that the course which they are pursuing makes them "the enemies of the cross of Christ?" There are such.

Brethren, be ye imitators together of me, and mark them that so walk even as ye have us for an example. For many walk, of whom I told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ: whose end is perdition, whose god is the belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things. For our citizenship is in heaven; whence also we wait for a

Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall fashion anew the body of our humiliation, that it may be conformed to the body of his glory, according to the working whereby he is able even to subject all things unto himself. (Phil. 3: 17-21.)

All who walk contrary to the teaching and example of Paul; all who make a god of their appetites and passions, pleasures, and lusts; all who "mind earthly things;" and all who are not faithful and loyal citizens of the kingdom of heaven—their commonwealth—walk as "enemies of the cross of Christ," God being the judge.

At one time Jesus said to Peter:

Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art a stumblingblock unto me: for thou mindest not the things of God, but the things of men. (Matt. 16: 23.)

To-day to be governed by the wisdom of the world, to have the Spirit of the world, to act upon the subtle suggestions of Satan, to mind "the things of men" and not "the things of God," will make any man, even as strong a man as Peter, an enemy to the cross of Christ and a stumbling-block to the church. And Peter never came from under this charge of Christ and was never freed from the sin of denying his Lord until he wept bitterly, repented, or "turned again." Satan sifted Peter as wheat, Christ made supplication for him that his faith fail not, and afterwards he not only strengthened the brethren and led thousands into the church, but in the sublimest heroism suffered imprisonment and death for Christ's sake.

As the incorruptible and eternal inheritance and the salvation of our souls and the souls of others are incomprehensibly greater than earthly wealth and life, we should be that much more afraid of walking as "enemies of the cross of Christ," of becoming judges instead of teachers and examples in all right living and godliness, and of being stumblingblocks to others, than we are of having to give up some theory or false position, or of suffering the loss, as did Peter and Paul, of earthly gain and prestige and even life itself.

Let us not, therefore, judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock in his brother's way, or an occasion of falling. (Rom. 14: 13.)

Try your own selves, whether ye are in the faith; prove your own selves. (2 Cor. 13: 5.)

Paul was neither imprudent and rash nor pessimistic. He saw everything clearly and in the light of inspiration. He wept over the fearful consequences of the conduct of brethren who were so living as to make themselves "enemies of the cross of Christ," sowing the seeds of discord and strife, and leading many to eternal ruin. Jesus wept over Jerusalem (Luke 19: 41) and at the grave of Lazarus, and he "was moved with indignation in the spirit" (John 11: 33, 38—margin) over the vain worship and hypocrisy of the Jews. Jesus was not discouraged and was not taking a gloomy and incorrect view of things when he described the condition of the world and asked if, when he should return, he would find faith on the earth. (Luke 17: 22 to 18: 8.)

That we now see the results of sins, the fearful consequences to the church of certain courses, and weep over them are not signs of any lack of faith or of pessimism. These show that we believe God. We know that all who refuse to accept and obey Christ will be lost forever, and that some of the church live as "enemies of the cross of Christ," and we are greatly grieved, as were Paul and Jesus.

Life is serious and earnest, with death and the judgment before all. It is filled with daily duties, grave responsibilities, heavy burdens, and bright and precious hope. But the hope comes only through discharging faithfully these duties, meeting bravely these obligations, and bearing cheerfully these burdens. The indescribable horrors of the failure to do these things in the fear of God cannot be laughed out of existence, staved off with a word, or brushed aside with the stroke of a pen. More must be done than to say simply, "O, do not become discouraged," or, "The church has always had its ups and downs." Just so; but who have lifted it up, when down? Who have saved it, when almost lost? Those who have wept and prayed, who have studied and believed the Bible and have worked, those who have made the heroic sacrifices and have suffered the persecutions.

There are thousands of young and tender lambs, exposed to the ravenous wolves of the world and crying for protection, that must be folded and fed; there are just so many babes in Christ, weak and helpless, longing for the spiritual milk, and begging and praying for instruction and guidance. This food and protection, instruction and guidance, must be given by all preachers and elders and churches with one unanimous voice and in "unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Is this work being done in the love of truth, the love of souls, and "anxiety for all the churches?" These grave duties and great responsibilities cannot be dodged or shirked by saying each babe in Christ must act upon its own responsibility and for itself. True, each babe is responsible to the extent of its ability, but it cannot be cast out into the wicked world upon its own responsibility to obtain food and protection and to live or die. We cannot free ourselves from the blood of men, young or old, until we have done all in our power to influence and help them on to salvation. Paul taught the church and others at Ephesus publicly and from house to house and "admonished every one night and day with tears." (Acts 20: 20, 31.) No one doubts that this work should be done now.

But, on the other hand, do not many seem bent on devouring the lambs, fleecing the flock, and destroying the fold! It does seem that, instead of considering "one another to provoke unto love and good works" (Heb. 10: 24), some are endeavoring to consume one another.

But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another. (Gal. 5: 15.)

How many congregations can one name, which were once united and happy, but are now torn asunder over some egotistical and contentious men, posing as martyrs to the cause of Christ, but who are simply ambitious to rule, proud, vain, self-exalted, jealous, and envious? Having been divided, some have built rival houses on the same street in sight of each other. Some preachers preach for one of these congregations and some for the other. All, I guess, preach on "Christian union" as "their doctrine," or a plank in their religious platform, if not on the command of God to every congregation to "give diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." All this appears to the world as a farce and burlesque, and it is. It is an open shame, a sin against the church, and a crime against Christ. It is a violation of every principle of forbearance, kindness, long-suffering, forgiveness, and love. and is a transgression of every command of God against strife, contention, division, hatred, bitterness, envy, and every vile deed. If such congregations and houses are not monumental "enemies to the cross of Christ," where can such be found?

But, wicked and grievous as it is, there are more to follow, I have just heard that a once zealous and united congregation is being torn apart by the same cruel means. Thirty or thirty-five zealous, useful, and generous members, realizing, for the sake of harmony, that it is necessary for the preacher, who seems to be literally "in charge," to "resign," have petitioned him, I understand, to do so. Instead of doing this, however, he seems to have started some kind of ruse to have the names of some of these members, at least, stricken from the church roll, or deprive them of a voice in such matters. Some of them are charter members, having worked all along to build up the congregation and having given liberally to the erection of the house of worship. One family gave as much, at least, as one thousand dollars. This family and others were there long before this preacher ever knew there was such a peaceful and happy congregation. It is the godly duty of all these members to remain where they are and to maintain their rights, to "sit steady in the boat," to deport themselves altogether as servants of the most high God, and in the spirit of Christ to oppose everything contrary to "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

Men who will divide congregations over themselves and their crotchets and ambition to rule ought to quit preaching until they learn what unity, peace, love, the gospel and obedience to it, and the spirit of Christ arc. If they do not know what these things are, they do not know enough to preach; if they know what these things are, but will not practice them, they are not good enough to preach. Men who do not endeavor to practice what they preach are not fit to preach.

Do not such preachers "walk" as "enemies of the cross of Christ?"

If I do not know what it is for some of the church to walk as "enemies of the cross of Christ," I shall thank him who knows to tell, because I am determined not to so "walk," if by the grace of God I can avoid it.

Two Commissions Given to the Apostles by the Savior. BY E. G. S.

The first of these commissions is found in the tenth chapter of Matthew; the second, in the sixteenth chapter of Mark. In the first record the commission says: "These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand." In this commission he also charged the twelve to heal the sick, raise the dead, and cast out devils. Thus they were inspired and empowered to work miracles in connection with their preaching, thus showing that the Lord was working with them and that what they preached was from the Lord. They were restricted from going among the Gentiles, but were to go rather to the Jewish people, here called "the lost sheep of the house of Israel," and were to require them to repent.

Thus the preparatory state of the kingdom of heaven was begun. When this preparatory work was begun and John the Baptist had been called to preach the good news of the near approach of the kingdom, Jesus himself came to him and was baptized by him. Thus Jesus himself gave a divine example expressing the importance of the ordinance of baptism. The remission of sins, therefore, is not the only important thing connected with baptism. Jesus did no sin, and John seemed to think he did not need to be baptized. But Jesus said: "Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." That was reason enough for him to be baptized and for John to baptize him.

One other item of importance is, baptism puts people into Christ when obeyed as the New Testament directs; and since there is no promise of pardon to a sinner till he enters into Christ, no man can reach the promise of pardon that fails to be baptized. It is strange, therefore, for any man to say that "baptism is a nonessential." Such a claim is a palpable contradiction of the word of God and virtually an accusation that Jesus himself submitted to a nonessential when he was baptized. It is wonderful how so many uninspired people are ready to say that baptism is a nonessentlal, when Jesus himself put it as something very important when he said to John: "For thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." It is the same as if he had said to John: "It is right for me to be baptized, and it is right for you to baptize me." When Jesus was baptized, a wonderful manifestation of approval was given from heaven in the voice that came from his Father: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." (Matt. 3: 47.) Yet, in spite of these facts, thousands of people to-day are ready to say that "baptism is a nonessential."

The final commission to the apostles was: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) They were to preach what people were to do, which was to be in force to the end of time. These same apostles are still preaching the gospel to the world through the New Testament; and all that believe and obey that gospel to the close of life will be eternally saved, while those that refuse it through life will be eternally lost. But a very serious question is: Why should not all that have access to the New Testament obey the gospel at the first opportunity and thus enjoy salvation in life and be ready to enjoy it throughout eternity? A great many people delude themselves out of the salvation of their souls by putting off their obedience to the gospel till a more convenient season; but the time never seems to come, and they die in their sins and are eternally lost, all from their own neglect.

The Savior is always ready to receive all that humbly repent and come to him, but he is never ready to receive those that will not repent. Sinners that will not repent are doomed to perish. While repentance is not the only step sinners are to take in turning to God, it is vitally important. "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." (Luke 13: 3, 5.) No sinner need think for a moment that he can be saved without repentance. The passage just quoted shows that there is no salvation for sinners that will not repent of their sins. Repentance includes a turning away from sin, without which there is no promise of pardon. Therefore all sinners should repent of all their sins, absolutely turn away from their sins. It is a blessing inexpressibly great that sinners that repent, that turn from sin and serve the Lord faithfully, may be saved.

An Appeal to Our Readers.

We are doing our very best to give you a paper that is worth the money. We believe that we do this. We know that we put in lots of hard, long, weary hours on the work. We never expect to get rich running the Gospel Advocate, but we do feel that we should at least make expenses. We are willing, and we do work hard enough for this. If we could get the earnest and hearty coöperation from all of our readers that we get from some, our wishes would be realized. We do not know how to go about doing this, except to keep on asking for it. We are going to get into a chronic habit of asking for it and see if we cannot get our readers into a chronic habit of doing what we want done.

Here is what we want: We want every reader of this paper to keep his or her subscription paid up at least one year in advance at the regular rate of two dollars per year. Then we want every reader to get at least one friend to subscribe for the paper every month. Of course not all of you can or will do this, but it does seem that several hundred of our subscribers could do it. And what a help it would be to us! You have no idea of the rejoicing that we would give vent to. As a mark of gratitude and appreciation, we will present a splendid New Testament with explanatory notes to each reader who sends us a new subscriber. Those who have seen the New Testament say that it alone is worth the price of the new subscription.

And think of the enlarged usefulness this would give the Gospel Advocate! We would be going into new homes constantly, making new friends all the time.

Think over our claims and our request. We think that you will find it a reasonable request. We do not ask you to give us anything but a few hours of your time.

Do your bit for the Gospel Advocate!

The War Sufferers' Fund.

The American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief sends us the following information about conditions in Jerusalem: "The need for food in Jerusalem is becoming imperative and the suffering is growing intense. When camels and donkeys employed in the transport columns become exhausted and seem likely to die, the hungry people, who are hanging along the borders of the caravan, rush in immediately when they see an animal fall. The neck is cut in a moment and within ten minutes not a bit of flesh is left on the bones. This is no fiction or imagination, but a fact witnessed again and again by one of the chaplains who has just come back from Jerusalem. He has seen numbers of women scratching at each other in their desperate efforts to grasp a bit of the flesh, and he has found famished women in the road between Bethlehem and Jerusalem. Bread in Jerusalem costs about ten times what it did before the war, and fuel is almost unprocurable. Forty-six hundred persons are being fed from one Brother Vincent's Japanese Coworkers.

Missionary

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

Brother Vincent has postponed his return to Japan indefinitely, but he still holds himself obligated to support the work and workers he has left till some suitable person can be found who will come and take his place. Brother Vincent has the superintendence of the Kamitomizaka and the Otsuka churches, both in Tokyo, and about a dozen believers in one of the country villages. I paid out for January for the two places seventy-three dollars and forty cents. This represents the regular monthly expenses. But the funds were short by a little over thirty dollars, which amount I advanced lest the workers be distressed to meet their monthly dues, Though I do not have the responsibility of seeing after the work, I believe it worthy, and because of the general interest I have in all our work and workers in Japan I am speaking a word simply as a friend. You may send offerings to C. G. Vincent, 137 East Third Street, Dayton. Ohio; D. C. Janes, Route 10, Buechel, Ky.; or to me, 68 Zoshigaya, Tokyo, Japan.

Marriage and Baptism.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

"There are two sisters that want to be baptized," said Brother Hiratsuka the other day while calling on me. "They are very desirous of doing so, but their parents object."

"Are the parents Buddhists?" I asked.

"No, they are indifferent toward religion," he replied.

"Why, then, do they object to their daughters' becoming Christians?"

"They are afraid that it will interfere with their genting married. The two sisters are now about nineteen and seventeen, the marriageable age, and the parents fear if they become Christians it may not be so easy to find proper husbands for them. They pleaded with their parents with tears in their eyes, but it was of no use. If they should die now, do you think they will be saved?"

"No, according to the Scriptures, they would not; for he that thinks more of father and mother than of Christ is not worthy of him."

When the sick man was brought to the door of the house in which Jesus was teaching and could not enter because of the crowd, they went up on top of the house and made a hole in the roof and let him down in the midst. They rose above the difficulties of the crowd and overcame all obstacles till they reached the feet of Jesus and obtained the blessing. The same is true now. All who would come to Christ must come with a faith and perseverance that will not give up. Christ has for us the greatest blessing it is possible to receive. In order to receive it, we should be willing to put forth all of our efforts and to suffer any trials that may come to us.

Does This Mean You?

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

We are making some changes here at Zoshigaya. Miss Andrews and Miss Cypert have decided to move into a Japanese house, and I have decided to move out of the Gakuin into my own home. Ten years ago I built a comfortable home adjoining our work here with a view of living in it, but during all this time I have been living a student's life along with the students. It is not an ideal sort of life by any means; and as I now look back on it, I wonder that I have lived this way as long as I have. The Lord has blessed me with a good home, and I see no reason why I should not get the benefits of it. I have waited long and patiently for some of my family or somebody to come and enjoy it with me, but now I have decided to wait no longer. Young Brother Sato, who is working his way in school, will be with me. We will have plenty of room—six rooms in the main building and two rooms and a lumber room in the Japanese quarters.

Our doors will be open to any American brother and his wife, or a brother without a wife, who will come and occupy a part of this home with us and take part with us in this work. There is plenty to do, so much that there is scarcely any limit to it. Not to speak of any amount of new work that might be opened up, we need at least two more men missionaries to keep going the work begun. Brother Vincent has decided, it seems, not to return to Japan. This leaves only one man on the field. We have also three women-all consecrated, good women; but we need more men, two married men preferred, one for Zoshigaya and one for the work Brother Vincent leaves. We need men not under twenty-five nor above thirty-five, who have had some experience, whose education is fair, and whose faith in the word of God is so well grounded that it cannot be shaken. Unbelief and a tendency to deny the supernatural in religion and the inspiration of the Bible is now rampant in Japan both among the missionaries and the Japanese "Christians," and the air is so full of it that one has to be on guard continually lest he breathe in the same contamination. I offer this as a preliminary caution to any who may think of coming. We have a tremendous fight on, and it behooves any or all who think of entering the conflict to be fully armed. But any one who will come mailed in God's armor need have no fear. Write me about it at 68 Zoshigaya, Tokyo; or to D. C. Janes, Route 10, Buechel, Ky. 0 0 0

Moving Pictures.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

To be self-centered is to be self-consumed.

On the first Sunday in January Mr. Y. Sato, a young man who has been with us for about a year, was baptized. He is a young man of excellent character. He works during the day and goes to school at night.

On January 20 I spoke at the Sendagaya church on "The Lord's Coming." At night I spoke at Zoshigaya on "The Origin of Evil." Evil originated with Adam just like it originates with us. Sin is the result of improper relations.

Mr. Kokusho, who recently went to America to study the dairying business, writes me from Louisville, Ky., saying: "I arrived yesterday (December 9) at Louisville and live in the Bible School dormitory. I went to church on Sunday. All Christians are very kind to me. I thank them. I will find soon a place with a good Christian dairyman," Brother Fujimori writes under date of January 21: "I have been sick in bed four days, and my children also were in bed and my wife in bed two weeks. She had a bad cold, and at last she bore a child day before yesterday. I thought I was going to lose another wife, but now she is better. Now my old mother is in a very bad condition." Another card states that his mother is dead and was buried on January 23.

Article 9.

In Families Where Several Youngsters Play Together They Should Have One Hour's Quiet Occupation Daily.

Punishments should never be inflicted in anger, but should rather be the natural consequence of the wrongdoing itself. Nature teaches her laws in this way: If you go too near a fire, you are burned; if too much indigestible food is eaten, sickness results; and if you drop a fragile glass, it will break. No one ever questions the justice of these inevitable consequences, nor will a child ever resent a punishment which he feels to be the result of his own heedlessness or wrongdoing. To quote Miss Harrison: "A child readily realizes that scattered toys must be gathered up, that soiled clothes must be changed, that tardiness necessarily brings a loss of opportunity, that money foolishly spent by him will not be resupplied by the parent, that teasing or tormenting the younger brother or sister causes a loss of the society of the mistreated one, that petulance on his part brings silence on the part of the mother, that recklessness causes loss of liberty."

In families where several children play together too much cannot be said in favor of a quiet hour, a time when each child shall be entirely alone, undisturbed by others. If the children are too old for a daily nap, they can be given some quiet occupation or play, such as looking at picture books, drawing with pencil or crayons, cutting out pictures with blunt-pointed scissors, making scrapbooks, modeling with clay or plasticine or stringing beads or buttons. With older children-and with babies, too-poise and self-control are gained "in the silence," and the wise mother will give herself and children this hour of rest.

It is a mistake to allow children to play with a dozen toys at one time. Children can easily be taught when very little to select and play with one thing at a time, and to put it away in its place before another is taken. Even in a crowded apartment it is possible to fit up a box or shelf where each child can have a place for his own treasure.

Toys which develop the imagination are better than intricate mechanical toys and elaborately dressed dolls. Next to a ball, the very best plaything is a set of blocks which is capable of being transformed into anything desired, from a train of cars to a pigeon house. Give a boy of five a hammer, some nails, and a few pieces of wood, and see what he can make. The results are often surprising. Children love to create, and the toy which they have made themselves will give a more lasting pleasure than the usual elaborate plaything bought ready-made.

The occupations of grown-ups have great attraction for children. A few simple regular duties should be given them every day. Work is one of the greatest means of spiritual development, and the wisest of all teachers for little children. Friedrich Froebel said that a child's offer to help should never be refused. To be sure, the mother may at first find it far more of a hindrance than help: but children of four or five can learn to dress and undress themselves, wipe the dishes, dust the chairs, help make beds, carry small pieces of kindling, empty scrapbaskets, water plants, and help in many other ways.

If the mother's spirit is right, children will always love to help. Children are little reflectors, and soon eatch the spirit of cheerful, willing work. If they see work done complainingly, what wonder if they also begin to feel badly used when asked to perform some simple helpful service, and to look upon work as a disagreeable hardship!

The Last Adventure.

Why should I fear death's call? Can there e'er be In life more beautiful adventure than To reëmbark upon that unknown sea-That mystery from which love summoned me-Upon whose hither shore my life began?

So gently was I brought that when life laid Me on time's bosom I was not aware; And when at length I knew that I was made Like her who bore me, then no more afraid Was I, lest love should fail of tender care.

And I have learned, He doeth all things well. Yet life, from its own incompleteness, holds A need, Instinctive, which it cannot tell-Of future greeting for each last farewell, Of happiness, united love enfolds.

All forms of life are endless; each frail vase Is emptied o'er and o'er—but filled again; And never tangled is the wondrous maze Of Nature's melodies through endless days-And yet forever new and sweet to men.

Gleams hint that life upon some future waits; The worm cannot forecast the butterfly-And yet the transformation but creates A step in the same Nature which now mates Our own-and may life's mystery untie.

Mayhap the butterfly this message brings: "The law, uncomprehended, I obey Although the lowliest of earth-bred things, Even I have been reborn with urgent wings, And heavenward fly-who crept but yesterday."

In life's fair mansion I am but a guest; And life will bring fulfillment of the gleam. I trust this last adventure is the best, The crowning of this earthly life's behest, The consummation of the poet's dream.

-James Terry White.

The object of our worship is the one God, he who by his commanding word, his arranging wisdom, his mighty power, brought forth from nothing this entire mass of our world, with all its array of elements, bodies, spirits, for the glory of his majesty; whence also the Greeks have bestowed on it the name of cosmos. The eye cannot see him, though he is (spiritually) visible. He is incomprehensible, though in grace he is manifested. He is beyond our utmost thought, though our human faculties conceive of him,-Tertullian. * * *

The State of Matrimony.

The State of Matrimony is bounded on the north by Bear, on the east by Forbear, on the south by Consideration, and on the west by Mutual Help. The capital city is Character, and its other important towns are Self-Control, Common Sense, Honesty, Suggestion, Sacrifice, Duty, Development. There are also two hamlets-Leve of Home and Love of Children. Just over the State line are the magnificent cities of Success and Happiness, to which there are not as many trains and trolleys as there might be. The industries of the State are kindness, courtesy, devotion as in courtship, praise, thoughtfulness, helpfulness, affection, love, unselfishness. In the villages of Love of Home and Love of Children large volumes of real educacation are found. The government of the State is a twofor-one equality. More heads are better than one head, and the State motto is: "What is best for the family?"-Selected.

Spirit of the Press

The Only Force That Transforms Life.

"Christianity . . , is the only force in the world that I have ever heard of that does actually transform life. And the proof of that transformation is to be found all over the Christian world. . . . Men begin suddenly to erect great spiritual standards over the little spiritual standards which they have heretofore professed."-President Wilson. 0 0 0

Culture Without Morality Is Bad.

An educated scoundrel is a dangerous citizen, but an educated Christian is a very useful citizen. S. Parkes Cadman says that "if Germany had not known so much in the way of system, scientific efficiency, and all the isms and kultur, the nation would not have been so morally blinded. When a nation has no conscience, it is the greater beast because of its culture. Unless education is steeped with spirituality, you cannot have morality. A highly moralized state cannot be maintained on a secular basis."

Ø Ø Ø A Vast Difference.

There is a vast difference between the man overtaken in a fault, and who fully and penitently confesses his fault, and the one who, when overtaken in a fault, makes vigorous denial and desperate effort to cover up his guilt. There is not only a vast difference in the spirit of the two men, but a vast difference in the attitude of their brethren toward them. The first deserves the sympathy and for-giveness of his brethren, while the latter deserves the condemnation and pity of his brethren.-Western Recorder.

The former repents; the latter is sorry that his sin is uncovered-which is the sorrow of the world. We cannot enjoy God until we hate and loathe sin.

Reality in Religion.

An editorial in the New York Times speaks as follows:

The unpardonable sin in religion is unreality. This is one of the large lessons of the world war. religion may have sufficed for conventional times, but the war has taught us that conventional religion is worse than useless in times like these. . . . The literature of the war bears abundant witness to the hunger of the man at The literature of the the front for real religion. He is face to face with naked He knows little of nice theological definitions; he is suspicious about dogma; he has no patience with ecclesiastical controversy; but he clings patiently and tenaciously to religious realities. . . He has rediscovered God as Alpha and Omega. And the God he has found is not an abstraction throned above the stars, but a living reality in the lives of hard-pressed men; a God who is closer than breathing and nearer than hands and Religion is intensely real to the fighting man.

When the editor of a great daily paper writes thus, religionists should take notice and devote their attention to the needs of the people. Theological hair-splitting and denominationalism will do a man no good when he comes to die. Brought face to face with death, men demand the religion of Christ. More and more men must come to respect God's word, must be guided by it and do what it says. In danger a man wants to know that Christ is with 0 0 0 him.

No News from the Boys in France.

We are receiving a number of letters from Christian women who have been called upon to give up their boys to help swell the army that "Uncle Sam" is mobilizing. The church has a great work to do. It should be aggressive in teaching the principles of truth, righteousness, and peace. Christians must bravely face conditions as they are and give the world an example of godliness that will lift it up nearer the cross of Christ. They should not for- | Company, Nashville, Tenn.

get how Christ suffered and how individual Christians gave up their lives without calling upon the world for help. Christians should gracefully submit to the inevitable. Righteousness is not dead; God still rules and is able to bring good out of this war to his people.

There are agencies at work to help remove the anxiety of parents and relatives. The Red Cross agencies have sought to quiet and reassure the people of this country who are anxious about their boys over in France, by assuring them that no news is always to be considered as good news. If casualties occur, friends will be informed so soon as the news is received. When bad news is received by the government, it is sent to the homes.

Christians never have any cause for pessimism and despair. With an unwavering faith they should hold on to God, not forgetting "that to them that love God all things work together for good."

A New Book that Deserves a Welcome.

Any new book that encourages the study of the Bible and presents its teachings in a helpful and convenient way should be accorded a warm reception. Therefore, we welcome the very-much-needed publication by John S. Durst of his new book just off the press, which bears the caption, "Fifty-two Bible Subjects Examined." The author of this book has devoted years of painstaking study to the Bible and has wide experience in teaching and in preaching the gospel. This book is the fruit of his life work. Among the various subjects discussed are: "The God of Nature, the Ged of the Bible;" "The Mystery Revealed;" "How to Study the Bible;" "The Understanding Heart;" "The Three Commissions;" "The Establishment of the Church;" "The Devil and His Work;" "The Church of Carist and the Christian Church;" "The Greater Works;" "The Keys of the Kingdom;" "The New Birth;" "Salvation by Faith;" "Repentance;" "The Good Confession;" "The One Baptism;" "The Power of the Gospel;" "The Gospel the Power of God Unto Salvation;" "The Church a Perfect Body" (three chapters); "The Identity of the Church;" "A New Organization, or Creation;" "The Head of the Body-the Church;" "God's Foolishness vs. Man's Wisdom;" "Water Salvation;" "Can a Christian Fall and be Lost?" "Seek, and You Shall Find;" "The Acts of Apostles" (six chapters); "Conversion to the Lord;" "God's Drawing Power;" "Parable of the Talents;" "Talk to Young Converts;" "The Law of Progressive Development;" "Preparedness" (three chapters); "The Unity of Christians;" "Ask for the Old Paths;" "Woman's Work in the Church;" "The Lord's Birthday, or Christmas;" "From Earth to Heaven;" "The Jews and the Land of Palestine;" "Deliverance from Bondage;" "The Holy Spirit" (three chapters); "Prayer as it Relates to the Alien Sinner."

The subjects are illustrated with diagrams and are treated in a way to stimulate thought and investigation. All classes may be assisted in arriving at the truth. I get a great number of letters here at the camp from friends. Many of these letters I may never be able to answer. I answer special ones, and when I have the time I do my utmost to comply with every request. I desire to render all the service I can. So write me, but do not expect an answer."

From M. S. Mason, Rogersville, Mo., May 1: "Since writing I have visited my regular appointments. I found much enthusiasm at Crisp, Dade County, and the house newly repaired and equipped at Masters, Cedar County. This is all encouraging. Pearl J. Packer, an excellent young preacher, is giving me valuable assistance. I go to Flint Hill, Dade County, next Lord's day. We have recently fenced our church property at Rogersville. Walnut Hill has lately re-roofed its building, and also sent twenty-five copies of one of our religious journals to the army boys for one year."

From D. S. Ligon, Denton, Texas, May 4; "The meeting near Waynoka, Okla., closed with a fine interest, but no additions. We have some fine brethren out at the Mc-Nally Schoolhouse. The rain and cold weather hindered much, but we hope and really feel that much good was done in the meeting. I am now at De Queen, Ark., and will be here for a few weeks preaching the word. Brethren, I have not just waited till money was made up to send me over here, but I am now here and will do my best for the cause we all should love. Will not at least a few brethren take the matter up with the church where you meet and get them to send me at least a small contribution for this work here? Now there is no church at all where I am going to preach, so I cannot expect any support here. Of course, if I cannot get some help, I cannot stay here as long as I should, but I will do my part. If any church or brother wants to assist me, send your help to me at De Queen, Ark., and I will make personal acknowledgment of the same."

Christian "War Work." BY E. C. FUOUA.

My silence in the months just past is not due to inactivity in the work, but to the fact that I have been unusually busy. The preparation for the summer's campaign of a number of terse and pointed "first principle" tracts and leaflets for distribution in connection with my tent and other meeting work has kept me going both day and night; and now I am engaged in a written debate through the Montrose Daily Press (a widely circulated and influential newspaper on the Western Slope of Colorado), which is pressing me in addition to my other work. Our proposition involves the second coming of Christ, my opponent affirming it to be a matter of the past, and hence all judgment is ended to earth's inhabitants. This judgment, says he, came at the destruction of Jerusalem, A.D. 70. The point I am after, incidentally, is to make known through this popular newspaper the teaching of the New Testament in its purity on many subjects of which the people are intensely ignorant. Much opposition to the church of Christ here has been caused by misleading and untruthful statements put out by the sectarian "ministry" in the hope of driving us from the field altogether. This daily-paper discussion is affording me an excellent opportunity to counteract this false representation.

The war excitement is having its peculiar effect. It is eausing more concern for the human soul and at the same time serving to magnify those worldly and "religious" sects which make politics and patriotism their chief "Christianity." In this, however, we are afforded an excellent opportunity for making plain the distinction between these institutions and the church as the body of Christ. I believe that Christianity will derive the greatest good from this war, after all, provided we press its claims according to our marching orders from the great Captain. In every conflict between democracy and autocracy, Christianity must be the victor when the final result is known. But the latter must be vigorously pressed by its friends, or the field prepared for the "seed" will grow a vicious crop instead. The present terrible war may be a means in God's providence for furthering the influence of Christ among the nations of earth at its close, while at the same time teaching us, through dire sacrifices, our dependence upon him as a nation, and that "the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will." (Dan. 4: 17.) If these be his purpose (and I firmly believe they are), then upon the church rests an added responsibility commensurate with the increased opportunity being providentially worked out. This is our view in Colorado, and we will work up to it with vigor.

I am working now in three distinct communities and gradually laying the foundations for two more congregations, If it be the Lord's will. I am consciously trying to fully do my part in this great work which is laid upon us all. Pray for the success of the effort here-and everywhere else.

CLINTON, S. C.

Christ in Prophecy. BY T. W. PHILLIPS.

Since prophecy came, in the olden time, not by the will of man, "but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost" (2 Pet. 1: 21), I desire in this article to give their testimony concerning the Christ. In Mic. 5: 2, this "holy man of God" says: "But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting." The prophet Micah made this statement about seven hundred and ten years before Christ was born in Bethlehem, as recorded by Matthew (2: 1-11) and Luke (2: 4-17). Another "holy man of God," the prophet Isaiah, says: "Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." (Isa. 7: 14.) This prophet made this declaration some seven hundred and fortytwo years before the startling event recorded in Matt. 1: 18-23, in which Matthew quotes from this same "holy man of God" and thus records the real fulfillment of the prophecy. Looking still into the future, the prophet said: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The prince of peace." (Isa. 9: 6.) And, behold, this wonderful and thrilling prophecy was fulfilled and portrayed in Luke 2: 1-14, concluding the beautiful story by saying: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Again, the prophet Hosea, another "holy man of God," says: "When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called my son out of Egypt." (Hos. 11: 1.) About seven hundred and forty years after this wonderful prophecy Matthew records the wonderful fulfillment, as we may read in Matt. 2: 12-15, saying in conclusion: "Out of Egypt, have I called my son."

Then some seven hundred and twelve years before Christ was born. the prophetic hand points to the forerunner of the Christ, and says: "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined." (Isa. 9: 2.) Another "holy man of God" testifies, saying: "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts."

(Mal. 3: 1.) Hence in Matt. 3: 3, 4 we read of the actual fulfillment of this wonderful prophecy: "For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. And the same John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins; and his meat was locusts and wild honey."

It will be observed that the prophet even told where Jesus' ministry would begin. (See Isa. 9: 1, 2.) And Matthew (4: 13-17) quotes the very language, declaring its fulfillment, saying: "And leaving Nazareth, he came and dwelt in Capernaum, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthalim: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, The land of Zabulon, and the land of Nephthalim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles; the people which sat in darkness saw great light. . . . From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." It is wonderful to observe that Daniel, a "holy man of God," tells, some five hundred and thirtyeight years before Christ was born, just when his ministry would begin, "Know therefore and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the Messiah the Prince," etc. (Dan. 9: 25.) This brings us to A.D. 27, when Jesus was baptized by John in Jordan, and shortly afterwards said: "The time is at hand."

Again, we observe that, about six hundred years before Christ was born, Jeremiah (31: 31) predicts that he will "make a new covenant with the house of Israel." This, too, we find actually fulfilled. (See Matt. 26: 26-29; Mark 14: 22-25; Luke 22: 19, 20; Heb. 8: 6-13.) Again, some seven hundred years before Christ was born it was predicted that he would restore sight to the blind (Isa. 29: 18); and in John 9: 6, 7 and Luke 18: 35-43 we see the actual fulfillment of it. The prophets foretold that he would heal the sick and make the lame to walk (Isa. 53: 4, 5); and we find that he did this very thing. (See Matt. 4: 23, 24; Luke 4: 38-40.) Some five hundred years before he was born, a "holy man of God" predicted that he would ride into Jerusalem on an ass' colt (Zech, 9: 9); and we find that he actually did as the prophet had foretold. (See Matt. 21; 2-11; John 12: 14, 15.) It was foretold that he would be sold for thirty pieces of silver (Zech. 11: 12, 13), and what would be done with the money. Accordingly, we see this literally fulfilled. (See Matt. 26: 15; 27: 1-7.) These "holy

Ouch ! ? ! ? ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called "freezone," when applied to a tender, aching corn, stops soreness at once, and soon the corn dries up and lifts right out without

He says freezone is an ether compound which dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding tissue or skin. A quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels.

men of God" even told of his death, and how he would be numbered with the transgressors, and how his grave would be with the rich. (See Isa. 53: 9.) They told of the nature of his wounds (Zech. 12: 10), just as we read its fulfillment in the New Testament. They even declared that therewould be no deceit nor guile in his mouth (Isa. 53: 9), just as we read in the New Testament (1 Pet. 2: 21, 22). These "holy men of God" foretold of the gall and vinegar and how they would mock him in the death tragedy (Ps. 22: 7, 8: 69: 21), just as we read in the New Testament. They also foretold his resurrection from the dead (Ps. 16: 10), just as the apostle Peter quotes in Acts 2: 27.

With all of this divine testimony before us, who can doubt the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead? Who can doubt that he is the Christ foretold in the holy Old Testament Scriptures? Who can doubt that he was all that he caimed to be, and received all that he claimed to have received of the Father? Truly we have proven his divinity by these many infallible witnesses and this unbroken chain of testimony. Then, having come, not "to destroy the law, or the prophets," but "to fulfill" them, and having fulfilled them in every jot and tittle, we can see clearly the beginning of the "new and living way," and should respect the great and last commission given by the Son of God immediately after his triumphant resurrection from the dead. (Matt. 28: 19, 20; Mark 16: 15, 16; Luke 24: 44-50.) He is beginning now as mediatorial King, and we should gladly look "unto him as the author and finisher of our faith," and in faithfulness serve him with joy and gladness till he comes again, or until we have finished our career among men. All glory and loyalty to him who is our King forever! "Unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end."

The Belle Haven Orphans' Home.

BY MRS. JENNIE CLARKE.

The news of the damage to property by the cyclone which destroyed about one-half of the Belle Haven Orphans' Home, of Luling, Texas, is now fairly before the brotherhood through the medium of our Christian papers, and aid is coming in, as well as many beautiful letters of encouragement.

It seems to be the desire of a majority who have written to make an effort to erect more substantial brick buildings as soon as possible. heartily indorse the effort; and if the brotherhood will furnish the means, I shall see that the plans are carried out. We should give God the best buildings, like character should be built on a firm foundation. "The Bible forcibly portrays the results, if we build on the sand."

A report of all contributions will be given in our quarterly report due on July 27, and by that time we hope to have a pleasing surprise for the brotherhood, and until that time let every one who can help make the coming report one long to be remembered.

Willingness to do God's will implies a willingness to suffer his will to be done in our lives. The calm acceptance of disagreeable but necessary facts in the strength of a confidence that this is God's will for us will be an armor against many of the ills of life. God will help us to be willing to accept his will for us if we will let him.—Selected.

EVER SALIVATED BY CALOMEL? HORRIBLE!

Calomel Is Quicksilver and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Calomel loses you a day! Do you know what calomel is? It is mercury—quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones, and should never be put into your system.

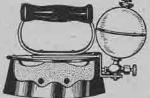

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated, and all knocked out, and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel, just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and cannot salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children, because it is perfectly harmless and does not gripe.

There is such great "demand" in the minds and hearts of the people for "something new" in religion that today we have "higher criticism" and the "New Thought" idea of religion which emanates from the heads of our great colleges, such as Harvard and Yale universities, and then on down to "Christian Science," Spiritualism, Russellism, and all other kinds of isms and schisms imaginable. Yes, all grades and shades of religious ideas are to-day held up before the minds of the people. Even among our own dear "loval" brethren many churches are "starving to death" spiritually in their mad rush for "something new." They say, "We must have something new in the preaching to catch the out siders," etc., when the truth is the Lord does not want us to "catch" any one who must be "caught" with anything newer than the old Jerusalem gospel which was first preached in its fullness by the inspired apostles of Jesus Christ, about two thousand years ago. But-alas!-this, and this alone, does not suit many of eur so-called "loyal brethren" to-day! Last fall the leading members of a church in the northern part of this county wanted me to preach for them this year, but I didn't encourage the move, as I thought they might want to change their notion; and, sure enough, they heard "something new," and then some wanted one and some another preacher. So I sent them word I didn't want the job at all.

I read a report in the Gospel Advocate this year in which the preacher told of the growth and improvements made by a church during his labors with them, but added: "It is deemed best to change preachers." I wonand am still wondering, dered. "why?" If a church is "doing well," why want to change preachers? And why should a preacher want to change?

Two churches in different parts of this county, each having a "home preacher," and there was talk that each church wanted the preacher away from home and neither wanted its "home man" (and suffice it to say neither of them "hired" the "home preacher"). Now, why all this, if it isn't that they want "something new" in the way of a frail creature called "man?"

Some places "want a meeting," but they will have no meeting at all before they will use a "home preacher." Last fall I preached at a mission point one Sunday afternoon, and the brother who lived there was very urgent that I hold a protracted meeting at the place. I told him I could not, but would send them a preacher, and named a home-county man; but "no," that would not suit. Then I named another brother, out of the county, whom they knew and who had written me that he wanted to do some "mission work;" and "no," he would not suit. Suffice it to say I've not bothered about that brother's meeting since. Yes, many brethren want some one they can't get, and won't have the ones they can get! Why be so "choice" about the preacher? It's the preaching more than the preacher that we should concern ourselves about most.

A preacher I know has regular appointments once a month for his home congregation. A brother who lives there told me recently that the crowds had dwindled to a small bunch and that another brother there said Brother - could do no good preaching there at home. I said: "No, indeed, so long as brethren talk that way about their home preacher." And the serious part of it is, the brethren are responsible and will have to answer for the sorry way they treat the "home preacher," as well as the "home preacher" will have to answer for the manner in which he treats his "home brethren." I believe the faithful gospel preacher should "reprove" them, "rebuke" them, and "exhort" them more than what is usually done.

But "a new broom sweeps clean," they say. And this reminds me of a preacher who came into this county from another State a few years ago, and he "took like wildfire" for a while, and some seemed to think him "the great power of God;" but they soon got tired of him, some bad reports followed, and not much, if any, permanent good resulted from his work here. So it is not good to always be on the hunt for a new preacher, a new fad, a new fancy, or a new anything else in religion.

Now, don't think I am "sore" and writing this because the brethren "call" me to "pastorate" for don't them. I am frankly writing things just as I see them. As for myself, I have more "calls" than I fill. As in the past, I intend to continue to take my tent and hold a few mission meetings, pay or no pay, and do what little good I can in that till the Lord calls me hence.

Long.

Little James Aubrey Long was born on October 30, 1916, and died on April 18, 1918. He was the only son of Wade and Geneva Long. His stay on earth was short, but he brightened their pathway, he was so sweet to them His little chair can never be filled. But little James is sleeping in the arms of Jesus. He was loved by every one, for he was a bright, sweet child. May the dear Lord bless his mother and father in their sorrow.

BERTHA LAFFOON.

Arnold.

The home of Brother and Sister Walter Arnold was made exceedingly sad on April 16 by the sudden and unexpected death of their only child, Christine, a sweet little girl, two years and seven months old, lacking three Christine was a most lovable child and was the source of much happiness to her young parents. She was sick only about two days, but she suffered intensely the last few hours of her life. She died of locked bowels after medical aid had exhausted every effort to bring relief. Funeral services were conducted in the home by the writer, assisted by Brethren J. Paul Slayden and Tate Ring. The remains were quietly laid to rest in beautiful Elmwood cemetery, in the presence of friends and loved ones. By request, "When the Trumpet Shall Sound" and "From the Cross to the Crown" were sung at the grave, the former being a great favorite with the child and one she often sang. Brother and Sister Arnold have our sincere sympathy in this sore bereavement. They seem to appreciate the full meaning of the words: "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." May we all so live that we shall meet this precious jewel in glory. J. A. CULLUM.

Killebrew.

W. H. Killebrew was born near Oak Grove, in Christian County, Ky., on May 13, 1838, and died on February 19, His parents, George W. Kille-1918. brew and Mary Ann Moore, were stanch Baptists, consequently he was reared in that faith; but upon reading the Greek Testament in early life was convinced, as he expressed it, that "the disciples have the Book on the Baptists." He halted, however, for several years between the two, finally at the age of thirtyseven deciding to become and be a Christian only. But little time passed before he was ordained an elder in the Oakland congregation by fasting, prayer, and laying on of hands, Brethren Charles M. Day and Miles taking part in the service. In this congregation he spent practically all his religious life, faithful and true to the cause he had espoused. During the last forty years of his life he was absent perhaps less than half a dozen times from the Lord's-day worship. Brother A. L. Johnson referred to him as the best elder he had ever met among all the congregations of his large acquaintance. He was married to Nora Johnson on November 23, 1864, while on parole during the Civil War. Nine children were reared to be grown, and all confessed their Savior during early life. His wife and six children survive him: Mrs. G. M. Rawlins, Clarksville, Tenn.; Mrs. J. S. Downer, Guthrie, Ky.; Sam Killebrew, New Mexico: Jim Killebrew, Muskogee, Okla.; Mrs. R. H. Peter, Denison, Texas; Mrs. E. Graham, Birmingham, Ala. Well could it be said when he was called to his reward: "Truly, 'a prince in Israel hath fallen." He fought the good fight and kept the faith. He was a devoted husband, a dutiful father, a true friend, and a faithful shepherd in the house of God. Praise His name for the fifty-three years of happy so-journ we had together here. Fare-well, loved one, but not for long, for I hope soon to meet you in that blissful home where death shall hold no sway.

McGlocklin.

Brother Sol. F. McGlocklin died, at his home, nine miles west of Athens, Ala., on April 5, 1918. The simple burial services were conducted in the presence of a throng of friends and neighbors by his old-time friend, Elder Lindsay Hedson. He was born on July 4, 1854, having reached, there-fore, almost his sixty-fourth milestone. He leaves a wife and two children to grieve for him, besides the stepchildren and grandchildren. of the children, Miss Effie McGlocklin, lives with her mother; the other, Mrs. Mary McLemore, lives near by the home of her mother. One sister, Mrs. Sherman Maples, survives him (she lives in Texas); and two brothers are left, E. H. McGlocklin and H. Ben Mc-Glocklin. Glocklin. Brother McGlocklin was married to Mrs. E. F. Baker on December 25, 1889. Soon after his marriage he became a member of the church of Christ, and in his quiet, humble way served his Master till the end. The greater portion of his young manhold was spent as a teacher in the public schools of North Ala-bama, a work in which he was suc-cessful, as later he was in farming. He aimed at all times to do justice to his neighbors and to do his share in the work of the church, which for several years he served as an elder. was always reserved and quiet, a good husband and a devoted father. The writer wishes it were in his power to pay a fitting tribute to this friend who has gone on his last journey; for, being himself a teacher, he felt the bond of kindred thought and visions and had opportunities to catch glimpses of the noble aims that glowed in the depths of this good man's soul, and the love for the cause of the Master made him a brother in truth as in EARL M. HODSON.

Out in the Fields With God.

The little cares that fretted me, I lost them yesterday, Among the fields, above the sea, Among the winds at play; Among the lowing of the herds, The rustling of the trees; Among the singing of the birds, The humming of the bees.

The foolish fears of what may happen, I cast them all away Among the clover-scented grass, Among the new-mown hay; Among the rustling of the corn, Where the drowsy poppies nod, Where ill thoughts die and good are born. Out in the fields with God.

Among the Colored Folks.

BY S. W. WOMACK.

Notwithstanding the dark and cloudy days of troubles and trials that we are now having and have been contending with for the last two months or more, our services are good and seemingly make a deeper impression on those who attend, and it seems now that the dark days are passing away. Beginning on Monday night after the first Lord's day in April, Brother B. J. Bynum, of Memphis, Tenn., spent one week with us, doing some able preaching against division in the church. His advice and that of the white brethren along these lines was about the plainest and the strongest I have ever heard, and I think it has done much good. A few of the members have returned to the old place of worship. The brethren, both white and colored, who have aided us along these paths of instruction have our highest appre-

Thanks to Brethren Joe Hasty, Debow, W. T. Selley, T. B. Larimore and wife, sisters of South College Street Church, Jackson Street Church, East Nashville, and all others for their kind remembrances of us in the good work. We hope to hear from others.

From now on until further notice all contributions for the Silver Point Christian College, in Putnam County, a good and worthy work, should be sent to Brother James Ealey, Route 1, Silver Point, Tenn.

It is conservatively estimated that this remarkable formula is now being used by over 3,000,000 people annually in America alone. Among those who have used and strongly endorse it are many physicians formerly connected with well-known hospitals, former United States Senators Wm. E. Mason and Charles A. Towne, former members of Congress; distinguished U. S. Army Generals (Retired), Judge Atkinson of the United states Court of Claims at Washington and former Health Commissioner Kerr, of Chicago.

Newspapers everywhere are invited to copy this statement for the benefit of their readers. It is suggested that physicians make a record of it and keep it in their offices so that they may intelligently answer questions of patients concerning it. Everybody is advised to cut it out and keep it. A copy of the actual sworn statement will be sent to anyone who desires such. It is as follows:

Elora, May 2 .- I was with the Lawrenceburg brethren and sisters on the fifth Sunday in March, and preached to splendid audiences twice—in the forenoon and at night. Almost in the very beginning of my preaching I did much work in the vicinity of Law-renceburg. There are many there who attended services and heard me were baptized into Christ thirty and forty years ago, at places near the city. They have now Brethren Thornberry, Coffman, King, Kelley, and pos-sibly others, who are "declaring the glad tidings of salvation" to the peo-ple of that town and surrounding country. These are loyal and faithful soldiers of whom those people are proud. I enjoyed the time spent with them very much indeed. They invited me to visit them again at any time I can. I think I shall try to arrange another trip over there before winter. Last Sunday I preached to a winter. Last Sunday I preached to a nice audience at Stony Point, in Lincoln County. I did much work for them in "the long ago." I have many friends there. I shall try, by special invitation, to visit them again this year. Brother A. H. Rozar and son, Vernon Rozar, live there, both splendid preachers and loyal to the cause of Christ. I will the Lord willing be of Christ. I will, the Lord willing, be at Greenwood, in Giles County, next Sunday, it being the first Sunday in May, and a regular yearly appoint-ment for me. That congregation was built up many years ago by Brother W. B. McQuiddy and myself. We do certainly have many fine friends there. W. B., why not make them a visit? You can preach yet, as much as the Dutchman rode the mule ("shust a little bit"), can you not? They would certainly enjoy it. Write them and go. On my trip to Green-wood, I will remain over, and will possibly preach some at night through the week at a new church, a little way from Greenwood, called "Pleas-ant Valley;" and at Pleasant Valley on the second Sunday, and possibly at Ethridge at night. I will be at Robertson Fork on the fourth Sunday of this month, and at Wilson Hill on the first Sunday in June. These old congregations were in my work many years ago for a number of years. I will be at State Line, in Lincoln County, on the second Sunday in June, at Cornersville on the fourth Sunday, and at Ostella on the fifth Sunday. I am due at Corder's Cross Roads, in Lincoln County, every third Sunday. I would be glad to arrange with others to fill out the remainder of 1918, and preach once or twice, if no more, for them .- J. R. Bradley.

Greenville, April 29,-Because of bad train connection from Cooper to home (Dallas) via this place, I am held up I have to get up at here to-day. A.M. Saturday and Monday to make this trip, and it takes the three full days, although it is only about seventy-five or eighty miles. But this is not taken into consideration by brethren when they go to remunerate the minister. The other fellow tells me he has to have pay for his time whether he delivers much or little goods. We had two nice services, but were rained out Saturday night. They expect to have four when I go again—Saturday before the fourth Sunday in May and June. My meetings begin in July, and all my time is engaged till September. Any in Kentucky or Ten-nessee who want me in September or October will please write me at 401 Montreal Avenue, Dallas, Texas .-J. Henrietta. April 29.-1 yesterday and Saturday night at Bowie to good crowds, and found a splendid bunch of Christians there. gin a protracted meeting for them on May 11 and hold over to near the fourth Sunday, when I will go to a point near Tulia for another mission meeting. It seems like I am getting to be a full-fledged missionary; but it is hard on the wife and babies. I begin at Byers, near home, the first of May, and there is where I will need your help. Come on with it, for we cannot afford to fail. I received a letter telling me that the brethren would support me in another mission meeting this year and I had better not start it. I know better; and if the writer will get out of the "mulli-grubs," he might get some help to do good work yet. I know I will get it, for I have abundantly proven that I deserve it and will use it the way the churches want their money used. I will have several meetings this season with old, large, and strong churches, but through May I will need your help. God bless those who have helped in the past.—Tice Elkins.

Fort Worth, April 27.—The work at Camp Bowie is doing fine. The boys are much interested and several have been restored to their "first love." Our service for worship is simply fine. The boys make some splendid talks and wait on the table and otherwise assist in the services. I shall continue to do all I can in this great work among the soldiers. We have the best tabernacle in the camp, and it is the best furnished, and I am trying to do the best work and circulate the best literature. I am in need of good books, tracts, etc., and would appreciate any good literature that might be sent us. I have a good helper in the person of Brother Baldwin, and he is training the boys in vocal music. We live, eat, and sleep in the camp, and render the best service we can. would be glad to have the names and proper addresses of any one in Camp Bowie, that we may visit them and help them in any way possible. far my support has been reasonably good, but the expenses are heavy and a sacrifice must be made to make the work what it should be. I am willing to give my all to this work, for it must be done, and done right. Pray for us, and may God bless all the faithful.-J. H. Lawson.

Corsicana, April 29.-I have many things that I would like to say, but I shall make a brief report of what is being done. Brother Pullias is at Sweeney in a good meeting. Brother Clark Cuthperson was at Barry yesterday, and reports a good day there. The writer was with the Corsicana church. In fact, April was his month with this congregation. The past two Lord's days there were ten additions, five each time. This is very encouraging to us, and indicates a steady growth for the church here. Brother G. M. Pullias has been with us since the first of the year, assisting us with the extra work that is being done in the county. I want to say that we were very fortunate in securing his assistance in this work. Nothing pleases me more than to say that he has made a fine impression, both as a preacher and as a godly man. Sufficient to say that no one has made any complaint so far. We alternate with the city church and other points in the county monthly. This alternation gives both of us an opportunity to reach people where possibly one or the other could not. We have planned to be together in several mission meetings in the county in July, August, and September. The gospel gust, and September. The gospel needs to be preached in this county. May it be the good pleasure of all of God's people to help those who are out of Christ to go to the Scriptures, where all saving truth and heaven's good news of great joy may be read; where peace may be spoken to the troubled soul.—E. E. Shoulders.

Purity Gives Power.

There are still many persons in the world that need to be impressed with the fact that the purer the blood is, the greater is the power of the system to remove disease and the less the liability to contract it. Persons whose blood is in good condition are much less likely to take cold or to be long troubled with it, or to eatch any contagious or infectious disease, than are those whose blood is impure and, therefore, impoverished and lacking in vitality. The best medicine for purifying the blood is Hood's Sarsaparilla, and persons suffering from any blood disease or any want of tone in the system are urged to give this medicine a trial. It is especially useful at this time of year.-Advt.

I came down here to work at the carpenter's trade and to be with my daughter and grandchildren. My sonin-law died three weeks ago. He had been sick quite a while. He left a widow and five children that depend upon me for a living, especially at the present; and now one of the children has smallpox and we are quarantined, so I cannot do anything. Besides, I have rheumatism and am not able to do much. I asked for help through the Gospel Advocate not long since, but was ignored entirely. I do not know why the brethren treat me so. It may be that I am not worthy. Any help will be greatly appreciated. So help an old brother and orphan children. I would be glad to go back to Savannah, Tenn.; and if I get able, I aim to go back there. There is no church of Christ at this place. There are several members here, but they are very loose members and "progressives." Address me at Tyronza, B. P. OBENEAL.

A Drive for Kindergartens.

Congress has recently recognized the educational needs of little children by making an appropriation to the United States Bureau of Education to enable it to promote kindergarten education in the several States and Territories.

This act is timely, for our people are being rudely awakened to the need of better training for citizenship than our boys and girls are now receiving. They realize the urgent necessity of properly equipping our children for the tremendous tasks they will be called upon to perform after the war is ended.

The Council for National Defense says with regard to this subject:

"There are nearly four million children in the United States who cannot receive the benefits of kindergarten training either because there are no kindergartens at all or not enough.

"Suggestion. Interest yourself in this need of the very little ones and write to the Bureau of Education, Washington, for their material and that of the National Kindergarten Association affiliated with the Bureau."

Training for citizenship cannot begin too early, according to the United States Commissioner of Education, who for months has been issuing, in cooperation with the National Kindergarten Association, the series of articles which this paper is printing, to provide better training for little ones in the home.

A drive is now on to have more kindergartens opened throughout the country, and parents are circulating petitions to present to their boards of education. Has such a petition been started for your school?

The General Federation of Women's Clubs, the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations, suffrage and labor organizations are all deeply interested in this subject, and great hopes are entertained that the drive will receive the hearty coöperation of local school authorities throughout the country.

Renew Your Health At Nature's Fountain

Without the Expense and Loss of Time Necessary for a Visit to the Spring

THE CRISIS

There comes a time in the life of practically every man and woman when their digestive or eliminative organs, or both, fail to respond to drugs prepared by human skill. In fact drugs seem to do them about a much harm as good for their systems tubel against all drugs. These are the cases which physicians call "stubborn" and "chronic" for the reason that they persist in spite of drug treatment. I do not refer to incurable diseases such as cancer and consumption, but to that larger class of functional disorders which we meet every day, where the organs of digestion and elimination are impaired.

For this class of cases our best physicians and our big city specialists send their wealthy patients to the mineral springs where, in the great majority of cases they are permanently restored or decidedly benefited. But what about the poor man who has not the money or the busy man or woman who cannot spare the time to spend several weeks or possibly months at a health resort? Shall circumstances deny them the restoration to health which Nature has provided? Read my answer in the coupon at the bottom of this page.

I have the utmost confidence in the Shivar Mineral Spring Water for to it I owe my Restoration to Health and probably my Life. It has made me tens of thousands of friends in all parts of America and even in foreign countries, whose faces I have never seen. Yet I count them my friends for the Shivar Spring Water has bound them to me by lasting gratitude.

I ask you to read their letters, a few samples of which I publish below for your benefit, and if you find among them any encouragement as to your own health do not hesitate to accept my offer which has no limits or conditions except those shown on the coupon. If you could read the letters that come to me daily, numbering about ten thousand a year, and the vast majority of them similar to those printed below, you would not wonder that I make this offer displaying my absolute confidence in the restorative powers of Shivar Mineral Water.

INDIGESTION

Savannah, Georgia.

I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well, and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy. Savannah, Georgia not disturb the most purely Nature's remedy, A. L. R. AVANT, M. D.

La Grange, Ga., Nov. 25, 1914.

I feel it my duty to suffering humanity to make public announcement of the benefits I have derived from Shivar Spring Water. I have been a sufferer for the Dast twenty-five years from indigestion and dyspepsia. After one week's trial of Shivar Water I commenced to improve, and after drinking it for four weeks I gained fifteen pounds. I feel better and stronger than I have in twenty-five years. I strongly recommend this Water to any one with stomach trouble of any character, and truly believe it will cure ulcer of the stomach. I am writing this voluntarily and trust it will fall in the hands of many who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with indigestion and nervous dyspepsia.

DYSPEPSIA

Baltimore, Md., April 30, 1914.

For many years I suffered with stomach trouble as a direct result of asthma. I consulted the very best specialist in this country, and spent quite a large sum of money in my endeavor to get relief. However, I had about come to the conclusion that my case was hopeless, but by accident I happened to get hold of one of your booklets, and decided to try Shivar Spring Water. After drinking the water for about three weeks I was entirely relieved, and since that time have suffered but I title inconvenience from my trouble. I cheerfully recommend the use of your Water to any one that may be suffering from stomach trouble.

Leeds, S. C.

I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent cure. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

BILIOUSNESS

Greenville, S. C., Feb. 26, 1914.

For over two years, following a nervous breakdown, I have suffered with a liver so torpid that ordinary remedies were absolutely powerless. Under such circumstances, I came to Shivar Spring, and began drinking the Water. Upon advice however, the first night I took a laxative; the second night a milder one. Since then I have taken none at all. The effect of the water has been remarkable—its action on my livermost marked, and my health and spirits greatly improved. I am satisfied that the laxative, followed by the Water, was the proper treatment in my case. My condition is now perfect, S. A. DERIEUX.

GALLSTONES

Shivar Spring Water cured my mother of gall-stones, or, I might say, it snatched her from the hospital door, as the doctors had said nothing short of an operation would do her any good, after drinking the Water she was able to get out of bed, and is today stout and healthy. I hope these few lines will be of help to some one suffering as my mother did.

What Is the Bible?

It would be very profitable to answer the question, "What is the Bible?" by studying the Word on this point. We will find that the Bible is God's revealed will to man, showing his origin, nature, and destiny. It is a mirror to show us what we are and what we may be. (James 1: 25.) It is the laver to wash away our sin and defilement. (Ex. 30: 17-21; Eph. 5: 26.) It is the lamp to guide us in the right way. (Ps. 119: 105.) It is milk, bread, strong meat, and honey, affording sustenance to the believer in all stages of spiritual development. (Heb. 12: 5-14; Ps. 19: 10.) It is fine gold to enrich us with heavenly treasure. (Ps. 19: 10.) It is the fire, hammer, and sword to be used in the warfare of life. (Jer. 23: 29; Heb. 4: 12; Eph. 6: 17.) It is the seed to plant the harvest fields for him and save souls. (Matt. 13.) The Bible is the chart by which we may steer in safety across the sea of life. It is the wand of Moses which swallows the serpents of temptation and makes the stream of life break out in the desert. It is the telescope of faith by which we look on the invisible things and bring the far things near.

The Lord's Prayer.

The Savior never intended to give his disciples a formal or set prayer to take precedence over all others, "After this manner therefore pray ye" was the direction given. He then proceeded to teach them the principles of profitable prayer. Because the disciples said, "Lord, teach us to pray," we must not infer that they were ignorant as to prayer or had not prayed before. They wished to improve this part of their worship. Having just heard Jesus pray, they were deeply impressed. All Christians should seek to improve their prayers. This does not mean that we should be seeking grammatical perfection (although that is desired), but we should seek, above all, to learn our Savior's spirit in praying and be guided more and more by the principles he taught. His prayer contained seven petitions. Three of them are for God's glory; three are for spiritual development; one is for a temporal need. From this we may learn a valuable lesson that should correct and improve some of our prayers. Does not the chief burden of our prayers relate to our selfish interests? Are we not liable to make the needs of the body more imperative than the needs of the soul? Let us profit by our Master's rule of true proportion.

How to Pray.

Since prayer is the heart of the Christian's life, we can never write or learn too much about it. All we need to learn is found in God's Book and is amplified by our own experiences. Beecher said, "Prayer is not beggary, but communion;" and Spurgeon said, "A prayerless soul is a Christless soul." Here are some rules that we glean from a study of the Bible on this subject:

Pray earnestly. "Prayer was made earnestly of the church unto God" for Peter in prison. (Acts 12: 5.) Paul writes: "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace." Neither arrogance nor presumption is implied by the word "boldly," but earnestness.

Pray happily. "Delight thyself also in Jehovah; and he will give thee the desires of thy heart." (Ps. 37; 4.)

Pray trustingly. "Trust also in him, and he will bring it to pass." (Ps. 37: 5.) The more we pray, the more we shall trust; for we shall have increasing experience of answered prayer.

Pray in secret. "Pray to thy Father who is in secret." (See Matt. 6: 5-8.) Private prayer is the foundation of Christian living and the source of all public prayer that is helpful. The "closet" is your regular place for private prayer.

Pray with others. "If two of you shall agree, . . . it shall be done." (Matt. 18: 19, 20.) The same Christ who commanded private prayer urged social prayer. Family prayer and the prayer meetings are the most fruitful assemblies known to earth.

Pray promptly. "Seek ye Jehovah while he may be found." (Isa. 55: 6.) In talking with God, we must pray as the need arises. Our great need does not admit of procrastination.

Pray in faith. "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that seek after him. If we would pray profitably, God must be as real to us as any earthly being.

Pray as the Spirit teaches. "The Spirit also helpeth our infirmity: for we know not how to pray as we ought." (Rom. 8: 26.)

Couple prayer with praise, "Call upon me in the day of trouble," says Asaph; "I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me."

God's Purpose in Sending John the Baptist into the World.

BY J. D. WALLING.

God has always had a purpose in all things that he has said or done. (Eph. 3: 11.) His eternal purpose was the happiness of mankind. He made man to be happy. He placed him where he might have unalloyed pleasure. But man's ideas of happiness then, like they are now, were not in harmony with God's. Hence his rejection of the will of God and the joys of Eden for the promises of the serpent; and—O!—the terrible reward is the wages of sin, death—the sorrow and woe of a world in disobedience and sin. But God said to the serpent: "He shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." (Gen. 3: 15.) This reveals to man the eternal truth that God's eternal purpose shall be accomplished.

In order to restore man again to the tree of life, God must now honor man's limitations, and they are great; for, while the serpent promised that he should "be as God. knowing good and evil," he was but as a babe. Like a tender father, therefore, God must nurse, teach, and train the world for four thousand years—first, under the age of the fathers; then under the schoolmaster, the law. During this age, and as an instructor, we hear "the voice of one crying in the wilderness." This, too, was according to God's purpose. We read in Isa. 40: 3, 4: "The voice of one that crieth, Prepare ye in the wilderness the way of Jehovah; make level in the desert a highway for our God." Surely we can see our God's unfolding purpose, a highway that a redeemed people may go over it.

But what was God's purpose in sending John the Baptist? Malachi, God's prophet, tells us: "Behold, I send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before meand the Lord, whom ye seek, will suddenly come to his temple; and the messenger of the covenant, whom ye desire, behold, he cometh, saith Jehovah of hosts." (Mal. 3: 1.) John, therefore, was to be God's messenger, and he was to prepare the way of the Lord. Again: "Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the great and terrible day of Jehovah come." (Mal. 4: 5.) Then, he was to be a prophet. But he was sent as a witness. "There came a man, sent from God, whose name was John. The same came for witness, that he might bear witness of the light, that all might believe through him." (John 1: 6, 7.) But John was a Jewish prophet. His father, Zacharias, was a Jewish priest (Luke 1: 8), and John, according to the law, was circumcised when eight days old. John the Baptist, as messenger, prophet, and witness, was sent to apostate Israel alone, who had departed from their schoolmaster, the law. (Matt. 3: 7-10.) John, therefore, lived and died under the first covenant. Therefore his ministry and baptism were not Christian. His ministry could not have been a Christian ministry, for the reason that he was sent as a messenger before, and to announce. the coming of Jesus. He was sent of God, and before all authority was given to Christ. (Matt. 28: 18.) He was sent and preached only to the Jews, while the Christian ministry was, and is, to all the world. (Mark 16: 15, 16.) John's ministry, therefore, being limited to the Jews only. could not be Christian. His baptism could not be Christian baptism, for the good reason that it was not from the Christ, while it was from heaven and of God. (Mark 11; 30.) It was not by Christ's authority. It had no blood of Jesus with it, and could not, therefore, be Christian. It had no Holy Spirit in it; was not in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, but only in the name of the Father. John's ministry and his baptism were without the Spirit. His disciples did not know, were not so much as taught, whether there be any Holy Spirit. Paul came "to Ephesus, and found certain disciples: and he said unto them, Did ye receive the Holy Spirit when ye believed? And they said unto him, Nay, we did not so much as hear whether the Holy Spirit was given. And he said, Into what then were ye baptized? And they said, Into John's baptism." (See Acts 19: 1-5.) Of course, if John's ministry and baptism had been Christian, they would have been taught in regard to the Spirit.

John's office was that of preacher. "John came, who baptized in the wilderness and preached the baptism of repentance unto remission of sins." (Mark 1: 4) He was a reformer. "For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and he shall drink no wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Spirit, even from his mother's womb. And many of the children of Israel shall he turn unto the Lord their God. And he shall go before his face in the spirit and power of Elijah, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to walk in the wisdom of the just; to make ready for the Lord a people prepared for him." (Luke 1: 15-17.) trust we can here see John's mission-a preacher, a reformer in Israel, to prepare Israel for the coming of the Christ. He was a prophet. "But wherefore went ye out? to see a prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet. This is he, of whom it is written, Behold. I send my messenger before thy face, who shall prepare thy way before thee. Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist; yet he that is but little in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." (Matt. 11: 9-11.) John preached the coming of the kingdom, that it was near, was at hand. He predicted the increase of Jesus: "John answered and said, A man can receive nothing, except it have been given him from heaven. Ye yourselves bear me witness, that I said, I am not the Christ, but, that I am sent before him. He that hath the bride is the bridegroom: but the friend of the bridegroom, that standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice: this my joy therefore is made full. He must increase, but I must decrease." (John 3: 27-30.) It will be seen from the foregoing that John was not the bridegroom and that he did not have the bride. The bride is the church, the kingdom. John was not even in the kingdom. He could not have been in it, for the least in the kingdom was greater than he, and yet Jesus said: "Among them that are born of woman there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist," So it was impossible for John to have been in the kingdom. Surely he would not have established the kingdom and failed to enter himself. In fact, John was never out of the commonwealth of Israel and never called a single convert out of it. All of John's converts remained zealous of the law till the first Pentecost after Christ's resurrection. He told his own disciples that he must decrease, but Jesus must increase. He said to them: "Repent ye; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." He predicted the baptism of the Holy Spirit. (Matt. 3: 11.) He introduced Jesus to Israel, saying: "Behold, the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world." This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man who is become before me: for he was before me." . . And I have seen, and have borne witness that this is the Son of God." (John 1: 29-34.) So John's work was finished, and he died under the law and for his convictions. (Matt. 14: 3-10.)

There were many reasons why John did not either establish the kingdom or enter it. In the first place, it was an impossibility for the kingdom of Christ to have an existence at that time, except in prophecy and in prospect, for the very good reason that there was neither King nor subjects, except in preparation. The subjects could not be fully prepared under the law; "for," says Paul, "the law made nothing perfect." (Heb. 7: 19; Gal. 2: 16.) "For it is impossible that the blood of bulls and goats should take away sins." (Heb. 10: 4.) "According to the law, I may almost say, all things are cleansed with blood, and apart from shedding of blood there is no remission." (Heb. 9: 22.) It is conclusive, therefore, that no one could enter the kingdom under the law; that no unclean person could enter the kingdom; that the bloody sacrifice under the law would not make clean. We must, therefore, look for other blood than that of bulls and goats. "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the hely place by the blood of Jesus, by the way which he dedicated for us, a new and living way, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh." (Heb. 10: 19, 20.) This should be the end of all controversy. None could be made clean, have their sins remitted, till the veil of Christ's flesh was rent and his blood "shed for the remission of sins." This was not done for at least one year after John's death. Had it been possible for man to be made clean without the blood of Christ, he would never have come to this world; but it was not. Just look here: "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them and greeted them from afar." What does this mean? "Not having received the promises." What promises? Abraham was in this number, and he had received three promises; but he had not been made clean enough for the kingdom of heaven. But he saw it "from afar." How far? The cross of Calvary. Please turn and read Heb. 11 and hear the conclusion: "These all, having had witness borne to them through their faith, received not the promise, God having provided some better thing concerning us, that apart from us they should not be made perfect." We are made perfect by the blood of Jesus. They were made perfect by the blood of Jesus. (Read Heb. 2: 14, 15.) Then it is mere twaddle to talk about the kingdom before the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Jesus. Should there have been such a thing, it would have been a kingdom without either a King or subjects. It would have been a body without head, blood, or Spirit; for the Holy Spirit as Comforter and Advocate was not yet given. (John 16: 7-15.) But now Jesus has died, shed his blood, arisen from the grave, been made King, and the Holy Spirit has come, is here now in the body convicting the world of sin. Sinner friend, through faith obey Jesus as King and enter into his body, where all spiritual blessings are.

Success.

BY F. W. SMITH.

(An address delivered before a teachers' meeting.)

There are two conceptions of success-one is false and the other is true. These are due to different views of life, its purposes and ultimate end. Therefore, what appears success in the estimation of one individual may be regarded by another as a most dismal failure. Hence, in order that humanity may have proper conceptions of this vital subject, a correct rule by which to measure what we term "success" is demanded. What, then, shall be that rule? Who, of all beings in this universe, is most competent to devise such a rule? Common sense and sound judgment decide, He who is possessed of infinite wisdom, Has such a rule been given? More than nineteen centuries ago Christ said: "And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." This is the divine rule, and he who conforms his life to its mandates will achieve, in the end, a most glorious success. But human vision is now weefully perverted, and many have yet to learn that "all is not gold that glitters." One has said:

"The world will be blind indeed if it does not reckon among its great ones such martyrs as miss the palm but not the pains of martyrdom, heroes without laurels, and conquerors without the jubilation of triumph." Has not many a man been a blessing to the world who has made no noise in it and who has died a beggar? Was not the brow of afflicted Lazarus adorned with the laurels of success, although he drank from the cup of abject poverty? Have not thousands died rich in worldly goods who were intellectually and morally bankrupt? Shall the accumulation of gold be the standard of true success? What peace of mind and satisfaction of soul can such molding of human energy bring in the presence of "the glittering heap," attended with the dark shadows of incessant fear and nervous auxiety? Would pyramids of gold compensate for the remorse of conscience arising from neglected opportunities to brighten the lives and alleviate the wants of suffering humanity? Shall worldly ambition, that subtle and fascinating influence which lures men and women to the dizzy heights of human glory, be the goal to which we aspire? Of such a road it has been said: "The higher it ascends, the more difficult it becomes, till at last it terminates in some elevation too narrow for friendship, too steep for safety, too sharp for repose, and where the occupant, above the sympathy of man and below the friendship of angels, resembles in the solitude, if not in the depths of his suffering, a Prometheus chained to the Caucasian rock." The ambition to receive the plaudits of fellow intelligences sent angels hurling from the battlements of heaven into the pit of eternal darkness. The experience of humanity shows that the greatest and most continued favors of fortune cannot, within themselves, make a man happy, nor the deprivation of them render miserable the possessor of a clear conscience and a well-regulated mind. But, in spite of all the preachments of moral philosophers, men will continue to crave, struggle, and toll for the world's prizes.

Do we ask, then, what shall be our aim in life? Every man and every woman has a mission to perform in this world, for which their talents fit them, and happy are they who find their places in the drama of life and play their part well by throwing into it all the energies of the soul. We should remember that we are not commissioned to solve the deep mysteries of the universe, but those within the sphere of our natural field of operation. Furthermore, the battles of life cannot be fought by proxy; each one must bear his or her own shield and spear. One star cannot shine for another. But in every battle and in every endeavor, let us not forget the Golden Rule. All can be crowned with true success, but we must pay the price. the observance of the divine rule, we have to "tread the wine press," at times without the help of human sympathy; but such experiences should tend to make us stronger and more determined. Mere hardships, of course, will not make men strong; but, like the soldier fighting for a great principle, they stimulate the determination to win. Imprison a gill of water in a solid rock, deprive it of heat, and it will burst its flinty bonds as did Samson the cords of the Philistines. Just so, a man or woman may be the victim of most unfavorable circumstances, but these can be converted into stepping-stones to success. Great men and women can no more be made without trials than brick can be made without heat. Then let us exclaim with Burns:

Come, firm Resolve, take thou the van, Thou stalk of earli-hemp in man.

We should consider curselves fortunate in that adversity is often like some ferocious animals: look them boldly in the face and they slink away. It would be difficult to exaggerate the grand achievements that may be wrought in a brief lifetime by the aid of an iron will.

Another has said: "Man is, to a considerable extent, the child of opportunity." This means that the avenues leading to success are opened by the hand of Fortune, but the statement should be taken with at least a "grain of salt." We rather incline to the old saying: "Where there is a will, there is a way." The opportunity for true greatness—viz., the building of a good character—is laid at every man's door to whom the Golden Rule has come. Circumstances do not make the man or the woman, but simply afford the opportunity for an exhibition of intrinsic value. Hence, true manhood or womanhood will assert itself in spite of circumstances. It is incredible that any combination of circumstances could have repressed Napoleon so long as he was free to act. His famous saying, "There shall be no Alps," embodies a will power that dominates seemingly insurmountable obstacles.

There is no course in life which demands the exercise of such a will like the discharging of the duties growing out of the Golden Rule. These duties may often lead us to do what for the present may seem detrimental to our own interests, but the resultant self-respect and peaceful conscience always more than compensate for any pecuniary loss we may thus sustain.

Therefore, my teacher friends, let me bid you to look well to those sacred obligations you have assumed toward the children committed to your care and training. Remember that in a very large measure the impress of your personality will be enstamped upon the hearts and lives of your pupils. Your temper, character, and mode of speech and conduct will be assimilated by them. Your work in the schoolroom has much to do with not only the unfolding of the pupils' intellectual powers, but with the formation of a character that shell reap a destiny. You are, to a great extent, silent toilers, often without the reward of helpful encouragement; but remember that our Lord, for the joy of redeeming the race of man, endured the suffering and shame of the cross. You may not receive at the hands of your fellow beings that reward of appreciation for the noble part you are performing in building the greatest structure of Christian civilization known to the world, but the pens of future historians will pay that tribute of praise to your labors of love which they so richly deserve. Paraphrasing a little, let me say in the language of a poet:

Laurels may flourish around the conqueror's tomb, But happiest they who win the world to come. Teachers have a silent field to fight, And their struggles are veiled from human sight. In some nook where alone they dwell, They wrestle with troubles too numerous to tell, Glorious triumplis their toils shall crown, Crowns of love and true renown.

The principles embodied in the Golden Rule firmly fixed in the heart will destroy every vestige of selfishness, leading men and women to the highest efficiency known to earth. Those who seek to work out the great problems of life by any other rule will have written at the end the sad result, "Failure"—a life spent in vain.

More News About the Georgia Work. BY S. H. HALL.

In the last two issues of the Gospel Advocate I have had something to say about our sore need of more laborers in Georgia. Out about fifty miles from Atlanta we have some twelve or fifteen members who took their stand for apostolic Christianity last summer in a short meeting Brother Joe White and I conducted. The brother who was to water this new congregation moved to South Georgia; hence it has not had the help it should have had. Just recently I made them a promise to be with them on Saturday night, as it seemed the best I could do; but a matter over which I had no control prevented my going. The following letter expresses strongly their needs and their sore disappointment:

Brother Hall: I write you to let you know that we were sadly disappointed last night at your not coming. We had a nice little congregation out to hear you. The time was spent mostly in singing. We surely do need a preacher. You know the children [her children, who are members] get disheartened, and you know we are few in number. and, so far as money is concerned, we are poor. Our enemies have said you would preach a few sermons for us, then leave us alone. As for my faith in God, I feel that I am on the Rock, on a firm foundation. Our children are young and our enemies are trying to destroy their faith. My prayer is: "Lord, help us to stand firm in the faith that was once for all delivered unto the saints." Pray for us, Now let me beg you, not for the whole world to forsake us. Pardon me if I have written one thing amiss. . . . May the Lord ever bless you in your work for the Master and a home in heaven in the "sweet by and by."

In another letter from a brother in the same congregation, he closes by saying:

Try it again. I would be glad if you could come Saturday and stay over Sunday, and let me know a week beforehand. I think we would have some more additions if we could get a little help. How about your giving us a week or two this summer? I think you could accomplish a great deal more in this section in another two-weeks' meeting. We need some good, hard, strong work in this section. We have the strongest opposition I ever saw any people have. I read of some back in ancient times who were persecuted more than we are.

I give the above as another sample of the needs of Georgia, that those who are helping us may know that their help is going where it is needed. Brethren Jones and Cuff, of the David Lipscomb College, will be here in a few days. This will help so much. But more and more laborers we need. May others take an interest in this field and help.

We had a fine day at West End Avenue yesterday (May 5) at both the morning and evening services. Two confessed their faith in Christ and were baptized and one united by statement.

Camp Gordon.

Undoubtedly, we have some of the finest boys at the camp I have ever seen. We had another fine service yesterday, in spite of the fact that I had two punctures and a blow-out trying to get there, the first tire trouble we have had in going to and from the camp. The following lines from Brother J. Clyde Shacklett, of Camp Gordon Headquarters Detachment, will be of interest to his friends and those who are interested in the camp work:

Brother Hall: It was only a pleasure for us to attend to the baptizing of the young man (Brother Rufus Dunn) who made confession last Lord's day and which we attended to last evening. We did not have a very convenient place, but were able to use the tank at the stable which is used for watering stock. That, of course, is good enough for the man who really has faith and wants to obey the gospel. I doubt if this man has ever heard very much real gospel preaching, but he is sufficiently taught to know that he should be baptized for the remission of his sins, and we tried to encourage him to read for himself, believe what he reads just because it is God's word, and not to be bothered with things which he cannot find therein. believe that if he will do that he will learn the right course in all cases and will be unquestionably safe. I hope he can be in this camp for some time and be associated with us, but that is doubtful. He asked me if he could get a letter from the church, so that, in case he is transferred, he will have something to show that he is identified with the church. I wish you would look after that, as the men transferred so quickly and without notice, and he desires to have a letter before he leaves.

I hope to see you often and to talk with you fully concerning the work here. We appreciate the assistance being given us by you, Brother Carter, and the church in the city.

The young man to whom Brother Shacklett refers was at services yesterday with a bright, happy face. He had never heard a sermon in which all the conditions of salvation were preached till the Sunday before he was baptized. When he came forward, he said: "Brother Hall, I can see that I ought to be baptized, and I want baptism." He had been taught to be moral, but how to get into Christ had never been shown to him. The most of the baptizing will be at the camp from now on; certainly so, so long as such men as Shacklett are there. They have a fine place—a large trough deep enough for two men to stand in, with water always running in and out—a splendid baptistery. Certainly if a horse trough was a suitable place for our Lord to be cradled when born into this world, it is also a suitable place for souls to be buried with him in baptism and raised to walk in newness of life.

Relief Work.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Doubtless the querist who asked the following question has not been reading the Gospel Advocate regularly and carefully; for, if he had been doing this, he would have read much in its columns urging Christians to contribute to relieve the starving and homeless millions who have been brought to this terrible condition by the ravages of war. We have kept standing just below the title, "The War Sufferers' Fund," the following scripture: "Whose stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry, but shall not be heard." But here is the question of Charles T. Clay, who Is in the Conscientious Objectors' Detachment, Company 57, 15th D.B., 165th D.B., Camp Travis, Texas: "What is your idea about doing relief work for the war sufferers in Europe?" Let it be distinctly understood that charity for Christ's sweet sake should be done in his name. "And whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him." (Col. 3: 17.) In all good works we should say in the language of the Holy Spirit: "Unto him be the glory in the church and in Christ Jesus unto all generations forever and ever. Amen." (Eph. 3: 21.) But we should also remember the fact that It is dangerous to bind a method of work upon the church of God when and where the Holy Spirit has bound none. This is as much a transgression of the law of God as it is to add to the word of God.

When we think of the millions of the young and the aged who are now without food and shelter, it is enough to wring the heart and to open the purse strings of humanity. When we learn that over a million people have perished during the past two years from exposure, starvation, disease, and cruel massacre, it indeed looks heartless to think that any one could hesitate for a moment about the goodness or the scripturalness of relieving these starving millions. Peoples that were once happy, contented, and self-supporting are new suffering starvation, privation, and tragedies that are too deep for tears. Concerning these awful horrors a writer testifies: "The mind grows numb and the heart sick from the continual recital of tales of such horror that it is difficult to believe the twentieth century could hold. The poor, wizened, monkeylike babies that have been held up before my eyes are the worst spectacles of all." When we are told that people are dying by the thousands from starvation and that starving little girls, apparently alone in the world, are crying over and over, "I'm hungry! I'm hungry!" it is wonderful, indeed, that a conscientious objector would seriously write us: "What is your idea about doing relief work for the war sufferers in Europe?" Instead of asking such questions, we should devote our energies, our means, and the time which God has given us to the relief of the suffering millions. "Hereby know ye love, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. But whose hath the world's goods, and beholdeth his brother in need, and shutteth up his compassion from him, how doth the love of God abide in him?" (1 John 3: 16, 17.)

In the midst of such heart-rending cries, with the world deluged in blood and tears, he who turns a deaf ear to the repeated cries for help that come from the agonizing millions and passes by "on the other side" is a Pharisee indeed. Such pharisaism will bar the gates of heaven against any man. The good Samaritan did not stop to inquire the cause of the helpless condition of the man who fell among robbers. It is enough for Christians to know that there are suffering wounds that should be dressed. It was just such heartless and sinful neglect that dug the impassable gulf between the rich man and Lazarus and forever shut the rich man out of heaven. The Christian's opportunity for doing good is multiplied many thousandfold by this cruel and unjustifiable war. He has the sick, the hungry, and the cold with him as never before. He cannot plead a lack of opportunity for serving God and for relieving the suffering. It will not avail him to criticize those who are working in the Master's cause while he sits idly by, knowing that thousands are starving to death and yet opening not his purse strings to relieve them. To all such Christ will say in the great day of judgment: "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels." On the other hand, to those who open their hearts and pursestrings to the starving millions will come that inexpressibly beautiful and sublime answer: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me." While Christians should all show respect for the authority of Christ and, above all things, should not set aside his authority, yet they should practice in harmony with the law of God. It is well to remember the language of the Holy Spirit when he says: "Doing nothing through faction or through vainglory, but in lowliness of mind each counting other better than himself; not looking each of you to his own things, but each of you also to the things of others." (Phil. 2: 3, 4.) Christians now have the opportunity to demonstrate to the world that the church is the light of the world, the sait of the earth. They can feed their hungry enemies, they can give them to drink, and in so doing heap coals of fire upon their heads. May God speed the day when Christians will not be overcome of evil, but will overcome evil with good. Christians who are doing nothing to relieve the terrible and awful sufferings of the millions who are passing through indescribable agonies are the greatest enemies to the cause of Christ.

Sermon Delivered at the Funeral Services in Memory of Mrs. Eudora Lindsay South, April 10, 1918.

BY M. C. K.

[On April 8, 1918, I was shocked and grieved by a message announcing the death of Mrs. South, wife of Elder J. K. P. South, at Frankfort, Ky. Mrs. South was my lifelong friend and a former parishioner of mine, and I was called to conduct the funeral services in her memory. After a prayer by Brother S. H. Jones, the following sermon was delivered.]

"When thou passest through the waters, I will be with when thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee; when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned, neither shall the flame kindle upon thee," (Isa. 43: 2.) "Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will whele thee with the year. I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." (Isa. 41: 10.) "The eternal God is thy dwelling place, and underneath are the everlasting arms." (Deut. 33: 37.) "Trust in Jehovah, and do ing arms." good; dwell in the land, and feed on his faithfulness. De-light thyself also in Jehovah; and he will give thee the desires of thy heart. Commit thy way unto Jehovah; trust also in him, and he will bring it to pass." (Ps. 37: 3.5.) "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." (Ps. 46: 1.) "Let not your heart be troubled: believe in God, believe also in me. ther's house are many mansions; if it were not so; I would have told you; for I go to prepare a place for you. if I go and prepare a place for you, I come again, and will receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." (John 14: 1-3.) "When this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall come to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting? The sting of death is sin; and the power of sin is the law: but thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. 15: 54-57.) "In nothing be anxious, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 4: 6, 7.) "These are they that come out of the great tribulation, and they washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God; and they serve him day and night in his temple; and he that sitteth on the throne shall spread his tabernacle over them. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun strike upon them, nor any heat; for the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne shall be their shepherd, and shall guide them unto fountains of waters of life; and God shall wipe away every tear from their eyes." (Rev. 7: 14-17.)
"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours. For their wayles follow with them." (Per. 14: 12.) labors: for their works follow with them." (Rev. 14: 13.)
"Blessed are they that wash their robes, that they may have the right to come to the tree of life, and may enter in by the gates into the city." (Rev. 22: 14.) "And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; each one of the several gates was of one pearl: and the street of the city was pure as it were transparent glass. And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God the Almighty, and the Lamb, are the temple thereof. And the city hath no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine upon it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the lamp thereof is the Lamb.

And the nations shall walk amidst the light thereof: and the kings of the earth bring their glory into it. And the gates thereof shall in no wise be shut by day (for there shall be no night there)." (Rev. 21: 21-25.)

As we think of the rare and cultured intellect, the splendid literary attainments, the noble and generous heart, and the exalted Christian character of this extraordinary woman, how forcibly are we reminded of the words of Edward Young: "Death loves a shining mark, a signal blow!" Truly is the saying exemplified in the present death; for, if it was the purpose of the grim monster to pluck from the garden of humanity one of its fairest flowers, then he aimed in this case at the right mark.

Mrs. Eudora Lindsay South was the embodiment of a high order of womanhood. Endowed by nature with rare intellectual gifts, she had the additional advantage of early literary training, and was graduated while yet a girl from Hocker College, afterwards changed to Hamilton College, Lexington, Ky., under the benign and successful presidency of the genial and polished Robert Graham. With an ardent thirst for knowledge on a broader scale and dominated then, as throughout her life, by the worthy ambition for high achievement, she planned and executed immediately upon her graduation a trip abroad, where, in Dresden, Saxony, in Florence and other Italian cities, and in sunny France, she continued her industrious and untiring efforts in the pursuit of knowledge. This period of study and travel abroad furnished a fine opportunity for extended research and improvement, and every day of it was diligently utilized. In Dresden it gave her access to the famous Dresden Picture Gallery, for which the city is most widely known, and where her cultured and appreciative eyes could gaze on Raphæl's celebrated masterpiece. 'The Sistine Madonna," and other noted works of art. And in that "cradle of Italian culture," as history distinguishes "Florence the Beautiful," situated in a beautiful valley at the foot of the Apennines and made famous as the home of Dante, Michelangelo, and Galileo, she added to her fund of classic and artistic lore.

She returned to her native land laden with rich treasures from which subsequently, whether in the classroom or in the social circle, she was ever ready to draw, to the rare profit and pleasure of her audience; and thus she had firmly laid the foundation for a brilliant and successful career.

After her marriage, in 1876, to the equally noble, chivalrous, and generous man of God, the beloved Brother South, who survives her, she founded Excelsior Institute, and in this institution performed the great work of her life.

But notwithstanding her extraordinary native ability and brilliant attainments in the field of letters, humility and modesty were two of the most prominent traits in her character. The same attractive and winning grace of modesty which so conspicuously marked her girlhood days continued to be the crowning glory and ornament of her life as wife and mother. And not only upon her own devoted children, who rise up to-day and call her blessed, but upon multitudes of others, many of whom are now dignified mothers and fathers, she left the impress of her modesty and other qualities of her great character. But, with all her brilliant attainments and the shining virtues which crowned her life, that which shone with the brightest luster and still sends its radiance over her whole life was her character as a Christian. Having become a Christian while the bloom of innocent girlhood was still on her cheek, she was a Christian practically all her life; and in this character she excelled preëminently, combining the domestic industry and piety of Martha and Mary, the tender devotion of John, and the heroism of Paul with the sweetness and gentleness of the Master himself.

And shall we say to-day of the noble being with all these splendid powers and varied attainments, that she is dead? That the glad music of life's sweet song is hushed in eternal silence? No, no; but in another clime, with the garlands of immortality on her brow, the notes of that song are echoing and reëchoing in still sweeter vibrations. In the beautiful words of her own favorite poet, the brilliant bard of Cambridge:

> Life is real! life is earnest! And the grave is not the goal; Dust thou art, to dust returnest, Was not spoken of the soul.

Yea, even as her pale and pulseless form lies before us in the casket, we may address to her the appropriate words of Mrs. Hemans:

> Calm on the bosom of God. Fair spirit, rest thee now!

She did not die young, and yet as, through our blinding tears, we look upon her fine form to-day, the words of England's greatest bard come to mind:

> Death lies on her like an untimely frost Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

In the prosecution of postgraduate studies, it was my good fortune to sit as a pupil at her feet, and she not only became my wise and faithful counselor, but was ever afterwards my true and devoted friend; and, weeping with the family to-day, I press to my own lips the cup of their grief, while the words of Whittier shall voice our united prayer:

> Fold her, O Father, in thine arms, And let her henceforth be A messenger of love between Our human hearts and thee.

To the faithful and devoted husband, who was the abiding stay and comfort of her heart, and to the children and grandchildren of their united love, I not only commend the beautiful passages read from God's holy word, but I wish to address to them also some additional and appropriate words of Whittier:

Yet, would I say, what thy own heart approveth, Our Father's will, Calling to him the dear one whom he loveth. Is mercy still.

Not upon thee or thine the solemn angel Hath evil wrought; Her funeral anthem is a glad evangel-The good die not.

God calls our loved ones, but we lose not wholly What he hath given; They live on earth, in thought and deed, as truly

As in his heaven.

No, no, she is not dead, but living still, and living where there is no death. And hence, because they truly voice the sentiment of God's word and were written by the great American whom she so greatly admired, I deem it appropriate to close the service in her memory with the familiar words of her favorite poet, the beloved Longfellow:

> There is no death! What seems so is transition: This life of mortal breath Is but a suburb of the life Elysian Whose portal we call death.

BY E. A. E.

When one church under the guidance of its elders in prayer and the light of the word of God withdraw themselves from a brother, can it produce anything else but strife for other congregations to take him up and receive him into full fellowship before he ever adjusts the matter with his home church? Even if the home church made some mistakes in its procedure, the place to right the wrong is there. All other churches should wait until the wrongs have been set right. God forbade the Jews to speak evil of their rulers. When Paul severely reproved a hypocritical high priest, he apologized when he learned that the man was a high priest. He did this, not through respect for the hypocrite, but in obedience to God. We must respect God's appointments and his order of things now. God commands the church in every place to withdraw themselves from every brother who walks disorderly; and when, in obedience to God, a church does this, who can undo it? Who will slap God in the face by saying his appointments are "no good?" Some congregations in the New Testament did try false teachers and some who claimed to be apostles and found them to be false. God praises these churches for this. God commands elders to stop the mouths of some teachers. (See Tit. 1.) In some places preachers "get in the saddle" and stop the mouths of the elders.

But should the elders and the whole church in spite and malice and revenge withdraw from a worthy brother, it would cease to be a church of Christ and become a synagogue of Satan. Satan got mighty big in some churches named in the New Testament.

The point this article makes is, in either case some are walking as "enemies of the cross of Christ."

Another command of God which is very much disregarded and ignored is the one which requires preachers and other teachers first to be proved, to have a good report at home, and to be approved by letter when sent to work in places where they are not known. Some congregations and some individuals seem to disregard this altogether. Surely all that God teaches on this subject, as well as on all others, must be studied and practiced.

I clip the following from the Christian Leader of March 26:

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

The church of Christ at Cincinnati, Ohio (Elm Street), has withdrawn fellowship from its former minister, Louis R. Patmont, for walking disorderly, causing a division, in-subordination, and unfaithfulness in the Christian ministry. Yours in Christ, L. LUNSFORD.

R. C. HAMMONS. Elders.

In the first place, not the clearest reputation has followed Brother Patmont in his peregrinations. Then, when a church with its elders withdraw themselves from him, it behooves every other church to act accordingly until, at least, the matter has been adjusted in the home church, if there has been anything unscriptural in the course pursued. Any other course on the part of other congregations, as should be clear to all, would be partisan and productive of strife.

Later I saw the following in The Word and Work:

In regard to certain notices derogatory to L. R. Patmont, which lately appeared in a certain brotherhood paper—the circumstances are known to us to be so peculiar that we would advise all brethren to suspend judgment adverse to Brother Patmont until an impartial investigation of the facts can be had.

I know nothing of "the facts," except the one fact published by the Christian Leader that the Elm Street Church has withdrawn from Brother Patmont, and that this statement has been signed by the elders of that church. The Word and Work intimates that there has not yet been "an impartial investigation of the facts;" in other words, that this church and its elders were not impartial in this action. The Word and Work may know. Whether it knows or does not know, this is a serious charge against these elders and the whole church. But, acting upon the suggestion of The Word and Work, brethren must "suspend judgment," not only "adverse to," but also in favor of. Patmont until he has righted himself with this church or it has righted itself with him. Brother Patmont, then, himself seeking the unity and peace of his home church and all others, will remain at home until this matter has been adjusted. Likewise The Word and Work, seeking the same, cannot advise other congregations to receive Brother Patmont until after this "impartial investigation of the facts" has been made. This investigation might show that the church was scriptural in what it did.

Then, Who or What is empowered to hold this "impartial investigation?" There is no power or ecclesiasticism over this church that can do it. It must be done by this church.

The main question is, in this case and similar ones what must be done to preserve unity and peace at home and to prevent the production of strife and division elsewhere? Is the above course the one to pursue to prevent strife and bitterness and to maintain "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace?" Other congregations should not be disturbed over the troubles of one. The unity, peace, and good of the churches are far above all partial or impartial investigations of any case in any one church or any personal prejudice and preference.

All the ways in which some of the church walk as "enemies of the cross of Christ" have not been pointed out; but enough has been said to cause us to study the word of God more closely, to fear, to watch, and to pray.

In point of sacrifice, one of the biggest contributions reported this week is ten cents sent by a colored washerwoman "whose heart was touched." Then, again, there are some contributions sent in the name of certain congregations where the membership consists of seven or eight people who are poor in this world's goods, but rich in faith. The contribution of one hundred dollars from the Bethlehem congregation in Wilson County, Tenn., is characteristic of the generous spirit of that church. We still note with pleasure the interest of some dear little children in the welfare of other little children across the seas whom they have never seen, but whom they love.

Perhaps we could not find a better impetus to stir up the hearts of our readers than to print what Brother John H. Arms, of Celina, Tenn., a man of tender and sympathetic heart, said in substance to a congregation in Clay County. He "preached on 'Sacrifice,' and showed that God gave the best and dearest of all his possessions—his Son—as a sacrifice for us; and it is through sacrifice, lovingly rendered, of our best, in means and talent, that we live in approval of our Heavenly Father." It is encouraging to note how the congregation responded to this fervent appeal.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Armenian and Syrian Fund or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Chancery Sale of Suburban Farm.

The old home place of the lamented Granville Lipscomb will be sold at the courthouse door, in Nashville, on Saturday, June 1, at twelve o'clock. This property comprises fifty-one acres, with dwellinghouse and other buildings. It adjoins the David Lipscomb College, formerly known as the Nashville Bible School. It is an ideal home site, with fine elevation, located on the Granny White road, about five miles from the Public Square and about one mile from the city limits. A boulevard, being an extension of the Belmont Boulevard, has been laid out through the farm and confirmed and declared a public highway.

If you are looking for a nice country home, with all the advantages of a growing city at your door, or for a real estate investment of exceptional value, do not fail to attend this sale.

Missionary

Boys and Kites.

BY J. M. M'CALER.

While walking on one of the busy streets of Tokyo during the New Year holidays, I observed three kites high up in the sky. Long streamers in the form of straw strings hung far out behind. To each kite a long string was attached that descended to an elevated vacant lot and at the end of which a boy watched with admiration and delight his little airship bravely riding out on the strong north wind.

The three boys' faces were all aglow with a consciousness of success. But on a telegraph wire just over my head hung another kite, dangling by the entangled string and litting round the wires as if in protest at its confinement. The great white eyes of Kujomasa, whose face was painted on it, seemed to draw down at the inner corners more fiercely than ever, as if to say: "Unless I am liberated immediately, I shall strike." This, however, may have been nothing more than the imagination of my own thoughts. What was more likely a fact was that some little fellow, on seeing the deplorable fate of his New Year's gift from Ototsan, had run home in great disappointment to relate his sad misfortune to his mother.

Money for Missionaries.

BY NELLIE STRAFFON.

On March 30 I forwarded to our missionaries in India contributions as follows:

To Brother Martin: From X. Y. Z., Jackson, Tenn., $1; H. J. Stafford, Trezevant, Tenn., $1; Mrs. Rella Morris, Madisonville, Texas, $2.50; D. A. Whisnant, Goldsboro, Texas, $2.50; Nellie Straiton, $1. Total, $8.

To Brother and Sister McHenry: From the church at Italy, Texas, through Mrs. T. B. Fuston, $20; Beulah and Carl Sullivan, Louise, Texas, $2; Mrs. J. M. Hayes, Polk, Tenn., $1; D. J. Prickett, West Unity, Ohio, $5. Total, $28.

To Brother and Sister Armstrong-Hopkins: From Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Donald, Justin, Texas, $2; Miss Ina Straiton, Fort Worth, Texas, $2; Mrs. B. P. Sloan, Humboldt, Tenn., $1; Miss Laura Cooke, Pilot Point, Texas, $1; Mrs. E. Emberson, Pilot Point, Texas, through Miss L. C., $2; Mrs. S. A. McKinney, Pilot Point, Texas, through Miss L. C., $2; Mrs. G. C. Curry, Donaldsonville, Ga., $2; church at Alameda, Texas, through Mrs. H. D. Garner, $3.82; church at Huckabay, Texas, through Leonard Watson, $5.52; Miss Lella Foster, Bishop, Texas, $5; Mrs. E. F. Lafferty, Caney, Okla., $5; Mrs. Rella Morris, Madisonville, Texas, $2.50; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Boyd, Andalusia, Ala., $2.50; D. A. Whisnant, Goldsboro, Texas, $2.50; J. L. Broad, Denison, Texas, $3; church at Huckabay, Texas, through Leonard Watson, $3.80; Mrs. John Straiton, Fort Worth, Texas, $1; Nellie Straiton's Sunday-school class, Fort Worth, Texas, $1.10; Nellie Straiton, $7.26. Total, $55.

A message to those who read this report, but who have not been contributing to the missionaries: The amounts received since the first of the year have not been nearly sufficient for the support of our missionaries. First of all, there is their personal support; then we should remember that they need to receive a sum sufficient to pay for their native helpers. A missionary's usefulness is increased many fold by the help of a native Christian; and where they have several native evangelists, they can cover a much larger territory Did you ever realize that the territory of India was about one-half the size of the United States and that the population was about three times as great as the population of the United States? But how insignificant is the very small amount we give to take the gospel of our Savior to India! Perhaps you have wished to serve Christ with your money, but have not realized the great need of India. Will you give a definite amount each month, or, if you cannot do this, send an occasional sum? I will gladly forward your gift. Address Miss Nellie Straiton, 1030 South Lake Street, Fort Worth, Texas.

nail from India.

BY NELLE STRAITON.

Due to war conditions, the mail service between India and this country is rather slow and irregular; so do not be disappointed if you do not receive an acknowledgment from India for three or four months after you have sent money.

In fact, I did not receive until the latter part of March a post card from Brother McHenry which was dated December 13, 1917, and which reads as follows: "Thanks for five dollars just received as per your favor of September 29. Excuse note. I have been unwell for several days. God reward you for your services. There were ten baptisms this month."

I also received about the same time a letter from Brother Martin and Brother McHenry acknowledging the receipt of three dollars and twenty-five cents sent to Brother Martin on October 31, and fourteen dollars sent to Brother McHenry at the same time.

Brother Jelley wrote on January 29: "I gratefully acknowledge your letter of October 31 and the accompanying check for sixteen dollars." He further writes that he is very anxious to come home, and asks that the brethren please raise the money for that purpose.

In the same budget of mail came letters from Sister Armstrong-Hopkins stating that they had received the money sent on September 29 and October 31. Each of the missionaries spoke of how grateful they were to the brethren and sisters who had a part in the gifts mentioned above.

As a great many of you perhaps already know, the Satara missionaries—that is, Brother and Sister Armstrong-Hopkins, Brother and Sister McHenry, and Brother Martin—have moved to Aurangabad, Deccan, India, where they hope to be able to accomplish much more good for the cause of Christ than they have yet accomplished. They believe this to be a splendid field in which to work, and only ask that the brethren and sisters in this country continue to support them in the work. [News has been received of Brother Armstrong-Hopkins' death since this was written.]

I shall be glad to forward any amount you wish to send to our missionaries, and please remember to read the monthly report at the beginning of next month. In fact, watch every issue of the paper for news items from our missionaries and for reports of money forwarded. Address me at 1030 South Lake Street, Fort Worth, Texas.

For supper last night I had corn bread. The corn grew in my own garden and was ground on a Japanese hand mill by the student who does my housework. I also had an egg laid by one of my own hens, potatoes that grew in my garden, strawberry jam from my own strawberry patch, and spinach grown at home. In this way I manage to counteract to some extent the high cost of living.

By MRS. ELVIRA HYATT

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Article 10.

Build Up Virtues and the Faults Will Disappear; Praise Will do More Good Than a Dozen Scoldings.

It pays to have high ideals for our children and to respect their individuality. Much can be accomplished by expecting children to be good and by showing them that we trust them.

We should never call a child "bad"—never wound his self-respect. This does not mean that his naughty actions should be "glossed over;" but, as one wise educator has expressed it, we should realize, that every fault is simply the absence of some virtue, and we should try to build up that quality in which the child is deficient rather than condemn him for that which he has not.

Build up the virtues and the faults will disappear. If a child is selfish, we should dwell on unselfishness; if the child is untidy, on neatness; if slow, on quickness; and we should always remember to praise even the slightest sign of the virtue we are working to cultivate. A child will try to live up to the thing for which he is praised. "How quiet and helpful my little Peggy is to-day!" will do more good than a dozen scoldings about noise and mischief.

Stories can be told to arouse and stimulate high ideals. Stories have a wonderful educational value, and almost any lesson can be taught in story form. Tell stories about birds, trees, flowers, animals, great and good men, simple stories of home and family life, stories from history and from the Bible. The eager little minds are ready for anything you wish to give them; and if you are a natural story-teller, great indeed is your opportunity. Ideals of right conduct, love of family, and sympathy with every living thing can all be given through the right use of stories.

Much has been said and written about prenatal influence, but volumes more are needed on postnatal influences. One of the first things a baby learns is to "smile back" at his mother, and in all his earliest years the child reflects the attitude of those around him. He imitates the things which he sees and hears in order to understand them; and "as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

A true mother leads a consecrated life. She will always be absolutely truthful and will keep every promise made to her child. She will recognize the good in all things and will never speak ill of any one in her child's presence. She will keep away all thoughts of fear and will awaken a spirit of loving service toward others and a growing belief in the power which is within himself, until at last he grows into a recognition of the universal love and goodness which underlie the whole life.

Life's Ideals.

Ideals are the soul of life. The simplest human act is directed to an end; and life, a series of unnumbered acts, must answer to some end, some ideal, mean or generous, seen by the eye of the heart, and pursued consciously or often unconsciously, which gives a unity and a clew to the bewildering mazes of human conduct. The word "progress" is unmeaning without reference to an ideal; and I would say of ideals that which was said of abstract thoughts by a distinguished scholar and statesman, that they "are the meat and drink of life." They support us; and, still more, they rule us.—Westcott.

Loving a Child.

Loving a child is key To Heaven's mystery. Loving a child, and giving It knowledge—this is living. Loving a child brings pain, And is life's greatest gain.

Loving a child is knowing The fierce joy of a sowing That shall cause mighty reaping. Loving a child is weeping, And fearing, too, and praying— This, there is no gainsaying.

Loving a child is being A part of God, and seeing The world beneath one's hand Enlarge, expand, Be different, and grow To one's thought. Even so.

Loving a child is key
To every mystery.
Loving a child is laughter
And heartache after—
Heartache and grief and pain
But always joy again.

Spurgeon's mother said to him: "I have trained you in righteousness. Your father and I have set you right examples. We have taught you the gospel. We have shown you the way of peace. My son, if you do not live a godly life, I will stand before God in the day of judgment and bear witness against you."

o o o A Sack of Worries.

A wayfarer carried a heavy sack, under which he toiled and complained unceasingly. From none could he get help or comfort; and as he slowly journeyed, groaning under his burden, the Angel of Optimism came to him and spoke kindly, saying: "Brother, what carriest thou?"

The man answered surlily: "My worries." :

The angel smiled pityingly upon him and said: "Let us look into thy burden and examine thy worries." And so they looked in. But—lo!—the sack was empty.

"Why, surely," cried the man, "there were two great worries—too heavy for man to bear. But—ah, yes, I had forgot—one was a worry of yesterday, and so it is gone."

"And the other?"

"That—why, that was a worry of to-morrow, and it—it has not yet come."

Then the angel smiled with infinite pity, saying: "Hearken! He who bows himself down under the worries of yesterday and to-morrow wears himself out for naught." But he who carries only the worries of to-day has no need of a sack for his sorrows. If thou wilt cast this black thing aside and give all thy strength and cheer and courage to the things of to-day, real misfortune never can burden thee."

Wondering, the man did as the angel commanded. And, as he took up his journey and went lightly, swiftly on, his heart and his hands were free to relieve many a brother wayfarer of his burdens and to pluck sweet fruits and flowers along the wayside. And when he came at last to the setting of the sun, it was with smiles and a song.—The Christian Herald.

Prohibition.

Recently Michigan and New Hampshire have become prohibition States. More and more of the States are falling in line against the whisky traffic. May God speed the day when open saloons will be a thing of the past. It is inconsistent in our government to ask the people to conserve food while they use grain for the manufacture of whisky. If every State in the Union and every Christian in the whole world were rid of the open saloons, it would be a blessing for humanity.

$ $ $

The Food Administrator.

Mr. Herbert C. Hoover, the United States Food Administrator, has succeeded in getting the confidence and admiration of the American people. In teaching the American people how to conserve food he has conferred upon them a great favor. At a conference of great men recently, Mr. Hoover said: "I do not believe there is another nation in the world in which the proportion of individuals of a willing sense of voluntary self-sacrifice is so high as in this people of ours, and nothing has demonstrated it more finely than the conservation of wheat."

False Prophets.

There have been false prophets in every age of the world. There are false prophets now, and it is reasonable to suppose that there will be until Gabriel blows his trumpet. The following is clipped from the Herald and Presbyter:

Interpreters of prophecy who identify the actors in the present war and fix the time of its finish are not confined to America, nor to the side of the entente allies. A writer in the Dresdener Nachrichten writes that, according to the book of Daniel, victory for the Germans is immediately at hand. His first point is that the state of war between Germany and all Russia ended on February 10, exactly twelve hundred and ninety days from August 1, 1914, the date on which the German mobilization began. The real victory, however, comes later. He quotes: "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." The period of thirteen hundred and thirty-five days expired on March 27. Of course, if he sticks to his prophecy, he must fix another date.

German Theology.

Dr. David Van Dyke, of Ottumwa, Iowa, has no use for the "made-in-Germany" brand of theology. Those colleges or theological seminaries or professors or preachers that have adopted this style of theology, and who are propagating infidelity in institutions built by people who gave their money for the dissemination of the pure gospel, he thinks to be in the straight line of apostolic succession from Judas Iscariot, who sold his Lord for money. He thinks that the General Assembly ought to recover from Union Seminary, by suit at law, the funds paid by evangelical men for its endowment, and that this is a duty owed to all evangelical givers of to-day, assuring them that the money they invest in boards and church institutions will not be perverted from the sacred trust in years to come. This is an argument which should not be lightly disregarded.—Herald and Presbyter.

It is to be hoped that the people of this country will free themselves from German infidelity. American people do not need such "kultur," for it destroys faith in God, faith in Christ, and faith in the Bible. Universities that teach German kultur to our young men should not be patronized. It should be our purpose to preserve the Bible just as it is, for it is good for all people of all ages and all classes.

The Work of the Church Must Not Stop.

There are some things that cannot stop even for the war. Service to Christ must continue. The world is as sadly in need of the gospel to-day as it has ever been before. If possible, there is more demand for preaching the gospel now than in time of peace. Missions must be supported. The passing of souls into the great beyond cannot be postponed. The Christians of this generation are the only ones who can ever give the gospel to the non-Christians of the present generation. The demand is urgent for the preaching of the gospel to every creature under heaven. It is folly, it is sinful and vicious, not to make sacrifices in order to preach the gospel everywhere and to every creature. The man who argues that it is not right to preach the gospel to the soldiers in the camps has certainly read with no purpose the great commission in which Christ said: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) This same commission as recorded in Mark reads: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) It is worse than absurd to contend that the gospel should not be preached in the camps as well as everywhere else. I am not disposed to waste any time upon the man who contends that nothing can be accomplished by preaching the gospel in the camps. The gospel is God's power unto salvation to believers in the camps as well as believers anywhere else.

God Answers Prayer in His Own Way.

Some people become pessimistic and rebellious because God does not answer their prayers as they think he should. If we have the spirit of trust and obedience, we will not dictate to God the way in which he shall answer our prayers. Christ exhibited the true spirit of prayer when he said: "Thy will, not mine, be done." Christians should pray, leaving God to answer prayer in his own way.

Andrew C. Zenos, in the Continent, gives us the following pertinent language in regard to God's answering prayer in his own way: "Hezekiah was granted deliverance from the attacks of Sennacherib in a marvelous way. The Scripture record is confirmed by the secular histories which agree in reporting a strange misfortune to Sennacherib's army and a failure of his campaign. Let not this, however, encourage the present-day believer in the true God to think that he also will receive his answer to prayer in a miraculous way. It rests with God as to how he will answer or act. The believer's part is to pray and trust. God is on his side, whatever the issue, if he only puts himself first on God's side.

Every day should be a day of earnest and united prayer by all Christians for God's blessings on our nation and for a righteous peace and victory, which he alone can give. We should realize that prayer is more powerful than the sword. Christians should pray more; and there will not be enough praying until all Christians learn to pray and to go down in penitent prayer on their knees before Jehovah. The nation has done well in subscribing to the Liberty Loan bonds. Money, however, while it is good in its way and for its purpose, cannot take the place of the divine blessing. We must render service to God, ever looking to him to give us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

F. W. Smith is in a good meeting at Fulton, Ky.

L. B. Jones will begin a meeting for the church at Bridgeport, Ala., on May 19.

Commencement exercises will be held at the Fanning Orphan School on Thursday, May 23, at 8 P.M. The public is invited.

Claude Woodruff will return to night to his work at Anniston, Ala. He has been assisting Brother Cawthon in meetings for several weeks.

From Arthur J. Veteto, Amity, Ark.: "I wish to say that I have some time for protracted-meeting work in the summer not yet engaged. Inquirers should address me at Amity, Ark., Route 2, Box 49."

A lady who once asked the privilege to be introduced to S. S. Prentice, said: "I congratulate the mother who has such a son." He immediately and warmly replied: "Rath-r congratulate the son on having such a mother."

Many Christians are locating in Washington, D. C., to enter the civil service. For their benefit we print the location of the house of worship. They meet each Lord's day a the Masonic Temple, corner of Eighth and F Streets, Northeast.

I. G. Malphurs, Valdosta, Ga., Route 2, wishes to locate in a town where there is a church needing teaching force. He is a high-school teacher of several years' experience, with college and some university training. He prefers the principalship, unless there is a splendid opening in another department.

Fom G. Dallas Smith, Cleburne, Texas, May 6: "In the Gospl Advocate of May 2 I wrote that the Cleburne church 'buil a two-thousand-dollar house last year, and it is free from debt.' It should have read, 'a twenty-thousand-dollar house, and it is free from debt.' We had two fine service yesterday."

"Savation from Sin." This book is composed of the editorils of David Lipscomb, collated by J. W. Shepherd, and cottains many of the best and most profound thoughts of its author. It contains an index to subjects and an index to scriptures. Contains 440 large pages; printed in large, clar type. Price, $1.50.

E. M. 3 orden, of Little Rock, Ark., writes: "The brethren at Little Rock are now engaged in their protracted meeting. It will continue until the first of June. Our congregation here is about six years old and is growing. Many newmembers have moved in, and it has given great strength to the work here. The writer is conducting the services. Ye hope to be successful."

To any curch or person who will send us six new subscribers to he Gospel Advocate, accompanied by twelve dollars, we ill give one dozen copies of our new hymn book, "Prais Him." Add postage for parcel post or transportatio. Act promptly while this liberal offer is good. Addres the McQuiddy Printing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

From R. H. Rogers, Fort Deposit, Ala., May 11: "The cause of Christeems to be getting stronger in this county. The thing we red most is more help. We have numbers of old congregions that have run down because they have no preacher I have aided three places in starting to meeting regularl, since I have been here, but I cannot fill all the places the I am called. I have more calls for meetings than I ca possibly give justice. Pray for us."

Wanted—A place in a private or public school which is controlled and patronized by our brethren. I prefer work in the seventh, eighth, and ninth grades or the principal-ship of a school of two or three teachers. I want to preach every Lord's day. I want a place in Tennessee if it can be had. I can furnish best of references and I hold a high-school license. Address J. W. Dickson, Elbridge Drug Company, Elbridge, Tenn.

The latest word from J. M. McCaleb, Tokyo, Japan: "On the last Sunday in March, Brother Fujimori baptized four persons at the Takahagi Church; on Tuesday, April 2, Brother Ishiguro, of the Otsuka Church, baptized five—three women and two men—in the Zoshigaya baptistery; on the first Sunday in April, Brother Miyajima baptized three—two students and a woman from the Salvation Army—at the Sendagaya Church. Twelve baptisms in eight days."

Several interesting meetings are in progress in Nashville and we are enjoying a spiritual feast of good things. Five persons have been baptized as a result of Brother Elam's preaching at Chapel Avenue. The interest at Green Street, where Brother Cawthon is preaching, is encouraging, with six baptisms and one restoration to date. G. C. Brewer, of Winchester, Tenn., reports a good start at Belmont Avenue. William P. Walker is preaching at California Avenue. Six have been added in this meeting.

Carl A. Gardner writes: "Beginning on Tuesday, May 28, 1918, and continuing six weeks, there will be a summer school at Thorp Spring, Texas, conducted by Thorp Spring Christian College. The courses offered will be limited to the high school and first two years of regular college work. Tuition and board will be less than one usually pays in schools of the same rank. Thorp Spring Christian College is one of the few 'A-Plus' junior colleges of the State. It is placed in the first class by the State Department of Education. Students who complete five prescribed courses above the high school will be issued a first-grade State teachers' certificate. Thorp Spring is an excellent place for a quiet summer outing and recreation."

The graduation exercises at David Lipscomb College to-day were largely attended. Prof. J. S. Batey, principal of the Lewisburg High School, delivered an inspiring address to the graduates. President H. Leo Boles, in behalf of the trustees and the faculty, conferred the following degrees: Ethel Blackburn Riley, B.A.; Charles R. Brewer, B.A.; Wilba Fox, B.L.; Christine Bovelle Ward, B.L.; James Leonard Jackson, B.S.; William Bryan Jordan, B.S.; Guy P. Moss, B.S.; Charles Pinckney Poole, B.A.; Eugene Lewis Pearson, B.A.; Annie Pearl Overby, B.A.; Virgia Nancy Morgan, B.A.; Emma Irene Martin, B.A.; Emma Greer, B.A.; Benjamin Cordell Goodpasture, B.A.; Gilbert F. W. A. Earnest writes: "The church at Del Rio, Texas, consisting of thirty-eight members, owns property worth about twenty-five hundred dollars, on which there is a debt of three hundred dollars. Beginning with March, we started to work on a systematic basis, disbursing our receipts as follows: Fifty-five per cent for preaching, twentytwo and one-half per cent on building, ten per cent for incidentals, five per cent for home missions, five per cent for foreign missions, and two and one-half per cent for Christian education. Prior to this time our collections averaged about thirty dollars per month. Our March collections totaled one hundred and thirty-nine dollars and sixty-two cents; and April, which had only four Sundays, amounted to one hundred and twenty-five dollars and thirty-nine cents. We are strong for systematic work, and believe many other congregations would improve if they would map out the work they ought to do, and then do it."

Brother McQuiddy: (1) Is it scriptural for women to teach or preach in the church on the first day of the week? If not, at what gatherings are they permitted to do so? (2) Is there a verse in the Bible which reads: "A man shall give an account of the deeds done in the body?" (3) What would you do with a congregation which does not get interested while explaining the great truths of the Bible?

T. S. Williams.

(1) It is scriptural for a woman to teach in a modest, quiet way, provided in doing so she does not usurp authority over the man, in the church on the first day of the week. Woman is forbidden to take the lead or to publicly proclaim the truth, as man was first made and then the woman. "For Adam was first formed, then Eve; and Adam was not beguiled, but the woman being beguiled hath fallen into transgression." (1 Tim. 2: 13, 14.) (2) There Is no such verse in the Bible. The nearest thing to it is Rom. 14: 12, which reads: "So then each one of us shall give account of himself to God." Also, Rom. 2: 6: "Who will render to every man according to his works." (3) The congregation that will not be interested in the study of the truth is unworthy of the truth. The best thing one can do with such a congregation, after he has done his full duty in presenting the truth, is to "shake off the dust of his feet as a testimony against it" and go to a congregation that will hear and accept the truth.

Brother McQuiddy; Apropos Saul of Tarsus: (1) Why did the aggressive persecutor and waster of the faith merely hold the raiment of those who slew Stephen, rather than cast stones? (2) How do we understand the seeming import of scripture that Saul was in a state of utter condemnation before his conversion, yet possessing a "conscience void of offense" and seeking light and truth? If one "hungers for the bread of heaven" and "thirsts for the water of life"—possesses "the honest and good heart" that searches diligently the Scriptures to know commanded duty—will be be led into the light of truth? (3) Is this a "scriptural paradox" which brethren preach: "If you follow your conscience (devoutly and blindly), you will be lost, or, if you do not follow (but defile) your conscience, you will be lost? To explain, you must have an enlightened conscience—a conscience educated by the Scriptures?

James E. Chessor.

(1) Suborned witnesses were the first to cast stones at Stephen, because this was in accord with the law. Deut. 17: 7 says: "The hands of the witnesses shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterwards the hand of all the people." Suborned witnesses stoned Stephen to death. Paul simply consented to his death and held the raiment of the witnesses. (2) It does not follow that because a man is conscientious in what he does, that he is therefore right. A man may be sincerely wrong, but never insincerely right. Only those who have a conscience enlightened and guided by the word of God will be absolutely safe in following their consciences. Paul was finally led into the light of the truth because he was honest and sincere in all that he did. "If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the teaching, whether it is of God, er whether I speak from myself." (John 7: 17.) (3) As already explained, it depends on the character of conscience as to whether one will be lost or saved in following it. The man who follows a scripturally enlightened conscience does not follow it blindly, but wisely, and will be saved. Men who are insincere in what they do can never be saved. 0 0 0

Brother McQuiddy: We read in the fourth chapter of Genesis that after Cain slew his brother Abel, the Lord said unto Cain: "A fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth." Cain said unto the Lord: "My punishment is greater than I can bear. . . . And it shall come to pass, that every one that findeth me shall slay me." "And the Lord set a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him." So far as the Bible states, Adam and Eve, Cain and Abel, were the only four persons living upon the earth at that time. Who was it that was liable to kill Cain if they found him? Cain went and dwelt in the land of Nod, and there he knew his wife. Who were those people that Cain found in the land of Nod? Who were their progenitors or ancestors? What was the mark that the Lord set upon Cain?

The Bible nowhere says that Cain and Abel were the first persons born. It nowhere indicates that the world was not peopled before their birth. All that we can say is that they were the first persons of whose birth the Bible makes revelation or gives an account. From the curse put upon the woman, it seems that before the disobedience she was capable of conception; for "unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy pain and thy conception; in pain thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee.' (Gen. 3: 16.) Again, we find that before the birth o Cain and Abel, Adam "called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother of all living." This indicates that there were living people before Cain and Abel and that Eve was the mother of these people. Also, it is hard o understand why the Lord placed a sign upon Cain after the murder of Abel, if there were no people to whom tlis could be a sign. "And Jehovah appointed a sign for Can, lest any finding him should smite him." (Gen. 4: 15.) I offer these facts and suggestions for those who assime that there were no people before Cain and Abel. They make this unwarranted assumption, and on it try to discredit the Bible. It is safer always to confine oursilves to facts that are clearly revealed. What the sign wasthat was placed upon Cain has given rise to a number of rivelously curious conjectures. There is no information showing just what it was. 0 0 0

Brother McQuiddy: Please give us an answer to be following questions: (1) Was Saturday the Jewish Sabath? (2) If so, when was it changed, and by whom was it changed?

E. D. Westall.

(1) Saturday was the Jewish Sabbath. Websters International Dictionary defines the Sabbath; "A seaso or day of rest. Specifically: The seventh day of the wes in the Jewish calendar, now called 'Saturday,' the obsevance of which as a day of rest and worship was enjoind in the decalogue." Moses commanded the Jews concening the manna: "Six days ye shall gather it; but on te seventh day is the Sabbath, in it there shall be none." (Ex. 16: 26.) That the Sabbath is the seventh day of he week is shown from Matt. 28: 1: "Now late on the Sbbath day, as it began to dawn toward the first day of theweek, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see th sepulcher." The Sabbath was given to the Jews and was nver given to the Gentile nations. (2) The Sabbath remins the Sabbath. The Jews were commanded to keep itin commemoration of their departure from Egypt. In ix days God created the heavens and the earth and on to seventh day he rested. The Gentiles were never commaded to keep the Sabbath. After the new and living way we sealed by the blood of Christ, the Sabbath can no loner be observed by divine authority. Christ took it out t the way, nailing it to the cross. After the descent ofthe Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost, we find the disples meeting to worship on the first day of the week. To first day of the week commemorates the resurrection o Christ from the tomb. Christians to-day keep the firstday of the week, and not the Sabbath, or seventh day ofhe week.

The Black Horse.

BY J. PERRY HODGE.

"And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and lo a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand. And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and see thou hurt not the oil and the wine." (Rev. 6: 5, 6.)

We have seen that the horses with their riders or those conveyed in chariots by the horses, as seen by Zechariah in his vision, were explained to him to be the four spirits of the heavens sent forth from standing before the Lord of all the earth, to walk to and fro through the earth. (See Zech. 1: 8-10; 6: 1-5.)

We have seen that one of the spirits that has been sent to walk to and fro through the earth during the gospel dispensation is the Spirit of Christ in the character of the Lamb that was slain (Rev. 5: 6), and that this Spirit includes all the seven Spirits of God, and that, as compared to other spirits sent to walk to and fro through the earth, he is represented under the symbol of the white horse and he that sat thereon, going forth conquering and to conquer (Rev. 6: 1, 2; 19: 11-21). We have seen that the spirits taken and east into the lake of fire and brimestone by this Spirit are the false prophet, the beast, and the dragon, (Rev. 19: 20; 20: 10.) We have seen that the spirit that went forth out of the mouth of these three were the spirits of devils, working miracles, going forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world. to gather them to the battle of the great day of God Almighty. (Rev. 16: 13, 14.)

We have seen that another one of the spirits that has been sent to and fro through the earth, in opposition to the Spirit of Christ, is the spirit of the devil in the character of an angel of light (2 Cor. 11: 13-15), transforming his ministers as ministers of righteousness, false prophets, through whose mouth the doctrines of devils was preached, and by giving heed thereto the servants of God were seduced and turned away from the true faith (1 Tim. 4: 1-3) and led into false systems of religion as substitutes for the true. This spirit of the devil is represented in John's vision under the symbol of the red horse and he that sat thereon. (Rev. 6: 3, 4.)

We come now to a consideration of the third spirit that is walking to and fro through the earth in opposition to the Spirit of Christ. This spirit is the spirit of the devil in the character of the tempter, and is represented in John's vision under the symbol of the black horse and he that sat thereon. (Rev. 6: 5, 6.) The rider of this black horse has a pair of balances in his hand, and the voice of trade is heard as though there might be buying and selling. A measure of wheat is offered for a penny, and three measures of barley for that price.

The tempter operates through the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, for these are all there is in the world through which temptations can enter (1 John 2: 16); for "every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed" (James 1: 14). The devil as the tempter always offers something in the way of enticement. To Eve the enticement was that, instead of producing death as God had told them it would, their eyes should be opened, and that they should be as gods, knowing good and evil, and that death would not result in the eating of the fruit God had told them not to eat of. "And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat." (Gen. 3: 4-6.) After Jesus had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was hungry, and the tempter, taking advantage of this condition, suggested that Jesus use his power in commanding that the stones near where he was at that time be made bread. Jesus met this suggestion by saying: "It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." (Matt. 4: 1-4.) Jesus was not enticed by the enticement of the tempter, neither was he drawn away by his own lust or desire for food. The devil met defeat, and Jesus shows us the way to quench the flery darts of the wicked one.

The tempter suggested to Jesus a way by which he could prove himself to be the Son of God. This was to east himself down from the pinnacle of the temple. If the angels should bear him up in their hands as David had said they would (Ps. 91: 11, 12) and save him from dashing his foot against a stone-a scripture the devil used to prove that they would do so if he were the Son of God-why, such an act would prove to all who saw it that Jesus was he of whom David had spoken, and, therefore, the Son of God. The proving of himself to be the Son of God was one of the things Jesus wanted, but to do so in the way the tempter suggested to him would be to tempt God, and again he met this suggestion of the devil by saying: "It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." (Deut. 6: 16; Matt. 4: 5-7.) Again the devil met defeat, and again Jesus shows us the way to victory against temptation.

The kingdoms of this world and the glory of them are to become the kingdoms of the Lord and of his Christ when Jesus shall have put down all authority and power and shall have destroyed all enemies; but the devil as the tempter showed Jesus all the kingdoms of this world and the glory of them as they were under his wicked rule, and these he offered to Jesus if he would merely fall down and worship him. This enticement of the devil failed to entice, and although Jesus desired that all the kingdoms of the world be his, he was not drawn away by this desire, but said: "Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." (Matt. 4: 8-10.) Thus was Jesus "in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin" (Heb. 4: 15), and in his temptations he has shown us how to resist them; "for in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted" (Heb. 2: 18).

Where Drugs Fail.

Many chronic diseases fail to respond to drug treatment, even in the hands of the best physicians, whereas acute diseases usually respond readily. When a disease has become chronic, drugs often seem to do as much harm as they do good, for the system rebels against them. It is just this class of cases which derive the greatest benefit from Shivar Mineral Water. If you suffer from chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric-acid poisoning, or other curable conditions due to impure blood, do not hesitate to accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer as printed below. His records show that only two in a hundred, on the average, have reported "no beneficial results." This is a wonderful record from a truly wonderful spring. Simply sign the following letter:

Do We Believe It?

BY J. M. DENNIS.

"All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." (Rom. 8: 28.)

This is a quotation from the apostle Paul to the Roman Christians, or the Christians in Rome. Paul here expresses faith by the strongest term when he says "and we know." The same term is used by Paul in 2 Cor. 5: 1. There, with reference to the assurances of God's presence and of heaven's joys and everlasting blessing to the finally faithful, Paul, who, no doubt, will possess a glorified body in which to serve and praise God forever, said: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

What is it Paul says "we know" or believe verily? "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God." The assurances of God's goodness to these who love him are expressed by Paul in the following: "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." Then he adds: "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." (Rom. 8: 35-39.)

Remember, Paul is here speaking of a special class or peculiar character of persons, when he says "all things work together for good to them," and he names the class that we may know who he is talking about-not to everybody, but only to those who "love God" and are "called according to his purpose."

The first query is: Who are lovers of God? The second is: Who have been called, and are, therefore, "the called according to his purpose?"

In answer to the first query, "Who are lovers of God?" I will present testimony of Jesus Christ and the apostle John. First, then, Jesus says: " If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." (John 14: 15.) Again, in verse 23, he says: "If a man love me, he will keep my words," But in verse 24 he says: "He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings." Again: "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments." (1 John 5: 3.)

Faith and principle never change Therefore faith in God and obedience to his requirements have ever been, are now, and will ever be the unchangeable test of man's love to God.

With regard to the past, we ask your attention to the following. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might." (Deut. 6: 5.) Again: "It shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments before the Lord our God, as he hath commanded us." (Deut. 6: 25.)

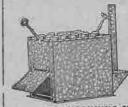

From Abel's offering in Gen. 4: 4 till the present day, man's love for God has been manifested by the doing of God's commandments. So Paul's expressions in Rom. 8: 28 are in harmony with God's unchangeable rule of giving good to those who show their love for him by doing his will; and though man may be unable to know at all times what is good for him, yet, if he is a lover of God, all things work together for good to him, because God, who changes not and who cannot lie. says so.

"Called according to his purpose" -called by the means or through the medium which unfolds God's purpose to man. Hence, Paul says: "Who hath saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." (2 Tim. 1: 9.) "Called . . . by our gospel." (2 Thess. 2: 14.) "Called . . . unto his kingdom and glory" (1 Thess. 2: 12)-or, as the Revised Version puts it, "who calleth you into his own kingdom and glory," thus showing that the calling continues, goes on down through the ages to the end.

God calls us by the gospel into his own holy government in this world, and into his holy likeness through service on our part rendered in harmony with his perfect directions. (1 Thess. 2: 12: 2 Pet. 1: 6.)

Meridian, Miss

"Noah, a Just Man."

BY E. G. ROCKLIFF.

In reply to Brother J. R. Bradley's criticism on the above subject. When did Noah preach to those wicked people? "While the ark was a preparing." Peter says: "When once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." (1 Pet. 3: 20.) Now, did the long-suffering of God wait one hundred and twenty years or less than one hundred years, as Brother Bradley affirms? The answer is in Gen. 6: 3.

It is hardly possible to know to a few years away back there in the morning of time. Twenty years to a man who lived to be nine hundred and fifty years old is not very much, Noah's age is expressed in round numbers-five hundred, six hundred, nine hundred and fifty-at different times. We say we are living in the twentieth century. The same thing will be true of those living eighty years from now. May it not be that during the fifth century of Noah's life he received instructions to build the ark? Events are not all stated chronologically in the Bible. For Instance. Japheth was Noah's eldest son, Shem next, then Ham; yet Shem is mentioned first and Japheth last. We know that Shem was one hundred years old and begat Arphaxad two years after the deluge. (Gen. 11: 10.) Perhaps Noah worked on the ark before these sons were born. If he did work one hundred and twenty years on it, there was plenty of time for these sons to be born, grow up, marry, and so have wives to take with them into the ark.

You believe that God's Spirit did strive with man? Well, if he strove through Noah, there seems to be connection between Noah's preaching, his building the ark, and the one hundred and twenty years' respite God promised. Noah's preaching was the most practical when he was building the ark. What better proof could the people have of the truth of Noah's preaching concerning the coming flood than the noise of blows falling upon the ark of safety? Clarke, in his commentary on Gen. 6: 22, says: "Noah prepared the ark, and during one hundred and twenty years preached righteousness to that sinful generation." That does not make it so, of course, but it is proof that I am not alone in thinking that Noah preached and worked one hundred and twenty years. "The Bible in Questions and Apswers," compiled by Brethren Rowe and Klingman, says: "Question: How long was the ark building? Perhaps a great part of the time Noah was preaching, or of the one hundred and twenty years mentioned." However, this seems as near as we can come.

There are some things in the Bible hard to reconcile, caused oftentimes through faulty translation. Noah is called in 2 Pet. 2: 5 "the eighth person. According to Gen. 5, he was the ninth person. It is the grandest book I know, for all that, and I praise God that I can understand and appreciate so much of it.

Silver Point Christian College.

BY HENRY CLAY.

The twelfth term of the Silver Point Christian College closed on April 11. It was beyond doubt the most impressive closing in the history of the Brother Bowser and wife have sacrificed as few would have done to enlighten and elevate the people about Silver Point. At the mass meeting held on the closing day we were startled at Brother Bowser's offering his resignation as president. "What shall we do?" was the question. We knew of no man in the brotherhood that could take his place. Again, we have learned to love him for his work's sake. We were not in an attitude to surrender mildly to this proposition. Hence a few got together and decided to launch a campaign that would secure means to build our school and pay a faculty. We have set about to get twenty-five persons to give fifty dollars each, others to give what they will. We are thankful for the progress made thus far. Pledges have been received as follows: From Henry Clay, $50; J. T. Ramsey, $50: Oddie McGill, $50; G. P. Bowser, $50; P. H. Black, $50; S. P. Pittman, $50; A. M. Burton, $50; S. F. Morrow, $50; O. P. Barry, $50; Annie C. Tuggle, $50; J. R. Holmes, $50; Marvin Lyles, $25; Ambus Stafford, $25; Herman Gibbs, $5. Cash received: From Sister David Lipscomb, $6; Pete Jared, 50 cents; Algood Moore, 10 cents. We heartily thank all these and hope that many more will repond. This move means success or no school for the colored disciples. Which shall it be? What you do may decide the matter. We can, we must, we shall succeed.

The truest help we can render to an afflicted man is not to take his burden from him, but to call out his best strength that he may be able to bear the burden.-Phillips Brooks.

WOU CAN TELL THE PEOPLE OF WHO HAVE IRON IN THEIR BLOOR RONG, HEALTHY, VIGOROUS FOLK,

Iron Will Increase the Strength of on for months without getting benefit from anything. Nervous, Run-down People in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

ONE glance is enough to tell which people have iron in their blood. They are the ones that do and dare. The others are in the weakling class. Sieepless nights spent worrying over supposed aliments, constant dosing with habit-forming drugs and narcottes and uscless attempts to brace up with strong coffee or other stimulants are what keep them suffering and vainly longing to be strong. Their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. Without iron the blood has no power to change food into living tissue and therefore, nothing you eat does you good; you don't get the strength out of it. When iron is supplied it enriches the impoverished blood and gives the body greater resistance to ward off disease. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were alling all the white, have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurishingly increased their strength and endur-simply by taking iron in the proper form.

OF TETTERINE

BY M. S. MASON.

Moderation is the anchor of the soul. What is destroyed is not of so much moment as the harm caused the destroyer. It brings about lack of control, consuming excesses, and weakness of character. We are an extravagant generation in both public and private life. You poor women who never have anthing to wear, quit using all your husband's salary to buy a new dress for every occasion. Watch the bread tray. Quit trying to follow that elusive goddess, Fashion. She is the bag of gold at the end of the rainbow. Live within your income. Don't try to wear dress suits on overall wages. Practice economy in your home and teach it to your children. It is the virtue that stores the land with plenty and makes us independent when the frosts of life's winter have tinged our golden locks with silver. For the proverb is true: "To waste in youth is to want in old age."

It is a home of peace. It is filled with the spirit of the Christian gospel: "Peace on earth, good will to men." Parents, quit fussing. Be sweethearts. You husbands who are always quarreling with your wives about the cooking, be as that dear, patient man of whom I heard. One morning the biscuits were as heavy as lead, and he didn't even frown, but he called his wife to his side and said: "My dear, please don't bake any more biscuits like these." She said: "Why?" He answered with a smile: "You're just too light for such heavy work." That man was a peacemaker. "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God."

Don't quarrel with your children or allow them to quarrel with each other. Keep sweet. The fruits of love, gentleness, and tenderness cannot grow in an atmosphere of hatred, jealousy, and strife. They only flourish where come the golden sunlight, the gentle shower, and the refreshing dews of peace.

It is a home of hospitality. I love the home where the latchstring hangs on the outside. People do not welcome you to their homes as they did in the long ago. They are selfish. They shut themselves up in their houses and, as it were, build a wall about themselves. They have converted the beautiful altar of friendship into a dark attic where the miser counts his gold. They make fashionable calls. O, those fashionable calls! They are hypocrisy itself. The devil rides side by side in the carriage with everybody that makes a fashionable call. There is nothing friendly about them. I like the custom of going and staying all night, leaving off all aristocratic airs and feeling at home. I like the spirit of the old-fashioned church devotions where they closed the services by singing, "Blest be the tie that binds," and after the benediction say: "Go home with me for dinner." I like the spirit of the Southland, where even the morning-glories open, the cotton blossoms nod, and the sweet magnolias breathe their fragrance and bid the stranger welcome within their master's gates. I love the spirit of the Arabian, who never refuses a stranger the shelter of his tent.

Open your homes. Too many times closed doors mean closed hearts. Do not turn the tramp away. Your boy may be begging sometime. Be hospitable. Entertain, and teach your children to entertain. Do not hide the little ones when visitors come. Let them join you. Teach them to receive and be received. This kind of society between friend and friend, neighbor and neighbor, the society of homes, the society of hearts-this is the only kind that is pure in the sight of God. Encourage it. It will save your charming daughter from the snares of the ballroom; it will save your handsome son from the gambler's table.

Last, but not least, it is a home of example. No amount of admonition can take the place of a pure, honest example. Children are great imitators. They form their habits of life by watching others. Every father is a hero in the eyes of his boy. No matter what it is, whatever papa says is right. Parents, that is a great opportunity. How are you going to use it? If you want your child to be industrious, you be industrious; if you want your child to be truthful, you be truthful; if you want your child to be economical, you be economical. A gentleman was one day passing a very beautiful residence, where he was attracted to a commotion on the front porch. Looking more closely, he saw that a man of middle age was pushing a very old man off the steps into the yard. The gentleman's sympathy and sense of justice was aroused and he started to interfere, but the old man threw up his hand and said: "Stranger, stay! Don't touch my boy. The fault is mine. Thirty years ago while this man was yet a lad, in his presence 1 threw my father from my door as he does me to-day. I am only reaping what I have sown."

Tells how to loosen a sore, tender corn so it lifts out without pain.

Good news spreads rapidly and druggists here are kept busy dispensing freezone, the ether discovery of a Cincinnati man, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

Ask at any pharmacy for a quarter ounce of freezone, which will cost very little, but is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn, and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

The discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

When Was It?

BY H. M. PHILLIPS.

I have heard it said that there was a time when a sick person was nursed by those near by without any charges whatever. A poor man having a misfortune was helped upon his feet and encouraged to press on. All the members of a congregation knew each other, visits were often made, no one felt that he was above the others, and all felt a brotherly love for one another. Erring members were seen and asked to return to the paths of righteousness and the persistent evil one was withdrawn from to keep the body pure, while the spiritual restored the fallen and the weak were borne by the strong. Prayer meetings were regular and all church services were well attended; Bible study was loved and the trend of the conversation was on spiritual affairs. None tried to slander the other, and all tried to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." - All paid strict attention to the preaching of the gospel; new truths were gladly received; and when taught the way more perfectly, they would turn with a willing mind to serve in spirit and truth. Music and societies which were not scriptural were not allowed, women as public preachers were unheard-of quantities. and each could give a reason for the hope within him. Money and pleasure were not the main objects in view, nor did one seek to have all to suit his selfish taste without regard to others. All dressed like they were ashamed of nakedness, and show and human praise were not the purposes of life. God's word was learned, believed, and obeyed, and all such stood in hope for eternal life. "When was it?" you ask (and so do I). It must have been when people set their affections upon heavenly things.

Books.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

" Of making many books there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh." (Eccles. 12: 12.)

The most enjoyable company a man can have aside from his family and friendly associates is that of books. Yet there are a few to be found who cannot read or write, who enjoy whiling away lonely hours in wanton idleness, caring nothing about storing the mind with sublime thoughts from the Book of truth or with the passing events of the day. The oldest account we have of books is found in Gen. 5: 1, which says, "This is the book of the generations of Adam;" and it appears like the book began to be made "in the day that God created man." Adam must have placed himself on record. That is as far back as I can trace the making of books, and it is even before "gardening," and was the first occupation in the world. Enoch, the seventh from Adam, surely wrote a book, or Jude would not have quoted from his prophecy.

The advantages people have now over people of a thousand years ago have been obtained mostly by the making of books. By means of books we can learn of the wisdom of Solomon, sing with the psalmist David, muse with the blind poet Homer, and learn lessons of patience from Job; can read of Alexander the Great, as if feasting with the earthly kings; can trace the prophecies of the men of God and read of the life of Christ. We can picture the hills of Oriental lands and learn of the rivers and seas. We can read of the wonderful temple of old and of Joshua at the Jordan shore. By books we learn the ways of the world, far back in the days of yore. By books we obtain the experience, knowledge, and life work of great and good men. Ten books are mentioned in the Bible which are lost. When the Alexandrian Library was burned, there were about six hundred thousand different books destroyed. It was burned because of the obscene literature in some of the books. I am glad that the United States government does not tolerate the making of such books. That library was burned by professed Christians. It must have been degrading. Many books teach good moral lessons not of a religious nature, but that which pertains to everyday life. Locke, of England, who died A.D. 1704, said: "The morality of the Bible doth so far excel that of all other books that for true morality I would direct a young man to none other book than the Bible, specially the New Testament Scriptures. Let him study them, for therein are contained the words of eternal life." Good books and good, loyal, religious papers have quite a moralizing influence in a quiet, Christian home.

Waldo, May 5 .- As different churches have mentioned doing evangelistic work in Camp Pike, we took the matter up at the church meeting to-day and decided that we would like to fellowship the work. Several churches have written to Brother O. E. Billingsley recently to know if he would take the work. Brother Billingsley been employed by the church of Christ in Waldo and near-by points for the past five years, and we are satisfied with his work, and think that he could represent the church of Christ at Camp Pike in an acceptable manner. If the churches throughout the country who are interested in this work will write to Brother Billingsley, we believe that the work can be put on foot at an early date. The church at Waldo will contribute twenty dollars per month toward the work. Address O. E. Billingsley, Waldo, Ark.-William H. Beasley.

Comanche, May 8 .- A door is open for a fine work at Osage City, Kan. Sister George Pomine has secured a house in which to hold a meeting, and have promised to do the preaching if I am able to do so. But in order to hold a meeting of sufficient length and interest to establish the work there, the expenses will be not less than one hundred dollars. This is an expense that I cannot afford to bear alone, having done nothing but mission work now for several months. I have several other calls for similar work, but cannot get to them just now for want of means. But the Osage meeting must be held at once. All things are ready, with the exception of the expense part. Sister Pomine writes me that she can raise a small amount there, but most of the expense must be contributed from outside. I had hoped to reach the work and begin on the second Sunday in May, but find I cannot reach it by that time. So I have postponed the meeting till the fourth Sunday in May. PENNSYLVANIA MAN THANKFUL.

PENNSYLVANIA MAN THANKFUL.

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir: Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years, and have always had trouble with it till I got your appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on; it just adapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in.

It would be a veritable Godsend to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it.

They would certainly never regret it.

My rupture is now all healed up, and nothing ever did it but your appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself, I will say a good word for your appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am.

Yours very sincerely,

JAMES A. BRITTON,

C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir: I never wore the appliance a minute over six months, and was cured sound and well; and I want to say no man ever did any harder work than I did while I was using it—I hauled forty perch of rock too big for any man to lift. I was ruptured eighteen years, and words cannot tell how thankful I am. Use my name if you like.

Yours sincerely,

RUFUS FIELDS,

OTHERS FAILED, BUT THE APPLIANCE CURED.

C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir: Your appliance dld all you claim for the little boy, and more, for it cured him sound and well. We let him wear it for about a year in all, although it cured him three months after he had begun to wear it. We had tried several other remedies and got no relief; and I shall certainly recommend it to friends, for we surely owe it to you.

Yours respectfully,

WILLIAM PATTERSON,

No. 717 South Main Street, Akron, O.

The above is C. E. Brooks, inventor of the Appliance, who cured himself and who has been curing others for over thirty years. If ruptured, write him to-day at Marshall, Mich.

CHILD CURED IN FOUR MONTHS.

21 Jansen Street, Dubuque, Ia. Brooks Rupture Appliance Company.

Gentiemen: The baby's rupture is altogether cured, thanks to your appliance, and we are so thankful to you. If we could only have known of it sconer, our little boy would not have had to suffer nearly as much as he did. He wore your brace a little over four months, and has not worn it now for six weeks.

Yours very truly, ANDREW EGGENBERGER.

Why Ten Reasons

YOU SHOULD SEND FOR BROOKS RUPTURE APPLIANCE.

- It is absolutely the only appliance of the kind on the market today, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.
- The appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of po-sition.
- Being an air cushion of soft rub-ber, it clings closely to the body, yet never histers or causes irritation.
- Unlike the ordinary so-called "pads" used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
- It is small, soft, and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.
- 5. The soft, pliable bands holding the appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.
- 7. There is nothing about it to get foul; and when it becomes solled, it can be washed without injuring it in the least.
- 8. There are no metal springs in the appliance to torture one by cut-ting and bruising the flesh.
- All of the material of which the appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe appliance to wear.
- 10. My reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon to-day.

Remember

I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and judge. Fill mail to-day.

The Supreme Paradox.

On four occasions our Savior affirmed that which we might call the supreme paradox of life. The first is a maxim: "He that findeth his life shall lose it: and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." (Matt. 10: 39.) The second is a purpose: "Whosoever would save his life shall lose it: and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake shall find it." (Matt. 16: 25.) The third is an effort: "Whoseever shall seek to gain his life shall lose it: but whosoever shall lose his life shall preserve it." (Luke 17: 33.) But the fourth is a passion: "He that loveth his life loseth it; and and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." (John 12: 25.) The frequent repetition of this striking statement and the graduating emphasis that is employed not only show its importance in the great Teacher's thought, but also suggest the need of its daily application in the lives of all his disciples to-day. To understand the passage, it is necessary to note the significance of the word "life." The word as uniformly used, except in the last clause of John 12: 25, refers to our natural life as human beings which ends at death. But, like other words, this one also came to have an enlarged meaning, and so denotes as well the spiritual life of man. In this startling paradox of the Savior's the word is used in this double sense. Both meanings are brought into play, so that a free translation would be: "He who, by yielding to persecution and failure to confess Christ, has avoided the loss of his natural life shall lose his spiritual and eternal life, and he who has lost his natural life for Christ's sake shall find life eternal."

Poor Business.

There are three considerations which support this divine principle, the first two of which are borrowed from the vernacular of commercial transactions. To gain the whole world at the expense of one's eternal life is a profitless transaction. It is a matter of poor economy, a foolish bargain which violates ordinary common sense, because it secures a lesser thing at the cost of a greater. To surrender that which is worth the sacrifice of all else is stupidity, even from a business point of view. As Dr. Clarke explains: "The value of a man to himself is here set above all other values in the world." It is like the field that contained the buried treasure; it is like the pearl of priceless value; it is a thing of worth beyond human computation. The highest life, once bartered for anything else, is irredeemable. Hence the Master asks: "What shall a man give in exchange for his life?" It cannot be redeemed, because there is nothing of equal value to buy it back. In the Hebrew letter we are taught that even though Esan had sold his birthright for a mess of pottage, he afterwards sought to inherit the blessing, but was rejected even though he sought it diligently with tears. It was beyond redemption. The same principle of irrevocable choice is observed in the apostle's teaching concerning apostasy. (Heb. 12: 16, 17.) The supreme question in the day of judgment will have reference to loss or gain of the higher life in this world, and each individual's course will be the basis of condemnation or approval. "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels, and then shall he render unto every man according to his deeds." Then the foolish and irrevocable mistakes of mankind will be made apparent. Then we shall understand in largest measure the blessing or the repudiation contained in the Savior's proposition: "Whoseever shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation. the Son of man also shall be ashamed of him, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels." (Mark 8: 38.) 0 0 0

Is Self-Preservation the First Law?

In regard to the direction of personal lives of men and women, I suppose there is no worldly maxim more often quoted than that which teaches, "Self-preservation is the first law of nature"—that is, the preservation of one's natural life is to be considered and sought after above every other motive and purpose. But this our Master teaches should not be made the supreme law of any man's life, because it violates the conditions of discipleship, promotes self-interest at the cost of righteousness, encourages self-indulgence instead of self-sacrifice, exalts the material above the spiritual, seeks the temporal above the eternal, postpones the acceptance of the gospel by making room for financial or social matters and giving the spiritual self the second place in one's thought, and finally results in the loss of that true life which is of infinitely more value than all the world. How easily do we lose sight of our Savior's law and substitute that of man in our dealings with one another! To hunger for popularity rather than righteousness, to break the rules of Christian living for personal advantage, to become unfaithful to New Testament ideals in public or in private life, to oppress for the sake of gain whether by capital or by labor, to violate any of Christ's teachings, means that we are minding the things of men rather than the things of God; it means that we are in danger; it means that we are blinded by the dark pillars of our own selfish desires or else by the dazzling glare of this present life until we can no longer see that which should always be the mountain of our hopes, the higher and enduring life. 0 0 0

"For the Benefit of the Church."

But in the matter of church worship this great lifesaving and life-losing principle should be regarded; for here we find it is so easy to barter the scriptural plan of work and worship in the church for a worldly ideal which will not prove acceptable unto God. So often we find those who acquire a passion for position or power rather than for service; so often we find those who believe in crowds rather than the spirituality of the membership; so often we find those who exalt the beauty of the eye above the beauty of the soul and find more pleasure in entertainment than in simplicity and genuineness of worship. Almost every week we hear of something being given "for the benefit of the church." For example, a little playlet is being widely advertised for the benefit of a certain Christian church. The most charitable thing we can say about these practices is that they are fostered and practiced by those who are honestly ignorant of God's teachings about his worship. We ourselves should watch and pray, lest we, too, fall into some such error.

But What Is Demanded ??

Let us ask the question: Just what duties are demanded—just what sacrifices must be made in order that we fulfill the condition of losing our lives for Christ? That is best answered by reference to this passage: "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." (Matt. 16: 24.) It is necessary that we fulfill every duty which the cross demands, that we make every sacrifice which true discipleship requires. In this age it is not probable that many of us will be required to forfeit our natural lives for his sake, as did many of the early disciples; but if we are true and loyal, we must even yet suffer many things for Christ. We ought to show a willingness to bear our "light afflictions" with cheerfulness and steadfastness; for we have the assurance that "if we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him."

Life Everlasting.

James Lane Allen tells us: "Upon these fields of October greenness there rises out of the earth a low, sturdy weed. Upon the top of this weed small white blossoms open as still as stars of frost. Upon these blossoms lies a fragrance so pure and wholesome that the searching sense is never cloyed, never satisfied. Years after the blossoms are dried and yellow and the leaves withered and gone, this wholesome fragrance lasts. The common people who often put their hopes into their names call it 'life everlasting.'" This is a symbol of the flower which Jesus would place in every man's heart and have him keep it there forever. What more inspiring thought, what more solemn prospect, what more impressive admonition, than that you should seek the higher life? It was the thought of it that evoked the prophet's question: "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not?" (Isa. 55: 2.) It is a question which becomes an earnest exhortation in the New Testament, falling from the lips of the great Teacher himself: "Work not for the food which perisheth, but for the food which abideth unto eternal life." (John 6: 27.)

Poland During the War.

By W. A. Gorski, Honorary Executive Secretary, Polish Victims' Relief Fund.

In his letter to the Belgians of November 15, 1916, Cardinal Mercier, who knew so well the sorrow, desolation, and need of his own Belgium, wrote of Poland: "I also beseech prayers for Poland, which never attempted a war of conquest, but always fought for the liberty of people and for civilization. She is suffering more than we. . . . Her soil has been ravaged by the flux and reflux of armies."

As a matter of fact, for thirty-three months Poland has borne the brunt of most of the titanic fighting on the eastern front. A territory as large as Maine, New Hampshire. Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Maryland, was suddenly transformed into one great battle field for the tramping millions of the armies of many powers, and to-day is but one vast cemetery, one dreary desert of devastation, one deep black scar on the face of civilization.

More than two hundred towns have completely disappeared; twenty thousand five hundred villages have been leveled to the ground; one thousand six hundred churches are in ruins; five hundred thousand young Polish girls have had their lives shattered by the greatest tragedy that can come to a woman. The loss in destroyed property amounts to nine billion dollars—a sum equal to the total wealth of Belgium before the war.

The number of Poles dead from starvation, disease, exposure, and cannon since the beginning of the war surpasses the total losses in killed of all the belligerent armies combined. While the rate of army casualities resulting in death on the western front averages 1.1 per cent, in Poland the death rate is 9.8 per cent. In the majority of invaded districts, not one child under seven years of age remains alive.

Think of it—a country without little children! No babies close cuddled to their mothers' breasts, no babies cooing and laughing in their cradles, no little toddlers taking their first steps, no sturdy little ones going to school. They are all dead, and one can walk for miles along the dreary waste of grim, silent roads without meeting a single child. Can you even think of it with dry eyes and without a lump rising in your throat?

Already in 1916 one heard of eleven thousand older children lying in Warsaw with atrophied limbs—children of the intellectual classes, of professional men, of artists. Lack of food slowly reduced the vitality of both child and mother. The frail succumbed, the strong became frail. Strange stories now come through to us. One hears that in Warsaw three hundred children are born a week and that four hundred die; that of those born many are without eyes, without finger nails. . . .

Out of the twenty million people still remaining alive in Poland, eleven million are homeless, driven into the open, skulking among the ruins, wandering dazed through the woods, creeping into hollows for rest under the stars; hungry, sick, weary, worn, racked with the struggle; subsisting on the bark of trees, on roots torn from the earth, and on the slight help the charity of their own people can give them and the small help from the other nations.

In a cablegram to the American Red Cross, received on November 18, 1917, Prince Adam Sapieha, Bishop of Cracow, states what follows: "The Polish people are threatened with extermination. That word is none too strong. We have practically exhausted our own resources. For three years Poland has been struggling, paying the bills for three-fourths of the charities, only one-fourth of the money coming from the outside; but this winter it cannot be done. The cities of Poland are bankrupt and cannot even support the asylums. Our only hope is in America."

That cablegram is but a corroboration of a statement previously made by a Jewish rabbi, Dr. L. B. Magnes, who, upon his return from Poland, said: "There is a people, a whole people of tens and hundreds of thousands, standing in line asking for bread, asking for soup, asking for the physical necessities of life, so that body and soul may be kept together. As a matter of fact, I did see some people drop from hunger. It is a people that is gradually getting weaker and weaker day by day; the children's legs are getting thinner and their eyes larger and their cheeks more hollow; and then one day they can walk no longer. In Vilna people get soup once a day. And what does this soup consist of? It consists of barley and warm water-no trace of meat, no trace of other vegetables. The same situation prevails not only in Poland proper, but also in Lithuania, in that part of Poland occupied by Austria, in Lublin. It prevails in Lemberg and throughout Galicia.'

Sometime last year the following proclamation appeared on the walls of Warsaw: "The government suggests that mothers having children should send them to Germany to be brought up and educated. Mothers who are willing to make this arrangement will receive one hundred and fifty marks for a boy and one hundred marks for a girl. No other aid will be given." This was signed by Governor-General von Beseler.

To render the above proclamation more effective, one hundred thousand families were immediately expelled from Warsaw to fare the best they could in the open among the ruins of devastated Poland. German charity provides for no one in Poland. It begins and ends at home. Only money can buy food.

In order to shorten this description already too long, let it be stated in brief that all that happened in Belgium was duplicated in Poland, but on a scale ten times greater. Poland has been isolated; her need is even greater than any of the others, and she has received so little.

Four million dollars is approximately the whole amount contributed by the whole world toward the relief of Poland during this war. Of this sum, America gave nearly one-half; in other words, the inhabitants of the United States donated a little less than two cents per capita for the rescue from death by starvation of the descendants of Kosciusko and Pulaski.

Many have wanted to give, longed to give, yet withheld their gifts, feeling that it would be impossible to get relief to the starving millions. It is said that Poland is invaded and held by the enemy; but so are Belgium, Northern France, and Servia. If they were not invaded, there would be no need for relief, no cry for help. Would the French and British nations have contributed millions to these countries and continue to pour forth relief, if they were not convinced that the money reached the sufferers?

When we think of that ringing, pathetic cry of Prince Sapieha, "Our only hope is America," we wonder why America has done so little. It can be only that in her many benefactions this greatest need in all the world has somehow not been thoroughly understood. Big-hearted, generous America always responds to every call of need when she understands and realizes. Of her those selfish words can never be said, "Tired of giving."

Giving is the only real living. Nothing else pays such dividends of real happiness. America has only started to give. Let those who talk about being tired of giving sit down quietly with their conscience and their pad and figure out what is the amount of their giving that has so enervated them. Have they given to the point of real sacrifice? Do they count their Liberty Loan investments—money loaned on the best security in the world and at a high rate of interest, and money to be spent to protect them and their families—as giving?

What the Liberty Loan is to the present generation, the immediate relief of Poland will be to the future ones. Germany wishes to exterminate the Poles, to colonize and Germanize their land in order to have a free right of way for her expansion toward the east, "Poland is the keystone of the European situation," said Napoleon at St. Helena. "The day the White Eagle of Poland comes back to life, that day the Black Eagle of Prussia will cease to exist," declared Bismarck in 1887 at the reichstag of Berlin.

All statesmen of to-day agree that an independent united Poland with access to the sea is indispensable for the reestablishment of equilibrium in Europe. But in order to play her rôle in the future, Poland must be strong, and to-day Poland is slowly agonizing.

For the sake of future peace, for the sake of future generations, that they may enjoy lasting peace and may be spared the sufferings which we are enduring to-day—help—help Poland!

Help the Brethren at Poplar Bluff, Mo.

BY S. H. HALL.

Some of our readers have noticed the statement that the brethren at Poplar Bluff, Mo., have bought a good, secondhand meetinghouse for twenty-five hundred dollars. They are not able to pay for this in cash, and are not able to pay for it on time and have the needed preaching done that is essential to the building up of the cause of Christ at that place. Brother James E. Laird, of Senath, Mo., has promised them a meeting, with a good singer to help him. These men must be supported and the building paid for. Shall we do it? Most certainly, if the interest is taken in the cause that should be taken. We must send "once and again" to the needs of the saints in certain fields till the work is put on its feet. This is certainly the way they did in the days of the apostles. (See Phil. 4: 15, 16.) Now shall we, who boast of being "apostolic in doctrine and practice," be what we claim to be? The first Lord's day in June is set for offerings toward this work on the part of those who will help. Please remember them in a substantial way. Send all offerings to L. M. Ward, Poplar Bluff, Mo. All funds sent beyond meeting the support of the meeting Brother Laird and his helper are to conduct will be applied to the notes on the building; so do not be afraid of sending too much.

A Quiet Meeting.

On the second Lord's day in May our house at West End Avenue had every available seat taken and the rostrum covered with children. It was our intention to start our first tent meeting at Lakewood that night, but our tent chairs did not arrive from Dalton in time. It seemed that every one was ready for a short revival at West End; so we let it begin, without any announcements on cards or in the papers. Every one was asked to work and pray. The revival continued seven days, with five souls baptized into Christ, one by statement, and one brother who had been out of line of duty confessing his sins and reconsecrating himself to God. Besides this, there seemed to have been a general uplifting on the part of the whole church. We had the best continued attendance that we have ever had through the week in a revival at West End.

At this writing our first tent meeting has begun at Lakewood Heights, and the best prospect we have ever had for victory there is before us. This is our third tent meeting in that section. We already have members enough there to start a congregation, but thus far they have preferred meeting with the West End Avenue and South Pryor Street congregations; however, as matters now look, it seems that we will have to look about for a permanent meeting place for another congregation. Never has the work looked so good in Atlanta.

God Is Answering Our Prayers.

Something has been said in the last two issues of the Gospel Advocate about the needs of this field in the way of more laborers and funds to support them. As I was wondering how we would manage to answer all the calls, in dropped Brother C. Petty to see his daughter, who lives here, and who is one of our most faithful members. He had about two weeks to spare, and we put him to work at once. I have just received the following lines from him about his visit to Buchanan and Pleasant View: "We had nice crowds here and also out where Brother Weathers lives, and all seemed to enjoy the services well. This is a good mission field in which some one could do a great work. . . . I hope you had a good day in Atlanta yesterday (May 12), for we certainly had a good day here. I pray the Lord to bless you in your great work. Give my love to all the brethren." Brother Petty is one of our best men, and he knows how to get close to the hearts of the people in the waste places in this State. We hope to have him with us a great deal from now on. He goes to Morgan's Chapel the last of this week, and then hurries over into Alabama for some work. The one important thing for all the Georgia Christians to do is to live as close to God as possible, and continue to work and pray, and God will, through his people, send more laborers our way. Just watch and see.

Supporting the Preacher.

BY C. E. HOLT.

This is a big subject. It is a Bible subject. The great apostle to the Gentiles said: "They that preach the gospel should live of the gospel." That means that preaching is the preacher's business, as farming is the farmer's business. If a man is a farmer, he should be able to live from his occupation. If a man farms and gets his living from preaching, then, of course, he is a failure as a farmer. Before the apostle Peter became a preacher, he had an occupation; he was a fisherman. That was the business from which he derived a support. After he became a preacher, he gave his entire time to preaching the gospel and in looking after the welfare of the church. At least, the facts and incidents connected with his life seem to warrant this conclusion.

I once thought that if people-Bible-reading people-differed among themselves in regard to any point in regard to church work or Christian activity or on any point of doctrine, it was due to the lack of clear, unambiguous statements in the Scriptures regarding the matters over which they differed. I find, however, that in this I was mistaken. Many Bible statements seem too clear to admit of any difference of construction or interpretation, and still we find good, conscientious people differing widely as to the real meaning of these scriptures. Take the question of the eldership. There is no question or subject connected with the church about which Bible teachers differ more widely and more fundamentally. Is it the ambiguity of the New Testament writers on the subject, or is it the preconceived ideas of men which warp and control them in their teaching on this subject? We withhold our opinion and reserve our answer for a future article. But the support of preachers is what now claims our attention. This article proceeds upon the assumption that all the readers of the Gospel Advocate accept the Bible teaching on this subject. There is no duty of the church more plainly taught and emphasized than that those who preach the gospel should get their living thereby. "Making tents" by Paul was only an incident in his life as a preacher, and was never meant to establish an inflexible rule of conduct. It, like many other statements of an incidental nature, has been overworked by some who want to throw off this responsibility.

But we now consider the present conditions which confront us to-day. Many of us have never seen such conditions. The country, in a material sense, is wonderfully prosperous. There is an abundance of food, and yet the most rigid economy must be practiced. We have not only our own people to feed, but we have to furnish a large supply of what the people of other nations use. All classes of men are making from two to five times the amount of money they made in former years, except preachers and school-teachers; and salaries of the latter class have been advanced in some places. But the preachers-what about them? Now here, is the question to be considered, and preachers ought not to have it to do. I believe in an eldership, and this question should be handled by the elders of the churches. But if there are churches which are virtually without elders (and there are churches in this condition), then some of the more thoughtful and more active members of these churches should take the matter in hand and see that the preacher or preachers who work with them are compensated in proportion to the increased cost of living. There is nothing more embarrassing to a preacher nor more hurtful to a church than for the preacher to fall behind with his grocery and dry-goods bills. It costs preachers three or four times as much to live now as it cost them ten years ago. I could prove this by actual facts; but why prove that which no one denies? It is a fact that churches are able to pay this increase without the least inconvenience. This is my reason for calling attention to the matter. I have heard of only one church that, without hint or request from the preacher, increased the preacher's support in proportion to his increased cost of living. Others may have done this, but I am told that many have not done so. Several of the best preachers in the brotherhood have told me that their support is about the same now that it was five and ten years ago. The fact is, brethren, many churches pay the same for regular preaching and for protracted meetings now that they paid ten and fifteen years ago. Now listen to an indisputable fact. When you give a preacher one dollar, you have given him about thirty cents. This means, of course, that a dollar will buy what thirty cents would have bought a few years ago. Had you thought of this? Now do not glance over this hurriedly, throw the paper down, and think no more about it. This, my friends, is a vital question and must receive general attention. Let us have a campaign for an increase in our contributions in every department.

Has Uncle Sam Six Hundred Thousand School Girls to Contribute to the Underworld Life Every Year?

BY T. A. FAULKNER.

Evil men and forces take delight in capturing what might be innocent and popular amusements and pressing them into the furtherance of their dark designs. Who that reads and thinks does not know that the modern dance has long been thus perverted? And more than ever in recent times movements and poses most meretricious and suggestive have been invented. They have spread like a contagion, and thousands of our finest young people have become a moral pestilence. The emissaries of the dance have invaded our schools and amusement centers, and its devotees waste time, dissipate their vitality, and multitudes start in a career of sorrow and shame.

We are confronted by the challenging statement that ninety per cent of the unfortunates of the underworld, coming fresh from our homes and high schools, can trace their downfall to the dance; and in a tragic number of instances they learned the art in some select private dance, academy, recreation center, or school building.

It is as the subtle and deadly foe of health, morals, the home, and the church that we wage our crusade against the dance. The famous evangelist, W. E. Biederwolf, said recently: "The records of the Protestant churches of the United States show that 458,400 new members were enrolled upon their books in 1917." In the "Purity Crusader," I. L. Baker, secretary of the New York Travelers Aid Society, declared: "In 1917 there were 600,000 girls in houses of ill fame, and 1,000,000 clandestines." And thus the kingdom of Satan more than keeps pace with the kingdom of God. The Referee of the Los Angeles Juvenile Court states that ninety-five per cent of the delinquents are from dance halls.

T. A. Faulkner, a former dancing master, testifies from his personal observation that ninety per cent of the vast army on the road to destruction, many to suicides' graves, received their first 'downward start at some dance, given often in some respectable home. The dance of to-day is the greatest asset and weapon the white-slaver has. It is the deadliest menace to the church and the home and must not be ignored. All it asks is to be let alone; will you grant what it asks? It is first the dance, then the café, the saloon, and—damnation!

Theory vs. Practice.

BY J. C. M'Q.

The pendulum swings from one extreme to the other. While it is right to be guided by "it is written" in the worship, it is not proper to devote all our time in contending over private interpretations and hobbies while we do nothing in the service of the Master. Christianity means action and not stagnation. While millions are dying of starvation, it is vain to fall on our knees and pray for them and yet do nothing to warm and fill them. "Even so faith, if it have not works, is dead in itself." (James

It is not enough for a preacher to claim to preclaim "all the counsel of God." Paul labored at Ephesus about three and one-half years, and during that time he declared unto them "the whole counsel of God." From this we are not to understand that he declared all that God knows or willed or even has revealed, but that he had not suppressed or concealed anything through fear or favor that might be profitable to the Ephesians concerning the salvation of man. He had proclaimed the whole doctrine of Christ crucified, with repentance toward God and faith in Jesus Christ as the Messiah. It is helpful to interpret the twenty-seventh verse of the twentieth chapter of Acts in the light of the twentieth verse: "How I shrank not from declaring unto you anything that was profitable, and teaching you publicly, and from house to house." The great apostle tells us that he was crafty in the presentation of the truth in order that he might win men to Christ. "But be it so, I did not myself burden you: but, being crafty, I caught you with guile." (2 Cor. 12: 16.)

The preacher who preaches any other than the gospel of Christ does so at the peril of his own soul. The minister who presents his own private interpretations, theories, and hobbies, instead of preaching the word of God, is under condemnation. Christ condemns all such in scathing words: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye tithe mint and anise and cummin, and have left undone the weightier matters of the law, justice, and mercy, and faith: but these ye ought to have done, and not to have left the other undone. Ye blind guides, that strain out the gnat, and swallow the camel!" (Matt. 23: 23.) We cannot give too much emphasis to the necessity of preaching the word of God. We must recognize the supreme authority of God. Paul admonishes Timothy: "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth." (2 Tim. 2: 15.)

God, however, demands a good practice as well as a good theory. Theoretical religion will not save. We must not stop with contending for the faith, but must go forward to perfection. "Pure religion and undefiled before our God and Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world." (James 1: 27.) It is to be deeply deplored that so many who contend for the gospel of Christ swing to the other extreme and really do nothing or little in relieving the starving millions.

The Salvation Army, on the other hand, pays little attention to the preaching of the word, but is doing much in the way of caring for the poor and needy. Christians should learn a lesson from "Salvationists." The correspondent of the New York Times declares: "When the memoirs of this war come to be written, the doughnuts and apple pies of the Salvation Army will take their place in history." It is explained that while the Salvation Army has not funds or millions back of it, it has "the motherly sense of some good women and kindly men who discover the way to the hearts of the doughboys." The good that the Salvation Army is doing is described by a correspondent, as quoted by the Literary Digest, as follows: "It is about six o'clock at night in one of the toy villages in which American soldiers are quartered back of their lines. The boys in brown have had their 'chow.' In the midst of the wooden one-story buildings there is a smaller hut. The door is crowded; it is crowded inside. A soldier boy who used to play in a moving-picture show is operating an outof-tune piano in opposition to a phonograph; but most of the boys are crowded about the counter where a young 'lassie' and a 'major' are passing out doughnuts, six for a franc, and apple pie at the equivalent of ten cents for a big slice. And-mark the point-if the boys have money and if they haven't money, they get the pie just the same. On this particular day the 'lassie' of eighteen years, with a helper, had made forty-nine apple pies and two thousand doughnuts. She hadn't made enough for the demand. Then there were chocolate and coffee served in large mugs at cheap prices-prices within the reach of the man who hasn't much left for luxuries out of his thirty-three dollars a month."

While urging our readers and all Christians to worship as guided by the Holy Spirit, I would also impress upon them the great necessity of making sacrifices for the truth. The Bible abounds in teaching urging us to be doers and not hearers of the word only. Christ says: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." (Matt. 7: 21.) Again, he says: "And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6: 46.) Christ will say to those who love and do his will: "Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me." To those who are contending for hobbies, theories, and opinions, and leaving undone the weightier matters of the law, he will say: "For I was hungry, and ye did not give me to eat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not. . . . And these shall go away into eternal punishment: but the righteous into eternal life." We should not expect the conversion of the world while we are doing so little in the service of the Master. We who know the truth should be ashamed to allow others to be more earnest and more zealous than we in the great work of feeding the starving, lifting up the fallen, and guiding the erring to "the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world." I sometimes become discouraged when I realize how much we know and how little we do. My heart grows sad when our preachers eloquently and matchlessly declare the word of God, while they nullify the importance of the message by a faulty and imperfect life. May God help us all to overcome the trials and temptations of this world and to so live that when we come to pass out of the shadows of this world we may enter into the glory light of heaven.

BY E. A. E.

COMMENDATORY.

It is encouraging and hopeful to note that several letters as well as verbal expressions of approval of the articles now appearing under this heading have been received.

All are appreciated because they show the influence the articles are having; but all cannot be published for lack of space. I take the liberty to publish an excerpt from one letter. Brother J. N. Armstrong, editor of the Gospel Herald and president of the school at Cordell, Okla., sees the danger ahead, to which the articles refer, and writes as follows:

Brother Elam: I have just read your article in the Gospel Advocate of April 18. I enjoyed it, and I write this note to tell you so and to express, also, my judgment of the timeliness of it. As little as is being said about it, we are having a new order of preaching on some vital points. I am not an old man, but I verily fear our young preachers are not grounded in the cardinals of Christianity. I wonder if we are at fault. I fear we have not been stressing some things at Cordell as we should. I know we have wanted to, but have we done it? Through the influence of your article I purpose now to make some changes in our Bible teaching in the school.

As I rode along on the train this morning meditating on that article, I determined to write this note and especially to ask a favor of you—a big favor, too. It is this: we want you to come to Cordell next school year—some time during the year. We cannot pay you for this trip. . . . Could you see your way clear to give us your services for two or three weeks next fall, winter, or spring, if we could pay your expenses? I should like to announce in our catalogue now preparing that you will come and teach us series of lessons on the eldership, other cardinal truths . . . and vital things of your own choosing. My idea is not "protracted-meeting sermons," but teaching. I know of no better way to tell you what we want, or feel that we need, than to say like your articles now appearing in the Gospel Advocate. Can you come?

I have written Brother Armstrong, the Lord willing, I can go.

A CHANGE NEEDED.

As Brother Armstrong says, more is needed than the continual round of "protracted-meeting sermons." These may be good, but much more is needed. There never was greater need than there is now of teaching what the church is-its foundation, construction, spirit, work, head, and eternal destiny; that it is "the pillar and ground of the truth," has been purchased with the blood of Jesus, and God must be glorified in it. (Eph. 1: 22, 23; 3: 20, 21.) Some preachers and other disciples of Christ are about to forget that God has a church, should be glorified in it, and cannot be glorified in any other religious institution. Brother Armstrong says he intends "to make some changes in our Bible teaching in the school." He knows better what to say in regard to that than I do; but I do know many changes in teaching the Bible in churches and to sinners must be made-in other words, the very great change from not teaching it at all in many places to feaching it must be made. While the Bible as a textbook should be taught in all schools for the young, the church is "the pillar and ground of the truth," and God holds it responsible for the teaching of his will, full and entire. Nothing must overshadow the church.

As to teaching, God has appointed elders as teachers in every church and made it a part of their solemn duty to teach his word and to see that nothing else is taught-even to stopping the mouths of false teachers. (See Tit. 1: 5-11.) Elders have a charge allotted to them, but are forbidden to "lord it over" this charge; they are to be examples to the flock and to "tend" it-watch over, nurture, feed, and protect it from false teachers within and wolves in sheep's clothing without. (1 Pet. 5: 1-5; Acts 20: 28-32.) Many preachers-good men-may not realize it, but the course they pursue in allowing themselves to be dubbed "the minister" of a particular congregation and in "taking charge of the work," etc., is gradually shoving God's appointment of elders and his ordained work for them to the background and overshadowing his order of things. It is as much rebellion against God to change his order here as elsewhere. Shall we plead for the New Testament church and New Testament order of work and worship and utterly ignore the elders and their God-given qualifications and appointed work? Yet, occasionally we learn that some self-conceited autocrat in the form of a young preacher who, because he has been requested by the elders to assist them in teaching the word of God in a given place, has assumed control, constitutes himself the chairman and head and general boss of the whole work of the church, kicked the elders around to suit himself, played politics by deposing some who opposed him and selecting others who favored his rule, and outraged the church, the Lamb's bride, and poses as "a minister of the gospel of peace." Satan never had a more successful emissary in destroying the harmony of a church and overthrowing the work of God than such a dictator. Such gross outrages against the appointments and work of God must be taught against until in humility the church of Christ will be properly respected. Elders of a church who suffer themselves to be thus set aside, cuffed about, and run over by some bigoted little preacher, who never gave a dollar toward building the house or made a sacrifice toward building up the congregation, but, having fleeced the flock, is ready to fleece and disturb and divide some other flock, are untrue to their sacred trust. They should, in the love of God and the truth and protection of the church, set such a preacher aside, warn all other churches against him, and proceed with the good work of the Lord.

No one can commit a greater sin against Christ than to tear afresh his body by dividing his church over oneself. It is distressing to know this sin is now frequently committed and seems to be on the increase. A REFORMATION OF NOT A FEW PREACHERS IS NEEDED.

How can preachers lead the church and others away from the world and into the humility and self-sacrifice, love, and spirit of Christ, when they themselves have the spirit of the world, preach after the manner of the world and wisdom of men; when they are worldly ambitious, vain, seek their own and not their neighbor's good, and love the applause of men; when they are jealous and suspicious of one another and watch one another; when they have no more regard for the body of Christ than to rend it and crucify it afresh over their own conceits; when they fail and sometimes refuse to pay their debts and to render to all their dues; when they yield to their own passions and lust and lack self-control, humility, and the meekness and mind of Christ?

We all know that Jesus is our great and perfect Exemplar; that we are to follow Paul, because he followed Christ; and that Paul taught Timothy and Titus and teaches all preachers now to be examples in "all good works." To disobey God at this point is to lead many to destruction. What can preaching amount to, if the preacher's example is not righteous, pure, and good in all particulars? As Brother Armstrong says, this is one of the cardinal points and vital principles which need to be stressed and impressed until some preachers reform.

At the time when the kingdoms of Judah and of Israel were at the height of their worldly prosperity and glory and reveled in wealth and luxuriousness, while at the same time they were in the deepest depths of corruption and ungodliness and on the verge of destruction, there were in them very many prophets and priests; but these prophets and priests were as corrupt as the people. It was "like people, like priest;" not "like priest, like people," as the passage is frequently quoted. The priests pandered to the people, sought to please the people, and lived and taught as the people demanded and not as God required. The same is true to-day: it is like people, like preachers. People-people of the church-in many places "will not endure the sound doctrine," but "will turn away their ears from the truth, and turn aside unto fables," and "will heap to themselves teachers" of fables, who will gratify their lusts. (2 Tim. 4: 1-4.) It is most lamentable that heaps of such teachers can be found. Many seem far more afraid of displeasing men than they are of displeasing God.

It must be repeated so often that every one will know that preachers can have no choice of what they are to preach and teach. God settles that. All true and faithful servants of God who are preachers will preach and teach all that which God commands them to. No man should presume to decline to preach all the will of God. All should be afraid to do this. No man should dare to preach more than the will of God. What is man, that he should undertake to teach God?

It must be repeated so often that every one will know that what a man preaches depends upon why he preaches. If he preaches to please and honor God, and, therefore, to save souls, he will "preach the word," "preach the gospel," preach "the whole counsel of God," and determine to know nothing "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." If he preaches to please men and seeks popularity, he will preach the things which men want and which will gain him what he seeks. If he desires place and position, he will preach so as to obtain them. If he preaches "for filthy lucre's sake," he will preach that which will procure the greatest amount of cash. Preachers who have been called of God to preach the gospel will preach the gospelnothing more, nothing less. Preachers who themselves have the spirit of Christ and are godly and who seek the salvation of men will preach "all things that pertain unto life and godliness." Preachers who know what the gospel is-its facts, commands, promises, life, and hope-that it is God's power to save from sin, the grave, and Satan here and hereafter-that Jesus is "the way and the truth and the life," and that no one can comeounto the Father except through him, and that there is no other name given under heaven whereby people can be saved-and who really seek the salvation of people will not preach themselves, but Christ Jesus as Lord, and themselves servants for Christ's sake. Paul-God through Paul-tells most plainly that which must be preached to all classes of people, filling all the different spheres of life and sustaining to one another all the different relationships-masters and servants, husbands and wives, parents and children, old men and young men, old women and young women, old widows and young widows, teachers and the taught, the full-grown in Christ and babes in Christ, saints and sinners, the elders in the church and the ones who are not elders, etc. He who fails to teach all this or anything else which God commands is either ignorant of the word of God or presumes to know better what to teach than God himself, and is unfaithful to God and the church and to sinners also, while he who refuses to do so is a traitor to God and the church. Preachers who honor Christ and seek the glory of God will preach, not only all that God bids them preach, but will study to show themselves approved unto God and to handle aright the word of truth, that they may not be put to shame before God.

Things That Are Profitable.

BY E. G. S.

Paul says: "This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men." (Tit. 3: 8.)

There can be no mistake about the things here spoken of by Paul being profitable to those that observe them. The passage has special reference to the souls of men. The apostle was not talking about money values, but about what would be of value to the souls of men. Money will not save the soul. It may feed and clothe the body. Our souls are of more value to us than all the money of this world would be, if we could control it to satisfy the demands of our bodies. The things that are of the highest possible value to us are things that pertain to our souls and that can be with us after the soul is forever done with this fleshly, mortal body. We shall enter into a new state or relationship when our souls are separated from these mortal bodies. After death there are two states or relationships provided for men. One is called "heaven' and the other is called "hell." To one or the other of these our souls are certain to go after death. Heaven will be the home of eternal happiness; hell will be the place of eternal suffering. Our destiny, the place of our existence after death, will be decided by the kind of life we live on earth. If we lead a faithful, Christian life here, we will be taken to heaven; but if we reject the Christian religion here, we will be sentenced to eternal torment at the judgment. The only sensible thing, therefore, is to be faithful in the Christian life on earth. If we will do this, we need not have any fear of eternal torment, but may rest assured of a life of true happiness after death.

No man can be truly happy while he is rejecting the Christian religion. Christianity is the only power in our reach that can save the souls of sinners; but Christianity cannot save the souls of those that will not obey its divine requirements. God's decree that "he that believeth not shall be damned" is a positive one that all the world cannot set aside. But the world should be exceedingly thankful for the grand decree that "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Eternity will certainly ring with shouts of praise for this divine arrangement. Christians, therefore, should never cease to praise God for the gospel plan of salvation; and the saved in heaven will never cease to praise and adore him for the divine plan through whose provisions their souls were saved, and never cease to praise him for his wonderful love and mercy as expressed in the gospel, wherein his holy will may be found. With the gospel plan of salvation plainly revealed in the New Testament, there is no reason why any soul in Bible lands should be lost; yet there are thousands and millions under the sound of the glorious gospel of Christ who are rejecting the gospel to the loss of their souls, despite all its heavenly and lovely invitations. There has never been, in all this world, such a display of love and mercy made for man's eternal good as is displayed in the gospel plan of salvation. See the Son of God, the Lord of glory, bleeding and dying upon the cross for the redemption of man! Never was such a sacrifice made as when Jesus died that sinners might be saved. No wonder that no other provision has been made to save people that reject the gospel of Christ. People that reject that would reject anything else that might be provided. What a wonderful thing it would be if all who are not Christians could be aroused to become such at once and take no further risk on the salvation of their souls! For if their souls are lost, they are eternally undone, without any possibility of remedy; for there is no sort of intimation anywhere in the Bible that those that refuse to obey the gospel can possibly be saved. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16: 16.) It is just as certain that those who will not believe and obey the gospel will be lost as that those who believe and obey it will be saved. Man could not have devised a plan by which he could be saved; neither can he possibly save himself if he refuses to obey the gospel. So the people of this world must believe and obey the gospel just as God has presented it or be lost. There is no possible way of escape from it.

But the question is: Why should there be any failure to believe and obey, when God makes such a sure promise of salvation to all that will believe and obey? The matter of saving the obedient is in the hands of the Lord and will be attended to in all cases of obedience to the gospel. No man should ever think for a moment of changing any item of obedience to the gospel. If we obey it just as God gave it, he will be certain to save us; but if we refuse to obey, he is sure to condemn us.

Our Lord and Heaven.

BY DR. W. H. MURPHY.

Dear Lord, I know thou lovest me, And I know I am thine; I've found the way high up to thee, And I know thou art mine.

I know, my Lord, thou lovest all Who will abide in thee; Thou gavest thy dear Son to call, To bear the cross for me.

This life, my Lord, without thy love,
Would make me all undone;
I would not wish to live above,
Away from thy dear Son.

No joy, no hope—I'd be so wild Without thy tender care; I would not be thy trusting child, My life would be so bare.

In heaven there is a resting place
For all who enter there,
Where we may see the dear Lord's face,
And have his love to share.

To any church or person who will send us six new subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, accompanied by twelve dollars, we will give one dozen copies of our new hymn book, "Praise Him." In response to our special request, Mr. Gorski,	secretary

In response to our special request, Mr. Gorski, secretary of the National American Committee of the Polish Victims' Relief Fund, has furnished us with a late report of the appalling conditions now existing in Poland. When you read his graphic recital on page 483 of this issue, you will see that the conditions there are as terrible as those depicted in Armenia and Syria, but with no great relief in sight. I encouraged Mr. Gorski to believe that the printing of these facts in the Gospel Advocate would elicit a quick and generous response, and I believe it will.

One of the above-named contributors, Mrs. Mary L. Wise, writes: "I have bought three hundred dollars' worth of Liberty bonds. I am seventy-five years old and sick most of the time. I don't get to go to church at all, but help in the cause all I can. I have been a member of the church for fifty years. This won't be my last contribution."

A. D. Gardner, of Paragould, Ark., expresses a thought worthy to pass on to others: "May this war teach all of us, at least, the fundamental principles of Christianity."

D. P. Craig, of Ingomar, Miss., writes: "May the Lord awaken all our sleeping souls to a sense of real Christian love and fellowship."

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Armenian and Syrian Fund or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

If you mean to act nobly and seek to know the best things which God hath put within the reach of men, you must fix your mind on that end, and not what will happen to you because of it.—George Eliot.

Missionary

Correction.

In the Gospel Advocate of March 28, in the statement of money forwarded to our missionaries in India on February 28 by Miss Nellie Straiton, appeared a paragraph headed, "To Brother and Sister Martin." This should have been "Brother and Sister McHenry." Included in this paragraph was an item reading, "J. G. Malphurs, Florida, $1," which should have been "J. G. Malphurs, Florida, $5."

Always Abounding.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

Brother R. S. King, of the Nashville Bible School, writes encouragingly as follows: "We have decided to assume the support of Brother Ishiguro, of the Otsuka Church, and give five dollars a month to Mrs. Yoshie and Miss Andrews. We are a small congregation, about a dozen families (except the school), and we cannot do much, but we want to do all we can. We want to do all the good we can, for we do not pass this way again. We want to give some to India this year and have planned quite a bit for home missions."

Brother Ishiguro receives twelve dollars and fifty cents a month, and ten dollars to the two sisters makes twenty-two dollars and fifty cents a month to the work in Japan, besides India and "quite a bit for home missions." This begins to look like the little church at the Nashville Bible School is really getting in earnest. If all the other churches would only do half this well, there is no telling how much could be done. If all the other churches of like size would give as much even in a whole year to foreign fields as this church gives in a month, the results would be far ahead of what they now are. Brethren, why not let us wake up and begin to serve the Lord as if we meant it?

Total, $61.50. This total covers the amount cabled ($50) and the cost of the cablegram ($11.50).

The ten dollars sent to Brother McHenry by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hays was sent for the starving brethren men tioned in Brother McHenry's recent appeal. The five dollars from Earl C Smith was also sent for this purpose.

This month I received, to help pay postage, three cents in stamps from a brother in Florida, twenty-four cents from a sister in Oklahoma, and thirty-four cents from a brother in California. I appreciate this very much indeed. I am very glad to report that my expenses for postage, stationery, etc., are getting heavier. I am glad because that indicates that I am getting contributions from a greater number of people. I hope they will keep on increasing until we double and treble the amounts we are sending now. Just recently I bought and paid for, personally, a new typewriter, as it was necessary for me to have this to help with my work.

As many of you already know, Brother Armstrong-Hopkins died recently, and Sister Armstrong-Hopkins is in urgent need of money. I have not yet received particulars and do not know just how heavy her expenses have been. However, it would be well to respond liberally. In fact, I have received a generous response from the brethren in Fort Worth and expect to receive more. I also feel sure that as soon as the brethren over the country read this, as well as my recent article on this subject, they will contribute as quickly and generously as they are able. Address Miss Nellie Straiton, 1030 South Lake Street, Fort Worth, Texas.

In a letter I received from Mrs. Maud Durham, Archer City, Texas, she states that she lives among sectarians and has not heard a gospel sermon in two years. Perhaps some preacher or brother living near there, or who expects to be in that locality soon, might be able to do some good work there. There might possibly be an opportunity to establish a church there. That would be "home mission work."

Training Little Children

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Article 11.

Simple, Homemade, Ludestructible Scrapbooks Are the Most Satisfactory for the Little Folk,

We have been intensely interested in watching our little daughter with her first books. In addition to their educational value, they are a source of great pleasure and have grown to be her daily companions. When she was about fourteen months old, she was given her first books-a small linen one containing pictures of animals. These we would call by name as we pointed them out to her, and as they became familiar she would point them out herself. After she had learned to talk, she could say the names also. Linen books containing pictures of objects in colors were next given the child; and when she had become acquainted with these, group pictures were added to the collection.

By counting the objects in the various groups-not over five at first-and by calling attention to their color, the child learned both number and color. Emilie Poulsson's book on "Finger Plays" is an enjoyable supplement to pictures of this kind.

We found simple, homemade, indestructible scrapbooks most satisfactory and attractive. Anticipating the book stage, we had collected a number of colored pictures from magazines. For the leaves of these books we used brown paper muslin, cutting a number of pieces twelve by twentyfour inches, and, after laying them one on top of another, stitching them through the center, thus making a book twelve by twelve inches when closed. On the pages we mounted the pictures with paste.

One book contained pictures of fowls, turkeys, chickens, ducks, geese, guinea fowls, and some pigeon and crow pictures also. In another book we pasted pictures of four-legged domestic animals. Many of the pictures showed the family life of these in their natural surroundings. They proved most interesting, as the child's experience is confined almost exclusively to the family of which she is a member, and animal families naturally appeal to every child.

Our little girl is now nearly two and a half years old, and she has never tired of her scrapbooks. Through them she has become acquainted with the different animals and the sound made by each, and is able to connect the animals and their calls.

The number of books of this kind which would be of great educational value to the child is almost limitless. Birds, flowers, vegetables, trades, farming, and history might all be presented to the child in this form. As our little girl grows older, we have planned books of harvesting pictures showing the various stages in the growth of wheat, from the preparation of the soil, planting of the seed, and so on, until it passes through the hands of the miller and baker and finally reaches the child in the form of her daily bread.

Another interesting process is the building of the home. from the trees to the finished product. This book will contain pictures of the forest, where the trees grow, the man felling the great trees, the horses and wagons which haul the trees to the sawmill, the cutting and planing of the boards, the train which transports them to the lumber yard, the boards piled high in the lumber yard, the carpenter at work putting the boards together, the house in the process of construction, and, lastly, the finished home and the family who lives in it. From these process books the child can be led to realize that it takes rain, sunshine, and warmth to make the trees and the grains grow, and that there are many people to thank for providing our simplest food, and that, above all, God is the great source of everything.

"Mother Goose Rhymes" and the child's favorite, "The Night Before Christmas," are always welcome diversions, and after repeated readings the child is able to supply words, lines, and later whole verses, thus incidentally developing the memory.

With the exception of a few simple books, which are really story-telling pictures, I would advocate the telling of stories rather than the reading of them to small children. The primary object of story-telling is to stimulate the imagination of the children, cultivate a taste for good literature, and guide them to the best books.

Lead Me On.

BY CLYDE DUNCAN.

Lead me on, dear Savior, on! Lead me from the paths of wrong, Let me live a holy life, Let me live in thy sunlight. Lead me on, O Savior, on!

I want to walk in thy pure path, I want to be always free from wrath; Let my soul be filled with love For the home up there above. Lead me on, O Savior, on!

May no doubts nor fears arise Of that kingdom in the skies; May thy Book forever guide Strangers on the billows wide. Lead me on, O Savior, on!

May death find me well prepared For that mansion pure and fair: May life find my path well trod, Let me find a home in God. Lead me on, O Savior, on!

Christ's confidence in us is unspeakably touching. . . . He felt the world was safe in our hands. He was away, but we would be Christs to it; the Light of the world was gone, but he would light a thousand lights, and leave each of us as one to illuminate one corner of its gloom, Drummond.

"Go With God."

Among the peasants of Russia a very common form of farewell is "S' Bokhem," which means "Go with God." It is their usual good-by, and even a short journey is prefaced with what seems to us strangely like a benediction. Frequent repetition may perhaps lessen the sense of what the words mean on the part of those using them, but the meaning is there, and is very suggestive and significant. There is in this good-by phrase a lesson for us, who may well learn from the Russian peasants in more than one exercise of simple trust. Would it not be a grand thing for us to set out upon our journeyings, long or short, with the thought that we were going in company with God? If we consciously went with God, we could not go to some of the places and do some of the things that occasionally we do; and the sense of his presence would be not only a restraint in this way, but a positive comfort and help.-

Both Sides of the Quaker Argument.

We clip from the Literary Digest a well-written statement of the Quaker argument against war, and also a statement quoted by the Literary Digest from The Living Church supporting the position the United States has taken and is taking in the war. Both sides are fairly, concisely, and strongly set forth. We are giving this because we think no stronger argument can be made for or against war.

The Friends, at their Philadelphia yearly meeting on March 29, restated their position, which is one that places themselves outside any participation in the war. This, in its printed circular, the meeting calls "its utmost contribution to humanity's deepest needs," and a letter signed by the clerks of the meeting declares that the pronouncment "was adopted without a dissenting voice as the official statement of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends." Furthermore, the meeting desires the "widest publicity possible" for its statement, which is a reaffirmation of this declaration passed by their forefathers in 1660:

"We utterly deny all outward wars and strife, and fightings with outward weapons, for any end, or under any pretense whatever; this is our testimony to the whole world. The spirit of Christ, by which we are guided, is not changeable, so as once to command us from a thing as evil and again to move unto it; and we certainly know, and testify to the world, that the spirit of Christ, which leads us into all truth, will never move us to fight and war against any man with outward weapons, neither for the kingdom of Christ nor for the kingdoms of this world."

The Quaker statement places its opposition to war as something much more than any single command of the Old or the New Testament, and continues:

"It is our faith that the way of love by which our Master, Jesus Christ, met and conquered evil, remains for his followers to-day the true method of combating wrong. For us, as for him, this involves refusal to use means which, like war, violate love and defeat its ends; but it does not mean a weak neutrality toward evil. For us, as for him, it means a life of action devoted to the heroic purpose of overcoming evil with good. The unspeakable sufferings of humanity are now calling us and all men to larger sacrifices and more earnest endeavors to put this faith into practice. To such endeavors we dedicate ourselves.

"In accordance with this faith, we desire to maintain all our relationships to-day.

"To our beloved country we affirm the deep loyalty of grateful hearts. We long to help her realize her noblest capacities as a great republic dedicated to liberty and democracy. But we believe that we best serve our country and all humanity when we maintain that religion and conscience are superior even to the state.

"To President Wilson we declare our appreciation of his steadfast and courageous efforts to keep the aims of the United States in this great conflict liberal, disinterested, and righteous.

"To our fellow countrymen who are following the leadings of conscience into ways where we cannot be their comrades we give assurance of respect and sympathy in all that they endure.

"Finally, for all men, whether they be called our enemies or not, we pray that the sacrificial love of Christ, stirring us to repentance, may reconcile and unite all mankind in the brotherhood of his spirit."

The statement leads The Living Church (Episcopalian, Milwaukee) to declare that "Quakerism is sixteen hundred years too late to be entitled to the epithet Christian." It further declares that—

"Those who outside the Society of This."

"Those who, outside the Society of Friends, and sometimes within the communion of the church, avow the principles of Quakerism, and ally themselves with these other forces that seek to make it impossible for America to fulfill her part in the present war, are fighting against the abolition of war, against the supremacy of a righteous peace." The Living Church goes on to maintain that "a principle must be tested by its result" and asserts that should the principles of Quakerism "once prevail on earth the end of civilization will be in sight, for there will be nothing to oppose to piracy, whether on sea or on land." But—

"Quakers hold that 'the way of love, by which our Master, Jesus Christ, met and conquered evil, remains for his followers to-day the true method of combating wrong.' Yes, the 'way of love.' Do we, as a nation, best show our love for the afflicted people of Belgium and France by a national neutrality, which redounds to the great benefit of the American pocketbook, or by pledging our lives and our fortunes to save those people from the frightful torments that are being wrought upon conquered peoples by the aggressor to-day? And even toward the German people themselves, would it be an act of love to permit them to be unopposed in a conquest that would mean for them the triumph of the power of Satan over their very selves?

"This American nation stood, a year and more ago, on a high eminence and beheld all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them. It was an exceedingly intoxicating vision. The gold of the world was pouring into its coffers. Factories were working to their utmost capacity and wages were very high The national supply of millionaires was being greatly multiplied. Shortly ahead loomed the vision of America dominating the world's markets; of Wall Street controlling the destines of all nations; of the American dollar the world standard, and the wealth of the world centered within our borders. It was a most alluring picture. 'All these things will I give thee,' was being whispered in the American ear, 'if thou wilt fall down and worship me.' The principle of pacifism said, 'Yes.' Profworship me.' The principle of pacifism said, 'Yes.' Profiteer and Socialist and pro-enemy interests all said, 'Yes.' The Society of Friends is saying. 'Yes.' It was the Christian conscience of the nation, despising the comforts of peace, throwing away the results of profiteering, repudiating a false conception of Christianity, defying the combination of Socialism and Kaiserism moving hand in hand, that said: 'Get thee behind me, Satan.' It was the Christian conscience of the nation that preferred abstinence and perhaps poverty that sent the nation's sons to war and pledged the heart of the nation at home to sustain them. And in these awful days, when the power of evil is slowly pressing back the armies of God and of righteousness on the western front, because Russians have surrendered to the principle of Quakerism plus Socialism plus Kaiserism. and there is little left that we in America can do except pray and redouble our efforts to get men and supplies across the water, it is the knowledge that we are fighting for God that sustains us; that the fight that our own men are making beside the men of France and of England and of Belgium is offered, in a mighty groan of suffering, as the world's prayer to Almighty God: 'Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven! Use us, we pray thee, as the foundation upon which to build thy kingdom; accomplish, through us, thy will on earth! Thus shall we be content.'

Always Something to Do.

Christians should render Christian service to Christ. As soldiers of the cross, they can find much to do. In rendering service to Christ and to our country. Christians should do all to the honor and glory of God through the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. It does not follow that Christians who are prompted by a desire to relieve the sufferings of the starving millions and to dress the wounds of the wounded are in any way encouraging war or that they are belligerents. The motive gives character to the action. Christians are justified in doing everything that they can do consistently to bring this terrible war to a righteous and speedy termination. The dying groans of millions and the agonizing cries of the starving for help and food are teaching Christians to lose sight of their selfishness and to do things in a large way. Selfishness is the damning sin of the age and has led many down to everlasting death. Christians are not their own. They belong first to Christ, and next they owe allegiance and obedience to their country. Christians, as such, should do all in their power to lessen the massacre, the bloodshed, and the awful crimes that are now so prevalent throughout almost the whole world.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

T. W. Phillips, of Fort Worth, Texas, writes that he is in far-away Phœnix, Ariz., in a promising meeting.

From J. D. Northcut, South Pittsburg, Tenn., May 13: "We are entering the second week of the meeting here with fine crowds and one addition. J. D. Gunn was with us Saturday."

On Friday, May 17, at the Hermitage Hotel, in this city, Mr. Watson W. Williams was married to Miss Moxie B. Hall, A. B. Lipscomb officiating. The Gospel Advocate extends heartiest congratulations.

From John W. Hedge, Kilgore, Texas, May 13: "Our audiences were exceedingly large at Myrtle Springs yesterday. I preach for the church there monthly, and will hold their annual meeting, beginning on the second Sunday in July."

W. F. Ledlow writes: "Thorp Spring Christian College is now permanently located at Thorp Spring. It will not move, as has been contemplated. The college plans to do greater things, and we feel sure that the college will be fine another year."

From Willis G. Jernigan, Grand Saline, Texas, May 13: "My meeting three miles east of this place began last Friday evening. We are having large crowds and fine interest is being manifested. Three have obeyed the Lord in baptism to date. Pray for me."

From E. M. Borden, Little Rock, Ark., May 17: "I am now in the midst of a meeting with my home congregation, Twelfth and Valmer Streets, this city. The interest is good and we are expecting some visible results. My next meeting will be at Lexington, Tenn., beginning on the first Sunday in June."

From Ben West, Ennis. Texas, May 13: "Four spirited services, large crowds, and one baptism yesterday. Ten of our men and boys spoke during our eight-days' meeting just closed, surprising the people who came by the freedom of the speakers and the preparation. Brother Fitzgerald, superintendent of the Sunday school, will have eight little girls in charge of the Sunday-night service with a scripture dialogue."

From F. L. Young, Cleburne, Texas, May 15: "The Iowa Park meeting continued two weeks. The elements seemed to be against us. Our tent was blown down several times. One was baptized. I go next to Godley. I am to begin a mission meeting at Somerville on June 16. In a town of three thousand there can be found only three or four members of the church. If they furnish the meeting place, I will give them three weeks. Trust in God and do good."

We have some good things to tell about the Nashville meetings. Brother Elam closed his work at Chapel Avenue on Friday evening. Many of us enjoyed his strong and earnest presentation of gospel themes. Several were baptized. William P. Walker is doing some mighty fine work at California Avenue, in West Nashville. Sixteen have been added to the congregation and the meeting continues. Interest in G. C. Brewer's meeting at Belmont Avenue is growing daily. R. V. Cawthon made a good start in the tent meeting on Trinity Lane. His meeting at Green Street resulted in several baptisms.

From E. G. Collins, 10 West Fifty-second Street, St. Elmo, Tenn., May 13: "Since the first of the year we have been living here, and I have been bookkeeping during the week and preaching on Lord's days, and otherwise helping in the Lord's work as opportunity presented itself. I am leaving my work to go into evangelistic work. I shall begin next Lord's day, May 19, at Dunlap, with Brother Taylor. I have some time in June I could hold meetings or sing; then I take up some work in Alabama. My wife will spend the summer at her home in Nova Scotia, Canada; so I will have no place to call my home."

B. P. Odeneal, of Tyronza, Ark., has written the following note to Brother E. G. Sewell: "I am in needy circumstances. I am seventy-three years old, and have grandchildren that depend on me to some extent. I called through the Gospel Advocate for help, but failed to get it. Will you be so kind as to put a little piece in the Advocate for me? It will have more influence than if I called for help. I would rather not ask for help, but under the circumstances I will."

Christians who live near to Brother Odeneal should investigate his condition and help him in the best way.

From L. Meade Williams, Tulare, Cal., May 14: "T. B. Larimore closed a month's meeting in Los Angeles and is now with the church in Fresno. I went to Fresno last Lord's day and heard him both morning and evening. To say I enjoyed it would be expressing it in very mild terms. I had not heard him since I left Kentucky, and it seemed good indeed to see him stand before a well-filled house of anxious listeners and speak from the Book of books. We are still hoping to have him with us in Tulare some before he leaves the State. The work at this place is moving along very nicely. We had Brother Langpaap, of San Francisco, with us a few weeks ago. He gave us words of encouragement while here."

From C. D. Crouch, St. Jo, Texas, May 14: "It may be of some interest to my friends among the Gospel Advocate readers to know that our oldest child has been down about three weeks with typhoid fever, and I have had fever for more than a week. The doctor has now pronounced it typhoid. I am out of the work of preaching the gospel for some time, but I hope to be preaching again by the last of June. I shall need to keep busy when I am able to work again, and I shall be glad to hear from brethren who need my services. We are sorely afflicted, but God will make our afflictions a blessing,"

May the Lord bless and sustain our brother in his trial. Brethren should write him at once about meetings.

R. D. Smith writes: "I closed a very pleasant year's work with the church at Mount Pleasant, Texas, on the first Sunday in May. The interested portion of the church at Mount Pleasant is quite small, but most of those who pretend to take an interest are as faithful as I have met with anywhere. The burden naturally fell heavily upon the faithful few, but they met it without complaint. Hardly anything we asked for in the work was withheld. If we needed funds, they were forthcoming, and freely; if we asked other privileges, these were alike granted. In short, they treated us royally. We could ask no better. In regard to the little band at Mount Pleasant, I desire to say that I do not know of a church that conducts itself more in keeping with the religion of the Master. We learned to love them greatly for their faithfulness to the cause and for their great kindness to us, and we pray God's blessings upon them in their work. On the last night of my stay in Mount Pleasant all the other churches dismissed their services and invited their people to attend our meeting. The pastor of the Methodist Church tendered us the use of their tabernacle in order that we might have room for all. This gave us a large audience to speak to in our closing service. We all appreciated this kindness shown us, and more especially the fact that they did not ask us to make any sacrifice, but said to us: 'Conduct the meeting as you see fit.' We all felt that much good was done by this meeting. The work at Terrell opened last Sunday, with good attendance at both hours. We are well pleased with Terrell and the church, and feel that there is a great opportunity for service here."

HALF SICK, HALF WELL

A Condition That Will Not Improve Upon Itself.

In the Spring the depressing condition that many call Spring fever often runs through families and neighborhoods.

hoods. This indefinite, hard-to-describe state of poor health probably means that you are thin-blooded and anemic. Exhausted thin blood gets thinner, low vitality falls lower, poor appetite becomes poorer. Then the thoroughly exhausted system can no longer resist, and on comes the prostrating illness or serious disease.

or serious disease.

Treat the half-sick, Spring-tired condition with that splendid course of medicine—Hood's Sarsaparilla, to fortify the whole body; Peptiron, to ironize and make rich red blood; Hood's Pills to rouse the liver to its regular daily duties,—and the half-well revives to perfect health. Each medicine is valuable in itself but is trebly so when used in this combination.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If it is coated, your little one's stomach, liver, and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless; doesn't sleep, eat, or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhæa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for bables, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Brethren Want a Meetinghouse.

BY LEONIDAS T. HOLLAND.

Last year, during the month of October, I went into Missouri and assisted Brother James E. Laird, of Senath, in a meeting at Wardell. While in that State, I also assisted in a meeting at Stewart, conducted by a Brother White, of Burton, Ky. But it is mainly of the Wardell meeting that I wish to speak at present.

The meeting began on Saturday night, October 13, in a Holiness church. We found no church of Christ there, but the Holiness people were kind and interested enough to let us use their building for our services. There were very few members of the church of Christ there, and we realized at once that there was plenty of work to be done. The few who were there were very faithful, earnest, hardworking Christians, and it was with their help that we succeeded in stirring the little town so completely. On the first night of the meeting a good audience was present. I amsure it was the oddity of the service and the newness of it that brought them out that night. To say the least of it, we made such a profound impression on them that they continued to come every chance they had. We not only had the hearty cooperation of the Holiness people, but some of the "sects" as well lent us their constant help. One couple, a Baptist brother and his wife, was there almost every time and gave invaluable support in the song service. Although this man did not obey the gospel in that meeting, I am sure he was convinced of his errors, from his disposition toward us at the close of the meeting. So far as baptisms were concerned, there were none. Yet a vast amount of good was accomplished, and so great was the effect of the meeting that one of the strongest members remarked: "We must have a house in which to worship. From the amount of interest shown and the vast good that has been done, we cannot afford to let the spirit and enthusiasm di down. We need a house, and we are going to have one,

Now I come to the point. These few brethren organized themselves into a church as soon as Brother Laird and I left them. They have been meeting from house to house since the meeting, but are still saying, "We're going to have a house," and, brethren, they are going to have a house, if one man has to build it. What I want to know is this: How many churches in Tennessee or elsewhere will respond immediately to the call? How many individuals will make contributions? If you are so you can, it is your duty to help in this time of great need. The church at Wardell, brethren, is a noble, worthy branch of the one great church, and it deserves your consideration. As stated above, one brother felt so strongly the need of a house that he said he would build it by himself if need be. But why should he do it alone? Put yourself in his place, brethren. Suppose you realized that the salvation of many souls depended on your having the gospel of Christ preached to them, and perchance, if you did not do all that was in your power, you would probably be the cause of some soul's being lost? You would wake up and desire that every one around would get wide awake to his duty. The Baptist brother mentioned above has said recently that he would donate the lot on which to build. Think of it-a Baptist with as much interest as that! How much have you? How do you know but that the building of a church at Wardell and the preaching of the gospel might cause that one man and many others to correct the errors of their past lives, leave the practices of man-made creeds and doctrines, and turn their wandering footsteps into the path that is ever illuminated by the word of God? I plead with you, brethren, that you wait not. Please remit something immediately, even though it be but little. Heed the call of Jesus Christ, and as the great call from Macedonia rang out and was answered loyally, so let this call reach into your very hearts and cause you to realize that to-day is the day to work; the night soon comes, when no man can work. Any help will be very greatly appreciated. Send all contributions to Brother Jim Wallace, Wardell, Mo.

The Black Horse.

BY J. PERRY HODGE.

Adam and Eve were in all points tempted like as we are—that is, through the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life—as may be clearly seen from the account given of that event; but they yielded, and their yielding was sin; for "when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." (James 1: 15.) "For the wages of sin is death." (Rom. 6: 23.)

The spirit of the devil as the tempter is no new character in the world, for he was in the garden of Eden in that character, neither were the activities of the devil in this character confined to the future at the time of John's vision, for, as we have seen, he tempted Jesus; and not only did he tempt Jesus, but he tempted every man whose lusts drew him away through such enticements as were held out to (James 1: 14.) The results, him. however, of the devil's activities, as it would in time affect the church, were future at the time John wrote of the black horse and his rider; for the time came after John's day when the kingdoms of this world and the glory of them were offered to the church upon the same terms that it had been offered to Jesus, and such as gave heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils departed from the faith (1 Tim. 4: 1) and became the tare element in the church; and this element, by prostituting itself, committed spiritual fornication by forming illegitimate unions with the kings of the earth, who gave to this union their power and strength to the full extent of their kingdom (Rev. 17: 13, 17), thus forming the papal empire, the beast of Rev. 13: 1-10 and Rev. 17: 7-17, to whom the dragon, "that old serpent called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world" (Rev. 12: 9), gave his power, his seat ("throne"-Revised Version), and great authority (Rev. 13: 2). This is the beast that was taken, and with him the false prophet, by the rider of the white horse, and cast into the lake that burns with fire and brimstone. (Rev. 19: 20.)

Why kingdoms of world-wide dominion are called "beasts," as at Dan. 7: 1-28; Rev. 13: 1-10; 11: 16; 17: 1-18, I do not know; but it may be on account of the beastly nature of such governments and the certainty that their dominion is derived and maintained by force such as beasts employ against each other in subduing other beasts. Anyway, the papal empire is the beast of Rev. 13: 1-10, and its dominion over the kingdoms of this world for more than a thousand years was given to it by the devil when the tare element in the church, of which element the papal church was composed, yielded to the temptation of the devil and fell down and worshiped him, for they worshiped him (Rev. 13: 4); and it was probably on account of this great apostasy in the church, this great falling away, that John was shown, under the symbol of the black horse and his rider, the spirit that would entice and draw away through their own lusts such as would be enticed; for the price of every one that can be enticed is gratification of the lust conceived, and that which he gives in exchange for this gratification is service to him who promises its gratification. This accounts for the balances in the hand of him that sat on the black horse and the voice of trade that was heard to come from the midst of the four beasts; for in every temptation there is the offer, the acceptance or rejection, and the exchange if the offer is accepted.

In the same way that the false prophet is any one who preaches seductive false doctrines, the tempter is any one who entices another to gratify the lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the eyes, or the pride of life. It is the spirit of the devil in both. Both the false prophet and the tempter is in the church, though not of it; but though both are in the church, they are in every false system of religion on earth, and the tempter is as active outside the church and outside every other system as he is in them; his activities extend wheresoever men are. The spirit of both is opposed to godliness and, therefore, to Christ; both are antichrist, and their work degrades man to the level of a beast; and, being more intelligent than a beast, it might with propriety be said it at their combined work is the production of "the beast," of which Peter says: "These, as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly perish in their own corruption; and shall receive the reward of unrighteousness, as they that count it pleasure to riot in the daytime. Spots they are and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings while they feast with you; having eyes full of adultery, and that cannot cease from sin; beguiling unstable souls; a heart they have exercised with covetous practices; cursed children: which have forsaken the right way, and are gone astray, following the way of Baalam the son of Bosor. who loved the wages of unrighteousness. . . . These are wells without water, clouds that are carried with a tempest; to whom the mist of darkness is reserved forever. For when

YES! MAGICALLY! CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You simply say to the drug-store man: "Give me a quarter of an ounce of freezone." This will cost very little, but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn from one's feet.

A few drops of this new ether compound, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, should relieve the soreness instantly; and soon the entire corn, root and all, dries up, and can be lifted out with the fingers.

This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man who says that, while freezone is sticky, it dries in a moment, and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

Do not let father die of infection or lockjaw from whittling at his corns, but clip this out and make him try it.

Calomel Salivates and Makes You Sick

There is no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone-a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid, which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it does not make you sick and cannot salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmiess.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick, and nauseated to-morrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue, or sour stomach. they speak great swelling words of vanity, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through much wantonness, those that were clean escaped from them who live in error. While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of corruption." (2 Pet. 2: 12-19.)

The rider of the black horse has a pair of balances in his hands, and the voice of trade is heard, as though there might be buying and selling. A measure of wheat as low as a penny, and barley three times that cheap. Esau sold his birthright for a morsel of pottage, and men and women who are led by the fleshly appetites sell their right to the tree of life for a single gratification of what the world has to offer them. Truly the spirit of the natural brute beast is the spirit that guides them in this commerce. What care they for religion, true or false? Neither true nor false prophets are heeded by them, but the gratification of the lusts of the flesh are the rewards they seek. They love the wages unrighteousness, as did the old prophet Balaam, and they hasten to run after such rewards, as he did.

Duty of a Priest.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

In the year 1872 I was in a debate with a man who said that Christ was not King now, but was only a Priest, and that he could not be King and Priest at the same time. I will admit that I am older now than I was then, but I endeavored to show him the duty of the priests and of the great high priest. And as Christ is our Priest through whom our spiritual sacrifices are offered to God, and he presents them to God for us, should he give up his priestly office in order to become a King for a thousand years over in Jerusalem, then not a millennialist in all the holy land of Jerusalem could offer a prayer to God, or a spiritual sacrifice of any kind, because they would have no great high priest to present them to God. Thus for one thousand years God would be deprived of all spiritual honor, praise, or spiritual sacrifices. Won't that be a delightful time for men without a Priest? Melchisedec was king and priest both at the same time, and was a type of Christ; and as there must be a similarity between the type and the antitype, when Christ became a priest after the order (in like manner) of Melchisedec, he was, therefore, King. That forever settles the kingship of Christ. And the Almighty knew more about this than any millennialist, and he by the prophet Zechariah said: "Behold the man whose name is The BRANCH; and he shall grow up out of his place, and he shall build the temple of the Lord: even he shall build the temple of the Lord; and he shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his throne." (Zech. 6: 12, 13.) The above needs no comment as to Christ being both King and Priest. Christ, as Priest, did not officiate in the temple made with hands, which was only a figure of the true spiritual temple which he built. As Priest, he entered into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us. As our Advocate, he surely presented the case to his Father. As our great High Priest, he surely set forth his crucifixion, his death, his lifeblood being shed. As a Redeemer, he surely spoke of his own resurrection. Surely God accepted him as the Mediator through whom all spiritual priestly offerings and prayers, praise, and thanksgiving should be Perfect Trust.

If I may be permitted to speak of myself, I would say that my own temperament is not naturally buoyant and hopeful. I am rather inclined to look on the dark side of things, and am subject to periods of great depression. These come often without any apparent cause. They are due, I think, partly to physical conditions, partly to mental habit, and partly, no doubt, to weakness of faith. Oftentimes I can only say with the psalmist: "Why art thou east down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance and my God." We have the divine assurance: "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee." I believe that. I believe that perfect trust would bring perfect peace. As perfect love casteth out all fear, so perfect trust would remove all anxiety. This is the teaching of Paul, who was entitled to speak as an oracle on the subject of the afflictive dispensations of providence. "Be careful [anxious] for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus."

The mysteries of our holy religion, such doctrines as the Trinity, the Deity of Christ, the atonement, and the resurrection of the body, must be accepted by a simple act of faith. They do not admit of demonstration. The words of Tennyson are profoundly

Strong Son of God, immortal Love, Whom we, that have not seen thy

By faith, and faith alone, embrace, Believing where we cannot prove.

In the same way, the mysteries of providence must be accepted in a spirit of trust, of simple acquiescence in the will of God. The supreme virtue of paganism was fortitude; the supreme virtue of Christianity is submission to the divine will

There is much in regard to the awful conflict that is desolating Europe, and which threatens the whole world, that calls for a steadfast trust in the providence of God. He has not abdicated the throne of the universe in favor of the Kaiser. The ultimate triumph of pan-Germanism is unthinkable. It would set the world back ten centuries. A universal world empire has been the dream of great conquerors in the past, but it has never been realized; and if such an empire could be established, resting upon brute force, it would contain the seeds of its own dissolution. The world is governed by ideals, not by force. As Dr. Beck has well said: "The weakness of Germany is her moral isolation. She has openly defied the ethical standards of modern civilization and has set up a military despotism through which she aims to rule the world. As a result, she has sunk to-day to the moral level of Mohammedanism. Germany is more cruel and barbarous than the Turk. There has been no such band of cutthroats and murderers as the Potsdam gang since the Algerine corsairs were driven from the Mediterranean."

Dark days may come to the people of America. There were many such during the four years of our Civil War. We are fighting against a powerful and unscrupulous foe, who heeds no law of humanity, no sentiment of justice, no appeal to conscience, no cry for mercy. It is a time for Christian people to live near to God, to put away every idol out of their hearts; and to be much in the spirit of humble confession and earnest prayer. Closing the Breweries.

The following letter from the United States Fuel Administration, at Washington, D. C., will be of interest to all who believe in temperance and true economy:

Mr. A. B. Lipscomb, Nashville, Tenn. -Dear Sir: The petition, signed by yourself and about two hundred and forty other citizens of Nashville, requesting the closing of the breweries during the period of the war, has been received.

Under an Act of Congress approved by the President, the United States Fuel Administration was created. Among the powers granted in this Act is authority to regulate and control the fuel of the country, to the end that the least possible suffering exist on the part of individuals and essentials.

It is not within the province of the Fuel Administration, and would be a serious breach of the trust imposed upon it, to regulate any industry to accord with the sentiments of any individual or group of individuals.

As you are probably aware, it was decided early in the war that the con-sumption of foodstuffs by distilleries was not justifiable from an economic standpoint, and all distilleries were closed and have remained so.

The brewing industry is admittedly a large consumer of fuel, and, as such, comes justifiably under the consideration of this department. Realizing that, though the coal situation is much improved, still some further curtail-ment was warranted, the United States Fuel Administration called a committee of the brewers to meet with them on March 14, and at that time a very substantial curtailment in barrelage was agreed to.

We have thus exercised the power imposed in the Administration to conserve fuel by directing a reduction of its use in this as in other industries, and it has been made perfectly clear to the brewing interests that, should conditions warrant further curtailment, an order even more drastic will be forthcoming. Yours very truly,

U. S. FUEL ADMINISTRATION. P. B. Noyes, Director of Conservation.

BY J. R. BRADLEY.

I see that Brother E. G. Rockliff, in the Gospel Advocate of May 16, page 475, has another article on the question of time spent by Noah in building the ark. Of course it makes but little difference how long the time was that he was actually at work on the ark. But let us look at the facts as stated in the "grandest book 1 know," as he says; and if we cannot ascertain by the facts the exact time, these facts will furnish us food for thought.

To begin then: "Noah was five hundred years old: and Noah begat Shem, Ham, and Japheth." (Gen. 5: 32.) "Noah was six hundred years old when the flood of waters was upon the earth." (Gen. 7: 6.) "And Noah went in, and his sons and his wife, and his sons' wives, with him, into the ark, because of the waters of the flood." (Gen. 7: 7.)

Now, between the "five hundred years" and the "six hundred years" these boys had to be born, grow up to marriageable age, select wives and be married, so as to enter the ark with Noah-all inside of one hundred years' time, between the time they were begotten and the time of the sixth-hundreth year of Noah's life. Also, during this hundred years' time God gives Noah the specifications, how to build the ark, and Noah goes to work, gets it completed, and he and his wife, his sons and their wives, all enter into it. Now the forty days and nights' rain begins. (See Gen. 6: 14 to Gen. 7: 5.)

Now, Brother Rockliff, all this had occurred inside of one hundred years, if Bible statements mean anything at all. Why say, then, that "Noah was a hundred and twenty years working on that boat?" Of course, Peter says "God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing" (1 Pet. 3: 20); but how long God had already been "waiting" before the "preparing" began, no mortal can tell. Yes, "Noah was a preacher of righteousness" (2 Pet. 2: 5), and may have been preaching several years before those boys were born. How could Noah be "a just man, and perfect in his generations" (Gen. 6: 9), and not be all the time "a preacher of righteousness?" Of course, God gave a time of "respite," of "a hundred and twenty years" (Gen. 6: 3), as Brother Rockliff says, and the time of "God's waiting while the ark was a preparing" is certainly embraced in the "one hundred and twenty years," as Peter says; but that is quite different from saying "all the one hundred and twenty years were consumed in the building of the ark." May the Lord help us to be so prepared that we may enter into the rest that remains for the people of God.

BY J. B. NELSON.

Thinking that the many friends of the late Brother John T. Poe would appreciate the contents of this letter, I send it to the Gospel Advocate (with some private things cut out) for publication. No preacher ever wrote me as many good, Christian letters as Brother Poe. He was one of my best friends and took great interest in my work, and never failed to admonish me to be true to the Bible, which I have always tried to do. I hope to see the good brother in glory.

Longview, Texas.-Dear Brother Nelson: Your letter from Coalgate, Okla., is just now to hand. Glad I have succeeded in waking you up. Thanks for compliments. I am getting very many nice letters like that, with some fine compliments, which is all very nice well appreciated; but I am not yet fat (physically) on them, but have fallen off in the last few months some twenty-five pounds. Fact is, I have been sick for the last seven weeks, and begin to think I am too old to "come back." I am nearing the gates of "the I am nearing the gates of "the Great Divide," and shall soon pass through. It is well. The brethren have concluded that "Brother Poe and a few others are too old and feeble to conduct protracted meetings, and we will get younger men." . . . I study the message of God to men, and how best to tell it to be effectual. Still, I preach the same old gospel. And doubtless even you have found that this is not so essential as modern sensation. Be it so. I shall, by the grace of God, go on preaching the old gospel to the end. And I am not "for sale," nor to be bribed. A leading digressive, and a good friend of mine, told me not long ago that if I had cast my lot with them I "could have been the 'biggest' and most popular preacher in Texas." I told him what preacher in Texas." I told him what kind of men God called great, and that I was trying to win his approval. care very little for the fulsome praise of the (scripturally) ignorant masses who can cry "Hosanna!" to-day and "Crucify him!" to-morrow. I am not my own, anyway-I belong to Christ; and if any want to buy me, they must apply to my Master-Christ; and, in that case, I know there are none who could pay the price he gave. Consequently, no angel, man, nor devil can purchase me—never! Nor am I so foolish as to seek the popularity and glory of the world, so long as I can nestle safely under the wing of Almighty God-the Supreme Ruler of the Universe-who has made me coheir with his own Son to every blazing sun and every revolving world that moves and shines in endless space. And I-a king-to sell myself to play the clown to an audience of men who dance and play and laugh in wild delirium on the verge of eternal ruin! No, no. Life here is too short to trifle with interests that reach on into eternity.

But, as I am quite feeble, I must change; I must switch on to another track, as I have other matters I wish to say, and am already weary enough to lie down. Like Brother McGarvey said of himself in his last days, "I am getting weak in the knees." It would

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone, ECZEMA. I have handled over one million cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am convinced the disease is due to an excess of acid in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. This acid must be removed.

This acid must be removed.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say it can be cured, I mean just what I say — C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast experience has taught me a great deal that would be of help to you. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than I or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write to me for free trial, just blame yourself. No matter where you live, I have treated your neighbors. Merely dropping me a postal today is likely to give you more real comfort in a week than you ever expected to enjoy agaim. Do it right now, your very life may be at stake.

give me great pleasure to visit your family once more. You have a noble wife, and, like me, you outmarried yourself. Well, what's the use in a man trading if he can't make something?

Yes, I think if -- knows when to stop, he will let the woman question stop. But he is sure to come back with 1 Tim. 11: 13-15, which has reference to another matter altogether—that is, to another matter attogether—that is, to women's preaching and usurping authority over men. I left this untouched to see if he would run to it. I do not regard — as a deep thinker or close reader. I heard him preach once on "The Atonement." I thought he made a poor thing of it. with him the same night I heard him preach, and told him next morning not to imagine that sleeping with me would make him any smarter, so he would not go off and jump on everybody he met, like a bulldog; but it did no good to advise him. Ever since night he has seemed to have a grudge at every other dog he meets, and many he doesn't meet.

I have had a time with "cranks" lately on the woman question, Sunday schools, classes, literature, etc. I asked Showalter to take a hand and try to settle some of them, as I was sick and able neither to think nor write; and he turned loose a dandy big gun.

I hope you are having a good meet-I wish I was in one and was well.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

One of the brightest and most entertaining of all our Sunday-school publications is The Young People, a fourpage weekly, devoted especially to the interests and welfare of young people of both sexes, but which will prove a channel of cheer and blessing to older ones as well. This periodical has just been consolidated with THE BIBLE STUDY HELPER, and presents the strongest and most essential features of both in an improved form. Three pages are given to stories of an entertaining and elevating character and articles of an educational nature, by gifted and well-informed writers, strikingly illustrated by photo-engravings and line drawings; and one page is devoted to a clear and coneise presentation of the Sunday-school lesson, historically and exegetically, by A. B. Lipscomb, one of the editors of the Gospel Advocate, in which are presented the thoughts of many of the world's best thinkers. The size of the page is 1034x14 inches. Greer.

Sister Emma Greer was born and reared in Davidson County, Tenn. She gave her heart to the Lord quite early in life, and was a member of the church of Christ for about twelve years, during which time she was a faithful Christian, doing what she could to lead others to Christ and to upbuild his cause. On Tuesday morning, April 23, 1918, at 10:30 o'clock, God saw fit to take her from her labors, and, at the age of forty-seven years, she fell asleep in Jesus. She leaves a devoted husband, three daughters, one son, one sister, three brothers, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Funeral services were conducted by Brother M. Keeble and the writer at the Jackson Street Church in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends. us be watching and ready, for we know not the time when the Master will call S. W. WOMACK. for us.

Grant.

Charles Wesley Grant was born on June 7, 1864, at Randolph, Ala., and died at his home, near Olustee, Okla., on April 14, 1918. Brother Grant carried good cheer and earnestness with him wherever he went, his feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. No congregation of which he was a member could be lifeless, for he had life and to spare. He was at home in the assembly and helped others to feel the same. "Diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord," was well exemplified in his well-ordered life. He bore ill treatment with a patience that made one think of those who first trusted in the Lord. believe he desired to live, above all else, for Christ, his invalid wife and his baby boy, the only child at home. When brethren wrote of Brother Grant's serious sickness and later that he was no better, I could not think his sickness would be unto death. Hope, though disappointed, lives on and on. "Thanks be unio God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." E. MILLWEE.

Murphy.

Mary Redding Murphy was born on January 11, 1884; obeyed the gospel at eleven years of age; was married. to I. C. Murphy, on June 4, 1902; and died on March 25, 1918. I first became acquainted with Sister Murphy about seven years ago while attempting my first protracted meeting with the Ephesus congregation, of Maury County, Tenn. Since that time I have had the pleasure of being with that splendid little band of worshipers, composed chiefly of Murphys and their relatives, in three other meetings and have visited them occasionally I always found the subtween times. ject of this sketch to be one of those queenly characters who impress you with the beauties of true Christian, womanly dignity and refinement. She and Brother Murphy were ideally mated. Never have I seen two more lovable characters brought together as man and wife, and their life was beautifully reflected in the lives of their children. Their home was such as delights the heart of a servant of the Lord-one that breathed the spirit of culture and refinement mingled with an air of devotion to the Master's cause. Of their four children, two girls and two boys, I baptized the eldest, Louise, last summer while Brother Rutherford and I were there in a meeting together. Brother Rutherford and I conducted the funeral exercises at the home, after which the body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Columbia, in the presence of a large gathering of sorrowing relatives and friends. God's blessings on the aged parents, the heartbroken husband, and the motherless little ones!

Armstrong-Hopkins.

George F. Armstrong-Hopkins was born in Farmington, Del., on March 25, 1855, the son of John and Mary A. (Taylor) Hopkins. Being bereft of his parents at about the age of fifteen years and being left with sufficient means, he acquired a good education. first being graduated from Wilmington Conference Academy, Dover, Del., in the autumn of 1880. The same year he entered Dickson College, Carlisle, Pa., from which institution he received the degree of B.A. on June 28, 1883; while three years later, in 1886, the degree of M.A. was conferred upon him. He was very much loved by his classmates, and, being of a poetic turn of mind, he was chosen to write the class ode, which he did to the delight of all. I might add that later in life he was the author of some beautiful hymns-" The Laborers Are Few, After receiving his education, he etc. was intimately connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church, serving as pastor and in other important positions and afterwards was sent by them to India as a missionary. He was first married to Miss Kate B. Sometime about the year 1912 he was convinced that baptism by immersion is the only baptism that is valid, and, as a result, was baptized into the church of Christ by Brother L. S. For about one year previous to his death he was not able to do much work, which seemed to worry him a great deal, as he was a man who had led a very active and useful life. Infidel Answered.

At a well-known hall in London an infidel club held its regular meeting. Mr. Bradlaugh, a noted lecturer, delivered a scathing attack on Christianity and dared any man to answer him. The chairman said: "No one here is likely to try, Mr. Bradlaugh. We are all of your way of thinking." But a gas fitter arose and said: "I have been a member of this club for five years. You all know me. Some months ago I lost my work, and I was ill, and, to make things worse, my wife was ill, too. Not one of you came near me, though my illness was known here. But some one came, and that man and his wife nursed us and provided for us, otherwise neither my wife nor I would have been alive to-day. That man was a city missionary whom I had driven from my home with threats. When I was well enough to think, I asked myself why he had been so kind to me, and I could not tell. So I asked him, and he told me he had done it for love of Christ. Now that is my answer to Mr. Bradlaugh. I say that a religion which will bring a man to the bedside of one who has hated and cursed him, and returns good for evil, love for hate, is a good thing for this troubled life, and I take it for myself. I have seen it in operation, and I know it is good." -Sermonizer.

Funerals.

I do not know when or where the custom of preaching funerals began, but I think it a very beautiful and fitting one. When our loved ones are called away, friends may come to comfort us, they may weep as we weep, but there is ever present in our hearts a sore place that no earthly balm can touch. The emptiness of words, however well chosen, is felt on every occasion when we are called upon to offer solace to bereaved ones; and how often are we lost in this wilderness of sorrow, and confusion is our portion, and the proper word fails us, and we must abide in the silence! But at the funeral, when God's word has the right of way; where the preacher talks of the Father; where the people sing of heaven; where prayers go up from hearts that have borne like sorrows-it is there that the soothing balm of heaven comes down into broken hearts, like the dew on Hermon, as it can in no other place. After some years in the ministry, having preached a great many funerals, but never having had one in my own home, I came home one night from my work, and wife said: "Papa, Throgmorton is very sick." Throgmorton was our fifteen-year-old son. and as promising a lad as could be found in the land. I watched by his bedside for only a few days, and then, with my own fingers, I closed his eyes in the long sleep we call death. I had thought that God had called him to preach. My hopes perished in a day. My heart had felt pain before, but not like that. Friends came, and they were so kind; I shall never forget But nothing helped like the funeral service in the church. The preacher's words of comfort, taken like a live coal from the altar, fresh from God's book; the sweet songs of Zion and the tender prayer of an old schoolmate-how they did bring courage and comfort! When that service was over, I believed in funerals as never before. Here our holy religion is put to its severest test as to its power to comfort, and there I came to know by experience that it indeed had power to comfort even in the presence of the lifeless form of one who was more than the world to me.

And, too, it is here that the minister may not only offer words of comfort to the bereaved, but may also give warning to the unsaved, many of whom attend funerals, at least on some occasions, that rarely, if ever, are found in the church on other occasions. Many have been led to seek the salvation of their souls as a result of funerals. I remember, some years ago, to have preached the funeral of a little babe. Neither of the parents was a Christian, but in two weeks I had baptized them both.

In the years I have been in the ministry I have had many a sad funeral. I have preached the funerals of drunkards, suicides, men killed by accidents on railroads and in mines, murderers, and unsaved persons dying at home. But I have never compromised the truth and "preached them to heaven" unless I had reasons to believe they were saved. Neither did I wound the feelings of the bereaved, and yet f think I gave comfort to the mourning ones. I know there is a question in the minds of many whether the funerals of wicked people should be preached; but for reasons already suggested, I think so. In preaching the funeral of a wicked woman, some years ago, I had an opportunity to tell of sin's destruction of all that spelled happiness, in a way and to many that under other circumstances I could never have had. The woman had led a desperate life I went to her home at ten o'clock, after preaching, one Sunday night, and prayed with her as her spirit went out. Before she died, she asked me to let her funeral be preached in the church, and for me to warn sinners of the wages of sin, using her own misspent life as an example. But even in this case I did not "preach her to hell." We can preach at the funerals of wicked people without doing that in a direct way. Although the deceased has left no evidence of having gone to rest, yet I doubt if it is the province of the preacher to say this one or that one, as an individual, has gone to the bad world; we may be mistaken. It is enough that we say that the believer is saved, the unbeliever is lost, let it apply to whomsoever. Blessed is that preacher that has the fineness of ministerial etiquette that he can preach at any funeral and neither wound feelings nor compromise the least jota of the truth as it is in Jesus. I am glad that, as a general rule, preachers are not paid for funerals. Because, first, everybody else that does anything is overpaid. The coffin costs too much, the undertaker and livery stables charge exorbitant prices, while the lot in the cemetery sells at the rate of many thousands of dollars an acre. Therefore, it gives the minister an opportunity to show his sympathy for the bereaved in a way that ought to make an impression for good. In the second place, this is all in most instances the preacher is asked to do. Others have sat up while the deceased was sick or helped in other ways. So let the preacher do what he is asked to do and what he is fitted to do, and expect nothing. If anything is given him, that is all right; but let it be known that we preachers do not "charge" for funerals, as do Catholic priests.

Yes, let us always do all we can to soothe the sorrows of those whose hearts are broken on account of the death of loved ones. As Christian brethren and sisters, we should never be too busy to attend the funerals of those who die in our midst. I preached the funeral, recently, of a good old lady who had lived a quiet and inoffensive life in the community. When the hour came for the funeral, the husband of more than fifty years of wedded life looked out for the neighbors whom he expected to come to the funeral, but only a little handful came, and I could see it greatly added to his sorrow. When you have lost some of your loved and own, you will realize this as you cannot otherwise. And then, too, we shall have one of our own, some of these days, and we desire that our friends shall not find themselves too busy to come and bid us the last sad farewell.-H. H. Wallace, in Western Recorder.

Old Tombs of Patriarchs.

The tombs of the patriarchs in Jerusalem, the cave of Machpelah, which Abraham bought "for a possession of a burying place," is still in existence. For forty centuries it withstood the ravages of time and men.

It is situated in the town of Hebron, sixteen miles south-southwest of Jerusalem, and sheltered from profanation by a Mohammedan mosque that rises above it. The tomb contains the whole patriarchal family, with the exception of Rachel. The cave is divided into an upper and a lower compartment. Only the upper compartment is accessible to the priest in charge of the mosque, but he only enters it in times of great calamity, and for the sole purpose of praying. As to the lower compartment, where repose the illustrious fathers of the Jewish nation, they remained completely closed until the year 1862, when, for the first time, King Edward VII., then the prince of Wales, together with Doctor Stanley, the dean of Westminster Abbey, and two other friends, were granted admission.

The six tombs are arranged symmetrically in rows of twos; a seventh, in the wall, is believed to belong to Joseph. Abraham's tomb, which has the form of a coffin with a shelving ridge, is about eight feet high, and is set in the cemented stone and marble. It is covered with three gold embroidered green carpets, which are the gifts of the emperor of Constantinople, Mohammed II., the conqueror of Egypt, Selim II., and the Sultan Abdul-Mejid.—Exchange.

Edifying as the Need May Be

The Way to Heaven.

There is but one way to heaven. Jesus does not use the plural, but speaks of "the way." He himself is "the way, the truth, and the life." Our departed relatives and friends who went to heaven all went the same way. If we wish to regain their companionship, we must take the same road. They believed and trusted in Christ. We must believe and trust in Christ. "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." They gave Jesus the highest places in their lives. We must make Jesus our Lord. "Wherefore also God highly exalted him, and gave unto him the name which is above every name; that in the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things on earth and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." (Phil 2: 9-11.) Those who have gone to heaven repented of their sins. Unless we walk in this same path of repentance, Jesus says we will perish. They were baptized into Christ. Just so baptism must be an important milestone on our journey to heaven. Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Peter, one of his apostles, writes about baptism "which doth now save you." These loved ones of ours, who died and went to heaven, lived faithful, consistent, Christian lives, adding to their faith one grace after another. We cannot afford to do less. Making these additions is part of our journey, too. "Thus shall be richly supplied unto you the entrance into the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.'

Our loved ones were not perfect. Now that they are gone, death has spread a halo around their names and to a great extent time has covered up their faults. But we do not forget that they had them. They were in some things like ourselves. They said and did things that ought never to have been said or done. They were sometimes rebellious, sometimes cast down. Their works did not save them. Had it not been for Jesus, they would all have perished. But Christ stood before them and said, "I am the way," and they took it. The same road lies before poor, suffering humanity now, but how few there are who take it!

It is a Troubled Path.

The road to heaven is a path of trouble. For those who travel it, no proof of this fact is required. One does not need proof of his own experience. One of the elders asked: "What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they?" The answer was: "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Our loved ones went by this path of tears into glory. Let us not be surprised if we have to travel the same pathway. If there are tears along our way, let that be one sign, at least, that that is the right way.

For Those Who Faint.

Do we become discouraged? Do we grow faint along the way? If we do, we may learn a cheering lesson from one of David's adventures recorded in the thirtieth chapter of First Samuel. There is a long procession of men, women, and children, loaded with jewels and robes and all the trophies of battle that the Amalekites had gathered through years of conquest-everything now in the hands of David and his friends. When they came to the brook Besor, the place where the sick and faint-hearted men had stayed, some of the mean fellows objected to the sick ones having any of the spoils. "These men did not fight," the objectors said. "Why should we divide with them?" But David ordered the division made, and it was made. Here was a robe for some pale-faced soldier; here was a pillow for some dying man; here was a handful of gold for some wasted trumpeter. For aught we know, those men who fainted by the brook endured as much as those who went into the battle. David, out of a magnanimous heart, said: "As his part is that goeth down to the battle, so shall his part be that tarrieth by the stuff." I do not believe that the only opportunities or the greatest opportunities to serve humanity best are found in Flanders. There is an opportunity equally as great for those who "tarry by the stuff," and who are to send it "over there" to save the wounded and the dying. If we do our part faithfully at home, we may depend upon it, we shall not lose our reward. God is greater and more considerate than his servant David.

We Must Win.

If we would win the society of our loved ones in heaven, we must not only travel a path of faith and of much tribulation, but we must positively battle for their companionship. David and his men never wanted sharp swords and invunerable shields and thick breastplates so much as they wanted them the day when they came down upon the Amalekites. If they had lost that battle, they never would have gotten their families back. I suppose that one glance at their loved ones in captivity was enough to hurl them into battle with tenfold courage and energy. They said: "Men, we must win it. Our all is at stake. We must win it!" And speaking of our spiritual warfare, I know that between us and our coming into the companionship of our loved ones there is a great battle to be waged. There is a Waterloo, a Gettysburg, a Verdun, and a Somme, that must be overcome. Paul urges us to put on the whole armor of God. "For our wrestling is not against flesh and blood, but against the principalities, against the powers, against the world rulers of this darkness, against the spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places." (Eph. 6: 12.) It is the war with the world, war with the flesh, war with the devil. David will either slay the Amalekites or the Amalekites will slay David. Just so we must conquer the lusts of the flesh and the temptations of the world or they will conquer us. "We must win," for "our all is at stake."

"Sin Against the Holy Spirit."

BY W. H. CARTER.

For a number of years I have noticed that occasionally some one asks: "What is the sin against the Holy Spirit?" I am of the opinion that the failure to understand is attributable to two causes—(1) the people fail to speak of it in the language of the Bible, and (2) they fail to examine their dictionaries to learn what the words used by the Savior mean. If words are "signs of ideas" or "vehicles through which ideas are conveyed from one mind to another," we cannot get the idea without knowing the meaning of the word or words used.

Our Savior did not say "sin against the Holy Ghost," but "blasphemy against the Holy Ghost." Notice carefully the Savior's words: "Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men." Now, what is "blasphemy?" It is words impiously spoken against God or divine things. Some of the Jews had said: "This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub the prince of devils," To show further that Jesus referred to their words, he said: "And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come," (Matt. 12: 22-32.)

But is not blasphemy sin? Yes, but all sin is not blasphemy. There is a difference between the meaning of the two words. Blasphemy is a specific sin-to use impious words against God or divine things. To blaspheme the Spirit and commit an unpardonable sin is to speak impious words against the Spirit. "Sin" is more general in its meaning and covers all kinds of transgression. One time, at the close of a discourse, a woman, who had been a Methodist, began to shout. Another woman, I was told, said: "That is the spirit of the devil working on her." Now, if the first woman was being influenced by the Holy Spirit, the second woman committed blasphemy against the Holy Spirit by calling it "the spirit of the devil,"-the very thing the Pharisees had, in substance, said about the spirit by which Jesus had cast out devils. It was blasphemeus speech.

I am of the opinion that it is a mistake to connect the above with the willful sin of Heb. 10: 26, for there may be willful sins that are not blasphemous. If I get the thought, Paul was speaking of those who had been taught, that knew the truth that Jesus had offered himself as a sacrifice for our sins, and now, if you willfully turn away from him, after having received the knowledge of the truth, "there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin." Jesus is the last sacrifice to be made, and, hence, apart from him, there is no salvation, "but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries."

Yes, it is true, John says, "there is a sin unto death." He says also, "there is a sin not unto death." Now, if we specialize or particularize as to the former, why not as to the latter? Here is where, I think, confusion comes in. We begin to guess, and we may hit it, and we may miss it. How is any one to know whether we hit or miss? What was, or is, the "sin unto death?" I do not know. What was, or is, the "sin not unto death?" I do not know. But this I do know: that, if I avoid all sin, I will not be guilty of the "sin unto death;" and if I use no impious language against the Holy Spirit, I will not be guilty of "blasphemy against the Holy Spirit."

To disobey the words of the Spirit in refusing to obey the gospel, either before or after becoming a Christian, I do not understand to be the "unpardonable sin;" for, if so, then who can have hope? For who has not disobeyed some word spoken by the Spirit? "Verily I say unto you, All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith they shall blaspheme: but he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Spirit hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation: because they said, He hath an unclean spirit." (Mark 3: 28-30.) If I understand the Scriptures, there is no sin that we cannot get forgiveness for, on proper repentance and obedience on our part, except the one specified sin—blasphemy against the Holy Spirit. That is unpardonable.

But one may fall away and become so hardened in sin that he cannot be brought to repentance. (See Heb. 6: I knew an instance, an old man who yielded to temptation, sinned, would not reform, and was withdrawn from. He was admonished and pleaded with, but refused to the last to come back to the church. Yet he would contend for the faith, and in this did not deny the Lord; but it was impossible to renew him to repentance. There was a self-pride, a lack of humility, or something that he could not, or would not, overcome. He died in that condition. We all need to be impressed with the fact that sin-any sin-is sufficient to condemn us, and that God does not look on sin with allowance. Each and every one must stand before God and give account. Let not Satan deceive you and lead you on in sin with the plea that, after a while, you can repent. He knows, and we ought to know, that the deeper we get into sin, the harder it will be to get out. May the Lord deliver us from evil and help us to shun temptation.

He Came for a Bone.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The writer was in the Baptist Flag man's town preaching the gospel, and Editor T. F. Moore condescended to favor the meeting one night with his presence. Subsequent developments showed that Brother Moore came for a bone on which to gnaw, but got instead a big mouthful of meat. In fact, as the old saying goes, "he bit off more than he could chew," and failed to put in his application for more. Here is what he had to say in his paper:

The editor went out Thursday night to hear Mr. F. W. Smith, of Nashville, Tenn., preach. Pastor F. O. Howell was at his best, and led an enthusiastic song service. Mr. Smith's subject was "God's Method of Saving Men," or words meaning the same. Mr. Smith made some splendid points, but it was all lost, as he began to raise and answer some needed questions. He stated that man was lost, dead That meant separation from God, in trespasses and sins. He then raised this question: How came man in this condition? Here is where Mr. Smith began to flounder and show the Bible student that he was either ignorant of the Bible answer to his question or preferred his theory to that, one or the other, we will let him choose which. He read Isa. 59: 1, 2, the prophet's message to Israel concerning her sins, and applied it to aliens. This, says he, teaches us how we were lost, separated from God, dead in trespasses and sins. You have done it of your own free will and accord. In other words, all men become sinners, aliens, dead in trespasses and sins, separated from God, by their own sins. Then he quoted Ezek, 18: 4: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." These thoughts look plausible to the casual reader or hearer; scriptures teach the doctrine he preaches? but do these If true, then the world by birth is with God and in him, for it is not till a man sins that he separates himself from God. We presume that Mr. Smith believes that the child is pure and holy by birth, for he said his body, or outer man, came by procreation from his parents, but his soul was breathed into him, we presume, like Adam was made a living soul. If our presuming be true, then universal apostasy must prevail for all who do not die in infancy, or the Campbellite theory is no good. If saved when born, of course this salvation must be lost before one can be saved again.

But is the doctrine taught by Mr. Smith and his following true? This doctrine cannot be true, for the Scriptures teach the reverse. Paul says: "Among whom also we all had our manner of life in times past, in the desires of our flesh, doing the will of the flesh and the thoughts of the flesh, and WERE by NATURE CHILDREN OF WRATH. even as others." (Eph. 2: 3.) David said: "Conceived in sin and brought forth in iniquity." This is the Bible answer to Mr. Smith's question. Reason teaches us that a thief is such before he steals. A sinner sins. No one becomes a sinner by sinning; he is one, or he would not sin.

The South once owned slaves, and many children were born in the slaves' homes. Were these infants born in bondage, or did they have to grow large enough to work before they became slaves?

The deeds of a man do not make him what he is; deeds only demonstrate what the man is. "By their fruits ye shall know them." Mr. Smith is logical after he lays down his premises, but a wrong premise is what deceives him and the people who hear him.

Now, I had made up my mind to let the Baptists rest for a while—was trying to be good to them; but Brother Moore comes along and upsets all of my good resolutions. In the discourse to which he alludes, I showed man's condition, his need of salvation, and God's method of saving man. Instead of joining with me in an effort to lead sinners to the Lamb of God, Brother Moore preferred to do what he could to keep them from hearing the gospel.

The thing that mortally wounded this Baptist editor was my stepping on his toes of "total hereditary depravity"a doctrine to the Baptist most wholesome, and very full of comfort. I stated that the thing which separated man from God was sin, and that it was the act of the individual, by his own free choice. Will Mr. Moore deny that it was the sin of Adam and Eve-a deliberate choice upon their part-that separated them from God? Surely he will not say they became thus separated by "total hereditary depravity," will he? If so, from whom did they inherit such a nature? If Satan could succeed in leading the first human beings into sin, who were in the presence of God, can he not lead all into sin? But Mr. Moore thinks this would bring about universal apostasy. Well, did not universal apostasy prevail when Adam and Eve sinned? It must have been universal, for those two were the whole family.

But, again, if men and women sin because they have inherited "total depravity," or "depravity" without the "total," then what caused Adam and Eve to sin? Was it depravity, with or without the total? If so, from whom did they inherit such a nature? This is not a naked bone for my friend to gnaw on, but one with plenty of meat, and fearfully tough for Baptist teeth. He will be found going to the dentist before he gets through with this dish. He says: "If saved when born, of course this salvation must be lost before one can be saved again." Well, were Adam and Eve safe or saved before they became lost? Will my friend say they were not? If two of God's creatures could become unsaved and then saved again, why cannot all? But that would destroy my friend's very wholesome doctrine-viz., total hereditary depravity-a doctrine expressed by words which cannot be found within the lids of the Bible.

But see how he capitalizes Eph. 2: 3. Poor man! He seeks a haven of rest for his depraved doctrine in this passage, but there is no place in it on which he can rest the soles of his weary feet. "Were by nature the children of wrath" is the thread he clings to; but watch it break with him. Of course the Ephesians and all others before conversion were by "nature" the children of wrath; but what is the meaning of the word "nature" in this passage? Is it not used in the sense of practice, the same as in 1 Cor. 11: 14: "Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a dishonor to him?" Nature in one sense makes a man's hair long, but it cannot be in that sense here, but in the sense of practice or custom. The very context disproves Editor Moore's contention: "And you did he make alive, when ye were dead through your trespasses and sins." (Eph. 2: 1.) For it to fit my friend's doctrine, it would have to read: "And you did he make alive, who were dead through total hereditary depravity." Adam Clarke, the noted scholar, has this to say in his comments on Gal. 2: 15: "Now, though the doctrine be true, and the state of man and universal experience confirm it, yet it can neither be supported from this place, nor even from Eph. 2: 3." Finding no rest here, Mr. Moore flies to Ps. 51: 5. But the sin here, whatever it was, is affirmed of David's mother, and not of David himself. The passage does not say or even imply that the thing brought forth was a sinner or even sinful. Mr. Moore read into these passages his most wholesome (?) doctrine of "total hereditary depravity."

He berates infant baptism, and he should know that the false doctrine of total hereditary depravity is the very foundation of infant baptism. Say, my friend, what becomes of the little infant full of "total hereditary depravity" dying in infancy? Will you, like Jeter, say that God regenerates dying infants by a direct, immediate work of the Spirit? If so, please cite the scripture that so teaches.

Will Mr. Moore be fair enough to let his readers see this reply? We shall see.

An Article from Z. T. Sweeney.

Editors Gospel Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Brethren: Last week's Advocate [April 18] contains my letter and your reply. In your letter you make up the issue between the Advocate and myself very satisfactorily. The following statement from your editorial contains the issue, clearly made, in the following question: "Does the constitution empower the convention to interfere with the local church authority? Brother Sweeney answers that question in the negative; but we, without the slightest hesitation, answer it categorically in the affirmative. Thus the issue is sharply drawn, and on this position we are willing to stand or fall as the facts may demand." It is not in the power of language to state the issue more fairly. Moreover, it is made to depend upon the "facts." I like facts. One established fact is worth a dozen inferences.

What are the facts?

Fact 1. "The constitution never once mentions the local church authority as one of the objects contemplated in the constitution." It is a universally known fact that no constitution can empower any one to act upon any question not contained within the scope of its objects. The constitution of the United States cannot empower Congress to legislate upon anything it does not mention. It takes a constitutional amendment to authorize such legislation. Likewise it will take an amendment to the constitution of the convention to authorize it to "interfere with local church autonomy."

Fact 2. The preamble to the constitution distinctly affirms its "steadfast adherence to the independence and autonomy of the local churches" and "disavows any control over our congregations." Because of these two facts I base my judgment that the constitution does not empower the convention "to interfere with local church autonomy." Whatever the constitution empowers must be found in the constitution. The constitution provides that matters can be decided by a majority vote of its members, but the matters so decided must be clearly stated in the objects of the constitution. This is right, for how else could they be decided? Does not the Gospel Advocate decide matters contemplated by its articles of incorporation by a majority vote of its directors? I'll risk my reputation as a prophet that it does. Now the international convention is as clearly a business organization as the Advocate Publishing Company and has no more power to deal with local church autonomy. Why should the Advocate Publishing Company decide matters by a majority vote that come within its scope, and refuse the convention the same right? You have said: "Give us a human business organization which can build orphanages, hospitals, and schools, with no power vested in a convention or a foreign missionary society or in anything else to interfere in any way with the divinely constituted rights of the local churches, and we shall certainly not oppose it." We have at last obtained a human business organization that can do the above enumerated things and reaffirms its steadfast support of the independence of the local churches and disavows any control over our congregations. Does this not bring us pretty close to each other?

A Meeting at Fulton, Ky.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The writer spent the better part of two weeks in May with the Central church of Christ, in Fulton. Ky. Brother F. O. Howell is the man who labors in word and doctrine with this church, and he is a most efficient servant in the Master's vineyard. He has done a great work in that field, and is held in the highest esteem by both those in and out of the church. He began the work under most unfavorable circumstances, and has succeeded in building a nice, convenient, and substantial brick house of worship in which meet regularly a splendid band of disciples. Brother Howell is a young man on the sunny side of forty, with a strong mind and a strong body. He has a great future before him as a preacher of the gospel. He led the singing during the meeting, and it was well done. There were five baptisms, and four united with the church who had held membership elsewhere. I appreciated very much my stay with the church and their very kind treatment of me in every way. I pray God's richest blessings to rest upon the preacher and those among whom he labors.

"Worth Its Weight in Gold"- But Have You Got It?

In reference to the Teachers' New Testament, which we are giving absolutely free to every subscriber on our list who sends us a new subscriber, Mrs. P. B. Jones, of Finley, Tenn., writes: "I received my Testament, and, so far as I have investigated, I think it is worth its weight in gold." Other expressions follow:

We are well pleased with the premium New Testament you sent us. The helps are of great value.—J. D. Hipp, Rucker, Tenn,

I received the Teachers' Testament, and thank you very much. It is the kind of book I have been wanting for years. I think it is fine.—Mrs. W. H. Lamb, Fosterville,

I have received the Testament, and will say that it is all that is claimed for it. Since receiving it I have read from Matthew through Acts, comments and all.—B. D. Sanders, Russellville, Ky.

I have received the Testament, and think it is just fine. The notes are very helpful. In fact, I think the Testament is worth the price paid for the Gospel Advocate."—Etta Bass, Portland, Tenn.

I received the Teachers' New Testament and am highly pleased with it. I use it in my Sunday-school studies, and obtain valuable information from the notes and helps.— M. A. Ball, Ethridge, Tenn.

I have received a copy of your Teachers' New Testament and prize it among all books, being the best that I have ever read according to the words of our Savior.—T. J. Dozier, Ashland City, Tenn.

I received one of your Teachers' Testaments, and am so well pleased with it that I do not see how I could do without it. I find it a great help in studying the Scriptures. It is worth the price of the Gospel Advocate.—R. A. Price, Bethpage, Tenn.

I received the Teachers' Testament, and want to thank you for same. It has been a great help to me in getting my Sunday-school lessons. I am working to get more subscribers for the best paper published, the Gospel Advocate.

—Mrs. George W. Jerles, Paducah, Ky.

I believe that the Teachers' New Testament which you furnish as a premium for subscriptions to the Gospel Advocate is the best for the money I have ever seen, and is just the thing for beginners in Bible study and teaching.—J. Ö. Barnes, Lake City, Fla.

I have received the Teachers' New Testament, and I am delighted with it. Many queries that are asked in your good paper are answered in the explanatory notes in this Testament. The introductions to the different books are excellent, and much information is found there that one usually does not find elsewhere. I could hardly get along without this book, it seems, now, and I urgently recommend it to all who are interested in the Word of Life.—James T. Thompson, Nashville, Tenn.

In many places the notes are helpful and assuring, but in some instances it will not do to follow them; for example, the notes concerning Simon the sorcerer (Acts 8) must all be wrong. Luke says Simon believed also, but the notes say it was not a sincere belief. (He pretended to believe, from mercenary motives, according to the notes.) Then, on the word "Assurance" in Heb. 11: 1, I think the notes are clearly wrong. Sectism does not demand the position taken here, therefore I think it is failure to understand it. But his position on Simon's case, I think, is the result of unadulterated sectarian prejudice. Yet there are many good thoughts in the notes, and I would regret very much to be deprived of them; but in some instances they must be received with "a grain of salt." I appreciate the Gospel Advocate very much, and, if I could, would take pleasure in sending you a list of subscribers.—J. T. J. Watson, Canoe, Ala.

Now, all of these commendations about the premium New Testament are nice to read; but what do they amount to if you have not received a copy? There is one coming to you upon a condition which is easy to fulfill. Simply send us a new subscriber at the regular subscription price of two dollars, and we will send your copy in a jiffy. Remember, this valuable Testament with notes retails for $1.10, but we send it to you free. A little effort on your part and we will all be happy.

We have received the following note of polynowly	adamont

We have received the following note of acknowledgment from W. A. Gorski, secretary of the Polish Victims' Relief Fund, dated New York, May 13: "We are again in receipt from you of two checks amounting to $202.67, for which we beg to express to your readers our most grateful thanks.

We have also received letters from H. C. Jaquith, secretary of the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief. The first is dated New York, May 17: "We are inclosing receipts for your contribution of $381.02. We have, as you see, made a separate receipt for $98.39 contributed by the students of Fisk University. It is through such cooperation that we are able to do much to alleviate the suffering described in the inclosed cablegrams." Under date of May 18 he writes: "We extend through you to the Gospel Advocate readers the heartfelt thanks of our committee in behalf of the starving people of Bible lands for your generous contribution of $307.84."

Our noble coworker, Brother John H. Arms, of Celina, Tenn., has generously offered to preach for some congregations in his section free of charge, provided they will send their contributions to the war sufferers. The contribution from the Clementsville congregation, noted above, is one of the first fruits of this sacrifice.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Armenian and Syrian Fund or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Most Ancient Church of Christendom at the Point of Extinction at Hands of Turks.

BY E. W. M'DOWELL,

A recent press item has reported another extensive massacre of Christians by Moslems in the region of Urumia and Salmas, Persia, and special mention was made of the death of Mar Shimon, Patriarch of the Nestorian or Assyrian Church. He fell bravely fighting in the defense of his people.

Few people, probably, recognized the significance or importance of this news item. The writer has recently returned from Salmas. He has had a thirty-years' acquaintance with these people and has very frequently enjoyed the hospitality of the Nestorian patriarch. Speaking from an intimate knowledge of these people and from love for their fallen chief, he desires to pay tribute to them.

The Nestorians are probably the most ancient branch of the Eastern Church. Within three centuries after the death of Christ they had established flourishing churches throughout Syria, Mesopotamia, and in the wild mountains of Kurdistan. There still remain church buildings over a thousand years old in which the sound of Christian worship has never ceased. In the fourth century they had a strong church in Persia. In the following century they had won from the heathen of India a following of two million. They left the imprint of their worship on the ritual of Buddhism in Tibet, and, most remarkable of all, there stands to-day in the heart of heathen China a stone monument on which are engraved in Syriac, the language of the Nestorians, the leading doctrines of the Christian faith, and the date on the stone is 781 A.D. In so short a time this Nestorian Church had preached the gospel over the greater part of Asia, from Syria to India and China. It is one of the most thrilling chapters of church history.

Then follows a sad and dark chapter. This great church lost its first love, fell away in a measure from the faith, its missionary zeal died. As a consequence, Mohammed arose, sword in hand, and established the religion of Islam; and after him came Tamerian and Jengis Khan, those bloody tyrants of Central Asia. Centuries of massacre followed and the Nestorians were almost exterminated. A small remnant of them found refuge in the deep and almost inaccessible valleys of the mountains of Kurdistan. From these rocky ramparts they unfurled the banner of the cross, and they have kept it floating there for over a thousand years. In the Dark Ages, when the Moslem hordes were pounding at the doors of Vienna and all Christian Europe trembled before them, this small band of Christians in the very heart of Islam still held fast to the name of Christ. God kept them there as his witness against the teachings of the false prophet.

These Nestorian Christians who are now being massacred in Salmas and Urumia by the Turks are all that are left of that once great and glorious church, and they are worthy descendants of those Highlanders of the Faith, for they still choose death rather than deny that holy Name.

Mar Shimon, who was both religious head and military chief of these brave and interesting people, died fighting bravely in the defense of his flock—the last martyr of a martyr church. With his death that line of patriarchs which had its beginning in the apostolic age may cease; and the saddest feature of it is that the final blow came out of the war of Christian nations.

Darkness still hangs over that land of sorrows. No word has come as to the end of this last massacre. There is reason to hope, however, that a remnant will be spared. It is the hope of some that this small remnant, largely women and children, can be brought to America at the end of the war and settled on cheap land where they will be able, with their knowledge of small farming, to gain a livelihood. In the meantime they must be kept from starvation. The American missionaries still remain in Urumia and Salmas to distribute the alms sent for their relief.

Contributions should be sent to the American Committee of Armenian and Syrian Relief, of which Ex-President Taft is chairman and Cleveland H. Dodge is treasurer, 1 Madison Avenue, New York. One hundred cents of every dollar reaches the starving.

If preferred, you may send your contributions to A. B. Lipscomb, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn., who will forward them to the committee and make acknowledgment in the Gospel Advocate.

Brother Metlob's Plight and Plans.

Seven years ago Brother Jacob Metlob, of Assyria, came to us, seeking aid in preaching the gospel to his people in Armenia. We considered his plea and agreed to help him. For four years we supported him, ceasing only when the war made it impossible for us to send him money. For three years he and his fellow Christians have been subjected to the horrors of war and the ravaging invasions of the Mohammedans. Thousands have been captured and killed or enslaved, including seventeen of Brother Metlob's near relatives. Brother Metlob and his oldest daughter succeeded in leaving Persia last October. They made their way through Russia, Siberia, Manchuria, Japan, and across the Pacific. They reached Harper, Kan., the last week in April. He has yet in Persia a son and a daughter. These children are in the mountains awaiting an opportunity to get away.

Brother Metlob is very anxious to return for these children. He wants to give them the advantage of an education in this country while the war continues, and then take them back to work among his people. The church at Harper will support and school them if they can be brought here.

In addition to the cares of these children, Brother Metlob is intrusted with the responsibility of leading out two thousand other Christians from that country. To accomplish this great task, he must have help. This help must be substantial. He estimates that it will require from four thousand to five thousand dollars to accomplish anything worth while. The Harper congregation has raised about twelve hundred dollars and will raise more. We consider this an excellent opportunity for the churches of Christ in America to demonstrate their willingness to share the tremendous burdens of our brethren in foreign lands. A great many of us are asking exemption from military service. Now let us prove to the government and to the world that we are sincere in our contentions; that, though we decline to enter actual warfare, we are perfectly willing to share the suffering. Let us give till it hurts; let us give till we realize that the war is on; let us give till we appreciate, to some extent at least, the awful miseries that our brothers are suffering in those foreign lands.

We, the elders of the church of Christ at Harper, Kan., strongly commend Brother Metlob as a true Christian, worthy of your hearty support. Persons or congregations desiring fellowship in this work may send money immediately to C. Ray Thompson, Harper, Kan. A full report of all contributions will be made in papers that donors may designate.

Teaching the Word of God.

BY J. C. M'Q.

I have received a number of questions from brethren in regard to teaching the Bible by the class system. These brethren state that a few in their congregations object to the division of the church into classes for the purpose of teaching the Bible.

Those who make such objections do not understand the meaning or force of the word "teach." Webster's International Dictionary defines "teach:" "To make to know how; to show how; hence, to school, train, or accustom to some action; as, to teach one to read. 'They have taught their tongues to speak lies.' (Jer. 9: 5.) To direct as an instructor; to guide the studies of, or to conduct through a course of studies; to give instruction to; as, to teach a child or a class." Thus it is seen that the word "teach" means to teach a child or a class; hence, in the word "teaching" inheres the idea of class teaching. The Lord expects every teacher to have sense enough to know just how large a class he can teach to advantage. Sometimes the teacher may teach one in his class, and sometimes he may be able to teach twenty-five, fifty, or one hundred. Some teachers may be able to handle several hundred.

Clear distinction is made in the Bible between the words "preach" and "teach." Preaching has its place in the church, and so has teaching. I quote from Trumbull's "Yale Lectures on the Sunday School," page 67: "Do not misunderstand me here. Every great reform in the church, or in any nominally religious community, since the days of John the Baptist and of Peter, has been brought about by preaching. Christians have been aroused from their sloth, sinners have been startled in and from their sins, by the clarion voice of the herald-preacher. Preaching has been, and is, and is to be, the preëminent agency for the warning and calling of sinners, and of the exhorting and directing of the saints. But the religious training of any people has been attained, and the results of any great reformation have been made permanent, only through a process of interlocutory, or catechetical, teaching, such as forms the distinguishing characteristics of the technical Sunday school."

John the Baptist is always represented as preaching. never teaching. Even when he gave particular instructions in the law of personal duty to the soldiers, publicans, and to the Jewish people, he was spoken of as a preacher. But Jesus was both a teacher and a preacher. He is represented as the teacher of truth, in addition to his mission as the preacher of righteousness.

So long as the Christian church evangelized in Jewish communities, the character of its services and the method of its teaching work, as a matter of course, largely resembled the plans and practices of the Jewish synagogue. It should be remembered that the original members of the Christian brotherhood were Jews, and were in no haste to abandon the religious customs of their nation. Christ had come, "not to destroy, but to fulfill," the law. His example strongly inculcated respect for the Jewish forms. Christians, therefore, naturally adopted the Jewish forms in the beginning. Hence they adopted the synagogue method of teaching, which is the catechetical, or interlocutory, method.

To show that the Scriptures do not warrant the objection to teaching the church in classes, it is only necessary to quote a few passages which make a clear distinction between preaching and teaching. When we find Christ and the apostles teaching, we understand that they taught classes, for this is the meaning of the word "teach." In the beginning, preaching even carried the idea of asking questions and answering them. It was frequently done in the interlocutory, or catechetical, method. Among the references we have to the child Jesus, we read in Luke 2: 46 that "they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the teachers, both hearing them, and asking them questions." Thus we find that Christ was using the class, or synagogue, method. His knowledge was so great and his questions so wonderful that we are told that "all that heard him were amazed at his understanding and his answers." Furthermore, we learn that, after he had entered upon his public ministry, Christ is spoken of again and again as teaching in the synagogues, as distinct from his preaching there. The evangelist Matthew, who peculiarly wrote from the Jewish standpoint, said, in terms which all Jews would understand, that "Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." (Matt. 4: 23.) Thus we see that he taught by that form of instruction which admitted of free interlocutory play between teacher and taught, and preached by a distinct heralding of the message from God. The same evangelist again tells us that "Jesus went about all the cities and the villages, teaching in their synagogues. and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." (Matt. 9: 35.)

Matthew (11: 1) also tells us that "he departed thence to teach and preach in their cities." Mark and Luke also repeatedly distinguish between the preaching and teaching of our Lord. (See Mark 1: 14, 21, 22, 39; Luke 20: 1.) Many other passages could be given, but these are amply sufficient. Christ, moreover, is represented by all the evangelists as pursuing this work of teaching wherever he might be—by the wayside, by the sea, in the private house, or in the temple court, as well as in the synagogue teaching the Jews by the well-known method of questions and answers.

The Scriptures abound in Christ's teachings by questions and answers, and I cannot understand why any one would object to teaching a class to-day by the same method, unless it be on the ground that they have fallen into a certain method of teaching and have decided that their method is the will of God. It is sad that some people get into a "rut" and then strive to make everybody else get into the same "rut." The Bible does not give the least support to such conduct, but, on the other hand, condemns it. The binding of a method upon the church of God where Christ has bound none is condemned just the same as adding to or taking from the word of God. Of such Christ says: "But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." Christians must not be guilty of binding their theories, opinions, and methods upon the church of God. To all who are guilty of such conduct let me say, in the language of Christ: "Every plant which my heavenly Father planted not, shall be rooted up." Christians fail to teach the word of God at the peril of their souls. God commands them to teach, and he demands that they use the most efficient method in instructing people in the way of life.

The Convention and Local Church Autonomy.

BY M. C. K.

On page 508 of this issue of the Gospel Advocate we publish another article from Brother Z. T. Sweeney, of Columbus, Ind. We ask the reader to carefully examine his article before reading our reply.

So far as its impression upon us is concerned, our interchange with Brother Sweeney, which, including public and private communications, has been in progress now for nearly a year, has not only been most agreeable and pleasant, but the dignity, fairness, and brotherly kindness which have uniformly marked his communications and his entire bearing throughout have won for him a high place in our esteem; and whether, during the present discussion, we come to an agreement on the main issue between us or not, the discussion, we are glad to believe, has been of a character to "bring us pretty close to each other" in at least some vital and very important ways. Let us hope and pray that these may still further pave the way for an ultimate agreement on the main question. Under such circumstances, it is with genuine pleasure that we shall now try to give respectful attention to his present argument.

1. He says: "The constitution never once mentions the local church authority as one of the objects contemplated in the constitution." Now, this assumes that, because the constitution does not "mention," in specific terms, "the local church authority as one of the objects contemplated" by it, therefore it cannot empower the convention to "interfere with local church autonomy." But, let us promptly ask the question, does this follow? By no manner of means. It is true, "the constitution never once mentions," in so many words, "the local church authority as one of the objects contemplated in" it, but that does not in any wise change the fact that the mission and function of the convention, which the constitution authorizes, is to supervise and conduct the missionary work of the churches; and in filling this mission and exercising this function, the constitution empowers the convention to decide matters in this very line of work by a majority vote. Our point is this-namely, the convention, being empowered by the constitution to decide missionary matters by a majority vote, if it should thus decide on some wrong measure, as, for example, the employment or retention of false teachers, or any other wrong thing, as it assuredly could do, then it not only could, but would, "interfere with local church authority;" for the churches, in every such case, would be compelled to either go wrong or to withdraw from the concern, one or the other. Of course, as before conceded, a church, in such a case, could do the latter; but precisely the same thing can be said of a church in any ecclesiasticism on earth, Rome herself not excepted. Of course, a local church, whether among the Catholics, the Episcopalians, the Methodists, the Presbyterians, or what not, in case a measure is adopted which it considers wrong, could withdraw from a diocese or district, thus declaring and maintaining its independence by severing all connection with the concern; and hence, with the same consistency and in precisely the same way, it could be said by their advocates, as our beloved Brother Sweeney says in this case, that no one of these ecclesiasticisms can "interfere with the local church autonomy." But does not our brother see that this, on his part, is a practical surrender of the whole question?

2. He asks the question: "Does not the Gospel Advocate decide matters contemplated by its articles of incorporation by a majority vote of its directors?" We promptly . and gladly reply, of course it does; but, please remember, dear brother, they are always matters of its own business, and not matters which are the business of somebody else; and here is the vital and essential difference between the Gospel Advocate and the convention now under discussion, and this difference is of exactly the character which makes decision by a majority vote right in the one case and wrong in the other. In other words, the Gospel Advocate, permit us to say, attends strictly and exclusively to its own business, and it never attempts to decide matters "by a majority vote of its directors," except matters of its own busness; but the convention presumes to decide matters of missionary work "by a majority vote of its members," and missionary work is the business of the churches, and made so by divine legislation. The board of supervisors and managers divinely appointed in each local church is in control. Hence, if the Gospel Advocate should undertake to decide such matters for the churches "by a majority vote of its directors," the same arguments made against the convention would be made against it, and with the same relevancy and logical force. But, as matters stand, our brother's illustration, for lack of parallelism, breaks down at the one vital point.

Finally, we, too, "like facts," and it is not only a fact, but the most significant of all facts in this connection, that, so far as any ecclesiastical arrangement or organization in religion is concerned, divine wisdom, for some reason, provided for, and stopped with, the local, but human wisdom has devised the general, organization, the former being expressed in the local church organization and the latter in the general-convention organization.

BY E. A. E.

WHAT IS THE CHURCH?

We must know what the world is and what the church is before we can know the difference between the two, and before we can realize the antagonism of the world to the church.

Seeking the greatest good of all concerned, it seems to me to be helpful and, therefore, wise in this connection to consider to some extent, at least, that which is called "church work," or what "working in the church" means. Before "church work," or "working in the church," can be defined, we again see, it is necessary to know what the church is.

It will suit our investigation best to first learn what the church is and then what the world is.

In the first place, let us lay aside all preconceived ideas of religious denominations, ecclesiasticisms, a partisan spirit, or "our position," etc., and let us learn all we can from the New Testament about the church, whose history is written in that book and whose head is Christ, and Christ alone. It is most refreshing to drink for ourselves directly from the original fountain, the word of God; it is encouraging to study firsthand the truth for ourselves and to stand at once on the bedrock of truth; it is most helpful and hopeful to know just what the Lord teaches.

This liberty and independence cannot be enjoyed and maintained without earnest investigation on the part of each individual and the exercise of the individual conscience.

Requesting each reader, then, for himself and for his own instruction and freedom, to study all the scriptures cited, because space will not allow their full quotation, attention is called to the following statements:

- 1. Jesus built the church. He said, "Upon this rock I will build my church;" and to Peter: "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 16: 13-19.) "Will build" and "will give" look to the future and show that when Jesus uttered these declarations the church had not yet been established. After Jesus ascended to heaven, sent the Holy Spirit upon the apostles, and set them to work on the first Pentecost after his resurrection in preaching "the gospel to the whole creation" and "teaching all the nations," "beginning from Jerusalem" (Isa. 2: 2-4; Mic. 4: 1-4; Luke 24: 45-47; Acts 1: 6-8, 12-14), the church is spoken of as in existence and increasing, people being added daily. This Pentecost has been called "the birthday of the church," and Peter refers to it as "the beginning." (Acts 11: 15.)
- 2. The church is built upon Christ crucified (1 Cor. 2; 2; 3: 11); upon the truth that Jesus of Nazareth is "the Christ, the Son of the living God;" "upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Christ Jesus himself being the chief corner stone," It is "a holy temple in the Lord." Jewish and Gentile Christians "are builded together for a habitation of God in the Spirit." They are "fellow citizens" in this "holy nation," or kingdom, children in "the household of God," and the two are "one new man" reconciled "in one body unto God through the cross." (Eph. 2: 13-22.)
- 3. All religious denominations have sprung up since Christ built his church. They are not branches of his church. He is the true vine, and every apostle first was a branch and every child of God since is a branch. The church—"the household of God," "a holy nation," "a holy temple"—embraces all children of God, all Christians, on earth, and cannot be a denomination. It can have no denominational or sectarian name. It is not spoken of in the New Testament as "the Christian Church" even. It is safe to "call Bible things by Bible names." "The disciples were called Christians first at Antioch." (Acts 11: 26.) "But if a man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God in this name." (1 Pet. 4: 16.)
- 4. According to the facts and figures under which the church is viewed, it is spoken of in the New Testament as "the church of God" (1 Cor. 1: 2; 2 Cor. 1: 1), "the house of God" (1 Tim. 3: 15); more frequently, "the church" (Acts 8: 1, 3; 9: 31), "the body of Christ" (1 Cor. 12: 27; Eph. 1: 22, 23; Col. 1: 18, 24), "the church of the first-born who are enrolled in heaven" (Heb. 12: 23), "a spiritual house," "a holy" and "royal priesthood," "a holy nation," "a people for God's own possession" (1 Pet. 2: 5, 9), "Israel of God" (Gal. 6: 16), "the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 16: 19; Col. 1: 13), "God's fellow workers," "God's husbandry," "God's building" (1 Cor. 3: 8), etc.

- 5. The word of which "church" is the translation means any gathering of citizens called out from their homes in any public place; any kind of assembly—a riotous one or an orderly one. The word "assembly," used three times in Acts 19 (verses 32, 39, 41), and the word "church" are from the same word. The assembly of the Israelites is designated in Acts 7: 38 and Heb. 2: 12 by the same word. Because Jesus has called a people "out of the world" (John 15: 19), "out of darkness into his marvelous light" (1 Pet. 2: 9), and has delivered them "out of the power of darkness" and has "translated" them into his kingdom (Col. 1: 18), he calls them his "church." Note the following facts:
- (a) All persons in the world who are truly Christ's disciples, all Christians in the world, all the children of God in the world, all citizens of Christ's kingdom in the world. all saints in the world, constitute "the church" on earth. All in the world who do the will of God are mothers and brothers and sisters to Christ (Matt. 12: 48-50; Mark 3: 33-35; Luke 8: 19-21), and are "the household of God." These are the church-"the body of Christ," of which he is the head and of which all Christians are "severally members;" the "spiritual house," or temple, of God, in which every Christian is a "living stone" and in which every one serves as a priest. (1 Tim. 3: 15; 1 Pet. 2: 5, 9; Eph. 1: 22; 2: 11-22; 1 Cor. 12: 28.) When Christ said, "On this rock I will build my church," he meant all Christians in the world-all who believe in and obey him and place themselves on this foundation. When Paul persecuted "the church" (1 Cor. 15: 9; Phil. 3: 5; Acts 8: 3; 22: 4, 5; 26: 9-11), he did so by punishing in the synagogues, dragging out of their homes and imprisoning and putting to death, men and women who were Christians, which shows that Christians everywhere are the church. Wherever Christians are, there is the church. One Christian is as much the church as others are.
- (b) All Christians, disciples of Christ, children of God, etc., in any given country constitute the church in that country, as "the church throughout all Judea and Galilee and Samaria." "The church" in these countries "had peace, being edified; and, walking in the fear of the Lord and in the comfort of the Holy Spirit, was multiplied." (Acts 9: 31.) This shows again that the church and Christians are the same. Also, all Christians in different places in Judea are called "the churches of Judea which were in Christ." (Gal. 1: 22, 23.) All Christians of a city, a town, a village, as well as of any given country, constitute the church of that place. (Acts 5: 11; 8: 1, 3; 1 Cor. 1: 2; 2 Cor. 1: 1; 1 Thess. 1: 1; and many other passages.)
- (c) The Christians, or children of God, in one's family are "the church" in one's house, or "the church" in one's house embraces all Christians in one's home. (Rom. 16: 5; 1 Cor. 16: 19; Col. 4: 15; Phile 2.)
- (d) An assembly of Christians in one place gathered together for worship is called the "church" or "congregation" there. (1 Cor. 11: 18, 22—margin; 1 Cor. 14: 19, 34, 35; verses 34, 35 speak of women making addresses in "the churches," or assemblies.)
- (e) "The church" at different places constitutes "churches of Christ." "The churches of Christ salute you." (Rom. 16: 16.) "The seven churches of Asia." (Rev. 1: 4.) All "churches of Christ." are the same, each one being "the church of God" in its place.
- (f) "The whole church" in any given place assembles at times in "one place" for worship (1 Cor. 5: 4; 11: 18, 22; 14: 23), and all are exhorted not to forsake their own assembling together (Heb. 10: 25); but where is the church when not assembled together? This shows that the church exists all the time, and, therefore, does not cease to be when the assembly has been dismissed. It is more than an assembly of Christians.

(g) In Heb. 12: 23—"the general assembly and church of the firstborn who are enrolled in heaven"—"the church" embraces all the redeemed in heaven as well as on earth.

6. The Christians of any given country, as "the church of Judea and Galilee and Samaria," or of the whole world, do not have to form an organization embracing all "churches of Christ" or some ecclesiasticism controlling all "churches of Christ" in that given country or the whole world in order to be the church of that given country or the whole world. They are the church already, because they are Christians, children of God, etc. Just when they became Christians, disciples of Christ, children of God, etc., in the same way they became the church.

The Word of God Is Quick and Powerful.

BY E. G. S.

The question now arises, In what sense is the word of God quick and powerful? The word "quick" means "living, active "-just the very opposite of the word "dead." One of its meanings is "effective." There will be no failure in the word of God. If we do not obey it and thus be saved by it, we are certain to be condemned by it. The divine commission as recorded by Mark expresses this much. It says: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." People may, and sometimes do, escape out of the hands of men that would do them harm if they could get hold of them; but none can escape condemnation if they refuse to obey the word of God. There is one thing of which we may rest assured; that is, we cannot disobey the word of God through life and then be saved by it. The only way for sinners to be saved by the word of God is to obey it.

But a very serious question is: Why do not all obey the word in Bible lands? This is a more serious question than most people realize. There is no serious disaster to befall people for obedience to the word of the Lord, but an awful and eternal calamity is certain to overtake those that disobey. With these plainly revealed facts before us, it is passing strange that any in Bible lands should fail to become Christians and live the Christian life. Yet countless numbers are making this terrible failure. When death comes to people in this condition, their chances are ended and they are eternally doomed. O that all would make up their minds as to the importance of this matter and would give their hearts and lives to the saving of their souls!

Not only is it true that a large number even in Bible lands fail to obey the gospel, but it is also true that many that become Christians fail to lead humble, faithful, Christian lives. This is not as it should be. Christians should be always watchful and faithful; they should study the New Testament and see to it that they are living as it directs. In this way we can have assurance that we are in the strait and narrow way and will be sure to reach the happy home after a while, if we continue to be faithful. But there will be no time when it will be safe to cease our efforts to be faithful to the Lord till we lay our armor by and cross over the dark, rolling river-a crossing, I presume, that very few of us are in any hurry to make. There are not many that are ready to say, "I want to go right new;" for, while we are never ready to say we want to stay here always, it seems that we always want to stay a little longer. This is especially true with all who are in good health and are in no insurmountable difficulties. Some plunge themselves into such difficulties that they can see no way to get out. Perhaps such as these would be glad if death would come and relieve them. But the masses would be glad to stay a little while longer, that they may accomplish certain ends in this short life. But the continuation of this life is always a matter of uncertainty, and Christians especially need to so live as to be ready at any time for a departure. Christians do not need to be always thinking about death, but rather about what good they can do in this life. There is always some good to be accomplished, if Christians will only look it up; and this they should be diligent in doing.

Many people, though, seem to try to see how little they can get along with; and that is one reason why some people have so little of this world's goods. There is not the good in great riches that most people seem to think there is. Those that simply have a comfortable living, as a rule, are happier than those that have great wealth. While it is the duty of all to try to make a living for themselves and their dependents, it is certainly a mistake to struggle to pile up riches beyond our necessities. However, I do not suppose the love of money will ever cease or ever be brought within the bounds of Bible teaching.

As a matter of fact, if all men could be induced to become faithful servants of the Lord and continue therein until death, then almost any good end could be attained: but the world is not ready yet for such an attainment. Yet it is the duty of all Christians to do all they can in that direction, and much and lasting good will be accomplished. No good can be accomplished that will reach beyond this life, except through the teaching of the Bible. We need not expect any form of religion ever to be invented by man's wisdom that can accomplish the grand designs of the Christian religion. Therefore all should be careful to live the Christian life as the word of God directs. All that will be faithful in doing this will have nothing to fear when they come to part from this earthly life. Nothing but the Christian religion can prepare us for eternal life, and we should be slow to allow anything to hinder us from securing the interest of our souls for eternity.

What Do You Say?

BY C. G. VINCENT.

Did you notice the fine reports about the baptisms at Otsuka and Kamitomizaka churches, in Tokyo, Japan? Sure you did. What do you think about it? "Fine, just fine!" Yes, so it is. But what about supporting these workers in their good cause? Only ten more days from this writing (May 20) and the first of the month will be upon us again-time to send a check to Japan; but we have only eight dollars in hand. Frankly now, shall we write to these faithful brethren in Japan the following message: "Very sorry to have to write you that the American brethren have not responded to your needs, so you will have to close down the work?" Brethren, this is no "bluff," for it is "mighty" close to the truth, or what will soon be the truth, if you do not answer this appeal. Do it now. If you do not care to send through me, then send your gift to Brother McCaleb or to Sister Andrews, stating that your offering is for the Otsuka or Kamitomizaka work. My address is 137 East Third Street, Dayton, Ohio.

Notes and Items About the Japan Work.

BY C. G. VINCENT.

Brother Hiratsuka wrote me a four-page report of his trip into the country, and it reads like Acts. I wish I could give all that he says and the map he drew of the route he took in, but to do that would take up too much space in this paper. So it must suffice to say that he did much good in the way of encouraging the few faithful believers in those parts and in the way of teaching many who have heard but little, if indeed any, of the soul-saving message from heaven. One was baptized. Brother Hiratsuka gave out much literature and many Bibles. I spoke of this trip briefly in a previous article, but I did not have before me the details of the meetings.

Brother Takashi is now in the country doing all he can to teach his people of the true and living God. Takashi graduated from high school recently with honors. He desires to continue his education, beginning again this fall. He is developing into an earnest and efficient worker.

Sister Togo is doing splendid work among the children and women. Miss Togo is well qualified now for her life work, having just finished her kindergarten course. She is well acquainted with the Bible and the teaching of the New Testament.

Brother Ishiguro reports three baptisms at the Otsuka church. He tells me that these new converts are unusually promising. He also reports that the rent on the house we are using for meetings has been increased. Brother Ishiguro is being supported by the church at the David Lipscomb College. What church or two churches will assume the support of Brother Hiratsuka at $27.50 a month? What an opportunity! Who will take up this matter in a businesslike way?

I have been advised that the increase in the cost of living has affected the Japanese relatively as much as it has us, and for this reason our workers are finding it hard to meet their obligations. They have been very patient. Other missions have met these conditions with increased support, and we should be as liberal. Brother Ishiguro should have two dollars and fifty cents (in his money five yen) more a month. I take this occasion to suggest that the good brethren of the David Lipscomb College do just a bit more and send our brother fifteen dollars a month instead of twelve dollars and fifty cents. I believe they will gladly do this.

I am glad to say that Miss Andrews has moved near the Kamitomizaka church and has offered to teach an English Bible class each Lord's-day evening before the regular services. This is a fine way to lead the students to study the Bible and finally to win them for the Master.

I want the readers of the Gospel Advocate to remember that I am still receiving and forwarding support for these workers each month. I mail the check on the first of the month. Send in our offering now for the June remittance. Address me at 137 East Third Street, Dayton, Ohio.

India's Need.

BY NELLIE STRAITON.

I here give some extracts from Sister Armstrong-Hopkins' letters which should be read with interest by all:

If we could have a fund for printing, we could use as much or as little as our allowance permitted or justified. Of course, the larger our fund for that purpose, the greater good we would be able to accomplish by means of religious literature, which is always a great power for good.

I have been very busy of late. There has been, and still is, such a lot of sickness among the missionaries and their workers and the children.

As you will see, my typewriter is still out of repair, badly so. I can hardly use it at all. Nor can we very well afford to have it put in order.

Please accept the assurance of our very sincere love, gratitude, and appreciation, together with our very best and heartlest holiday wishes. How we long to give a gift to those we love, at such a time as this! But when we give up all for Christ and India, we also relinquish such privileges as these.

When we came to India the second time, it was with the understanding that it was to be for the remainder of our lives; and we expect to live and die in this country. We wish only and above all things to serve God and poor, suffering humanity in this benighted land of India.

Your kind letter of October 31, together with New York draft for eighty-five dollars, came safely, and was received three days ago, affording much comfort and relief. Many thanks to you, dear friend, and to each and every one of the good friends and brethren and sisters who have contributed toward this generous fellowship. I shall write to each of them just as soon as possible. Meanwhile please assure them of our warm and sincere appreciation, gratitude, and love.

The eighty-five dollars mentioned above is the last eightyfive dollars I have been able to send. Since then (October 31) the gifts each month have been from twenty-five to thirty-five dollars less than that sum. This is surely not enough. Those who have contributed have been very generous, and some of them have sent a gift regularly every month. But there must be very many who are not giving to missionary work, and to those of you I appeal. Jesus Christ, when he sent his disciples out as missionaries, did not limit them to Jerusalem, nor Judea, nor Samaria; but "to the uttermost part of the earth" was his parting message to them. Please compare these words: "Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations." "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation." Will you help to send the gospel to far-away India? Address Miss Nellie Straiton, 1030 South Lake Street, Fort 0 0 0 Worth, Texas.

Moving Pietures.

The number of baptisms of the churches of Christ in Japan with which I am in cooperation, for 1917, were as follows: Zoshigaya church, none; Takahagi church (Fujimori, minister), two; Sendagaya church, seven; Kamitomi zaka church (Hiratsuka, minister), nine; Otsuka church (Ishiguro, minister), twelve; in the village of Amarumc, four—a total of thirty-four.

The Philadelphia Convention.

The "Win the War for Permanent Peace" Convention, held in Philadelphia, under the auspices of the League to Enforce Peace, May 16, 17, was a brilliant success.

We attended this convention, not as an appointee of the International Convention of Disciples of Christ, but as a representative of the Christian Standard, and upon an invitation from Mr. Taft's secretary.

Great church and interdenominational and political conventions have been held for years past, and in every section of the country; but it is doubtful if, in our entire history as a nation, there has ever been a meeting so representative and potential as the one just closed in Philadelphia.

Every State in the Union sent delegates. Every complexion of politics and religion and thought was represented, yet no one on the program or in lobby gossip attempted to grind an ax. All were Americans—nothing more, nothing less.

Thirty-six Governors and ex-Governors, United States Senators and Congressmen, mayors of the leading cities, jurists, captains of industry, college presidents and professors, distinguished ministers, and the editors of the leading religious and secular journals were present

Nor was the attendance by any means masculine. Ladies traveled from New England and the South and the Pacific coast to participate in this history-making occasion. Mrs. J. Thomas Preston—formerly Mrs. Grover Cleveland—presided at one of the sessions, and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw delivered one of the thrilling addresses.

The distinguished, but intensely active, citizen, William Howard Taft, president of the League to Enforce Peace, was the master of ceremonies, and he was a master in every sense of the word. "What to do with our ex-Presidents" is now no longer a question in one's mind, when he comprehends the activity of Professor Taft, In addition to his duties as director of the League to Enforce Peace, he is traveling, traveling—creating and steadying the war sentiment so essential in this crisis. During the last few months he has visited sixteen cantonments and addressed our soldiers-telling them why they are going In one of his brief convention addresses he reoverseas. ferred to their essential mission, emphasized the importance of sending men who have the gift of public speech to discuss the war issues in the cantonments, and stated that many of our men in training—brave, but uninformed—need instruction respecting the life-and-death struggle between autocracy and democracy.

The program was great in its personnel. George Wharton Pepper, Rabbi Wise, Charles B. Elliott, Professor Mc-Elroy, Charles Evans Hughes, Henry Van Dyke, and John Sharp Williams are a few of the distinguished men who addressed the assembly.

John Sparko, the distinguished—perhaps the most outstanding—Socialist in America, discussed the theme, "A Made-in-Germany Socialism." When introduced, the ovation accorded him was not at all pronounced. However, as he proceeded, he won his great audience. He declared that, as an internationalist and a pacifist, he is in favor of the war, and wishes it to continue until the imperial government of Germany is absolutely crushed, and likewise stated that he has no sympathy with a peace propaganda which proposes "terms" of any kind with Kaiserism. His address, not in line with much of the socialistic teaching with which we are acquainted, was a surprise to his audience, and likewise a tonic.

The Philadelphia Convention was a war meeting, held in the name of peace. Every speech deprecated the proposition to negotiate peace with Germany. It was the sentiment of the convention that the war must go on, even if all the allied democratic countries are reduced to sackcloth and ashes, until the central powers are subdued and militarism is shot into its grave.

The League to Enforce Peace is an organization which stands for war, because its members realize that permanent peace can obtain only at the point of the sword. This is, of course, contrary to the preconceived ideals of our modern civilization. We thought the world had progressed beyond the method of settling disputes in bloody battle. We had not reckoned with the medieval spirit which slumbered in Germany, and which suddenly sprang forth, a mad monster, to destroy all that is precious in the sight of both God and man.

Mr. C. K. Ratcliff, England's representative to the convention, said: "England and America were sundered by a German-English king; now England and America are united by a German kaiser." He predicted that the Anglo-Saxon tongue, and the great ideals for which the two countries stand, will come forth in new, powerful, and righteous glory in the reconstruction period, and this prophecy was greeted with an ovation which began in a round of hand-clapping and terminated in a standing, shouting demonstration.

We were likewise impressed with the place given the Christian religion in the addresses. A number of the speakers repudiated German rationalism, and all recognized the part religion must have in the great readjustment.—Christian Standard.

I clip the above editorial and give it to our readers because it is of general interest. Our dreams of world peace are shattered, but this should only stimulate Christians to work and pray more for universal and lasting peace.

The Forty-Five Petitioners.

Some time ago forty-five people, who had contributed money to the College of the Bible, and who were not satisfied with the present management of that institution, petitioned the Board of Trustees to reopen the case against the professors who are accused of teaching destructive criticism, and give it a fair and thorough investigation under the rules that govern the trial of cases in civil courts. That the case has never received such an investigation is known to every person who is familiar with its history. These petitioners felt that their money was being used contrary to the purposes for which they gave it, and their petition was just and reasonable; but it was turned down with a coolness which seemed to say: "We have your money, and we propose to use it to suit ourselves, regardless of your wishes." Some of these petitioning donors feel much as they would if they had been waylaid.

By way of apology for this outrageous treatment of the petitioners, it has been said that only forty-five of the seven or eight hundred donors signed the petition. While that is true, it is also true that the petition was sent to only about seventy donors, and nearly sixty-five per cent of those to whom it was sent signed it. Does that indicate a sentiment that is insignificant enough to be ignored in a matter of this kind? The probability is that the petition would have been treated just as it was, if it had been signed by every donor now living; for the trustees seem to think that, as they constitute a self-perpetuating body, they can do just as they please, and the donors cannot help themselves. They may find that they are relying upon a very insecure foundation.—J. B. Briney, in Christian Standard.

This is the way of errorists. They always belittle the opposition of the advocates of truth. They rely on numbers and not on the truth. It is amazing that the leaders in all the universities are not ready to abandon forever German kultur and higher criticism. German rationalism has proved a curse to all who have accepted it. It is worse than folly to fasten such a blight on the rising generation. We would rejoice to see Brother Briney succeed in driving all forms of skepticism out of the Bible College.

Prohibition in Detroit.

The benefits of prohibition are seen in Detroit as in every place where it is tried. On Tuesday of last week the Central Police District reported that for twenty-four hours not an arrest was made, not an accident occurred, and not one report of theft was made. This showed a revolution in many lives. The Ford Company reported that on the first Monday in April, the last wet month, 2,620 men were absent from work because of Saturday-night drinking. On the first Monday in May only 1,618 were absent, and only 1,536 the second Monday. The fitness of more than a thousand more men to do the day's work was a commentary that pours a flood of light on the situation.—Herald and Presbyter.

The man who lives as God directs is sure to be blessed. Temperance is good for the person who practices it. God demands of us temperance because he means to bless us. The man rebels against his own interests who fights against God's law.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

J. P. Lowrey is in a good meeting at Paragould, Ark.

There have been five baptisms at Grandview Heights, where Joe McPherson is engaged in a successful meeting.

- J. D. Smith, of Dry Fork, Ky., will begin a meeting for the Joseph Avenue congregation, this city, on Sunday, June 9.
- R. V. Cawthon's tent meeting at Trinity Lane continues to grow in interest. One person has been baptized at this writing.
- A. B. Lipscomb delivered the commencement address to the graduates of the Price-Webb Preparatory School, at Lewisburg, Tenn., Tuesday.
- G. C. Brewer closed the meeting for the Belmont Avenue congregation, this city, last Sunday. The brethren were much pleased with his labor among them.
- A. B. Lipscomb preached at Cowan, Tenn., Sunday. There is an energetic little band of Christians at this point, and the outlook for better things is very promising.
- From J. D. Northcut, Tracy City, Tenn., May 22: "We closed at South Pittsburg with a packed house, with nine baptized and three reclaimed. I begin at Monteagle next Sunday."

After the close of the present session, W. H. Owen will not be connected with the college at Henderson, Tenn. He would like to get in touch with a good field for teaching and preaching. His address will be Henderson for some time yet.

From Ben West, Ennis, Texas, May 16: "We had a large crowd at the hour of prayer last evening, with good talks by several brethren. There was one confession and two baptisms. Brother Dunn, of Houston, will begin a meeting with us on June 1."

From H. I. Copeland, Haleyville, Ala., May 23: "I like Alabama fine, and think I have done some good work. I regret that it is necessary for me to leave this people; but I am going to be with some fine people at Ripley, Tenn., a place where a preacher is very much needed."

From J. W. Dunn, Paris, Texas, May 22: "We are in the third week of our mission meeting in West Paris. Fine audiences and interest. Additions all along. J. S. Dunn, of Dallas, will come the first Sunday in June to labor with us at the Lamar Avenue Church. We are hopeful of much good."

From James E. Laird, Steele, Mo., May 15: "I am now in an interesting meeting at this place. Leonidas T. Holland, of Greenfield, Tenn., is conducting the song service, and is doing it well. The church here has been divided over the instrumental-music question and our brethren have been driven out of the house, but we mean to build a new one."

From A. O. Colley, 2018 Bennett Avenue, Dallas, Texas: "There were four accessions at the Pearl and Bryan Streets church of Christ, this city, on the second Sunday in May. We all rejoice to say we are in unity, planning for great things for the Lord. A. B. Lipscomb, of the Gospel Advocate office, is to assist us in a meeting to begin on the fifth Sunday in June. We expect a great meeting."

From F. L. Young, Cleburne, Texas, May 22: "Beginning on June 1, I have agreed to conduct a series of meetings at Godley, Somerville, Dodd City, Silvana, Campbell, and Hilltown. They embrace June, July, and August. The meeting at Somerville will be a mission meeting. In this town of three thousand, I am told, there are only four members of the church. Pray that a door may be open for the word."

J. H. Copeland writes: "My address is 34 Company, Ninth Train Battalion, 156 Depot Brigade, Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C. If you have a son here in camp, please send me his address, so I may look him up. I want to come in contact with every Christian boy here, so that we may come together for the Lord's-day worship. Brethren, pray for us, for we know that the prayers of a right-eous man availeth much."

The annual commencement of the National Teachers' Normal and Business College, Henderson, Tenn., will begin on June 3 and close on the 6th—Monday, Thesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. The sermon will be given in College Hall, Sunday evening, by A. G. Freed. The class address will be delivered by Hon. Sid. R. Clark, of Trenton, Tenn., Wednesday evening. There will be in all departments about forty graduates. To all exercises, friends and brethren are cordially invited.

From F. B. Shepherd, Lometa, May 18: "The work here is daily growing more encouraging. The Sunday school membership drive resulted in an increase of one hundred per cent. The cottage meeting, which we had planned only until warm weather, is to be continued as a regular meeting. My Bible-story class on Saturday afternoons, for children under fourteen, is proving the most encouraging work I have so far undertaken. At the services on Sunday night one who had been withdrawn from many years ago returned to renew his allegiance. Rejoice with us."

William Rucker writes from Adrian, Fla.: "Since last report I have held meetings at Labelle and Bokeelia, and will to-night close a short meeting near Trenton with the Cherry Sink church of Christ. I also had a debate with a Wesleyan Methodist that was all we could have wished. Four persons have been baptized at Cherry Sink, four were baptized at Labelle and three at Bokeelia. The work in Florida is succeeding well where an effort is being made, but laborers are few and the work is great. Florida needs more preachers who are willing to work for a living now and the reward otherwise later, If any is to be expected. I have decided to stay in Florida this year, except time for one meeting in Georgia. I have arranged my Tennessee work for next year. My time is all taken until August. Brethren in Florida may write me for work later than that."

Luther F. Wallace and Harry Hayes write from Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C.: "For the benefit of the Christian boys who are in Camp Jackson and those who are yet to come, we are going to give you the names and addresses of the boys who are now meeting for worship here. These boys would be glad to help any one who has not yet found our place of worship. We meet at the Y. M. C. A. Unit 136, Artillery Side. The following were present last Lord's day: Abb Spellings, Battery A, 318 F. A.; John Pittman, Battery A, 318 F. A.; James Pigg, Battery C, 318 F. A.; Jesse Moore, Battery E, 318 F. A.; Wade Richardson, Battery D, 318 F. A.; - Maynard, Battery C, 318 F. A.; Bennie L. Sutton, Q. M. C. Det. B. 1; Clyde Doggett, Q. M. C. Det. B. 1; Frank H. Neely, Battery C, 318 F. A.; Ray Lee Norwood, 15 Company, 156 Depot Brigade; William F. Caldwell, 32 Company, 156 Depot Brigade; Dennis G. Farmer, 32 Company, 156 Depot Brigade; Luther F. Wallace, Battery B, 318 F. A.; Harry Hayes, 32 Company, 156 Depot Brigade. Now it is true that some are being moved almost daily, but all these boys will not be apt to move at once: so any boy in camp may see either, and he will be glad to help him find us next Lord's day. We had a fine meeting last Lord's day, and the prospects here are fine for us. Those who are in camp can easily find us by seeing one of the boys named above."

Training Little Children

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Article 12.

Parents must not look down upon the child and consider his efforts, trials, and sorrows petty. We must try to understand how sincerely they put all their hearts into their play and that the losses that seem so trivial to us are of great moment to them. We must learn to share all their experiences with them if we would develop the fine feelings we wish them to have at maturity.

Children must not be shut off in one part of the house to remain aloof until a certain age, but ought to be a part of the family circle, sharing its joys, work, and minor sorrows. I do not mean that children should be pushed before visitors, have all their meals at the family table, or remain up till their elders retire; but there are times and places when it is the children's right and privilege really to be members of the family.

Even when they are very young, children can assume responsibility for certain light tasks about the house; and as their age and strength increase, more and more duties should be added. The great American idea has been to remove all responsibility from the child and to give him a care-free childhood. I would not take one second of joy away from any child, but I would make it a joy for him to feel that the home is his and that he, too, helps in the making of it by performing certain duties that need to be done for the comfort of all. The child of two can pick up toys, put away dishes and silver, help set the table, dust low furniture, and run many errands upstairs and down. and he loves to feel that he is "mother's helper."

> He brings his daddy's slippers, He picks up baby's toys; He shuts the door for grandma, Without a bit of noise. On errands for his mother He scampers up and down, She vows she would not change him For all the boys in town.

(Song for "A Little Child's Day," by Emile Poulsson and

Then the child can help prepare for the great festival days-birthdays, Thanksgiving, and Christmas-those joyous days which bring the family very close together; and we can let him share not only in the preparation, but in the joy of the day itself; and here very early he gains a presentiment of the love and spirit of service that make home, and an ideal of the home that he will some day found.

As we would let the child share the labor and the festivals, so we must permit him to share the great family secrets and home joys. Let him know that he must never divulge anything that concerns only the family, and I know that a child properly trained will never tell his playmates what he is told is a family secret.

So we begin very early to train him to keep his word and the sanctity of the home. When he has been thus prepared, he is ready to share with the mother and father that greatest family secret, the coming of the new baby. and this confidence will bind the little one closer than anything else to the very heart of the home.

Children are so open-hearted and ready and respond so sweetly and quickly to faith and trust that we often miss great happiness by not sharing our hopes and joys more freely with them.

If we keep the bond very close, our home will become the great meeting place of all children, and this love and companionship between parents and children will be like a powerful magnet whose attraction the children cannot re-

So from these beginnings the home tie will be so strengthened that we need never fear that the allurements of the world can draw our children from us, but can rest assured that they will always return to the "center of deep repose," 0 0 0

Watching.

BY M. E. H.

Are we watching, ever watching, For our Savier from on high? Would we welcome his appearing, Should he come before we die?

Christ has told us in his message To be watching day and night For the blessed Son of glory, Who is coming in his might.

Yes, we're ready and are watching, Should he come this very hour, And we'd welcome his appearing In the clouds with all his power.

May God help us to continue To be faithful to the end; Then we'll be called up in glory, There to reign always with him.

The things most difficult to do are usually the most important and useful when accomplished. The promotion of the spiritual life among men and women is the hardest work in all the world. Yet it is by far the greatest undertaking to which we may address ourselves. It is not popular. There is no applause. He who masters it best generally fails to realize it and often himself hangs upon the cross. It is thus that our greatest ones are kept humble.—Selected. 0 0 0

Lives of superior usefulness are usually lives directed toward the achievement of one end or at most of a few ends, and impelled by a simple belief in some great effective object. Many fair intellectual gifts and splendid opportunities are of little avail without concentration of purpose and energy. Want of right direction, self-knowledge and discipline, result in the wreck of multitudes, who might prove useful servants of mankind, in the church, and of the world, were they trained to exalt some few genuine beliefs as the steadfast stars to lead and guide them through the world, and forgetting wandering orbs and fleeting meteors, be contented to follow those from the beginning to the end of their mortal journey .- C. Gethsemane.

BY C. PETTY.

The scenes of this garden are as sacred and solemn as any connected with our Savior's wonderful life that he lived among men. He had just instituted the Supper and sung the last hymn with his disciples and had said to them: "All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad." (Matt. 26: 31.) Peter said unto him: "Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended." (Verse 33.) Then he went with them all near Gethsemane, and said: "Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder. And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee [James and John], and began to be sorrowful and very heavy. Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death; tarry ye here, and watch with me. And he went a little farther, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt. And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What, could ye not watch with me one hour?" He told them that "the spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak." He knew their weakness and frailties much better than they did, and dealt in pity with them. He knew before the temptation came what they would do; and though Peter thought he would stay with him even though all the rest should fail, he tells Peter what he would do, and says: "But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not; and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren," That is: "Peter, I am helping you over the trials that shall befall you, and now you be a help to your brethren when I am gone." They had been with him on the mount of glory, and Peter said it was good to be there; in fact, they had seen all the wonders he had performed; but that did not remove the weakness of the flesh. But he loved them still; and though he knew they would all forsake him, he dealt kindly with them, and wanted Peter to be a help to others-a great lesson that comes down to all his disciples for all time.

Now, brother, sister, how many that are weary have you been a help to along life's toilsome way? Do you deal kindly and in pity with them? Do you cheer them as on they go with their heavy burdens? If so, happy will your life be. Remember that the dear Savior had to tread the wine press alone. No one but an angel came to him while in that dark and lonely Gethsemane, while every leaf was in mourning and every dewdrop a tear. How sweet must the angel's visit have been to the Savior while in that lenely garden, when all the sins of the world lay on him, and he prayed as no one else could pray in the stillness of that night! But there was no other way for man's redemption but for him to drink that cup, and no way for the gates of that heavenly city to be opened for man, that man one day might be gathered into that eternal home, but by his death. Not only this, but he knew the trials and struggles all his followers would have after he was gone. But all of his followers of all ages can have the sweet consolation, amid all their sighing, that he will never leave them nor forsake them. Should not this cause us to sing for joy all along life's way, even to the end? And now, while the world is wrapped in gloom as never before, and all the earth is sighing and in tears, and many earthly friends may forsake you and you may be left all alone in this unfriendly world, yet know that the Savior will never leave you. In view of this, let us all in spirit gather often in the garden of Gethsemane, that we may see that our Savior is dealing in pity in our trials and struggles and will be with us until trials are over and we lay down to Gadsden, May 12.—The work of the Master in this part of his vineyard moves steadily onward. Brother Price Billingsley has just closed an eightdays' meeting with the congregation While there were no additions, we had good audiences, and we feel sure that much good has been accomplished. Brother Billingsley was at his best. He has greatly endeared himself to the people here, and they hope to be able to secure him sometime for a much longer meeting .-Aruna Clark.

Arizona.

Phenix, May 20.—The meeting in Phenix is progressing nicely; crowds growing as well as the interest. I preached four times yesterday and baptized one lady from the Methodist Church. There are many "isms" here to hinder the work of the simple gospel-Russellism, Mormonism, Adventism. Somnerism, and all the other denominational institutions. The thing that has hindered and hurt the church of Christ most here is the Somner folk, who denounce Bible schools, declaring nonfellowship with preachers and brethren who indorse them, and their declaration of evangelistic authority over the churches and the eldership, They have caused division here over these things, and thus hindered and hurt the cause of truth. I will be here two weeks yet, and we hope for a great meeting before the close.-T. W. Phillips.

California.

Fresno, May 9 .- The work at the Nevada Avenue congregation is moving along nicely. The house is filled to overflowing each Lord's day, and the interest is good and growing. Brother Larimore is to begin a month's meeting with us next Sunday, and, of course, we are expecting a great feast of spiritual things. I am to preach for the congregation in San Francisco next Sunday morning and in Berkeley at night. The cause is progressing in both of these places. Success to the Gospel Advocate, its editors, contributors, and readers. It grows better with the passing of time.—W. Halliday Trice.

Tarpon Springs, May 20 .- I am now in a meeting at Tarpon Springs. Our crowds are not large, but interest is growing. One confession and baptism vesterday. I was with the brethren at Tampa a few days before coming here. I preached there on May 9-12; also preached at Harney, a mission point, about ten miles from Tampa, in the afternoon of May 12, and had one confession, so went back for baptizing and preaching service the next day. I came to Florida early in January, expecting to stay probably five or six weeks, but calls kept coming and I am still busy and have calls for several weeks' work yet, and almost every-where I have gone the brethren have urged me to move to the State. ters sent to my home address, Box 24, Tennessee City, Tenn., should reach me without much delay .- J. H. Mur-

McMinnville, May 20 .- I am engaged in a good meeting with the Depot Street church of Christ, at this place, with eight baptized and one restored to fellowship. Pikeville, May 16.-I have been in East Tennessee with good success for the Lord. I find that that field has been badly everlooked, many souls dying who never heard the gospel. Brother, if you cannot go and take the gospel message, then help to send some one else. God is going to hold some one responsible. Will it be you? Who will be the first to go with me into this field?-G. S. Marsh.

Hillsboro, May 20.—I was told that there was no church of Christ at Newmarket, Ala. I spent about ten days there in February and March. I soon found three men and their wives who were simply Christians. Strange to say, all of these women were from Tennessee-one, a niece of Brother Frolds; another, my daughter; the other, a sister from Bedford County. We had the worship as the New Testament directs in Brother A. P. Hill's home while I was there. Since then they have met from house to house on the first day of the week to break bread. While they have no house, I consider God has a church in Newmarket. Brethren, should any of you be there on the Lord's day, be sure to meet with the saints there. Brother A. L. Moore is postmaster and will give the desired information. Newmarket is in a good country and is a fine little town. Nearly all the merchants have farms and are interested in building up the country. I find that good land can be had there much cheaper than in Tennessee. beauty about those people is that everybody works. Rich men have their sons and daughters to do work. I find this so different from Southern Alabama. To any who may read this, who are thinking of going West, I will say: You had better see Alabama before you go. We expect to have a house soon, so all of God's children can meet and sound out the old Jeru-salem gospel. I tried to get a place to preach there, but failed. I went back again in April and preached out three miles, where we found a few Chris-tians. Brother Horton is much beloved there. I am often reminded of what God said in olden times: leaders of this people cause them to err; and they that are led of them are destroyed." The same is true today. My prayer is that the Lord's will be done.—W. P. Sims.

Texas.

Canadian, May 20.—Beginning on April 21 and continuing nine days, I did the preaching in a meeting with Brother W. P. Skaggs and the church at Tom Bean. I found the Tom Bean church a large and happy band of saints, moving along in peace and harmony. Brother Skaggs is supported by the church to work with and for it. Their love is reciprocal. Brother Skaggs is a busy man and does his work well. He and his good wife furnished me a happy home with them during the meeting. The meeting was very well attended and some interest was manifested, but rain and sickness hindered much and we closed without additions. Last Wednesday Brother Skaggs and I closed an eleven-days' meeting with the Miami church without any additions. Brother Skaggs did the preaching, which was enjoyed by both saint and sinner, and which, no doubt, will do good in the future. The war and indifference are keeping many brethren and the outsiders from taking very much interest in spiritual things. The writer spent from Friday night till Sunday afternoon at Laketon Schoolhouse, preaching the word to a full house. Brother J. B. Nelson will begin a meeting with us in Canadian next Sunday. We are preparing for a great meeting. While the nations are waging a carnal warfare and sparing nothing to win the fight, the church should not forget to wage a spiritual warfare against Satan and sin, and spare nothing in order to win the fight of faith .- O. M. Reynolds.

Bread of Life.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

Jesus said: "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you." (John 6: 53.) This was very repulsive to many, and they said, "This is a hard saying," and many turned away from him. Jesus had said: "Not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead." As much as to say: "You are not to eat my flesh and drink my blood like your fathers are manna." It appears like they were so blinded by materialism that they did not understand that this eating and drinking was done by believing and obeying. His flesh and blood were to be spiritual food upon which the longing soul might feast and obtain spiritual life. They were not to eat the gospel like they would eat a piece of bread. Jesus was the bread of life. He was the spiritual manna in contrast with the manna which sustained life. His flesh, or body, was to be the sacrificial offering. His blood, which was equal to the life of the human race which was lost on account of the first sin, was to be given to atone for sin. This is why Jesus is the bread of life. There are no other means of redemption This bread of life, which is the gospel, extends to men in this world; and as the eating and drinking are done by faith and obedience, the man who fails to believe and obey fails to obtain the eternal life which Jesus came to give. The eternal destiny of man is at stake in this matter. No wonder that God smote Elymas with blindness when he committed spiritual murder by depriving a man of the bread of life which Paul was giving in order that he might live. Some claim that the eating and drinking spoken of in John 6: 53 refer to the communion. Not so, but communion is included in what is enjoined upon a person who eats of the spiritual "bread" by believing and obeying what the gospel requires. The priestcraft fraud of pretending to change the communion bread and wine into the real flesh and blood of Jesus was established by Nicholas II. in A.D. 1059, at the council of Rome. Then in 1414 it was decreed that the priests should drink the wine in place of the laity. I do not desire to be that kind of a priest.

WHY DO ALL DOCTORS PRESCRIBE CALOMEL?

Of all the medicines in the world, doctors prescribe calomel most often and depend upon it most universally. There must be a good and sufficient reason. What is it?

If you will study the doctors' books, you will find that the medical authorities prescribe calomel for almost every disease. reason is that calomel is the greatest and only thorough system purifier. It makes the liver active, drives out the poisons from the stomach, bowels, and kidneys, and there-by purifies the blood. Calomel puts the entire system in the most favorable condition for Nature to exercise her recuperative power. Your doctor will tell you that drugs merely assist Nature. That is why he prescribes calomel so often.

The new kind of calomel, called "Calotabs," is refined and purified from all of the nauseating and dangerous qualities of the old-style calomel, and is rapidly taking its place, for it is more effective than the oldstyle calomel as a liver cleanser and system parifier. One Calotab at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No nausea nor the slightest unpleasantness. Next morning you awake feeling fine, with a hearty appe-tite for breakfast. Eat what you please fruits, acids, or anything. No restrictions of habit or diet.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages; price, thirty-five cents. mended and guaranteed by druggists every-where. Your money back if you are not de-

Cincinnati authority says corns dry up and lift out with fingers.

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lockjaw or blood poison, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority, who tells you that a quarter ounce of a drug called "Freezone" can be obtained at little cost from the drug store, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

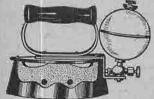

You simply apply a few drops of freezone on a tender, aching corn, and the soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

This drug is sticky, but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

The Black Horse.

They who walk after the flesh in the lusts of uncleanness despise government, are presumptuous, self-willed, and not afraid to speak evil of dignities. (2 Pet. 2: 10.) Jude speaks of them as follows: "For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men; turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ. I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ve once knew this, how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterwards destroyed them that believed not. And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day. Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. Likewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities." (Jude 1: 4-8.) Paul says: "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." (Gal. 5: 19-21.) "For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other." (Verse 17.) This spirit operates through the lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the eye, and the pride of life, which John tells us is all there is in the world. (1 John 2: 16.) He also tells us that the love of God is not in any man who loves the world or anything that is of the world. (1 John 2: 15.) Paul says: "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof." (Rom. 6: 12.) "For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God." (Rom. 8: 5-8.) "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." - (1 Cor. 2: 14.) This spirit of worldliness invades every heart both in the church and out of it, both in the true and in the false systems of religion. Paul speaks of it as a warring element in his life. He says: "But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members. O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death? I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God: but with the flesh the law of (Rom. 7: 23-25.) Continuing, he says: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." (Rom. 8: 1.)

The flesh has certain needs that are lawful and right to procure for it when this can be done lawfully; but to walk after the flesh merely in the gratification of the lusts thereof, satisfying its appetites and ambitions, is to be like a beast, and those who do these things are continually drawn away of their lusts and enticed, through a love of the wages of unrighteousness, which the devil as their tempter is continually holding up before them.

The tempter entices some to satisfy the lusts of the flesh in adultery or fornication; some find satisfaction in acquiring unclean or filthy habits; some, in lasciviousness. Idolatry, or covetousness, furnishes sufficient enticement for many, as also every other work of the flesh. (Gal. 5: 19-21,) These works of the flesh and many more are offered by the devil as the tempter as gratification of the desires of the flesh and those who yield are they who walk after the flesh. Every person that can be entired accepts as the price of his service to Satan whatever enticement the tempter offers that promises satisfactory gratification of the lusts involved. The fleece and the milk of the flock promises satisfactory reward to the false prophet for his services in bringing in damnable heresies by which division and factions are produced, for no other reason than that of furnishing him a flock to fleece and otherwise despoil of their goods to his profit. Thus it is plain that in every form of temptation there is such an element of commercial exchanges involved as to account for the pair of balances in the hand of him whose business it is to negotiate these exchanges. Therefore the devil, in the character of the tempter, sits upon the black horse with a pair of balances in his hand, negotiating with men, in exchange for their souls, such earthly rewards as promise satisfactory gratification of the appetites and ambitions of the flesh in this life.

It was the kingdoms of this world and the glory of them that the devil, as tempter of the church, offered as enticement, that led to the falling away of that portion of the church that could be led away through the lusts in its members for world power and dominion in the establishment of the beast of Rev. 13: 1-10, to whom the dragon "that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan" (Rev. 12: 9), gave power, a throne, and great authority (Rev. 13: 2). It was this beast and the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, as two of the three spirits sent to walk to and fro in the earth, that was or will be taken by the rider of the white horse and cast into the lake burning with fire and brimstone. (Rev. 19: 19-21.) The time will come when that same dragon, "that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan," will be bound for a thousand years and cast into the bottomless pit (Rev. 20: 1-3); and finally, after the thousand years are finished, he, too, will be cast into the same lake of fire and brimstone where the beast and false prophet are (Rev. 20: 7-10), where he will be tormented day and night forever and ever.

It does not take great men to do great things; it only takes consecrated men.—Phillips Brooks,

Among the Colored Folks

Meeting at Bellbuckle, Tenn.

I am now in my first protracted meeting for this season, at Bellbuckle, Tenn. This is my sixth meeting at this place, and interest is good. Four years ago there was but one member of the church of Christ here, but now there are about twenty-one, and also a good many who are friendly to us now, who, when we first came, were bitter against the gospel of Christ and did all in their power to prevent us from preaching here. The meeting has been in progress nearly two weeks, with no additions yet, but I am glad to see such a fine spirit in the people. On last Lord's day a good many of the brethren and sisters came from Fosterville, or near there, and met with us, and it was a pleasure to have them with us; and while they were with us we held a business meeting and arranged a plan to collect funds to build us a meetinghouse, and the interest was high. Fifty dollars was subscribed, and half of it is ready to be paid in at once. We also have got out some papers to place in the hands of the members so they can solicit aid from those who will help a work of this kind. Brother W. R. Mingle (white) has been interested in this work from the very start. He is a man who has the confidence of the people here, both white and colored, and he has agreed to act as treasurer; so all who may read this notice and feel it their duty to assist a little, weak, struggling band of Christians can send their contributions to W. R. Mingle, Bellbuckle, Tenn.

My next meeting will be at Louisville, Ky. This is a place where the white Christians are trying to establish a loyal work among the colored people. The Highland church of Christ has the work in charge. Brother E. L. Jorgenson is their minister, and he is a fine, Christian man. It seems that his whole object is to win souls for Christ, let them be white or colored. This will be my second meeting with them, and I am asking God to give us the victory.

In conclusion, let us all do more for Christ's kingdom on earth, and let his spirit rule in our hearts, and all hatred, malice, envying, and divisions will cease. M. KEEBLE.

Church-House Talk.

BY H. M. PHILLIPS.

There is an idea in the minds of some people that the church house is a more sacred place than any other house. This is possibly because such houses were used mostly for sacred services and young folks were taught to be good at the church house. The house should be kept clean and tidy, and a failure to do so shows a wrong spirit in the church meeting there. Now church houses are used for almost everything. Some members use them to talk business, trades, and almost all other worldly affairs.

What should our talk be about when we assemble? I feel sure it would be better if all would have more to say along spiritual lines; they would be better prepared for the services. If we talk of worldly things till services begin, then cease till we dismiss, and then begin again, it shows, at least, that we are very full of such. It might be, if our mouths would speak our thoughts during the service, that there would be but little of the spiritual said. Now all must agree that there is too little interest in such, judging from the trend of the talk we usually hear. Brethren, what do the members talk about mostly around and in the church house? Do they all seem to have come to worship God or to talk their worldly affairs?

Now, the way to correct this is not to plead for a more consecrated conversation at the church house alone, but get all to have such all the days of the week and near or in any house. To try and appear religious a few hours on Sunday and then go wild during the week is a bad thing to do. It means a failure. When the Book teaches us to think and sp ak upon those things above, it means not only for an hour or so on Sunday, but all the week. If our week-day talk were guarded, the church-house talk would, as a natural result, be as becometh Christians. "Keep thy heart with all diligence." "As a man thinketh, so is he." "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." So if the fountain is pure, the stream will be likewise. We need to have more spiritual talk, not only at the church house, but everywhere. Speak sound words at all times.

A Great Mother's Godly Influence.

Over a generation ago a young teacher named Martha Campbell had her heart fired with love for a lost world and zeal for Christ's last command. She was not permitted to go to the foreign field; but when she became a mother, every one of her children was consecrated to the Lord.

That humble woman is the mother of Wilbert W. White, who founded the Bible Teachers' Training School in New York, and editor of the Bible Magazine: of J. Campbell White, who largely organized the Laymen's Missionary Movement and was its first General Secretary; of Mrs. John R. Mott, whose husband is perhaps the best-known figure in the missionary world, the president of the World's Missionary Conference at Edinburgh; of Mrs. W. R. Stewart, whose husband is a missionary in China; while the eldest daughter is married to a minister who was for many years a missionary in frontier service in the Great Northwest.

Surely the God of Abraham still lives, and is able to fill the weakest earthen vessel, and with his indwelling presence to bless the very ends of the earth from any place in which his providence has placed his servants.

The Christian home still is the indispensable, divinely ordained recruiting station for the army of the Lord, and holy motherhood still occupies the highest place in the camp of the King. -Missionary Review.

Hope.

To work without hope is discouraging. We need the sense of progress to cheer and sustain us. To go around and around on a treadmill of mere drudgery takes our spirit out of us. Therefore we need a deeper and larger hope. This God gives us. We need to have faith that the years, as they come and go, may give us a deeper experience, may lift us to a large vision, may enable us to come nearer to God in faith, nearer to man in human sympathy and love.-Exchange.

OCTOR SAYS NUXATED IRON WILL INCREASE STRENGTH of DELICATE

In many instances says City Physician persons have suffered for years without knowing what made them feel tired, listless and run-down when their real trouble was lack of Iron in the blood-how to tell.

TF you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack from and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied a multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you cat does you good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance, in such cases, it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or marcotle drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming fired. Next take two fire-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good, sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and one of the best blood builders in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teath, upset their stomachs and were not atsimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

Manufacturer's Nôte: Nuxated Iron which is recom-

Manufacturer's Note: Nuxated Iron which is recommended above is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic from products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser, or they will refund the money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Home.

BY MATTIE HOLDER.

Home! Home! What a cloud of memories come floating o'er me when I hear the word "home" or see it in Home, to me, does not mean merely a place to sleep and eat.

The place where I was reared was to me a cozy "home, sweet home," indeed and in truth. Strangers, tramps, preachers, the poor and needy were never turned away from our home empty-stomached.

My mother, though not strong physically, tried to see that her household, including hired help and tenants, were well fed; and by her modest, practical, Christian life she induced others to be good and follow Jesus.

I loved my parents and home. To me, home was the dearest, the finest, the fairest, the richest, the rarest, the sweetest, the most sacred, the grandest and most glorious of all God's many wonderful gifts to the human family.

Home was my haven of rest-my harbor from all toils, trials, and temp-When I did any thing tations. wrong (I can truthfully say I never did wrong intentionally), I was not afraid to go in or that my parents would thrash me or scold me and bawi around like some heathen. I knew they would look kindly and say very gently: "I know my little girl didn't intend to do wrong." My father and mother loved me devotedly and had the utmost confidence in me.

My mother not being healthy, she kept a colored nurse until I was about ten years old; and I really loved "Jane," my nurse, and "Aunt Mandy," her mother and our cook. Jane's cousin, Nise, would take me for rides on her back; and though we had fine horses and buggies then, I enjoyed those rides on Nise's back best, unless it was the rides over the fields behind my daddy on old "Cory," a pacing brown mare.

My grown sister would take such splendid care of me when she was at home. She took me everywhere with her; and her escorts were so nice and good to me, simply because I was a pure, nice, modest, little girl.

We would almost always attend church services in the country during the morning. In the afternoon we went to union services at a schoolhouse on my father's place-a log schoolhouse; and I can hear and see old Brother Parker (a Baptist minister) just as plainly now as I could when I was a tiny tot of three or four years old. One Sunday he said: Come over here, Sis, you and Phœbe, and sing that good old song, 'O How Happy Are They Who Their Savior

Obey!" And those two noble, sweet, modest, Christian women would go "over" and help him sing. But my parents, my grown sister, Brother Parker, and those two ladies whom Brother Parker called "Sis" and "Phœbe" (Mesdames Jim and Jake Goddard) have all passed into the great beyond.

In the summer, when the days were long and lonesome, my father would take us driving late in the afternoon. Happy? Of course I was happy, but not frivolous and foolish. I tried to be serious and sincere and make others love me and be happy, too.

Since then I have been to places where they had a nice building, nice furniture, and everything outward to make a home; but it was only the hull. (I prefer the kernel.) The poor wife did not have time (from gadding-poor thing!) to fix something good and wholesome for her family to eat. She did not have time (take time) to teach them to pray, or anything, unless some preacher came around, and then-O, my!-it's "Precious," "Darling," and such endearing terms; and, "I don't see why the child acted so terribly bad." Well, I do. It is like dear, good, true, noble Brother Sutton used to say: "Little Johnnie is only acting in the preacher's presence as he does when there is no preacher around." Wouldn't it be fine if we could only manage the Lord as we can some poor, old, green preachers?

No disrespect to preachers, however, for I think to preach and practice the gospel as it is taught in the Bible is the grandest, noblest calling beneath the blue canopy of heaven; and I think to be a pure, true, sweet, sympathetic, self-sacrificing, consecrated, conscientious, Christian wife of such a minister is as exalted a position as any lady need aspire to. The genuine article can be told by its jingle when the metal is tested. "Every wise woman buildeth her house: but the foolish plucketh it down with her hands."

Be sure of God. With simple, loving worship, by continual obedience. by purifying yourself even as he is pure, creep close to him, keep close to him. Be sure of God, and nothing can overthrow or drown you.-Phillips Brooks.

PENNSYLVANIA MAN THANKFUL.

PENNSYLVANIA MAN THANKFUL.

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir: Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years, and have always had trouble with it till I got your appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snue, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on; it just adapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in.

It would be a veritable Godsend to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it. My rupture is now all healed up, and nothing ever did it but your appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself, I will say a good word for your appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am,

Yours very sincerely,

We had tried several other remedies and got no relief; and I shall certainly recommend it to friends, for we surely owe it to you.

CHILD CURED IN FOUR MONTHS.

21 Jansen Street, Dubuque, Ia. Brooks Rupture Appliance Company.

Gentlemen: The baby's rupture is altogether cured, thanks to your appliance, and we are so thankful to you. If we could only have known of it sooner, our little boy would not have had to suffer nearly as much as he did. He wore your brace a little over four months, and has not worn it now for six weeks.

Yours very truly.

Yours very, truly, ANDREW EGGENBERGER.

Why Ten Reasons

YOU SHOULD SEND FOR BROOKS RUPTURE APPLIANCE.

- 1. It is absolutely the only appliance of the kind on the market today, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.
- 2 The appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of position.
- Being an air cushion of soft rub-ber, it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.
- 4. Unlike the ordinary so-called "pads" used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
- It is small, soft, and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.
- The soft, pliable bands holding the appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.
- 7. There is nothing about it to get foul; and when it becomes solled, it can be washed without injuring it in the least.
- There are no metal springs in the appliance to torture one by cut-ting and bruising the flesh.
- All of the material of which the appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe appliance to wear.
- 10. My reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon to-day.

Remember

I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day.

The Ark of the Covenant.

The ark of the covenant was treasured by the Israelites, not because of its costliness or its artistic beauty, but because to them it became the visible symbol of God's presence. In that respect it stood for Christ, whose other name was Immanuel—"God with us." When Israel was on the march, the ark was carried in the forefront because it was supposed, and rightly so, that the welfare of the nation depended upon their loyalty to that ark with all that it stood for. The Philistines knew of their devotion to that ark; consequently the enemy's attack was usually centered against it. The enemy assumed that if the ark was taken the hope and courage of Israel would depart. And this was the usual result.

When a swift-footed messenger came running to Eli and told him that Israel had fled before the Philistines, that was, indeed, bad tidings; when he told him, furthermore, that his two sons had been killed in battle, that was still more sorrowful tidings; but when the messenger said, finally, "The ark of God is taken," the poor old man's heart was broken, and he toppled over dead. That was the blow that killed father.

For a like reason we find that the main assault which infidels have made against the Christian religion has been directed against the divinity of Christ and the inspiration of the Bible. The temple in Jerusalem was supported by two pillars, called "Jachin" and "Boaz." If they fell, the temple would fall. Just so the two fundamental and vital propositions of our faith are, "Christ is the Son of God," and, "The Bible is inspired." If these two fall, we will have nothing left worth fighting for.

But there is no reason why an intelligent person should cherish any misgivings about the final and complete victory of both. There is scarcely an ancient city of the world but what has not at one time or another been illuminated by bonfires made of Bibles, yet the Book survives "without the fire or smell of fire upon it." Our great libraries are like cemeteries. You may enter and see dead volumes which flourished in their day like Cæsars and Pharaohs, now laid away like mummies. But the Bible, the oldest of them all, is still the best seller in the book markets of the world, and last year its circulation was larger than ever before.

The Bible's Influence.

In view of the past history of the Bible, it is strange indeed that we should hear such remarks as, "The Book has outlived its usefulness;" and, "The learning of the world is against it;" and, "Nobody believes it any more." These slighting remarks remind us of what the little girl in New York City said when the crack Seventh Regiment with its hundreds of uniformed soldiers was passing in parade. Her little pet poodle dog began to bark, and she called excitedly to her mother: "Come, mother, come quick! Gyp is going to bite the army!" There may be a great deal of loud talk and even boasting concerning the alleged decadence of the Bible upon the part of its enemies. but nothing can convince God's faithful children that the victory is going the wrong way. There are a great many organizations and movements looking toward the betterment of the world, and these young men will be importuned to join them, but I may boldly state that none of them can compare with the work and influence of the Bible in shaping the fabric of human character. The Bible has been foremost in maintaining the sanctity of domestic life. It teaches that all our civilization centers in the home and radiates from it. The Bible has led the march in the betterment of social life. It stands for law and order and all the conditions that make a community a desirable place in which to live. The Bible does not build saloons or gambling dens. It builds churches, schools, hospitals, factories, parks, and institutions that make for the uplift of all kinds of men.

At the beginning of the Christian era the toiler who worked with his hands was a slave. He received no remuneration except a few cents a day or his board and keep. Then came Jesus of Nazareth teaching that "the laborer is worthy of his hire;" and ever since the Carpenter has been marching down the centuries with his Golden Rule, urging the square deal, and, as a result, capital and labor have been brought face to face and eye to eye in a way that we little dreamed would ever be realized.

The Greatest Battle.

There are many young men under draft age who are chafing under the restraint. Never fear, young men; you will have a battle to fight, a terrible adversary to overcome. The greatest battle of your life will be the battle against sin that every man must wage. If you fail, your sorrow is not ended; it is just begun. To get ready for this momentous struggle, you need to put on the whole armor of God. We older men hardly realize what a terrible antagonist we have, and we have not been putting up the light we should. We are just like the old colored man who was hoeing his corn. A white man, for a joke, dressed himself in a hideous garb and mask and went out to scare him. "Is yo' de debbil?" the old colored man asked. "Yes, I'm the devil, and I have come after you," said his visitor. The old colored man's knees began to shake, but he was very resourceful. "Mr. Debbil," he said, "you's mistaken in me. I'se talked agin yo' sometimes, I'se sung agin yo', I'se prayed agin yo', I'se preached agin yo'; but fore God, in my sperit I'se always been for yo'." We want our young men to bear a different testimony.

No doubt many of you have been reading with zest and pleasure the letters from our boys "over there." The fact that these letters were not intended for publication, but were written for the eyes of the home folks, makes them all the more interesting. Whatever of wit or wisdom or joy or pathos they may contain we know is genuine. The letter that touched my heart most deeply contained this bit of news; "Mother, I received the Book in the trenches. I sacrificed my last candle. When morning dawned, I was alone with the Bible." It was gratifying to note that he spelled that word "Book" with a capital B. "Boys, it is the wish of your parents, your teachers, and your friends that you should write the Bible in large letters across the pathway of your life, that it may carry you in triumph to heaven—"over the top."

"My son, forget not my law; but let thy heart keep my commandments: for length of days, and years of life, and peace, will they add to thee. Let not kindness and truth forsake thee: bind them about thy neck; write them upon the tablet of thy heart: so shalt thou find favor and good understanding in the sight of God and man. Trust in Jehovah with all thy heart, and lean not upon thine own understanding: in all thy ways acknowledge him, and he will direct thy paths."

Jesus, the Christ.

BY SAMUEL C. BOYCE.

When God in his Infinite wisdom created the world and its inhabitants, as a culminating height to this stupendous work which he had wrought, man was made in his own image and given dominion over all that had been created. Despite the many marks of special favor bestowed upon man, he has been a continuous source of grief to his Creator. trampling underfoot God's love and mercy and transgressing his holy laws. Though man has assiduously persisted in this contemptuous defiance to God; though he has flagrantly displayed all the distinguishing marks of base ingratitude, the God of love incessantly watches over him, "not willing that any should perish" and having "no pleasure in the death of him that dieth." Although Jehovah, because of his divine nature and holy attributes, is "unappeasable to sin, he is appeasable to the sinner." From the very beginning of man's transgressions and prior to his fall, God has sought out and utilized every possible available method to snatch man from that hideous monster, sin, which surreptitiously entwines its serpentlike folds with the very essence of man's being, dragging its victim down into everlasting ruin. Abundant means have been formulated by God for the restoration of man. Under the old covenant certain rules and regulations for the guidance of the people were given, and men from among the people were chosen to teach and execute the laws; but the very men whom God had chosen to instruct the people and to enforce the laws oftentimes committed grievous sins against him. The sins of the unstable rulers and priests, combined with those of a rebellious people, reached such enormous proportions that God declared through Daniel he would set up a kingdom which "shall not be left to other people." As a means to this end, a Messiah was to be sent into the world, who would do the whole will of God. As distinguishing marks of his Messiahship, "he shall not strive, nor cry; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets. . . . And in his name shall the Gentiles trust." All those things which he spoke would come to pass; he would be exalted and abased, rich and peor, mortal and immortal, God and man, and his name should continue forever. This spoken, the prophetic age closed, a period of expectancy began for the Messiah; and "when the fullness of time was come," God sent his only begotten Son into the world that man might live.

Of the early life of our Savior, the sacred writers have seen fit to reveal but little. This omission, however, is not unnatural, since the Gospels were not written to detail a blography, but were written that "ye might believe that Jesns is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye might have life through his name." In the gospel narratives, the manner of life and teachings of Jesus are recorded. The actual words of the Son of God, who "speke as never man spoke," thus perpetuated, should be diligently considered by man, through which he has access to eternal life.

The simple, unfeigned teachings of our Lord, teeming with so many irrefragable truths, have been an eyer-increasing source of happiness and jey to dying men and women. Though uneducated, as man counts education, he was in need of no such instruction. No less Being than God himself was speaking through him. The Savior of mankind was not a formal deliverer of sermons at stated intervals and on particular occasions; but everywhere, at all times and under all conditions, he poured forth from the depth of his heart those words needful to prepare the children of men for life eternal. Possessing, as he did, a clear insight into the profound awfulness of eternity, which can neither be mathematically calculated nor intellectually comprehended by man, the terrible solemnity and seriousness of life, the everlasting ecstatic bliss of the righteous man, of the unending doom of the wicked, it Is no wonder that Jesus sought so earnestly to impress upon man the crying necessity of being prepared to launch out into eternity. Surely, if man, even for a moment, could realize that "it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." he would awake out of his sinful negligence and willful stupidity. The Son of man has "in these last days" spoken things which the prophets of old wished to know and the angels in heaven desired to look into. is an inestimable privilege to be permitted to peruse those sacred pages upon which are recorded the gracious words of the Redeemer of man. No moral philosophy formulated by man is worthy to be compared to the great principles of right taught by our Lord. He has uttered the highest assertions of truth, the sublimest words of love and mercy, and the most profound wisdom in simple words. Though nineteen centuries have passed, though countless millions have lived and died, the words of Jesus, the Christ, still live, which time, the great destroyer, only serves to give a more radiant splendor; and when time shall have been declared no more and eternity is ushered in, the words of our Savior will still have a freshness and attractiveness for dying men and women. In the heavenly Jerusalem, prepared for those who hear and do the words of the great Redeemer, "the old, old story of Jesus and his love" will be their "new, new song" of praise. Not only by his teachings, but also by his concurrent manner of life. Jesus persuaded men to turn from the evil works.

Though he was "in all points tempted like as we are," he lived a life of purity and sinlessness. He had barely begun his public ministry when he was accosted by Satan, who subjected him to three seemingly insurmountable temptations, especially designed and contrived by fiendish heart to thwart our Savior in his glorious mission. All of these Satanic onslaughts were successfully withstood by Jesus, and it was evident that Satan had at last encountered One whom he was unable to conquer. Decisively defeated as he was, Satan did not relax his efforts to hinder Christ in the saving of souls. Through the Pharisees and others the destable efforts of Satan continued.

The Pharisees, who represented the fashionable and popular religion of that day, were mortified at the humility and simplicity of Jesus, "who took upon himself the form of a servant" and made his abode with the poor; and when they further perceived that his teachings and whole manner of life were uprooting their pernicious doctrine, their abhorrence developed into a fanatical hatred. He was despised, hated, and slain by them, because he did not conform to their preconceived ideas and inventions of the expected Messiah. Had Jesus been man and not the Christ, he would have taken advantage of their false conception of the Messiah, receiving all the honor and glory which they were capable of bestowing upon him. The Pharisees, sadducees, and Herodians, formulating arguments of the most subtle nature, sought to entangle him in his talk. In this the calumniators of our Lord miserably failed to accomplish their efforts, and they then attempted to induce him to say something against Cæsar in order that they might find some fault whereby they could bring indictment against him. Under the specious cloak of hypocrisy, they feigned themselves great admirers of him and professed to believe that he was the Son of God. Thinking their vain flattery had served its purpose, they immediately asked him: "Is it lawful for us to give tribute to Cæsar?" In answer to this question, Christ said: "Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's." The Pharisees were not only put to silence, but they actually marveled at his answer. The Sadducees also ignominiously failed to entrap the Savior in his teachings "And after that they durst not ask him any questions at all." Smarting under their defeat, the Jews' hatred became intense, which culminated in the death of the Son of God on the cross.

Of all forms of executions, crucifixion is the most horrible. Writhing in terrible agony, the victim is compelled to hang upon his own wounds for hours. Turning this way and that upon the bruised and bloody wounds, relief is passionately sought even for a moment. Instead of ease, the aching pains become more and more intense. Nerves break and bloody sweat distills from the body. This terrible ordeal is endured until death relieves the victim from the lingering tortures. Such was the death of the blessed Redeemer in Gethsemane. A spectacle before heaven and earth, the lifeblood of our Savior slowly ebbed away. The luminant sun, the source of all light, hid its face from the heinous crime of mortals and for hours refused to give forth its light, leaving the world in chaotic darkness. The earth was shaken with great quakes; the veil in the temple at Jerusalem was rent in twain; sepulchers were opened, and many who slept awoke unto the resurrection of life. Following close on his death, a grand and glorious event was about to transpire. On the third day after his death the Redeemer of mankind burst the chain of death and rose from the tomb, a conqueror of death, hell, and the grave. As the shedding of his blood paved the way for the remission of sins, the resurrection from the grave opened up the way to eternal life. Though the malefactors and murderers of our Lord had glutted their thirst for his blood, he accomplished that glorious mission of establishing a kingdom, through which men have access to eternal

Under the new covenant, "established upon better promises," Jesus "hath broken down the middle wall of partition" and hath become our High Priest, through whom we may "come boldly unto the throne of grace." Having been "delivered from the power of darkness" and translated "into the kingdom of God's dear Son," let our manner of life and conversation be "an odor of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well pleasing unto God." And when we have ended our earthly pilgrimage, have received the great and final summons, we may "with joy unspeakable" launch out into eternity, fully persuaded we shall forever reign with God, the Creator of us all, with holy angels, and with Him who purchased our redemption.

Correction of T. B. Larimore.

BY H. L. WALLING.

In the Gospel Advocate of April 25, he seems to make no difference between the bread used to feed the multitude and the bread used in the passover supper. In feeding the five thousand it is "loaf"—five loaves. Not so in the passover supper.

In the passover supper it was "unleavened bread." Nothing leavened could be found in their houses for seven days. A loaf of bread is leavened, massive. So Jesus used unleavened bread, and he and all inspired men called it "bread." I am greatly surprised that Brother Larimore has never seen the difference. Matthew called it "bread," Mark called it "bread," the American Revised Version calls it "bread," Robert Young calls it "bread," Campbell said something that set you against my position. You must be a "Campbellite," to induce you to leave off following the Bible. I am going by the Bible, and it says "bread" all the time when speaking of the cake in the Lord's Supper. Paul speaks of the "bread," See I Cor. 10: 17: "For we being many are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of that one bread."

You complain at my wanting God's order given at Jerusalem. God was always a God of order. See 1 Cor. 11: 34: "I will set in order when 1 come:" Also see Tit. 1: 5: "Set in order things," etc. In 2 Tim. 1: 13, Timothy is commanded to "hold fast the form of sound words." Not "loaf" where it is "bread." And no loaf allowed in the house for seven days.

I hardly expect you to acknowledge your error. Preachers and writers never like to acknowledge themselves in error.

[The preceding criticism was courteously sent to me from the Gospel Advocate office, that I might say whatsoever I might wish to say by way of comment on it. I appreciate the courtesy; but I have nothing to say. If the author of the criticism is satisfied with it, I certainly should be. So, so far as I am concerned, this is the end of it.—T. B. Larimore.]

The Man Who Repents.

BY PRICE BILLINGSLEY.

The man who repents turns wholly from his sins and willingly faces all the consequences which a full settlement for them involves. Repentance is not a mere feeling sorry for sin or experiencing shame on account of the sin being found out. It is a turning from sin without reserve or condition, without counting the cost and without spite toward any one, and the making of full restitution. The man who repents, instead of fear or shame that the public should know, wants men to see that he has cast out and turned from his sins. He seeks neither to excuse himself nor to keep his sins from being fully known. He does not from fear and shame evade and seek to cover his sins. Instead, he courts investigation, wants the light turned on, and shrinks not from giving the full fruits of repentance. From a compelling sense of duty he takes the direct course, humbly and fully confesses his sins and shows his deeds, and rests not till he has done his utmost at honest and honorable restitution. He does not hedge or excuse or hide. He manfully names his own sins, renounces them, and makes everybody know he has turned from them. He does not say, "If I have done wrong." A man cannot repent with an "if," and this same crooked word will hold him outside the pearly gates.

Sins must be confessed. (1 John 1: 9; James 5: 16.) This is the way they are turned from and adjusted. Their adjustment must be acceptable to God; and this means, if the sins are known to the public, they must be publicly righted. By no sort of private arrangement can they be canceled. The only way out is an honest and plain telling of the whole truth. Nothing short of a specific naming and renouncing of them will suffice; and this strengthens one against falling again. We can be sure God has forgiven our sins only when we thus turn from them. A sin never goes out of date. God must cancel it, or it goes on eating out the heart, costing the more the longer it stands. And without or before genuine repentance, which includes confession, God will not cancel it. However, when we turn to him, confess to and renounce our sins, he forgives and restores us. And while we may be terrified at men thus learning of our sins, yet, if we feel right about it, we shudder far more at the thought that God knows of them, or that we should be without his pardoning grace,

Do you lack the courage thus to face and set right your wrongs? Then be sure you are denied God's grace. Are you afraid to have your sins come to light? Then you have never truly repented of them and you are unforgiven, and nothing could be worse for you and everybody concerned than that you should be whitewashed, excused, and allowed to forget them. No greater misfortune can happen to the moral sense of mankind than that sins which have not been repented of and righted should be condoned and forgotten. We are commanded to "abhor that which is evil," "hate the garments spotted by the flesh," "hate every false way." "The fear of the Lord is to hate evil," and God commands: "Love no false thing; for all these things do I hate." True, I am to love you, to be kind and gentle toward you always, and to do all in my power to restore you and heal your sin. But so long as you are impenitent and refuse to turn from and set right your wrongs, I myself should be utterly in the wrong if I acted toward you as though you had done right. I dare not excuse and help you to hide the rottenness within. No; we can excuse sin in no one, least of all in ourselves, and at no matter what cost we must hold on to high standards of right, honor, and purity, and set our faces like flint against wrongdoing.

It is not terrible to die. It is only terrible to live with something dead inside. Sins we fear to confess to and make lawful settlement for, forever shame and throttle us. Some otherwise good men there are who have been thus choked down and destroyed. Their sins held them in shadows and slavery. Whereas, had these same men risen up and confessed to and renounced their evil deeds, the sins no longer could have dogged and harmed them, and they could once more have been noble men and liberated for God's service. If God is for a man, he will be lifted up; but if God is not for a man, then no amount of human machinery can raise him. And we know that God will not save the impenitent. Therefore he who conceals and would forget his sins is lost. (Prov. 28: 13.) Would I know my sins and, in order to their correction, have them known? My whole future is involved in the answer. There are many things worse than death, and one of these things is the covering up of sins and refusing to make an honest and honorable reparation for them. But the soul that loves life and hates evil, though broken and beaten into the mire, will gladly pay the price for the joy of going again on the high road of honor and purity.

India's Prayer in Song.

BY W. HUME M'HENRY AND S. O. MARTIN.

The Lord of glory cometh, With all his angels bright; Then be ye ready for him Before the coming night.

The light of day is dawning
For those who love his name.
Then why neglect the fallen?
To save them Jesus came.

Three hundred thirty million Dumb idols are all vain; They ne'er can save a sinner From all his guilty stain.

Why stand ye idly waiting?
His coming draweth nigh.
Then help the dying nations
To meet their Lord on high.

From Ganges' rolling waters
Comes India's call to-day;
"Come over now and save us—
O come, O come, we pray!

"O foreign brother, sister, Will you now heed our call, That daily goeth upward Unto the God of all?"

CHORUS.

"From unreal to the real, From darkness to the light, From death to life immertal," Lead us to mansions bright.

Written in Bendala, India, on December 27, 1917, while on an evangelistic tour among the native brethren. Made to be sung to the tune of "Stand Up for Jesus." Please sing this in your congregation.

Greater Things for God.

BY RUBY BROYLES GERTH.

(A prize-winning essay.)

The subject under consideration should stir us to active thoughts, words, and deeds. Talk about the problems of the time-there is but one, and that is, how to get the truths of God's word into the hearts and lives of all the people. Therefore, let us "study to show thyself [ourselves] approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." (2 Tim. 2 15.) So let us study to learn more, to work better, to earn more, to help others, and so to be well equipped to be a blessing in leading others to Christ, and to broaden the missionary view which was in our Savior's last command. "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations." (Matt. 28: 19; Mark 16: 15, 16; Luke 24: 46, 47.) "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge." (Prov. 1: 7.) Therefore "get wisdom, get understanding." "For the Lord giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding." (Prov. 2: 6.) "Wisdom is the principal thing: therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding." (Prov. 4: 7.) "For wisdom is better than rubies; and all the things that may be desired are not to be compared to it." (Prov. 8: 11.)

This is not our home. It is only our abiding place for a few brief years, given us by the Lord in which to prepare to live with him in the mansions he has prepared for us, and during this short pilgrimage of ours we must work for "greater things for God," never failing to kneel reverently and continually (oftentimes every day) to Jehovah in prayer; for "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." (James 5: 16.) There is a great responsibility resting upon us to first be faithful and diligent ourselves and to then earnestly ask Jehovah for guidance-"ask in faith, nothing doubting "-that we may be a blessing to the present generation. Let us not fall short of our Savior's command, but proclaim his gospel here, there, and everywhere. The man who wins is the man who works; so let us pull the reins strongly from sin to the right road of Christianity (for the fate of humanity is in the hands of the present—the youth of to-day will rule the world of tomorrow). Christianity and love should be the ruling passion of the civilized world. We cannot all be preachers, but we can all help with our prayers, our means (money), and our time, visiting and writing to our friends, thus sowing the right kind of seed in the hearts of men and women; for the heart is like a garden, capable of producing (under good culture) everything beautiful and good in humanity. Let us then be up and doing to shape the destiny of man. Without our aid and influence (as individuals), in prayer, daily life, means, kind words, exhorting, visiting, etc., some of our loved ones may reach the river's brink of death and the judgment of God unprepared; for "what shall be the end of them that obey not the gospel of God?" (1 Pet. 4: 17.) Let us emphasize the fact and importance of the family altar, which is the root of the good to be accomplished in the children and the future generation, even the nations yet unborn. Reading and praying are of vast importance in the home and will help greatly in gratifying our Savior's command and widening the missionary view in foreign fields as well as in the home land. O, for more homes where God's holy Book (the Book of all books) is read daily, sweet season of worship; all made happier, stronger, and better by this continued practice! Let us strive to be like Paul in Acts 20: 26, 27: "I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." "Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgression." (Isa. 58: 1.) Let us present our "bodies a living sacrifice." (Rom. 12: 1.) "Therefore be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." (1 Cor. 15: 58.) Our work is inestimable. May we do all the good we can, to all men, in all places, at all times, seeking "first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness."

In conclusion let us ask ourselves the following questions:

- 1. Does my life please God? (2 Cor. 5: 9.)
- 2. Am I studying my Bible daily? (Acts 17: 11.)
- 3. How much time do I spend in prayer? (Luke 6: 12:22; 41, 42.)
- 4. Am I trying to turn my friends to Jesus? (John 1: 41, 42.)
 - 5. Have I ever had an answer to prayer? (Acts 10: 4-6.)
- 6. How does my life look to those not Christians? (Matt. 5: 16.)
- 7. Am I making the world better or worse? (Acts 11:
- 8. Am I for Christ or against him? (Matt. 12: 20.)

May each one of us be a missionary to all people, even to the uttermost parts of the earth, teaching all things whatsoever Jesus has commanded us. Jehovah grant his face to shine on all those who chance to read this article and bless them in doing "greater things for God."

THE BIBLE.

Come, let us read our Bibles through—God's witnesses, both old and new; Brothers and sisters, all unite To make this practice our delight. Twill fill our hearts with joy and song And make us happy all day long, So what we've read and pondered well We may in love to others tell.

The World Against the Church. No. 7.

BY E. A. E.

THE CHURCH IS A DIVINE STRUCTURE.

In addition to what was said last week, let us study the following scriptures:

For we are God's fellow workers: ye are God's husbandry ["tilled land"—margin], God's building. (1 Cor. 3: 9.1

Know ye not that ye are a temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man destroyeth the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, and such are ye. (1 Cor. 3: 16, 17.)

Or know ye not that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit which is in you, which ye have from God? and ye are not your own; for ye were bought with a price: glorify God therefore in your body. (1 Cor. 6: 19, 20.)

So then ye are no more strangers and sojourners, but ye are fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God, being built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Christ Jesus himself being the chief corner stone; in whom each several building, fitly framed together, groweth into a holy temple in the Lord; in whom ye also are builded together for a habitation of God in the Spirit. (Eph. 2: 19-22.)

These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly; but if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how men ought to behave themselves in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth. (1 Tim. 3: 14, 15.)

And Moses indeed was faithful in all his [God's] house as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were afterwards to be spoken; but Christ as a son, over his [God's] house; whose house are we, if we hold fast our boldness and the glorying of our hope firm unto the end. (Heb. 3: 5, 6,)

Ye also, as living stones, are built up a spiritual house, to be a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God through Jesus Christ. (1 Pet. 2: 5.)

These scriptures with others that might be quoted show that Christians-disciples of Christ-the children of Godthe church—are the house of God, the building of God, the temple of God.

These scriptures teach that God dwells in his church, his house, his building, or his temple; that his church, his house, building, temple, is his babitation in the Spirit; and that it is not some house of wood or brick or stone which God fills with his Spirit and in which he dwells. "If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." (Rom. 8: 9_)

The tabernacle which Moses built was a type of the church or building of God, "the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, not man." (Heb. 8: 2.) The temple which Solomon built was a type of the temple of God to-day, "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets. Christ Jesus himself being the chief corner stone " 2; 20; see, also, 1 Pet. 2; 4, 5.)

God was the architect and Moses was the builder of the tabernacie in the wilderness. God gave to Moses the pattern—the plan and specifications—of the tabernacle, giving the dimensions of the building and of every piece of furniture to go in it, stating the place each piece was to occupy, naming the materials to be used and the size of each piece, even to the smallest clasp, and the number to be used. Moses built the tabernacle according to God's pattern. When this had all been done, "as Jehovah commanded Moses," God covered the tabernacle with the cloud and filled it with his glory. In it was the presence and glory of God. It was "the tent of meeting" and God's dwelling place among the people. (See Ex. 25: 8; 29: 45; chapters 39, 40.)

David gave to Solomon the plan and specifications-"the pattern"-of the temple in the minutest detail, not only of the building itself, including all the inner chambers, but also the furniture and vessels and all implements, specifying the kinds of wood, and the weight of gold and silver to go into each. David had all this by the Spirit and was "made to understand in writing from the hand of Jehovah, even all the works of this pattern." (See 1 Chron. 28: 11-19.) When Sciomon had built the temple according to God's direction and had dedicated it to God, "fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices: and the glory of Jehovah filled the house." (2 Chron. 6 and 7: 1-3.)

Jesus built the church, the "spiritual house," or temple of God, according to the plan and specifications of God. When Jesus had completed this work, God filled this house or temple with his Spirit and glory. (See Acts 2.) Since then it has been "a habitation of God in the Spirit," Let us note the following facts:

1. There was one tabernacle, there was one temple, and there is one church of God, or house of God, now.

2. The church of God has a divine architect-God himself; a divine builder-Christ; a divine foundation-the one specified by Jehovah (Isa. 28: 16; Matt. 16: 18; 1 Cor. 3; 11; Eph. 2; 20); a divine construction or organization -one God has set in order; a divine Spirit-the Holy Spirit; a divine or spiritual body—the body of Christ; a divine head-Christ is "head over all things to the church" (Eph. 1: 22); divine laws—Christ, the head, is its lawgiver and ruler, "and his commandments are not grievous" (1 John 5: 3); a divine government—the teaching of Christ—"the whole counsel of God;" a divine mission—it is "the pillar and ground of the truth" and "a spiritual house" in which all Christians as "a holy priest-hood" are to "offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ;" divine conditions of entrance; and a divine or holy life.

3. God did not build his church on a human foundation and in human wisdom; did not put over it a human head and does not govern it by human laws; he did not give to it human conditions of entrance and a human mission.

4. Every other institution in the world, except the church, has a human foundation, a human organization, a human head, a human lawgiver, a human government, a human spirit, human conditions of entrance, and a human mission.

5. One is a Christian because one is in the church of God; but one is not a Christian because one belongs to or is in any other institution in the world. Some institutions may require one to be a Christian before they will accept one as a member, but one is not a Christian simply by virtue of being a member of them.

 God has never filled any other institution on earth, except the church, with his Spirit and glory, and no other institution is his "habitation in the Spirit."

7. All other institutions, except the church, manifest the wisdom and glory of men; but the church manifests the wisdom and glory of God. (Eph. 3: 10, 11, 20, 21.) All must decide by whose wisdom they will be governed and whose glory they will seek.

8. It is sin to turn away from the church, the divine or God-ordained institution, complete and fully adequate in all parts to accomplish its mission, to some Institution or institutions to do the work God has committed to the church, because to do so is to turn away from the wisdom of God to human wisdom; to turn away from Christ, its foundation and head, to a human foundation and head; to turn away from the Holy Spirit to a human spirit, the spirit of the world; to turn away from the blood of Christ, because he purchased the church with his blood.

9. The church is the body of Christ, and that body is one (1 Cor. 12: 12, 13; 27; Eph. 1: 22, 23; 4: 4, 5.) Since the church of God embraces all Christians, all God's children, all saints, all citizens of the kingdom of heaven, there can be but one church of God in the world.

10. As stated above, God alone can give the conditions of entrance into his church, or kingdom, or household, and he does this through Christ. These conditions are clearly set forth in Matt. 28: 18-20; Mark 16: 15, 16; Luke 24: 45-47; Acts 2: 36-38: They are to believe with the whole heart in Jesus of Nazareth as the Christ, the Son of the living God-to trust in him as the crucified and risen Savior, and King of kings and Lord of lords; to repent of all sin-to turn away in godly sorrow from all sin as such-secret sins and public sins, sins of thoughts and of words and of deeds; and to be baptized from the heart "into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." Then God pardons and saves from "old sins," and at the same time and in the say way adds all such persons to the church, or to the saved; and thus people enter God's church. And as the church they live and work in obedience to God until he adds them "to the general assembly" above.

"Around the Lord's Table" was published in response to numerous requests from all parts of the country. Brother A. B. Lipscomb converted the recent special Lord's Supper number of the Gospel Advocate into a handsome pamphlet suitable for preservation and ready reference. This publication presents every phase of this important subject. Price, 25 cents.

Total Abstinence.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Some professed Christians act as though it is unscriptural to teach that no Christian should make, sell, or drink wine or strong drink. They hold that the doctrine is extreme and strive to prove that it is no sin to drink strong drink from the fact that the Savior converted water into wine at Cana of Galilee. This is no proof that it is right to drink strong drink now. Neither was converting the water into wine at Cana of Galilee any more miraculous than the conversion of water into wine with which we are familiar. All pure wine is made of water. We are so familiar with the way that God ordinarily makes water into wine that we see it done every year and think little or nothing of it. The rain falls upon the ground and is filtered through the soil, up through the roots of the vines. and on up through the vines themselves, and is bottled up and hung out in clusters of bottles on the branches of the vines. We break the bottles, squeeze out the wine, and drink it, and it does not make us drunk. Because Jesus made wine, it does not follow that we should get drunk on whisky. God makes strychnine, but it is not right for a man to commit suicide by taking it.

Every one familiar with the Scriptures knows that God never made positive requirements of a people until they were prepared to obey them from the heart. On this principle Christ delayed his coming into the world until the people could receive him. On this ground God frequently tolerates a practice for a time, but sets in motion principles that will work the destruction of the practice through the renovation of the heart. God does not exact any service that is not from the heart. Until the heart is prepared to obey the law, God does not give the law. Divorce and polygamy were not forbidden until the heart was educated to the idea of retaining one wife through life. Slavery has never been approved by Jehovah; but God nowhere forbids slavery, even regulates it; yet the great principles of brotherly love, equality, and justice inculcated by Jehoval must eventually root up and destroy slavery. For instance, polygamy is nowhere directly forbidden. It was tolerated through the patriarchal and Jewish ages. Christ teaches that this was done on account of the hardness of their hearts. That is, their hearts were unable to appreciate the principle of monogamy; so God did not make the demand. In the beginning God created one woman for one man, and said: "Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one fiesh." (Gen. 2: 24.) Every principle and precept of God must all eventually lead to this primitive ideal marriage relation. It cannot be otherwise and God be true. As man develops and grows in the principles of the Christian religion, he will conform more and more to the ideal marriage relation, and will also demand the same conformity in others. Under the workings of the Christian religion great progress has been made in uplifting and purifying the marriage relation and also in abolishing slavery. The grosser forms of slavery have already been abolished. But the will of God will not be done on earth as it is in heaven until all unfair and unjust dealings between men are abolished.

On the same principle, the Bible nowhere says to a Christian: "You shall not dance; you shall not gamble or play cards." But it most clearly inculcates principles that will forever destroy such practices.

In harmony with this principle of operation, while the Bible has nowhere directly forbidden the use of wine or strong drink, it has at all times given approval to habits of total abstinence and inculcated principles that will in practice lead all Christians to practice total abstinence. No Christian is consistent who does not "shun the very appearance of evil." There is not one redeeming feature connected with the use of intoxicants. In all ages of the world wine has been recognized by God as exciting and accompanying the vilest crimes. Noah's drunkenness is the first on record. Be it said to his credit that he is not charged with getting drunk the second time. While drunk, Lot committed incest.

While wine was used in the early ages, its use was most severely condemned. Its use was recognized as exciting the baser passions and as leading into sin. "Wine is a mocker, strong drink a brawler; and whosoever erreth thereby is not wise." (Prov. 20: 1.) "Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath complaining? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek out mixed wine. Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it sparkleth in the cup, when it goeth down smoothly: at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder. Thine eyes shall behold strange things, and thy heart shall utter perverse things." 23: 29-33.) It would be hard to conceive of a sin to which the use of intoxicants does not lead. It made the nations mad. "The nations have drunk of her wine; therefore the nations are mad." (Jer. 51: 7.) "For thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel, unto me: Take this cup of the wine of wrath at my hand, and cause all the nations, to whom I send thee, to drink it. And they shall drink, and reel to and fro, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them." (Jer. 25: 15, 16.)

At all times the highest orders of God's servants abstained from wine, and those who attended the most sacred service in the tabernacle were required to refrain from the use of wine. "And Jehovah spake unto Aaron, saying, Drink no wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tent of meeting, that ye die not: it shall be a statute forever throughout your generations." (Lev. 10: 8, 9.) The Nazarite was to give himself wholly unto the service of the Lord. "And Jehovah spake unto Moses saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When either man or woman shall make a special vow of a Nazarite to separate himself unto Jehovah. he shall separate himself from wine and strong drink." (Num. 6: 1-3.) The Rechabites, a family of Nazarites, were noted for their total abstinence, who so attained to the priestly office. Daniel and his companions refused to defile themselves by the use of the king's wine. This shows that the use of wine disqualifies for the most sacred service. Solomon declares: "It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes to say, Where is strong drink? lest they drink, and forget the law, and pervert the justice due to any that is afflicted." 31: 4, 5.) Here it is clearly taught that wine perverted the judgment, made them forgetful of the law, and disqualified them for a fair and just administration. This fact of itself justifies us in the conclusion that as we draw near to God we will the more and more discontinue the use of all wine and strong drink. John the Baptist drank no wine. Christ teaches that as his disciples grow strong spiritually they will discontinue the use of wine. Timothy, trained by Paul most carefully in the Christian dispensation, would take no wine even in sickness. Paul remonstrated with him: "Use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and thine often infirmities." This permits its use only in sickness. Those engaged in the chief work of the church, and who were to be examples to others, must not "be given to wine." These scriptures all abundantly show that the true servant of God must refrain from all use of intoxicants, as the use of wine has been considered defiling to the service of God in all ages.

But there are other scriptures which show how most conclusively that the Christian sins every time he countenances or in any way encourages strong drink. The Savior says: "Woe unto the world because of occasions of stumbling! for it must needs be that the occasions come; but woe to that man through whom the occasion cometh!" Men cannot be hothouse plants, and occasions to fall will come without Christians leading their weak brethren into temptation. In harmony with this the prophet declares: Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, to thee that addest thy venom, and makest him drunken also, that thou mayest look on their nakedness!" (Hab. 2: 15.) Again, the Holy Spirit teaches: "It is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth." (Rom. 14: 21.) "For through thy knowledge he that is weak perisheth, the brother for whose sake Christ died. And thus, sinning against the brethren, and wounding their conscience when it is weak, ye sin against Christ. Wherefore, if meat causeth my brother to stumble, I will eat no flesh for evermore, that I cause not my brother to stumble." (1 Cor. 8: 11-13.) If as a Christian man I give my vote or influence to keep wide-open saloons, and a weak brother is overtaken in drunkenness, I am not guiltless of the blood of all men. I have sinned against my weak brother, against Christ, and imperiled my own soul. It is vain to plead that the brother should be strong enough to stand. Where can we find a man that has not some weakness? "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her." (John 8: 7.)

Occasions of stumbling must come, but woe to him by whom they come? While we are damning the weak brother to hell, what about the professed Christian who rents his house to the saloonist? What about the Christian (?) who gives his vote to keep him in business? Will God damn the weak brother and justify the others who give their influence in kicking the poor fellow down to hell? Nay, verily. If any man gets a lower place in hell than all others, it will be the man who had no appetite for strong drink, who never knew what it was to be tempted by whisky, yet who for the sake of gain encouraged and countenanced the sale of intoxicating liquors. The weak brother whom he snared to ruin may rise up in the judgment to torment him.

It is an everlasting shame that even professed Christians will allow the revenue received from the hellish business to outweigh the value of souls. How revolting and degrading the thought! The whisky business pulls down a thousand times more than it builds up. The drinker gets nothing for his money but a drunk, a felon's cell, or a noose around the neck. But if it made the drinker rich, and all who handle in any way the defiling liquid, and sent them to hell at last, as it does, I would pray to be delivered from its defilement, that I might go to heaven when I die. Better be pure and as poor as Lazarus than rich as Crosus and go to hell at last.

But by this time some one is ready to shout, "Politics!" In the name of reason, cannot a man preach temperance as taught in the Bible without entering politics? This is not a political question, but a moral one. It is the devil erying to you, "Politics!" I care nothing for politics. I am sorry that so many Christians who vote do not vote any better than the vilest sinner. If politics are so corrupt that preachers should have nothing to do with them, then all Christians should let them alone. This article is a straightforward plea for temperance, for home, and for the manhood and womanhood of our land. I want to see strong drink driven out of the church and out of the land. It has already ruined too many homes and blighted too many lives. It has brought disgrace to every community, shame to every user, and it has brought thousands of our sons to a drunkard's hell. It has made weeping mothers, broken-hearted wives, paupers, criminals, and murderers. It robs heaven and peoples hell. What think you of the consistency of the Christian who gives his influence to this heaven-defying and soul-destroying business?

I received a copy of your Teachers' New Testament, and am highly pleased with it. I will recommend it to any one that will work for the Gospel Advocate. I find it a great help in studying the Bible. I think the Gospel Advocate one of our best papers.—J. McInteer, Franklin, Ky.

I have received your premium Testament. At first I was not very favorably impressed with it; but the more I examine it, the better I like it, and think now it is the best thing of the kind I have found for the money .- W. W. Young, Sparta, Tenn.

I am a reader of the Gospel Advocate, and think it one of the grandest papers I ever read. I have also got possession of one of your Teachers' Bibles, and think it a great All of us need one. I hope that I can help spread the Advocate. Every Christian ought to take it. to thank you very much for my Bible. I will try not to let it lay up and get dusty.-J. W. Britt, Chickalah, Ark.

I am interested in the Gospel Advocate, for it has been of great benefit to me in the study of the Scriptures; and the Testament is just the very book for any one whose education is limited like mine. We have a Sunday school organized here, composed of Methodists, Baptists, and Christians, and I was appointed as teacher of the Bible class. Hence I needed some explanations on the Scriptures, and the Testament you sent me just fills the bill.-J. T. Skidmore, Grapeland, Texas.

I gladly state my indorsement and approval of the Teachers' New Testament. Its size and neat arrangement with clear type is highly desirable; and best of all is the introduction to each book and the scholarly notes prepared on almost every verse. The Introduction gives a comprehensive view of the book and its purposes, which drives away that mystical view usually taken of divine writings and makes it have a personal significance. The American Revised Version, used in the text, is another advantage offered by the book. It divides the chapters into paragraphs, thus rendering it more easily understood.-L. N. Gray, Mayfield, Ky.

I received the New Testament in due time, and think it a most excellent present. It is one of the best presents that could be given to any one. I thank you all many times. I will do all I can to increase the circuation of the Gospel Advocate, for I think it is the best paper that was ever published. I would not do without it for many times its cost. Also, I visited Sister Eva Savage this morning, and she told me about her new Book, and she says she is most heartily pleased with it; and she asked me to send her thanks and appreciation of the same. Also, she says she likes the Gospel Advocate very much, for it is so good to read and help to understand the word of God.-W. J. White, Lakewood, Fla.

Brother McQuiddy: Please explain the following scriptures: (1) Luke 9: 59, 60: "And he said unto another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father. But he said unto him, Leave the dead to bury their own dead; but go thou and publish abroad the kingdom of God." What does "let the dead bury their dead" mean? (2) Matt. 26: 27: "And he took a cup, and gave thanks, and gave to them, saying, Drink ye all of it." What does "drink ye all of it" mean?

J. E. Sanders.

(1) There are two views of this passage. One is that the father was already dead and that the son only wanted to attend the funeral and properly observe the last sad rites. Another view is that the disciple asked that he might be permitted to remain at home until his father's death and burial, then follow Christ. This is the more probable view. Christ meant to teach that Christians owe their whole duty to the Lord and not to the world, and that in order for any one to be his disciple he must love Christ more than father or mother or brother or sister. Christ must be first with his disciples. Christ said to this one that those who are of the world, and are, therefore, dead in trespasses and in sins, should bury their dead, while his disciples should devote their time to advancing the kingdom of Christ. (2) This evidently means that each and every disciple should drink of the fruit of the vine. It should be observed that he did not tell them all to eat of the bread, while he commanded all to drink of the wine, as if intended to uproot the Roman Catholic innovation of denying the laity the cup.

Brother McQuiddy: Please advise me whether it is right to have an organ or plano in the church. Was there music or instruments in the temple where the apostles worshiped? Does Eph. 5: 19—"Speaking one to another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord"—mean to sing and play the instrument at the same time?

FINIS ZOLLAR.

We do not find the organ or plano in the New Testament churches. Those who walk by faith in the worship will not bring organs and pianos into the worship of the church. If any apostle ever worshiped with an instrument of music in the temple, the New Testament is silent on the subject. Peter and John did go into the temple at the hour of prayer, and worked many signs and wonders, in consequence of which they were brought into the public ward. The Holy Spirit gave the reason for their going into the temple in the following words: "But an angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors, and brought them out, and said, Go ye, and stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this Life. And when they heard this, they entered into the temple about daybreak, and taught." (Acts 5: 19-21.) That the apostles worshiped with instruments in the temple is an assumption pure and simple. Singing and playing are two different things. We do read of singing in the church, but we do not read of playing in the church. If "singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord" means to play with an instrument, it is certain that the apostles never found it out. Inspired men certainly knew the meaning of "sing." We can play without singing, and we can sing without playing. James 5: 13 reads: "Is any among you suffering? let him pray. Is any cheerful? let him sing praise." Swearing is considered in verse 12. Christians are commanded: "Swear not." Hence the apostle says, in the next verse, if any is afflicted, let him not swear or use improper language, but let him pray. God is his helper and support in the hour of afflic-If a man is cheerful, let him not show his cheerfulness in wanton speeches, but let him sing praise unto Jehovah.

Brother McQuiddy: (1) Is there any scripture in the New Testament to justify us in the arranging into classes an audience on Lord's day to teach them lessons from the Bible? (2) As the word "religion" is found only in the New Testament, from what language and from what word in that language do we get the word "religion" in English?

J. M. DENNIS.

(1) From a careful investigation of the word of God we learn that from the days of Abraham systematic instruction had its place in the plans of the chosen people of God. From the days of Moses the Jewish church gave the young religious training by means of questions and answers. From the days of Ezra the Bible school was a recognized agency for the study and teaching of God's word. In the days of Jesus of Nazareth there was a system of Bible schools corresponding very closely to the Bible schools of to-day. Luke 2: 47 declares: "And all that heard him were amazed at his understanding and his answers." The Holy Spirit shows a marked distinction between the preaching and teaching of our Lord. I might quote many passages, but for lack of space I will give only Matt. 9: 35: "And Jesus went about all the cities and the villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." The teaching in the synagogue was done by means of questions and answers. Preaching is a public proclamation of the truth. Babies must be fed on milk, and not on solid food. Hence the necessity of teaching children in a class to themselves, and not in a class with full-grown men and women. The Holy Spirit says: "For every one that partaketh of milk is without experience of the word of righteousness; for he is a babe. But solid food is for full-grown men, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern good and evil." (Heb. 5: 13, 14.) (2) Religion is derived from the Latin "religio." Etymologically, it means to bind again. By disobedience man separates himself from God. By obedience he is religioned, or rebound, to God.

Brother McQuiddy: Please answer the following questions: (1) What do the Scriptures teach about a sinner's prayers? (2) In what way does one come in contact with the Holy Spirit?

K. H. PURDUE.

(1) All men are sinners. The querist evidently means alien sinners, those who turn away their ears from hearing the Lord. The prayers of such sinners are not heard. This is evident from John 9: 31, which reads: "We know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshiper of God, and do his will, him he heareth." Prov. 28: 9 clearly states: "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer is an abomination." God does not hear those who are willfully disobedient, but is long-suffering to the obedient, who, when they do commit sins, confess them and turn away from them. All such may come holdly unto the throne of mercy, realizing that they have not a high priest who cannot be touched with a feeling of their infirmities, but who has been tempted as they are, yet without sin. To all who are doing the will of God, yet sometimes stumble, comes this comforting assurance: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." (2) Men receive the Holy Spirit in obedience to the truth. Acts 5: 32 declares: "And we are witnesses of these things; and so is the Holy Spirit, whom God hath given to them that obey him." Read, also, Gal. 4: 6, which says: "And because ye are sons, God sent forth the Spirit of his Son into our hearts, crying, Abba, Father." The Holy Spirit does not dwell in the willfully wicked, but in those who are obedient.

Disappointments.

Every effort within our power should be made to guard against disappointments. In the first place, appointments should not be made unless they are necessary; in the second place, when they are made, we should remember we are getting dangerously close to becoming covenant breakers when we fail to fill them, a thing the Bible condemns in the strongest way. (See Rom. 1: 31; 2 Tim. 3: 3.) We are getting into very bad company when we have no regard for our promises, our engagements, and covenants into which we enter with others.

Just now I have before me two blue, blue letters which came as a result of engagements not being fulfilled. I give them to our readers that they may see the sting of disappointment and the sore need of more workers—and workers, too, that will fill every engagement, if possible. Here they are:

Brother Hall: I will write you a few lines about my disappointment. I met the train yesterday in the rain, and the preacher did not come. I thought he would be sure to come to-day; so I went back and stayed nearly all day, but he did not come. When I got back home, I received a card in to-day's mail from him, which I want you to see; I know one thing: he cares but little so I am inclosing it. about this place, else his memory is very poor. Brother Hall, you do not know how much disappointment this is. We had everything ready and a large crowd that was more than anxious to hear him; some from a distance. Such as this certainly hurts the cause here so very much. Now I want to hear from you soon. I do not intend to answer the card at all. You may if you think best.

Now here is another letter from a different place about the same preacher's failure to fill his engagements:

Dear Brother: You wrote me to be sure and meet Brother—. I sure did meet both morning trains, and he sure did not come. I was busy with my work and did not have the time to lose and be disappointed. It looks like our people do not care for disappointing a little, dependent congregation. We number only eleven here, and these disappointments weaken us.

I am giving the above letters, leaving names and places out, simply to show that disappointments hurt. Sometimes brethren allow themselves to become impatient and blame preachers for not filling their engagements, when something over which they had no control prevented their doing so. This may have been true in the above cases. It does good for the preacher to get there and let the people see him, even if he is hoarse and cannot preach. Such goes a long way in offsetting the weakening effects of small places working up a crowd and then have to announce that the preacher did not come. Brother Traylor, of the Nashville . (Tennessee) Bible School, is at one of the above places this week, doing what he can to encourage the faithful. If it is the Lord's will, the writer will make a dash of about one hundred miles in his auto Saturday afternoon to be with the faithful at the latter place on the night of June 1. I am doing the work of three or four men-have not one idle moment-but greater sacrifices we must make for the struggling congregations in this State. I know well the two men who wrote the above letters; and while it is apparent that they have become a little impatient. I cannot scold them; for they are true and faithful men, who love the cause, and their great interest in it causes them to write such letters. May God bless them.

"If."

Paul, in his letter to the Colossian brethren (chapter 1: 22, 23), teaches that Christ had reconciled them to God and would present them to God at his coming, "holy and without blemish and unreprovable," if so be that ye continue in the faith, grounded and steadfast, and not moved away from the hope of the gospel." "If" is one of those big little words; it looks small, and, indeed, is small, so far as size is concerned, but is immense in thought. It is like standing on a very narrow place with two vast eternities on either side. On one side is a never-ending existence with the devil and his angels, and into which place you are certainly to fall if you do not go the other way. May God help the brethren to be impressed with the fact that it is not enough to become a Christian; that it is not enough to start to heaven; that it is not enough to once appreciate the death of Christ to the degree that we confess Christ and are baptized into him. We must continue to be, in every sense of the word, Christians indeed: we must continue to go to heaven, after starting, till we get there; we must continue to appreciate Christ's love in dying that we might live, and must let this appreciation grow instead of letting it weaken and die. Yes, brethren, we will certainly be saved, "if" we continue in the faith. Let me emphasize this important truth for the benefit of the struggling few, wherever they are. Preachers may disappoint you and many things may arise that cause pain and discomfort, but one thing see to it that you ever dothat is, "continue in the faith, grounded and steadfast, and not moved away from the hope of the gospel." May God help us so to continue.

Miscellaneous Items.

Brother R. R. Brooks, of Chattanooga, Tenn., thrilled the West End Avenue brethren in his address on the last Lord's-day morning in May. He spoke at the tent at Lakewood Heights in the afternoon and to the East Point brethren at night. No man has come our way who was more highly appreciated and joyfully received. The Lord willing, he will come again.

When this reaches the brethren, Brethren Morgan H. Carter and A. C. Traylor will be in the midst of a revival with the Rockmart brethren. The writer enjoyed a short stay with them on the third Lord's day in May and had the pleasure of preaching the commencement sermon for the high school at that place. It was also his pleasure to be with the brethren at Tracy City, Tenn., on the fourth Lord's day and deliver the commencement sermon at the college building in the forencon and preach at the regular place of worship at night. It was fine to shake hands with Brother J. D. Northcut, whom I had not seen for about twenty years, and meet the other fine people of Tracy City.

At this writing the tent meeting at Lakewood Heights continues, with two more confessions last night. Others will follow. When people almost with breathless attention listen to the gospel, God's power to save, it will certainly accomplish in their souls the wonderful work of conversion. May the Lord give us more laborers and keep those of us who are here ever busy striving to lead souls to Christ.

E. S. Jelley, the Missionary to India.

As our readers know, Brother Jelley has been a missionary to India for a number of years. It was largely through the support of the readers of the Gospel Advocate that he was sent to India and supported in his work. His mother is now sick in Cleveland, Ohio. Brother Jelley's health is bad, and those who best understand the climatic conditions in India claim that it is necessary for him to be brought home for a rest. I am writing this note to encourage our readers to forward contributions to us to be used for the purpose of bringing him home. One thousand dollars or more will be required for this purpose. Conditions make it imperative for his return. I believe the statement of this necessity will lead to a generous response and that the brotherhood will soon furnish enough for his safe return. Prompt action will be appreciated.

p p p A Dead Church.

Christians should be especially active in times of peril. When the darkness is great, bright and shining lights are needed. In the darkness a bright light appears more brilliant. Some churches have a bell rung as the signal for the last call to worship. W. K. Book, in the The Southland, tells an interesting story:

One time I was holding a meeting in a town where it was hard to get a hearing. You know people will go to a funeral when they will not go to church on any other occasion. One day at the hour for preaching, I began to toll the bell. An old woman came and asked: "Who is dead?" I replied: "The church, and I am getting ready for the funeral." They came after this, and we had a great meeting.

In the terrible crisis that is now hovering over almost the habitable globe, the church has a great work to do. It must maintain the morals of the people both at home and abroad. Christians should work with such zeal and alacrity that nothing funereal could be suggested. The church will not fail, it will not die. The gates of Hades will not prevail against it.

Bought With a Price.

Strange is it that the Old Testament says: "Ye have sold yourselves for naught, but ye shall be redeemed without money." The precious blood of Christ is our rating by one who loves us. The world is familiar with the lines:

"Still as of old
Man by himself is priced.
For thirty pieces Judas sold Himself, not Christ."

We mark ourselves down—alas!—so low. A prominent commercial leader said: "I never promoted a man in my life. He does it himself."

A small negro lad on the auction block attracted the attention of a bystander. The philanthropic spectator asked: "If I buy you, will you be honest?" The reply was noble: "Yes, whether you buy me or not." God's valuation is already on us. Christ loved us and gave his life a ransom for us.—The Christian Intelligencer.

The man who aims high reaches high. The man who aims low never attains to anything noble. It is remarkably strange that some men will sell out integrity, character, and manhood for one nickel. For the sake of saving a nickel, some men will beat their way through a tollgate. The man who values his word may expect the world to value it. The man who protects his honesty may expect the world to place a high estimate upon his character. We usually make of ourselves just what we desire to be. Truth, virtue, and manhood are worth far more than all the treasures of this world. God placed a high estimate upon us by giving his own beloved Son to die for us. We should not place a low estimate upon ourselves.

Conditions After the War.

One of our most esteemed contemporaries is discussing the question, How shall we treat Germany after the war? It seems to me that the more important question is: What shall we be after the war, and what will our spiritual condition be? One thing is certain. We should be more godly and more spiritual-minded after the war than we are now. Adversity should not prove our undoing, but our making. We should be able to extract good from the evil that we do not permit to overwhelm us. The Hely Spirit admonishes: "Count it all joy, my brethren, when ye fall into manifold temptations: knowing that the proving of your faith worketh patience. And let patience have its perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, lacking in nothing." (James 1: 2-4.) The intermingling and commingling of the people during the war through all the different channels of life should cement the world into one great brotherhood. All those who love and obey the Lord Jesus Christ should be cemented and united in a unity that has hitherto been unknown.

The church's greatest day is coming because the church's greatest responsibility is now being thrust upon her. These responsibilities and problems must be met and solved with the spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ, and Christ alone, is able to give us the power to successfully cope with the new conditions. The religion of Jesus Christ is not intended for one nation to the exclusion and neglect of another, but it is international and intended for every creature on the face of the earth. Some one has truly said: "The missionary enterprise is a Christian campaign of international good will." Christ came not to bring peace to one class of men to the exclusion of others, but his coming by the angel was announced in the blessed words: "Peace on earth, good will toward men." The church should labor to bring good will among all the nations and peoples of the earth. Good will is the only basis upon which the people of all the nations can dwell in peace. It is the only basis upon which the nations can abide without war and strife. The church should be persistent and ceaseless in its efforts to bring about "peace on earth, good will toward men." This it can do by ministering to friends and foes alike, by nursing the sick and dressing the wounds of all. Christians cannot be too careful not to allow themselves to be dominated by hate. In the midst of the terrible cruelties and massacres that are being heaped upon thousands and thousands, Christians must reflect that spirit of forbearance that Christ has ever taught his followers to possess. It is the cultivation of good will toward men that will be the salvation of the human race.

Selfishness, disunion, and sectarianism have conspired to prevent the cultivation of good will toward men. The sacrifices that the war requires us to make should be helpful in expunging selfishness and sectarianism from our hearts. While Christians should realize that they have something to do and a great work to do in the winning of this war and the leading of humanity up to Christianity, they should never lose sight of the fact that their highest duty is to God and that they should seek to lead their adversaries into the Christike life which will expel wars from the whole world and bring in a universal reign of peace on earth and good will toward men. This is a result to be devoutly wished, and it is peculiarly the church's task to bring it about.

George Matheson said: "If you want to teach a child that heaven is his home, that God is his Father, that Christ is his brother, that the ties which bind the world are family ties, you must begin by purifying the original ideas. You must make the thought of home endearing, the name of father sacred, the sense of brotherhood protective, the relationship of the family divine."

AT HOME AND ABROAD

From E. S. Jelley, Dehra Dun, U. P., India: "Brother Petros Sasane and some other workers went on a trip among the churches in February. They baptized twenty persons."

J. H. Gregory, of Scottsboro, Ala., wishes to buy a farm in Middle Tennessee, of about seventy-five acres of good land, near a village where there is a congregation of loyal disciples of Christ.

Miss Clyde Crowe writes from Fulton, Ky.: "I feel that the Gospel Advocate is a great help to Christians, and no Christian home should be without it. I read each number with interest and send them to the soldiers in camp."

From J. D. Northcut, Tracy City, Tenn., May 27: "S. H. Hall, of Atlanta, Ga., was with us yesterday, and preached a very able discourse to a large and appreciative audience in the Shook School auditorium. This was the baccalaureate sermon."

From J. Paul Kimbrell, Iron City, Tenn., May 30: "1 am on my way to Sharon Grove, Ky., for a meeting, beginning on June 2. Jarratt L. Smith, of Louisville, Ky., will join me on Monday. We will work there together and then go to Tennessee for some work."

G. Dallas Smith writes: "I closed the meeting with the Central church of Christ, Fort Worth, on Sunday, May 26, with fifteen added to the congregation by membership. There are some fine people in this church. I begin at Roswell, N. M., next Sunday."

A woman giving her name as Miss Florence Ward is confined in the Insane Asylum at Chattahooche, Fla. She claims to have been reared near Lebanon, Tenn., and further states that she was once a missionary to Brazil. If you know or can locate any of her people, you will do an act of kindness by notifying J. R. Old, at Ocala, Fla.

From Jarratt L. Smith, Louisville, Ky., May 22: "There have been two more additions to the F Street congregation since the report of May 9 in the Gospel Advocate. They are good, influential men. On the evening of May 11, at the home of E. P. Brewer, on Lines Avenue, Mr. Clyde Yates and Miss Ada Shipp, both of this city, were united in marriage by the writer."

From R. D. Smith, Terrell, Texas, May 28: "All the meetings last Lord's day were well attended and the interest good. There has been one baptism since I came to Terrell. We have ordered one hundred new song books, which we expect to add very materially to the interest in our work. Our meeting is to begin within a few days, and we are looking forward to this meeting with great expectations. The brethren at Terrell are proving themselves an excellent body to work with, and we are enjoying the work very much."

Wanted, at Berry, Ala.—We want a practical man who has a good case of working Christianity and who is a good doctor of medicine, preferably a graduate of the Eclectic school of medicine, to locate with us at once. The school here has a place for a strong teacher with a college education and some normal training, either man or woman, but preferably a man who also preaches the gospel. We are in need of a number of Christian families to move here and keep boarders and do farm work.—Alabama Christian College, Berry, Ala."

From J. A. Cullum, Memphis, Tenn., June 1: "I have, through the solicitation of many brethren, consented to put into tract form a sermon I preach on 'Instrumental Music in Christian Worship.' It will contain a brief discussion of our view of the music question from both the Old and New Testaments. It is plain and should do much good in teaching the honest reader the truth on this very important subject. Send your order now. Get your congregation to order a good supply for missionary work. Single copy, ten cents. One dozen for one dollar, prepaid. My address is 14 East Calhoun Street, Memphis, Tenn."

From D. S. Ligon, Denton, Texas, May 22: "I will say that I am not giving my time to the work in Beaver County, Okla., now, but am holding meetings wherever I am needed. While I am compelled to be at home now for thirty days, perhaps, I hope to be in the field by July. For some reason unknown to me, I have had two meetings called off, or, rather, the brethren where I had arranged to hold their meeting have just deliberately, after arranging with me, gone back on their own agreement. Brethren, if this is right, I confess I do not know what right is. For this reason I have some time for meetings, one in July and one in August. I am not asking now for a mission meeting, either. I have done my share of that kind of work."

From Will W. Slater, Formosa, Ark., May 22: "I closed a week's meeting last Sunday night at Shady Point, Okla. We had large attendance and good interest. One was baptized and four took membership. This was one of the most pleasant and enjoyable meetings I have ever held. The church is at peace with each other, and they manifest a Christian spirit and brotherly love toward each other. In fact, they have the 'old-time religion,' and it is a pleasure to labor with them. They are few in number, but rich in faith. I will return for another meeting. They know how to care for a preacher's family in a financial way. 1 am teaching a singing school at Formosa, and will preach here next Lord's day. I will preach at Center Ridge, Ark, the first Sunday in June. Brother Garner will hold the meeting at Center Ridge, and Brother Johnson will hold the meeting here this summer."

From W. F. Cox, Selkirk, Ontario, Canada: "Since my last report two noble young men and an aged mother have been added to the one body by immersion. We are greatly encouraged with the rapid increase in interest in our Master's work here. May the Lord's cause go forth with renewed rapidity. As regards the evangelistic endeavor in the West, the following free gifts have been received by me: From Brother Black, $1; N. Bunt, 50 cents; H. L. Richardson, Hamilton, Ontario, $3.50; Dr. Sister Lily Jackson, $25; Sister Minnie Fry, Simcoe, Ontario, $25. Many thanks for these gifts. The work in the West is one of great importance and worthy of our consideration. The efforts exerted and the means given in support of this work will not be in vain, but may be the means of winning many precious souls for Christ and firmly establishing many new congregations in this part of the world."

From Tice Elkins, Tulia, Texas, May 27: "I started to this place for a meeting last Friday, stopped at Amarillo overnight, was called back to Claud by telephone to preach a funeral, and came back to Amarillo and preached that night, and then reached Tulia about one o'clock in the morning, getting out to my appointment, fourteen miles in the country, Sunday at eleven o'clock, and found a small crowd to preach to. But last night we had more than a houseful, and we hope for a good meeting. I will begin a meeting with the Bluegrove brethren, in Clay County, Saturday before the second Lord's day in June. I hope the brethren where I am to hold meetings will get song books and some one to lead the song service before we have to begin. We lose lots of ground by not getting ready for a meeting. So many of the preachers are reporting 'no additions' from their efforts in meetings, and the strongest men we have. I wonder what is in store for us? Will the gospel lose its power till the war ends? God help us

Shady Point, May 24.—Brother Will W. Slater, of Council Hill, has just recently closed a week's meeting for us One was baptized and four took memhership. The meeting was well attended and good interest was manifested throughout. Several seemed to be almost persuaded. Brother Slater is a forceful speaker and a plain teacher of the word. He has been asso-ciated with some of the strongest preachers in the brotherhood, singing in meetings for them, which has been of great benefit to him in fitting him for his work of preaching the gospel. He gave us some of the finest lessons we have ever heard, and the congregation was highly pleased with his work. We have invited him to return for another meeting. Brother Slater is a good singer and an able teacher of vocal music. He should be kept busy all the time. Brethren, call him out for your schools and meetings. God bless the church everywhere:-R. A. Chaplin, May 28.-Last Sunday was a great day at Van Buren. Seventy-two dollars was raised to relieve the suffering in Europe. These brethren want to glorify God during this war, and they have decided to give through the church. I am laboring with five churches, and I feel that the brethren are coming to a sense of duty. will send our contributions to the Gospel Advocate and they can forward it to the needy. I want to call upon my preaching brethren to impress upon the people their duty in doing all they do through the name of Christ. These are, indeed, "grievous Christ. These are, indeed, buty of times," and it is the solemn duty of trally around the every Christian to rally around the standard of Jesus Christ.—R. A. Craig.

Hartsville, May 25 .- Our work at Hartsville, Philippi, Dixon Springs, and Antioch is moving along about as much as we are pushing it. Sometimes we push our work and sometimes our work pushes us; you may guess which it is here. Anyway, we are not at all satisfied with what we are doing and we are trying to do more. Sometimes when we mention feeding some of the starving people, some will say they are doing their part through some society; but last third Lord's day we called on our home congregation for at least twenty-five dollars for this work, and we certainly "went over the top" by several dollars, which was very encouraging, and we have decided to give at least that every month for a while. Let every congregation and every member of each congregation rally around the banner of our King and never give up until the enemy is conquered and the crown of glory won .-Thomas H. Burton.

One, a married lady, had a few days before "professed" in a Baptist meeting, but, learning "the way of the Lord more perfectly," she confessed Christ and was baptized .- J. S. Daugherty.

Henrietta, May 23.—I closed the meeting at Bowie last night, with one to take membership. Is that a failure? Ask the brethren there if we did not have a good meeting, and a successful one. I came home and went to Bluegrove to preach a funeral to-day, and to-night I start for Tulla to hold a meeting near there. During the a meeting near there. During the Bowie meeting I was called by tele-phone to Childress to preach the fu-neral of Brother W. W. Porter, and a sad funeral it was. Hatched 117 Chicks.'

John A. Clark, of Jonesboro, Ark., writes: "I hatched one hundred and seventeen chicks, and did not lose one. Not a weak one in the flock." Mrs. J. B. Courson, of Cordova, Ala., writes: "I have been using your tablets and did not lose a single chick. My neighbors want your tablets."

You will not lose a single chick, either, if you will use Reefer's Ready Relief, which every poultry raiser knows saves baby chicks from dying dreadful white diarrhea that plague. A package of this new scientific discovery will save five hundred baby chicks. Are not five hundred of your baby chicks worth one dollar? That is less than one-half cent apiece. I take all the risk and will refund every penny of your money if Reefer's Ready Relief fails to save your chicks. A million-dollar bank backs up this guarantee. Send for a dollar package to-day, or write for my free poultry book, which tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry. E. J. Reefer, 6525 Reefer Building, Kansas City, Mo.

PENNSYLVANIA MAN THANKFUL.

PENNSYLVANIA MAN THANKFUL.

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir: Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years, and have always had trouble with it till I got your appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on; it just adapted fiself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in.

It would be a veritable Godsend to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture If all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it. My rupture is now all healed up, and nothing ever did it but your appliance, whenever the opportunity presents itself, I will say a good word for your appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am,

Yours very sincerely,

JAMES A. BRITTON,

CURED IN SIX MONTHS AFTER EIGHTEEN YEARS.

Hinton, Ky.

C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir: I never wore the appliance a minute over six months, and was cured sound and well; and I want to say no man ever did any harder work than I did while I was using it—I hauled forty perch of rock too big for any man to lift. I was ruptured eighteen years, and words cannot tell how thankful I am. Use my name if you like.

Yours sincerely,

RUFUS FIELDS,

Dear Sir: Your appliance did all you claim for the little boy, and more, for it cured him sound and well. We let him wear it for about a year in all, although it cured him three months after he had begun to wear it. We had tried several other remedies and got no relief; and I shall certainly recommend it to friends, for we surely owe it to you.

Yours respectfully,

Gentlemen: The baby's rupture is altogether cured, thanks to your appliance, and we are so thankful to you. If we could only have known of it sooner, our little boy would not have had to suffer nearly as much as he did. He wore your brace a little over four months, and has not worn it now for six weeks.

Ten Reasons Why

YOU SHOULD SEND FOR BROOKS RUPTURE APPLIANCE.

- It is absolutely the only appliance of the kind on the market to-day, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.
- The appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of po-sition.
- Being an air cushion of soft rub-ber, it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.
- 4. Unlike the ordinary so-called "pads" used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
- It is small, soft, and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.
- The soft, pliable bands holding the appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.
- There is nothing about it to get foul; and when it becomes solled, it can be washed without injuring it in the least.
- There are no metal springs in the appliance to torture one by cut-ting and bruising the flesh.
- All of the material of which the appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe appliance to wear.
- 10. My reputation for honesty and fair dealing 's so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon to-day.

TRANSPARENT OVEN DISHES

Work in Western Canada.

BY HULDA M. GOOD.

I have been asked to write briefly an article for publication to place the work in Western Canada before the eyes of those who are interested, and perhaps it will create an interest where before none existed.

To Brother Sampson Mann we owe thanks for being the means of having the pure gospel planted out here. He realized that he should be baptized from a study of the Scriptures, so wrote to Brother M. Watterworth, evangelist for the Carman church (Manitoba) at that time, to come out to baptize him. He has always since sacrificed a great deal to keep the work going, few knowing about his sacrifices. The following year he was the means of securing the assistance of Brother H. L. Richardson, who was then in Beamsville, Ontario, This meant a good deal of personal sacrifice for him, as there were only two faithful members at first.

Brother Watterworth, as I mentioned above as being the first to preach the gospel here, held meetings in a tent and in Schnellar Schoolhouse for a while. Three were baptized during his stay, and two came out from denominations who had been baptized.

In 1911 Brother H. L. Richardson labored among us until the month of December. He was not here continually, but always when absent he wrote regularly to the congregation. encouraging us to be faithful, and also giving good teaching. He worked hard and tirelessly under discouraging circumstances. He held meetings at several places. At one time he held meetings at three places on Lord's days, having to cover a distance of thirty-six miles or thereabout. This he did on a bicycle most of the time. I believe. Truly those who have never been here cannot understand what the hardships were, at the first especially. He baptized about fourteen during the time he spent here, and one previously baptized came out from sectarianism. There was just the one congregation at that time-Schnellar-which has continued from the first. Financially, they have been unable to assist but little, therefore it required sacrifice of both labor and money on the part of those who have worked among us.

The spring of 1916 we were fortunate in securing the help of Brother H. A. Rogers, from Carman, Manitoba. He held meetings in Bromhead at first, where we were then meeting. Since then he has been with us many times, and has been the instrument in God's hands of establishing three congregations in Saskatchewan.

Regina congregation was established a year ago last February, and the members up to the present continue faithful. The Lyndale school district congregation (about ten miles from Schnellar) will be a year old this summer. One in the Knoxville school district, about the same distance from Schnellar, was established this spring, Brother Rogers has baptized sixty-nine since December, 1916, and reclaimed

From February, 1917, to March, 1918, he has held twenty-six weeks of meetings, which has meant no small sacrifice, both from a financial and labor point of view. He lives at Carman, and has a family to support; so it can readily be seen what this means to him. He has God's work in the west at heart and has labored most faithfully. The people are now interested and the opportunity is good for spreading the gospel, if only we could keep an evangelist to do it, Brother Rogers has held meetings at three other schoolhouses, and expects to spend all the time possible in evangelizing here this summer. He is not only apt in teaching the gospel in simplicity, but does much good in visiting the homes of the people.

Brother C. G. McPhee, evangelist for Carman, is with us at present. He held a two-weeks' meeting at Schnellar Schoolhouse when he first came. He has baptized one. He is now holding meetings at the three places on Lord's

We would like to secure the help of Brother W. F. Cox for the summer, and also have Brother McPhee, if possible, as now is the time to put the pure religion of Christ before the minds of the people, while they are interested and seem desirous of learning the true way.

Saskatchewan is a good field, for most of the people have never heard of the church of Christ; therefore they think the doctrine a new one and wish to investigate. Many at this time, too, are turning to religion, realizing that there is something wrong when such a terrible war continues for so long a time. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few [too few out here]; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

Work we do in stone will crumble; but when we teach a great lesson to a child, its influence will last forever .-J. R. Miller.

Letters That Inspire Confidence.

I wish very much that every reader of this paper could spend sufficient time in my office to read the thousands of letters which I have received from all parts of the country. I have printed several hundreds of them in a booklet; but I wish you could see the originals, for I would like to have you realize the wonderful results which they report in the relief of dyspepsia, indigestion, persistent headache, rheu matism, kidney, bladder, and liver diseases, uric-acid poisoning, and other curable conditions due to impure blood.

Before my own health was restored by Shivar Mineral Water and I purchased this spring, and before ceived all these letters from sufferers, did not take very much stock in advertisements like this. I, therefore cannot blame you if you doubt; but, my friend. I am absolutely convinced that the Shivar Spring is the greatest restorative mineral spring ever discovered, not excepting the famous spas of Europe. I have shipped this water to thousands of sufferers in all parts of the United States, and they almost invariably report either permanent restoration or beneficial results. That is why I make the offer contained in the following letter. Sign it now and mail it.

Shivar Spring, Box 21L, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen: I accept your offer and inclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send; and if I report no benefit, you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If it is coated, your little one's stomach, liver, and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless; doesn't sleep, eat, or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Work in Arkansas.

BY D. S. LIGON.

My trip to Arkansas was not as I expected and wished, for I could not stay as long as I expected to do. I began at Walker's Chapel on the first Lord's day in May, and feel that some good was done. After closing there, I began at a schoolhouse between Walker's Chapel, on the west bank of the Cossatott River, and De Queen. Both of these places are right in the country where I lived when a boy, and all seemed to enjoy my preaching. Brethren, much work is needed in that part, and I am anxious to return there sometime and remain some two or three months. I was speaking to one of my sister's children (now a grown young lady) about her duty to the Lord and her present church relation (she is a Baptist), and she said: "Well, this is all I know, Uncle, and this is all I have heard." This made me sad, indeed. O, how I do pray that our brethren will have a greater mind for home mission work! Somehow, I have always had a mission spirit, but I have about gone my limit in this work. I notice some preachers will arrange for a mission meeting, and before the meeting begins they begin to call for help. I went over there where I knew the work was badly needed, and asked the brethren who wished to have any fellowship in this work to remember me. Only one sister-Sister Fuller, Dyersburg, Tenn.-thought enough of this to help me. She sent me two dollars, for which I am very thankful. As I was returning, I stopped over one night at Nash, Texas, where I have held several meetings, and the brethren there gave me three dollars, and this is all I received on the trip, spending some fifteen days and about twenty-five dollars. I had to return home, as my wife was not doing so well and wanted to go on to Mineral Wells, Texas, for her health. She may have to have an operation before she gets well, but will first see what Mineral Wells will do for her. I will have to remain at home with the children for more than a month while she is away, and try to take care of things at home. My wife has been under treatment of the doctor for more than a year, which has been quite an expense to us, but I have never complained, as she was so I could go on with my work; but now she must go to the Wells, which keeps me from my work, and I will need some help. I cannot understand why our brethren will just go on and on, let a poor preacher "root, hog, or die," and then, as soon as he dies, beg over his dead body for his wife and children. If the church would do its duty, no preacher's family would have to be advertised to the world as poverty stricken, which reflects on the ability of the preacher to support his family or on the church for not supporting the preacher. - I have been in the ministry for more than twenty-five years. So if you want to help us in this time of need, the way is open. My address is Denton, Texas.

sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so muchabout Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com-

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, back-ache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, and did to Mrs. Werthline.

OBITUARIES

Thurston.

Sister Mary E. Thurston was born on January 5, 1845, in Crawford County, Ark., and was principally reared in that county. She obeyed the gospel during the Civil War, and in these years she was a faithful Christian, doing what she could to lead others to Christ and to upbuild his cause. On April 11, 1918, she crossed the dark valley and fell asleep in Jesus at the age of seventy-three years. She leaves an only daughter and a host of friends and relatives to mourn her loss. Brethren J. T. Jones and J. Q. Russell conducted funeral services, after which we laid her mortal body away in Leard cemetery beside her brother. Blessed are they who sleep in the Lord!

Gray.

James Victor Gray, son of J. M. and Anna Gray, was born on May 8, 1896, and died on April 22, 1918. This young man obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother Fox at the age of seventeen. Victor was an excellent young man with many noble traits, and to know him was to love him. He was an untiring worker in the church and often led the song service. The writer spoke words of comfort to the bereaved, together with a goodly number of friends and loved ones, at the Lillamay meetinghouse, in Cheatham County. "As for man, his days are as grass; as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth. For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more." (Ps. 103: 15, 16.) "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

Terry.

GEORGE W. GRAVES.

On May 13, 1918, death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Terry, of Spruce Pine, Ala., and took from them their daughter, Lillie, who was a beautiful, Christian woman. Miss Lillie had spent only twenty-four summers in this world, but left many relatives and a host of friends to mourn her loss. She was laid to rest in the family graveyard near Spruce Pine. A large crowd of friends and relatives attended the services, conducted by the writer. It is quite painful to have to give up our loved ones, and it is often very difficult to understand why God stoops to this garden or that and plucks its brightest flower. We may be consoled by the fact that "he has his mysteries of grace and ways that we cannot tell," and is at all times just. May God bless the bereaved family and friends and give to them all the silent peace of heaven.

Croom.

Brother T. W. Croom and wife are passing through great sorrow. Their little boy, Paul Croom, about two years old, was trying to crawl through a plank fence, when he slipped, hung his head, and broke his neck. This occurred on Friday, May 10, 1918. They are much grieved. It was so

Women of Tennessee Prepare for Trouble!

When a girl becomes a woman, when a woman becomes a mother, and when a woman passes through the changes of middle life, are the three periods of life when health and strength are most needed to withstand the pain and distress often caused by severe organic disturbances. Many thousands in Tennessee would testify as do the following:

Nashville, Tenn.

"I have used Dr.
Pierce's Favorite Prescription and found it the best medicine for my troubles. I can recommend it to any lady who suffers with woman's troubles."—Mrs.
Lue Price, 403
Sylvan Street.

Women should never experiment with unknown preparations; the risk is too great. Dr. Pierce's Prescription has been a favorite with women for nearly fifty years because it contains no alcohol or any marcotic. It is put up in both liquid and tablets and is to be found in almost any drug store. If not obtainable send 10 cts. to Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and he will mail a trial package of the tablets.

Lenoir City, Tenn.—"Some years ago I broke down from over-work and exposure. My brother thought I would die. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it brought me out all right. I have also taken several bottles since and it always helps me. I can say it is a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to all broken-down women. It is the best medicine for nervousness and for prospective mathers that I ever saw,"—MARY L. WALKER.

Sure! High Heels Cause Corns But Who Cares Now

Because style decrees that women crowd and buckle up their tender toes in high-heel footwear, they suffer from corns; then they cut and trim at these painful pests, which merely makes the corn grow hard. This suicidal habit may cause lockjaw, and women are warned to stop it.

A few drops of a drug called "freezone" applied directly upon a sore corn gives quick relief, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out without pain. Ask the drug-store man for a quarter of an ounce of freezone, which costs very little, but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

This drug is an ether compound and dries in a moment, and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. Clip this out and pin on your wife's dresser.

shocking, so horrible, to find the little fellow hanging in the fence, dead. Two women were in sight of him, close by—his mother and a near neighbor. His mother had been away from him less than five minutes. They tried hard for more than an hour with the help of a physician to revive him, thinking him choked and stunned. Brother and Sister Croom live now near Center Point, in Howard County, Ark., having bought a farm and moved there this spring. They were happy in their new home, but—alas!—all is sadness so soon! "Man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward." Brethren, pray for them and bless them O. E. BILLINGSLEY.

Wilhoyte.

Once more, at the quiet midnight hour, when the world was wrapped in peaceful slumber, the kind and loving Heavenly Father reached down and plucked another ripened sheaf ready for the harvest. Sister Lucy Ann Wilhoyte went home on May 14, 1918, aged eighty-four years. Her husband, Brother James S. Wilhoyte, preceded her to the better land several years ago; also, two sons have passed over the river. The remaining three sons and four daughters were with her when the end came; one daughter was absent on account of sickness. Her children were loving and dutiful and showed her every care and kindness in her illness. Sister Wilhoyte's life was an exceedingly bright and hospitable one. Her home was always open to every one. Strangers received the same hearty welcome as friends, and, if need be, she would arise at any hour of the night and take in the wanderer and minister to his needs. O, what a reflection of the Christ life in her life! To the children I would say: Imitate her many Christian graces. She beher many Christian graces. came a Christian in her girlhood and lived faithful to the end.

He obeyed the gospel in 1883, and was a member of the congregation at Gladeville, Tenn., at which place he resided till his death. The writer never had the pleasure of knowing Brother Spickard personally, only having become ac-quainted with Sister Spickard, the widow, and some of the other members of the family since his death. Those who knew Brother Spickard best all speak in the very highest terms of him, bearing testimony to the fact that he was a good and obliging neighbor, a devoted husband, a kind father, and the elders of the congregation say that he lived a faithful and consistent member of the body of consistent member of the body of Christ. Then, in the precious hope of the gospel, we may all say with his dear family, our loss is his eternal gain. To Sister Spickard and sons we feel to say: "Why lament the Christian's dying?" Soon each one of you, with all of us, will be called to join that innumerable throng where

THE ONE GREAT OPPORTUNITY

The DeCamp Glass Casket Company has practically built and equipped a magnificent plant in Chattanooga, Tenn., for the manufacture of the only indestructible burial receptacie in the world—namely, Glass Caskets. The glass casket is constructed of two solid pieces of glass (lift and body). The lid is hinged by means of metallic bands, which are placed around both the body and lid of the casket, eliminating the boring of holes in the glass. The lid and body are so constructed that a tongue and groove is formed; the groove is filled with composition of scaling material, so that when the lift is let down it forms a perfect union of two solid pieces of glass. It is a well-known fact that glass is indestructible when placed in the ground, as there are no known elements in the earth that will affect it. When the bodies of our loved ones are put away in glass caskets, it is a satisfaction to know that they are not lying in a pool of water and mud, and that there are no vermin of any kind that can ever affect them. If one would come to Chattanooga, so through our magnificent plant, investigate our most modern machinery and equipment, he would be convinced at a glance that the DeCamp Glass Casket Company is preparing to do business for a long, long time on a big scale. Its buildings are constructed of steel, the brick, and concrete, with the roofs. It is not a question of selling glass caskets that confronts the DeCamp Glass Casket Company to-day. The only question it has to answer is: "How many can you furnish?" The glass casket is going on the market to sell in competition with the wood; it is air-tight, waterproof, and will last indefinitely. It was the intention of the DeCamp Glass Casket Company to sell only a sufficent working capital to discount all bills. With this amount on hand, the balance of the stock is to be canceled by a vote of the stockholders. Every share, whether held by a small or large investor, will participate equally in all dividends.

A FORTUNE.

$100.00 well invested has made many a man independent. Had you invested $100.00 in Ford, Coco-Cola, or Bell Telephone stock as an original investor, to-day you could retire, $100.00 invested in the DeCamp Glass Casket Company promises even greater return, because they are a necessity, and the sale of them will not be governed by wars, market, etc. but is as certain as death. This is a clean business proposition, and we solicit investigation. You may make a fortune if you buy a few shares of this stock while you can. It has been decided to place 1,000 shares on the market at $15,00 per share. This amount will last but a little while.

GONE FOREVER.

The greatest opportunity that ever confronted you, we believe, is knocking at your door, and it is up to you to accept. Anthony.

After two years of affliction, Brother W. O. Anthony departed this life on March 2, 1918, being about fifty-eight years old. His entire life was spent about five miles west of Hartsville, in the community in which he was born. He spent twenty-five years in the service of the Master, serving about ten years as elder at Philippi, a congregation that he was instrumental in establishing. When I say he was one of the best men I have ever met, I only voice the sentiment of all who knew him. I have never heard any one speak evil of him, and I never heard him speak evil of any one. In his kind, humble, gentle way, he was ever ready to bless and never curse. As a business man, he was reasonable in all his dealings with white or black, rich or poor. As a Christian, few equal and none excel. Unlike some, he never left his righteous robe at the meetinghouse on Sunday, but tried to live every day aright, thus having a great influence over those he came in contact with. He was ever ready to contribute liberally to the financial affairs of the church. Freely he re-ceived, freely he gave. I have known him to be away from the post of duty only one time, and then in a humble way he confessed his fault and repented. He is certainly missed by the congregation. A volume could be written on his Christian life, but we whiten on his constrain the, but we think this will suffice. In his home life, we find but few like him. He loved his family next to his God. As a husband, he was kind, loving, faithful, and true, providing well for his own. And such a good father is ever loved and cherished by his children; kind, but firm, always demanding the highest respect of his children. The family and loved ones realize they have lost a good, faithful, and true friend; but we believe that he has only crossed the silver river and is waiting on the beautiful shore to welcome us when over the peaceful stream the angel of death shall carry us. Like "the sunset's radiant glow," we see the "golden gems" and "jewels rare" of this dear brother's life to beckon us as we journey on. Surely he has won the victory. We cannot, he has won the victory. we would not, have him to come to us; but we can go to him. He leaves a wife and three children, one brother and one sister, to mourn their loss. The remains were laid to rest in the family burying ground.

A Memorial of Love Sublime.

BY C. NETTERVILLE

There seems to be one word in our language that covers the whole ground of the Christian religion, that embraces all there is of Christian ethics; and that word is "love." There seems to be one attribute of the almighty and ever-living God that stands out in bold prominence, preëminently overshadowing all others, shedding its benign rays over every portion of this sincursed world, lighting up our pathway from earth to heaven with the radiance of that light divine which time cannot dim nor distance obscure; and that attribute is "love."

In the beginning, prompted by this great impulse of the heart divine, God created man. "In his own image made he him;" and, breathing into his nostrils the breath of life, he placed him in the garden of Eden, a perfect being in ideal conditions and surroundings. Satan tempted; man yielded and fell, transferring his allegiance from the God who made him to the demon whose sole desire and impulse seems to be to destroy the works of Him who created all things: and God, in much sorrow, pronounced the awful curse, which was the inevitable consequence of so great a sin, and immediately began the work of human redemption-redemption fraught, as it was destined to be, with so much of suffering, humiliation, and finally with agonizing death upon the cruel cross. He so loved the world, steeped in sin, degradation, and rebellion as it was, that he was willing to give his only begotten and well-beloved Son to die, that man might live. And Christ Jesus so loved us that he was willing to leave his starlit home in glory, take upon himself the form of man, descend to this sin-cursed earth, suffer in great humiliation, and die the ignominious death of the cross, that we might be redeemed from sin and woe and "fitted for mansions in the skies." Was ever love like this? This question was asked centuries ago, to-day it is ringing in our ears, and in the great beyond angels will take up the refrain and keep it ringing-" Was ever love like this?"

God's great love for man is too plainly manifest on every hand to need any argument in proof of its existence. To him man is indebted, not only for what he has, but for what he is. He made man in his own likeness, which were honor great enough; but he was not content to stop at that. He made him ruler over all else that he had created, a kind of universal monarch over this mundane sphere. To him man is indebted, not only for life and health and strength, but even for the bright sunshine and the soft, invigorating showers that cause vegetation to spring forth and the earth to yield her bounteous harvests for man's sustenance. The very air he breathes, the food he eats, and the water he drinks are blessings from his great storehouse of love most copiously poured cut. But great and munificent as are these gifts, they are as nothing compared with what he has in store for those who sincerely love and faithfully serve him unto the end. When we think of the beauty, the grandeur, and the glory of that life beyond the grave in that better land where Christ, having given himself a ransom for us, has gone to prepare for us a home of endless joy, we are lost in admiration, in wonder, and in awe. Was ever love like this? Jesus himself has said: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." But Christ did more than this: He laid down his life for his enemies, for those who cruelly persecuted and crucified him, nailing him hand and foot to that cruel cross erected on Mount Calvary. While suffering the excruciating agonies of such a death, he cried: "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do." Again we can but exclaim: Was ever such love known to mortal man!

Great and good men and women have lived upon this earth who have been blessings to the human family, and the natural desire of the human heart is to perpetuate the remembrance of their deeds of love and mercy in the minds of the sons and daughters of man. For this purpose "memorial windows," cathedral domes, and marble statues have been constructed by loving hands, guided by the promptings of grateful hearts, in memory of loved and honored ones who have departed. But these, like all things made by mortal man, are transitory in their nature, and the time will come when obliteration will be their fate, and oblivion the destiny of those for the perpetuation of whose memories they were erected. Such, then, are not suitable mementos of the never-dying love which the Son of God bore for fallen man. It was the part of divine wisdom then to establish some institution which by its very nature should typify this great love and at the same time resist the ravages o! decay, thus being a perpetual reminder of love divine. This has been secured in the institution which Christians observe every Lord's day by partaking of the bread, which represents his body given for us, and the cup. which represents his blood shed for our redemption from sin and endless ruin. His pathetic injunction to his disciples was: "Do this in remembrance of me." Then, upon every recurrence of the "first day of the week" the disciples of the Lord Jesus are wont to assemble themselves together in brotherly love around the table bearing these emblems and partake of this memorial institution, having their minds fixed upon Calvary and their hearts overflowing with gratitude for such a magnificent display of love divine.

A memorial institution it is indeed and in truth, drawing our hearts closer and knitting them more firmly in bonds of love to Him who, baring his feet to the thorns that strew the pathway of human endeavor and baring his breast to the cruel darts of the enemy of all mankind, trod alone the wine press of humiliation, ignominy, and death, being in all respects tried and tempted as we are, in order that he might the more effectually intercede for frail humanity in heaven's high court before a throne of grace and mercy.

But it is also a monumental institution. The same loving Savior who said, "Do this in remembrance of me," also said: "As oft as ye do this, ye do show forth my death till I come." As a monument of love divine, it bears convincing testimony that "Jesus died for sinful man."

Following are some extracts from letters received:

I am pleased to state that I read the above-described publication with more or less interest and I wish to thank you for your kindness in the matter. (L. M. Snowden, New York City.)

I received your book some time ago. I have been away most of the time in court and have overlooked it. I appreciate it very much, and have gotten some very valuable suggestions from the work. (Frank L. Lynch, Winchester, Tenn.)

I finished reading your book to-day, and find it quite interesting. I will want to read it again; so you will find check inclosed for same. (Louis Foy, Fulton, Ky.)

I inclose you a check for the four books. I am now too old to take any work outside of my house and garden. There are lots of people who need your book. It is loyal to God, logical, good for the young and old—no better book except the Bible; and the Bible is made more valuable by having your book. I wish you the greatest success. (H. L. A Woman's Adventure in a Tank.

It was the most peaceful of spring mornings. From every rooftop ban-My glance ners of smoke waved. dropped from those emblems of a nation's prosperity to the khaki-clad soldiers at work on their great war engine, and my heart flowed to overflowing with love and gratitude. These "boys" had been in the battle of Arras, and so had the tank. Both were battle-scarred in our defense.

I knew that any expression of gratitude would only bore the men; but the rank would not mind. So I reached out my hand, where I stood, and stroked it.

It broke into violent purring. The crew had started the engine! I looked up. The young recruiting officer was mounting the Fifth Avenue bus which was to follow the tank and from which he was to address crowds all over the city.

"Ready!" one of the crew called to

I looked for the door. Somehow I had expected to step into the tank through a tall, narrow door, or to clamber to the top and descend inside; but, instead, a horizontal slit opened under the bulging side, and through that I scrambled (with as great dignity as possible) into the warm, dusky interior of the monster.

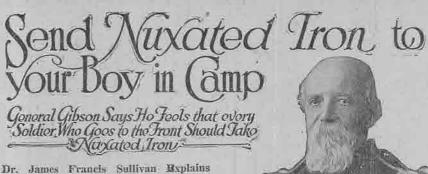

The crew crawled in after me, closing the door. The engine beat louder. There were excited sounds from the crowd (now invisible). We were off!

Instantly a terrific jolting set up, accompanied by a deafening clatter. Talking was almost impossible. The throat ached with the escort. I know nothing to compare the din to, unless It might be riding in a wagon, without tires, loaded with steel rails, over a rutty road.

Dazed by the racket and vibration, T sat in the rear, beside a gearsman. At the front sat the driver. The others were in their places.

The entire middle of the "steel caterpillar" was taken up by the engine, a great 150-horse-power affair, using eight gallons of gasoline for every mile. Around me, on the walls, were the cases of ammunition. Before my face were two machine guns; two others were on the opposite side of the tank; and there was a gun at the front and one at the rear. It was all very grim. And as I sat there in the semidarkness in that jolting, clattering fort, with the faint odors of stale powder and grease and gasoline in my nostrils, and those quiet khaki-clad men all about, something clutched at my heart.

Just then we turned a corner, one side of the great caterpillar standing still while the other was kept in mo-

Dr. James Francis Sullivan Hyplains Why It Helps to Increase Strength and Endurance and Build Up Weak, Nervous, Run-down Folks.

What every soldier most needs is tremendous "stay there" strength, power and endurance with nerves of steel and blood of fron. To kelp produce this result there is nothing in my experience which I have found so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated Iron, says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, "I have personally found it of such great value as a tonic strength and blood builder that I believe if General Glisson's advice were followed many of our fighting men would find it of great benefit. In my opinion there is nothing better than organic from—Nuxated Iron—for enriching the blood and helping increase strength, energy and endurance."

General Horatio Gates Glisson says Nuxafed

General Horatio Gates Gibson says Nuxated Iron has brought back to him in good measure that old buoyancy and energy that filled his reins in 1847 when he made his triumphant entry with General Scott into the City of Mexico and he feels that every soldier should take Nuxated Iron.

Another remarkable case is that of General David Stuart Gordon, noted Inckan flighter and hero of the battle of Getrysburg. General Gordon says: "When I became badly run-down his year, I found myself totally without the hirskeal power to come back' as I had done in my younger days. I tried different so-called 'tonics' without feeling any better, but finally I heard of how physicians were widely recommending organic front to renew red blood and rebuild strength in worn-out bodies. As a result I started taking Nuxated Iron and within a month it had roused by weakened vital forces and made me feel strong again, giving me endurance such as I never hoped to again possess."

Another interesting case is that of General John Lincoln Clem, who at the early age of 12 years was Sergeant in the U. S. Army and the last veteran of the Civil War to remain on the U. S. Army and the last veteran of the Civil War to remain on the U. S. Army active list, General

Clom says: "I find and Nuxated from the one and ever-reliable tonic. Two months after beginning the treatment

I am a well man."

And then there is Judge Samuel S. Voder, Statesman, Jurist and for 18 years a practicing physician—formarity Surgeon Major in the Army and now Commander in Chief of the Union Veteran Union, who says: "Nuxated Iron restores, reviviles and rehabilitates the System. To the man of 70 as 1 am, it is just as certain, just as efficacious as to the youth in his teems."

It is surprising how many people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming fired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxted Iron which is prescribed by Dr. Sullivan, and which has been used by Generals Olison, Gordon, Chem, Judge Yoder and others with such surprising results, is not a serier remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, not upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will redund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists and general stores.

tion. Now we were on cobblestones, apparently. The jolting became almost unbearable. The din, too, increased. I thought of a boiler factory shaken by a continuous earthquake.

"Could a shell pierce this?" I asked. "If a direct hit: not otherwise. The steel is seven-sixteenths of an inch

"How many men in a tank when in action?"

"Usually eight-a driver, brakeman, two gearsmen, and four gunners." He added, smiling: "This tank is twenty-six feet long, seven feet ten inches high, and nine feet broad. It weighs thirty-two tons; and when in action, even the driver's window is closed, periscope being used. At night we follow white tapes laid down for ns."

I could not have listened longer. A great faintness had swept over me; and I ached in every joint. I asked to be put down. The tank stopped. one of the slitlike doors opened, and I rolled out into the sunlight of lower New York, to the huge delight of a great crowd which had instantly gathered.

We were at the Williamsburg Bridge; so the tank started on across it, toward Brooklyn, accompanied by the bus from which the recruiting officers addressed the fascinated, follow-

I watched until the tank had waddled out of sight, then-with a little prayer for the success of the day's recruiting and a feeling of thankfulness that I had had a small (if unseen) part in it-I made my way dizzily to the nearest street car .- Vera L. Connolly, in The Christian Herald.

It has been a thousand times observed, and I must observe it once more, that the hours we pass with happy prospects in view are more pleasing than those crowned with fruition.-Goldsmith.

Loss of Appetite is commonly gradual; one dish after another is set aside. It is one of the first indications that the system is running down, and there is nothing else so good for it as Hood's Sarsaparilla-the best of all tonics.-Advt.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir. As you are well aware, in 1909 I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered 10 gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months from date I berandrinking it gained 29 lbs., was strong and perfectly well and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovation of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happly blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely nature's remedy.

The World's Most Needed Lesson.

The other day our President said a wise thing in three words: "Politics is adjourned." Then he proceeded to teach the world its most needed lesson, the lesson of helpfulness.

Was there ever a time in the history of the world when there were more unfortunates lying beaten and bruised across the pathways of life than at the present? Europe has about seven millions of men prisoners of war. Many of these are in the most uncomfortable quarters and lack sufficient food and clothing. There are now fifty thousand blind soldiers in France, the result of gas poisoning on the firing line. Belgium's unfortunate and starving women and children are crying for bread. Food riots are of frequent occurrence. The suffering of the Armenians and Syrians is too horrible for language to describe. The same is true of Poland. In view of these awful conditions, the man who is not willing to learn the lesson of helpfulness has no business on the face of the earth.

On this subject the Bible is most instructive and the most inspiring book we have. In it we find the world's perfect example of helpfulness, Jesus Christ. He is the model for the ages. Here we are taught that we are to please our neighbors for their good because Christ also pleased not himself. (Rom. 15: 3.) Because Christ laid down his life for us, we ought to lay down our lives for our brothers and sisters in need. (1 John 3: 16.) The briefest and at the same time the most important and comprehensive rule for helpfulness is, "Follow Christ."

The Master's Lesson.

The Master gave this lesson; "Ye know that they who are accounted to rule over the Gentiles lord it over them: and their great ones exercise authority over them. But it is not so among you: but whosoever would become great among you, shall be your minister; and whosoever would be first among you, shall be servant of all," (Mark 10: 42-44.) These words were called forth by the request of James and John to have the two chief places in the kingdom. Jesus was a very patient teacher with his disciples. If they did not learn a lesson the first time, he taught it over again. This lesson of becoming great through helpfulness was one of the most difficult for them to grasp. They had quite another conception of what constituted greatness. It was the Gentile idea of lording it over others that Jesus had to eradicate. For a long time the principle of honor through service was foreign to the minds of men. So we find that, according to Luke, another contention arose among the disciples, probably a wrangle as to who should have precedence at the table. Jesus repeated his thought about helpfulness. "And he said unto them, The kings of the Gentiles have lordship over them; and they that have authority over them are called Benefactors. But ye shall not be so: but he that is the greater among you, let him become as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve. For which is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth? is not he that sitteth at meat? but I am in the midst of you as he that serveth." (Luke 22: 25-27.) $ $ $

Waking Up to Its Meaning.

Other men in their respective ages have been, like the disciples of Jesus, slow to comprehend the meaning of his words because they have paid so little attention to them. To a thoroughly selfish man one of the most foolish sounding sentences in the world is in the New Testament. It reads: "If any man would be first among you, let him be your servant." To him this rule seems perfectly absurd; beautiful in sentiment, but impractical, good only for dreams. So the world thought for many years. But Jesus' words did not return unto him void. They have borne fruit.

The American Magazine tells of how a famous banker talked to an applicant for a position in his bank: "What do you suppose has made this bank the biggest in the United States? Management? Yes. Ability? Yes. But did you ever read a verse in your Bible that goes something like this: 'If any man would be great among you, let him be your servant.' Young man, that's the greatest bit of business truth ever put into a single sentence. It's the secret of the success of this bank. Why do we have more money than any other bank? Because we give a greater service to the people."

NOTICE TO READERS—When you finish reading this copy of the Gospel Advocate, place a United States one-cent stamp on this notice, hand same to any United States postal employee, and it will be placed in the hands of our soldiers or sallors at the front. No wrap-Commercializing the Principle.

Pick up any trade paper and read its advertisements, and you will see how deeply Jesus' words have soaked in. Half of them are nothing in the world but Jesus' principle in different words. "We are the greatest automobile manufacturers in the world," reads one, and then goes on to explain: "Because we get our backs dirty erawling under your car more than any other manufacturer. We are the servants of all; therefore we are the first of all." Another advertisement reads in substance: "Come to my hotel. Because there is nothing so menial, so slavish, that we won't gladly do it for you. We are more humble servants than any other hotel men; therefore ours is the best hotel." Service -service-service is the keynote of modern business, the open sesame to present-day success. And every man who discovers it and applies it to his own business supposes that he has found a new thing in the world, never suspecting that Jesus has been holding out the secret to him, waiting for the world to take it, for over nineteen hundred years.

But an appreciation of this rule of greatness is not confined to the trading world. Some of those who occupy the highest positions of honor and trust have learned it well. That governor had caught the true spirit, the idea that exalted office is but opportunity for greater service, when he said, replying to a young man's profuse thanks for painstaking help in a matter of public service: "When I became governor, I was but making a covenant to be the most helpful man in the State."

Paul says: "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." If business men and politicians have learned how to do this for the good of humanity, shall not his disciples do it yet the more? "For the love of Christ constraineth us."

Adam. No. 1.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

The word "Adam" has a threefold meaning as used in the Scriptures—first, Adam, meaning the race of man, or just man; second, Adam as a representative of the race, the federal head of the human race, the man; third, individual, as a man.

We present this subject under these three heads-man. the man, and a man. Adam as man represents a miracle, All things began in miracle. The first creation of the earth and all that pertains to it began in miracle, but are continued by law; so, in the creation of the human family, man began as a miracle. I am not in sympathy with the theory of evolution, that man came from the lower forms and has evolved into the present form or state. I hold to the scripture that man was created full-grown, possessing all of the attributes and powers of mind, soul, and body which he now has. These powers and attributes may not have been as fully developed as they afterwards became to be, but he was created and pronounced good, perfect as any of the work which came from the hand of God. Gen. 1: 26-31 teaches us that man was formed from the dust. take it that everything that belonged to this earth, of the vegetable and animal kingdom, was formed from the dust, and man's body was made of the dust. An analysis of the elements which are found in a human body shows that all of these elements are found in the earth. Should Jehovali stop with that, man would have been only an animal; but after man had been formed from the dust, God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul.

He was formed in the likeness, or created in the image, of God. I think that man's moral and spiritual natures are like God; that it is his moral and spiritual natures which were formed in the likeness of God. This teaches that man is at least a twofold being. A material part, made of the dust, and an immaterial, immertal part, which is in the image of God. The material part of man must go back to the earth from whence it came and the spirit return unto God who gave it.

We can gather but little from the condensed statements of Genesis as to man's primitive condition. The earth, with all that pertained to it, and especially the garden of Eden, was turned over to man. Man was fully developed at this time, or else he could not have taken charge of all lower creation and been held responsible for the condition of the garden of Eden and the earth as it came fresh from the plastic hand of Jehovah. I think that the origin of the human race is divine and that man bears the mark of divine perfection in the management and care of the lower creation. What a magnificent being man must have been when he walked the earth in the early days bearing the image of his God, which image distinguished him from all other things created!

The fall of man is made very prominent in the brief description given by the writer of Genesis. As long as man's will moved in harmony with God's will, man fulfilled the purpose of his Creator. It was his mission to ever walk and act in harmony with the will of his God. It was an eventful and fateful day for the human family, as well as for the first man, when he deviated from the purpose and will of his Creator. So far as we know, man, who was endowed with reason, intellect, and spirituality, lifted far above other forms of creation and bearing the image of his God, was the first of all created things to deviate from the will and purpose of Jehovah. The being which was created in the image of God, and better prepared to reflect the honor and glory of God and carry out the will and purpose of God, was the first to deviate, the first to disobey the law of God, and the first to degenerate. This is a sad commentary on the human family.

Adam was not deceived in the sin, or transgression. (1 Tim. 2: 13, 14.) Eve, as we shall see when we come to the study of that character, was deceived, but Adam was not deceived. It seems that Adam committed a sin with his eyes wide open, with a clear understanding that he was disobeying the law of his Creator. Some have said that Adam tried to offer excuses for his sin. This may be true. Man is prone to offer excuses for his sin. The children of men to-day are often found guilty of trying to hide their sins behind the sins of others.

When Adam said, "The woman which thou gayest me did cause me to eat," it is thought that he was casting a reflection or a reproach upon Jehovah for giving unto him one who would entice him to sin. I do not understand that Adam was casting an insult in the face of Jehovah when he uttered these words. I rather think that he was stumbling in his excuse for his sin. I do not believe that Adam meant to say, "If thou hadst not given me the woman, I would not have sinned;" neither do I think that Adam is trying to place so much of the blame upon Eye for this sin. However, it matters but little what interpretation we give this scripture; the result and consequence remain the same.

Some commentators think that there can be traced the disobedience of the entire decalogue in the sin of Adam and that each of the ten commandments was disobeyed in the fall of man. Thomas Scott holds to this view. I think that Adam worshiped and served Eve, the creature, instead of the Creator. (Rom. 1: 25.) I hold to the view that Adam knew that he had sinned and knew that he was sinning at the time; yet, to be with Eve, his helpmeet, he yielded to her entreaties, followed her suggestions, obeyed her commands, and sinned, and took upon himself the responsibility of the curse which was placed upon him. It seems that Adam chose rather to be a dying sinner in the company and association of Eve than to be a living man in the presence and under the blessings of his God.

What words can express, what heart can conceive, the bitter results and far-reaching consequences of Adam's foolish choice? All his posterity have experienced the melancholy transition from health to sickness, from ease to disease, from joy to sorrow, from salvation to sin, from glory to shame. The eyes which before met the approach of God with rapture and delight now are clouded with sorrow and remorse; the ear which listened with ecstasy at the voice of Jehovah now trembles with fear and horror; that tongue which was once tuned only to the accent and language of love has now learned to reproach and upbraid: that heart which glowed at the promise and prospect of a fair, numerous, and happy progeny now sinks in dejection at the dismal apprehension of that guilt and woe in which his folly had plunged all his hapless children. Where innocence once sat enthroned and reigned in peace, now despair broods over hopeless reflections and termenting fears. "Above him is the awful throne of an offended God; beneath him, a fathomless gulf kindled by the breath of Jehovah."

BY F. W. SMITH.

That the kingdom of Israel originated in rebellion against God is perceptible to any casual reader; for nothing is more clearly taught in the word of God than this fact, which the following makes plain: "And the Lord said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them." (1 Sam. 8: 7.) God was ruling over the people through judges; and when they reversed this divine order, demanding a king, it was a clear rejection of God and open rebellion to him. An objector may seek to relieve the situation by claiming that God, long before this, gave directions concerning the selection of kings, in these words: "When thou art come unto the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, and shalt possess it, and shalt dwell therein, and shalt say, I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me; thou shalt in any wise set him king over thee, whom the Lord thy God shall choose: one from among thy brethren shalt thou set king over thee; thou mayest not set a stranger over thee, which is not thy (Deut. 17: 14, 15.) But this, in connection with subsequent developments, shows that God foresaw that when his people should reach the promised land and be relieved of the burdens and privations of the wilderness life. pride would assert itself and the favored people would desire to conform to the nations about them; that when they beheld the pomp, splendor, and show of the thrones and those who sat upon them, their hearts would run after the ways of man. Thus it has always been with poor, fallen humanity; the glare and glitter of the world blinds the eyes and hardens the heart. In order, therefore, that Israel and the whole world might learn a lesson by sad experience which it would not learn otherwise, God permitted them to have a king, but reserved the right to choose their kings and to rule in their kingdom. Many wicked kings sat upon the throne of Israel; but each, in turn, was used by Him who "ruleth in the kingdom of men" to serve some purpose in the dispensation of his providence. By a prolonged and bitter experience, lasting through stormy centuries, Israel learned of the fatal mistake in turning from the wisdom of God to an arm of flesh.

SAUL SELECTED TO BE KING OVER ISRAEL.

When the time came to make a king, God chose Saul through Samuel, the prophet. "Now the Lord had told Samuel in his ear a day before Saul came, saying, Tomorrow about this time I will send thee a man out of the land of Benjamin, and thou shalt anoint him to be captain over my people Israel." (1 Sam. 9: 15, 16.) It must not be forgotten that God did not permit Israel to have an earthly king until after he had repeatedly warned them of their sin and danger in demanding one. He told them, through Samuel, how the king would oppress them-making slaves of their sons and daughters; taking their fields, vineyards, and olive yards; and levying a heavy tax upon them for the support of the gorgeous institution for which they were clamoring. However, none of these warnings had the desired effect upon them; a kingdom they wanted, and a kingdom they must have. When a man is bent on a wrong course, all the warnings of heaven and earth will sometimes fail to check him. Experiences of others all round him, who have pursued the same course to their destruction and eternal ruin, have no bearing upon him. How often it is that a loving and tender wife pleads with a husband, a father with a son, a friend with a friend, to desist from a ruinous course-all to no avail! As Israel did, so do many now.

CHARACTERISTICS OF KING SAUL.

Physically, Saul was a magnificent specimen of manhood, being head and shoulders above any of the thousands of Israel. A man with such a personal bearing was well calculated to inspire the hosts of Israel with confidence in his ability to fight their battles and to lead them to heights of glory in the eyes of the nations; but they were walking more by sight than by faith, a weakness which has cursed the world through all the ages past and which will continue to blight it until the word of God becomes man's chief and only counselor. Then, and not till then, will man be fitted for the place in the great economy of God which he was designed to occupy. Morally, Saul was a weakling. At first he was timid and shrank from public notice, even hiding from the assemblage when he was to be proclaimed king. From such a beginning, it would have been expected that Saul would make a modest, mild, and good ruler. Such, however, was not the case. He developed a spirit which made him morose and cruel in the extreme to even his nearest and best subjects. His treatment of David marks him as a tyrant, lacking in all those gentle qualities of heart and disposition which inseparably unite rulers and subjects. Mentally, Saul was too weak to be a successful ruler, even from a political point of view. He acted in such a way as to estrange from him many of his subjects, thus entailing upon his kingdom a weakness, which has proven in many instances a lack of skillful policy upon the part of kings. There is that in man which rebels against tyranny in any form. A father cannot rule his children with a rod of iron and retain their love and respect; neither can an earthly ruler sway the scepter of tyranny and hold the love and adoration of his subjects. The tyrannical and extremely oppressive spirit upon the part of modern rulers is the chief cause of the seeds of anarchy which have been so freely sown in American soil. and which threaten to destroy the very foundation of this once-glorious republic.

SAUL REJECTED BY THE LORD.

For his disobedience to God, it was told by the prophet that the kingdom should be taken from Saul and given to his neighbor. In the fulfillment of this divine prediction we see exemplified the principle of God's dealings with kingdoms, as set forth by both Jeremiah and Daniel. "At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to pluck up, and to pull down, and to destroy it; if that nation, against whom I have pronounced, turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them. And at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it; if it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then I will repent of the good, wherewith I said I would benefit them." (Jer. 18: 7-10.) The prophet Daniel (4: 17) said, with reference to deposing Nebuchadnezzar: "To the intent that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men." Thus it is clearly shown that when God, for some wise purpose, wishes to bring about changes in the kingdoms of this world, he always finds a way for the accomplishment of his purpose. By one sweep of his mighty power kings are blotted out, thrones totter, and empires crumble. arrogant Saul, lifted up with unholy pride and filled with worldly ambition, was made to realize, to his everlasting shame, that the God of heaven "ruleth in the kingdom of men." Saul undertook the impossible-viz., to administer the affairs of state without taking God into the count. The same principle holds with reference to individual life. Man cannot reasonably hope to conduct the affairs pertaining to his own life with the view of attaining that which is good for him, if he refuses the divine partnership.

THE NATURE OF SAUL'S CHIEF SIN.

There are two classes of sins. For one, forgiveness is extended; but for the other, there is no forgiveness. The sin for which there is no forgiveness is, in some places, called the "presumptuous sin." (See Num. 15: 30; Deut. 1; 43; 18; 20; Ps. 19; 13; 2 Pet. 2; 9, 10; 1 John 5; 16.) Saul committed the presumptuous sin. It is true that he did not come to it at a single bound, but educated himself to it by many minor offenses. We must remember that sin is cumulative in its nature. A little sin persisted in fits and educates the soul for greater transgression. The sin that put Saul beyond the pale of divine mercy was in deliberately setting aside God's law and instituting his own. The following are some of his offenses: (1) He forced himself and made an offering (1 Sam. 13: 12); (2) he failed to destroy the Amalekites, as God directed (1 Sam. 15: 23-26); (3) he violated a plain law in consulting a witch (1 Sam. 28: 7, 8) (4) he ended his career by taking his own life (1 Sam. 31: 4). O, the wreck and ruin sin has wrought in this world! Its pathway can be clearly traced from Eden through all the centuries by its blotting, blighting, and withering curse.

Thus the first king of the kingdom born in rebellion to God passed away, and yet the people continued in the downward path. Is it not strange that, in the face of such a thorough test of human institutions, the world will continue to build up and cling to them? Happy is the soul who relies implicitly upon the God of heaven for guidance in all the affairs and concerns of life. He will lead safely and surely through the darkness as well as in the light; and when the last storm shall have swept the soul, it will rest forever in the peaceful sunshine of God's eternal home.

Work in Tate County, Miss.

BY J. P. LOWREY.

A few weeks ago I called the attention of the Gospel Advocate readers to the fact that we are trying to build a church house in Senatobia and asked those who wanted to have part in the work that we are trying to do to send us liberal contributions. In response to that appeal a brother in Alabama has written to know if we are loyal to the Book, stating that he would send us fifty dollars, provided we are trying to build up a loyal congregation that worships as "it is written."

For the satisfaction of this brother and others who may not know just what the conditions at Senatobia are and have been, I will say a few words. When I came here, nearly four years ago, there was in the town a digressive church with which a few loyal brethren were meeting. I held a meeting here, and we did all that we could in the spirit of the Master to get them to lay aside their innovations and stand united on the teachings of the Book, to which some of them would not agree. As a result, those who desire to walk in old paths have been meeting for nearly four years at the courthouse. During all that time we have kept before our neighbors this proposition: "Show us one thing that the New Testament teaches us to do as worship that we are not doing, and we will get at it; or show us one thing that we are doing as worship that the New Testament does not teach us to do, and we will quit it." We are simply trying to serve the Lord as "it is written."

We have bought a lot for which we had to pay twelve hundred and fifty dollars, and we had the "restrictive clause" placed in the deed. The church at Tupelo, Miss., has sent us a check for fifteen dollars and fifteen cents, for which we are very thankful. The Tupelo brethren have passed through the same fight that we are having at Senatobia.

Now, brethren, if we build a house and continue the fight in this field, we must have help. I have "held the line" here for four years at a tremendous sacrifice on my part. but have done this without a murmur. I have never called for personal help. There are brethren here who have stood by me in the fight. But now, if you would see the cause of Christ prosper as it should in Northern Mississippi, you will "come over and help us." We must have at least one thousand dollars more than is now in sight; but we expect to let the contract for the building, believing that contributions will come in on time to meet the needs. Send all contributions to M. H. Dandridge, treasurer, Senatobia, Miss. Please do not wait till we call on you again. If you expect to help in this work, do it now. We want the house completed in time for a meeting in the early fall. May the Lord help all of us.

"Uncle Jackey" Subscribes for the Gospel Advocate. BY GEORGE W. FARMER

Uncle Jack Laine-or, as the people in the community call him, "Uncle Jackey"-lives four miles southwest from Lebanon, Tenn., and is one among the oldest citizens of Wilson County. He is now eighty odd years of age, and has reared a considerable family of children. One of his sons has answered his country's call and is now in France. This fact gives him deep concern, and he becomes stirred with emotion when talking about it, thinking it very probable he will not live to see the boy return, even if he should be so fortunate as to return. The writer called to see "Uncle Jack" a few days ago; and when he told him he was interested in extending the circulation of the Gospel Advocate. Uncle Jack began to tell about how long he had taken the paper (though not recently), and that he read the paper in Tolbert Fanning's day, but said he could not see to read much now. "But," he said, "my family needs the paper;" and in his very palsied condition he began feeling for his money purse to get the money to pay for the subscription.

How unlike many others! "My family needs it!" On calling to see the brethren about the paper, very often we meet with the reply from the head of the family, "I am getting so I can't see to read;" or. "I do not have time to read it."

Brother, your family "needs it." Every family should have a good church paper, and if you cannot see to read, or, as "you think," you do not have time to read it, your wife and children should have it, and you should get it for them and encourage them to read it. Its influence is wonderful. A sister said to me not long since: "It looks good to see the Gospel Advocate lying around." Another said: "We do not aim to be without it."

God bless Brother Laine and his family, and may his days be lengthened out and his son be permitted to return from France, unharmed, to theer his aged father before he passes to the "other side."

A Soldier's Letter.

American Aviation Headquarters, London, England, May 5, 1918.—Dear Brother Lipscomb: Remembering the good sermons you preached and the good advice you gave to the young men of the Russell Street congregation who were leaving friends and home to serve their country, I am writing this that you may know that at least one appreciated your efforts in that way and has been strengthened and helped many times by those good sermons.

I have looked on the bright side of life since leaving home, and find that I can live as I think God would have me, if only I try as I should. This present life is filled with many temptations, and especially our surroundings at this time, but I am glad that so far I have had the strength and courage to resist such. The army is one immense body of wandering humanity, and it is surprising to find how few of our boys seem to think for a moment on the serious side of life. There seems to be nothing before them but the present day and such excitement as it may afford. Many are filled with the spirit of war and are in the greatest hurry to get to the front, and, I might add, back to the good old States also.

All seem anxious to get across; and after they are here, there is no place like home. I find it interesting to mix and mingle with so many different people and to learn their views of life. The army is one of the greatest fields I know of in which to do good, and a place where the little things as well as the large are appreciated by the more thoughtful ones. I try to do good to all, and hope that while I am serving my country I may also serve my Master. I realize my efforts are weak, but try to give some cheer each day and make it a point to get in a smile somewhere.

I have learned how to appreciate more fully than ever before the true value of friends and home and the privilege of worshiping on the first day of the week. So far I have been unable to find a congregation of our faith, and doubt if there are any here. Should you be able to give any information or advice, I would be very glad indeed. Since being here I have attended services at the Church of England once, this being on Easter Sunday. They had a very simple and devoted service. I have missed the services at Russell Street very much, and shall be glad when I am permitted to enjoy them again.

My work here is very pleasant and am seeing new and interesting things every day. Am stationed at Avlation Headquarters in England, and would like to stay here until the war is ended. Have had the best of health since being in the army and have enjoyed this new life better than I expected, but am ready to return at any time.

I feel that I have had the prayers of all my good friends and shall ask a continuation of them, that while in a foreign land and away from the influence of home and Christian friends I may still live a clean, pure life.

Should you find it convenient and have the time, I would appreciate hearing from you.

With all good, Christian wishes and prayers, I am,
Yours in Him, RIDLEY DERRYBERRY.

The Tennessee Orphans' Home, Columbia, Tenn., is moving on splendidly. A good work is being done in a quiet way. No one is now employed to solicit funds for the Home, so we have decided to ask the churches to make a contribution for the Home on July 7, the first Lord's day in July. The funds for feeding and clothing the orphans are running low.

The English Equivalent for the Greek Term "Baptize."

BY M. C. K.

The article on "New Testament Nomenclature" in our issue of April 4, 1918, discussing the meaning of the Greek term "baptism," closed with this promise:

It is the purpose to further consider, in another article, the matter of Greek and English equivalents to express the act which, in this case, is enjoined by the divine com-

Necessary attention to numerous other matters having caused an unavoidable delay, we now redeem this promise by attempting to show that the Greek verb "baptize" and the English verb "immerse" are exact equivalents in meaning, and that each is, therefore, an exact translation of the other. Of course, to correctly translate one language into another, it is necessary to express in the language into which the translation is made the exact ideas, no more and no less, that are contained in the language from which it is made. This is a self-evident proposition, and no one, properly informed in such matters, would think of calling it in question. And the proposition holds good, no matter what language or languages may be involved in the case, and no matter what may be the subject under consideration. We might illustrate the idea with terms from any two languages. For example, the English term "horse" denotes a certain species of quadruped in the animal kingdom, and the Greek term "hippos" denotes the same animal. So far as practical matters are concerned, there is no difference in meaning between the two terms, each expressing in one language the exact idea expressed by the other in another language. Hence, each is an exact translation of the other; and if we would correctly translate into Greek an English sentence containing the word "horse," it would be necessary to use the aforementioned Greek term; or, if translating into English a Greek sentence containing the word "hippos," we would be compelled to render the latter by the English term "horse."

Now, coming to the New Testament ordinance denoted by the term "baptism," we should recall the fact that this term itself is Greek, and it is not translated in either the Common or the Revised Version, but is merely transferred in both. A world of controversy and confusion would have been prevented if this word, precisely as all other words in the Greek New Testament, had been translated, as, of course, it should have been. If theological prejudice and practice had controlled the king's translators of A.D. 1611 and the Revisers of A.D. 1881 in dealing with all other terms as they were controlled in dealing with this one. there would have been no translation at all in either case. But when it comes to practical matters in the attempt to follow the New Testament in its use of this word, as a mere tyro knows, nothing can be done until there is a translation of it, or an attempt at a translation, one or the other. In practice, men are compelled to say and do say what they consider the term to mean; and, to clarify matters at this point, we now lay down the proposition that, from the remotest period of antiquity in which we have any trace of the Greek language and literature; even including modern Greek down to the present day, the idea conveyed by the verb "baptizo" is exactly the same as that conveyed by the verb "immerse." There is perhaps no proposition in the whole realm of philology more clearly susceptible of demonstration than this one. In fact, if any question in all this realm has ever been settled by an appeal to facts, and settled beyond all reasonable ground for doubt, then surely this question is thus settled. It is not more clearly and certainly an established fact that what "horse" means in English, "hippos" means in Greek, than it is that what "immerse" means in English, "baptizo" means in Greek. They are exact equivalents of each other. That our readers may the better appreciate the strength of this position, let us note some of the facts.

I. What the lexicons say. (1) The very highest lexical authority in classic Greek in the world to-day is Liddell & Scott, whose great lexicon, defining the word, says: "To dip in or under water." (2) The very highest lexical authority in New Testament Greek in the world to-day is the great work of Joseph Henry Thayer, which says: "To dip. to immerse, to submerge," (3) The very highest lexical authority in the world to-day confining itself exclusively to the Roman and Byzantine periods, which include the New Testament period, is the great work of E. A. Sophoeles, who was himself a native Greek and for thirty-eight years professor of the Greek language in Harvard University, which says: "To dip, to immerse, to sink." And he adds this significant note: "There is no evidence that Lake and Paul and the other writers of the New Testament put upon this verb meanings not recognized by the Greeks."

2. What other authorities say. Without attempting to quote at length here, we add the fact that the definition just given from the lexicons is confirmed by the combined testimony of the Christian fathers, encyclopedias, historians, reformers, commentators, and theologians of all schools of thought in all the ages; and this testimony comes from the most eminent among them. Dean Stanley, who ranks in this class, says: "For thirteen centuries the almost universal practice of baptism was that of which we read in the New Testament, and which is the very meaning of the word 'baptize'—that those who were baptized were plunged, submerged, immersed into the water."

To the same effect, commenting on the expression "buried by baptism," the eminent bishop, Charles John Ellicott, says: "Jewish ablutions . . . had nothing in common with the figurative act which portrayed through immersion the complete disappearance of the old nature, and by emerging, the beginning of a totally new life."

Dean Henry Alford, the learned commentator on the Greek New Testament, says: "Baptism was administered in the daytime, by immersion of the whole person."

But the greatest of all in this brilliant list, and perhaps the most scholarly bishop of the Episcopal Church in America, Bishop A. Cleveland Coxe, of Buffalo, N. Y., the learned editor of "The Ante-Nicene Fathers," said in 1890: "The word means to dip. . . . In the Church of England dipping is even now the primary rule. But it is not the ordinary custom. . . . In France (unreformed) the custom of dipping became obsolete long before it was disused in England. But for this bad example, my own opinion is that dipping would still prevail among Anglicans. I wish that all Christians would restore the primitive practice."

Presbyterian scholarship speaks in the same way. John Calvin himself said: "The word 'baptize' signifies to immerse, and it is certain that the rite of immersion was observed by the ancient church."

Dr. Philip Schaff, the learned Chairman of the American Committee on the Old Testament Revision, and professor of church history in Union Theological Seminary, says: "The baptism of Christ in the river Jordan and the illustrations of baptism in the New Testament are all in favor of immersion rather than sprinkling, as is freely admitted by the best exegetes, both Catholic and Protestant, English and German." As shown in Dr. Christian's work on the subject, the Southern Presbyterians in 1891 had "founded three churches in Greece," all of which, as well as all other churches in Greece, were "compelled to immerse candidates for baptism." This is certainly significant in a country where the people speak, read, write, and understand the Greek language; and a professor in the University of Athens said, at the same time, that "the commonest day laborer understands nothing else for 'baptizo' but immersion."

Thus the position here defended is sustained by the united testimony of commentators, encyclopedists, historians, lexicographers, orators, philosophers, poets, reformers, statesmen, theologians, and every other character of testimony that applies in the case.

(3) A ticofold fact. (1) All standard Greek-English lexicons in the world say the word "baptizo" means to immerse. (2) Not a single standard Greek-English lexicon in the world says it means to sprinkle or pour. Hence, in harmony with this indisputable fact, when Prof. M. W. Humphreys was professor of Greek in Vanderbilt University, the great institution of Methodism, he was asked to name "one standard Greek-English lexicon that gives either 'sprinkle' or 'pour' as one of the meanings of the Greek word 'baptizo,'" and he answered in these significant words: "There is no standard Greek-English lexicon that gives 'sprinkle' or 'pour' as meanings of 'baptizo,'"

Hence, finally, it is a settled fact, and settled beyond all cavil, all controversy, and all doubt, with all persons who are both able and willing to examine and respect the facts in the case, that "baptizo" in Greek means what "immerse" in English means; and it therefore follows, by all the laws governing the use of language and by the inexorable demands of both logic and Scripture, that, to obey the command expressed by the term "baptizo," one must do what is expressed by the term "immerse."

"Lay Hands Suddenly on no Man." BY E. G. S.

These words were written by the apostle Paul to Timothy. (1 Tim. 5: 22.) What is said by inspiration is always important and should, therefore, be seriously considered by Christians to the end of time. Paul was giving instruction to Timothy as to the work and management of a church, or congregation of Christians. The point under consideration was the matter of appointing workers in the churches. The expression, "Lay hands suddenly on no man," sounds like it had reference to personal conflicts; but it refers to the appointment of workers in the church, as of elders, deacons, and such like, and is an admonition not to be hasty or inconsiderate in the matter-that is, to try to always put the right sort of men as leaders in the practical work of the congregation. It is a known fact that thoughtless, inconsiderate men that do not read and study the New Testament are liable to run churches aground instead of training them up in the teaching of the word of the Lord. Hence just such preaching as this passage gives is needful in all the churches.

The church of Christ was not built up in the days of the apostles by human wisdom, but by the inspired word of God spoken by inspired men. Churches need to be built up to-day by that same inspired word of God as it stands on record in the New Testament, and not by the wisdom and doctrines of uninspired men. When built up by the doctrines and opinions of men, they are not churches of Christ. None are churches of Christ except those that are built up by the word of God; and only those that continue to live as the word of God teaches continue to be churches of Christ. In any matter of practical Christianity, the great question is: What does the word of God say about it? We should always let that settle it. The word of God is infallibly right in all it says. The thing for us to do is to try to learn what any passage means by studying the connection in which it is placed, as well as the passage itself. With the help of the connection in which a word stands, we can generally reach the correct meaning of any passage in the New Testament. The great trouble, however, is that most teachers give their own opinions as to the meaning of a passage instead of studying the meaning of the words used and the subject under consideration. The word of God in all its practical requirements is very plain; and if we study the words of the New Testament as we study the words of other books, we will find that it is as easily understood as other books; but if we allow ourselves to be misled by the opinions of uninspired men, we will likely misunderstand and misapply the word of God and build our hopes upon these human opinions, only to find out our mistake when it is too late to make amends. Such a mistake would be an awful one. We should make sure, therefore, that we are building upon the word of God, and not upon the opinions of men. The word of God will stand forever, and if we build upon it we will be upon a sure foundation; but if we accept the opinions of men as to what the word of God teaches, we may find ourselves standing on the sand instead of on the foundation of eternal truth. God's truth obeyed will save. Error cannot save, no matter how well we may obey it. The word of God says: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." The opinions of men say: "The doctrine of justification by faith only is a most wholesome doctrine, and very full of comfort." But the word of God will stand when all human opinions have failed. The only safety for our souls is to see to it that we are standing upon the word. Nothing else can be of any benefit in the matter of our soul's salvation.

Now, in order that we may safely build upon the word of God, we must study it and learn what it teaches. If we faithfully serve God as his holy word requires, there is nothing surer than that we will be saved in eternity; but if we simply study what his word says without doing what it requires, we will certainly be lost forever. Very many read the New Testament who do not obey its requirements. God does not propose to save men whether they want to be saved or not. He gives them their own choice to do his holy will and be saved or to reject it and be eternally condemned. So, if we are not all saved in eternity, it will not be the Lord's fault, but our own. The fact that God has given us his word will not save us. Jesus himself plainly said: "He that believeth not shall be damned." So our condemnation is just as sure if we do not obey as is our salvation if we do obey. There is every reason, therefore, that we not only read the pure word of God, but that we obey its requirements to the extent of our ability till life ends.

But what is a lifetime compared with eternity? It is certainly worth many lives of faithfulness here to be admitted into endless happiness when done with our pilgrimage on earth. But to drag along through this life disregarding the word of God will place us in eternal night, with no power to make a change. If we reach heaven, the preparation must be made for it in this life. It is plain from the reading of the Bible that no preparation can be made after death. Our eternal doom, therefore, will be in accord with the actions of this life. God's word tells us what our earthly lives prepare us for. So let us be up and doing the right while life lasts.

Each Must Account to God for Himself. BY J. C. M'O.

The Bible makes it unmistakably clear that each man is responsible to God for himself. A man may be a slacker and may shirk his duty, but he cannot escape his responsibility. The Spirit declares: "For we must all be made manifest before the judgment seat of Christ; that each one may receive the things done in the body, according to what he hath done, whether it be good or bad." (2 Cor. 5: 10.) Again, we read: "Who will render to every man according to his works." (Rom. 2: 6.) Also we read: "So then each one of us shall give account of himself to God." (Rom. 14: 12.)

No one can serve the Lord by proxy, but every one must obey God for himself. "For each man shall bear his own (Gal. 6: 5.) As every one must account for himself to God, he must be free to think, to decide, and to act for himself. No body of men, however good, wise, and influential, can assume the responsibility of deciding and acting for him. Others could as easily sleep, eat, and breathe for him as obey God for him. The Bible does not grant one man the right to sit in judgment on another's conscience, for all must stand before the judgment seat of God. So long as men read, believe, and interpret the Scriptures for themselves, so long must they give account to God, and not to any body of men. "Who art thou that judgest the servant of another? to his own lord he standeth or falleth. Yea, he shall be made to stand; for the Lord hath power to make him stand." (Rom. 14: 4.)

In the light of so much clear Bible teaching on this subject, popes and bishops have no right to bind the laity to certain fixed principles as creeds, confessions of faith, and disciplines, but every man must be permitted to believe and construe the Bible for himself. When men exercise freedom of thought and action, there will be diversity of sentiment on those things that are not clearly revealed in the Bible. Hence, barring the fundamentals of salvation, there has always been, and doubtless always will be, considerable diversity of sentiment among Christians who take the word of God as their only authority in religion. Christians should be one in faith, while enjoying great latitude in opinions. No Christian should seek to force an acceptance of his opinions upon other Christians. He should not disfellowship those who do not accept his theories. The man who is so blinded by his erroneous theory that all teaching must be done by public proclamation has no right to retard the progress of the truth by seeking to bind his false and vicious theory upon the consciences of other Christians. The man who thinks it is permissible to use instrumental music in the worship of the church should not force an acceptance of his opinion on those who regard the use of an instrument an addition to the worship, inasmuch as we do not find it used in any New Testament church. Every Christian should state what Christ teaches him, but no Christian is warranted in saying that his conviction must be the faith of every other Christian.

When there is diversity of sentiment as to the expediency of any action among Christians, no one has the right to contend that his conviction is the conviction of the church and brand all men as cowards and traitors who do not accept his view. Such action loses sight of the freedom of thought and decision that God accords to every responsible being. Some few have contended that the editors of this journal could have kept members of the church of Christ out of the war by declaring that the church of Christ, as a body, opposed war in every form. This we could not do without stultifying ourselves and giving up the basic principle upon which Christ's church is built. We have no scriptural right to speak in any authoritative way for the church of Christ. Christ himself has done this, and we can only encourage Christians to take orders from the Head of the church.

That there is diversity of sentiment among Christians as to the teaching of the church of Christ on the subject of war will not be denied by any one who is well informed in regard to the teaching and practice of the church. As deeply as we deplore war, and while earnestly praying that all wars may cease and that a reign of peace may be ushered in, yet we cannot truthfully say that the church of Christ is a unit in opposition to war. Brother Lipscomb's appeal to the Confederate and Federal authorities for exemption during the Civil War, instead of showing a united church, indicated comparatively few who pleaded for exemption from combatant service because they conscientiously opposed war. Brother Lipscomb only asked that those who had maintained a position of Christian separation from the world be "placed upon a footing similar to that in which denominations holding a like faith are placed."

President Wilson has made provisions to exempt from combatant service those who are conscientiously opposed to such service. The government has generously provided noncombatant service for all such persons. It has been our pleasure to help each individual who is opposed to taking part as a combatant and who has asked us to help him to secure noncombatant service. We have also encouraged every one to be a good citizen, to submit to the government cheerfully, and to do all he could conscientiously to aid his government. Our duty is clear on this point. "Let every soul be in subjection to the higher powers: for there is no power but of God; and the powers that be are ordained of God. Therefore he that resisteth the power, withstandeth the ordinance of God: and they that withstand shall receive to themselves judgment. For rulers are not a terror to the good work, but to the evil. And wouldest thou have no fear of the power? do that which is good, and then shalt have praise from the same: for he is a minister of God to thee for good." (Rom. 13: 1-4.) Christians should cheerfully do all within their power to save lives, to relieve the distress and suffering of the millions who are now starving. The church must do its part earnestly and faithfully in maintaining the morale of our soldiers and of the people at home. It has an active work to do. It should lead the way in upholding the principles of truth, righteousness, and justice, and at the same time pray for those who despitefully use it and persecute it. It is the "salt of the earth" and the "light of the world." Christians, above all others, should display wisdom and prudence and should do nothing that will bring reproach on the religion of Christ. The church will not fail in this dark hour of trial and suffering, but, in the strength of Jehovah, will grandly and nobly perform its duty. Christians, when they hear the groans of the dying and the agonizing cries of the starving, do not stop to inquire what brought them to such misery, but reach out to them a helping hand, as did the good Samaritan.

Along with his recent contribution Brother John R. Williams, of Hornbeak, Tenn., gave us this timely lesson: "Paul says: 'But know this, that in the last days grievous times shall come.' Certainly these are 'grievous times'—a time of bloodshed, tears, and deep sorrow. Again: 'Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.' The world is now reaping of its own sowing, and none but God knows the depth of grief and sorrow that all must drink. If we do not lend a helping hand to earth's suffering subjects in these days, certainly we are not worthy the name we claim to wear and honor."

"Following received from Jerusalem: 'Our records show twenty thousand individuals helped in Jerusalem. Laundry and mending contracts for army undertaken. Government now transporting fifteen hundred Armenian refugees from Jerusalem to Port Said; others coming from southeast. Hospital established at Mejdel, near Gaza, is doing excellent work. Conditions in Ramallah region are greatly improved. Employment provided all. Funds low. Cable eighty thousand dollars May budget. Trowbridge will meet Armenian Syrian Relief and Red Cross Commission at Port Said."

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Armenian and Syrian Fund or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

What They Say of Our Premium New Testament.

From all parts of the country come expressions of approval and recommendation of the Teachers' New Testament which we are giving free to each subscriber who sends us a new one. Here are some of the latest received:

I received my New Testament with notes, and, as far as I have had time to examine it, I think it very helpful in the study of the word, and I can recommend it to any one in studying the New Testament.—L. Meade Williams, Tulare Cal.

I have received the Teachers' New Testament, and I am highly pleased with it. I have examined and studied quite a number of pasages with notes thereon, and find the notes quite helpful in most instances. Please accept my thanks for the Testament.—W. D. Craig, Goshen, Wash.

This will convey to you my appreciation and thanks for the nice premium (New Testament). However, I doubt not it is worth the price. When a person is well on her seventy-fifth milestone, many ills conspire to keep one from duty. Long live the dear Gospel Advocate and its staff of able contributors.—Mrs. S. E. Hall, Puxico, Mo.

I received the Teachers' New Testament, and I am thankful to you for it. I like the notes and help fine. They are good. But as I have always studied the King James translation, I think I still like it best of all. While I have lots of helps on studying the Bible, so far as I have had time to investigate, the Teachers' New Testament is second to none.—E. D. Westfall, Wheeler, Texas.

I received the New Testament with notes which you sent me, for which I wish to thank you. "Multum in parvo" expresses my estimate of it. I think it a most excellent book. I never before saw so much along this line in so compact form. It certainly is just what the average reader of the New Testament needs. Many who do not have the time for extensive reading nor the books from which to obtain the information herein contained may find in this little Testament assistance that they have longed for; and the price puts it in reach of all. I made a gift of the Gospel Advocate to a friend to bless the friend and to extend the circulation of the paper, and you gave me the book as a premium, and so "I got my money's worth," after all, for the book certainly is worth the subscription price of the paper.—C. N. Sparkman, Poplar Bluff, Mo.

Missionary

News from the Orient.

BY S. O. MARTIN.

On February 16 we received a telegram from Dr. S. Armstrong-Hopkins in Bombay that Brother George F. Armstrong-Hopkins was dead. Upon receiving this, I went immediately to Bombay, where I found Doctor Armstrong-Hopkins a patient in the same hospital. The fact is that we were all moving for Aurangabad, and en route Brother and Sister Armstrong-Hopkins went to Basawal to visit a friend. As the climate of Basawal is very warm, they both became ill. Their friends advised them to go to St. George's Hospital, Bombay. They did, and soon after arriving there Brother Hopkins died. For some time they have both been in very poor health.

On my way home from Bombay, I went to Satara on business, where I met Brother McHenry, who accompanied me home to Aurangabad. I was in Satara one day before Brother McHenry arrived, and during that time I was invited by a Brahman to take dinner with him. I accepted the invitation. On arrival at the house, I was asked to leave my shoes at the door. I did, and, entering the room, we started up the steps to an upper room. Not having any lamp lighted, the man asked me to follow the rope which was tied at the top and bottom of the stairs as a guide. I was surprised to find in this man's library a book on the "Life of Christ." He was very much pleased that I should dine with him, and said: "I am worshiping Christ in Mr. Martin to-night." I told him that we did not worship God by worshiping men, but that we might serve God by means of serving our fellow man. His idea was pantheistic-the idea that God is in everything and that everything is God. He loved a good argument. He said he was a Christian. I told him that he should worship Christ, not through any mediator, but through the Spirit-worship God through Christ as the Mediator.

Pretty soon the time came for supper (dinner in English), and we again went downstairs. Instead of having a dining table, we were provided with a small board to sit on and a large brass dish to eat out of. The wife never eats with the husband in Hindu homes, and thus the wife served us with food. The man was a vegetarian, and he had a good dinner of all kinds of vegetables. We ate our food with our hands, as he had no forks and knives nor any spoons. When the time came to give thanks for the food, I waited until he had made his ceremony. He clasped his hands together in an attitude of prayer for a second, and then dipped his hand in the lota (water cup) at his side and made a circle of the water around his plate. This he did with great precision, as if he were quite accustomed to it. I then gave thanks to God for the food, and we began eating. This was my first visit to the home of a Brahman. The Brahmans are the highest caste of India. To-day the people seem to be growing tired of Brahman rule and are appointing priests to minister to them in their own caste. Formerly no marriage could take place without the presence of a Brahman, etc. The word "Brahma" means God. So these people were almost worshiped. 0 0 0

His first and most important duty is to preach to perishing nations the word of everlasting life. All his energy should be directed to that end. Typewriting is nerve-racking, especially in India. To write a large number of personal letters of acknowledgment each month, coupled with local correspondence and other duties, consumes more of the missionary's time and energy than should be given to such a work. Besides, the postage required consumes considerable of what the missionary receives. Brethren, would it not be better if we could be relieved of all this work and expense? How can this be done? Simply by your contributing a very small sum monthly to print a small, four-page paper. Six dollars per month will provide us with means to start the paper at once. It will not be to our advantage alone, but to yours as well. Instead of only a few of our friends hearing of the work each month, all would, at about the same expense, be able to keep in close touch with the needs and progress of the work, and would learn many things about India and the problems the missionary has to face. We hope that simply to mention this matter will elicit an immediate response that will enable us to print the paper in the near future. Until we receive your reply, we shall, the Lord willing, issue a monthly report of the work.

Number of native evangelists, 4; number of men working independently, 6; number of children under training, 5; number of immersions in January, 60; number in February, 5.

Contributions received by Martin for January and February: Personal, $159.10; for workers, $5.

Contributions received by McHenry for January and February; Personal, $207.25; for workers, $104.85; for children, $21.60.

In the future we shall report names and amounts of the donors. We gratefully thank each one for the fellowship received and beseech both continued assistance and an abiding interest in your prayers.

Too much and too long-continued help results in making enemies. What is done as a favor comes to be regarded as a right, and when not granted there is offense.

The Greek Catholic Church, the state church of Russia till recently, has for many years been doing mission work in Japan, appropriating fifty thousand dollars a year to that end. But now the state and church being separated, this appropriation has been cut off and the Japanese churches have decided that they are able to go on independent of foreign help.

Prices for the common necessaries of life are getting so high in Japan that the government is opening markets to accommodate the people, and private individuals are doing the same, which is having a salutary influence on the grocerymen. I am paying sixty cents a pound for butter. The man talked of more, but I told him when it got above that he need not bring me any more.

Brother Togo, our cook, must give up his place on account of ill health. Cooking for over thirty people is too big a task for him. He has been with us for about seven years, and he said that to go away would be like leaving home. I told him to rest up a while and I would try to find him a place where the work would be lighter. He said he would fall upon God and not be anxious.

Training Little Children

By MRS, JANET W. MCKENZIE.

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Article 13.

It is the Ideals Held Before Little Folk and the Spirit Infused into Work and Play That Help to Make Them Useful Men and Women.

Kindergarten training is often begun at home unconsciously by both mother and child. It has its beginnings in the answers to the first questions familiar to every mother, such as: "Mother, what color is this?" "How many are there?" "Which is my right hand?" "Which is heavier?"

If mother will take a little time to play with her children, as Froebel urges, the first question about color can be made the nucleus of a little game. Let the child find something of the same color as that which first interests him, then something in each of the six standard colors; count the articles found; classify them as smooth or rough, heavy or light, and so on.

In the same way the three type forms of solids—the sphere, cube, and cylinder—can be shown the child; and articles around the house classified as cubical like the cube or block, round like the sphere or ball, or cylindrical like a barrel. The size of objects should also be noted.

Color, form, and number can easily be made into games if mother has time to play with her children.

When mother is busy with the pressing routine of housework, perhaps a box of cranberries and a long thread in a coarse needle would entertain a dear little meddler and give mother a free hour to work. Cranberries may be scarce, but buttons flourish in every home; also inch pieces of macaroni which can be combined with circles or squares of colored paper cut out of bright advertising pages.

When baking is under way and little hands have to be kept from interfering, a piece of colored string one yard long with the ends tied together will afford much delight. Wet the string and make as perfect a circle of it as possible on a flat surface. By pushing a point in the circle to the center, we changed what looked like a full moon into a crescent; pushing in three places makes a clover leaf. The variations are endless; and the child can learn, with an occasional suggestion from mother, to make familiar symmetrical outlines in this way.

Perhaps it is bread that is being baked. What possibilities in a small lump of dough! It can be made into a loaf just like mother's or rolled into tiny biscuits.

Toothpicks have many possibilities as play material. With them pictures can be made in outline of houses, fences, furniture, boats, or stars, and it is material that can be used ver and over again.

Chains of paper are made by slipping one short strip within another and pasting the ends. Colored strips may be alternated with the white strips that have been saved from rolls of narrow ribbon.

Coloring with crayons, cutting out pictures, and pasting are all kindergarien activities that can be carried on at home.

A blank book in which pictures of furniture have been pasted for each room of a house give delight that I have seen last all summer. How eagerly the advertising pages in magazines are searched for the kitchen cabinet, bath tub, parlor suite, crib, or bed! How carefully the selected pictures are cut and pasted on the proper page!

With a hatbox as the frame for a doll house and cardboard partitions making four rooms, a child's interest and attention may be occupied perhaps for several months. The house can be furnished as to occupants and rugs from the magazines, while curtains can be made for the windows from paper lace used in candy boxes. The furniture can be made from folded paper or built with small blocks of dominoes.

These suggestions only touch the rim of activities that kindergarten training opens up to the little child. What the mother may do at home will be helpful, but what the kindergarten does every day for three hours will be far more so. In kindergarten the child is a member of a social group and learns the valuable lesson of consideration of others and the spirit of team work.

Let me say to mothers who are not within reach of a public kindergarten that your best course is to agitate and cooperate to have one if it is a possible thing.

If that cannot be done and some kindergarten materials can be purchased, a catalogue from Milton Bradley Company, Springfield, Mass., or E. Steiger & Co., 49 Murray Street, New York, will be helpful in selecting the list of materials desired.

However, the spirit is more important than the material. "Come, let us live with our children," says Froebel; and, "Come and play with us," say the children themselves.

Look back in memory to your own childhood. What are your dearest recollections of your mother? Her unceasing care for your food, clothes, teeth, eyes, health? Or, is it not rather that happy day you took your lunch, mother and the rest, and went for an unexpected picnic? Did the shopping trips, the churchgoing, the calling, the occasional matinee, leave the deepest impress, or the quiet hour when mother was alone with you and read or told you stories?

Dear mothers, cumbered, like Martha, with many cares, can you not see that the practical and necessary services which you render your child ministers to the physical, which passes? But the hours of play and mental effort which you share and encourage and the ideals you set up for emulation—these are the meat of the spirit of your child which nourish the very essence of his life, developing in him that intangible something we call "personality" and forming his contribution to the race.

Dreaming and Doing.

It is not the thing that you meant to do, But the thing you did, my son, That counts in keeping the record true Till the long day's work is done.

It is not the eastles you build in Spain,
Nor the mighty deeds you planned:
It is not the dream of the dreaming brain,
But the deed of the toiling hand.

For the airy castle dissolves in air,
And the vision fadeth fast;
But the thing that is done—it standeth there
Till the earth and heavens are past.

Spirit of the Press

Not a Failure.

I take no stock in these impulsive prophecies about the coming millennium. There is too much unfinished business in the world for it to come to an end, and Christianity is not a failure. The fantastic interpretations of the Apocalypse of St. John as bearing upon this time do not disturb me. I have a perspective now that sets things in their right aspect, and I see the program of God is working out. I am reaping now the fruit of fifty years' study of history; and you do not catch me leaving the great liner of orthodox faith in a rational theology to embark in the little skiffs of "millennial expectations" bobbing up amid the turbulent waves of this time. I am on board the "old ship of Zion," and so far I have not felt her quiver with the shock of the world-shaking tumult of the day.-Dr. Sam Steel, in Central (Ky.) Methodist.

It is refreshing to see that Mr. Steel is not carried away with the speculative views of the day. He has much company, however. Notwithstanding the terrible times and the disposition of many teachers to speculate, there are thousands of others who are sitting steady in the boat.

$ $ $ A Frank Expression.

I wrote a number of brethren for a statement of their views concerning the merits of the "Teachers' Testament." a copy of which we are furnishing to old subscribers who send us one new yearly subscriber to the Gospel Advocate, accompanied by two dollars. Brother J. R. Bradley was among the number. We are glad to publish his reply in full, which follows:

Elora, Tenn., June 6, 1918.—Brother McQuiddy: I am sure you will not want to publish what I think of the notes (rather a failure to note at all) in the Testament you send me. See Mark 16: 16, where baptism is certainly a part of the plan of salvation, is left out of the "notes." See, also, Acts 2: 38, that "baptism for the remission of sins" is wholly ignored. Acts 22: 16—"Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins"—is entirely left out. Rom. 6: 17, 18, where Paul certainly emphasized the obedience to be "made free from sin," is ignored. See, again, 1 Pet. 3: 21. This note is very ambiguous: "It must be interpreted with other passages of scripture." How much light does that I am going to say this: I believe the "commentator" intended and did dodge the force of these passages. J. R. BRADLEY.

All human productions should be received with "a grain of salt." No human production is perfect. All men are fallible and make mistakes. We are just as ready to publish an adverse criticism as a favorable comment.

I am free to say, however, that the things to which Brother Bradley objects are all favorable to the truth in the light of the purpose the publishers expected the notes to serve as set forth by them. The publishers state: "Special care has been exercised in the selection and preparation of the Notes and Comments on the text of Nelson's Explanatory Testament, so as to give a full and complete explanation of all the difficult passages, with entire freedom from theological and denominational bias. With this object in view, the Notes and Comments have been revised and approved by noted scholars representing the different evangelical denominations and acting as associate editors."

In the light of this statement, the silence on the passages to which reference is made is golden. The passages are not difficult and the meaning is so evident and clear as not to need any comment. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" is not difficult of meaning, according to the commentators, and they were too honest as commentators to seek to obscure its meaning by comment. In the light of their purpose their silence is much more valuable than their comment could be.

They do, however, regard 1 Pet. 3: 21 a difficult passage and on it make an extended comment, giving the different views of different religionists. The passage reads: "Which also after a true likeness doth now save you, even baptism, not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the interrogation of a good conscience toward God, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ." Here is the comment: "Doth now save you, even baptism. Noah's experience in the flood is made a type of baptism. Through faith Noah obeyed God and was saved when others were lost. Some would interpret this experience as being typical of the symbolism of baptism, while others would interpret it as meaning that we are actually saved through baptism. The verse must be interpreted in connection with other passages of scripture. Not the putting away, etc. The interpretation of this passage is unusually difficult. What is the first question that a newly made believer asks? Paul asked: 'What shall I do, Lord?' (Acts 22: 10.) The answer to this question is: Surrender yourself to Christ: become dead to the world and the old life. Baptism is a symbol of this surrender; it is an act of obedience. Peter emphasizes this by showing the difference between Christian baptism and the Jewish washings. The latter were for the removal of outward impurities; Christian baptism is a means ordained of God through which we testify to our faith in the resurrection. (Rom. 6: 2-11.)"

I am sure that the Introductions to the books of the New Testament are very valuable to the general reader. Dealing with matters of history and facts, they are not liable to be influenced by sectarian bias. They certainly contain a wealth of accurate information concerning the books of the New Testament in concise language and compact form." The Notes used, as all comments should be used, are very helpful, and the fund of information given in the Introductions should prove almost invaluable to students of the New Testament. p p p

Is Your Investment Worth While?

On every hand we are getting new disclosures of the fact that chivalry is not a medieval virtue, as some have supposed, but is thoroughly modern. Not infrequently have we thought that America was dominated by the opposite of chivalry, by sordidness, by indifference, by complacency, by love of ease. But with the passing weeks new moral vistas have burst upon our wondering eyes, and we have made the discovery that the war is bringing out unsuspected degrees of unselfishness. No one can read without deep emotion the following from a letter written by Lieut. Dinsmore Ely, U. S. A., of Winnetka, Ill., to his father, Dr. James O. Ely, a few days before the Lieutenant was killed on April 21 in aviation service in France:

"And I want to say, in closing, if anything should happen to me, let's have no mourning, in spirit or dress. Like a Liberty bond, it is an investment, not a loss, when a man dies for his country. It is an honor to a family, and is that the time for weeping? I would rather leave my family rich in pleasant memories of my life than numbed in sorrow at my death."

How pitifully inadequate, indeed, have been some of our life investments heretofore! It shames us as we look back upon hours spent in tasks that were not, after all, really worth while. Most of us have done but little which will be held in remembrance by others after our course is run. But Lieutenant Ely, and scores of young Americans like him, will render a service to be remembered by generations yet unborn. Some investments abide. Is your investment of life one that will pay immortal dividends?-The Standard (Baptist).

AT HOME AND ABROAD

From J. D. Northcut, Tracy City, Tenn., June 3: "We closed a week's meeting at Monteagle yesterday. I begin at Sewanee next Sunday."

J. P. Lowrey is in a good meeting at Paragould, Ark. Do not fall to read his statement concerning the work at Senatobia, Miss., on page 556 of this issue. This field deserves the support and encouragement of the brethren everywhere.

The Russell Street congregation has begun its summer campaign of mission meetings in and around Nashville. Joe McPherson is preaching this week in the tent at the end of Fifth Street, in East Nashville, near the Standard Furniture Company. The start was good.

Joe McPherson sends this in: "The Grandview Heights meeting, this city, continued one week and up until Friday night of the second week. We had splendid audiences, good attention, good singing, and five baptisms. The congregation is in splendid working condition and at peace tith each other."

From R. D. Smith, Terrell, Texas, June 3: "Our meeting began yesterday with good interest. The attendance was electrically good at the morning hour, and in spite of the havy rain a fair audience was in attendance at night. We desire the prayers of the faithful that the word may rul and be glorified."

From Ben West, Ennis, Texas, June 7: "The meeting fou days old here, with eighteen additions—eight baptized, thre elderly people from the First Christian Church, and seve by relation. G. A. Dunn and his two little boys, from Houston, are doing great preaching and singing. The church is on high ground."

The Tennessee Orphans' Home, Columbia, Tenn., is moving of splendidly. A good work is being done in a quiet way. No one is now employed to solicit funds for the Home, so we have decided to ask the churches to make a contribition for the Home on July 7, the first Lord's day in July The funds for feeding and clothing the orphans are running low.

From]. A. Buchanan, Thorp Spring, Texas, June 6: "I have justclosed a meeting at Floresville, with one baptism. I go nex to Charco. I attended Thorp Spring Christian College lat session. The school has been very successful under the leadership of C. R. Nichol and his faculty. Brother Nihol's success at Thorp Spring has demonstrated his ability is a school man. May all our schools succeed."

The death of Sister Lucy J. Compton, aged eighty-seven years, at he home on the Granny White road, this city, last Thursda, removes from our midst one of God's most precious sains. Many of our readers, who knew and loved her for her york's sake, will join the editors of this journal in tendeing deepest sympathy to the children and grandchildren. Yet we should rejoice in the fruition of her consecrate life,

From Mrs. Kte Killebrew, San Francisco, Cal., May 23: "The San Francisco congregation is expecting T. B. Larimore to hold a neeting in a hall at 222 Vanness Avenue, beginning on Jine 16, to continue a month. To hear Brother Larimore preach is going to be a feast for us, and, we hope, a means if getting the need of this neglected field before the brother cood. We pray that much good may be accomplished in the meeting."

From E. M. Boron, Little Rock, Ark., May 27: "Our meeting at the Twifth and Valmer Streets Church, in Little Rock is growin in interest. We think it is the best interest we have everhad in this city. Three more made the confession last night and will be baptized to-night after the sermon. The meeting will continue until Thursday night. I will then go to Lexington, Tenn., where I am to begin a meeting on the first Sunday in June."

A. O. Colley, Dallas, Texas, writes: "On the first Sunday in June there were four accessions to our fellowship at the Pearl and Bryan Streets church of Christ—one restored, two by membership, and one by confession and baptism. There were three accessions on the fourth Sunday in May. The work is growing with each Sunday's service. We are now in a tent meeting in the Mount Auburn addition of the city. This work will be carried on by the different congregations of the city."

From A. K. Ramsey, Forest Hill, La., June 5: "May was a busy month. Good services at all points. Brother McQuiddy preached twice at a near-by schoolhouse, where much interest is being aroused. I spent several days with Brother Hebert, at Jennings, who is being troubled some by a Baptist preacher who has been trying to lead some of his babes in Christ astray. Good services at Forest Hill last Sunday. Memorial services for Sister Dyer in the morning. We think the outlook hopeful."

From Morgan H. Carter, Atlanta, Ga., June 8: "God is blessing us with success in this field. S. H. Hall has just closed a meeting in one of the suburban districts, with seven conversions and the seed sown for much future work. The writer is in a meeting at Rockmart, with five conversions to date and hopes of others. The Gospel Advocate is read and appreciated by a wide circle of Christians in Atlanta and the surrounding country. May God bless you as he sees best in doing the greatest possible good."

E. M. Borden writes: "The brethren worshiping at Twelfth and Valmer Streets, Little Rock, Ark., have just closed their fifth protracted meeting, with the writer assisting. The meeting lasted two weeks and closed with a fine interest. Five were baptized and one was restored. Our congregation has increased wonderfully in the last two years, and is talking of doing some mission work in the city. I am now in a meeting at Lexington, Tenn. Interest is good for the beginning of the meeting."

From U. G. Wilkinson, Comanche, Okla., June 1: "I went to Osage City, Kan., for a meeting; but finding conditions unfavorable and having been sick so much this spring, I deemed it advisable not to undertake a meeting there just now. I returned home, and, being considerably improved, it is my intention to go next week to Gracemont, Okla., to hold the mission meeting wanted there. I expect to spend ten days or more there. I received, in addition to $13 from my home brethren, the following: From Brother Trowbridge, Osage City, Kan., $5; Miss Vera Young, Bristow, Okla., $2; brethren at Camp Travis, Texas, through Charles T. Clay, $10. This will hardly meet expenses for these meetings, but I am trusting the brethren will contribute still further to the work. Send your contributions to me at Comanche, Okla. I thank you very much for the assistance so far received.'

From F. P. Fonner, Buffalo, W. Va., June 4: "During the last three months I have received help in my work as follows: From Miss Ella Talley, $1; D. H. Howell and R. E. Howell, $2.50; Mrs. Ira C. Hardesty, mother, and sister, $8; A. R. Stalker, $5; John F. Kemp, Sr., $1; Miss Elva Newland, $1; Mrs. E. A. Bailey, $2; "A Sister," Calvert, Texas, $2; A. J. Grier, $3.50; Mrs. M. E. Henry and a friend, $4; O'dell, West Virginia, $5. I am very thankful for this help. It is very much appreciated. May God bless and prosper all the donors. I am seeing about the hardest times I have ever seen since I began work for God, nearly forty years ago. I am obliged to labor much with my hands in order to keep my mission work going, and this is robbing me of the little remaining strength I have left. Please address me at Buffalo, W. Va., Box 81, with encouragement. Be in haste."

Query Department

Brother McQuiddy: Please give me the meaning of Deut. 23: 2. This question has been asked me, and I do not know what answer to give. E. V. Jones.

Deut. 23: 2 reads: "A bastard shall not enter into the assembly of Jehovah; even to the tenth generation shall none of his enter into the assembly of Jehovah." "Bastard" means the offspring of an incestuous or illegitimate cohabitation.

Brother McQuiddy: Please answer the following questions: (1) Has a woman a right to teach a class of women at what is called "Sunday school?" (2) Can a single man who is qualified hold the office of elder? Please give scriptures proving each question.

W. C. RAMSEY.

(1) A woman who is qualified and has the ability to teach a class of women is certainly under obligations to do so. Acts 8: 3, 4 reads: "But Saul laid waste the church, entering into every house, and dragging men and women committed them to prison. They therefore that were scattered abroad went about preaching the word." The word here rendered "preaching" means announcing the glad tidings and has the force of teaching and not of public proclamation. Priscilla joined her husband, Aquila, in expounding the way of God more accurately to Apollos. (Acts 18: 26.) (2) 1 Tim. 3: 1, 2 reads: "Faithful is the saying. If a man seeketh the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work. The bishop therefore must be without reproach, the husband of one wife, temperate, sober-minded, orderly, given to hospitality, apt to teach." The words "elder" and "bishop" are used interchangeably in the New Testament. Paul commands Titus to appoint elders in every city, but in describing the qualifications of an elder he calls him a "bishop." (Tit. 1: 7.) 1 Pet. 5: 1, 2 addresses "elders" and commands them to exercise the office of "bishop" over the flock. The thought of the scripture text is that a bishop must have only one wife. In those loose times of divorce, men were converted who had had successively several wives. Divorce for unscriptural reasons would not free a man from his first living wife. Hence the limitation to those who had only one living wife. I do not think there is any reference to the remarriage after the death of a wife or that the passage means that a man who has never been married, yet has the qualifications of an elder, cannot do the work of an elder: 0 0 0

Brother McQuiddy: (1) Please explain 1 Tim. 6: 5. Does this mean for the elders to withdraw from the main hody of the church with some of the members and go off and start up a work somewhere near by, or to remain in the body and withdraw from the member or members that cause the confusion? (2) Also, explain 2 Cor. 6: 17. Who is to do this coming out, and to whom does it refer? When a member or members of a congregation leave with troubles not settled and go off somewhere else to worship or with some other congregation, is this worship acceptable with God, with their troubles unsettled? Please give me all the light you can, with the Scriptures proving the same.

S. W. Wollack.

(1) 1 Tim. 6: 5 reads: "Wranglings of men corrupted in mind and bereft of the truth, supposing that godliness is a way of gain." I have quoted from the American Revised Version, Standard Edition. The King James Version reads: "Perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself." The apostle advised his son in the gospel, Timothy, to withdraw himself from the heretical teachers who had sprung foolish doctrines upon the church. Orderly walking Christians should withdraw themselves in the everyday affairs of life from those who walk disorderly. The withdrawal of fellowship from the disorderly walking means more than the withdrawal of public fellowship. It means that we are not to associate with the disorderly walking in private or in any other way that will uphold and encourage them in their wrongdoing The passage does not lend any support to the idea that some members of the church may pull off from the main body of the church and start up a factional body. Those who do this become disorderly themselves, instead of withdrawing from the disorderly walking as Paul advised Timothy to do. (2) 2 Cor. 6: 17 reads: "Wherefore come ye out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and toucl no unclean thing; and I will receive you." This is a quota tion from Isa. 52: 11, and it means that the righteous cal have no fellowship with the unrighteous, and certain? discourages those who are living faithful, Christian Ilvs from pulling off from the body of the church and formig a factional church on account of those who create confision in the church and that are walking disorderly. The Holy Spirit plainly commands: "Now I beseech you, brehren, mark them that are causing the divisions and ocasions of stumbling, contrary to the doctrine which ye learned: and turn away from them." (Rom. 16: 7.) Then the Bible commands Christians to turn away rom those who are causing division and occasions of stumling in the church contrary to the doctrine of Christ. This draws a line between righteousness and unrighteosness and condemns the righteous for upholding and supprting the evil one by associating with him. While the Holy Spirit prohibits the association of Christians win the fornicators, he means fornicators in the church. H says: "I wrote unto you in my spistle to have no company with fornicators; not at all meaning with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous and extortioners, or with idolaters; for then must ye needs go out of the world: but as it is, I wrote unto you not to keep compan, if any man that is named a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a reviler, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such a one no, not to eat." (1 Cor. 5: 9-11.) This prohibits our eating an ordinary meal with a brother who is a fornicator and shows that we are to to nothing that will in the least encourage him in his wrogdoing.

Women and men suffer from blood and nerve conditions for which it is impossible to conceive of a better remedy than Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron taken in conjunction, one before eating and the other after.

These two great medicines aid each other, and it is economy to take both, a four-fold benefit being derived.

Peptiron is the ideal iron preparation—no injury to teeth, no constipating effect. All druggists.

Eckman's Alterative

Sin and Iniquity.
BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

"Sin is the transgression of the law." (1 John 3: 4.) The definition of "iniquity" is injustice, sin. Both are wrong. Iniquity is different from sin only in the way it is committed. When a man passes over law, he sins, and in his transgression he may go another step or two farther and commit iniquity by doing something else besides what he in the transgression efused to do; and going beyond and doing something which God never commanded is iniquity. For men to make laws to govern themselves religiously or for God to work by in their religious devotions is iniquity. The command to sing was given by way of approval of singing in religious devotion. The one who can sing in the worship and willfully refuses commits a sin; and if he goes beyond the singing and plays an instrument of music in place of the singing, or with it, he commits iniquity. The iniquity of this age in religious worship consists in doing something which God never commanded, and such presumptuous iniquity exalts man's wisdom above the wisdom of God.

As law presupposes intelligence, where there is no intelligence, there can be no law given. Are mankind intelligent? If so, then they are subject to law, both national and divine. Ignorance does not excuse a man from the penalty for violating either civil or divine law; if it did, then, the more ignorance, the better. One of Job's friends looked upon the wickedness of men as an endless blot. "Is not thy wickedness great? and thine iniquities infinite?" (Job 22: 5.) Jesus said: "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." (Matt. 24: 12.) In religious affairs, arrogance, self-conceit, bigotry, malice, hatred, and all other like cold-hearted sins are forbidden; but many of them also result in iniquity. When iniquity abounds, about all love for God or man is cold and indifferent, and the man is governed by his own standard of righteousness and thus exalts his own wisdom above the wisdom of the Almighty, and that is the genuine article called "iniquity." It appears that Lucifer was the first to commit the sin of iniquity when he undertook to dethrone the Almighty and exalt himself and his wisdom above the wisdom of the Most High, who rules in the kingdom of men.

To work, to help and to be helped, to learn sympathy through suffering, to learn faith by perplexity, to reach truth through wonder—behold, this is what it is to prosper; that is what it is to live.—Phillips Brooks.

LISTEN TO THIS! SAYS CORNS LIFT RIGHT OUT NOW

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called "freezone," which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn relieves the soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out with the fingers.

It is a sticky ether compound which dries the moment it is applied and simply shivels the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You are further warned that cutting at a corn is a suicidal habit.

The Christian Home. No. 16. BY M. S. MASON.

Ah, how true! Make your life exemplary; be what you want the boy or

What is the influence of the Christian home? A young American lad was very saucy to his father in the presence of a Japanese lady. The father said to her: "My son is very rude. At what time do you think a child's training should begin?" She looked at him shrewdly and gave him that very worthy solution of the moral problem in Japan: "Well, from what I know of you, I think that boy's training should have begun with his greatgrandfather."

She was sounding deeply the great issue of moral training. She had suggested the principle of moral evolution-the principle by which nations rise in virtue or sink in crime. In this generation we are training succeeding generations. If this generation is virtuous, the next generation is more virtuous; if this generation is vicious, the next generation is more vicious. The home is the very foundation of our national life. With Christian homes, we shall rise in true national strength; with unchristian homes, we shall perish in our own weakness. The good homes of to-day will be better homes to-morrow, and the bad homes of yesterday are worse homes to-day.

Let us suppose that a man in a certain community has seven children. They have been reared in a Christian home. They know the art of home making. They arrive at a marriageable age and choose worthy companions. They produce those virtues in their homes that their own parents taught them, and their homes are even happier than the old home has been. Suppose each of these seven homes rear seven children that are Christian home makers and each of those seven do likewise. That proud great-grandfather can look down the line of his generations and see three hundred and forty-three souls that have followed the beautiful way of life through his influence. The good that that man has done can never be measured till the judgment. No one can estimate the number of souls that will be touched by that man's life.

But now let us look at the other side. Suppose this man had an unchristian home-a home like thousands in this fair land of ours. He has seven children also. They know less than he does. They marry, and, having learned no better, choose companions as unworthy as themselves. Their homes are not worthy of the name. But into those squalid, dull places of sin and shame are born seven children also-born from the beginning to lives of crime. three hundred and forty-three souls in three generations become servants of the devil through the influence of one wrecked life. Men's deeds live after them, and at the judgment, before the careless father and frivolous mother will pass in review the sins of generations vet unborn.

Parents, do these remarks bring before you a deeper sense of responsibility? May you see in moral homes the correction of public and private evils. May you practice the things I have told you. May you each and all do your part, that in the near future our nation may be purged of its evils. our people come to love the things of God, and the fires of patriotism burn brighter as we look upon "our flag" as her stars shine with a new luster, her blue field reflects more truth, her stripes display a grander glory in their folds, and, fragrant with incense of love, honor, and industry, may she wave over a purer and better land, a land of happy Christian homes.

It has been received on its merits, and its constant use for nearly a century has made it a family word in every household. Its instantaneous healing effect and its soothing relief to skin infections make it almost indispensable in the home. The Lexington church debt has been cut down now to something less than eleven hundred dollars. The note is due on the second day of August. The brethren began meeting in their new place of worship on the first Sunday in May. They still need outside help. Now, is there not one hundred congregations or individuals that will give ten dollars each to pay this debt off? Brethren, if you cannot give ten dollars on this, will you be one of two hundred congregations to give five dollars each on the debt? Now, brethren, every soldier in the army of the Lord to the front, and let's drive the Lexington church debt clear out of existence on the second day of August and have one little congregation in Lexington worshiping as the New Testament directs, and at the same time free from any debt. Among the Colored Folks.

On Friday before the third Sunday in May I visited the church at Union City, Tenn., and found them not doing so well. I preached for them at night. I then went to Latham, where I preached on Sunday at 11 A.M. and 3 P.M. Brother T. J. Latham is a faithful elder and is working with the body at this place. I left them on Monday for Newbern, where I met a few disciples. On Tuesday I went to Dyersburg and met with a few; thence to Jackson, where I made my way back to Corinth, Miss. I will be at Tuscumbia, Ala., on Lord's day (May 26). There is much work to do in the Master's vineyard, but the workers are few, as we can see the dark cloud rising in many ways. This is a thing to think about. "We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things" God has spoken. (See Heb. 2: 1, 2.)

PANAMA HATS HAND-WOVEN

New Discovery Brings Costly Panama Within Reach of All.

Within Reach of All.

New York, N. Y. (Special).—It is now proven that the stylish Panama, up to now only worn by the best-dressed people, can now be sold for $1. You don't have to be skeptical about the low price, as it gives service like the $5 and $10 kind, but not so fine a weave; and by this new discovery of weave one can hardly tell the difference. A Panama gives a man or woman distinction and at the same time comfort. Mr. George J. Bungay, 28 South William Street, of New York City, is backing up his discovery by sending a real hand-woven Panama, any size, trimmed, blocked, with silk hand, to any one for $1. postpald. Fitted with leather sweat band, 25 cents extra. Furthermore, his policy is that, if you are not entirely satisfied, he will return your money.—Advt.

Genuine Humility.

Genuine humility-a sane, safe, soher estimate of one's powers, talents. and attainments, as distinguished from the mock-modesty sort or calculated self-depreciation, which has sometimes been called "humility with a hook," because it seems to be fishing for compliments-is a rare virtue. It is a sign of true greatness. Sir Isaac Newton illustrated it when he said: "I know not what the world may think of my labors, but to myself it seems that I have been but a child playing on the seashore, now finding some pebble rather more polished and now some shell rather more agreeably variegated than another, while the immense ocean of truth extended itself unexplored before me."

Another scientist of distinction, we think it was Sir Humphry Davy, said in substance: "The net result of my life has been the discovery and training of three men, one of whom has repudiated my main theories and another has become personally estranged from me."

How very different this from the vain boasting of the half-educated, puffed up with a little learning, or the conceit of those who are carried away with thoughts of their own fancied bigness! "The only thing that I know," said Socrates, "is that I know nothing." And the real Christian is always ready to say: "Apart from Christ I am nothing, without him I can do nothing,"—Exchange.

OBITUARIES

McKissick.

William Caleb McKissick was the oldest son of Brother and Sister W. R. M. McKissick, of the Broadview community, Maury County, Tenn. He was born on February 13, 1901, and died on March 25, 1918. He was born into the kingdom of Christ about three years ago, remembering his Creator in the days of his youth, and proved himself a faithful and devout servant of He was nurtured in the Lord by his Christian parents, and his delight was in the law of the Lord day and night. The ties of love and affection which bound him to his parents and brothers were very strong indeed; and with his good morals and noble, Christian life, he wielded a splendid influence over the young people in the community in which he lived. His thoughts were pure, his words clean, and his life uplifting to humanity. His early death made many hearts sad and caused us to think more that there are some things that are hard to understand. While it is sad to give up such a splendid character, yet we rejoice with the family in the blessed hope of the everlasting life of peace and joy for evermore. I pray that the Lord may heal the broken hearts and ultimately take us all home.

F. C. SOWELL.

Neely.

Sister Neely, widow of the late Samuel Neely, of Ethridge, Tenn., was born on October 11, 1840, and died on May 28, 1918. She became a member of the body of Christ under the preaching of Brother J. R. Bradley about thirty-seven years ago and lived true to her confession in Christ. Her home was blessed with eleven children. Nine of them are still living. She filled woman's God-given mission by instilling into the hearts of her children true Christian principles. Therefore all of her children became obedient to the faith early in life. This speaks well for the faith of the mother, which "worketh by love," (Gal. 5: 6.) Sister Neely was afflicted for many years, but, being in possession of that love which "suffereth long, and is kind," she endured her affliction with much patience. All that loving hearts and tender hands could do was done by her children to make her last days on earth pleasant. May the Lord comfort and bless the dear ones left behind. We laid her body to rest by the side of her husband in the city of the dead at Ethridge. Burial services were conducted by the writer.

Dickinson.

The accidents of life are incidents that make us think and wonder. There are two opposite systems of philosophy, one fatalism and the other optimism. But even ame there is a difference. But even among optimists One says: "Whatever is, is best; all things will eventuate in good to all." The other says: "All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." (Rom. 8: 28.) This scripture and similar promises and assurances are all that can be relied upon to dispel the gloom and sadness that hover over the home of Brother and Sister T. W. Dickinson, of Smyrna, Tenn. On Wednesday, May 8, 1918, toward the close of the day, their son, Robert Dudley Dickinson, a promising boy of fifteen years, went out into the pasture where some boys were cutting down a tree. He was warned of the danger, but, somehow, he ran the wrong way and was crushed beneath the weight of the tree, and immediately he breathed his last and was ushered into eternity. The community was shocked; the parents were prostrated; the one devoted brother and the two devoted sisters were heartbroken. His young body was crushed, but their spirits were crushed. On the following Friday the body was laid to rest in the Smyrna cemetery, after funeral services held at the home by the writer. Many sad and sympathizing friends and relatives assembled to do what they could to assuage the grief that came into that home. Robert was born on January 19, 1903, and was baptized into Christ during a meeting held by Brother Wrye with the Smyrna congregation in the summer of 1917. May the Father above guard this family and heal their wounds, bind up their broken hearts, and save them from future sorrows, if it be his will. S. P. PITTMAN.

Ledbetter.

James M. Ledbetter was born on June 15, 1849, and died, at Lewisburg, Tenn., on April 12, 1918. He is survived by his wife and four children-Mrs. J. G. Stinson, Lewisburg, Tenn.; J. O. Ledbetter, Winchester, Tenn.; W. M. Ledbetter, Sturgis, Miss.; and M. C. Ledbetter, Pulaski, Tenn. They were with him during his last hours on earth and did all that willing hands could do to bring rest to the fired body and peace to the sainted father. He gave his life to Christ in early young manhood and became a member of the church of Christ at Lewisburg, where he met regularly with the brethren the first day of each week until ill health confined him to his home a few weeks before his death. In his work as deacon he performed his duties willingly assuming the cheerfully. more unpleasant of the tasks and striv-ing to efface self that God might be given the glory. Rarely absent from his accustomed place in his home con-gregation on the first day of the week, his going leaves a vacancy that time alone can fill. The words as expressed to the writer of this several years ago by one of his friends, "Any one in Lewisburg can tell you that J. M. Led-better is one of the best men in this town," best express the strong influence and Christian character that marked his life. All of his children gave their hearts to Christ in early life, led by the home life of a father and mother who followed the footsteps of the Master in their daily life, voted to his family, gentle and faithful to the companion of his journey through this life, words fail us in our efforts to console the wife, our mother. and we turn to Him who said, "I am the resurrection, and the life," know-"I am ing that his words are comfort and life, even the hope that is eternal. The Golden Age.

The golden age will dawn When man shall dare to be From false ambition free. His goal the truth, When every youth Shall seek-not wealth and fame, But this-a spotless name. Righteousness shall be bold In that fair age of gold.

The golden age will come When men shall work for joy, When each shall find employ Suited to each: When toil shall teach, Not bring the soul disgust; Men will not hear "Thou must!" Labor will not be sold, In that bright age of gold.

The golden age on earth Will be a time of peace; The wars of greed shall cease; Envy shall fail. Mercy prevail. Creeds shall not separate; Caste shall be out of date: Love shall all hearts enfold In that fair age of gold. -Thomas Curtis Clarke.

Clinging to God.

While there are other things that must legitimately occupy our minds, let us see to it that, ever and anon, we turn ourselves, with a conscious gathering in our souls, to him, and calm and occupy our hearts and minds with the bright and peaceful thoughts of a present God, ever near us, and ever gracious to us. Life is a dreary stretch of wilderness, unless all through it there be dotted, like a chain of ponds in a desert, these moments in which the mind fixes itself upon God, and loses sorrow and sins and weakness, and all other sadness, in the calm and blessed contemplation of his sweetness and sufficiency. The very heavens are bare and lacking in the highest beauty, unless there stretch across them the long line of rosytinted clouds.-Alexander Maclaren, in Zion's Advocate.

The Blood and the Brain.

Among the many important physiclogical facts that should be as well known by people generally as they are by physicians is the dependence of the brain for its proper action on the vitality of the blood. If this is impaired, the blood affords an imperfect stimulus to the brain, and, as a necessary consequence, languor and inactivity of the entire nervous system follows, and a tendency to headache or faintness makes its appearance.

It is probable that no other medicine ever produced has done more in the way of revitalizing the blood, making it pure and rich, than Hood's Sarsaparilla, which should certainly be given a trial where there is any reason to believe that the blood is defective in quality or deficient in quantity.-Advt.

EVER SALIVATED BY CALOMEL? HORRIBLE!

Calomel Is Quicksilver and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Calomel loses you a day! Do you know what calomel is? It is mercury quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones, and should never be put into your system. When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated, and all knocked out, and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel, just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and cannot salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children, because it is perfectly harmless and does not gripe.

When the Laugh Is on You.

People are not very much inclined to laugh at the girl who is always ready to join in the laugh against herself. It is the one who assumes airs of tremendous superiority, and seems to feel herself infallible, who needs to be afraid of making a slip. Even if people laugh at the girl who laughs at herself, there is always a tenderness in it, a kindness that takes out all the sting. Learn to enjoy a joke on yourself.-Exchange.

Discipline Essential.

Those who escape discipline are to be pitied, but we may be sure the escape will not be for long. The order of the world provides for this without our interference. In most cases we had much better be concerned in holding our hands off or in providing alleviations for the hours between these needful buffetings by the heavy hand of fate. The discipline of others, in other words, ordinarily is none of our business. We may safely and wisely leave it to parents, schoolmasters, police, and to the hard knocks of life.—Selected.

"I thought I'd die of loneliness when I first came to Washington," said a young girl from Maine one evening when talking with a friend at: her club. "I got in a boarding house when I first came here where the landlady evidently had determined to make all she could out of us with the least outlay possible on her part. She filled every nook and cranny of her big house. The 'new girls' were her victims, though she told us repeatedly that she was doing her 'patriotic bit' by taking us in. She took us in all right on the average of forty dollars a month apiece, and we calculated it cost her fully ten dollars per person to feed us. She brought soldiers home with her from church for Sunday dinners; and if they were handsome young officers, they always went with her daughters for an auto ride after dinner. If they were only plain privates in khaki, the rest of us girls could have them in the parlor. Sometimes she got left on that dicker, for some of the private soldiers went a long way ahead of her

"Well, we stood it as long as we could; but after we joined the club and found that boarding places were not nearly as scarce in Washington as we had been led to believe, nor as high-priced, our emancipation day came, and several of us have found mighty pleasant boarding places elsewhere. Still," she added, energetically, "it costs a lot of money to live in Washington, and I have found, as far as money goes, I saved as much on a salary of six hundred dollars in Maine as I'll be able to save on twelve hundred dollars here."

But the girl who answered her had learned far more truly what living in Washington in these epoch-making days might mean. Said she: "I've found it expensive to live here, too; but have you taken into consideration the advantages-the Library of Congress, the public buildings, the art galleries, the beautiful city itself? But aside from that, think of being in Washington, the capital of our nation, when history is being made as it is to-day! Think of being able to see the War Congress and the world's greatest people whom the war is bringing to Washington! We are seeing history made, and that is wonderful; but I think, too, sometimes," she added, shyly, "that I am doing my bit for my country by being in the government service now, and surely that is an honor none of us would miss."-Abby Gunn Baker, in The Christian Herald.

Can a Man Walk Forward and Backward at the Same Time?

BY A. M. GEORGE.

Can a man believe two antithetical statements or be in two places at the same time? All will doubtless answer: "No, of course not. Why do you ask such foolish questions?" Follow me through this writing thoughtfully, and you may find that, though the question seems foolish, many otherwise intelligent people are trying to do this remarkable and impossible thing, and flatter themselves that they are really doing it; and then, strangely enough, if you accuse them of doing so, they will feel insulted, and maybe think that you are maliciously lying. But let us go on and see how this will work out.

We can know things only by investigation: but some people yes, many-are so infatuated by prejudice and partisan spirit that they will give no attention to anything that does not agree with their notions or desires. They are like a judge before whom a man is being tried for a supposed crime, ruling out all of the man's witnesses and deciding the matter by the evidence on one side only. Such a judge would be not only a fool, but a very bad man, and subject to impeachment. These prejudiced, one-sided people are just on a level with this kind of a judge. A reasonable, sensible person will always consider both sides before passing judgment on any important matter.

Now let us examine these questions from a religious standpoint and see whether they are altogether foolish or not. First, can a man believe two statements, one a contradiction of the other, at the same time? All intelligent people will answer, "No." Well, it is a fact that all religious people profess to believe both the doctrines of their churches and the doctrines of the Bible at the same time. I think that many of them really believe this, because their teachers tell them that their doctrines are just the same as the Bible, and the larger part of the people, knowing neither the Bible nor the doctrines of their own churches, are deceived, and so go on unsuspicious of their condition, however erroneous and dangerous it may be. They do not know that the doctrines of their churches contradict plain Bible statements, and that it is as impossible for them to believe both at the same time as it is for them to walk forward and backward at the same time. Now, is this all true? Let us see,

There are a great many denominational doctrines, all of which contradict some plain Bible doctrine, 1 will take two or three of the bestknown and fundamental doctrines of the denominations and place them side by side with the Bible so that all, even the most simple, may see the antagonism between them. Understand that when I say that denominational doctrines contradict the Bible, I do not mean to say that the denominations have no Bible doctrine, because all have a little in common; but what Bible doctrine they hold never did and never will make a denomination-Baptist, Methodist, or any other-nor will it separate one from another.

I will begin with a well-known and very popular foundation doctrine, I may say, of nearly all, if not all, denominational churches-that is, "salvation by faith alone." Everybody at all informed knows that this is, as it were, the "chief corner stone" of nearly the entire denominational world. Now let us put it to the test. The denominations say: "That we are justified by faith only is a most wholesome doctrine, and very full of comfort." The apostle James says: "Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only. . . For as the body without the Spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also."

Again, nearly all denominations teach that a man cannot be saved until the Holy Spirit by some direct influence or manipulation, generally called "baptism of the Holy Spirit." prepares him and leads him to Christ. The Bible says: (1) "The world [sinners] cannot receive [the Spirit of truth], because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him." (John 14: 17.) (2) "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts." (Gal. 4: 6.) (3) "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul," (Ps. 19: 7.) (4) "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." (Rom. 1: 16.) (5) "In whom ye also trusted, after [notice, after hearing] that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation." (Eph. 1: 13.) (6) "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel. . . . by which . . . ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you." (1 Cor. 15: 1, 2.) (7) "The seed is the word of God." (Luke 8: 11.) Notice, the "seed" is the word of God, not the Spirit that brought the seed, (8) "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God," (1 Pet. 1: 23.)

I have taken these two well-known doctrines of the denominations and set them by the side of plain, simple Bible dectrines, so that anybody who does not shut his eyes and stop his ears will see that my statements are true. Who cannot see the fatal difference that separates the denominations from God? This puts before the read-

Sworn Statement of Composition of its Formula

The Board of Directors have authorized the broadest publication of the sworn statement of the composition of Nuxated Iron, one of the most widely used tonic, strength and blood builders in the world, so that the public may examine it for themselves and judge as to its merits.

It is conservativaly estimated that this than one-

It is conservatively estimated that this remarkable formula is now being used by over 3,000,000 people annually in America alone. Among those who have used and strongly endorse it are many physicians formerly connected with well-known hospitals, distinguished U. S. Army Generals (Rethred), Judge Atkinson of the United States Court of Claims at Washington and former Health Commissioner Kerr, of Chicago.

Newspapers everywhere are invited to copy this statement for the benefit of their readers. It is suggested that physicians make a record of it and keep it in their offices so that they may intelligently answer questions of patients concerning it. Everybody is advised to cut it out and keep it. A copy of the actual sworn statement will be sent to any one who desires such. It is as follows:

Each dose of two tablets of Nuxated Iron contains one and one-half grains of organic iron in the form of iron peptonate of a special specific standard which in our opinion possesses superior qualifourth the cost to us, and by using metaurchion we could have accomplished the same thing at less than one-twelfth the cost; but by so doing we must have most certainly impaired their therapeutic efficacy. Glycerophesphates used in Nuxated Iron is one of the most expensive to nic ingredients known. It is especially recommended to build up the nerve force and thereby increase brain power, as glycerophosphates Jefferson Park Hospital, Chiare said to concease the temptation in greeients of Nuxated Iron (Iron Peptonate and Glycerophosphates) are very expensive products as compared with most other tonics.

Dr. J. W. Armisted, Grove Hill, Ala., graduate of the University of Alabama School of Medicine, Mobile, 1883, says: "In the cases I used Nuxated Iron, I have found more beneficial results than from any preparation I have ever used in 34 years practice," Dr. R. B. Baugh, Polkville, Miss., graduate of the Memphis Hospital College, Memphis, 1898, says: "I always prescribe Nuxated Iron where a reconstructive tonic is indicated." er, too plainly to be misunderstood, the antithesis, antipathy, and antagonism between the two.

Having carefully studied these things -both sides-for fifty years, the writer is familiar with all the efforts that have been made, and are still being made, to evade, nullify, or "explain away" this glaring antagonism or contradiction.

I can show that the same trouble follows every denominational doctrine. Not one can be justified without first tampering with plain, unambiguous scriptures until they are unrecognizable. Any doctrine that will separate one church from another in any degree is in opposition to Christ. (See John 17: 20, 21.)

We may say that the denominational religious world mainly rests upon these two doctrines; work them out and the structure falls. I ask any honest person if the scriptures above named do not knock them both out. These scriptures are from the wisdom and mouth of God, while these other doctrines are from the wisdem and mouths of men; and God says the wisdom of man is "foolishness." (1 Cor. 3: 19.)

If the scriptures are to stand, the denominational hosts have never been converted to Christ, either by the Spirit or the word of God, and they would better study these scriptures more and their creeds and leaders less. It is bad to antagonize the word of God.

I once heard a Baptist preacher say, in the pulpit; "It makes me tired and sick to hear people always talking about believing and following the Bible." It must have been men like him that hatched up all these doctrines that contradict the Bible. What a shame! He would do well to read Acts 20: 28-33; 1 Tim. 4: 13-16; 2 Tim. 3: 13-17; 4: 1-4; John 6: 63. He might learn from these that Christ and his apostles spent their lives doing just what fatigued and nauseated him. Poor fellow!

Edifying as the Need May Be Instability.

One of the greatest hindrances to the growth of the church is the instability of its members. So many suffer themselves to be laughed down by the taunting world around them. There is a story of an Indian who confessed Christ and allowed his scalp lock to be cut off as a sign that he would never go on the warpath again. On his way home he met some wild Indians who jeered and said: "Yesterday you were a warrior; to-day you are a squaw." It stung the man deeply, and he rushed home and threw himself on the floor in despair. His Christian wife said: "Yesterday there was not a man in the world who dared call you a coward. Can't you be as brave for Him who died for you as you were to kill the Sioux?" He sprang to his feet and said: "I can, and I will." The moral to this story is that sometimes it requires more of bravery and steadfastness to be called a coward for Jesus' sake than to contend in open conflict.

Grafting.

The chief reason for the existence of the church as an organization is to secure the salvation of souls. From the attitude of many professed followers of Christ, one would suppose the church is to be a cold-storage warehouse. The apostolic church was a hothouse, in which the new converts not only thrived and grew, but in which new plants were continually being started. Charles Spurgeon once said: "If you want to add a tree, there must be grafting done. A true church is a living thing, and only living men and women are fit to be grafted into it, and the grafting must be done by the Lord. Some members are only tied on the church and they are neither use nor ornament. When I see disunion and disaffection among church members, I can well understand that the Lord never added them, but it would be a great mercy to the church if the Lord would take them away. There were additions to the church every day. Some churches, if they have an addition once in twelve months, make as much noise over the one as a hen does when she lays an egg."

How refreshing it is to read the words: "And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed!"

Testimony.

The power of all testimony for Jesus lies in personal experience. A report of a report is a cold, dead thing. The standard was set by Jesus himself when he said: "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen." (John 3: 11.) The Mohammedan is not ashamed to bow in prayer anywhere he happens to be when the call comes. The Mormons are so proud of their religious affiliation that they publish it on their places of business. There is a story of a Roman emperor who secured a Greek architect to build him a magnificent colosseum on the promise to reward him abundantly. When the structure was completed, a great celebration was planned in honor of the emperor and the architect. When the crowd had assembled, hungry lions were turned loose and a band of Christians brought into the arena. When the architect saw them, he cried out, "I also am a Christian," and he was thrown in with the others. Could you or I have done that for Christ? Could we have stood up in the presence of that great audience who hated Christ, and hated everything about him, and have said, "I also am a Christian?" The audience will not be so large, but no doubt the testing time will come to each one of us, if it has not come already.

The Original Title.

When the church first came into existence on the day of Pentecost, we read that "all that believed were together, and had all things common; and they sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need." This arrangement was peculiar to the Jerusalem church and was necessary to meet the exigencies of the situation. The communism of these early disciples may have been too literal to be followed exactly, yet there is suggested a principle of the ownership of property which the church has been very slow in rightly recognizing. The teaching of the Bible throughout is that original title is vested in God; and what a man holds, he holds as a steward. God holds the title to our silver and gold and lands and cattle, and it is he that gives the power to accumulate these things. Hence, when the church fails to recognize this principle and use God's property for his work, we are guilty of the misappropriation of funds that do not belong

God's Purpose in the Establishment of His Church.
BY J. D. WALLING.

Inasmuch as God has had a purpose in all his action, it would be well to learn his purpose in establishing his church. That he has a church is without controversy. But what is its object, its purpose? Why was it established? We may say, in the beginning of this investigation, it was for the unification of his people. Jesus said: "I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep. And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd." (John 10: 14-16.) We understand from this scripture that the "other sheep . . not of this fold" are the Gentiles; that both Jews and Gentiles were to be brought into one fold, and were, therefore, to be one body; and that the body should hear the Shepherd's voice. We understand, then, that Jesus is the good Shepherd, Teacher, and that the body, one body, is to hear his voice. They were to be brought into the body for that purpose. Hence the prayer of Jesus: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." (John 17: 20, 21.) Of course it is but reasonable to expect that all the sheep will hear the Shepherd's prayer and do all in their power to bring it to pass, for the Shepherd has only one fold. "That in the dispensation of the fullness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him." (Eph. 1: 10.)

The church was to be, and is, the "pillar and ground" of the truth. Jesus said: "I am the truth." Again: "Thy word [God's word] is truth." "These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly: but if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth." (1 Tim. 3: 14, 15.) Now we learn that the fold is "the house of God," "the church of the living God." This house, fold, body, or church, is to be one; to hear the voice of Jesus; and to be the pillar and support of the truth, the word of God. And Jesus is not only the Shepherd of the fold, but he is the head over the "house of God." "But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ; from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." (Eph 4: 15, 16.) Beloved, please reread that verse, ponder it. Do you believe it? Do not answer too quick; but do you believe it? If so, why do you undertake to do God's work under the direction of any other head or through any other body? The whole body of Christ, the church, is "fitly joined together," compact, every joint supplied. Then it is perfect for the work designed. But when you lend your support to another body other than the church, you say it (the church) is not able to do the work for which it was created and that its head is weak.

But, notwithstanding this fact, God established his church that Christ might have the preëminence and that it might promulgate the manifold wisdom of God in its work. "The eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of his power to usward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power, which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: and hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." (Eph. 1: 18-23.) "Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ; and to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ: to the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God." (Eph. 3: 8-10.)

Surely the blessed Savior must be bowed in sorrow over the adulterous condition of his bride. He looked upon her in love. He had reason to expect that she would reverence and adore him. He saw in her the power to evangelize the world and to make known the "manifold wisdom of God." He saw in her all the benevolent institutions needed to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and to care for the widows and orphans. He saw in her the power to support the truth and to make the lost, ruined, sad, mourning, sorrow-stricken hearts of men rejoice with the good news of salvation. She stood before him in beauty, as a bride adorned for her husband. How could he but love her? She had, and has now, power to show him as far above all principalities and powers, as the King of kings and Lord of lords, as sitting at the right hand of God, all power and authority being in his hands. But we are told that she is inadequate; she cannot evangelize the world; therefore mere man must provide an institution with a human head to accomplish this purpose. I cannot help but wonder how such men will feel when they stand at the judgment seat of Christ and hear Paul say: "Who has known the mind of the Lord, or who has been his counselor?"

We are told again: "The worship must be attractive to get the young into the church." Then Jesus was mistaken, Paul was mistaken, God was mistaken, the Holy Spirit was mistaken. Will you tell them so when you stand before them in the judgment? Or had it ever occurred to you that you would be called upon to do that? Is it not better to teach the young, as well as the old, that the assembly of the saints is the place where life is dispensed, and if they want life, they must come there to get it? "In him was life; and the life was the light of men." "Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, and the truth, and the life." It never was the mission of the church to entertain; but its purpose was, and is, to edify. Hence Paul's instruction to Timothy: "Preach the word." The word is not only God's means to edify the church, but it reveals God's power to save." "For our gospel came not unto you in word only. but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." (1 Thess. 1: 5.) "For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word of the truth of the gospel; which is come unto you as it is in all the world; and bringeth forth fruit as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and knew the grace of God in truth." (Col. 1: 5, 6.)

The preached word brought joy when obeyed at the hands of the apostles. Why would not the preaching of the word produce the same hope and joy now? Why not, then, preach the same soul-saving gospel? Teach men that the work of the church is to "glorify God." Paul was content to preach it in season and out of season. He had no flattering words for kings or governors. He had no compliments for the rabbis, no gallant speeches for the ladies, no political utterances for those in power. He only saw the lost and sinful world, his soul went out to them, and he simply stood behind the cross and preached the gospel as God's power to save. Why are not men content to do that now? Beloved, God's word is still the truth and has lost none of its power. There never was a better time to preach it, or a greater reason for contending earnestly for "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." May God give us grace to preach Jesus as the Christ, the Savior of men.

The Kingdom of Israel. No. 2. BY F. W. SMITH.

It was told Saul that the kingdom would be taken from him and given to his neighbor. The "neighbor" proved to be David, the son of Jesse. The man, above all others, that Saul feared and hated was David. How, then, this prediction must have grated upon the ears of this rejected and God-forsaken king! The man who, without effort, was his rival in the affection of the people, whom he hated with an intense hatred and whose life he sought, is to occupy his throne, wear his crown, and wield his scepter. Thus it often transpires that men unfitted for places of trust are made to suffer mortification in seeing others whom they have snubbed take their places. A notable 11lustration of this is found in the history of Haman, who built the gallows for Mordecai, but was himself executed upon it. Let not those who are intrusted with the interests of others be filled with the spirit of self-importance, which leads them to disregard the rights and capabilities of their equals. Men thus self-exalted are likely to be brought to the knowledge that the world was made without them and that it will continue to exist when they are

DAVID BEFORE HIS INTRODUCTION TO THE KING'S COURT.

1. David's personal appearance was very attractive. He was what the world now terms "handsome." "Now he was ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to," (1 Sam. 16: 12.) Good looks upon the part of either men or women are not always in their favor. Many a woman's beauty has been the cause of her ruin. The gift of beauty, coupled with strength of character, is an ernament of which any woman should be justly proud: but if her chief attraction lies in an outward beauty, she is to be pitied, for she will be vain and too weak to resist the flattery of designing men. God gives the beauty, but the strength of character must be developed upon the part of the creature. Likewise, the man whose power consists only in his personal appearance, without those inward traits which constitute true manhood, is most sure to fall a prey to silly and wicked women.

2. David's occupation was that of a shepherd. (1 Sam. 16: 11.) It is a notable fact that God, in the selection of men for the performance of great duties, took them from the humbler walks of life. When the time came to bring Israel out of the long night of Egyptian bondage, Moses was selected from the pastoral life; Gideon was called from the thrashing floor to deliver Israel from the Midianites; for the unfolding of the world-wide scheme of redemption the unlearned and unostentations were selected; and for a man to sit upon Israel's throne, God goes to the sheepfold. How different are the ways of God from those of man! Man looks on the outer appearance, but God looks on the heart. God saw in David those traits of character necessary to fit one for such a responsible position at the time.

3. David's physical strength and courage are worthy of notice. "He maketh my feet like hinds' feet, and setteth me upon my high places. He teacheth my hands to war, so that a bow of steel is broken by mine arms." (Ps. 18: 33, 34.) By this we are led to believe that David was a man of wonderful strength. He could climb the rugged mountains with the ease of the hind and break in pieces the bow of the enemy. This is but typical of the spiritual strength of the true servant of God to-day. His courage was displayed when he slew the lion that would devour the sheep and when he met in single combat a mighty giant. Such courage is needed now to fight the giant of sin.

David was both a musician and a poet. This wonderful combination of genius was consecrated in the psalms which bear his name and which have inspired and comforted multiplied thousands through the ages. The beautiful Ps. 19 fills the believer with inspiration and reverence as he contemplates the creative power in the heavens that bend above him, and which proclaim in Nature's voice the glory of God. How many have been comforted and blessed by Ps. 23! It sooths the sorrowful, suffering heart and lifts the soul into a peaceful rest. "The Lord is my shepherd"—what sublime and yet tender words! Upon these we can rely for guidance through the wilderness and for light when our feet slip into the chilly waters of the dark, dreaded river.

5. David was possessed of a deeply religious nature. When he saw the insults of the giant, Goliath, hurled into the face of God's people, his soul was stirred within him, and he inquired: "Who is this uncircumcised Philistine, that he should defy the armies of the living God?" (1 Sam. 17: 26.) Thus he manifested a deep interest in the glory of God, which characterized him through life. David was far from committing the presumptuous sin and prayed to be delivered from it. (Ps. 19: 13.) He loved the law of God and always sought to magnify it, although he proved at one time to be very weak morally.

DAVID'S RELATIONS WITH SAUL.

1. David was selected as the chief musician for the king's court. It was he who, by the soft touch of the instrument, brought forth strains of melody that drove the evil spirit from Saul, which made him as a madman.

2. David became the king's son-in-law because of his triumph over Goliath, for it was said that to him who killed the giant should be given the king's daughter. (1 Sam. 17: 25.) David did not battle for the hand of a woman, but for the glory of God and the interests of the kingdom. He did not consider himself worthy to bear such relation to the king as that of son-in-law. (1 Sam. 18: 18.)

3. David's official position in the kingdom was only third in rank from the king. Abner, captain over the hosts, and Jonathan, heir to the throne, stood above David.

4. On account of Saul's evil treatment, David is driven out from his land and people and forced to live the life of a fugitive. Listen to his piteous wail: "For they have driven me out this day from abiding in the inheritance of the Lord, saying, Go, serve other gods." (1 Sam. 26: 19.) This faithful servant of God was made to wander among strangers, living at times in the dens and caves of the earth; but his faith never wavered. He firmly trusted in God to restore him to his native land, to the people he loved. He believed, as all who claim to follow God should believe, that Jehovah would right all wrongs and reward the faithful.

DAVID'S ATTITUDE TOWARD SAUL.

1. When David finally saw that his life depended upon his keeping out of Saul's reach, he made up his mind to endure the hardships and privations of a fugitive's life. The world calls this "cowardice," but it is in reality true courage. It is better for one to run from an enemy than to stain his hands with blood.

2. Saul pursues David from place to place, hunting him like a partridge, while the treacherous Ziphites were beating the bushes before him and three thousand men were stationed to catch even the prints of his footsteps upon the hills. All this David knew, but he trusted in God to deliver him. The lesson is that no matter how many are against a soul, if God be for that soul, no power can overcome it. "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

3. David has Saul at his mercy, but refuses to harm a hair of his head, although strongly urged to do so. The only thing he did to Saul was to cut off the skirt of his robe, which thing caused David's conscience to smite him. (1 Sam. 24: 4, 5.) What a wonderful contrast between these two men! Saul is hunting David to take his life; and when he falls into David's hands as helpless as an infant, he is allowed to go unharmed. This one incident in the life of David shows him to have been one of the most remarkable men that ever lived. He respected in the highest degree and to the fullest measure the law concerning the Lord's anointed. He was willing for God to take vengeance. What a world this would be if this principle were imbibed and lived up to!

4. Finally, David mourns the death of Saul. (2 Sam. 1: 11-27.) How unlike many is this! Upon the death of an inveterate enemy, many would have rejoiced instead of lamented; but David wept and expressed in other ways his great sorrow at the death of Israel's king. Let us learn the lesson not to rejoice over the misfortune of even an enemy.

In a feeble way I have given the bright side of David's life, but in another paper I shall give the dark side.

Adam. No. 2.

BY II. LEO BOLES.

We next consider Adam as the man. (Rom. 5: 14; 1 Cor. 15; 22.) In these scriptures Paul teaches that Adam represented the human family. As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." This seems to place Adam as the federal head, or representative, of the human race. Inasmuch as he had sinned, he represents the race as sinners. Death has passed unto all men, for all sinned. It seems that all have sinned in their representative. As a member of Congress represents the people, or his constituency, so Adam represents the human family in this sin. Not only does he represent the human family in this sin, but in a similar way he represents Christ and is spoken of often by biblical students as a type of Christ. For by one man sin entered into the world; so by one man, Christ Jesus, righteousness and a plan of obtaining that righteousness came into the world. I think that whatever was lost in Adam by the human family may be gained in Christ. So that we need not suffer eternal condemnation because of Adam's sin. Each must suffer the penalty of his own sin. We do not have to suffer or bear the guilt of Adam's sin, but we do have to suffer the consequences of Adam's sin as the federal head.

We now consider Adam as a man. The history concerning Adam as a man is very brief. The narratives in Genesis are to a large extent very brief. Genesis has been called the book of origins, and we need not expect to find a full description or lengthy portrayal of the early patriarchs. We must look closely at the few statements given concerning Adam as a man in order to gather the full knowledge of him. The first man may be looked at as undeveloped in many of his attributes and traits of character. Adam is presented to us as a husband and then a father. This impresses us with his responsibilities in life. No one can look clearly at his obligations as a husband and his responsibilities as a father without concluding that he was created to fulfill these positions and meet these obligations and responsibilities. We are also impressed with his early entering upon the duties and shouldering the responsibilities. There is no intimation that he tried to shirk any of the duties or dodge any of the obligations which rested upon him in filling these relations of life. His courage and faithfulness in undertaking these obligations and responsibilities impress us with an earnestness in life which should characterize all of his posterity.

He lived to be nine hundred and thirty years old. This was not quite so long as some of the patriarchs lived, yet a long time compared to our age. It is to be understood that people did not live so fast then as they do now, and possibly they did not live so full a life as they do now. We crowd life very much now, and this has its tendency to shorten our period of existence. At that time the earth had not degenerated to its present condition. The curse upon Adam and upon the earth began, I believe, at once, and the downward tendency was gradual. This may account for the long lives that the early patriarchs lived.

Tradition says that Adam's grave was at the place of the crucifixion of Christ. "Golgotha" means "skull." and tradition says that it was named from Adam's skull. 1 do not think that there is much confidence to be put in this tradition, and I mention it only that we may get all that has been said about Adam.

For a further study of Adam, the following scriptures may be examined: Deut. 32: 8; Job 31: 33; Hos. 6: 7; Luke 3: 38; Acts 17: 29. In Isa. 43: 27, the expression. "Thy first father sinned," may have reference to Adam. Many scholars think that the prophet is speaking of Adam's sin. Among those who so hold may be found Adam Clarke and Thomas Scott. Others think that the prophet had reference to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob as the first fathers of the children of Israel. Jameson-Fausette Brown think that the prophet had reference to Abraham. The fact is clear that Adam sinned and also that Abraham sinned, and there is not much to be gained by a discussion as to which the prophet had reference when he said, "Thy first father sinned."

Adam was taken into covenant relationship with God. No other creature has been so exalted and honored. There are always two parties to a covenant. In this covenant, God and Adam are the parties. On the part of Adam, moral obedience to God is made a condition of the covenant; on the part of God, protection and love. Adam broke his part of the covenant, but Jehovah has never ceased to protect and love mankind. In a future study we will examine some practical lessons to be gained from Adam's relationship to God.

The Tennessee Orphans' Home, Columbia, Tenn., is moving on splendidly. A good work is being done in a quiet way. No one is now employed to solicit funds for the Home, so we have decided to ask the churches to make a contribution for the Home on July 7, the first Lord's day in July. The funds for feeding and clothing the orphans are running low.

To any church or person who will send us six new subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, accompanied by twelve dollars, we will give one dozen copies of our new hymn book, "Praise Him." Add postage for parcel post or transportation. Act promptly while this liberal offer is good. Address the McQuiddy Printing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Do None of These Things Move You?

BY W. HUME M'HENRY AND S. O. MARTIN.

According to our promise, we herewith give you further particulars of our recent tour among the brethren. We met with a hearty reception. Leaving Aurangabad, we first visited a small village about two miles out. Here we met a small band which had only recently been immersed by Brother I. B. Sonavne. After considerable exhortation we partook of the Lord's Supper with them. On the morrow we witnessed the baptism of one woman. Commending her to the grace of God, we took our leave for Chickalthana, where we found five babes in Christ, and administered unto them "the sincere milk of the word." On the following day—Christmas Day—we assembled at the river, where twenty souls were baptized into Christ.

From there we returned to Aurangabad, and, after arranging for a bungalow, made our way to Bendala, a village twenty-two miles away. Here we found the village somewhat deserted; for, on account of famine, the people had gone in search of food. By inquiry we learned that practically all of our brethren throughout a large area of the country were almost in a starving condition. Our hearts were moved within us as we listened to their pitiful story. The former harvest was practically a failure on account of the drought. This being the case, grain of all kinds has more than doubled in price. Besides, few of the brethren ever have money, being dependent upon the grain that they are able to gather during harvest as their part for their labor. Thus they were left without grain or money. There is plenty of grain, but it cannot be obtained without money. It is yet two and one-half months until the latter harvest, or main harvest. From now until the harvest matures there is no demand for labor. Imagine, if you can, the condition of a people naturally poverty stricken, without money, food, or work. We found them reduced to the necessity of making their bread from wild weed seeds. Besides bread, their other food consists mainly of grass and weeds gathered in the jungles. It would not take a doctor to know that such a diet would contain little strength. Men who were formerly comparatively strong are weak and emaciated. Children have greatly enlarged abdomens, with arms and legs like pipestems. Few have any clothing at all. The question that concerns them is: "How shall we live until harvest?" Notwithstanding such straits, we did not learn of any who had renounced the faith or had gone to other missions where they could receive material help immediately. Many express not only a willingness, but a desire, to depart and be with the Lord. One man said: "If this condition goes on much longer, we will meet our Jesus." This was said with all earnestness.

Since they look upon the missionary as their best earthly friend, they appeal to us to relieve them of their sufferings. Our hearts truly ached when we had to tell them that we were unable to contribute materially to this end. We remembered that in following the apostolic plan the church in Satara had laid by in store about fifty dollars. We have decided to ask the church to appropriate this fund for the relief of the poor saints. This will not amount to more than sixty or seventy-five cents per capita for those who are in direct need. From five to ten cents a day will keep them from starving.

Brethren, we have tried to picture the condition, but we find that words are unable to portray the real situation. We feel sure that every soul would be moved, if they could only see poverty as it stalks about among these downtrodden brethren. The churches in Macedonia contributed liberally in ministering to the needs of the poor, faminestricken saints of Judea. The Spirit of the Lord which prompted this liberality now appeals to you to help the saints in India. The call is urgent. The cry is incessant. We are told that the coming harvest will be much under the average, and that the time between the next harvest will likely usher in a period of greater suffering than prevails at present. Therefore it is evident that there should be an emergency fund in the hands of the missionary to be used as the need may so require. We are too far away to get relief on short notice. One thousand dollars could be easily raised by each Christian laying by in store a small mite weekly; or if one or two well-favored brethren want to invest that amount where it will yield heavy interest for . eternity, let them come forward at once. Two ways are suggested as to how such a fund can be used advantageously. First, the amount not needed for present emergency can always be on interest. Second, at harvest time grain can be bought at about one-half the price that is asked during the famine. The amount estimated to tide the brethren over the famine can be bought at harvest and stored away for the emergency. In this way their need will be met at half the expenditure required should the purchase be made in the time of famine. There is this additional advantage of having the funds on hand: if during one famine grain is furnished, thus keeping them all out of the throes of death, then, out of the grain gathered during the next harvest they would be able to replace a part of the grain advanced; or the amount gathered will be almost enough, if not sufficient, to carry the most of them through the next hard season. This is the main necessity for an emergency fund; however, others arising might call for part of it.

Do not think that this is either sectarian or speculative; it is a practical solution of the problem that confronts us, and would be an ideal application in the Lord's work of the same business principle which guides successful men in the management of secular affairs. "Whoso stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry, but shall not be heard." (Prov. 21: 13.)

The Tennessee Orphans' Home, Columbia, Tenn., is moving on splendidly. A good work is being done in a quiet way. No one is now employed to solicit funds for the Home, so we have decided to ask the churches to make a contribution for the Home on July 7, the first Lord's day in July. Our noble coworker, Oscar L. Carnahan, of Moss, Tenn., is generously preaching for some congregations in his section free of charge, with the understanding that they will send their contributions to the war sufferers. The contribution from the Clementsville congregation, acknowledged in our issue of May 30, is one of the first fruits of this sacrifice. The contribution from the church at Brimstone, Tenn., noted above, is another. Through an error in this office this action was ascribed to another good preacher who is very active in behalf of the war sufferers.

Brother John H. Arms, of Celina, Tenn., writes: "In passing near their place of meeting to my appointment at Cave Spring, I met one of the leaders of the colored church, and, being asked if I could not give them an appointment, I told him that I could be at their place at three-thirty o'clock, and he so announced at their morning service; and as I have made up my mind to ask for help for the destitute and starving wherever I preach, I asked and received the small contribution. These are poor, yet they willingly gave their mite. I go again on the second Lord's day in July to Cave Spring, and also will be with those colored people in the evening. They promise to be better prepared by that time. Brethren, it did my soul good to see those people—even the children—give their pennies. I know them, and know they are not any of them wealthy. I only write these items that you may more fully realize how very important I deem this great work."

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Armenian and Syrian Fund or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Remember the Orphans.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Calls for help are steady and constant. People must get the habit of giving, realizing that "it is more blessed to give than to receive," While so many demands are being made on our hearts and purses, we must not overlook the work at home, and especially the Tennessee Orphans' Home. A noble work is being done in this Home and the interest in it must not be allowed to wane. The funds for the maintenance of the Home are running low, so we are asking the churches to give the contribution on the first Lord's day in July to the Home. A liberal and cheerful remembrance of the orphans will lead God to smile upon and bless us. "But whose hath the world's goods, and beholdeth his brother in need, and shutteth up his compassion from him, how doth the love of God abide in him?" (1 John 3: 17.)

Scott-Thompson Debate.

BY T. B. THOMPSON.

Beginning on July 2, Jehovah willing, there will be a religious discussion between J. R. Scott (Primitive Baptist) and T. B. Thompson (Christian) upon the following propositions: (1) Salvation from sin conditional. Thompson affirms. (2) Salvation from sin unconditional. Scott affirms. (3) The conditions of salvation. Thompson affirms. (4) Provision for salvation made for only a part of the human family. Scott affirms. I have not taken space to quote the whole of each proposition, but merely to give the substance of each. Four days are to be given to the four propositions, beginning as above indicated. Brother I. B. Bradley, of Dickson, Tenn., will act as my moderator. All persons expecting to attend this discussion, who reside at a distance, should write me at Murray, Ky., before coming, so ample provision may be made for their entertainment. The discussion will be at Friendship meetinghouse, twelve miles east of Murray. Cars will meet trains on Monday for all who attend.

The Tennessee Orphans' Home, Columbia, Tenn., is moving on splendidly. A good work is being done in a quiet way. No one is now employed to solicit funds for the Home, so we have decided to ask the churches to make a contribution for the Home on July 7, the first Lord's day in July. The funds for feeding and clothing the orphans are running low.

Mrs. Walter Murray, Oklahoma, Okla., June 12: "We met in our own building last Sunday for the first time. I would like to have you announce for the benefit of any brethren who may be in our city over Sunday, that our place of worship is located one-half block east of Belle Isle and Interurban car line on Tenth Street. It is only a small frame building, but we bought it at a bargain, and we feel that it is the first step toward a nice, comfortable place to meet."

From J. L. Hines, Meaford, Ontario, Canada, June 12: "Last Lord's day was a great day for the church here. H. L.
